Three Boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills
Cured Her.

It is hard to do housework with a weak and aching back. Backache comes from sick kidneys, and what a lot of trouble sick kidneys cause.

But they can't help it. If more work is put on them they get out of order.

Weak back is simply a warning from the kidneys and should be attended to immediately so as to avoid years of terrible suffering from kidney trouble. Mrs. N. L. Smith, Smith's Falls, Ont., writes: "I take pleasure in writing you, stating the benefit I have received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About a year ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back and was so bad I could not even sweep my own floor. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, which I did, and with the greatest benefit. I only used three boxes and I am as well as ever. I highly recommend these pills to any sufferer from lame back or kidney trouble."

BAPTIST RALLY IN TALBOT ST. CHURCH

Address by Rev. Dr. Williamson a Well-Known American Divine.

A TALK TO THE PEOPLE

Riches Do Not Bring Happiness Always—All Honorable Callings Are Holy.

The annual rally of the Baptist Young People's Union was held in the Talbot Street Baptist Church last evening, and was very largely attended. The feature of the programme was an address by Rev. Dr. Williamson, of the Third Baptist Church, St. Louis, on "The Task and the Power."

"Scriptural study of history," he said, "will reveal to every student the fact that God has His plan. All the events of a man's life have been found to be directed by a power higher than himself. It follows that the best possible use that can be made of the human life is to discover God's purpose in the world, and then invest every power one has in the accomplishment of His plans. History is strewn with wrecks caused through misdirected power. Lives that might have been useful and honored have been wasted and have had the accumulated results of a life's work destroyed in an hour because they failed to co-operate with God. We cannot accomplish our tasks without Him, and in a very true sense God does not choose to accomplish His tasks without us."

"God has ordained that the earth shall not be brought to its completed state save through the touch of man. In this co-operation man rises to his highest dignity."

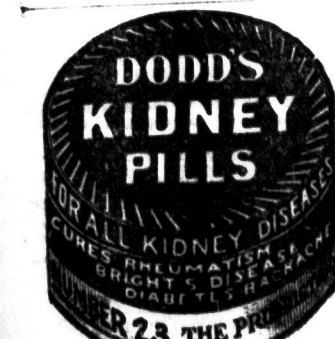

"We should regard every honorable calling in life as holy. It was a sad day for the world when its tasks were divided into secular and sacred. Every man ought to regard his work as a distinct service rendered to God. The merchant or the farmer who honestly fulfills his life ministry is no less a servant of God than the minister or missionary."

"It will be evident that the highest form of work we share with Him is spiritual and for the Christian consists in giving the Gospel to the whole world. Our field of activity is nothing less than the whole world. Christ as we catch His vision of wonderful empire can we come to our best. What marvellous responsibility this places upon human life. He is not worthy of the name of a man who does not assume his share of the burden of His world. Every boy would like to be Abraham Lincoln, but which Abraham Lincoln does he mean the honored president, or the Lincoln of poverty in a log cabin, who walked barefoot to school and endured all kinds of hardships? Lincoln's crown was possible only because of his cross."

"Unhappiness of World."
"Much of the unhappiness in the world arises from the fact that men have not found a task worthy of a human life. There is no more contentment among the rich than among the poor. Places of high honor in the state do not satisfy the craving of the human heart. Only the task of placing Jesus Christ on His throne can do that completely."

During the evening officers for the year were elected as follows:
President, Arthur Williamson; vice-president, J. Baldwin; secretary, Frank Stewart; corresponding secretary, Mrs. (Rev.) Stevens; treasurer, Miss E. Yoo.

Mr. Stewart presented the treasurer's report, which was found to be most satisfactory, and was adopted.

CONDUCTOR FITZPATRICK PLEADED NOT GUILTY

Trial of C. P. R. Employee Was Opened at Woodstock.

Woodstock, Feb. 28.—The trial of Conductor John J. Fitzpatrick, of London, the man who had charge of train No. 87, on the afternoon of Jan. 30, and which met in a rear-end collision with train No. 645 at Thamesford station, as a result of which R. A. Lane was killed, opened at the local police court this morning. Crown Attorney Hall prosecuted, while Fitzpatrick's interests were looked after by Mr. M. P. McDonald, of London. Fitzpatrick pleaded not guilty to the charge of having the rear end of his train moving forward, thereby endangering the lives of R. A. Lane and others, and through his counsel elected to be tried by the magistrates.

The Front Brakeman.
Arthur Kelly, a resident of London, and a C. P. R. brakeman, was called on the afternoon of Jan. 29, Conductor John J. Fitzpatrick, in charge of train No. 87, was in the rear of the train, and was the first to see the crash. He was about to go into the van when he was warned that there was a train coming. He looked up and saw a train of six or six car lengths away. A second later the crash came.

Didn't Hear Whistle.
He did not hear the train whistle, Kelly said, there were no whistles at all at Thamesford. He, however, switches at each end of the yard, and every train that is sent out of the yard is supposed to travel through the yard.

Prepared to Stop at an Instant's Notice.
Witness stated that according to the rules in this case there should have been a man out behind the engine with a flag to protect the rear of the train. Kelly heard orders between Fitzpatrick and Lane, but saw them talking together. After the conversation, Lane went towards the rear of the train, and the conductor went to the office. This was the last witness saw of Lane alive. Kelly was present when the remains of a woman were found the week, and believed that Lane was the one who perished. Witness stated that Lane had plenty of time to go into the van and get his flag, and be out again before the crash came, after he was talking to the conductor. He believed, however, that Lane was in the van when the crash came. Witness believed the cause of the accident was the neglect of Brakeman Lane to fulfill his duty. In this place it was not necessary for the conductor to tell him to protect the train. It was his duty as rear-end brakeman to protect the rear end of the train. The rear-end brakeman, Kelly stated, was known as the flagman.

Cross-examined, the witness said that Fitzpatrick was very strict in regard to the carrying out of rules.

The Station Agent.
Mr. L. McPherson, station agent at Thamesford, said he was on duty on Jan. 30. He remembered Fitzpatrick's train coming in on the day mentioned, and that the conductor did not report to him when he came in, but later entered the freight shed with his way bills. The train came then, and he stated that he gave the conductor instructions to go back to Ingersoll West. It was while the witness and the conductor were talking, these instructions over that the crash came. He did not hear Fitzpatrick issue any orders to his men. The day was sunny, and he did not hear the whistle. He did not see Lane go to the rear of the train. He knew the other train was ahead of him, but thought that it would have taken the siding at Ingersoll Junction. When the collision took place, the witness stated that his train was running about six miles an hour. He looked out, when almost a mile from Thamesford, but could not see anything, owing to the storm.

Conductor Frank O'Donoghue, who had charge of train No. 645, which collided with the rear end of train No. 87, at Thamesford Junction, said that he had running orders from Woodstock to London. He knew the other train was ahead of him, but thought that it would have taken the siding at Ingersoll Junction. When the collision took place, the witness stated that his train was running about six miles an hour. He looked out, when almost a mile from Thamesford, but could not see anything, owing to the storm.

Joseph McKay, brewer, of London, identified the wreckage found in the debris after the fire as one belonging to R. A. Lane.

Robert Stevens, sectionman, told of finding the wreckage, and John Atkinson, brakeman on No. 87, gave evidence regarding the position of No. 87, and the circumstances surrounding the collision.

The case will be resumed on Thursday.

A MONTREAL ROMANCE

Father Refuses to Allow Girl to Wed a Chinaman.

Montreal, Feb. 28.—Because he would not permit her to marry the man of her choice, Charlie Gagnon, a Chinese, a father arrested for non-support, and he appeared yesterday before Recorder Dumas, and was committed eight days for medical examination.

The case presents many peculiar features. The father, Anne Aubin, some 45 years ago left his wife and family and disappeared completely. He was not seen or heard of until his reappearance about a year ago.

During his absence his eldest daughter had married, and he hastened to hunt her up and paid her frequent visits, but took no measure to include or interfere with any other part of the house. It means that the hotel that is doing a trade in excess of $40 per day is to pay five per cent in addition to the ordinary license fee.

A Monthly Return.
Hon. A. C. MacKay interrupted to inquire whether the $40 was named in the act as an average return, to which the minister replied that it was

Increased Assessment for Express Companies and All Stock Transfers To Be Taxed.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Toronto, March 1.—Impelled by the constant necessity of raising the province's income in order to keep pace with the ever-growing expenditures, the Government yesterday introduced in the legislature two important bills, which will probably meet with a storm of opposition when their contents are understood and their probable effect realized.

The recent work that license inspectors throughout the province carried on in securing returns for bar earnings, was explained when Hon. W. J. Hanna, provincial secretary, briefly outlined the Government bill, by which he proposes to tax the bar trade.

The bill provides that any licensee who on all bar sales over forty dollars a day, the Provincial Secretary admitted that the bill was a departure from the general principle followed, but was justified in view of the increased value of licenses as the result of the spread of the dry districts.

Hon. Mr. Hanna announced that the Government had enlarged the scope of the veto, with respect to a chemist's certificate, because of the increased value of licenses as the result of the spread of the dry districts. He introduced a bill designed to prevent druggists from abusing their privileges, by providing that a chemist's certificate, once issued upon a second conviction for breach of the license act.

Tax on All Stock Transfers.
The other bill was introduced by Hon. Mr. Matheson. Its principal provision calls for the imposing of a tax of two cents on every $100 of fractional shares, or of the value of every transfer of stock, bonds, or debenture stock. The tax will be a half per cent of the value of the stock, bonds, or debenture stock, and will be levied upon the transferor.

A Large Revenue Increase.
The new bill is expected to add to the provincial treasury considerably over one hundred thousand dollars. The added revenue from the double-tracking tax on express companies and a tax on all race tracks.

Loss Certificate Second Time.
And another bill, which provides that upon the second conviction of a chemist his certificate shall, ipso facto, become void, and he of no force for practice. It also provides that if a chemist is convicted of a second offence, his certificate shall be void, and he of no force for practice.

A Penalty Provided.
The bill also provides that every chemist who, on being called upon by the Provincial Secretary, fails to produce a certificate, shall be liable to a fine of $10 for each day that he fails to produce it.

Mr. Nickle Becomes Indignant.
The methods followed by the Optometrical Association of Ontario in the subject of a warm attack from Mr. W. F. Nickle, of Kingston, at the opening of the Legislature, on a bill which Sir James Whitney approved last night.

Mr. Nickle declared that accompanying the circular was a letter, referring to the bill being brought in at this session of the Legislature, and couched in such terms as to lead him to believe that the bill would pass, and that he would save money by joining the association at once and paying minor fees.

Mr. Nickle declared that he had never been introduced in the House.

Inducing Men to Pay Money.
Sir James said he approved of the matter being brought to the attention of the House. This circular, he said, "has been drawn with more or less care and it is clearly intended to induce men to pay money for registering under the act respecting the Optometrical Association. It is an endeavor to get them to pay money under the supposed provisions of the act, and which undoubtedly they are not subject to by making it appear that they would later be called upon to pay a much larger sum. I would suggest that this should be laid before the crown attorney."

Assembly Act in Blank.
Sir James Whitney introduced the act with reference to the increased indemnity and the deduction of the indemnities of absent members. The bill was in blank, however, and will be filled in in committee. Sir James stated that it was a matter for the House to deal with rather than the Government.

Reciprocity to Come Up Again.
It is hinted that the Government intends to bring on a resolution favoring reciprocity of the proposed reciprocity agreement with the United States by the Dominion Parliament. The resolution will likely come up some time next week. The matter was discussed in caucus and will be taken up again on Friday.

not. The department would receive a monthly sum from the licensees. In practically all of the hotels, which would come under the new clauses cash registers were kept, and there would be little difficulty in the way of bookkeeping. Provision was made, stated Hon. Mr. Hanna, requiring the hotelkeepers to keep proper accounts and to permit them to furnish monthly returns.

"This is not a revenue act," he continued, "but since the reduction of licenses is creating additional value for those that remain, there is no reason why the province should not get a considerable portion of that increased increment."

To the Liberal leader, the minister explained that the accounts for the hotelkeepers would be checked by inspectors from the head office. The department would not make use of local inspectors for this work.

Veto for All Licenses.
The provincial secretary then announced to the House that the Government had taken the right to veto all licenses in the province.

"We have," he explained, "extended the right to veto we took some years ago with regard to the unorganized districts. We have extended it to the whole province. The unorganized districts felt that we were putting them in a class by themselves. They found it was more or less like some even while they were in the class. Our experience with it in the unorganized districts has been such that we are convinced it is proper provision for the province. It is not with the intention of sitting in review upon conditions fairly established but we do propose to take the veto to meet extreme and exceptional cases."

Getting After the Druggists.
The provincial secretary explained the provision that had been made to put a stop to the abuse of the liquor license act by the druggists, an abuse that had become greater since the "dry" area had increased. The bill was heartily approved by the chemists.

Where a chemist is found violating the law and is convicted under the liquor license act for a second offence, that a chemist's certificate, once issued upon a second conviction for breach of the license act, shall be void, and he of no force for practice. It also provides that if a chemist is convicted of a second offence, his certificate shall be void, and he of no force for practice.

Must Print Formula on Label.
The bill provides that if any compound having more than two and one-half per cent of alcohol is not prepared according to the formula of some standard work, it shall not be offered for sale unless the formula on which it is prepared is printed on the label on the bottle or upon the wrapper, or a copy of the formula is sworn to and filed with the provincial secretary. It also provides that if a chemist is convicted of a second offence, his certificate shall be void, and he of no force for practice.

Loss Certificate Second Time.
And another bill, which provides that upon the second conviction of a chemist his certificate shall, ipso facto, become void, and he of no force for practice. It also provides that if a chemist is convicted of a second offence, his certificate shall be void, and he of no force for practice.

THE UNIONISTS DISORGANIZED OVER THE LORDS REFORM

Caucus Discusses Lansdowne's Measure, But Fails to Decide On Delinquent Action—Bill Calls For One Hundred Hereditary Peers.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The debate in the House of Commons on the Lords Bill was continued tonight in a rather listless manner. Walpole Astor, who was elected for Plymouth, made a long speech, but it was not very interesting. The Unionist members of the House of Commons are not very keen on the reform of the House of Lords. The bill will embody Lord Carson's principle to the extent of one member, another ten to be elected, and the remainder ten to be nominated. The new House of Lords thus constituted would be especially conservative in character, and according to the Liberal side, it would be subject to the objections against the existing House of Lords.

The cabinet, according to the Times, has already commenced deliberation on the bill. The bill is a measure of the House of Commons, and it is not very popular with the Unionist members of the House of Commons.

SIFTON LEAVES

tion, on which the permanent prosperity of the agricultural as well as the urban population depended, that it would operate against the consolidation of the Canadian provinces in a strong and united nation. It was the States to the south, that the higher prices for wheat and other farm products which the farmers expected would not be realized, that it would make the west the backward of Chicago, and, finally, that it meant that Canada was placing her head in the American noose and forsaking the permanency of the British markets. He concluded with the statement that the agreement spoiled retrogressed and placed the Canadian farmer in the position of the British farmer.

Mr. Fisher's Reply.
Hon. Mr. Fisher, in the course of his thoughtful four hours' speech, pointed out that the government had secured, without the sacrifice of a single industry, the reciprocity in natural products for which Canada had been looking for over forty years. He declared that the agreement meant no loss of the British market, and all the same, he held there was the Canadian farmer, but simply the addition of another new and great market. In comparison of price for the agricultural products on either side of the line he conclusively demonstrated that none of the evils which Mr. Sifton predicted would follow, and that many millions in additional profit should be realized to the Canadian producer. He took up again the interests of the farmer, and in detail the economic, gardening, and the demand of the people of Canada for years, the States would not give reciprocity in natural products unless Canada included also a large list of manufactured articles. Now reciprocity in natural products had been secured without sacrificing a single manufactured article. The American had come down. The mandate for reciprocity was of forty years standing, and the country was now committed to the bargain only if the people's representatives approved of it.

can farmers. The American market for the products of the Canadian farmer, Mr. Fisher thought, had not put Mr. Sifton out of touch with the real situation of his western constituents. He quoted the views of representative western farmers, who referred Mr. Sifton's views as to the effect of the agreement on western export prices to the United States. He believed that the result of this agreement there would be some increase in the price paid to Canadian farmers and some reduction in the price paid to American farmers. He pointed out that the agreement would not sacrifice the British market, and all the same, he held there was the Canadian farmer, but simply the addition of another new and great market. In comparison of price for the agricultural products on either side of the line he conclusively demonstrated that none of the evils which Mr. Sifton predicted would follow, and that many millions in additional profit should be realized to the Canadian producer. He took up again the interests of the farmer, and in detail the economic, gardening, and the demand of the people of Canada for years, the States would not give reciprocity in natural products unless Canada included also a large list of manufactured articles. Now reciprocity in natural products had been secured without sacrificing a single manufactured article. The American had come down. The mandate for reciprocity was of forty years standing, and the country was now committed to the bargain only if the people's representatives approved of it.

Dealing with Mr. Sifton's argument that the agreement meant that Canadian farmers would sacrifice their present foothold in the British market, Mr. Fisher pointed out that the conditions of free and favorable access to Britain were in a wise change. The British market was a vast one, and it was a change for the better. The American market for the products of the Canadian farmer, Mr. Fisher thought, had not put Mr. Sifton out of touch with the real situation of his western constituents. He quoted the views of representative western farmers, who referred Mr. Sifton's views as to the effect of the agreement on western export prices to the United States. AN AMUSING SKETCH

Presented by the Young People of St. Mary's Church.

The young people of St. Mary's church presented a very amusing and well-rehearsed sketch entitled "Pignatelli," before a very appreciative audience at St. Mary's Hall last evening.

The play dealt with the troubles of one Whiffles, who desired to negotiate the marriage of his daughter Lavinia to a rich man, who was a member of the aristocracy, although in debt beyond hope of redemption without the Whiffles money which he was given reason to believe existed.

Mr. John Hoy as Pignatelli, Lavinia's uncle, who exposed the real state of affairs, took the part of the miserly father, and Miss Pignatelli, before a very appreciative audience at St. Mary's Hall last evening.
