The Oddfellows' Auditorium was veritably on fete last evening. Of the fashionable company who thronged the spacious parlors, broad corridor and splendid ball-room, were none who sought refined, heartsome and wholly sociable and pleasurable enjoyment and sought in vain.

The scene during the progress of the assembly was brilliant and pleasing, viewed from the standpoint of an observer. To the participants it certainly could not have been less strikingly beautiful and inspiring. The ball-room was draped and decorated with exquisite taste, the profusion of flowers and foliage adding much to the pretty effect. The lighting was admirable.

THE LOVELY COSTUMES.

The lovely costumes of the fair dancers made a picture which a masculine mind might be impressed with, but only the feminine brain could fully receive and adequately describe. It might, indeed, be said that

Bright the lights shone
On fair women and brave men.

For the youth and beauty of the city, with their gallant escorts, were there gathered, and their number was augmented by the youth and beauty of other places, duly accompanied. Votaries of Terpsichore, nearly every one, they had all opportunity to indulge in the mazes of the dance to music that was ravishingly sweet—the strains of the famous Zieck's Detroit orchestra.

Among the fair devotees at the shrine of the tripping Goddess were noticed several debutantes, whose entrance into society was signified by a universal manifestation of ardent admiration on the part of the gentlemen and who received the homage paid them with admirable ease, grace and dignity.

The initial assembly of the season will long be held in pleasurable remembrance.

IN PICTURE AND STORY

Rev. W. P. Reekie Entertains a Large Audience at William
St. Baptist Church.

A Splendid Lecture Illustrated With Views of the Holy Land, To-night
Egypt, Illustrated.

A trip through Palestine. This was the subject of an exceedingly interesting lecture given by W. P. Reekie, in the William St. Baptist church last evening. The church was crowded to the doors, so that there was hardly standing room.

Mr. Reekie who has just returned from an extended trip through the Holy Land is a good, clear speaker, and delivers his lecture in an interesting manner, so that the audience has no trouble in following him and understanding everything he says.

There is a vein of humor and merriment running through the whole lecture, which tends to make it more enjoyable and at different intervals, Mr. Reekie would cite some humorous incident which brought out the humorous side of life in Palestine.

During the whole of his trip he provided himself with a camera and took pictures of the different interesting scenes and buildings he entered. These he had made into limelight views, and these he used to illustrate his lecture. (The most of these pictures are exceedingly interesting, especially those of Jerusalem, Bethlehem, and the different old buildings so often read about.)

He began by giving, on the canvas, a picture of McMaster Hall, Toronto. This was followed by the bridge over the Firth of Forth, Scotland, and then the parliament buildings on the Thames. He then took his listeners to Italy, where he showed them the church of St. Marks, and different scenes in Rome.

He then proceeded to the Holy Land, landing at Jaffa and thence to Jerusalem. He showed the village and pool of Siloam, the Mount of Olives, Bethany, Hebron, and Bethlehem. He then went north as far west as Damascus, and journeyed east to the sea shore again.

He closed his lecture by scenes of Christ's crucifixion, his burial, and his ascension into Heaven.

Mr. Reekie will give another lecture on A Trip through Egypt, to-night. This also will be illustrated with limelight views.

TUESDAY, OCT. 29.

NOT NEEDED IN CANADA.

A nickel-in-the-slot freak has struck Toronto, with a phonograph reproducing the sounds of a southern negro lynchings. Such "entertainment" — a burlesque upon the word — is brutalizing and Canada has no use for it. The Planet agrees most heartily with the Toronto Star when in discussing the matter that paper says:—

No doubt it was curiosity and nothing worse that induced hundreds of people to go daily to the shop in Yonge street where a phonograph reproduced the death cries of Henry Smith, the negro who was burned at the stake in Paris, Texas, some time ago. A representative of the Toronto Saturday Night who attended the show complained to Inspector Archibald, and Crown Attorney Carry caused the performance to be suppressed, and the cylinders used in the phonograph. Saturday Night says:—

There is no question that the record is authentic. For pure horror the thing was beyond words. The yells and curses of the mob, the screams and pleas for mercy of the slowly-roasted negro combined in a babel so blood-curdling as to be comparable to nothing short of a glimpse into hell itself. It is inconceivable how law-abiding Canadian retaining the least vestige of self respect, could listen to so hideous a thing without having their gorge risen and being betrayed into an attack on the machine and its operator. That such an attraction could play to big business in the heart of a city that boasts of its schools and churches, and that is regarded as being the centre of culture in the Dominion, suggests some very unpleasant reflections. To what extent are the people of this country serious in denouncing the deeds of Southern mobs, seeing that in an enlightened Canadian city, hundreds can find pleasure in flocking to hear and see what purports to be a true-to-life reproduction of one of the most awful excesses of mob trial on record?

It cannot be believed that any motive but curiosity led people to this atrocious entertainment, and no doubt nearly all who went regretted it. Curiosity is strong in man, and if Hades gaped for half an hour anywhere near Toronto we suppose the streets would be blocked with people trying to get a look in while the chance lasted—not that they approved the place, or found pleasure in looking in to it, but simply because it was in the way of a phenomenon.

But this country should not share in the curse of negro-hunting—in the evil effects that are sure to flow to the people of the United States from the brutalizing reprisals made by mobs upon brutal criminals. We must fence out such evils, if we can, and certainly the phonographic reproduction of the moans, groans, screams, and curses of a negro burning at the stake is an "entertainment" that should not be allowed to be presented anywhere in Canada. The authorities should take such measures as will make it unnecessary for each city and town to protect itself in turn from such an evil as this.

TOO LITTLE TACT.

Montreal Witness.
The strong, blunt, manly Buller, idol of his troops, has had to retire from service because he was too courageous and chivalrous, too frank and too little tactful. He is every inch a soldier but too little of a general.

AFTER MUCH TRIBULATION.

English Paper.
A rather curious obituary notice appears in the columns of the Cornwall Record: "He was five times married, but has found peace at last."

THAT "LIBERAL" LITERATURE.

Hamilton Herald (Engl.).
A man named Mabey tried to sell campaign material to the Ontario Tory machine; but it was rejected because it was too abusive. Then he faked up another batch of material and offered it to the Ontario government machine, and it was accepted. The Herald hasn't seen Mr. Mabey's pamphlet and cannot express any opinion as to its merits; but, whatever

SOUND AS A DOLLAR

That is the result of a course of treatment with Scott's Emulsion. We have special reference to persons with weak lungs and sensitive throats.

Scott's Emulsion does some things better than others. This is one of them. It has a peculiar action on the throat and lungs which gives them strength and makes them tough.

That's how Scott's Emulsion drives out coughs, colds and bronchitis. It keeps them out, too.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like. SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, Toronto its literary merits may be, its value as Grit campaign material is now rather less than nothing.

A CHIVALROUS ACT.

New York Sun.
The leading British service paper the Army and Navy Gazette, says of Buller's telegram: "It was interpreted a little readily into a counsel of surrender. Sir Redvers Buller does not deny that he so intended it, but he had a reason, and it is one to his infinite credit. He wished White to understand that if surrender became inevitable, he the supreme chief, was prepared to accept the responsibility of it. Viewed in this light it was surely a chivalrous, not a blameworthy act." It looks as if the British public, irritated at the non-conclusion of the war, had fastened on Sir Redvers as a scapegoat.

THE SULTAN'S WAY.

Toronto Globe.
While there have been many suggestions that newspapers should decline to publish any references to assassinations, and should in this way discourage their desire for notoriety, the Sultan, according to The London Daily Mail, has already set the example in this regard. The Sultan's official organ, The Sabah, in reporting the death of Mr. McKinley, said:—"Mr. McKinley, who has been suffering in health for some time past, has not recovered from his malady, and, according to the telegram which we print above, has just passed away." The Sultan's motive may well be imagined.

MACHINE IN EAST KENT.

Mail and Empire.
East Kent Conservatives have decided, in view of the fact that the present bye-elections to return a candidate for but a few months, they will not place a candidate in the field, but will call a convention at an early date for the purpose of selecting a candidate for the general election and definitely insulating the campaign. The Government candidate, John Lee, was selected by the machine and forced upon the local party against its will. By the other aspirants the action of the machine is felt to be humiliating, and the machine will hear from them when the general election takes place.

LOOKS LIKE A JOKE.

Hamilton Spectator.
The East Kent Liberals assembled in convention the other day and produced this, the very best joke of the season:

"That this convention of East Kent Liberals deplores the fact that violations of the sanctity of the ballot-box have been committed by irresponsible persons under the pretense of aiding in the election of Liberal representatives."

"They desire to record their most unqualified condemnation of such practice and their hope that such offenders shall receive the severest punishment."

Men who can stretch their consciences sufficiently to allow them to call the election officers appointed by government and the members of the Grit machine "irresponsible persons" who "pretended" to aid the Grit party, must necessarily be tremendously sincere in hoping that these soundrels be punished.

A new issue of the School Manual—school law and regulations, 1901, has been issued by the Education Department and the books have been mailed to the several rural school sections, by the inspectors. The town school board are being supplied direct from the Department. Among the recent changes in the regulations is one that very materially affects a large number of teachers who have been expecting renewals of certificates, under section 87 (a) of the regulations as heretofore. This regulation has been changed so as to limit renewals to those who have passed the Junior Leaving Examination or the Model School Examination. Coming so unexpectedly, this regulation if adhered to by the County Board of Examiners, will place a large number of teachers in an awkward position and cause inconvenience to the School Boards that expect to re-engage them for the ensuing year. Inspector Colles, as secretary of the Board of Examiners, is now in correspondence with the Education Department with a view to obtaining the sanction of the Minister of Education to granting renewals to present applicants, under former conditions until the present regulation shall have had time to be more widely known. The renewals granted at last meeting of the Board were to those holding Senior Leaving certificates and who are thereby exempt from re-examination.

WASTED WORK.

A very popular young man in South Chatham, who is not in the habit of cutting wood, took a notion Saturday night and when he takes a notion it's all off with what he does after. Well, anyway, he decided to cut enough wood to last over Sunday. He pulled off his coat first, then he got warm "under the collar" and he took it off. He continued work for a few minutes and off came the vest. He had worked for ten minutes already. Soon he had enough to last over Sunday and he went in the house where he enjoyed the pleasant smiles of a mother and the thankful signs of a father. He brought in enough to light the first fire and put the remainder in the woodshed. Next morning mother said very affectionately, "please B—, bring in some wood." Out he went, but 'twasn't there at all. What he said wasn't Websterlike.

"We were very much pleased with the design you sent. It was beautiful and appropriate." The Victoria Ave. Greenhouses receive such words of commendation every day. Telephone No. 181.

Glasses Can Cure

DO cure—in many, many cases. We have fitted glasses for plenty of people who have had slight defects of the eyes, who after wearing them for a while, have been able to put them off again—cured.

The ailment may have been slight and hardly worth the trouble of procuring glasses, some may say—but those who think that never suffered severely from headache—never had to leave off reading or sewing owing to aching, burning eyes, or we know they would appreciate a prompt, permanent relief very much.

If something's wrong, let us tell you what it is and how to relieve it. Costs nothing.

SULLENLY PAYS PENALTY

Czolg as Assassin of Late President McKinley Executed This Morning.

Special to The Planet.

Auburn, N. Y., Oct. 28.—It was just exactly 7:11 o'clock when Czolgosz crossed the threshold, but a minute had elapsed and he had just finished the last statement when the strapping was completed and the guards stepped back.

He head was erect, and with his gray flannel shirt turned back at the neck, he looked quite boyish. He was intensely pale and as he tried to throw his head back and carry himself erect his chin quivered very perceptibly.

As he was being seated he looked about at the assembled witnesses with quite a steady stare and said, "I killed the president because he was an enemy of the good people—the working people."

His voice trembled slightly at first, but gained strength with each word and he spoke perfect English.

"I am not sorry for my crime," he said loudly, just as the guard pushed his head back on the rubber headrest and drew the strap across his forehead and chin.

For 45 seconds the full current was kept on and then slowly the electrician threw the switch back, reducing the current volt by volt until it was out off entirely. Then just as it had reached that point he threw the lever back again for two or three seconds. The body, which had collapsed as the current was reduced, stiffened up again against the straps.

When it was turned off again, Dr. MacDonald stepped to the chair and put his hand over the heart. He said he felt no pulsation, but suggested that the current be turned on again for a few seconds. Once more the body became rigid. At 7:15 the current was turned off for good.

As the pressure on the straps tightened and bound the jaw slightly, he mumbled: "I'm awfully sorry I could not see my father."

THREE CONTACTS OF ELECTRICITY.

Warden Mead raised his hand and at 7:12:30 Electrician Davis turned the switch that threw 1,700 volts of electricity into the living body.

The rush of the current threw the body so hard against the straps that they cracked perceptibly. The hands clenched suddenly and the whole attitude was one of extreme tenseness.

From the time Czolgosz had left his cell until the full penalty was paid, less than four minutes had elapsed. The physicians present used the stethoscope and other tests to determine if any life remained.

SUGAR BEET PRODUCTION

Hooper King Talks on the Grow, Ing of this Root.

Net Profit of From $25 to $80 Per acre—He Will Plant 7 Acres Next Year.

Hooper King, of this city, went to Wallaceburg last week, to investigate the culture of sugar beets. He desired to inspect fields where the beets were being dug up, that he might judge whether there was money in growing this root or not.

"The cultivation of the beet root," said Mr. King to The Planet, is similar and the expense of raising no greater than of raising mangolds. The cost of harvesting is no more barring the purchasing of a plough for lifting the beets. This plough costs $9 I find that beets produce from 15 to 20 tons to the acre. For shipment to the other side, buyers are paying $3.20 per ton. All the growers are satisfied with a return netting from $25 to $60, per acre, clear profit. They are now building a factory at Wallaceburg, which will be ready to manufacture beet sugar next season.

"Wednesday, the day I was there, I saw 130 loads of beets being delivered for shipment. The crop averages two tons to the load and all the farmers were well satisfied with their crop this year. The company have purchased 50 acres for a site for their factory, and the lake Erie have put a switch in.

"The manager showed me around for a couple of hours. The capital stock of the company will be $600,000. The building will be 1,000 feet long. The manager told me that the farmers were growing beets at $3.20 per ton for the Michigan factory and were prepared to go on and raise them at $4 per ton for home use. If the farmers around Chatham would grow from 1,000 to 1,500 acres of beets for the Wallaceburg factory next year, Chatham would get a factory. After the raising of beets was begun here, Chatham would have no difficulty in getting a factory. The city was splen-

NEGLECT

If the tooth aches the owner goes to a dentist; if the stomach, he goes to a doctor; if his corn hurts he goes to a chiropodist, but if his eye aches he blames it to overwork or perhaps to a cold in the head. A man in New York who once had good eyesight but turned blind offered $1,000,000 to have his sight restored. He was like hundreds of other people of the present day and who are troubled with a dull headache, which they blame to overwork, study, or perhaps to being up late the night before. There are others who complain of objects being dull, and again there are people who see specks floating in the air like dust, which is not dust, but eye trouble. These troubles can all be relieved by consulting E. J. MacIntyre, Chatham's reliable Optician, who uses all the latest methods for treating these troubles.

HOME SPUN HEART.

"A Homespun Heart," a pastoral comedy drama, by Hal Reid, was presented at the Grand last evening. The story is of simple country life, where the machinations of a miserly old Money-lender and an adventurous gambler, which they received. There were touching scenes offset now and again by snatches of humor, furnished chiefly by Bill Dyke, a ge'er-do-well of quaint country life was very realistic and the scenery too, was splendid and well adapted to the piece. "A Homespun Heart" was undoubtedly the best comedy drama that has appeared here this season and it was well entitled to the frequent applause of the audience. The play appeared to take with the people, and they are not slow to give vent to their approval will be the "House that Jack Built."

"THE HOUSE THAT JACK BUILT"

"The House that Jack Built," will have its first presentation in this city at the Grand on Saturday evening, Nov. 16th. This, the latest contribution which Mr. George H. Broadhurst has given to the stage, is said to be even better than his three former farcical productions with which theatrical managers are so familiar, namely, "The Wrong Mr. Wright," "Why Smith left Home," and "What Happened to Jones." Prominent in the cast of "The House that Jack Built" are George H. Summers, C. F. Lorraine, St. George Hussey, Bessie Lockwood, Hugh Cameron, Joe Williams, Mildred Keith, May Courtney, Gloria Alonzo, Robert Brower, Albert Amberg, Arthur Gline, Roy Goodchild, Fred Johns, Harry Hopkins and others.

The Beach Comber And the Man-of-War.

By J. F. ROSE-SOLEY.

[Copyright, 1894, by the Author.]

The copra house was down on the rock bound beach, some 50 yards away from the shore, a stretch of uneven, stony soil, with grass patches here and there and great black rocks showing out from the surface, separating the two places where the trader did his business. The old man's weary feet had worn a deep track across the plot; up and down he went many times a day. The copra house—the title is a misnomer, but it is always used in Samoa—was but a mere flimsy erection of rough boards, though iron roofed and water tight. Further, the door was provided with a very substantial padlock, which the trader was at great pains to lock and unlock every time he visited the shed, for the place held the only merchandise the country could produce—all that there was to trade for. The little bits of oily, brown, evil smelling copra must be kept dry or else they would rot long before the time came for shipping them to Europe. And they must be protected from theft, or else the cunning natives would think nothing of taking a few basketfuls at night and reselling them to the trader next day. Therefore every time a Samoan came, perhaps with but a few baskets of the copra, the old trader, with a weary sigh, would take a key down from its accustomed nail and plod down to the shed. It was quite a solemn and serious business, this purchase of a few shillings' worth of produce, and both sides went about it with becoming gravity. The first question that had to be decided was whether the copra was green—that is to say, whether it had been merely warmed in the sun or whether it had been properly dried by several days' exposure.

As the copra is bought by weight, it is, of course, to the native seller's interest to dry it as little as possible, while the trader, on the other hand, does not want to lose 20 or 30 per cent by shrinkage. So the two argue the point out together, while I sit on the wire enclosed veranda and watch from afar the wordy conflict.

Silei, the industrious girl, has got her sewing machine out. She does not put it on a table, as the white lady would, but rests it on a kerosene case on the floor and squats cross legged before it. Of course it is a hand machine; natives do not take readily to the use of the treadle. She is fastidious really, for geona lava-lava out of the brightest prints Manchester can produce, and when they are made they will be hung up in the store and sold for half a dollar each, perhaps in exchange for the very basket of copra the native is arguing about. He swears with a fluency of Biblical expression which only long missionary training has rendered possible, but that the copra has been three days in the sun, whereas the trader, judging from his experience, asserts that at the outside it cannot have been more than one, and in cloudy weather too.

At last the trader, grumbling somewhat, purchases the copra, for he knows if he does not it will go to his rival's store. He is consoled by the reflection that his balances are 13 pounds out in every 100; also he is an expert at weighing and by dexterously manipulating the scales can make the copra appear several pounds lighter than it really is, and so under the waving palms by the side of the rippling lagoon, nature smiling on them with her most innocent expression, the two complete their ingenious transaction. Both are cheating, and both know it. So perhaps it does not matter very much. The native, having been well taught by the missionaries, will go to church three times next Sunday and say his morning and evening prayers more fervently than ever, so that he will save his conscience. As for the godless trader, he has no conscience. He has long since lost even the memory of the article. So we need not concern ourselves about him.

At last, after another half hour's haggling in the store, the native goes away with the goods which he has been permitted to take in exchange for the copra, and the trader comes out of the house and seats himself wearily beside me, mopping his face the while.

As usual he harks back to the old times.

"Things were different in those days," he said. "Then we could do as we liked with the natives. Now they can do as they like with us. We have to cut things fine to make a living at all." And to console himself he took a long drink of kava, emptying the cocoanut shell, which held about a pint, at one draft.

Silei laughed the musical little laugh of the Samoan maiden. The whir of the sewing machine ceased and she looked smilingly at the nearly empty bowl. She knew she would soon have to fabricate more kava, an occupation which she particularly enjoyed, I suppose, because it gratified her maiden vanity by enabling her to exhibit herself in the most graceful of attitudes.

"Yes, yes, girl, you can make some more," said the trader. "I'll keep you from the machine, and we don't want that infernal thing clicking away while we are talking."

"The oil days were the times," he began, "before any one invented this copra and we used to take oil from the natives in payment for everything. Why, even the missionaries used to have a big tank outside the church door and would take up the collection in oil. It was gallons of oil instead of dollars then, but they got the money just the same in the end, and the church prospered."

His face clouded as he made this last remark. Perhaps the undoubted prosperity of mission work in Samoa brought him no consolation. Perhaps he would have preferred the natives in their original barbaric state rather than civilized and Christianized and educated up to a standpoint of bargaining which he found it difficult for even the superior intellect of a white man to overreach them.

He did not say this, though. "I've made more money in a week then than I can do in a year now," he went on. "Forty years ago, when I was but a young fellow, I started trading on the southern side of Upolu, within 20 miles of me, and I could get any price I liked for an old uniform coat, especially if it had brass buttons on it, but a Tower musket—that was the thing," and his rugged old face lit up at the pleasant reminiscence.

"I had the place to myself for three years, and you may be sure I made a pretty good thing of it. Wish I had it. Some of the money left now. Then old Jack Wilkinson came along and settled down near me."

"But who was Jack Wilkinson?" I asked.

"Never hear of Jack Wilkinson—old Jack, as he was always called? Why, I thought everybody in Samoa knew of him, but he was getting to be an old man then, and he's been dead long since, and I suppose you young people have forgotten all about the old fogies."

"Well, I'll tell you about Jack. He was a hard case, one of the regular old style beach combers. He had been I don't know how many years in the group and had grown to be almost like a native. He used to wear a lava-lava instead of trousers, just like a Samoan, and he could go about barefoot anywhere, even on a coral reef, and that's a thing few white men can manage without cutting their feet to pieces."

"They did say," and he lowered his voice unconsciously, "that he was one of a party of convicts who had escaped from Australia when it was a penal settlement. They stole a boat and somehow found their way here and made themselves at home among the natives, but the story was only whispered between white men, and it would have been as much as one's life was worth to even hint at the thing to old Jack. He was a handy man with his knife, and there were no police about to call him to account for his actions."

"I got along well enough with Jack, though I must say he had ways of dealing with the natives which I hardly approved of. They were afraid of him, though, and fed him on the best the land could furnish. Jack never did anything for them in return. He spent his days lying on a mat in the shade of one of their big cool houses, open all round, so that the breeze could pass through and Jack could see all that was going on without even moving. Sometimes, when he was particularly energetic, he would go fishing on the reef at low tide, when coral showed up high above the water, and it was easy enough to spear mulluuli with long three pronged spears."

"Still, I soon found it was to my interest to keep in with old Jack. He got twice as much oil as I could for the same amount of trade, and though he was always abusing and ill treating the Samoans, strangely enough they would take their oil to him rather than to me."

and I was as smooth as butter to the natives, talking kindly to them and always giving them little presents. I own that I could never quite make it out to this day, and no man knows the crooks and twists of the Samoan character better than I do. I cannot understand what gave Jack his extraordinary influence over the people, though, to be sure, in the end they killed him on Manono. But I'll tell you about that some other time.

"So it happened that Jack became a sort of sub-trader or assistant and would buy the natives' oil, giving them in return orders on me for so much trade. I paid him a good commission, and I could afford to do it, for so long as Jack was sober he was the best hand at bargaining with the Samoans I ever saw, but when he got drunk there was no holding him. I had to get a case of gin down from Apia now and again or else Jack would never have staid with me. Then, he would go tearing wild for a week or two until it was all finished and perhaps wind up by setting fire to a native house, or carrying off a woman, or something like that. I had to pay for the damage, and then Jack sobered down and went along right enough for another month or two."

"It was this falling that had got the beach comber into trouble at Tanua, a village about 20 miles along the coast, where he had lived before coming to my place. The natives there had put up with him for a long time, but at last they got sick of the business, and the chiefs of the town turned dead against him and gave him a week in which to clear out. I never knew rightly what brought this about, for Jack was very reticent on the point, but it must have been something very bad or else the natives would never have summoned up courage to behave as they did. There was a taupe, a village virgin, mixed up in the business, I know, a fine looking girl. She stuck to him all through and came away with him to Salua, where I was."

"For a long time Jack had been playing off an old beach comber's bounce on the natives at Tanua. Whenever they would turn a bit nasty he would threaten to bring a British man-of-war down on them and have them well punished. This used to scare the people, for men-of-war were scarce in those days, and the Samoans had an almost superstitious awe of their guns. It's different now, for the natives have seen so much of modern war vessels that they've grown to despise them. They aren't afraid of being shelled either. Why, I've seen them over on Upolu, when a man-of-war did actually fire on the rebels, sitting round smoking quite comfortably in the back behind, while the shots were dropping into their village and doing no harm at all, except perhaps setting fire to a house or two, and when, by pure accident, a shell did fall into a cookhouse and kill five men they said that the victims had been stealing the missionary's ducks or else they would not have been killed. Shows the benefit of religious teaching, doesn't it?"

"Well, to come back to Jack. The man-of-war game at last got played out because no man-of-war came, and the natives would not believe him any longer. Then he had to clear, but at the very last, when he was leaving, he told them that he would soon come back with a big war canoe and make them pay a heavy fine in pigs."

"The Tanua people only laughed at him, but as it turned out, strangely enough, Jack kept his word. He had been at Salua about six months when a man-of-war actually did come, not after the natives, but after Jack himself. The coastal had at last—for news traveled slowly then—heard of Jack's pranks at Tanua, and had sent the Sea Gull, which happened to be in Apia at the time, down to arrest him. It was a bad lookout for Jack, for there were enough crimes charged against him to hang a dozen men."

"I was away in the bush hunting wild cattle when the Sea Gull arrived, and that saved Jack—that and his own smartness. The vessel dropped into the lagoon at Salua early one morning and anchored about a mile from the shore, for it was a good safe harbor, though rather small. Jack from his own hut saw her come in and guessed what she was after. Presently she lowered a boat, and a lieutenant, all gold lace, came ashore in style. Of course he went to my place, for it was the only papalagi house about, and I suppose they thought I would be able to tell them the whereabouts of Jack, having heard that he had been seen around Salua."

"When the lieutenant opened the gate, there was Jack, as bold as brass, sitting on an easy chair upon the veranda reading an old newspaper and looking very much at home."

"I nearly died of laughing when Jack told me the story afterward, mimi-

and I was as smooth as butter to the natives, talking kindly to them and always giving them little presents. I cannot understand what gave Jack his extraordinary influence over the people, though, to be sure, in the end they killed him on Manono. But I'll tell you about that some other time.

"So it happened that Jack became a sort of sub-trader or assistant and would buy the natives' oil, giving them in return orders on me for so much trade. I paid him a good commission, and I could afford to do it, for so long as Jack was sober he was the best hand at bargaining with the Samoans I ever saw, but when he got drunk there was no holding him. I had to get a case of gin down from Apia now and again or else Jack would never have staid with me. Then, he would go tearing wild for a week or two until it was all finished and perhaps wind up by setting fire to a native house, or carrying off a woman, or something like that. I had to pay for the damage, and then Jack sobered down and went along right enough for another month or two."

"It was this falling that had got the beach comber into trouble at Tanua, a village about 20 miles along the coast, where he had lived before coming to my place. The natives there had put up with him for a long time, but at last they got sick of the business, and the chiefs of the town turned dead against him and gave him a week in which to clear out. I never knew rightly what brought this about, for Jack was very reticent on the point, but it must have been something very bad or else the natives would never have summoned up courage to behave as they did. There was a taupe, a village virgin, mixed up in the business, I know, a fine looking girl. She stuck to him all through and came away with him to Salua, where I was."

"For a long time Jack had been playing off an old beach comber's bounce on the natives at Tanua. Whenever they would turn a bit nasty he would threaten to bring a British man-of-war down on them and have them well punished. This used to scare the people, for men-of-war were scarce in those days, and the Samoans had an almost superstitious awe of their guns. It's different now, for the natives have seen so much of modern war vessels that they've grown to despise them. They aren't afraid of being shelled either. Why, I've seen them over on Upolu, when a man-of-war did actually fire on the rebels, sitting round smoking quite comfortably in the back behind, while the shots were dropping into their village and doing no harm at all, except perhaps setting fire to a house or two, and when, by pure accident, a shell did fall into a cookhouse and kill five men they said that the victims had been stealing the missionary's ducks or else they would not have been killed. Shows the benefit of religious teaching, doesn't it?"

"Well, to come back to Jack. The man-of-war game at last got played out because no man-of-war came, and the natives would not believe him any longer. Then he had to clear, but at the very last, when he was leaving, he told them that he would soon come back with a big war canoe and make them pay a heavy fine in pigs."

"The Tanua people only laughed at him, but as it turned out, strangely enough, Jack kept his word. He had been at Salua about six months when a man-of-war actually did come, not after the natives, but after Jack himself. The coastal had at last—for news traveled slowly then—heard of Jack's pranks at Tanua, and had sent the Sea Gull, which happened to be in Apia at the time, down to arrest him. It was a bad lookout for Jack, for there were enough crimes charged against him to hang a dozen men."

"I was away in the bush hunting wild cattle when the Sea Gull arrived, and that saved Jack—that and his own smartness. The vessel dropped into the lagoon at Salua early one morning and anchored about a mile from the shore, for it was a good safe harbor, though rather small. Jack from his own hut saw her come in and guessed what she was after. Presently she lowered a boat, and a lieutenant, all gold lace, came ashore in style. Of course he went to my place, for it was the only papalagi house about, and I suppose they thought I would be able to tell them the whereabouts of Jack, having heard that he had been seen around Salua."

"When the lieutenant opened the gate, there was Jack, as bold as brass, sitting on an easy chair upon the veranda reading an old newspaper and looking very much at home."

"I nearly died of laughing when Jack told me the story afterward, mimi-

and I was as smooth as butter to the natives, talking kindly to them and always giving them little presents. I own that I could never quite make it out to this day, and no man knows the crooks and twists of the Samoan character better than I do. I cannot understand what gave Jack his extraordinary influence over the people, though, to be sure, in the end they killed him on Manono. But I'll tell you about that some other time.

PRANKS OF SOLDIERS

INCIDENTS THAT LENT VARIETY TO THE LIFE OF THE FIGHTERS.

Times During the War Between the States When Discipline Was Forgotten and the Generals Found It Wise to Ignore the Fact.

"Discipline didn't count," said the sergeant, "in the matter of pranks. There were not better soldiers in the army than the boys of the Eighty-fifth Illinois, and none yielded more readily to discipline or responded more rapidly in the rough school of experience. But the men of the Eighty-fifth were, after Stone River, Chickamauga, Kennesaw, Peach Tree Creek, Atlanta and the march to the sea, as much given to pranks as they were in their first march in Kentucky in the summer of 1862. We arrived at Richmond on the long march from the Carolinas early in May, 1865. Our brigade was made up of seasoned soldiers, if there were any in the army, but they came north in the belief that General Halleck or Secretary Stanton had put a slight on General Sherman, and they were looking for trouble.

"The march from North Carolina after the surrender of Johnston had been a sort of picnic for the boys, but discipline was as strict as it was in front of Atlanta, and it was needed when we came to Richmond. Halleck, then in command of the department of the James, directed that Sherman's army pass in review before him as it marched through Richmond. Sherman forbade the review, and Halleck refused to permit any of Sherman's men to enter the city. Ex-Confederates and citizens came and went at will, but when Sherman's men attempted to visit the city they were met at the pontoon bridge by a provost guard and turned back.

"Sherman's men resented all this, and they were furious over the intimation that they were kept out of the city in the interests of good order and because they could not be trusted. The boys talked only among themselves and organized to carry out a plan to see the city. One day a large crowd of unarmed soldiers assembled at the south end of the bridge and at a given signal rushed upon the guards, pushing many of them into the river and overwhelming the others by sheer weight of numbers. In short, Sherman's men, acting without orders and without officers, seized the bridge and held it while the boys went over and looked at the fallen Confederate capital. So far as I know, Halleck made no complaint of this irregular proceeding, and Sherman did not notice it.

"After the grand review at Washington the Eighty-fifth Illinois, with the other regiments of the brigade, went into camp near the Soldiers' home, and the men were permitted to roam at will over the city. One morning some of the boys discovered a soldier at Fort Sumner walking up and down in front of an officer's tent carrying a log on his shoulder. One of the boys was sent over to investigate, and when he reported that the soldier at the fort was carrying the log as punishment for a very trivial offense the men decided to interfere. They went in force, but without arms, over to the fort, took charge, dismissed the log carrier to his quarters and jovially informed the officer in command that the punishment was contrary to the regulations as to let it occur again.

"At the close of the interview they picked up the log and brought it to the head of an orderly column into our camp. At the beginning of the war such a proceeding would have thrown army headquarters into a panic. But then the war was over, and Sherman's men were in great favor, and the case was not even reported.

"I remember a case," said the major, "in which soldiers who came to frolic remained to camp. One night our brigade camped at Tallahassee, and a fire called the men to the crossing of the principal streets. The boys were at first greatly amused at the efforts made by some talent to put out the fire and were free with the most absurd suggestions. But when the matter became serious and the few citizens were bewildered and helpless the soldiers fell into ranks, organized quickly a dozen fire brigades and, under the direction of men who had fought big fires at home, worked half the night to save the property of their enemies. They checked and after a time mastered the fire, but from first to last they bore themselves like soldiers on a frolic, except that they made a business of putting out the fire.

"That same brigade after the terrific battle of Jan. 2, 1863, at Stone River, returned from the last charge against Breckinridge's corps to their bivouac of the morning to find Negley's men carrying off the rails out of which they had built road shelters the night before. Palmer's men hurriedly stacked arms and by common impulse surrounded, at a full run, the rail experts of the other division. Both divisions had participated in the charge, and had marched back in the dusk of evening with the battle spirit on them. Palmer's men came on the scene at the swinging, exultant step of victory, marching like regiments on review. But no sooner did they see Negley's men carrying off their rails than they dropped the soldier and bore down on the raiders like football players in a rush. The movement was so spontaneous and the numbers were so great that Negley's men were overwhelmed, and Palmer's men carried back the rails trodding like mad.

"The scene was as tumultuous as a hundred football struggles compressed into one and the uproar was terrific. Negley's men were forming for a counter rush when General Palmer and Negley came in from the scene, the one bareheaded and the other disheveled. Negley complained loudly that it was a pretty howdy do when he couldn't confiscate rails enough to shelter his headquarters from the rain without Palmer turning out from 5,000 to 10,000 men to prevent the confiscation. Palmer replied that he had no rails himself to lend, but his men might have if they were approached in the right way, but by the great horn spoon, nobody could steal the rails which his men had stolen with infinite trouble two days before. In this spirit the affair was settled, each general ordering his men to quarters if they could find them.

A Daily Nuisance.

A Simple Remedy Which Will Interest Cataract Sufferers.

In its earliest stages cataract is more of a nuisance than a menace to the general health, but sooner or later, the disease extends to the throat, bronchial tubes and even to the stomach and intestines.

Cataract is essentially a disease of the mucous membrane of the local symptoms being a profuse discharge of mucus, stoppage of the nostrils, irritation in throat, causing coughing, sneezing, gagging and frequent clearings of the throat and head.

The usual treatment by local doses, snuffs, salves, etc., often gives temporary relief, but anything like a cure can only be obtained by a remedy which removes the cause and the disappearance of the inflammation from the mucous surfaces.

A new remedy which meets these requirements and which so far has been remarkably successful in curing cataract is Stuart's Catarrh Tablets.

These tablets act upon the blood and mucous membranes only. They can hardly be called a secret patent medicine as they are composed of such valuable remedies as sanguinaria, hyacinth, Eucalyptol and similar cleansing medicines which cure by eliminating from the blood and mucous surfaces the catarrhal poison.

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are large, pleasant tasting lozenges taken internally, allowing them to dissolve slowly in the mouth, in this way they reach the throat, fauces and the entire alimentary canal.

If desired, they may also be dissolved in water and used as a douche in addition to the internal use, but it is not at all necessary to use a douche; a few of them dissolved in the mouth daily, will cure the whole catarrhal trouble without resorting to the inconvenience of a douche.

Dr. Bennett states "that the internal treatment for cataract is rapidly taking the place of the old plan of douches and local application and further says that probably the best and certainly the safest remedy at present on the market is Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, as no more potent made of their composition and all the really efficient remedies for cataract are contained in this tablet."

Druggists sell Stuart's Catarrh Tablets at fifty cents for full sized packages. Ask your druggist, and if he is honest, he will tell you there is no safer, more palatable, more efficient and convenient remedy on the market.

A MAGIC POWER.
The ugliest face may be beautiful grow. If love's lamp shines from out the eyes.
The saddest life sweet joy may know, If from the soul love's income rise.
—Emma C. Dowd.

A puny child is always an anxiety to the parents. There seems generally no reason why the little one should be weak when it is so well fed. But the fact is that it does not matter how much food the child takes if the stomach cannot extract the nourishment from it. No benefit can be derived from just eating. That is the condition of many a sickly child. The stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition are not doing their work, and the body is starved. A little use to give fish foods, like cod liver oil or emulsions, in such a case, because these also have to be digested; they may lighten the stomach's labor but they don't strengthen it. Strength is what the stomach needs. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery strengthens the stomach, nourishes the nerves and increases the action of the blood making glands. It is a tonic to every other preparation for children's use, on account of its body building qualities, and also because it is pleasant to the taste and contains no alcohol, whiskey or other intoxicant. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are valuable aid when the bowels are irregular. They are small. Children take them readily.

FALL TREE PLANTING.

Not a Good Practice in Northern Latitude, But Can Be Made Successful.

At the meeting of the Iowa Horticultural Society last year the question of fall planting of orchards was discussed pretty thoroughly, and it was stated by one of the speakers that it is entirely an error to recommend fall planting as many do, and especially in the more northern sections of Iowa, which conditions would also apply to other sections of the same latitude. The speaker claimed that the climate of northern Iowa was so dry and cold that it is only in an occasional year that fall planting will succeed satisfactorily.

If the practice of fall planting is adopted, it will result only in failure in the large majority of cases, but the speaker said, if you must and will plant in autumn, lean your trees, in setting, well to the south by southwest. After setting, bank up around the tree a wide band, 18 to 20 inches high, then cover with a heavy coat of stable manure. This prevents freezing until late, and when it does freeze will keep frozen until spring opens, when everything should be removed from around the tree, to the bottom level. The criticism will be that this means hard labor and plenty of it, but it is preferable to dead trees. The speaker's advice was not to get trees in the fall, but should you do so, do not plant them then, but rather dig in a high place, a trench three feet deep and three or four feet wide, and as long as may be needed, depending upon the number of trees to be buried. One end of the trench should be a slope of about 45 degrees, upon which convenience laying your trees, with roots down on bottom of trench, and the tops will reach but little above the original level. Make the layer thin enough that you may pack plenty of fine earth between the roots. Cover this layer, roots, bodies and tops, taking care that the earth is firmly packed around the roots. Commence with another layer, treating in the same manner until all are in; then mound up the earth to the whole, leaving ditches, not too near, around the outside for draining off the surface water. The speaker found that this method was the best one for "fall planting."—Prairie Farmer.

A Bridegroom's Perfunctory Promise.
The groom entered alone and said confidentially:
"Do you use the word 'Obey' in your marriage service, Mr. Blank?"
"No," said the minister, "I do not usually."

"Well," said the expectant Benedict, "I have come to ask you to marry me now, and I want it used."

"Certainly," replied the other. "It shall be done." And presently the couple stood solemnly before him.

"James T.," said the clergyman, "do you take this woman to be your wedded wife?"

"I do."

"Do you solemnly promise to love, to honor and obey her so long as you both live?"

Honor and rebellion struggled with the sanctities of the occasion on the bridegroom's face, but he chokingly responded, "I do," and the meek bride decorously promised in her turn.

After the ceremony was over the bridegroom said excitedly aside to the grave minister:

"You misunderstood me, sir, you misunderstood me! I referred to the woman's promising to obey."

"Ah, did you, indeed?" serenely answered his reverence. "But I think what is good for one side is good for the other, don't you? And, my friend, it is my advice to you to say nothing about it, for as an old married man I can tell you you'll have to obey anyhow."

Taking the Children Into Partnership.
A lady was recently speaking of her plan to keep all the business current affairs from the knowledge of her children—keeping everything depressing out of their life, she called it—that they might be free to enjoy themselves as long as possible, without any feeling of trouble or responsibility. "But will that really add to their happiness in the long run?" asked an older mother, dissenting. "We have always tried to take our children into partnership—to have them share our plans and interests, and let them know what we are trying to do and what we have to live on."

It seems to me that successes are more valued, if they come as something one has hoped for and helped to work for, and retrenchments are more easily borne, if they are intelligently agreed upon in the family council, instead of forced upon the younger members with only the bald statement that we cannot afford this or that. It strengthens the family tie, if the children feel that it is our home, our business, and our interests; if they know that their opinion is considered and that there is wisdom, self-control, and unselfishness. Life's best good for all of us lies in its discipline; not in escaping its burdens, but in learning how to bear them.

Done His Best.
"Your constituents are getting annoyed with you," said the faithful adviser.

"For what reason?" inquired Senator Sorghum.

"They say you haven't done a thing to discourage the trusts that are becoming so rich and arrogant."

"You go back and tell my constituents that. Tell them that whenever I have come in contact with a trust I have done all in my power to take some of its money away from it."

Hairbreadth Escape.
Mrs. Crimsoneak—I see by this paper that some statistician discovered that the average woman carries 40 to 60 miles of hair on her head.

Mr. Crimsoneak—And then she makes trouble if her husband happens to carry a couple of yards of it on his coat sleeve.

IT COST MONEY.

Many a man has spent all his earnings in trying to get rid of rheumatism. It cost Mr. James Davison, Oconto, Ont., between $1,000 and $2,000 before he tried Dr. Hall's Rheumatic Cure. He was a helpless invalid for six years but suffered from sciatica in his hip joint completely and he is now working his farm. This great blood purifier is put up in bottles containing ten days' treatment. Price 50 cents at all drug stores or The Dr. Hall Medicine Co., Kingston, Ont.

The Pain of Sore Feet.

Just about the most tantalizing of all pains comes from sore feet. To get relief bathe the feet in warm water and then rub them with Polson's Nerve Lotion. It penetrates through the pores of the skin, takes out the soreness, reduces swellings, invigorates the tired muscles, tones up the circulation, and prevents the feet from becoming sore again. Nervine is a protection and safe-guard against the pains and aches of the entire family and cures rheumatism, neuralgia, toothache, &c. 25 cents.

Rheumatism is a Constitutional Disease

The pain and localized conditions are mere results of constitutional conditions. Poisoned blood sends its evil influence to various parts of the body, and to cure permanently you must treat it constitutionally. Nothing so completely dispels these poisons from the system as Ferrozone. It imparts vitality and vigor, enabling the system to throw off the poisons that engendered rheumatism. Ferrozone also fortifies the system against the weakening effects of rheumatism, and cures, not simply relieves as most medicines do. Sold by McCall & Co.

The best way to overcome error is to emphasize the truth it ignores.

Perfect Cure for Bronchitis
This disease can be treated only by a remedy carried to the affected parts along with the air breathed, for nature intended these organs for the passage of air alone, and sprays, atomizers and internal medicines utterly fail. But Catarrhazone doesn't fail, for it goes wherever the air breathed goes, and its healing antiseptic vapor is sure to reach every affected part. Catarrhazone is inhaled at the mouth and after passing through every air cell of the breathing organs is slowly exhaled through the nostrils. Catarrhazone protects and heals the inflamed surfaces, relieves congestion, allays inflammation and perfectly cures all bronchial affections. Price $1. Small size 25c. CHAS RYALL WROTE HOME

A Gallant Chathamite Winning Honors in South African Constabulary.

Was Wounded but has Recovered—Mentioned in Despatches for Gallantry.

Doorn Kop, Sept. 22, '01.

To Lt.-Col. Rankin.
I think it is about time I was writing to you again. I see by an English paper, dated August 18th that a body of the S. A. C. had a scrap with 40 Boers. This is not correct for it was in that scrap that I was wounded. The S. A. C. numbered 100, or correctly speaking, 98, while the Boers numbered 360, instead of 40, as was ascertained afterwards. When our officer asked me how many I saw I said about 300 and when the staff adjt. went out to hand the white flag to deliver a proclamation, the number proved to be 360, two commandoes. Du Toit's and Jacob's. The latter seemed to be in command. He manoeuvred his troops to the best advantage. He is also a man to fight against, for he respects the white flag as well as anyone I was into Bloemfontein for, day or two, and while I was away the squad to which I belong, were out under Sgt. Armstrong, and disobeyed orders of Major Vaughan, and when they came back Major Vaughan gave Armstrong an awful calling. He said, "Supposing you had run against a body of Boers, you would have been captured, that is the way with 19 Troop, they are always blundering. To which Armstrong replied, "Sir, we did run into a body of Boers and got two of them, three horses, one mule and three saddles. Major Vaughan changed his tune to praise. Good for the 19th. They are staying at the front, as we were at Klakfontein. I regret I was not with them that day. However, I'll send a copy of orders from Col. Ridley, or rather an extract of a letter from him to the officer commanding this district.
Abraham's Kraal, 5, 9, '01.
"The following extract of a letter from Col. Ridley, C. B., Officer Commanding O. C. R., Division S. A. C., are published for information: The following is a copy of a letter from Col. Ridley to the officer commanding this district, dated 19th Aug. I consider all ranks bore themselves gallantly at the fight near Klakfontein or Basie's Pan. When part of your force met the enemy, Lt. Eaton and his troop (19) are to be congratulated on their behaviour against superior numbers. The following individuals showed up conspicuously: No. 19 troop—Lt. Eaton; Troop Sgt. Maj. Macville, Corp. Key; Troopers H. Falkenwe, P. Mack, C. Ryall, W. Gibbons, W. V. Jackson, the late A. James.
No. 6 troop—Troopers Clode and (Harrison) the last named belongs to 19 troop, a mistake. All of whose names I am sending to headquarters. In the action on the 23rd, between No. 1 troop and a superior force of Boers, the accident by which two men of 22 troop were wounded, was very regrettable, but Capt. Tucker's men could not be blamed for it. Trooper Purcell's (22 troop) conduct was very admirable, and I hope sincerely that his wound will not prove very serious. Trooper Rudd (22 troop) also behaved conspicuously well, and these two men's names are being sent to headquarters. I notice also the good behavior of the following of No. 1 troop while in action: Corp. Wilkinson, Corp. Garrison, Troopers, Bevan, Kay, Cook, Howard, Sigle, Anderson, Kennedy, and Kirkpatrick.
I received a letter from Harry Green and he said to be sure and keep up the restoration of the Canadians. I always will, as will all the rest of the boys of this troop. Well, I'll have to close. My respects to all the members of the 24th. I remain,
Yours respectfully,
CHAS. RYALL.

DIED IN AFRICA
An Ex Chathamite Succumbs to Enteric Fever at Petrusburg, S. A.
The Department of Militia was notified through his Excellency the Governor-General of the following casualties to Canadians in South Africa.—Harvey Gale Milne, died from enteric fever at Petrusburg on Monday. His next of kin is J. Z. Milne, of Qu'Appelle Station, N.W.T.—Mail and Empire.
Young Milne was quite well known in this city. He will be remembered by many as one of the boys who attended the Collegiate Institute in this city in 1895. He lived with Mrs. Salter Jarvis for a couple of years and was a great favorite with all who knew him.
Quite unselfish and always kind and thoughtful for others, he made many friends. He went to South Africa in March last but recently wrote to his friends here a letter full of hope.
Harvey Milne was a splendid example of young Canadian manhood and it is very sad that he should be cut down in the prime of his life.
A Georgia youngster who goes to Sunday school has decided that the reason you never see an angel with a mustache is because they have such a close shave to get there.

A FACTORY FOR CHATHAM

City Council Treat With the Wallaceburg Beet Sugar Company.

As Inducement, They ask for a Free Site Exemption From Taxes and 20,000 Gallons of Water Daily.

"You transact business with dispatch," remarked G. W. McCormick, secretary of the Wallaceburg Beet Root Sugar Factory, to Ald. Taylor at the close of the special meeting of the City Council last night. "Yes," responded the alderman from across the park, "we have made a practice of doing so all this year. Of course, this was only a special meeting. We did all the regular work a week ago, but our Mayor has been noted for punctuality and dispatch."

The special meeting of the City Council that gave rise to the above conversation was called by Mayor Sulman that the Council might consider a proposition from the directors of the Wallaceburg factory who propose to man of the Property committee if he in Chatham. All the aldermen were in attendance except Ald. Pritchard, who is still too ill to attend. Ald. Scane, chairman of the Finance committee, was welcomed back after his illness.

Requests to trim trees, received from William Side, R. O. Knight, Edward Horning and William Somerville were referred to the Chief of Police.

The following accounts were ordered paid:
J. L. Scott, $3.75.
Thos. Brundage, $4.25.
Bell Telephone Co., $1.40.
Dr. Thornton and A. D. Westman wrote resigning their positions on the Board of Health.

MEDAL FOR YOUNG BAXTER.
The Mayor said that his attention had been called to an article in The Planet under date of June 14, giving particulars re the saving of the life of a comrade by Thos. Baxter. He asked that the Humane Society be requested to furnish young Baxter with a medal.

Ald. Taylor moved, seconded by Ald. McGee, that the City Clerk write the Humane Society, calling their attention to the brave deed.—Carried.

ENGINEER'S OFFICE CHANGE.
The Mayor inquired of the chairman of the Property committee if he had attended to the request to have the city engineer's office moved downstairs. Ald. Taylor stated that he had been told that an effort had been made to do this some years ago, but the Board of Health had objected.

The Mayor—They have nothing to say about it.
Ald. Taylor—If we can make the change, we intend to do so.

On motion of Cowan-Scane, a rebate of $2 was granted Stephen Dyer. He had purchased a single grave in Maple Leaf cemetery but, having purchased a lot, he asked a refund of the money paid for the grave.

BEEF SUGAR FACTORY.

Secretary McCormick, of the Wallaceburg Beet Root Sugar Factory, was heard. He said: "The company with which I am connected is erecting a beet root sugar factory at Wallaceburg. Quite a number of the stockholders and the board of directors feel that it would be a good idea to have a factory in Chatham also. If the city will grant a few concessions and if a sufficient quantity of beets can be secured they are prepared to give a beet root sugar factory in Chatham."

"The factory will be about similar to the one in Wallaceburg, perhaps larger. The Wallaceburg factory is larger than any in Michigan. Talking to some of your citizens, they led me to believe that Chatham would give the site for the factory, exemption from taxation and enough pure water for washing the finished sugar. It is necessary also to get the farmers interested in growing sugar beets. In 1897, in Michigan, the first factory was completed. The President of the factory told me that they wanted 5,000 acres for growing beets, but after canvassing twelve counties all they could secure was 2,500 acres. That was in 1897, now there is 80,000 acres devoted to the culture of sugar beets in Michigan.

Our people do not want to establish a factory where beets are not grown. If the beets had been raised here as in Wallaceburg, it is very likely that the factory would have been here in place of where it is, although Wallaceburg has a little the best of Chatham in the streams and waterways which can be used for bringing in the beets.

All we ask is that the Council give us some expression of what they are willing to do along the lines mentioned. Of course we understand that everything has to be ratified by the ratepayers. We will, however, send our men here to solicit acreage. If we can secure 1,500 acres to grow beets upon next year and if the city will grant the few things we ask, we will put up a factory equal to the one at Wallaceburg. The crop of beets for 1902, that is the yield from the 1,500 acres which we shall secure, we will manufacture in Wallaceburg but after that we would manufacture all in the Chatham factory.

Ald. Scane—What amount of pure water would be required.
Mr. McCormick—The amount will not exceed 20,000 gallons daily.

Ald. Cowan—How much land will you require for a site?
Mr. McCormick—From 40 to 50 acres.

Ald. Scane—Would the site need to be near a stream?
Mr. McCormick—Yes. Close enough to get all the water required. The Wallaceburg factory is 250 feet from the river. The cost of laying sewers and the cost of carrying the water any distance is great.

Ald. Marshall—If you get a guarantee of 1,500 acres of beets for 1902,

Men's and Boys' Underwear

When you visit an orchard you are apt to make for the tree that's heaviest loaded. No particular reason for it, perhaps, but it's human nature.

That is one reason why we are showing more styles of winter underclothing than you'd expect a store to keep. Twenty-five distinct styles are here for men and boys. People like an unrestricted choice, and then, tastes do differ wonderfully in underwear.

Undersuits for every age from five years upward. We start with a good fleeced cotton for little fellows at 27c a piece, and range up to those beautiful English all-wools that cost $5 a suit for the biggest men. As many between sorts as there are tints in the sunrise.

The main point is that you can't very well get disappointed if you come here hunting Underwear.

how many more acres would you require the next year?

Mr. McCormick—it would never pay to erect a plant to handle the crop from 1500 acres. It will require at least 6000 acres to keep the Wallaceburg plant going. The factory we propose to establish here would slice 600 tons of beets per day which would produce 60 tons of sugar daily.

Ald. Scane Moved, seconded by Ald. Scane, that a by-law be prepared and submitted to the ratepayers on Monday, the sixth day of January next, providing for a free site, exemption from taxes, and 20,000 gallons of water daily, to be furnished to the Chatham Beet Root Sugar Company, for the establishment of a factory in or near Chatham.—Carried.

This resolution was referred to the Industrial committee, they to meet with the directors of the company, prepare the agreement and report to the council.
