THURSDAY, MAY 26.

DOUBLE ELECTIONS.

An Ottawa correspondent, referring to the visits of the Ontario Premier and Attorney-General to the Capital, says a very prominent Liberal politician made the significant remark that the two Governments would go to the country at practically the same time with the Dominion administration leading off. "The one campaign fund and the one batch of promises would do both for Laurier and Ross," he asserted. From the manner in which the Ontario politicians have been flocking there of late, the belief is growing that the scheme of practically a joint appeal to the country is being seriously considered, if not actually decided upon already.

THE BREATH OF LIFE

There is a woman in Chicago, a Mrs. Charles Kelley, who says that she is learning to live without eating. She subsists on air, she says, luxuriates on long breaths, fattens on deep respirations. When hungry she takes an appetizing breath; when very hungry she takes two; starving, three. She also takes a little celery soup. That is because she is only a beginner. When she has become perfect in the art of breathing, she hopes to dispense with the soup. Her aerial diet isn't liquified either. It is just the ordinary ozone, the Chicago brand at that!

"Breathe right," preaches Mrs. Kelley, "and you will not need to eat." This comes rather as a jay-up on the susceptibilities of people who have been taught that they are privileged to stop eating only when they are able to breathe no more. But let not the gourmand think that an "eatingless" age will deprive him of his dainties. For such as he there will be prepared "Redolent Respirations," "Bottled Breezes," "Hallowed Inhalations," and other aerial entrees too numerous to mention. The politician will dine on "Hot Air." The musician will breathe in celestial ozone tremulant with the harmony of master minds. The house problem will be everlastingly solved. Kitchens and dining rooms will be no longer needed. The triumphant servant girl who now tyrannizes over the land and demands seven nights a week off and high wages will be cast down and trodden under foot.

Finally a toothless age will be developed. In ages still further in the future perhaps the mouth may vanish altogether, while the race talks and breathes through its nose. The savage custom of "rubbing noses" is doubtless the survival of a time when men or so ago when mouthless men enjoyed the possession of the secret of living by breathing which has lain in obscurity until discovered afresh by this enterprising Mrs. Kelley, of Chicago.

When Mrs. Kelley is able to do without the celery soup, her benighted fellow beings will join her at a five o'clock breath or two. Until that time the most of them will stick to their old-fashioned beefsteak and whatever culinary frills the cook may be good enough to provide. At the same time they will not altogether neglect to breathe, as such a course opens up a shorter path to the graveyard than does neglecting to eat. In the words of the poet:

Chicago air is thick and good, But even there it were amiss For breezy breaths and airy bliss To sacrifice our daily food.

The big newspapers are finding that the maintenance at the front of war correspondents, who are not allowed to send home any war news, is a costly business. The last London Daily Mail to hand contains a special cable column in length from its correspondent at the Japanese headquarters at Wiju. The report was sent on April 30, and contains much readable descriptive matter, but of the battle of the Yalu, which was fought on April 28, not a word. Yet the cablegram alone cost $500. No wonder the papers are asking themselves if the war correspondence is worth what it costs.

The English people, it is said, do not take kindly to the proposal to compensate liquor-dealers, who for public reasons are deprived of their licenses. The measure seems to have been received with more favor by the House of Commons than by the country generally. One of the English papers puts it this way—"We have been foolish enough to give away every year monopoly rights in the sale of intoxicants for which we might have obtained many millions. Because of this bad finance in the past, Mr. Balfour now tells us we must make a further present to the trade by redering the gift perpetual. Nor is this all. Next we are to take a portion of the money which ought to go to the exchequer and use it to buy back the very gifts we made. In other words, we first make a valuable annual present and then provide means for giving the recipient handsome compensation if we should ever stop the present." The question is one which is not unlikely to be of considerable interest to the people of Ontario at some future time.

SCHOOL OF SIGNALLING.

The location of the new school of signalling is also engaging the attention of the government. For this school Ottawa would seem to be an ideal place. The formation of the surrounding country with its high hills would afford opportunities for long distance work impossible to obtain in low-lying districts.

Then, again, it is advantageous to have as much as possible of the machinery of these subsidiary branches at headquarters, where the work comes directly under the eye of the R. O. C. We have already the school of musketry there, and it is likely that many of those coming to attend it would take advantage of their presence in the Capital to take up signalling work also. Kingston seems to be in high favor for this school, in order that the R. M. C. may also derive benefit from it. While this is not a bad reason, we hardly think it strong enough to override the more numerous advantages of Ottawa.

ONLY ONE CURE FOR CATARRH

And it's neither a doggy mixture, a troublesome atomizer or an irritating snuff—it is fragrant, healing Catarrh-ozone, which is recommended by at least twenty thousand physicians in United States and Canada. The balsamic vapor of Catarrh-ozone goes at once to the source of disease, kills the germs, heals sore spots; it prevents dropping in the throat, keeps the nostrils clear and cures foul breath. Cure is complete and permanent when Catarrh-ozone is used. It is as certain as eternity to cure, it can't fail. Every complete dollar outfit guaranteed; trial size 25c. Use only Catarrh-ozone.

DRESDEN

May 26.—Roy Carscadden, Roy Wells, Garret Wells, Bruce Wallen and Jas. Anderson spent the holiday at Mitchell's Bay. They report lots of sport and a good catch of fish.

Wm. Rudd & Co. have just completed a new wagonette for W. N. Tape, proprietor of the Bon Ton Brewery. The new rig is indeed a beauty and reflects great credit upon both the maker and purchaser.

BEYOND ALL DESCRIPTION

Was the experience Mrs. E. V. Carter, of Danville, had with rheumatism which rested everything till Neville was tried, and it cured.

"The only relief I ever got was from rubbing on Neville," writes Mrs. Carter. "It penetrated to the very core of the pain and eased my suffering after a few applications. I have used many rheumatic remedies, but none had the soothing, pain-subduing power of Neville, which I recommend highly." Try Neville yourself. Good for internal use and excellent to rub on. Price 25c.

THE FARMER'S WIFE
is very careful about her churn. She scolds it thoroughly after using, and gives it a sun bath to sweeten it. She knows that if her churn is sour it will taint the butter that is made in it. The stomach is a churn. In the stomach and digestive and nutritive tracts are performed processes which are exactly akin to the churning of butter. Is it not apparent, then, that if this stomach churn is "sour," it causes all which is put into it? The evil of a foul stomach is not the bad taste in the mouth and the foul breath caused by it, but the corruption of the pure current of the blood and the dissemination of disease throughout the body. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes the sour stomach sweet. It does for the stomach what the washing and sun do for the churn—absolutely removes every taint or corrupting element. "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whisky or other intoxicant and no narcotic.

MONEY TO THE WINDS

Mrs. (Capt.) Willisroft met with a peculiar accident this afternoon. She was caught in the rain and wind storm and started to run. Mrs. Willisroft's purse is one of those carried by a chain. The purse flew open and a roll of bills amounting to $288 flew out. The loss was not noted at first, and when it was the money was flying in every direction. The accident occurred near the gas offices. Mrs. Willisroft succeeded in recovering $260, but the rest had not been recovered.

Her engagement ring set with two diamonds and a ruby was missing. A liberal reward is offered for the recovery of the ring.

DRAINAGE CASE

The drainage suit of Jno. W. Campbell vs. the Township of Howard was heard yesterday in Ridgetown before his honor Drainage Referee J. B. Rankin, K. C. This action is to recover damages for the destruction of crops during the years 1902 and 1903 by reason of the Harrison and McGregor Creek drains not being in proper condition for carrying off the water. No stated amount is claimed. Walter Mills appeared for plaintiff, L. J. Rycraft contra. The Referee adjourned the case to enable him to inspect the work and the case will be argued in two weeks.

SHOWS WILL BE GOOD

Geo. S. Heyward, W. W. Scane, A. C. Woodward and G. W. Cowan visited Sarnia yesterday and inspected every show in the street carnival, which is being held there this week and which will be held in Chatham during the Old Boys' Re-union.

Certain rumors have been circulated giving the impression that the shows moving to Sarnia and coming here are not up to the standard of excellence. The gentlemen were a delegation to investigate the matter and to report on it before the shows came to Chatham.

They found everything satisfactory in Sarnia. Every one of the shows are good clean shows and there are no fakes. Geo. W. Cowan, one of the delegation, in an interview with The Planet this morning said—

"We found no objectionable features in connection with the show and every one is giving complete satisfaction in Sarnia. We saw all the shows and they are all good. The company is just commencing a tour through Canada and they won't have any show that would injure their reputation."

"The high dive is exactly as represented. A man leaps from a point 75 feet in the air into 3-1/2 feet of water, turning a couple of flips on the way down twice a day in the open air. The trained bear free show is also given twice a day, as also is the tight wire acrobat performance. We are now satisfied that the shows that will be brought here are all good ones."

It is quite possible to have your own way without the aid of scales.

This is the season of the year when Scott's Emulsion does some of its best work. Fortifying the system against the ravages of winter is one of the most effective uses of Scott's Emulsion; it builds up the strength of the whole body and puts one in a healthy, vigorous condition.

Weak lungs, throat troubles or bronchial affections get more positive help and relief from Scott's Emulsion than from any other source.

Cod liver oil itself is very scarce just now; cheap adulterations and mixtures of inferior oils are offered everywhere.

This is why Scott's Emulsion should be insisted upon. It never varies from the high quality and absolute purity that has made it the standard for thirty years.

We'll send you a sample free upon request.

A Detroit specialist who has 14 certificates and diplomas from medical colleges and state boards of medical examiners, has perfected a startling method of curing the diseases of men in their own homes, so that there may be no doubt in the mind of any man that he has both the method and the ability to do as he says. Dr. Goldberg, the discoverer, will send the method entirely free to all men who send him their names and addresses. He wants to hear from men who have suffered that they have been unable to get cured. Gleet, gonorrhea, sexual weakness, varicocele, lost manhood, blood poisoning, rheumatism, enlargement of prostate, impotency, etc. His wonderful method not only cures the condition it treats, but likewise all the complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, nervous debility, etc. The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made it a rule not to cure a man unless he can cure you, and when you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is the best interest of every man who suffers in this way to write the doctor confidentially and lay your case before him, and if he accepts your case for treatment it is equivalent to a cure, as he does not under any consideration accept incurable cases for treatment; and, remember, if he does accept your case you may pay when you are cured. He sends the method, as well as his booklet on the subject, containing the 14 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him simply:

MORAN OF THE LADY LETTY...

It was true. During all the next day not a shark was in sight, and though the crew fished incessantly all day they were rewarded by not so much as a bite. No one could offer any explanation.

"He strange," said Moran. "Never heard of shark leaving this feed before. And you can see with half an eye that the hands don't like the looks of it. Superstitious beggars! They need to be clumped in the head!"

That same night Wilbur woke in his hammock on the 50's deck about half past 2. The moon was down, the sky one powder of stars. There was not a breath of wind. It was so still that he could hear some large fish playing and breathing off toward the shore. Then, without the least warning, he felt the schooner begin to lift under him. He rolled out of his hammock and stood on the deck. Those could be no doubt of it—the whole forepart was rising beneath him. He could see the bowsprit moving upward from star to star. With the schooner lifted; objects on deck began to slide aft; the oil in the deck tubs washed over; then, as there came a wild scrambling of the Chinese crew up the 50's deck hatch, she rolled again, gradually at first, then, with an abrupt lurch that almost threw him from his feet, regained her level. Moran met him in the waist. Charlie came running aft.

"What was that? Are we grounding?"

"No, no. We are still fast to the kelp. Was it a tidal wave?"

"Nonsense! It wouldn't have handled us that way."

"Well, what was it? Listen! For heaven's sake, keep quiet there forward!"

Wilbur looked over the side into the water. The rigging were still chasing themselves away from the schooner.
There was nothing else. The stillness shut down again. There was not a sound.

CHAPTER VI.

IN spite of his best efforts at self control Wilbur felt a slow, cold clutch at his heart. That sickening, uneasy lifting of the schooner or out of the glassy water at a time when there was not enough wind to so much as wrinkle the surface sent a creep of something very like horror through all his flesh.

Again he peered over the side down into the help thickened sea. Nothing—not a breath of air was stirring. The gray light that seeped down from the stars showed not a break upon the surface of Magdalen's bay. On shore nothing moved.

"Quiet there, forward!" called Moran

The succeeding stillness was pre-found. All on board listened intently.
The water dripped like the falling of a clock from the Bertha Millner's stern, which with the rising of the bow had sunk almost to the rail. There was no other sound.

"Strange!" muttered Moran, her brows contracting.

Charlie broke the silence with a yell.

"No likes, no likes!" he cried at top voice.

The man had gone suddenly green.

Wilbur could see the shine of his eyes, distended like those of a harnessed cat.

As he, Moran and Wilbur stood in the schooner's waist, staring at each other.

The smell of punk came to their nostrils. Forward the coxies were already burning joss sticks on the 50's deck head, hatching their foreheads to the deck.

Moran went forward and kicked them to their feet and hurried their joss sticks into the sea.

"Feng shui! Feng shui!" they exclaimed with bated breaths. "The Feng shui no likes we."

Low in the east the horizon began to blacken against the sky. It was early morning. A watch was set, the Chinamen sent below, and until daybreak, when Charlie began to make a clattering of this in the galley as he set about preparing breakfast, Wilbur paced the rounds of the schooner, looking, listening and waiting again for that slow, horrifying lift. But the rest of the night was without incident.

After breakfast the strangely ascertained three—Charlie, Moran and Wilbur—held another conference in the cabin.

It was decided to move the schooner to the other side of the bay.

"Feng shui in disa place. No likes we," announced Charlie.

"Feng shui—who are they?"

Charlie promptly became incoherent on this subject, and Moran and Wilbur could only guess that the Feng shui were the tutelary deities that presided over that portion of Magdalen's bay. At any rate, there were evidently no more sharks to be caught in that Salsburg ground. So sail was made, and by noon the Bertha Millner fled up to the help on the opposite side of the bay, about half a mile from the shore.

The sharks were plentiful here, and the sailing went forward again as before. Certain of these sharks were handled, skinned by a blow on the nose and their fins cut off. The Chinamen padded these fins away in appeasment kegs. Eventually they would be sent to China.

Two or three days passed. The hands kept steadily at their work.

Nothing more occurred to disturb the monotony of the seething days and sleepless nights. The schooner sat as easily on the unbroken water as though built to the bottom. Soon the night watch was discontinued. During these days the three officers lived high. Turfles were plentiful, and what with their steaks and eggs, the fished salmon, the sea fish, the really delicious shark fins and the quail that Charlie and Wilbur trapped along the shore, the trio had nothing to wish for in the way of table luxuries.

The shore was absolutely deserted as well as the back country—an unbroken wilderness of mud and sage.

Half a dozen times Wilbur, wearing of his jacket about the schooner, made the entire circuit of the bay from point to point. Standing on one of the latter projections and looking out to the west, the Pacific appeared as empty of life as the land. Never a keel out those waters, never a sail broke the edge of the horizon, never a feather of smoke spotted the sky where it whitened to meet the sea. Everything was empty—vast, unpeopled desolate—palpating with heat.

Another week passed. Charlie began to complain that the sharks were growing scarce again.

"I think bimby him go way, once a mo'."

That same night Wilbur, lying in his hammock, was awakened by a touch on his arm. He woke to see Moran beside him on the deck.

"Did you hear anything?" she said in a low voice, looking at him under her scarf.

"No, no!" he exclaimed, getting up, reaching for his wicker sandals. "Did you?"

"I thought so—something. Did you feel anything?"

"I've been asleep; I haven't noticed anything. Is it beginning again?"

"The schooner lifted again just now, very gently. I happened to be awake or I wouldn't have noticed it." They were talking in low voices, as is the custom of people speaking in the dark.

"There, what's that?" exclaimed Wilbur under his breath. A gentle vibration, barely perceptible, thrilled through the schooner. Under his hand that was clasped upon the rail Wilbur could feel a faint trembling in her frame. It stopped, began again and died slowly away.

"Well, what the deuce is it?" he muttered impatiently, trying to master the returning creep of dread.

Moran shook her head, biting her lip.

"It's beyond me," she said, frowning. "Can you see anything?" The sky, sea and land were unbroken reaches of solitude. There was no breath of wind.

"Listen," said Moran. Far off to landward came the faint, sleepy cluck-ing of a quail and the stridulating of unnumbered crickets. A long ripple licked the slope of the beach and slid back into the ocean. Wilbur shook his head.

"Don't hear anything," he whispered.

"Sh—there—she's trembling again."

Once more a prolonged but faint quivering ran through the Bertha Milner from stern to stern and from keel to masthead. There was a barely audible creaking of joints and panels.

The oil in the deck tubs trembled. The vibration was so fine and rapid that it ticked the scales of Wilbur's feet as he stood on the deck.

"I'd give two fingers to know what it all means," murmured Moran in a low voice. "I've been to sea for"— Then suddenly she cried aloud:
"Steady, all! She's lifting again!"

The schooner heaved slowly under them, this time by the stern. Up she went, up and up, while Wilbur gripped at a stay to keep his place and tried to choke down his heart, that seemed to beat against his palate.

"Heavens!" ejaculated Moran, her eyes blazing. "This thing is!" The Bertha came suddenly down to an easy keel, rocking in that glassy sea as if in a tide rip. The deck was awash with oil. Far out in the bay the ripples widening from the schooner blurried the reflections of the stars. The Chinamen swarmed up the hatchway, retrieving and shrill. Again the Bertha Millner lifted and sank, the tubs sliding on the deck, the masts quivering like reeds, the timbers groaning aloud with the strain. In the stern something cracked and smashed. Then the trouble died away, the ripples faded into the ocean and the schooner settled to her keel, quite motionless.

"Look," said Moran, her face toward the Bertha's stern. "The rudder is out of the judgements." It was true—the Bertha Millner's helm was unshipped.

There was no more sleep for any one on board that night. Wilbur tamped the quarter deck, sick with a feeling he dared not put a name to. Moran sat by the wrecked rudder head, a we-less pistol in her hand, sweating under her breath from time to time. Charlie appeared on the quarter deck at intervals, looked at Wilbur and Moran with wide open eyes, and then took himself away. On the forward deck the coolies pasted strips of red paper inscribed with nettles upon the mast and filled the air with the reek of their joss sticks.

"If one could only see what it was," growled Moran between her clinched teeth. "But this—hearing and trembling—it's queer."

"That's it, that's it," said Wilbur quickly, facing her. "What are we going to do, Moran?"

"Stick it out!" she exclaimed, striking her knee with her fist. "We can't leave the schooner—I won't leave her.
I'll stay by this dough dish as long as two planes in her hold together. Were you thinking of cutting away?" She sighed with her brow.

Wilbur looked at her, sitting erect by the disabled rudder, her head bare, her braids of yellow hair hanging over her breast, sitting there in man's clothes and man's boots, the pistol at her side. He shook his head.

"I'm not leaving the Bertha till you do," he answered, adding, "I'll stand by you, mate, until we"— "Feel that?" said Moran, holding up a hand.

A fine, quivering tremble was thrilling through every beam of the schooner, vibrating each rope like a harp string. It passed away, but before it either Wilbur or Moran could comment upon it recommenced, this time much more perceptibly. Charlie dashed aft, his cue flying.

"Wat mahum heep shake?" he shouted. "Wat for him shake? No sawry, no likes, pretty much heep shak.
Aiy-yak, aiy-yak!"

Slowly the schooner heaved up as though upon the crest of some huge wave, slowly it settled and again gradually lifted, till Wilbur had to catch at the rail to steady his footing.

The quivering sensation increased so that their very teeth chattered with it.
Below in the cabin they could hear small objects falling from the shelves and table. Then, with a sudden drop, the Bertha fell back to her keel again, the spilled oil spouting from her scuppers, the masts rocking, the water churning and splashing from her sides.

And that was all. There was no sound—nothing was in sight. There was only the frightened trembling of the little schooner and that long, slow heave and lift.

Morning came, and breakfast was had in silence and grim perplexity. It was too late to think of getting away now that the rudder was disabled. The Bertha Millner must bide where she was.

Welland, Ont., May 23.—(Special.)— J. J. Yokom, a prominent merchant of this city, is telling his friends of his remarkable cure of a terrible Kidney Disease by Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mr. Yokom's statement is as follows:

"For more than a year I had been ailing with Kidney Trouble in all its worst symptoms. I had a distressed feeling in my head, little or no appetite and a feeling of languor. I became greatly reduced in weight.

"Doctors and medicines failing to give me any benefit I became despondent when by good luck I observed to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and from the first they seemed to suit my case. After taking five boxes the old trouble had gradually disappeared and I was feeling better than I had in many years."

Dodd's Kidney Pills suit the case of every man, woman or child who has any form of Kidney Disease.
They always cure and cure permanently.

THE LOVELOCK.

How to Use It Artistically to Hide a Large or Poor Ear.

Ears that are large can be made much prettier by artistic aids, and one of these is the little natural curl.
This is called the artist's curl, and it is always found over the ear of the artist's model. Theoretically this little lock, which is called the lovelock, should fall over the ear in its own graceful little curl. But really few people have the natural ear curl. Such curl as they have is produced with the aid of art.

Too many people, in making the ear curl, all into the error of making the curl too heavy. It should be extremely light, scarcely more than a wisp of hair, and it should fall directly over the ear, with its end flying loose.

There should not be over twenty-four hairs in the little lovelock, which so gently caresses the rim of the ear.

The artistic beauty of the lovelock lies in the way it is curled. Take the tongs, only moderately warm, and turn the little lock until every hair is securely wound in its depths. Now hold the tongs while you count sixty. Slide them out and you will find a lovely little ringlet, light, fluffy and so fine that it needs only one twirl of the comb to make it look like fluff.

Those who are willing to go to a great deal of trouble will tell you that it is best to divide this little lovelock, small as it is, into three, and then, with scarcely half a dozen hairs in each curl, to wind it through the tongs until a lot of delicious ringlets are made.
This is poetic in the extreme, and what is more, it hides a poor ear.

HANDKERCHIEF BAG.

It May Be Used For the Laundry or
For Night Robes.

Bags are always useful around the house and there is hardly a room in which a use for one cannot be found.
Bags for laundry or for putting away night robes are very pretty made of two big decorated handkerchiefs, whether these be of silk or cotton.
Three of the edges are sewed together and that leaves an open top. Three inches below the upper edge a band is sewed inside each handkerchief and ribbons are run through these and drawn together when the bag is closed.

Large bows of ribbon are very attractive when the bag is made to hang beside the bed as a holder for night robes, but fancy mercerized ropes, in pretty colors, finished with tassels, are better for laundry bags.

Convenient Basket.

A novel and convenient basket for the busy housewife is made with a foundation of cardboard covered with any pretty flowery cretonne or muslin and is generously supplied with pocket-ets. The four sides of the basket are shaped with rounded tops that become narrow as they approach the base, which is square. Each section is neatly and firmly covered with the material and supplied with pockets.

One such basket has a big shirred pocket on one side, a rack for patterns and the like and a needlebook on the other, with smaller pockets on the remaining two, while to the inside are attached a generous pouch and various minor pockets for buttons and the like. But all these can be varied to suit individual preferences, the essential merit of the basket being that the receptacle will stand on the floor and be ever ready at hand.

Wheat Flour For Cleaning.

The cleaning power of pure wheat flour is not so widely appreciated as it should be. Delicate white woolen things, of many kinds, can be easily and quickly cleaned by a flour bath.
White woolen shawls, nice wool head draperies and even white furs and feathers can be freed of dust or grease in this way. Take a few handfuls of flour, put it in a basin and submerge the article that is to be cleaned. Rub and pat the wool for some minutes, being careful not to injure it by too vigorous handling. Now open the window and shake the flour out gently.
Take a fresh handful of flour for a "rinse" and go through the same process for a moment. When shaken out after the rinse you will be delighted with the results.

Lavender Sachets.

Lavender is one of the cleanest, sweetest perfumes in existence, and sachet bags filled with its flowers give to clothes closet or linen press a delicious, refined, old fashioned fragrance.
It is a romantic odor. It is romance, sentiment crystallized—if an odor can be said to be a crystallization of anything. It never satiates or cloy, and it never goes out of fashion, because it never comes into fashion. Half a pound of dried lavender flowers, half an ounce each of extract of musk and simple benzoin and one-fourth of an ounce of oil of lavender make a delicious filling for a sachet for use with bed linen.

THE CHATHAM DAILY PLANET

SCOURGE OF THE AGE IS KIDNEY DISEASE

Terrible Increase in the Num- ber of Deaths from This Ailment

It is Common to All Classes and Conditions of People

It Creeps Stealthily into The System And Develops into Many Diseases.

Bright's Disease, Heart Disease, Diabetes, Dropsy and Rheumatism, are Among The Forms It Takes.

Dodd's Kidney Pills The One Remedy That Never Fails To Cure, No Matter How or Where It Is Found.

Of all the diseases the human body has to combat in its struggle for health, the one that is steadily growing in strength and terror is Kidney Disease. Quietly, stealthily as a serpent, it creeps on its victim till the latter is enveloped in its folds, and the greatest physician in the world has been known to stand helpless before it. As the last fold goes around the struggling victim and the doctor shakes his head and whispers "Bright's Disease," hope fades to nothing, and the sorrowing friends feel that death has marked their loved one for its own.

The alarming increase of this terrible disease is making it evidenced by the columns of almost every newspaper. For not among the lowly of the earth alone does it look for its victims. Statesmen, judges, eminent lawyers, and honored divines are numbered among those who in response to the doctor's word have been graves with the full marks of this dread disease upon their bodies. It is so prevalent has the disease become that a celebrated New York specialist stated recently that not one person in a hundred was free from some taint of Kidney Disease.

WORKS IN SECRET.

It is the secrecy of Kidney Disease that makes it the more dreaded.
You can fight an enemy in the open with some chance of success, but if he is lying in wait to take you at an unwary moment your chances of successfully fighting him are terribly diminished. So it is with Kidney Disease. Its first warnings are so faint as to be hardly noticeable, a slight pain in the back that is charged up to over exertion, a slight discoloration of the urine or a burning sensation while urinating that hardly attracts attention. That is all. But that means that Kidney Disease is at work gradually eating its way into your system. The pain in the back grows more severe, the urinary trouble more complicated, swellings under the eyes and of the limbs denote the coming of Dropsy, sharp shooting pains in the joints and muscles tell that Rheumatism has you in its grasp, or perhaps a day or two's illness leads to the calling of the doctor, and then the terrible truth is forced upon you—Bright's Disease has got in its grasp.

WAY OF ESCAPE.

With this silent, relentless enemy slowly but surely eating its way into prominence and making that prominence by a yearly increase in the length of its death list, the demand of the day, of the hour, is "Show us the way of escape." Nature never put mankind in a critical condition without providing a way of escape —providing mankind were wise enough to take the way provided.
In this case the way of escape is a simple vegetable remedy. It has been before the people of Canada for thirteen years, and, like all the great reliefs of nature, has been first received and first appreciated by the lowly in life, those known as the common people of Canada.

Is it the common people of Canada who die of Bright's Disease? No, it is the bright and shining marks, those who are stationed above the clouds of the masses, that the result of this! Go to the people who are practically exempt from Kidney Disease in its worst form, and ask them. With almost a single voice they will reply: "We cure our Kidney ailments with Dodd's Kidney Pills, and they never get a chance to develop into that terrible disease that carries so many prominent men into the grave."

ON WITH HIS WORK.

And so it is; the man who does manual labor must heal his slightest ailments by his hinder him his work.
When he has his kidneys he cures it with Dodd's Kidney Pills, and goes on with his work; when he feels a twinge of Rheumatism he drives it out of his body with Dodd's Kidney Pills—and goes on with his work.
Necessity has taught him that he cannot turn his kidneys to get rid of his pains, for he must work to live. He has not been educated to that standpoint where a prescription to cure must be written by a specialist at a cost of dollars to every letter. He may not even know that there never was a disease that took in all classes of the community but what nature provided a cure within the means of all classes of the community. What he does know is more to the point than all this. He knows that Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure all aches which experience has taught him come from the kidneys. He takes Dodd's Kidney Pills, and goes on with his work.

SOME EXCEPTIONS.

Of course, there were exceptions to every rule. Even among common people there are those who neglect the early warnings of Kidney Disease. It takes exceptions to prove the rule—but many of these exceptions prove more—they prove that no case of Kidney Disease is too far gone for Dodd's Kidney Pills to cure. Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Dropsy, Heart Disease—all the varied forms of Kidney
