Voyage of Life.

BY LIZZIE LINDEN Proudly o'er the mighty ocean Sped a bark its homeward way Curl'd the wavelets at its motion, Dash'd aside the laughing spray Smiled the glowing sky around i Set in glory earth's bright sun : Chains of stars in beauty bound it, When the day its course had run.

Yet, ere crimson dyes of morning Flush'd the darkly silent sea,-Ere the moon, the waves adorning, Sunk to rest by dawn's decree :--Storms burst o'er the gallant vessel, Crested billows swept her deck; Life and death now seem'd to wrestle, Each the other's power to check.

Gone her cargo, riches wasted, All was lost save one poor soul; Death had left but this untasted, And this only reach'd the goal Ceased with fury to be fraught; And when the black clouds rent asunder, Lo! the ship had reached her port!

Christian, on LIFE's swelling ocean, Wheresoe'er thy lot be cast, Soft the breezes, swift the motion, Through the river of the past Sweet the joys of sunny childhood, That, alas! too quickly flee; For the sweeping waves of manhood Bear them onward to the sea.

Soon will trials lower above thee, And thy way be dark and drear Yet the angel pilots love thee, And thy voyage long will cheere What, though friends and fortune fail thee Sall with faith in Jesus blest, Seraph forms in bliss, shall hail thee,-Bid thy weary spirit rest!

Then despair not, doubt no longer, Though death's waters o'er thee sweep: Through the storm-clouds, brighter, stronger, treams heaven's glory on the deep! Furl thy sails! thou'rt drawing nearer! Hark! the angel anthems rise! Now, immortal, freer, clearer, View thy port :- 'tis Paradise !

In order to man's fullest development,—mental, moral and physical,—a fixed object of pursuit is necessary. Mount

On the Dedication of the Darimouth Wesleyan Chapel.

Be it a church! for Thee, oh Lord. Sole and entire for Thee To promulgate thy sacred Word That sets the sinner free! Be it a Temple for His praise, Who fills all time and space, Where ransom'd ones their voices raise As trophies of His grace. Be it a retuge-where to flee And find salvation there For ever dedicate to Thee! Be it a House of Prayer, Simple its doctrines, clear and true, May every seeker find Untrammelled by sectarian view Or dogma of the mind: Send down Thy light, O God of Truth. Let no dark cloud obscure, On every heart thy laws so write That they may long endure. Once not a people! let them now Be numbered in thy lot, Deign to accept their offered vow, Hence never more forgot, And let this latter House still stand A monument to Thee!

A FRIEND ON THIS SIDE.

From this its Jubilee!

(FOR THE PROVINCIAL WESLEYAN.) To my First-born Son.

Cemented both by heart and band

Gift of God! in faith I take thee-Faith that He will guard His own-From all sin and ill redeem thee, Bless and save my first-born Son.

To His service I present thee-On his altar lay thee down-Joyfully to Him who gave thee, Consecrate my first-born Son,

I have ask'd for thee a guerdon, Loftier, nobler, richer far: Than the proudest earthly title, That the sons of Fortune wear.

I have ask'd that God would hold thee As a star in His right hand, Make thee wise to win immortals Souls to people Heaven's bright land.

May thy mother's prayer be answered, And a victor's crown be won; And may hosts as trophies gathered Hail to Heaven, my first-born Son!
