UNIVERSITY HEADS IN CONFERENCE

Discussed Formation of Control Examining Board and Extension of Summer School

Suggestions regarding the formation of a central examining board for the Universities of the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland and the extending of the Summer school at Mount Allison University to a Co-operative School, having classes at Dalhousie one year, at Acadia the next, and at Mount Allison the next, were received and discussed at a Conference of the Presidents of Maritime Universities held at Halifax last Friday afternoon.

Those in attendance included Dr. G. J. Trueman, President of Mount Allison University; Chancellor C. C. Jones, of the University of New Brunswick; Dr. A. S. Mackenzie, President of Dalhousie University; Dr. Clarence Mackinnon, Principal of Pine Hill College; Dr. Wheelock, representing Acadia College in the absence of the President, Dr. F. W. Patterson; Dr. P. H. Sexton, principal of the Nova Scotia Technical College; Brother Culhane, of St. Mary's College; and Dr. B. C. Borden, ex-President of Mt. Allison.

Dr. Vincent P. Burke, Deputy Minister of Education in Newfoundland, who was invited to attend the Conference, was unable to do so. Rev. A. H. Moore, President of King's College, was also unable to attend.

Matters of inter-college importance were taken up during the Conference, and several important topics were under consideration. The chief matter taken up by the Conference was the suggestion regarding the formation of the Central Examining Board, whose standards will be accepted by all Eastern Universities.

At present each college, high school and collegiate academy maintains its own examining board and the formation of the proposed board will relieve them of this duty. A special committee was appointed to deal with this matter and report at another conference to be held in the near future.

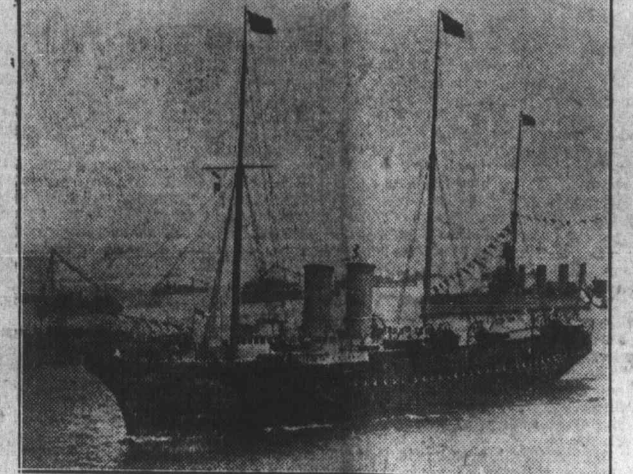

The next question dealt with was in regard to the proposed departments of education, as referred to the Conference by the Carnegie Corporation, who wish to learn as soon as possible the proposed location of the departments, if established. Those in attendance at the conference did not feel that they had secured enough definite information to answer the query, and as a result a committee was appointed to look into the matter and report back at the next meeting of the representatives of the Maritime Universities.

At the close of the Conference, a short discussion took place over the Summer school at present being conducted at Mount Allison University. It was suggested that the classes be extended, so as to make it a co-operative school, having classes at Dalhousie, Acadia and Mount Allison on successive years. No definite action was taken in this matter, however, and as a result the classes will continue to be held at Mount Allison.

The dwelling of Mr. William O. Taylor, at the corner of Acadia street and Horton avenue was practically destroyed by fire at an early hour on Tuesday morning. At 3 o'clock Mr. Taylor was awakened by smoke with which the house was filled. He called to his son William and a student who roomed with them and they had barely time to effect an escape from the burning building. Mrs. Taylor was at the time visiting in Berwick.

An alarm was rung in and the fire company quickly responding soon had a stream of water playing on the fire. Some of the furniture, including the piano, was removed in a damaged condition. The upper part of the house was badly gutted by fire and the lower part soaked with water before the progress of the flames could be overcome. The dwelling and furniture were insured. This house was built over forty years ago for the late (Prof.) A. E. Coldwell. It was purchased several years ago by the present owner, who has since moved the building and spent considerable in changes and repairs.

All work is being rushed in order to have the yacht ready to leave as soon as the King's health permits.

BAY STEAMER WAS BADLY BUFFETED

Huge Sea Broke Over the Empress and Wrecked Saloon.

DIGBY, N.S., Feb. 28.—The Canadian Pacific Railway's steamer, Empress, will sail for St. John this afternoon, on schedule, after having lain over here last night, following the buffeting she received in the Bay of Fundy yesterday, when a huge wave boarded the ship and beaking over the after cabin wrecked saloon doors and windows from their fastenings, slightly injured several passengers, and generally wrecked the interior. Lloyd Sanford, of Bear River, and Mrs. Joseph Smith, of Bridgetown, among the passengers injured were able to proceed to their homes today. Offshore the ship was tossed about, causing the damage, was one of the heaviest in their experience. It was seen from the bridge and an effort was made to minimize its effect by heading the steamer into the South-wester, but it came on too rapidly and boarding the ship, broke with terrific force above the after cabin.

MISS RUTH MACDONALD DELIGHTS HALIFAX AUDIENCE

(From The Morning Chronicle) A large audience was perfectly charmed Tuesday evening when Miss Ruth Blaisdell Macdonald, soprano, was the visiting artist at the Ladies' Musical Club meeting in the School for the Blind. Two groups of songs, one containing five numbers and the other seven, and two encores, were beautifully sung by Miss Macdonald, whose voice is as sweet, clear, and true as voice can be, produced with apparently no effort, so that the most difficult passages were a delight to listen to. The first songs were lovely, but each succeeding number seemed to be more beautiful as the singer became imbued with the spirit of the music, and in the Donizetti number, an aria with many florid passages, she disclosed the resources of her voice in a manner which drew forth tremendous applause, but at that point she denied the encore so much desired.

IMPORTANT MEETING OF SCHOOL BOARD

Present Members of Teaching Staff Re-appointed—Generous Estimates for Current Year.

At the regular monthly meeting of the School Board on Monday evening, all the members were present except Commissioner Vaughan. No meeting for the purpose having been held at the required time, the election of a chairman was the first item of business, and on motion of Mayor Chambers, seconded by Commissioner Parsons, Dr. J. T. Roach was re-elected to that position.

The clerk reported that a number of applications had been received from teachers desirous of filling any vacancies in the teaching staff that might occur for the next year.

Accounts were presented by the clerk and ordered paid: Petty Cash $ 7.41, W. O. Pulsifer 1.73, F. W. Woodman 1.75, A. W. Bleakney 2.48, Woodman & Co. 21.50, J. H. Baltzar 4.52, R. E. Harris & Sons 221.52, H. E. Blakeney 1.36, A. V. Rand 3.85, Davidson Bros. 12.50, Geo. N. Hendry Co. 29.02.

The chairman stated that the electric bell, ordered through J. C. Mitchell at the time the new building was completed had finally been taken over and installed and was giving perfect satisfaction.

The clerk was instructed to notify the members of the present teaching staff that their services would be required for the ensuing year, and ask that their acceptance of re-appointment be handed in before April 1st. In the case of Miss Locke, who has been supplying during the present year for Mrs. Davidson, the appointment is on the understanding that Mrs. Davidson will not be able to resume her position.

REX BEACH WON FAME WITH "THE SPOILERS"

A literary person with a passion for figures has estimated that fully ten million books dealing with Alaska have been sold. Two names head the list of best sellers of Alaska novels. They are Rex Beach and Jack London.

Rex Beach's novel, "The Spoilers," according to the figures, is the most popular novel ever written about the far north. Its sales have run to the half million mark. Numerous editions have been printed. It is even now selling as well as the average novel, and it has been nearly twenty years since it was published.

Interest in the book was revived by the announcement that it was being filmed on an elaborate scale by Jesse D. Hampton at the Goldwyn Studios. When it was screened some years ago it was the first big American picture. The new version has an all-star cast, headed by Milton Sills, Barbara Bedford, Anna O. Nilsson and Noah Beery. It will be the attraction at the Orpheum Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday.

The pulpit of the Baptist church was filled on Sunday last, in the absence of the pastor, by Rev. Dr. DeWolfe, who preached two very acceptable sermons.

CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING OF FRUIT

Fruit Growing Organizations Confer at Ottawa to Formulate Plans to Eliminate "Ravenous Middlemen" in Sale of Agricultural Products.

OTTAWA, March 2.—A Dominion-wide co-operative marketing or brokerage scheme to care not only for domestic but also for export business is being devised at an important conference which opened at the Chateau Laurier here this morning between representatives of co-operative fruit growers organizations from practically every Province of Canada.

The movement toward the formulation of such a plan had, it is understood, its origin amongst the British Columbia growers who have quickly enlisted the sympathetic support of growers in the eastern Provinces.

Another feature of this movement is that it has the hearty endorsement of the Federal Department of Agriculture, and Hon. W. R. Motherwell, the Minister, at the morning session and Dr. J. H. Grisdale, the Deputy Minister, at the afternoon session made it plain to the conference that the Federal authorities were ready to give them every possible assistance in furthering their project.

That the report of Lewis Duncan, who was appointed by the Department of Labor to investigate under the Combines Investigation Act the activities of the Nash interests in Western Canada, has created deep interest among the conferees is shown by the presence of many copies of that report in the conference room today.

After considerable discussion at this afternoon's meeting the following resolution was unanimously adopted: Whereas the Associated Growers of British Columbia Ltd., has now under way the organization of a grower-owned brokerage company and whereas representatives of the larger co-operative fruit and vegetable companies of Eastern Canada have discussed with the representatives of the Associated Growers the possibility of forming a national co-operative brokerage to provide for the national distribution of agricultural products; therefore be it resolved that this committee approves of the formation of a national brokerage company on a co-operative basis and further recommends that those in attendance at this meeting place and strongly support the proposition before their respective companies.

Federal Fruit Commissioner Geo. McIntosh is acting as chairman of the conference and the following are in attendance from the various Provinces: H. R. Simpson, E. C. Chambers and D. McNair, British Columbia; C. W. Baxter and W. C. Thompson of the Niagara Peninsula; W. A. Shook Clarkston, Thomas Rowley and J. E. Johnson representing other Ontario firms; J. H. Lavore representing the co-operative organizations of Quebec; A. G. Turney of the New Brunswick Fruit Growers Association and A. E. McMahon of the United Fruit Companies of Nova Scotia, Ltd.

The mover of the resolution was Mr. Baxter and the seconder Mr. Thompson. Dr. Grisdale, addressing this afternoon's meeting, declared that the most difficult problem confronting fruit products in Canada was that of marketing. Those producers were the objects of "very many ravenous middlemen" who constituted a serious handicap in effective and profitable marketing. "I have," he added, "seen some extortionate charges levied by those middlemen." He urged that the conference consider not only the advantages of co-operative marketing in the Dominion but also in Great Britain. "The foreign market must be the controlling factor in these products as it is for cattle and dairy products. There is a splendid market in the United Kingdom for our fruits and you will be very wise in studying how best you can place your hard fruit on that market."

The Federal authorities could, he said, be very helpful in the matter of inspection and in helping to maintain high standards. Standardization of fruit, he said, is an essential, if we are to get the confidence of shipper and consumer, and in this the Federal Department can give you great assistance. He deplored the tendency to lower the grades of fruit and other Canadian products. "I have read your resolution," said Dr. Grisdale in conclusion, "and it seems to me to offer an excellent opportunity of being put into effect, but there is a lot of work ahead. If our department can help you in this in persuading the various associations to

DIARY OF MARGARET D. MICHENER

Aug. 25th. Sunday. I had company yesterday afternoon; Ann Eliza West, Mary and Ann were here. We had a very pleasant time talking over days that are past and gone. Ann Eliza likes to talk on phrenology and physiology, and we agree there. They are good subjects for conversation. She stopped all night and we did not go to sleep till after midnight. This morning after breakfast Ann Eliza and her son returned to her father's and I went to S. School as usual. There were a great many there. The lesson today was on the ten commandments. Rev. Vaughan preached. There was another meeting appointed for this afternoon, after which John and Ann came and took supper with me; then we went for a walk down to the beach and stopped in to see Olivia.

26th. This has been a lovely day. After school Maria and I went up to father's. After tea we sat in the front entry and had a sing. We started home at nine o'clock, the boys and Ann coming part way it is such a beautiful night. We could not refrain from admiring the glory of the heavens. The works of God are wonderful.

27th. The "Village Belle" has arrived from St. John. She left Saturday night and had a hard time getting here.

29th. I attended a prayer meeting last night up to Sarah Whitman's. I think she is not long for this world.

THE GREAT BLUE NILE DAM NEARING COMPLETION

Of all the monuments the British Empire has scattered throughout the world, generations yet unborn will marvel at none more than the Sennar Dam across the River Nile in the Egyptian Soudan. The wall, which weighs more than 1,000,000 tons, will likely be completed by June of this year, and will store the ten thousand million gallon daily flow of the Blue Nile, for irrigation purposes and add a great area to the land devoted to cotton cultivation and other crops. This photograph shows the "big push" on the work where the last gap will be filled, and the water rushing through the canals. It was this property in the Soudan the Egyptian government wanted the British government to hand over, with all the territory of the Soudan.

She is failing fast; happy for such and all who have their trust in Jesus Christ.

30th. I had a short noon yesterday and let school out early. I had promised Ann Eliza to make her a visit. On my way I overtook Mary Churchill, accompanied by Miss Hutchins from Halifax and Miss Shand from Windsor. Ann Eliza met us at the gate laughing, and told of the company they had. Upon entering we found Hannah Faulkner, Mrs. Harris, Mrs. E. Davidson and Mrs. S. Caldwell there. Mr. Joshua West had come with Enoch, and Mrs. Melinda Holmes was added to our number. Soon as supper was over they began to disperse. I stayed longer than the others and had a nice walk out in the orchard with Mr. Churchill and Ann Eliza to see the fruit which is very abundant. When I came home Mr. and Mrs. West came with me to the gate, the last walk I may have with them for sometime, as they will soon be leaving. I could not help wishing Simeon had come home when I saw Ann E. so happy at Joshua's unexpected arrival.

31st. Maria went to Windsor this afternoon to look for letters I think. I would not go for fear of disappointment. I received a note inviting me to go to a sing up to Capt. R. Davidson's tonight. I went and had a very nice time; there we e quite a number there. After returning home Maria came in having just returned in the "Bellow". She was almost discouraged on getting no letters. I think we may get some by Tuesday.

Sept. 1st. We heard a good sermon today from Rev. Chase. Sarah Vaughan and Ann came home with me after meeting. Mr. Chase preached again at four o'clock. I wrote a letter to Aunt Lydia Kelly, who lives in Bath, to send by Ann Eliza tomorrow when she is leaving us.

3rd. Last evening I went down to Abigail's and stopped till this morning. It has been a very warm day. There was a heavy shower this afternoon. I went over to Emily Ann's aft r school and had a pleasant visit with them. Asa is going to sail the "Village Belle" and Michael is going with them. I took a walk down to the shore with the boys. Capt. J. Lockhart's new brig "Alamode" came there today from Town Landing. I called in to see Olivia and then had a very pleasant walk home. Maria is here, fearing all the while lest something has befallen our loved ones, but I hope not.

4th. This afternoon Ann, Maria, and I went with Hibbard down on board the "Village Belle". There is quite a pretty cabin. We got some books and returned home. Ruth is here and will stay all night.

5th. I wrote a letter to Amaret Merry today and then went to Capt. Holmes' with the missionary money I had collected. It has been a very warm day.

Cross of the Order of St. John, instituted by Queen Victoria many years ago. Its ribbon is of black watered silk, and it is awarded to nurses or those actively interested in nursing. The Imperial Service Order was originated by King Edward as a reward for women showing conspicuous bravery in any sphere of life. Its holders are few in number, and the decoration is highly valued. Ever more exclusive are the Royal Order of Victoria and Albert and the Imperial Order of the Crown of India, the latter awarded for services rendered in India by women of the Viceregal Court and wives of the native princes. It is a coveted decoration, but not more so than the first-named, which is given only to titled women, and this in very rare instances.

A LOT OF HELPS

When ironing, if a garment becomes SCORCHED, wet with peroxide and hang in sun to bleach.

INK stains can be removed the same way, or, to remove ink another remedy is to put stained garment over a saucer and cover stain with borax. Then pour peroxide over borax. Do not put any water on stain. Borax and peroxide will take effect almost immediately.

If a gown becomes stained with LEM-

ON JUICE, household ammonia applied to the spot will restore cloth to original color.

IODINE stains—Dip in strong ammonia water and rinse as soon as stain disappears. This is good also for the hands if they become stained through using it.

ALCOHOL can be used, too, washing garment afterwards in soapy water.

GREASE spots on dark woolen goods, or men's coat collars can be cleaned by using borax water, rinsing in clear water and hanging in sun to dry.

ICE CREAM SODA stains—Sponge with gasoline or chloroform, with blotting paper under spot. When dry, sponge with tepid water and rub with a flannel till dry.

MACHINE GREASE may be removed by using cold water, ammonia and soap. This will not cause colors to run.

BLOOD STAINS, even if old and dark, can be removed by soaking in strong ammonia water.

INDELIBLE INK can be removed by equal parts of turpentine and ammonia when everything else fails. Saturate the garment well—let soak, then rinse in warm water.

"IF"

(With apologies to Kipling)

If you can give your time to cross-word puzzles
And do them every hour of the day;
If you can find the "word denoting muzzles"
And "meaning type of ruler in Bombay";
If you can wait and not be tired of waiting
Until you grab the proper word to fit;
If you can think with little hesitating
Who governed England in the time of Pitt;
If you can work (but not enough to hamper
Your ardent quest for all the missing words);
If you can shirk sufficiently to scamper
Through dictionaries "Abba" to "Zee-kerbs";
If you can bear to find the word you've spoiled for
Has seven letters when you want but four.
If you can laugh when words you've simply boiled for Won't do because they lack one letter more;
If you can, travelling by train or trolley
Stick to a puzzle on the way to work;
And then upon arriving there, by golly,
Grab up another over which to lurk;
If you can put the morn in solving others
And even solve another one at lunch;
If you can help some worried word-crazed brother
To get a word synonymous with bunch;
If you can get the waiter there to serve you
And drop the puzzle he's perspiring over;
If you can get the cashier to observe you
Instead of solving "Puzzle Number 4";

If you can make your way back to your job, sir,
And not be knocked about and bumped and bruised;
By scores of other victims in the mob, sir,
Who by the "horizontals" are confused;
If you can spend the afternoon exploring
For "like an incense; similar to fish"
And finding words quite "similar to flooring"
And vertically, "used with chafing dish";
If at the close of day when work is ended
You hop a train and settle in a trance
To find a word synonymous with "blend-ed"
Or perhaps a horizontal word for "pants";
If you can mix with crowds and never know it
And hunt for words to put 'em where they ain't;
If you can love your home and never show it,
But just sit dumbly hunting words like "paint";
If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With putting silly words in spaces clear,
Yours is the earth, and every squirrel-cage in it
And—which is more—you'll be a Nut, old dear! †

From now on he will be a booster for Nova Scotia.

JOHN HARRINGTON

The death of Mr. John Harrington, an aged resident of Wolfville, which occurred at the home of his son Edward in this town, on Thursday last, removes a man well known and highly respected throughout the county. Mr. Harrington was born at Kentville on Oct. 10th, 1838, and lived for the most of his long life in that place. He was a son of the late George Harrington, who was one of the original grantees. The farm, which is located at the western part of the town, was afterwards divided between his two brothers, and is now owned by a descendant. The Harrington family has been a prominent one in Kings county and for many years has been identified with the interests of the shire town.

The deceased was a successful farmer and a good citizen. Two years ago he disposed of his farm and removed to Wolfville. He is survived by his wife, who was formerly Miss Annie Taylor, a daughter of the late Silas Taylor, of Falmouth. Their surviving children are: Mrs. Marchant Clark, of Woodville; Mrs. Fred Mitchell, of Kentville; John, of Kentville; Fred, of New Minas; and Edward, of Wolfville.

The funeral took place from the Kentville Baptist church, of which the deceased was long a faithful member, on Saturday afternoon. Rev. D. G. Ross conducted the service, and the interment was at "The Oakes".

Scout Master Harry Watson, of Grand Pre, came to Avonport recently and organized a Boy Scout Patrol, sixteen strong, and it is hoped more will join this splendid work. Meetings will be held in the Vestry on Tuesday evening.

"MONTMARTRE", STARRING POLA NEGRI, DUE SOON

"Montmartre", Pola Negri's latest Paramount production, directed by Ernest Lubitsch, the man who made the star famous in "Passion", is a colorful romance of France about 1860.

In the picture, which comes to the Orpheum Theatre next Monday and Tuesday, Pola has the role of Yvette, an alluring dancer in the Cafe Flora in Montmartre. She has a chance meeting with a young composer, and he falls in love with her. But there is an older cousin who steps in and spoils everything by telling the musician's mother that Yvette is no kind of a woman for her son to be seen with—a cafe grisette and all that. Nevertheless they get married in secret.

The composer makes a great hit with his symphony. He is at the peak of his fame, and it goes to his head. He begins to pay less and less attention to his wife, and the one-time popular cafe dancer is now a broken woman.

With a novel twist in affairs, an altogether unexpected climax, all the composer's old love for Yvette comes rushing back, and it is infinitely more entertaining on the screen! If you're looking for entertainment, you won't want to miss "Montmartre". It's the biggest thing Pola Negri's ever done.

DEGREE FACTORIES

"The Baptist" (Chicago) prints the following: The degree of Doctor of Divinity has become so common that it no longer carries any special distinction. The degree factories have worked overtime to sell the degree of D.D. and Ph.D. to anybody who had the cash to pay down. "Cash and Carry the Degree" is the motto of all paper colleges which do business with weak ministerial brethren who imagine that a degree will give them an entrée to more lucrative fields and satisfy a vanity that feeds on wind. Some small colleges have also erred in cheapening the honor by bestowing it too freely in the hope of making friends for the institution. At any rate the doctor's degree means nothing to the great mass of people who have no college background, and it usually raises a suspicion in the minds of the intelligentsia as to the source and history of its endowment. If the D.D. were given to the graduates of all standard theological seminaries who have previously earned their bachelor's degree in an accredited college, the degree would then have some meaning and dignity. It would no longer suffer under the cloud of "honorary". Any man with brains and heart and character and industry could earn it, and all the boys whose names appear in the regular columns of the theological alumni record would be "doctors".

THE LEANING TOWER OF PISA IN SOME DANGER OF FALLING

ROME, Feb. 27.—The Tribune publishes a despatch from Pisa asserting that fear is expressed that the famous leaning tower is in danger of falling. The tower was built between the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, and from the top leans fourteen feet off the perpendicular. For years there has been discussion as to whether it was thus purposely built, or whether the leaning tendency was due to displacement of the structure.

The first alarm for the stability of the tower was reported in 1907. A special commission was then appointed and after a long study and examination came to the conclusion that there had been a slight increase in the slant since measurements were taken 150 years previously. The change had developed so uniformly that no immediate danger was believed to exist.

MONCTON, Feb. 27.—University of New Brunswick Hockey team won the championship of the western section of the Maritime Interscholastic Hockey League here tonight by defeating Mount Allison by a score of 3 to 1 in a fast and exciting game played on a splendid sheet of ice. Keenan, right winger of the black and red scored all three goals for U.N.B. McLean scored the garnet and gold's only counter in the second period on a long shot from centre ice, which found its way into the net past Carten. D. C. Currie, of New Glasgow, handled the whistle.

WILLOW BANK CEMETERY

An Appeal by the Directors

The Directors of the Willow Bank Cemetery Corporation would like to see the Cemetery one of the finest resting places for our dead in any part of our land. It is common talk on the part of visitors that Wolfville is one of the most beautiful towns in Nova Scotia. Its homes, its lawns and its streets are well kept. This is an index of the desire on the part of the citizens to deserve such a tribute. It is a laudable ambition and a worthy ideal. The same may be said with perhaps added emphasis, of the way in which our cemetery is looked after. To beautify, improve and adorn it, is the desire of its Directors. Much has already been done to improve its general appearance as many of you know. The annual assessment of Two Dollars per lot does no more than to keep the lots and paths clean for the season. This leaves little or nothing for improvements, etc. A number of the lot holders have put their lots under perpetual care by the payment of $100.00, thus providing for their permanent upkeep and releasing them from any assessment. Already we have about $2500, held by the Eastern Trust Co., of Halifax, as trustee, of which only the income can be used. If now twenty other lot holders can be

SAYS ANNEXATION TALK WASTE OF TIME

"Co-operative marketing has done much to standardize the products of agriculture," declared Hon. C. M. Hamilton, Minister of Agriculture for Saskatchewan, in opening the Saskatchewan Grain Growers' Association convention. "We may be disposed to hold out the threat of separation or annexation, I am of the opinion that little is to be gained by expending our time and energy in that way."

secured before December 31 of the present year to do the same, we have the promise of an additional $1000 to be added to this fund, which would bring it up to $5500. At the annual meeting it was voted that 50% of the receipts from the sale of all lots shall also be devoted to this purpose, so that in the near future the Directors hope to be in a position to engage the services of a competent person who will give his whole time to the care of the Cemetery.

In view then of the fact that the resources at our disposal are limited, and the further fact that we are likely to lose the services of the present efficient Managing Director in the near future, the Directors are fully persuaded that every legitimate effort should be made at once to increase the permanent fund. It is therefore with confidence that you place this matter before you for consideration, assured that you will respond to this appeal, both heartily and promptly. The cause is worthy and your application for having your lot put under perpetual care.

ACADIA CO-EDS BEAT DALHOUSIE

HALIFAX, March 2.—In one of the closest basketball games seen this winter in the Dalhousie gymnasium, Acadia girls' team won over the Dalhousie co-eds by the score of 13-10 Saturday afternoon. The visiting players took the lead at the outset and at no time were headed, although the Dalhousie players fought strenuously to overcome the lead. The Acadia players had slightly the better of team work and their combination plays seemed to worry the Dal guards until the second period when the combined efforts were more successfully broken up. Marion Campbell for Dalhousie and Jean McLaughlin were the individual stars of the game and each accounted for a large percentage of the points for their respective teams. Miss Campbell's scores were particularly fine for she was closely guarded and at no time was permitted to shoot from an easy position.

In the first period Acadia by better team work scored two baskets before the Dal players found their stride. The period ended 6-2 in favor of Acadia and the score about indicates the play.

The second period saw Dalhousie take the offensive and on several occasions the score came within one point of being tied, but the Acadia players were always able to unearth another score at the moment when most needed. When the final whistle blew the score stood Acadia 13, Dalhousie, 10.

The teams: Dalhousie—M. Campbell, M. Thompson, forwards; A. Clarke, centre; E. Barnstead, H. Roberts, M. Kennedy, M. Borden, guards.

Acadia—A. Doherty, J. McLaughlin, forwards; P. Colbath, centre; H. Lawson, C. Chyelman, B. Smith, F. Parice, M. Currie, guards.

AVONPORT LADIES ENTERTAIN LOCAL BIBLE CLASS

Leaving the Baptist church at 2 o'clock p.m., in teams furnished by T. R. Wallace and James Rathburn, twenty-three members of the Ladies' Bible Class went to Avonport on Wednesday of last week, to attend a special meeting of the Avonport W.M.A. Society.

The program of the meeting was as follows:

Music—Avonport choir. Prayer—Mrs. C. R. Nowlan, Wolfville. Address of welcome—Mrs. Percy Reid. Address by Mrs. Hardy, full of interesting reminiscences of her old home and childhood. Mrs. Hardy introduced Mrs. Gullison as the speaker of a rare heart to heart talk, telling of the length and breadth, heights and depths of our missionary work in India, and the great need for medical missionaries.

Collection. Music—Avonport choir. Solo—Mrs. Taylor, Wolfville. Prayer—Mrs. Hardy, Wolfville.

After the meeting very delicious and beautiful refreshments were served in the vestry. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the ladies of Avonport for a very pleasant and profitable afternoon and the hope expressed that they might soon have the pleasure of a return visit from them.

ACADIA WON FROM PINE HILL, 46-36

HALIFAX, Feb. 28.—Acadia University's fast basket ball team took a 46 to 36 victory over the Pine Hill College aggregation at the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium last night before by far the largest crowd of the season. The colleges gave their yells and between periods sang the college songs. Altogether it was the most colorful contest of the season.

The two teams were deadlocked at the finish of the first period by a score of 22-all, but in the final session the Acadians broke loose and amassed a total of 26 points, while they held their opponents to seven baskets, for a total of fourteen points.

Richardson, of Pine Hill, and Cox, formerly of the champion Truro team and now at Acadia, tied as leading scorers, each to alling eighteen points by fine shooting. Davidson, Acadia star, was close behind stars with fourteen points, while Harrison, of the locals, had eight points to his credit.

Write and Wait for An Answer, or Telephone and get Your Answer Right Away--Which ???

When a man has a proposition to make an out-of-town customer, more often than not he puts it in writing, mails the letter, then waits—waits perhaps days!—for an answer.

He has no assurance that his proposition will be accepted, yet for days his hands are tied; he can't make the proposition to anyone else.

If, instead of writing, he had telephoned—what a difference! Instead of waiting to learn if his customer was off or on with the proposition, he would have known at once; and if he was off, he could, instead of letting the days slip idly by, have devoted them to submitting his project elsewhere.

Time is money. These delays cost time, therefore money. The wise man shuns delays. He doesn't write; he telephones!

SHOULD GIVE NATIVE PRODUCT A CHANCE

(Toronto Globe Editorial.) The "Made-in-Canada" campaign is one in which Canadians may heartily co-operate without regard to their opinions as to the exact height of the tariff wall, or the bearing of the tariff on industry. An out-and-out free trader may also be an enthusiastic Canadian, and a firm believer in the capacity of Canadians to take the front rank in manufacturing industry as well as in any other form of activity. The importance of the tariff is not to be denied, but the question need not be raised when an appeal is being made to Canadians to buy Canadian goods, and so to increase the volume of business and employment.

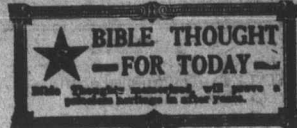

There is perhaps some false modesty in regard to the products of Canadian factories. We have not quite outgrown the colonial habit of deference in this respect. The word "imported" still carries with it a suggestion of superiority—so much so that a Canadian manufacturer has been known to put an English or American label on his own products. Canadian woolen goods, excellent in quality, have suffered from this superstition. Canadians should get rid of this false modesty. They should at least give the native product a chance: ask for it, insist upon getting it, and give the article a fair trial.

Manufacturers might also do more in the way of publicity for their own products. We speak now not only of newspaper advertising, in which we might be suspected of a selfish interest, but of special exhibitions and various other ways of featuring Canadian manufactures. There is not the least reason why Canada should not be one of the foremost manufacturing nations in the world. It has the coal, the water powers and other fundamentals of industry. Its people are as ingenious, inventive and enterprising as any in the world. The progress already achieved has been marvellous. The census of 1901 showed a value of $481,000,000 in manufactured products. The census of 1921 showed a value of $2,747,000,000. The Canadian consumer may do a great deal to maintain that progress by giving preference to the products of Canadian factories.

FLAX GROWING IN NOVA SCOTIA

Plans have been completed for a demonstration on a fairly extensive scale of flax growing and manufacture in Lunenburg County. This experiment is being inaugurated jointly by the Experimental Farms Division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture and the Provincial Department of Agriculture.

It is planned to grow some thirty acres of flax on about as many farms, all of which will be manufactured into fiber in a small plant to be installed near the town of Lunenburg. The farmers participating in this experiment have signed agreements to grow their allotted quantities and clearly understand that while there is every likelihood that they will obtain a fair revenue from the land involved, yet the whole business is to be regarded as an experimental demonstration.

The county of Lunenburg was chosen for this demonstration largely because it was one of the largest flax growing counties in the days when flax growing was carried on throughout the whole province of Nova Scotia, and was persisted in here for a good many years after it had been given up in other parts of the province. It is the hope of the promoters that this Lunenburg experiment may prove the nucleus of an important source of cash revenue to the farmers of Eastern Canada.

RULES FOR HEALTH

Some excellent rules for health are given in a recent number of Hygeia, a health journal. Many of them are ignored by thousands in spite of the fact that obeying them is easy and in many cases pleasant. Here are some of them:

Ventilate every room you occupy. Breathe night air at night time. Open your bedroom windows. Have no fires in bedrooms.

Get back to nature in the matter of foods. Remember the original food products are grains, vegetables, fruits, nuts, meat, milk, eggs and water.

Keep the teeth and gums healthy. Keep them clean.

The secret of great personal power is work, play, rest and sleep in moderation. Never permit a piece of work, or stress or strain of any kind, to run along without frequent interruptions in the nature of relaxations.

Keep serene no matter what happens. It is possible for most of us to observe all of these rules. The last one is difficult and its observance depends to a large extent on temperament. Probably the most important admonition is that which advises moderation in all things.

CHAPTER V.

Voices on the Wire

"It seems," mused Movie Bill, "that whether I want to or not I've to butt in on that squeaky-voiced fellow's affairs." He was supposed, in the phrase beloved of Mr. Micawber, to be waiting in Colvalli, "for something to turn up." It had turned up too, but not in the usual sense. He was really held thrall there by Margaret MacPherson—she of "Miggles! Marr-r-garet, whaur are ye?" He was, in the vernacular, "just batty" to her; but sooner or later, he felt it in his bones, he would have to go. What avail to stay? He knew what he looked like; for he shaved himself every morning. He knew that he was ugly, ugly facially, not in temper. But he delayed and delayed, and made deep plans to allow of visits to the house a mile out of "town" there, northward, which would rouse no suspicions regarding his state. He knew that she would never be his to care for; but to see her, just to see her, to be near her, held him in Colvalli—ostensibly waiting for that something to turn up.

Now, the day being hot and the veranda the afternoon, despite its brood eyes, sultry, he lay on his bed, the window wide open and the shades drawn, reading. Books were his consolation, his anodyne. Down on the sidewalk someone who had been to the coast and heard the touring D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, passed humming:

Hey dee, hey dee,
Lack-a-day dee, misery me;
He shipped no sup and he craved no crumb
But he sighed for the love of a lady?"

Movie Bill sat and threw the book he had been trying to read on to the bureau. The wild rhythmic prose in the form of poetry, by Carl Sandburg of Chicago, had been helping him; but at that pathetic stave in song, sifted up from the sidewalk in the crystal afternoon, he knew he was a fool.

"I've got to get a move on," he told himself. "What's the good of hanging around just to see her face, just to see her now and then? It will only make it worse for myself when I do go or," he gloomed at the drawn shade, and the slit of gold light below it, "she gets married."

It was then that what had been only a hum of voices in the next room, punctuated with occasional clicks of a bottle on a tumbler's edge, rose up clearly.

"I tell you, by heck, I'm going over to haze him if necessary into telling me just where he picked up that galena. One way or another I'll find out."

Thus came to Bill one voice and, lower, but still clear, almost in its entirety the speech in response:

"Oh, shucks! Foolish to . . . cut out the hazing . . . don't know what he dropped anyhow. Pump him. Don't hazz."

"What was he bringing the specimens back for?" the first voice roared, as of one in a combative state.

"True, true!" spoke the other, consoling. "But don't you ask about them straight. Pump him."

"I'll pump him! By heck, I'll pump lead into him if he don't talk well. I'll handle him easy no more than five minutes, and then—"

"You be careful, Mark. You are liable to shoot a man up before your mind has a chance to imagine ahead and see the electric chair."

A door slammed. Feet clumped away down the corridor.

Movie Bill raised the shade and stepped out on to the narrow balcony, lit his pipe and leant his elbow on the rail. He saw Mark Bantling make exit on the sidewalk, balancing slightly, resting a hand a moment, fingers spread drunkenly at the doorpost. He watched him walk across to the livery stable. He watched him ride out. In a saddle Bantling showed no hint of inebriety, but Movie Bill was not unfamiliar with the sight of a man who could scarce walk yet riding passing well. The nature of the man Bantling showed itself to Movie in the callous, bullying manner in which he handled the horse that he rode.

Movie Bill descended to the bare sitting-room and shut the door, for he wished not to be heard speaking on the telephone. He consulted the card of subscribers on the wall and found what he wanted—the T. T. Ranch (Tremaine and Thomas), 6. He took down the receiver and—

"Six," said he.

"Six," came the acknowledgment. He waited.

"I'll ring again," said the voice.

He waited. There was just a hum suggesting the big space of the range lands, wind in the grass.

"I'll ring again," came the voice.

Nothing happened. Movie Bill hung up the receiver. An hour later he tried again.

"Six," he said.

"Six," replied the voice on the wire. Nothing.

"I'll ring again."

Nothing but a faint hum as of the world spinning in space. Then—

"Hullo! Hullo!" came suddenly another voice.

Movie Bill was on the point of saying: "That the T. T. ranch?" but he frowned and did not.

"Do you know who's speaking?" he enquired.

"Yes, of course I know," came the voice again; and he recognized it as Bantling's.

He stood waiting, wondering what to say—decided to say nothing, just wait for the click of the receiver at the other end being hung up.

"Hullo! Foot-look!" came Bantling's voice, oddly horrible on the phone.

"Wrong number. You got the wrong number, old bird. Try Long Distance. Try a heck of a Long Distance. Mine will be gir, thank you!" and then a demoniacal laugh.

Movie Bill's face showed even more wrinkles than when it was in repose. That disembodied voice on the wire!

Horrible! It was as if he had been connected by Central with a lunatic asylum. Then suddenly a little flame of rage rose in him at being thus spoken to by any one, drunk or sober.

"Darn you!" he said. "Can't you be civil on the wire? What in thunder are you doing in there anyhow? Have you got the information you want, you darn claim-jumper?"

"What? How's that?" asked Bantling thickly.

"If you touch that fellow Piccolo—" Movie Bill hesitated. He was puzzled. He wondered if the madman had perhaps killed Piccolo. "He's the goose with the golden eggs, you know," he said. "Go easy with him."

"Who the — are you?" Bantling roared so loudly as to fuz his voice on the wire.

"Mel!" Movie Bill was furious, absurdly furious. "I'm the man that's going to register that claim—not you!"

Then his rage ebbed. He hung up the receiver so that Bantling would not hear his mirth, for the last words he spoke shook with laughter.

"All the same," he considered, "he's in the T. T. ranch house. He's liable to have killed young Thomas."

He walked slowly from the Benwell House and crossed the road to the livery stable where he kept his own horses. The liveryman helped in the saddling, and when all was ready Bill drew the lines over the horse's head, grabbed a bit of mane and the horn in the quick gesture of an experienced rider. As he swung to the saddle and settled in one movement Baldy stepped up. He rode out into the full blaze of sun again.

"Yes, whether I want to or not," he mused. "I am sure butting into the life of that fellow Piccolo. That hotheaded maniac is liable to have plugged him if Tremaine wasn't around. Sound as if he was doing a glorious mad dance at the phone. Hope they were either both out or came home heeled."

He rode on along the winding main road till he came to the two ruts leading to the Tremaine and Thomas ranch, swept his line hand out to the off-side and the horse veered round. He dropped the lines once again, and again, on his neck, in a tap-tap-tap to indicate a lunge, and then, as one in a moving easy chair, rode on to the house.

"Hullo! Hullo!" he hailed. "Anybody around?"

"Around?" echoed the big empty barn, and that was all.

He dismounted, left the lines tied to the ground, and stepped to the door and knocked. There was no answer. He put his hand in his pocket and with the nose of his little automatic point d' ahead, but still in the pocket, he tried the handle sharply, flung the door open, and stood pat. Nothing within! For only sound—a nasty little nickel alarm clock tick-tocked atop the Grand Piano.

Bill stepped in and stood thoughtful in the big central room. He stared at the telephone box and its two bells, each with a point of light, like big round metal eyes. If only the thing was alive and could speak of itself! Then, right hand still in pocket, holding his automatic, he stepped to a curtain and raised it sharply, very alert. He looked only into a small empty room like a ship's berth, with two bunks and a window, a dimity curtain on the window's lower half, and a white cirrus cloud like a feather adrift in air crossing the blue sky beyond the upper half.

The photograph of an elderly gentleman in a tail-coat, holding a plug hat in his hand, and with an elbow on what looked like an unfinished sundial, was on the wall above one of the cots.

"Piccolo's pa, I guess," said Movie Bill. "Wonder if he too had a high thin voice when he was excited, like as if he was going to break into a tenor song." He had not been smoking as he rode over to the ranch, and so was able to smell very distinctly an odor of tobacco—to be precise, a cigar. He paused at the row of books. Books interested him. He considered their titles, even took up one or two and glanced at them, and was so employed at the shelves when a horse's whinny caused him to replace the volume in his hand and step outside again.

And there was Piccolo riding into the much-trampled yard between the house and the barn. Piccolo's eyes were wide, staring at the open door behind the strange horse.

"How-dy," rumbled Movie Bill. "I just came over to see that you were all right."

Piccolo seemed puzzled.

"I rang you up on the phone to see if you were all right," said Movie, seeing that Piccolo made no reply, "and either I got the wrong number or you had a visitor who answered, and he sounded to me drunk or batty. It worried me. So I rode over to see that you were all right."

Piccolo looked suspiciously at him.

"Well, that was surely kind of you," he said.

Movie Bill saw the expression of suspicion and being "all too human" he reserved it—and then told himself it was but natural for Piccolo to be "le ry" of him. So—

"You see," he explained further, "I heard a man say he was coming over to see you; and he was pretty well lit up with fig juice. After he was gone a spell I thought I'd just phone you to see if you were all right."

Piccolo was still suspicious.

"That was very kind of you," he said again, guardedly.

That look of suspicion still remaining, despite the attempts at explanation, Movie Bill was annoyed.

"Yes," said he. "I don't mind you losing out, but I don't want to see you planded. It's a darn pleasant world to ride around over. I thought to myself: 'That wisp of a fellow would stand a poor show before a man of that size and weight.'"

"Wisp of a fellow!" came from Piccolo, in a very high shrill note, like that of a blue Jay.

"That," said Movie Bill languidly, "was my consideration translated into words, though maybe I did not speak aloud. But I see you are all right now, so I am satisfied."

He drew the lines over Baldy's neck, grabbed a lock of mane, grabbed the horn and swung to his seat as the horse tepped up.

"Good afternoon," he said. "Adios as we used to say in Arizona." He did not raise his voice. "Tat-ta, as the Welsh say. And to Hanover with you!"

"Who do you claim was the man who came over to see me?" Piccolo shrilled after him, standing in the yard in a belligerent attitude.

"Claim?" enquired Movie Bill over his shoulder. "Claim? I'm telling you. I'm not laying a story before you to argue about and sit in your sieve of a head! Claim!"

He rode away, and a hundred yards off called himself a fool. That phrase came to him: "Human, all too human!"

NEWS SUPPRESSION

(Editor and Publisher)
Commenting on the peculiar embarrassment a newspaper feels when suppression of news is asked by personal friends, the editor of the Ottawa Journal tells his readers that news is a commodity and that it is as absurd to ask an editor not to print an item as it is to ask a butcher not to dispose of certain beefsteaks to customers, or importing a music store proprietor not to handle certain songs.

News suppression is usually futile, benefiting no one and doing positive harm in many instances. In Ottawa it has been discovered, for instance, that when the local newspapers yield to the pleas of personal friends to "keep it out," like a good fellow, the special correspondents of out-of-town papers usually get the news, and it gradually floats back by word of mouth and the Ottawa newspapers are suspected of being either incompetent or cowardly.

Suppression of many news items also reacts against those who have sought it as a means of escaping supposed disgrace or humiliation. It only piles up their troubles.

This angle always reminds us of the Boston merchant who told an editor that he would withdraw all advertising if news of his daughter's elopement was published.

The editor replied: "You can't scare me into doing an injustice to your daughter and her husband. I shall not be party to a family conspiracy which proposes to make the happy and impulsive marriage day of a boy and girl something abnormal and mysterious, and, therefore, a topic for back stairs gossip and indecency. Your daughter has a right to be known as a bride; her husband has a right to his social status as her husband. If you had sense, instead of stupid and half-baked pride in the shallow conventions of life, you would be here asking us to tell the whole town the glad tidings that your daughter had chosen her life partner, and was sufficiently independent and characterful to take him whether you and wife approved or not."

Poor old daddy weakened, and before the interview ended he not only gave permission to run a first page story but corrected the proof, and asked for additional galley proofs to "send to the other papers." He did not "pull" his advertising, but increased it and for years was that editor's personal friend.

The best way to avoid embarrassment when the "good fellows" come around to suppress legitimate news is to tell them exactly what the logical consequences are, to them, and to your newspaper.

The waiter appealed to the manager. "That gentleman says his soup isn't fit for a pig."

"Then take it away, you idiot, and bring him some that is."

Does your pen Qualify? Yes, it's a Waterman's

Any fountain pen's usefulness depends upon three things—the nib, the ink supply and the flow. The nib must conform—the ink supply must be generous, the flow must be steady and continuous. There is a Waterman's nib to suit every possible style of handwriting. The ink supply in every Waterman's is greater than that of any other pen of similar size. The "spoon" feed—exclusive to Waterman's—is the one method by which a steady flow of ink is assured. It is because of these features—because of its ability to write properly at all times—that there are more Waterman's in use than all other makes of fountain pens combined.

HIGHWAY NOTICE

Closing of Roads

The attention of the public is respectfully called to an Act to amend Chapter 77 of the Revised Statutes of 1923 of "The Load of Vehicles Act", passed the 9th day of April, 1924, A.D.

Be it enacted by the Governor, Council and Assembly, as follows:

1.—Section 7 of Chapter 77 of the Revised Statutes, 1923, the "Load of Vehicles Act", is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

7.—(1) No person shall operate a motor vehicle that is subject to the provisions of the Motor Vehicle Act on any highway in any municipality after the first day of March and before the first day of June following without the permission of the Superintendent of Highways or of such other officer as may be appointed by the Provincial Highways Board for that purpose first had and obtained.

(2) The Provincial Highways Board from time to time in each year may, and is hereby authorized and empowered with the approval of the Minister of Highways, to exempt from the provisions of Sub-section 1 of this section, for the whole or any part of the period between the first day of March and the first day of June following in the year and for which the exemption is granted, every person operating any motor vehicle or a motor vehicle of any particular class that is subject to the provisions of the Motor Vehicle Act, on all highways within any municipality or municipalities which highways in the opinion of the Provincial Highways Board will not be unreasonably damaged by reason of such exemption.

AWBERRY SILK FAILLIE MAKES A SIMPLE AFTER-NOON FROCK

Faillie in a delightful strawberry color makes the youthful dress sketched above.

The trimming touches are of soft ecru tint, that is the batiste collar and cuffs are ecru, while the velvet ribbon that laces through them is a deep strawberry tint to match the dress. The suede belt is of the same color.

This use of velvet ribbon to lace through sheer collar and cuffs is most effective. The velvet may either match the frock material or offer a smart contrast to it.

A cream faillie frock with cream batiste collar and cuffs laced with velvet ribbon is very attractive.

Robinson, member for King's; L. H. Martel, member for Hants, and L. J. Lovett, member for Digby-Annapolis.

After the delegation had pointed out the necessity of suitable storage facilities for the use of apple and bulb shippers, the Minister expressed himself as sympathetic toward the project. When fuller details were prepared, he said, the matter would be further discussed at a conference between the Minister of Public Works, the Minister of Railways and Hon. E. M. Macdonald.

Others who sent in correct solutions were—Karl Nowlan, Robert Herbin, Mable Burgher and Laura M. Boates, Wolfville; Mrs. James Gertridge, and ceived at this office. On account of the fact that our out-of-town readers are placed at a disadvantage in not being able to get their answers to us as soon as the town readers, we will this week confine the contest to outside readers only.

The first two to hand in correct solutions to last week's puzzle were Allan Pick and L. E. Shaw, both of Wolfville. As they are both now subscribers we would ask them to please send us the names of some persons outside their families to whom they would like us to send the paper for six and three months respectively.

join in this national scheme, we shall be very glad to do so."

Thomas W. Caldwell, Progressive member for Victoria and Carleton, N.B., and interested in potato production, referred to the investigation now being conducted in New Brunswick, under the Composites Investigation Act, into the methods of marketing and urged the great need of a central marketing agency "on which we can depend and which will give us a fair deal". He declared that shippers were largely speculators and discouraged their co-operative plans. He hoped to see this Federal brokerage agency placed on a satisfactory basis next year. He also stressed the need of reliable statistics as to the crop prospects of the various fruits and vegetables and declared that figures given out by the Federal Food Board in the last year of the war as to potato production did much injury to the potato growers.

W. A. Wilson, representative of the Federal Department of Agriculture in British markets, told of the need of co-operative marketing and also of the necessity of Canadians setting high standards of agricultural products and of maintaining them.

Tomorrow morning a committee will be named to work out the details of a Federal plan such as was favored at this afternoon's meeting.

Lewis Duncan, who investigated the alleged combine of fruit and vegetable jobbers in the West, said he had found that western brokerage firms collected fifteen per cent., whereas in Montreal it was about twelve per cent., and in Great Britain from 7 1/2 to 10 per cent., commission. Mr. Duncan strongly recommended a Dominion-wide selling agency, treating the whole country as a unit, and thus avoiding, among other things, competition between districts.

CANADA MAY HAVE A ROYAL VISITOR THIS YEAR

So successful was the recent visit of the Prince of Wales to Canada, that Princess Mary and her husband, Viscount Lascelles, have virtually decided to visit Canada this year. It is authoritatively reported. The visit will be in every way informal. No social function for many years stirred the entire world as did Princess Mary's wedding, and she has won favor wherever has been.

DIARY OF MARGARET D. MICHENER

Aug. 2nd, 1850.—It astonishes me when I think this is the month of August. How fast the summer is going. We have just had a fine rain. Last night as school was out Olivia and Ann called in and we went home with Olivia. When we were about to return a heavy thunder and lightning storm came up so we stopped all night and I arose early this morning and had a lovely walk home. I have written a letter to Simon and one to Rebecca Elder. I had a visit from Nancy Wednesday night.

4th.—Another Sabbath near its close. They always pass swiftly to me. I attended Sunday School and meeting as usual. Mr. E. Harvey and Celeste, from Newport, came to Mary's last night. They, with Maria, took dinner with me today.

6th.—I started last night after school to collect money for the Union Missionary Society. I met with some repulses and some success. I stopped in at father's, then went out in the field and raked hay a while. Hibbart came home last night. Mrs. Beazley had a daughter today.

7th.—Capt. Whit Holmes came up last night from Halifax and brought me a letter from John Michener, so tonight Ann came in and we wrote to him.

12th.—I went to Conference meeting on Saturday afternoon. Joseph Marsters was there. He spoke of the time when there was a shout in the camp of Israel, when willing converts were coming up to own the Lord. I think there is a deep feeling with some on account of the state of our church, of its declension and spiritual slumbers of its members. Yet God is not left without a witness and his promises are the same as always. I went home with Ruth for the night and stayed till Sunday School time. I had a good meeting with my class. There were 78 scholars present. In the afternoon I went to see M. J. Coalfeet and Mrs. Rathburn, both being quite sick. On Wednesday evening the 14th inst., a few came in for a prayer meeting. I received a lovely letter from cousin Mary Ann Keys. It is nearly a year since I had heard from her. She is going to be married next month. Elmira and I went over to Mary's and stopped all night; we talked half the night.

BEFORE IT IS TOO LATE

If you have a gray-haired mother
In the old home far away,
Sit you down and write the letter
You put off from day to day.
Don't wait until her weary steps
Reach Heaven's pearly gate,
But show her that you think of her,
Before it is too late.

If you have a tender message,
Or a loving word to say,
Don't wait till you forget it,
But whisper it today.
Who knows what bitter memories
May haunt you if you wait?
So make your loved one happy
Before it is too late.

The tender word unspoken,
The letters never sent,
The long forgotten messages,
The wealth of love unspent;
For these some hearts are breaking,
For these some loved ones wait;
Show them that you care for them,
Before it is too late.

George Bancroft Griffith.

NEW CURE FOR COLDS

The chlorine treatment is simple. You simply remain in one small room for an hour. In the case of the government clinics at Washington, the tediousness has been relieved by providing books.

Magazines and newspapers.

Also the development of a portable apparatus by means of which chlorine can be administered to a single patient permits a sufferer to rest comfortably in his own home or office while undergoing treatment. Despite the fact that chlorine was used as a war weapon there is no reason why the most nervous person should fear to take the treatment. It would require about 100 times the strength of chlorine that is used in the treatment before there would be danger in breathing the gas.

When the patients are seated, a valve is opened, as a small amount is fed from a glass cylinder containing chlorine in liquid form. An ordinary electric fan beside the inlet pipe circulates it through the room. When the treatment ends all the chlorine-bearing air is driven out by fans.

The apparatus consists of a small glass cylinder, capable of holding a little more than a quart of liquid chlorine. When a valve at the top is opened, chlorine escapes through rubber tubing to a glass cylinder filled with a salt solution. Thence a simple siphon causes the chlorine to pass in jets into the room through glass piping.

A single treatment—enough for seven persons simultaneously—costs about seven cents.—Robert E. Martin, in Popular Science Monthly.

HANTSPORT WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

On Friday afternoon a grand rally was held by the local Women's Institute at the home of Mrs. Asa Newcombe. After the reading of the minutes important business matters were taken up and discussed. The president, Mrs. B. Davison, was authorized to send a letter of sympathy to the secretary, Mrs. R. Lawrence, in behalf of the Institute, for the loss she has sustained through the death of her sister, Mrs. W. D. Fullerton.

The programme consisted of a reading on St. Valentine by Mrs. B. Davison, and interesting papers on Home Decoration by Mrs. A. B. Dickie and Mrs. E. Lester. These papers set forth some very valuable suggestions to those who contemplate re-decorating their homes this spring.

Following the programme a dainty supper was served.

CHAPTER III

Angus Drives To The "T. T. Ranch"

The bunch of returned horses was down in the home pasture. They were whinnying to their old fellows by the time Tremaine reached home. And by the time Piccolo got to the ranch-house Tremaine had let them all in.

It was good to be back, in Piccolo's eyes, to see again the foot breadth of water running along in the irrigation ditch. Even the stove-pipe sticking up out of the roof it was good to see again! When he had hung his saddle on its peg he went indoors to find his partner filling his tobacco pouch at the big tin.

"A smoke, Pic, my lad," said Jack. "A smoke before anything. No more knock-knock muck."

Piccolo flung off his heavy coat and went out for cordwood to start the stove, and Tremaine smoked meditatively. He had something on his mind, but it was not till after supper that he spoke it, pushing back his plate.

"That old man Angus MacPherson is sure all prospector," said he.

"I guess he is. He's not so very old, Jack."

Puff-puff went Tremaine.

"You didn't notice the way he looked at the bits of stone you threw out of your pocket, Pic?"

"Yes. When you were dusting out your pocket like a kind of a shy school kid under the eyes of his daughter."

"Oh, gwan!" said David Thomas.

"I guess there's nothing in it," said Tremaine.

"and yet I don't know. I'll be turning into a writing sharp if I get imagining. But there seemed more than him just being bugs on looking at rocks. Got any more bits in your pocket?"

Hestated at Piccolo. He frowned. He wondered what was the meaning of his partner's expression. Really what Tremaine said had conjured back a picture into Piccolo's mind, a picture hardly noted at the time. He remembered how Mark Bantling had watched him when he sat his horse before the Benwell House veranda answering the silly questions of that fellow What's-his-name.

"It's queer, you know, how mineral has been found in this Western country. Tremaine remarked, persistent. "Most unexpected ways. Accidents! Devil's own luck, as the saying goes."

"Guess I wouldn't know paying mineral even if I saw it," said Piccolo. "Copper in a stone don't always look like copper in a penny piece. Silver in a stone don't always look like half a dollar. Might be tin for all I'd know. Once I thought I'd got gold and a darned old prospector laughed himself red over me. Mica it was."

"Well, man tin's valuable. Mica is valuable if you get the right kind and in the right quantity."

"Oh, shoot!" said Piccolo. "Above ground for me! No delving like a mole."

But though the subject seemed to be thus dismissed it stuck in Tremaine's mind, in Piccolo's. He could not rest. Supper over that night, because of his thoughts set a-going by Jack's remarks, he came to a decision regarding a course of action. But shy of telling what he was about he announced:

"Guess I'll saddle up and go back to Colvalli. I want some cig papers."

"Smoke a pipe, man," said Tremaine.

"No. I want some papers."

"There's some there, then. On top of the grand piano."

Grand Piano was their name for an old packing-case turned into a cupboard.

"Ah, but they're white. I want wheat straw."

"Gee, you are surly particular."

Piccolo waited for no further repartee, strolled leisurely out. To ride five miles for (ostensibly) a packet of cigarette papers—brown, when white were procurable, as well as a pipe—was perhaps odd.

To ease his conscience, rather than to have them to show to Jack, he certainly bought wheat papers in Colvalli before doing aught else. Shades of night were taking the gold light out of the rolling prairie. Distances were purple instead of green, sifted with blue.

He left his horse hitched at Inman's Store, and strolled along to the Benwell House. There were few men there, so he sat on the veranda edge, legs dangling over, and rolled a cigarette. Then he dropped his tobacco sack—and the papers. He had to light a match to find them. When he had found them his face, to the considering gaze of Movie Bill, sitting there again (reading no more, the dim light forbidding), had a worried look. An ingenious sort of man, thought Movie.

"Looking for anything?" he asked.

"Me? Why no."

"Oh!" said Movie Bill.

Piccolo eyed him sidewise in the dusk.

"I saw a man pick up something there just after you went today," Movie added, "and I wondered."

Piccolo thought he had better be clever before those deep-set meditative eyes.

"Guess it was nothing I dropped," said he.

"All right," replied Bill, laconically.

Whistling gently, hands in pockets, Piccolo strolled round the gable, lost in thought, came to his horse. There might be something in what Jack imagined, thought he. What should he do? Sohe wondered. The notion took him to ride back to Angus MacPherson's and—he hesitated. What could he do there? They might not sit on the veranda so late. How, even if they did, would he see? He could not pretend to drop things there and light matches. He would be ashamed to seem clumsy, "all thumbs", before Miss MacPherson. For a moment he thought of going up to the MacPherson house quietly and examining the ground stealthily before the veranda, for the dropped stones. Then he remembered the dog. It would, for sure, give tongue if he prowled about that way.

A gentle night breeze fanned down the straggling street, stirred the dust, was cool on his cheek. He felt himself fool. Stupid notion, that of his partner's! He wondered if he should go back and ask Jack's advice; but to do so he would have to tell of dusting out his pocket before the Benwell House, and Jack somehow seemed always able to see inside him. Jack would say: "That was what you remembered when I was talking about the dropped stones at MacPherson's!" Piccolo had a sensitiveness in his make-up, his constitution, his harmless ego. He had always dreaded not-being able to play the man in an emergency; and yet in all the emergencies he had met he had done so. Still, he had that sensitiveness. He would go home, he decided—and sleep on it.

"To sleep on it has helped many a man," he mused.

If he had only known it Angus MacPherson was quoting the very same adage to himself scarcely a mile to north—and quoting it without avail.

Slowly homeward rode Piccolo through the dusk, the red glow of his cigarette head to his silhouetted saddle-horn as he took the twining road along the benches.

And Angus, in his buckboard, saw that figure as he drove south also, on one of the backward loops of road.

"Eh man," he murmured, "a wonderful land for what the painter bodies call 'effects'. What a figure is you against the last of the day! What would we call it? The Last of the Cowpunchers. Eh, man, a caller air; a grand atmosphere!"

He flicked the whip and hummed a few bars of his favourite song:

"... my heart will ever be at home in dear old Scotland, wi' my ain folk!"

The last of the cowpunchers (that Angus, joggling along in the buckboard did not recognize as Piccolo in that light, or lack of light) drifted down beyond the roll of plain. A sickle of moon showed like a paring of silver in the deep blue sky. The Dipper was bright, with its pointers pointing to the North Star, and over against it belted Orion stood above the rolling world.

"It's better to be quixotic than close," thought Angus; and he arrived at the T.T. ranch so little in rear of Piccolo that the latter stood waiting to see who came, framed by the oblong of lit ranch door.

"Good-night," said Angus.

"Oh, it's you," said Piccolo, and his voice at that moment was scarcely higher than a whisper.

"I beg your pardon?" said Angus.

"I said, 'Oh, it's you!'" repeated Piccolo.

"Ay, that's right. Oh, it's me and no doubt—no doubt." He sighed, as one sighing over his own folly. "Could I have a word wi' ye, Pic?" he enquired.

CHAPTER IV

Maps and Smell of Wood Smoke

"You've only to hear something new to you once and then you are always hearing it," thought Piccolo at Mac's first words.

For this was his speech when he entered.

"I do not know whether I am about to show myself a fool, or quixotic"; and under his lifted white brows he blinked at the light.

Tremaine had risen and bowed to the visitor. Piccolo stood a step behind him, having ushered him in, round-eyed. For something to say in response, rather than to air his recently acquired knowledge, he informed Angus: "I know what quixotic means sir. Jack mentioned that Don Quixote this very afternoon."

"I wasna apropos of me, was it?" enquired Angus with the slightest of pawky smiles. "Most people, after they leave a house, clatter about the folk they've been calling upon—sometimes for good, sometimes for ill." He beamed generally upon them, lest they might think him cranky and highly serious. "It is a human frailty I greatly dislike. Ye'll notice too that when a party has left a room there are folks that at once begin discussing him—or her." Yes quite so, that's the way it goes," he growled on.

But he was speaking for speaking's sake to break the ice, thinking the while of other matters, a way very common to him as Piccolo was to discover.

Feeling a certain deference to him because of his age neither Tremaine nor Thomas attempted any speech, just awaited some words from Angus that would seem less like a talking to himself, monologue. And Tremaine thrust forward the chair on which he had been sitting, their most comfortable chair, and clapped the back of it with his best bow, as indication to their visitor to be seated.

"Thank ye," said Angus, nodded, and slowly sat down. Then he remarked, or it may be said, enquired (the upward Aberdonian lilt was at the end of the words): "I suppose you two are both good partners?"

"They looked one to the other.

"I mean in the sense of 'What's mine isthine', as you might say," Angus elucidated.

Tremaine smiled. Piccolo smiled.

"Ay, I thought so," said Angus.

"Thank you, sir."

This last was to Jack who, not flabbergasted-looking like Piccolo by the unexpected evening call, had pushed forward a tobacco tin, seeing Angus dive a hand down into his pocket, and presuming it was for his pipe.

But it was not his pipe he produced. He drew his hand from his pocket and, lying in the palm, was a little stone the size of a lump of sugar, but not four square, a lapped little stone. He held it forth for their view. It glittered in the lamplight with a myriad pinpoints of light.

"Do you ken what this is?" he asked, as they looked at it. Then the Scot suddenly went in abeyance. "Say, fellows," he said, "this little splinter of rock—do you know the first thing about it?"

Silence.

"It was double the size when you dropped it today in front of my veranda, Pic. I cleaved it with a hammer. Do you know what it is? Say! This is an awful quiet assemblage!"

Jack looked from the stone to Piccolo and, sitting down, pushed well away from him on the table the book he had been reading. His face had the expression of: "I told you so!"

"Well, evidently you don't know," said Angus. "Evidently I am all quixotic in coming to you. You don't deserve to be told! It's a galena."

He set it on the table.

"There," he said, "it's yours! You go back to where you got it from and look for more, follow it up. Go hunt for more to see where this came from, whether fallen from above near at hand, or washed to where you found it by freshets. And when you find the mother-lode stake it."

"Mother who?" said Piccolo thinking. With an absent gesture, like an automaton, he drew a stool toward the table and sat down, elbows on table, to stare at the little stone with a rapt expression.

"Did ye think I said Mother Habbaid!" ejaculated Angus. "Hosses, hosses! Man, do you not know that this is a meenal country as well as a good land for cows and cayuses? To be sure staring at that bit of stone as if you were a crystal gazer will not avail much. Go and get it, as ye might say, and quote the title of one of these movies I saw in Spokane. Go and get it, lad."

GUELPH'S FIRST HOUSE TO BE RESTORED

At the instance of the Wellington Historical Society, the old Priory building of Guelph, Ontario, erected nearly a century ago by John Galt, the founder of that city, is to be restored. The various trades unions in Guelph have offered to contribute to the restoration and an energetic campaign is now being carried on among the citizens to raise the balance of the money required to rebuild, in replica, the building as it stood on completion ninety-seven years ago. The old building was removed from its original site many years ago, and some of the original logs were replaced with new ones, but there are still many of the timbers remaining that were placed in position by the Canada Company's axemen in 1827. For some years the old Priory building was utilized as a passenger station by the Canadian Pacific, but it was abandoned as a station when the town of Guelph outgrew it. Tradition has it that Galt, taking an axe from one of the axemen struck the first blow against the first tree to be felled, after which he and his party drank to the prosperity of Guelph.

Extraordinary Construction Feat at Famous Mountain Resort

Right, the shell in course of erection. Left, the cover beneath which the construction work is going on. Below, Chateau Lake Louise, as it will appear upon completion.

Architects and builders all over America are much interested in the progress of the re-building of the Canadian Pacific hotel at Lake Louise, Alberta. The site of this building is over a mile above sea level, and the thermometer frequently takes a sensational drop, there being winter days when 56 below zero is on record. It was imperative that the new wing, which is being built to replace that burned down last summer, should be finished and open for the coming season, and that work on it should, therefore, not be interrupted by winter weather.

Several architects and contractors from United States cities, who have visited the site, expressed doubts as to whether the job could be done during the cold weather, particularly in view of the fact that so much of the work consisted in pouring cement. This had to be safeguarded from freezing, and it was finally decided to build a huge wooden, tar-paper lined, shell around the entire space to be occupied by the new wing of the hotel. On the inside of this shell were hung thousands of feet of temporary steam coils, kept hot by 380 horse-power steam boilers, the effect of which was to provide a safe, summer-like atmosphere for the carrying on of the work.

The erection of so important a building in a position so comparatively difficult of access, as is the Lake Louise Chateau, is a matter calling for unusual engineering skill, the task of getting the materials to the site being by no means an easy one. With a night and day service, in spite of ice and snow, over 26,000 tons of material and coal are being delivered by the winding narrow-gauge tramway on a four per cent grade for a distance of 3 1/2 miles from Lake Louise depot to the Chateau. Canadian Pacific forces are supervising the work, supplying steam and electricity and delivering material to the site.

This extension will enable the Chateau to accommodate seven hundred guests in a fireproof building, with every modern convenience, and one of its features will be the magnificent view of the lake and the group of mountains surrounding it from the ball room, rotunda, lounge and dining room through enormous plate glass windows which feature the whole length of the building. The extension was designed by Messrs. Barrett and Blackader, of Montreal, who have done other important work in connection with Canadian Pacific hotels and the contract was undertaken by Messrs. Carter-Halls and Aldinger, of Winnipeg.
