WHY EXPERIMENT?

Food scientists claim that the leavener is largely responsible for the flavor, texture and wholesomeness of your home baking. That on no other one ingredient does so much depend. It is important, therefore, to use a baking powder that you know possesses the necessary leavening qualities.

MAGIC BAKING POWDER

and is the only strictly high class baking powder in Canada selling at a moderate price. Its reputation is built on purity and highest quality.

The only well known medium priced baking powder made in Canada that does not contain alum and that has all its ingredients plainly stated on the label.

CHAPTER XXV.
AS IN A DREAM.

"No, thank you, dear! I've been married once, and, as the boy said of the prickly pear, 'No more for me, thank you!' But yours is another case altogether, and I confess that I tremble every day lest you should come and tell me, with that mouse-like little smile of yours, that one of these men is going to take you from me. Ah! what a pity it would be—for we are so happy, you and I, dear! If girls could only know when they are well off! But they never do. It's only when they have resigned their liberty and given all their heart for about a quarter of some selfish man's, that they discover what a fraud matrimony is!"

And Doris had made no reply beyond the quiet, "mouse-like smile," and a little sigh, which was too low to reach her companion's ear. Not Lady Despard alone, but many another of the frequenters of the Villa Rimini, had wondered that this beautiful English girl should be so irresponsible to the admiration and attentions lavished upon her. Men of rank and position, for whom the matrons of society angled unceasingly, paid court to her, needing but a smile or word of encouragement to lay their titles at her feet; but the smile or the word were never extended to them. As the Princess of Carthage, clad in the mystic veil, moved, like an unapproachable spirit, amongst the suitors at her father's court, so Doris Marlowe lived, surrounded by a barrier of reserve which, vague and intangible as it was, served to keep the most ardent at arm's length.

The past alone was to her reality; the present seemed like a dream; and often she sat beside Lady Despard, surrounded by a crowd of people laughing and talking, the voices died upon her ears, and she heard only the murmur of the brook in Barton meadows, mingling with the voice of the man who had won her heart and tossed it aside, shattered and broken forever.

Often she wondered whether he had married the Lady Grace—whose name, when first she had heard it on his lips, had sounded like a knell in her ears.

If stone walls do not a prison make, a crowd cannot destroy solitude; and Doris, in the midst of the brilliant throng which made the Villa Rimini its centre, lived in a mental and spiritual solitude, on the threshold of which only two persons ever trod. One was Lady Despard, whom she loved, the other as she did all the others, but it was impossible. He made it impossible by never giving her a chance of repulsing him. Since the evening he had come to Chester Gardens for the first time he had never paid her a single compliment, and from his lips alone she never received a single "pretty" speech.

Although he slept at the inn, he had a luxurious suite of apartments in the villa, and they met at almost every meal, and frequently during the day, but his manner to Doris was one of studious courtesy toned by a reserve which matched her own.

By the rest he was regarded as the most charming of men. The women secretly—some of them openly—adored him for his good looks, which were remarkable, even in that land of handsome faces, and for the exquisite voice, which was always at their service. The men voted him a "good fellow," and was warm in his praises. The reception from which he was absent always seemed lacking in its accustomed brightness, and no dance or outdoor excursion was complete without Mr. Percy Levant.

Perhaps the air of mystery which surrounded him increased the interest he awakened. Nobody knew anything about him, except that he was in Florence to study music, and, in some vague, unexplained way, to collect materials for a magnificent and unique music-room which Lady Despard intended building in one of her houses, and at some unfixed time in the dim future.

Of himself, and his own affairs and past history he was as silent as Doris was of hers; and people who were at first inclined to be curious accepted his want of a past and were content to take him for what he was—a light-hearted waif floating like a bubble on the surface of society.

To the superficial frequenters of the Villa Rimini he did not seem to have a care, and scarcely an object in life, excepting it were to play and sing at all times and seasons, whenever Lady Despard requested him.

But Doris was something more than a superficial observer, and often when, in the early morning or in the delicious gloaming, she was wandering dreamily through the flower-scented grounds, she would come across him pacing moodily beneath the trees, or lying on a bank, with his head resting on his hands, and his handsome face darkened by an expression which would have startled his many friends who thought they knew him quite intimately.

At such times he would spring up, dispelling his moodiness instantly, and resume his usual manner; but the impression he had made remained with Doris.

And, having seen him off his guard, as it were, she found herself, at odd times, thinking of him. He seemed as alone in the midst of the pleasure-seeking crowd as herself. From thinking of him in an indifferent, casual kind of way, she grew, all unconsciously, to entertain a vague sort of sympathy for him, which she would never have been capable of if he had lavished compliments upon her, as the rest did. She felt convinced that some shadow lay in his past, and that the ready jest and the fluent laugh only hid a wound which it was too proud to permit the world to gaze at.

This was the first phase of their relation; the second began during the second week of their Florentine life. She became conscious that his presence at the villa contributed not only to the enjoyment of Lady Despard and the rest, but to hers!

In an indescribable way he seemed to know exactly what was wanted at any given moment, and to supply it; and his thoughtfulness, strangely enough, always appeared to save trouble to Doris.

From the first day of her coming to Lady Despard, she had undertaken the arrangement of the flowers in the various rooms, and she continued to do so in Florence as in London. The head gardener was accustomed to send up huge baskets of flowers each morning, which Doris would set out and arrange in the various vases and bowls. It was a long task, and one morning he had entered the salon and found her in the midst of it, looking rather pale and tired; for the room was hot and close with the almost overpowering perfume.

"That is a serious business," he said, in his quiet fashion.

"Isn't it?" she assented, with a smile.

He said nothing more, and passed out; but the next morning Doris found the flowers spread out on a table, under an awning, in the shady part of the terrace.

"Why, how thoughtful of the gardener!" she said to Lady Despard's maid, who stood near.

"Oh, but it wasn't the gardener, miss," said the girl. "It was Mr. Percy who brought the table out here; he did himself, and put the awning up."

"It was very kind of him," said Doris, and when he came in to breakfast she thanked him.

"It is cooler out there, no doubt," he said, and turned to speak to Lady Despard at once.

A few evenings afterwards a discussion arose respecting a book that had suddenly leapt into popular favour.

"What do you think of it, Miss Marlowe?" enquired an old Italian nobleman, whose breast sparkled with orders.

"I haven't read it, count," said Doris.

Instantly there was an enquiry for the book; but it appeared that no one possessed a copy.

"Oh, you must read it! I'll send to London for a copy," said the count.

An hour afterwards someone wanted a song from Percy Levant, but he was nowhere to be found; but presently one of the young men—of whom there were always more than a sufficient quantity at the villa—came in with a:

"I say, Lady Despard, if Mr. Levant doesn't mind, he'll lose that jolly voice of his. I've just met him in the hall, wet through; it's raining cats and dogs, you know. Can't make out where on earth he's been, don't you know!"

A little later Percy Levant sauntered into the room, and Doris saw him laughing and talking with one and another on his way to the piano, and she thought the lady must have been mistaken; but, when all had gone, and she was going upstairs, he came to her with something in his hand.

"There is the book they were talking about," he said. "I fancy it isn't worth the fuss they are making about it."

"Where did you get it?" said Doris. He shrugged his shoulders.

"I was lucky enough to find a copy in the town," he replied.

"Then it was for that you went out and got wet!" she exclaimed. "It was very kind; but was it worth while, Mr. Levant?"

"I thought so, and think so still; but I may be mistaken," he retorted, with his peculiar, half-cynical smile. "Good-night," and he moved away, as if the incident were done with.

Gradually she began to realize that in any difficulty he was always at her side. A big picnic was to be arranged, and Lady Despard, who had got accustomed to leaving everything to Doris, had done so on this occasion, and Doris was up early in the morning to give the necessary orders. She found that all the preparations had been made. Mr. Percy Levant had interviewed the major domo, and the thing was done.

When Doris thanked him, he smiled, and courteously cut her short. "I don't deserve any thanks," he said. "You see, my Italian is not so good as yours, and I was anxious to practise it with the major domo, that's all. We are all moved by selfish motives, Miss Marlowe."

"Not all," said Doris. "Not Mr. Percy Levant."

He started slightly, and fixed his brilliant eyes on her for a second; then, with a laugh, said:

"Yes, even Mr. Percy Levant."

Twenty times a day she found him coming to her assistance, but always in the same way, always with the same unobtrusiveness, which was almost coldness, but which was very welcome to Doris, contrasted with the fervent, accentuated attention of the rest of the men.

And the Worst is Yet to Come—

The Intelligent Way To End Corns

Not by paring. That's a risky makeshift, and results are brief.

Not by harsh, haphazard methods made by non-scientific men.

Not by padding. Pads are unsightly, and they simply coddle corns.

Expert Methods

Blue-jay was invented by a scientific expert. It is made by a house famed for its surgical dressings.

It embodies the up-to-date method, the right method of corn treatment.

Apply it and the pain stops instantly. Forget it for two days. Remove it, and the corn is gone for good. One corn in ten may need a second application, but that's all.

Millions of corns have been ended in this way. Aching corns are unknown to its users.

These are facts known to your own friends and neighbors. It is time that you knew them. Try Blue-jay tonight.

Coal Miners' Strike Settled

City of Taito Destroyed By Tempest -- Grand Duke Nicholas Again--Rich Coal Seams Discovered -- Martial Law Proclaimed in Hungary.

BOLSHEVIKS CUT OFF.
LONDON, Aug. 21. Military authorities here point out that the occupation by General Denek of the town of Cherkassy, on the Dnieper River, below Kiev, cuts the last remaining line of communication of the Bolsheviki with Odessa.

RICH COAL SEAMS FOUND.
LONDON, Aug. 21. Rich coal seams, estimated to contain 5,000,000 tons of coal to the square mile, have been located in Spitzbergen by a Scottish expedition under Dr. William Spears, the well-known explorer and geographer, according to reports received here.

STORM DESTROYS CITY.
SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 21. A storm off the Chinese coast has destroyed the city of Taito, on the island of Formosa, according to a cablegram to-day to the New World Japanese newspaper. The storms also did considerable damage on Kinshu Island, in the Japanese groups, the cablegram said.

MARTIAL LAW IN HUNGARY.
COPENHAGEN, Aug. 21. Martial law has been proclaimed throughout Hungary, says a Budapest despatch, dated Wednesday.

REGULATING HOURS OF WORK.
LONDON, Aug. 20. (Reuter's).--The bills regulating the hours and wages for employment of workers and the minimum rate of wages to be paid, and the appointment of a commission to regulate the same, which was introduced in the House of Commons on Aug. 18th, contains an order that the number of working hours shall be exclusive of the intervals provided for meals and that any working week shall not exceed 48 hours. Power to grant exceptions is given to the Home Secretary or Minister of Labor when recommended by the Joint Industrial Council, a Conciliation Board of Trade or Board of organizations of employers. Any hours worked in excess of the Statutory working week shall be regarded as overtime. The decision regarding overtime, under which it may be worked, rests with the Home Secretary or Minister of Labor, and the payment for overtime shall be in no case less than 25 per cent. in excess of normal time rate. The penalty for a contravention of the order is a maximum fine of ten pounds sterling for each offence. The measure does not apply to domestic and outdoor servants, except those employed in connection with trade for purposes of gain; to persons holding responsible positions of supervision or management; to persons employed in a confidential capacity not usually employed in manual labor, to any master seaman or apprentice of a seagoing ship; to persons regulated by the Coal Mines Act; to any person employed in agriculture, horticulture and forestry. His Majesty in Council may in the event of war or imminent national danger suspend the operation of the provisions mentioned. The bill authorizes the appointment of a commission for the purpose of enquiring into and deciding the rates of wages, having regard to the cost of living in the various districts, and the adoption of such methods for bringing such rates into operation, also for enquiring into and granting exemptions of the rates fixed in the rates of infirm or incapable workers and other exceptional cases, and making recommendations with a view of introducing the necessary legislation. Both bills are the first fruits of the National Industrial Conference summoned last February. The bills are to be circulated during the Parliamentary recess among employers, trade union organizations, together with a scheme for the formation of a National Industrial Council which is hoped will be established in the autumn. The hours bill is regarded as amounting to a revolution in the industrial life of the country. It is the first legislative measure limiting the number of hours workmen, except the Miners' Bill, and fixing the minimum wage for them. It agrees in every detail with the recommendations of the joint industrial conference except with regard to agriculture, which the Trade Unionists wish to have included. The preamble of the Wages Bill recognizes that all persons are entitled to an adequate living wage, and, like the Hours' Bill, it carries out the points of the Labor Charter of the Paris Peace Conference.

Diplomas for Journalists
"The Senate of the University of London has instituted a diploma for Journalism which will be awarded after examination to persons who have pursued prescribed courses of study within the university," says the Daily Telegraph.

"The Senate has taken this step at the suggestion of the Institute of Journalists, and after conference with representatives of the Board of Education and the Appointments Department of the Ministry of Labour, largely in the interests of demobilized officers and men and of released war-workers who propose to follow, on the grounds of special aptitude, the profession of Journalism."

"At the same time matriculated students of the university being not less than seventeen years of age, as well as non-matriculated students of adequate educational proficiency, will be admitted to the prescribed university course for the diploma. The university courses constitute a comprehensive and co-ordinated curriculum of modern or current knowledge together with instruction and practice in writing for the Press. The main aim is to give a sound intellectual training which is calculated to promote professional efficiency. Short-hand and typewriting will not be included in the university courses, but students will be expected to make themselves proficient in these subjects as early as possible. The university courses will commence in October next and will extend normally over two consecutive university sessions. But in the case of graduates of the University of London and of other universities approved for the purpose, the courses may be completed in a shorter period.

courses for the diploma for Journalism, and the general arrangements for the admission of students and for the examination have been placed by the Senate under the supervision of a Journalism Committee of the University.

What Carpentier Has Done!
His Boxing Record in a Nutshell.

Those who are reading the articles by George Carpentier will be interested to know something more about his career.

He has created a record by holding the boxing championship of France of every weight, and now he is the European heavy-weight champion, a title he won by defeating our own Bombardeer Wells.

Some of his earlier fights were against our feather-weights and light-weights. He then fought our middle-weight champion, Jim Sullivan, at Monte Carlo in 1912, and knocked him out in two rounds. A year later he treated Bandsman Rice in the same fashion. These victories paved the way to his fight with Wells, whom he knocked out in the four rounds at Ghent, repeating the victory in one round at the National Sporting Club six months later.

His last victory before the war was won against the American giant, Gunboat Smith.

His first fight since the far was with Dick Smith, the British heavy-weight, who succumbed to Carpentier's onslaughts in eight rounds on July 19th last.

His next big fight is with our own Joe Beckett for the championship of Europe on September 2nd.

Bridegrooms' Poor Memories.
The Rev. George Harvest was to have been married to the daughter of Bishop Compton, of London, but on the morning fixed for the ceremony forgot all about it and went off fishing. Much indignation was felt by the bride and her friends, and the engagement was broken off. But the reverend gentleman's second engagement was equally unsuccessful. Once more he forgot to come up to the altar, and lost his expectant bride in consequence.

M. Pasteur was a scientist of wonderful concentration in his work. So absorbed was he in a problem on the day of his marriage that he kept his bride waiting an hour at the altar without putting in an appearance. A search being instituted, he was traced to the University, where he was found at work in his laboratory, having forgotten all about his wedding-day.

After Thomas Edison's wedding he returned to his workshop, and became so engrossed in the problem then under attention that he entirely forgot his newly-made wife and stayed away from her for forty-eight hours.

When John Kemble, the gifted tragedian, was married, he returned to the stage to play Hamlet on his wedding-even. Whether his mind became so absorbed in the character as to exclude all other matters of vital importance we cannot say; but for the time he forgot his waiting bride and what had befallen him on that fateful day, and went off to his own rooms in the Temple on the conclusion of the performance at the theatre!--Tit Bits.

Pulling an Elephant's Tooth.

It does not require much imagination to realize that pulling an elephant's tooth is something of an engineering as well as a dental job.

An example of this was when Albert, one of the biggest elephants in the Ringling herd at Madison Square Gardens, New York, had refused to eat, and the circus veterinary found a great tooth cavity which was beyond remedy by filling.

The tooth that was giving Albert so much discomfort was as large as a man's fist. After a liberal dose of cocaine had been injected, forceps as big as ice tongs were clamped to the tooth, a rope attached to the forceps, and a squad of trainers made ready to supply the pulling power.

At a given signal the trainers gave a tremendous pull, and out came the huge tooth.

In this sort of dental work the unknown quantity lies in what the elephant will do. Albert had been taken out of the menagerie to prevent panic among the rest of the herd in case he developed an inclination to object to the process. However, he underwent the ordeal calmly, and as soon as his jaw was dressed he was conducted back to his stall!

Wise Men Say--

That it is better to fail in good cause than to succeed in a bad one.

That business is like a wheelbarrow--it stands still unless someone pushes it.

That it isn't the big idea that counts, it's the ability to put it into operation.

That some people's idea of making life easy seems to be making it harder for the rest of us.

That the greatest investment in the world is courtesy. It costs nothing and pays big dividends.

That patience is often an excuse to wait for something, when energy to go and fetch it would be more appropriate.

That climbing the ladder of life may be difficult, but it is only when you are sliding down that you get caught on the splinters.

That tact is the essence of human brotherliness. Tact and tolerance consistently practised in private and public life would solve half the problems of humanity.

Healthy Mothers Healthy Babies

Every true mother realizes the fact that her baby's health depends upon her own, that the very vitality of her child is influenced by her own physical condition. How important it is, therefore, to guard against any derangement of the female organs, which induces general weakness, nervousness, constant fatigue and utter inability to properly care for her child. Please remember, that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and strength to thousands of such mothers.

Mitchell, Ind.--"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me so much during the time I was looking forward to the coming of my little one that I am recommending it to other expectant mothers. Before taking it, some days I suffered with neuralgia so badly that I thought I could not live, but after taking three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was entirely relieved of neuralgia. I had gained in strength and was able to go around and do all my housework. My baby when I month old weighed 19 pounds and I feel better than I have for a long time. I never had any medicine do me so much good."--Mrs. PEARL MONTMAN, Mitchell, Ind.

Good health during and after maternity is a most important factor to both mother and child, and many letters have been received by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., telling of health restored during this trying period by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

sections, of which one is compulsory, and the other offers a wide choice of subjects. The compulsory courses include the English composition and practice in writing for the Press as well as lecture courses in the general history of science, the history of political ideas, and principles of criticism with practice in their application. The students will also choose courses of instruction in three out of the following branches of knowledge, viz., English literature, and criticism, history, modern languages (one, or in special conditions, two to be selected out of French, German, Spanish, Italian, and Russian,) political science, philosophy, and psychology.

"The courses of instructions will be pursued at one or more of the following colleges of the university: University College, King's College, East London College, Bedford College, and the London School of Economics. Students will be admitted to full membership (including membership of student's union) of the institutions at which they are attending the greater number of their lecture courses. The examination for the diploma for Journalism will take place once in each academic year, in July, and the first examination will be held in 1921. The examiners, in determining the results of the examinations, will take into consideration the proficiency and the progress which the candidate has shown throughout the period of training. PLAGIARISED AND OTHERWISE.

RED LIONS ARE CHAMPIONS.

Here's to you, Lions! Here's to you! Here's to your spirit, tried and true. Here's to your right courageous heart. Here's to your corking good start. Here's to your finish, just as bright. As flashing stars in a radiant night. Here's to you, Hiltz and your plucky crew!

Here's to you, Lions! Here's to you.

By 11 runs to 2 the Red Lions put it all over the Wanderers in last night's game, and earned for themselves the 1919 Championship of the St. John's League, the G. G. Allen Cup and the League pennant. Truly, "constant effort must command success" and after seven lean years, Hiltz and his crew have at last come into their own. There may be nothing brilliant or miraculous about his managerial display, but for dogged determination and unflinching tenacity he has no superior.

If ever a manager and a ball club had the right to be discouraged—the combination was the Red Lions. You can imagine how the average manager and the average ball club feel when they are bringing up the rear in mid-season. There would have been nothing to it but a peppy discussion, beginning "Wait till next year, etc." But not so the Lions! They just dug right in, slashed their players around in various positions and of course the result has been a distinct shock to the other three clubs. But he is said in fairness to the other Clubs that they do not begrudge the Hiltz aggregation their championship, for truly the Lions deserve it. With their team being continually shattered through voluntary enlistments just when they seemed to be within reach of the pennant, they have stuck to it through thick and thin, and at last their efforts have been rewarded. Hiltz himself is one of the real old timers, (of whom not a half dozen now wear ball togs from the days when the game was introduced here in 1913 at Stancombe's), and his actions on the diamond have always had a most stimulating effect on the morale of his club. He is a strong kicker but only when he considers he has legitimate reason, and has never acquired the reputation of being an umpire-batter.

Dreams That Came True

Lord Newborough, the night before the recent Beckett-Goddard fight took place, dreamt that Beckett knocked out his opponent in the second round. His lordship took time by the forelock by giving his manservant a sealed envelope and instructions that it should not be opened until the result of the fight came through. On the morning after the fight the envelope was duly opened, and it read: "Beckett knocks out Goddard in the second round." This of course, tallied with the actual result.

Before Lord Randolph Churchill went to the races on one occasion, he dreamt that he saw a certain number hoisted. When he consulted his racecard he found that only one horse had so high a number. Upon making enquiries, he discovered that this horse had chances better than the odds indicated. He backed it heavily, and won a considerable sum.

When Lord Bradford's Sir Hugo won the Derby in 1892 at 40 to 1, a Liverpool public house manager dreamt that he saw a newspaper giving the result of the Derby in large type. To his utter amazement, the name of Sir Hugo appeared as No. 1. His dream so impressed him that he did not hesitate to back Lord Bradford's horse with his employer's money. It

MEMORABLE TOUR THROUGH GERMANY.

LONDON, Aug. 20. (Reuter's Dispatch) — A dispatch from Cologne states that the Army Council has made a memorable tour of the occupied territory held by the British in Germany. The tour commenced with a visit to the General and Commercial College in Cologne operated by the British Army, where Field Marshal Wilson and Mr. Vincent Churchill, Secretary of State for War, examined the work of the soldiers' students in the crafts section. Mr. Churchill, addressing them, paid tribute to the admirable organization and work of the college. Subsequently the Army Council witnessed a magnificent review of the sixth corps, under Lt. General Sir J. Haldane with massed band and then followed a parade of all sections of the women workers of the army on the Rhine, which Mr. Churchill characterized as an unique event in the annals of the British Army. "It," he said, "the war had continued longer, a certain number of women would have been employed in the front line area as signallers, telegraphists and clerks."

THE AVERAGES.

The official scorers—Messrs. Chaning and Merner—are now at work preparing the averages of the players for the season, and we hope to be able to publish them in Monday's column.

DARDANELLES COMMISSION REPORTS.

LONDON, Aug. 20. (Reuter Ottawa Agency) — The Times forecasts that the Dardanelles Commission's report will find that insufficient consideration has been given to ensure proper safety at the time of the original landing in 1914. The difficulties at the time were greatly underestimated and the Commission strongly criticizes the attacks made at Anzo and Sulva. The failure is largely attributed to faulty leadership. Censuring several commanders particularly, at Sulva, the report unhesitatingly agrees with the decision to evacuate, but states that the occasion was unduly delayed and expresses the opinion that Monro's view, confirmed by Kitchener, ought to have been decisive.

WHAT THE EMPIRE GAVE.

LONDON, Aug. 21. (Reuter despatch).—The report of the War Cabinet from 1918 states that the strength of the regular army reserve and Territorial forces on the fourth of August, 1914, was 733,514. England has since recruited 4,096,158 men, with the other enlistments in the United Kingdom and Canada. The total white enlistments in the whole Empire were 7,130,280. The figures of enlistment for races other than white, including over 1,250,000 from India, were 1,524,187, giving a grand total for all the races of the Empire of 8,654,467. In addition to these Chinese and other labor units were raised for service in Salonika, Egypt and Mesopotamia.

THE EMPIRE'S CASUALTIES.

LONDON, Aug. 21. (Reuter Despatch).—The report of the War Cabinet for 1918 records the following as the total casualties of the British Empire to the end of 1918: Killed, officers, 35,264; other ranks, 528,569. Wounded, officers, 92,142; other ranks, 1,948,378. Missing, officers, 11,958; other ranks, 342,610.

Slates Dirigible Drone.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir:—I noticed a few days ago that the gentleman or lady, or whatever it might be, that writes that column which appears in the "Star" under the significant title, "The Dirigible Drone," is very much concerned about the condition of the harbor. This is as it should be. It is a wholesome sentiment, for our water-ways, as well as our roadways and all that appertains to us should at all times receive the earnest thought of every citizen.

But there is a something deplorable about the meddling, in such matters, of a person who is incompetent, and who apparently never gave any thought to the matter beyond the mental effort required to jerk out a few sentences that tell us nothing worth listening to, about boughs being thrown into the harbor, our lack of yachts on the waters, and the ignorance of his duties which weigh down the Harbor Master.

I am not much interested in the question of suitable yachts, and I also confess I am not sitting up nights worrying over the dumping of a few boughs into the water, while of course I disapprove of the action. What I am interested in, however, if the deplorable fact that an ignorant person is permitted to throw aspersions right and left upon the ability or character of capable and upright citizens.

Whilst I profess some ignorance of yachts and yachting, I yet would point out to the author of "The Dirigible Drone," that the pollution of our waters, while it might interfere with the aquatic sports of the piscatorial tribe, is not a deterrent to either rowing or yachting. Our harbor would have pleasure boats on it, even to satisfy the tastes of the Drone writer only for one thing and that is its limited size, and it is rarely pleasant sailing outside.

Our harbor is a snug one for an anchorage, but it is not commodious enough to offer any inducement to him who would delight in sailing a pleasure boat. As to the dumping of things into the harbor of which complaint is made, and I admit with some show of reason, I do not know if the writer has any authority for holding the Harbor Master responsible for the continuance of a time honored custom. This matter of throwing waste matter into the harbor should I think be dealt with by the Board of Trade seeing that we have no Harbor Commission.

Whoever should undertake the correction of this long standing practice of using the harbor as a dumping place for refuse would have a task before him altogether too big to be handled by the Harbor Master be he ever so capable, even as capable as the writer of the Drone who attempts to accuse him of dereliction of duty in this matter.

There would be a case against the Reid Co. for dumping above the Long Bridge and for filling in what used to be known as the Municipal Basin. The Gas Light Co. would also have to be dealt with as would also the various coopers along the South Side. Then when through with those, he should have to sue the City itself. We have sewers emptying into the various coves bringing in their discharge of sand and gravel which is a much more serious matter than throwing in such floatsam as fir boughs.

In conclusion, permit me to offer a word of advice to the Drone writer. I would say to him, in the beginning of his career as a writer, don't write till you are sure you are acquainted with the subject you would write upon.

First fill your mind then begin to open the sluices of your thought sprinkler.

Pat and Mike were fighting in the street, and although they had previously agreed that when either had had sufficient of it he should cry out, "Enough!" Pat, who was obviously getting the worst of it, still remained silent.

Then, as the fight progressed, the tables seemed to turn, and Mike began to get a terrible hiding. Suddenly Pat caught him one fair on the point of the jaw, which sent poor Mike sprawling to the ground. "Enough!" he cried.

"Glory be!" exclaimed Pat. "That's the word I've been trying to remember for the last ten minutes!"

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

AS IF WE ALL WERE RICH.

Don't you sometimes hear folks talk about the way to live, and about what people should and shouldn't do, and can and can't, in a way that implies a bout twice as much means as most people have? And doesn't the futility and absurdity of such talk make you shudder? Here's an example of what I mean. We were talking about going abroad.

"The trouble with most people," said the man who has lived abroad, "is that when they go abroad they try to do everything at once. That's not the way to do it. You should go with the idea that you are going again, and plan to see a few things each time."

He has crossed half a dozen times.

Now that's all well enough for him. He has lived abroad for some years and has crossed at least half a dozen times besides. And some of his small circle of friends may have done likewise. But what possible application has that to people in general? Of the very small percentage who go abroad at all, how many go more than once? Surely not one in five—probably not one in ten (if anyone knows any figures on this subject, I'd be more than glad to have them). Suppose everyone went with the idea of going again and needlessly left some of the things he wanted most to see for the next trip, then nine out of ten would never see those things at all.

As if The "Average Woman" Could Have A Maid!

Again, we talked about housekeeping and how much a woman could do outside her home. One woman assured us that the average woman could have plenty of time for various and sundry purposes which she named. "I don't see how she could do all those things," said I, "without neglecting her housework. Of course some women are much smarter than others, but even so, just doing dishes and beds, and the rest of the routine work does take time, no matter how smart you are." "Oh, of course, I am reckoning on her having at least one servant," said the woman who had been talking so blithely about "the average woman."

Evidently she thought that the "at least one servant" class included such a large majority that the rest were not worth considering.

What, as a matter of fact, do you imagine is the proportion of women who have one servant? I happen to have some figures that bear on this subject. Maybe you'd like to hear them so that you can quote them the next time someone talks in that large way to you.

Don't You Find These Figures Startling?

Mahin, in his data book of 1915, estimates that only 15 per cent of the total population earn over $30 a week—and surely one could not keep a helper on less; that only 6 per cent earn over $60 a week, that 46 per cent earn less than $15 a week, 73 per cent less than $20, and 88 per cent less than $30 a week. Of course incomes have gone up since then, but the cost of living has practically nullified this for most of us.

I have a feeling that these figures will be startling to a good many people. I wish I could know if I am right in that feeling.

BE A CREDIT TO YOUR TOWN.

Be a credit to your town. Help to build its fair renown; Stoop to nothing that would shame Either yours or its good name In whatever you find to do Have your city proud of you.

Write with conduct's golden pen That your town breeds gentlemen And no matter where you go Something of its spirit show, You may walk your way content If it's best you represent.

Serve it every way you can; In your trials play the man; Guard its honor as your own; Keep its petty faults unknown; Be a kind and genial host, Love your town but do not boast.

When you travel, east or west, For your city live you best; Prove by every act you do That its citizens are true, Let men learn to link your name With the town from whence you came.

Cities grow not great by stone Or the wealth or lands they own All the fame they rise to win Comes from men who dwell therein, Human hearts shape all renown! Be a credit to your town.

A Great Administrator.

One of the earlier examples of those who would in modern parlance, be termed "empire-builders," was Warren Hastings, whose death occurred exactly one hundred years ago. His name is generally associated with his remarkable impeachment and trial, but it is admitted that we owe our Indian Empire to his ability and statesmanship. When Hastings returned to England in 1786, he was received with distinction by George III, and had his services acknowledged by the East India Company, but he was charged with misgovernment by the Whigs, Burke and Fox alleging him to be guilty of cruelty and oppression. The Commons assented to his impeachment, and Hastings was the subject of a notorious trial, which lasted more than seven years. He was at length acquitted, but the proceedings cost him £70,000, the bulk of his fortune. The verdict of history recognized his great gifts as an administrator, and is inclined to condone his excesses on the ground that they were justified by the circumstances of the time. The East India Company provided for his declining years, and he received honors from the City and from Parliament, and was made a Privy Councillor. The family of Hastings was an old but impoverished one, and Warren commenced his wonderful career by going out to Calcutta as a writer in the employ of the East India Company. He passed the evening of his days as a country gentleman in Worcestershire, and died on Aug. 22, 1818, in his 86th year.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited. Gentlemen.—I have used MINARD'S LINIMENT on my vessel and in my family for years, and for the every-day ills and accidents of life I consider it has no equal. I would not start on a voyage without it, if it cost a dollar a bottle.

CAPT. F. R. DESJARDIN, Sch. Storka, St. Andre, Kamouraska.

Collars and cuffs are sometimes laced with ribbon of a becoming shade. Some belts go only around front and sides of the figure, leaving the back to fall in a panel.

STUNG.
The grocer overcharged two cents last evening, in his tin-horn store; and he may raise some loud laments, but I shall go there nevermore. Most any man may sting me once, but that one instance should suffice; methinks I'd be a first class dunce to let the same man sting me twice. I'll pardon any man's mistakes, if there's no guile within his heart; but when he makes malicious breaks, I say, "Farewell! We twain must part! You classed me with the easy jays, you hung the boob sign on my brow; henceforth we go our divers ways, companions once, but strangers now." My trade the grocer soon will miss; I bought large quantities of prunes; and he, his bosom filled with bliss, raked in my hard-earned picaunas. The giant swindler may arrive, and sting me sore in my own hall, sell bogus stocks in blocks of five, and I admire him for his gall. The polished grafter may appear, with every smooth and modern curve, and leave me broke, or pretty near, and I respect him for his nerve. I smile when highly gifted gents get all the coin I have to spare; but when I'm stung for seven cents I walk the floor and tear my hair.

Fads and Fashions.

Fine linen with lace and embroidery is used for brassieres. Fashion still favors the combination of different materials. The new silhouette has a suggestion of roundness about it. Nothing makes a prettier suit for a growing girl than tweed. Ball tassels finish the soft girdles of some very pretty coats. Dark blue satin and gabardine make a pretty combination. Navy blue, black and the various shades of tan are the fall colors. Buttons and girdles are still the most important points of trimming. Children are now more simply dressed than they have ever been. Little girls' girdles are of narrow ribbon tied in a soft bow in front. Make the blue serge dress the foundation of the school girl's wardrobe. There are many frills and pleatings about some of the new evening frocks.

At the City Hall.

The regular meeting of the City Council took place yesterday afternoon. The following matters were disposed of:

The matter of lights will be taken up next month.

Howley and Fox, on behalf of Thomas Kent, claimed $250 for damages arising out of his horses having been illegally impounded. The horses were taken outside of the city limits. As it appeared the impounder made a mistake, the matter was referred to the Solicitor with instructions to settle for $100, otherwise go to Court.

L. E. Keegan wrote as to the condition of road leading to the General Hospital. Decided to have a top dressing put on.

Mrs. Boggan was given a permit to erect steps on Gower St., provided there is no encroachment on the street.

Mr. Brehm will be given a permit to install motors subject to the approval of the Engineer.

Tenders for hose were read, and the tenders are asked to submit samples by noon Saturday.

Reports on sewerage are to be made by the Plumbing Inspector respecting houses on Queen's Road and College Square.

Approval was given to the applications of Mrs. Hynes and Dally Star for additions and repairs.

Permit could not be given J. Mercer for addition to house on McKay Street.

Tenders for oats will be called for. It was decided to put a fountain at the foot of Temperance Street.

Plan of property Merrymeeting Road, was submitted, showing a possible opening of new streets. The owners will be asked if they approve or if they have any objections.

The following was submitted by the Mayor and approved:

The Council having duly considered the matter of holding elections to fill the places of the two Councilors who have resigned, has decided not to do so. The Municipal Act provides that in case of a vacancy, the Council shall order an election if the term of the Council has more than two years to run, or if one-fifth of the electors petition for an election to be held. As the term of the present Council expires on June 30th next, it does not appear to be necessary to go to the expense of an election for the few months that remain, and probably it would be very difficult to find men to take office for such a short time. While, therefore, the Council is very strongly of opinion that vacancies should be filled promptly, it believes in the present instance that it is acting in the best interests of the public in coming to the decision recorded above. The Council will be pleased, however, to consider any representations that may be made to them on the matter by duly qualified electors. Further, it should be added that until the Charter is passed and the qualifications of electors clearly laid down, it is almost impossible to say who are entitled to vote and who are not.

Work Horse Parade.

Under the auspices of the Society for the Protection of Animals, the Work Horse Parade will be held on Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 3rd. One hundred and thirty-five horses and ponies have entered. The entries already include 21 heavy draft horses, twenty by truckmen who own and drive their own animals, five truck horses owned privately, 28 farm horses, 4 ponies not used for hire, and 7 ponies used for hire and express delivery. In the privately owned carriage class were 3, including Mr. R. A. Brehm's thoroughbred, Rosabelle, and Hon. M. G. Winter's. In the old age list, that is, horses 10 years or more in the same service, are eleven, of which one is 28 years old and another 27. There will also be a competition for teams or pairs of truck horses, and so far 6 have been entered. Prizes to be awarded are medals for the winning horses to attach to the harness and be worn for the year, besides a blue rosette to be attached to the bridle. A red ribbon will be given for second place and yellow for third. The drivers will receive $5 for first, $3 for 2nd and $2 for third. The parade will start on Water Street and the route will likely be up Queen's Street, Theatre Hill along Gower Street and King's Bridge Road entering Government House Grounds by the Eastern Gate. The animals will be lined up in the Governor's meadow where the judging and distribution of prizes will take place.

Torbay Garden Party.

Father Athley's Garden Party at Torbay, which was postponed on Wednesday, will take place on Sunday, the 24th inst. Elaborate preparations have been made and an enjoyable afternoon is assured all visitors from the city.

ARGENTIA GARDEN PARTY—Rev. Father Savin, of Argentia, intends holding a Garden Party there on the afternoon of August 31st. The proceeds will be for the church building fund.

Beautiful Trinity!

Trinity! Beautiful Trinity! Such it was, such it is, and such it ever will be, for its beauty is largely natural, and nature was in a beautiful mood when she laid it out in the distant past.

Doubtless there are harbours with more unbroken spaces and with, perhaps, greater depths of water; but I question if there is one to match the three beautiful arms of water, each distinct from the others, each with its own peculiar setting, all united in one picturesque sheet of water, which, because of this rare combination of three in one was given the name of Trinity.

Of the three arms the South West Arm is the most beautiful, and those who during some August or September afternoon have seen its glass-calm surface, and the South Side hills mirrored in its depths, are not likely to be unimpressed, or soon to forget it.

Owing to its peculiar formation, it is well nigh impossible to get a view of Trinity as a whole. This, however, is more than atoned for by the many picturesque vistas, several of which are surpassingly beautiful.

The best panoramic view may be had from Gun Hill; but as this hill can be climbed only by the young and strong, many of our visitors, who are singing the praises of beautiful Trinity, have come and gone without having seen the town and surrounding country from this vantage point.

There are also some fine views from the South Side hills and from Trinity East; whilst a sequence of land and water stretching to the north, which may be viewed from a bend on the high road leading to Trouty, is well worth the efforts required to get there.

The North West Arm is not without its beauty spots, one of which is Glen Cove. This was known to the old people as Gott's Cove, and Gott's Cove Plain; and this, together with Jenkins' Farm constituted their favourite boating and bathing place and picnic grounds. Who, I ask, will ever forget the Sunday School picnics of fifty years ago? Picnics were picnics in those days, when all the holidays of the year were rolled into one, and that one was spent by old and young on some delightful August day, either at Jenkins' Farm, or Gott's Cove Plain.

"O for the touch of a vanished hand," the hand that joined with yours or mine in the game of "thread-the-needle, ran! dan! dan!" or, "Here we go round the mulberry tree."

"O for the sound of a voice that is stilled," the voice that came from the roaring fire place where the tea was being made, announcing that "tea is ready."

The natural beauties of this spot were enhanced some forty years ago by Captain and Mrs. Cookesley, and evidences of their work still remain. They, with excellent taste, cut paths through the woodlands, built rockeries, and rustic bridges, in front of and around their artistic residence, and in several other ways made it a lovely, sequestered spot.

During those years the Cookesleys lived in Trinity, they took a deep interest in church and social life, and their unstinted kindness to the deserving poor is still gratefully remembered. The fine English clock in the church tower (unfortunately stopped at present, owing to some slight disarrangement of works) and the beautiful silver Communion vessels, still in use at St. Paul's Church, are constant reminders of generous citizens that we could ill afford to lose, and who may never be replaced. Grant them Lord eternal rest.

Like all other good places, Trinity is a hard place to get to, one result of which is, many people who year by year long for a week or two of just such rest and enjoyment as it alone affords, have to be content with less attractive places, because of easier access.

Though the Trinity of to-day is not the Trinity of fifty years ago, in respect of persons and things that come to our mind when we talk of "the good old days" yet in addition to the things I have already mentioned which are ever calculated to attract the visitor and the tourist, there is Trouty Brook and Muddy Pond, North West Arm Brook, and Salmon Cove Brook, Kirby's Hole, and Ponds in abundance, all within a radius of a few miles, where four-pound sea trout, and one pound mud trout may be secured in season, all through the good old summer time.

There is a Bank, with the most genial and obliging of managers, to relieve the visitor of financial worries, and to supply the necessary requirements, if your credit is good.

That, however, which is of most interest to the travelling public is the Hotel. In this respect Trinity is well in the forefront, and the Garland Hotel, where Mrs. Jenkins allows nothing to come between her guests and their every comfort—is known to those who are in a position to judge, as the best in the country. It has fifteen comfortable bedrooms which are often filled in summer time, a smoking room, a ladies' parlour, a sitting-room, and a dining-room. Everything is spotlessly clean, and the food in quantity, quality, and cooking, is all that any one could desire or expect. Because of limitations peculiar to an outpost, however, those at a distance should reserve rooms in good time.

Whilst a private motor car is the only one of its kind in the place, good horses and comfortable carriages are always available, to take you to or from the railway station, to the trout pools, or to any other of the many points of interest.

Rev. Messrs. Stickings, Tarahan, and Cole, represent the Church of England, Roman Catholic and Methodist churches, respectively, and the people of Trinity have always had the reputation of being good church goers.

St. Paul's Church of England, is a beautiful gothic structure, fitted with everything of the best, the custodian of the oldest church registers in the country, and standing beside a church-yard containing the bodies of several generations, and in which are headstones of quaint designs, and with interesting epitaphs—some of the stones bearing the date of 1743. Of these I may write later.

Daily services are held in this church. It is never locked, and the rector is always glad to show interested visitors the old registers, in his keeping, and to allow them to read extracts from their deeply interesting pages.

Sagona's Report.

The Reid-Nid. Co. received the following report from Capt. Parsons of the Sagona, last evening, which shows a decided improvement in the cod-fishery along the Labrador coast, with prospects for a fair voyage: "Arrived at Nain on the 17th; wind from W. to S.W., light and fine since the 15th. Ice from Paul's Island to Cape Harrison interfering with trawl. Two schooners at Winsor's Hr. finished loading to-day. Turnavik packed with ice all the summer. At Ilak there are 13 schooners with from 500 to 800 qts. and still doing well. In Makovick Bay there is plenty of fish, and several schooners here are doing well. At Stag's Bay two schrs. finished loading to-day; several others here doing well. Cape Harrison is still blocked with ice, but a number of schooners have got good catches of cod when the ice slacks off. Sign of fish from Ilak to Okak. There are hundreds of schooners north of Nain."

New Cafe Opened.

The new Cafe, occupying the site recently filled by the Cafe of Mr. Godden, Water St., was formally opened to the public last evening. A number of guests had been invited to enjoy the opening spread, and Messrs. J. J. Ryan, Star; J. Browne and T. W. Carver, Advocate; T. J. Foran, News, and J. R. Smallwood, Telegram represented the Press. Hon. W. J. Higgins, Mr. C. E. Hunt, Mr. F. B. Wood, and Sergeant Detective Byrne represented different phases of the public. Hon. W. J. Higgins moved Mr. F. B. Wood to the chair, as being the "grandfather" of the Cafe business in this country. Mr. C. E. Hunt, speaking for Messrs. Lee and Co., the proprietors, welcomed everyone and hoped that all would be satisfied with the Cafe and service. Mr. Hunt dropped some humorous remarks such as only he can think of, and his hearers were kept in continual laughter. He was glad to see the Press representatives present; it was not often that they could be brought together in peaceful discussion such as this, but he knew that this was the last occasion until the conclusion of the elections. "From now on," he said, "diplomatic relations are severed." Mr. Higgins was the first purchaser, taking a cigar. Mr. Ah Chung is the head cook. Mr. Chung is an expert quick lunch cook, and holds a recommendation from the Governor of British Columbia, having cooked for him for three years. He has cooked in Canada for 27 years. Without doubt he is the best cook ever came to this country, and with him in charge of the cooking the King Cafe must receive the patronage deserved. It is the most up-to-date and modern cafe in the country.

Every Saturday evening after 7 o'clock, Choice Ends of Beef, Mutton, Lamb, Pork will be sold at cost. ELLIS & CO., LTD., 203 Water Street.—nov 29,

The Real Charlie Chaplin.

One Who Knows, and at the time Disliked Him, Gives a Picturesque Pen-Picture of the Million Dollar Laughter Maker.

(By HAYDEN TALBOT.)

The Charlie Chaplin of fiction—that is, the Charlie Chaplin most of you have heard so many stories about—is as unreal as any Mary Pickford's curls!

(Mary's mother "bobbed" Mary's hair a long time ago, and then paid two hundred pounds for an especially fine wig, and that wig has remained a vitally important part of the make-up of "the world's sweetheart" ever since.)

To present the real Chaplin to readers of Answers is a task at once eminently pleasing to me and peculiarly reparational. For probably no one of his vast audience had a more instinctive dislike for him than I had—a dislike based on ignorance and unfounded rumours. His unequalled ability as a mimic I was willing enough to admit; it was his personal character for which I had taken an intense disfavor. My supposed reasons were something of this kind:

Poor Old Charlie!

He was arrogant and overbearing. He was ungrateful, and forgetful of his former colleagues. He was close-fisted. He was ignorant in the extreme. He was a renegade Englishman. He was a slacker.

After six months' daily intercourse with Charlie Chaplin, I can state positively that he is none of these things. On the contrary, I found:

He is modest and unassuming. He is full of gratitude to the men who helped him in his music-hall days.

He is generous, albeit not like the average youth suddenly possessed of "easy" money, who flings it about.

He is uneducated, and, in that sense, ignorant; but he puts in every spare moment remedying this defect, and is accomplishing marvels in the matter of self-education by omnivorous reading of the classics and the highest class contemporary literature.

Not a Slacker.

He offered his services repeatedly to the officer in charge of the British recruiting depot in Los Angeles, and continued to make pictures only when it was explained to him that his money-earning capacity could be turned to infinitely better effect than his services as a Tommy—not to mention the tonic value to nations beset by war-worries of his inimitable antics on the screen.

This is what I know to be true. But until I had met Chaplin—ashamed as I am now to admit it—I readily Curiously enough, Chaplin considers himself anything but a good comedian. In his opinion pathos is his forte. One day, when he is finished with existing contracts, and can do what he pleases in a professional way, it may be confidently expected that he will appear in a screen version of some famous story in which romance and nothing at all of comedy will figure.

Felt Sorry For Himself!

"The best thing I've ever done before the camera?" he repeated, in answer to a question. "Well, I think it is that first reel of 'The Immigrant,' in which every point I score is absolutely not comedy at all, but downright pathos. Of course, people who go to see me on the screen go expecting to laugh, and they laughed in that first reel of 'The Immigrant.' But when I saw it it made even me feel sorry for the poor chap in the restaurant facing the pretty girl, and with no money for either her or his own meal."

One thing Chaplin insists on in every picture he makes. And, parenthetically, there is no one engaged in picture-making more sober, serious, and sincere than Chaplin. Nothing in a Chaplin picture may be even faintly improbable. However ridiculous and absurd the situation of his conceivings, the fact remains that it could happen in real life.

Time and money play no part in the making of a Chaplin picture. On one occasion the comedian "shot" forty-two thousand feet of film in the making of a picture which, when released, could only measure two thousand feet! Although his present contract calls for his delivering eight pictures—and he is to receive his money irrespective of the quality of the films—and, obviously, the quicker he makes them the greater his rate of recompense, one of the series took almost four months in the making.

Chaplin's arrival at his studio in the morning is characteristic. He sneaks in the back way nine times out of ten! He was perfectly willing to explain this.

Scared of Girls!

"I haven't got the heart to go in through the front office," he said. "There are always a hundred or so people out there—all on the pay-roll, and all expecting big things of me. As a matter of fact, when I get to the office I haven't an idea in the world what I am going to do that day, with all these people on my hands, so I hustle to my dressing-room and into my make-up and out on 'location' as fast as I can, and pray hard that when we all get there I'll have an idea."

That especially attractive quality of Chaplin's which every girl—and such men as enjoy the confidence of some girl—knows—his film self-consciousness in the society of pretty women—is not at all assumed. In the presence of the fair sex Charlie is quite the most retiring, individual in the world. He is shy almost to the point of embarrassment. For which reason his marriage to Mildred Harris came as a bombshell to his friends.

For several years it was more or less generally known that Charlie continued to have Edna Purviance appear as his leading woman in every one of his pictures for something more than mere business reasons. Rumour had it that Charlie was, in fact, in love with the undeniably beautiful girl. However that may have been, it is said that Miss Purviance deliberately renounced her opportunity to become the wife of the million-dollar comedian—an opportunity few other girls in the California film world would not have jumped at eagerly. Miss Harris was a performer at the Universal Studio—relatively unknown to screen fans. To-day, as "Mrs. Charlie Chaplin," her pictures are in almost as great demand as those of Charlie's own make.

But those who know the little chap best freely predict that his becoming a benedict can never rob him of his eager desire to associate with, and study, as many different types of individuals as he can meet—Answers.

Couldn't Be Done.

"There was a sound of revelry by night" in a country village recently, for one of the leading lights in the local commercial world, who chanced also to be captain of the volunteer fire brigade, was giving his annual party. Just as the fun started there came a loud knock at the door and a painting inquiry for the chief of the fire-fighters. "There's a big fire up the street," gasped the messenger.

"Can't 'elp it if there's 'arf-a-dozen," snapped the captain. "The engine ain't goin' to no fires to-night. I've got a party on."

"Surely you ain't goin' to refuse to try and save property just because you're giving a party?" was the query. The captain hesitated. "Not exactly because 'to the party,' came the answer at length; "but, hang it all, I ain't goin' to show the missus up for nobody."

"Show your missus up?"

"Yes, show 'er up. Everybody in the 'ouse 'as been admiring 'er new coal vase in the drawin'-room, and it 'appens to be my 'elmet!'"

The Office Boy Has a "Blow--Out."

Automobiles.—In the first place I ain't got none. Now there is prominent autos for prominent people. For instance, "Our Big Boss" has got a Cadderlax, while a feller in our office has got a Ford. Fords is Fords all the world over. Last summer, when we was in the country we had one what wouldn't crank, so the feller what run it always runned it backwards up a hill at night, then in the mornin' he jest took off the breaks an' let 'er rip.

When the feller what invented autos invented them, the saps livin' around him called 'em horseless carriages. Henry Fords goin' to make a auto for two hundred an', 50 plunks, so I guess I'll get one—when the Boss comes across with a couple of rases. The auto that I like best is a Stutz, because bear-cats always did appeal to me. Anyway they must be good autos 'cause the feller what makes 'em says they're good and he ort to know. Most autos hev four wheels and a steerin' wheel. A feller I know once told this to me—

A little spark, a little coil,
A little gas, a little oil,
A piece of tin and a small siver,
Put 'em together and you've got a siver.

Now that ain't ortful good poetry, but it tells yer what I want it to. Course they have autos in other countries besides this one. In England they have a Rolls-Rice, in Italy a Fry-it, and in France a Rain-ait, but ignorant people ain't never heard of them.

No matter what kind of a auto you got, it must hev tires. Tires is used so that when it bounces it won't bounce. Tires has got to have inside tires, and inside tires is ortful good fer sling-shots. Tires cost a whole lot of dough, and tack's don't, therefore the two don't agree. There is one funny thing about every auto, that is: Its got to be tired before it will be run, funny, ain't it?

Some people think it's hard to run an auto, but really it ain't; in fact I seen one go down a hill by its own self and it stopped of its own accord too—when it hit a tree.

Most every auto has a enjin. Enjins are ortful complicated things. I can take any enjin apart, put it back together again, and have only twenty-seven parts left over. Now my father thinks I don't know nothin' 'bout an enjin, but I do, in fact, I could tell you the whole history of one but it will take too long; anyway I can tell yer the parts. It has 4 cilinders, 4 plugged sparks, a fan, for the summer (and winter.) It has a break, and another break, it has some carb-eaters and a rady-atur. A Ford also has a lot of nuts, a crank, an' a rattle.—Rexall Magazine.

WHOLESALE CONFECTIONERS.

Half-Mast High.

The practice of hoisting flags at half-mast on public buildings when a prominent man dies was originally a military one.

Ever since flags were used in war it has been the custom to have the flag of the superior, or conquering, nation above that of the inferior, or vanquished. When an army found itself hopelessly beaten it hauled its flag down far enough for the victor's flag to be placed above it on the same pole. This was a token, not only of submission, but of respect.

In like manner, when a famous soldier died flags were lowered, not only to indicate respect to his memory, but to show that he had succumbed to the greatest conqueror of all—Death, for which flag space was left at the top of the flagstaff.—Tit Bits.

(By MAUD WEST, in "Answers.")

It is safe to say that ninety per cent. of professional blackmailers carrying on operations in this country are foreigners, and most of them belong to the Continental gang known as the "Black Hundred."

I once had an encounter with that notorious Austrian blackmailer who passed under the name of Captain Fechbest. I saw a photograph of some captured Austrian prisoners in a paper during the war, and recognized him at once in the group. He afterwards escaped and subsequently was killed. At the time I met him he was attempting to blackmail the only daughter of a wealthy peer.

Only One Chance—Bluff.

The story is rather a long one, and there is no need to give all the details of it here.

Sufficient it is to say that the captain had once met the peer's daughter abroad; she had no idea of the kind of man he was, and she became engaged to him. Subsequently she wrote him a dozen letters, then she learnt something of the truth about his character, and she ceased to correspond with him. Later on the captain came to London, and endeavored to sell her the letters she had written to him for £10,000, threatening to send them to the man she had then become engaged to if she declined to buy them.

I was instructed to endeavour to get the letters back. There was only one way of doing this. I had to try a bluff; if it failed, the peer's daughter or her father would either have had to pay or have the captain arrested and stand the consequences.

I went one evening to the hotel where the captain was staying, when I knew he was out. I knew the manager of the hotel well. My business, I may say, brings me a great deal to the big West End hotels. I told the manager what my business was, and asked him to let me go to the captain's room and wait there until he returned.

Handed Them Over.

My great hope was that by taking him quite unexpectedly, I might frighten him into giving up the letters. The captain did not return to his rooms until past eight o'clock. It was then quite dark. I heard a step in the corridor, then the door opened, there was a click, and the room was flooded with light. I was standing near the mantelpiece. I gave the captain no time. "I am a detective," I said, "and I want you to give me back the letters Lady V wrote you. I can give you a few seconds to make up your mind. I have two Scotland Yard men downstairs." I put my hand on the electric bell, and began to count.

The captain made a sudden rush at me, and placed one hand over my mouth, and gripped my throat with the other. I confess I was a bit frightened. He could easily have strangled me, but I did not think he would quite risk doing that. He suddenly let me go, and broke into a laugh.

"The game is up," he said. "You can have the letters—there they are." He took a packet from his pocket and gave it to me. There were exactly a dozen letters—the number was correct.

"All right," I said, as I put the letters into my bag, "but remember, you must clear out of London tomorrow." Again the captain laughed. "I intend doing so," he said. "I have finished with the job." I went downstairs, followed by the captain. When we reached the hall, he said: "Give my love to Lady V—I have had £6,000 out of her already, or I assure you I should not have given you the letters so easily. I had hoped to get another £4,000, but I dare say she could not have found the money, and I want to get out of London."

During the war the Black Hundred gang were inactive; but since the armistice they have renewed their operations.

Not long since, a well-known lady in society received an anonymous letter which ran as follows:

"Dear Madam,—It has come to our knowledge that you have given cocaine to a young lady who is a friend of yours. This is now likely to cause you much trouble. The writers of this letter desire to help you, and if you are willing to pay them £500, they will secure you against a prosecution that is brewing against you which, however it may result, will involve you in a public scandal."

Then followed the suggestion that she should meet one of the writers of the letter at Charing Cross Post Office at a certain time. This occurred about the time of the Billie Carleton case. The lady in question had, on her doctor's orders, taken cocaine on two or three occasions, and once she had given a little of the drug to a young girl who suffered from neuralgic headaches; but she warned her not to take the drug without consulting her doctor. The blackmailers had probably ascertained these facts through servants.

"You Must Fight!"

The letter terrified the unfortunate lady, and she did the most foolish thing she could have done. She met the blackmailer, and two days later paid him £500.

A couple of weeks later the lady got another letter demanding more money. Then she came to me. In all such cases there is only one thing to do, and I told my client so. "You must put up a fight," I said, "or these men will ruin you. If the worst comes to the worst, you will have to prosecute; but I hope it may not come to that."

My client, after a lot of persuasion, consented to leave the case entirely in my hands. She was to have met one of the blackmailers the following Tuesday—I saw her on Friday—at Charing Cross Post Office again to pay him another £300. I went in her place. I had no difficulty in recognizing the blackmailer, from her description.

He was standing near the crossing opposite the Tube Station when I arrived on the scene.

I went up to him at once, told him that Lady V had sent me, and that I had £300 with me which she had directed me to give him. The man looked suspicious and also, I thought, very frightened. He hesitated, and then began to move away.

"No, you don't," I said. "You are being watched. If you don't come with me, I— He stopped, glared at me, and said: "Well, what do you want?"

"Come in here," I said, and turned towards a tea-shop. At the door he hesitated once more, and then he followed me in. I sat down at one of the tables.

"You have probably guessed," I said, "that I am a detective. Well, I am. I want you to give me back the £500 that Lady V gave you, and if you don't—well, you know Lady V is prepared to fight this business, and I will have you arrested directly you leave this place."

He remained silent for a couple of moments, then he said: "I have only £300 with me. You can take it or leave it."

I suspected he was speaking the truth.

Anyway, I knew my client would far sooner accept back the £300 than prosecute, and I knew that she would not be troubled by the gang again. I left the shop five minutes later with £300 in my pocket.

Other victims of this gang were young men, as a rule of position and wealth, who had been court-martialled in France frequently for trivial offences, but who particularly desired to keep the fact that they had been court-martialled secret from their friends and relatives at home.

Here is a sample case of this kind. One night an officer whom I shall call Captain B— was coming out of a restaurant in Piccadilly, when he was accosted by his name by a well-dressed man of about forty.

"You don't remember me," said the latter, "but I am Major—, and I met you in France. I should like to speak to you privately for a few minutes."

What He Should Have Done.

"All right," said the captain, "I am walking to my club, if you will walk in that direction; I shall be pleased to hear anything you have to say, but I don't remember having met you before."

It would have been hard for the captain to have done so, because the so-called major had never been in the Army.

Well, the major got to business at once. He told Captain B— that it had come to the knowledge of certain people that the captain had been court-martialled in France for an offence involving a charge of cowardice. The captain stopped, faced his companion.

"That is an infernal lie!" said the captain, but he had grown as white as a sheet.

"It may or may not be," answered the major; "but if you don't meet me somewhere and pay me £1,000, some person or persons will inform the lady you are engaged to of the circumstances on which you were court-martialled."

What the captain ought to have done, of course, was either to have knocked the blackmailer down, or given him in charge to the police. What he did was to agree to meet him the following day, at the Charing Cross Post Office where he paid him the money.

Good Advice.

The situation of the captain was in brief, this. He had been court-martialled for overstaying his leave on the eve of an attack in which his regiment was taking part. He had overstayed his leave to attend to private family affairs of the greatest importance, and he applied for permission to do so, which he was under the impression had been granted. There was some mistake about the matter. The captain was court-martialled, but was entirely exonerated from any charge involving cowardice. The captain later became engaged to a lady with whom he had fallen deeply in love.

He said, in telling me of the incident: "It is the only circumstance of my life I kept secret from her; but I was afraid to tell her—that was a fact. It would kill me if she doubted my courage for a moment." He had paid the blackmailer at this time, and I could only advise him that if anyone attempted to blackmail him again in the same manner, to make a clean breast of the matter to his sweetheart, and give the blackmailer in charge to the police.

Another Untruth Exposed.

ADVOCATE AGAIN MISQUOTES MR. MORINE.

Editor Daily News:
Dear Sir,—The Advocate on Wednesday contained the following as its chief headline: "Road Boards Safeguards Against Confederation, said A. B. Morine." On the fourth column of the same number of the Advocate, the following appears:—"Morine said in 1915: 'The Local Affairs Act is Newfoundland's greatest safeguard against Confederation.'" It will not surprise you, nor the sophisticated public, probably, when I say that both statements are absolute falsehoods.

On Friday, April 16th, 1915, in the House of Assembly, I said: "Mr. Chairman, I am of the opinion that no further attempt to proceed with this Bill (The Local Affairs Act) ought to be made during the present session. . . . The law relating to the Government of local affairs is most extensive and difficult, and will have to be dealt with most thoroughly, to have the effect desired. . . . The time has arrived when these matters should be fully and comprehensively dealt with. . . . This elective system, if carried out on politically impartial lines, ought to bring in very much better returns for the money spent. . . . I would expect great benefit to accrue to this Colony from local incorporation. . . . If we had country, town or village councils, the natural adaptability of the people to public affairs would show itself. . . . The greatest safeguard that you who dissolve in confederation can have against it is Municipal Incorporation. . . . It is better that an effort should be made for something large and tangible than for something small and unsatisfactory. . . . The cure is local incorporation all round the country."

On the same occasion Mr. Coaker said: "The plan, as suggested by Mr. Morine, is, in my opinion, a very good one, and I am sure would eliminate many of the difficulties which confront the Government to-day."

Mr. Jennings said: "I hope some effort will be made to deal with this matter (Road Boards) pending the consideration of the more elaborate Act to meet those other considerations which Mr. Morine has referred to."
At a later date a great deal in what has been said by Mr. Morine that each locality should be given control of the Public Health, Road Money, Marine Works, and other local matters like that.

It does not appear in the local Hansard Report of the Proceedings of the Assembly in 1915, but it is a fact, nevertheless, that I refused to be a member of the Committee of the whole House on the Local Affairs Bill, upon the ground that the proposals then before the House would prove to be unsatisfactory, and when the report of the Committee of the Whole was tabled, I said that I considered the measure so incomplete that I would take no part in putting it through the House.

My proposal was that the whole Colony should be incorporated in districts, or townships, or towns, or villages, according to the circumstances of each locality, and that the powers of incorporate bodies should be extensive and complete; and, as the context of my speech will show, my reference to Confederation, as connected with the subject, was that, by complete incorporation, the care of local affairs being thrown upon local bodies the expense would largely be provided for by direct taxation, instead of out of the Customs revenue, and a self-supporting country would not need to adopt Confederation for financial reasons alone. This measure of general municipal incorporation, which I suggested, is a very different matter from the Road Board expedient which constitutes what is now called in high-sounding words, "The Local Affairs Act."

There is one significant phrase in my speech, which goes to the very root of the difficulty that has arisen, when I say that "the elective system, if carried out on politically impartial lines, ought to bring very much better returns for the money spent". It has not been carried out on such impartial lines. Coaker's notorious circular made the election of Road Boards a purely party question. I have before me at this minute a report of a case in which certain Union Council members were the only persons present at a meeting called to elect a Road Board, and they elected themselves. In a letter just to hand I find the following reference to a person, whose name I cannot give:—"He is a good reliable man; he was Chairman of the Road Board until two years ago, when the Union men got orders to vote in a Union Road Board. Had we known it at the time of the meeting, they would never have got there, as we are in the majority." This is only one of hundreds of instances of the same kind.

As I have said before, I now repeat that elective Road Boards where Coaker prevails are a delusion and a snare, being nothing more or less than the expression of Boss Coaker's rule. The Boards are not representative of the people; they are representative only of the Kaiserism which is enthroned at Port Union. Yours truly,
ALFRED B. MORINE.
