CHAPTER XIII.

It was glorious to tramp or ride along over the wide commons, or through the leafy lanes, with the larks singing up above one's head, and the young horses neighing at one's elbow. It was glorious when, after a hard day's work, they pitched their camp in some glade, and eat and rested under the stars or the light of a big placid moon.

Sometimes he was away for a couple of days, horse-buying, and when he came back to camp, everybody—always excepting Bill and Steve—was glad to see him.

"Here's Mr. Jack!" would go round, and the men would lounge toward him, or look up from the camp-fire and nod. The women would smile, showing their ivory-white teeth, as well as nod; and Mother Katie would always have some savory dish prepared for him, and quietly putting it before him, watch him eat it as if she enjoyed the sight.

To the children "Mr. Jack" was a kind of god; and whenever he made his appearance they would scamper toward him better-skitter, and swarm close about him, feeling in his pockets for the sweets and toys which he never forgot. He usually came up to the group by the fire with a child on each broad shoulder, and half a dozen clinging to his stalwart figure.

And yet, with all his tenderness and softness of heart, there was a strength of will and a quiet determination about him which was extremely useful.

There are "rows" in the best-conducted families, and there were occasional rows in this wandering camp of egyptians, and gradually Royce stepped into the position of arbitrator. He had as simple a mode of dealing with their squabbles as he had in horse-dealing. He would listen patiently to each side, and give his award, and, as a rule, it was accepted; but if it was not, and the two men were of a size and pretty equal in strength, Royce would advise them to strip and fight it out.

"You'll feel much better after it," he would say; "and by the time you've banged each other about a bit you'll come to see I'm right."

If one man was much smaller than the other, then Royce would remark, as quietly as usual:

"Well, I shall have to fight the bigger of you, I suppose; and he would get up and take off his coat.

As a rule he did not need to go any further, and the squabble came to an end. No one was particularly anxious to engage in a combat with a young giant who could with one blow fell a man like an ox, or take him up and hurl him to the ground as if he were a bundle of withes.

And Madge? My pen falters as I write her name; for the heart of a maiden in its first throb of love is a sacred thing, and not to be handled with anything but a delicate and a tender touch.

If the other women admitted him, if the children ran yelling with delight at the sound of his deep, musical voice, how was it with Madge, who never heard his name mentioned without a thrill, who never saw him without a sudden rush of her young, warm blood through her veins?

Who was it wrote the pregnant line—"And, lo! her love grew until all things else became small?"

Her love grew day by day, and yet she managed to conceal it, almost from herself. Royce had no suspicion of it. He noticed that she was seldom at the camp-fire, and that though he saw a great deal of the other women, somehow or other he rarely found an opportunity of a chat with Madge. He did not know that the dark eyes were watching him, with love's light in them, from behind the white muslin blinds of her van; did not guess that she would sit for hours at her basket-work listening to Tony, who was her favorite among the children, talking about "Mr. Jack," and that she encouraged him to do so; did not guess that it was she who mended his clothes and sewed the buttons on his shirts—all that she could do, alas! for her hero—her god!

Whenever he came across her, Tony or one of the other children was with her; for she shrank, with the timidity born of her love, from being alone with him.

Royce missed her, and thought a great deal about her—thought of her as much as he thought of Irene, the lily maid—but it was only when he was riding out or smoking his pipe at the camp-fire after supper that he had time for thought. He was asleep the moment he threw himself down on the clean straw, and if he dreamed it was of Monk Towers, and his mother, and Seymour—and always Irene. But when he chanced to meet Madge he was struck, in a vague kind of way, by a certain change in her.

For one thing, she seemed to have grown even more beautiful. Surely her eyes were darker, and shone with a deeper, softer luster. There was a vague kind of change in her dress, too, it seemed to him. She still wore the brown skirt and the red shawl, but they were worn differently. Or was it the bit of white lace at her throat, the thick coils into which she now wound the lovely hair, which worked the alteration?

One day they were journeying along the high-road to a town in which a fair was to be held. Royce was riding a big horse, and had a string of colts and others in his charge, and though his keen eye was watchfully upon them all, he was thinking rather gravely.

This was the first fair the camp were visiting since Cumberland, and he was wondering what part he should be expected to play. Whatever they asked him to do, he would not refuse—he was resolved upon that—but he shrank a little from the publicity of the thing. Up to the present the life had been delightfully secluded, and, so to speak, private; but this fair meant a change, and by no means a welcome one.

"Well, I must take the rough with the smooth," he said to himself at last; and, determined to make the best of it he hurried up his cavalcade and rode on singing.

Presently he came up to the vans which had been sent on in advance, and saw a group of women and children walking in the road.

The usual cry of "Here's Mr. Jack! Halloo, Mr. Jack!" rose from the children; and Royce, as he rode up beside them, looked down and nodded and smiled.

Then a childlike treble rose above the rest:

"Mr. Jack, give me a wide, will 'oo?" Royce turned his head, and saw

Tony holding on by Madge's hand. "Hush, Tony!" she said in a low voice. "Mr. Jack is busy, and doesn't want to be bothered. Don't you see how many horses he has to take care of?" and she bent her head a warm flush rose to her face.

Royce pulled up and waited for them, and raised his cap. "Halloo, Madge!" he said in his frank, cheery way. "Why are you walking? You'll get tired, won't you?" "No—oh, no!" she replied, with downcast eyes. "The van was hot, and Tony wanted to walk, too."

"And now Tony wants to ride. Like the rest of mankind, Tony is never satisfied," he said. "Here, come along!" and, bending down, he lifted Tony by the middle of his clothing and put him in front of him.

The child crowed with delight, and looked down at Madge with ungrateful triumph. "I thought he would!" he said, with a knowing nod. "Mr. Jack's kinder nor you, Madge!"

"You ungrateful young imp! I've a good mind to drop you overboard!" said Royce, laughing.

Tony laughed with perfect assurance. "What a big horse, Mr. Jack!" he said. "It's big enough for Madge, too? Why don't 'oo take her up 'is well? She's tired. Ain't 'oo Madge?"

Madge shook her head and smiled up at the child. "I'm not tired, Tony," she said; "and, besides, there is not room for three, big as the horse is."

"Oh, well, soon alter that," said Royce; and he slipped off. "Come along, Madge; the imp is right, and you'd be better riding." She did not know what he intended to do for the moment, then as he held out his arms she shrank back; but he either did not see the gesture or chose to disregard it, for he took her up in his arms as if she were a feather and placed her sideways on the broad, smooth back.

The warm flush deepened to a rich crimson, which left her face rather pale as she bent it over Tony; but she said nothing, and Royce drove on beside them, still watching his horses, but keeping a corner of his eye for his two human charges.

"That's better, isn't it?" he said. "Anyhow, you are out of the dust. How far is the fair off now, Madge?" "Three miles," she said in a low voice.

"Are you glad we are going to a fair?" he inquired. "Are you?" she asked, instead of replying. He shrugged his shoulders. "Don't know, quite. Think not. But you, Madge?"

"I hate it!" she said, suddenly. Then, as if ashamed of her vehemence, she added, "I don't like the noise and the crowd and excitement."

Governors in Australia
A constitutional debate has arisen in Australia with regard to the Lieut-Governor of the State of Tasmania, which emphasizes one notable variation in the constitution of the Australian Commonwealth from the precedent established by the creation of the Dominion of Canada in the British North American Act. It is a variation which also serves to illustrate, we think, that the Canadian is the better system. In the Imperial Act creating the Australian Commonwealth there is a provision that the Governors of the various States shall be appointed by the Secretary of State for the Colonies; in other words, by the British Government of the day, just as the Governor-General is appointed in the case of Canada.

In Canada the appointment of Lieut-Governors of the Provinces is made by the Federal Government. The Australians did not adopt this precedent, one explanation suggested being that they feared that Governors who owed their appointment to the Federal Government would probably be chosen for political or party reasons and would play politics. So the plan of appointment by the Home authorities was adopted. But this plan has not worked out very satisfactorily, and from time to time friction has developed.

Some years ago the Queensland Government had a serious clash with the Governor, and there has been recurrent trouble in Tasmania. In the latter state the Legislature has refused to vote money for the Governor, and by a vote of 14 to 12 has declared against the appointment of a Governor from outside the State. However, the New Statesman of London, noting this fact, says:—

"For a number of years there has been a growing feeling in Australia against the practice of appointing State Governors from Great Britain. If Canada finds it practicable to appoint Canadian-born Lieutenant-Governors for her Provinces, why not Australia? Such is the argument used, and there is much to be said for this point of view."

The Canadian system, as the Winnipeg Free Press says, has in practice been quite satisfactory. Theoretically it might have been urged, and probably was, when the details of Confederation were being worked out, that Lieut-Governors appointed by the Dominion Government would make trouble for provincial administrations of a different political persuasion; but in practice there has been very little of this.

"The Lieut-Governorships," says the Free Press, "is a high and honorable office, and in the great majority of cases its obligations have been scrupulously respected by its occupants. In the very few exceptions to this rule it has been found that our system is not without its remedies. The Australians made a mistake when they did not make their procedure conform to that of Canada; and it is interesting to observe that they are finding this out by experience.—Morning Chronicle.

Constipation Banished

LIFE'S EVENING.
I know a gross of ancient men who rest, in life's decline, enjoying sweet and rare a quietude beneath the tree and vine. I live where winter try men abound; they sit beside the sea, white whiskers reaching to the ground—from grief and trouble free. They labored well when down a little kale to keep them in old age. I never knew an ancient crook to rest in peace like these, with money in his pocketbook, and whiskers to his knees. This crook puts up a gaudy front in youth and middle age; he pulls his vicious, sinful stunt, and scorns the sweat-stained wage. But never have I seen him rest in peace when bent and hoar, with fifteen dollars in his vest, and credit at the store. The money of the busy crook is easily obtained, and easily it goes, gadabout! it goes, and nothing gained. The crook is seldom known to save the product of his skill, and when at last he hits a grave the city pays the bill. And if he reaches wintry years, to everyone's amuse, in some punky parlorhouse he appears; to end his frothy days. Around me I see many gents whose beards are long and white; they hushanded the useful cents by methods sane and right.

REAL PEOPLE IN THE PAPERS.
When you read your city newspaper, do you realize as you read, that all these tragedies and successes are actually happening to real people?
Of course we all know that this is true, but how often do we sense it?
A neighbor of mine opened up the paper the other morning to read in it of the tragic death by accident of two of her sister's children. Her telephone was out of order which was the reason she had not been notified. The shock was terrible, of course.
She sees Behind the Newspaper.
"There it was," she said afterwards, "my own sister's name, and the children's pictures. I kept reading it over and over. I couldn't believe it was true and that I was awake. Yet it was just like items I've read a thousand times. Since then, when I read about some tragedy like that it comes over me so queer: 'Why that's about someone real, just like my sister.' And I see my sister's home, and the way she looked. And the children. And their father. And I think of grandmother and what it meant to her. And how we all rushed to her home. And the toys the children had left in the middle of the floor when they went out that day. And the coroner's report. And the whole dreadful feeling that if it were only yesterday at this time it could have been prevented. So now when I read about any accident or any tragedy of any kind, I seem to see behind the words. It sounds ridiculous, but I don't think I ever realized before that all the people in the newspaper were real."

We Read Them Casually.
It didn't sound ridiculous to me, for I, too, have had it brought home to me in similar fashion that all these items that we read so casually stand for real tragedy or real happiness somewhere.

Every death notice, every announcement of an engagement, every report of a wedding, every "born to"—think how very epoch making they are to a group of people somewhere! And think how many lives they each touch more remotely but still with living force.

Read It That Way To-day.
Look at your newspaper to-day with eyes for a moment opened to the reality behind all these printed words. That automobile accident, that suit for divorce, that announcement of a prize award, how much human emotion stands behind them all. How truly freighted with human hopes and fears and joys and sorrows is this two or three cents worth of paper you take from the newstand or the newsboy.

Of course you can't see it that way every day. There is a limit to our ability to react to other people's joys and sorrows. But it is interesting and enlarging to the sympathies to catch such a glimpse of the lives that are going on about us, once in awhile.

As we passed the C.C.C. Armoury last night we were glad to hear the sound of their bugles and hearing headquarters of the C.L.B. the same sound was heard. Evidently two hearts that beat as one!

Business as usual this week. The Lt.-Col. Commanding, Captain Stick, Adjutant, P. B. Rendell, Surgeon Captain Burden, Lieutenants W. R. Mott, Quartermaster Hubert Rendall and the Brigade Major G. R. Williams were on duty, with Regt. Sergt. Major John Andrews. The Athletic Committee were busy arranging their programme of indoor sports and will probably extend an invitation to the Girl Guides. Cashier Q. M. Shears of the Brigade Savings Bank reports many lads opening Savings Accounts every week. A good healthy sign! Sergt. Max Tiford who has been on the sick list we are glad to say is reported to be slowly improving. The Old Comrades are happily enjoying the comfort of their new Club rooms. Last night the Battalion Chaplain Rev. J. Brinton was there with his lads and he was having a great game of billiards with Lieut. Mott, they being players in the billiard tournament for the prize cup offered by Lieut. Col. Walter Rendell, C.B.E. The Old Comrades have offered the use of their original club rooms to the Colonel for use as a Company room, which courtesy is very much appreciated by the staff. Surgeon Major Burden examined 13 recruits last week and 22 lads Thursday. Any physical defects of each lads were noted on the record sheet, and instructions given them to report such defects to their parents or their own family physicians. Many lads have defective teeth needing attention. Surgeon Captain Burden has medically examined all A. Company and F. Company lads and many recruits, and thus is carrying on splendid work for the health of the Brigade generally. He is now organizing a permanent Ambulance Class of some twenty lads who have first-class ambulance certificates. Two stretcher sections are being arranged for—on for each company under Veteran Sergt. Major Stewart Dewling, M.M., formerly of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment. This week completes the winter course of gymnastic classes on Tuesdays and Thursday, and next week and Brigade takes up the usual barrack square drill routine. Instructors Arthur Johnson (Boxing), Morgan (Bare), Captain Fred Marshall, La Fosse, Fred Stone have been a splendid team of gymnastic instructors and the O.C. has noted the magnificent results of their gymnastic training this winter. The staff thanks you, gentlemen. The gym will be open on Mondays and Fridays for the lads to carry on. No gym subscription will be charged, and a hearty welcome is extended to all ranks. After parade last night the gym squad had some instruction in Indian club swinging.

Bay Roberts Company reports all well. January records show an average attendance of 80 and February 88. Well done. Bay Roberts. On February 10th a church parade was held in the afternoon with 71 answering the roll. The nominal roll has now six officers, Rev. E. M. Bishop, Chaplain; Major J. W. Dawe, Royal Newfoundland Regiment, and Captain N. French, a veteran of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment. Lieutenants R. J. Mercer, C. C. Butt and 2nd Lieut. veteran R. Parsons. The W. Officers number three, N.C.O.'s eight, with sixty privates comprise this company. A Strickland has been appointed Company correspondent for Lamaline Company. This loyal little Company under Rev. H. Kirby continues to do good work. On March 10th the Chaplain, Captain H. King, and Lieut. Strickland visited Point aux Gaul, arriving at 7.15 p.m. at the C.E.W.A. Hall. The recruits were on parade and many parents and supporters were present. Rev. H. Kirby, Chaplain, addressed the meeting on the aims and objects of the C.L.B. The recruits were given their first drill by Lieut. H. King and Guide Books were distributed. Mr. Edgar Hillier has been appointed Drill Sergeant. After the organization meeting the Brigade officers were royally entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Hillier. The officers wish to thank the F.F.U. of Point aux Gaul for courtesies extended as well as to St. Elizabeth's Branch of the C.E.W.A. for giving their hall for the use of the Brigade. Well done Lamaline and Point aux Gaul! the Brigade at Headquarters is behind you in the best wishes for future progress.

Portugal Cove under Lieut. W. Sheppard reports for February a strength of fifty-two all ranks, with an average attendance of forty-five. Good work, and Portugal Cove is going to have their place in the Brigade's Sun! Many new recruits are joining and Portugal Cove boys will be represented this year at Topseat Camp.

Bell Island Company under Major Lindsay carries on as usual, maintaining a high standard of efficiency. They have forty-three on the roll for February. Owing to labour conditions and many lads away, the Band has had to be demobilized, but the gallant Major will reorganise it again later. J. Company lads are reliable and are holding the line bravely under adverse conditions due to lack of employment at the Mines. Major Lindsay's request for commissions for various officers is being attended to. We are pleased to announce this week's orders contain the awarding of a Second Lieut. Commission to Mr. Arthur Johnson for his loyal and excellent services to the Brigade for many years. Congratulations Lieut. Johnson. Lance Corporal C. Thomas was officially presented with his Corporal chevron at last night's parade. Sergt. H.

Adams is granted leave for one month from March 25th. The officers' class had another session last night and Captain Stick, Instructor, gave them quite an interesting and strenuous half hour. Efficiency is the password in the Adjutant's department.

Remote Arctic Islanders

WEAR DOUBLE FUR COATS. FAIRBANKS, Alaska, March 19.—A glimpse of life on a remote island in the Arctic Ocean was afforded by E. W. Wyant, a trader, who stopped here this winter on his way from San Francisco back to his distant post. On Bailey Island, 250 miles east of the mouth of the Mackenzie river, where Wyant has been in business since 1917, the wind blows, he averred, at a speed fit to make Alaska's winter blasts seem summer zephyrs. Nevertheless he was of the opinion that a dirigible like the Shenandoah would be able to reach the North Pole by flying over his territory in summer.

Leaving the island with its 20 inhabitants last summer on a whaler for San Francisco, Wyant made the voyage in three months. He was here on his way "mushing" overland, and expected that supplies which he had bought to last several years would arrive next August by water.

When one travels in his neighborhood, Wyant related, one wears two suits of deerskin, a suit with the fur turned out and one with the fur turned in. Flour costs $15 a hundred pounds and bacon $1.25 a pound. Last year the colony of 20 took 20,000 pellets, principally of white fox.

Berlin, Feb. 29 (A.P.)—Newspapers have given much space in tribute to Peter Heering, who died recently at Copenhagen, aged 86 years. He is credited with originating cherry brandy, a popular drink in Germany. Several writers to newspapers have suggested the erection of a monument to his memory.

Obituary

JOSEPH EVANS.

(H. P. SHORTIS.)
On yesterday morning, the Feast of the Annunciation, there passed away, after a protracted illness, borne with resignation to the Divine Will, and fortified by all the rites of Holy Church, Mr. Joseph Evans, an old and highly respected resident of this city, aged 83 years. Mr. Evans was born on the passage from Lisbon, Portugal, to Valencia, Spain, his father being a native of Wales and an engineer on the steamer at the time, and his mother a native of Lisbon, often accompanied his father during his voyages between the two ports. He came to Newfoundland in 1858, on the brig Melina, Capt. Thomas, which was built by the late Abel Watkins in Green Bay, for the old firm of Stabb, Rowe & Holmwood of St. John's. For some years he sailed out of the employ of Messrs. P. & L. Tessier and other firms, and also made several voyages to the sealfishery—his first experience being in the brigantine "Brothers," Capt. Geoffrey Callahan. He was also to the sealfishery with Captains Mark and Patrick Delaney and William Jackman in steamships. After retiring from seafaring life he entered the employ of A. S. Rendell & Co., and was the trusted and confidential messenger and caretaker of the office for over twenty years, and never was he known to be reluctant or absent in his duties. After leaving A. S. Rendell & Co. he was appointed in connection with the Theatre flat of the Total Abstinence Hall, and while in that position for many years he was painstaking, reliable and courteous to all, especially to the children who attended the performances. He considered no trouble too great to make them comfortable and happy, and the youngsters fully appreciated his kind disposition, and were quickly at home with him. He was a total abstainer during his long life. It was really remarkable how well he served he was in the affairs, not alone of his adopted country, Newfoundland, but of Europe and elsewhere. He was a most interesting conversationalist, and his slight foreign accent made the pronunciation of his remarks pleasing to the ear. He was one of those men who had no enemies, but hosts of friends, who will hear of his demise with profound regret. The deceased leaves to mourn their sad loss a wife, four sons and two daughters and a wide circle of friends. Requiescat in pace.

Superstitions at Sea

Rear-Admiral Sir Guy Gaunt, in speaking of superstitions at sea, says it was ill for a man who whistled to while away a hot afternoon—sure enough he would be calling a hurricane in his wake. You could whistle for a wind, but it must be done with due deference, and, needless to say, the wind would come.

The most popular method, however, of raising the wind was to stick a knife in the mast, and when the mast was made of iron the task was none too easy. Blood in the scuppers, too, was a favorite means of ensuring a fair voyage. I have seen plenty of sharks hauled over the side, cut open, and their blood sprinkled in the scuppers. As far as I know, that did no harm to anybody, and certainly appeased the quails of the crew.

Some of them need appeasing—especially the coloured gentlemen, who were extraordinarily childish in their superstitions. I remember such a case in an old negro on watch, and who had been told off to strike a bell every half hour. It was arranged that he could look through the scuttle into the mate's cabin and tell the time from a small alarm clock there.

As he looked through, the negro thought "If only I could move those hands on a bit I should shorten my watch." He therefore stepped into the cabin which was forbidden ground, grasped the clock, and, trembling all over, turned the hands at the back. But it was the alarm handle that he turned, and when the bell whirred the negro was terror-stricken. We found him clasping the clock to his stomach, yelling with terror, thinking that he had been punished by the devil.

Ignorance was an endless source of humor, and some of our sailors, poor fellows, had not much schooling. We had once a man on board who was responsible for all the painting arrangements. This man—though nobody knew it till afterwards—could neither read nor write, and his method of checking his accounts was to make certain strange dabs on a huge tub. Thus a blue circle had been used—a red semi-circle, a pot of red, and so on.

One day, when the man was sick, the mate happened to find the tub, saw it was very much splashed about and ordered it to be painted grey. The man's sorrow on finding his precious tub was pitiful. He had lost a year's account of the paint he had used.

Cleanliness Next to Godliness.

To anyone desirous of taking a walk with a definite object in view (for an aimless saunter is uninteresting even at the best of times), we would suggest his including in his itinerary the maze of lanes and blind alleys in that section of the city which lies immediately north of New Gower Street. We suggest that route in particular to the Municipal Councillors and also to those who are possessed of civic pride. It is not because of the scenic attractions nor because of the salubrity of the atmosphere that we direct the visitor's steps in this direction. On the contrary, it is because those attractions are conspicuous by their absence, and as opposites attract, he may find here much that is interesting even if he is not entertained thereby.

The explorer is advised to take certain precautions before making the venture. A stout stick, good footwear, and a supply of some pungent disinfectant are suggested. During the last few days, the sun has come out and after the former cold raw weather, it has given us a new lease of life. So too has it brought life—of another kind—into this unobtainable quarter. So too has it revealed the corruption previously hidden by the snows of winter. The need for the precautionary measures we suggested will be at once apparent, for a fall on the treacherous, filthy surface of those "streets" would have disastrous consequences, if not to his person, at least to his clothing and to his feelings.

It will not require a particularly observant eye for the explorer to discover the causes of the objectionable odours which assail his nose. They are at his feet—decayed vegetable matter, poisonous filth, mud which is composed of every unmentionable corruption, and reeking gutters containing puddles in which the children sail their improvised boats! It is not an uncommon sight either, to see a tiny toddler fall full length into those foul drains in its efforts to emulate the feats of its older companions, and the spectacle after the rescue can be more easily imagined than described!

But why describe these unsavoury sights? Why not generalise? Why not refer to them in terms that would not shock our susceptibility? We mention these things plainly, and still the story is—by no means told, because it is time we knew of them, because what we have said in true, too true, and because it seems that we must be shocked before we will move in such a matter.

The part of the city which we have described is but one of the blots, but one of the disease breeding centres which remain neglected and unclean until a providential rain comes to scour them, or carry the refuse into the lower parts of the town.

The press tries to awaken public spirit, the churches try to keep alive religious enthusiasm, the social workers are attempting to improve the physique of the children, and the police to stamp out immorality and crime. Were it not for the inborn respect and regard for religion and the law which the residents of our city possess, appeals would be in vain, for under such depressing circumstances and in such vile surroundings the good seed can only bear fruit with difficulty, and the soil is ready to nourish the weeds.

If it is beyond the means of the Municipal Council to make of St. John's a City Beautiful, they can at least make such parts habitable, and it is their duty to take the necessary steps now.

Legislature to be Further Prorogued

It is probable that the next Gazette will announce the further prorogation of the Legislature until April 9th. It is stated in reliable circles that the House will not meet for the despatch of business until the latter part of April. The delay is rumoured to have been caused owing to the discussion by the Executive of important matters which are to come before the Legislature, being delayed by the Enquiry. One of these matters is said to be the tariff revision. The report of this commission was, it is understood, submitted to the Executive Government about a week ago.

Yesterday afternoon and evening the hall was filled to capacity and every one present was greatly impressed with the excellence of the show. In the afternoon upwards of 150 children attended the performance. This morning the orphans of the various institutions will be the guests of Lieut. SEALING NEWS

The messages from the sealing fleet last night show very little difference in the position of the ships. The Neptune got clear last night and had steamed about two miles in a N. N.W. direction, when she again became jammed, whilst the Sagona improved her position slightly since Monday. The Ranger is apparently picking up scattered seals and reports having added an additional 400 to her catch. Judging by a message from the Eagle arrangements were made for the aeroplanes to make a flight but this was found impossible due to the rafting ice. Capt. Ed. Bishop is of the opinion the main patch is 13 miles W.N.W. of his ships position. A westerly breeze, so the experts state, is required to change present conditions. This would allow the ships to move about freely and then the hopes of securing good loads would look very bright. The latest messages are:—

BOWING BROS.
Ranger—On board and stowed down 3,000 old and young; still jammed.

Terra Nova—Position unchanged, wind north east. Nothing but a westerly breeze can help us.

Viking—Ice tight, ship jammed.

Eagle—Wind north east, impossible for aeroplanes to fly on rafted ice, ship jammed. Think main patch 13 miles W.N.W.

Sagona—Made two miles since yesterday.

JOB BROS. & CO.
Neptune—Got clear last night, steered two miles N.N.W., now jammed. Light breeze from east.

Theils—Position same as yesterday, jammed all day; wind N.E.

Rotary Luncheon

Rotarian Reuben Horwood presided at the Rotary Luncheon held at Wood's West End Restaurant on Tuesday, and a new member, Mr. Arch Munn, introduced by Rotarian Mackenzie, was admitted. Rev. Canon Earp treated the Rotarians to a very timely talk under the heading of "Some Reminiscences of Newfoundland." He referred to the courteous treatment accorded him by the people of Newfoundland and regretted very much that he would soon be leaving his hospitable shores. The Rev. Canon spoke highly of the work that Rotary is doing in this and other countries, and was satisfied that if it were possible to get the main body of our people thinking along similar lines, a solution would be found to our present difficulties. In many respects Rotary has succeeded where the Church had failed, and the practical application of Rotary ideals could only result in much good to our country.

He had given a great deal of study to conditions obtaining here, and had collected a few thoughts which he would offer for the consideration of the gathering. He pointed out that it was time for reflection; that each individual owed it to himself and to the country to stop and consider the lessons to be learned from the recent crisis in our public life. He then spoke of the wonderful opportunity afforded each citizen to do his share in making this richly endowed country the country that God intended it to be. All of us should have a talisman and it should be the talisman of hope. Without hope we cannot be very far, and it was a tribute to the wonderful strength of the country that it has been able to withstand the many setbacks which it has been called upon to endure.

We have every good reason to appreciate the potential wealth of our country with its unlimited natural resources and fisheries, and we should resolve to do our utmost as citizens to restore a feeling of confidence and goodwill amongst our people. Finally we should concentrate on the youth of the country, and by our example and advice, train the coming generation to the value of good citizenship.

In summing up the Rev. Canon Earp made use of the following acrostic:—
Reflection
Opportunity
Talisman of Hope
Appreciation
Resolution
Youthful spirit

The guests included Padre Nangle, W. H. Jackman, J. C. Hepburn, E. H. Berteau, Mr. Stephenson. A hearty vote of thanks was unanimously accorded Rev. Canon Earp and the National Anthem brought the luncheon to a close.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES

SIR ROBERT HORNE DENOUNCES ABANDONMENT OF NAVAL BASE.

LONDON, March 26. The Government's abandonment of the plan of the Singapore naval base was again the subject of discussion in the House of Commons to-day in the report stage of the Navy Estimates, when Sir Robert Horne to mark his disapproval moved a resolution in the Estimates of £100. The House motion was defeated by 287 to 111. Sir Robert complained that the Government, far from consulting the Dominions on this subject, had announced to them its decision without giving them a chance of altering the Government's judgment. Never had he seen consultation in more discourteous form, he declared. The £1,100,000 which the base would cost was not expensive insurance. He scouted any implication of a menace to Japan. Charles G. Ammon, Parliamentary Secretary for the Admiralty, replied that Japan had given every indication of a desire to carry out the Washington Agreement, and had fulfilled them both in the letter and in the spirit. He argued that in view of the reported desire of the American people for some sort of world conference on disarmament, a gesture from this side was opportune.

A SENSATIONAL CONFESSION.
TORONTO, March 26. At midnight to-night, the greatest sensation in Queenspark in years was sprung at Public Accounts' Committee of the Legislature. Alex. Ross, former Manager of the Bond Department of the Home Bank, who had previously told the Committee about his share in making on selling succession duty free bonds, volunteered to come back and tell the Committee the truth. Laboring under great strain he made a statement that $10,000 had been split three ways between himself, L. C. Mason and Charles Matthews, the Deputy Treasurer. Mason is married to the stepdaughter of Mr. Matthews. G. M. Hart who was with Mr. Ross in selling bonds to the Government, got $1,500, which was his share of the transaction. Ross and Hart had previously told the Committee they had split huge profits without mentioning either Matthews or Mason.

A RACE WHICH IS NOT A RACE.
CALSHOTT, Eng., Mar. 24. Great Britain entered air race round the world against the United States at 12.10 p.m. to-day when an Amphibian plane manned by three of the Royal Air Force aviators rose from Southampton pier and with escort of land and sea planes, started its gliding nose toward the coast of France. Officially, of course, there isn't any race. Three British flyers of long experience in the air merely wanted to try a round-the-world flight on their own, and a group of United States planes happened to be trying to accomplish the same thing at the same time. Unofficially, however, everyone in Great Britain who cares about flying looks upon the venture which begins here to-day as a race against United States planes, which left California flying in opposite direction last week. Squadron leader A. Stuart-Stearns, a modest Scotchman of 32 who is navigating the British plane expects to complete the voyage in four months. Just before arising from the water, the pilot received telegram from King George wishing him success and assuring him that he will follow the progress of the trip with keen interest.

DAIL ADJOURNED AS A MARK OF SYMPATHY.
DUBLIN, Mar. 26. To-day's session Dail Eireann was brief and peaceful, and early adjournment being taken out of sympathy with the victims of Queensland outrage, without any stirring ministerial differences or resignations from the Cabinet that had been anticipated. The public with the idea that the session might be exciting, filled the visitors galleries at an early hour, but when the ministers appeared including President Cosgrave who looked somewhat pale after an illness there was no sign of friction, and the only change from the usual was that minister of defence Mulcahy having resigned, Saturday, among private members.

Methodist Church at Harbor Grace

HOLDS ANNUAL MISSIONARY MEETING.

The annual Missionary Meeting of the Methodist Church was held at Coughlin Hall on Thursday evening, March 20th inst., and was quite successful. Despite the unfavourable weather there was a large audience present. John Trapnell, J.P., I.S.O., who has for so many years occupied the chair at such meetings, acted in this capacity, and gave the opening address in his usual good style. After a hymn had been sung, Rev. Mr. Harris, pastor of the Church, presented his annual Missionary report. The next to address the meeting was Rev. O. Jackson, B. D., of Freshwater, who, with the help of a map, endeavoured to concentrate the thoughts of all present on Japan, and clearly pointed out what Mission work will mean to that country, its people, and the world-wide effect. This splendid address was listened to with rapt attention, and shall long be remembered by those present.

After the singing of another hymn, Rev. F. S. Coffin, M.A., Pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, delivered a short but most interesting address, dealing chiefly with mission work in Western Africa and reviewed (as far as time would permit) the life of one whose sacrifices and devoted life-service to the people of that dark country, should always serve as an example and inspiration to others. The last speaker was Rev. W. B. Bagden, B.A., of Carboneau, who delivered a most helpful and uplifting address, dealing with the missionary cause in general. It was very impressive and keenly followed by the audience. He pointed out the great need for workers at home as well as on the far-flung battle line of the mission field.

The Choir of the Church was present and rendered in their usual good style an Anthem, "The Awakening Chorus," while the customary missionary collection was being taken up. This meeting was considered very successful, and such impressive and forceful addresses cannot fail but to leave a lasting impression on its hearers. The speakers left a message, which may be summed up in the following lines:—
"O Zion, haste, thy mission high fulfill,
To tell to all the world that God is Light;
That He who made all nations is not One
That He should perish, lost in shades of night."

Silby Barrett Resigns and Goes Back to the Pit--Miners in the Bituminous Industry Ratify the Three Years' Agreement--Dail Denounces the Queenstown Outrage.

THE DAILY SYMPATHY.
DUBLIN, March 25. After a brief denunciation reference to the attack on the British soldiers at Queenstown last week, the Daily Eireann carried a motion for adjournment to-day as an expression of sympathy with the victims of the outrage and their families. President Cosgrave who himself moved the adjournment said "in its deliberateness and savagery the shooting has no parallel. It is almost inconceivable that any civilized country should produce four men who could plot and carry out such a foul, callous deed. All annals of savagery may be searched but I doubt if any worse instance can be found. It made our people at home and our friends abroad hang their heads in shame."

AN IRISH ENGAGEMENT.
DUBLIN, March 25. County Leitrim was excited to-day by news of an engagement, in which one man was killed, between National Army troops and a party of irregulars in the mountainous district of Rossan. The engagement ensued when a party of suspects were rounded up in a roundhouse. Shots were exchanged and the leader of the Free State troops, Lieutenant Kane, was shot and killed. An arrest was made later. The military are active in the county, advices from various points state.

THE HONDURAS REVOLUTION.
WASHINGTON, March 25. Honduras Revolutionaries are in complete possession of the entire country with the exception of Tegucigalpa, the capital, according to a report to-day from the United States Minister there to the State Department.

PREMIERS DISAGREED.
LONDON, March 25. Disagreement of the Dominion Premiers regarding the relation of the Singapore naval base project to the Washington Treaty, is strikingly brought out in the correspondence on the subject issued to-day as a white paper.

WAGE AGREEMENT RATIFIED.
INDIANAPOLIS, March 25. The rank and file of the U. M. W. of America ratified the new wage scale agreement, assuring peace in the bituminous industry for three years by an overwhelming vote, it was announced here this afternoon. The vote was 164,858 to 26,253.

JAPAN'S ESTIMATES.
TOKIO, March 25. The Cabinet to-day adopted working estimates for the fiscal year 1924-25, totalling 1,347,000,000 yen of which 238,000,000 is for the Navy and 193,000,000 for the Army. These two estimates are approximately the same as in the budget of the current year.

CANADA'S IMMIGRATION FIGURES.
OTTAWA, March 25. Immigration during the 11 months of the fiscal year ending February, totalled 135,128, an increase of 104 per cent. over the figures for the corresponding 11 months of the previous fiscal year. British immigration increased 117 per cent.; immigration from the United States decreased 6 per cent.

STEAMSHIP SUBSIDIES.
OTTAWA, Mar. 25. Steamship Companies serving Canadian ports received $1,139,828 in subsidies from the Canadian Government in the fiscal year just ending. Figures tabled to-day at the request of J. S. Woodsworth, Winnipeg, show that more than fifty companies are being subsidized to maintain the service between Canadian ports on the Pacific and Atlantic coasts, while several are giving trans-oceanic service.

GOOD SPORTS ALL.
SEATTLE, Mar. 25. The best of luck to the British fliers is wished by members of the American World Flight Expedition here. Major Frederick D. Martin, in command of the United States aviators, pointed out that the British aviators are at a disadvantage at having only one plane. They have but one chance of getting around, he said, while we have four. They're fine fellows, we wish them every success. The American expedition will leave Sunday or Monday if weather conditions permit for Prince Rupert, B.C., on the fifth leg of the world journey.

BILLIARD ASSOCIATION FORMED--OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP TO BE COMPETED FOR.

A large attendance of billiard enthusiasts were present at a meeting in the G.W.V.A. rooms last night, called for the purpose of forming a Newfoundland Billiard Association. Lieut. Col. T. Nangle occupied the chair and in his opening remarks outlined plans and proposals which were supported by those present. The formation of a Billiard Association, in keeping with the rules laid down by the Billiard Control Board of England, met with the full approval of all. After a lengthy discussion it was moved by Hon. W. R. Warren and seconded by Mr. G. Rabbitts that a Newfoundland Billiard Association be formed, and carried unanimously.

The election of officers for the first Newfoundland Billiard Association resulted as follows:--
Hon. President--Hon. W. R. Warren.
President--W. J. Martin.
Vice-President--J. Edwards.
Secy.-Treas.--W. B. Skinner.
It was decided that an Executive Committee be formed, consisting of the officers with one representative from each club in the city. The representatives will be requested to meet the officers of the Association in due course for the purpose of drafting up the new rules and by-laws. The Premier, in attendance, announced that he would present a trophy for the first tournament the Association would organize; and at the same time thanked the gathering for the great honor conferred upon him.

The next matter taken up was the holding of a championship tournament within the next couple of weeks. It was felt that it would be very desirable to hold such a tournament, and it would also give a good send-off to the new Association. Much discussion took place on the form to be taken and it was eventually decided that it would be an open championship, the entries for which will be kept open until Friday next. It was also felt that the tournament should be started at the very earliest date. Negotiations are now under progress to hold the games in the Star rooms on one of their tables. It was also decided that neutral cushions would be used.

Large Audiences are Delighted With Geddes

A large audience again heard Mr. Cameron Geddes singing "Mary of Argyle," "The Heart Dowed Down," and "A Smile will go a Long, Long Way." The pictures were well up to the mark, particularly the comedy which features Billy M. U. R. A. V. Every day Mr. Geddes is receiving requests to sing certain songs and as time passes he will strain a point to accommodate his correspondents and well-wishers. Mr. Geddes' repertoire of songs is a very lengthy one and the public are assured that with each change rendition that will prove very acceptable will be sung by him. This afternoon's matinee is the same as to-night's performance, whilst an announcement of much importance will be contained in to-morrow's advertising columns.

Why Children Cheat and Steal

A revealing light is cast upon the cause of the shady morals in public life, now being dragged out into view, by a magazine article that exposes the beginnings of financial and moral laxity in our school children. Written long before Teapot Dome became a by-word, it appears at the very moment to show where the root of adult crookedness begins and where it should be attacked. In school, it seems, every pagan god in history may be the subject of the day's lesson, but not the God of the Bible. A knowledge of Greek and Roman gods is often one of the requirements in courses necessary for graduation. Geography is taught along with the history of pagan faiths, but the God with whose handiwork geography is concerned, the God of Christianity and of Judaism, is left out of the curriculum. The child must learn about Him and about religion as best he can. The comparatively few children who go to Sunday school, as shown in statistics compiled in Indiana, average twelve hours a year in religious training; additional training in the way they should go at their mothers' knee, but a vast number receive it not at all. It seems that it is not the business of the public school to teach the child the plain and simple morals of every-day living, to teach him that it is as sinful to cheat a store-keeper or a railroad company as a sin to steal from the rich as from the poor. The result is seen in the archives which we would the soonest forget, in the unparalleled growth of crime of every sort in the United States. It is a pretty stirring indictment of our public school system which William G. Shepherd, journalist and author, presents in Good Housekeeping. He tells us that the facts prove that there is no place in America to which a parent can send his children—and keep them within the limits of democracy—where they will receive instruction in religion and morals. "Religion and morals, somehow, have dropped out along the road in our educational progress." Tests show, we are told, that more than one-half of our American school children will, under temptation, have an unethical outlook on life. They show more than half of them will cheat and lie and steal. These tests, we are told, were conducted scientifically. One of them, known as the "True-False" test, has been applied to thousands of children in the United States. After each statement given to a child to test its moral viewpoint are printed the words "True False," and the child is asked to underline the word which he believes describes the statement. Here is the viewpoint presented by some children:

"It is NOT wrong to steal from one who has secured his wealth dishonestly."

"It is more honorable to have charge of an office than to work at a trade."

"Stupidity is more sinful than deceit."

"Unnecessarily failing to meet an appointment on time is NOT immoral and unchristian."

"It is true that our duty is greater to secure justice for the people of our own race and religion than for others."

"Cheating a railroad is NOT so much a sin as cheating a person."

"It is not the pupil's duty to call attention to the fact that a teacher has given him too high marks."

"It is true that IF A STOREKEEPER GIVES YOU TOO MUCH MONEY IT IS ALL RIGHT TO KEEP IT, BECAUSE HE WOULD PROBABLY DO THE SAME IF YOU PAID HIM TOO MUCH."

Thousands of American children, we are told, assented to these statements when they had an equal opportunity to dissent from them by merely making a mark with a lead-pencil. "Nothing they had received in school or at home in the way of religious instruction caused them to mark their paper otherwise. Their answers "afforded proof that under American life, 'way down deep into its very childhood, there is unmorality in thought and downright approval of dishonesty.'"

Another test—the Purchasing Test—tried children with the confidence of the examiners—gave the child purchasers a dime too much in making change. The test was to see how many children—and which ones—would bring back the dime to the teacher. The result was that:

"Sixty-four per cent. of the children did not return the dime, either to the teacher or to the store."

"The scientists who made this test insist that their selection of children was made so carefully that they feel safe in assuming that sixty-four per cent. of all America's children would have done as these children did."

"In still another test the children were taken into cafeterias where they could select their own food, and where they were expected to make a report of how much food they had bought. Not half of them reported honestly."

"The tests were ingeniously disguised. In one city a test was given in a restaurant where the children thought they were giving a banquet for the restaurant keeper who, some weeks before, had made a gift to their school organization. Every child brought a certain amount of money to pay for his share of the banquet. At the conclusion of the banquet it was announced, privately, to each child, that the cost was less than had been expected. The children were supposed to return the excess to their school organization. This test involved not only honesty, but gratitude to the restaurant-keeper and loyalty to the school organization. Only a small percentage of the children returned the money."

Here is a test made to see how children would cheat in examinations, a test so severe that it would strain the moral fiber of even senior college students:

"The children are given double sheets of paper, the under sheet being secretly coated with wax that shows any change or correction. A set of questions and answers is written on the blackboard and a map hung over the answers. The teacher, in this test leaves the room while the children are writing down their answers to the questions. After a certain length of time the map, apparently by accidents, falls from the blackboard and discloses the list of answers. The children, with no teacher in the room, have the opportunity to correct any errors they have made in their answers; they are given plenty of time to yield to this temptation. In some of these tests 100 per cent. of the children yielded."

Tests to determine whether they would overpraise themselves or allow themselves unearned credit were given children. These tests were character-sifters, scientifically designed, and scores were given in every test, and strength of character and the ability to resist temptation were expressed in terms of percentages, as engineers express the strength of steel. The highest score, we are told, was 82.3 per cent.

"It was made by a group of Boy Scouts which had been organized two years. These high-idealized fellows came within 17.7 per cent. of being 100 per cent. trustworthy and honest. Some of the fellows came into the troop during the later months that the tests were under way. Of course, none of the boys in the troop knew the purpose of the various experiments; often, of course, they were not aware that they were being tested. The old-timers in the troop ranked up 100 per cent. One young fellow said, 'I don't know what these examinations are, but they must be trying to test our nerve.' He scored 100."

"The second highest score was 80.4 per cent. It was made by a group of Boy Scouts which had been organized six months.

"The third highest score was 78.2, made by a group of boys in highly efficient private school, who came from high-class homes."

"Far down in the list, number nine, came the group that interests you and me—that interests every father and mother in this land—a group of boys in a typical American public school. Most of us have our children in the public schools. We can not all have our sons in the Boy Scouts, or in private schools. These privileges are luxuries to some of us. The score of this public-school group was only 56.8."

"Are our public schools in America being so conducted that honesty and the development of character in our children are luxuries outside of the range of public schools? Is a belief in God, such as the Boy Scouts have, and the Girl Scouts, and such as is taught in most private schools in America, too rare a privilege for American public-school children?"

"I am giving the list of these scores. They are taken from a book by Dr. Walter S. Athearn, entitled 'Measurements and Standards in Religious Education,' published by the George H. Doran Company, of New York:

Rank	Group	Average
1st	Boy Scouts (2 years)	82.3
2nd	Boy Scouts (6 months)	80.4
3rd	Private School	78.2
4th	Private School	75.0
5th	Camp Fire Girls (4 months)	62.2
6th	Boy Scouts (just organized)	60.5
7th	Private School	59.5
8th	Boy Scouts (just organized)	58.1
9th	Public School	56.8

These tests were made, not to prove the wickedness of American children, but "to discover, scientifically, whether or not goodness, honesty, trustworthiness, and a decent outlook on life and a love of God and man could be taught in school; whether they could be taught, definitely and decisively, like other subjects." It was discovered that these subjects can be taught in school and that "they can be so thoroughly learned that they produce definite results in children."

"Apart from program and credits, it is encouraging to behold the major divisions of the churches uniting in an effort not only to give all the children entrance into their spiritual heritage, but also to develop in them the virtues which are at the basis of all sound citizenship—without which our whole social structure will be as the house built on the sand. The effort deserved recognition in the first column of the first page and has had it."

"Our desperate criminals to-day range under the age of twenty-two years."

"Fifteen thousand persons will die this year by murder and homicide in our country. It would take three hours for a procession of those who will perish by murder or homicide before December 31, 1924, to pass a given point."

"I have secured the following figures from William B. Joyce, Chairman of the National Surety Company, of New York. They show the estimated thefts that will occur in the United States this year:

Nature of Crime	Amount Stolen
Stock Frauds	$1,900,000,000
Credit Frauds	400,000,000
Burglary, Larceny and Petty Theft	250,000,000
Embezzlement	100,000,000
Forgery	100,000,000
Seaport Robberies, Piracies, Customs Frauds	100,000,000
Railroad Freight Thefts	25,000,000
Home-Building Frauds	25,000,000
Add Miscellaneous Financial Crimes	$2,000,000,000
TOTAL	$3,000,000,000

"Our public-school system has been improving and increasing every year. And yet see what else has been increasing. I give in the table below the items of embezzlement and burglary, because they are not merely financial crimes of tricky business or commercial cheating, but crimes bordering on individual, moral or physical violence:

Year	Embezzlement Losses	Burglary Losses
1910	$1,396,031	$ 886,045
1912	2,050,201	1,293,533
1913	2,060,248	2,947,790
1914	4,623,604	5,660,205
1915	5,223,513	10,183,853
1921	$2,700,000	11,500,000

"We must find a way to secure religious instruction for our children. The place for it is America's public schools, for all of America's children."

However, a joint meeting of Catholics, Protestants and Jews in New York—the first of its kind, according to the press—held that religious instruction should be outside the school, and that each child should be instructed in the faith of its parents. The conference, attended by 3,000 teachers drawn together by a common peril, was addressed by Archbishop Hayes, representing the Catholics; the Rev. Dr. Walter M. Howlett, in charge of the Daily Vacation Bible School Association, representing the Protestants; and by the Rev. Dr. D. de Sola Pool, rabbi of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, representing the Jews. One sentiment animated the gathering—the need of spiritual training for the child. All children, without question of creed, comments the New York Times, must be brought within the range of

Exchange Fluctuations Feared

London, March 1 (A.P.)—The government should take a hand in the present condition of the money exchange and enact legislation to prevent fluctuations, said Sir George Paish in an address before Birmingham manufacturers. He said that the exchange tended to hamper trade and unless arrested the fall of all or any one of the exchanges might involve political trouble.

Gold-Beating An Ancient Craft

The ancient industry of gold-beating is still carried on to a very large extent in London and Birmingham, England.

It is a highly-skilled craft, the methods of which have largely remained the same for ages past. The beating of the gold into those wonderful, extended, thin leaves is still done by hand, and the high degree of manual skill that is exercised in the delicate work is a heritage of generations of beaters.

It is one of the oldest industries, having been practised in the East from time immemorial, and can certainly be traced back in Egypt for 4,000 years. It was transplanted thence to England hundreds of years ago.

Messrs. Goodison's business in Birmingham was established in 1847, and is now being carried by the third generation. There can be little doubt that the methods in operation to-day in Messrs. Goodison's establishment are substantially the same as those which were used by the ancient Egyptians in the time of the biblical Pharaohs.

It is one of the few industries into which the machine and mechanical power have not entered and seem unlikely ever to enter. It depends entirely upon highly trained hands and brains, and in England that skill has been so highly developed that English gold leaf stands pre-eminent all the world over.

The gold, arriving in thin ribbons, is put in small pieces into moulds, or books or specially prepared skin, and subjected to heavy beating with hammers for about five hours. They vary in weight from 4 lb. to 16 lb. At the end of that time the gold is beaten into a delicate tissue of a thickness estimated at the 230,000th part of an inch.

Mrs. Davis Recovers Strength

The following statement contained in a letter from Mrs. Alice Davis of Jamestown, N.Y., should bring hope to other women who are in the same condition she was. She says, "I was nervous and weak with pains in my back, no ambition, and utterly discouraged, and could not sit up all the time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored my health and strength so I am now running a rooming house and do all the work."

Income Taxes May Be Cut

Ottawa, March 14—(By Canadian Press).—Rumors current that the budget is to be brought down in about three weeks have led to an inference in certain quarters that the Government intends to reduce income taxes. The inference is founded on the idea that the budget is being brought forward early so that any changes made in the income tax may come into effect before April 30 next when the first payment of income taxes for the present year is due.

The Shark and the Otter

The sea-otter mother was pursuing a fish—a pollock. She had a clinging cub with her, otherwise the chase would not have been prolonged. Suddenly, writes Samuel Scaville, Jun., in his book, "Wild Folk," as the pollock dived to lower depths in the hope that the water pressure might drive back its pursuer, a grotesquely horrible head thrust itself from the darkness right in its path.

Dark, and shining like wet rubber, the shape resembled nothing so much as that of a great double-headed sledge hammer. From either of the living hammer-heads gleamed a greenish malignant eye.

Before the pollock could dart aside, the great hammer-head shark turned partly over, there was a flash of sharp teeth, and the fugitive fish disappeared.

A second later the ridged, grey, fifteen foot body shot towards the otter, with such speed that the water fairly hissed from the schimlar-shaped fins. The sea otter is, among the swiftest swimmers of the mammals, but no air-breathing creature can compete in speed with a shark. Almost instantly the hammer-head was upon her.

The jaws of all the sharks are so undershot that, in order to grip their prey, they must perform a turn over on their sides. This peculiarity of their kind was all that saved the otter.

For a second the grim head over-shadowed her. Then, with a twist of its long tail, shaped like the fluke of an anchor, the shark turned over and the vast mouth swung open, armed with two rows of inch-long, sharp, triangular teeth, whose edges were serrated like a saw. Each separate tooth was curved back towards the gullet, so that for any living thing caught in their dreadful grip there was no more chance of escape than there would be from the inter-locking cog-wheels of a stone-crusher.

Flashed To One Side.

As the jaws of death gaped for the sea otter, with a writhe of her swift body she flashed to one side, while the little cub whimpered in her arms, and the fatal teeth of the shark just grazed her trailing, flapping hind legs, so close they snapped behind her. Swerving beneath the great bulk, the otter began a desperate fight for life.

Every foot of the shark's gaunt, striped body was built for speed. There was not a bone anywhere under his drab and livid skin—only rings and strips and columns of tough and springy cartilage, which enabled him to cut through the water like a blade of tempered grey steel. With the rush of a torpedo the grim figure shot after the fleeing otter, who had but one advantage, and that was in length.

It takes a six-foot body less time to turn than one that measures fifteen feet. In a straightaway race the fish would have overtaken the mammal in a few seconds; but when it came to twisting, turning and doubling, the sea otter had the advantage, albeit of the slightest.

Again and again the desperate sea mother avoided death by an inch. More than once the ringing jaws of the great fish snapped together right behind her, and only the tiny tick of time it took to turn over saved her. Desperately she sought to win the refuge of the kelpbed, but always the grey shape thrust herself between her and safety.

The Need of Air.

At last an ally of the sea folk joined in the hunt. Water was claiming her toll of oxygen from the alien beneath her depths. A sea-otter can stay under water for half an hour at a pinch—but not when swimming at full speed, with the laboring heart pumping blood at full capacity; and this one realized despairingly that soon she must breathe or die.

Little by little she shaped her course towards the surface, dreadfully fearing lest the second she must spend in drawing one deep breath would be her last. She flashed upwards through a whole gamut of greens—chrome, cedar, Jasper, myrtle malachite, emerald, ending with the pulsing, golden sap-green of the surface.

Swim as she would, however, the monstrous head was always just at her flank, and the slightest pause would give those fatal teeth their grip. Once again she avoided by a hair's breath a snap of the deadly jaws, and struggled despairingly towards the upper air.

As the great fish turned to follow, out from the sunlight through the gleaming water, shot a long, dark body. Away from the safety of the kelp to the head of horror with its implacable eyes came the old dog otter, for the creed of the sea otter is unchanging—one mate for life and death. With his round misshapen head bristling, and his shiny black eyes shining like fire, this one crossed the vast back of the shark like a shadow.

Dog-Otter's Fierce Attack.

As the great fish turned to follow the fleeing mother, the blunt, pointed teeth of the dog otter, which can grind the flintiest shells to powder, fastened themselves with a bull-dog grip just behind the last fin of the shark, where its long sinuous tail jointed the body.

With all the force of his tremendous jaws, the great sea otter champed his teeth through the masses of muscles, deep into the cartilage column, crushing one of its ball-and-socket joints. Like a spring steel the shark bent almost double on itself.

Just as the gaping jaws were about to close, with a quick flirt of his body, the otter swung across the other side, without relaxing for an instant the grip of those punishing teeth.

The undershot jaws of the great fish could not reach the head of its tormentor, fixed as it was in the central ridge of the shark's back. Again and again the hammer-head bent from side to side, but each time the old dog otter evaded the clashing teeth and ground to bits joint after joint of the shark's spine, while the lashing tail strokes became feebler and feebler.

Not until the mother otter and her cub were safe on their way to the kelpbed, breathing great life-saving draughts of fresh air at the surface did the grim jaws of the old otter relax. Then, with an arrowy dive and double, he shot under and over the disabled fish, and sped away to join his mate in the hidden thickets of the kelp.

Rome Welcomes Archbishops.

Thousands of Citizens Struggle to Catch a Glimpse of Prelates.

Rome, March 17.—Rome extended a welcome in spirit to Archbishop Hayes, of New York, and Archbishop Mundelein, of Chicago, who arrived here this afternoon from Paris. It was to have been a royal welcome in form as well, but the crowd which gathered to welcome the two prelates who are to be raised to the cardinalate was so great that it became necessary to conduct the Archbishops away from the vast assembly, although the royal waiting room had been prepared for their reception.

Spores of churchmen were at the station to greet the distinguished visitors and thousands of citizens struggled amongst themselves to catch a glimpse of the dignitaries who are soon to be princes of the church. Archbishops Hayes and Mundelein will be received by Cardinal Gasparri, Papal Secretary of State, tomorrow morning. Both were guests of the United States College at dinner this evening.

It is not the policy of the manufacturers of Ivory soap to make extravagant claims in its behalf. They simply say that Ivory soap is a good, pure toilet soap and that it will cleanse the skin thoroughly without injuring the most delicate complexion.

We Have Long Suspected It

CEYLON WOULD STOP DISHONEST TRADERS IN ADULTERATED TEA.

COLOMBO, Ceylon.—(A.P.)—Complaints from Egypt concerning the quality of a consignment of tea from this port have served to draw attention to the fact that the trade in rubber leaves, labelled as tea, has become a minor industry in Ceylon.

The consignment to Egypt was returned here and analyzed. The report of the analyst declared it consisted of 50 per cent of rubber leaves. The appearance of the latter had been changed by pounding them, straining them with cochineal, and then treating them with lime-water.

In one store in Colombo the Criminal Investigation Department of the Government recently found 4,000 lbs. of prepared rubber leaves. The trade appears to be mainly with Egypt and the Persian Gulf, though it is likely that much of the tea shipped to the Gulf eventually finds its way into Russia.

In spite of the existing regulations dealing with the exportation of tea, the authorities are powerless to act, and the trade is carried on openly. The difficulty lies in the lack of any legal definition of tea. In the trade, tea is understood to be the infusion of the leaves of a shrub or small tree of the Tea family. The dictionary definition, however, includes beverages made of other substances, such as camomile tea, and sassafras tea. Even if the consignment of tea from this port had been found to consist of tea leaves, it is doubtful whether the police could proceed against the vendors, for medical men who have not found the drink made from them at all deleterious to health.

Intimately bound up with this rubber leaf trade is a traffic in coarse red tea leaves and prunings. Certain Colombo merchants make a practice of sending men to the estates to buy the coarsest red leaf sweepings and prunings which no reputable estate would send out for cataloging under its own mark.

A bill is to be introduced at the next session of the legislative council, prohibiting the sale or export as tea of anything except leaves of the bushes commonly known as tea bushes.

Why Not Leave Well Enough Alone

SCIENTISTS SEEK MEANS TO HELP PLANTS BREATHE.

EAST LANSING, Mich.—(A.P.)—Air pressure is about the same at points ten feet beneath the surface of the ground as in the open places swept by varying breezes, according to tests made by Dr. M. M. McCool, head of the Department of Soils, and Prof. G. J. Bouyoucos, Research Professor of soils, at Michigan Agricultural College here.

The two men determined to find out something of the need for aeration of soils and of getting air down to the roots of plants, some of which, like alfalfa or sweet clover, penetrate to a depth of ten feet.

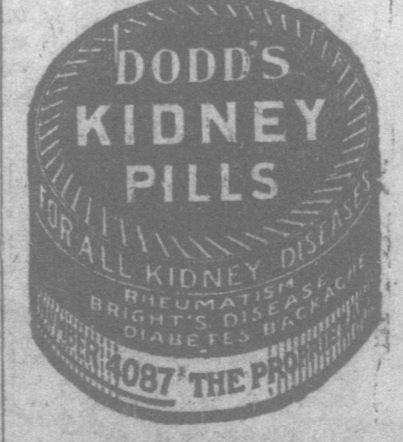

In the course of experiments they set barographs, instruments which measure the pressure of air, at various distances beneath the surface of the earth. These were so sealed that it was impossible for any air influence to reach them except through unbroken ground. The test was tried in sand, loam and clay. The records of the buried barographs, compared with one above the surface, showed that even at a depth of ten feet a change in air pressure at the surface was followed almost at the same time by a similar change in air pressure on the buried instrument.

75% of disease avoided through internal cleanliness

WHY run the risk of sickness? Keep clean internally. When you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste. These poisons, absorbed by the blood, attack all parts of the body. The first results, headache, biliousness, a feeling of "heaviness," etc., serve as warnings of a graver danger. If this intestinal poisoning continues unchecked, you become the victim of some serious organic disease.

This is why intestinal specialists state that constipation is the primary cause of three-quarters of all illness, including the gravest diseases of life.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favor Lubrication

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Not a Medicine

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

New Ways of Forcing Plants

It is a common practice among nature-lovers yearning for the blossoms of spring to cut branches from early flowering trees toward the end of the winter and force them to an early blossoming by bringing them indoors into a warm room. This is readily done with the budding twigs of fruit-trees and of the elder bush, the Forsythia, etc. In recent years various other methods have been employed, some of which are discussed by Dr. Friedl Wehr, in Die Umschau (Frankfurt), who says:

Among these methods of interrupting the winter rest of plants the ether process of Johannsen and the warm bath method of Molisch have long been generally known, the latter being preferable, being both simple and certain, since a bath at a temperature of 95 degrees F. will rouse them from their sleep within twelve hours even buds in a deep state of rest.

The writer proceeds to describe some more recent methods, many of which he believes are suitable for practicable purposes in the hands of gardeners and florists. First among these is the squeezing or pinching method of Weber himself, described by him two or three years ago in German biological and botanical journals. According to this, resting buds, for example, are sharply pinched by tongs or other means so that the external scales of the bud appear to be prest slightly out of position. The pressure is then immediately released.

Germans Build Liner

Bremerhaven, March 3.—The Columbus, the new steamer of the North German-Lloyd Line which will make her maiden trip to New York next spring, is said to have a larger passenger capacity than any ship afloat, close to 1,800. She is built especially with the idea of accommodating passengers, and little space has been provided for cargo. Cabins extend in the very bow and stern of the ship, and every effort has been made to provide adequate recreation space for passengers on all decks. The gross tonnage of the ship is 32,000. She is 350 feet long, 32 feet wide, and has a draught of 32 feet.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

When preparing a meal try to clean as you work, and the task will be lighter. Add to apricots, when partly frozen, a pint of whipped cream, and finish freezing. Pots and pans are easier to wash if filled with cold water as soon as they are emptied. With a salt fish a pipin butter sauce, flavored with mustard and cayenne, is nice. Dried fish, sweetened and chilled, and served in sherbet glasses, makes an attractive dessert. Sprinkle tomato salad with a little grated cheese and serve with mayonnaise dressing. Flavor steamed fig pudding with grated nutmeg and cinnamon and serve with lemon sauce. Shrimp sauce is excellent served with fish. Season with a little lemon juice and cayenne pepper. Do not put a meringue on a pudding until it is rather cool, as otherwise the egg will liquefy. Suet should be sprinkled with flour, and chopped, in a cool place so that it will not become sticky. Use finely-chopped sweetbreads, mixed with whipped cream, and well seasoned, as a sandwich filling. For a dainty tea-time sandwich use chopped candied cherries moistened with orange juice as a filling. Boiling washing soda water should be poured through the refrigerator drain-pipe every other day. Place mushroom caps on toast, spread with maitre d'hotel butter, and bake for a few minutes in a covered dish.
