Miramichi Advance

CHATHAM, N. B., OCTOBER 4, 1888

(Written for the Advance)

The British Constitution

VIII.

During the last three hundred years the British Empire has been ruled by five female sovereigns, and under the government of at least three out of the five she attained a height of power and prosperity unknown before. The reign of Elizabeth is rich with the records of everything that is glorious in literature, and in the history of the world, and there is not the least doubt that posterity will look back to the reign of Victoria and pass a similar judgment upon it. If it cannot compare with its predecessors in great and brilliant military glories, it is not less distinguished at the cost of the best blood and treasure of the country, it far exceeds them in the attainment of that which is of more value and consequence to the people. It can point with pride to a long array of popular and reforming legislation now almost dear to the statesman of former generations, which has placed the British Empire far in advance of the most civilized and enlightened nations of the Continent of Europe. In addition to this, it is splendid with all the arts of peace and can produce a list of authors of every description of science and literature, many of whom are worthy to rank with those who preceded them during the reign of the last Tudor and the last Stuart.

When the present Sovereign ascended the throne, June 20, 1837, she was not only young, but new both in business and life, and during the fifty-one years she has reigned over the Empire, she has gained the respect and esteem of the British people. During these years, while the power of the crown has been slowly but steadily increasing, the statesman who governed the country when she ascended the throne have long since passed away and other men have taken their places to fight the battles of principle as well as of party.

Although times party feeling among politicians and people may run high there is a spirit of honor now existing among political opponents that was unknown in the chivalrous days of Elizabeth and the no less brilliant and no less troubling times of Queen Anne. There cannot be a doubt that these beneficial changes are due to the increased power then Dr. Pedelin sent for. The broken bones were set and the other injuries attended to. Mr. Russell has since been taken to his home and is said to be doing as well as can be expected.

EVERY-DAY GOODNESS.—The Advocate referring to the fact that the old Methodist Church, Chatham, has been leased by the proprietor of the Advance remarks:—

And now the Advance is to be removed into and occupy this former sacred edifice still looked upon with respect by the older members of the congregation, and we sincerely hope that in future our contemporary in its writings will have due regard to the sacred precincts of the old Chatham Methodist Church.

THE ADVOCATE'S rule of conduct leads to have due regard for what is right and true at all times and in all places. We have not one code of morals for the newspaper office and another for the church, for we hold that however elevating "the sacred precincts of the Methodist church" may be, the office of a well-conducted public journal should be equally dedicated to the cause of truth and righteousness. It is in this idea of religion and righteousness that the leading organs at Bay du Vin for Quebec, Capt. Hugh McMillan is in charge of the Carrier Dove and Capt. F. B. Williamson will go in the Middleton on her voyage up the St. Lawrence.

place. The splinters were all out of the wound and as the wind died down a little of the south side Kilbride took in her splinter and jibed her mainsail off Douglaslaw, Blosdy and Kitchof taking the commodore's example. Loggie however pursued a different policy. His main boom was away off against the port shrouds and as the wind puffed off shore from that quarter he, instead of abiding his splinter, let her go—laying the yards after port broad, so that the main boom could be guyed further forward. He thus scored an important point against his opponents, who lost all the benefit of their splinters while they were taking them out again to starboard. Well, drawing up on Kilbride and passing her just off the Marine Hospital. The order here was Fisherman, with a lead of nearly half a mile, followed by Welton, Home, Kilbride, Blosdy and Kitchof, Fisherman went round Canadian Marsh Point so closely in shore that it was feared by some of the onlookers that she would be driven ashore. But in this, as in other things, sailing-master Loggie knew what he was doing, and clearing the point, she bowled off for the stake boat without having to touch a shell or shot. Keeping well to the south out of the strong wind, Fisherman soon lay within a few hundred yards of the turning point, when she bore away towards it and as she went around the splintered jib sprit-reef, Blaupland, and the old favorite, Mackled, were working to windward with all their might and main, and she showed them as flat as boards. Welton's Home was well handled, but she was not so good as Fisherman, who was well ahead of her. Home off Kerr's Mill. Blosdy had been fouled by Kilbride just as she was approaching the stake boat, when she had four planks, but on the down run she came up on Welton's Home and passed the race being finished in the following order:—

Fisherman. Welton's Home. Blosdy. Kitchof. Home off Kerr's Mill. The last named was so far behind that she did not finish before the wind fell and she tied up to a wharf at the upper end of Chatham.

OF THE RACE between the second class boats one of the participants in it writes:—There were three starters in the second class—Mackled, by Mr. Watt, Lotie, by Mr. Hays, Nelson, and Annie, by Mr. Stewart. Lotie crossed the line promptly, Annie two minutes later, and Mackled forty seconds later still. Mackled slipped by the others and gradually gained to the turn off Newcastle, when Lotie, which had kept second place, quickly overhauled and past her, finishing with a long lead. Mackled kept at Annie, but after working down the North shore, out of the strength of the tide, started across for the stake boat, ran into a fat calm, and drifted back to the wharf wharf. Annie hugged the shore till she reached the ferry wharf, still second, and crossed over the line, 25 minutes behind the leader. The small boats did well to get down at the wharf wharf. Annie hugged the shore till she reached the ferry wharf, still second, and crossed over the line, 25 minutes behind the leader.

THE RECORD of the racing is as follows:—

Table with columns for Name, Class, Time, and other details.

THE MOST INTERESTING contest of the season between the five of the Miramichi Yacht Club took place on Thursday, 30th, the number of craft engaged showing an increase over those in previous years of the year, while the re-appearing in the first class of the old "Fisherman," after her mishaps of the last race, showing proof, fore and aft, above and below, of being fitted as her many admirers felt she should, caused everybody to await the results of the day's sailing with far more interest than was manifested in the Club's race before. Mr. Robert Loggie, as looked over the "Fisherman's" new and broad mainsail, her jib, topsail and spinnaker, fresh from Mr. Wilson's sail loft, were a confident expression, indicating that he meant business this time, and if the old favorite did not win it would not be on account of neglect of any preparation on his part. Commodore Miller's first yacht, the "Kilbride" was the force, with her keel over at the helm, her sails, though smaller than a racer of her measurement should have, setting flat and being sheeted and clewed faultlessly, and every man on board at his station and in full knowledge of his duties.

A NEW competitor appeared in the list—The Welton's Home—owned by Messrs. A. & R. Loggie and like the Fisherman, Kilbride and Blosdy, a centre-board sloop. This craft had an excellent effect on the yachting interests of the town. Commodore Miller, while taking the start of his boat in true yachtsman's spirit, will, of course, not allow the glory of the Club to be shared with a newcomer. He was well pleased to see the Fisherman's new and broad mainsail, her jib, topsail and spinnaker, fresh from Mr. Wilson's sail loft, were a confident expression, indicating that he meant business this time, and if the old favorite did not win it would not be on account of neglect of any preparation on his part. Commodore Miller, while taking the start of his boat in true yachtsman's spirit, will, of course, not allow the glory of the Club to be shared with a newcomer. He was well pleased to see the Fisherman's new and broad mainsail, her jib, topsail and spinnaker, fresh from Mr. Wilson's sail loft, were a confident expression, indicating that he meant business this time, and if the old favorite did not win it would not be on account of neglect of any preparation on his part. Commodore Miller's first yacht, the "Kilbride" was the force, with her keel over at the helm, her sails, though smaller than a racer of her measurement should have, setting flat and being sheeted and clewed faultlessly, and every man on board at his station and in full knowledge of his duties.

A NEW competitor appeared in the list—The Welton's Home—owned by Messrs. A. & R. Loggie and like the Fisherman, Kilbride and Blosdy, a centre-board sloop. This craft had an excellent effect on the yachting interests of the town. son, Committee of Prosecution for violation of the Salt Act and W. C. Anslow, P. G. W. P. Then I had a long talk with the Hon. Mr. Phillips, who was engaged in the light traffic because I would not pledge myself to vote against the Salt Act. I also lost many votes from my refusing to take "plumbers." My reason for refusing to take such votes being that I would much rather be defeated than have my name on the list of the "Clib" or "Ring of Tyranny"—the Adams Party—resorting to all their usual low means, contemptible tricks, schemes and unfair canvasses, Adams making a personal home to house canvass and using or rather abusing the whole power of the Dominion patronage against Mr. Lyons and myself. Hence, in consideration of these odds and unfair combinations working against the man, it is not strange that he only led 63 votes!

Yours truly, C. N. RAMSAY.

'Please, sir,' said old Zerah, the housekeeper, 'there's a man in the plum tree.'

'Up in the plum tree?' repeated Mr. Brown. 'And what's he doing up in that plum tree? It ain't the time o' year for ripe plums.'

'No,' said Zerah, giving the frying-pan that she was cleaning an extra scrape with the knife, 'ain't it time o' year for plums to be ripe? But it's always time o' year for young men to make fools of themselves, and the third branch of that 'ar plum tree is on a line with the window of Arabella Arden's room.'

'Eh?' said Mr. Brown, dropping his newspaper and opening his eyes very wide. 'As true as Fyon live, sir,' said Zerah.

ing, he thought. He tore a leaf from his pocket-book, scribbled a line or two on it as well as he could in the uncertain dusk, and wrapping it around his neck, swung it as far as his arm could reach toward the swamp.

'Matters are getting serious,' he said to himself. But the mixture had not been without its use.

'Hello!' said Weir, 'a shooting star.' 'A white bird!' exclaimed Belton, choking, his long, swinging stride. 'No it isn't either, it's a watch with a letter wrapped around it.'

'What was that?' said Weir. 'Let's go and look the dog!' 'Let's do nothing of the sort,' said Belton.
