

A Coastguard's Story—A Fact.

EXTRACT FROM J. W.'S JOURNAL, KEPT WHILE SOUTH, IN 1862.

There is perhaps not a more beautiful little river in South Carolina than the Inlet. On either side its banks are studded with towering pines, and there is an opening through the dense forest, presenting a view a neat farm or elegant plantation. It was here the sturdy Negro went forth to his daily task, his muscled back heaving from the opposite side of the tranquil stream, and gradually flying away, only to be answered in return by wild and romantic shouts from his fellow slaves.

I spent fourteen long months in North and South Carolina during the years of 1862-3, a portion of which was at the Inlet; and for a certain length of time I was a member of the Coastguards, and we then would have a signal station which controlled all the signal stations reaching from Fort Caswell to Suiter. Now and then we would have a patrol of the coast, who would occasionally land for the purpose of burning blockade-runners or destroying all works. In most of these instances we would wound or kill a few, and sometimes they fled in a panic, but generally we would not do so. I was once sent to a plantation to see if I could find any of the Coastguards who had been there, but I found none. I was then sent to a plantation to see if I could find any of the Coastguards who had been there, but I found none.

With large dark eyes, with light and flowing hair blacker than the Post's raven. Some of these dangers were bewitchingly pretty, excellent company—when they were not out of sight—but they all had a strange habit. They never showed their teeth; I think they never were hostile; but they all had this strange habit of showing their teeth. A small boy to see them would imagine that their mouths contained little drum-sticks, but it was not so; it was their snuff stick—a stick on the end of which would be wound sufficient yarn to form a kind of ball, into they would moan in their dear little mouths and then rub thoroughly in snuff; after which it would be returned to the above named little mouth, and then they would come, showing their right and left, some of them making handsome shots at blue tail flies.

It was at one of those plantations that I met a gentleman from St. John's—a blue-eyed gentleman from the North among the beautiful snow. He was a rather decent kind of fellow and owned a blockade-runner then in L—Inlet. His crew were Baltimore free negroes, and he was under very heavy bonds that none of them should set foot on South Carolina soil. His vessel had been blockaded in this place for a year, and the blacks were almost in a state of starvation. Poor wretches, I often pitied their condition, for they had been shipped under false papers. My St. John friend prevailed on me to take a heavy long boat and run the riggers out through the pickets past the Fort, thus giving them their liberty, for off shore was a favored Yankee fleet. I did so, and I very nearly cost my life as you shall see.

On my way down stream the coastguards hailed me as follows: "Where goes that boat?" "Down to the clam beds," I replied. "Pass on," was the order, and we did. I took the dories entirely out of the River, and cautioned them, saying: "If you are captured you will be all hanged or shot."

"We never will be taken alive," cried old Tom, a good man, who when he parted with me, said, while the tears flowed down his honest cheeks, "You have saved us; my supplications have been heard; God bless you; my wife and children in dear old Baltimore, Heaven bless them, shall pray for you."

The boat stopped swiftly from shore, aided by the ebbing current, and I saw the refugees gain the side of a gun-batter, thus giving them their liberty, for off shore was a favored Yankee fleet. I did so, and I very nearly cost my life as you shall see.

the old Battery. They thought I had deserted to give news to the Northern fleet, but on seeing me hold a signal for them to come after me, a baton was despatched at once with twenty men armed to the teeth. I met them as they landed, and a more bloodthirsty looking band never disgraced the mountains of Spain. I was called a coward, villain, spy, and thousands of other worse names. This made me very stubborn and savage. I felt as if I was penned in a corner. I refused to answer any questions till I was brought before the Captain. One of the soldiers

STROKE ME OVER THE HEAD with his rifle and out me considerably. Another rasal drew his bowie knife and held it in rather an unpleasant style near my throat. I answered nothing, keeping my right hand in my breast over my palpitating heart near which nestled a revolver. The Sergeant in command soon after this gave orders that I should be let alone and drew his sword on a wretch that kicked me. May the gods smile on that noble officer. If ever I meet him I will stand the Hook. We soon arrived back to Fort Stanley, and it was then dark and dismal. The mournful screams of the loon divers were sent to sound my death knell. My life was not insured either, and I don't think I could have got a policy under guard in any circumstances. I was placed under guard and kept so three days, and was then

PUT ON TRIAL for the serious crime of aiding slaves to escape from the State, the penalty of which, they said, "Do you know?" "Let me hear it," I inquired firmly. "Nothing less than DEATH," answered our Captain.

Now the St. John man who had caused me to be in this scrape was present; he was a member of a strong and ancient Order, and so were the Captain of the coastguards and all the officers present. He pleaded my case for me and said but little. We soon arrived back to Fort Stanley, and it was then dark and dismal. The mournful screams of the loon divers were sent to sound my death knell. but in disfavor with the politicians. The Democratic party is showing a desire to cooperate with the Liberal Republicans, and the New York World is apparently favoring the nomination of Charles Francis Adams, late Minister to England, for the Presidency. The name of Governor Palmer, of Illinois, has also been mentioned. The nomination by an office-holder of a General Hazard for the Convention of Pennsylvania, has disinterested a large body of Republicans in that State; and as the Democratic and Republican vote is pretty equally divided there, it is thought that a popular nomination in opposition to the Administration candidate will wrest the Keystone State from Grant and damage his prospects irreparably. The President's opponents in the Republican Party appear determined to compass his defeat, while the array of office-holders are working quite as vigorously to ensure his success. The Philadelphia Convention, composed exclusively of Republicans, will recommend his re-nomination, while the Cincinnati Convention, also called by pure Republicans, will certainly unanimously recommend another candidate. The Negro Convention in New Orleans has pronounced for the re-nomination of Adams, and the Legislature of Louisiana are inclined the same way. If any large body of Republicans in New York, Pennsylvania and the more important Western States and it is in the West that the opposition to Grant is strongest, the stake to be won against him, as now seems probable, and can be brought to act cordially with the Democrats, there will be a fair prospect of a change in the occupancy of the White House.

Billiards.—Cyrille Dion, "Champion of America," 243 Broadway, N. Y., having heard that John Deery, William Goldswaiter and others were ready to play him a match and hang out to the last that the negroes ran away and pitched me out of the boat. I was soon questioned and re-cross-questioned, but I held out bravely. The old Captain finally fixed his dark eyes on me, but I was not intimidated. I was then remanded three days more—then again I was put through a course of sprouts &c. &c. and finally acquitted. "Young man," spoke the commander of the fort, "you have to every respect while with us acted properly, and we have always looked on you as a true friend to our suffering country—but bear me! If my suspicions were at all sprung in regard to your having assisted the negroes to escape, you should be smothered."

smothered. A PLEASANT GATHERING.

Beauty, Fashion and Wealth Assembled in Behalf of the Industrial School—A Rich Man who could not be Persuaded to Assist.

A brilliantly numerous and fashionable assembly gathered in the extensive suite of parlors immediately over the office of the Victoria Hotel last evening. The very commendable and useful charity, which is located over in Carlton, and is known among philanthropists as the Industrial School for little boys, was the object which called into the parlors, halls, and adjacent rooms of the Victoria, these distinguished and leading workers for our public charity. About half-past seven the audience commenced to arrive, and before many minutes there was a standing room only, though no announcement to that effect was posted up. Among the prominent clergymen, politicians, doctors, and merchants present were Rev. Messrs. Armstrong, Oak-Carey, Pope, Messrs. Boyd, Burpee, Frith, Travis, King, Wiggins, Jordan, Spurr, Magee, Hall, and a numerous attendance of ladies.—Mrs. Perley, Mrs. Robinson, the Misses Sturdee, Miss Hammond, and Messrs. Lockhart, Drake, Hall, Manks, Manning and others turning the musical part of the entertainment. A good many essayed full dress, both among the ladies and gentlemen; just as many more did not. Every one was left to his or her own choice, which made every thing pass off very agreeably. The gentlemen left their overcoats, hats and canes in a room in the charge of a couple of attendants, and a parlor for the ladies was also allotted by the gentleman who presided, Mr. Oregan, who, though his immediate pecuniary benefit from the entertainment will be nothing, has the satisfaction of knowing that no more deserving gathering could afford his sumptuous parlors than those who sought to do, educate, and render useful the little waifs under Mr. McKillop's care at the Industrial School.

Shortly after eight o'clock, Mr. Frith opened the exercises by briefly announcing the objects of the meeting, and the restriction in the way of doing good which the institution suffered from the interference of the Legislature Council with a bill almost unless their efforts in behalf of the school. The "Chough and Crow," a chorus, and "The song of the Captive Greek Girl," by Mrs. James Robinson, were then sung. The Rev. G. J. Cain followed with a comprehensive statement of the good done by the institution,—how many it cared for, what it cost, how it was done, and how much they owed now; what they were to do for the benefit of the children; and after they were educated, clothed and cared for, what was done with them. At the present time the Directors owe twelve hundred dollars, and the object of this evening was to try and raise money to clear that debt off.

A beautifully rendered piece, "The Hunter's Song," by the Misses Sturdee, followed, and a stirring piano solo, by Miss Robertson. The Rev. Mr. Carey, in his usual animated style, made a short address, referring to the success of these institutions in other places.

The distribution of small cards then occupied a few minutes, with the appeal in verse and prose, "I agree to give the following amount for the Industrial School," or "I agree to give a certain amount yearly" to the school. One prominent and wealthy individual, who was in the room, and who had been invited to be in close proximity, was accosted by a bland and pertentious member of the medical fraternity with a card.

"Have a card?" said the doctor. "Rich man," responded the other. "Have a card?" "I'll be a little louder tone from the doctor. "Rich man," "Saw one." "Better take one," said the pertentious member. "Rich man," "Don't want any," shortly and curtly responded he again "from abroad over the sea."

Notwithstanding this demurrer the respectable sum of over seven hundred dollars was collected on the spot in about five minutes, by Messrs. John Magee, Spurr, T. H. Hall and Rev. Mr. Carey who handed around silver salvers and as the result received from the general company the above sum. After the financial feast came the flow of soul, and Mr. Boyd delivered a pointed address and read a humorous sermon of Father Proulx's. Owing to the crowded state of the room the majority of the speeches were unobtainable to those round the doors and corridors, Mr. Boyd's being better heard than any of the evening. A brief quartette was then sung by Miss Hammond, Mrs. Vernon, Dr. Holden and Mrs. Smalley.

Isaac Burpee Esq., Treasurer of the Society who has been accustomed to address the turbulent spirits of the Portland Town Council, then addressed this dignified audience. His remarks were expressive. He guaranteed, if fourteen others besides himself could be induced to join, to pay the expenses of the School for five years, after the public had erected a proper building. Addresses of Rev. Messrs. Armstrong and Pope, a solo from Mr. Lockhart, the very lively solo, "I'm a Merry Zingara," artistically sung by Mrs. Perley, and the quartette the "River of Time," finished the entertainment. At the close with a few appropriate expressions Mr. Burpee moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Oregan for his kindness in throwing open his spacious and elegant apartments to the public. After the audience had departed, the Directors entertained the singers at a collation. The whole affair was creditable, enjoyable and thoroughly successful, and satisfied all who attended it.

The City Healths.—The Halifax Press is urging the Health authorities to commence immediately the purification of the City. "It is very desirable," says the Chronicle, "on all grounds, that the City should be thoroughly cleaned at once, but especially because of the cholera which has broken out in the city." Similar remarks apply to St. John. The Board of Health should be up and doing.

Turf Notes.

The Boston Post says the pleasant weather of the last week has materially helped the trotting tracks in that vicinity, and they will soon be in order for use by the trainers and drivers.

From the New York papers we learn that trainers there are active in their preparations for the Spring campaign, which begins with the Fleetwood Park meeting on the 21st of May. The large number of trotters at present in the stables belonging to the Fleetwood Association indicates that the season will be a very busy one, and give the horsemen as much work as they can possibly attend to. The entries, both for Fleetwood and Prospect Park races, close at the same time, say Monday evening, May 9.

The Eastern turfmen propose to give W. H. Woodruff, the well known Boston trainer, who has just recovered from a serious illness, a benefit as soon as the season opens.

W. Frank Dot, formerly proprietor of the Mystic Park, has just died in Chicago. The greatest rival of his has lost all action in his headquarters from rheumatism, and it is feared that he will have to be destroyed. He is one of the most successful sires in this country, and his loss will be regretted by every turfman.

The victory of Monarchist in the Metairie Cup race at New Orleans on Monday will tend to open the eyes of turfmen as to his chances for the cup races at Jerome, Long Branch and Saratoga. If Bassett should win, it is thought Monarchist will not be far behind him.

The Turf, Field and Farm says the young stallion Starline, by his recent exhibitions of speed, has astonished Mr. Bonner that he sold on Wednesday last he went up to Orange county and made an investment in Starline blood. The dam of Starline is heavy with foal, by old Hambletonian, Starline's sire, Mr. Bonner agreed to pay Mr. Backman, her owner, five thousand dollars for the prospective colt, which, as will be seen, will be a full brother or sister to Starline. Mr. Bonner is to take the risk whether the colt comes alive or dead.

The following relative to leading New York stables and trainers will interest horsemen everywhere:—Dan and Ben Macoe have a foal in their charge named Dan by Dan, Yorkshire, a son of Palmer, W. H. Taylor, James Jurgensen (formerly Logan) and Judge Fullerton, which were highly appreciated. Mr. Gerow, in his closing address, invited all present, through the Worthy Chief, to join the Order.

Large Auction Sale.—A large wholesale stock of liquors, selected from the Government with reference to the younger members of the Church. The "Ram Fiend" and other pieces were given, and interspersed with vocal and instrumental music. Mrs. Diggle, Mrs. Morton, and Miss Nelson sang solos which were highly appreciated. Maera Foster's Task Factory on George's street is doing a good foreign trade. The proprietors have now on hand orders for 570 boxes of Shoe Nails for the Mexican and South American trade, and orders for twenty tons of Hungarian Shoe Nails for the Australian and New Zealand market. The former will be shipped via New York in bond; the latter via London. Foster and Son have reason to complain of the excessive freight charges by steamer hence to London, namely, 30s. per ton, measurement, while the rate from New York to London is only 20s. per ton actual weight. They estimate that it costs them fully double the New York rate to send to London direct from St. John. The steamer ought to modify their tariff rather than lose such freight as offers here.

The Factory is in full blast; its products are in as high favor as ever and business constantly increasing.

The Eastern turfmen propose to give W. H. Woodruff, the well known Boston trainer, who has just recovered from a serious illness, a benefit as soon as the season opens.

W. Frank Dot, formerly proprietor of the Mystic Park, has just died in Chicago. The greatest rival of his has lost all action in his headquarters from rheumatism, and it is feared that he will have to be destroyed. He is one of the most successful sires in this country, and his loss will be regretted by every turfman.

The victory of Monarchist in the Metairie Cup race at New Orleans on Monday will tend to open the eyes of turfmen as to his chances for the cup races at Jerome, Long Branch and Saratoga. If Bassett should win, it is thought Monarchist will not be far behind him.

The Turf, Field and Farm says the young stallion Starline, by his recent exhibitions of speed, has astonished Mr. Bonner that he sold on Wednesday last he went up to Orange county and made an investment in Starline blood. The dam of Starline is heavy with foal, by old Hambletonian, Starline's sire, Mr. Bonner agreed to pay Mr. Backman, her owner, five thousand dollars for the prospective colt, which, as will be seen, will be a full brother or sister to Starline. Mr. Bonner is to take the risk whether the colt comes alive or dead.

The following relative to leading New York stables and trainers will interest horsemen everywhere:—Dan and Ben Macoe have a foal in their charge named Dan by Dan, Yorkshire, a son of Palmer, W. H. Taylor, James Jurgensen (formerly Logan) and Judge Fullerton, which were highly appreciated. Mr. Gerow, in his closing address, invited all present, through the Worthy Chief, to join the Order.

Large Auction Sale.—A large wholesale stock of liquors, selected from the Government with reference to the younger members of the Church. The "Ram Fiend" and other pieces were given, and interspersed with vocal and instrumental music. Mrs. Diggle, Mrs. Morton, and Miss Nelson sang solos which were highly appreciated. Mr. Gerow, in his closing address, invited all present, through the Worthy Chief, to join the Order.
