KNITTING.

An old time kitchen, an open door, Sunshine lying across the floor ; A little maid, feet bare and brown, Cheeks like roses, a cotton gown, Rippling masses of shining hair,
And a childish forehead, smooth and fair.

The child is kuitting. The open door Wooes her, tempts her more and more. The sky is cloudless, the air is sweet, And sadly restless the bare brown feet. Still, as she wishes her task were done, She counts the rounds off, one by one.

But one round more-a childish tune Ripples out from the childish lips, While swift and swifter the finger-tips Play out and in, till I hear her say: "Twenty rounds! I'm going to play!"

Up to the hedge where the sweet-brier blows, hasing the butterflies, watching the bees, Wading in clover up to her knees, Mocking the bobolinks : oh, what fun It is to be free when the task is done!

Years and years have glided away. The child is a woman, and threads of gray One by one crept into her hair, And I see the prints of the feet of care. Yet I like to watch her. To-night she sits By her household fire, and as then she knits.

Swiftly the needles glance, and the thread Glides through her fingers, white and red, "Tis a baby's stocking. To and fro And in and out the needles go, She sings as she sang that day in June, But the low, soft strain is a nursery tune.
