The ukase goes far towards confirming the prophecy that Russia would raise the tariff on German products.

Sentences of Armenians Commuted.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 31. — The sentences of ten of the Armenian prisoners recently condemned to death at Angora for taking part in the seditious uprising at Marsovan and Cesarea have been commuted by the Sultan to penal servitude for eight years. The death sentence will be carried out in the case of five other prisoners, who, it is claimed, have been proved to be common murderers. The terms of 24 other prisoners who were sentenced to imprisonment have been reduced.

Everybody Sorry.

LONDON, July 31.—Prime Minister Gladstone, replying to a question asked by Mr. John Lloyd Wharton (Con.), said that doubtless it would be for the general convenience of the House and in the interest of good order, if an arrangement should be arrived at by means of which the supporters of the Government and the members of the Opposition might sit on opposite sides of the House.

Mr. William Hunter (Liberal) asked if Mr. Gladstone had taken into consideration the injury done the honor and dignity of the House and if the assaults committed by members on Thursday evening were to be allowed to pass without punishment. He also inquired what action would be taken if he moved the appointment of a committee to inquire into and report on the matter.

Mr. Gladstone replied that he would probably answer these questions tomorrow.

Mr. Henry Labouchere referred to a statement made in the Pall Mall Gazette by Mr. William Fisher, Conservative, with reference to his assault on Mr. John William Logan, Liberal member for South Leicestershire. He suggested that Mr. Logan be permitted to reply to Mr. Fisher's statement.

Speaker Peel said he thought it would conduce to a peaceful solution of the matter if both Mr. Fisher and Mr. Logan addressed the House.

Mr. Fisher amid cries of "Logan," "Logan," arose and expressed deep regret for the part he had taken in the affray.

Mr. Logan then emphatically denied that he had intended to assault anyone, and said he deeply regretted that he had been concerned in the affair.

Mr. Gladstone said that the explanations were satisfactory to him and he hoped the matter would be allowed to drop.

The Rt. Hon. A. J. Balfour and Mr. Justin McCarthy also expressed themselves as satisfied. Mr. McCarthy, however, protested against the ideat that the row was due to the Irish members.

Siam.

LONDON, July 31.—The Paris correspondent of the Central News says that it has learned from good authority that France demands as security from Siam that the terms of the ultimatum will be carried out, the temporary custody of Chantaboon, a town near the Gulf of Siam, also that Siam shall establish no military stations at certain named places near the frontier of Cambodia or within a certain distance of the Mekong River.

LONDON, July 31.—Replying in the House of Commons to-day to a question asked by Hon. George Curzon (Conservative) Sir Edward Grey said that he was unable to give exact information regarding the blockade of the Siamese coast and the occupation of several islands by the French. It was understood, however, that the occupation of the islands was only temporary. It did not appear that any British vessels had been seized by the French. The information at hand showed that two or three British vessels had been stopped under a misapprehension.

PARIS, July 31.—Owing to representations made to M. Develle, the Foreign Minister, by Lord Dufferin, the British ambassador, the question of a neutral zone between the French possessions in the Siamese Peninsula and British Burmah and the Shan States has been settled satisfactorily. It has been agreed that the French blockade of the Siamese coast shall be raised immediately.

LONDON, July 31.—A dispatch from Bangkok dated Monday, 7 p.m., says: "The uneasiness among the people here far from lessening is increasing. Seven more French gunboats have arrived at Koh-Si-Chang, making a total of thirteen now there. Negotiations are still going on, but the progress made is not reported. The intentions of the French are awaited with fear and apprehension. Rear Admiral Humann, commanding the French squadron has issued a second blockade notice to take effect three days from Saturday. He will order the British warships Pallas and Swift, now lying off Bangkok, to go outside the blockade limits. M. Pavie, the French Minister resident, has gone to Saigon, and Rear Admiral Humann is under direct orders from Paris. Unless the French Government interposes quickly an attack on Bangkok seems certain. The trading community is surprised that Humann is still allowed a free hand.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—The Post's Paris correspondent says: A lengthy interview on Monday morning between M. Develle and Lord Dufferin resulted in a friendly entente, permitting Siam to be maintained as a buffer between the British and the French possessions. France abandons the ceded parts to which England lays claim as having formed part of Burmah previous to Theebaw's overthrow. England agrees to the necessity of an accurate adjustment of the Siamese frontier in relation to Tonquin and Annam. The entente is so complete that Lord Dufferin will probably return to England on Tuesday or Wednesday.

THE FINANCIAL FLURRY

Not So Bad as Reports Have Made It Appear.

WASHINGTON, July 31.—Because of the conflicting statements regarding the number of failures of national banks, Controller Eckels has prepared a statement which will undoubtedly strengthen public confidence. He says: "Recent dispatches having appeared in the newspapers to the effect that since Jan. 1, 1893, '200 banks' have failed, instead of 200 having closed their doors, but 105 have gone into the hands of the Controller of the Currency. Fourteen of this number have already resumed business under favorable conditions and possessed of the confidence of the communities where located, and during the ensuing week it is expected several others will have complied with the requirements of the controller and reopened, while prior to Sept. 1 an equal number will resume."

The statement concludes: "The majority of those that recently failed are absolutely solvent, and only closed through an unwarranted lack of confidence in them, causing disastrous runs. Following is a resume: Number now in operation, 3,785; number failed since Jan. 1, 1893, 105; number reopened, 14; number in hands of receivers, 33; number in hands of bank examiners, with application to Controller for resumption, 58."

A run was precipitated on the New York banks Saturday by the announcement that 60 days' notice of withdrawals would be expected from depositors.

A. Daniels & Co., private bankers at Marion, Ia., have assigned.

The Springfield (Mo.) Savings Bank made an assignment Monday morning. The bank is solvent and will pay in full.

The First National Bank at Dallas, Ore., has closed its doors.

The Pendleton (Ore.) Savings Bank has temporarily suspended. Assets, $250,000; liabilities, $135,000.

The First National Bank of Kendalville, Ind., which suspended June 22, has been allowed to reopen.

THE BRIDEGROOM WAS NOT THERE.

Strange Conduct of Charles Freeman, a Windsor School Teacher.

WINDSOR, July 31.—A brief dispatch was given to the public some three weeks ago in regard to the postponement of a wedding that was to have taken place here between Miss Alice Treble, a popular teacher of this place, and Charles Freeman, formerly of Windsor, who has been teaching a school in Glencoe. The following details have since been learned:

The wedding had been arranged for July 11, and on the proceeding evening the prospective bride's brother, George Treble, a bookkeeper for Strong, Lee & Co., of Detroit, gave a bachelor's dinner at the Crawford House in honor of the groom to be, but that gentleman did not materialize, neither did he send any explanation of his absence. The festivities went on just the same, however, and those present, which included all the prominent young bachelors of Windsor, report having had an enjoyable time.

Freeman's absence from the dinner was the sole subject of conversation at the Treble residence after the dinner, and when next morning he was still absent the anxiety of Miss Treble and her relatives increased. Telegrams were sent to Glencoe and also to London asking for an explanation, but no answer came back. Surmisals as to the cause of the absence were numerous, but that was all the satisfaction to be derived. At the hour set for the wedding a large number of invited guests were present and the wedding gifts were not only numerous, but were said to be the best assortment ever seen at a local nuptial event. The arrangements for the wedding feast had also gone on uninterruptedly, in the hope that the groom would be on hand at the appointed hour. After waiting a long time for Freeman's arrival it was concluded that he was not coming, and the party dispersed, after extending sympathies to Miss Treble.

About a week after the day set for the wedding a letter was received by Miss Treble from Freeman, but it contained no explanation of his absence and no form of apology. It simply asked the young lady to go to London and they would be quietly married. The matter was discussed at some length and resulted in Miss Treble writing to Freeman asking why he had not come to Windsor at the appointed time. In answer to this he said he had been sick of fever and was not able to come to Windsor.

Miss Treble, accompanied by her mother and one of her brothers, then went to London and they not only found Freeman in apparently good health, but, when pushed for an explanation as to his outrageous conduct, he did considerable stammering in framing an excuse. It was decided at once that he had some other reason than any he advanced, and the Treble family returned to Windsor resolved to drop him entirely. The presents were all returned to the donors and to all inquirers for information the Trebles had but one answer: "Please do not ask us anything about it. We do not ask for any sympathy, but desire rather to let the whole affair pass as quietly as possible into oblivion."

It is now said that Freeman is really indisposed, but not through fever. When he recovers from his injuries it is possible he may find himself out of a situation, for his actions towards Miss Treble have been heralded to Glencoe, and the school board there is now considering the advisability of dismissing him. For many months prior to the date set for the wedding Freeman made it a practice of coming to Windsor every Saturday to spend Sunday with his affianced bride. On such occasions he would room with a friend and eat all his meals at the Treble residence.

Windsor is full of rumors as to the alleged cause of Freeman's actions, but nothing of a definite nature can be learned, either from the Trebles or any of his former associates in Windsor. Miss Treble is an applicant for her old position in the third ward school, and as her record as a teacher was unsurpassed, is is more than likely her successor, who had already been engaged, will be released.

POWDERLY AT CHAUTAUQUA.

LAKEVIEW, July 30.—A feature of one of the recent Chautauqua meetings was the address of Hon. Terrence V. Powderly, of Scranton, Pa., the noted labor leader, whose topic was "The Relations of Organized Labor to the Country." He said:

"Our organization is against free and indiscriminate immigration. Go to the mining districts and see twenty men living in one room, a hovel, sleeping on shelves on the walls, ignorant, almost uncivilized. We cannot build a free republic out of such material as this, and yet it is imported to supplant more intelligent labor because it is cheaper. American citizens are turned out of homes by these invading hordes. We are sending missionaries to China and elsewhere, but, oh, what a field there is for them at home! Better it is that they stay at home until they can represent a truly Christian country.

"Then we demand equal rights for both sexes. We believe woman should have the ballot, but we hope she will use it more intelligently than some men do.

"We believe in government ownership of railroads, but first we believe in government ownership of the telegraphs."

The speaker said some foolish person had reported that Powderly, the Pope and 60 ministers were in a conspiracy to subvert our free institutions. The only conspiracy he was in was with 60,000,000 of his countrymen to keep this country forever from all foreign domination or interference of every kind and character. He would sever his right arm before he would cripple the grand public school system which gave him the little education he had.

He will carry a fifteen-pound satchel and two suits of clothing, and will mail from each town he passes through a letter signed by the postmaster of the place. Furthermore, he agrees to make the trip without taking any money with him, depending entirely upon his wits and the novelty of his undertaking to secure him the necessary sustenance.

He Wanted a Choice.

Trivvet—Is this your advertisement in the paper for a lost dog?

Dicer—Yes.

Trivvet—Why, you never had a dog to lose.

Dicer—I know; but I want one now, and I think I can make a satisfactory selection from the animals the advertisement will bring in.

Perhaps It Is.

It is intimated that the phrase, "The wind blew through his whiskers," says the Boston Transcript, is a plagiarism on Chaucer, who says in "The Shipman," "With many a tempest had his beard been shaken."

Splendid Showing!

Results of the Collegiate Institute Entrance Examinations.

Successful Candidates Number 256 Out of 344 Writing.

London Beats Its Own Record—Miss Lillie Nelles in the Lead—Medals and Memorials.

London's public schools and London pupils have surpassed themselves.

Yesterday Inspector Carson received the long-looked-for returns of the Collegiate Institute entrance examinations from headquarters. The result is eminently gratifying to the educational authorities here. No less than 256 passed, by long odds the highest number London has ever turned out. In 1892 there were 186 successful candidates, which broke all previous records; so that the relative number this year is enormous. Nominally 334 tried the recent examinations; the percentage of passing candidates is therefore remarkable.

The total obtainable marks were 764 or 382 to pass. Miss Lillie Nelles, the clever daughter of Mr. H. E. Nelles, leads the entire list with 671 marks—an excellent showing. The names in the appended tables are in alphabetical order, boys first and girls second, with the marks made by each. The pupil making the highest marks in each of the public schools receives the Boyle memorial prize.

Trustee E. J. McRobert offered a gold and a silver medal to the two leading pupils in the Waterloo street and Princess avenue schools, and Trustee D. W. Blackwell made similar awards for the Lorne avenue and Rectory street schools. Waterloo street school captures both the former and Lorne avenue the latter. In Waterloo street school Lillie Nelles made 671, Aggie Halstead 558 and Mamie Hance 537. It is optional with Lillie Nelles to choose the gold medal or the Boyle memorial. If she takes the former Aggie Halstead may own the silver medal, and Mamie Hance the memorial prize. In the Lorne avenue school Eva Williams, with 586, Frank Cooper with 574 and Charles Anderson with 563, lead. In the same way the choice of gold medal or memorial prize rests with the foremost.

A certain time is allowed in which pupils may appeal to the authorities against decisions. Particulars may be seen in the school act or on application to the inspector.

The results are as follows:

The case was before John Richmond Saturday, and was adjourned for a few days.

ELGIN.

An inquest will be held in connection with the death of Frank Sherman, the section foreman at Yarmouth killed in the recent M. C. R. accident.

On Saturday afternoon Special Constable Hopkins at St. Thomas shadowed a man whom he suspected of giving liquor to Indians. The man after going east returned and went down Elgin street, where he was seen to hand a parcel to Henry Skyler, an Indian. The constable went up and found it to be a bottle of whisky. He then arrested the white man, Charles Wedge, of Shedden. At the police court he was fined $50 and costs or three months in jail.

HURON.

Capt. Moore, of the steamship City of Windsor, has brought intelligence regarding the portion of a ship recently cast ashore at Walkhouse, Manitoulin Island. Only one body was found in the wreck instead of three, as was reported. The wreck is a piece of the cabin roof about six feet square, painted olive green. On the body was a black coat and vest, black striped trousers, pair of overalls, yellow oilskin trousers and black coat, new rubber boots, pair gray cotton socks, gray underclothing. He was about 6 feet in height and between 20 and 25 years of age. The body was found about fourteen miles from Duck Island.

After she had gone a pocketbook, which appears to have rolled out of the coat pocket was missing. It contained two hospital tickets, worth about $100 to Mr. Rolls but of no value to anyone else, a check for $20 and about a dollar in change. The police were set on her track, but she had levanted.

WALKED ALL THE WAY.

Mrs. Lucille Rodney and Her Party Tramp from Galveston to Chicago.

CHICAGO, July 31.—Mrs. Lucille Rodney, accompanied by her husband, G. B. Rodney and W. W. Holliday, arrived in Chicago yesterday afternoon from Galveston, Texas, having walked the entire distance. The trip was made for a wager of $5,000 and sundry considerations.

A FORGER FOR $150,000.

The Crooked Transactions of a New York Bookbinder.

NEW YORK, July 31.—Judge Bookstaver, in the Court of Common Pleas, granted orders that the summons in two actions brought against James Grange, the bookbinder of Nos. 66 and 68 Duane street, who made an assignment several weeks ago and absconded, having withdrawn large sums of money and uttered forged paper to the amount of upward of $150,000, be served upon him by publication.

One suit is brought by Lawrence, Frazier & Co., bankers and brokers, to recover $8,439 on forged checks, notes and drafts issued by Grange. The other action is by Charles Fraser and Henry G. Marshall, to recover $7,066 on forged checks.

Several creditors have brought suits against Grange, one of them being to recover $97,000 on forged paper.

TWO DARING ROBBERIES.

Thieves Get Away with Over $5,000 Worth of Jewelry and Diamonds.

CHICAGO, July 31.—One of the most daring robberies ever attempted in the city was committed at the residence of Mrs. R. Ammon Saturday afternoon in broad daylight. The thieves, after binding and gagging Mrs. Ammon, succeeded in robbing her of her diamonds and a gold watch, the whole valued at $2,000, and made good their escape. Two well-dressed men were admitted to the house about 3 o'clock and one of them displayed a detective's badge and said that he was searching for a thief whom he suspected to be a friend of Mrs. Ammon's servant and to be hiding in the girl's room. While Mrs. Ammon was showing the supposed detectives upstairs one grasped her by the throat and putting a revolver to her throat threatened her with instant death if she made an outcry. At the same instant the other man thrust a handkerchief in her mouth, and taking a rope from his pocket bound her hands and feet. They then placed her on the bed and robbed her of her jewelry. She wore two diamond rings and her diamond eardrops, and they tore and lacerated the woman's ears in pulling them out. The thieves then ransacked the drawers of a dresser and found other jewelry and then took their departure, leaving Mrs. Ammon bound and gagged. The most startling theory in connection with the robbery is that the thieves were police officers.

May Seymour, the keeper of a disreputable house, was robbed of a casket containing $3,500 worth of diamonds the same night.

Had a Rattler Hooked in His Trousers.

ASHLAND, Pa., July 31.—A son of David McKelvey, residing at Rocktown, while running through the woods near his home, was attacked by a rattlesnake which he had trod upon. The snake fastened its fangs to the boy's pantaloons and was unable to withdraw them. The frightened boy started home at breakneck speed, dragging the snake with him, where it was killed. The lad was not hurt.

Nemitz Fights Back.

CHICAGO, July 31.—Henri Bertrand Nemitz intends to bring an action against Arnold Holinger, the Swiss consul, and M. Perrenaund, the Swiss commissioner-general at the World's Fair, for defamation of character. Nemitz claims he has suffered damages to the amount of $25,000 because Holinger and Perrenaund circulated reports that he had embezzled certain sums of money from the Swiss exhibitors. Consul Holinger procured the arrest of Nemitz in Toronto on the charge of larceny, and the warrant issued will form the basis of the allegations of the Swiss agent.

Liquor Dealers in Politics.

COLUMBUS, O., July 31.—The Ohio State League of Liquor Dealers will enter politics as an organization. This important announcement was made at the close of the quarterly session Friday. It is the purpose of the Liquor Dealers' Association to require all candidates to formally and firmly express their views upon certain questions affecting the liquor interests, and failing, they will be voted against.

It was given out that a resolution was adopted to the effect that the league will support only those candidates entertaining "liberal views." This is intended to embrace the repeal of the Adair law, which provides for a listing of habitual drunkards and makes it an offense to sell liquor to them. It covers also the repeal of the Sunday closing law. Both these laws the saloon interests consider fantastical, and they believe that they should be repealed.

An officer of the league makes the statement that the members have no objection to a proper restriction or a regulation that will put out of existence the low-class saloons, which cast approbrium upon the entire trade. He gave out the further information that the liquor interest would not oppose a modified Sunday law, or one giving communities local option. It is their argument that public sentiment in all the large cities favor open saloons on Sunday, and they do not want those members of the Legislature who represent villages and townships to dictate what the cities shall do. They do not object to a law prohibiting the sale of liquor to minors, but demand that the minor as well as the saloon-keeper be punished as attempting a fraud.

The league indorsed Senator Iden, of the Licking district, because he voted to suit the liquor interests in the last Assembly. The annual meeting will be held in this city Oct. 9.

—[BROWNING.

London, Tuesday, August 1.

IN ALL the recent discussions respecting the tribulations of Siam, the newspapers of the United States have for the most part sympathized with the English views.

IN POINT of local interest to-day, the palm must be given to the list of city school pupils who have successfully passed the high school entrance examination. It is a day of rejoicing for many young people. Deal tenderly with the unsuccessful.

THE cable says the career of the British Imperial Federation League is likely to be cut short owing to lack of funds and lack of interest. The only federation idea worth consideration is one that shall in some way organically unite Great Britain, the United States and Canada.

THE annual report of the Dominion Department of Marine and Fisheries, soon to be issued, shows that the total catch for last year was valued at $18,941,171—a decrease of $36,907 compared with the previous year. The total value of fish exported last year was $9,675,398. The value of the yield by provinces was as follows:

Ontario	$2,042,198
Quebec	2,236,732
Nova Scotia	6,340,724
New Brunswick	3,203,922
Manitoba and Territories	1,688,254
British Columbia	2,849,484
Prince Edward Island	1,179,857
Total	$18,941,171

How near Great Britain and France came to war is shown by a usually well-informed cable correspondent. When Lord Rosebery, British Foreign Minister, learned that a blockade of the Siamese coast had been declared without notifying England he sent through Lord Dufferin to the French Government a short and simple note to this effect: "Great Britain refuses to recognize the blockade begun on the coast of Siam. If English commerce in those waters is interfered with by France, such action will be construed as a deliberate attack upon the English flag." After dispatching this ultimatum the Gladstone Government began active preparations to insure free commerce to and from Bangkok. In other words, the British notified the French Government that they meant to have free trade, even if war were necessary to insure it. The French Government, having no real grounds for obstructing commerce, in view of Siam's conciliatory attitude, has no other reasonable option than to back down. Complete surrender was betokened in its announcement that the French blockading force would be instructed after Sunday to allow English vessels unimpeded intercourse with Siamese ports. Inasmuch as nine-tenths of the Siamese commerce is in British ships this concession amounted to abandoning the blockade. Siam meanwhile has announced that she gives up to France all the territory which the republic demands; but as the land in question is claimed either by Great Britain or by China, the practical effect of the surrender is to replace the weak kingdom by these much stronger nations, with the rulers of which France will now have to deal. It will in all probability turn out that France will in the end get no more than Siam conceded in the first reply to the French ultimatum. There are those who say that not only Great Britain and China but Germany backed up the view that France was altogether too greedy and exacting in her demands on the ruler of the land of the white elephant, and there can be no doubt that the verdict of civilized nations generally is also against the republic. If the nations of the earth were unselfish enough to throw their influence against any country that clearly sets out on an unwarranted grab game, there would be fewer wars and a freer field for the promotion of the principles of Christianity.

AN OBJECT LESSON IN ADVERTISING.

(New York Recorder.)

An object lesson in the art of advertising well worthy of general attention is afforded this week in the crowded stores of Bloomingdale Brothers. The dull season is about at its deadest point now, but this firm's establishment has presented just such scenes of bustling activity for several days past as are witnessed during the Christmas shopping carnival. And it is no secret that this remarkable rush of midsummer business has been the direct result of large newspaper advertising. There is a hint in this incident for all our business men. The dullness of midsummer trade is doubtless due in large measure to the superstition that liberal advertising in July and August does not pay. Advertising, generously and judiciously done, always pays. It is a fact worth noting in this relation that the largest drygoods advertiser in America does his heaviest advertising in the summer months.

A fruit dealer says that this is going to be a good year for peaches and grapes. One orchard on Catawba Island near Put-In-Bay, is going to produce 500,000 bushels of peaches. Similar reports come from all over Ohio. Grapes and plums are going to be equally plentiful. Four tons to the acre is an ordinary crop, but this year vineyards on Catawby Island will average from eight to ten tons to the acre.

British Gossip by Cable.

Though the Siam embroglio occupied the attention of diplomats and parliamentarians a great deal last week, the British public seemed far more interested in the row which took place in the House of Commons on Thursday night. The riot, in fact, overshadowed every other public topic. More significant than the brutal event itself are the keenness of the repentance of all concerned, and the disgust and shame which the whole country is expressing. Scarcely any national disgrace would be more deeply felt. No feature of British life has been an object of greater popular pride than the time-honored dignity and decorum of the mother of Parliaments. One of England's fondest boasts has been that such personal encounters as have disgraced the French Chamber and some American Legislatures were impossible in the great chamber of British gentlemen. It is the loss forever of this privilege of comparison which seems to be most keenly felt. There is a good deal of crimination between the participants in the fracas, but there is also wholesome confession and shame on the part of nearly all involved. But there seems to be a consensus of opinion that the intensity of the row was really set by Mr. Chamberlain when he applied the epithet of "Herod" to Gladstone, and brought forth the retort of "Judas" from O'Connor. The shame with which the affair is regarded by all the members of the House was illustrated Saturday afternoon. The terrace overlooking the Thames was filled as usual. Passengers on the passing steamboats shouted gibes to the honorable members. There were suggestions that Jem Smith should be engaged as chairman of the House, and that Marquis of Queensberry rules be enforced. Some jeering critics squared off in boxing attitudes. The effect was that in a few minutes the terrace was entirely deserted by the members. Several veteran reporters in the gallery of the House regarded the fight as the logical outcome of the steady deterioration in Parliamentary manners that has been going on for years. The courtly form of address, "My honorable and learned friend," is undergoing contraction in favor of simply "The honorable member." Mr. Gladstone is one of the few who adhere to the old style of address. Formerly the whips, on ascending the floor of the House, bowed three times to the chair. Now they straggle along, recognizing the Speaker or chairman of the committee with a familiar little nod. In fact, the old stateliness is evidently passing from the deportment of the House of Commons.

About Parliamentary Dress.

"The change in the matter of dress," writes a correspondent, "is especially marked. Saddening tweeds and slouch hats are now regarded as a matter of course, and a legislative epoch of white flannels and straw headgear is actually threatened. Only last night one of the smartest of the younger Tory members burst upon the House without a waistcoat, his coat being thrown open to reveal the blue shirt, with black silk cummerbund. The time was when such an apparition would have caused a sensation in the House, but nobody was disturbed by it last night."

While decadence in parliamentary manners may have been exhibited on recent occasions, it is absurd to suggest that a movement in favor of common-sense summer clothing suggests retrograde action. A visitor to the British House of Commons on a warm summer day could not but see that in sticking by heavy broadcloth suit and tall hat the average British parliamentarian sacrificed comfort to appearance.

Taken Down a Peg.

When the young Khedive of Egypt announced his intention to visit the Sultan—his nominal suzerain—a good many Englishmen scented danger to British interests, and they expressed an opinion that the journey ought to be prevented. The visit was allowed, however, and the Khedive has returned to Egypt with increased wisdom, and possibly with decreased ambition. The English in Egypt have always treated him as a monarch, but in Constantinople, to his deep mortification, he was regarded as a mere wali or governor, and his pretensions to royal rank were studiously ignored. It suited the Sultan, for the moment, to play the English game, and he did so without the slightest regard for the vain young vassal's feelings. There is danger in this, for the exasperated Khedive may seek consolation in French sympathy. There is some reason to believe that he actually sought it before leaving Constantinople, in a secret interview with the secretary of the French Embassy, and that French help was promised to him whenever an opportune moment should come for throwing off the hated English yoke. Presumably, therefore, if the Siamese crisis should become acute, troubles will concurrently arise in Egypt.

The Season Over,

The London season closed Saturday, but the exodus began soon after the royal wedding. Next week and for three months to come the town will be socially empty. It has been on the whole the gayest season the metropolis ever knew. The city was never so crowded, never so busy, and never so well entertained. It is interesting to note that amid a great surfeit of public amusements the experiment of a distinctly American theater introduced by Augustin Daly has been a complete success. Crowded houses have been the rule since the opening night, and the season has been extended another week. Then Miss Rehan and the rest of the company will go for a short vacation.

For Protestant Teachers.

Arthur Kube, of Berlin, who died a short time ago, bequeathed his entire fortune, amounting to between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 marks, to the city. This money, according to the terms of the bequest, is to be used to found a retreat for aged Protestant teachers, of both sexes, whose pensions are not sufficient to live in the manner to which they were accustomed during their teaching days.

New Flag for Alsace-Lorraine.

On the occasion of the German Emperor's visit to Alsace-Lorraine in September a new flag, designed to be used in place of the one hitherto belonging to Alsace-Lorraine, will be hoisted. The new flag will bear an imperial crown on a silver field, which will be encircled by a white band resting on red and black bands.

The Great Strike.

The great strike of English coal miners is doing all the harm expected from it, and more. More than 250,000 men are now out. Coal prices have risen, despite all statements concerning an over-stocked market, and many iron works and factories are running short of fuel and must stop operations soon unless the supply be increased. A few factory owners have already given notice that they must close their concerns within a week or two.

Fashion in Whiskers.

The London newspapers are discussing another threatened edict of the tyrant fashion. This time it is aimed at the masculine gender. It is said that a revival of Dundrearys, or mutton-chop whiskers, is about to be decreed. Fortunately very few London "Johnnies" have hirsuté capacity to supply the demand.

Want Denominational Teaching.

The Tories have discovered in the educational policy of the Government another excuse for wasting the time of the House of Commons. The education estimates will be introduced this week, and it is proposed to debate them at least two days. Mr. Acland, Minister of Education, is charged with deliberate intention to destroy voluntary or denominational schools and to replace them with "Godless" state schools. With this accusation as its basis the debate is likely to be an extremely bitter one, and the Tories will do their best to carry a vote of censure on the Government. They profess to expect the support of the Irish members, who mostly favor denominational education, but they will be disappointed.

To Increase the Army.

The Frankfurt Gazette remarks upon the rapidity with which the preparations to meet the extensions made necessary by the Army Bill are being made. The bill was passed by the Reichstag on July 15. On the 16th the War Office telegraphed, ordering an enlargement of the barracks at Frankfort, and on the 17th the work was begun.

Farewell Snaps.

The Prince and Princess of Wales, Prince and Princess Christian, and the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Saxe-Weimar, and numerous less titled sportsmen, have visited the Goodwood stables to inspect Ormonde before his voyage to America. Several visitors carried their cameras with them and took farewell snap shots at the great stallion.

The New Reichstag Analyzed.

An analysis of the German Reichstag reveals that only four Hebrews hold seats. These are Herred Singer, Wurm, Stadthagen and Schoenlank, all of whom are Socialists. Rather more than a quarter of the members are of noble birth. There is a preponderance of landowners and farmers, their number reaching 145, but there are no less than 110 lawyers in the new House. Among the members of the other professional divisions noted is a master chimney-sweep.

Still Missing.

The Independent Belge ridicules the story of the Pall Mall Gazette to the effect that its "special commissioner" has found the thief who, about fifteen years ago, stole from Thomas Agnew & Sons, Gainsborough's portrait of the Duchess of Devonshire. Adam Wirth, whom the Pall Mall designated as the thief, was merely hoaxing a man who called to talk with him as to his wife's fortune, says the Belgian journal, when he made the alleged confession. He laughed heartily when informed that the Pall Mall had taken him seriously.

Proposed Acadamy of Medicine.

A project is on foot for establishing a great academy of medicine in London by the amalgamation of the Royal College of Physicians, the Royal College of Surgeons, and other medical societies, but it is not probable that it will succeed. Each society suspects the others of the design to kill it, and so strong is the rivalry and jealousy among these grave and learned bodies that it has taken a month's cautious diplomacy to get together a small committee to consider the subject of the union.

It is announced that Mrs. Langtry will make a tour on this continent next season, beginning in New York in October. The beauty was almost forgotten.

That Tired Feeling

The marked benefit which people overcome by That Tired Feeling derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla, conclusively proves that this medicine "makes the weak strong." J. B. Emerton, a well known merchant of Auburn, Maine, says: "About five years ago I began to suffer with very severe pain in my Stomach, gradually growing worse. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, being convinced that I was troubled with Dyspepsia complicated with Liver and Kidney troubles. I improved at once and am certainly very much better and feel more like working.

THE TURF.

THE PACER

Times have changed at Fleetwood since "Alky" Bonner said, "No gentleman drives a pacer." The pacers of that day were almost all "weavers," but nowadays the straight-line stepper is so common that at a distance many a good judge is at a loss to distinguish the pace from the trot. And so it has come about that many a member of New York's driving club goes out to Fleetwood behind a fleet pacer in preference to a trotter. What is true of New York is true of Philadelphia, Boston, Buffalo and Chicago.—[New York Times.

ROBBED OF HIS GOLD.

An Aged Miser Loses His Hoard—Two Young Farmers Supposed to be the Thieves.

WOLCOTT, N. Y., July 31.—The sheriff at Lyons has in his custody two young farmers who are charged with robbing a miserly old farmer of about $7,000. Jacob Livingstone owns about 600 acres of valuable land at Caycat, a backwoods settlement in the northeastern part of this township. He also has about $12,000 in mortgages. His house is old and is tumbling about his ears. He slept on a bed of old and filthy rags, with a musty feather tick as a covering. He is 80 years old and is partially deaf and blind. All his life he has deprived himself of the necessities of life. He has only one son, who is the natural outcome of such surroundiags, dirty, ignorant and verdant. Livingstone kept his money in a wicker basket in a chest in a closet upstairs, having little or no confidence in banks. The door to this closet was boarded up, and he entered his treasure-house by a ladder from the outside.

On the evening of June 11 a man went to his door and asked permission to warm himself. The old man wondered at this, as the air outside was warm enough. But the stranger came in and sat down. The old man noticed a strange odor in the room, and soon afterward fell asleep. When he awoke he was in the dark and alone, and it was nearly daylight. He soon discovered that the door leading to his treasure room had been beaten down and his money stolen. Only useless papers and a $50 bill were left. Much of the money was in yellow shiners—tens and twenties. He reported his loss to the authorities at Red Creek, but the public knew nothing of it until yesterday.

The idea of the officers was to watch until some of the money was spent. Yesterday Fred W. McPherson, of Victory, Cayuga county, and John Earle, of Sterling, the same county, were arrested and brought to Wolcott for examination before Justice Kellogg. They are laboring men and became suddenly rich. In June Earle bought a farm, for which he paid $3,300 cash. McPherson bought gold watches for himself and wife and dressed up his family in extravagant style.

Livingstone said in court that he lost $1,500 by theft two years ago, which was never recovered, and now he expected to die in the alms-house. Should these young farmers be found guilty much of the property can be recovered, but the legal expenses are likely to eat it up.

MY DISTINGUISHED BROTHER.

Since my brother Mundanus has become rich and famous as the author and autocrat of the boot-jack trust, I have been very strongly tempted to stop working for myself and arrange with him for my support. It may be that I shall conclude that the habit of drudgery is too firmly fixed on me to be thrown off with impunity, so that perhaps I shall elect to go on working; but if I do, it will be in the nature of a self-indulgence, maintained for mere personal ease, against my conviction of what is just and right. For my argument is, and it is conceived on general and impersonal grounsd, and founded without prejudice on dispassionate observation, that a comfortable maintenance without work is a very moderate set-off to any ordinary man for the inconvenience and detriment of having an immoderately successful brother. The reason lies in the incorrigible tendency of society to measure brothers by the same standard. When they are little, society puts them back to back and observes which is the taller. When they are grown it piles their achievements or renown or incomes up side by side, and remarks which pile is bigger. Mr. Rockefeller's or Mr. Astor's income may run up into the millions, without making anyone think the worse of my capacity; but ever since it became known that Mundanus was getting $50,000 a year (largely payable in bootjack stock, as I happen to know, but the public doesn't) it has been imputed to me as a fault, and somewhat of a disgrace, that my in-takings were not so large. However conscientiously a man may have used the talents given him, and whatever honorable progress he may have made in life, if it be his misfortune to have a meteoric brother, who has sailed conspicuous where he has had to plod, and arrived glorious while he has sweated in patient aspiration, the slow-gaited man is bound to suffer as I do by disparaging comparison with his ocupod fellow of the same brood.—[From "The Point of View," in the August Scribner.

Crazed by Gas!

How Mrs. Smith Smashed Things in the Dentist's Parlors.

She Fought Like a Tiger and Jumped from a Window.

Six Men Had All They Could Do to Hold the Lady.

NEW YORK, July 31.—Mrs. Catharine Smith, of 166 Hope street, Williamsburg, went to the Brooklyn Dental Parlors at 710 Grand street, and when she left the place was a wreck. Mrs. Smith is ordinarily a quiet, orderly person, and has a husband and three children. During the last two weeks she has not been amiable, owing to three teeth on her lower jaw, which kept up a constant thumping night and day until she was worn out with pain and exhaustion. She tried all the remedies and blistered her face and gums to get better, but to no avail.

The dental parlors are kept by Drs. M. Lewkowicz and P. Schoenemann. Mrs. Smith presented herself to them with her head tied up in bandages, and both hands pressed against her face.

"Oh, doctor! I'm dying with the pain," she cried.

She walked up and down the rooms and Dr. Lewkowicz told her that he would try and arrange it that she could take the place of some of the other patients, who were all suffering from aches. She told Dr. Lewkowicz that she could not stand the pain of having the teeth pulled without laughing gas.

"Did you ever take gas before?" he asked.

"Oh, yes; I'm all right," she replied.

Then the doctor took her into a small hall room where the extracting is done and she jumped into the heavy chair. The bandage was taken off her head and Dr. Lewkowicz put a rubber crock in her mouth. She took a firm grip on it while the doctor located the three teeth.

"Be sure and give me enough gas," said Mrs. Smith. "I can't stand any more pain."

Dr. Schoenemann gave the gas, and Mrs. Smith did not have to take as much as is ordinarily given before she became unconscious. Dr. Lewkowicz picked up the forceps, got a good grip on one of the back teeth, and out it came. Dr. Schoenemann stood at the back of the chair ready to seize the woman if she should show signs of violence. The first manifestation made by an unruly patient usually is to throw the arms upward and backward, but Mrs. Smith did not follow the rules. She slid feet first out of the chair to the floor, and before anyone could get near her she began turning handsprings, alternately standing on her head and feet. Both the doctors, who are much larger than Mrs. Smith, got hold of her, but she knocked them down with well planted blows in the eyes and abdomen. Her eyes were open and kept moving from side to side. She ran up and down the parlors, upsetting everything that she touched and scattering wreck and ruin everywhere.

The doctors were reinforced by two lusty assistants, and the four men caught Mrs. Smith, but they might as well have seized a cannon ball. She rolled over the floor, carrying all hands with her for several minutes, and then the gas seemed to have lost its power and she became quiet. The men were exhausted, but she stood up and had a hearty laugh as she looked around the room.

The woman broke loose again in a moment, and with a wild whoop started again with the work of destruction. She seized a large water pitcher and hurled it with terrific force at one of the doctors. He dodged, and the pitcher broke against the wall. Then she kept the men dancing lively to keep out of the way of flying goblets and a washbowl. She kicked viciously at Dr. Lewkowicz and landed on the pewter gas tank. The gas escaped with a loud hissing and added to the confusion.

Most of the time she kept up a quiet schoolgirl giggle, but there was nothing girlish about her right arm.

When there was nothing more in the room to upset, Mrs. Smith flew to the window and ripped down the curtains. She raised the window, and before anyone could get near her she gave a wild whoop and jumped out. She landed on top of a piazza and rolled off into the yard. The whole distance is 27 feet. Her left arm struck a railing and was broken in two places. She lay on the ground apparently unconscious, when Charles Dellery, who keeps a store on the ground floor, rushed out.

Mrs. Smith still had the use of her right arm and she sent Dellery spinning across the yard with an uppercut on the jaw. Dellery was reinforced by his two clerks, the two doctors and two assistants, but Mrs. Smith was more than a match for the seven men until the gas died out. Then she fell in a heap from exhaustion. She was carried to the dental parlor.

"I don't blame anybody, doctor," she said. "The last time I took the gas it made me crazy. Are my teeth out?"

When the doctor told her there were two left, she screamed and fainted. An ambulance took her to St. Catherine's Hospital. The surgeon said he could not tell how badly she was hurt, as she was suffering from shock. The indications were that she was injured internally and was in a critical condition.

THOUGHT IT WAS A COMET.

Mrs. Huber's Oil Stove Was Afire and She Threw It Out of the Window.

WOODBRIDGE, N. J., July 31.—Mrs. Mary Huber, of Main street, was ironing this afternoon and using an oil stove. The oil blazed up. Mrs. Huber threw her ironing blanket over the stove and threw it out of the window. The oil saturated the blanket and flames trailed after it several feet.

John Weigand, the barber, was sitting in a window directly below Mrs. Huber's. He was sharpening a razor, and was startled when the blazing mass with its streaming tail of fire went past. Weigand yelled and bolted for the front door. He told all he met that a comet had fallen alongside his shop. The fire was put out with a few pails of water.

Mexican Chinese in Danger.

OAXACA, Mexico, July 31.—The Chinese living in Merida, capital of the State, have been removed to a remote and guarded quarter to protect them from the wrath of the whites, who have heard and believe that the Chinese have been killing and eating little children.

Among the pains and aches cured with marvelous rapidity with Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil is earache. The young are especially subject to it, and the desirability of this Oil as a family remedy is enhanced by the fact that it is admirably adapted not only to the above ailment, but also to the hurts, disorders of the bowels, and affections of the throat, to which the young are specially subject.

Having just opened a case of Heptonette Waterproofs, we think it opportune to give a little talk on this cloth—to explain what it is and wherein it differs from other waterproof materials. First, it is guaranteed perfectly porous yet rain-repellant. Second it is an odorless cloth. Third, it contains no rubber. These three features will be appreciated by the ladies, who are doubtless familiar with the old-time air-tight rubber garment and its nauseating aroma. Besides, it is claimed for these cloaks that they are the better of being thoroughly well dried before a fire after being out in the rain. Heat spoils the old proof but improves the Heptonnette garments.

The goods to hand are the latest fall styles. They are all made with detachable capes this season and are very useful and stylish for traveling purposes.

The triple cape is a feature for the coming season. The leading colors are black, navy blue and check tweeds. The "Military" Cape will also be very stylish next season. They are quite new, of rough-finished cloth, with pleated collar, double and triple silk lined.

Having the sole agency for London, we carry a great variety. The genuine Heptonette cannot be procured elsewhere in the city. Every garment is stamped "Heptonette." See that the stamp is there.

TOWED BY AN ICEBERG.

How Capt. Chase Utilized the Drifting Ice.

[From the Philadelphia Record.]

The ingenuity of Capt. Chase, of the bark E. O. Clark, which arrived here yesterday from Greenland, has earned for him the proud distinction of being the first sailing master to make his vessel fast to an iceberg and allow it to pull him toward his destination without a sail being set.

The bark sailed from Ivigtut, a port on the southwest coast of Greenland, on June 21, for Philadelphia. She was loaded with a cargo of cryolite. She is one of the seven vessels that are regularly engaged in carrying that little-known mineral from the far north. For three days after leaving Ivigtut she was surrounded on all sides by monster icebergs, but they soon became lost to sight in a dense fog, and it was then that the skill of a master mariner was brought into play and thoroughly tested. Capt. Chase and his crew of ten men were kept constantly on the alert, and the vessel beat to and fro until the fog lifted. Then the most dangerous ice was seen well astern, and the ship was out of immediate danger.

For six days afterward huge bergs were in sight, but far enough away to preclude the possibility of collision. Drift ice was sighted on June 30, having been driven off shore by a northeast wind. It was drifting almost in the direct course which the Clark was endeavoring to pursue. The vessel was soon on the outer edge of an immense field of drift ice, which extended in a northeasterly direction as far as the eye could reach, with an occasional berg reaching high into the air. On the other side was the clear water.

The Clark was soon caught in the drift, and was so firmly held in the ice that she was carried many miles on her course, a line having been made fast to one of the nearest bergs to keep her steady. For several days all hands enjoyed the novel experience of being towed by an iceberg, but finally the wind began to change the direction of the drift. Then the rope was cut, the sails were set, and the vessel soon freed herself, and in a few days was clear of the Arctic current. The rest of the long journey was devoid of special interest.

A VENTURESOME VIKING

Intends to Cross the Atlantic Next Month in a Skiff.

NEW YORK, July 31.—Chris Paulsen came from the land of the vikings, and after a tempestuous career upon the seas settled in Rahway. In the quiet of his barnyard he is now completing a 16-foot skiff, in which, all going well, he will cross the Atlantic to visit his parents in Norway.

Paulsen is 36 years old, and inured to the hardships of sailor life. When he was 13 years old he ran away from home and stowed himself away on an English steamer bound for America. Here he learned the trade of ship's carpenter. After mastering his trade he shipped as first mate on a West Indies fruiter, and for fourteen years he followed the sea. Then he grew weary of the water and settled down to lead a more peaceful life.

When the Viking arrived here Paulsen saw her, talked with her crew, and was seized with the idea of crossing the ocean in a still smaller boat. He at once began to prepare his plans, and so well did he carry them out that before this week is ended his boat will be launched. Her dimensions are: Length over all, 16 feet; beam, 5 feet; depth 3 feet 6 inches; keel, 10 feet.

She will be rigged with a low freeboard and with a watertight compartment in each end. Rubber tubes will be run along the gunwales to add to her buoyancy. She will be sloop-rigged, the mainsail being 12 by 12 feet, with a jib 6 by 10 feet. She will be sharp at both ends.

Paulsen expects to start on Aug. 20. He does not intend to take provisions enough for the whole trip, as he will follow the course of the transatlantic liners and expects to obtain fresh provisions from time to time. Two tanks holding 100 gallons of water will be stowed away, one in each end. His only food will be hard-tack. Paulsen expects to make the Shetland Islands in 36 days.

RELIGION AND INDUSTRY.

What may prove a profitable movement has been initiated at Chautauqua by the formation of the American Institute of Christian Sociology, which will endeavor to apply Christian principles to economic and social difficulties. It may appear satire on society nominally Christian to organize such an institution. It may be even asked what the church is doing. Some one may say: "If the church is not effectively applying the principles of the Christian religion to the settlement of social troubles, where will you find the zeal and intelligence to make the application?"

Notwithstanding all that is said about the practical duties of the church, we believe that they compromise a somewhat limited sphere. Unfashionable as it may be to say it, the first care of the church should be to save souls. In order to accomplish this, it must indeed engage in subordinate tasks; but it cannot undertake to manage all the enterprises and answer all the questions of the world. It has no particular relation to business, though needing the aid of business men; nor to exploration, though often availing itself of its labors; nor to science save to recognize what science has proved; nor to art and letters except by supplying ideals and inspirations; nor to social problems except in the exercise of that humble charity enjoined by the founder of Christianity. What is called the teaching office of the church is interpreted with more or less liberty; but even when it is made to comprehend all education, it is not supposed to deal directly with all the questions that arise in the development of society. The churches must deal particularly with that which is established, accepted, about which their members are presumed to be in agreement; they also deal with general truths and ideas. The church is for all time, and cannot wisely identify itself with parties and other associations which are for a day.

Yet the future Christianity depends on the success with which it will adjust itself to the developments of society, meet coming needs and answer questions which relate to duty and happiness. The principles of Christianity must be applied to the wants of men and to the problems agitating the economic world. And, though the church itself cannot take up these matters in a particular way, there should be Christian men who will treat them individually in the Christian spirit. The church should not be responsible for their mistakes; but it should commend the purpose of their labors. When men propose economic theories and schemes, they will not at once agree as to which are the more conformable with the teachings of Christ; but it would be of prodigious benefit to society to see many men experimenting in the Christian spirit and trying to decide what forms of industrial enterprise best exemplify the idea of human brotherhood. It will be admitted that this idea has not thoroughly permeated industrial life; it will even be admitted that much of the industrial and commercial activity going on is absolutely opposed to the idea that men are brothers.

The American Institute of Christian Sociology will propose the law of Christ as a general rule for mercantile and industrial life; will deny the error that law has somewhat been outgrown in the progress of the race; will attempt to show how it solves many problems, especially such as concern disputes of labor and capital; will impress it upon employes and labor unions; will seek to interest the wealthy; will examine the different plans proposed by benevolent employers for the good of those they employ; and will undertake a great deal of work for which educated men are fitted.

SOMETHING OF A MYSTERY.

A Young Man Disappears From a St Catharines Boarding House.

ST. CATHARINES, July 31.—A young man whose name was not known left his boarding house in this city on July 3, and has not been heard of since. The boarding house is kept by Mrs. E. A. Weaver, at No. 7 Court street, and the young man in question came to this city about six weeks ago and engaged board with Mrs. Weaver. He was apparently 25 years of age, and was of medium build and height. His hair was dark brown and he wore a light moustache. Nothing more is known about him except that he canvassed for paints and oils. On the afternoon of July 3 the young man took his two valises and a box of paints and left the house. He told one of the boarders that he was going to the Falls. As he left his trunk unlocked in his room, it is presumed that he intended to return shortly. Nothing further being heard of him, Mrs. Weaver became suspicious and informed the police. An examination of his trunk was made by the chief, when it was found that he came from Watford, Ont., and his name is Jesse R. Neff. Among the articles found in his trunk was a note for $900, payable in 24 months from December, 1890, and on which $100 has been paid. He had a rather sullen and downcast disposition and seldom spoke, except when spoken to. This accounts for the fact that no one had the opportunity to learn his name. From all appearances he was not a drinking man. He was very regular in his habits, and kept everything in apple-pie order about his room. He stated to Mrs. Weaver at one time that he wanted his sister to come here to work at the dressmaking business, and spoke of engaging board for her.

Effective Music.

The daughter of a country rector taught the choir boys a new tune at a Monday evening's practice, to be sung on the following Sunday. Sunday morning came. "Well, Johnny," said Miss X., "I hope you haven't forgotten the new tune, for we depend much on you." "Naw, mum, not a bit. Why, I've been a-skeering the crows with it all week."

Denied the Impeachment.

"Oh Mr. Dinwiddle," said the high school girl, "have you ever known what it is to grope in the darkness for the unfindable, to put forth your foot to step upon the unfathomable?"

"Why, no," replied the young man, "I can't say that I have—at least not since I signed the temperance pledge."

THE HERMIT BUSINESS.

A hermit met an angel in the way.
He said he lived only to beg and pray;
A cold cave was his lone abiding place;
He saw few men, never a woman's face.
The angel said, "You look like what you say,
It is poor living and it does not pay;
He who lives holy, noble work will do;
He who loves God loves man and woman, too.'

—There is a barn in dispute in Dorchester township. It is claimed by Thos. and David McMillan and by Joshua Andrews. On July 25 the first named was arrested on a charge of assaulting Mr. Andrews. The case was set for trial on Aug. 1 and bail accepted. On Saturday night Constable Ward went out and arrested both Thomas and David again on complaint of Mr. Andrews, the charge this time being forcible entrance into the disputed barn, which Andrews had locked. This case will also be heard on Aug. 1.

Fun for the Children.

Through the kindness of the street railway company and the Humane Society about 100 children residing in the city were given a free ride in the open cars. The trip included most of company's lines, and from the happy faces and the continued cheers of the little ones the excursion was evidently enjoyed. At Queen's Park the merry-go-round was kept busy for some time. Superintendent Smith had charge of the children, and to the company and the society the young folks are very grateful.

Strathroy Notes.

Sunday evening was an ideal night—bright and still. But about midnight the stillness was rudely broken by the alarm bell, and the brightness was heightened by the glare of fire. People rushed from every quarter, expecting a serious conflagration, and were certainly relieved to find that the blaze came from a stable in the rear of the Boughart property, the hotel on which was burned several months ago. The fire, however, caught on the roof of the adjoining rake factory, which was saved by the exertions of the firemen and citizens. The barn contained a buggy and some articles of furniture, all of which were destroyed. The factory was damaged to the amount of $200.

The canning factory is in the rush of a season that will be far in advance of last year.

Kicked in the Face by a Horse.

Fred, the 12-year-old son of Ald. Parnell, met with a sad accident yesterday afternoon. How it happened is not known, the boy was found in the yard attached to his father's bakery wagon, lying unconscious on the ground, having been kicked in the face by a horse. After he had partially regained his senses he staggered to the door of the bake shop and was seen by one of the men. The lad was hastily taken home and Dr. Ferguson summoned. The physician, however, could give no decided opinion regarding the possible result of the boy's injuries. His face was terribly lacerated, and a pool of blood was found where he had been lying. At a late hour in the evening he remained unconscious. The lad is the pride of his parents, who are much distressed over the sad accident.

Sudden Death.

Intelligence reached London last night of the sudden death of Mr. Wm. Walker, the well-known London township stock raiser. Deceased, who was best known to the public as a breeder of pure-bred sheep, was at Quebec city, on his way home from England, where he had purchased a number of choice animals for his flock, when he dropped dead of heart disease. Mr. Walker was 56 years of age. He came with his parents from Cumberland, Eng., when he was in his fourth year, and had lived on the fine farm belonging to the family ever since. He leaves a widow and family of five, viz., Thos. Graham, who has for years been actively associated with him in the management of his business; Mrs. Finlay Marshall, Lobo, and Annie, Minnie and Clara, at home. Much sympathy is extended to the bereaved ones by a wide circle of friends. The funeral takes place from the late residence of deceased, near Ilderton, on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

THE OPEN FORUM.

To the Editor of the ADVERTISER:

I see that considerable friction has been developed between the City Council and the street railway people. Now, to my mind, this is both unfortunate and unnecessary. The relationship between them is a purely business one, and sentiment or personal feeling has no place in the transaction. The question is simply this: The council has an electrical franchise to dispose of. Let them state its value and the conditions under which it will be granted and let the existing company or any other company accept it or not as they choose. The aldermen should not have any trouble in arriving at the value of the franchise. Let them get the Hamilton or Ottawa agreement, either of which would form a basis from which an estimate could easily be made. Take for instance the city of Hamilton, which, though containing a few thousand more population, is of little more value to a street railway company than is the city of London. Yet the Hamilton street railway pays to the corporation the sum of $400 per mile for single, and $800 per mile for double track per annum. In addition to this they pay 6 per cent. on all receipts up to $125,000, and an increased percentage on the earnings over that amount. Now it is only a question of a few years when the population of London will equal, if not exceed, that of Hamilton, and as its franchise only extends for twenty years, surely our franchise for 33 years, thus making it coterminous with the franchise of the present company is worth as much as that of Hamilton, and any offer of a less sum should not be entertained by the aldermen. They should not forget the fact that every year adds to the value of the franchise, thus five years from now, with the increase in population and the improvements in electricity, it will probably sell for 25 per cent. more than at present. Don't be in a hurry to give the city away. We can stand the horses and mules a while longer, and we still have the use of our legs. Yours, TAXPAYER.

THREE IN ONE.

Roman Catholics, Methodists and Baptists, Worship in the Same Church.

LONG ISLAND, L. I., July 31.—Three denominations worshiped in the East Avenue Baptist Church in Long Island city yesterday—the Roman Catholic, the Methodist and the Baptist. The last was the only one of the three that was in its regular church. The burned-out St. Mary's Roman Catholic congregation held services in the Baptist Church. A Methodist flock, owing to the absence of its pastor, joined with the Baptists and Father McGuire celebrated mass.

TO ENTER SARNIA.

Rumors of the C. P. R. Branching to Sarnia—Another Tunnel Talked Of.

SARNIA, July 31.—Rumors of a railway deal of considerable magnitude have become public property.

It has been a matter of general belief for years past that the Canadian Pacific Railway has had its eyes on this town as an objective point and was only waiting for a favorable opportunity to extend its line to Sarnia. It begins to look now as if the big corporation was about to take decisive steps to buy a right of way. On inquiry it has been ascertained that negotiations are on foot to have the charter of the Lambton Southern Railway transferred to the C. P. R. This would give the latter road a direct route through the townships of Brooke and Enniskillen, including Petrolea and the oil territory, to Sarnia.

Citizens of the town who have been spoken to express themselves as delighted with the prospect, and the general sentiment seems to be in favor of giving the C. P. R. every encouragement. Should the railway come here it would mean the construction of another tunnel and the expenditure of vast sums of money within the corporation. Further developments will be anxiously awaited.

ODDS AND ENDS.

An English tourist in Ireland was shown the sights by a guide, and among the places named were the "Devil's Gap" and the "Devil's Bowl." "What an amount of land the devil possesses in Ireland," said the tourist; "he must be an important personage in this country." "Your honor's right," was the prompt reply; "but like the rest of the landlords he's an absentee."

Drowning at Sarnia.

SARNIA, July 30.—This morning while a number of young men were bathing off Lawrence's lumber dock Edward Roberts was carried down by the current, which is very swift at this point, and drowned. The body has not been recovered. Deceased was about 19 years of age and was a son of John Roberts, of the firm of Crawford & Roberts, carpenters and contractors, of this town.

A remedy for every ache and pain, and science, through ceaseless activity and experiment, is constantly wresting the secrets of her domain. A new and wonderful discovery has recently been made, by means of which tens of thousands will be freed from pain. Nerviline, or nerve pain cure, represents in very concentrated form the most potent pain-relieving substitutes known to medical science, and strange to say, it is composed of substances solely vegetable in origin. Polson's Nerviline is the most prompt, certain and pleasant pain remedy in the world. Try Nerviline for toothache, neuralgia, cramps, etc., always safe and efficient.

ASKS HEAVY DAMAGES.

A Wealthy Colored Man Sues the Pullman Company for $100,000.

BALTIMORE, July 31.—Col. Nathan Toomer, one of the wealthiest colored men living in the South, has instituted suit for $100,000 against the Pullman Palace Car Company. The suit promises to be most interesting. Nathan Toomer is nearly white, and is one of the largest land owners in Augusta, Ga. He has represented his district in the Legislature and is a prominent leader of the negroes of the South. An attempt was made a few weeks ago to kidnap his 14-year-old daughter, who had been involved in a love affair and has been sent here to St. Francis Institute, and for which three men are under indictment.

Col. Toomer and his wife were present during the proceedings. Mrs. Toomer became ill during the hearing of the case. Her husband on June 5 engaged a section in a sleeper from Baltimore to Augusta. At Columbia, the car was switched off and Col. Toomer claims was allowed to remain for 24 hours in the freight yard, exposed to the scorching sun and the noise made by the constantly passing engines. Mrs. Toomer became very much excited and a physician was called in. He accompanied her to Augusta, where she died Sunday morning, two days after the Columbia detention. It is claimed in the bill that Mr. Toomer and his wife having purchased a ticket from Baltimore to Augusta were entitled to a thorough trip without any delay. Having been delayed it is claimed that the Pullman Company is responsible.

A DRUNKEN HONEYMOON!

The Groom Asks the Police to Arrest Him—Friends Watch the Bride.

NEW YORK, July 31.—A wild-eyed, red-headed man, about 30 years of age, rushed into the Charles street police station yesterday afternoon and told the sergeant at the desk that he was Dr. William B. Shepherd, of 17 Abingdon Square. He said that he was married on Saturday last, and that he had been drinking ever since.

"I have spent $175 in bottled beer," he said, "and by wife and I have been in an awful condition since our marriage. She is now home, being watched by two friends. As for me, it is utterly impossible for me to get sober, and I want you to commit me to the island for a few days."

A policeman escorted the man to the Jefferson Market Police Court. Justice Hogan sent the man into the prison, indorsing the commitment paper: "Until he gets perfectly sober."

HIS REPENTANCE.

Sara, behind the blind, could see them, but they could not see her. Neal stood a moment at the door, and then looked down over the railings of the area.

"Are the ladies out?" he asked.

"Yes," came back for an answer in Dorcas's voice. The woman evidently did not know that Miss Sara had not accompanied her mistress.

"You can come in then," Sara distinctly heard Neal say to the lady—if lady she was. And he opened the door with his latch-key.

They stood talking in the passage for some little time in an undertone, and then Neal took her into the back room. It opened to the dining-room with folding doors; but the doors were always kept closed; and indeed the back room was chiefly used as Neal's pantry. Sara, who at first had been doubtful whether it might not be a visitor to herself, came to the conclusion that it was only a visitor to Neal, and she resumed her reading.

But the voices grew rather louder. And the words "Captain Davenal" caused her to look up with a start. No wonder she should start at that name, remembering the past. A sudden fear came over her that something or other connected with the past was again threatening her brother.

She could hear no more, for the voices dropped again to their covert tone. Another minute and Neal was conducting the stranger to the front door.

"We shall hear more by the next mail; but there's not the sightest doubt he's married," Sara heard him say as he passed the room. "The lady is a heiress; a Miss Reid."

"Well," cried the other voice, "I'll have satisfaction. I'll have it somehow. I don't care what punishment it brings him to, I'll have it."

The visitor went away. Neal closed the street door upon her and turned to behold his young mistress at that of the dining-room, a scared look in her eyes, a white shade upon her face.

"What has that young"—Sara hesitated between the words person and lady, but chose the former—"person to do with Captain Davenal?"

She had spoken without reflection in her impulse; in her renewed fear, which she had deemed buried with the past. Neal for once in his life was confounded. He did not speak immediately; he was probably striving to recall what had been said, inconvenient for her to hear.

"Tell me at once, Neal; I insist on your speaking," she reiterated, attributing his hesitation to unwillingness to speak. "Indeed it is better that I should know it. What was she saying about my brother?"

That alarm of some nature had been aroused within her, that she was painfully anxious, and that also the alarm and anxiety were connected with Captain Davenal, Neal could not fail to read. But his speech was certainly less ready than usual, for he still kept silence.

"I heard you tell her that Captain Davenal was married; that further news would be in by the next mail," pursued Sara, growing perturbed with every moment. "What was it to her? Who is she? For what purpose did she come here? Neal! can't you answer me?"—and her voice grew quite with its alarm and pain.

"Miss Sara—if I hesitated to answer, it is that I do not like to speak," he said at length. "I tell the young woman she must be mistaken in what she says—that it can't be. But she won't hear me."

"What is it that she says?". Have you seen her before to-day?"

"She has been here once or twice before. But for the understanding that you and my mistress were out, I should not have allowed her to come in this time. I am very sorry that it should have happened, miss."

"But what is it?" returned Sara, nearly wild with suspense. "What has she come for?"

"She has come to ask questions about Captain Davenal."

"But what about him? What is he to her?"

Neal coughed he took his handsome silk handkerchief—he always used very handsome ones—and wiped his mouth. Sara trembled. His manner was unpleasantly mysterious, and it seemed as if she were on the verge of hearing something terrible.

"Does she know my brother?"

She says she does. Miss Sara I would have given a great deal to prevent this happening to-day. It will only worry you, and I dare say I could still have put her off and kept her quiet."

"Neal, tell me the worst," cried, her voice and her heart alike growing faint. "I must hear it now."

"Well, Miss Sara, she says she is the wife of Captain Davenal."

"She—says—she—is—the—wife—of—Captain Davenal!"

The words were echoed slowly in very astonishment, a pause between each. Vague as her fears had been, they had not touched on this.

"It is what she says, Miss Sara. I told her it must be one of two things—either that she was deceiving me in saying it, or that she was herself deceived. But she insists upon it that she is his true and lawful wife; that she was married to him nearly twelve months before he went abroad. She says my late master, Dr. Davenal, knew of it."

Sara stared at Neal in a sort of helpless manner. Never for a moment did it occur to her to question the truth; her mind accepted it; a terrible calamity; worse, it seemed in this moment, than all that had gone before.

"She came here this morning in consequence of hearing of the Captain's marriage to Miss Reid. I acknowledged that news had come home to that effect; it would have been quite useless, you see, Miss Sara, to deny what's known publically."

"Neal! Neal! you will not mention this?" came the feverish wish, the first uttered in her bewilderment. "You will guard it faithfully. We—I—some one must see what can be done."

"You may entirely depend on me, Miss Sara," replied Neal, speaking more impressive than was his wont—Neal the impassive. "Of course, miss, the chief thing will be to guard against exposure."

Sara turned into the dining-room, mind and body alike sinking. A sick, faint fear came over her that this must be the secret connected with her brother which had been disclosed that long past night, to Dr. Davenal. Another moment, and she did not see how this could be. There would have been no crime in it; Captain Davenal was not married then. Her brain was in a chaos of perplexity, her mind agitated with doubt. If this young woman—lady—whatever she might be, was Edward's wife, how could he have married Rosa Reid? Was it the money tempted him? Calm, self-controlled though she was usually, a groan of despair broke from her lips.

Neal in the back room thought she called him, and came round to the dining-room door. She looked up as he stood there, and stared at him, just as though she had forgotten who he was.

"Did you call, Miss Sara?"

"I—I—I did not call. Neal—do you know—what the name is?—I—mean—what it was?"

"Yes, miss, I know so much as that—Catherine Wentworth."

He retired, leaving Sara alone. Almost a rebellious thought was stealing over her—was she never to be at rest? Not much at rest just then certainly; for Mrs. Cray had driven to the door and was asking for her.

Sara tied her bonnet on mechanically and went out. Mrs. Cray was seated in a fly. She would not alight then, she said; she had a great deal to do. Sara stepped in. Mrs. Cray was an imperious-looking woman, fair and pale, with a handsome face. Sara thought her over-dressed and very fidgety. They were not much acquainted at Hallingham.

"I have nothing to wear," she said to Sara. "I want a host of things. A bonnet first. Mrs. Mark Cray has given me the address of a superior dressmaker. She is a little selfish, is she not?"

"Who is?" cried Sara in answer to the sentence which came out rather abruptly after the rest.

"Mrs. Mark Cray. To confess to you the truth, I think she might have lent me the carriage this morning, instead of sending me out in a hired fly, and keeping the carriage for herself and the girls. It seems to be the way of the world now-a-days; the young before the old. She is Mark's wife, and I am only his mother."

At Death's Door.—Dyspepsia Conquered.—A Great Medical Triumph. GENTLEMEN,—My medical adviser and others told me I could not possibly live, when I commenced the use of Northrop & Lyman's VEGETABLE DISCOVERY for Dyspepsia. My case was one of the worst of its kind. For three years I could not eat meat and my weight decreased from 219 to 119 pounds. All the food I took for thirteen months previous to taking the VEGETABLE DISCOVERY consisted of milk. I am now entirely cured and have regained my usual weight, can eat anything with a keen relish and feel like a new man. I have sold over 30 dozen VEGETABLE DISCOVERY since it cured me, as I am well-known, and people in this section know how low I was, and thought I could not possibly be cured. They are eager to try this grand medicine. It certainly saved my life, as I never expected to recover when I first commenced using it. I am not exaggerating anything, but feel glad to be able to contribute this testimonial and trust it may be the means of convincing others of its merit as a certain cure for Dyspepsia. JEAN VALCOURT,

MAY RIVAL THE BORDEN CASE.

A Young Girl To Be Tried for Murdering Her Father and Sister.

ST. LOUIS, July 31.—The coroner has decided that Maud McKibben, aged 17 years, was responsible for the death by poisoning of her father and sister, and she will be arrested. The verdict was reached after a report by the city chemist to the effect that he had found in the viscera of the dead persons and in the food partaken by them traces of arsenic, copper and other ingredients of which paris green is compounded.

The case is one of deep mystery, and in motive, design and trial will surpass the famous Borden case. On June 21 last the McKibben family, with the exception of Mrs. McKibben, who has been separated from her husband for several years, partook of a family dinner at the residence of Mrs. Charles Stewart, a married daughter. Maud McKibben assisted in preparing the meal and was the only member of the party who did not eat dinner. Her refusal was attributed to a severe headache. Soon after the meal the participants became violently ill. The father died at St. Luke's Hospital two days later, and Mrs. Stewart died on June 25.

It was learned that Maud had been unsuccessful in an attempt to procure paris green from a neighboring drug store, and this fact, together with the knowledge that she was jealous of her sisters and had made threats of revenge for being arrested on suspicion of stealing money from her father, led to her arrest. At the preliminary examination Maud asserted her innocence and was released pending the coroner's verdict.

Schoolmates Married While on a Visit to the World's Fair.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., July 31.—It has just been learned that Clarence Dean and Miss Grace Cora Wright, two young schoolmates of this city, were married on July 18 at Petosca, Mich. About June 1 Mrs. Dean and her son started for the World's Fair, and Miss Wright accompanied them on their way as far as Toledo, where she left them and joined her uncle at Mount Pleasant, Mich. Later Miss Dean visited the fair, where she again met young Dean.

The couple went to Petosca and were married without the knowledge of any of their relatives. Miss Wright recently passed her 17th birthday and has attended the Clinton Liberal Institute the past year. Her husband is about 16. The father of the bride is a prominent builder and contractor. He says the only thing that he regrets in connection with the marriage is that the couple were so young. They are now on a wedding tour in Illinois. Mr. Wright has written them to come to the parental roof as soon as their visit is over.

Much Needed Invention.

Doctor—You say you always burn this lamp in your room all night?

Woman—Always. I can't sleep without a lamp.

WHAT WE SEE.—We noticed a nice looking young man passing up Dundas street the other day with a large-sized hole in the side of his pants. LONDON AND ENVIRONS.

—Mr. Justice Ferguson, Toronto, is in the city.

—Messrs. Crossley and Hunter, the evangelists, are at the Tecumseh.

—Ed. Griffith, representing the Hotel Manitoba, Chicago, is in the city.

—Messrs. Walter Gurd and Edward Parker, city, are on a trip to the Mackinac.

—Miss Maude Parker, daughter of Mr. T. R. Parker, C. P. R. ticket agent, is visiting in Detroit.

—Misses Jessie McClure and Edith Gustin have returned from Port Stanley. They visited a short time in Cleveland.

—Miss Maud Coughlin and Miss Ella Johnston, of Glanworth, are spending a short vacation with friends in this city.

—Rev. Dr. Moment, of Brooklyn, N. Y., preached with eloquence and acceptance Sunday in Victoria Hall. Dr. Moment is the guest of Dr. Hodge.

—Among the newly-arrived guests at the Fraser House, Port Stanley, are: Mrs. Taylor and daughter, Akron, Ohio; Frank Cooper, wife and family, this city; Thomas Coffey and Mrs. Coffey, Robert Burns, Mrs. Burns and child.

—Miss A. E. Martin is spending a few weeks with friends in London and Detroit.

—Mrs. Nicholson, of London, who has been visiting friends in Hamilton, has returned home.—Miss Wilson, John street north, is visiting Mrs Durand, London.—[Hamilton Herald.

—Mr. John Watson, whose box factory was destroyed by fire on Saturday night has resumed business in the building formerly occupied by him. At present his intention is to build on the old site, but he has not arrived at any decided conclusion. Much sympathy is felt for him in his loss.

—Mr. Max Goldberg has entered suit against Contractor Heaman for $5,000. He claims that while driving down Wellington street the other evening his wagon ran on a pile of gravel and upset, throwing him out on the road. The gravel was placed there by Mr. Heaman in front of a store which he is building for Johnston Bros., bakers.

—A Winnipeg dispatch to the Toronto Empire says: "The town of Red Deer is in a fever of excitement over what has turned out to be an unfounded charge against the school teacher there, Miss Dunkin. The charge was made by Rev. Leo Gaetz, and the residents are so incensed at his conduct in the matter that he was burned in effigy last night." What could our former fellow-townsman have said to cause all this hubbub?

—In the case of Dr. Patterson, of Lucknow, charged with practicing dentistry without a license (which has interested the dental fraternity generally), Mayor Barker, after due consideration of the evidence adduced, has decided that the defendant is guilty of a breach of the dental law and has therefore convicted him in the sum of $20 and costs. His worship considers that the defendant was practicing dentistry and did not draw any line between the mechanical and professional features which go to make up the art of dentistry.

—The death is chronicled in Grand Ledge, Mich., of Mrs. Jane Nixon. Deceased was a daughter of the late Robert Jackson, of London township. She was born in Armagh, Ireland, in 1815, and came to Canada when 4 years old with her father, who settled in London township. She was married to John Nixon in 1833 and moved to Grand Ledge, Mich., in 1841, where she died at 78 years of age. Deceased was a member of the Methodist Church for 63 years and was a sister of Mrs. George Webster and Mr. Joshua Jackson, city.

—Quite an extended docket was placed before Magistrate Parke in the Police Court yesterday morning. Very few of the cases, however, were dealt with. James Kelly and Richard Porter, the two men who are said to have indulged, along with "Joker" Cavanagh, in the ransacking of Mrs. Esther Barnes house, were charged with assault and wounding. The latter could not appear and the two were remanded for a week. Thomas Murray, who was an unwilling participant in the fracas, has also sworn out an information against the men.

Burglars at Delaware.

The store of Bodkin & Co., at Delaware, was entered by burglars on Friday night. Entrance was effected by means of a rear door and the necessary tools were procured from a near-by carpenter shop. A hole was drilled in the safe and about half a pound of powder placed therein, when, it appears, the burglars found the key and opened it without further trouble. About $15 in small change was all they got and a few articles were taken out of the shop. The back door was double locked, and considerable trouble must have been experienced in forcing an entrance. The tools taken from the carpenter shop were left behind. There is no clue to the perpetrators of the robbery.

Walking to Chicago.

Two enterprising young residents of London West do not intend to wait for cheap World's Fair rates, but purpose starting for Chicago to-day on foot. Harry Dell and Hubert Feekings are their names. They have shipped their Sunday clothes on ahead, and will travel with a limited amount of luggage, the necessary cash and shillalahs large enough to menace stray dogs or tramps. They expect, if walking is fairly good, to cover the distance in about fifteen days. The method of locomotion may be slower than a railroad train, but they are in no hurry, and expect to have a pleasant, healthful ramble through Ontario, Michigan and northern Indiana.

Fell Off the Bridge.

Ever since the construction of the C. P. R. railway bridge over the river at Oxford street, a certain class of young boys have made it the main object of life to perform daring feats thereon and see how near they can come to killing themselves and yet escape. Signs tacked up by the railway company warning pedestrians with the infliction of a heavy penalty appeared to have no effect on the boys. There was the usual number performing fancy drill on the bridge Sunday night. One of them, a boy named Chapman, residing on Ann street, was walking on the extreme edge of the frame-work. Suddenly his feet slipped and he lost his hold and fell heavily to the street below. His companions thought he was killed and became very much scared. They hurried down and did what they could for him. For a long time he could not stir, but at last he got on his feet, and by means of frequent rests and a well-developed limp he was able to get home. There is a splendid moral in this for other boys who indulge in this dangerous pastime. If the accident had happened further out and had the lad dropped onto a boulder or into the water there would probably have been a funeral as a result.

A Burglary That Failed.

Mr. Ed. Kidner, who resides at 499 Grey street, is engineer out at the London and Petrolea Barrel Company, and, with his wife, attended the picnic of that firm at Port Stanley on Saturday. That they were absent appears to have been known by some of the light-fingered gentry who infest the city at this season and who are always looking out for chances. When Mr. and Mrs. Kidner returned home on Saturday night they found the inside of the house in a topsy-turvey condition. Bureau drawers were pulled out and their contents scattered around, bedticks and bedcovers were piled all over, and almost everything movable had been examined by burglars in their search for money. At present nothing has been missed, and, as the burglars overlooked what money there was in the house, it is believed that they went unrewarded for their trouble. None of the neighbors appear to have seen anyone enter the house. People living next door saw the back door open about teatime, but thought nothing of it. Mrs. Kidner's sister saw a man about the same time apparently watching on the front sidewalk. Whoever they were, the parties locked the door after them when they left. Suspicion points to some young men who work not, and who infest the southern part of the city and the L. and P. S. track.

Give Holloway's Corn Cure a trial. It removed ten corns from one pair of feet without any pain. What it has done once it will do again.

Hotel Manitoba.

The Hotel Manitoba, during the last two or three weeks has received the patronage of a large number of Londoners who speak in glowing praise of the satisfactory manner in which their comforts have been looked after. The hotel is now crowded. Mr. E. Griffith is here booking parties ahead and advertising the hotel around this district. The list of citizens who lately returned are as follows: Robt. Reid, jun., and wife, C. W. Leonard and wife, J. R. Shuttleworth and wife, J. C. Duffield and wife, R. K. Cowan and wife, Wm. Blair, F. W. Coles, Wm. Greenwood, G. N. Weekes, John Macpherson and J. R. Seavey and family. Any of these parties can testify to the good care and hospitality given all guests. b
