The New York Sun's London cable says: There is good reason to believe that the one man who most regrets the measure of the defeat of British Radicalism is the man who worked most to bring it about. Mr. Joseph Chamber-lain, in talking a week ago with a conspicuous American politician who was tion over the success of his negotiation of one of the greatest deals ever consummated in British politics. The power of the Irish party in the Liberal Government was far less in proportion than that gained by the handful of Liberal-Unionists in the new Cabinet, and the man who maneuvered the result naturally is proud of his skill in the manipulation of men and situations. The cautious American ventured to suggest that possibly the sage of Birmingham had overdone it, and the revolt against Radicalism might prove so strong that the Tories no longer would have use for their Lib-eral-Unionist allies. Mr. Chamberlain smiled the knowing smile of the man who is absolutely sure of his position and replied: "That is impossible. We shall obtain a working Unionist majority in the new Parliament, but the Conservatives will be almost helpless without the Liberal-Unionist mem-

The result proves that Mr. Chamberlain is not better as a judge of the popular temper than are the Tory and Liberal leaders. He finds that he can take his followers, bag and baggage, over to the Opposition the first day Parliament shall meet, and the Conservatives still will be able to control the House of Commons. The problem which most interests English politicians is whether Lord Salisbury will stand by the spirit as well as by the letter of his bargain with Mr. Chamberlain and the Duke of Devonshire. Nobody except the Liberal-Unionists themselves would blame the Conservative chief if he reduced the representation of his allies in the Cabinet to fair proportons, which would mean practically the retention of only Devonshire and Chamberlain in the new

SWEDEN'S CABINET CRISIS.

Stockholm, July 21.-King Oscar, who is spending a holiday at Marstrand, summoned M. Thorne, a Norwegian ex-Minister and a Conservative, and asked him to undertake the formation of a coalition Cabinet. M. Thorne consented to make the attempt.

VICTORY FOR THE TORONTO RAILWAY.

London, July 20 .- The Privy Council has granted the Toronto Railway special leave to appeal from the decision of the Supreme Court of Canada, which dismissed the appellants' action to recover the amount paid for customs dues levied on steel rails.

ALBERT EDWARD AT THE RACES. Berlin, July 21.-The Prince of Wales is coming to Baden-Baden to attend the races as the guest of Prince Fuerstenburg. The Crown Prince of Greece, who is now the guest of ex-Empress Frederick at Kronburg, Prince George of Prussia, and a host of German and foreign aristocrats are expected to be present at the Baden-Baden races.

THE PORTE AND ARMENIA. Constantinople, July 21.-The Porte has appointed Shakir Pasha to supervise the reforms in Armenia. This is regarded as a concession to the powers, which are still asking for a more definite statement as to what reforms the Porte proposes to carry out. AN AWFUL DISASTER.

Spezzio, Italy, July 21.-A terrible accident occurred near the mouth of the Gulf of Spezzia today, the steamers Ortigia and Maria P. ran into each other, and the latter was so badly damaged that she sank in a very short time. She had on board, in addition to her crew, 141 pasengers from Naples, all of whom were drowned. The scene on board the sinking steamer defles description. The passengers were panic-stricken and rushed hither and thither calling on the saints to save them. The steamer, it is said, filled so rapidly that it was impossible to cast free and launch the small boats on board of her or on the Ortigia.

A later dispatch says the accident resulted in the loss of 148 lives today The Maria P. had on board, in addition to her crew, 178 passengers bound from Naples for the River Plate, by far the larger part of whom were immigrants. The night was pitch dark when the collision occurred and most of the passengers were asleep in the bunks at the time. From the reports received here it is impossible to determine whether any attempt was made by the Maria P to launch her small boats, but judging from the accounts given by the excited survivors it is surmised that the steamer went down too quickly to allow of this being done, though one boat got away.

The blackness of the night added to the terror of those on board, and it is added that some passengers, crazed with fear, jumped overboard. he Ortiga on her previous voyage collided in the same spot with a French steamer, and this fact adds strength to the belief hat she was responsible for this morning's disaster.

The Maria P. was a schooner-rigged iron screw steamer of 772 tons gross and 420 net tons. She was built in Sunderland in 1886, and was 175 feet long, 27 feet 1 inch beam and 19 feet 8 inches in depth of hold. She had five compartments. She was owned by Marini Brichetto and her hailing port was Genoa.

STAMBULOFF'S SENSATIONAL FUNERAL.

Sofia, July 20.-The funeral procession of M. Stambuloff started at 2 o'clock for the cathedral, where services were held. M. Stambuloff's mother and M. Petkoff, a political friend, followed the hearse. There were present all the foreign envoys with the exception of the representa-tive of Belgium and 200 friends of the deceased. When the scene of the assassination was reached the procession halted and M. Petkoff delivered an harangue. Suddenly a revolver was fired and somebody cried, "Run for your lives." The onlookers were panicstricken and rushed in all directions. Mounted gendarmes hurried up and quiet was restored. The diplomats withdrew and the gendarmes escorted the remains to the cathedral. When the mourners and the others arrived at the cemetery they met an organized crowd of the friends of Major Panitza, who was accused of treason. This crowd had decked the graves of Major Panitza and his accomplices with flowers and Bulgarian flags. They barred the passage of the hearse containing the remains of M. Stambuloff and threatened those accompanying it. A detachment of cavalry that was posted at the cemetery surrounded the two parties. The coffin was lowered into the the grave in silence. Very few of the mourners reached the grave. The city was much excited.

TORY PLANS UPSET. London, July 22.-The re-election of Speaker Gully has annoyed the Tory leaders greatly and upset their plans. yisiting him, made no secret of his ela- His success at the polls was one of the many surprises of this very surprising contest. Everybody thought he would be thrown out, and Mr. Balfour went out of his way to incite his constituents against him, in order to make assurance doubly sure. Sir Matthew White Ridley was placed in an office pending his election to the Speakership and a coveted Secretaryship of State was to be given one of the disappointed Tories who were left out of the Cabinet. Mr. Gully knew all this, and made a desperate and successful fight in Carlisle. Now he has to be reckoned with. The probabilities are that Mr. Balfour will endeavor to avoid a party division over the Speakership by giving Mr. Gully a judgeship or sending him to the House of Peers as a new lord. Mr. Gully is not likely to raise any difficulties in the way of this arrangement, although naturally he will prefer to retain the Speakership. He stands to gain, anyhow, because if he should be rejected by the Commons, and he should get nothing else, he would be entitled to a pension of £5,000 a year as ex-Speaker.

PAN-AMERICAN CONCRESS.

The "Settlement" Idea Explained by Miss Adams.

The Church in Modern Life"-Movements for Enlarged and Purer Womanhood.

Toronto, July 21.-Rev. Dr. Burns, of Hamilton, occupied the chair at the Pan-American Congress yesterday morning. Miss Jane Adams, of Hull House, Chicago, delivered an address upon the settlement idea. She explained that the term means a group cf persons in good circumstances who settled in an industrial and depressed district in a city and exert there all the good they can. She denied that the institution with which she is connected is a center of socialism or a single tax propaganda and gave a vivid description of the crowded neighborhood where she works, of efforts to make the neglected people feel that they are part of human Christian brotherhood, and of attempt to remedy the odious sweating system by co-operation and shortening of the hours of labor. Rev. Dr. Morgan Wood, of Detroit, delivered an animated and vigorous address on "The Church in Modern Life." He was heart and soul for the direction of Christian effort to social conditions.

Mrs. S. G. Wood, Dominion president of the Girls' Friendly Societies, closed the programme with an interesting sketch of the movement for an enlarged and purer womanhood, with which she has so long been identified. Sectional meetings were held in the Metropolitan Methodist Church and St. James' Square Presbyterian Church in

At the evening session of the congress the programme was carried fully with the addition of an address from Rev. Father Ryan, rector of St. Michael's Cathedral, on "Organization of Charity and the Catholic Church." His remarks were characterized by the widest charity.

The next speaker was Mrs. Henry Wade Rogers, of Evanston, Ill., who spoke on the subject of "Recent Progress in Philanthropy." Her paper was a general review of the rise and development of our Christian institutions for the relief of suffering.

"The Scientific Value of Love" was the subject handled by Prof. William Tremont Blackman, of Yale University. He argued that love was the central thought of all religion, and that the forces of love had always existed under conditions of barbarism.

pare a report for submission to the shareholders. may secure bondsmen.

MRS. HOLMES MAY TURN. Indianapolis, Ind., July 22.—Mrs. Holmes, the wife of the accused murderer and insurance swindler, left here for Philadelphia yesterday at the instance of the prosecuting attorney of that city. Mrs. Holmes herself would not talk, but her most intimate friend, to whom she confided her purpose, did talk last night. This person says that Mrs. Holmes has forsaken her husband. This person was told by Mrs. Holmes that the assertion of Holmes that he was not in Toronto, but was absent with his wife when the Pietzel children disappeared, is not true; that wherever Holmes was at that time, he was not with Mrs. Holmes. Moreover, Mrs. Holmes says she was with Holmes in Chicago at the time Miss Williams disappeared. This intimate friend of Mrs. Holmes believes that she will tell all she knows about her husband, and be a strong witness in prosecuting him.

Somebody Disappointed—The Hudson Bay Railway Bill Introduced at the Last Hour.—An Important Clause Clipped off-The Bill Itself Nearly Strangled in the Senate-Prorogation Postponed Until Monday.

(Special by telegraph from our own representative.)

Ottawa, July 21.—When the Commons resumed at 3 o'clock, on the motion for the second reading of the Hudson Bay Railway bill, Mr. Mills, of Bothwell, took the point of order that a bill amending a private bill could not be introduced as a Government measure. Mr. Martin dwelt on the change of route which left Winnipeg out and sub-stituted Gladstone, and contended that the Manitoba Government ought to have had an opportunity of appearing if they chose and saying how far their interests were affected, if any. Mr. Tupper and Mr. Daly opposed the point of order, but the Speaker held it was good and ruled out section 3 au-thorizing the change of route, and this section was consequently struck out. This left the bill authorizing the dividing up of the subsidy and $80,000 a year for twenty years in two halves. one for each half of the road, and extending the time for completion until 18:8-three years from now.

Mr. Laurier offered an amendment depriving the company of the subsidy If they ceased to operate the road. This was lost, and the bill passed and went to the Senate at 4:15 p.m.

Here Mr. McInnes, a Hamilton Con-servative, moved the three months' heist, and it is said it would have carried then, a majority of the senators being against the bill, but a debate ensued, Mr. Scott supporting the hoist. He said it was reported, but he would not believe truly, that the proposed loan of $2,500,000 was to have been shared by the Government for election purposes.

Premier Bowell sprang up and in-dignantly repudiated any such bood-ling, and characterized Mr. Scott strongly for daring to mention it. At 5:30, the hour his Excellency had set for proroguing Parliament, the debate was still in progress, and the Ministers from the House of Commons came over, and a sort of Cabinet council was held in the cloak room. A message was sent to Rideau Hall asking the Governor-General not to come until 6 o'clock. The military officers, aides, guards of honor, general public, all the accessories of prorogation, were on hand At 6 o'clock Premier Bowell, who was very much put out, announced that the Government had decided not to prorogue, and the soldiers and citizens went away feeling that they had been fooled. Never before has prorogation been deferred after it was once officially announced.

The Senate met again in the evening, and after further debate Senator Mc-Innes' hoist was defeated by 7 to 11, only eighteen senators voting. A few absented themselves. The motion for the first reading carried, and the second reading will be moved at 10 o'clock

Mr. Van Horne and Judge Clarke, of the C. P. R., were around, evidently interested in the fate of the bill, but it is generally felt that the bill is now of little use to the promotors. The fact that the Government delayed introducing it until the last day of the session-about seven hours before prorogation-when they knew it could be killed in half a dozen different ways, rather goes to show that they were not particular about it.

Hon. Wilfrid Laurier in the Commons said he would not delay the bill and did not, and Premier Bowell made an acknowledgment of this in the debate. The Commons will meet again at 10 o'clock tomorrow.

REMENYI IN COURT.

Played on a Violin and Swore It Was Not a Strad.

New York, July 22.-Edouard Remenyi, the famous violinist, was one of the witnesses in the Bott-Flechter Stradivarius case in New York. A socalled Strad violin had been stolen from Mrs. Bott. The State was trying to prove that a violin claimed by Flechter, defendant, was the identical fiddle. Hence the importance of Renienyi's testimony. When called Remenyi came forward and said he was nervous and didn't want to play.

"What is the good?" he said; "it will show very little. I can take a violin that is worth $4 and make it mellow or harsh, just as I wish. It is the player more than the fiddle that counts.' "Well, before you play I want to ask you a few questions," said Mr. Flecher's lawyer. "How long have you been playing the violin?" "Fifty years." "And in that time how many instruments have you played on?" "About 10,000; maybe more." "Could you tell a Stradivarius from any other kind of violin?" Remenyi grunted. "Could you tell black man from a white one?" he asked in return. "I could not be mis-taken," he added.

"Is this a 'Strad?' " asked the lawyer, handing the instrument to the old musician. "No." snorted Remenvi.

The old man then took the instrunent, at the request of the lawyer, and played a selection from "The Huguenots." At the conclusion of the playing the court ordered an adjourn-

On Being Accorded the Freedom of Wick Borough, Caithness, Burgess Ticket. Tells of His Attachment to Caithness County - Appreciation of the Honor Conferred Upon Him.

Ontario's Prime Minister Accepts the

As stated in the "Advertiser" some days ago, the freedom of Wick Borough, Caithness county, Scotland, was presented to Sir Oliver Mowat. The provost, in presenting the freedom of the borough, read an address to Sir | Oliver, to which Ontario's Prime Minister made the following reply:

"Mr. Provost and Gentlemen of the Town Council of Wick,-As the youngest burgess and guild brother, I have great diffidence in saying a word upon this occasion. I feel great difficulty in finding words in which to express what I desire to say. But your address on this occasion has increased the difficulty, by reason of the great kindness which has been manifested in it towards me from beginning to end. heartily, and with pleasure, accept the honor which you have just conferred upon me. (Applause.) I will appreciate it very highly in view of the very distinguished men upon whom the honor has been conferred heretofore, but what I specially appreciate it for is that it comes to me from this royal and ancient burgh of Wick, the chief town of Caithness, the county of my father's and mother's birthplace, and all their forefathers, for I know not how many generations—(Hear, hear, and applause)—and as coming to me because of my relation to this county and people, and because of the position which I have had the satisfaction of reaching in the country where I was born, and where I had lived so long, and were I am living still. It is natural to men of every race to feel an interest in their birthplace and in the birthplace of their forefathers after they have left it, and Caithness men and Caithness women have certainly been no exception. (Applause.) On the contrary, it has always seemed to me that there was evidence of a greater and more exceptional attachment on the part of those who have left this county as compared with a like attachment on the part of the natives of other counties and other countries. (Applause.) One illustration of that which has often occurred to me is that I find there are Caithness associations everywhere-(applause)-and I do not find like associations for many of the other counties of Scotland. There are several such institutions in Scotland; we have them also in the United States of America, and one of the most flourishing of them is in the city of Toronto, the capital of Ontario, where I reside, an association of which I have had the honor for many years of being an honorary president. (Applause.) of balconies, overlooking Lake Erie. Terms on application. Special rates for families and

These institutions, however, are not confined to those who had the honor of being born in Caithness. "Some of us had felt that to be of Caithness blood was as strong a tie, tated almost as strong an attachment to the county as those who had not only Caithness blood, but to whom Caithness has also been a birthplace. (Hear, hear.) This has partly arisen from the example and teaching of our Caithness parents. (Applause.) In my own case I do not remember the time when I first heard of Wick, and always with loving reference to it. I do not remember the time when I first heard of Freswick and other places in the county, which were always referred to with loving words of recollection. used often to hear of friends and relatives who were left behind, nearly all of whom are now passed away. I have also heard them speak of the parish ministers they knew; how they revered them, and how good and wise they were. I felt I knew them all; but, they, too, are all passed away. I heard much of the occupation of the people -about your fisheries and fisher folk, and other matters. This interested me very much in the county of Caithness, and kept up the interest. Then I had other advantages. I remember reading the John O'Groat journal, I dare say before many of you who are now here came into the world. seems a pretty strong paper, and I do not know about politics. I do not but it must be a pretty strong paper since it has existed all that time-(hear, hear)-but I used to read it, and to read about local matters with special interest, and that gave me great advantages in knowing about Caithnes and keeping up my interest in it. I was so constantly meeting Caithness people and talking to them, and hearing what they had to say of the country they had left; and it has long been plain to me that if Caithness has a less genial climate than other parts of the world, and if its soil is less fertile, and if it has less to attract tourists than other parts of the world, at the same time it has a climate and soil and advantages that have served to produce a hardy and hard-working people—(applause)—people who are well able to adapt themselves to the new circumstances of any new country. There are many of them in Canada many of them in Ontario who have done pretty well there. I have not heard of any of them there who are not making a very good living. Some of them have acquired money and lands and houses and the confidence of their fellow-men. They have proved them-selves, industrious, resolute, thrifty

"I am glad that I am a Caithnessman. (Applause.) I am glad to be a son at Caithness, although not born here, and I feel very grateful for your recognition of me as displayed in this burgess ticket which has been presented to me. While I say all that of Caithness, while I frankly express the love I have been taught to feel for this county, at the same time I am a Canadian, and to it, of course, is due my special attachment. It is there I was born; it is there I have spent my life; it is there I have acquired whatever success in life has been my lot, and it is to Canada, as well as Caithness, that I owe the honor you have just conferred upon me. (Applause.) Canada, as you have been told, is country. It is a country to which any man may well be attached. It is the country specially of the poor man, where multitudes of poor men rise to advantages which they could never do in a new country. Some Caithnessmen there got the name of Wick attached to a place; there is also another locality named Thurso, and I myself have add-ed several others to the list of localities bearing Caithness names, and it has been a great pleasure to me that I have occupied the position which enabled me to do that. (Applause.) Once more I thank you for the honor you have conferred upon me. I will bear it in my recollection the rest of which is the one great blood purifier.

people, the kind of settlers we are glad to have there-a successful and law-my life, and the burgess ticket you have handed to me shall go down to my posterity as a memorial of what has taken place here, and as serving to maintain in their memories and affections the home of their forefathers and the ancient and royal Burgh of Wick." (Prolonged applause.)

MAD LEAP

Of a Montreal Man-Jumps 200 Feet From a Precipitous Cliff-A Companien Has a Fatal Fall-

Liquor the Cause.

Montreal, July 21 .- A party composed of four Government messengers, named respectively, Francois Prevoist, Paul Cote, J. Berthiaumen and J. Carmon, went fishing up the Montmorency River yesterday. After some time they resolved to try their luck below the falls. They proceeded by the high cliffs on the east side of Montmorency, with the intention of walking down to the foot of the cliff by a pathway.

Cote undertook to lead the party down. He had not proceeded far when he was carried off, his feet having slipped downwards with loosened turf. He fell down the almost perpendicular sides of the cliff, 50 feet below. Caron and Berthiaumeau ran by another path to the foot of the promontory, where Cote lay senseless.

Meanwhile Prevost had witnessed the terrible fall from above, and was seen by a woman to take off his hat and coat, and then leaped to eternity, 200 feet below. His body was terribly mangled.

Death was instantaneous. Cote was still alive, but it is thought his injuries are so serious that he will not live. Liquor seems to have been the cause of this sad affair. An inquest will be held tomorrow.

FIBRE CHAMOIS VS. BUCKSKIN. The Canadian Fibre Chamois Company have entered an action in the Supreme Court for an injunction and for $5,000 damages against Boisseau & Co., the owners of La Cie, Generale des Bazars, of St. Lawrence street, upon the alleged ground that the defendants have been infringing plaintiffs' trade mark by selling an interlining known as "Textile Buckskin," under the name of Fibre Chamois, and to purchasers asking for the latter. The plaintiffs also complain of a sign displayed in one of the windows of defendants' store, which it is alleged is calculated to deceive the public into buying what is called an imitation article under the belief that they are getting the genuine article. Plaintiffs are represented by Messrs. Macmaster & Maclennan, and will apply for an interim injunc-

Mr. Richard Harding Davis, in a recent article on a certain set in Paris, has an anecdote to relate of a young man which would go to prove that the age of chivalry is with us yet. He says: "I met an American art student, who told me with much satisfaction of how he had made himself intensely disagreeable at a dinner party given by one of these expatriated Americans. 'I didn't mind their taking away the character of every married woman they knew,' he said; 'they were their own friends, not mine; but I did object when they began on the young girls, for that is something we haven't learned at nome yet. And finally they got to Miss —, and one haven't learned at nome yet. And finally they got to Miss —, and one of the women said, "Oh, she has so compromised herself now that no one will marry her." At which it seems my young man banged the table with his fist and said: "I'll marry her, if she'll have me, and I know twenty more men at home who would be glad of the chance. We've all asked her once, and chance. We've all asked her once, and we're willing to ask her again.'

"There was an uncomfortable pause and the young woman who had spoken protested that she had not meant it so seriously. She had only meant that the girl was a trifle passee and travel-worn. But when the women had left the table, one of the men laughed, and

"'You are quite like the breeze from the piny woods at home. I suppose we do talk rather thoughtlessly over here, but then none of us take what we say of each other as absolute truth."

"It's a great pity," said the convicted burglar to his lawyer, "that you couldn't have made that closing speech of yours at the opening of the case." "I don't see that it would have made any difference."

"It would, though. Then the jury would have been asleep when the evidence came in and I'd have stood some show."-Chicago Tribune.

Perhaps the most difficult side of one's nature to provide for adequately is the social side. It is easy enough to make a hermit of one's self and go nowhere; and it is easy enough to let one's self be sucked into the vortex of endless social recreation until one's sensations become akin to those of a highly-varnished humming-top. I am | cloth, and so on through an endless varinot quite sure which is the worse; but I am inclined to believe that the hermit, especially if he is self-righteous, is more detestable in that he is less altruistic. He may be a more superior person than the gad-fly of society, but ethics no longer sanctions self-cultivation purely for the benefit of self. Every man and woman who seeks to play an intelligent part in the world ought to manage to dine out and attend other social functions every now and then, even if it is necessary to bid for invitations.-Robert Grant, in the June Scribner.

There is a decided verve and chic about the girl of the period quite different from her sisters of former years. and it is not all due to heaps of finery, to crimps and curls or to artificial aids of any sort. This season's girl is entirely unversed in the arts of the brush or the use of rouge, relying on her own sweetness and clearness of skin to make her attractive, and never touching a curling iron to her locks, depending on the beautiful gloss and satiny smoothness to make her beau-

Professor Max Muller, of Zurich University, states forcibly his favorable opinion of the higher education of women. The renowned scholar said lately to an interviewer in Oxford, Eng.:

"Formerly, I was a bitter opponent of the higher education of women; but I am now converted, and regard it as one of the greatest achievements of our age. It is an actual pleasure to see the young women at their studies. Young men work as little as possible; young women as much as possible; yes, most of them even too much. Besides, their method of studying is more systematic, and what they accomplish is, therefore, more thorough. I wish the young men would reflect upon this, and learn from the young women how to learn."-Woman's Journal.

A small boy was at a table where his mother was not near to take, care of him, and a lady next to him volunteered her services. "Let me cut your steak for you," she said; "if I can cut it the way you like it," she added, with some degree of doubt. "Thank you," the boy responded, accepting her courtesy; "I shall like it the way you cut it. even if you do not cut it the way I like it."

She intrusts it to an agent, who sees that it is scattered broadcast throughout the city, and its grower stoutly avers that many a time she recognizes her own particular violets in the boutonnieres of her sister and brother office-holders, since each blossom is in her eyes endowed with as distinct a personality as are the human flowers of a kindergarten in the eyes of their leader.--Jenness Miller's Magazine.

Walking on Broadway, the main face which impresses one is that New York is essentially a city of shoppers-of shoppers, at that, in shirt waists. That the holders of fashion in gay Paris have decreed that none shall be worn, matters little to us. We have accepted and taken them unto ourselves with all their ugliness, but, oh! with all their comforts, too. For they alone solve for us the problem of how to keep cool on a hot day. The name "shirt waist" embraces a large variety of fancy waists, however.

some with the Marie Antoinette fichus, some with box-plaits running down the front; some are of silk, and some of lawn; some of dimity and some of grass-ety, but all of them cool and comfortable. For cycling, boating and outing trips the genuine shirt waist appears to be the favorite. Checks of black and white, and red and white are much worn. The check should be about an eighth of an inch square. Pink and white is also very pretty. The other day I saw one worn with a soft pink silk tie knotted close to the neck, which was very fetching. As a rule, however, dark ties seem to be preferred. An innovation in ties is one which is very broad and extends in all the width of its two ends, to the waist line. Grass cloth is cool-looking material for a waist, and, in fact, for an entire gown. It is the old-fashioned linen gown evolved, but how much daintier than of yore! It is gauzy in appearance, and may be made up over a color. Such a bodice is the one pictured. It has a slightly fulled back, while the front is trimmed with three box-plaits. These are trimmed with ecru lace. Odds and Ends.

A collet of white chiffon, or of mauva, pink or black is the daintiest drapery for the shoulders. It is too light to give heat, and is merely added to summer toilettes because it is becoming and gives stylish breadth. Istakes the place of the lace capes of long ago, and suggests a wrap on occasions when a wrap is considered the correct thing, no matter how warm the weather may be. The white collet has two finely crimped pleatings of chiffon hanging from a shallow yoke of white taffeta covered with puffs of chiffon. A drapery of wide lace of very yellow tint is across the front, while the back has an immense bow and ends of wide white taffeta ribbon. Around the neck is a full ruche of crimped chiffon. A mauve collet is of accordion-pleated chiffon, with the pleating waved effectively. A black chiffon collet, mounted on yellow silk, will be liked for certain gowns, but more practical and useful capes are black throughout, that they may accompany dresses of any color. For these the yoke is of black jet spangles as large as sequins, mounted closely to cover the entire fabric, which is of chiffon resting smoothly on a foundation of satin. Below are two pleated flounces of ments in Washington has been fortunchiffon and full ruche about the neck. Modists make very elegant collets slightly heavier than those just noted, of black peau de soie lined with immaculate white satin, the lining being made still more equisite by a border of crimped white chiffon. The trimming enriching the outside is of jet spangles put on in large flowerlike clusters representing mammoth pansies or daisies in shape, every spangle sewed on by the hand of painstaking needle-women. These trimmings are confined to the yoke-like top of the cape, which is circular, and forms voluminous folds around the shoulders. By way of variety these capes are completed by very fine black net instead of chiffon. used in one or two knife-pleated ruffles over the peau de soie, and a ruche of the same about the neck. Very gay Scotch plaid ribbons, in which the French seem to delight in midsummer as well as in winter, are used to trim these light linen frocks. The Stuart plaid, one of the gayest red tartans, is used by Paquin on ecru batiste gowns with a yoke of linen passementeria lined throughout with red taffeta. It forms a wide belt, with a bow at the back of projecting loops, four in a row, without ends. The ribbon collar, while drawn back in easy folds in front, is made very large further back by three loops begin-ning on each side, the last two extending far out beyond the neck to correspond with

There is no reason, provided there is no disease of the nails to combat, or no deformity of the fingers. why every woman should not be able herself to keep her hands and nails in proper condition. The various implements, lotions, polishes, powders and acids used by the professionals are now for sale in all the shops, and after having the hands carefully manieured half a dozen times by a skilful manicure, the tricks of the trade are easily learned, and patience and perseverance will enabl any woman with a fairly well shaped hand to make it almost beautiful. LIBERALS LOOKING AHEAD. The special cables today deal largely with the British general elections. One correspondent says: The Liberals are ceasing to discuss the cause that shattered the party and are concentrating their interest on what the future may bring for them. The Daily News, the Westminster Gazette and other leading organs take precisely the same view as previously expected, that parliaments with great majorities always show a tendency to fall to pieces, and that the overwhelming strength of the Conservative majority will compel Lord Saliscury to legislate in favor of land, church and sectarian education on lines which will lead to a rupture in the Liberal-Unionist ranks. Regarding the permanence of great majorities, Sir William V. Harcourt, speaking to the electors of Monmouth, reminded them of how in 1886 the Liberals were confronted by a majority in the House of 128, which majority was finally converted into a minority of 40.

A BROAD HINT. A signifleant article in the Times in which Liberal-Unionists are advised to abandon home rule and start afresh on the old party lines attracts attention, as it is supposed to have been inspired by an influential adherent of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, besides forecasting what may happen if the Tory intrigues are successful in weakening the Liberal-Unionist element in the Government. The symptoms of the intentions of the 'Tories to guide the Government policy with a masterful hand independent of the feelings of the Liberal-Unionists have become so pronounced that it is really not premature to predict that Mr. Chamberlain and his followers will be obliged to submit or desert the extisting coalition. Thus Sir Michael Hicks-Beach tells his constituents that about the first act of the new Government will be the undoing of the effects of Sir William Harcourt's democratic budget by re-turning large sums to the landlords in rebate to the rates paid by them. Similarly the Tory candidates everywhere announce that the public funds must be used freely to assist denominational schools, and in the manufacturing districts they promise to repeal the cotton duties. Lord Salisbury undoubtedly begins his administration of the Government unhampered by a single edge, but his supporters, having heartily and honestly promised much will insist that their pledges be carried BREAKERS AHEAD! In their latest speeches, Mr. Balfour and Mr. Chamberlain foreshadow the introduction in Parliament of two great Irish measures. Mr. Balfour declared his intention to introduce a measure conferring greater economic alvan-tages upon Ireland, which is interprated to mean that the Government will put the Irish contributions to imperial finance upon the just level claimed for them by Irish politicians.

Mr. Chamberlain indicated that a bill would be introduced dealing with what he calls "the great anomaly of the existing electoral system," which allows Ireland 23 members in Farliament more than her population en titles her to. His measure proposes to assign these 22 members to England, as Scot-land is already represented. Well-in-formed Conservative papers talk of reforming the Irish administration by the abolition of the vice-royalty, and the creating of a new state secretaryship for Ireland, similar to that now existing for Scotland. The Irish members of Parliament, though they hold in the greatest detestation the castle countral, will vigorously resist a measure l'ooking to the abolition of the vice-royalty, as depriving the country of the last semblances of separate national exist-

COL. NORTH'S CLOWNING. Col. North, the "Nitrate King," wino was defeated by a narrow majority in Leeds by Herbert Gladstone son of the ex-Prime Minister, bade farewell to his supporters thus: "I have been a fortnight in politics. The next time I will know more about them and will give my opponent a fair show. I only now want to thank you, and the next thing, I want a drink." He publicly declared that he knew nothing about politics, but simply followed the lead of Lord Salisbury. He did, nowever, understand trade, and how to bring it to Leeds. When he was asked to deliver a political address he brought the platform a hired lecturer. Col. North declared that he did not suppose that politics was difficult. As a practical business man he had not studied politics before he chose to practice, but he would engage to learn more about it in six weeks than young Mr. Gladstone had acquired in fifteen years. He urged his claim as a native; speaking to the electors, he said: "Boys, look here," pointing to some humble dwellings, "that is where I was born. I am now worth millions, and am ready to spend them among you." Col. North narrowly escaped being returned.

CALLING NAMES. The Miner and Labor Leader, Mr. James Keir-Hardie's paper, describes the workingmen who voted against the independent labor candidates as "caitlffs. cads, noodles, numskulls, ninnies, slaves, sweaters, scoundrels, cabbageheaded cowards.'

THE PHYSICAL FORCE PARTY. The Physical Force party, who had been organizing to compel action by the Liberals, were prepared to make such hostile demonstrations as would show that Irish discontent would not brook longer delay in satisfying Irish demands. It is stated that secret driffings have been widely revived in Ireland by old malcontents. A number of well-known members of Irish commun-ities in London, Glasgow and Liver-pool have left within the month for Ireland, making no secret to their compatriots that something was brewing in which they meant to start. The tri-umph of Unionists and prospective co-ercion may be giving impetus to the secret societies and may precipitate outbreaks in Ireland. Intimate friends of Mr. Gladstone the elections with mixed feelings. "JULIA" KNEW ALL ABOUT IT. Mr. Wm. T. Stead, formerly editor of the Pall Mall Gazette, and now editor and proprietor of Borderland, a quarterly devoted to the study of physical phenomena, claims for his spirit Julia the credit of predicting in 1893 that in a comparatively short time the Liberals would be in a minority in the Parliament of over 100. Julia at the same time foretold that Lord Salisbury would pass a measure of local government for Ireland that would be Home Rule in all but name.

HER MAJESTY NOT AMUSED. Referring to the risky conversations now held in high circles Woman says that the Queen having heard laughter in a group of princes and princesses and others of the royal household asked the cause of the fun. Nobody ventured to repeat what had been said to excite the laughter. The Queen insisted upon being told, and then one of the party repeated the remark. The Queen listened coldly, and then rising with all her dignity said: "We are not

THE MAYBRICK ASSOCIATION. The Maybrick Association, with which many American cities are affiliated, is about to present a petition to the new Home Secretary, Sir Matthew White Ridley, asking him to reopen the Maybrick case. Mrs. Florence Maybrick, it will be recalled, is an American woman, a native of Mobile, Ala., who was some years ago convicted of having poisoned her husband, a wealthy merchant of Liverpool. She was sentenced to be hanged, but the sentence was commuted to imprisonment for life. She is now confined in the Woking prison. Many persons be-lieve that she is innocent of the charge on which she was convicted. The judge before whom she was tried later became insane and was compelled to retire from the bench by his associates. He always entertained a bitter prejudice against Americans.

LADIES AT WORK. In Southport two American ladies, Lady Naylor-Leland and Mrs. Curzon, were active fighters in the interests of their husbands. Mrs. Curon, formerly Miss Mary Lieter, of Chicago, succeeded in acquiring a popularity greater than her husband's, and won his battle for him. Wherever she appeared the people overwhelmed her with attentions. Lady Naylor-Leyland, formerly Miss J. Chamberlain, of Cleveland, was a rival to Mrs. Curzon. Speaking of her appearance in the campaign, a local radical orator said that the true fame of her loveliness was not confined to England, but it extended throughout Europe and America. But her husband's chances were blasted by his recent "ratting" from the Conservative party. And Mr. Curzon will represent the district in the next Parliament.

THE MURDERERS. The father of the 13 and 11-year-old Coombes boys, who stabbed their mother in London on July 8, and then spent ten days in the house with the decomposed body, playing cards and otherwise enjoying themselves, is stew-ard of the steamer France, which is due in New York today. Yesterday a mob tried to lynch a man named Fox, who is supposed to have been an accessory to the crime. The man Fox has been arrested. He wore clothes belonging to Mr. Coombes, pledged goods that the boys took from the house after they had killed their mother and joined the boys in spending the proceeds. The oldest boy exculpates Fox and says the murder was due to the fact that his mother had threatened to thrash himself and his brother for misconduct and also their desire to obtain money to spend. Both boys seem to be keen and precocious. The elder is perfectly callous, and does not seem to realize the enormity of the crime. BREACH OF PROMISE CASE.

A London jury has mulcted the Coms um of $3,500 for breach of promise of n larriage, brought by the operatic arti ste, Carla Dagmar. No defense was made, the defendant failing to appear, so only the plaintiff's side of the story was heard. According to this, the defen dant, after becoming engaged to the pla intiff, married in New York a widow named Brown. Shortly afterwards he wrote to Miss Dagmar's sister, saying: Something has occurred, financially and otherwise, that prevents me to give back my promise to Carla. I can never support her, and am now utterly broke. Consider me a stranger in the future."

In his letters to Miss Dagmar the defendant called her his "tootsie own sweet one," and declared that he was "greedy to kiss her." The plaintiff, in the course of her evidence, stated that she was about to start for New York, to appear in Jacob Jakobiwski's opera, when she saw the notice of his marriage in the papers, coupled with the announcement that after their honeymoon, the leading part in his "Dawn of Venus" would be taken by

THE CZAR ON STAMBULOFF'S MURDER.

According to advices from St. Petersburg, the Czar, upon hearing of the assassination of M. Stambuloff, summoned the Bulgarian mission, which is now in St. Petersburg, and in a few fiercely uttered words, denounced them and their Government for the murder. Stambuloff never did anything for Germany, and Russia will surely resent the abuse."

GREAT GIFT FOR IRVING. A casket containing an illuminated address, subscribed by the British members of the theatrical profession, was presented to Sir Henry Irving in the Lyceum Theater on Friday. The theater was crowded with actors and actresses. The presentation speech was made by Mr. Bancroft, the well known English actor, and Mr. Irving made an appropriate reply. The casket, which contains one hundred ounces of gold, is of exquisite design in crystal, with twelve gold columns.

DUKE OF YORK'S BABY REPORT-

ED DEAF AND DUMB. A report has been circulated that has caused the greatest kind of a sensation in society. It is to the effect that the Duke and Duchess of York's baby, Prince Edward, is deaf and dumb. It is impossible to ascertain what amount of truth there is in the report. The baby is a little over a year old, and is stout and well formed. His photographs do not exhibit a trace of mental defect, but the report of this calamity is bruited widely as a fact.

FELL FLAT. The report that the Russo-Chinese loan had been largely subscribed for in Paris yesterday fell entirely flat in London. Financiers here assert that the French contractors engineer the quotation, that the French public has not taken the loan, that the premium price has been inflated, and that it will vanish when the loss goes to allotment. It is recalled how the last great Russian loan of £20,500,000 was alleged to have been taken in France seven times over; and how, finally, the Paris syndicate had 50 per cent of the total amount taken off their hand.

QUEEN GOES TO OSBORNE. Queen Victoria intends to go to Osborne House, her residence in the Isle of Wight, against the advice of her physician, who holds the air too relaxing. They want her to return early to Balmoral, her Highland residence. IN THE ARK.

Isaac N. Ford cables to the Tribune as follows: The old story about Noah's friend, who thought it wouldn't be much of a shower after all, has been on many Liberal lips this week. Lord Salisbury, Mr. Balfour, Mr. Chamberlain and all their relatives have been in the ark with the full Unionist menagerie, and have been very comfortable especially Mr. Chamberlain—but the troubled waters outside have been rising steadily over the despairing Liberals. No political party in England was ever overwhelmed with a more disastrous defeat; there has been nothing like it for three generations. All the great towns have turned against the Liberals, and the counties have followed the boroughs. All the local issues on which the party depended have been repudiated. Derby has gone against the local veto, Welsh disestablishment has been answered by Unionist gains in Cardiff, Pembroke and Swansea; the London programme has produced a remarkable turn-over of Liberal votes to the Unionists; the democratic budget made no friends anywhere; Newcastle rejects Home Rule in the person of its chief English advocate, Mr. Morley; Lancashire, with its industrial hives, is not more emphatic than the agricultural shires in declaring against the Newcastle programme. The Unionist gains are not confined to any section, class or in-dustrial interest; the swing-around of the constituencies is general and independent of local conditions. It has involved in some instances the turning over of over 2,000 votes in the three years. The result is so stupendous that all partisan attempts to explain it away are futile.

Some apologists began by charging the working classes with treachery, the Irish factions with stupidity, and local constituencies with ingratitude, but in the face of the general demoralization of Liberal voters this is mere beating of the air. Other commentators assert that the party has been punished because it committed the fatal blunder of choosing a peer to head the assault upon the House of Lords, but the sight of the prostrate form of Sir William Vernon Harcourt outside the breastworks of Derby does not give color to that assumption. Another explanation goes to show that the electors have not repudiated Liberal principles, but only condemned Liberal tactics; but that is too fine a distinc-tion. The bi-metalists also contend that their issue was of paramount importance, and certainly it was a factor of the result in Lancashire and other industrial centers, although it was less influential in the agricultural shires; but it is plain that the general elections have not been carried on the currency question.

CAUSE OF THE TURN-OVER. The safest generalization that can be formed is that, with Mr. Gladstone in retirement and Mr. Parnell dead, the Irish party rent with feuds, and the Liberal leaders pledged to carry out the Newcastle programme, but un-willing to make an aggressive fight against the Lords, the people have considered it necessary to have a change and to give Mr. Chamberlain a chance to show what he can do with his Tory Democracy. To this may be added the fact that the Unionists had a superior organization and all the money they needed for a successful canvass. The Liberals lacked leaders, organizers, candidates and money.

THE SLAIN. The mortality among the Liberal leaders has been remarkable; seven officials or semi-official members of the last Government have already been de-

There is a marked contrast between Sir William Harcourt's manner of accepting a situation and Mr. Morley's retirement from Newcastle. Before the Unionists had finished laughing over his misfortune Sir William Harcourt was at Tredegar fighting for the Welsh seat with his usual aggressiveness. Mr. John Morley in his hour of defeat thanked his followers for their devo-tion and zeal, uraised his opponents for treating him with fairness and courtesy, and accepted his own fate like a philosopher. Mr. Arnold, Mr. Shaw-Lefevre, Sir John Hibbert and Sir E. J. Reed have all lost their places on the front Opposition bench. An evening journal facetiously suggests that Sir Augustus Harris may be willing to supply "supers" from the grand opera to fill their seats. Mr. Asquith, Mr. Campbell-Bannerman and Mr. Herbert Gladstone are safe, the last plucked like a brand from the burning. Mr. Speaker Gully was also re-elected despite the intervention of Mr. Balfour. Mr. Rider Haggard had a melancholy experience in North Norfolk, where he was defeated after being mobbed by rioters who would have been more congenially employed in the wilds of Zululand than in an election scramble of a peaceful agricultural county of Eng-SUMMING UP.

Exclusive of Saturday's pollings the Unionist gains are 63, equivalent to a majority of 140 in the next Parliament. majority of 100 in the next Parliament. The current is running strongly in one direction and steadily increasing in power. It is probable that their majority will exceed 120 when the elections are closed. This majority will release Lord Salisbury's and Mr. Balfour's dependency on Mr. Chamberlain, whose political aims and ambitions would have been better served by a less sweeping victory. While the Liberals have been harrassed three years with a small majority, the Unionists may be embarrassed by having one so big as to be unmanageable. If any Unionist leader can claim a large share of the credit for the victory it is Mr. Chamberlain. He prevented the passage of Mr. Gladstone's first Home Rule Bill, organized the Unionist coalition and held it together during the present canvass. His scheme of Tory democratic reform has been accepted by the electors as a practical substitute for the Newcastle programme. As a tactician and organizer he has no superior in English politics, and the Liberal rout is due in a large measure to his practical talent in that line of work.

A RESTLESS COLLEAGUE. But Mr. Chamberlain has always been a restless and unmanageable Min isterial colleague. Even now he has taken so active a part in the canvass and is triumphing over the results of the election so ostentatiously as to obscure Mr. Balfour's prestige of leadership. His success, moreover, in pro-viding handsomely for all his political followers has excited the resentment of some old Tories. With a narrower majority Mr. Balfour would be at Mr. Chamberlain's mercy; with a large majority the notes of Tory democracy may go to protest.

THE IRISH ELECTIONS. The Irish elections are hotly contested in factional fights. Mr. Redmond is doing more than holding his ground, and may have a baker's dozen of seats before the pollings close. Mr. Healey, having had a break with Messrs. Dillon, Blake and McCarthy, may be forced ultimately into an alliance with Mr. Redmond. A leader with a strong will like Parnell is needed in order to restore the prestige of the Irish cause, but no man of his stature and commanding genius is now in sight. The unopposed return of Mr. John Daly for Limerick while he is in prison is an unfortunate inci lent THE LABOR PARTY. The dependent labor party has lost most of its strength in the Commons, although it has forced the Liberals in many boroughs to recognize its influence. Kier Hardie has been beaten, and John Burns has had a narrow escape in Battersea through the third party movement. Many Liberal seats were sacrificed, and the abor cause has been set back a decade in the Commons.

NOT DEAD YET. Many partisans claim the Liberal party has been destroyed. That was said also in 1874, but the party returned triumphantly to power in six years. Great parties do not die easily.

WANTS A THRONE. The New York World's cable says: It is stated that Prince Adolphus of Teck, who married the daughter of the Duke of Westminster, is a candidate for the throne of Bulgaria. This dispatch would imply that Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria will have to go to make room for a successor satisfactory to both Russia and England. It has been known for some time that Russia was disgusted with young Ferdinand and that he has made efforts to ingratiate himself in the Czar's faver. In fact, some of his confidential men are in St. Petersburg now, ostensibly to offer at this late day Ferdinand's condolences on the death of the late Czar, but really, it is surmised, to ascertain, if possible, the real intentions of Russia with regard to Bul-

Prince Ferdinand is now at Carlsbad, hiding himself from public places and constant dread of assassination. Stambuloff's death, which removes Russia's most powerful barrier in dealing with Bulgaria, will tend to complicate matters. Prince Adolphus has a powerful influence behind him in England, and if Russia can be diplomati cally arranged with, his candidacy for the Bulgarian throne is sure to give Prince Ferdinand some uneasiness.

Baird, an Englishman, May, a Frenchman, and E. Wright, an Ameri-can, have been arrested in Paris on a charge of extensive forgery of American bonds.

The North German Gazette says it is officially announced that Germany has presented an ultimatum to Morocco in connection with the claim for indemnity for the recent murder of a German subject.

The Governments of Germany and Austria have decided upon holding an international conference with a view of settling the questions concerning the payment of export bounties on sugar. The Governments of France, Belgium and Russia have been invited to take part in the conference.

Mme. Stambuloff has refused the offer of the state to pay the funeral expenses of her murdered husband. It is rumored that in 1894 ex-Premier Stambuloff dispatched many important documents to friends abroad to keep them out of the hands of his enemies.

Tecumseh Park Saturday afternoon resulted in a victory for the Balmorals. Barron occupied the box for the Bals. and pitched a splendid game, while Cavanagh and O'Brien pitched for the Pastimes, only eight hits being made off them. In the third inning Pinel, catcher and captain of the Pastimes, got his thumb broken by a foul ball, and this necessitated a changing round of the team which considerably weakened them. Up to this time the score stood I to I, but the accident to their captain completely unnerved the Pastimes and the Bals, were easy winners. The score:

Dr. Talmage Gives Reasons Why They Should Be Contented.

Extraordinary People Have Extraordinary Tribulations-The Slavery of Household Work.

New York, July 22.-Rev. Dr. Talmage, who is still absent on his annual midsummer tour, preaching and lecturing, had prepared for yesterday a sermon on "Plain People," a topic which will appeal to a very large majority of readers anywhere. The text selected was: Romans xvi., 14-15, "Salute Asyncritus, Phlegon, Hermas, Patrobas, Hermes, Philologus and Julia."

Matthew Henry, Albert Barnes, Adam Clark, Thomas Scott, and all the commentators pass by these verses without any especial remark. other twenty people mentioned in the chapter were distinguished for something, and were therefore discussed by the illustrious expositors, but nothing is said about Asyncritus, Phlegon, Hermas, Patrobas, Hermes, Philologus and Julia. Where were they born? No one knows. Where did they die? There is no record of their decease. For what were they distinguished? Absolutely Hamilton, July 2i.—A good sized crowd saw the Hamilton baseball team for nothing, or the trait of character would have been brought out by the wash at Dundurn Park yesterday to apostle. They were ordinary people, the Maple Leafs, of Guelph. The game moving in ordinary spheres, attending to ordinary duty, and meeting ordinary responsibilities.

What the world wants is a religion for ordinary people. If there be in the United States 65,000,000 people, there are certainly not more than 1,000,000 extraordinary. We spend too much of our time in twisting garlands for remarkables, and building thrones for magnates, and sculpturing warriors, and apotheosizing philanthropists. The rank and file of the Lord's soldiery need especial help.

The vast majority of people to whom this sermon comes will never lead an army, will never write a state constitution, will never electrify a senate, will never make an important invention, will never introduce a new philosophy, will never decide the fate of a nation. You do not expect to; you do not want to. Many of you are women at the head of households. This morning you launched the family for Sabbath observance. Your brain decided the apparel, and your judgment was final on all questions of personal attire. To regulate the food, and the apparel, and the habits, and decide the thousand questions of home life is a tax upon brain and nerve and general health absolutely appalling, if there be no divine alleviation.

They who provide the food of the world decide the health of the world. One of the greatest battles of this century was lost because a commander that morning had a fit of indigestion. You have only to go on some errand amid the taverns and the hotels of the United States and Great Britain to appreciate the fact that a vast multitude of the human race are slaughtered by incompetent cookery. Though a young woman may have taken lessons in music, and may have taken lessons in painting, and lessons in astronomy, she is not well educated unless she has taken lessons in dough! They who decide the apparel of the world, and the food of the world, decide the endurance for the Queen's prize a heavy rain was world, decide the endurance of the world.

An unthinking man may consider it a matter of little importance—the cares

alist, Sergt. Hogg, of the Scottish of the household and the economics of domestic life-but I tell you the earth is Rotinson, of Manchester, and Boyd strewn with the martyrs of kitchen and nursery. The health-shattered womanhood of America cries out for a God who can help ordinary women in the ordinary duties of housekeeping. Then there are all the ordinary business men. They need divine and Christian help. All these men in ordinary business life want divine help. You see how the wrinkles are printing on ing of any on record. When both had fired their eighth shot the Scotchman the countenance the story of worriment and care. You cannot tell how old a business man is by looking at was one point ahead, but he finished him. Gray hairs at thirty. A man of forty-five with the stoop of a nonogenarian. No time to attend to improved dentistry; the grinders cease because they are few. Actually dying of old age at forty or fifty, when they ought to be at the meridian. Many of these business men have bodies like a neglected clock to which you come, and you wind it up and it begins to buzz and roar, and then the hands start around very rapidly, and then the clock strikes | Burial of the Children's Remains in a five, or ten, or forty, and strikes without any sense, and then suddenly stops. So is the body of that worn-out business $300. Skedden scored 258 and Spearing man. It is a neglected clock, and though by some summer recreation it may be wound up, still the machinery is all out of gear. Port mortem examination reveals the fact that all the springs and pivots and balance wheels of health are completely deranged. The human clock has simply run down. And at the time when the steady hand ought to be pointing to the industrial hours on a clear and sun-lit dial, the the chairman, greeted Hayhurst, and whole machinery of body, mind and earthly capacity stops forever. The cemeteries have thousands of business men who died of old age at thirty, ulated him, and said she was delighted thirty-five, forty, forty-five.

Now, what is wanted is grace-divine grace for ordinary business men, men who are harnessed from morn till night and all the days of their life -harnessed in business. Not grace to lose a hundred thousand but to lose ten dollars. Not grace to supervise two hundred and fifty employes in a factory, but grace to supervise bookkeeper and two salesmen, and the small boy that sweeps out the store. Grace to invest not the eighty thousand dollars of net profit, but the twenty-five hundred of clear gain. Grace not to endure the loss of a whole shipload of spices from the Indies, but grace to endure the loss of a paper of collars from the leakage of a displaced shingle on a poor roof. Grace not to endure the tardiness of the American Congress in passing a necesssary law, but grace to endure the tardiness of an errand boy stopping to play marbles when he ought to deliver goods. Such a grace as thousands of business men have today-keeping them tranquil whether goods sell or do not sell, whether cus tomers pay or do not pay, whether tariff is up or tariff is down, whether the crops are luxuriant or a dead failure-calm in all circumstances and amid all vicissitudes. That is the kind of grace we want.

Then there are all the ordinary farmers. We talk about agricultural life, and we immediately shoot off to talk about Cincinnatus, the patrican, who went from the plow to a high position, and after he got through the dictatorship in twenty-one days went back again to the plow. What encouragement is that to ordinary farmers? The vast majority of them—none of them will be patricians. Perhaps none of them will be senators. If any of them have dictatorships, it will be over 40, 50 or 100 acres of the old homestead.

What these men want is grace to keep their patience while plowing with balky oxen, and to keep cheerful amid the drought that destroys the corn Grace in catching weather that enables them, without imprecation, to spread out the hay the third time, although again and again and again It has been almost ready for the mow. A grace to doctor the cow with the hollow horn, and the sheep with the foot-rot, and the horse with the dis-temper, and to compet the unwilling acres to yield a livelihood for the family, and schooling for the children, and little extras to help the older boy in business, and sometning for the daughter's wedding outfit, and a little surplus for the time when the ankles will get stiff with age, and the breath will be a little short, and the swinging of the cradle through the hot harvest field will bring on the old man's vertigo. Better close up about Cincinnatus I know five hundred farmers just as noble as he was. What they want is to know that they have the friendship of that Christ who often drew his similes from the farmer's life, as when he said: "A sower went forth to sow"; as when he built his best parable out of the scene of a farmer's boy coming back from his wan-derings, and the old farm house shock that night with rural jubilee; and who compared himself to a lamb in the pasture field; and who said the eternal God is a farmer, declaring, "My Father is the husbandman."

The healing profession has had its Abercrombies, and its Abernethys, and its Valentine Motts, and its Willard Parkers; but the ordinary physicians do the most of the world's medicining. If you think that you are ordinary, thank God that you are not extraordinary. I am tired, and sick, and bored almost to death with extraordinary people. They take all their time to tell us how very extraordinary they really are. You know as well as I do, my brother and sister, that the most of the useful work of the world is done by unpretentious people who toil right on—by people who do not get much approval, and no one seems to say, that is well done." Phenomena are of but little use. Things that are exceptional cannot be depended on. Better trust the smallest planet that swings on its orbit than ten comets shooting this way and that, imperiling the longevity of worlds attending to their own business. For steady illumination better is a lamp than a rocket. Then, if you feel that you are ordinary, remember that your position invites the less attack.

Conspicuous people-how they have to take it! How they are mispepresented, and abused, and shot at! The higher the horns of a roebuck the easier to track him down. What a delicate affair it must be to be a candidate for President of the United States! It must be so soothing to the nerves! It must pour into the soul of a candidate such a sense of serenity when he reads the blessed newspapers!

I came into the possession of the abusive cartoons in the time of Napoleon I., printed while he was yet alive. The retreat of the army from Moscow, that army buried in the snows of Russia, one of the most awful tragedies of the centuries, represented under the figure of a monster called General Frost shaving the Emperor with a razor leicle. As Satyr and Beleezebub, he is represented, page after page, England cursing him, Spain cursing him, Germany cursing him, Russia cursing him, North and South America cursing him. The most remarkable man of his day, and the most abused. All those men in history who now have a halo around their name on earth wore a crown of thorns.

Then remember, if you have only what is called an ordinary home, that the great deliverers of the world have all come from such a home. And there may be seated, reading at your evening stand, a child who shall be potent for the ages. Just unroll the scroll of men mighty in Church and State, and you will find that nearly all came from log cabins or poor homes. Genius almost always runs out in the third or fourth generation. You cannot find in all history an instance where the fourth generation of extraordinary people amount to anything. Columbus from a weaver's hut, Demosthenes from a cutler's cellar, Bloomfield and Missionary Carey from a shoemaker's bench. Arkwright from a barber's shop; and He, whose name is high over all the earth, and air, and sky, from a manger. Let us all be content with such things as we have. God is just as good in what he keeps away from us as in what he gives us. Even a knot may be useful if it is at the end of a thread. Oh, that we might be baptized with a contented spirit! The spider draws poison out of a flower, the bee gets honey out of a thistle; but happiness is a heavenly elixir, and the contented spirit extracts it not from the rhododen-dron of the hills, but from the lily of the valley.

THE PIETZEL GIRLS.

Toronto Cemetery.

Toronto, July 21.—The bodies of Alice Pietzel and little Nellie Pietzel were buried in St. James' Cemetery today. The discovery of the bones in a Chicago building, which had been rented by Holmes, and which the authorities there say they will be able to prove are the remains of Minnie Williams, completely destroys the alibi which Holmes, through his counsel, has been setting up. Mrs. Howard, Holmes' third wife, who, it is claimed, was with him when he is alleged to have murdered the Pietzel girls in October last, and Assistant District Attorney Barlow and Barrister Moon, counsel for Holmes, are expected in Toronto before the next sitting of the inquest. Mrs. Howard and Mr. Moon will spend their time in working up a defense for Holmes. Chicago, July 22.-To the long list of murders and other crimes already traceable to H. H. Holmes, must now be added the mysterious disappearance of Mrs. I. L. Conner and her 12-yearold daughter, with a reasonable certainty that they have been disposed of in the same manner in which the rest of his victims met their death. Mrs. Conner and her child were last seen in the company of Holmes in this city in 1893. Since then all trace of them has been lost, and the detectives who have been working on the case are now of the opinion that the finding of their bodies is the only possible solution of the mystery. It is the intention of the Chicago police to make every effort to have H. H. Holmes, the insurance swindler, brought here to answer the charge of having murdered the Williams sisters. The local officers are convinced that the murder of the Williams girls was the first committed by Holmes, and they argue that in consequence he should be returned to stand trial for it first. They also insist that they will be able to produce evidence that he did murder the sisters. The police are by no means convinced by the analysis made by the doctors on Saturday that the substance found in the big stove in Holmes' office was fireclay and not human bones. They say that fireclay would not become brittle in any kind of heat, whereas a portion of that found in the stove crumbled in the hands of Detective Kirkpatrick. It has developed that the substance upon which the first report of the finding of the bones of Minnie Williams was hinged, was the hands of Detective Geyer, of Philadelphia. It was said that he visited Chicago a week ago, and when he left he carried with him positive proof that a body had been burned in the big stove in Holmes' office. It was also learned Yesterday that Detective Geyer would come to Chicago after he completes his search for the remains of Howard Pietzel in Detroit, and will co-operate with the Chicago officers in whatever may be done hereafter In police circles it was said this morning that the only hope of convicting Holmes was in Chicago. It was said that the Philadelphia authorities could convict him of nothing more serious than insurance swindling, and that the Canadian authorities would not go to the expense of extraditing and trying him. In the event that Detective Geyer fails to locate the body of Howard Pietzel in Detroit, everything will depend on the work of the Chicago police.

He reports the country in Bruce and Grey counties as in a terrible state, caused by the prolonged drought. New Zealand and Australian cheese are getting into favor, and as the supply is not exorbitant, prices have gone up a peg or two, the present range being 26s to 42s, the latter for exceptionally choice goods. On 'Change. Special to C. E. Turner, broker, Masonio Temple, from Kennett, Hopkins Company. Chicago, July 20.-Higher cables and small Argentine exports for the week put a little vim into the market. It started off at about yesterday's closing price and quickly advanced to 66 1-2c. It halted here for some time, when Armour came in as a buyer. This frightened the shorts, who covered freely. Shorts covered so freely today that offerings are likely to be rather liberal on Monday if primary receipts should show up liberally. The market is narrow and controlled entirely by local operators. Corn and oats steadier, with local covering. The cash demand for corn continues good, and this helps the market, but outsiders are quite bearish on long futures for corn and oats. Provisions stronger, with fair buying by several houses, some of it supposed to be for Armour.

Wm. Spry was elected chairman of a very strong management committee; John Nichol, treasurer, and Walter Toll, the efficient secretary of last year's committee, was reelected. The picnic will be held on the second Saturday in August.

WILL HE STAY? Rev, Alfred Dann, rector of Kilkeedy, Ireland, and canon of Limerick Cathedral, preached at both services in St. Paul's Cathedral Sunday. A vestry meeting will be held at which it may be decided to ask the bishop to appoint Mr. Dann as vicar of the cathedral, in succession to Rev. John Berry. Mr. Dann is a very able pulpit orator and greatly impressed the congregation.

FARE TO SPRINGBANK. It is hardly possible now that the work on the Springbank electric line can be completed by the first week in August, as was originally intended. The rails have not yet arrived, although they have only to come from St. Thomas, where they were purchased from the M. C. R. They are the ordinary "T" rail. There has been a great deal of speculation as to what the fare will be on the Springbank line. This point has not been definitely settled by the street railway board, and although not officially announced, it is altogether likely that the fare from any portion of the city will be 15 cents. As the fare to and fro in the city proper would be 10 cents, if taken without a Springbank trip, a 15 cent rate is not considered excessive by the company. Many think that a 10 cent rate would pay them better. If the company believed so they would probably adopt it.

Deceased was the eldest daughter of Samuel and Ellen Pocock, 206 Richmond street, and was in her 29th year. She had taught school for seven years, and for five years of that time had assisted in molding the young idea at Simcoe street school. She was eminently qualified for the work mentally, but was not of a robust constitution. The strain of and several months ago deceased was obliged to cease active employment. Miss Pocock was beloved not only by her pupils, but by all who had the pleasure of her acquaintance. She sang in the choir at Christ Church, and also taught a Sunday school class. The music at last evening's service was of a character appropriate to the occasion. Rev. Mr. Moorhouse and Canon Richardson officiated at the funeral, and the pall-bearers were W. G. Doherty, Andrew McCormick, Thomas McCormick, Harry Softley, William Softley and S. Irwin. The interment was at Woodland Cemetery, whither the remains were followed by a targe number of sorrowing friends. GYPSIES, BEARS AND MONKEYS. A cavalcade passed through East London this morning that would have created not a little excitement had it taken the main streets through the city proper. It consisted of a party of strolling gypsies, men, women and children—fifteen altogether—a covered wagon, seven horses, three bears and two monkeys. The party camped just east of the asylum over-night, and when the procession reached the eastern limits this morning the small boy of the East End imagined that the advance guard of Barnum & Bailey's show had appeared. A few small children rode in the wagon, but the rest of the party walked. Five horses followed the wagon and nibbled the dainty bits of grass along the wayside, but always keeping up with the procession. The bears were led by children, and were in fine condition. One was a brown Cinnamon, and the other two were black Rocky Mountain bears. The monkeys were also in charge of young-sters. The women of the party played on tambourines and the men at No. 2 fire hall were treated to a bear and monkey dance. Recognizing a good thing when they saw it, and as the leader asked the nearest way to Chicago, the firemen tried to induce the queer aggregation to proceed down Dundas street. But the gypsies preferred to keep to the outskirts, and struck south towards the Hamilton road. Everyone in the party looked the picture of perfect health. CAPTURED YANKEE NETS.

In the team was. an engagement her defenders may take refuge behind several inches of steel in the hull and pepper away through portholes in the side. In short, the Petrel has a business air about her, from the dangerous steel ram that plows the water or anything else that is luckless enough to get in front, to the saucy brass cannon in the rear that looks as defiant as the motto on its muzzle, 'Honi soit qui mal y pense.' This piece was made in 1813, and has probably been through the wars, but seems to be good for a few centuries yet. It is evidently a pet with the crew, and is kept as bright as a Sunday school pupil on picnic days. The Petrel, as becomes her vocation, is no stick in the mud. Her magnificent engines of 300 horse-power can develop a 16-mile-an-hour gait if there's an enemy to chase. Below the deck everything has the same spick-and-span appearance, the same order and system, as above. At the foot of the main stairs is the armory-rifles, cutlasses and pistols hanging on the wall. The men are daily drilled at sword practice, and are quite expert. The saloon—as elegantly furnished as a parlor-the captain's apartments, the officers' and privates' rooms, the engine and boiler rooms, and the coal bunkers, are all below, well ventilated, and in ship-shape, of course. The Petrel has done the state some service, notably in capturing the Detroit scows which dumped Detroit garbage under the nostrils of Amherstburghers. Her latest catch was on Thursday last, when she discovered 69 American nets, the property of Erie fishermen, in Canadian waters off Long The nets were five miles in length, and were quietly gathered in by the Petrel. They are now drying on the reels at Port Stanley, and will be sold to the highest bidder. It is not thought the owners will be present at the sale. They were not when the nets were seized, though they would have had a warm reception. It was im-possible to keep the fish fresh more than a day or two. The men of the Petrel like Port Stan-ley, and they are liked in turn by the natives and their visitors. The crew attend divine service every Sunday in Ottawa, July 22.-The following was the speech from the throne at prorogation this afternoon:

"Honorable Gentlemen of the Senate:
"Gentlemen of the House of Commons: "In bringing this session of Parliament to a conclusion, I have to congratulate you on the industry and zeal which have marked your labors. The necessary legislation having been passed, the treaty of commerce with France, from which favorable commercial results may be expected, will as soon as ratified, be put into force by proclamauntil next session. "I am pleased to observe the grant of Parliament in aid of the fund contributed by the Canadian people for the benefit of the family of the Right Hon. Sir John Thompson.

"The amendments which have been made to the law relating to the civil service will, it is believed, result in increased efficiency and economy.

"The legislation of the session will, I trust, contribute to an improved administration of criminal law, the advancement of commerce and the extension of railways and telegraphic communication. "Gentlemen of the House of Com-

The Secret Out.

"A brown veil is a common affair; my daughter may have had a dozen for aught I know."

"Lying loose around the room?" "How can I tell?" 'And you cannot accommodate me?'

"O, I cannot refuse you a look at the It is just as my daughter left it," she declared somewhat bitterly. "She has not found leisure to attend to it, and I certainly was not going to arrange and dispose of the effects with-out her assistance. But you speak of a chain of evidence. Evidence of what and evidence against whom? It is surely not indiscreet for me to inquire?" "Madam, do you know a Dr. Modes-worth, of this city?" 'Are you sure that no such person was invited to your daughter's wed-Positive." "Then if he was here at all, he was here against your knowledge?" "Most certainly."

We do not know that he was, but he is the person who professed to pick up Miss Farley from the stoop of a louse in Twenty-second street, and as that story is somewhat incredible, we are trying to prove that he carried her away from this house, where she certainly was in attendance on Miss Gretorex as early as 2 o'clock in the even-

Then all you wish of us is to prove that attendance? He bowed.

Why not prove it, then, in a simple way? Cannot Mrs. Cameron say whether she had any such person with her or not?"

He knew why this was asked. He knew that the mother's heart was throbbing under all her pride and self-possession to learn what her equally proud daughter concealed under her silence and seeming indifference.

"I have not questioned Mrs. Camerhe therefore said; "but from the fact that she has volunteered no information to the police, I take it for granted that she does not know the right name and history of the person she employed."

Your conclusions are doubtless correct," the mother allowed. But she looked as if she would like to be assured of the fact. "And now you will come up to her room?"

Wondering at her calmness, for he knew that she had in some way received a blow, he rose and followed her upstairs. As they passed Peter, Mr. Gryce gave him a faint smile; perhaps in the way of remuneration for the disappointment he was conscious of having caused him.

I think that I have said somewhere that the room formerly occupied by Miss Gretorex was in the front of the house. It was large, and, as Mr. Gryce perceived upon his entrance, an exceedingly attractive and home-like appartment. But is was all in disorder at the present time, showing by its very condition that no foot had entered it since Mrs. Cameron went out. This circumstance was certainly a most fortunate one, and lent to the survey which this astute detective at once gave it an interest it could not have otherwise possessed. Even Mrs. Gretorex seemed to catch the infection of the moment, and peered about in corners and under tables as if her life depended upon finding some clew with which to help orward the cause of fustice. He watched her as much as he studied the room, and only when he perceived that she was quite satisfied that no stray veil was to be found did he point to a pile of clothes that cluttered up a small alcove at one end of the room, and remark:

"Your daughter seems to have flung her whole wardrobe here in a heap. These are her clothes, are they not?" "Certainly; old ones which she had before she was married, but too good to be scattered about like this. I won-

But here her voice, thick with emotion, broke in with the words:
"What does this mean? What is this going on in my room without my knowledge?" With a quick movement both turned. Mrs. Cameron, bonneted and wrapped in furs, was standing before them in the open doorway.

CHAPTER XVI.

For an instant Mrs. Gretorex and the detective, so dissimilar in all other regards, were the same expression of disconcertation, but only for an instant. She from policy and he from custom, soon assumed an aspect of self-possession; and Mrs. Gretorex. speaking in behalf of both, observed with a nonchalance that the other secretly admired:

"We were looking for that poor girl's veil. It seems that it is missing, and that the police imagine it to have been dropped here."

A mortal palor spread a ghastly lisht over Genevieve Cameron's face. "I am at a loss—" she began; but meeting her mother's eye, qualled, and caught hold of the door at her side for

"I suppose you knew that the young woman who was in the habit of bring-ing home your dresses died on your wedding night?" that mother inexcrably pursued.

No answer. "You have not been so absorbed in your new life that you have not read this in the paners?"

Genevieve shook her head. "Why didn't you say something to someone, then? I should have thought you would, Genevieve, if only to preserve us from the surmises and suspicions of the police. But perhaps you did not know what a secret you were hiding; perhaps the girl had not given you her real name or shown you her real face?" "Her face?" repeated Mrs. Cameron under her breath, her eyes growing large and black in the stare that she fixed upon her mother.

"Yes, they say, all say, that this girl, Mildred Farley—Was that the name she gave you?"

Genevieve quivered. Did she nod yes, or did that look of hers mean no? "Looked so much like you that it was really remarkable?"

Mrs. Cameron dropped at once into her usual manner. "Do they say that?" she inquired, loosening her furs with a steady hand and carelessly throwing them into a chair near by. "Well, it is odd!" And turning towards the hall, she cried almost gayly, "Come in Walter, I have been caught in an equivocation, and you must help me to reinstate myself."

Promptly at this call, the tall form and fine features of Dr. Cameron appeared on the threshold.

"I do not understand you," said he, "but I will do what I can." And there he paused, for his eye had fallen on Mr. Gryce and he experienced a vague trouble that he instinctively sought to

"It is not much," explained Genevieve, looking magnificent in her non-chalant disdain. "I knew Mildred Farley, and I had several dealings with her in this house; but I did not say so, and, indeed, disclaimed the fact when questioned on the subject; for-and it may seem a lame excuse to you-I hate everything connected with law courts. Besides, she did look astonishingly like me, and I knew that I should be made the victim of mush unpleasantness if I were forced to appear as a witness before those who knew her. If all this betrays weakness I stand condemned. I am sure I am glad to be rid of my secret, for I took no pleasure in keeping it. I assure you." Her ease, her grace, her confidence in her own charm to make even a worse peccadillo than this forgotten, would have influenced most any man in her favor: but Dr. Cameron was stern in his principles and hated deceit in small things more, perhaps, than he did in great. She saw his altered face and her head began to droop.

"Can I do anything to remedy my fault?" she asked.
Mr. Gryce stepped forward rapidly. "You can tell us whether you left her in this room when you went down to be married." The stare which she had fixed on her mother a few minutes before was nothing to that which she bestowed upon the detective ar this simple suggestion. It froze Dr. Cameron's blood for he remembered—ah, with that fatal precision—all the deubts and terrors of that hour from the moment when the change had taken place in Genevieve at the sight of the woman she now acknowledged to be Mildred Farley, to that instant of relief when she fainted away on his shoulder in the carriage. But his emotion, intense as it was, soon disappeared before the arch smile that presently broke up the fixity of that stony gaze.

"And do you know all that, too?"
she asked. "What vever people you are! I declare I never imagined the police were such adepts at getting in-formation. Yes, she was with me that night—helped me to dress and arrange my veil. I had not expected her, for she had received her pay when she brought home the last dress, and I had no reason to think she would come -but her presence was very welcome for all that, and she assisted me, as I say, and when the time came for me to go down, I left her to go home when got ready. Was there anything wrong in that?"

"Certainly not, madam; we only wish to get at the facts. And was she there when you returned?"
"No." Mrs. Cameron lightly shook her head. "She had disappeared; I had not expected her to remain. Walter, where are you going? Wait for me, do: this gentleman will not stop me much longer, I know."

Cameron, who had withdrawn from the doorway at this last word of his wife, paused on the spot where he stood, but did not come back into the

"My husband is in a hurry," she explained to the detective; "is there any-thing more you would like to ask me about this girl?" "Well, yes, madam, there is." returned Mr. Gryce, suavely. "In the first place, I should like to know how vou became acquainted with her; then, how far that friendship went, and lastly, what light you can throw upon her death? All these things it would be of service to me to hear, for, as you already know, there is suspicion abroad that she did not meet her death by her own free will and act, but was helped to it by a certain person whom you also know, or at least have lately seen," (To be continued.)

THE WILLIAM BOOTH.

The Salyation Army Boat at Port Stanley.

The Band Visits London-Interesting Facts About the Little Craft Whose Crow Consists of Converts-Local Army Notes.

The snug little Salvation Army tug 'William Booth" arrived at Port Stanley on Friday afternoon, and Londoners were yesterday treated to some splendid sacred music by the band, which accompanies the boat. The band played in St. Thomas on Friday night and came over to London on Saturday. The bandsmen are dressed in sailo fashion, and their clothes are an exact counterpart of those worn by the Lib-eral Fleet, with the exception that they show more signs of rough usage. The William Booth started out from Toronto on May 10 to carry the news of salvation to the various harbors on the Great Lakes, intending originally to visit Chicago. Owing to the construction of the marine coasting law this project was abandoned, and the little craft rounded on her course at the north end of Lake Huron, and started homeward on the American

All the principal Canadian ports on Lakes Erie, St. Clair and Huron and connecting rivers have been visited, as well as Marine City, Detroit, Munro, Toledo, Sandusky, Cleveland and Ashtabula, on the American side. Everywhere the greatest courtesy and kindness has been shown the members of the crew, and their methods reached many a hardened sailor man who would not listen to the Gospel in other forms. The crew of the boat, including the band, numbers twenty. The band consists of twelve pieces, and is under the leadership of Capt. Bird. None of the crew receive pay—all labor for the common cause, and all are con-verts. The boat is 71 feet over all, 12 foot beam, and 6 foot depth of hold. It is capable of doing ten miles an hour. While the boat is entirely seaworthy, no unnecessary risks are taken.

From Port Stanley the William Booth goes to Port Dover and Buffalo; then through the Welland Canal to Toronto, Another trip will then be taken from Toronto to Montreal. The boat is expected to make Toronto by Aug. 10. The city S. A. Band was on its mettle yesterday, and alternated with the sailor band on parade. This band is made up of men and women, and is Ensign Lowry has received marching orders, and farewells next week. He goes to Toronto.

LETTERS TO THE "ADVERTISER."

If you have a grievance to ventilate, information to give, a subject of public interest to dis cuss, or a service to acknowledge, we will print it in this column, provided the name of the writer is attached to his or her communication for publication. Make it as brief as possible.

To the Editor of the "Advertiser": Was pleased to see our letter published in your last Wednesday's issue, showing your citizens just what our tender was, viz.: A full equipped city steel hook and ladder truck, main ladder, 60 feet extension; also one of the est ever made, largest size chemic fire engines, fully equipped. This full double outfit, just what you need, for $2,800, and guaranteed for five years. Now, then, as you have kindly published the facts, we now propose to follow it up in practice. We will back up our tender by bringing all the above articles to your city, show to your people the working of our ladders—how efficient and simple and perfect they are, and how strong, and light and reliable. Then we will build a great bonfire of cordwood, barrels and boxes, bigger than a haystack, saturate all with ten or twenty gallons of coal oil and set it on fire. When at its fiercest blazing on fire. stage, we will apply the chemical fire engine to put it out, and make it black in a few minutes. All this we will do at our own expense-not one cent of cost to your city-if your City Council will at the same time cause the aerial to be given a public test. Then let the people vote next day in the town hall which tender they will prefer. This way, Mr. Editor, would be the true method to practically test their respective merits, which, I trust, your City Council will agree to do. Let the whole people decide upon the merits. This is the true way to purchase such apparatus. Will give best satisfaction to all, as well as the City Council. The rejected lot to go back home, and no claim of any kind against your city. We will gladly accept. Respectfully RONALD FIRE ENGINE WORKS.

PRACTICAL JOKER KILLED. He Played Chost and Was Stabbed

With a Pitchfork.

Niagara, Ont., July 20 .- A sad affair took place near here some time Friday evening, in which a young man named Frank Rogers lost his life while playing a practical joke on an Italian em ployed by Mr. Havens as a farm hand.

The two young men were cocking hay when Rogers left the field and going to the house returned with a sheet, in-tending to frighten the Italian, who has a mortal fear of ghosts. Enveloping himself in the sheet, he hid behind a cock of hay, and as the Italian came along he suddenly sprang up before him.

The Italian being nearly frightened to death, quickly thrust his pitchfork into Rogers' eyes, inflicting fatal in-juries from which he died almost imme-dately. Nothing has been done with the Italian.

ARRIVAL OF THE PARISIAN. The Allan liner Parisian, from Montreal and Quebec, arrived at the Prince's Landing Stage on July 2 at 7 a.m., having on board 601 passengers of all classes, including 235 saloon, 172 second cabin and 194 steerage. This is the largest number of passengers ever carried from Canada in one steamer. All the passengers and their baggage were landed in the short space of one hour, and about 100 of them proceeded for London by a special train in waiting for them at the Riverside station. The train left at 9:35 punctually, and was due in London about 1:15 p.m. The mail from Canada was landed from the steamer at 7:25 a.m., and was dealt with under the new conditions with dispatch and without difficulty, and the London and Continental portion was forwarded from the Riverside station by the special train. The Liverpool correspondence was distributed by the deliveries commencing at 9:40 a.m. and 10 a.m. The voyage by the Parisian has been a very pleasant one, and she has fully sustained her high reputation, which is that of being the finest pessenger steamer that has ever been employed in the Canadian mail and pasenger service. Particularly by ladies and others who suffer from mal de mer is her steadiness appreciated, this being due to her bilge keels, which reduce the rolling of the vessel in a seaway to a minimum.

The Rev. Dr. Withrow and Dr. Oldright, M.D., proposed and seconded a cordial vote of thanks to Captain Ritchie, his officers and crew, and to the stewards, for their special attention and unfailing courtesy to all, and expresing an opinion that the voyage had been most enjoyable. The Parisian's sailing dates are: From Montreal, July 27, Aug. 31, Oct. 5, Nov. 9.—Toronto World, July 16.

-The Western Ontario Bar Association, at its session in Windsor, decided to hold its annual meeting in this city on Dec. 27.

-Mr. F. E. Westland, son of Dr. Geo. Westland, of this city, and who for some time was connected with the St. Thomas Car Wheel Company, has been promoted to the charge of the compa-ny's establishment in Philadelphia. -Mrs. Janet Brownlee, mother of Mr. Andrew Callander, 400 King street, died on Saturday morning, aged 84 years. The remains were taken to North Gower, Ont., by the C. P. R. afternoon train and will be interred today. Deceased had been an invalid for nine years. -Miss Maggie Maguire gave a very artistic solo on the piano, in the Opera House yesterday morning. This young lady is one of London's best players. In the evening the clarionet solo by

Mr. Robert Allen was much admired. Miss Maud Fowler's solo in the morning was one of the choicest. -Capt. Argo Foster, of the steamer Thames, met with a very painful accident on Saturday, and in consequence will be laid up for two months. He was in charge of the boat at the time, when his right foot went under a little pinion and was dragged in contact with the propeller. The small toe was almost torn from the foot and had to be amputated. A portion of the bone had to be removed from the next toe. -The Pan-American Congress in Toronto has drawn a large number of delegates from all over the American Union and the British provinces. Water Commissioner Judd and Reeve Macdonald have just returned, where they attended as delegates. The reeve of West Middlesex was suggested as a delegate at the last meeting of the County Council, but could not attend, owing to the objections he had taken on his appointment. Frank Grew acted as his substitute.

-Joseph Jones, a glass blower, en route from Hamilton to the Western States, was an occupant of the Police Court cage this morning. Jones struck town on Saturday, was flush with coin and became very drunk. Hence his arrest. It was Jones' first appearance in London police circles, but, as he had $357 88 in his clothes, P. M. Parke decided to relieve him of $2. The short stay in London cost the prisoner over Patrick G. Farris was another drunk. He was en route to the Emerald Isle from he didn't know where. He was not as well fixed as Jones, and the court allowed him to go. Fred Fuller, the young colored man charged with assaulting Mabel Williams, was discharged. The complainant failed to put in an appearance.

The funeral of the late Mr. Wm. Willis, of 546 King street, took place Saturday afternoon from the family residence to Mt. Pleasant Cemetery. It was conducted by St. John's Lodge, No. 209a, A. F. and A. M., the members of which, with brethren from the various other city lodges, attended to the number of 100. The Masonic portion of the service was conducted by R. Wor. Bro. George C. Davis, and Rev. Mr. Cassidy officiated in the absence of Rev. E. B. Lanceley, pastor of Dundas Street Methodist Church, with which deceased had been actively connected for many years. The trustee board of the church was represented by Messrs.
Col. Lewis, Gilbert Glass, Isaac Webster, J. H. Belton, Wm. Magee, and Amos Bradford, and Wor. Bros. A.
Carrothers and W. O'Brien, and Bros.
C. F. Colwell, W. T. Duff, John Gentleman and Thomas Blackwell represented St. John's Lodge in the same capacity. The band of the seventh Battalion preceded the cortege.

A MYSTERIOUS FIRE. A fire, the origin of which is shrouded in mystery, occurred in the north end furniture store of Mr. Peter Lewis at a late hour on Saturday night. The run to the north end of Richmond street is a long one for the firemen, and by the time they arrived and got to work the flames had done a large amount of damage to the costly furniture with which the place was stocked. A great deal of damage was also done by water. The loss will amount to $500. It is fully covered by insur-

Mrs. Foster, of Kent street, has just recovered from a serious attack of La Grippe. This is the second siege she has had of this influenza, the first of which attacked Mrs. Foster about three years ago, and left her with a very troublesome cough, accom-panied with chronic bronchitis, and a companied with chrome bronchits, and a com-plication of other diseases, which made it almost impossible for her to attend church without disturbing the congregation by coughing, and, indeed, Mrs. Foster assures us that so bad were the spasms that she often feared she would burst a blood vessel during one of these severe attacks. It was very natural that under such circumstances numerous friends would recommend as many different "cure alls." She tried Cherry Pectoral, Tar, Linseed and other preparations, but was growing generally worse when a friend who had been benefited by Barkwell's Bronchial Balsam advised her to try that, and in a few days she was out of bed, and the best feature is that she is now entirely freed from all simptoms of the Bronchitis, of which she never hoped to be cured. Mr. Millar, a neighbor, also had a bad cough and was completely cured by the same preparation.
