BIG 7-DAY EXHIBITION OPENS WITH PROSPECT OF RECORD SUCCESS

Western Fair Makes Best Getaway in Its History—More Exhibits in Place Than On Mondays of Previous Years—Visitors Already Flocking to Grounds—Good Attendance Anticipated This Afternoon.

London's big eight-day exhibition opened this morning on schedule time with a velocity that promises to carry it far over the record marks of any previous year in the history of the Western Fair Association. Paid admissions commenced early today, and while most of the two-bit pieces up to 10 or 11 o'clock came out of the admissions and workmen who had neglected to secure passes in advance, and who subsequently came back with passes to get their money back, yet there were quite a few visitors at sightseeing who also passed through the gates.

All a Bustle. Innumerable carriages were rising on after another in quick succession, the going and coming of hundreds of supply wagons, the arrival of workmen, the moving of cattle being led from the trains to their well-bedded stalls, the general bustle of machinery, exhibit unloaded and transported to the proper locations on the grounds, makes opening day one of the most interesting days of the fair.

Officials Pleased. At 10 o'clock today there was considerably more going on the grounds than at noon on the following Monday in many recent years. Fair officials express keen appreciation of the response exhibitors have made to the appeal that all exhibits should be in place as early as possible. The midway, of course, has not yet arrived, but this is no disappointment as it is not due to open up until Monday morning, and present indications are that it will be in full operation Monday noon at the latest.

"MADE IN CANADA" PROPAGANDA TO BE FEATURED AT FAIR

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association To Boost Home Products.

ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN

Posters and Cards To Educate Public Will Be Utilized.

One of the features of the Western Fair this year, in fact, a feature of practically every fair held in Canada, will be the tremendous stress laid on all things Canadian produced and manufactured. Widespread propaganda will be carried on by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association in an attempt to educate the public in the importance of buying wherever possible goods manufactured or produced in this country. Everywhere during next week visitors to the Western Fair will see posters, both large and small. The large posters will urge the public to buy Canadian products, and the employment might be given to thousands of men and women, while the small posters, "Produced in Canada," will be given to all exhibitors with Canadian-made goods. This is the first year of the campaign.

EUROPE IN DANGER IF IRISH DECLINE OFFER OF DOMINION HOME RULE AND REAL PEACE

Sir Philip Gibbs Says Blood Ties Between England and Ireland Cannot Be Broken Despite Sinn Fein Contention Irish Are Separate Races—Both Have Names On Same Memorial Tablets—Declares English Public Kept Militarists From Crushing Sister Nation and Prevented Region of Fire and Sword.

[Special Cable To The Advertiser.]
By Sir Philip Gibbs.
As an Englishman who loves liberty and Ireland, as a land which has struggled for liberty throughout the history of her history, I venture to write an appeal to the Irish race throughout the world, not written coldly, but with the emotion which stirs me and thousands of other Englishmen in a poignant way at the thought of the present truce between Ireland and England may give way to a renewed and more tragic conflict.
I have only this recommendation to make to the Irish people:
In so far as I could help their claim for self-government as a writing man and public speaker I did so at times when such words were dangerous and unpopular, though in America by a strange paradox, Irish men and women and Irish sympathizers howled me down when I spoke upholding their right to life and liberty to the extent of advocating the same home rule which is now offered them.
It is not as a man of public influence, for I have none, that I write this address to the Englishman with liberal ideas and faith in the future of humanity, and who hates war.
Great masses in France and Flanders from the first to last.
In the first place I feel that if after this offer of dominion home rule with certain conditions that are capable of

Ready for Kiddies. Anticipating the thousands of school children who are coming to the fair Monday, efforts will be made to have all the riding devices and educational exhibits on the midway operating early Monday morning.
This morning the Main Building was rapidly filling up with exhibits, as were the Art Building and the fancy work department. All the art exhibits, it was declared, would be on display by noon, and in the meantime the Art Building, as were all other buildings, were open to the public, and many visitors were leisurely studying the pictures as skilled workers unpacked them and quickly hung them in their places. Judging by common sense this afternoon in the fancy work and ladies' work departments, and to all who are especially interested in art, the fair will probably be one of the best days to visit the fair, and in advance of next week's crowds in respect of the departments which interest them most.

Live Stock Arriving. The cattle, horses and other live stock were coming in a steady stream this morning, but not all of the live stock will be here before Monday morning. In the meantime all the live stock barns are open to the public, and some very good stock is already on exhibit, well worth a visit to the barns even at this early stage.
The machinery was only partially in place this morning, but prospects were that there would be little vacant space left by early afternoon. Practically all the concessionaires will be operating early this afternoon, about one-half of them being ready for business this morning.

SUIT AGAINST CITY GAS CO. FOR WEDNESDAY

Ald. G. A. Wenige Suing For Refund of "Readiness to Serve" Charge.

The case of Wenige vs. the City Gas Company will be heard next Wednesday, according to Frank Whetter, clerk of the ninth division court.
The case has already been adjourned on two occasions owing to the illness of Magistrate A. H. M. Graydon, who is counsel for the gas company, and although there has been an attempt to again adjourn it, Mr. Whetter believes it will be proceeded with. The case will be heard by Judge J. C. Judd.
Ald. G. A. Wenige is attempting to recover the "readiness to serve" charge, which he has paid, and which he claims is illegal. If he wins his case it will probably involve the refund of $50,000, which the gas company has collected from the citizens since the "readiness to serve" charge went into effect, and which Ald. Wenige declares will be ordered refunded.

TALBOT STREET IS OPEN FOR TRAFFIC

Paving of Talbot street, between King and Fullerton streets, is completed and this thoroughfare is now open to traffic. City Engineer H. A. Brazier announced this morning. Many complaints had been received from the citizens that the street would be torn up during Fair week, but these wisecracks are deemed to be unwarranted.
But for the fact that a break in the sanitary sewer on Talbot street caused a delay in the work, the street would have been completed long ago.

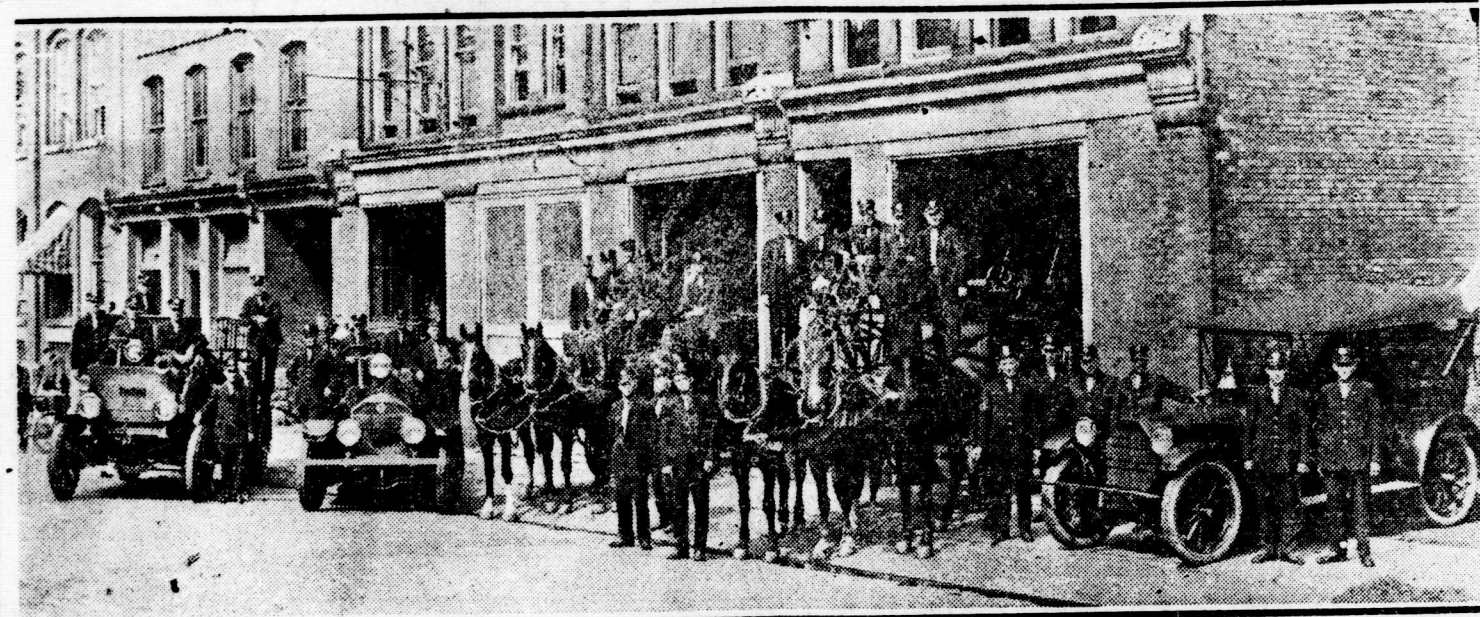

LEAGUE ASSEMBLY IS SPEEDING UP WORK

Election of Judges to International Court Will Be Held Wednesday.

Geneva, Sept. 10.—Discussion of the work done by the council of the League of Nations during the past year was resumed by the assembly of the league today, and which now offers to add to the gathering weight and momentum, have declared for a program of international reconciliation and appeasement.
I feel therefore that the Irish people will be flinging themselves across this alteration over the conference table, Irish leaders declare for war rather than peace, it will be a challenge not only to England but to the men and women of goodwill in all parts of the world who now after the awful lessons of the war are trying to demobilize the standing hatreds as well as the boundaries of democratic liberty by a wider brotherhood of the human family.

At the present day after the red years of war, there is for the first time a sign of a forward movement being made by the leaders of the peoples of the world. The national hatreds engendered by the war are beginning to subside.
Human charity as expressed in the relief given the starving children of Europe, and which now offers to add to the gathering weight and momentum, have declared for a program of international reconciliation and appeasement.
I feel therefore that the Irish people will be flinging themselves across this

ALL ABOARD AT CENTRAL FIRE HALL

MOTORISTS WARNED AGAINST SPEEDING DURING FAIR WEEK

London Motor Club Anticipates Some Activity by County Constables.

OBNOXIOUS PRACTICE

Matter Discussed by County Council, But No Action Taken.

Although there have been no complaints from motorists of this city of persecutions at the hands of Middlesex County constables since the ruling that the custom of county constables must be tried by competent magistrates, the officials of the London Motor Club have issued a warning to motorists that care should be taken during Fair week.

Roads Infested. This warning has been issued on the strength of past records. For several years, it is alleged, a great many cars have been stopped by county constables on roads leading to London during the Western Fair week, arresting practically every passing motorist for speeding. Under the fee system the constables were able to reap rich harvests in this way.

This practice has a harmful effect on the attendance at the fair, it is claimed, because a great many car owners who otherwise would have visited the city during the fair refused to run the risk of paying a fine and heavy costs.
The practice became so obnoxious to the county council that it was called upon to do something to prevent such persecutions. During the fall session the council passed a resolution that an investigation should be held, while many councillors were even in favor of asking the Government to abolish all speed laws.

Cause of Annoyance. It was pointed out by the council that Middlesex was getting a bad name in all parts of the country. Bitter complaints had been received from motorists that they had been summoned to court, but who could not spare the time or expense to fight the case.

While the officials of the club believe that the constables will be less active this year owing to the fact that all cases must be tried by a magistrate, they are of the opinion that motorists must be prepared to look out for themselves at other points in Western Ontario during the past week.

UNITED FARMERS TO HOLD CONVENTION IN WINNIPEG, SEPT. 22-23

Winnipeg, Sept. 10.—The executive of the United Farmers of Manitoba will meet here on September 22 and 23 to discuss the federal political situation. It was announced last night by W. R. Wood, secretary.

HEAVY INCREASE IN GRAIN BEING STORED

Ottawa, Sept. 10.—According to returns received at the Dominion Bureau of statistics for the week ending September 2, 1921, the quantity of grain in store at the different elevators throughout Canada has increased by 2,311,150 bushels, made up as follows: Wheat, 823,004 bushels; oats, 1,201,163 bushels; barley, 129,555 bushels; rye, 181,005 bushels. Flax indicates the only decrease, of 154,547 bushels.
In the interior terminal elevators a decrease is shown in oats of 25,175 bushels, while wheat shows an increase of 1,158 bushels.
The United States lake ports show an increase in wheat of 6,553 bushels. Barley and flax show decreases of 157 and 325 bushels respectively.

History of London's Fire Department Is One of Real Service

Started in Early 40's With Bucket Brigade—Every Resident Required To Keep Cowhide Bucket in a Handy Place—First Engine a Grass Sprinkler—Volunteer Companies Next Step Forward—The Present-Day Fire Fighting Force and Equipment Rated A1.

Away back in the forties, when London could safely be termed "London in the Bush," when wild animals still roamed around the main streets, and when the early settlers were still busily engaged with their pick and shovel, saw and hammer, records the origin of the London Fire Department.

George J. Goodhue, Simeon Merrill and High Constable Groves were responsible for the organization of the first fire-fighting force when they succeeded in having a bylaw passed by the district council, compelling every householder to keep a fire-bucket, made of leather and painted black, hanging in a convenient position. Cowhide dippers, as they were then called, were inspected by Captain Groves, who was for many years following head of the department, to see that all were in perfect condition and ready for immediate use.

Wonderful Machine. In the year 1844, G. J. Goodhue, representing the department, purchased a fire-engine, which was in reality, merely a large garden sprinkler. The arrival of this wonderful piece of mechanism was the occasion of the first volunteer company being organized. They used this wonderful addition to the fire-fighting apparatus and did fairly good work with it until the occasion of the biggest fire in the history of London, on April 11, 1845, when over three hundred

THREE POSITIONS IN GOVERNMENT OFFICES ARE STILL VACANT

Deputy Postmaster, Collector of Customs and Superintendent Mail Delivery.

Applications were declared closed at the postoffice on Friday for the position known locally as "Superintendent of Mail Delivered," rendered vacant by the recent superannuation of Mr. E. Elliott. As none but members of the staff applied little doubt exists that a London man will be appointed.

Although August 31 was the last day for prospective deputy postmasters to have their applications in at Ottawa, they have as yet been no outward and visible sign from the civil service commission. Four applicants at least have been known to be in the lookout for acceptance of this position, while it is claimed that one outsider has cast longing eyes at the chair about to be relinquished by the present postmaster.

The postoffice collector of customs is also awaiting the pleasure of the authorities down at Capital Hill, and the retiring collector, Mr. E. Elliott, is scheduled to leave on September 1, still attending to the duties. It is expected that in event of no collector being appointed shortly a temporary one will be installed to "carry on."

TROPICAL STORM SWEEPS SOUTH; LEAVES DEATH AND DESTRUCTION IN ITS PATH

Loss of Life At San Antonio Due to Overflowing of River Banks, Is Estimated As High As 500—Cotton Crop of Windward Islands Destroyed by the Cyclone—Heavy Damage to Shipping in All Parts of West Indies—South Dakota and Nebraska Report Loss of Life and Property.

San Antonio, Texas, Sept. 10.—Six are known to be dead and property in the central portion of the city has been damaged to the extent of several millions of dollars by a flood which swept through San Antonio last night. Estimate of the loss of life and the property damage is difficult early this morning.

Troops from Fort Sam Houston are patrolling the city and aiding in rescue work.

The water supply is cut off, as is also the electric light and telephone power.

Estimate of the loss of life reaches as high as 500 by police and fire officials.

Water from the San Antonio River, which winds through the city, and from its tributary, the Olmes Creek, flooded the business section of the city for many blocks to a depth of from ten to fifteen feet. The San Pedro Creek on the west side of the city, which runs through the Mexican district, overflowed and joined the waters from the river and swept through the southern part of the city.

Water Fifteen Feet Deep. Water stood fifteen feet deep in the lobby of the Shuster Hotel, which is a block from the river. The flood reached to the Alamo Plaza on the east, which is five blocks from the river. Both banks of the San Antonio River are strewn with the wreckage of houses.

Newspaper plants were flooded, but the San Antonio Light succeeded in issuing an extra on a hand press at 6 a.m. Alarming reports of loss of life in the valley of the San Antonio River south of the city are coming in, but the light is unable to confirm them.

It is believed that the greatest loss of life occurred in the Mexican district. Residents in that sector were unable to get out, though aided throughout the night by firemen and police troops from Fort Sam Houston.

At 8 a.m. Phil Wright, commissioner of fire and police, stated he believed the loss of life to be "very high." He could give no definite figures. He had just completed a tour of the flooded districts. Only six bodies have been recovered so far.

SEVERAL HURT AT AUSTIN. Austin, Tex., Sept. 10.—Reports from Creedmore, a small village south of Austin, state that several persons were seriously injured and several thousands of dollars of property damage was done when a tornado struck there yesterday afternoon. Communication was cut off entirely.

WORST STORM IN YEARS. Port of Spain, Trinidad, Sept. 10.—A tropical storm of great violence which struck Trinidad Thursday caused great damage to the island and several thousands of dollars of property damage was done. The storm, which was traveling west-northwest, was principally confined to the harbor. It was the worst weather within the memory of the oldest inhabitants.

COTTON CROP DESTROYED. St. Vincent, Windward Islands, Sept. 9.—St. Vincent's Sea Island cotton crop for 1921 was almost entirely destroyed by the cyclonic storm which swept over the Windward Islands Thursday. The sugar cane fields were laid flat, and homes and outbuildings were uprooted or stripped. The economic outlook, already affected by the market depression, now is considered a gloomy one. Besides destroying the growing crop, the storm did considerable damage to buildings. The public jetties in Georgetown were completely demolished. The sea there having made even greater havoc than it did in the great hurricane of 1904.

TWO KILLED AT SIOUX FALLS. Sioux Falls, S. D., Sept. 10.—Two men were killed at West Sioux Falls and many small farm buildings were destroyed in a cyclone which struck just before midnight. The damage to the town of Sioux Falls city limits came last night. The towns of Otis, Hartford and East Sioux Falls are reported to have been hit, but telegraphic communication is demoralized.

SEVERE IN NEBRASKA. Omaha, Neb., Sept. 10.—Mixed with hailstones of prodigious size was general over Eastern and Southern Nebraska last night. Heavy winds and violent electrical displays were reported.

POOR PEANUT CROP. Petersburg, Va., Sept. 10.—Virginia's peanut crop this year will be less than 50 per cent of normal, and in some sections will be a total loss, according to reports of the Virginia Peanut Growers' Association. The decrease is attributed to drought.

ASSESSMENT DEPT. WINS VICTORY OVER POLICE SERGEANT

William McCullough Has Property Value Boosted by Court of Revision.

The city assessment department lined up against the police at a session of the court of revision last night, when Sergeant William McCullough appealed the assessment of his property in ward two, declaring it to be excessive. The assessment department won out. The court after deep consideration decided to observe the law to the letter carefully when its stalwart guardians are involved, and consequently ruled that the error if any was in the other direction, and accordingly boosted the sergeant's property assessment $2,000. He must now pay taxes on $2,800.

Income and assessment tax appeals from property owners of ward two to an approximate number of 150 were heard at the session of the court of revision on Friday night.

Appearing for the Trans-Canada Theatres Company, John R. Minnick claimed that the assessed value of the Grand Opera House, $97,000, is excessive. He explained that he was willing to sell the theatre immediately for $20,000 less than the present assessed value. His appeal was left over for further consideration.

C. H. Ivey appeared in the interests of the London Institute of Musical Art, stating that the said corporation had purchased the property known as the Wortman estate to be used in a similar manner as the institute proper, which was exempted from taxation a year ago. Exemption for this addition was allowed.

R. H. Dowler appeared for Dowler & Co., claiming over-valuation, and stated that the property was not worth the assessed amount of $95,000. He advised that the cellar of the building was unfit for use, by reason of sewage difficulties. This claim was also left in abeyance.

Messrs. Jared Vining, T. J. Murphy, Sheriff Cameron were in attendance at last night's session, with J. G. Richter and Stephen Grant acting in advisory capacities. The court was lengthy, commencing at 7:30 p.m. and lasting until near midnight.

Approval of the acceptance of county pupils in the city schools at the cost of instruction, $4.81 per month, was voted. Leave of absence was recommended to several teachers, and a number of applications for positions on the teaching staffs of the city were referred to Inspector Edwards for future reference.

Her mother had purchased a small sheet at a local store. "What's that mother?" asked the young adventuresome girl, but despite that and the fact that she was of the gentler sex, a ride on a freight train held no fears for her. The boy with whom she ran away is but 15 years old. He came to Detroit from England nine months ago. The two families knew each other in England. The boy is still in jail and may be deported.

MANY CHILDREN CANNOT OBTAIN SCHOOL BOOKS

Ald. F. R. Watkinson Would Put Free Books Before Teachers.

Another sponsor of free text books for public school children was discovered yesterday when Ald. F. R. Watkinson, who was acting mayor, "came out strong" in favor of such action. "I have heard that there was a bylaw passed eleven years ago authorizing the text books to the public school children, but I have not yet confirmed it," he informed The Advertiser. "If there is not such a bylaw, No. 1 committee of the city council should recommend that a bylaw be put to the people. There are thousands of small school children in the city who have no school books and no means of getting them. It will be a case of the strong helping the weak, and the people will approve of it. Such action will only take about $5,000 a year."

"It is up to me to bring the matter up before No. 1 committee at its next meeting," concluded Ald. Watkinson.

MURRELLS MAY BE PAIR WHO STOLE BOAT AT SARNIA

Chief Jackson of Indian Reserve, Declares He Recognized the Bandits.

The detectives received what may be their first real clue to the whereabouts of the Murrell brothers last night in a phone message from J. J. Jackson, Indian chief on the Sarnia reserve. He stated that he saw the Murrells on the reserve at 7 o'clock on September 5.

Later in the morning the two men were seen heading for the United States shore in a boat that had been stolen from the reserve.

At the time the men were seen Chief Jackson did not know that the Murrells had escaped, but on seeing the photos of the bandits in the newspapers later in the morning he was positive that the men who had escaped were the pair named.

Chief Jackson gave no reason for not sending in the word at an earlier date.

During the afternoon on Friday a party of police made a thorough search of the woods and underbrush in the vicinity of Manor Park and westward. The search was without result.

It followed rumors that the Murrells were seen on different occasions in the vicinity. Riverview vs. Simcoe, Ryerson vs. Empress, St. George's vs. Tecumseh, Talbot vs. Victoria.

New York Women Enjoy Shopping in London; Find Latest Models On Show

Revel in Viewing Latest Creations of the Modiste's Art—Gowns Fashioned From the Materials of Contrasting Shades—Fur Trimmings a Popular Feature—Fur Scarves Will Be All the Thing This Fall.

Dear Editor,—The shops are certainly the most fascinating places in town at this time of the year. I'd rather wander from counter to counter, where I can see the makings of my winter wardrobe than sit a whole afternoon watching the most thrilling movie picture of man's invention. And the reason is that I'm a woman, and nothing delights the heart of woman more than an orgy of shopping, be her pocketbook full or slim.

If she is fortunate enough to have a plentiful supply of money at hand, and I'll confess right now that I have not, then she can go boldly ahead and buy as the fancy takes her. Lucky woman! But if her funds are short and her imagination long, she is even luckier still, for she has the inexpressible delight of buying over and over again the garments which still remain crisply displayed in the shop cases, and cost her not a cent.

A recent bride told me that nothing caused her greater joy on her honeymoon trip than her daily exploration of the stores. In fact, it became such a mania with her that her newly-made husband rather jealously inquired whether it was a honeymoon trip or a shopping expedition on which she had come. He was early coming up against one of women's characteristic weaknesses—one of her delightful faults for which she is at the same time loved and hopelessly misunderstood.

There are some few disdainful creatures who pretend they would rather do their shopping in New York or Paris (I have seen them secretly slipping into the London stores, and ordering their French models, and then they were safe. They didn't wish Mrs. Thomas White-Brown-Green-Black to know where they had purchased their latest costume, but secretly they knew that they could secure it at one of London's shops, and get away with it in the same manner as if it had come direct from a Paris modiste or one of New York's most fashionable costumers. It was all in knowing how to buy.)

Something to Talk About.
Just to prove that these same people who patronize the London shops know what they are about, let me tell you about my New York friend. She has been visiting me for the past few days, stepping off on her way to the west. We talked over old times as long as we possibly could. At first I was really interested, but as every source of gossip gave out I began to feel uneasy. No longer able to contribute to the conversation, my mind flashed back to an advertisement I had seen in the paper on the day of my friend's arrival. "Newest Fall Models. Just Arrived. Come Early and Get Your Pick!" That was two days ago, and I know how many other women in the city had seen the same announcement. I couldn't leave my guest, and how could I ask her, a New Yorker, to spend her time looking through the London shops?

Almost as if sensing my difficulty she came to the rescue, and suggested, if you please, that she would like to see the London shopping district. The stores are so big and crowded that it is almost impossible to shop there successfully, she said. "I just love to get to a small city where I can wander around in the smaller stores. And, do you know, I often think that the purchases made in a small town are more satisfactory. At least, one is not always confronted with the thought that there are millions of garments one might have been and which might possibly have been a better buy than one's own purchase."

In Elysium.
And so we went shopping. And my New York friend, in fact, she remarked on the up-to-dateness of the shops, and went mad over two attractive little hats which we found during our rounds. There were probably other like them in New York, but it might have taken weeks to discover them in the hundreds of stores there. One of them suited her type exactly, a little black straw hat, with long pheasant feathers swinging back along the side. She is a dark Frenchy looking little woman, and the hat was marked "Paris" in the lining. So she bought it, and is wearing it on her trip to the west. Never a soul will guess that she bought it in London, but should the question arise, she will out with the truth immediately, for she is a frank little person, and loves to put the credit where it belongs.

Dainty Creations.
But hats weren't the only articles we "shopped." We saw many of them, 'tis true—pretty shades of silk duvetyn, silk, beaver and lovely velvets mixed—largely quiet in tone, but a few gay with color. However, it was in the departments advertising "Gowns" that our feminine natures had full play. Quiet as to foundation color, the gowns were found riotous in their trimmings of braid, wool and sequins. Extremely narrow bands of long-haired fur were sometimes used to give the necessary "touch" to a gown, and then again flowers, quaintly fashioned from the gown material in contrasting shades, would peep here and there from its folds to make us eager to buy. We found all of the dresses loosely made, to hang from the shoulders and thus give the wearer the freedom of a costliest waistline.

Freed From Slavery.
This emancipation of women from the old tight waistline of twenty-five years ago has greatly interested me, as has the shortening of the skirts, which have risen from their filthy place, sweeping the floor, to a modest few inches below the knees, in the same twenty-five years. It has taken twenty-five years to do it (an old gown of my mother's now reposing in an attic trunk measures a scant 18 inches about the waistline), but now that it has come, surely fashion will never drive women back to their former slavery. It is rather pitiful to see the attempts of the designers to lengthen the skirts each season. They send bulletins broadcast proclaiming their decision, but still my lady's ankles remain free in defiance of their half-made laws.

Soft Materials.
The dresses were as a coat. My old cotton crepes, substantial satins and the ever-popular taffetas. For street wear, tricotines and like materials were used, mostly navy in shade, and all made on loose lines, the smartest of which were of dressy material.

The furs themselves were lovely, and I cast envious eyes whenever I passed them by. At one shop, a sympathetic saleswoman slipped a large soft seal coat over my linen street dress, and I caressed its downy lining, and wished I could afford a new coat every season. I must have made an attractive picture in its dark furiness, for another shopper happening by, with a larger purse or perhaps a greater nerve, I don't know which, insisted on having it for her own.

Fur Scarfs.
I may get a fur scarf, however. They're all the thing this season, says my New York friend, and they're not quite so expensive as a coat. My old fur coat will do in that case, for it'll be entirely covered with the lovely fur garment. When we were looking at furs we came across the sweetest white fur coat, cap and muff for a little four-year-old girl, and she reminded me of the children's departments. And once there, it was almost impossible to drag us away. My friend has two small children at home, and children's garments have always been a source of fascination for me.

Kidder's Wear.
Perhaps the most practical things we encountered on this our last lap of shopping, were small black satin rompers, attractively trimmed with bands of color. But what we enjoyed most of all was the babies' millinery opening. There were all the wee bonnets in a special showcase, very youthful by reason of their white color and shape, but quite grown-up as to material and trimming. Silk duvetyn is "the rage" for mothers' hats, and so babies' hats had to be made of that same material, too, if you please, and trimmings ranged from simple ribbon bows to bindings of white ostrich feather. For the larger children we found the good old standard gray little straw hat, and shades of the popular sports materials, but attached to sensible white underwaists by which they are suspended from the shoulders of the youthful wearers. Tiny wool capes, just like those fashioned for grown-ups, and wee sweater coats were also sources of fascination on this shopping expedition which came only too briefly to a close. My friend was scheduled to leave by an early afternoon train, and we had barely left time for lunch.

Thank you very much for your space, kind Editor. I am

ROOMING DIRECTORY
PREPARED BY "Y"

Officials of the local Y. M. C. A. are at present making a survey of all boarding houses in the city, which they have on their list, getting the full details regarding the facilities in each individual home, exact location in the city, the number of people in the family and in a general way all information pertaining to the home so that anyone in search of a room or rooms may see at a glance just what he wants without taking all the trouble to go out and search for himself.

Hitherto, the stranger coming into the city has been forced while conducting his business to put up at a high-priced hotel for two or three weeks while seeking apartments. Very often he was unable to secure rooms even at a hotel at any price, all available room having already been taken up.

When this new directory is complete, probably by next week, anyone desiring room and board or rooms alone, will be able to consult it at the "Y," and be directed to just the sort of place he desires.

movement to better the state of civilized relationship if they reject the full reality of an abstract ideal of liberties, which are not necessary to their honor or their souls. They will be harking back to medievalism and not linking up with modern progress in democratic liberty if they insist on separation and isolation.

PAINFUL NEURALGIA, TORTURING SCIATICA

Both Come From the Same Cause—Thin, Watery Blood.

Most people think of neuralgia as a pain in the head or face, but neuralgia may affect any nerve in the body. Different names are given to it when it affects certain nerves. Thus neuralgia of the sciatic nerve is called sciatica, but the character of the pain and the nature of the disease are the same. The pain in neuralgia is caused by starved nerves. The blood which carries nourishment to the nerves has become thin and impure and no longer does so, and the pain you feel is the cry of the nerves for natural food. You may ease the pains of neuralgia with hot applications, but real relief from the trouble comes by enriching and purifying the blood. For this purpose Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are strongly recommended. These pills make new, rich blood and thus act as a most effective nerve tonic. If you are suffering from this most dreaded of troubles, or any form of nerve trouble, give these pills a fair trial, and note the ease and comfort that follows their use. You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont.

nationality, for that is a medieval idea which has given place to larger views of human duty and relationship.

The world has moved on since Ireland had sixty kings and England was a heptarchy. It has moved on since the war between the North and the South in the United States. It is moving toward a larger federation of free peoples as within the British Empire, to an international code of justice and it is the conviction of all leading minds today, based not on theory but on plain and terrible facts, that if Europe does not abandon the old evil of national vendettas and link up along closer lines in similar federations, Europe will be utterly ruined.

That is the large aspect of Ireland's claim for separation and isolation, and the one that will go with separation. But there are other aspects more immediate and visible to ordinary Englishmen.

Ireland maintains her right to absolute separation as a nation foreign to England in blood, in speech and in history. But few Englishmen admit that, because so many of them would be repudiating their women, wives and mothers would be denying their own blood.

Irish blood has mixed for centuries with English blood. There are thousands of British families who have adopted among them, who have good drops of it from some Irish rose who caught an English heart. All through history, on the battlefields of Europe in recent years, where I saw them with unforgotten eyes, Irish youth lay dead with English youth, and there was no enmity between them before they died, but a great comradeship.

Irish names, heroic names, are emblazoned with British names on scrolls of honor throughout the Empire which they made together. Now in England and throughout the Empire, Irishmen hold high office, administer British laws and work in fellow service wherever the rule of the British race reaches.

To me, therefore, no Irishman is a foreigner. His blood is my blood, though I am English. If I ask for absolute separation he asks for something which few Englishmen can give without opening the veins in their bodies if they know their ancestry. All the ancient wrongs in Irish history cannot, alas, be wiped out, and their memories are as fresh in Irish brains as in English brains, too. If they know that history, yet put into history proportion by the thought that there were cruelties in England no less than in Ireland, that the penal laws in England were just as barbarous, that the Irish peasant even in the worst days was not so enslaved and stunted and brutalized as the woman and children in the Lancashire mills during the evil days of industrial tyranny; that the men who crushed the liberties of Ireland crushed the liberties of England too; and that as English democracy struggled up to its older freedom, the English made amends, some amends, in Ireland by land laws which gave soil to Irish peasants, and by municipal government.

It is not enough yet, and in recent years there have been new memories to rankle in Irish hearts, the folly of British official intolerance, and then worst of all, arrests, hangings, shootings, raids, reprisals and terror. I sickened out all that agony like many Englishmen who thought and still think that the tragic episodes smothered our grief, because two blacks do not make white.

But the Irish must be fair to those who face them, must acknowledge in their hearts that many things were done by Sinn Feiners which were cruel and abominable according to the laws of God and man, and that their acts of war could not be ignored by the British Government without abject surrender and cowardice not to be expected of British people.

But all that black nightmare has been lifted by the true which gives us all a chance for looking forward to light instead of back to darkness. The offer made by Premier Lloyd George, not only formally, but in his speeches and letters, is a great act of statesmanship, which expresses the spirit of the whole English people, and fulfills the hope of all lovers of liberty throughout the world.

Save Ireland From Politics. He has put aside all petty arguments for the great principle of a free partnership in the British federation of free peoples. Such a thing will never happen again in our time, for when the present government breaks up, Ireland will be flung again into the arena of party politics, and the present sympathy of the English people may be dissolved by new appeals to passion and prejudice by unscrupulous politicians.

The old call of the Englishman would be made, the old cruelties always dominant in English hearts would be restored, and Ireland herself, in rejecting a fair offer of liberty, would play into the hands of the bigots and militarists who are now mostly silent.

To the ordinary Englishman it appears that some of the Irish irreconcilables are behaving now in what used to be called the feminine way of making use of their weakness as a weapon against the strength of men by daring a brutal male to hit them or be cruel to them, knowing that their own weakness protects them, and would disarm a man in spite of all exhortation.

If England really intended to dominate Ireland by sheer brute force, which may God prevent, it is certain that she could do so despite the desperate courage of Irish youths. It would be bloody and horrible. English losses would be heavy, but Ireland would be reduced to death and ashes.

Why this has not been done before and why it will never be done, is not through lack of strength, but lack of will. It is no answer to say that England tried to do so and failed before the truth.

All that was done in military repression and reprisals was limited by the refusal to let the militarists have full command of military resources and conduct the war as war. It was a secret, half-hearted, furtive attempt to deal with terror by counter-terror and not to wage open war against declared enemies.

The English public opinion would not be persuaded then or now to declare real war against a sister nation, and two-thirds of what was done in Ireland was done without English knowledge.

I write these things with one object in view only, which is to call to the generosity of the Irish race throughout the world, so that they may strengthen the hands of the peacemakers, to appeal to them for great-heartedness, to bigger than the little niggles of chop logic debate, and to yield just a little to English pride and sentiment, as they are yielding to theirs.

Between the Irish race and the British race there is a chance for lasting brotherhood made close and dear because of old tragedies blotted out by forgiveness.

Your Boy's Future

The Boy's future shall not be left to chance.

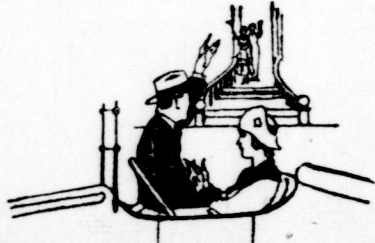

The Boy can be interested in his own future.

The Boy's ideas are "steered" by the knowledge of his Father's early investment for him.

His "preparation" expenses are provided for by the "Vocational Endowment."

Success and Marriage close the first chapters of the Boy's Future, and the early plans made for him are brought to completion.

What are his chances for a good start in life? Of course you have plans for him. It is easy, however, to think of what you intend to do for your boy, but what if your plans should fail? Do not overlook the fact that ordinary plans are dependent upon you being here to carry them out.

You can make sure of your boy's future—you can put your entire plan for him into immediate effect.

The Canada Life offers a simple and convenient way by means of a small yearly deposit, through the

which is arranged to mature when you think it will be most needed by your boy. In this way $1,500, $2,000, $5,000, or more, is sure to be ready for his first serious step in life, whether you are here or not. This plan, of course, applies equally well to your Daughter's future.

Our New Plan

1st—The Vocational Endowment Fund is guaranteed in cash at the time selected by you.

2nd—In the event of your death, no further deposits are required and the fund will be paid at the time selected.

3rd—All deposits will be returned with 3½ per cent. compound interest if the child should die, providing such a sum does not exceed the amount of the endowment, or, if desired, the benefits of the policy may be transferred to another child.

There are many other valuable features which will be explained in full on request.

Do Your Part Without Delay

The uncertainties of life call for immediate action. A yearly deposit which is very small in proportion to the Fund guaranteed enables you to make sure, absolutely, whether you live or die, that your Boy's future is assured.

BLESSED ARE THE PEACEMAKERS.

Men of world eminence like Viscount James Bryce directed the mind of the International School of Politics, held recently at Williamstown, Mass. At the concluding function Hon. Elihu Root, who stands easily in the front rank of later American statesmen and jurists, delivered a closely-reasoned address on the art of international peace. He observed that new democracies had lately come into existence, and new conceptions of government had taken root in the minds of the people. Multitudes had been emancipated from old habits and customs and modes of feeling. Conscious of new powers and new relations toward those in authority, they are asserting the right of decision, and following hard on the heels of representatives and governments. There is a swing from the utter selfishness of old autocracies to more liberal and generous ways which bring as yet imperfectly formed require the balance of education. Nationalities, like individuals, must learn the rule of their limitations, and to know that the idea of justice is not only justice for themselves and their families or communities, but to others. There must be respect for the convictions and interests of contemporaries, bearing fruit in mutual concessions. The time has come for the development of the international mind, and a recognition of that essentially Christian conception that it is not simply what a nation does for itself, but what it does for humanity that entitles it to the highest honors. Nationality is too deeply seated to disappear, but needs to be permeated by a new spirit. The profound lesson must be learned that in God's good world the way to attain and sustain prosperity is not to pull down others and climb over them, but to help all up together to a united success. Otherwise there will be clash of interests, havoc and bitter experience. Like other students of the course of events, Mr. Root has not failed to recognize that a type of exalted virtue fired by the Great War developed the illusion that a new and better world would spontaneously manifest itself. It is scarcely necessary to ask if that has been realized. Like a fierce summer storm the conflict temporarily cleared the air, but did not dissolve or regenerate the old elements that make for mischief. It did clarify conceptions of the savagery and futility of warfare, and that creates a hope that the Christian social or political conscience will crystallize itself in a better ordering of world affairs. However, it is idle to shut one's eyes to the ugly fact that selfish interests and sinful passions still hold an alarming sway.

Mr. Root appears to have left his theme at that point, but the evils which he recognizes have their rootage in the unrenowned heart and mind, as the Scriptures repeatedly and explicitly teach. Penetrating all disguise or veneer, the old prophet records that "the heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked." The Redeemer Himself, in words of most unmistakable clarity, taught the disciples that the thoughts which dwell and destroy proceed out of the heart, bearing the fruitage of lust and greed and murder. The evil bent is there, and mischief-makers are ready to equip it with weapons that promote dissensions, destruction and death. Speaking before the Canadian Club at Vancouver, B. C., Lord Northcliffe made use of a happily-inspired phrase when he indicated as a supreme task for good men everywhere the duty of disarming the minds of the people. Were that generally and sincerely undertaken through the church, the school and the press, the tasks of statesmen and the disarmament conference in November would be vastly simplified. But behind and underlying all pacific movements lies the individual mind and will, actuated too often by jealousy and avarice. In their character and conduct nations will not rise above the type of people who compose and lead them. Consequently a solution of the ills afflicting mankind must be sought in a renewal of ideal and will, working out in truth, mercy and justice. Field Marshal Earl Haig, the renowned British commander, has declared "the Gospel of Christ is the world's only social hope, and sole promise of world peace." The reason for this is that it reaches the individual life. Human nature unaided by a higher power is unequal to the task of self-regeneration. Even the mighty St. Paul realized that he only became qualified to achieve in his moral undertakings through Christ, who strengthened him. "Be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds," was his inspiring message to others. The problem at last resolves itself into a spiritual one. The present generation has learned at a fearful cost never before approached that the Christian spirit must be evoked, and the rule of the Divine Peacemaker of Nazareth assume its rightful place in the councils of the nations. Then will be realized the vision of old: "Mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other."

THE RURAL MAIL-CARRIERS.

Any contract that involves a loss to the contractor is so manifestly unjust that one wonders how such a state of things could exist for any length of time, and yet the rural mail-carriers of Canada claim that at the present moment they are losing about $300 a year on the work that they have to perform for the Federal Government. According to Garfield MacKinnon, representative of the Rural Mail-Carriers' Association, this matter has been brought before the Government in all its bearings, and yet nothing has been done to redress what is manifestly a gross injustice.

At the present time these contractors are paid at the rate of $30 per mile per annum for carrying the mails. Out of this they have to maintain and feed a couple of horses, and provide adequate equipment both winter and summer, besides being prepared for all contingencies. The schedule of remuneration now in use is that which prevailed as far back as 1908, and this in face of the fact that, from janitors to postmasters, allowance has been made by the authorities for making up to the other employees by retroactive payments the strain on their living expenses caused by the war.

The fact that nothing has been done to better the conditions under which the contractors carry the mails since 1908 is in itself sufficient to show that these servants of the public are being treated in a most unfair manner. Not only this, but the system of awarding the contracts, according to evidence adduced, is also obviously unfair. It appears that after the men in a certain district have submitted their tenders they are one by one approached by a representative of the Government, who, by a process of haggling, prevails on the would-be contractors to still further cut down their prices.

The contractors say that in order to wrest even a poor livelihood from this occupation the rate of pay ought to be at least $70 per mile per annum, and that the trifling which is at present allowed those who drive the mails to the postoffice from railway stations and steamboats should be increased threefold. They also maintain that they are entitled to retroactive payment at the new rate for the losses they have sustained during the high cost of living period.

The rural mail-carriers have undoubtedly a good case, and it is to be hoped that the retiring Government will lose no time in having this act of justice performed to a faithful and hard-working class of civil servants whose remuneration is absurdly out of all proportion to their great responsibilities.

THE G. T. R. DECISION.

The decision of the arbitrators appointed to value the stocks of the Grand Trunk Railway is that no value attaches to the $37,000,000 of ordinary and first, second and third preference stocks of the company. This means that the shareholders are to get nothing, and will doubtless cause a warm protest from those in Britain. A large proportion of the stock is held in Britain, and the decision will come as a severe blow to those who have been hoping against hope that something might be saved from the wreck.

It has been suggested by Sir Thomas White, who represented the Government in the matter, that the Government and Parliament might take into consideration, as a matter of "compassion," the granting of some compensation to the interested shareholders. As the matter stands, the Government assumes liability for $12,500,000 of guaranteed stock and for debenture stock, together with the other debts of the company.

The administration which inherits this formidable legacy from the present Government will not have its troubles to seek. It is obvious that desirable as it may be to open up and serve every part of the Dominion by affording adequate means of transportation, it has been proved beyond a doubt that the country has not yet reached that state of maturity where indiscriminate and miscalculated competition can be carried on with impunity.

A church in Massachusetts has been broken into and half a dozen sermons stolen. It is feared that the thief will find them so dry that his next raid will be on a Government dispensary.

The Prohibition Bill, which has just passed the Lower House in Christiania, forbids the importation of liquors or wines containing more than 14 per cent alcohol. The "wets" consider that there is nothing particularly rotten in the state of Denmark.

The exhibition of paintings by famous artists promises to be one of the most pleasing features of the Western Fair. It is confidently anticipated that none of the visitors will experience the disappointment of the old lady who, when inspecting a picture of "A Bull," after Paul Potter, exclaimed: "I see the bull all right; but where is Paul Potter?"

In their laudable endeavors to raise the wind for paying off their huge bill for reparations, the Germans recently imposed taxes on baths, coffins and nightgowns. The advisability of putting a tax on fat men is now being discussed, the waist line being taken as the standard of avoirdupois, 500 marks to be the penalty for the first superfluous inch, 1,000 marks for the second, and so on till the limit of rotundity is reached.

EUROPEAN IMMIGRATION.

(Toronto Globe.) It would not be good policy so to restrict European immigration that no person except a farmer or farm laborer could enter Canada, even though he had money and could furnish assurances that he would not become a public charge. Such a law would be resented in every country of Europe, and would permanently injure our immigration prospects. The congress was justified in asking that it be made illegal to carry on at the present time any propaganda to induce non-agricultural workers to come to this country. Many British mechanics who have found themselves working in Canada claim that they were misled by official literature or by misrepresentations of transportation agents. It is the duty of the federal and provincial governments to place the facts before intending emigrants in Europe, to encourage only farm workers, and to keep a watch on those who have selfish motives for promoting transatlantic travel.

LETTERS

ANOTHER MANOR PARK.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:
As a resident of Manor Park for the past five years and knowing the people and the conditions under which they live at first hand, I think a pen-picture of the other side of the story might be interesting, and give a different idea of the district. Your correspondent was evidently imbued with a craze for the yellow journalism, and what better opportunity could present itself than the sensation of the moment. He did himself well. What did it matter if it was not all authentic? It was a good story, and the great Canadian public represented by the readers of The Advertiser were satisfied with a record of sordid lives and surroundings in the park.

We know better than your correspondent does that ours is not a Bitcarton or City of Boulevards, but we also know the main reason why. Does your correspondent know that 80 per cent of the population are returned men? Does he know that many were just starting their little homesteads in 1914 when the great war broke out? Does he know that these men left their little all and joined up at their country's call. Many never came back. Some came back maimed and broken. Some are still in the sanatorium. "A Canadian's home is his castle," and these men on their return started in to finish the work of home-building that had been deferred during their absence.

Charity begins at home. If we would hate to think that the citizens of London took pleasure in the misfortune of their less fortunate neighbors.

We ask no favors. We are law-abiding, as records will show. Give us fairplay, and if you can't give us our uplift, please keep our lives in yours truly.
HUGH MCCOLL,

OTHERS' VIEWS

NIL NISI BONUM.

[The Nation and the Athenaeum.]
"I suppose it is a point in time to say, but I confess to having taken small pleasure from the singing of Caruso. The power of his voice (which was wonderful) seemed to be in excess of what was needed for the process of beautiful sound, and its duet of the impression the artist gave of coarseness in physique and shallowness in mentality. This arose, no doubt, from a defective gift of aesthetic ear. All I can say is that it never occurred when De Reszke was singing. Then, mind and ear were equally satisfied, and if the singer's voice was not quite so magnificent as Caruso's, its exquisite using made that, and more than that, up for me. Neither was an unmediated strain; but De Reszke's seemed to me to come from the divine region."

"GREATNESS."

[Edmund Spenser.]

New York is the world's greatest city from the standpoint of population and wealth. It would have more reason to be proud of its greatness if it had found a way to protect the lives and property of its citizens. Its crime record during the first seven months of this year put it in a class by itself. There have been 200 murders, an average of almost one a day, and 3,000 automobile thefts, an average of about 15 a day. The loss of stolen automobiles is about $3,000,000. Other crimes, such as burglaries and holdups, are in like proportion.

What's In a Book?

By Kathleen K. Bowker.

IS THIS TRUE ABOUT TRADE UNIONS?

Adam Ward was the richest mill owner in all the town of Milborough. Though at one time he had been just an ordinary workman there. By good fortune, however, he had discovered a "new process," which had revolutionized mill conditions (we are given no idea what particular kind of grist was woven, spun or ground by this machinery around which a whole story pages its inky way), and this added three or four noughts to the slip in his pay envelope. In fact, he was soon dispensing pay envelopes, not receiving them. But he had grown utterly away from his old friends and associates, though many of them were still his employees. Riches had not been entirely good fortune to Adam Ward. Money had scorched his heart, not warmed it. All his sympathies were with McVior, a fellow mill-owner, who firmly believed that all strikers should be driven back to work with machine guns. Adam had tried to instill these feelings into his children, and had partially succeeded with his beautiful daughter, Helen. But war had been kinder than a mistaken father to John Ward, and given him an understanding soul, and a true eye for values.

This same John, having served as a private during the war, was now general manager at the mills, where his right-hand man was Captain Charlie Martin, D. S. O., who having started from home with him, had gone over to John's head in the regiment; but was contented to serve under him in business. They were still faithful "oldies."

John was doing his best (with Charlie's active support) to adjust the acute situation between the employers and the employees. Peter Martin, Charlie's father, had worked at the same bench with Adam Ward in the old days, and both they and their children had been close friends. But Martin's wife was dead, and the lovely but top-loftical Helen Ward had gone into realms unknown except by reports to Mary Martin and her brother. Helen laughed at the old childish romance between herself and Charlie—of which, indeed, she was ashamed; and though she had worked like a heroine for the French orphans, the children of her own home town were practically an unknown species to her.

But now the whole place was in the throes of unrest, fomented by the popular agitator, Jake Vodel.

And here arises a curious situation, curious at least to me, who am not certain of the exact laws of unionism, though I have investigated some of them.

One by one the crews of five out of the six mills go on strike in answer to Vodel's inflammatory talk. But the men in Ward's mill (chiefly on account of the combined influence of John Ward and the two Martins) do not strike in a body, though one by one the individual men begin to fall away, and join the malcontents. Evidently this strike has not been called from headquarters. Certainly the strikers—lying of cold and starvation—are not receiving strike pay. And there is clearly a struggle between that outstanding character "The Interpreter"—a noble old man, famed in the mills, and now living in a hut on top of a hill that overlooks the town, where he is cared for by a deaf mute, and provides for both by basket making. He is the final court of appeal to all parties—whether because of his own arresting personality, or because of some secret power with the trades unions, or both, does not very clearly appear. Moreover, Adam Ward is in possession of some dreadful secret that is driving him mad.

McVior is trying to marry Helen—and John wants to become engaged to Mary Martin. Why he cannot—since they both love each other dearly—I, for one, entirely fail to see. Apparently the democratic Americans think it too much for the noble and well-educated daughter of a workman to contemplate marriage with the rich owner's son; even though her brother is a captain in the army, and started life together. However, when

FALLON-L'ENTENNE.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at Assumption Church, Sandwich, at 8 o'clock on Monday morning, September 5, when Miss Emilie L'Entenne of New Brunswick became the bride of Mr. Robert Fallon of Assumption College, Sandwich, formerly of London. The bride, being a member of the Sodality, had the privilege of being married in the sanctuary, and looked charming in a tailored suit of navy blue tulle, trimmed with henna satin hat, trimmed with ostrich feathers. Her dowry were a corsage bouquet of Sweetheart roses.

Miss Pamela Dugan, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid, while Mr. James Fallon of London, cousin of the groom, acted as best man.

Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom, accompanied by Mrs. Norman Dumouchelle, Jackson's Corners, cousin of the groom, and a wedding breakfast was served to the immediate relatives of the contracting parties, the table being beautifully decorated with pink and white roses, and the house throughout with a profusion of fall flowers. The happy couple will be at home to their friends after October 1 at their new home in Windsor.

Mrs. Robert McKay, who has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Woolway, of Tecumseh avenue, has returned to her home in Kitchener. Miss Audrey Woolway has come back to the city after six weeks spent in Muskoka and New Ontario.

Mr. Arthur Scrimger, Cedar Springs, the noted Canadian author, is sending out invitations to the London men and women of letters, that they attend a gathering of the Western Ontario branch of the Canadian Authors' Association to be held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms, Chatham, on Friday, September 15.

What the Press Agents Say About the Shows

AT ALLEN'S.

"OVER THE HILL," THE MOST POWERFUL OF ALL MODERN MOTION PICTURE DRAMAS, AT THE ALLEN FAIR WEEK.

One of the most epoch-making photoplays of many years is the beautiful William Fox photoplay of mother-love, "Over the Hill," which will be seen at the Allen Theatre Fair Week.

Founded on the famous poem, by Will Carleton, this simple story of the devotion of a mother for her children, in spite of the trials and tribulations to which they subject her, is one of the most appealing and lovable stories ever screened. There is no suggestion of big massive scenes, no spectacular effects, no crowds—nothing but the simple, thrilling, powerful story that touches the heart of all humanity and brings everyone to realize the love and affection with which a mother's memory should always be revered.

Produced in New York by William Fox in September, 1920, without ostentation, without undue exploitation, without any furor or newspaper fireworks, the fame of the simple and beautiful picture, "Over the Hill," spread like wildfire. All who saw it sent hundreds of their friends. Newspapers hailed it as one of the great and crowning artistic triumphs of the motion picture world. Clergymen preached sermons about it. Editors wrote editorials advising every mother's son and daughter to see "Over the Hill."

"Over the Hill," played on Broadway at prices up to $2 for more than a year, and is playing the regular theatres all over the United States at these prices. It was scheduled to play in Canada on the same basis, but owing to the large circuit of theatres controlled by Allen Theatres, Limited, and their tremendous buying power, they have been able to make a special arrangement with Mr. William Fox, whereby "Over the Hill" will be shown at prices which are about half of what they would have been otherwise.

FAMOUS CANADIAN BAND AT ALLEN'S FAIR WEEK.

By permission of Lieut.-Col. C. H. Hill and officers, the Royal Canadian Military Concert Band will play a special engagement at the Allen Fair Week. The Royal Canadian Military Concert Band is recognized by critics to be the premier band in Canada. This is the same band which under the direction of Capt. Ryan was selected to play at the coronation of King George V., and later when the world war broke out they went overseas. They were sent from Passchendaele by Gen. Sir Arthur Currie, commanding the Canadian Corps, to play for the exhibition of Canadian war photographs at Paris. Monday Fair Week will be Military Day at the Allen.

Sergt. Linfoot, popular overseas baritone, will also be an exceptionally pleasing attraction at the Allen Fair Week in connection with the Royal Canadian Military Concert Band. Sergt. Linfoot will entertain Allen patrons with a number of solos at every performance.

AT THE GRAND.

The theatre-going public of London look forward to May Robson's visit each year with the greatest amount of interest, for they know there is a guarantee of perfect satisfaction with all the productions Augustus Pitou, Inc., secures for Miss Robson.

Miss Robson holds the palm for never having had an adverse criticism of her work, and when "It Pays to Smile," comes to the Grand Opera House on Monday evening next as a special Fair week attraction, Miss Robson will portray a character entirely different from any she has ever played.

Few people ever stop to consider what a close student of human nature an actress of Miss Robson's calibre has to be. In every production she is playing a part which may be exactly opposite to her own nature and disposition, and to make the successes Miss Robson has of so many characters, it would seem that she would forget sometimes and get out of the atmosphere, but she never does.

Ethel Watts Mumford, in dramatizing "It Pays to Smile," has given Miss Robson some wonderful situations and exciting scenes, and the whole plot of the heart of all humanity and brings everyone to realize the love and affection with which a mother's memory should always be revered.

THE BLACKSTONE SHOW.

The coming of Blackstone to the Grand for five days, commencing Tuesday next, will be the theatrical event of the season. No show presented during the entire year seems to have a general appeal to the masses, and none is more deserving for the present new show far surpasses all previous efforts, and will long set the mark to standardize attractions of the kind.

The latest edition of the Blackstone show brings more new illusions than have ever before been seen in one great aggregation. Not only are they numerically stronger, but in point of class finish, gorgeousness and presentation, they leave nothing to be desired. As an added attraction interjected to relieve the continuity is the charming little band-fidd, Miss Inez Nourse, whose reputation is world-wide, as the daintiest artist, the Dixie instrument can boast of.

Those who believe the band has limitations have only to hear this little lady perform upon it to suffer all disillusionment. Miss Nourse fairly makes Uncle Remus' beloved music box converse. There is nothing too difficult for her mastery execution. Chopin, Schubert, Rossini, Tchaikowsky and Irving Berlin are equally facile for this celebrated little genius, and the Great Blackstone considers it an honor to submit her as a part of his incomparable show.

Get ready to laugh—laugh as you never laughed before. The most brilliant and hilarious dramatic frolics of a decade—"Ladies' Night"—will be the attraction at the Grand for one night only—Monday, Sept. 20, and if the verdict of New York, which kept this spirited farce on Broadway all last season, holds good here, as it unquestionably will, local players are facing the merriest entertainment of many seasons. Naturally there are the sad moments in "Ladies' Night" and it may be set down right here that neither are there any dull moments in this frisky frolic of three model young men who unexpectedly find themselves astray in a Turkish bath on ladies' night. The young men face a situation that threatens lurid possibilities, but the worst that happens is a colorful entertainment, filled to the brim with fun and sniped with a dash of lingerie that is a feast for the eyes. A. H. Woods, the producer of this most successful of all last season's New York plays, has given "Ladies' Night" a production of rare beauty and a typical Broadway company, including Ralph Bunker, Muriel Hudson, Josephine Saxe, Ebba Andrus, Dave Jones, Stanley DeWolfe, Ellen Rest, Antoinette Crawford, Mary Nixon, Helen Courtney, Marjorie Chester, Alma Wall, Bobbie Lee, Dell Farlandean, Lilian Smalley, William H. Dorbin and Josephine DeWolfe.

MAJESTIC.

YOUNG MEN DON'T PRESENT LINGER TO LADY FRIENDS. SEE "UP IN MABEL'S ROOM" AT THE MAJESTIC THEATRE THIS WEEK AND LEARN WHY.

If you are a young man who is susceptible to womanly charms and feel that you ought to make presents to lady friends, take warning and profit by the experience of many other young men who have had the same feelings. Do not give silk hosiery or lingerie. The old saying that back is a simple color and white is simple, too, but that they make a combination you are apt to rue, when in the form of a letter, is a warning that cannot be sounded too often to a young man in love, but more wholesome advice would be don't give dainty feminine wearing apparel as gifts, unless you have some way of getting them back in the event of the young lady in question coming out second best in your love affairs, and being the one that is left behind when you marry and settle down for life.

"Up in Mabel's Room," a wonderful light farce, with a moral that has a punch strong enough to make you remember it for many moons after seeing it will occupy the boards at the Majestic Theatre all next week. It will be produced by the Wm. A. Grew players, and when that is said local theatre-goers are assured that it will be produced well, and that a treat is in store for all who attend.

Although only here a few days the Wm. A. Grew players have already endeared themselves to the hearts of London theatre-goers through their presentation of "Turn To The Right," and will certainly uphold the wonderful reputation gained by the company in London last season.

Special matinees will be staged Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoon next week, and on Monday night two seats will be given for the price of one.

If you want to see a light, wholesome farce, full of joy and laughs, don't fail to attend the Majestic Fair Week.

AT LOEW'S.

LOUISE GLAUM SUPERB IN BIG EMOTIONAL ROLE, WHICH PLAYS LOEW'S MONDAY NEXT.

Louise Glaum, the famous emotional artist, in J. Parker Read's (Juni) soul-stirring drama, "The Lone Wolf's Daughter," a W. W. Hodkinson release from the powerful pen of Louis Joseph Vance, is the attraction at the Loew Theatre, beginning Monday. The star's tremendous following certainly find it every bit as interest-compelling and thrilling as her recent triumph, "Sabara," accorded everywhere as one of the most popular productions of the year.

The program also includes a Mack Sennett comedy, Loew's concert orchestra with Mr. Joseph Tiri, leader, a screen pictorial, and vaudeville.

HOBART BOSWORTH, STARRING IN "THE BRUTE MASTER," TO BE SHOWN AT LOEW'S THEATRE THURSDAY NEXT.

Hobart Bosworth, whose latest starring vehicle "The Brute Master," a J. Parker Read production, released through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, which will be shown at Loew's Theatre three days only, has in the title role of his picture what critics and Mr. Bosworth himself declare to be better suited to him than any role he has thus far essayed.

Hobart Bosworth is one of the pioneer actors of the motion picture field. After years in Day's Theatre, New York, supporting Mrs. Fiske, Julia Marlowe, Henrietta Crossman and Amelia Bingham, as leading man, he was starred by Harrison Fiske. His first picture experience was with Selig, the pioneer company of Los Angeles.

company he made no less than 112 pictures, some of which he directed himself.

As "Bucko McAllister," the brute master who rules the crew of his weather-battered old schooner, and all others with whom he comes in contact by sheer force of his giant-like strength, the popular star does work that for convincing realism has seldom been equalled on the screen. Indeed, so true does the characterization ring, that in viewing the picture one has great difficulty in believing that it is acting, and not the "brute master" himself.

A delegation from the American Legion will also be present, and fraternal delegates have been invited from all other veteran organizations. The Great War Veterans' Association convention will have before it many pressing national and international problems. Greatest among the national problems is that of unemployment, while the question of amalgamation of all veteran organizations in Canada into one body will be fully discussed.

FLEECE OF $15,000 BY BETTING FRAUD

MONTREAL, Sept. 9.—Destitute, wife broken-hearted and greatly upset and $15,000 out of his pocket—a lifetime's savings—through an old "confidence game," is the position in which Robert Brown of Bedford, Eng., but now a resident of this city, finds himself. Brown, according to his story, was fleeced by two men in a betting fraud, whose acquaintance he made by chance while on a journey from Quebec. The men, whose names were given as Barton and Millar, inveigled Brown into betting $10,000 on a "sure" horse. He did so and won, but was then informed that his winnings could not be paid until he had definitely established himself. Briefly, this meant putting up $15,000. To do this, Brown was forced to embark for England, where he got together all his money and returned to Canada, where the confidence men quickly relieved him of it.

Conservatism and Simplicity Noted in Suits and Overcoats for Fall

by Chester Feitel

Simplicity is the keynote of fall fashions for men's suits. All traces of the novelty garments have been effaced by the designers who have replaced them with a vastly more graceful, practical vogue. One dependent upon superior tailoring and high grade materials for its "class," rather than on trick features, as in the past seasons.

The tendency to conservatism is more adapted to the well-dressed businessman, providing a more dignified bearing conducive to true poise. The sporty suit has been succeeded by one that is more refined and correct.

Relaxing from their efforts to produce the so-called "smart" effects, designers have decreed that suits rely solely on their quality for distinction. Discriminating dressers have always been aware that it is impossible to imitate the inherent simplicity of high-grade clothes with cheaper substitutes, so perhaps it was their almost prohibitive prices in the past few years that begot the vogue of extreme suits.

The fact that the clothes purchasing power of a dollar has increased nearly 50 per cent, is probably, likewise, accountable for its abolition.

Suits for Fall Gracious.

Suits are built along the natural lines of the figure, rendering them easy-fitting and graceful. Don't be misled into believing that the fashion has not its own basic style features; they are as clearly defined as ever, but are of an unbridled nature constituted by the change in style is distinctly for the better, and the variation is an added charm.

From the high school youth to the mature businessman this fashion may be adapted with equal success.

Military Suggestions Gone.

Perhaps they lose something in sacrifice for the military suggestion that was in evidence, reminiscent of the dough-boy's uniform, but on the whole the change in style is distinctly for the better, and the variation is an added charm.

Coats are semi-fitted, with generally lower lines. Slightly waisted, several inches lower than in the spring and summer suits, and the pockets and lapels have likewise dropped. The lapels are medium notched, long and rolling. A medium vent is used, about eight inches, the shorter vent having proved ungraceful and not suited to the ordinary physique.

As to the number of buttons, it is wholly a matter of choice, usually governed by the type of figure and individual preference. Two, three and four button models seem to share equal favor.

Double-Breasted Stronger.

There is always a certain quantity of double-breasted coats worn, especially in fall, and although they are not featured they have also received their share of attention. Noticeable in these are the same proclivities as in the single-breasted models, and they lend themselves so well and readily to this treatment that there is a strong probability of increased popularity as the season advances.

The trousers seem to have struck a happy medium. Neither the tight bottom or bell-shaped trouser legs are to be used, but straight and full from the hips down. This is also an evidence of the conservatism of the prevailing style. They are to be worn quite long, breaking over the shoes, without cuffs at the bottom.

Vests Are Cut Lower.

Two buttons have been relegated to vests. They are cut a trifle lower, with longer points conforming to the general droopy lines of the suit.

Patch pockets were one of the innovations that showed the direct military influence, and have been completely eliminated. Succeeding are the plain flapped inserted pockets. It will be noticed also that they have been dropped several inches to a more natural position.

There is practically no partiality shown as to colors—if any at all is evinced, perhaps it is to brown, which is always attractive and serviceable, and has been somewhat neglected recently. However, green, grey, blue and mixed materials are amply represented.

Checks and Plaids Liked.

An overcoat of stripes has directed the choice to herring-bones, checks and plaids for fall fashions.

Overcoats, of course, show the same designing as suits, but are more liberal in their interpretation. Belts are often employed either fully circling or confined to the back of the coats. This produces a trim and jaunty effect relieving that objectionable lundled-up feeling.

Robby patch pockets are also noted, and successfully further the effect of sturdy outdoor smartness that is correct and permissible in an overcoat.

Variety in Overcoats.

Double-breasted models appear to be most favored, but the best manufacturers are also showing some very dapper single-breasted ones, especially in the lighter weight topcoats.

Very few fur-trimmed models are shown, and these confine themselves to a small detachable collar of seal, beaver or otter. Fur-lined coats are only displayed for motoring. The fact that the prices of furs have materially reduced might lead one to expect a more general use, but the reaction to that all-prevailing simplicity has predominated, banishing their application.

Raglans and Ulsters O. K.

Raglans and ulsters are serviceable and practical, and are built along strong, serviceable lines, insuring maximum wear. Some new and attractive materials are used, and the colors include shades of brown, green, blue and grey, also novelty mixtures.

For more dressy occasions or mild days, topcoats of lighter weight. Most obvious are the distinctive cuts and careful tailoring of these garments. They are quite short, barely past the knee, permitting greater freedom for the legs.

Blue and Brown Chosen Colors.

These models follow more closely the dictates for the suit coats. Belts and patch pockets, rarely being seen—straight, semi-fitted backs invariably appear. Blue and black seem to be the chosen colors for these coats.

Remembering the prime requisites of the fall vogue, quality and simplicity, one may expect to see fewer incongruities and more dignified and gracefully suited men this season. If some of the sportiness has been sacrificed this is more than compensated by the acquired distinction.

VIENNA RECOVERING FROM DEPRESSION

HOTELS USUALLY FULL

American Visitors Advised To Make Sure of Room Beforehand.

VIENNA, Sept. 8.—There are so many rumors about Vienna that it is almost impossible for the outsider to get a clear picture of what the city is like and what a foreign visitor may expect to find here. After her many and extremely unpleasant experiences during the last year, Vienna is full of contrasts. Most American visitors who come here for a short stay get very one-sided impressions of the place. Of two articles in American papers, one writer came to the conclusion that every American who wants to have a good time for $2 a day ought to spend some weeks in Vienna, and the other that American visitors will run the risk of being systematically deceived by cabmen and the like and insulted by the population.

An American traveler coming to Vienna ought not to overlook the precaution of making sure of a room beforehand, or if this is not possible, to take a train which arrives here in the morning and leaves sufficient time to look out for accommodation before night. The first class hotels are generally full, and in many cases unable to reserve rooms in advance. But if a traveler has already arrived and does not shrink from going or driving to the chief hotels, which are all situated in the Kaerntnerstrasse quarter, and quite close to one another, he can be almost sure to find what he wants.

If he does not he can take a room in one of the second-class hotels near the western station for a night or two. Apart from that a visitor to Vienna must never forget that he finds himself in a town which is only just recovering from a severe illness which had threatened its very life and that he cannot expect to find everything in exactly the same order as in London or Paris.

Life Again Normal.

Life has become again normal in comparison to the dreary months of winter and early spring of 1920. The outward appearance of the buildings leaves still much to desire, but it has improved, and people in the street are again decently and sometimes even elegantly dressed. Last year old uniforms worn by civilians predominated, showing that the wearers lacked the money for buying proper clothes. This year these uniforms have become rare. The average men, women and children are no longer pale and haggard, but have regained a healthy color. The street car service is not bad, and the number of horse carriages and motor cars is on the increase.

Artistic life is as intense as it used to be, and if a person is happy enough to be worried by the exchange rate and diminished buying capacity of the unfortunate Austrian crown there is no reason why he or she should not thoroughly enjoy the many attractions which the place has to offer. In fact, the hotels seem to be swarming with Americans. English is the predominant language in the hall of the Imperial Hotel and in the Bristol and Astoria on the Kaerntnering.

But the Viennese problem is not so much a tourist as a political and economic problem. The town is in a state of transformation, which will make something entirely new of it—without regard to the personal wishes of the native population or of the foreign guests. Vienna is simply obeying an economic law which has already proved stronger than politics, and the future will depend entirely upon this law, whether it may lead to a later union with Germany, which is not impossible, although improbable, or to a permanently independent Austrian state or to some sort of Danubian federation. This law is the expression of the fact that a big economic center always exercises a strong attraction on its surroundings by the mere fact of its existence, and that this attraction cannot be removed by artificial means.

The Gate to the East.

Vienna forms the entrance door to the Near East, to European Asia, as it is sometimes called. Where the last promontory of the Alps, the Leopoldsdorf, descends to the Danube, and the Danuberg, the first hill of the eastern range of the Carpathians, rises on the left bank, leaving a narrow outlet for the big river, there is the frontier line between Western Europe and its culture, and Eastern Europe with its Asiatic affinities. And it is at the foot of the Leopoldsdorf that Vienna is situated. This fact alone—if there were no others—would predestine it as mediator between west and east. But there is the Danube besides, with one of the best and biggest river harbors in this part of the world, and a big junction of transcontinental railway lines, converging from north, south, west and east. The shortest railway route from Trieste on the Adriatic to the Baltic Sea leads via Vienna, and the shortest route from London and Paris to Bucharest and Constantinople too. All these reasons make Vienna one of the most important transit places in Europe.

With her 2,000,000 souls the city is too big to be only the capital of the small country which has inherited the once proud name of Austria. It must either become more or die. It is today one of the most international of cities, where merchants and tourists from the Balkans and other states meet.

The Viennese want to make of their city a huge commercial and transit center. They arrange musical festivals and international fairs, and spare no cost to keep their big theatres and concert orchestras going. This year the state will have to pay a subvention of about 120,000,000 crowns to the two big state theatres, and whether this course may be right or wrong from the financial point of view, it has certainly proved the right way of saving Vienna from desolation and decay. By developing into an international center, Vienna gains a new right of existence, since its role as residence of the Hapsburgs is at an end.

AUTO PARK AT FAIR GROUNDS.

Autumn Directs Children's Fashions

A blue haze obscures the distant trees, purple against the sky, there is an acrid smell of burning leaves, little valleys of white frost line the paths in the road, and we are sure that autumn again holds its cheery and colorful away.

While the leaves are donning their most brilliant hues, at Jack Frost's command, alas that we mortals do not follow suit. Except for here and there a bright jacket, the little folk are getting ready for school, wearing navy blues and browns and the more sombre colors. Thank goodness, bright fairs are possible and sweaters and a bright plaid or two.

One or two of the Jersey frocks will not be subdued, however, but blossom forth in jades and tans, cerise and white and other joyous colors.

For School Days.
One little Jersey frock for school days is of jade green jersey, made very straight with a narrow belt of the green. Cuffs are of putty color, jersey bound with a narrow edge of green. A yoke of putty is bound the same way. Over each hip is a smart little arrangement, a perfectly straight panel made of alternate stripes of putty and green.

Two pretty little frocks suggest themselves for early fall. Perhaps these are not frocks, for they combine a smock with bloomers to match. One set is of red and white gingham, with white collars and cuffs. Black is used for embroidery on the white checks. Another set is practical in pongee. The smock is bound at the round neckline with orchid and also at the cuffs. Flowers very beautifully done in Japanese embroidery repeat these colors, with a jade leaves. The bloomers rejoice in a tiny pocket.

In taffeta, too, comes another set, comprised of smock with matching bloomers. Of taffeta the smock is trimmed with knife pleating of taffeta, at the round neckline, sleeves and hem. The front of the smock makes one deep scallop, ending over the hip. At the waist the bloomers more pleating appears. A few dainty little accents of red embroidery decorate the neck and yoke.

For a charming party frock, old blue taffeta is combined with coral crepe de chine. Two long aprons, or shall one say panels of taffeta, fasten over the shoulders. The bound round ended tabs from the front slips through a similar tab from the back. Again at the hem tabs hold the front and back panels together, except that here a pretty ribbon rose is added. The dress is gay with coral, fluffy with short round puff sleeves. A simple little bound neckline finishes it.

For the Baby Carriage.
For the wee infant matched pillows and carriage spreads are shown. One set was beautifully hand drawn in crepe de chine. A star shape of drawn work decorated the centre, while the hem was edged with wide Val lace. Another dainty pillow of pink silk covered itself with hand embroidered net, with a wide lace edge. The spread corresponded with white net over pink and wore a large flat pink bow of narrow ribbon.

For school wear for the miss, blouses and pleated skirts will be good and also sailor suits. For a pleated beige jersey skirt, a smart little box coat of

Intricacy and Lingerie

By Marjorie Howe Dixon.

Each year brings out more fascinating and interesting models in lingerie styling, charming in their lovely daintiness. Undergarments that are stiffly starched and plain, as in the good old days, when endurance was the chief demand, practically do not exist in these days.

Any woman can call to mind the severe undergarments of her mother's day, at which she scratched one, ugly, unattractively plain. Since woman's heart has always delighted in pretty, attractive lingerie, she has discarded those old stiff ideas, and now wears soft silks and linens, georgettes and Italian silks.

Corsets, too, have long since yielded to the popular and sensible demand for comfort. Many are made with inserts of elastic of few bones, or entirely of elastic. This year has brought out a soft garment, called a corsetette, combining brassiere and corset, to be worn at home when a real corset is not required.

One of the novelties in this garment is a corset made of silk braid in flesh pink. The braid is stitched where the bone casings are, but free in between. Another new little idea it boasts is the use of flat pearl buttons on tabs of the braid. Wide lace trims the lower edge of this dainty affair. Another corset was no wider than a sash. To be sure it duvety is designed, fastening with a single button. A practical crepe de chine dress of simple straight design wears a narrow belt. A gingham collar and cuffs add a touch of quaint freshness edging itself with pleating. Buster Brown must have designed the collar.

Among the coats, the comfortable camel's hair will appear again. Its raglan sleeves are belted at the cuff with a narrow strap and buckle. A high lady's chin, and her coat will fasten with more straps and buckles. The belt, not to be outdone, also rejoices in a buckle.

A cape back that makes a part of the sleeve is the feature of another child's coat, braided in an interesting design. A narrow belt doubles in front, and the way so many of them do, the daughter may tuck her hands into little pockets.

There are those who do not like autumn. With all these pretty things to wear, how can they dislike the season?

Variety of Styles.
Bodices and brassieres are simply unending in profusion of styles and combinations of lace, silks and ribbons. An Italian silk brassiere is one of these. Very popular are the hand-embroidered net bodices, with lovely little flowers in design. A narrow belt doubles in front, and the way so many of them do, the daughter may tuck her hands into little pockets.

The bride who will be choosing her trousseau will surely have a thrilling time. One wonders how she can ever want to demand at once, for it seems to want to belong especially to her. It must have been the demure orange blossoms that had to have matching bodice, bloomers, chemise and step-in-drawers, it must needs add a cap. This last trifle was nothing but a clever ribbon coronet with knots of orange blossoms trailing with pointed edge graces all the dainty parts to this whole, each of which proudly wears its own ribbon.

Irresistible Lingerie.
Others among the sets to match have their own breathless interest. Could any woman resist a raspberry confection of fillet and georgette, combining a fillet and chemise with step-in bloomers? Or will she rather be intrigued by a white Italian silk set of bloomers and a white striped with blue? The top of the vest, striped with blue, the top of the chemise wears a yoke of blue crepe de chine.

Breakfast coats for morning wear—pyjamas for the night and negligees any time between, each hour of the day demands its own lingerie.

For morning there is a wide choice among pretty coats of taffeta, changeable silks, pussy willows, crepe de chine and embroidered muslin, for gracing the table when husband wants his morning coffee. But just one moment. One cunning new little garment will not be overlooked. And that is a black and white noisily checked bathrobe. Before she appears at the time she will have hung up this kimono-shaped affair, with its wide band of yellow, all made of nothing less than bath towel.

Fanciful Pyjamas.
Pyjamas for milady started out quite simply, following the lines of those for men. But they just couldn't stay that way. Oh, no! And why should they? So they considered silk for material, especially crepe de chine, and added tucks and laces and things until, behold, a charming set. It tried to be simple and square and all. It hemmed its coat of pink crepe de chine with tucks of georgette, that turned a square collar and cuffs were of tucked material, not omitting those on the trousers.

Another pyjama set would be fine for traveling. It decided on grey crepe de chine, piping itself on all pockets with coral. A round collar of coral finished neck, and all its cuffs too.

Negligees look good enough to eat. A princess slip had slipped among them, demanding to be noticed. It was made of white net, gathered at the waist with a wide pink ribbon in a casing. Again at the hem the pink ribbon lurked in its casing, edged with a wide ruffle of the net. Beautiful hand embroidery decorated the bodice in a triangular motif, repeated again at the hem in front.

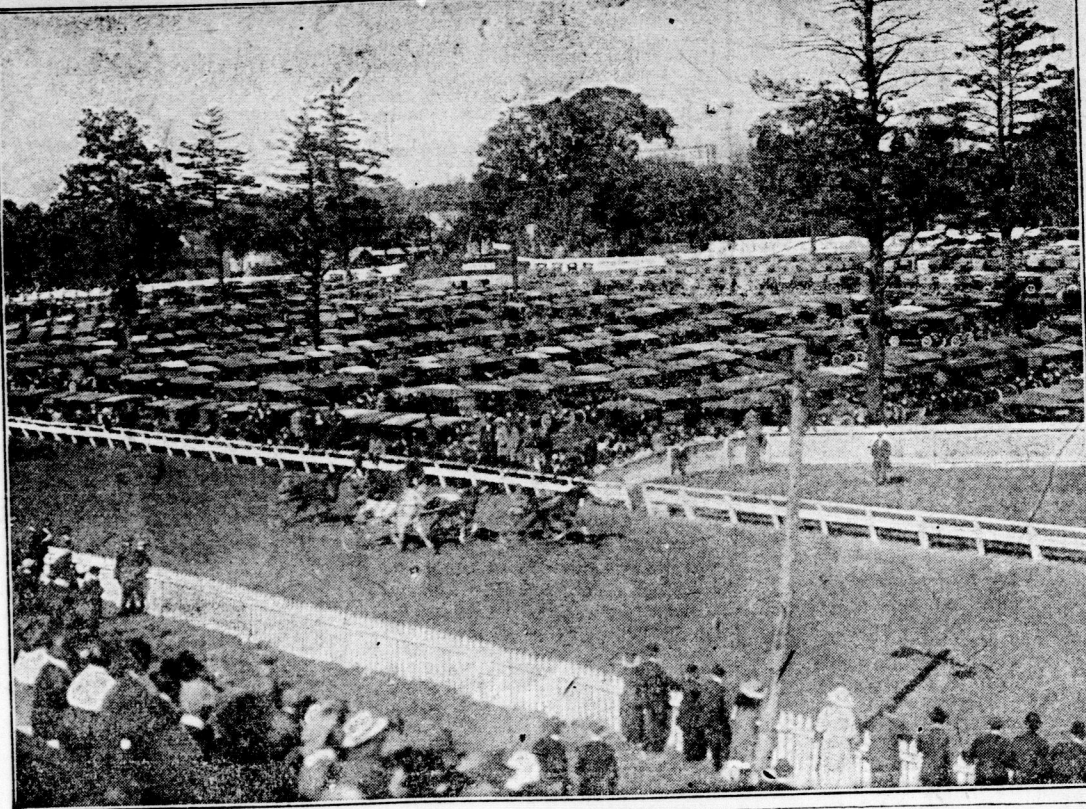

Of these two negligees, which will you choose? One is pink crepe de chine, the other hand embroidered net with fillet insertion. The net one conceals, but partly a dainty slip of pink silk, with accordion pleated skirt sashed with blue.

The crepe de chine negligee took a front panel, with a wide hem just beyond fillet insertion, and joined it to a similar back panel. Then it tied a sash around the two. At the round neck line it wore a lovely pastel bouquet flatter soft as a demure decoration.

EARLY THEORY OF PRODUCTION OF PEARLS.

The earliest theory of the production of pearls was that they were congealed dew-drops. Another notion was that pearls were the eggs of oysters. The Chinese solved the problem and found that pearls are due to the irritation produced by the introduction of a foreign matter, such as a grain of sand, into the shell of the oyster. This bit of matter is coated by the oyster with nacre like that with which the shell is lined, and the result is a pearl.

The Chinese and Japanese carry on the artificial production of pearls to a considerable extent. The shells of the bivalve are separated gently and a small bit of mud of a tiny piece of lead is inserted under the flesh to serve as a nucleus for the pearl. The shell then closes and the oyster is placed carefully in a stream of water and fed on manure. After an interval of four years the shells are opened and the nuclei-coated with nacre, are removed. Pearls produced in this way are genuine and wholly natural. The process is started artificially, but is carried on by the oyster in a strictly normal and natural manner.

LIFE AMONG GULLS

A Modern Robinson Crusoe Is Guardian of a Lonely Island.

On one of the Four Brothers Islands in Lake Champlain, Erastus Bartlett Webster leads a solitary life, with only sea gulls and field mice for companions. There he does his own cooking, collates the personal history of sea gulls and their habits and translates a Spanish work on California Bay in his leisure.

Webster is the answer to an advertisement inserted in a New York newspaper about Easter: "Wanted—A man to live alone on an island; inland like; eight miles from shore; transportation, food, shelter, boat, etc., furnished; no work, no compensation." He just happened to see the advertisement in New York libraries at his literary task. A book may be translated just as well on a lonely island as in New York; so, being accustomed to life in the open, he jumped at the chance.

The advertiser, Edward P. Hatch, jun., owner of the island, had 1,600 acres of the country, who became interested through the widespread publicity the "ad" brought. Webster was chosen from the applicants. It was in May when he went to the island to protect the sea gulls that make the islands their home from a public that had been carrying away eggs and otherwise disrupting the home life of the gulls.

Twenty years ago Edward P. Hatch realized that the gulls at Four Brothers must be protected; he built a cabin on the island nearest the shore and most thickly wooded—his own father had set out several hundred white pines among the basswood, oak and maple trees which were indigenous there.

Only one point on the Western Brothers offered a lee and a landing place at the same time, and when Webster first crossed over to the island that point was occupied by a fleet of gulls which rose, making a noise like a dozen mainfalls going up at once, as he jumped out on the beach.

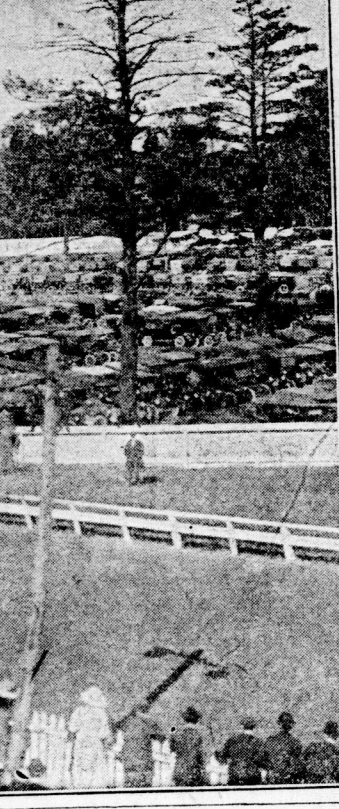

Climbing the little bluff, he found himself in an open "grove" of spruce woodland, with beaten trails leading along the top. The long, sparse grass was netted with the tiny trails of the field mice, and dozens of them skittered wildly away, zig-zagging swiftly along the paths, as he advanced. Gulls yelled and rose from the shore

WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. W. Beesley, Mille Roche, Ont., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for the past eight months and would not be without them. I used them for indigestion and teething and my baby is cutting his teeth without any trouble whatever. I can highly recommend the Tablets to other mothers." What Mrs. Beesley says thousands of other mothers say. The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach, thus driving out constipation and indigestion and making teething easy. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont.

Suitable for any room in the home.

of big bowlders. They were right out on the beaches. They were under trees on top of the bank, and they were on top of the bank—a total of 325 nests.

As Webster found them he set up markers, little sticks bearing numbers thrust unobtrusively into the ground or cracks of the ledge. He marked them all to ascertain whether the birds actually return to the same spots year after year. It is believed that they do, though the hazard placing of the nests would seem to be against it. But this belief is only one of several that are amazing.

For instance, in the fall the gulls hatched that year emigrate and do not return. One of the old birds escorts the new colony to its section of coast, and then comes back alone. But when one of the old birds dies or is killed a young gull comes in and takes that old bird's place—and nest. It is as if there were just so many apartments in the place and they were always filled.

To Every Father and Mother

"What mean ye fellow citizens of Athens that ye turn every stone to scrape wealth together, and take so little care of your children, to whom one day ye must relinquish all."—Socrates.

Thoughtful parents of today are faced with the same grave problem that troubled the Athenian philosopher over 400 years before Christ.

This is the era of progress. The call for trained men and women to carry forward in Medicine, Science, Engineering and Fine Arts is stronger than ever before.

If you would help your children make the most of their lives you should give them the best education you can afford. A university education is the first essential for our future leaders.

A college stands at your door with open gates ready to give them complete courses in Medicine, Arts and Public Health. Admission is by Junior Matriculation except for special or nurses courses, and the fees are so low that any one may attend.

Western University degrees are universally recognized.

This takes up little space in the room and is a most useful piece of furniture. Daven-os are now made in the same artistic period designs as other furniture, and can be procured in tapestry, velvet or leather coverings to match other upholstered furniture in your home. Boys' Clothes Reflect Men's Fashions for Fall

What is it in clothes that appeals to the youth? Style—quality—service? Not to have 'em just like Daddy's—that's it.

Not one iota of difference does the cut or the tailoring, or the material make. But it's the imitative instinct, prompted by a brand of hero-worship that guides his preferences.

With this knowledge of boy nature in view, designers have followed the same style tendencies as in men's clothes, and very sturdy, manly little figures do they present. However, the interpretation is more liberal and less severe as a concession to the feminine influence that must be still considered at this age.

Few Style Changes.

Lower waistlines, lower pockets and colling lapels are noted as in men's suits, but patch pockets and in some instances belts are still retained. Double-breasted models also are more popular than in men's garments. Norfolk jackets cannot be overlooked at the school boy age. Pleats and yokes are found in some of the favorite styles. These suits appeal to both the boy and his mother.

Trousers are in full knickerbocker style, a trifle longer and less baggy, to be secured just below the knee with a strap.

Fine grade flannels, tweeds, chevrons and worsteds are used in their fashion-

ing. Blue serge, club checks and shepherd plaids are favored, and some extremely natty looking models are observed.

Usterettes Have Snap.

Jaunty usterettes are offered for the school boy, too, fashioned of heavy materials such as are used for men's coats. Double-breasted models with patch pockets and belts provide exceedingly swagger and serviceable overcoats.

Raglan effects with set-in sleeves are also noted and are either generously pleated or full draped. Both the knee length and three-quarter models are approved.

The fabrics used are of the rougher textures, such as the unsharpened weaves, coarse tweeds, Shetlands, Chinchillas, etc.

Juvenile Styles of Interest.

Juvenile fashions have come in for a considerable share of attention in the last few seasons, and a variety of delightful little suits is the result.

Every mother knows that adorable stage when her baby boy is first introduced to suits with trousers and asserts his masculinity by demanding "pockets never-ending."

A charming model is the Junior Norfolk that is patterned after big brother's suit. They are box pleated either in the back or front or at the sides, with jaunty little belts. These suits button straight up the front, through the neck, without lapels, and straight trousers are displayed, although some with knickerbockers are also shown.

Eton Norfolks Remain.

Middy suits and Eton Norfolks also endear themselves to the proud parents' hearts and are liberally represented in fall fashions for the little fellow.

A more dressy model is the Oliver Twist suit. Dark velvet or corduroy is combined with white or daintily tinted silk shirts.

Always appealing for the kiddie are the one-piece knitted suits, that match. They are both practical and cunning and the baby is well protected against all draughts in one of these.

Caps Are Preferred.

Caps must be given precedence over hats, they appeal to the youngster as a college fashion. This school-boy preference is established and deserves encouragement for its suitability and neatness, as a cap will withstand hard usage and retain its shape and color far better than a hat.

So varied and fanciful are the hat and cap fashions for the very little boy that it is almost impossible to enumerate the styles. If any are given preference they appear to be the first sailor and tam shapes.

the opportune time came released to the Catholic Women's Bureau. This organization, which works in conjunction with the women's police division, immediately began to educate the girl as to the proper attitude she should take toward her husband. He had been found to be a clean-cut chap, generous, and well-deserving.

Word was received from the girl's home in the eastern city that she would be received there, so a trip was arranged. On the afternoon of her departure the husband took her to dinner. She is in the east now, and soon will return to live with her husband.

This is only one of many instances in which the women's police division has obtained results. A 15-year-old girl was picked up on the street only a few nights ago, taken to a home, and a few days later delivered to her mother in Pittsburgh. She ran away from home five weeks after beginning her high school education. She told conflicting stories to Miss Murray, but finally admitted the truth.

Children Get Care.

Two little girls, one 5 years old, another 9 years, were taken into custody by policewomen when they attempted to make their way into a picture theatre behind a group of adults. They gave misleading addresses to the policewomen, but later told the truth. The girls were taken home, where their mother was found drugged to an unconscious condition. The girls were placed where they are certain of proper care.

"I would much rather accomplish a little, and accomplish that well, than to back over the ground and gather up the pieces," said Miss Murray, in discussing her program.

Six of Miss Murray's policewomen patrol the streets from 5 o'clock in the evening until 1 o'clock in the morning. Another shift works from 7 o'clock in the evening until 2 o'clock in the morning. Stray girls are picked up in automobiles and taken home.

Detroit's division is handicapped in that the city has no vagrancy act. The policewomen here must be absolutely sure of the evidence before making an arrest.

"Do any of your staff ever attempt to lure men, and then place them under arrest?" Miss Murray was asked. "I should say not," she replied emphatically. "If would not allow that for one moment. To begin with, it is not dignified, and then we are not trying to accomplish anything for the men. It is the women we are working for, particularly young girls."

FRANKLIN'S WIFE DESCRIBED AS ILLITERATE.

Soon after his arrival in Philadelphia, Benjamin Franklin went to live with the parents of Deborah Read, who later

Fall Hat Tips from the Manufacturers

It can be truthfully said that Canadian men are becoming better dressed and more carefully groomed as a whole. Not effeminately so, as some are perhaps inclined to infer—for it's almost an impossibility to even imagine that of our virile, clear-eyed, out-door youths who so valiantly represented our manhood in the trenches. But wholesomely trim and immaculate they are becoming.

It is true that most men's fashions originate in England, but they are interpreted and vested with an athletic individuality that is distinctly Canadian.

Small Hats the Rule.

Correct fall hat fashions display an even stronger tendency than has been heretofore observed. The manufacturers are producing shapes with plenty of roll to the brims.

Lighter colors than usual appear to be most approved. Quantities of greys are being sold in addition to the very popular tans and lighter shades of browns.

became his wife, and it was not long before he and Deborah became engaged. Their marriage plans were interrupted by the necessity of Franklin's visiting London.

His stay in England was longer than expected, but Benjamin remained faithful to his "dear child," as he always called her, and returned to America, anxious to hasten the wedding. What was his grief and astonishment when, upon his arrival in Philadelphia, he learned that his "Debbie," less steadfast than himself, had succumbed to the wiles of a fascinating ne'er-do-well

Soft fedoras are accorded the greatest favor, as this shape is found to be best suited to the majority of men.

Fabric Hats Established.

Fabric hats of two-toned mixtures and scratch effects are such altogether comfortable and practical head wear that their position is becoming more and more definitely established.

Nothing need be said about fine felts, as they are staple and indelibly identified with correctness. Velours and beavers are coming in for more than their usual share of favor. This is due to the fact that these, which are the aristocrats of soft hats, have been materially reduced in price, and may be purchased at a reasonable cost for the fall season.

Derbies With Low Crowns.

Derbies, too, must be considered, as they are inseparable from the heavy overcoats of the season. Following the general tendency of smallness, they display low, flat crowns and narrow, curled brims.

lamed Rogers, who had loved her briefly and gone away. The deserted Deborah once more turned her affections towards Franklin, who forthwith married her. It is asserted by some historians that Deborah took her famous husband without the formality of divorcing her first one, but that fact has never been definitely established.

The Franklins, once they had weathered the pre-marital storms, lived happily together. Deborah, described by historians as an illiterate, superstitious woman, seems to have held her hus-

Hat bands are quite wide and are often of contrasting colors, offering a variety of distinctive effects. Although most hats wear their bow on the side, many are used on the back, both being approved.

Caps are full and generously fashioned. There is a jaunty about them that makes up for what they may sacrifice to dressiness, and there is an appeal to a cap to which most men respond.

They are made of smart woolen fabrics. Some sporty patterns are very popular, including plaids, checks and solid colors.

Fur Caps Lower in Price.

Fur caps have been reduced somewhat in price, but this fact does not appear to have increased their popularity. The ones shown are usually of Hudson seal, and are somewhat larger and more capacious than in past seasons.

Correct Fall Shoe Styles

By CHESTER FEITEL

The increasing reluctance men are showing to discard oxfords even in cold weather originally occasioned the necessity of a heavy model that fattered the brogue.

Although the brogue was originally intended for oxfords, the treatment has extended to shoes. Heavily ornamented, they produced a novelty in men's shoes that was very acceptable after the exclusive supremacy of ultra-conservative English walking models. So popular did the style become, that it was retained through the entire summer, and now is advanced from the novelty class to a staple fashion that will probably continue as a fall shoe requisite.

Comfort Important Factor.

Their roomy lasts and square tips are so comfortable and easy on the feet that this influence is noted in all of the favored shoe fashions. Even the exclusive English models are displaying more rounded toes, following the natural lines of the foot.

Brown is the popular color for fall. Russet and cordovan shades are preferred as a compromise between the very dark browns and light tans. Black, dull and gunmetal finishes as ever retain their position of correctness in all seasons.

Few Button Models Shown.

Not many button models are to be worn. A few patent leather ones with kid tops are displayed for strictly formal occasions.

More favored than the button models are patent oxfords with light hand-turned soles for dress wear. Spats are worn with these, giving the necessary protection from the cold and producing a very smart effect. For use in this connection the lighter shades of fawn, tan, pearl and beige are employed, but for more ordinary wear dark grey, brown and black spats are preferred.

Roomier Lasts Favored.

A word more about the more familiar and established English walking shoes. They are of a simple, refined vogue and always retain a place of their own in shoe fashions, varying but slightly in their general characteristics. The past seasons induced a more exaggerated pointing, but the roomier lasts of the fall styles have re-established the more natural dignity that marks these models.

The tendency to "square-toes" and more generous lasts is one to be encouraged, as it will produce a beneficial effect on men's feet, besides furnishing a more natural and graceful shoe.

Two-tone effects are rigidly avoided by the discriminating dresser.

When she was there, and her recreation, an investigation of her court, institutional, social agency and board of health records was made. A diagnosis of her mental condition was made. She was sent to the Ann Arbor Psychopathic Hospital for observation. The facts concerning her husband were investigated.

When the data was finally presented it revealed that the girl's stepmother had forced her to marry a young Lithuanian residing in Detroit, who had been advertising for a wife. They were married in the girl's church in an eastern city. She fought with him from the time they boarded the train en route to Detroit until she deserted him and was taken to a downtown hotel by a doctor.

This doctor had given the child $15, instructed her how to register at the hotel, and then left her. She was arrested a day later. Temporarily she was held as a suspect of a downtown robbery, then released to the women's division.

Finds Husband O. K.

With a picture of the girl's past before them, the policewomen formed a tentative plan for the girl. She was placed in the detention home, and when the Detroit policewoman, she is safe and sane. Contrary to the mental picture the layman has of her—a big, brawny creature, carrying a large night-stick—the policewoman is young and dignified. The policewomen of Detroit range in age from 26 to 34 years.

"My husband is like the devil, and he has great horns," explained a 17-year-old wife to one of Miss Murray's aides only a short time ago. The girl had been arrested in a downtown hotel after the manager became suspicious when she frequently called a telephone number and insisted that the party answering the telephone should come to her immediately and bring a gun.

Ordinarily one might expect the women's division to locate the husband in this case and attempt a reconciliation. But that wasn't the path pursued. Oh, no; the women police must know the facts, and in this case the facts covered eleven typewritten pages.

A history of the girl's family was obtained, facts concerning her father, her mother, stepmother, brother, maternal and paternal uncles and distant relatives. The policewomen delved into her previous employment, her educa-

XANTIPPE DEAD BUT EMULATED

Women Police Are Kept Busy Making Modern Wives See Error of Their Ways.

Detroit, Sept. 6.—Diogenes sat on the edge of a broken tub in Athens' streets centuries ago and pondered over his wayward wife, Xantippe, a woman who, in the present day, had she resided in Detroit, might have turned more grey the hair of Chief of Police women Mae Murray.

Xantippe is dead. Instead of her, blue-eyed blondes and dazzling brunettes, who insist upon scratching and biting their husbands, are daily at hand with the law as interpreted by the women's police division.

HOMUTH TRIES TO PATCH UP PEACE
IN NORTH OXFORD

Declares Farmers Are in Honor Bound To Carry Out Agreement.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

WOODSTOCK, Sept. 9.—Karl Homuth, Labor member in the Legislature for South Waterloo, addressed a public meeting here tonight. The meeting was under the auspices of the local Independent Labor party, and there was a fair attendance. Mr. Homuth opened with a resume of the work accomplished by the Drury Government at the last session, and then set out in an effort to patch up the differences that have arisen in the past between North Oxford Farmers and Woodstock Independent Labor party.

The famous agreement between the farmers and labor men, wherein the farmers were to support the Labor nominees for the Legislature, and in return secure Labor support in electing a member to the Federal House, was taken up by Mr. Homuth. He pointed out to the farmers that they were in honor bound to carry out the agreement, and he said that in case the Labor men did not receive the promised support they had a right to throw their support elsewhere.

"Labor in North Oxford has a right to a representative in either of the Houses, and I will support them," said Mr. Homuth.

The Labor member's remarks were almost entirely devoted to an effort to bring together the Farmer and the Labor forces in North Oxford. He called on the farmers of North Oxford to get behind a Labor man in the coming by-election. Hon. Peter Smith was announced as one of the speakers, but he did not put in an appearance.

CLEARING DECKS FOR ELECTION CAMPAIGN

OTTAWA, Sept. 9.—The Journal, in its news column today, says: "The Ottawa Liberal-Conservative National Association will meet shortly to lay the groundwork of the party convention. Little time will be lost by either the Labor, Liberal or Conservative organizations in clearing the decks for action. It is assumed that the three parties will have their respective candidates in the field before dissolution, unless dissolution is announced almost immediately."

Hon. Mr. King would devote his speech at the West York meeting to a reply to the address of Premier Meighen at London, it was announced.

VEALE IS SENT TO HIGHER COURT

Ex-Springford Constable Declines To Elect At Preliminary Hearing.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

WOODSTOCK, Sept. 9.—Charles R. Peale of Springford appeared in police court today to answer two charges, one of burning a building on the farm of Eli Barnim and the second of sending threatening letters to the Otter Fire Insurance Company. Veale declined to elect, but, following the taking of some evidence, which included the documents Veale is alleged to have signed acknowledging the burning of one of the Barnim barns, the other of sending the threatening letters, the magistrate sent accused up before a higher court. The defendant's health has been bad since he was arrested, and today he had to be practically taken to and from the courtroom.

VETERAN COLLAPSES
FROM MALNUTRITION

Unemployed Soldier Had Just Secured Work Through Auction Block.

BOSTON, Sept. 9.—The collapse of Edward Dixon, of Philadelphia, apparently from malnutrition, just after his services had been sold to the highest bidder, brought the second day of the auction block for unemployed on the Boston Common to a close after twelve men had been promised work.

Dixon, a war veteran, had prepared an appeal, which Urban Ledoux, leader of the unemployed group, read to the thousands of persons gathered around the bandstand. As Ledoux was reading an account of the death of Dixon's father in the war, which had left the young man alone, Dixon swayed and collapsed. One meal a day, and sometimes not that had been his portion, he said. Physicians said tonight that this experience and exposure from sleeping on the Common made his condition serious.

Bidders were more plentiful today than yesterday, and many pledges of food and clothing for the men in addition to payment of wages were forthcoming. Women acted as auctioneers, and put the men, stripped to the waist, through exercises, to show their capability.

Ledoux said that the auction would be continued tomorrow in an endeavor to find work for all the men in his care, as the best he could do for them now was to feed them once a day.

GODERICH TERROR
TAKEN AT DETROIT

Alleged To Have Blown Five Safes in Goderich In One Month.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

DETROIT, Sept. 9.—Safe-blower and robber with a sense of humor, who set the town of Goderich, Ont., laughing and filled it with fear, is John D. Kay, police declare.

He was arrested here for the Ontario police today.

Kay, the police say, had blown five safes in Goderich within a month when the mayor of the town posted a reward of $200 for his arrest. The next night the versatile "soup" handler entered the mayor's drug store, blew the safe and took $165. Then he drove off in a truck with 20 cases of prescription liquor.

This feat rather got the goat of the Goderich chief of police, who announced in an interview he would "get" Kay or know why. The same night the home of the chief of police was broken into and ransacked. The chief had no safe.

Kay apparently decided it was time to move, but Alfred Whiteside, provincial police officer, proved a good detective and ran him down almost as soon as he had hung up his hat in his new home in Detroit. He led Detective Sergeant Edward Graff and Joseph Garvin to Kay in a rooming house at 1433 Merrieh avenue.

ESCAPED UNHURT
IN 200-FOOT FALL

TORONTO, Sept. 9.—To fall a distance of nearly 200 feet and escape without any serious injury was the experience of a motor party of five who, while returning to the city from a corn roast in the country early this morning, were hurled to the bottom of Scarborough Bluffs when their car plunged over the brow of the cliff. The car is a total wreck, but the passengers, beyond a few bruises and a severe shaking up, are none the worse for their wild plunge through space.

LONDONER AMONG

Arthur T. Little's Stock Figured in Cattle Awards At Toronto.

TORONTO, Sept. 9.—Nine hundred of the best horses and cattle that Canada can produce, the prize winners of competitions during the last two weeks, supplied the feature of today's Canadian National Exhibition activities in a giant parade in front of the grandstand this afternoon. Well over half a million dollars stepped along the track on horse-shoes and cloven hoof, and the ribbons in which the animals were represented approximately another $30,000 in prizes and trophies.

Among the big prize winners represented in the cattle parade were R. H. Bull of Brampton, A. T. Little of London, and Wm. Lyall of Magog, Que.

BIG MISSOURI BARN
DESTROYED BY FIRE

[Special to The Advertiser.]

WOODSTOCK, Sept. 9.—James Young of concession 10, East Nissouri, lost his big barn tonight by fire of unknown origin. He lost his season's crops and a number of fine chickens. The loss may reach $7,000, and is partially covered by insurance. More than 500 autos blocked the roads as farmers from all over the district rushed to help.

A disastrous fire occurred on the farm of William McClary, adjoining the city this afternoon, when his fine large barn, together with the silo, hog pens and other buildings were completely destroyed. About 3 o'clock a haystack was set on fire from a spark from an engine which was being used on the farm at silo filling. In less than five minutes the fire had spread to the barn and other buildings, and despite the immediate aid of the men engaged in silo filling the buildings were soon doomed. Woodstock fire brigade was telephoned for and with their aid the house, which was situated closed to the other buildings, was saved after a hard fight. The loss will probably reach $5,000, partly covered by insurance.

Don't Buy Your Furniture Without Proper Deliberation

Are you going to buy your furniture while under the influence of a fast-talking salesman and the screaming type of a Hallabalo Sale where the only idea is "to get your money" and "the buyer must protect himself"? Or will you buy where you may go and look, compare values and prices—where you may take all the time you wish—where the salesman will take a personal interest in your needs, offer you suggestions, and then let you go home and think it over?

Do you think you know the game well enough to prevent an experienced, clever talking salesman from switching you off the "bait" and selling you "something else."

Your money will buy satisfaction or dissatisfaction.

Simplicity and A Liveable House

by Marjorie Howe Dixon

There is a subtle something that creates charm in a home. So many elements must be combined to make up this quality. And so much restraint must be exercised. In many, many homes, one is impressed at once with a vast profusion of objects. Such a house needs careful elimination more than any other one thing—could people but understand the restful quality of simplicity. Many a woman, if she would but sweep all the clutter from her dresser into the top drawer, and not let there be but three objects out at one time, would be amazed at how much easier this would make it for her, and how much more restful she would find it.

Rooms Express Personality.
As in dressing, one is careful to select an appropriate costume, so in creating a liveable home, one selects appropriate furniture. Small rooms will not stand large overstuffed suites. Large rooms must not be cluttered with light elaborate furniture.

Let us see what this season offers. Presuming the house to have high ceilings, generous rooms, fireplaces, as many of the older homes, and some of the newer ones, do what will be suitable? A luxurious overstuffed davenport, with loose cushions, upholstered in wool tapestry, hand embroidered, must be considered first. Here is a point. The heavy rocker and armchair need no longer match the davenport. And this well, too. Because the owner is allowed so much more play of his individual taste.

Another beautiful chair—only one should be used in a room—is beautiful in polychrome Italian Renaissance. A high-backed handsome old fellow it is, too, and elaborately carved. Then, one must have a good library table, one or two small tables, some musical instrument, and a shaded lamp, not to mention bookcases. A spinet desk will make an attractive addition.

A dining-room in this large high-ceilinged home will be stately in French Renaissance. The oblong walnut table has the center of attention, while one wall will boast an unusual console board. This is an extremely wide table, the top marble, of dull green, and the drawers concealed in the wood.

Opposite are two chests, the high one with closed doors, standing in dignity with carved legs, is for the silver service, while the low chest is for flat silver, and like the console board, marble topped.

Bedroom Furnishings.
For a bedroom one would choose a painted suite, hand decorated, or one of the natural wood finishes. Walnut and mahogany are good, in Hepplewhite, Sheraton, Louis XVI., according to one's taste.

For the smaller homes, where the large overstuffed pieces are too massive, smaller suites in cane and upholstery are appropriate. Velours are very popular for the cushions of these, also mohair, frize, and leather. A good cotton tapestry is a wise investment, promising at least eight or nine years' service.

In this lighter furniture all the good periods are available—Queen Anne, Adam, Chippendale and Hepplewhite.

A comfortable place for the living-room is a chaise longue, or if one prefers it, a day bed. For the small apartment there is a sofa that can be made into a bed very easily, supplying extra sleeping space.

Polychrome furniture is being manufactured for dining-rooms. It must be chosen carefully, else there will be too much color in the room.

For the bedrooms in the smaller house, walnut or mahogany sets are always good. The ivory suites are not as popular as they were.

It is notable that manufacturers of high-grade furniture will maintain their careful construction and good materials in their less expensive lines as well as in their costly ones.

For the breakfast room there are several types of furniture offered. Enameled sets, hand decorated, are very beautiful. One of these in Queen Anne style is a grey surface with a narrow gold line. Windsor chairs are good in this room.

A breakfast-room in fibre or reed makes an attractive place. Besides the table and matching chairs, one may find both serving table and buffet. A pretty fernery at the window will add living green, while a glass-topped tea cart will save steps for the housewife.

Crotonnes and Chintzes.
Brightly patterned crotonnes and chintzes are used to upholster fibre and reed furniture, for the sun parlor and porch. Enamel skillfully repeats notes of color from the crotonne patterns. Printed linen is too expensive for most people and is not much in demand.

Among the small pieces one may select for this pleasant room, are chaise longue, lamp, desks, small tables and lounging chairs. A pretty little sewing table had baskets at each end and a wooden top with two drawers in the center. A kidney-shaped desk of fibre has a cunning round chair to match. In one corner a small octagonal table may stand, to hold a plant, with a shelf below for magazines.

Tasteful arrangement of the hall with a few pieces carefully selected, is important. Mirrors lend themselves to this space admirably and are designed to match in periods, or are attractive in gold or colored frames. Placed above a console table with its bright bit of gay Venetian glass, the mirror feels quite at home. Pottery parrots are suitable below the glass, or a bowl of flowers flanked by candlesticks.

One of the handsome polychrome chairs with its high-curved back mentioned earlier, will be sufficient by itself for the hall. The chief service performed by the hall is the creation of a pleasant impression on those who are entering. Here again simplicity is paramount. In fact there is no room in the house where this principle is not of the greatest importance in making an interior at once restful and attractive.

CONVENIENCES FOR HOUSEHOLD COMFORT

BY MARJORIE HOWE DIXON.

The little mechanical devices that assist in making housework less of a burden are rapidly becoming so within reach of all, that every home boasts some of them.

And the workmanship is improving at the same time. One of the newest ideas is a sewing machine (with a motor), that folds into a neat table, that makes a very pretty console for the dining-room.

Of course, electric irons are a joy. There are the two sizes, one for the household and the other for the traveler.

Helps for Baby.
One can imagine several little comforts for the mother, whose baby's cry awakes her in the night. With a switch with a double socket she could turn on a little heater for her toes and a softly shaded light. Another outlet would heat a clever little bottle warmer, so that in great coziness and comfort the little one could be cared for and quickly sent to sleep again.

For the table there are several practical appliances. The lamp and coffee percolator are two of these. A waffle iron and a grill are wonderful helps at the breakfast hour, with their appetizing odors sent into the air.

One of the newer table accessories is an electric tea pot with its own tea ball. The tea ball is held on a chain through the knob at the top. When the tea is steeped, the tea ball can be raised and caught, so it will be free from the water, and not make the tea too strong.

Gas Appliances.

Where electricity is not available there are several very convenient gas appliances. One of these is the gas iron, and another is a light portable heater with copper facing, so that it sends out a cheery glow. Of course, the gas stove will have its clever little lighter, so that pressing a button lights the burners as the gas is turned on. With the gas stove comes a good kitchen heater for cold mornings, and also a modern kitchen contains a good incinerator.

So it would seem that with a well-planned house the modern woman should be far freer than her grandmother, who was not fortunate enough to possess all these labor-saving devices.

The Opportunity To Save On Quality Furniture Is Manifestly Remarkable

FALL and Winter are symbolic of home-life and indoor relaxation away from the toil and strife of the busy world. It is a time when family interests are renewed, new thoughts, new hopes and pleasures suddenly come forth. Take for instance your living-room—the social centre for your entire household. Is it furnished with the idea of creating contentment amongst those who frequent it? Do the younger members of your family enjoy entertaining their friends there because of its subtle charm, warmth and cheerful atmosphere?

These are the things that go to make a home what it should be, and it is because of the tremendous savings on all our furniture that makes it possible for everyone who wishes a home of comfort and charm to have one and at little cost.

Therefore, is it of significance to every home-lover that we are offering furniture for the home at very unusual savings at a time when it can best be used.

Come in and see the wonderful display that we are now holding. Our sales-people, trained in the Art of home-furnishings, will gladly offer their helpful suggestions to you. No obligation is felt in showing you through our various floors, bringing to your attention many unusual "finds" which will give the needed touch to your home.

New Period Styles

IF EUROPE had given nothing to the New World but the opportunity to reproduce the fine old masterpieces of furniture found within the walls of her mighty palaces and castles, we would be deeply in her debt.

And every little while we find a new authentic reproduction of some fine old piece, endowed with a surplus of charm, adding to the progress of furniture craftsmanship of America.

The charm of an Italian Renaissance Dining-Room Suite, the dignity of a William and Mary Bed-Room Suite, the daintiness of the Queen Anne Period of furniture, such things do not vanish with the passing hour, but take soil in the heart and the home.

Yet none of these things that we mention are expensive. So we won't talk about that. Rather, then, let us talk about quality, which is as old-fashioned as the furniture itself, so satisfactory and so characteristic of this establishment.

It is just such merchandise as this that you will find here, that of the highest grade, and at prices guaranteed to be lower than any other store in this city. We give you credit, and we do not charge you interest—a mighty important factor in furnishing the home.

RAPID RISE IN WHEAT DUE TO TRADE TANGLE

Market Advanced Too Fast—
 Big Slump Is Expected
 Soon.

BY AURELIUS.

(Copyrighted, Collier's News Bureau.)
 CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—“Take warning—breakers ahead!”

The grain markets, and especially wheat, have gone on a wild advancing orgy.

Prices have advanced as though a war boom were on. But do not be deceived. This is distinctly not a war boom.

Rather it is an hysterical reaction from a tangled and muddled business situation which was so bad that it couldn't get worse. But it has not got materially better, and the final readjustment to sound business, where everyone will make a normal profit, lies far ahead.

The advance in wheat has been too rapid. The big spurt started like a meteor, but still can prove a dud. If prices go any further it will likely mean that the ultimate horoscope must be re-cast and the legitimate bull market due some months ahead will be spoiled.

Not Out of Woods.

Businessmen—bankers and manufacturers—declare the country is a long way from being out of the woods, and they see a long vista of hard times and distress ahead.

The great right arm of labor will be at work producing normally. The advance in grain and cotton will step in the right direction, but unfortunately these basic industries cannot carry the full load.

The weight of the war still rests squarely on the shoulders of the world. Atlas's task has been somewhat lightened, but the Old Man of the Sea is still sitting on the secure perch.

The writer has been bullish on grain from bottom level and was bullish late in May, when the low levels of the last seven years were made. Wheat then had a 50c bushel advance and then slumped. There have been two more subsequent slumps and full recoveries.

History is due to repeat, perhaps not so great a scale, but it is almost certain that before there can be a sound and sustained advance that will carry prices to the levels of last May, other industries must show signs of real recovery. The writer regards this advance as having been inevitable.

It had to come, and this department heralded it when 95 per cent of the trade was bullish. Now all the recent hoarsely uttered and top-heavy long interest accumulated in the last few days, and when liquidation sets in the market will crumble.

Profitable Short Sale.

Those with profits in grain should accept them now, and wait for a big reaction before reinvesting their lines. This is good trading and expert speculation, even if the market goes some higher. If it does, the market—and this means wheat—will be an enormous profit for the speculator.

After such an advance as came this mid-week, the short side looks by far the most attractive and profitable speculation. When everybody is a bull, be a bear; when they are all bullish, buy.

In these few words are contained the only invariable rule by which money can be made by speculation. Success hates a crowd.

FURTHER ADVANCE IN WHEAT PRICES ON CHICAGO BOARD

September and December Sell
 At New High Levels.

CHICAGO, Sept. 9.—Wheat sold for new highs for September and December on the present movement on the Chicago Board of Trade here today, while May touched new ground for the season.

There was a break around 2½c early, owing to a bearish construction placed on the Government crop report, but it was more than recovered later.

May advancing ½c over the opening, which was the low mark of the day. The news, with the exception of the Government report, was bullish, the drought in Argentina being the leading factor.

According to Buenos Aires cables the drought continues and unless rains come shortly fears of heavy damage are expected.

September wheat closed 4½c over the opening and ½c over the low.

Corn was helped by the advance in wheat and closing prices showed gains of ¾c. The market showed more activity and while lower early on the bearish Government report, later advanced to above yesterday's finish. Buying was mainly of local character, but there was some investment purchases.

Oats showed independent strength late in the session and with broader trade advanced to a new high on the present movement, being ½c up at the finish.

Provisions were easier on scattered commission house selling, which offset to a great extent the advance of 10¢ in hogs and buying of October lard by packers.

ANNUAL PICNIC FOR PATIENTS IS HELD AT WESTMINSTER
Several Local Organizations Assist in Entertaining Former Soldiers.

With the aid of the weatherman, ably assisted by the Y.M.C.A., the Knights of Columbus, the local Red Cross and several other organizations from the city, the patients at Westminster Hospital were treated to one of the best picnics that has been held this summer. All afternoon crowds of citizens were arriving at the hospital grounds, either by the L. & P. S. R. by street car or motor car, to witness the annual affair and they departed more than pleased with their visit. The R. C. brass band, under the direction of Capt. J. Ryan, provided music in front of the institution throughout the afternoon, which, needless to say, was much appreciated by both the visitors, the patients and staff. The staff of the hospital wish to convey their appreciation and thanks to the various organizations for their aid in making the event such a great success and also to the following firms for their kind donations: Hobbs Hardware, Imperial Oil Company, W. McPhillips, Ontario Creamery, Edward Adams Company, S. F. Lawton, Gray's Limited, Pardon Hardware Company, A. Friend, London Soap Company, Johnston Bros., Struhalman & Ingram, P. S. Onn, The Swift Canadian Company (Toronto), Cowan Hardware, Moore Fruit Company, J. S. Perrin & Co., Northern Electric, Kingsmill's, Silverwood's, Mann & Co., J. A. Brownlee & Co., Scandrett Bros., City Creamery and T. B. Eschott. During the afternoon Robert Liddle and David Allan, representatives of the local Y. M. C. A., distributed cigarettes and chocolate bars to the patients and the Y. M. C. A. also kindly loaned most of the equipment for the sports. The Knights of Columbus were also very active in the sports. Although there are nearly 455 patients at the institution, only about 65 per cent were able to take an active part in the sports. There is quite a number of bed cases at the hospital, but the patients so confined were able to witness the games, thereby deriving some enjoyment. The committee was composed of Dr. B. T. McGee, president; Dr. T. L.

STORY HOUR OFFER FOR FAIR REFUSED
E. V. Buchanan Says Directors of Exhibition Turned Down Proposal.

Commenting on the success of "the children's hour" at the Toronto Exhibition, in which children gather at the exhibition grounds to hear stories told by young enthusiasts qualified in the art, General Manager E. V. Buchanan of the public utilities commission informed The Advertiser Friday that playground supervisors had been offered for these duties at the Western Fair next week, but that the offer had been turned down. "That is just what we offered," he said, "in addition to having supervisors on the job to look after children while their parents were enjoying the fair, but the fair board said 'No.' "It is a very good thing," Secretary W. A. Tanner of the board of education informed The Advertiser, "with good literature when a qualified person is engaged to tell the stories."

STRATHROY TEACHER GOES TO PETROLEA

PETROLEA, Sept. 9.—The high school board has secured Miss Mary McGugan of Strathroy as successor to Miss Saunders who taught Latin, art and physical culture. Farmers all through this district have practically finished their harvesting and expect to get an unusually early start with their fall work. The grain yield is turning out fair, with the exception of oats, which is light. London Fair will be a big drawing card next week for farmers and others in this section, and many large parties will go in by train and auto. Arrangements have been completed for a parade of the Orangemen on Sunday morning to the Methodist Church. The Black Knights will also walk. The Citizens' Band will lead the parade. F. Strangway of the 10th line east, a young farmer, will come up on Monday for a preliminary hearing on a charge of having seduced Edith Stark of Enniskillen Township, a girl under eighteen. Strangway was arrested by Chief Ferguson, and was later released on $3,000 bail.

Welcome and offer their best wishes for the success of the Western Fair, and hope particularly that every visitor will take this opportunity to make the closer acquaintance of our firm by paying us a social call at the Fair Grounds---the southeast corner of the Annex to the Palace---or at our newly built store, 248 Dundas Street.

Both are interesting spots, devoted exclusively to the sale of Musical Instruments—to Pianos, Player-Pianos and Phonographs, which cap the effort of the industry for inward and outward perfection. In their inner excellence and in outer aspects these Mason & Risch instruments are undeniably better than ever! THE MASON & RISCH PIANO, PLAYER-PIANO OR PHONOGRAPH of your selection comes to you FROM FACTORY TO HOME, and you may arrange for payment in a way that will meet your personal convenience.

YOU ARE ALSO INVITED TO HEAR

The Mason & Risch Phonograph

The great underlying fundamental of the Mason & Risch business is:

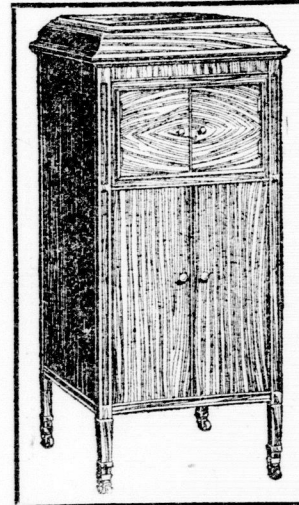

"That Men, Money and Machinery, brought together in a united effort to excel others, can produce a superior product in quality and value."

Built on this principle by men who have labored long to bring it to its high estate, the Mason & Risch Phonograph stands here today as a perfect system of human control over mechanical music-producing medium, almost unbelievably close, smooth and fine! To the Mason & Risch Phonograph has been imparted the same knowledge of tone-building principles that have made our Pianos famous for over half a century.

Come and hear it! You will enjoy it! It will play for you your favorite music with all the swing you could ask—expressively, sympathetically, brilliantly—as suits the occasion. With such an instrument in your home, you may hear such music as daily calls thousands forth to the greatest Concert Halls of the world to listen to the most beautifully finished works of the greatest Artists and Musicians.

As to outward appearance, the attractive lines of the different models will be apparent to you at a glance.

THE undeniable disposition on the part of the Canadian public to regard the Mason & Risch piano as a particularly desirable instrument to own is by no means a matter of the moment.

Rather, it is a steadily growing preference extending over a period of half a century that is simply becoming more strongly pronounced as time goes by. Go back in your memory and you will find that you have always heard of the Mason & Risch as a product of skill, of experience, and of artistic understanding of what correct tone really is.

If today that esteem for the Mason & Risch is much deeper and more definite the reason is: that the increasingly large number of Mason & Risch instruments in use is the proof in favor of their product.
