Hon. Bro. Alexander Vidal, who a short while ago was re-elected president of the Dominion Alliance for the Suppression of the Liquor Traffic, is one of the most active and distinguish-ed members of Canada's Senate Cham-

He was born at Bracknell, Berkshire, England, in 1819. In 1834 his father came to Canada and settled at Sarnia. Senator Vidal was educated at the Royal Mathematical School, Christ's at Upper Norwood, Surrey, England, and educated in the local school, and Hospital, London, Eng. When the militia was called out in 1837 to suppress the rebellion of that year, he served as a private and step by step was promoted until he won the lieutenantcolonel's epaulettes in the Lambton Reserve Militia, which rank he still retains. He was licensed a provincial land surveyor in 1843, and for 10 years followed this profession. During this period he was frequently employed by the Government. He accompanied Captain Anderson to the shores of Lakes Huron and Superior as commissioner to arrange with the Indians for the transfer of lands to the Canadian government.

In 1861 he placed himself in the field as a Conservative candidate for the Legislative Assembly and was defeated, but in 1863 he was successful in a contest for the representation in the Legis-lative Council of the St. Clair division, which comprised the counties of Lambton and West Middlesex, which seat he held until the confederation of the pro-vinces, when the latter body was abolished and the present Senate created. In 1873 he was called to the Senate and since that period he has been a conspicuous and able member of that body of Canada's representative men.

Bro. Vidal was over 12 years agent for the Bank of Upper Canada in Sarnia subsequently for eight years agent for the Bank of Montreal. As chairman of several committees in the Senate, such as Banking, Railways, Contingencies, etc., he has been from time to ne prominently before the public and held in the highest esteem through-

Bro. Hills called upon us and we were which it has fallen into.

He instanced the recent visit of Bro. Clatworthy, P. S. G. President, to Halifax, and said that the arranging of his visit by the Supreme Secretary was not of the best. He says they received a letter from the S. G. Sec., saying that Bro. Clatworthy would likely be with you, etc. In the meantime he had peen to Halifax and had left. Then the lodge instructed the secretary to notify the Executive that they would like, when a Supreme officer was on a visit in the name and at the expense of the Order, that he remain long enough to ee the brethren

It seems that Bro. Clatworthy was nore anxious to open the new lodge at Dartmouth than to see the members who had been instrumental in keeping alive the Order in Nova Scotia. It is evident the object in view by the P. S. G. P., was the fact that he could point out that he had opened so many lodges, etc., which he could claim to his credit. The lodge would have been pened at all events.

I have been asked by the members of our lodge why do not the officers fulfill their promises? What can I say; only tell them that we are so far away, and are so small in numbers, that we are not worth any notice! I think we deserve a little notice if we are in an iso

III. LADY STEWART'S TRUST.

I KNEW Allan Ramsey for more than thirty years while he was in India, and I should hope I'm a better judge of what he was than a stuck-up old maid with two footmen and a pet poodle, like Miss Selby. When I knew him first he was a slim Scotch lad just joined, and I was the major's wife. The major took a fancy to the lad, and so did I: we became great friends. Then Ramsey saved my life in the Mutiny, and we became greaterfriends than ever. He got rapid promotion, as a good many did at that time, and not e of them earned it better than he. He was major at twenty-six, and went home invalided while we were quarterat Delhi. When he came out next year he brought his wife with him. She was a neice I believe to this MissSelby, out a very different person. Alice Ramsey was a sweet woman. She was very young when she came out, and was quite the beauty of the station all the time we were at Delhi. Poor thing! India is a bad place for wives. I thought it would have broken her heart when she had to part with her only child, a pretty, delicate girl. We were at Calcutta then, and she came down to send the child away. I shall never forget the silent agony of the or young mother when she parted with that child.

I didn't see much of the Ramseys after that, as their regiment was always up country, and of course when he got a separate command there was no chance of our being thrown together, so it was quite a concidence that I should have been asked to look after Ramsey's girl when she came out to see her mother. It was then that I made old Miss Selby's aquaintance, and I can't say I took to her at all. No doubt she was fond of Ramsey's girl; when I came to know the child myself I could easily see there was no particular merit in that. What set me rather against the foolish old creature was the way she had of evidently fancying that and herfamily were something in par-ticular, and that her neice, Alice's creature, she was greatly cut to at ving to part with the child, which I pose was natural enough after ten ars, and I dare say some allowance ould be made for a person who has never known anything but what she could learn in an old place down in the midland counties, where nearly every-body she saw took off his hat when she and a nicer child I never saw. How she ever contrived to grow up beside that old trump at Selby Hall without I brought Ramsey's child out to him, and a nicer child I never saw. How getting spoiled I don't know, but she was just as simple-hearted a girl as ever I saw in my life, without one bit of nonsense about her. A pretty girl, too. I confess I like pretty girls and handsome men a good deal better than plain ones. Of course I know all about "handsome is that handsome does," and all that kind of thing, which is very good for copy-book headings, Don't tell me. I'm an old woman now and can afford to say what all women think, and what I say is that I like handsome goods put up in pretty par-cels. A good man is ever so much the better for being good looking, and a nice girl is ever so much nicer when she has a pretty face and a good figure. Alice Ramsey was a singularly pretty girl; her face was one of those that might turn out beautiful, or might just miss it as so many do; and, what was more, it was a very attractive face. I know I took to the child at once, and was able with a good consci to Allan himself, when he met us at ience and reputation to be spared long enough to go with her himself, and be sides, as he told me, Sandie Maitland had been felling him that he had kept her a little to long beside him for her health, and had advised him to send her home by a sailing vessel around the Cape to set her up again. Of course I knew Sandie Maitland well, for he had been surgeon of our old regiment for twenty years, and I knew he was pretty sure to be right : so I undertook to look out for some good ship and some nice passenger in whose care I could safely trust the child. Ramsey had grown fond of that girl,-almost absurdedly fond,—and he was as fussy as a hen with one chicken about her.

He worried me with directions and sautions till I sent him off about his nsiness. Just as if I didn't know better than any man what was proper and safe for a child like that! I like the idea, at my time of life, too!

exactly what I wanted, for times are greatly changed from those I used to know forty years ago, when everybody went around the Cape, and the sailing vessels were all one could desire Nowadays the steamships have spoiled the Cape route, and the sailing-ships don't depend much on passengers, and don't get the same class, as a rule, when thy get any. There were ships to be had, of course, but it wasn't easy to find any suitable person to trust with the girl. At last, however, I was lucky enough to hear of a good chance, Major Ransome of the Sikh horse had been invalided home, poor fellow, that he might die among his friends, I believe, and to please his wife the doctors said that a long sea voyage might cure him. Of course the poor creature-she was very young-grasped at the shadow of a hope, and they had taken passages by the Tanjore, a fine new clipper ship on the second voyage. The general had all inquiries made about her, and all were satisfactory. I went and saw her myself, and thought I should have perferred to go home in her to one of the P. & O. steamers with that terrible four days of the Red Sea. So it was settled that Alice Ramsey should go in the Tanjore under the care of Mrs. Ransome. We made every arrangement we could for the child, for the general had grown just as fond of her by that time as I was myself. She had been with us six weeks before we ound a ship, and, in spite of her being young, of course she had got to shut a pretty girl up in a bandbox in a place like Calcutta, and Alice was an inusually pretty one, so it was no wonder we had a good many men as as well as someladies—Alice was one to have many lady friends—to see her off.

I saw the last of her from the pilot essel, and I was never more sorry to eart with a girl in my, life. The last her face, and the sunlight shining through it like gold. I can fancy I see the child still. I understand that Miss Selby says that I am in some way responsible for what happened afterwards. If Miss Selby were here I might express my opinion of that lady in terms that meet her, I have been careful to state exactly what I had to do with the matter. That foolish old person may now say exactly what she pleases.

AN ENGLISHMAN'S SATISFAC TION.

There is something almost phenomenal about an Englishman's solid selfsatisfaction when he is alone with his pipe. Every nation has its own way of smoking. There is a hasty and vicious manner about the Frenchman's little Calcutta, that it was a real pleasure cigarette of pungent black tobacco; the Italian dreams over his rat-tail to have had her company.

You know already that Ramsey's the Italian dreams over his rat-tail cigar; the American either eats half of his Havana while he smokes the other, his Havana while he smokes the other, that read like a broken heart, and I or else he takes a frivolous delight in was thankful the poor fellow had his smoking delicately and keeping the daughter with him, for I knew that white ash whole to the end; the Gereven if she couldn't comfort him for man surrounds himself with a cloud, his loss it would do him all the good in and, god-like, meditates within it; the world to have sombody to look there is a sacrificial air about the after. Don't tell me about broken Asiatic's narghile as the thin spire rises hearts. Nobody ever breaks his (or, steadily and spreads above his head; for that matter, her) heart who has but the Englishman's short brier-root plenty to do and makes an effort to do it. Ramsey was to much of a man in any case to do anything so weak, but I havn't a doubt that child helped him it is the badge of the conqueror. The Victory which Terminated with Historic Trafalgar.

Off Ferrol, 1805.

The strategy of Napoleon was to so dispatch his fleets to put Lord Nelson off the true design of his movements, but at sea our admiral was too alert to e caught by the French fleet.

Napoleon formed the plan of sending his fleets, as each found an apportunity of escaping our blockade upon their ports, on a voyage across the Atlantic, with orders to concentrate at one of the West Indian Islands, and to do us, as we have said, all the mischief that yas possible there. They were then to eturn rapidly towards the Channel, raise the blockade of such French ports as had any ships in them, and then appear off Boulogue, before our fleets could be brought back and collected : so as to give him command of the sea for even twenty-four hours, to enable his army to cross and land upon the coast of Kent.

Admiral Villeneuve, with the Toulon leet, and Admiral Gravina, with the Spanish Cadiz fleet, succeeded in getting to sea in the spring of 1805, with 18 sail of the line, and crossed the Atlantic to Martinique. In eager chase, Nelson followed them with only 11 ressels; but Villeneuve succeeded in doubling on his pursuers, and hauled up for Europe. PUBLIC AFFAIRS.

.. * * It is not infrequently the case that even deterioration contains within itself the seeds of its own recovery," writes Dr. Parkhurst in September Ladies' Home Journal, in an article on "The Young Man as a Citizen." "It is a lesson that has many times been taught in the course of history, that decadence has to reach a certain point before its symptoms are sufficient to arrest effective attention. That attention is now, to all appearances, being arrested. Notwithstanding all the wily manœuvreing that is being practiced by our political tricksters there is growing up among our young men an having a membership upwards of 13. quiet observation that contains the possibilities of large effect. Personally, I have never known the like of it. The politiciars may be a large that the politiciars are a large that the politiciars are a large that the politiciary may be a large I have never known the like of it. The politicians may love their country for what they can wring out of it, but there are thousands of young men in our cities, and hundreds of thousands of young men in the country at large, who have souls as well as pockets, and who, if wisely directed and felicitously united, can, as a very easy thing, wrest our institutions from the hands of the spoilers and devote them to the behests of the people."

OUR "TENTH" YEAR.

With this issue the ANGLO-SAXON enters upon its tenth year.

We launched the Anglo-Saxon in doubt as to what the ultimate result yould be-the field was a new one-but we were hopeful of accomplishing the object of our aim-the bringing together in union for strong and effective purposes the English nationality.

The hope of our ambition is now an assured fact.

In 1887 the Sons of England Society represented only 44 lodges, with about 5,000 members. To-day numbers 230 lodges with about 15,000 members, and the Anglo-Saxon has been credited with being the chief promoter in bring about this great increase in numbers. If it has not fully met the sanguine expectations of our friends, the increase has been solid and substantial. With the Sons of England the Anglo-Saxon has grown in favor, it has been there exponent under all'circumstances.

The Anglo-Saxon has experienced many critical moments, but thanks to its many devoted and stalwart friends all these difficulties have been over-

During our ten years of existence w have enjoyed the privilege of a large circle of contributors from all parts of the Dominion. Their opinions have been read with pleasure. The ANGLO-SAXON has been the means of keeping up a fraternal feeling throughout the provinces—those on the Pacific slope feeling the inspiration of those on the Atlantic coast-both vieing to do their of our correspondents, thereby linking a strong national spirit together. We have never lacked for stronger supporters and sympathizers in our rts than we have found among Englishmen of the S. O. E. lodges, and we hope to merit their continued support and assistance in the undertaking we have set before us.

JOHN W. CARTER Supreme Grand Secretary.

Office of the Supreme Grand Lodge,
Toronto, Sept. 10th, 1896.

For an officer of the S. O. E. to keep in touch with the progress of the Order he must read the Anglo-Saxon.

PARTIZANSHIP. ,

We are in receipt of a lengthy com nunication from an esteemed corres pondent in Winnipeg, Manitoba. Our brother writes in a factious spirit of the ecent events following upon the downfall of the Tupper Ministry. His opinions are not shared in by the vast majority of Canadians, -who are more than satisfied with the action of Her Majesty's Representative. Even the Ottawa Citizen, the local Tupper organ, in an editorial of the 22nd September writes as follows :-

"It seems to us undoubted that His Excellency was within his plain con-stitutional right in refusing to sign the lisputed Orders-in-Council."

Our correspondent in the West gives an account of the differences between the Conservatives and the Liberals in the British Parliament, but these diferences abroad do not bind nor are hey shared in by the parties in Canada. The Canadian Conservatives bear no esemblance to the English ones but continued his sanguinary customs. He plied to D.D.'s. king of Dahomey was asked why he s reported to have replied :- "The Conservative party is very strong in that we have always advocated the policy of Conservative party in Canada, we shall answer by quoting from an editorial which appeared in our issue of January, 1888:-

"The object the promoters of the Anglo-Saxon had was to give their efforts and assistance to cons the mighty British Empire, nay, rather the Empire of English speaking eoples; to oppose strongly anarchy and dis-loyalty to the constitution of our country; to cause the name of Engand to be held in honour through the virtuous actions of her sons; to bind Canada more closely to the Mothercountry; to remove all cause of irritaion between Canada and the United States of America; and to make Canada great by making its people on in allegiance, language and laws."

We have not changed in our aims we hold Canada above Party, but the Empire before all, inasmuch as in the British Empire we think we see the ark of political safety and regeneration for the whole world.

TRAFALGAR CELEBRATION.

There is a movement working throughout the Empire for a fitting elebration of the Battle of Trafalgar on the 21st of October.

England on a large scale, from among the Coast Guards and Royal-Marines, 88,400; and the addition of 28,600 pensioner reserves—making a grand total of 112,000 sailors.

In Canada a number of the Sons of England lodges are taking the initiative in this the most brilliant of England's naval victories. We hope the pirit which actuated the men under Velson, are still dominant in Englishmen of the Dominion, and may the notto which inspired his men, and are felt to-day, be used by us, and may every Son of England do his duty and honour the hero who said, "England cts every man this day to do his !" The salt is in the Englishman's blood still, and his passion for the sea is stirring, and the enthusiasm will be inbounding on this occasion.

Every lodge can get up an enternt of song and speech, and a few od addresses and naval songs would leasing set off to the monotony of om. It would draw m Englishmen together than any other eitherto suggested movement. Let us have a worthy celebration.

A Welcome Visitor.

Ottawa had many visitors last week, come than that of Thos. Elliott, Mayor of Brantford, and

P.S.G.P. of the Sons of England.

Bro. Elliott is a capital fellow to spend an hour with, he is always full of in teresting facts, particularly that of the Order. He assured us that the efforts we were putting forth in the interest of the Order were highly appreciated throughout the West, and he hoped we would not relax, but continue until the parnacles which were now so tightly clinging to the name of the society vere loosened and thrown off.

Bro. Elliott was in Ottawa on busi ness with the Government.

FREE LITERATURE.

We have been written to by several District Deputies, enquiring why they do not get the Anglo-Saxon regularly. For the past two years we published the names of D. D. officers also sup-plied them with copies of the ANGLO-SAXON which were paid for by the S. G. Lodge, but this year the Executive did not deem it important enough to supply the D. D.'s with literature. After being repeatedly asked for copies and requested to publish the D. D.'s names and addresses as formally, we wrote the Executive to continue the former proposition, and after two months' waiting was assured that it could not be entertained. We there upon published the names as issued in the G. L. Report, and occasionally mail a copy of the paper to those among the D. D.'s who have not become subscribers. Now, we think that the Executive should undertake to supply literature to their officers. A District Deputy wrote us last week: "I would like to have a lozen copies of your paper, it is the est means I can use in canvassing for members." We sent the dozen papers, but we think—and any reasonable member desirence. member desirous of doing what he can for the Order would-that the Execu-

A resolution was past at the Grand Lodge at its last session urging Domin Dahomey."

As to the charge made by our friend, page 111. Up to date no steps have een taken to carry out the wishes as expressed in the motion. As far as we can learn the desire of G. L. was that such a step was necessary in the interest of the Order, and there are no legal or logical reasons why it should not be arried into effect. We hope some thing will be done to have the necessary legislation effected at the next session of the Dominion Parliament, and not allow the resolution to remain on the should not the Executive carry out the instructions of G. L.? Why should delegates from subordinate lodges loose their time to advance the Order if it is not heeded? Can the officers expect obedience when they themselves disobey?

> Several communications have reached ur office of a very interesting nature but the senders have failed to comply with the rule of sending their nar We insist upon the observation of this rule. The communications we refer to are signed, "An Englishman," and "A iciary Member." One deals with political matters and the other with that of the Beneficiary. Another bro-ther writes us to the effect, why not get up an agitation to have the White Rose made a qualifying degree for the Beneficiary, or in other words none but Beneficiary members to become White Rose members. Our columns are open for any brother wishing to contribute upon these lines. Something should be done to make the Beneficiary more popular and attractive to the un-insured members. We are sure the present methods of the Beneficiary Board is not meeting with general approbation in the Order.

The Record, with headquarters in Shaftesbury Hall, Toronto, has dis-robed itself of its official authority, and has laid aside its "Yellow Jacket and Peacock Feathers." It announced its unofficial and humble position in the August issue. What about the official news extracted from private letters, which are sent in confidence to the S. G. S? Surely that is not to be discontinued? The concern boasts of a P. S. G. President as financial manager. They also boast that their issues are gratuitous!

As mentioned in our last issue, the visit of Bro. Geo. Clatworthy, P.S.G.P., was one of personal gratification to vide the enquiry from lodge Chebucto, of Halifax, to the Supreme Secretary, —"why did not Bro. Clatworthy remain long enough to be seen by the members in Halifax?" These visits and routes are so imperfectly laid out that they smack of the Jack-in-the-Box idea, they are here and there and gone and nothing done, but the "expensional be charged up.

The responses to the circular we sent to the lodges has been extremely encouraging. We trust the brethren who ented to represent the ANGLO-SAXON will meet with a hearty support to their solicitations. Our object in taking this method of placing the ANGLO-SAXON in the hands of the brethren was to create a stronger national sentiment within the ranks of our Order, and in the near future make of our nationality s dor in the com or take a licking, we are always ready and waiting for the interview. We have licked ten such attempts as the Record already. Why a year's sub-scription when it is gratuitously circulated? The news editor must be more careful when he steals! The Anglo-Saxon enjoys a large circulation in England. 'Application was made for the placing of 300 copies of last issue. This does not include copies sent "home" by readers of the paper in Canada to their friends in England. One D. D. sent 20 copies.

In another place will be found an official notice" from the Executive. We think it would be well that the Exutive should re-construct the claus eferring to its own governance. Until hat is done, and the Supreme Grand ecretary is moved off of being an officer who has the giving of a vote and assisting in deciding points at issue—he often has given his version of the case in previous correspondence pending the meeting of the Executive—friction and misunderstanding is bound to occur, and a serious want of good feeling prevail between the members and Executive's decisions. We hope the memers who have written to us on this natter will make an effort to rectify this unbusiness like state of affairs which the Order has borne with suffering patience.

How it is Received.

We give the following, as a sample of some 43 letters, including resolutions passed by lodges, which have reached us during the past month condemning the springing upon the Order under books of G. L. as "dead wood." Why false pretences of the Record. Space will not allow us to deal at length with the communications this issue. We shall continue to pursue our course of explaining the situation of affairs until justice is done the members, and the Order is purged of the cliques, and falsifications presented to the member as official in the gratuitous fabricator from Shaftesbury Hall. The letters of appreciation are not alone confined to "ordinary member," but from entlemen who carry the highest titles se men know the of the Order, and the iquitous ropes and how they are nbitious schemes at the expense of the Order. The resolutions we refer to ave been sent to the Executive by the odges, so that they cannot plead ignorant of the feeling which is prevailing throughout the Order. We quote:

"Your circular letter received. In answer would say, that I must admire your pluck in the way that you are working in spite of the greatest opposition. I must also that I am pl that this lodge has taken in regards to the "Record." Upon my reading their notice asking for the names, etc., of the members, a motion was made that I was not to furnish them, as they wished to have nothing to do with it, after the action taken at the last Grand Lodge. They send me a bundle of every issue; the greater part is now on hand, nobody wants them."

Decidedly the Best.

SUDBURY, Ont., Sept., 9th.
DEAR SIR AND BRO.—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your circular, issued a few days ago with a view of in-creasing the circulation of the Anglo-SAXON among Englishmen, and I as sure you my hearty co-operation. Not only has the Anglo-Saxon been (and we hope will continue to be) the mean of attracting a large number of Eng-lish immigrants of a desirable class to Manitoba and the Northwest; but in a patriotic sense I consider it one of the best mediums of information of par. ticular interest to Englishmen gener ally in this country, and as such it deserves the support of all who desire to maintain British connection and the supremacy of the British Empire.

As you are already aware, copies of the Anglo-Saxon go to 12 members of Lodge Sudbury, exclusive of myself, but it is at present a matter of regret that out of the . . number in good standing, there are only live or six who take any active interest in affairs pertaining to the Order.

Wishing you every success, and that this your tenth year of publication may prove a prosperous one for your-self and our noble society in general.

Yours fraternally, F. A. LUCAS,

"Infirm of Purpose!"

In our last issue we described at some ength the work of the Third Congress of the Chambers of Commerce of the Empire which was held in London last June, and quoted the resolution which it adopted unanimously, and which re commended a reference of the subject of closer inter-British trade relations to an Imperial Conference for consideration, There is no doubt that this resolution constitutes a distinct step in advance of any former pronouncement regarding this matter by any body of British merchants in conference assembled. At the same time it must be noted that Her Majesty's Government is not advised to take action as regards the Conference until the suggestion has been made "on behalf of the Colonies or some of them." This is in substantial greement with Mr. Chamberlain's notions regarding the requisite procedure. He insists, at the very start, that the initiative shall be taken by the Colonies, regardless altogether of the fact that proposals from that quar-ter have, in times past, met with scant courtesy at the hands of various home governments and have only resulted in provoking ungenerous criticism and unfavorable rejoinders on the part of English politicians.

Two examples may be cited in proof of this. Nearly five years ago the Dominion Parliament addressed Her Majesty praying for the abrogation of "unfortunate" Commercial Treaties, the nature of which has been frequently explained in our columns. When the subject was brought up in the House of Commons, on the 9th of February, 1892, Sir M. Hicks Beach. then as now a member of a Conservative Cabinet, was pleased to remark as follows :-"I venture to say that we should view with the greatest possible respect any resolutions passed by the Dominion Parliament, and we should give them our best attention. But we should do so with the recollection and with the belief that we are better able to judge of the commercial relations of this country even than the Houses of the Dominion Parliament?"

This was the politely contemptuous way in which Canada's suggestions were then met. Later, when a Liberal Ministry had to deal with the recommendations of the Ottawa Conference, Lord Ripon declined the recommenda tions of the Colonies as regards prefer ential trade, informing them that-ential trade, informing them that—

"a consideration of the practical difficulties, and of the more immediate results of a system of mutual tariff discrimination, has convinced Her Majesty's Government that, even if its consequences were confined to the limits of the Empire, and even if it were not followed by changes of fiscal policy on the part of foreign powers unfavorable to this country, its general economic results would not be beneficial to the Empire."

In view of such experience as recards

In view of such experience as regard England's attitude on commercial ques ions, it must be admitted that the invitation to "try again" cannot be very mpting to Colonial statesmen

Moreover, any inducement, that might cause the Colonies to enter upon a third attempt to establish preferential trade with the mother country, vanishes entirely when the basis of negotiation set forth by Mr. Chamberlain is considered. The following are his

"On the other hand, as I have said, the Colonies while maintaining their duties upon foreign imports, would agree to a free interchange of commodities with the rest of the Empire, and would cease to place protective duties upon any product of British labour."

It can safely be said that the publication of this condition at the recent Commercial Congress produced a feeling of dismay among the Colonial delegates, which founed expression in everal of their speeches. For instance the Hon, John Henry, of Hobart, Tasmania, pointed out "two insurmount-able objections—either of them fatal" to such a proposal as Mr. Chamberlain's.
These objections were the financial necessities of the Colonies and the protectionist sentiments prevailing in most o

"I think," "said Mr. Henry, "that if Mr. Chamberlain had studied this question in a practical way from a Colonial point of view, and mastered al the facts in connection with Australian he facts in connection with Australian hance, he would never have laid town the position which he did in his address yesterday, because it is quite as impracticable as the one that he threw aside, the proposal for a free trade policy between the Australian Colonies and Great Britain."

It is with much regret that we are thus compelled, on second thoughts, and after further study of the process ings of the Congress, to modify our opinion of Mr. Chamberlain's proposal. The truth is that his Congress speech, neutralises the one delivered at the Canada Club Dinner, which had raised, in an unprecedented degree, the hopes Sec. Possibly, however, it is not Mr. Chamberlain but his colleagues in the Cabinet who have said, "We will proceed no further in this business." Perhas Lord Salisbury or Sir M. Hicks-Beach sees lions in the path. It is strange that the strongest Conservative Government that England has ever had should hesitate to effect that which Beaconsfield long ago declared to be necessary for the Consolidation of the Empire, namely, the establishment of an Imperial Tariff; and indeed of one altogether distinct and for totally dif-ferent purposes than the various local tariffs now in force in the different div-isions of the British Empire.

The Immigration Problem.

NOW IS CANADA'S GREAT OP-PORTUNITY.

There are now many reasons presenting themselves which go to show that Canada will get, in the near of elements hostile to its commercial development under British ausnices. tion from England. The features that The general effect of that has been that giving a certain amount of protection have worked against Canadaduring the past 30 years, are now disappearing. The misrepresentations made in England by the United States officials, a revenue tariff for fifteen years, and both railway and land companies are both railway and land companies, are the Right Honorable gentleman who free trade—and in the long run the insinking before the truth of the statements of the farmers who give their testimony of the opportunities and tariff. Well, Mr. Chairman, under advantages of Canada for their becoming known through the active from $68,000,000 to $30,000,000 as the policy which, in the long run, will conbrethren in England. Canada is also branch of the Interior Department, and the articles upon Canada and her broad and her resources in the newspapers, etc. By a judicious use of Canadian literature circulated in England, the advantages of Canada will alone bring forth the result aimed at. The word "America" was so lavishly used by the agents of the United States, immediately after the civil war, that "Canada" was com pletely lost to the mind of the English people. By such a liberal use of the word "America" it became so in-stilled in the minds of the English people, that they took it for granted that it included " British North Ameri-emigrate to the colonies rather than elsewhere ought to grow stronger. The United States has always been our chief competitor. Now it retires from the race for the best of reasons. Na-turally the colonies become the gainers. Where else will Englishmen, Irishmen and Scotchmen, anxious to better themselves, go? Then the active sentiment in fayor of British unity and the building up of the Empire falls in line with this new current in the tide of migration as nicely as possible. Britons in leaving the British Isles, do not go out from under the flag; nor weaken by compulsory desertion the strength of the Empire. Canada is better situated than any country on earth to take the overflow from the British islands. It lies closer to them than any competitor that car-ries the flag; and it is situated on about the same parallels of latitude. The very similar natural conditions nted by the United States allured presented by the United States allured Englishmen for many a long day; and Canada has these natural conditions, still open to the new settler and made the more attractive by the presence of British political institutions and commercial principles.

A pushing immigration policy ought to obtain for Canada practically the whole surplus agricultural population of England.

You have heard some-thing from our friend Mr. Cockshutt of the struggles which we in Canada have had to face. #### The Capture of Quebec-1759.

BY FRED. A. BRADLEY. Wolfe was one of Britain's shining stars, The bravest of the brave, When he led his men before Quebec, For Canada to save.

Montealm had the cliffs well fortified, With many bristling guns; and a stronger place had never fell To the hands of British sons.

At last, covered by a false attack, On the opposite "Beauport" shore, Wolfe sailed his fleet above the town, With one thousand men or more. That night, in boats with mueffled oars,
They glided down the stream;
And reached the shady cliffs once more,
Without been heard or seen.

They landed in a lonely cave,
Which at present bears his n Were on the field of fame.

As soon as Montcalin saw Wolfe's men, And heard their muskets rattle, He marched right off against them To fight the deciding battle.

It needed but one British charge, To cause the French to run; But our brave Wolfe died on the field, So happy and so young.

Montcalm, he died a noble death; As the best of Quebec's defender and dying, said: "I'm glad I die "Before Quebec surrenders."

And now since Canada has been won, Against such odds and straits: "Let us keep it for ourselves," I say, "Don't give it to the States."

Ottawa, 21st Sept. 1896. [The above lines were composed by a 14 years of age.]

MEN AND WOMEN

WHO HAVE HELPED TO MAKE

ENGLAND GREAT.

Archbishop Anselm completes his great work, "Cm Dens Homo," (Why od became man), a treatise on th almost certain, that William's death was something to be thankful for.

In 1105 Henry and his brother Robert have some serious differences and Henry undertakes a trip with an army to Normandy in order to thrash his brother and gobble up the Dukedom. He and Robert meet, however, and endeavoured to patch up an agreement, but all to no use so in 1106 he invaded to the convention.

Two other papers which have existed for the Executive's approbation, did not survive long enough to be effective in their efforts. But still they were to Normandy in order to thrash his brother and gobble up the Dukedom. He and Robert meet, however, and endeavoured to patch up an agreement, but all to no use so in 1106 he invaded Normands and the Executive expression.

brother, was in Palestine with het Crusaders. Henry, his younger brother, immediately went to Winehester and took possession of the royal treasures, then he proceeded to London, when, with the assistance of the Earl of War-wick, he was chosen King on the 3rd of August, 1100, and was crowned at Westminster Abby on the 5th of the same month, by Maurice, Bishop of London. The people of England, much against the wishes of the great Barons, took kindly to Henry because of his having been born and brought up in the country. One of the first acts of Henry I, was to marry Matilda, a daughter of Margaret and Malcolm, of Scotland, and sister of Edward, King of Scotland. This Marilda was a great-granddaughter of Edmund Ironsides, and Henry, by marrying her, united the Norman with the Saxonlines. Matilda, who inherited much of her mother's one who did much for the good and gentleness, mixed with a fair share of her father's energy and will power, was sent to be educated at the Abbeys one who did much for the good and welfare of the common people. Henry married again, this time to Addicia of Louvaine, in 1121. Henry's sons are was sent to be educated at the Abbeys of Ramesy in Hampshire, and Witton in Wiltshire, and wore the veil as a protection against the insults and addresses of Norman nobles, and there was some doubt whether this fact would not be a bar to her marriage.

To get over this Henry appealed to Anselm, and this wise primate called the lady before him and listened to her tale, which was given in words of passionate earnestness. She told him of the taunts she had received because she had steadfastly refused to become a nun, and that she only at last unwillingly acceded because actual blows were inflicted upon her by her aunt, who was abbess. "As often as I stood Collingwood, Sept, 1896.

in her presence," the girl pleaded to the hop, "I wore the veil, trembl ing as I wore it with indignation and grief. But as soon as I could get out of her sight I used to snatch it from my head, fling it to the ground, and rample it under foot. That was the way, and none other, in which I was veiled." Anselm and his court decided that Matilda was free to marry, and she and Henry were married, and she was crowned Queen in Westminster Abbey on Monday, Nov. 11th, 1100. Both Churchmen and Barons were oped to this union, but the good sense of Anselm, who saw the good that would ensue from this marriage, prevailed, and it was good for England i did; for by this union the blood of Cerdic and Alfred united with that of Hrolf and the first William; and the dawn of better days for the peasantry was made manifest for in the following year, 1101, Henry granted a charter of liberties agreeing to put in force the laws of Edward the Confessor, promising not to farm or sell benefices, to abolish arbitrary feudal exactions and other reforms, and, though the charter soon became partially inoperative, it proved to be a good foundation stone on which other privileges and iberal reforms Were extracted.

Robert, who had returned from Palestine, sailed with an army and landed at Portchester, determined to enforce his claims on the English throne, and many of the old Anglo-Roman nobles joined him, but Anselm steps in, and by his influence and adroitness succeeds in adverting a disastrous nggle. Robert relinquishes all ms on England, and Henry yields claims on England, and Henry yields up all his possessions in Normandy except Drenfret, and agrees to pay to Robert 3,000 marks yearly. These arrangements secured peace, and a period of prosperity set in that gave to the arts and industries an impetus that has come to the present day. Skilled artizans from Normandy, Italy, France and Germany, took up their abodes in the Island and their arts and trade remainsland, and their arts and trade remained in the country, and were in many instances improved upon by the ready intelligence of the working classes. In 1101 Queen Matilda gives birth to a son at the Abbey of Abingden in Berkson at the Abbey of Abingden in Berk-shire. In December, 1103 a daughter was born to Henry who was named after her mother, Matilda, and who several quarrels with the church in which he generally came out second best, but on the whole the church aid not make much out of him; and their lifferences usually ended in some small addition to the peoples liberties, which was something to be thankful for.

but all to no use so in 1106 he invaded Normandy, and on Sept. 28th he whipped Robert severely, and took himped Robert severely, and Normandy and made it an English de-

> Early in 1106 Henry settles a body of Flemings in Pembrokeshire, Wales, where some of the descendants live to where some of the descendants live to this day. In 1107 Henry and his much beloved Queen introduced the custom of making royal progress through different parts of the country. In the following year, Windlesore, now Windsor Castle, was made a royal residence, and both Henry and Matilda added many additions to the castle. The next year the great Archbishop Anmarried again, this time to Addicia of Louvaine, in 1121. Henry's sons are shipwrecked and drowned, and he causes all his nobles and followers to swear fealty to Matilda, his daughter, who is Empress of Germany, but, her husband dying, she marries again and a son is born to her. Henry calls his followers together again and the oath of submission to Matilda is renewed, her infant son Henry, being included. In 1187, Henry dies, Stephen of Blois rebels against Matilda's son. About this time Geoffry of Monmouth, a Welshman of Norman descent, published his Historia Britonum (History of the Britons) in Latin. This work gives us the fullest account of the ancient Britons we possess.

The "Official Organs."

Order, that portion, at all events refering to "Official Organs."

When the Anglo-Saxon was in its infancy the then Supreme Grand Executive at that time had taken under its protecting wing the fathering of official organ-The Englishman. This paper was started in Montreal by some far seeing Englishman. It was pointed out in glowing terms that success would be assured, and the Order would father it, if it would but make its headquarters at Toronto. The paper was moved to Toronto, and the result was it was killed by the interferance of the too many incompetant Shaftesbury Hall bosses.

Another official paper was the Cana dian-Englishman. It lived upon pros-pective official recognition, and died after a lingering illness.

Another, and more important concern, was the English-Canadian, which had an incorporated $10,000 joint stock company, and so big was it in its fealings, that it was going around threaten-ing to gobble up all opposition. Its directors went to the London Grand Lodge and over-awed the dele with its importance, and received "offi-cial recognition!" The Anglo-Saxon was a thorn in the side. The paper was continually crying about amalra-mation, but the Anglo-Saxon was not to be caught by such bait. The English-Canadian continued struggleing for existence with "official recogition" till the following G. L. meeti held in the city of Montreal, when its friends were drumed up to be delegates, and the G. L. was forced to appoint a committee to hear the reasons why amalgamation should not take place ote of the chairman! What was the result? The moment the committee's report was laid on the table of the frand Lodge it was thrown out and he Anglo-Saxon was the choice of

We now come to the Executive's action last year, but what wobbling, what a want of self-dignity, what a lowering of justice between man lowering of justice between man and man! When we appeared at the doors of the Executive—by request— see G. L. Report, page 20—and were requested to make an offer, we did so. We assured them at that time that it was too low to be a success, and we were verbally informed that the Anglo-SAXON would be recommended to be fully and finally adopted at the coming Grand Lodge which would meet at

What a stutification of opinion! Two weeks' previous to the G. L. meeting this Executive advertized for tenders for the publication of an "official organ" repudiating the former verbal greement. It was not done from pure motives, it was done with a selfish m tive, and not for the good of the Order. It was to injure, if possible, the Anglo-Saxon. But the scheme failed miserably. The advertized official scheme was rejected by the members of Grand of the Executive, until it was pointed out to them, that their actions were unconstitutional! This latter venture is bolder in its design it aims to get a firm grip upon the Order. It placed a retired by senior members of the Order in charge at Shaftes—whose judgment and probity the mabury Hall, whether to watch the finan-cial transactions of the Executive or to be there to lobby, we know not. We have been requested by a number of brethren to give them some information upon this irritating question. We herewith comply with the request in as a condensed a form as nossible.

What is the effect of all this vacillation and twisting by the Executive upon the Order? The result has been demoralizing; it has placed the members moralizing; it has placed the members in an indifferent mood, and when any advice is issued as "official" it is looked at suspiciously. Why should it not be? The "official organ" transactions are pointers to go by. The Executives themselves have spent some $2,000, and by their waiting to "consider and see," have cost the members, who had investigation of the second of the secon ed in defunct official papers some $20,000, in the hope of becoming the organ of the Order. Is this right, when they are there to advice and guide the members to their best interest?

It has been pointed out before in a previous writing on the subject, that Provincial Grand Lodges and even District ones are scarcely advisable with us at present. In fact, from a very recent experience, the writer is more of opinion than ever that it will be for the best interest of the Order for the various lodges to run their business each for itself individually. Even in the case of electing a District Deputy, it would be well each lodge should elect one at the time it ballotted for its officers in December, the candidate otherwise eligible for the office, not being necessarily a member of the lodge electing him as D.D.

The members present on the quarter ly night in December would represent their lodge, and the whole number of the membership of the lodge would be unted to the successful candidate So if he secured any two lodges, that candidate would be pretty sure of election. By this means any organized combine to capture the position for some specific member would in a great measure be upset, and a far better at-tendance of members, consequently a more representative vote, would be ob-tained than by the calling of a general meeting on a night specially set apart for that purpose.

In conclusion it may be remarked that as the "Record" has been established for the purpose of bringing the Beneficiary Department of the S. O. E. nore prominently before the members of the Order, it would become the duty of the Anglo-Saxon to touch from time to time on this subject also, specially so, now that an old established trade journal in Toronto is taking up the matter in no friendly spirit.

Yours fraternally, PAST DISTRICT DEPUTY. Winnipeg, Manitoba.

Our correspondent suggests that we open our columns to a discussion of the merits of the Beneficiary of the S. O. E. Our columns are open. The means adopted to push the Beneficiary among members is too flimsy and sentimental. A monetary branch of any institution must be shorn of sentimentality, and rely for its support upon a sure founda-tion, which will commend itself readily to the applicant. However, we leave this matter open for members and others to discuss as they may feel disosed. If it is believed that the "Reord" is put forth in the interest of the Beneficiary it is a bribe for the truth,

"In Fraternal Remembrance."

On Monday, the 24th of August, the members of lodge Empress of the West, No. 177, Regina, N.W.T., placed two memorial tablets in the burial ground of the North West Mounted Police, Regina, to mark the last resting places of our late brothers, Constable . H. Kingscote and special Constable R. T. S. Champion.

In the upper part of the tablets is lisplayed, in appropriate colours, the official emblem of the Order, (the white official emblem of the Order, (the white or "St. George" ensign with Union Jack in the upper corner, and S.
