POETRY.

A Legend.

I read a legend of a monk who painted in an old convent cell in days bygone, Pictures of martyrs and of virgins sainted, And the sweet Christ Face with the crown of thorn.

Poor Dante, not fit to be a chapel's treasure— Fall many a taunting word upon them fell; But the good altar set him for his pleasure, Adorn with them his solitary cell.

One night the poor monk mused: "Could I but render Honor to Christ as other painters do,— Were but my skill as great as is the tender Love that inspires me when His Cross I view!

"But no: 'tis vain I toil and strive in soot; What man so sooms, still less can He admire; My life's work is all vain; to-morrow I'll cast my flimsy picture in the fire."

He raised his eyes within his cell—O wonder! There stood a visitor; thorn-crowned was He, And a sweet voice the silence rent assunder: "I scorn no work that's done for love of Me."

And round the walls the paintings shone resplendent With lights and colors to this world unknown, A perfect beauty, and a hue transcendent, That never yet on mortal canvas shone.

There is a meaning in the strange old story; Let none dare judge his brother's worth or give; The purest intent to the act is glory, The noblest purpose makes the grandest deed.

STORY.

Every Man's Right.

"You are wasting your time and strength in trying to reform the world on the drink question. Every man has a right to do as he pleases, and you might as well stop men from running down hill as stop men from drinking liquor when they want it. It is my right, and it is every man's right, to drink or let it alone."

The lady to whom these assertions were made looked at the speaker for a moment, and then said quietly:—"All the same, Mr. Warner, I shall continue to work for temperance as long as I live. It is my right."

"That may be," replied the gentleman, who so stoutly maintained his right, "but you so stoutly maintained his right to do as he pleases. But you are playing a losing game. I drink a glass of liquor when I want it, and I expect I always shall. I have four boys who take a glass when they want it, and I expect they will keep on too."

"Then there are five not to be influenced by anything which may be said or written."

"You may count sure on the five, I hope you won't take offense of what I say, but I can't imagine why you want to talk and write so much about temperance, when you might spend your time to a great deal better advantage. I want you to do as well as you can for yourself, and I know you are too sensible to be willing to work for nothing."

"I am not working for nothing, Mr. Warner; I am doing what I believe to be my duty, and having done that, I leave the result to God."

"It will be left to the common sense of people who think differently from what you do, and the majority is sure to be against you. I talk plainly; but you talk so plainly yourself, you can hardly find fault with me. You see, I remember you when you were a little girl, and, of course, I have seen much of one side of the world than you have. Your theory sounds all right, but facts are against you. I have thought a great deal about drinking liquor, and I have made up my mind that every man has a right to drink or let it alone, just as he pleases. It is a matter that concerns himself alone."

"Do you mean to say, Mr. Warner, that his habits in this respect concern no one but himself?"

"I mean to say just that," replied the gentleman, and, as his attention was then called elsewhere, the conversation ended.

Mr. Warner was a moderate drinker, professing to deplore drunkenness, and yet defending what he called "personal liberty" on all occasions. His temperament and his habits of rigid economy made it reasonably certain that he would never drink to excess, but his influence was always and ever on the side of intemperance.

He was then building a hotel, of which one of his sons was expected to take charge, and where, as a matter of course, liquor would be sold.

The son was an enterprising young man—a merchant—doing a good business and respected by the community in which he lived. If he indulged in the use of intoxicating liquor, as his father had said, few were aware of the fact.

When the hotel was completed and opened to the public, he was its popular landlord, while still attending to his store. As time went on, however, there was a change. His manner was often excited and sometimes positively offensive. Both hotel and store lost their best patrons, and it required no prophet to foresee failure and ruin.

It was known that the father had remonstrated with his son, who retorted by claiming the right to do as he pleased, since it was a matter which concerned only himself.

Debts accumulated, and his stock of goods was sold at auction to meet the demands of his creditors. This, although what might have been expected, hastened the impending disaster.

Then, too, to add to his already threatened ruin, the wife of young Mr. Warner became a habitual drunkard, dragging him lower and lower in the social scale (refusing to listen to appeal or remonstrance, and claiming her right to do as she pleased. Her husband, mortified and indignant at her conduct reproached her in language she declared insulting. A quarrel ensued and a divorce was obtained, leaving them freed from all mutual obligations. Fortunately there were no children to be considered, so that the separation concerned only themselves.

The hotel became notorious as a resort of the dissolute, and, after finding it impossible to effect a change in this respect, Mr. Warner, Sr., advertised for its sale. He parted with it at a heavy loss, yet with a feeling of intense relief.

His son, thus thrown out of business, attempted to find employment as a clerk or agent, but no one would trust him. He was allowed at home in his father's house, where mother and sister tried in vain to reform him.

Necessity compelled him to earn money in some way, and, after a period of enforced idleness, he engaged in manual labor, wherever he could find the opportunity. He ditched, sawed wood, mixed and carried mortar, and, in short, did anything and everything the poorest man would do. On one occasion, when new sidewalks were laid through the village, he was seen at work in front of his old store, his clothing soiled and ragged, his face flushed, and his eyes bloodshot.

"Dan Warner has been on a spree for a week," remarked a bystander. "He run himself out of pocket, as he always does when he gets started, and has had to go to work again. The old man won't give him a cent, and you'll find him around, either, when he gets on a drunk, so he has to start out for something. This is pretty tough work for him. It is all he can do to keep his end of the roller moving, and, I should think the very sight of the store would make him desperate. He must think of the time when he was counted among our progress-men. If I was in his place, I would work anywhere rather than here; I would starve before I would sink to such a depth."

"Starving is not so easy," was replied. "Besides a man must have money to buy liquor, and liquor Dan Warner will find in any event. His father will feed him rather than have him go hungry, but liquor is under lock and key in that house."

"I suppose the old man drinks the same as ever."

"Yes, and always will, though two of his boys have been ruined by it, and the other two have escaped only because their wives had power to hold them to total abstinence. Dan has gone down a little lower than Ben, but they are both pretty near the bottom of the hill."

They are nearer the bottom of the hill now than when this was said. They are poorer, if possible, although Dan, as he is familiarly called, continues to earn enough to supply himself with liquor. A week's work will pay for a week's debauch, when he hides himself in some wretched place where even his father will not intrude.

Once his father visited every saloon in the town, asking the proprietors not to sell this son; but, as might have been expected, his request was treated with contempt. Said one saloon keeper:

"The first glass of liquor I ever drank I bought in your hotel. Dan sold it to me, and part of the profits went to you. You said everybody had a right to sell or drink, just as they pleased, and I believe you. I am taking my right to do both."

"When the law shuts down on me as I expect it will, now the women are making a fuss about it, I shall stop and not before. As long as I sell to anybody, I shall sell to Dan when he has money. It don't do to trust much on such bills; I found that out some time ago. Sorry I can't oblige you, Mr. Warner, but business is business and my business is selling liquor."

Mr. Warner could make no reply. He remembered when the widowed mother of this very man had begged him for the sake of the young man in the town to close the bar of his hotel, and he told her that his hotel was run to make money, not to save anybody—young or old. So he went his way with bowed head, thinking it may be, regretfully of the past, yet giving no sign.

He is still living, and still a moderate drinker, while his son is a drunkenard of the lowest type. Each exercises his right to decide for himself in regard to the use of intoxicating drinks; but, alas, no power of their own make it possible that the consequences shall fall only upon themselves. Experience and revelation alike teach that no man liveth to himself alone.

A few years since, a clergyman, eminent for scholarship and clear outline into the future, said to me with marked emphasis:

"The time is coming when the curse of intemperance will have assumed such gigantic proportions, that the people of the country will be forced to rise in self-defense and crush the monster. It cannot be done easily, but it must be done, or we shall be utterly ruined."

Has not the time now come? If not, what new developments are required to arouse us to a sense of our danger.—Nat. Temp. Advocate.

Home Love.

Home love is the best love. The love that you are born to is the sweetest you will have on earth. You, who are so anxious to escape from the home nest, pause a moment and remember this is so. It is right that the hour should come when you, in your turn should become a wife and mother and give the best love to others but that will be just it. Nobody—not a lover not a husband—will ever be so true as your mother or your father. Never again, after strangers have broken the beautiful bond, will there be anything as sweet as the little circle of mother, father or children where you are cherished, protected, praised and kept from harm. You may not know it now, but you will know it some day. Whomsoever you may marry, true and good though he may be, will, after the love days are over and the honeymoon has waned, give you only what you deserve of love or sympathy, and usually much less, never more. You must watch and be wary, lest you lose that love that came in through the eye, because the one that looked through your eyes, that loved you when you were that dreadful little object, a baby, and thought you exquisitely beautiful and wonderfully brilliant—they do not care for faces that are fairer and finer than those that are more graceful than yours. You are their very own, and so better to them always than others.—California Patron.

Promoted.

He would be a strange boy who, on being asked to name the happiest day of his life, would not think of that eventful morning when he laid aside skis and put on trousers, the insignia of manly dignity.

The Boston Home Journal tells of one child who bore this high honor with apparent indifference for a whole day, but was very unwilling to take off his beloved trousers at night.

When he had yielded to persuasion and was snugly tucked in bed he looked up to say, with emphasis: "Mamma, please put away those skis, and never let me see them again!"

"In a few years," said Mr. Edison, "the world will be like one big car; it will be unsafe to speak in a house until one has examined the walls and furniture for concealed phonographs."

The Best Offer Yet.

The publishers of the ACADIAN have always endeavored to place the best of reading matter before its readers, and with that end in view clubbing arrangements have been made from time to time with some of the very best publications on the continent.

Our Fisheries.

Few people have any idea of the vast extent and enormous wealth of our fisheries. Comprising the coasts of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, P. E. Island and the island of Newfoundland and its "Grand Banks," the richest fishing grounds in the world, in all about 3,500 miles of sea coast, their value and immensity is incalculable.

When Cabot first crossed the Atlantic and beheld these shores, the whole north-west coast of America he christened Newfoundland. Since those days its fisheries have been famous the world over.

About the middle of the seventeenth century the hardy inhabitants of New England and Nova Scotia began to realize the value of our fisheries. France attempted to drive away the Colonials and Englishmen, and French ships-of-war were instructed to seize all vessels not carrying the flag of France found in the fishing waters.

We find in 1744 France employed 550 ships and 27,500 men and caught 1,000,246 quintals of fish in the Newfoundland fisheries. The Americans and English scarcely equalled one-third and were rapidly decreasing until Parliament came to the rescue.

A joint high commission met at Washington, in 1874 representing England, Canada and the United States, and among other disputes settled that of the fisheries. The provisions touching our case in the treaty were that "the inhabitants of the United States of America should have the right to fish in common with British subjects for ten years from the date of treaty."

The Canadians now have every advantage over the Americans in this fishing industry. First, in years gone by, cod-fishing was carried on off the coast of New England; now they have become so scarce that it does not pay the fishermen for the outlay.

The people of the United States, however, being largely composed of Roman Catholics, must have their fish at any cost. Consequently our fish will find a better market after paying duty than when admitted free.

In 1882 Canada employed in fishing 50,000 men and the products of their labor amounted to $17,500,000, or equal to $350 for each man at work.

Religious Advice to a Young Man. Oh, no, young man, do not run down religion; you had better run it up. Pure and undefiled religion is what we want for humanity.

The closer the observance the stronger the delight. We have then two great classes of duties, the fulfillment of which secures its peculiar result. Beyond these we feel constrained to the performance of higher duties, and when penetration shows these and reason demands a loving compliance to them, the soul receives its grand reward, and hope flies as the dove with its olive-branch home to that resting place where love is supreme and good is glorified.

THE ACADIAN.

WOLFVILLE, N. S., OCT. 11, 1889.

Local and Provincial.

THANKSGIVING.—Thursday, the 7th day of November, will be proclaimed Thanksgiving Day.

MASSAGE.—The next regular meeting of St. George's Lodge, A. F. & A. M., will be held this evening in the Lodge room.

FATERNAL VISIT.—Wolfville Division pays the Division at White Rock a fraternal visit this evening. A pleasant time is expected.

St. JOHN'S CHURCH, WOLFVILLE.—On the next three Sundays, October 13th, 20th and 27th, the service will be in St. John's church at three o'clock, p. m. Free.

MATCH OFF.—The baseball match which was to have taken place yesterday at Windsor between the Wanderers and picked teams from Windsor and Wolfville did not take place on account of some difficulty in making arrangements with the Halifax team.

LAUNDRY.—The Hants Journal says that Mr. Harding Bishop, of Wolfville, and Mr. Henry Welton have purchased the laundry business of Mr. J. C. Stronach, at Windsor. We wish our young townsman and his associate in business every success in their new venture.

THE ACADIA.—The steamer Acadia did not make her regular trip to Wolfville this week on account of injuries sustained by a collision with the steamer Hanthwa sea Parshoro Pier on Friday morning last. We understand the damage has now been repaired and that she will resume her trips.

THE COSMOPOLITAN.—We would call the careful attention of our readers to our combination offer in another column of the ACADIAN and COSMOPOLITAN. Such an opportunity of getting a first-class magazine at a low price is not often offered and those who take advantage of it at once will do well.

POTATOES.—The potato prospects are creating quite an interest and the prospect now is that the demand and price will be better than for some years past. Some shippers are buying now and are paying 35 cents, which is certainly a good price compared with that of late years. The crop is small, but there will probably be more money in it than in any year for some time back.

JOURNALISM.—The Head Light is the name of a short little paper that comes to us from Truro. It is published largely in the interests of railroad men and will no doubt be appreciated and patronized liberally by them, as it should be. Though small, the Head Light is bright and full of news of the right kind and gives promise of being a very welcome exchange. Couple on, brother.

Wheat Bran, a few tons, Choice, just received at R. PRAT'S.

DANGEROUS.—The condition of the "street over Mud Bridge," in the lower end of the town, is very dangerous. For some time past the railings have been in a bad condition, and in crossing a few days since we noticed that they had been removed. This is a matter that should be looked after at once, as if left in the present condition there is likely to soon be a bad accident to result. Some change should be made at once. In the same connection we notice that the bridge over the sidewalk in the same locality, which we referred to in a late issue, has not yet been repaired. It, too, should be looked after at once.

WOLFVILLE DIVISION.—Wolfville Division is in a very prosperous state at present. The attendance is good and the meetings are interesting. Last Monday evening the officers for the coming quarter were installed. They are as follows:

PERSONAL.—Mr. E. W. Abbot, who is now employed in the W. U. Telegraph Office at Halifax, is home on a visit.

HONORS.—The University of Ottawa has conferred the degree of doctor of laws on Sir John Thompson, Minister of Justice.

SMASH.—A special train early yesterday morning shunted a car upon the station platform at this place and made quite a smash. It was, however, soon repaired.

BURGLARY.—Some persons forced an entrance into Shaw's barber shop one night recently and stole a number of cigars, &c. Entrance was obtained through a window on the south side of the building. The parties will likely be made to pay dearly for their "smoke."

TEA-MEETING.—The members of Maple Leaf Division of Greenwich, held a tea-meeting in the hall at that place last evening. The affair was in every way a success and reflected great credit on those having it in charge. We understand a very creditable sum was realized.

AN OLD MASON DEAD.—Lieut. Col. Paynter, a Waterloo veteran and well known in Masonic circles, died at Windsor on Saturday last, and was buried with Masonic honors at Bridgetown on Tuesday, a large number of Masons from Windsor, Kentville and elsewhere attending. He was 95 years of age and had resided in Windsor for twenty-five years.

PROF. KEIRSTEAD AT WINDSOR.—Rev. Mr. Keirstead, of Wolfville, conducted the services in the Presbyterian church on Sunday last. We have heard the sermon referred to by gentlemen of the congregation in terms of the highest praise. The morning discourse was on "The Attractive Power of Christ," that in the evening on "The Insufficiency of Morality."—Hants Journal.

Go to Payzant's for Dentistry.

MERCHANTS' WEEK.—Arrangements are now being made by the St. John, N. B., Board of Trade to hold their semi-annual "Merchants' Week," commencing on the 14th inst., and measures are now about complete with the various railway and steamer companies to issue tickets during the week, commencing on that date at one fare for the double journey, and good to return within one week from the date of same.

A full line of Brushes of all kinds at WALTER BROWN'S.

DEATH OF REV. JOSEPH KEMPTON.—The remains of Rev. Joseph Kempton, who died at St. John, N. B., on Friday last, were brought to Wolfville on Saturday evening and interred in the Willow Bank Cemetery on Sunday afternoon. The services were conducted by Rev. Drs. Higgins and Sawyer. The funeral took place from the residence of J. W. Bigelow, Esq., brother-in-law of the deceased. The attendance was large.

Johnston's Decorators' Paste White lead; warranted equal to any lead in the market at WALTER BROWN'S.

MISSIONARY.—Last Sunday evening was the occasion of the regular monthly missionary meeting of the Baptist church. It being the last meeting of the kind previous to the departure of the missionaries, Rev. W. V. Higgins and wife, and Miss Nettie Fitch, to India, the church took this opportunity to express their sympathy with and bid them a public farewell. The service was a very interesting one and the church was crowded. After prayers by Prof. Caldwell and Rev. J. B. Henneon, appropriate addresses were made by the pastor, Rev. T. A. Higgins, and Prof. Jones. The missionaries then addressed the meeting and spoke with much feeling and earnestness. Mr. Chas. A. Eaton, of the College, gave an address of welcome from the Acadia Missionary Society, which was listened to with much interest. This was followed by an address from Rev. J. W. Manning and closing prayer by Rev. B. B. Kempton. The meeting was one of much impression and elicited great interest in and enthusiasm for the work of foreign missions.

Shaw's New Barber Shop.

Since our enterprising brother Mr. J. M. Shaw, first began business in Wolfville he has been constantly making improvements in his rooms, to be the better prepared to carry on his business and to accommodate his patrons. He has lately moved into his new shop next the Glasgow House which has just been fitted up for him by Mr. J. D. Chambers. The rooms have been completed this week and present a neat and attractive appearance, being light, airy and comfortable; and have a new and cheerful appearance. The walls and ceiling have been tastefully painted and ornamented, the latter a pretty cream-color and the former in the "Lincrest" work, which is new in Wolfville and greatly admired.—each corner, in addition, being prettily ornamented with a neat scroll. The walls are sheathed part way up and prettily painted in panels of dark and light brown. The establishment as it now appears is a credit to the town, being neatly and comfortably furnished with all the requisites of the tonorial art. We hope Mr. Shaw's enterprise will be duly appreciated by the people of Wolfville and that he will receive a generous patronage. We can now safely say that we have as good a barber and as good rooms as any town of like size or importance in the lower provinces.

High Prices for Apples. Our remarks upon the value of apples in the last number are being more than substantiated. In fact, except in a few favored sections, there are very few apples in the country. In some counties bordering upon the southern shore of Lake Erie, especially in Essex and Kent, a fair crop is reported, but on the whole there will probably not be one-tenth of last year's crop in Canada, and the percentage in New York state and Michigan will be very little higher. Indeed Chicago apple buyers have already been operating quite freely in Western Ontario and as early as the first week in September had secured some 20,000 barrels at $2 per barrel, f. o. b., for fall apples, and $3.50 for winter apples. Montreal men have been contracting heavily, so that a lively competition is at work to bring up prices to an unusual scale. It is even stated that quite recently the sum of $3.75 per barrel was paid for 1,000 barrels of winter fruit, f. o. b.

We think, therefore, that there is every encouragement for those of us who have no apple crop to expect high prices for our stock right at home, and we do not advise great haste in selling, unless out side figures are to be had.—Canadian Horticulturist.

PRICES OF PEARS.—If apples are bringing a surprisingly high price pears are by no means behind them, they have sold during the latter part of September at a higher figure than was ever known in Canada. Bartlett pears went up to $15 per barrel, and even $20 has been paid for some of fine quality. Fine Flemish Beauty pears have been selling as high as $6 to $10 for No. 1 quality.

TAKE NOTICE.—If your razor is dull, take it to J. M. Shaw's Barber Shop, and he will put it in first-class order for the small sum of 15c. 10

HORSE SOLD.—Mr. C. R. Bill has purchased from W. E. Newcomb, Esq., Upper Canada, and shipped to St. John a very promising 4 year old gelding by Sir Garnet. Price $175.—Western Chronicle.

Minard's Liniment for sale everywhere.

Married. REID—KINSMAN.—On the 2d inst., by Rev. Thomas McFall, Arthur Reid and Ethel J., daughter of the late Joshua Kinsman, all of Lakeville.

Did. JACKSON.—At Lower Church St., Oct. 3d, after a lingering illness, borne with much patient resignation to the Divine will, aged 71 years, Lavinia, beloved wife of George Jackson, Esq., Wood.—At Port Williams, of typhoid fever, Oct. 6th, Amos Wood, aged 61 years.

THORPE.—At West Newton, Mass., Sept. 16th, aged 72 years, Rebecca, widow of the late William Thorpe, of Sheffield Mills, and daughter of the late Nathan Eaton. For many years she was a consistent and much esteemed member of the Baptist church at Canada.

RAND.—At Hantsport, 4th inst., Rev. Silas Tertius Rand, D. D., D. C. L., L. L. D., the veteran Micmac missionary, in his 80th year.

KEMPTON.—At St. John, on the 4th inst., Rev. Joseph T. Kempton, pastor of the Hopewell Baptist church, in the 54th year of his age.
