FREDERICTON, NOVEMBER 10, 1890. THE UNITED STATES ELECTIONS.

The elections in the United States which took place on Tuesday last, resulted in very strong gains for the democratic party. The next house of representatives will be democratic by a large majority. The great issue in the campaign was the tariff, precipitated by the passage of the McKinley bill, and the verdict of the constituencies is a distinct triumph for tariff reform. The protected manufacturer made a tremendous struggle; but they were powerless to avert the disaster. A potent influence in bringing about the result was the organization of the farmers, who have begun to feel the necessity for asserting themselves, and have not been deceived by the vague promises of an increased market held out by the high protectionists. of ways and means, whose name was on that account affixed to the new tariff has been practiced in order to reduce the St. John is after all only the chief expres- a foot deep. IMPERIAL FEDERATION.

General Laurie, M. P. for Shelburne, N. S., has been astonishing the imperial federationists. At a meeting of the league held in London the other day he told them that they must not think of Canada as a colony, but as an independent ally. He also told them that there was no use talking about federation unless England was prepared to discriminate in favor of Canada in the matter of the tariff, and further that if the movement for federation originated in England, Canada would have nothing to do with it. We are told that his speech only received a little "complimentary" applause. We are not surprised at this. The federationists are living in a fool's paradise. They think somebody besides themselves wants an imperial federation. Mr. Parkin was sent around the world to feel the pulse of the people. When he came back it was noticeable that his principal, Lord Roseberry, suddenly grew very cool on the against the shower of cold water which as their time is limited. ded upon it in Canada and Australia go to work the wrong way. You cannot men, whether at home or abroad, must first be free. Give them freedom and you can do what you like with them. Try to tie them up and they become obstinate and intractable. Therefore this paradox is true, that the bonds of the empire are stronger the more they are relaxed.

As a rule all applications were initialed by me. Oct. 18th 1889 met Mr. Currie at the court at Petersville, G. F. Baird was there, and a conversation took place respecting the sending of applications to Fredericton. When making up my preliminary list in 1886 I was allowed by law to receive applications there, and I told Currie so during that year, applications received on the 18th Oct. 1889 were ruled out, because the time was up. They had been sent to Fredericton, and not to Gagetown. Were mailed at St. John on the very last day, and did not reach me within the time allowed by law, nor at my office in Gagetown. Mr. Babbitt would receive my letters at that place, and would make a memoranda of the dates of receipt. In 1886 the law did not fix the place where these applications were to be received but it does now. Did not receive applications from Sunbury in this city in 1889. In 1886 I allowed Mr. Babbitt to send back applications for rectification to parties who had not made proper returns, although I was not obliged to do this. I together with my clerk received abuse even for this, and as a fact in 1889 I did not allow Mr. Battitt to send any applications back for rectification, as I knew we should be accused of delaying these applications, although they were improperly The proceedings on Wednesday morning were chiefly taken up with the identification of papers, and about 11.45 a. m. Mr. C. A. Skinner opened up for the defence. Fred. Alward of Brunswick, sworn, said -Public opinion he thought was against Mr.

"Have you no friends across the way?" My little city darling said; " And when there comes a rainy day, Can't you look out, and nod your head To some one else, as I can do To Will and Fred and baby Sue? I heard you tell mamma to-day You had no friends across the way.'

"But I have friends "dear friends." I cried, With quick, remorseful thought of home. " A band of brothers, side by side, To greet me if I go or come. In How dear they are, I cannot say! Nor how it cheers me day by day To see across the valley far How strong and beautiful they are!

"And you should see the robes they wear-Their mantles thick and soft and green, Then rain-bow-tinted, yet more fair, Or ermine wraps with silver sheen But yet I think I love them best When, all in sombre shadows drest, Their broken ranks in silence lie Beneath the solemn midnight sky.

"Sometimes a misty curtain dawn Between us hides these friends from me But when at sunset it is gone, Dear child, how fair the sight I see! For where the nearer ranks divide, The gates of glory open wide; And lo! in that unearthly light The farther hills transfigured quite: While yet another and another Peeps o'er the shoulder of his brother. And smiles through rosy mist, and seem Perhaps I'll go and see them too. But now I'd rather watch to see Children across the street from me And nod to Will, and play peep-bo With cunning little baby Sue.
