ned on a summer's day, Led by the fragrant breeze, I wandered forth to take the air Among the green-wood trees.

There seiz'd me for their prey. My shricks had all been spent in vain;

But heaven, that saw my grief, Brought this brave youth within my call, With nothing but his bunting spear,

And caus'd them soon to stand. The Scots were overthrown:

Blest were the wounds I bare ! From that fond hour she deign'd to smile, And listen to my prayer.

But oh ! we fear'd, (alas, the while !) Her princely mother's pride : Sister of haughty BOLINGBROKE", Our house's ancient foe, To me, I thought, a banish'd wight,

At length to fly with me, I won this lovely timorous maid ; To Scotland bound are we.

Fearing we were pursu'd. We turn'd adown the right-hand path, And gain'd this lonely wood :

And reach'd this friendly bower. Now rest ye both, the hermit said; A while your cares forego :

FIT THE SECOND. Lovely smil'd the blushing morn, And every storm was fled;

She found her HENRY all alone, The youth, consulting with his friend,

Her cheek with blushes dyed, When fondly he besought her there

Within this lonely hermitage There is a chapel meet :

O HENRY! when thou deign'st to sue, Can I thy suit withstand? When thou, lov'd youth, hast won my hear Can I refuse my hand?

And mother's tender care : And whether weal or woe betide. Thy lot I mean to share.

Such matchless favour shew, To share with me, a banish'd wight, My peril, pain, or woe?

Now heaven, I trust, hath joys in store To crown thy constant breast; For, know, fond hope assures my heart That we shall soon be blest.

Not far from hence stands Coquet Isle, Surrounded by the sea ; There dwells a holy friar, well known To all thy friends and thee; .

To Raby castle he shall go, And for us kindly plead. To fetch this good and holy man

Will join us both in one. "Joan, countess of Westmoreland, mother

And dagger in his hand, He sprung like lightning on my foes,

Thus freed me, captive, from their bands To make me more his own.

Could ne'er such favour shew. Despairing then to gain consent;

Then lighting from our weary steeds To shun the pelting shower, We met thy kind conducting hand,

And near a flight of shapely steps,

All cut with nicest skill,

All planted by his hands.

Then, scoop'd within the solid rock, Three sacred vaults he shews; The chief a chapel, neatly arch'd, On branching columns rose. Each proper ornament was there,

The lattice for confession fram'd, And holy-water vase. O'er either door a sacred text Invites to godly fear ; And in a little scutcheon hung The cross, and crown, and spear.

And near a glimmering solemn light Two well-wrought windows lend. Beside the altar rose a tomb, All in the living stone : On which a young and beautieous maid In goodly sculpture shone.

Lean'd hovering o'er her breast;
A weeping warrior at her feet;
And near to these her crest*. The cliff, the vault, but chief the tomb, Attract the wondering pair : Eager they ask, what hapless dame

The stopendous, and, we may say, the awful evens, tidings of which have been coming to us during the last few months, like successive claps of thunder, or like earthquake-threes from the other side of the world, must have moved every mind capable of thought to its deepest thinking. The awfulness of this tremendous crisis in human affairs, to our minds, lies especially in this—that new, civilized men, are now multitudes into city streets to break down and to build up; all this, to our view, is matter of momentous inquiry. But whatever shall be thought of this great experiment on a scale as vast as Christendom; whether it be regarded as a light thing or as a serious thing; it is certain that the time has cone! Big with unseen and incalculable issues, the birth-time of momentous ages, the beginning of what no mortal eye can see to the end; it is come! The great hour has struck, in the fortunes of men! Looked for, waited for, believed in, expected; but expected to for, believed in, expected; but expected to have and the right to laude and the right laude a cisively, with startling distinctness, with a stroke like that of doom, which tells us that the hand upon the dial can never go back. Hereditary power had only two reliances; Hereditary power had only two reliances; the strength of opinion, and the standing army. Both have fallen. Reverence is gone; the standing army has melted into the mass of the people. The people are now the incontestable sovereigns. All the slighter the demonstration of their power is, all the stronger is the argument that seals the doom of absolute monarchies.

seals the doom of absolute monarchies.

And were ever causes so apparently slight followed by consequences so stupendous? The story almost-exceeds belief. Really, it is difficult to comprehend it, to credit it, to feel that it is not a dream. A few thousands of peope gathered themselves in the streets of Paris, one Thursday morning (it was the twenty-third of Pebruary last); a mere populace was there; without plan, without organization without leaders.—The monarch sat so in his guarded palace; he remembered that troops hedged him around, and that a hundred thousand were almost within call; he was secure, he smiled at danger; when suddenly the cry comes, "The people are up!" and on the instant, the Bourbon monarch springs through his palace gates, like a like and the local state that prowls for plunder, and is led on the prowls.

gone!

"What!" exclaimed the people of Europe, "so easy? So easy to be rid of a king!" And in Vienna, and in Munich, and in Berlin, they gather themselves tonnder the king's windows, and they say,
"Give us a constitution; give us the freedom of the press; give us trial by jury; give us liberal and just institutions:" and immeevel, gave the impulse to this great demonus liberal and just institutions:" and immediately, from all palace gates and windows comes the answer, "We will, we will, good people; we will do any thing; we will concede every thing."

We do not say, that all the people of Europe, or the majority of them, desire to

THE CRISIS OF FREEDOM IN THE OLD WORLD AND THE NEW.

From the Christian Examiner.

The stopendous, and, we may say, the awful events, tidings of which have been coming to us during the last few months, like, successive claps of thunder, or like says the obstruct conservative, intereched in his own theories and the limit of the says the obstruct conservative, intereched in his own theories and like the people, fostered by education and circulated by the press. Ideas have got in among the people, fostered by education and circulated by the press. Ideas have got in among the people, fostered by education and circulated by the press. Ideas have got in and gone down among the people; theories, industrial, social, and political; thoughts of a better condition; notions, perhaps, of some impracticable free-town and felicity. says the obstructe conservative, intrenched in his own theories and his time-hallowed institutions; "vain theories! Utopian dreams, like those of Rousseau!" But those dreams, let us tell him, have startied the world to waking life. And what is it that now agitates our own country, also, throughout its entire extent? It is an idea; it is a moral theory; the theory of free soil and free men. Nor these alone; but ideas of extending territory and sational. human affairs, to our minds, lies especially in this,—that men, civilized men, are now irretrievably committed to the solemn trial of self-government. What this implies, what qualities it demands—what wisdom and sobriety, what social effort and what social disinterestedness, are necessary to make the experiment safe; whether it has been well and wissely begun by the rush of multitudes into city streets to break down and to build up; all this, to our view, is matter of momentous inquiry. But whatever the momentum inquiry. But whatever the momentum inquiry. But whatever the momentum in the world to waking lite. And what is it that now agitates our own country, also, throughout its entire extent? It is an idea; it is a moral theory; the theory of free soil and free men. Nor these alone: but ideas of extending territory and national aggrand zeument, on a broad scale, and questions in obscurer channels, about rent and property and the right to labor and to the land, are spreading themselves through the world to waking lite. And what is it that now agitates our own country, also, throughout its entire extent? It is an idea; it is a moral theory; the step of and it is a moral theory; the step of and it is a moral theory; the step of and it is a moral theory; the same dea; it is a moral theory; the step of and it is a moral theory; the step of and it is a moral theory; the same dea; it is a moral theory; the same dea;

for, believed in, expected; but expected to come only after long preparation, expected among the slow results of centuries of changes; the hour has atruck suddenly, determined the company of the barbarians without, in Algeria of Afghanistan, a royal marriage in one quarter, a liberal pontificate in another; the changes; the hour has atruck suddenly, determined the company of the botteres and irec-trace excitements in others; all have given way before this stupendous movement. One thought, one subject of agitation, one point of hope or lear, occupies the attention of the whole civilized world. As single as the sweep of the tempest, as swift, one impulse has run through all the nations of Southern Europe, from the Atlantic to the borders of Asia. from the Atlantic to the borders of Asia from the Atlantic to the borders of Asia.—
What is it? Only the blindest political bigotry can fail to see that this is no chance ebullition, but a general tendency of men's minds. They ask for liberty. They ask for freer governments, for better institutions. This is the cry that goes up from the gathered crowds of Paris, and Berlin, and Milan, and Vienna. People do not rush into the streets armed and ready to die, without cause; nor do they everywhere die, without cause; nor do they everywhere take up and repeat one watchword, without meaning. Something is the matter with these weary, old, singgish dynasties of Europe. The people are not satisfied with them. And the time has come, in the world, when the people's being satisfied is a "Such divinity doth hedge a king,

That treason does but peep to what it would;"
he remembered, too, that thirty thousand troops hedged him account asked now, and must be answered.

"The neonic" was not asked now, and must be answered.

"The neonic" was a such as a second and the second neonic and must be answered.

denly the cry comes, and on the instant, the Bourbon monarch and on the instant, the Bourbon monarch springs through his palace gates, like a thief at night, glad to escape on any terms.

Times have changed: no hurdle bore the last king of France to the guillotine, but a last king of France to the guillotine, but a served to carry him common street-carriage served to carry him strong and stable governments fled in construction? It is the fearful toesin given attention? It is the fearful toesin given attention? Let us ask ourcommon street-carriage served to tail, strong and stante government through the gates of the city; and he is aternation? Itself the fearful toesin given ground. Itself the sak our grounders ground selves how it would be under a government Europe, "so easy? So easy to be rid of a king?" And in Vienna, and in Munich, and in Berlin, they gather themselves to gether; they had already done it in Naples; they gather themselves together without concert; sometimes a crowd of students, sometimes a throng of artisans; they come under the king's windows, and they say,

Is not the battle fought? Is not the victory won?. Can there be any more doubt of the secendency of the people? It seemed to us, perhaps, imbedile and pusit. Is not the battle fought? Is not the victory won? Can there be any more doubt of the ascendency of the people? It is seemed to us, perhaps, imbecile and pusifications for monarchs thus to submit; but they understood the crisis better than we did. They knew that resistance was vain. They knew, light as these demonstrations seemed, that there was an overmastering force behind. They knew that these popular ebullitions in their capitals were but as street dust and rubbish, swept up by the first breath of a rising storm, and that the whole atmosphere of the world would soon come rushing on in the same resistless current.

A change is come over the civilized world, as it were in a night. The people are precipitated upon self-government.—Are they prepared for it? But we wish to take a larger view of this crisis,—of what it is not wast it increase. Are they prepared for it? But we wish to take a larger view of this crisis,—of what it is,—of what is,—of what it was the Reform banquet. And what was the Reform banquet, to discuss and advocate relorm, and especially a reform in the franchise. Who demanded it? An unitary what is, is, or in the country of what it was a meeting, under the name and seth outside the present in the factory of what it was a meeting, under the name and seth outside the present in the factory of what it was a meeting, under the name and seth outside the present in the factory of what is supported by a reform in the factory of what is supported by a reform in the factory of what is supported by a reform in the factory of what is supported by a reform in the factory of what is supported by a reform in the factory of what is supported by a reform in the factory of what is supported by a reform in the factory of what is supported by a reform in the factory of what is supported by a reform in the factory of what is supported by a reform in the factory of what is supported by a reform in the factory of what is supported by a reform in the factory of what is supported by a reform in the f ues; were these an unknown mob? Mr. Van Egmond in the chair.
Your committee having carefully considered the several documents referred to them, beg to submit the following report:

5, 6. Your committee are happy to find that the Canada Company, have so readily acquiesced in the improvement of the road in Stanley and Hay, and that the same has been immediately carried into effect by the Warden.

7, 8. Your committee approves of the correspondence between the Solicitor of the Council, J. Strachan, Eq., and the Warden, on the subject of a threatened application for a Mandamus, to compel the Council to creet a new Court House, especially under the circumstances referred to in the Warden's reply.

9. Your committee would recommend, that in future, all communications received by the Council from official departments, should be immediately acknowledged of the receipt by the Clerk of the Council, and that at the close of the session, the council of the coun the Clerk of the Council, and that at the close of the session, the Clerk of the Council notify the several parties respectively, of what the Council has decided in the matters submitted.

10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15. Your committee upon due deliberation of the several documents submitted, relating to the erection of a Court House, although concuring to some extent with the reasons given for a new Court House, we cannot at present recommend involving the District in such heavy debt, especially as the debt for the present Court House is not yet liquidated, and the Roads and Bridges requiring more outley than the finances of the District admit of.

16. 17, 18. Your committee cannot recommend the grant finances of the District admit of.

16, 17, 18. Your committee cannot recommend the grant for improving the road leading to the "Gool and Court Room" as prayed for, by memorial of the Clerk of the Peace, by order of the Court of General Quarter Sessions, as the said road to the court of General Quarter Sessions, as the said road to the court of the court is now in a far superior condition than any of the main leading roads in this District. 20. The District Surveyor's roport having been examined, it would appear that a contract has been given to William McIlwain on section No. 3, Huron Road, near Mr. Monroe's Tavern, without Tenders.

Your committe highly disapproves of such proceedings by the District Surveyor, and recommend that no contract to such extent, be in future given privately.
The Surveyor has also entered the following contracts in his

the contract for the remaining 12.

23. Your committee cannot recommend any more pay to Joseph Whatly, for reducing hills near Mr. Hay's, than the amount stated in his contract. In regard to the contract, it appears by evidence that Whatly was paid in full, to his entire eatisfaction.

24. Your committe recommend that the off-take drain through the Land of Samuel Gibson, be covered up, so as to allow the water to pass underneath.

25. Your committee cannot recommend any more for work done than the rate contracted for by William Kesnar.

done than the rate contracted for by William Kesnar.

27, 85. Your committee recommend that a tax amounting to £9 5s., be levied on School Section No. 5; in Goderich, for repairing the School House therein.

26. Your committee would recommend that the balance remaining unexpended out of the money raised in Colborne for the support of indigents be paid into the hands of the Treasurer, to be kept for similar purposes, and that the Treasurer pay all claims due of such a nature on the productions of proper vouchers. 28. Your committee recommend that the sum of £7 10s.

55. It appears to your committee that £40 15s. 5d., stands to the credit of the late H. Hyndman, Esq., in the District accounts, as allowance for Constables. And moreover, your committee conceive that the Council is bound to provide for the administration of justice, but have no power to pay away any money for that purpose.
