CHAPTER XLII

"It was easy to deceive my brother. He is a book-worm, a scholar, a good man; but he taken no interest in the world or what is going on in it. Nothing ever surprises him; he is never sorry, never glad. Years ago, when I took the boy to him, he said, 'Is he your son, Gerald?' and, when I man; but has taken no interest in the none. He is unlike everyone else. It was easy to deceive him. I told him that his charge was ended, that the boy was dead, and that he could return home. He asked no question, he made no comment, he returned, and I remained. Vivien, I meant to bring the boy up as my own, and never to tell you; but I found that I could not live. I worked hard to keep him and myself. I spent all my annuity on him. I brought him back to England when I found that I could not live, and he is here; but, Vivien, listen."

She ceased her passionate weeping and looked at him.

"Listen, beloved," he said. "He has changed so completely; he is not the boy he was—cunning, false, undisciplined; our training has done him some good. He is not perfect—far from it—but he is a better boy than he was."

"Where is he?" she asked.

"I placed him in the best school I could find—Dr. Lester's, of Hammsmith. He is there as Henry Dorman. He has wanted for nothing, Vivien—you believe that?"

"Yes," she replied, "I am sure of it. But it was a cruel deception—a cruel kindness—a cruel deed. I would rather have died yesterday than have heard this to-day."

"Still you have been happy, my beloved?"

"Yes, but all my happiness is over now," she replied, with a bitter cry—"all over. I can never be happy again."

"I did it because I loved you, and could not endure to see you suffer. I meant, only kindness—only love. I knew that if you believed the boy dead and buried your last scruple would be removed, and you would be happy. I knew that while you believed him living you would never know one moment's peace. Oh, pardon me, my beloved!"

He held out his white, worn hands. "See how I have suffered," he said, sadly. "I was a strong man once, and a good man. See to what my fatal love for you has led me. I have stained my soul by sin, and my strength has left me. I have loved you so that I am dying for you. Now I know what it is to waste one's heart—to garner the whole strength of a soul, and lavish it in vain. Now I say to myself with contrite tears, that I ought to have thought of Heaven as I have thought of you."

"My poor Gerald," she said; "that is a terrible love."

"I know it—it has killed me. I have never had any hope in it. You were proud, stately, beautiful—I was only a poor dependent. I never dreamed of any return; but just as a flower gives its perfume to the sun, gives its all, gives freely, asking no return, so I was willing to live and die for you. I wanted no return. I laid my honor, my truth, my honesty, my very manhood, under your feet. I would have sinned even more deeply to make you happy. I loved you better than myself."

"But, Gerald," she said gently, "why have you told me your secret? I was happy in my ignorance. Why have you not kept your secret to the end?"

The sad dying eyes seemed to fill with a sudden light.

"Because I could not die with it un told. I have lingered on in the agony of death and could not die. You cannot see what I see, beloved. Here by my side stands the grim king, sword in hand. It would not fall until I had told you—until justice was done. I could live in sin—I dared not die in it."

"Still, I cannot see why you should have told me," she moaned, "I was so happy, Gerald."

"Listen, beloved," he said again. "Justice must be done; the boy must go back to Lancewood."

"Never," she cried hastily—"never! All our sin and suffering shall not have been in vain."

"But I say it must be done, Vivien. You must do justice; you must restore the inheritance to the boy."

A sharp spasm of pain passed over his livid face. Lady St. Just laid his hand down on the pillow; she smoothed back the hair from his brow; his face grew more calm again.

"Vivien," he whispered, faintly, "once, long ago, when I was going away from you, you kissed me, and the memory of that moment has never left me. Beloved, kiss me again, for I am dying for you."

She laid her fresh warm lips on his, already growing cold and chill. She saw a strange change come over his face, and she rose hastily and called the nurse.

"I am afraid Mr. Dorman is worse," she said.

The nurse looked at him.

"He is dying, madam," she told her.

He opened his eyes, which were filled with a strange, deep shadow, and fixed them on Vivien's face. She saw his lips move, and bent over him.

"The boy must go back to Lancewood," he said, with labored breath. "Promise me."

She made no answer.

"Promise me," he repeated, and before her answer came Gerald Dorman was dead.

"Very sudden at the last," said the nurse. "I am afraid it has alarmed you, madam."

Lady St. Just knelt half-crouching on the floor; it was not so much the death of Gerald Dorman that had prostrated her as the story he had told.

"Shall I get anything for you, madam?" inquired the woman, kindly.

Lady St. Just thanked her, but said "No;" then, rising, she looked long on the dead face of the man who had loved her so well.

"He was a faithful friend to our family," she said, slowly. "He was my father's secretary, and my husband shall see that all proper respect is paid to him now."

For, with the quickness of her keen intelligence, she saw that Gerald's death must be made known to her husband. The annuity that had been his would revert to the estate. It would be better to make no mystery of his death. There would be no need "at present" to mention Oswald.

Once more Lady St. Just bent down and touched the dead man's face with her lips.

"Good-bye, Gerald," she said. "You have served me well, you have loved me well—too well for your own happiness and for mine."

Once again she looked at the strange yet familiar face—strange in the marble beauty that was fast spreading over it. He who had loved her so well, had suffered for her, had sinned for her, lay still—he could love and suffer no more.

A rush of tears blinded her eyes. How good he had been to her, this unhappy man!

"He is dead, Joan," she said to her maid as she re-entered the cab, "he is dead."

And Joan never knew that Lady St. Just had seen Gerald Dorman die; she believed that her lady had reached the house too late. She did not feel surprised that Lady St. Just went during the whole of the way home, wept in such hopeless despair, such weariness of heart, Joan thought it very natural she should regret, and regret deeply too, an old devoted friend like Gerald Dorman.

"His lordship will be vexed to see you so put out," said the faithful woman. "Did he know where you were going, my lady? But, no—I am sure, had he known, he would have accompanied you."

"I did not tell him, Joan," she replied. "The letter that came to me was addressed by the doctor, I suppose. Lord St. Just was not in the room when I read it."

She was so proud that she disliked equivocating ever so slightly to this woman. A false word was detestable to her. When she reached home Lord St. Just was absent, and she was thankful there would be time to compose herself before his return. When he did appear she was looking pale and ill, but he did not notice it.

"Adrian," she said, "can you spare me a few minutes? I have something to say to you."

"The dressing-bell has rung, but I am quite at your orders," he replied.

"You remember my father's secretary? You have heard me speak of him very often," she began in a low voice.

"Certainly," said Lord St. Just, in his kindly, genial manner. "Your father left him an annuity, did he not?"

"Yes. I had a letter to-day telling me that he was dying and would like to see me." She spoke in a low, hurried voice, with her face turned from him. "I went. He was dying when I reached the house—he is dead now."

"My darling wife," cried Lord St. Just, "you should not have gone through such a scene."

She did not appear to have heard him. After a brief silence she continued:

"It was a great surprise to me. I did not even know that he had returned to England."

"It will be a great trouble to you also, Vivien. He was a faithful friend, I believe."

"Too faithful," she said to herself, with a deep-drawn, bitter sigh. But for his readiness to sacrifice himself for her, but for his wonderful love and fidelity, she would not be in her present terrible position.

"It is getting late, Vivien," said Lord St. Just, suddenly. "You are forgetting our dinner-party, darling. You must go and dress." Then, struck by her dreamy, abstracted expression, he hastened to add: "Is there anything you wish me to do in this matter?"

"Yes," she replied. "Poor Gerald Dorman had but one relative, a brother, and he is in Rouen. I want you, Adrian, to see that Gerald has a fitting funeral."

"I will attend to it myself," said the generous nobleman. "I will go myself as chief mourner; that will please you, Vivien."

Slowly and sadly she raised her pale face to his and kissed him.

"You are always good to me," she said—"always kind."

"My peerless Vivien, who would be anything else? It is hard on you, darling. I know that you are grieved about this; it is a loss to you. No new friends can ever take the place of the old. It is hard on you; but, if you can try to be yourself to-night, and amuse our guests as you usually do, I shall be glad; nevertheless, if you would rather not come down to dinner, I will make all excuses for you."

"I will come," she said; "and you will see that all due respect is paid to my father's old friend and secretary?"

"I will, my darling," and kissing her pale face more warmly than usual, Lord St. Just hastened away.

CHAPTER XLIII

"I shall have to live with the knowledge through all the future," Lady St. Just thought to herself; "I may just as well begin my task now."

Yet she had some terrible duties for anxiety; one was, would anything compromising to her be found in Gerald's papers? She tried to reassure herself that she loved her too well to be careless in any matter affecting her. Yet, for the next two days, the proud, beautiful woman suffered a very martyrdom of suspense. Every ring at the bell, every knock at the door, every unusual sound, every strange footstep startled her, and at last Lord St. Just began to fear that she must be ill, and to wonder what was the matter with her. It was a sore and terrible trial of her nerves. She did not dare to go again to Gerald's lodgings, lest her doing so would excite wonder and comment. The day of poor Gerald's funeral came, and every one who had known his connection with the family thought that Lord St. Just acted kindly and courteously in following. It was a fitting mark of attention. The kindly nobleman himself had taken care that the ceremony should be one befitting a friend of the Nesles. Gerald's brother did not attend; the engagement that he had in Rouen would not allow him. So poor Gerald was laid to rest, and Lord St. Just ordered a marble monument that was to tell his name and his age.

He was sorry for the hapless secretary.

GERMAN PIRATE SUNK.

LONDON, Sept. 1. The Admiralty has given out no information concerning the fate of the German submarine which sank the Arabic. Unofficial reports which say that the submarine had been sunk, are being circulated widely. It is said that the craft attempted to torpedo the steamer Nicotian, which arrived at Liverpool from New Orleans on August 29th, five days after the Arabic went down. According to this account, the Nicotian escaped and the submarine, while attempting to sink her, fell a victim to a patrol boat. In Liverpool the report is current that the submarine has been captured and sunk.

FIGHTING IN KAMERUNS.

PARIS, Sept. 1. Fighting continues in the Kameruns. The Minister of Colonies gave out a statement to-day, announcing further victories. The statement follows: The French forces in the eastern and southeastern Kameruns are continuing a vigorous offensive in the direction of Haoude, the capital of the colony. The German troops have been defeated in a series of engagements and are retreating in great disorder. Many native German troops have surrendered with arms and equipment. Our right column coming from the north attacked strongly fortified positions at the Dume station in conjunction with our southern column. The Germans were defeated, abandoning their positions. In their retreat they threw most of their supplies into the river.

DESPERATE FIGHTING.

LONDON, Sept. 1. Russian rearwards are making desperate resistance to the efforts of the forces of Prince Leopold of Bavaria and Von Hindenburg's southern wing to cut off the Russian troops still clinging to the Vilna and Grodno, says the Petrograd correspondent of the Times. The new movement of Von Mackensen's army against the trunk line between Kovle and Kiev, which might isolate the Russian troops in Galicia, is regarded seriously in Petrograd, but the broken and woody nature of the ground is expected to retard advance in this direction. It is persistently rumored that President of the Duma, Rodzianko will shortly be appointed Premier with wide powers as to the formation of his cabinet.

FRENCH FINANCES.

PARIS, Sept. 1. France could send before the end of the war, a billion and a half francs in gold to the United States, without affecting her financial position in Europe, said Senator Armond to-day. Senator Armond is an eminent authority on financial questions, and the spokesman of the financial committee of the Senate. "While we can do this and will do it, if America insists," he continues, "on this side we consider the greatest service which can be rendered France is to cooperate in stabilizing the Exchange market, which America can do to their own advantage as well as ours by granting a loan, the proceeds of which would pay for supplies pur-

VIOLATE SWISS TERRITORY.

GENEVA, Sept. 1. German aviators have violated Swiss territory for the fourth time. Five German military aeroplanes flew inside the Swiss frontier opposite the French town of Delle. Although under fire from French artillery, the aeroplanes turned back. One damaged machine came down near a Swiss village, but afterwards took to flight and escaped towards Alsace.

THE BALKAN SITUATION.

LONDON, Sept. 1. The Balkan situation is discussed at length in despatches to the morning papers from Bucharest, Sofia and Athens. Although the correspondents are generally optimistic, emphasis is placed on the difficulties which the diplomats of the Quadruple Entente Powers are encountering in their endeavors to adjust the conflicting demands, and disarm the mutual suspicions of the Balkan nations. The Standard's Athens representative believes that no definite developments in the Balkan situation can be expected in the immediate future. As regards Greece, he says, if there is to be intervention it will not come until Greek interests demand it, and its sole object will be to lay the foundation of a Greece, which must include large portions of Near Eastern territory. The Bucharest correspondent of the Times emphasizes the necessity for a better understanding between Roumania and Bulgaria. If Roumania could be induced to make a definite offer to Bulgaria, the effect on her sister country would be immediate, he says.

ROUMANIA STANDS FIRM.

ROME, Sept. 1. It is understood here that the Roumanian Government has decided to stand firmly by its policy of declining to permit the Central Empires to forward arms and ammunition through Roumania to Turkey. A statement made here on good authority explains the attitude toward the Central Powers as follows: Roumania desires to maintain strict neutrality. She is confirmed in her attitude by the existence of war between Italy and Turkey, desiring to preserve intimate relations of friendship between herself and Italy.

NEWS AGENCY REPORT.

BERLIN, Sept. 1. A report was given out by the Overseas News Agency to-day that a cruiser of the Allies had met with disaster off Asia Minor. The telegram from Smyrna says that two hostile cruisers bombarded the city of Smyrna and the coast. In the Gulf south of the city, says the News Agency, one cruiser foundered, and the second attempted to go to her rescue, but was prevented by the Turkish artillery.

EXCHANGE RATES.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1. Foreign Exchange rates closed last and loose to-day, and the lowest values ever reached in this country were recorded. The English pound quoted at $4.50 at the opening of the market, and subsequently rose to $4.55 and then fell back to $4.54 at the end of the day. France dropped to 69, lire hovered around 6.5 and reichmarks zig-zagged between 80 1/2 and 80.

AMERICA CONFIRMS REPORT.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1. Bearing out the reports that the German submarine which sank the Arabic had herself been sunk, a State Department official has revealed that a report was received from Ambassador Page, at London, the day after the sinking of the steamer, indicating that a German submarine had been destroyed near the scene of the Arabic disaster.

CRUISERS TO BE BUILT FOR PERU.

MADRID, Sept. 1. The Peruvian Government has given an order for two cruisers to be built in Spanish shipyards.

MINERS STILL OUT.

LONDON, Sept. 1. Although an agreement was reached yesterday at a conference in London of Welsh mine owners, the men themselves have not thus far accepted the situation. Reports to-day from South Wales say that 25,000 more miners are on strike.

GERMANY WILL WARN PASSENGER STEAMERS.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1. The German Ambassador, on instructions from Berlin, informed Secretary Lansing to-day that the German Government had accepted the principle that passenger steamers should be warned before being attacked by submarines. She will formally communicate this information in writing later.

GERMANY OFFERS TO BUY COTTON FROM UNITED STATES.

BERLIN, Sept. 1. German business men have transmitted to the United States an offer to buy a million bales of cotton. The offer was for fifteen cents a pound, payable on delivery of the cotton in German harbors.

HELPING THE ENEMY.

DUNKIRK, Sept. 1. The number of machinists who went on strike on Monday at the Brooks Plant of the American Locomotive Company was increased yesterday afternoon when a large number of other machinists joined their comrades. The Company is engaged in making shells for the Allies.

WILL COMPLY WITH REQUESTS.

PARIS, Sept. 1. The Serbian Government has informed Greece that it intends to comply with the requests of the Quadruple Entente concerning the concessions demanded by Bulgaria, says an Athens despatch to the Matin.

JAPANESE FOR DARDANELLES.

PARIS, Sept. 1. What appears to be an intimation that Japan may co-operate in the campaign to force the Dardanelles, is contained in an interview with Baron Hayashi, the Japanese Ambassador in Paris, sent to the Petite Parisian, a Paris Rome correspondent. "I can say much about that," the Baron is quoted as saying in reply to a question regarding the Dardanelles, "for we must not allow our enemies to profit by information about the movement of our troops."

MERITED PUNISHMENT.

MANCHESTER, Sept. 1. Theodore Slagton, a British journalist of German parentage, was sentenced to-day to a term of six months in jail for writing to American newspapers matters calculated to prejudicide the relation of the British Government with neutral countries. When arrested on August 21st, Slagton denied that his articles were intended for publication.

WARNED NOT TO WORK IN FACTORIES.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 1. Following the example of Germany, the Austro-Hungarian Government announces that all Austrians and Hungarians in neutral countries, particularly in the United States, are warned not to work in factories producing war material for the enemies of the Dual Monarchy. Violation of this decree is punishable by imprisonment from ten to twenty years, even by capital punishment under certain conditions.

HAS NOT REQUESTED ASSISTANCE.

TOKIO, Sept. 1. Russia has not requested troops to be sent from Japan to her assistance.

ELDER STATESMAN DEAD.

TOKIO, Sept. 1. Marquis Inouye, one of the elder statesmen of Japan, died to-day.

FRENCH TAKE ROAD.

PARIS, Sept. 1. An official statement by the Ministry of Marine to-night says: The island of Ruad, in Syria, lying between Latakia and Parajima, has been occupied by a detachment from the French squadron, which holds the blockhouse on the Syrian shore. The French flag was hoisted this morning. There was no resistance by the population.

LONDON BUDGET.

LONDON, Sept. 1. The minor fortresses of Lutsk, which with those of Dubno and Tzvyro form a fortified triangle on Russian territory just north of the Galician frontier, were captured by the Austrians to-day, according to an official report from Vienna. It is in this direction that the Austro-German offensive has been most aggressive during the past few days, the object being to separate the Russian armies which have been retreating through the Pripet marshes from Galicia, and which yesterday inflicted, so the Russians claim, another severe defeat on the invaders. The capture of Lutsk will likely compel the Russians to hasten their victory, to evacuate that part of Galicia still held by them, otherwise their retreat would be seriously threatened. Along the rest of the front, except in the centre where the Austro-Germans continue to make slow advances, the Russians appear to be holding their own. They have thus far prevented the Germans from crossing Dvina, and at Friedrichstadt, where a battle is in progress several days, they have arrested the German offensive between that point and the Gulf of Riga, and are still holding their ground between Kovno and Vilna and before Grodno.

Although the Germans have approached the outer position of Grodno, the fortresses of military writers here is that the Russians stand a good chance of winning the race for time. Within the next few weeks the autumn rains will be felt, and it is pointed out that unless they can succeed in gaining a decisive result before the onset of the winter, the Germans can hardly hope to reach the Russian armies before, under cover of long winter, they are reformed and re-equipped. At present the Austro-Germans are straining every nerve to win this decision, but they have been greatly delayed by the intensity of the Russian counter-attacks, with which the Russian troops hold positions in protecting their retreating comrades. The Russian losses have been enormous. Berlin says that the Russians have lost 1,000,000 in prisoners since May 2nd, the date on which the drive commenced in Western Galicia, while during August alone the German captures included over a quarter of a million of these and 2,300 cannons. The Russian losses, too, have been heavy. It is killed and wounded, while the strain on the troops have been terrible. The Austro-Germans, it is estimated, about 2,000,000 men on the eastern front, 500,000 being in Riga region, more than 1,000,000 in the centre, and from 600,000 to 700,000 in Galicia.

For a week the French have been pouring an avalanche of shells into the German lines on the west. It is believed that this ammunition would not be used simply for the purpose of damaging the German trenches, and therefore an early general offensive is looked for.

MORE GAINS IN GALIPOOLI.

LONDON, Sept. 1. Further gains for the Allied forces on Gallipoli Peninsula are chronicled on an official report received from General Sir Ian Hamilton, Commander-in-Chief of the British forces operating against the Turks. The report says: "Further fighting on the 27th and 28th in the northern section of the line, resulted in the capture of an important tactical point. The 'Banduk Anafurti' was captured, and appreciable gain of ground occupied by the Australian and New Zealand Army Corps. Field guns, machine guns, and hand-grenades of a severe character. Very heavy losses were inflicted on the Turks and three of their machine guns, three trench mortars, two hundred rifles, five hundred bombs and a large quantity of small arms and ammunition was captured by us."

Claims That Follow War.

How the Values of Worthless Things Jump up When Compensation is to be made

After every war there are always numbers of claims for damage sent in to the various nations engaged. For instance, after the Boer War, Great Britain experienced a huge impounding of ridiculous claims, which ranged from a modest half-crown compensation for a child's doll "commandeered" from a loyalist farm by a Cape rebel, to one of nearly a quarter of a million sterling brought by a Portuguese subject whose sugar factory was burnt, as a matter of military policy, by order of Lord Kitchener.

About the same time, America went through a similar experience with regard to claims lodged against it by people who had suffered, either in person or estate, during the hostilities in Cuba. Altogether, 495 claimants appeared, and they asked between them $7,000,000 doles. ($211,400,000) of the United States Government. One instance of a huge claim being paid is afforded by the case of a certain John Magee, who at his death left a fortune to his heirs which was considered immense even in that city of millionaires in which he died—San Francisco. This John Magee was a small trader at San Jose, in Guatemala. He was also British consular agent at that remote and little visited port, an almost entirely honorary position, but one which carried with it among other privileges, immunity from arrest under both the ordinary and extraordinary laws of the State.

War, however, broke out between Guatemala and San Salvador, and Magee was seized, thrown into prison, and severely flogged by order of a certain Colonel Gonzalez. For this he demanded reparation, and, being backed up by the British Government, he got it, to the tune of $60,000, being at the rate of $1,000 for each lash received.

But the above fades into insignificance when compared with the famous "Alabama claim" brought by Uncle Sam against John Bull soon after the Civil War between North and South.

The Alabama was a steam vessel of about 900 tons, with engines of 300 horse-power, constructed by Messrs. Laird, of Birkenhead, for the Southern Confederate States. She was launched on May 15th, 1862, and while her character was being inquired into, she sailed surreptitiously from the Messer, only a few hours before the British Government telegraphed to detain her.

Under the command of a Captain Semmes, she forthwith commenced the career of a privateer, and undoubtedly did great damage to the American mercantile marine, until she was finally attacked and sunk off Cherbourg, by the Federal Iron-clad Kearsage, on June 19th, 1864.

Our Government all along said they were sorry, but that they were not responsible. The authorities at Washington, however, thought otherwise, and sent in a claim for damages.

This claim included not only compensation in full for all vessels captured by the Alabama, but also introduced enormous claims for indirect losses. These latter included such items as compensation for loss by transfer of trade from America to British ships; ditto for loss owing to increased rates of marine insurance on the whole of the American mercantile marine; and most ridiculous of all, indemnification for theoretical losses incidental to the prolongation of the war, owing to the Alabama's successful strategy on the high seas.

After nearly leading to a rupture between the two countries, the whole question was referred to an International Arbitration Commission, which held its first meeting at Geneva, in June, 1872. This tribunal at once ruled the indirect damages out of court, but ordered us in the end to pay direct claims amounting to $2,225,168 13s. 4d., a sum afterwards admitted by the Americans themselves to be fully $1,250,000 in excess of the losses actually suffered by them.

DARKNESS.

By GEORGE FITCH

Author of "At Good Old Slawsh."

Darkness is a condition which occurs when the sun goes off duty at night.

It is very thick and black and is distinguished for its entire absence of light. If a thousand square miles of darkness could be run through a cylinder it would not yield enough light to satisfy an engaged couple in a lonely parlor.

Darkness is very unpopular, because it compels man to spend large sums of money for hand-made light which is a very inferior article and is always going off at a critical point in the entertainment, giving some cheap opportunity to yell "Fire!" Nevertheless, darkness is useful, and often fills a man full of profound and surging grandeur, no man who has heard an umpire call the game in the eight inning with the home team ahead by an eyelash can speak in anything but the highest terms of darkness.

Darkness is also a boon to the man who has bought his West Palm Beach suit. Many a man has worn one of these suits around the block at night for a week, before he has had the courage to translate himself into the busy city life in all his spotless radiance.

Darkness has saved more farmers' wives than medicine ever did. Farmers' wives have to stop work shortly after dark, because of the high price of kerosene. If there was no darkness the rest-dents of New York City would have to live by daylight and vast numbers of them would expire of ennui and other contagious diseases.

Darkness has enabled astronomers to take long refreshing squirts at the universe and by means of the stars to weigh the earth and calculate its size. It has also enabled enterprising captains of industry to put electric signs on top of the Palisades and to say things to 5,000,000 people at one time.

Moreover, darkness is a soft, thick veil which hides a million billboards from the suffering public. For this reason alone we should be very grateful to darkness and encourage it by every means in our power, even to refusing to pay gas bills when they are too high.

THURSDAY, Sept. 2nd, 1915.

Our Boys in Egypt.

This morning Mr. W. A. Munn, received a cable from Alexandria, from his son Errol, who is with the Newfoundland Regiment, stating that they had arrived there and were proceeding to Cairo. Other messages say they arrived at Alexandria at four o'clock this morning. They left Aldershot in high spirits on the night of the 19th, as will be seen by a reference to the letter of Lieut-Surgeon Tait, which will be seen elsewhere in this issue. Next day they embarked on the Megantic, a fine White Star liner of 15,000 tons and 17 knots speed. The voyage from London to Alexandria usually lasts about 12 days. We do not know from what port they embarked, but it would probably be Southampton, and as the message of their arrival has come 15 days from their leaving port, it is clear they must have had a good trip, as the conveying of the British usually occupies a longer time than ordinary voyages. But the main satisfaction is their safe arrival in port, after facing the perils of German submarines. Alexandria, the port at which they disembarked is on the west side of the Nile delta, and is the main depot of both the British and French forces which are engaged in the Dardanelles. It is a considerable distance from the Dardanelles, being some 700 miles away. It is one of the famous cities of antiquity and was founded by Alexander the Great, 332 years before the Christian era. In 1798 it was taken by Napoleon, whose plans were frustrated by Nelson at the Battle of the Nile, and in 1801 it was wrested from him by the British, and came again under Turkish rule. After the Arabi Pasha revolt, it was taken by the British in 1882 after a bombardment by Admiral Seymour. It was in this engagement that Lord Beresford gained his fame on the gunboat Condor. The destination of the Newfoundland Contingent, however, is the great military camp outside Cairo, the apex of the Delta of the Nile, from which it spreads out by its various mouths to the waters of the Mediterranean. It is on these great plains of sands, overlooked by the Great Pyramids and the Sphinx that the Australian and New Zealand contingents received their final training before they were sent to do their great deeds on the Peninsula of Gallipoli, and where they are co-operating with other British forces in an effort to obtain mastery of the heights of Sari Bahr. The plains around the Great Pyramid were the scene of Napoleon's battle of the Pyramid, when he destroyed the power of the Mamelukes, the military caste which had long dominated the Egyptians. The climate of the place is hot and dry, the period of great heat is however between July and October, but after that time the heat is not oppressive, and the climate is a most delightful one. Here they will finish the training commenced at Aldershot, and will be a reserve for any attack that may develop on the Suez Canal, the like of which failed last winter, but which may be attempted again this fall.

The scene of the main fighting which took place then on the Suez Canal is about 75 miles away from the camp of the Pyramid, which is the present destination of our boys. It is of course on the side of the canal further away from the side of the Turkish camp.

Miss Mary Hall, F R G S

The Famous African Traveller.

On Monday evening, the 6th inst., at the Grenfell Hall, we shall have the pleasure of hearing the most famous woman traveller of the day, give her experiences as the first woman who passed from end to end of Africa, through its most civilized and its wildest parts, illustrating her talk with 100 views taken by herself. She is not only famous as a traveller, but as a writer and a lecturer, having lectured before the Royal Scottish Geographical Society, London, the most critical of Geographical Societies, who conferred upon her the honour of their fellowship. Starting from the Cape, she will carry us to the great Zimbabwe Ruins of Rhodesia and then to the burial place of Cecil John Rhodes, the founder of the Oxford Scholarship of which some Newfoundland boys reap the benefit year by year. Then she will take us through wildest Africa and show us the Great Lakes, the Great Falls. She travels by railway, by small boat, on foot in every possible way till she at last brings us to Egypt, the land of the Pharaohs, which within a short time, perhaps now is the home of Newfoundland's 1st Regiment.

We shall see the land and hear its stories, and so those whose hearts are some to help their King and Country will be able to picture most truly the surroundings in which they live. We need not hesitate in saying that Miss Hall may be assured of a crowded house.

Temperance Rally.

In connection with the Financial District Meeting in Bay Roberts, on Tuesday evening, a temperance meeting was held in Central Methodist Church. The chair was taken by Rev. Dr. Fenwick, and the appointed speakers were Revs. H. Royle, N. M. Guy and W. H. Browning. Following these, addresses were delivered by Rev. Dr. Fenwick, Mr. H. H. A. and Rev. Dr. Curtis who closed his address by moving a resolution pledging the entire audience standing to show their determination to have done with the liquor traffic. A large vote for prohibition may be expected from the progressive town of Bay Roberts.

Orphans' Collection.

We would remind our readers that the collection for the Bellevue Orphans will be taken up at all the Masses on Sunday next. The up-keep of an institution of this kind necessitates a considerable outlay. To feed, clothe and educate over 120 children requires a large income—much larger in fact than many who only have a limited knowledge of the requirements of such a family can realize. In addition to the amount required for the purchase of food and clothing there must of necessity, be a large yearly expenditure for fuel and light, repairs to buildings, and renewal of household requisities. To fully appreciate the good work done by the Sisters, one must visit the Orphanage and see the neatly-dressed, healthy and happy looking children, and mentally contrast their present condition with what it would likely have been if such a home had not been provided.

Our citizens, remarkable for the generosity with which they respond to appeals for charitable purposes, will, we feel sure, sustain their well-deserved reputation and by their generous contributions make Sunday's collection a record one.

Mystery Solved.

The mystery surrounding the find of men's clothing etc., near the Quiddi Vidi Lake Swimming Pool, has been cleared up. The man who left the articles of wear at the place mentioned, has been found. On Saturday evening last he had been celebrating and went to the swimming pool for a bath. After partly undressing he decided not to go in the water but made a straight tack for home just as he was, with only one boot on, no coat, no shirt and no collar. The next day he found he was minus his furnishings and a small drop in a flask that he left behind in his coat pocket.

BIG HOLIDAY BILL AT NICKEL.

There is a grand holiday bill at the Nickel Theatre to-day, as will be seen by the advertisement elsewhere, and it is sure to attract large audiences. The Nickel is always popular, especially on holidays as everyone likes to be with the crowd. The principal subject to-day is "The Million Dollar Mystery" in which all are interested. Thousands of citizens, young and old are deeply interested in this fascinating story. To-day's episode is one of the best. We know all that have seen the previous chapters will see this. The programme starts at 2 p.m. sharp and 7 p.m., so that as many as possible will be able to attend to-day. The other pictures are exceptionally good. Messrs. Cairns and Hoskins are coming to the Nickel next week.

AT THE CRESCENT.

Mr. Harvey Collins sings at the Crescent Picture Palace to-day: "If we can't be the same old sweet-hearts we'll still be the same old friends" and "I'll change the shadows to sunshine," Ernest Ball's great song. The picture programme is a very fine one, the productions of the very best photo play companies and featuring some of the celebrated movie stars, such as Maurice Costello, Dorothy Kelly, Arthur A. Johnson and others. This big show costs no more. Go to the Crescent to-day and see it. Afternoons, 2 o'clock; night, 7 o'clock.

BRITISH THEATRE.

The many patrons who witnessed the entertainments at British Theatre yesterday enjoyed one of the most pleasing and interesting programmes which have as yet been given at that popular amusement resort. Although still slightly indisposed Madame Olive Timmons sang her two numbers: "When I Was a Dreamer" and "Mary of Argyle" magnificently, her accompaniments being faultlessly played by Mr. A. H. Allen.

The pictures deserve special mention as they are all highly entertaining and of remarkably beautiful photography.

OUR SOLDIERS AT ROSSLEYS.

On Monday will be shown a very fine film of our brave soldiers brought to Mr. Rossley by the officers who have just returned home. This picture is the clearest and best ever taken of the boys, every face can be seen, it was taken in Scotland at the camp. There is a very fine programme to-night. Jack Rossley will deliver his great turn, entitled: "The Dream of Peace," something never seen here before. Jack Rossley is to be congratulated, he has secured the services of Ian McKenzie and his talented lady artists. Ian McKenzie in the Old Country and his household. Mr. Rossley after considerable trouble has at last been able to secure this treatment being faultlessly played by Mr. A. H. Allen.

A splendid clear picture of our soldier lads will be shown at Rossley's and they will be arranged for the finest films in the country.

The officers newly returned brought the film with them.

Missing Boy Found.

George Barter, the eight-year-old son of Mr. Jonas Barter, President of the T. P. Union, who strayed away from his home on Mundy Pond Road Tuesday evening, was found yesterday morning on the Southside Hill, having spent the previous night in the woods. He was found by two men named Squires and Lamb who cared for him at their houses, later bringing him home to his parents. The boy Barter has been a sufferer from a serious complaint since he was born and that caused him to wander away. He is none the worse now of his unpleasant experience.

Letter From Lieut-Surgeon Tait.

R. A. M. C. MESS,
Twesdown Camp,
Farnham,
Surrey,
Friday, Aug. 20th.

Dear Father,—I was up to Aldershot yesterday and saw the last of Bert and the Newfoundland boys before they left for the Bardselles.

I have seen Bert quite a number of times, and have dined with the officers, the Newfoundland Camp being only four miles from here.

When Miss May Furlong arrives home she will give you all the news, for she has been here to see us, and has been a regular mother to the boys, and the three of us here.

Saturday last I went to town and stayed there till Sunday night, Carty and Donnelly being down at the same time. Yesterday, after drill, I caught a bus and went out and had dinner with Bert. Miss Furlong and Mrs.
Jackson were there, and we all stayed until the last company went away, which was 1:30 p.m. We had afternoon tea with the lads, chatted away till dinner at 7, and then everyone was busy getting orders carried out, and arranging things for the final discharge, and at 8 they paraded for leaving. Bert was fine when we left, in the best of health, and in good spirits. All the chaps were jolly glad to be moving, and getting ready to see some active service.

At the station I had a chance to see a lot of our chaps in the ranks whom I had not met before, such as Mitchell,
Shears, Stan and Wilfred Harvey,
Ralph Herder, Sam Snow, Benson, Taylor, Lloyd Woods and others, these were all looking well and were keen on getting away.

The Newfoundland Regiment—or a part of it at least—formed the King's bodyguard the other day when he was here, which we Newfoundlanders consider quite an honour. His Majesty complimented the lads on their looking so well, and when they were getting on the train they received a message from the King, wishing them
"goodbye" and "extending to them his best wishes, etc."

I have seen quite a few regiments, but I must say our boys were the finest make-up I have ever seen. Their radical reductions on all remaining lines of summer wearing apparel for Ladies, Misses and Children.
This Store now presents unlimited opportunities to save money.

It was a great sight to see our lads
—A and B Company for the first train, followed about twenty minutes by C and D march to the train, singing "Tipperary" and other familiar songs, and the men of the other regiments, all along the way, shouting out to them at the top of their voices and heaping upon them all the "lucks" and "good wishes" possible.

It certainly was great to hear the word Newfoundland, and to listen to the complimentary remarks from the bystanders.

I am busy every day from 6 a.m.
till 4 p.m. attending drill, lectures, etc., and I like very much. I have just returned from a six mile route march, but the roads being very dusty make the journey a little more wearable. As you know we have the week-end off duty, so I am dining on Sunday with Miss Furlong, at the Hotel Cecil, which is a very nice place, good to the boys, and I have been making good use of her motor car quite a lot.

I hope you are all well at home.
I saw Dr. Parsons a few days ago, he is looking fine and is now waiting for orders to move to the front.

I must now close.
Yours in haste,
H. SINCLAIR TAIT.

Wanderers Trim Red Lions

In Yesterday's Baseball.
Though contrary to the opinion of the fans, the Wanderers made the Red Lions bite the dust yesterday afternoon thus the victors are now in good standing for the championship.
Despite the unfavourable weather the attendance of spectators was the largest for the season, the proceeds amounting to $56. The players were:

Wanderers Red Lions
Ford Hiltz
King Cooney
Hartnett Baird
Hocken Payne
Britt Crawford
McLeod Munn
McCrindle Gowans
McLean Rolls
c. field.
Jenkins relieved rolls in the seventh innings. The score by innings was—Wanderers 3 1 4 0 0 1 0 3—12
Red Lions 3 1 0 0 0 1 0—5

Messrs. Chesman and Montgomerie were umpires and Messrs. Outerbridge and Cocks were scorers.
The contest was fast and exciting throughout. A regrettable feature was the rain shower, interfering with play somewhat. The pitching by King and Cooney was excellent.
MacLean, of the Wanderers, made the best hit of the game, reaching third base. McLeod, McCrindle and Hocken, of the same team, each made a two bagger. In the second innings Hartnett and Hocken made a double play.
The Cubs and B. I. S. will contest next Wednesday and it is a foregone conclusion that the Cubs are going to win. They will play off with the Wanderers for the pendant the following week.
During the game yesterday a certain insignificant player made himself obnoxious to all. The frills and tinsel as introduced were, we understand, contrary to all baseball etiquette. By his interference with other players and bases he had to be repeatedly called to order by the umpires who were "ragged" by the delinquent while the game was held up.
The incident was generally regretted.

The Strength of Artillery Steel

Almost Inconceivable Pressure to Which the Barrels of the Big Cannon are subjected.
(From Tit-Bits.)
Modern high-powered guns could not be built without steel strong enough to resist the enormous pressure to which they are subjected. Few understand how great these pressures are—almost as far beyond ordinary comprehension as are the distances of the stars or the number of atoms in a glass of water. An attempt to state the matter in a form that will mean something to the ordinary mind is made by a contributor to "La Nature" in an article entitled "The Strains Resisted by Gun-Metal." He writes:
"When the marvels of modern artillery are described, perhaps we direct our admiration too exclusively to the mechanicians who have combined to construct it. We must not, however, forget the metallurgist, for it is owing to the astonishing qualities of the metal that the gun is so well able to resist the enormous strain due to the detonation of the explosive."
"It is interesting to cite here some figures published by Commander Trigault. At each discharge of a gun, in the case of our field-pieces, in the less than three-tenths of a second, the pressure exceeds twenty tons to the square inch, and the speed of the projectile leaving the muzzle is more than 2500 feet per second."
"The energy developed may be put at about half a million foot-pounds; in other words, considering the cannon as a motor working during an exceedingly short time, we may place its rating at about twenty million horsepower."
"Not only must the metal be able to resist these strains time after time, but to do so under unfavorable circumstances such as the high temperatures produced by the explosives. And not only must the metal of the gun be as strong as this, but it is the same with that of the shell. The shell of our 'seventy-five' supports a pressure estimated at seventeen tons; the work of the device that takes up the recoil reaches about twelve tons to the square inch, and the mount neutralizes at each discharge about two tons."
"In fact, these conditions are realized in quite a remarkable way. It has been possible to test in the machine shop the pieces of a battery that has fired several thousand shots and to show that they have suffered not the slightest deformation."
"This is why it is necessary to employ special steels. The use of nickel in proportions of one per cent to two per cent, gives to steel special qualities. This is one of the points where the economic blockade to which the Germans are subjected is likely to cause them great trouble when it becomes necessary for them to renew their war material. For nickel comes exclusively from New Caledonia and Canada, that is to say, from a French colony and a British one. When the Germans, therefore, have used up their stock, there will be no source from which to replenish it."

Marshall Bros

Men and Women's Clothes.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

A little neighbor of mine is much grieved because her husband cannot be brought to admire her new gown. "It's the very latest style," she says, "and I spent more than I could afford to on it. The silk was two dollars a yard and the lace five. All my friends think it is stunning. But every time I put it on he wants to know why I don't wear some old rag of a dress that isn't fit to be seen. That's his way of showing he doesn't like it. Men are so queer about women's clothes," she concluded with a sigh.

If "queer" means different from women (which of course it does mean since the accusation came from a woman and "queer" always means "different from me"), men certainly are queer about women's clothes.

Men Don't Know Styles.

In the first place, to the average man style doesn't mean much. He is just as apt to admire a dress that is five years out of date as the latest thing, more so if the latest thing is ugly or unbecoming.

Color and becomingness are the two big factors in women's clothes from a man's point of view—whether he knows it or not.

Most men love bright colors. I don't mean flashy colors, but colors like pink, blue or yellow in distinction to greys and mauves and browns. Pink, a children's trained nurse tells me, is the psychological color for children. All the graduates wear pink because children respond to it most quickly. I have noticed that most men's eyes light up at the sight of a pink gown. After all, what else are they but big children?

They Have No Idea What Clothes Cost. Men seldom recognize costliness or the absence of it in women's clothes. Almost every woman has heard her husband say, "There's a dress you look well in. Why don't you wear that oftener?" of some pink or blue cotton morning gown, while he ignores the lace creation that would buy twenty pink cotton gowns.

Most men prefer fluffy ruffles to plain tailored effects, just as they are more quickly attracted by the fluffy ruffles girl. They have enough plain tailoring in their own clothes, poor things.

Men sometimes admire striking clothes but usually on some other man's wife. They don't mind their women folks being stared at because they are pretty or beautifully dressed, but they aren't keen about having them make a deliberate bid for attention by striking clothes.

Of course these few ideas are offered by an observer of men, not by a man. Perhaps some of my masculine reader friends would like to amend them. His views will be welcome.

QUESTION—I am about to announce my engagement. Now I am not fond of jewelry and our funds are rather limited. Do you think it is my fiancée's bounden duty to invest in a diamond ring? My sister and some of my girl friends do.—Reader Friend.

ANSWER—If you have the courage to go without that diamond, Reader Friend, I for one shall highly respect you. If you feel the need of some symbol, why not some quaint silver ring or a plain gold band that can be used for a wedding ring? The richest bride I ever met had a symbolic gold ring for both engagement and wedding rings.

Police Officer Retires.

District Inspector William Collins, of the Newfoundland Constabulary, resigned from the force yesterday, after a period of 43 years of active and faithful service. Inspector Collins joined the Constabulary under Inspector Foley in 1872 and besides Mr. Foley he served under Inspector Generals Carty, Fawcett, McCowen and the present Inspector General Sullivan. In the early eighties he was attached to the Mounted Force, but of late years had been superintending street duty. His record has been that of a capable and courteous officer, and he will be missed from the street by his many friends who trust that the evening of his life may be spent in the enjoyment of a well deserved rest from a life of efficient and faithful service. The Telegram hopes that he may spend many years to enjoy his superannuation.

Fishery Report.

The latest fishery reports received by the Board of Trade are:

Aug. 28. From J. Gosse, (Spaniard's Bay to Upper Island Cove)—The catch to date is 425 qts. with 10 for last week. Practically nothing was got the last week owing to the scarcity of bait, though there was a good sign of cod on the grounds.

Aug. 28th. From P. J. Wade, (Salmon Cove Pt. to Collier's North Pt.)—Twenty-five dories and skiffs and one boat are still fishing, but no traps. The total catch is 480 qts. and for last week 30. Prospects are not very good as the bait supply is very limited, the only kind obtainable being a few herring. When a supply of these can be had the boats get from 1/4 to 1/2 qt. of cod a day. There is no sign of squid yet.

Aug. 28th. From J. F. Williams, (Bay Bulls Head to Long Point)—There is yet no sign of squid, but prospects would be good if bait were procurable. At present only a few herring can be obtained. Fifteen dories and 10 motor boats are fishing. The catch is 1205 qts. and for last week 130.

Aug. 28th. From W. Ward, (Mosquito Pt. to Bryan's Cove)—Bait is scarce and prospects are poor. The catch to date is 454 qts. with 30 for last week. Only 20 dories and skiffs are now fishing.

Aug. 28th. From H. Lawton, (Southern Head of Keels to Knight's Cove Pt.)—Owing to the scarcity of squid very few hook and line vessels were operating this week. Prospects are poor but when herring can be obtained, skiffs get from 1 to 2 1/2 qts. daily. Very little is being done with traps or codnets. The total catch is 3190 qts. and for last week 60. About 20 dories and skiffs are fishing.

Hot Roast Turkey and Chicken Suppers served at McGARRY'S Cafe until midnight. Also, Afternoon Tea served for Ladies and Gentlemen from 4.30 to 6 p.m., until further notice. sep21

Suppose all the Saloons Were Closed

WHAT WOULD HAPPEN TO THOSE EMPLOYED BY THE LIQUOR TRADE!

(By Charles Stehle in Ladies' Home Journal.)
(Concluded.)

Viewing the question from another angle, it means that the same amount of capital that is now invested in the liquor industry were transferred to legitimate business enterprises, the number of workers employed, the sum of wages paid and the amount of materials required would be increased fourfold. So that, even though three-quarters of the total capital invested in the liquor business were destroyed the workman, as such, would be just as prosperous.

It must not be assumed, however, that were the liquor business abolished every dollar now invested in it would be lost, as the liquor men themselves now declare. Land values would remain the same, and most of the buildings and much of the machinery could be utilized for other kinds of industries without serious depreciation in value.

We are, however, concerned primarily with the great mass of workmen who would be affected. Let us take five leading industries in the United States—textiles, iron and steel and their products; lumber and its manufactures; leather and its products, and paper and printing—and compare them with the liquor business (including the matting industry), with reference to the number of wage-earners employed, capital invested and wages paid:

For every $1,000,000 invested in each of these industries the following number of wage-earners are employed: Liquor, 77; iron, 284; paper, 367; leather, 469; textiles, 578; lumber, 579. These figures prove that the iron industry employs nearly four times as many, paper and printing five times as many, leather six times as many, textiles seven and one-half times as many, and lumber seven and one-half times as many workers for every $1,000,000 invested as does the liquor industry.

What is the ratio of wages paid the workers to the amount of capital invested in the business as compared with each of the industries noted above? Here are the figures: Liquor, 5.8 per cent.; iron, 17.4 per cent.; paper, 21.3 per cent.; leather, 23.5 per cent.; textiles, 23.9 per cent.; lumber, 27.1 per cent. A quick glance at these figures shows how comparatively little the laboring man gets out of the liquor business.

Estimates of the amount of money spent annually for existing liquor, bread and clothing. Suppose the liquor business were destroyed, and the money now spent for beer and whisky should be spent for bread and clothing—not that it would be necessary to have a baker shop or a clothing store on nearly every corner in our cities, as is the case today with regard to the saloon, but merely as a basis of comparison and because bread and clothing are two of the greatest staple productions.

Were this transfer of expenditures to be made it would give employment to nearly eight times as many workers, who would collectively receive five and one-half times as much in wages. Here are the United States census figures for 1913: Number of wage-earners employed—Liquor industry, 62,920; bread and clothing industries, 493,655. Wages paid—Liquor industry, $45,352,000; bread and clothing industries, $244,196,000.

But this is not all—more than five times as much raw material would be required in the bread and clothing industries as is now required in the liquor industry. The liquor industry, in 1913, spent for raw material $139,199,000; the bread and clothing industry spent for raw material $744,357,000—that is, they would require an additional $605,000,000 worth of raw material over and above what the liquor industry now uses. The production of this raw material would require many thousands of additional workers.

As already intimated, it would be necessary to spend all of the $1,800,000,000 for bread and clothing if the liquor industry were destroyed. But if the diversion of this money into the legitimate industries mentioned above would produce the results described, it is not fair to say that substantially the same general results would be achieved if the total sum were distributed among all the industries that would receive the benefit of increased business were men to spend money for the necessities of life, as well as for their legitimate luxuries, instead of for beer and whisky?

If this transfer were made—that is, the expenditure of $1,800,000,000 now used for liquor—to other legitimate purposes, it is fair to say that the men who make glass bottles, barrels, automobiles, signs, printing material, cabinet work and other products, who are now employed by the liquor business, would find jobs.

According to the census figures of 1910 there were, at that time in the United States about one hundred thousand bartenders. What will become of these when the saloon is abolished? What is it that constitutes a successful bartender? It is his ability as a salesman, and a man who is a good bartender will make a good clerk or salesman in practically any other kind of business. Furthermore, it requires many more people to sell $1,800,000,000 worth of bread and clothing, for example, than it does to sell liquor of the same value. And it is more than likely that at least as many series employees, such as travelling salesmen, book-keepers and stenographers, will be employed.

We still need to reckon with the bona fide brewers and maltsters, distillers and rectifiers who are engaged in the manufacture of intoxicating liquors. According to the census returns there are fewer than 15,000 of these in the United States. These will of necessity be compelled to adjust themselves to the changed economic conditions. But this does not mean that they will either go adrift or cause a "labor panic."

It is probable that about 10,000 artisans of various kinds are compelled annually to shift from one occupation to another. Those who are compelled to do this no doubt suffer some inconvenience, but the point is that it does not result in the serious trouble predicted by the liquor men. As a matter of fact more workmen lose their jobs because saloons are open than would be the case were the saloons to be closed.

One of the most appealing arguments being made to workmen by the liquor interests is that the workman should insist upon his right to exercise his personal liberty.

In this country there is no such thing as absolute liberty. We talk about a simple democratic form of government, when, as a matter of fact, a democracy is a most complex form of government. The simplest form of government is that of the autocrat who has the right to cut off the head of the man who disagrees with him. But in a country composed of about one hundred million citizens, each of whom thinks that he is as good as his neighbor, if not a little better, no one dares to do as he pleases.

The workman who has a family may not spend his wages as he pleases. The law says that he must first of all make provision for his wife and children. He is compelled to send these children to school, even though he may not believe in education. For the state insists that he shall be compelled to make good citizens of his children; and it has decreed that among other things the education which it provides for which the parent may provide in some other way assists in developing good citizenship.

A man may not burn down his own house in the crowded city, because by so doing he may set fire to his neighbor's house. The workman may not do with his own body as he pleases. And yet if this country should go to war with another country the state would not hesitate to send the same workman to the front of the battle, with the chances in favor of his being killed.

The law does not permit the sale of certain kinds of drugs, because they are injurious to the minds and bodies of those who may use them. When the state decrees that liquor is poison, and that the saloon is a detriment to society, then the state may logically and legally prohibit the sale of liquor and close the saloons, no matter how much such action may interfere with some man's "personal liberty."

WISE BOYS.

WALT MASON.

The oily tongued stranger goes after the granger & shells him a new-fangled churn; and we in the city exclaim, "W h a t a pity the farmer no wisdom will learn! He surely is easy; no graft is too chessey to sprng on the tiller of soil; the agents pursue him, hornsawgle and do him, and then amble off with the spoil." And we in the city, so leard and so witty, so wise to all manner of snares, invest in some bubble that's loaded with trouble, or purchase a few Belgian hares. We deal with some faker who sells by the acre a swamp that is hopelessly drowned, or buy with good money a mine that is funny, that's naught but a hole in the ground. We fall for the charmer—turned down by the farmer—who sells us a punk lot of books; for quick riches questing, we're always investing in pipe dreams and moonshine and spooks. Oh, lumty-tum-looral, the rubes who are rural are smarter than rubes in the town; the small grafts may get them, and jolt them and fret them, the big ones they always turn down. We shy at the small ones and fall for the tall ones, and blow in our bundles at once; the farm rubes'the sharpest or I'm not a harpist; the town rubes'the cham-

394th Day of the War TO-DAY'S Messages.

10.15 A.M. TENSION RELAXED AT WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, To-day. The strained relations between the States and Germany over submarine warfare apparently passed into history yesterday, after Count Von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, had informed Secretary of State Lansing in writing that prior to the sinking of the Arabic the Government had decided its submarines should sink no more liners without warning.

ARTILLERY ACTIVE. ROME, (Official) To-day. On the Upper Noce River, our artillery opened fire on the enemy.

VON TRIPPITZ ILL. LONDON, To-day. A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co., from Amsterdam, says reports received there from Berlin are to the effect that Count Von Trippitz, the German Minister of Marine, is ill from overwork and exhaustion.

NO ILL TREATMENT OF GERMAN WOMEN OR CHILDREN. LONDON, To-day. The Home Secretary, this evening, issued a denial of statements, published in the United States, that German women and children in London are being exposed to the fury of mobs, which is encouraged by the police whenever they venture out of doors; that they are prevented from buying food and compelled to subsist on what they can beg.

WOMEN REPLACING MEN WORKERS. LONDON, To-day. War has been responsible for women railway ticket collectors in London, but it is in Manchester that women are replacing men more than in any other part of England.

CAUGHT CARRYING DESPATCHES. LONDON, To-day. According to the Central News, James Archibald, an American newspaper correspondent, who was apprehended by British authority when the steamer Rotterdam, bound from New York for Rotterdam, put into Falmouth a few days ago, was carrying despatches from Berlin to Vienna from the German and Austrian Embassies at Washington.

NO NEWS OF STEFFANSON. NOME, Alaska, To-day. The steamer Corwin arrived to-day from a trading trip from Cape Serge, Siberia. The natives along the Siberian coast have heard nothing of Viljalmit Steffansson, explorer, who with two companions left Martin Point, the west mouth of Mackenzie River, on March 22, 1914, going north over ice in search of new land and was expected to reach Banksland.

IMPORTANT CONCESSION. LONDON, To-day. The London morning newspapers, while recognizing that President Wilson has secured an important concession from Germany with regard to Germany's submarine warfare, expressed the belief that the President will not be content with it.

RUSSIANS NOW HOLDING THE GERMANS. PETROGRAD, To-day. To-day's news shows more than a steady slowing up of the German advance. The Russians now hold the Germans on entire front, except in the neighbourhood of Riga, where the enemy has again retired to River Miusa.

12.30 P.M. ARABIC SUBMARINE CAUGHT IN NET. NEW YORK, To-day. An official of the White Star liner Adriatic, which arrived from Liverpool this morning, declared positively that the German submarine which sank the Arabic had been caught in a steel net by boats in double. The crew were now prisoners in England.

1.30 P.M. 1700 EMPLOYEES DISMISSED. LONDON, To-day. As the first step in the movement for retrenchment in Government expenditure the Express announces the dismissal of 1700 employees of the Land Valuation Department created under the Budget of 1909 to make a complete valuation of all land in Great Britain preliminary to the taxation of unenclosed incements.

GERMAN PEOPLE KEPT IN IGNORANCE. LONDON, To-day. The German public has been kept in ignorance of any concession to the United States, concerning submarine warfare according to the London Times. The British Admiralty's revelation regarding the loss of many submarines also has been concealed from the German people the Times asserts.

BRICK AND CEMENT! Hard Brick, Soft Brick, Fire Brick, Cement, in bris. and sacks. H. J. Stabb & Co

Letter From One Of Our Boys.

Badajos Barracks, Wellington Lines, Aldershot, Aug. 15, '15. Dear . . . Well, boy, I am just trying to catch the mail and tell you a little real news. Well the inspection came off on Thursday and we were one of the best there. In all there was about forty thousand troops there. We were the last in the line and Kitchener had a long talk to us; he said "you've just come down from Scotland, haven't you?"

Submarine "Dives."

Our early submarines cost £35,000 each. Officers and men on submarines receive extra pay. Modern submarines usually carry six or eight torpedoes.

THIRTY 1901 there was not a submarine in the British Navy.

For the expulsion of torpedoes, air at a pressure of 50 lb. is used.

In the American Navy was a submarine named the "Intelligent Whale."

Under some conditions, submerged submarines can be seen from aeroplanes and airships.

The submarine's deadliest enemy is the destroyer, which, at its best, can run 46 miles per hour.

In the British Navy submarines must, as a rule, remain submerged for longer than three hours.

For consumption beneath the waves air is stored in a submarine under the great pressure of 2,000 lb.

A Whitehead torpedo runs 6,000 yards, travelling part of the distance at the rate of 50 miles an hour.

On the surface submarines derive their motive power from oil or petrol; submerged, they are driven by electricity.

An automatic device prevents submarines from descending to a depth where the pressure of water would be dangerous.

Even on the surface a submarine is a comparatively slow craft. Her best speed is seldom much over 16 knots per hour.

If one of our submarines should be sunk, the crew could, by donning suits something like a diver's, come to the surface.

The eye of the submarine is the periscope, which is a tube not much thicker than a man's arm, with reflecting prisms at each end.

In our Navy no man is forced to serve on a submarine. The crew consists of volunteers, of whom many numbers are always forthcoming.

The sting of a submarine lies in her head or tail, because there are her torpedo-tubes. She cannot sink an enemy ship while broadside on to it.

Modern submarines can travel on the surface about 4,000 miles without replenishing fuel. The limit of a continuous under-water run is about 150 miles.
