There Must Be a Reason

That a great many of the garments that we have received in the past month were from new customers who had those garments mislabeled by other dyers and were sent to us as a last resort before a settlement was made with the owners. We were able to doctor up the majority of those crippled garments to the entire satisfaction of those owners. If you have any sick garments of this character send them to us. If our customers don't accept the garments after we doctor them, don't pay us. No cure no pay. We have received a new shipment of dye, the best on the market. Raglans cleaned and dyed at shortest notice. Outport orders get my personal attention.

CHAPTER IV.

MORE FAREWELLS THAN ONE.

"Isn't there any one, papa, you would like to have come and see you some day? Any one, I mean, you used to care for before we came here?" She had hit on the very theme of her father's thoughts. He answered instantly, though slowly, for speech was difficult to him now, and indistinct when hurried:

"Yes, there is some one who would come if I could ask him. I wish I could."

"Who, papa?"

"You knew him. Do you remember him, Sydney? Jacob—Jacob Cheene."

"Remember him! Why, yes, papa! He used to carry me about at Stuart's and keep me in his desk! I am so glad you want him. We'll get him here!" And despite Mr. Alwyn's nervous "No, no, child; your mother wouldn't have him!" Sydney lay in wait for the first opportunity of petitioning for this visitor, only, however, to be met by most positive refusal.

"It would be no pleasure to your father, I assure you, Sydney. He can't possibly desire to see this man. He is not fit to receive any one."

"But he said he did really wish for Mr. Cheene, mamma; and—"

"You know perfectly well he is ordered to be quiet. You have heard Dr. Dacle say so over and over again."

"But Dr. Dacle says an old friend's coming would not hurt him. I saw him this morning going past, mamma, and ran out to ask him."

"You take too much upon yourself, Sydney," rebuked her mother, frowning. Now, if this "old friend" were not invited, it would look as if she had negated the scheme. The Dacles' "poor Mr. Alwyn" had had a ring in it which she had not liked of late. There was little love lost between herself and the warm-hearted doctor or his family. "You had no right to speak of any one's coming till you had named it first to me," she pursued, irritably; "I have no room for such a visitor. He was only a clerk. I couldn't have him at my own table, and I certainly could not have him gossiping with the servants."

Gossiping with the servants! Not fit for her mother's table! Her father's one much-desired friend! Sydney's temper rose with a vehemence that she had never known before. "You had no right to speak of any one's coming till you had named it first to me," she pursued, irritably; "I have no room for such a visitor. He was only a clerk. I couldn't have him at my own table, and I certainly could not have him gossiping with the servants."

whom he had been parted by such ill-hap.

It was a curious re-union, fraught at first with a speechless pain, when the weather, fallen from his high estate of wealth, muffled now with struggling emotion, clasped hands with his old clerk, and looked at him with eyes that seemed to have forgotten how to be glad. Curious and grievous. For Jacob Cheene, the once shy dependant, had to keep calm and lead the way to cheerfulness, when for thoughts of the old placid past, and sight of the shattered life before him, he could have sat down and cried like any baby.

But that was only for a little while, and later on it was good to see them both, when the ailing man's state was recognized by his guest; for then all that was bright and welcome did the clerk recall and recount, speaking more and more freely as he found—with relief—that the lawyer's memory was a mere blank on some points. So he spoke of "Stuarts," telling how well the house looked with its rich new tenants, and related much news, always pleasant, of old townfolk; and if a question were put with a touch of half-frightened recollection, about some unsafe names, why, then, it so happened, Jacob Cheene had quite forgotten, or knew nothing of but so-and-so—and then he led his listener on safer ground again!

Thus talked the two old men—the feebleness of one making the other seem almost youthful—till they must needs revive old stories of the wondrous musical evenings; and Sydney saw her father's face light up, his fingers, white, wasted, nervous, stirring to the touch of invisible strings as Jacob Cheene described that great finale wherein the first violin had led such a glorious prelude as left them all exultant, breathless, fit for never another chord that night!

That was the safest theme they found. Pleased as a child, the host kept harping on it, and the next day of Jacob's visit Sydney brought out her father's violin ("It must have been left behind, for some one sent it to papa months after we got here," she explained. "Wasn't it strange?") and Mr. Cheene said it was, very, and the much-loved instrument and stately, justly laid upon its master's knees, just as it were, for recognition, and leave to be touched by another, and then the loose strings were well known—so beautiful, it might have been some saintly funeral song.

But the delight was too vivid. It set one hearer trembling past restraint. So the notes, strange at the Dale, were silenced. Only in cautiously chosen converse of old times the rest of the day passed, and with the morrow Jacob Cheene's master farewell.

Arriving on foot from Hedyngham, he was received by Mrs. Alwyn with a dignified "You are very good, Mr. Cheene, to travel across the country for such a doubtful pleasure as meeting poor Mr. Alwyn. A mere wreck you will find him. Kindly excuse my having many engagements, I am taking my daughter out both to-day and to-morrow. Sydney, I hope, will attend to you." Then the lady bowed herself away no whit less patronizing than of yore, and Jacob Cheene, his young hostess hovering about him in shy delight, was taken up-stairs to meet once more the old employer from whom he had been parted by such ill-hap. It was a curious re-union, fraught at first with a speechless pain, when the weather, fallen from his high estate of wealth, muffled now with struggling emotion, clasped hands with his old clerk, and looked at him with eyes that seemed to have forgotten how to be glad. Curious and grievous. For Jacob Cheene, the once shy dependant, had to keep calm and lead the way to cheerfulness, when for thoughts of the old placid past, and sight of the shattered life before him, he could have sat down and cried like any baby.

But that flying visit was a wondrous pleasure to Sydney's father. He talked of it morning, noon and night for days after, always with delight. Always but once; an evening when some fortnight had gone by, and Leonard and her mother absent in the next village at some festivity, the two at home sat together silently watching the sunset, a great piled-up splendor of golden clouds above a most peaceful sea, of tender-tinted blue.

The old man had been happier, if more strenuous, than for weeks that day. But now he suddenly grew restless. Pointing with shaking hand toward the brilliant west:

"How shall I—reach it?" he asked, looking straight forward with a great anxious yearning; "won't they—stop me?"

"Who stop you, father?" cried Sydney, springing to her feet, to draw his white head upon her shoulder.

"Why, they!" he answered, gazing forward, though the clear space was only peopled by phantoms of his disturbed brain—"they will Oh, how I wronged them! But, Sydney," bringing his shaking hands together with a piteous burst of grief, "I never meant to! Jacob will tell you—why didn't he tell you when he came?—I never meant to!"

GARDENING.
My neighbor has a garden fair and all the beds are neat and trim. But he has hired a stranger's hand to come and do the work for him; He walks among his shrubs and vines and proudly he admires them there. But he who'd come to know the flowers must give a garden constant care.

My patch of ground is not so large but I know every rose by name, And I have watched the peonies grow since first the pink shoots upward came; No stranger's hands have raked my beds and jostled these few plants of mine, For I have nurtured every shoot and guarded every trailing vine.

My neighbor has a garden fair and all his beds are neat and trim, But all the blossoms that are there are merely pretty flowers to him; He never knows the fight for life a struggling little rose bush makes Nor sees the new shoots spring up, because he never hoes or rakes.

I have no hired man to toil or trim my garden beds for me, 'Tis mine to break the sun-baked ground and water every plant and tree, 'Tis mine to fight the weeds and pests and give my roses constant care, But I get more than blossoms gay for life a struggling little rose bush makes Nor sees the new shoots spring up, because he never hoes or rakes.

Dempsey at the Movies.

CHAMPION WATCHES BATTLE BETWEEN HIMSELF AND CARPENTIER.

JERSEY CITY, N.J., July 4.—Jack Dempsey, still the heavyweight champion of the world, celebrated the 4th of July in addition to celebrating the victory over Georges Carpentier, the European champion Saturday. Dempsey plans to remain in this vicinity for several days, when he will go to Salt Lake City, his home for a vacation and rest from his long training grind. The champion, yesterday, saw himself in action. He motored to a motion picture theatre that was showing pictures of the great encounter.

Huddled in a back seat alongside of Jack Kearns, manager, and Mike Trent, the Chicago detective sergeant, who has been his bodyguard, he watched the punch that enabled him to retain the championship. He also saw the punches that in the second round caused the mass of humanity in the arena to gasp in the belief that the blonde Frenchman was to make good his threat to carry the title across the seas. Dempsey saw himself tatter and away as the Frenchman sent those punches to his jaw. Perhaps not until he saw the picture did he realize just how near he had been to dropping to the canvas floor, for after the fight Dempsey declared the blows had not bothered him. As Dempsey saw himself on the screen inflicting punishment upon his lighter opponent, his eyes sparkled and he leaned forward eagerly and uttered an exclamation of admiration for the way Carpentier gamely came back.

"If ever chance brings you my way, Miss Sydney, though it doesn't seem likely to now, you'll be sure and come and see me."

She promised "Yes; that she would."

"And you'll write to me and tell me about your father?"

Again "Yes," most willingly.

"For," stopping as they paced the platform to take one more long look at John Alwyn's child, with something of a haze about his own sight—"for there never was a kinder, truer, better friend than he was to me."

"Yes, he is good, isn't he, Mr. Cheene?" Sydney breaks in, her lips thrilling at this praise—very sweet, though almost unheard hitherto—gentle; you don't half know how so gentle; and uncomplaining he is! and he was always—when he was well—good to every one, wasn't he, Mr. Cheene?"

"Ah! that he always meant to be, I'll stake my life," returns her companion; more he cannot say, for the tramp comes shrieking up, he keeps shaking the child's hand till the guard hustles him into his carriage, and in another minute he is out of sight and out of questioning.

But that flying visit was a wondrous pleasure to Sydney's father. He talked of it morning, noon and night for days after, always with delight. Always but once; an evening when some fortnight had gone by, and Leonard and her mother absent in the next village at some festivity, the two at home sat together silently watching the sunset, a great piled-up splendor of golden clouds above a most peaceful sea, of tender-tinted blue.

The old man had been happier, if more strenuous, than for weeks that day. But now he suddenly grew restless. Pointing with shaking hand toward the brilliant west:

"Why, they!" he answered, gazing forward, though the clear space was only peopled by phantoms of his disturbed brain—"they will Oh, how I wronged them! But, Sydney," bringing his shaking hands together with a piteous burst of grief, "I never meant to! Jacob will tell you—why didn't he tell you when he came?—I never meant to!"

You Will Enjoy This new teeth-cleaning method

Brush teeth for ten days in this new way. We supply the test. See and feel the good effects. Compare them with the old ways.

Both are combined in a tooth paste called Pepsodent—a scientific product. And to millions of people it is bringing whiter, cleaner, safer teeth.

It will be a pleasant test. And it may bring to you, as it has to millions, a new conception of clean teeth.

Acts like fruit acids
Pepsodent also brings three other effects, such as fruit acids would bring. It brings them regularly and at proper times.

Whiter teeth
One great object is to fight the film—that viscous film you feel. It clings to teeth, gets between the teeth and stays.

It multiplies the salivary flow—Nature's great tooth-protecting agent. X multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva, to digest starch deposits that cling. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva, to neutralize mouth acids which cause tooth decay.

Old brushing methods do not effectively combat it. Much is left intact, forming a dingy coat. And most tooth troubles are now traced to it.

Modern diet, rich in starch, makes these things essential.

Firm is what discolors, not the tooth. It forms the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Quickly seen
The effects are quick and apparent. No one can doubt the benefits when they are explained.

Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear.

Fight it daily
Dental science has found two methods to effectively fight film. Many careful tests have proved them. Leading dentists everywhere now advise their daily use.

Feel and see these good effects, then judge if you always want them. They are vastly important. Cut out the coupon now.

A scientific film combatant combined with two other modern requisites. Now advised by leading dentists everywhere and supplied by all druggists in large tubes.

American Bride for King's Son.

In a recent issue of the "North American," Gertrude, Lady Decies, writes that Mayfair is watching with increasing interest the growing friendship between the Duke of York and Lady Mary Irene Curzon, the pretty daughter of Earl Curzon and his first wife, the late Mary Victoria Leiter.

Should the rumours which are flying around Society prove correct, and a friendship between the Duke and Lady Mary develop into matrimony, the alliance between British Royalty and the American girl, so much desired by many people on both sides of the "iron ring pond," would be realized.

Sunday's express arrived at P. aux Baques at 3 p.m. yesterday at the Kyle with mail and passengers called for Sydney at 4 p.m.

"HOW MUCH"

Which would you rather do, knock a revolver out of a high-waisted hand or go to a hotel and ask what a dinner cost before you bought it, and then, if you thought it cost too much, turn back and go out of the hotel?

In making the comparison, I had the courage in mind, but I am not more that I did not unwittingly make another comparison, too.

I do really think there are many men who would have the courage to do the first and not the courage to do the second part of the two things.

A Deserved Punishment.

The other day we got stuck with an absolutely miserable meal for which we paid $2.50 apiece because we didn't ask "how much?" before we went in. Had we asked, knowing the character of the food the place is supposed to serve, we would never have entered. It was a maddening experience to see a $5 bill go for a few fish chowder, thin, poorly cooked steak, indifferent French fried potatoes, wilted salad, fried commursh in a bird bathtub with corn syrup on it, commonplace vanilla ice cream and poor coffee. But it was a good lesson. We needed a punishment for our lack of courage and we got it.

Hereafter we have made up our minds not to be afraid to ask what things cost before we order them, whether they be hotel dinners, or repairs to the auto, or silk stockings.

And if we keep our resolution we shall save far more in the end than we lost.

And save it not only for ourselves but for others.

Prices Come Down With a Bang.

I think there is no more salutary check on would-be profiteers than the person who asks how much a thing costs before he buys it. I know a merchant who was suspected of profiteering and who has been made so nervous by a systematic campaign among his customers of asking what each thing costs before ordering and then occasionally quoting him comparative prices from elsewhere, that he has come down with a bang in his prices.

Of course there is a fascination about making the large gesture of saying "I'll take it" without asking the price. Money is nothing to us, we imply, we don't have to consider it—which in 90 cases out of 100 is tommyrot, and is recognized as tommyrot by the people before whom the gesture is made.

They Needn't Be Afraid.

I think men are worse about this thing than women, for two reasons. In the first place, women are the chief purchasing agents and do most of the small shopping in the family and have to get the "How much is it?" habit, whereas men only buy now and then and feel that they can afford to buy less closely. Also men regard their ability to make money as the price tag on themselves, and if they hint by asking the price tag on an article that their ability to make money is limited, they think they are putting a cheap tag on themselves.

Personally, I think this an entirely false notion and I admire the moral courage of the man who isn't afraid to say "How much?" Don't you?

When Choosing the Material for a washable Frock for the growing child—

MOTHER naturally thinks of the possibilities of the fabric shrinking in the wash. It is therefore a relief to her to know that the fabric will not shrink or lose its charm if Lux is used for its cleansing.

Durability, charm of colour, quality of texture, the freshness of newness—these are preserved to all good fabrics washed with Lux. A packet of Lux—a bowl of warm water—and dainty hands can cleanse delightful fabrics in a delightfully easy manner.

The beautiful pure Lux flakes are whisked into a creamy, bubbly lather in an instant. Gently squeeze this cleansing foam through and through the soiled texture—then rinse in clean water and hang to dry. Lux cannot harm a silken thread. It coaxes rather than forces the dirt from the clothes.

Saint Kentigern of Glasgow.

There is great uncertainty about the origin of S. Kentigern, who lived and labored early in the seventh century.

Legend says that he was the illegitimate son of Theinm, daughter of Lotie, King of the Picts, by Eugenius III, King of Scots, and that her father, full of anger and grief, threw her over the rocks on Mount Dimpeld. By some miraculous chance she was not injured, and her father relenting, she was sent to Culross, where, on the seashore, her boy, Kentibern, was born. Servan, a monk, found the mother and child, and exclaiming "My dear! my dear!" asked the outcast girl and her baby to share his call. He instructed the mother in the faith of Christ and baptized her giving her the name of Tanca. The baby he called Kentigern.

The child grew up in the monk's cell. Servan loved the boy dearly and commonly called him Mungo, which means dearest.

The mother who learned to love and serve God, bitterly regretted her sin.

Many are the legends connected with the childhood of Kentigern. Servan had a pet robin, which would eat out of his hand, and perched on his shoulder, and when the monk chanted the psalms of David, the little bird flapped its wings and twittered shrilly.

Servan had some pupils, at Culross, who were very jealous of their tutor's love for Kentigern, so they wrung the neck of the robin and said that Kentigern had done it. But Kentigern grieved for his dear master's sorrow, took the bird and prayed over it, and by the time the old man had returned from Church, the bird was alive and hopped to meet him.

In those days as there were no matches, fires were never allowed to die out entirely. It was the duty of the pupils of Servan to take turns in tending the fires. When Kentigern's week came round, his mates, extinguished the fires and Mungo, rising in the morning, found every spark gone and the ashes cold. Taking a stick, he placed it over the cold ashes, and invoking the name of the Holy Trinity, he blew upon the dead cinders, and a flame leaped up which kindled the branch; and thereat he lighted the church candles.

At last, Kentigern, unable to endure the envy of his fellow pupils, ran away and eventually settled near Glasgow, where he inhabited a cave in the face of the rock. Here he enjoyed the sea breezes and converted the people who came to hear him, among others, the King of Strathclyde. Here he was consecrated bishop by an Irish prelate. The district of Strathclyde, or Cumbria, on the west coast of Britain, from the mouth of the Clyde to that of the Mersey, that is to say from Glasgow to Liverpool, was occupied by a mingled race of Picts and Scots, whose capital was Al-Cleid, now Dumbarton. It was in this region that S. Kentigern was called to labor.

Although a bishop, he still lived in his rocky cell with a stone for his pillow, and in order to insure his body to hardships, he stood in the Clyde to recite his daily psalter.

A garment of goat-skin around about his loins, and a hood, and over all his alb, was his only clothing. In one hand he carried a plain wooden staff, in the other a book. His food consisted of bread and cheese and milk.

Driven out of Scotland by the usurper, Morken Manor, S. Kentigern took refuge in Wales with David, Bishop of Menevia. Here he remained and built the famous monastery of Lan-Elwyn, afterwards called St. Asaph. And there he gathered about him a number of disciples and scholars, and he was there at the date of death of St. David, in 544.

In 560 he was recalled to Glasgow, and took with him many Welsh monks. There he established the first foundations of the great cathedral, which still bears his name.

He gathered round him numerous disciples, "all learned in holy literature, all working with their hands and possessing nothing as individuals."

"They dwell," says Jocelyn "in separate cells, as did Kentigern, thence they were called Calledet."

Here he was visited by Columba, who came from Iona, accompanied by a great train of monks. Columba and Kentigern exchanged staffs before they parted and the staff of S. Columba, which was in later times given to Wilfred, who placed it in the monastic church he founded at Ripon.

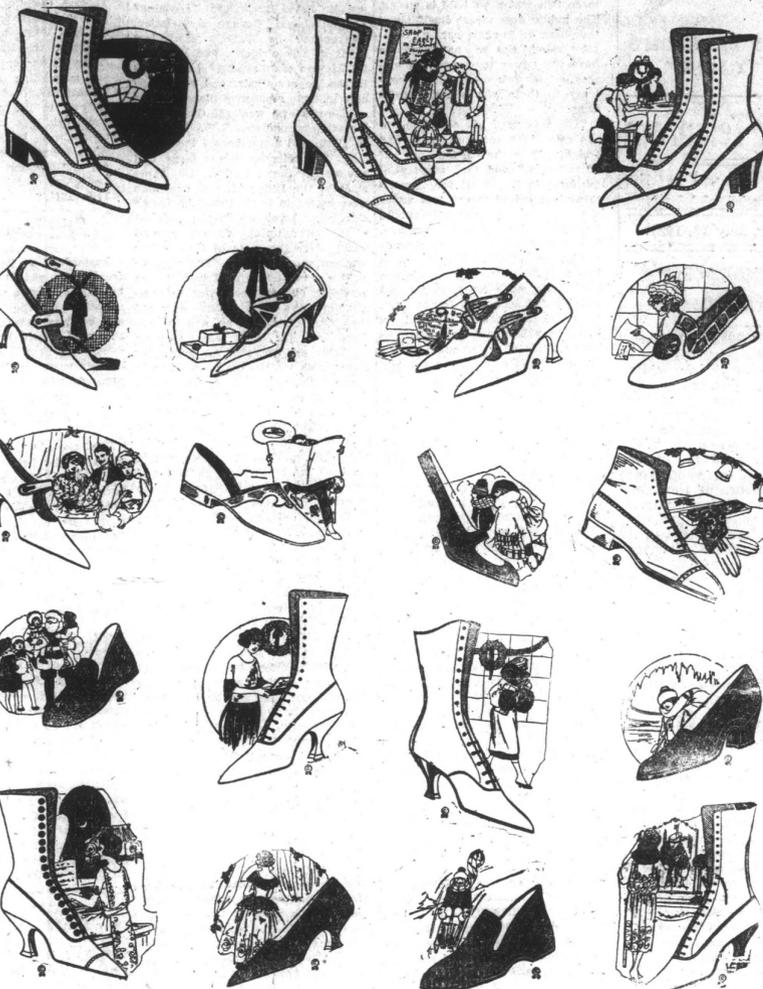

The following is one of the best known legends connected with the name of Kentigern. The wife of Roderick, in a moment of weakness, gave a knight of her husband's court a ring that the latter had given her. The King discovered this, one day when out hunting, and taking the ring from the knight's finger, threw it into the river. Then he demanded the return of the ring from his consort.

She, in trouble, went to S. Kentigern, and begged him to help her. "Sorry for her," Saint Kentigern prayed for the discovery of the ring, which was found in the belly of a salmon, caught in the Clyde. Thus the Queen escaped severe punishment, at the hands of the king. And for this reason, the ancient edifices of S. Kentigern, represent him, holding the episcopal cross in one hand, and in the other a salmon with a ring in its mouth.

Saint Kentigern, who lived to be a ripe old age, died in the year 601.

CHINESE CUSTOMS.

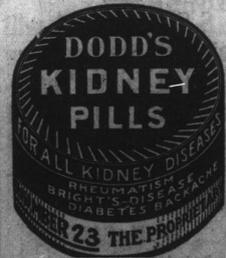

In China, great and happy land, the doctor's only in demand when folks are feeling fine; he's paid to keep his patients hale; if they fall sick he draws no kate, and must take in his sign. And so we see him on the jump to cure the measles or the mump, or other fell disease; it doesn't pay to have men sick, so he prescribes his powdered brick, his pills and healing teas. And if the patient catches in, the heirs kick up a frightful din that indicates their ire; they camp upon the doctor's trail, and ride that learned man on a rail, and set his house afire. And in our land, where culture reigns, when we fall sick, with pea green pains, we call the nearest doc; when we are well we care no whoop for all the potions in his coop, for all the pills in stock. The doctor knows we have a wad, a bundle opulent and broad, he knows we'll pay his bills; and he would more than human be if he were not inclined to see how long we'll take his pills. We put temptation in his way; why should he heal us in a day, or even in a year? Why should he show his smoothest curve, and toll and strain his every nerve to put our works in gear? The Chinese plan is much the best, in fact, the peoples of the West might learn much from Cathay; her methods often are so sane they make our finest schemes look vain, like pipe dreams gone astray.

A Contemporary's Opinion.

The Harbor Grace Standard, in its current issue, carries a very able leading article, which is perhaps the best critique on the railway situation that has been written for some time. The Standard is not hostile to the Government, hence such criticism as it indulges in, comes with all the more force and gives it greater influence in the controversy now being waged around the railway problem and Newfoundland's share in it as being represented for the past year by Government Commissioners on the operating board. Harbor Grace is a railway town. It knows and appreciates the advantages of railway connection, having for many years been the terminus of the old Newfoundland Railway. The Standard believes that the Company should manage the railway and expresses itself in no uncertain manner on that point, as follows:

"Very little is known publicly about the arrangement effected between the Government and the Reid-Newfoundland Co., about the Railway management. The general report is that the Company will undertake it independent of the Government. That is as it should be—the Company assumed full responsibility when the whole system was given to it in 1898 for fifty years. If the burden proved too great let the Company default and the property revert to its rightful owners—the people. This would include the abrogation of all the other concessions given by the great deal of that year."

The black type is ours.

With such a sentiment there can be no conflict. Inability to operate should mean surrender of the whole road and the return of all the lands and other concessions made under the 1898 and not taken back by the 1901 contract. There is surely a penal clause somewhere in the latter agreement, which should be looked into. The policy of taking too much for granted is not a sensible one, nor one which any business men would accept. In a case of this sort all interested should adopt the Missouriian motto, "You'll have to show me." Dig up the 1901 contract, and any subsequent amendments and let the legal minded and trained search through it and discover whether there is or not any protection for Newfoundland, or if all the benefits have been thrown into the scales of the Company. Surely it is unthinkable that such an omission could have been made, even accidentally. If there is no penal clause then we are doubtless up against it, but should there be, then let it be made operative at once. We have white elephants a plenty on hand, without the addition to the pile of the railway. Yet if we have to take it over because of the Company's inability or disinclination to operate it excepting under a loss guarantee by way of the revenue of the Colony, then let the Company cut clear altogether and let the Government sell the whole thing, lock, stock and barrel to some capable concern willing to undertake the job. There has been enough fooling and enough expense—too much of the latter for one brief twelve months, and Newfoundland does not need to be reminded that she is paying through the nose both ways.

The Standard advocates great and drastic reductions in respect of operation, and after naming these, continues:

"It may be said that the steps named would be a backward move in the progress of civilization, but in the face of stringent times and pressing needs economy is to be preferred to useless and extragant notions. A prudent man will not have two horses when one will perform all the work he has to do, and so it is with the trains—there is no need of double service when one will fill all the requirements. The starting from St. John's on Sundays of a cross-country train is not in accordance with what the majority of our people consider a right and proper observance of the rest-day. It is better for us to be a little behind in the ways of the world than to be encouraged to do that which we hold is wrong. The public may please itself about travelling on Sunday, but a Company should not be permitted to have the power to compel its employees to work on Sundays contrary to their wishes and convictions.

There is need of attention to the rates both for passengers and freight. With the cutting out of "free passes" and the substantial advances in the rates the experimental period of the system and the commission's control should have added largely to the revenue. The user should have some consideration extended to him, as upon him falls the full burden. We are paying too much for passages and freights for such indifferent and unsatisfactory service, and it is time the public made a move to have its side of the question shown up, considered and fairly treated."

Hear, Hear to the above. The public have become so used to being kept in the dark by operators of the railway, that they had come to the conclusion that they were merely being favored by the running of it. Still they dug down and paid up for every extra cent a mile on passages or cent a hundred pounds on freights. We certainly are paying too much for both passage and freight, but notwithstanding the tariff increases in these rates, the Commission last year were short $1,200,000, the excess of expenditure over revenue, and we are to be further mulcted of an additional $1,500,000 during the succeeding year, unless there can be devised a plan to change the present system entirely and by rigid economy save the vast waste that is going on. On this one particular point to-day, the hope and future of the country so far as the operation of the railway is concerned, is with the Opposition, and we believe these gentlemen will not be unfaithful to their trust.

Harry G. Hawker.

A TRIBUTE.

By the death of Harry G. Hawker, who was killed whilst flying over Henderson yesterday, the world loses its most daring and intrepid aviator. Hawker was one of the pioneers in aviation. When aeroplanes were but in the experimental stage, he again and again risked his life for the benefit of successful advancement. His crowning effort was his attempt to fly the Atlantic in May, 1919, in his tiny, two seater "plane. The story of that memorable flight, how he had to come down in mid-ocean after covering over half of the required distance, and how after being knocked about and buffeted by the waves he was rescued by the Danish tramp "Mary," is too well known to need repetition. It seems particularly sad that one who has undergone so many stirring adventures and has come safely out of them should go to his death in a short flight, but at least he died as he must have desired, in harness. To men like Hawker and Sir John A. Loock the world owes a great debt, which it can never repay, for their names are enrolled upon the list of those gallant men who in war and peace have sacrificed themselves for its advancement.

A Denial.

Messrs. Emanuel Pike, Ltd., of Fort St. Basques, desire us to say that this firm has not received any telegram or other communication from the Prime Minister, as stated in the House of Assembly debates and in our editorial column of 6th inst., re taking possession of 250 barrels flour on June 29th, despite Customs protest. Furthermore, Messrs. Pike wish it to be distinctly understood that they are determined to fight the Sales Tax in the interests of the people whom they supply, and will consistently refuse to pay it. Moreover, Messrs. Pike declare that whatever supplies they have issued have been on their own account, and not supported by any Government guarantee, notwithstanding the heavy losses they incurred by reason of the operation of the Fish Export Regulations. Messrs. Pike are to be congratulated on their enterprise in this carrying on, without soliciting assistance from the Government, and we trust that their independence in this respect will meet with its due reward. Some other portions of the letter of Messrs. Pike, received to-day, will be dealt with later.

The Red Taxi will run from Rawlins' Cross to St. Patrick's Garden Party this afternoon. Lester's Buckboards will start from West End Fire Hall and Railway Station. Fare 10 cents. jly13,11

Orangemen

Commemorate "Boyne Day."

JOINT MEETING "ROYAL OAK" AND "LEEMING" LODGES.

Called to order by the sound of the gavel in the hands of W. Bro. F. Gordon Bradley, Worshipful Master of the senior Lodge in the City of St. John's, a joint meeting of the Brethren of "Royal Oak" and "Leeming" Lodges, Loyal Orange Association, was opened in Victoria Hall last night at 8.30 o'clock. The Worshipful Master of "Leeming" Lodge was in the Deputy Chair, and other officers in their respective places, whilst on the platform were the Grand Master of Newfoundland, R.W. Bro. W. H. Cave, and a number of Past Masters. The attendance was large, and one worthy the occasion. On three sides of the Lodge Room members were seated in triple tiers, the fourth side being taken up by the pedestal of the Worshipful Master, around which were the seats of those other brethren supporting him. The purpose of the meeting was explained by the presiding officer, which was to commemorate the 231st anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne, and the address from the Chair was a most scholarly exposition of the principles upon which the Orange Association is founded, the oration being an eloquent charge to members to maintain and stand fast to those principles.

The Right Worshipful the Grand Master, next addressed the assembly, and in his well known felicitous style exhorted the brethren to be firm and true to their obligations. Other speeches were made by Past Masters C. T. James, Grand Secretary Milley, Parsons, Mark Puddester, T. F. Butt, W. J. Peet, R. Ivany and others. A most interesting communication was read by W. Bro. W. J. Peet from Past Grand Master D. Morison, who gave a brief history of the Order in Newfoundland, and concluded by regretting his inability to be present. A telegram from Grand Bank, signed by James M. Howell, on behalf of Orangemen at that place, expressed fraternal greetings and hopes for the success of the meeting. Subsequently, P.M. Bro. C. T. James (Royal William Lodge, Channel), moved the following resolution, which was seconded by the Grand Secretary, Bro. Jordan Milley, and carried by acclamation:

"That this meeting of Orangemen in the City of St. John's, offers its heartiest congratulations to Bro. Sir Richard Anderson Squires, Prime Minister, Past Grand Master, upon the honor conferred upon him by His Majesty the King in creating him a Knight Commander of the Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George, an honor which redounds not only to the conferee, but is a distinction to the Loyal Orange Association and to Newfoundland."

Bro. Jordan Milley moved, seconded by Grand Master Cave and carried by acclamation:

"That the thanks of this meeting are due and are hereby tendered Bro. Donald Morison for his interesting communication, read by the Worshipful Master of "Leeming" Lodge, with an expression of regret that the distinguished Brother was unable to be present at to-night's assembly."

Following some minor routine business the meeting was duly closed by singing the National Anthem.

Careful Handling.

At the freight warehouse of Messrs. Harvey & Co., Ltd., yesterday, could be noticed five hundred cases "Sun-kist" Oranges, all the way from California, across the whole North American continent to North Sydney, for shipment to St. John's by S.S. Sable I. The uniqueness of the consignment was that not one case was battered or broken and not one of the fruit was missing from either. The packages and their labels were just as originally shipped, from the point of origin in the far Western States, and it speaks volumes for the careful handling they received in transit that they should have been landed in such excellent condition, after a rail and steamship route of thousands of miles. Stacked in the shed the piles of cases made a veritable picture of how to engage in the art of the carriage of fragile packages.

WHERE TO GO THIS AFTERNOON.

Where? To the Methodist College-Ayre Athletic Association Garden Party at Brookfield. Train leaves the station at 2.45 p.m. sharp, so we would advise your getting to the station early and securing a comfortable seat. A genuine, companionable afternoon is assured. Commemorative Tablet.

There is now on exhibition at Muir's Marble Works, a tablet commemorating the deeds of Sergt. T. R. Ricketts, V.C., D.C.M., C. de G., which is to be placed in the church at Middle Arm, White Bay, the gallant soldier's birthplace. The tablet is an excellent work of art and bears the following inscription:—

"Erected by an admiring people in honour of No. 3102 Sergt. Thomas Ricketts, V.C., C. de G., who was born and bred in Middle Arm, White Bay, and who enlisted in the Royal N. F. L. D. Regiment on September 2nd, 1916, and proceeding overseas to fight against the Central Powers of Europe, in the cause of honour and truth, was awarded the Victoria Cross, by His Majesty the King, for most conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty, near Ledeghem, Belgium, on October 14th, 1918."

Still Negotiating.

Yesterday, a deputation of men from Reids visited the Prime Minister, and discussed with him the labor situation at the company's marine and railway works. The report of this meeting will be presented by the deputation at a meeting which will be held soon. In the meantime work proceeds without interruption.

Assault Case.

The case of "Paddy Coughlan's eye" came up for hearing in the Police Court this morning when Paddy Coughlan, a well known farmer, charged his nephew with a brutal assault. Mr. G. W. Ayre acted for Coughlan and Hon. M. P. Gibbs for the defendant. The defendant's wife had to confirm her husband's statement or otherwise the defendant would be fined. The case was not concluded up to press hour.

The Veterans' Sports.

The G.W.V.A. are holding their sports this afternoon and a large and varied programme has been prepared, which should be greatly appreciated by all who attend. Some events unusual in local sports are on the programme, including a boat contest, wrestling exhibition and field regatta and crutch race. The St. John's Coon Band will discourse music during the day in the refreshment tent. As a fitting conclusion to Sports Day a dance will be held to-night in the C.C. Hall, which will no doubt be largely attended.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

IS CRAIG IRRECONCILABLE?

BELFAST, July 12. In the largest demonstration in many years, Orangemen to the number of forty thousand paraded here to-day in celebration of anniversary of Battle of Boyne. The demonstration passed off calmly, although quiet was not attributed to the true. Hospitals were kept busy all day as result of clashes and the death roll was added to by the shooting of a youth in the Falls District by snipers. York Street, where rival forces intermingled, simmered with excitement until a late hour. To-day the parade required three hours to pass a given point. The keynote of the speeches delivered afterward, was, "What we have we hold." Sir James Craig speaking at Finaghy, gave his reasons for accepting the invitation of Mr. Lloyd George, "first," he declared, "if we did not go to the Conference we would be misrepresented behind our backs. We would have nobody to say a word for us." "Second, we are still a community on the face of the earth, and foreign countries, as well as our own dominions, would misconstrue Ulster if she stepped aside. She would be condemned in her absence, and told, 'You would not go to the Conference' therefore you must be ruled out of court." "Third, it gets into the mind, even of some of our friends that we have something to give away. While I and my colleagues are there, there will be nothing to give away. Therefore while it is distasteful to many of us, we are not going to flinch from what we consider our duty to the wellbeing of our own people in the North." Pointing out that the whole situation has changed since June 22, Sir James declared, "I no longer am James Craig, except to my friends, but to those who would tamper with Ulster's rights I am the Prime Minister of Northern Ireland. The way of peace is in our own hands, and in our own hands only. The way of peace is impossible without these murderers first coming to their senses, and stopping murder. All the onus lies upon them."

TWO CONFERENCES.

LONDON, July 12. (By Gratton O'Leary, Canadian Press staff correspondent.) In consequence of official conversations, which took place here to-day, it is not improbable the British Government will make an effort to have a separate Conference, on Pacific problems, held in London before the Washington Conference on disarmament takes place. President Harding's idea, and the original idea held here, was that both Conferences should be held in Washington, the first dealing with disarmament, and embracing all of the Great Powers, and the second, arising out of the first, to be confined to nations having special interests in the Pacific.

Poor Rod Fishing.

American tourists and others returning from the ancient colony by this morning's trip of the steamer Kyle, says last Saturday's North Sydney Herald, tell that the drought in the various places visited was the worst in years. The different pools, famous for their excellent salmon, are almost dry, and fishing is practically out of the question. Salmon are plentiful, but the water is so low that they remain on the bottom and refuse to leave the muddy nests. One American returning this morning said that not in the seventeen years he has regularly visited the colony were the pools so low and the fishing so poor.

Nothing But the Truth—Without Fear or Favour.

LIONS HAVE EAST WIN.

In their clash last night the Lions played with the C.E.I. in the first frame for 3 runs, mauling them in the second for 6, and devouring them altogether for 9 in the fourth. The Lions were reverent for scoring, and when the Institute lads fell down on their fielding the kings of the forest stretched 1 ply wallops into full circuits. Some of the C.E.I. players had about as much kick in them as a chorus girl with broken knees, and certainly not more than is contained in Hag Aie. Even at that they had some excellent chances, having the sacks soaked on four occasions, but Callahan kept them well in hand. If St. John's fans like plenty of hard hitting then they had it to their heart's content last night with the murderous wallops of Hiltz, Robertson, Callahan, Munn and Cahill. Some of the C.E.I. players should get a good disciplining as their too apparent apathy and lack of interest after the score had crept up a bit, made the spectators weary, and it should be remembered that it is hardly fair to them to have to pay perfectly good money to see players stroll after a battered ball like a one legged man with water on the knee. Waiting for the first hop, and then studying the monogram on the ball, is not baseball in any sense of the word, and players like Winter, Martin, the two Churchills, Alderdice, Windsor and Gabriel, who finished like Trojans in spite of their overwhelming defeat, showed the good sporting blood that is in them. The Institute lads are long in material, if short in experience, and good stiff continuous practices will eventually take the kink out of them. The Lions are in excellent form, good hitters, and apparently in excellent condition to defend their title. However, to compensate the fans for the rather one sided show last night a good exhibition is assured on to-morrow night when the B.I.S. and C.E.I. will try conclusions.

THE BELL-CYR CONTEST.

Dear Sir—With regard to the proposed race between Jack Bell and Editor Diamond Dust. I do not wish to state that no agreement will be officially entered into until something more of a definite character has been received from Montreal. Should the man's category resemble that of Bell then our sporting public will have something interesting to look forward to, and the details can be quite easily arranged. Your suggestion that the Athletic Association is a good one for an elaborate Sports programme can be prepared as a championship card, while the proceeds, if agreeable would help defray expenses in such one or more runners to compete at Halifax in the fall.

I would like to inform citizens that Bell is absolutely in the pink of condition. He stood the test of the 5 mile race well, considering he has a strained calf muscle, which was caused through running over a piece of road when training. He has not been that extra care was taken in running as lightly as possible upon the injured limb, together with good treatment received, and the good judgment displayed, and not being forced throughout the entire race to help materially in not showing an apparent effect.

For the next few weeks he will be down to easy training, just enough to keep in shape, while later on to see him in a neighbouring town en route to Halifax conditioning for the race which he contemplates entering for in October.

Bell has very wisely decided in view of the importance of the Halifax Race not to participate in the Regatta as otherwise stated and resigned from Mr. Jack Tobin's amateur crew.

Yours truly,
A. HARVEY THOMAS,
(Manager for Jack Bell)

Harry Hawker Killed When Machine Crashes--Supreme Council Meets in France.

HARRY HAWKER DEAD.
LONDON, July 12. Harry G. Hawker, famous aviator, was killed on the Hendon Flying Field to-day. His machine burst into flames as it alighted on the field. Hawker achieved fame in May, 1919, when he attempted the Trans-Atlantic flight from Newfoundland to Ireland, his machine falling into the water in mid ocean. He was rescued by the Danish steamer Mary. On his return to Great Britain he was decorated by King George. The trans-Atlantic crossing was achieved a month later by Captain Sir John Alcock, who, himself, died in December, 1919, result of injuries received in a crash to death near Cottevard in France.

SUPREME COUNCIL TO MEET.
PARIS, July 12. The Allied Supreme Council probably will meet toward the end of this month, either in Boulogne or in Paris, it was announced by the French Foreign Office this morning. The Upper Silesian question will be uppermost in the discussion, and it is expected that Great Britain may bring up the question of the evacuation of Dusseldorf, Duisburg and Ruhrort, as recognition of the disposition of the present German Government to carry out the terms of the Versailles Treaty.

SCANDALOUS INDEED.
PARIS, July 12. France has informed Germany she will continue occupation of the Rhine region until Germany has complied with the conditions of the Treaty of Versailles relative to the punishment of those who violated the rules of civilized warfare in the world war. Premier Briand told the Senate to-day. Replying to a question he characterized the findings of the Leipzig Court as scandalous.

MAY SHORTEN IMPERIAL CONFERENCE.
LONDON, July 12. The Premiers of the British Dominions are reported to be planning to cut short the sessions of the Imperial Conference, so that they may return to their home states, and prepare for the Washington Conference. It appears to be the feeling in official quarters that discussion of naval armaments and other important matters should be held in abeyance until after the nations have met, and have decided upon their future action regarding military and naval affairs.

DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE.
LONDON, July 12. The Disarmament Conference continues to be the most prominent topic of discussion, dividing the honors with the Irish Peace Conference. No doubt is felt in London that all the nations invited will accept, and as the French Premier, M. Briand, seems already to have decided to go to Washington, it is considered all the more likely that the British Prime Minister will also go, always provided that State affairs at home at that time will permit his absence, and that his health will permit him to make the trip, as there has been talk of the Premier taking a long rest in Switzerland, by advice of his physicians. The belief prevails among the members of his entourage, however, that the Premier is strongly inclined to visit the United States, and that Sir Auckland Geddes, British Ambassador at Washington, is pressing him to go. It is assumed as a certainty that A. J. Balfour, Lord President of the Council, will be a delegate, and probably also Admiral Lord Beatty, Lord Lee of Fareham, First Lord of the Admiralty, and Sir Lansing Worthington Evans, Secretary for War. Much interest is shown in the question as to whether Germany and Russia will be invited to send delegates to the Conference, and, in unabated press comment, increasing attention is bestowed on the fact that the invitations are not confined to those powers especially interested in Pacific problems, but also to France, which, it is held, will introduce the more complex problems of general disarmament, as well as naval. The Premier's statement in the House of Commons yesterday welcoming President Harding's suggestion, probably will be the only announcement of the attitude of Great Britain on the subject until Washington has indicated the exact nature of the plans for the organization of the conference and other details, which will be handled through the customary diplomatic channels.

FRANCE'S REPLY RECEIVED.
WASHINGTON, July 12. Receipt of formal acceptance by France of President Harding's invitation to join in an International Conference on the limitation of armaments and Far-Eastern problems, was announced to-day by the State Department. This was the first formal reply to the invitation to be received.

ITALY WILL ACCEPT.
ROME, July 12. The proposal of President Harding for a conference on restriction of armaments has been favorably received in Italian official circles, and especially by Premier Bonomi and Foreign Minister Della Terrotta, it was indicated to-day. This leads to the belief that Italy would undoubtedly accept the invitation to such Conference.

FRANCE ENTUSES.
PARIS, July 12. The French Government will accept with pleasure and without reserve the invitation to a conference on the limitation of armaments. This is stated in a letter sent to the United States Embassy here, by the Government this morning for President Harding. Premier Briand later announced publicly in the Chamber of Deputies that the Government would eagerly accept such invitation. The Premier expressed thanks to President Harding "for his noble initiative," while the Chamber broke into cheers. The Senate in its turn was aroused to unusual enthusiasm in approval of President Harding's idea when announced regarding the Government's action was made in that body. It was said at the Foreign Office that Premier Briand probably would represent France at the proposed Conference and that whoever was sent would go with the idea of co-operating wholeheartedly in any scheme for disarmament, compatible with the security of France.

turbance of any kind has been reported from any part of Ireland, other than Belfast, according to an official statement issued from Dublin Castle to-day. On the other hand there have been many scenes of ardent rejoicing over the new peace development. All Dublin gave itself over last night to celebrating the truce, and sang and cheered until daybreak.

DE VALERA IN LONDON.
LONDON, July 12. Eamonn De Valera and other Irish Republican leaders, who are to participate in the conference with Prime Minister Lloyd George here on Thursday, arrived in London from Dublin this evening. They received a tumultuous reception at Euston Station. Lawrence O'Neil, Lord Mayor of Dublin, Count Plunkett as well as Griffiths, Stack, and Barton accompany De Valera.

A HARDING PRONOUNCEMENT.
WASHINGTON, July 12. Enactment at the present time of adjusted compensation legislation for Veterans of the war would imperil the financial stability of the nation, President Harding told the United States Senate to-day, in the second address he has made to that body during his administration. After four months survey of conditions the President said, he was fully persuaded that three things were essential to restoration. These he said were revision, including reduction of internal taxation, refunding of war debt and adjustment of United States Foreign Loans.

House of Assembly.
TUESDAY, July 12th. The House met at 8.15 p.m. Mr. Archibald read a letter from the inhabitants of Tinton on the subject of unemployment. He asked for assistance for those men unable to go to Badger.

Mr. Cave tabled the Report of the Select Committee on Naval Prize Money which is as follows:—
"Report of the Select Committee appointed by the House of Assembly July 11, 1921 to consider petition of Newfoundland Royal Naval Reservists in reference to payment of Prize Money and matters in relation thereto:—
To the Honourable House of Assembly in Legislative Session convened:—
Your committee appointed as above beg to report as follows: On July 12, 1921, your committee attended at the Militia Department, and there conferred with Lieut-Col. Rendell, Chief Staff Officer, the President and Secretary of the Great War Veterans' Association, and a delegation from the Newfoundland Royal Naval Reservists.

The records of the Department in reference to this matter were produced and examined, and a general discussion thereon followed. It appears to your Committee that the Militia Department was under the impression that the Reservists had abandoned their claims on Prize Money, whereas the Reservists, or the great majority of them, never contemplated an assignment of such fund or an abandonment of their claims thereon, and apparently were at all times of the opinion that Prize Money as such would be payable to them upon its allocation or distribution by the Imperial authorities.

Under all the circumstances your Committee recommend the payment of this Prize Money as such to the Newfoundland Royal Naval Reservists if and when received from the Imperial Authorities. It might be desirable to have this fund distributed through the Naval Station at this port.

Various members gave notice of question.
The answers to several questions on the Order Paper were tabled.

LOBELIA A NUISANCE.
With reference to the Lobelia Sir John Crosbie said she was a nuisance to shipping entering and leaving the harbor and should be removed from her present position.

Some discussion arose over Dr. Grenfell going to represent the Government at a fisheries commission in Washington on his own. Sir Michael Cashin, Mr. Higgins and Sir John Crosbie expressed themselves very strongly on this matter.
The Prime Minister denied that Dr. Grenfell acted for the Government.
Sir Michael Cashin also spoke on the matter of unsold pit props and stated that $200,000 worth were rotting up North.

The House went into Committee of the Whole on the Railway Resolutions.
The Prime Minister read the report of the Government Engineer of April 26th, 1919. He also quoted statistics of the comparative earnings and expenses from 1904 to 1921. Several questions were asked by Mr. Sullivan and other Opposition members during the Prime Minister's address.

Sir Michael Cashin made a brief address in which he criticized parts of the Prime Minister's address. In his speech he said that our national debt had now reached 51 millions of dollars. He asked for adjournment until Thursday.
After the Committee had risen, the Prohibition and Fisheries Supplies Bill were read a second time.
The House then adjourned until Thursday afternoon.

St. Bon's Reunion.
The annual reunion of St. Bonaventure's College Association, which is being held to-morrow, bids fair to eclipse all previous celebrations. Sir Michael Cashin, President of the Association, and an energetic committee have made excellent preparations. Mass will be celebrated by Rev. Fr. McGrath, and His Grace the Archbishop will impart Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament. The oration will be delivered by Mr. J. R. MacDonnell, M.H.A. In the evening a grand band concert will be given on the campus, which will be open to the public. Judge Morris has charge of this end of the programme, which is enough to ensure success. The ladies of the Presentation Convent Association are looking after the catering. The morning ceremonies are in charge of Mr. John A. Barron and a capable committee.

Orangemen Celebrate.
Orangemen throughout the Dominion celebrated yesterday, the anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne. Flags were flying from various city buildings whilst in the night guns were fired at intervals and bonfires lit up the South Side Hills. The various Orange Lodges met in the evening in Victoria Hall, where several inspiring and appropriate addresses were made.

What is an Inch of Rain?
What is an inch of rain? The weather man has instruments for very accurate measurements of it, just as he measures the snowfall, the sunshine and the direction and velocity of the wind, to say nothing of the rise and fall of the temperature. An acre is composed of 6,272,640 square inches, and if there was an inch of water on it that would amount to 6,272,640 cubic inches. There are 231 cubic inches in a gallon, so that 6,272,640 cubic inches equals 27,000 gallons, and that much water would weigh 220,000 pounds, or 110 tons. It figures out, then, that an inch of rain falling is at the rate of 110 tons per acre. It is a good thing the tonnage is scattered over so much territory.

Miss Nilsson's Beauty Secrets.
On the Local Grounds.

Fish on the local grounds are reported as fairly plentiful, and yesterday good catches were had by hook and liners. Traps also did well, Mr. Levi Snelgrove and crew of the Battery getting 100 quintals in a haul, whilst Mr. James Chauker had over 30 qts. in one of his traps. Other crews also did well, and prospects are bright. Further up the shore there has been a good sign of fish during the past week, especially at Bay Bulls, where Mr. Alden O'Driscoll is high liner with over 600 qts. landed to date. To the north of Sargolaf fair trapping is reported, but the fishermen are beginning to be troubled with dogfish. At Logy Bay and vicinity these pests are reported very plentiful. A large portion of the fish taken the past few days are had-dock which the fishermen say are not worth the trouble of curing, owing to the low price they will fetch.

FORMED IN LONDON, England.
With the object of developing closer commercial relations between Canada and Great Britain, as well as with the Continent generally, a Canadian Chamber of Commerce was formed at a meeting held at Australia House, London, England, last month. The principal speaker was Lieutenant-Colonel Amery, Under Secretary for the Colonies, and now Financial Secretary to the Admiralty.
Mr. H. C. Wade, Agent-General for British Columbia, who presided, said it was hoped that there would be co-operation with the Canadian Department of Trade and Commerce, the Canadian Grain Growers' Association, the Canadian Fruit Growers' Association and other bodies. The Canadian Manufacturers' Association had already given their assurance of support. It was most important that the Chamber should be recognized by the Government of Canada, and as the official trade administrative body of the Government was withdrawing its activities it might be thought advisable through the new channel to accomplish the object in view both economically and effectively. It was hoped by means of the Chamber to strengthen trade relations between Canada and the Continent of Europe. It was still the custom to carry on a great deal of trade through New York agents. Such a roundabout method of doing business was not only illogical but unpatriotic. The Chamber could carry on a very useful propaganda work in persuading firms to do their business with Canadian interests.

Lieutenant-Colonel Amery said the step was significant of Canadian enterprise and expansion, and a revelation of the character of Canada's future development. He believed that Canada was destined in the fairness of time to rival, if not outstrip, her great neighbor, the United States. Canada could not do that by simply imitating the latter's policy of internal development. Foreign trade had been naturally regarded by the United States as comparatively a secondary matter. With Canada, however, while her resources were immense in volume, they were in the main resources of the Northern zone, and she needed for their full exploitation, like Great Britain, a highly developed foreign trade. He believed her policy was to become a Greater Britain and not a trade second-rate copy of the United States. (Hear, hear.) The first task of the Chamber was to see what trade they could find in the United Kingdom, which was still the greatest importing market in the world. They would find keen competition, but they would also find co-operation and help. The range of Imperial Preference was not as wide as in Canada, but it was substantial and had been of assistance to those engaged in Canadian business. There was also the preference of individual good-will and it was for the Chamber to develop that to the fullest. The more Canadian trade was developed, the more would the strength and prosperity of the British Empire grow. Canada could not develop a great outward flow of trade without having an inward flow, and in that inward flow the trade of Great Britain was bound to have a substantial and ever-increasing share. (Applause.)

It was decided to extend an invitation to Newfoundland interests to join the movement.
A short discussion followed, and a vote of thanks was passed to Colonel Amery on the proposition of Sir George McLaren Brown.—The Chronicle.

China's First Stamp.

The designer of China's first postal stamp committed such serious blunders that he was banished. A. M. Villard, a draughtsman of exceptional ability, was in 1849 employed in the Chinese Customs Office. He was requested to design new postal stamps to be issued on the sixtieth birthday of the Emperor's mother. Proud of the distinction thus conferred upon him, Villard did his best to satisfy the Peking Government, but made two fatal mistakes. He used the abbreviation "Imp. Chin. Post" instead of spelling out "Imperial Chinese Post." As a Chinese public official he was expected to know that the criminal code forbids any abbreviation in a public document under severe penalties. Still worse was Villard's other offense. One of his designs was in purple, the use of which color was the exclusive prerogative of the imperial house, and a capital offense for any other person. His artistic achievement and good intentions notwithstanding, Villard was disgraced and told that he deserved capital punishment for his unheard-of, even if unintentional, offense against the imperial house. In deference to France (Villard was a Frenchman) he was not put to death, but sent on official business to Tibet, a mission that was considered another form of execution. And indeed Villard was never heard of afterward.

Look for Liquor to Bring Prosperity.

Return of moderate "wetness" to British Columbia as a result of the Moderation Act, providing for government control of the liquor trade, is expected to develop a notable effect on Pacific Coast business conditions. Just what the effect will be is the subject of considerable controversy among speculators. One of the principal arguments used by the anti-prohibition people when the question was put to a vote last Fall, was that government control would bring new residents to British Columbia, increase the tourist traffic tremendously and bring in its wake new capital and eventually new industry and a much larger population.

Whether the benefit to be enjoyed from the enforcement of the new legislation is to be of a permanent nature is questioned by those who fought against it and favored rigid prohibition; either this, or the continued enforcement of the B. C.
