The Broken Circle!

CHAPTER VII.

"You need say no more!" cried Martin Ray. "Have we not heard how sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child? I have no son, and I rested my pride, my hopes, my ambition on you; and you have heartlessly deserted me for a stranger who despises me."

"I cannot believe as you believe, father, or think as you think. We must have parted sooner or later; I could not have borne my lot, now that I am beginning to understand you."

Hettie's arms clasped him even more tightly.

"Never mind, father. I will make it all up to you. I will die to save you from pain. She will tire soon, and come back to you."

"Never!" he cried, his face aflame with anger. "Stand away from me, Hettie! Let me see the child so ready to leave me and give up the love of years at the bidding of a stranger!"

Hettie drew back, and at that moment she knew in her heart that his best and dearest love had been given to the daughter who had deserted him.

"Let me look at her!" he cried. "She has deserted me and gone over to my enemies!"

"I have simply given up a life which has never been tolerable to me, and which grows more unbearable every day. I shall love you always, father; but I shall never share your principles."

His face paled with anger.

"You speak bravely enough now that you know your words give me no concern. I am justly punished, for in my blindness I confess that I loved you best. You must forgive me, Hettie. I shall love but one daughter now."

"I have nothing to forgive; it was natural that you should love Leah best. Do not be angry with her. She told me she did not care about the life you wanted her to lead. Leah loves everything beautiful, and she wants to be loved. She does not care for lectures and politics."

The simple words almost made the general smile; but there was no smile on the lips of Martin Ray, as he turned to his elder child.

"Look at me," he said, "and tell me to my face that you are going to leave me."

and taught my life long! That I should have a daughter among the wealthy and the aristocracy of the land is to me a shame and disgrace. There is yet time to make your final decision, Leah. I will believe that you were over-tempted by the man who has bribed you; I will believe that you repent of your momentary desertion; I will believe anything and everything if you will only come back to me, Leah, child of my heart!"

General Hatton stood by and said nothing. He would not influence the girl; her heart should decide. He could not help thinking what a beautiful picture of pathetic determination she made, standing with her eyes wistfully seeking her father's face, her hands clasped.

"I could never be what you want me to be, father," she said; "and you would dislike me, hate me, when I refused. It is better that I should accept my uncle's offer."

"You refuse then, decidedly, once and forever, Leah, to carry out my wishes?"

"I do refuse," she replied, calmly. "I could not act as you wish. I do not believe in that which you would have me teach."

"Say no more," he cried, holding up his hand as though he would ward off a blow—"no more! I have heard from your own lips your decision. You choose to make your home with this stranger—for stranger he is, no matter how closely he may be related to you—you would rather live with him than with me?"

"It is not my fault," she said humbly. "You would have made my life intolerable to me."

"You renounce me—give me up entirely for him?" continued Martin.

"You cast me out of your life, and choose to cling to him? Do not be afraid to speak out plainly."

"I am not afraid," she replied, calmly. "I do prefer to go to my mother's brother."

"Well and good," said Martin Ray, with a white face—"well and good. You have made your choice; you must abide by it. Nothing can ever alter it in this world. Some fathers would have cursed you. I will not; but I tell you, as much I sorrow as in anger, that punishment will fall upon you. I may not have been perhaps the best of fathers, but I am your father, and to give up my love and protection for that of another is, I say, a sin that cries to Heaven for vengeance. You hear me, Leah? I say it to warn you. The time will come when, with unutterable regret, you will remember this hour and this deed. The time will come when the anger of Heaven will fall upon you—when, in your turn, your heart will be torn with anguish, and you will say to yourself: 'This is the punishment that my father prophesied for me.' I do not curse you, Leah; I leave you to the Power that never fails to punish or reward."

"Do not be so angry with her, father," said a loving voice; and again Hettie's arms clung to him tenderly.

The general, seeing that Leah had hardly strength to stand, drew her nearer to him.

"There is one thing I must do before you go," said Martin Ray. "I will not say that I have studied my Bible much; but I have made a family register of it."

He unclasped Hettie's arms, and placed her in a chair, then he went to the bookshelf, took from it a large Bible, opened it, and laid it upon the table before the general. There was about his action that dignity that comes from great sorrow.

"Look!" he said, pointing with his finger. "There is the entry of my marriage with Doris Hatton. Here is the birth of Hettie, fifteen years ago. Now see. My eldest child is dead to me; she died to-day. I have but one daughter living."

He took a pen and dipped it in ink, and through the name of Leah Ray he drew a thick black line with steady fingers. He wrote opposite to it, "Dead to me." Then he closed the book, and replaced it on the shelf.

"There is no more to be either said or done," he continued. "You have taken my child from me, General Hatton. She goes readily—let her go. I do not mean to complain; but, when she passes over the threshold of the house, she passes over my heart."

General Hatton bent down, and looked into the beautiful face so white and still.

"Leah," he said, gently, "I would not over-persuade you—and the choice is for life. Will you take time to think over it?"

MOTHER!

Move Child's Bowels with "California Fig Syrup"

Even a sick child loves the "fruit" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has cold, a teaspoonful will never fail to open the bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste from the tender, little bowels and gives you a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

Royal Wedding Cake.

SOME FAMOUS EXAMPLES.

Princess Mary's own wedding cake has, we all know, been made in Edinburgh by the same firm that was responsible for the cake used at the marriage of the King and Queen, and is to be on much the same elaborate scale.

That magnificent cake was built on a silver dais, surmounted by bronze figures of exquisite beauty. On it was a sugar arch, in the centre of which was a vase, wherein six doves were perched, while the pillars culminated in smaller vases of orange blossoms.

Above the arch stood four figures of girls in Grecian costumes, holding over their heads a gigantic sugar vase, from which roses and creepers hung, and round the cake were shields on which the Imperial monograms and national crests were engraved.

A cake very similar in design, but not quite so elaborate, was the one made for the wedding of the Duke of Connaught.

Princess Beatrice had a magnificent piece of confectionery for her wedding, and it is said that the sugar work alone took three months to complete.

The entire cake was a mass of lace-work, and there were as many as twenty figures on it, while here and there baskets of delicate sugar lace held clusters of orange blossom.

Queen Maud of Norway had another ornate cake, designed expressly to commemorate the nautical experiences of the bridegroom, the Danish Prince who is now King Haakon.

The cake was made up of four smaller ones, supported by a number of sugar lighthouses, and at the base of each reclined a figure of Britannia, while surrounding the largest cake were the arms of Britain and Denmark.

Perhaps the most beautiful feature of this novel cake was the icicles, made of silver, which fell amid a profusion of orange blossom from a vase at the top.

The late ill-fated Czar of Russia holds the record, however, for costly and sumptuous wedding cakes.

It was studded with jewels said to be worth at least $8,000, which encircled the cake, and the dais was a sheet of solid gold. Altogether its cost was about $21,000, an extravagance that was never before reached in the production of a Royal wedding cake.

HER NEED OF MONEY.

The world is too much with us late and soon
Getting and spending we lay waste
our powers."
—Wordsworth.

One day in the beautiful dining room of an acquaintance's home I admired the handsome pieces of lace that covered the top of the serving table and the buffet.

"Oh those old things," she said, "you don't really like them do you? I'm ashamed of them. I've had them for years. I'm going to get some new ones just as soon as I can get the money out of Harry."

Unappreciated.

The lace really was beautiful although of a kind which has been "the thing" for several years and is now becoming too common to suit those who care for beautiful things—not because they are beautiful but because they are new and too expensive for everyone to have.

Consequently the lady of the house plans to supplant them with whatever the newest thing is "as soon as she can get the money out of Harry."

"I wonder how many women folk will think me a traitor to my sex when I say that I pity Harry. And also all those who like him are kept forever grinding to give some woman the chance to buy and discard and buy and discard, and buy again."

Money and Life.

The money that would replace those lace scarfs with some newer kind of lace will cost just so much of Harry's life, just so many hours of all the time he has on earth. You have often heard the saying, "time is money." Well, it is just as true that money is time. Count out the few of us who live on inherited incomes and to the rest every dollar of money means just so much of life. When we spend money we spend life.

Of course one cannot live without spending money but one can live without spending it in unjustifiable or foolish ways.

Every man wants as comfortable and beautiful a home as his means will allow but there is a medium between letting the home go unadorned and wanting to change the adornments every little while at the behest of fashion.

Every man wants his wife to look as well dressed as his means will allow but there is a medium between having her make a wise choice of attractive becoming clothes and having her constantly making foolish casual purchases discarding and buying again.

Spending Her Husband's Life.

I have heard it said that there is more matrimonial trouble over money matters than over any other subject. Men resent having their money spent foolishly more than they do almost anything else. If women realized that it was their husband's lives they were spending I wonder if they would not sometimes be a little more careful to spend so as to get the most happiness and comfort for everyone concerned.

THE STREET.

My room is near the village street too close to traffic maddening, and all night long I hear the feet of foolish people gadding. Hour after hour I hear their tread, their midnight vigils keeping, how people hate to go to bed and do some useful sleeping! I hear the thuds climb the hill, a-honking and a-horning, and flappers' voices rising shrill, at 2.10 in the morning. We used to have our fun by day, by day we did our choring; when evening came we lit the hay and did some fancy snoring. If any man sent up a yawp that sleepers found disturbing, he'd run against the village cop, who'd slam him through the curbing. But weary people have no rights in this gray world of sorrow; they lie in bed awake o' nights, and long to greet the morrow. The young folks whoop beneath the stars, and yell and sing and clamor, and poisoned pups and henny cars all help to swell the clamor. The midnight hour no comfort has, there's little chance for dreaming, for all the night is full of jazz and yips and flappers' screaming. And so the old folks yearn and weep for sanity nights departed, when they could lay them down and sleep, and get up cheery hearted.

Death of "Our Only General."

Field-Marshal Lord Wolseley, the man who fought in many wars, and was known as "Our only General," died at Mentone on March 25, 1913, his eightieth year. He was the eldest son of Major G. L. Wolseley, and was born in Dublin. Gasetted as an ensign in the 12th Regiment of Foot before he was nineteen, he was soon afterwards transferred to the 80th Regiment, with which he served in the Burmese war, where he was severely wounded and invalided home. After his recovery he was promoted to lieutenant in the 90th Light Infantry, with which he served in nearly all the fighting outside Sebastopol and was wounded in the sortie in one eye. On the way to India he was shipwrecked in the Straits of Malacca, but arrived in time to be present at the attack on Lucknow, and at the end of the Mutiny he was a Lieutenant-Colonel. He took part in the capture of the Taku Forts, and in 1861, when war was anticipated with the United States, Wolseley was sent, with other officers, to organize the local forces in Canada, where he remained for ten years; during which time he conducted the Red River Expedition against Louis Rell, the half-breed. After serving at the War Office as Assistant Adjutant-General, he in 1875, was sent to command the expedition to Ashanti, and for his success there he received the thanks of Parliament, a grant of £25,000, the freedom of the City of London, and was promoted to Major-General. In 1876, he went to Natal on a political mission, and in 1878 he was made High Commissioner of Cyprus; in the following year he brought the Zulu War to a conclusion. He then became successively Quartermaster-General and Adjutant-General. In 1882 he commanded in the Egyptian expedition against Arabi Pasha, and for his success was created Baron Wolseley of Cairo, and promoted General. His last active service was in command of the Nile Expedition 1884-5, for the relief of General Gordon at Khartoum. In 1894 he was promoted to Field-Marshal, and in the following year he became Commander-in-Chief, a post which he retired in 1900, when his public life came to an end. His career was so phenomenally successful, and he was so continually in the public eye, that he came to be known as "Our only general"—his Christian name being adopted for a slang phrase—"all Sir Garnet."

First Doctors—Then a Skin Specialist—Then a Bottle of D.D.D.

I will consider it a favor if you will allow me to add my testimonial to the many hundreds you no doubt have in praise of the great results effected by the D.D.D. Prescription. I was a sufferer for two years with eczema on my legs and ankles. I tried three or four different doctors and none of them did me any good. I got tired of trying their remedies, I then went to a skin specialist but he was no better than the others. I was reading the Sunday paper and happened to see your ad. I am very glad that I did. I secured a trial bottle of D.D.D. and it did me so much good that I sent for a dollar bottle, also a cake of soap. That is all I used, and I am perfectly well. I have advised several others to use it and the results have been the same. You are at liberty to use my name for I consider D.D.D. the best remedy in use.

Anyone suffering from skin trouble—mild or severe—should investigate at once the merits of D.D.D. Try it to-day. Your money back unless the first bottle relieves you. Ask your druggist.

Roast Beef of Old England

NOW COMES FROM FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

London (Associated Press)—A meat that was very popular in London music halls years ago extolled the virtues of the "Roast Beef of Old England," and vigorously declared that it accounts for the freedom that was in the blood of the Englishman. It is generally believed that quite a much of the rich, red blood of freemen runs in his veins as in the good days of old, but it can no longer be said that it is the "Roast beef of old England" that accounts for its presence there. In fact many Englishmen, but more especially Londoners, eat much less of English beef than they do of beef that comes from other countries that are far distant, and which is brought to England frozen in refrigerators. A report of the "meat trade" which has just been published, says importations in the last ed Kingdom in 1921 exceeded all previous records with a total of 514,414 tons of beef, mutton and lamb. The home product was estimated at 1,056,400 tons. In London district 85 per cent of the meat marketed comes from overseas. Only one Londoner out of seven can reckon upon having British-fed meat to eat.

Armenians Lament Bryce

Constantinople.—The Armenian community here held an imposing memorial service for the late Viscount James Bryce, British statesman and Ambassador to the United States. Tributes of affection were paid to his memory by the Patriarch, Monsignor Zaven, who officiated and who declared that Lord Bryce had been to Armenians a wise counsellor and guide, a most devoted and unflinching friend. He declared that Armenian Pacific fishing trade must land their fish at Ketchikan instead of at Prince Rupert, as is now the custom.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

LONDON PRESS HORRIFIED.

LONDON, March 25. London morning newspapers comment at length on the Irish situation, especially expressing their horror of savage murders in Belfast yesterday of five members of the family of Owen MacMahon. They term this tragedy the worst massacre in Ireland since Dublin gunmen slaughtered fourteen British officers there in November, 1920. The last reports from Belfast say the crime has profoundly shocked the conscience of every decent element in the city, and it is feared more murders will occur as a reprisal. Meanwhile nothing has been learned to identify the murderers. The Daily Sketch attributes to General Sir Nevill Macready, Military Commander in Ireland, the opinion that the Ulster Government "appear absolutely incompetent to exercise adequate control." On the other hand frontier outrages are attributed to members of the Irish Republican Army, together with Eamon DeValera's speeches which are cited as accounting in some measure for the inflamed feelings of the least controllable class in Belfast. The Times says "the civilized world recalls in horror before a lengthening tale of barbarous outrages, which have disgraced both North and South for the past three years."

Prince's Rink.

The ice at the Prince's Rink is not, as stated through a misunderstanding in this morning's News, in a very bad condition. There is still from five to six inches good solid ice on the rink though, owing to soft weather, it is covered with water at present. One night's frost would dry up the ice and put it in very good condition, and as the "Toronto man" predicts it colder for to-night it is hoped to have a sufficiently good sheet to run off the big game between St. Bon's and Felidians on Monday night. The League met yesterday and decided that whatever the ice conditions this game would be played by next Wednesday night at the latest. As soon as the St. Bon's-Felidian game is played, for the balance of the week the rink will be kept open principally for the benefit of mercantile and club teams who may wish to play matches. Mercantile and club games will be booked at any hour during the day or evening for the balance of the week—first come first served. Unless another cold snap should come the rink will close for the season next Saturday night. Patrons who have skates at the rink are requested to take delivery of them by the end of next week as the rink management will not be responsible for skates, clothing, etc. left in lockers or elsewhere at the rink after the first of April.

A beautiful and choice selection of general merchandise will be offered at SHEA'S Monday night.—mar25,21

The Power Behind.

The High Commissioner for Australia, Sir Joseph Cook, tells a good story of the young man from "down under" who came to London on a visit.

His host, a relative by marriage, went in "strong" for the new movement in art, and took him to an exhibition of futurist paintings.

The "Cornstalker" remained quiet during the tour of the galleries.

"Well," said the relative at last, "you don't seem to be particularly interested in the pictures. What do you think of them?"

"Think!" exclaimed the youth from down under. "Why, man, I've got two aunts in Australia that can knit better pictures than these!"

Co-operative Marketing.

What a Bonavista Fisherman Thinks.

Local Competition Must be Wiped Out in Our Foreign Markets.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—The enclosed correspondence may prove interesting. The letter to me is genuinely the production of a Labrador fisherman—no ordinary man, though, you'll admit, for his letter would do credit to a philosopher.

Yours truly,
ALFRED B. MORINE.
March 24, 1922.

THE LETTER.
A. B. Morine, Esq.
Dear Sir—I value very highly your correspondence of January 24, and have delayed answering, first because your request to write you "from time to time" simply means that, and second, because the change you advocate involves so many channels of thought that I find myself entirely incapable of travelling those channels intelligently.

The one outstanding feature of marketing our fish is, as you suggest, the need of wiping out finally and forever this competition in our markets amongst local fish exporters; but the question is can we induce those exporters to come together and agree to give up present methods of selling for the Co-operative system. Do the fish exporters (that is on an average) make more money now than they would? Would they still be on the job of exporting as leaders of the Association, or would others fill their places? If not, could we get control enough of the fish business to enable us to act independently? Have they ever been consulted on this matter? If not, and we really mean to start this Co-operative system, how shall we begin to work? I ask these questions because I am thoroughly convinced that you are not of the visionary class, and I know you honestly mean or wish to see this method adopted and given a fair trial; though I confess I grow tense and dissatisfied to see that no other person capable of discussing this matter intelligently makes a hand to encourage you and bring out of your suggestions a workable proposition. At present, as far as I can see, a wide discussion by broadminded men is the primary need. In discussion there would be the hope of workable plans—the hope that in spite of present discouraging aspects we could in time be selling our fish in a more sane and satisfactory way. Of course, as far as I know, you may now be formulating plans to work out your suggestions. On the one hand an arrangement amongst fish exporters solely could be made without a hitch, providing you could get them to work and think on business principles, and outside of the public—that is, in the forming of the Association, but if by any chance the public becomes, or is a primary need to its formation, it never can become a workable project. I say this because the public, always inclining to indifference, have through the disastrous efforts of Coaker's Regulations become callously apathetic, and will look with mistrust on any other scheme (might I say plan) for selling fishery products.

Now I don't forget that part of the fishing public who can follow your ideas would follow you, but then there is a part which wouldn't follow because of misunderstanding—a part which wouldn't follow because of apathy, and I am sure you know that there are quite a number who follow nothing not sanctioned by Coaker; in fact who would despise through Coaker anything "coming from Morine." Those thoughts are not penned, Mr. Morine, with any hope of discouraging you; far from it, but as they are facts, it is just as well to recognize them, and recognize also, that following closely on the heels of the infamous regulations, and face to face with Coaker and his Nationalization scheme, it would be useless to depend upon public sanction for co-operation.

Now if I could get anyone to read your letters with only half the interest that I have found in them, or get a copy of this letter to which I am replying before every man in this country, and have it studied dispassionately, I feel sure you would soon have the moral support the project most certainly seems to warrant, but I fear that the conflicting ideas of those unstable days through which we are passing, backed to a degree by Coaker's arguments, would spoil a scheme just at present to try out this system you advocate.

As you intimate, comparatively few fishermen read your letters, and although it seems a mad thing to say, reason does not appeal to the majority of laboring men of to-day. Fanaticism with its imaginary gilt frills is the Elysium of the "under-dog." Pipe dreams, lullabies for grown ups, and Red rule without profit as long as it brings vengeance is the panacea for muscles and sinews. Instead of honest toil as God intended.

Coaker in your path, Sir, and you

In his! Coaker will stoop low when no other dog can be seen to prompt him to a quick swoop, but with intelligence as his foe he will redouble his efforts, and emphasize every sentence of his arguments in deception or otherwise. This is why I hate and fear him. You can combat logic with a better logic, but you do not know how to handle any man who kicks and founders for the purpose of raising dust to cover up the real issue.

Your ideas will be moving to action before I shall or can know to a great degree what I am really talking about, but in the meantime I thank you sincerely for the interest you have aroused in me, first by your letters through your letter to me personally. Your letter is full of interest, though I do not think I fully deserve the high compliment you pay me. However, knowing it is not flattery, I appreciate it very much. I shall think it a privilege to come and see you again when I come to St. John's.

Very truly yours,
S.I.T.
March 6, 1922.

THE REPLY.
Dear Sir—I am indeed your debtor for your very able letter of the 6th inst., splendidly written, and touching with clarity upon points raised by my letters on Co-operative Marketing. It is very encouraging to receive such a proof of intelligent consideration. You have, I hope, received a copy of my address to the Rotary Club, amplifying my arguments.

You ask very pertinent questions concerning the probability of participation by present day exporters in a Co-operative system of marketing; would they voluntarily co-operate; could control of exporting be got in spite of them; if not, how can Co-operative Marketing be brought about; do they make more money by present methods than under a Co-operative system. Answers to your questions are of almost vital importance.

By present methods, individual merchants or firms probably make more in certain years, and less in others, than they would under a system of co-operative marketing, which would have a stabilizing effect. Now, fish exporting is gambling; then, it would be safe, sound and reasonable. Upon the average, exporters would benefit by the change. Bad cure and bad marketing victimize the fishermen and the Colony as a whole, but probably the exporters, the middle-men, escape with the least harm. A system which is fundamentally sound, as our present marketing system is, cannot but be injurious in the long run to everybody concerned in it.

PREPARED BY DAVIS & LAWRENCE CO. MONTREAL

It is probable that the majority of present day exporters would at the outset be inclined to oppose co-operative marketing. They have grown up with present day methods, and would probably look askance upon new proposals. Some have grown well-to-do, and some have lost their all, under existing methods, and the latter, perhaps, want to try again. But I know that some of the most enterprising exporters realize that the era of co-operation is dawning, they have given some study to it, they have tried it in some instances, and are prepared for the change, I believe that the majority are open to conviction, and are so sincerely loyal to the Colony that they will "follow the gleam" when they see it. They would shrink from "Nationalization," with its menace of political control, but co-operate in a system which left the producers in charge of exporting.

There are methods by which co-operative marketing of the Colony's fish could be brought about without the approval of present day exporters, and even against their united opposition. For instance, Coaker could have conferred it upon the Colony in 1920, when he imposed his fatal Regulations. But I should not like to have co-operative marketing attempted without the consent and cordial assistance of the body of present day exporters, for their knowledge of marketing, and all that concerns it, is invaluable, in spite of all the insolent or flippant abuse which is showered upon them from time to time. If I had control of a campaign for initiating Co-operative Marketing, I should, I am confident, be able to enlist the assistance of exporters in making it absolutely universal, and prohibiting exportation except through Central Exchange. That central body should be composed of the best brains amongst the fishermen and exporters of the Colony. To be supremely successful, co-operation must be complete and universal in the Colony.

Co-operative Marketing could be established by the exporters without the aid of the public, or by the public in spite of the opposition of the exporters, but neither will, in fact, be done, I feel sure, for there is too much apathy, and if the apathy were dispelled, there would be too much division of opinion, to make co-operative marketing a fact accomplished. It can only be brought about by a campaign to arouse public opinion, and probably only as the result of its success as a party policy, and the adoption of that party at a general election. I admit the force of all that you say about the effect upon public sentiment of the disastrous failure of the Fishery Regulations, and of Coaker's extension, and hope that to-morrow evening the spacious College Hall will be filled to capacity.

Bible Society Meeting.
The adjourned annual meeting of the Newfoundland Bible Society takes place on to-morrow (Sunday) after the evening services in the various churches, and will be held in the Methodist College Hall. Addresses will be delivered by Rev. E. C. Earp, Rector of St. Thomas's and Rev. C. H. Johnson, Pastor of Cochrane St. Centennial Church. Special music will be provided by Mr. F. J. King, organist of the C. of E. Cathedral. The work of the Society is deserving of support. The annual income is now considerably less than it was many years ago, although the purchasing power of many has decreased. That efforts will be made to provide the money necessary if the Society is to carry on its work, is sincerely hoped. His Excellency the Governor will preside at the meeting. The officers of the Society desire to impress the general public on the great necessity for its maintenance and extension, and hope that to-morrow evening the spacious College Hall will be filled to capacity.

in the Methodist Cemetery, Harbor
Grace. Condolences.

There also passed away on Monday morning a well known resident, in the person of Mr. Thomas Snow of Harvey Street. Mr. Snow had been ill but a very few days, and his death was unexpected. For many years he had been watchman at Messrs. Murray and Crawford's premises, and his funeral will be missed from its accustomed place by the public. His wife predeceased him a few years ago. He leaves to mourn two sons, Mr. Nathaniel Snow of Halifax (ex-R.N.R.), and Willie at home; four daughters, Susie
in Canada, Minnie (Mrs. S. Snow), Gertrude and Lilly of this town. Our sympathy goes out to the family at this hour of trial. Funeral took place this afternoon (Wednesday) and was very well attended. Interment was made in the Church of England Cemetry.

sorry to learn that she has been com-

Royal Wedding Simplicity.

Princess Mary set quite a new fashion in royal weddings. Tradition has taught us to expect on such an occasion a resplendent pageant of stately lords and lovely ladies, arrayed in all the pomp and dignity of Court dress and coronet. The setting of our Princess's nuptials, however, struck an altogether different note, for typical of Royal consideration and sound common sense, in view of treacherous weather conditions, the order had gone forth that morning dress was to be worn.

Thus, for the first time in history,
women attended a Royal wedding in Westminster Abbey in hats and dresses. Not only did the distinguished event establish a precedent, but it will also usher in a new era in the fashion world, since the styles favored will reflect the exalted bride's own simplicity of taste and love of quiet colour and effect. This revolutionary order, issued officially by the Dean of Westminster, places all women on an equality never before enjoyed in the history of the land.

Got No Sleep
But now the neuritis has gone,
the pains have ceased, the nervous system is restored and the writer of this letter pays a grateful tribute to the medicine which made him well.

Mr. John Woodward, P.T.O., Lucan, Ont., writes:

"It gives me much pleasure to recommend Dr. Chase's medicine, especially the Nerve Food. I was a sufferer from neuritis for several years, and tried all kinds of remedies, yet never seemed to get any better. At last my nerves and whole system seemed to give way through not being able to get any rest or sleep at night for pain, which mostly used to take me in all parts of the limbs and feet. My nerves would twitch till my whole body would seem to jerk right up as I lay in bed. Almost at the point of despair, I decided I would get
Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which I did,
and after taking twenty boxes I believe I'm almost normal again. I also keep a box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills on hand, and for the past year I seem to enjoy my usual health."

A Plea for Development.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—Nothing has appeared in the press concerning the proposed Flour Mill for Newfoundland for some considerable time—in fact very little has even been publicly said. Does this mean that the idea has died in embryo,
or that Mr. Palmer's visit is now quietly bearing fruit, the results of which we shall see anon? When news of the Humber project was first published
great interest and hope were aroused,
as the development of such vast resources and the consequent employment meant so much in these times of great need. But when men realized the enormity of the terms how was turned to alarm, as it was felt to accept them would be suicidal. Still it is to be regretted that some reasonable arrangement could not be reached for, in all conscience, Newfoundland needs the development of all possible resources, and abundant employment. It is well very well to say that Newfoundland is essentially a fishing country and that no other business can be successfully operated, but is it really logical to make the assertion that because fishing hitherto has constitu-ed our chief industry, no other industry would succeed? Such an argument has no foundation in fact, for there are not many other countries interested very largely in fishing, but at the same time find it possible to develop all natural resources, and to introduce any and every enterprise that would tend to the betterment of such countries.

Time was, perhaps, when the fishing industry in Newfoundland was all-sufficient, but it seems evident to-day that, unless a greater disposition on the part of our young manhood in that direction is shown, Newfoundland will find it absolutely necessary to face the situation squarely, and see to it that her natural resources are fully developed and that all possible encouragements given capitalists here are prepared to introduce such industries as will make her future sure. The idea of "what was good enough for my father is good enough for me" has too
long been accepted in Newfoundland,
and as a result we have never made any serious effort to do better. For one thing we have never, in all the years, tried to enlarge our borders.
We have contented ourselves here and there all around our coast, but with the exception of Grand and Bishop Falls, the whole interior of our country, which offers such splendid possibilities, is left to the bitter and the owl, and to the roaming herds of wild animals.

We do not wish to make the ridiculous claim that Newfoundland is an agricultural country, par excellence, but we do believe she possesses an abundance of good land which, if properly handled would put the business of stock, hog and poultry raising beyond peradventure, and this, when coupled with our fisheries and such other industries as are practicable,
would hasten the day when our population would be a happy million, spread over the entire country, instead of a few thousands scattered along the sea coast.

It is really encouraging to hear reports of mineral finds, at various places around the country, but unless our faith in our mineral possibilities is increased, and unless we drop our Bolsheis Exporting Gold.

attitude of "can any good come out of Newfoundland," we shall never reap
the harvest of buried wealth we ought.
There is no doubt that Newfoundland, in common with all other countries, is passing through a time of severe stress, and the employment question was probably never more serious. But it will not help matters to preach calamity or contemplate too seriously the darker side. The outlook for the seal fishery is promising, and the question of supplying for the summer fisheries may not present such grave difficulties as we anticipate, as the Government, black as our friends
the opposition may paint them, are doubtless anxious to help the Country back to its feet, and consequently will render all possible assistance. But although our fisheries are still vital,
and must be prosecuted to the limit,
other avenues that promise help must not be overlooked. Let us, therefore, have all possible legitimate development along every available line, and let us encourage the establishment of all such industries as will help to solve our difficulties, and make our land prosperous.
Yours very truly,
PROGRESS.

The Annunciation and Incarnation.

On the 25th of March 4004 years
after the creation of Adam and Eve, 577 years after the Deluge, 1510
years after Moses delivered the people of God, 1332 years after the construction of the Royalty of David, 723
years after the foundation of Rome,
and on the anniversary of the miraculous passage of the Red Sea,
the Lord God Almighty and all mercies sent the Archangel Gabriel to a virgin of the name of Mary, living in the little town of Nazareth in Galilee to announce to her the incarnation of the Son of God. Mary was then about 14 years of age and was betrothed to Joseph, her relation. Descended like herself from the Royal race of David, and of the tribe of Judah. According to ancient tradition it was at noonday on the 25th of March that the angel Gabriel, clothed in human form and glorified with the light of heaven, appeared to Mary, who was praying at the time in a grotto hewn from the solid rock of the Hill at the foot of her house was built, as were all houses of Nazareth. This grotto has been converted into a chapel and may be seen, and is still venerated in the village of Nazareth.

tive of the town, the result being a win for the Harbor Grace boys. On Monday night another game was played, this time the visiting team being from Carbonear, and they also were defeated.

TRINITY.

In kind recognition of my efforts to revive, in pleasant mood, the story of the Burin Coal deposit, a friend has sent me the outline facts of another story that covers some twenty-six years of Burin history at the end of the last century; and which had much to do with the mixing up of domestic ties, by the strange actions of one of its citizens. Ever since the days of Enoch Arden—and probably before his day—some man whose machinery of daily life had gone on with a regular beat for years, suddenly slipped a cog, resulting in his going off at a tangent, disappearing from view—and then, when he was well nigh forgotten, bobbed up serenely from some unexpected quarter.

I remember a chronic case of two of this kind in my old parish in Cape Breton. The man was a quiet citizen with regular habits, and with no desire to go far from home. One day, however, he went to the well for water at a given time. Some one was sent to hurry him up, but whilst his buckets were found filled with water at the well, he was not there, nor was he heard of for six months after that, and then he was in some American city, from which he came home and went on as before. The same strange disappearing trick came out in the man's daughter. At certain times she simply had to "run away" as she called it, and she did—and then she came back again some day. The family and neighbors got so used to it, that neither the going nor the coming affected them, and it went on till the end, when she went away and never came back.

Such is the story of Ambrose B— of Burin that my friend has sent me; only that his disappearance was of a longer duration, and his actions were fraught with more serious consequences. About forty-seven years ago, there lived in a fishing village near Burin, a well-to-do planter by the name of Ambrose B—. He was the owner of a schooner, and was a respected dealer with the firm of Baine, Johnston & Co. at St. John's. He used to fish in the Straits, and was well known as an industrious and a successful fisherman. His schooner was a fine vessel of fifty tons, well fitted in every respect for cod-selme work. In the spring of 1875 the usual preparations were made for the summer's work, and Captain B— with eight men left for the Straits. All went along as usual till they came to 'Brig Bay where they harbored for the night. In the morning, Captain B— went on shore, and when he returned to the schooner, he greatly surprised the mate, by telling him that he did not intend to go any further.

"You," he said to the mate, "may go on down the Straits and get what fish you can, or you may go right back home again. If, however, you go fishing, do as I always did—give the voyage to the merchant, and the schooner too, if necessary." Neither the mate nor any of the crew noticed anything wrong with him, but they could not understand his actions. In the meantime Captain B— packed his clothes and other belongings, and one of the men took him on shore in the dory, and returned to the schooner without him. None of any of the captain's relatives had seen anything wrong with him mentally, nor did they know of any family troubles. Nothing, however, was left for the crew to do, but to recognize the mate as captain, and acting under his instructions they endeavored to do as they believed Captain B— intended to do when he left home.

The summer's catch was not a good one, for in spite of their trying to forget it, the men were upset in mind by the captain's actions, and they returned to St. John's at an earlier date than usual. They did as the captain had told them to do. They took what fish they had caught to St. John's, and handed it over, together with the schooner, to Messrs. Baine, Johnston & Co. All they could say when they returned was—the skipper went ashore at Brig Bay, and intentionally did not return to the schooner.

Captain B— was a married man with a wife and five children, (two boys and three girls) living. The elder boy was about ten years of age, and the youngest girl was a baby in arms when their father went away. His brother John, and the people of the village could not understand the captain's actions, and whatever reasons he had for them he kept them to himself. When the other fishing crews returned from the Straits they brought no news of Captain B— and with the coming of winter all communication with Brig Bay was cut off till the next spring. With the advent of spring the schooners fitted out for the Straits as usual, and when they returned the next fall they brought the news that Captain B— had stayed at Brig Bay and fished there during the summer after he had left the schooner; and that during the winter, whilst out sealing, he was drowned by falling through the ice. Through this information was not altogether reliable, it was taken for granted, and everybody in the village spoke of Captain B— as having met his death by drowning—and within a few years he was forgotten.

His widow did the best she could to bring up the children. The three girls grew up to be good women, and they became good wives and mothers; whilst the two boys—Samuel and George, became two of the finest men on the West Coast; and two of the finest fishermen that Newfoundland ever produced. After a few years the captain's widow married one William F— of the same village, and raised another family. At this date, if you asked any of the grown-up people of Port au Bras about one Ambrose B— you would be told—"he was drowned in the Straits twenty-six years ago."

Well! during the summer of 1901 (twenty-six years after Captain B— disappeared) the s.s. Glenora came to Burin from Port aux Basques on one of her regular trips, and the usual number of people stocked to the wharf to see the passengers come on shore. There were several passengers this time, mostly groups of tourists. One man, however, came ashore alone. He was well dressed, and carried a valise that in itself indicated prosperity on the part of the owner. As he walked briskly up the wharf, one man who had known Ambrose B— years ago, remarked to another old citizen: "That man resembles me of Ambrose B—." The other man said, "Oh, no! that man is now; for he was forty-five when he was drowned, and that is twenty-six years ago;" and they dismissed the man and the subject from their thoughts.

In addition to the pleasure that the "Burin Coal Story" gave to so many other of our readers, we are glad to have the testimony of the new Burin correspondent to the Evening Telegram, to the same effect. We are also glad to have been the means of calling forth one, whom we hope will continue to represent Burin and its deeply interesting vicinity. The other story of Burin's "Enoch Arden" that will be found in this and the next issue of Trinity Notes, will, no doubt, bring back other memories to the Burin correspondent. In future, however, we shall regard him as the custodian and the rightful publisher of all story-material from that interesting part of the country. We are too far away to get all the details and local color necessary for justice to such work.

In compliance with the request of the Bishop in his Lenten Pastoral—Queen's College is being kept continually before the members of St. Paul's congregation during the season of Lent. On the Sunday before Lent, a plain, straightforward, and forceful appeal was made to a large congregation at Evensong, in the spiritual and financial interests of Queen's. Copies of the Bishop's Pastoral Letter have been sent to those who do not take the Diocesan Magazine-Leaflets, on which is a prayer for an increase of clergy, and also one for Queen's College, have been freely distributed to individuals, who are asked, and who have promised to use them with their daily private prayers. The Litany for Queen's College is being used every Sunday at Evensong, and the special prayers on the leaflet form a part of the weekly Eucharist, and the daily Mattins and Evensong. The lecture by Mr. Somerton, in the financial interests of Queen's was a success. One man paid $10 for a ticket, and another man gave $3 for his; and the proceeds—$30—have been deposited in the Bank, as the first-fruits of our special offerings to be made at Easter. The women are working at home so many hours a week, and they will have a special table for Queen's College at their Easter Sale of Work. The envelopes for our Self-Denial offerings—in addition to all this—will be distributed on Palm Sunday, and we have reasons to believe that they will be more than usually productive. No one who has prayed for Queen's during Lent can be kept from giving in its behalf at Easter; for every one is reminded that: Prayer without work is hypocrisy; and work without prayer is presumption. We do not wish the Bishop and the Principal of the College to infer from all this, that their fellow-townsmen and women of Trinity will supply all the required endowment—though we wish we could—to cheer their hearts and to relieve their responsibilities. Nor are we writing in a boastful strain—realizing as we do, that we may fall short of our aim and aspirations. We are writing to remind ourselves of duty and privilege in connection with our Lenten efforts for Queen's College, and perchance to remind others of, or to encourage others in efforts to do the same. Floreat Queen's.

Happy Events of Ninety Years Ago.—MARRIED—1832—John Coleman and Jane Delaney. Witnesses: John Power, Nicholas Bulger. 1833—Nicholas Bulger and Catherine Delaney. Witnesses: John Power, Robert Strathie. 1834—Stephen Crocker and Catherine Doherty. Witnesses: John Crocker, Daniel Eagan. 1834—William Rogers and Catherine Grant. Witnesses: Sarah Grant, Sarah Jestican. 1835—James Morris and Tamor Stone. Witnesses: Henry Stone, John Way. 1836—Miles Swadbridge and Rose Bugden. Witnesses: John Crocker, Thomas DeGrish. 1836—John Manuel, Catalina, and Elizabeth Cook. Witnesses: Robert Manuel, Thomas Manuel. 1836—James Jestican and Elizabeth Bugden. Witnesses: William Bugden, William Jestican.

Magistrate Somerton paid an official visit to Catalina last week.

Mr. Joseph Morris celebrated his 81st birthday on February 2nd, and his sister, Mrs. Patrick Crocker (nee Miriam Morris) celebrated her 79th birthday on March 10th.

On Tuesday evening last one of the clergy addressed the members of the Blackledge Club, Port Rexton, on the subject of "God's Call to the Laity."

Answers to Correspondents: "A.E." North Sydney—Yes, George Old was a shipbuilder in Garland's Dock in Trinity. He moved from here to Bras D'or in Cape Breton. Two of his daughters, if not more, are still living in Nova Scotia.

"Trinitarian Abroad"—Admiral's Island, at the entrance to Trinity Harbor, was so called, because the Fishing Admiral always controlled it for his fish drying purposes. The first captain of the fishing fleet that got here in the spring, became the Admiral of the fleet for that season. There was a temporary bridge connecting the Island with the Fort Point.

"Enquirer"—Two of the oldest people in this neighborhood are Reginald Burrage Mills and Robert Miller, both of Trinity East. Mr. Mills was born in December, 1836, and Mr. Miller was born in January, 1834.

"H.J."—The Parish Hall in Trinity was built in 1897, during the incumbency of Rev. Canon Smart. On the face of the corner-stone, in the following: "This stone was laid in commemoration of Queen Victoria's Jubilee, June 12th, 1897."

"Interested"—You have puzzled me, when you ask "why was the road leading past Mr. Arthur Power's house known as Wiseman's Beach? I have often wondered why it was so-called.

"W.S."—John Clothier's house was in the garden (now owned by Mr. Walter White) about twenty yards from what was known as David Grant's workshop. When I was a boy it was used by Frank Power as a cooper shop. A land led down to it from the main road.

THE NEW EDISON

"THE PHONOGRAPH WITH A SOUL."

ECONOMY.—More music is recorded on an Edison 10 inch Re-Creation than on a 12 inch talking machine record. The Edison Re-Creation is recorded 150 threads to the inch, while "talking machine" disks are recorded only 80 threads to the inch. The Edison Re-Creation is much less susceptible to breakage.
