Orangeville as a Town.—The Advertiser says:—A requisition has been largely signed requesting Mr. McCarthy to accept the Mayoralty for the first year of our advancement. In the event of his accepting we do not expect any opposition. Mr. McKitrick has also been requested to accept the Reeveship and there seems to be a unanimous feeling in his favour. The qualification for Councillors in Towns is $800 of real estate or $1600 of rental. Electors must be assessed at $300 to a given vote. This rule will cut off a great number of votes in this town, and will confine the election of councillors to a small number, as but few are qualified. We shall require to elect a Mayor, Reeve, and eight Councillors in this town.

A Chat About Fordwich. A Chat About Fordwich.

This village was first settled in the winter of 1854-55, Joel Rogers being the first to take up his residence in the place. There was no clearing, so Joel pitched his house near a stream, one of the branches of the Maitland River. He the branches of the Mattand River. He kept tasers for some time, dealing out forty-rod to the new settlers in Fordwich Township. In the epring of 1855 Mr. Arthur Mitchell moved his family into the place, built himself a house, and applied to the Government for a Post Office, to be called Lizadel, which was granted. As there was a fine water privilege the Government selected the place for a town plot, sent in survoyors and laid out the village, giving it the name of Fordwich. Joel Rogers purchased the water privilege, binding himself to have a grist mill in operation in two years. He failed to do this, and the Government gave him other two years. Still no mill was built. The Government then offered it for sale by public auction in Goderieh, when Messrs Mitchell and Walker became the purchasers. Mr Mitchell got the water power into his own hands, and erected a Flour and Saw mill, but when ready to start a freshet took away the dam, throwing work back several months. After all being got ready the dam was taken away a second dime, which made it up hill work for Mr Mitchell. The want of a flour mill was greatly felt by the new settlers, and other places began to spring up, owing to the delay in getting the mills working at the "Plot." Leechville and Wroxeter both got up mills, and, of course, took the start, which injured the progress of the Government village, and has kept it back for years. There is a prospect of its now being one of the finest villages in the County. It is improving gradually, but on a sure basis. Mr. Thos. Wilson purchased the mills a few years ago. He leased the saw mill, which was burned down; he replaced it with a new bailding, 30x50, at a cost of $2,800 for building and machinery. The new mil commenced to work in December 1872. Last summer, as Mr Wilson expected that the T. G. & B. R. would be completed and as he intended going into the grain business, he leased the administration to the grain business, he leased the flour mill to G. B. Crawford, and sometimes as Lasadel, the P.O. name. In J

CHAPTER X. A REVELATION—NED GORDON AGAIN THWARTS IAN M'KENZIE—BROTHER AND SISTER MEET —FORWARD TO CASTLE M'LEOD.

"Cease, woman, I say," again ex-claimed M'Kenzie, savagely, than oath. "There has been enough of this. Come

"There has been enough of this. Come away."
And as he spoke he seized our heroine roughly by the wrist, and, despite her struggles and screams, commenced to drag her to the boat.
"Help, help," cried the poor girl, and Jeannie echoed the cry.
But simultaneously there was heard a crashing sound, and a large dog bounded through the trees. Then a loud ringing voice shouted—
"Help you shall have. At hum Boun.

" Help you shall have. At him, Boun-

"Help you shall have. At him, Bouncer."

The twe girls uttered a cry of joy; they had recognised the voice.

It was evident that Ian also knew it, for, with a muttered oath, he exclaimed.

"That meddling Lowland cur again. While he spoke he coutinued to drag Flora furiously towards the boat.

But the dog at this moment sprang forward, and with a growl seized him by the leg. With a sharp cry of pain M'-Kenzie let go his hold of our heroine and attempted to deal the brute a kick, but in this he was unsuccessful, as it leaped nimbly away, and at the same moment our old friend Ned Gordon strode out from amongst the trees, firmly grasping his stout stick in his hand.

"What!" he exclaimed, as he recognised M'Kenzie and Flora. "Is this villain renewing his insolence, my girl? Back, sir, or I will repeat the lesson ye gat afore."

But even as he spoke, Gordon's eyes alighted upon the woman beside our heroine, who stood regarding him with wistful eyes.

"Jeannie," he exclaimed, bounding heroine, who steod regarding him with wistful eyes.

"Jeannie," he exclaimed, bounding towards her. "Jeannie, my sister Jennie," and the next instant brother and sister were locked in each other's embrace both sobbing aloud.

"My brother, my brother," was the joyful response. "Thank God I have met you."

both sobbing aloud.

"My brother, my brother," was the joyful response. "Thank God I have met you."

"And here," exclaimed Flora, excitedly pointing to M'Kenzie, "here is her betrayer."

For a moment Ned appeared stunned, then disengaging himself from his sister's grasp, and turning, he bounded forward towards M'Kenzie, his air and attitude being that of an avenger.

But Ian had expected the bursting of the storm the moment he learned the relationship which existed between Jeannie and the Lowlander, and before Flora had spoken he was making with all speed for the boat, his pace being accelerated by the dog barking at his heels; and swift as Ned darted forward he was to late—the scoundrel had pushed off and entered the boat, and was already several yards from the shore. As he seized the oars and commenced to row away, he sent back a derisive, scornful laugh, and shouted—

"I can't prolong the interview just now but we shall meet again, and then you shall have your satisfaction."

"Ay, Ian M'Kenzie, I swear by the heaven above met that I will hea satisfaction, an't that ere lang, an' such a satisfaction, an't hat ere lang, an' such a satisfaction, as by right belongs to the protector of her you have basely injured. Ay, we shall meet again, any ye may tremble as ye contemplate that day, which is not far in the future."

Well was it for M'Kenzie that he had such an easy means of escape at hand, else he would have suffered for his iniquities, for Gordon was much excited with honest indignation, and eager to avenge his sister's wrongs.

Ian derisively yelled something in reply but it could not be distinctly heard. Gordon then turned to his sister and Flora, and gazing eagerly at both exclaimed—

"Tell me hoo it is that I see ye baith thegither. Little did I dream a day or twa syne when I tauld you, my lass, o' my sister's sufferin' that you suld be the first I wad meet wi' her."

"Our meeting was accidental," re plied Flora, cheerily, for she was now happy beyond measure—in the first place, because she had found in G

Palmerston.

Hotel Chinge.—The hotel formerly occupied by R. Conquest has changed hands. Mesers. Smith & Foote, late of Fergus, are the proprietors. As they are well liked, they may expect to do a good business. It will be known as the "Palmerston Hotel."

There is a report circulated in this locality that twenty men were paid off on the W., G. & B. Railway at Palmerston.

I. O. O. F.—A ledge of this order will
In this village on or about be organized in this village on or about the 20th of December. A fine hall is be-ing fitted up over Messrs. Ewing & Jack-son's new store. The charter members are S. T. Jackson, W. J. McMillan, Wm. Reid, James Scott, and F. Hazelword; there are over twenty ready to join as soon as it is started. When the affair comes off your readers will be furnished with full particulars.

Teviotdale.

Chanced Hanss.—Mr. W. Squire, of Toviotdale Hotel, has sold his lease to a person from Wallace. He leaves on the 15th of January next.

Cattle Fair.—The Teviotdale monthly cattle fair came off here last Friday. There were not so many cattle as was expected. Good cattle commanded high prices, while poor animals could hardly be sold at any price. There were plenty of buyers, and if the farmers had only brought out the cattle they could easily have been sold at fair prices.

Snow.—There is good sleighing in this locality at the date of writing. It snows every day, which makes it very disagreeable. It is seldom that the snow falls so heavily so early in the season.

Fordwich.

A Libel.—There has been a report in circulation that Mr. J. B. Crawford, miller, Fordwich, was implicated in the firing of Leeches' mill, Gorris, in October last. Those who are acquainted with Mr. Crawford do not believe it. The reason attributed for it is competition in business. Mr. Crawford has sent the following reply te Mr. A. Smith, miller, Gorrie:

"I have been informed that you have circulated a report, taking that I, Joseph B. Crawford, miller, Fordwich, was the person who set fire to Mesers. Leeches' mill, Gorrie, on the night of the 20th nlt. Now, Sir, I wish you to retreat your charges, as I consider the report has been circulated to damage my character."
