FAREWELL TO MISSIONARIES

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Morse Given a Reception before Leaving for Mission Field in China, and Presented with Address.

The friends of Dr. and Mrs. Reginald Morse gave them a farewell at a service held in the Baptist church, in Lawrencetown, Tuesday evening, August 24th. The large auditorium was crowded almost to its capacity. Messages were received from friends regretting they could not be present. Rev. H. G. Mellick, the newly elected pastor of the church presided. Dr. and Mrs. Morse sat beside him on the platform and about them were seated large numbers of leading ministers and professional men, who gave strong and interesting addresses. After the singing of a hymn Rev. Lew Wallace read the scripture and Rev. Mr. McCutcheon led in prayer.

The chairman then, in a few sentences stated the purpose of the meeting, which was to give the friends of Dr. and Mrs. Morse an opportunity of meeting them and expressing their kind regards for them before their departure for their field of service in China.

Mr. Mellick then called upon Dr. Hall, principal of the Normal School, Truro, who read an address to Dr. and Mrs. Morse. The address was beautiful in thought and expression. It was neatly written on fine parchment and signed, by a large number of those present. Dr. Morse replied in a few well chosen words.

Addresses were then given by Rev. Mr. Hart, Methodist minister in Lawrencetown. Rev. Mr. Poole, Methodist minister, Prince Albert, Sask., Rev. D. B. Harkness, Superintendent of Baptist Missions in Western Canada, Rev. Lew Wallace, evangelist, Rev. Mr. McCutcheon, of Paradise, Prof. McGill and O. P. Goucher of Middleton, Dr. Richardson, professor in Yale University, and Dr. Hall. The addresses were excellent and were heard with intense interest. Music was provided by Miss Saunders and the choir.

After the program a dainty luncheon was served in the vestry by the ladies, and an opportunity was given for the friends to shake hands with Dr. and Mrs. Morse.

The large gathering showed the esteem in which Dr. and Mrs. Morse are held in the community. Their hosts of friends will follow them with loving remembrances and prayer. Dr. and Mrs. Morse left Lawrencetown August 25th, they will visit friends in Nova Scotia and United States before sailing for China.

THE BRIDGETOWN SCHOOL

PUBLIC SCHOOLS RE-OPEN

Excellent Educational Advantages in Pleasant Surroundings—Fire Escapes to Add to Safety of Bridgetown Youth.

The Bridgetown School opened on Monday last with a fairly good attendance. Our fine schoolhouse with its beautiful and well-kept grounds is a matter of pride to every citizen. The building is well located, its situation being slightly and hygienic, while the beautiful trees growing on the spacious grounds surrounding it give it the effect of being located in a park. At the east side of the building is a pretty fountain which adds to its attractiveness.

The interior is spacious, well lighted and kept in a cleanly condition. Although the building is about eight years old, no unsightly defacements appear anywhere, and varnished woodwork and well oiled hard wood floors add their sanitary value. To Dr. Jost, the chairman of the school-board is largely due the well-kept and unmarred appearance of the building as he has been most assiduous in his efforts to give the growing youth of our town not only the best education possible, but a thoroughly attractive, refined and sanitary environment, and deserves the highest gratitude of the parents of Bridgetown for what he has accomplished.

But one essential thing is lacking in the equipment of the building, and that is the addition of fire escapes. Recent horrors in school holocausts have awakened our people to the sense of danger and need of such safeguards, and the Monitor - Sentinel has for sometime advocated the procuring of fire escapes. Consequently, we are pleased to publish the information that fire escapes are now being made and will be added before fall fires are started. The outside doors have been made to open outward and swing easily. There are two broad staircases leading from the upper story so that every precaution has been taken as regards safety from fire, which must be a matter of gratification to all our citizens. As a further aid in vacating the building in case of fire, and to avoid panic, the children should be practised in fire drill.

One other improvement we would still advocate, to be added as soon as circumstances permit, is the establishment of a department of manual training not only as an adjunct to the regular school curriculum, but as a special feature for the child who is backward at books. This adjunct would be, we believe, of untold value to the majority of the pupils who will become members of the industrial class without whom no community can prosper.

There have some changes in the teaching staff since last term, owing to the resignation of Miss Johnson, Miss Eva Graves, Miss Florence Cochran. The staff now comprises Mr. H. L. Bustin, principal, Miss Anetta Bishop, elementary department, Miss Hattie Stoney, intermediate, Miss Bessie Crowe, Miss Bessie Hoyt and Miss Chipman, 1st, 2nd and 3rd grades primary.

The Apple Crop

Thirty-five million barrels, or 12,000,000 barrels more than in 1908, is the estimated crop of the United States and Canada this year, according to Ben H. Rice, secretary-manager of the second national apple show in Spokane, Nov. 15 to 20, who added, in giving out the foregoing:

"While the quality of the product east of the Mississippi river is not as good as last year, the crop will be much larger and, probably more profitable. The state in the west of the Mississippi is lighter than in 1908, but the fruit is of a better grade."

"The International Apple Shippers Association has issued an official statement that the crop in the New England states is 20 per cent in excess of 1908, while the yield in the central states is about 74 per cent below last year, and the middle western states report a crop double that of last season, when the yield was light."

"Growers in the southern states report a crop of from 125 to 150 per cent larger than in 1908. The Pacific group will have a smaller crop than last year, but the decreases in Idaho, Washington, and New Mexico are more than made up by the big yield in Colorado, so that the western crop will be fully as large as the previous season."

"Losses are shown in reports from New York, New Hampshire, Kansas and Oklahoma. Michigan and Wisconsin and other states have gains. The Dominion of Canada, not including Nova Scotia, shows a gain of 75 per cent, and the crop in the province of Nova Scotia is fully as large as in 1908, when a bumper crop was harvested."

"While there is no way by which the crop can be figured to a certainty," said Mr. Rice, "the foregoing figures show as near as it is possible to get them what the yield will be, and they will govern prices. There are indications that the export business from the northwest will be larger than in 1908, when many apples were sent abroad."

NOVA SCOTIA EXHIBITION AND SPLENDID RACING MEET

THE DEPARTMENT BUILDINGS AT THE PROVINCIAL EXHIBITION WILL BE COMPLETELY FILLED - $7,000 FOR SPEED COMPETITION

The Nova Scotia Exhibition this year comes off a month later than last—the dates of opening being Saturday, Sept. 25th. The fair will open at the Agricultural Station, Fisheries and Mechanics, a more favorable time for exhibits, while the general public will have an opportunity to visit and enjoy the Fair. The indications are that the exhibitors fully appreciate this, for already the applications for space in the Main building and the outlook for exhibits in Machinery Hall are as promising as that of the Dominion Exhibition. The live stock is likely to be in excess of what has been seen in the past.

The prize list amounts to $20,000 and the splendid exhibits that are assured in the Agricultural and Horticultural departments will make competition keen. The prospects for the Nova Scotia Fruit Crop are most promising and its excellence will be reflected in a superb exhibition at the Fair in Halifax.

Every Nova Scotian who wishes to keep in touch with the progress of the Province should see the 1909 Exhibition at Halifax.

The Grand Stand will be occupied in the afternoon by crowds gathered to see the fleetest horses that the Maritime Provinces can produce. There will be seven days of races for purses aggregating $7,000. Twenty-one races will come off, so that the for each purse will average nearly $400.00.

The usual low excursion rates will prevail on the railways, and the prospects are that with a splendid exhibition and a great racing meet the attendance will be very large.

Canadians on the Military Camp

(From the Toronto Star)

If Canadians must they will get into a game that is all waste and damage and loss, but they would prefer not to go in but to see the game stopped before being drawn into it. They would rather spend their money in the building of railways, canals, ships of commerce, the deepening of harbors, the making of good roads, the setting up of schools, hospitals, homes for the aged, the paying of pensions to the old soldiers of labor, the veterans of hard work, those who fall wounded while serving, not slaying, their fellows.

However, if this country must, to attain the status of a nation, adopt the ways and habits of a nation—if there is no other way, why, we might as well send for a catalogue and order a complete outfit from poisoned arrows to aeroplanes.

The New Canadian Cruisers

London, Aug. 25.—The Canadian Associated Press learns on high authority that the vessels to be loaned to the Canadian government will be two third-class cruisers, one for the Pacific and the other for the Atlantic. These ships will require refitting and alterations which will be done on this side at the expense of the Canadian government. The officers of these ships will also be loaned to Canada and paid by Canada.

CANADA WILL BUILD

When Canada starts to build warships, which it is understood will be the Bristol type of cruiser, they will be built in Canada. Representatives of a leading firm of shipbuilders will shortly proceed to the Dominion to select a site for a shipyard. Regarding the site for a shipyard in the Pacific, a prominent naval expert asked his opinion by a Canadian official, replied that Vancouver was more suitable than Esquimaux, tho it might also be necessary to have a dock in the latter place.

It is further understood that the idea of having submarines on the North St. Lawrence and Pacific coast has been suggested, and the suggestion received with some favor.

NEW ICE-BREAKER WELL UNDERWAY

Hon. Mr. Brodeur is at Barrow and inspected the icebreaker Earl Grey built to ply between Pictou and Charlottetown. He expressed himself as in every way satisfied. The vessel has not the appearance of an icebreaker, on the contrary, that of a pleasure yacht. The decorations, ceilings, panels in saloons and cabins are of the most luxurious order. A large party of Canadian visitors were shown over the vessel by Lieut. Dawson and Lieut. McKenzie, of Vickers, Sons and Maxim. The builders all agreed that the firm had reason for congratulation in turning out such a fine vessel. The Earl Grey left Barrow for a trial trip over a measured mile in the Clyde, when it is expected she will beat the contract speed of 17 knots. She has 6,500 h. p. engines and boilers, and can force a passage through ice fifteen feet in thickness.

NEWFOUNDLAND ALSO WILL HELP IN GOOD WORK

Sir Edward P. Morris, premier of Newfoundland, prior to sailing for home, said the imperial defense conference had been a wonderful success. "It will be regarded by the historian as the most effective step taken in our day to preserve the peace of the world by maintaining Britain as mistress of the seas," he declared.

"During the conference there was not a discordant note. Every British colony was anxious to share the burdens and responsibility of empire, and to contribute to a central fund for the maintenance of the whole family."

"They do not want their lives, trade and liberty any longer to be protected alone by the British sailor and soldier without contributing to the maintenance by sharing in the work of both."

McDougal Lodged in Jail

Bruce McDougal, publisher of a paper called the Free Speech in Moncton was arrested there on a charge of criminal libel, laid by Patrolman Lucas, of the St. John police force. The Free Speech has been publishing most disgusting matters about young ladies of high repute, prominent citizens, aldermen and members of the government, and the attorney general's department decided something must be done. When detective Kileen arrived at St. John with McDougal, he was met by a large crowd of enraged citizens and the police fearing their man might come in for rough handling, sent a squad of extra men to help the regular force at the depot. McDougal was hurried into a cab and taken to a cell.

Application has been made for the incorporation of the Black Diamond Coal Company, Ltd. Messrs. J. S. McGivern, A. A. Wilson, H. G. Curry, of St. John; Harry Welton, J. O. Miller and J. E. Miller, of Newcastle, Queens Co., and C. D. Dykeman, of Jemseg, Queens County, are to be provisional directors. The capital stock is to be $80,000, in $5 shares. The coal mines to be operated are near Newcastle, Queens Co.—Moncton Times.

The Tourist Travel

Mr. G. F. Parker, travelling passenger agent of the Dominion Atlantic Railway returned to the city last evening from western points. He reports a fairly good business among the tourist resorts. Some localities, however, are complaining of a perceptible falling off, this he accounts for from the fact, that, although as many, and perhaps more, people have come to the province this year, yet they disperse and may be found in farm houses and cozy spots abounding all along the coast of Nova Scotia and Cape Breton, where many also have built summer cottages.

Mr. Parker says the D. A. R. steamers are having large passenger lists this summer and many are still being booked for September—Sydney Post.

BETTER TO REPEAL

St. John Times.—The city fathers of Chatham frankly admit that they do not want the Scott Act enforced. There are temperance leaders who want the act, but will not assume responsibility for its enforcement. It would be better for the morals of the community to repeal the act than wink at persistent and public violation.

Train Plunges Through

Bridge; No One Killed

Victoria, B. C., Aug. 23.—What is considered by those chiefly concerned as little less than a miracle occurred near here yesterday, when an entire Great Northern passenger train plunged through a burning bridge, dropping into a gulch forty feet below. No one was killed, and no one was fatally hurt.

The whole train, engine, mail car, baggage and express car and passenger coaches is a complete wreck, and the financial loss exceeds $25,000. The train was bound from Grand Forks to Spokane and was on the bridge before the seriousness of the situation was sized up.

jects which are not discussed between a gentleman and his servant. This is one of them. Please remember it. "Thank you, Mr.—I mean 'm' lord," said the valet respectfully. "Very good, sir."

In stating up his man the astute Bills had made a grave mistake, wherein he found much food for reflection regarding his future line of conduct. He had long since learned to manage his former master by various cunning little artifices, but this wide awake Texan, with his square chin and steely blue eyes, was quite another proposition. Although Bills had divined the object of this masquerade, it did not seem as if he would profit much by it, and yet there must be some way in which he could turn it to his own advantage eventually, he was sure.

Meanwhile the adventurer descended into the drawing room and was presented to several other members of the small house party who had arrived by the late afternoon train for the week end. First there was Miss Caroline Schermerly, half sister to Mr. Renwyck and belonging to the haute noblesse of old Manhattan. Flatterers described her as a lady of uncertain age, although there was little doubt as to her personal antiquity. She was tall, somewhat angular and incased in a formal coat of blue blooded steel, which had never thawed sufficiently to admit of a husband being warmed to her side. She approved of ears. They represented ease; therefore she promptly took Richard under her moving wing to the vast discomfiture of the gentleman thus appropriated. Then there was Miss Inezene Chittendon, a bosom friend of Miss Renwyck, newly released from boarding school and radiant in the glamour of her first season out. She was blond, flirty, gaily, enthusiastic, delivering her sentences in a short, jerky staccato, with a deal of unnecessary emphasis, until her conversation suggested some one playing a telegraph operator with a vichy siphon.

"She was so glad to meet a real live English boy!" Really, it was delightful. How did it feel to be a gentleman instead of just an ordinary American? But of course he couldn't tell the difference, never having been anything else, you know, and so on ad infinitum. In his heart Richard agreed with her (hearty), but was not in a position to make explanations.

It was now introduced to the last of the guests, Mr. Cornelius Van der Awe, an overjoying young man, sand eyed, dark and in love with Miss Chittendon to the verge of melancholia. He said he was very much pleased to meet Lord Croylund and asked if they were having much fog at home.

Richard had been posted on London fogs and was enabled to draw a picture sufficiently dismal to meet with the questioner's desire.

"Dinner is served," announced a tall butler, who fortunately chanced to be an Irishman. Otherwise there might have been whisperings over some of the strange earl's characteristics in the servants' hall.

"All right," said Mr. Renwyck; "we won't wait for Michael. He never missed an opportunity of being late in all his life."

Richard, who against his every inclination was forced to take in the stately Miss Schermerly, was wondering vaguely who "Michael" might be when suddenly his heart stood still at the entrance of the gentleman himself, and again in his ears sounded the haunting echo of that doubtful compliment:

"Very good seat for an Englishman, my lord."

Mr. Michael Corrigan was a merry, hearty little man, brother to Mrs. Renwyck, not ashamed of his immediate Irish ancestry and a thorn in his brother-in-law Jacob's side. The two gentlemen had never got on well together, owing to an utter dissimilarity of tastes and a bull-dog tendency to argue out their respective sides of every question to the bitter end. If one made a statement the other was sure to combat it, no matter what his private convictions chanced to be, and poor Mrs. Renwyck lived in mortal dread of a tilt a la outrance between the two. Moreover, there had been a recent discussion, which, had Richard known it, would have caused him much distress of mind, for the rock on which the brothers-in-law had split was a business deal with one Bill Williams of San Antonio, Tex.

Before the advent of Mr. Corrigan, Richard had been plumbing himself on having carried out his role so successfully. It was comparatively easy to throw sand in the eyes of the Renwycks and their guests, but Mr. Corrigan put a different complexion on the face of things, for the Texan recognized the gentleman as a staunch friend of his father's who had visited their ranch some ten years before. Richard was then a mere boy and would scarcely be remembered, he hoped, especially when masquerading as a foreigner. Still he had his quaking doubts and re-buffed his efforts to appear un-American. As the dinner progressed he was rejoiced to detect no sign of recognition, but before the salad was served he found himself in trouble.

For the benefit of his guests Mr. Renwyck recounted the afternoon's feat of horsemanship, and Richard found himself upon the defensive. Fortunately he knew the details of the real Lord Croylund's venture in Texas cattle and told the story with good effect, thus accounting for his ability to ride anything that ran on four legs, yet all the while he felt the steady gaze of Mr. Corrigan's little gimlet eyes, which made him most uncomfortable.

When this ordeal was passed Miss Chittendon forced him into one more complication.

"Oh, Lord Croylund," she gushed from her seat on the opposite side of the table, "won't you please tell us a lot about England? I've never crossed, you know, and I'm just dying to see the places I've read of in so many books."

"My dear young lady," Richard returned, with unfeigned languor, "you wouldn't find it half so jolly as your own country, really. I mean I fancy I shall never see it again."

He was not to get out of that coil so easily, however, for the ladies piled him with difficult questions until he wished with all his heart that three of them at least were confined for life in the Tower of London, while he talked to the fourth of brunches and love and things he understood. Then Mr. Corrigan took a hand.

"Lord Croylund," he began, leisurely sipping his port, "it has been many years since I was in London, but I have always retained a most delightful recollection of Hyde park. Very few changes there, I suppose?"

Richard brightened visibly. This was a subject on which the astute Bills had drilled him well. He could speak of it, he thought, with little danger of a slip. Mr. Corrigan went on reflectively:

"Quite a park, as I remember it."

"Vast," agreed Richard, wishing his mentor had been a little more explicit as to dimensions.

"I was especially impressed," said Mr. Corrigan, with delicate blandness, "with that splendid statue of Napoleon, which stands at the main entrance. You are familiar with it, of course, Lord Croylund?"

"Oh, quite!" assented Richard boldly, screwing in his monocle and looking Uncle Michael straight in the eye, with never a tremor in his own. "To me it is quite the finest bit of bronze I've ever seen."

Mr. Corrigan seemed puzzled.

"Brooze?" he murmured thoughtfully. "Now, that's strange. I was under the impression that it was done in marble." He looked up with a smile and a sigh. "I dare say I'm getting old, my lord."

Richard began to feel beads of cold perspiration gathering upon his brow, but dared not call attention thereto by napping.

"It is quite weather stained, you know," he explained, with outward calm, "and perhaps—well, you see, the sculptor's name is Thornton. I've never heard that he worked in marble, though I may be wrong."

"But what I don't understand," exclaimed Mr. Renwyck, "is why you Englishmen ever put up a statue of Napoleon at all. Seems to me that hating him as you did it was rather a curious thing to do."

"Not at all," said Richard desperately; "prisoner, y'know—St. Helena—and all that sort of thing—er—magnanimous."

Uncle Michael did not seem convinced and was about to ask more questions when Mr. Renwyck turned upon him sharply.

"Michael, you are doing this for the sake of argument. I don't believe you know anything about it, and what is more, I think Lord Croylund is humoring you for the sake of politeness. I'll prove it." He turned to Richard. "My boy, I ought to have warned you in advance. My brother-in-law is a crochet old lawyer who has never got over his bad habits. Tell me—honestly now—is there a statue of Napoleon Bonaparte in Hyde park at all?"

"No," smiled Richard, greatly relieved at this turn, "there is not."

"Who is it, then?"

"Wellington," sneered Richard, with triumphant carelessness, although he really did not know whether there was such a statue or not. But then neither did any one else at the table, although all but Miss Chittendon had visited England, some of them many times. The company laughed at Mr. Corrigan's discomfiture, while the victim himself seemed to enjoy it with the keenest zest. That dangerous incident was closed.

The dinner was finished at last, and Mr. Corrigan, pleading an appointment, departed, greatly to Richard's relief. The rest of the evening was spent in company with the ladies, for the young man's efforts to single out one in particular were invariably frustrated by the other three. It was not until nearly 11 that he had a short half hour with her alone, but in this he was repaid for all his tribulations. Miss Harriet was dressed in an exquisite pale blue gown, modestly revealing a neck and shoulders which to Richard were the most beautiful in all the world. They sat on the front veranda overlooking the river, she in a low wicker chair and he on the steps at her feet. Behind him were clusters of wistaria blooms, while beyond in the darkness the first of the fireflies twinkled like stars. To them came the midnight scents and the murmur of the wind across the mighty Hudson on its journey to the sea.

Miss Harriet told him of her trip to Texas and of the gallant cowboy who had saved her life, while Richard listened with a bounding heart. He longed to claim a hero's place, to confess his deception and tell her the plain, bare truth. And yet he paused. To confess would involve disclosing the reason of his flight, and he dare not risk the chance of losing her yet. She was young, romantic. The very daring of a lover's bold design might appeal to her; but, on the other hand, it was better to wait till he had won her heart than to ruin all by foolish precipitance.

"And what sort of chap was this cowboy?" he asked her presently.

"Oh, splendid!" she answered, with enthusiasm. "He was tall and straight and strong. Why, he lifted me as though I had been a child and set me down as tenderly as my own mother might have done. It all came so suddenly and I was so bewildered that I scarcely even thanked him. I know he thinks me perfectly horrid, and I would give anything on earth if I could only tell him that I'm—that I'm not."

"And you saw all that in five minutes?" he asked eagerly.

"In five minutes!" she exclaimed, surprised. "How do you know how long it was?"

"Oh—er—a perfectly natural inference," he stammered, hunting for cover.

"Well, it was a short time," she smiled.

"And yet you did not learn his name?"

Miss Harriet shook her head.

"No. We came away at once, and I had no chance. You see, I only saw him for a moment—that is, after he put me down—and—and he was in such a hurry to catch his cows."

Richard smiled into the wistaria haze and was silent for a time.

"I suppose," he began presently, "that the young fellow was of the ordinary type of cowboy we see so frequently out?"

"No," interrupted Miss Harriet, with a decisiveness that pleased him to the quick; "he was nothing of the sort. Of course he was roughly dressed, as they all are, but a gentleman is a gentleman even in a flannel shirt, and 'chaps' don't they call them? Do you know, Lord Croylund, he reminds me in many ways of you. He—no, no," she added hastily, "I don't mean that. He was quite different. You see, he was an American."

"Lucky beggar!" observed the pseudo earl, with a heavy sigh. "Miss Renwyck, I, too, would love to become an American if—won't you teach me how?"

"I'll be glad," she laughed. "Yes, I will, if you promise to follow instructions implicitly."

"Done!" he answered. "I'm ready for my first lesson. How will you begin?"

She thought for a moment, then looked down upon him impishly.

"First I think I should like to destroy your monocle with—a croquet mallet."

Richard screwed it into his eye with renewed vigor and stared up at her through it with an excellent simulacrum of a wondering English incomprehension, stammering out with delightful vagueness:

"D'ye mean while I am—ah—wearing it, Miss Renwyck?"

CHAPTER VIII. AFTER Miss Renwyck had retired Richard lighted a cigarette and sat alone on the veranda, turning over in his mind the events of his first crowded day and his plans for the future campaign. Mr. Michael Corrigan troubled him. This little fat man was nobody's fool, and no one could tell what sort of mischief was being hatched behind those piercing eyes, which, if they continued to twinkle about the Renwyck place, would shortly discover many things.

Richard sighed and flicked the stump of his cigarette away. He rose and was about to pass into the house when he was met in the doorway by Mr. Renwyck.

"Croylund," said his host impressively, "there is a little matter which I should like to talk over with you, and I have purposely waited until the ladies retired."

Richard fancied there was a certain grimness in Mr. Renwyck's tone and jumped to a swift conclusion. He was found out. He wished to avoid a scene if possible, but from what his father had told him of Mr. Renwyck's "certainly" he answered evenly, rather relieved that the expected break was coming. "Shall we sit here on the porch?"

"No," said the old gentleman; "I don't care to be overheard by any of the servants. If you don't mind walking we'll move away from the house."

Richard was convinced. He was sure that when Jacob Renwyck expressed a candid opinion of any one—especially an impostor—he would find it difficult to speak in whispers. It was just as well, on the whole, and Richard preferred to receive his malediction out of earshot of his ladylove. He rose with alacrity, therefore, and followed his host, who led the way across the lawn toward a little observatory or pleasure house on the crest of a bluff overlooking the moonlit Hudson.

At another time the young man might have enjoyed the view of the great calm river sweeping past the shadowy hills on the farther side, but under the circumstances the scene did not appeal to him. There were other thoughts which occupied his mind. Mr. Renwyck walked with his hands clasped behind him, and Richard watched his every move. Physically the Texan was more than a match for Mr. Renwyck, but the latter had probably armed himself for the occasion, a trifling precaution which would not have escaped the southerner. And Richard then and there resolved never again to put on a pair of trousers that had no pistol pocket in them. What did those eastern tailors know about the requirements of a gentleman anyway? But then it flashed into his mind that Mr. Renwyck was probably no better provided than he in that particular—reassuring thought!

Suddenly Mr. Renwyck unclasped his hands and transferred one of them to his breast pocket. Richard caught sight of a bulging projection—it was there then!

He was on the point of seizing his host's wrist when the latter brought forth a brown covered case.

"Have a cigar," he said, with crafty cordiality, and Richard accepted, with his gaze still concentrated on Mr. Renwyck's hands.

"Thank you, no," the Texan answered. "I'll smoke it dry for awhile, if you don't mind."

The trick was an old one. He had seen it worked along the Rio Grande. A Mexican had presented a cheroot to a cow puncher, who, after lighting it, found himself looking into the muzzle of an overgrown Colt's—and a Texan learns to profit by observation as well as experience.

Mr. Renwyck now invited his guest to a seat beside him on a smooth flat stone on the edge of the cliff. Richard accepted, but cautiously slid his foot to a point behind Mr. Renwyck's leg, with the aim of overturning his enemy backward at the first sign of treachery.

"Croylund," he began abruptly, "I've taken a fancy to you somehow, and I'm going to prove it by putting you on the inside of a little business deal."

"A business deal?" gasped Richard in unfeigned surprise.

"Yes," nodded the old gentleman, puffing thoughtfully at his cigar. "Of course I don't know how you are fixed financially, nor have I any intention of asking impertinent questions, but if you care to come with me in a transaction in which I myself have invested largely I can put you in the way of making quite a snug little sum."

Richard withdrew his foot from behind Mr. Renwyck's leg and in the darkness strove to kick himself. Conscience had made of him not exactly a coward, but a careful skater on thin ice.

"That's very clever of you, indeed," he answered, lighting his perfect and gazing across the Hudson. "Is it what you call—er—flirt?"

"Well, no," said the old financier. "It's more than that. It's a dead certainty, and I'm on the inside. Let me explain. To begin with, it is a deep water harbor enterprise in the state of Texas."

"A local company has been organized and styles itself the Houston, Matagorda City and Gulf Railroad and Improvement Company." And Richard recognized the company with a thrill of excitement. "They're going to get an appropriation from the legislature for making a deep water harbor at Matagorda City. They own all the land in the vicinity and the right of way for a branch line to connect with the railroad systems of Texas at Houston. Now, this scheme, all else being equal, would be a sweet, juicy plum for its promoters. But things are not all equal. I have learned its details, and I propose to smash it."

He spoke with a savage emphasis, which revealed his hatred and his determination. If hell has no fury like a woman scorned, a friend turned enemy is almost as venomous.

"How are you going to do it?" asked Richard, with growing anxiety.

"There chances to be a rival company in the field, my boy, backed by money—influence—pull. In fact, I organized it to make a deep water harbor at Longmat, on San Antonio bay. I rather think the legislative appropriation will go there."

"And is Longmat better adapted for a deep water harbor than Matagorda City?"

"Much better."

"Why?"

"Because I own all the land at Longmat, and for various reasons that—er—do credit to its business acumen the committee on railroads in the legislature agrees with me."

"Which means," suggested Richard, "that the legislature is doing business at the same old stand."

Mr. Renwyck laughed.

"That sounds very American for a foreigner, but suppose we put it a little more delicately. The legislature through this committee can be persuaded."

"And the other company does not know this?"

"Not a whisper of it."

"But won't it find out from the legislature?"

"It won't. I am certain of those Texas statesmen. They have been—fixed."

"But I thought"—began Richard, then stopped suddenly, remembering that he was supposed to be up in American railroad affairs.

"Well!"

"—that such matters required much time—red tape—and all that sort of thing, you know."

"Not a bit of it," answered the old gentleman, rubbing his hands in anticipatory pleasure. "Now, listen. I have devised this opposition scheme myself and know what I'm talking about. In just two weeks from now the Houston, Matagorda City and Gulf Railroad and Improvement Company's bill for a deep water harbor at Matagorda City will be introduced in the legislature with a great flourish of trumpets and referred to the railroad committee—my committee, that is. At the same time a small and unostentatious little bill substituting Longmat for Matagorda City will also be quietly slipped in by some of my agents. No one knows me in this connection at all, and of course you will respect my confidence."

"Certainly."

"Well, this bill will be referred and forgotten by everybody until the last minute, when the original bill will be amended, and the large appropriation will go to Longmat, too near the end of the session for any change. The stockholders of the opposite company are so certain of success, that their first mortgage bonds have been issued, quietly taken up among themselves and are rising in value every day. But wait. When the Longmat scheme is assured the bonds of the company won't be worth a cent. I shall buy their right of way to Houston for a song, and—well, the state of Texas will be greatly benefited, while the other fellows pay!"

"Buy Texas?" asked Richard innocently.

"Pay for the fiddler, my boy—that is, I," laughed Mr. Renwyck complacently. The old gentleman coolly flicked

"The old man's name is Bill Williams," the ash from his cigar, turned and looked smilingly at his young auditor in assured triumph.

Richard smoked in silence for a time, then presently said, with affected carelessness:

"Mr. Renwyck, what you say is no doubt based on sound judgment and bestness and—er—legislative experience; yet, on the other hand, it strikes me that you are taking rather a heavy risk for the sake of mere money."

"Ah," cried the old financier, with a snap of his heavy jaw, "now you've struck it! And I don't mind telling you the real reason. It isn't the money. Hang the money! I'm doing this to get even with one man—one man who represents the Houston, Matagorda City and Gulf Railroad and Improvement Company, just as I represent the Longmat Development and Construction Company. He isn't a friend of mine—at least no longer—and, by George, I've got him! And, what's more, I'm going to squeeze him till his body is as dry as the state of Texas! I think you told me that you knew his son. The old man's name is Bill Williams."

Richard's brain was in a whirl. The Houston, Matagorda City and Gulf Railroad and Improvement Company was his father's pet, the darling of his heart. He had worked over it, slaved over it and owned the controlling interest, in which he had invested an enormous sum. If what Mr. Renwyck said was true the coming crash would overwhelm his father completely. Not only had that gentleman invested his own money in the company, but he had induced his friends to join with him, and well Richard knew that his father would feel responsible for their loss. Again, the young man was not the kind of man who could stand meekly by—and see his dear old dad bested by an enemy. With a mental gasp he realized that he stood in possession of information by which he could turn the tables on Jacob Renwyck and the legislature across with me."

BROTHER TOLD BROTHER

One Suffered for Fifteen Years, the Other for Thirteen.

The convincing powers of a testimonial were never more clearly shown than in the case of Mr. Hugh Brown, a brother, Lemuel Brown, of Avondale, N.B., read in the paper about Hon. John Costigan being cured by "Fruit-a-lives." Knowing the Senator would only endorse a medicine which had cured him, Mr. Lemuel Brown tried "Fruit-a-lives." They cured him of Chronic Indigestion and Constipation, so he urged his brother to try them.

Hartland, N.E., Oct. 28th, 1907. "Three doctors told me that I had Liver Disease and serious Stomach Trouble. My stomach was very weak. I took their medicines for thirteen years and grew worse. My brother (who was cured of terrible indigestion by 'Fruit-a-lives' after suffering for 15 years), recommended me to try these wonderful tablets. I bought half a dozen boxes and have just finished the sixth. I eat all kinds of hearty foods without distress and am greatly improved in every way. 'Fruit-a-lives' also cured the Chronic Constipation which was so distressing in my case." (Signed) HUGH BROWN. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50; a trial box, 25c. MEXICAN ISLAND DISAPPEARS

Mexico City, August 25.—A despatch from Acapulco says that the government warship General Guerrero has left there to investigate the fate of Clipperton Island, which is reported to have partly disappeared as a result of the recent earthquake shocks. The island is claimed by both France and Mexico, and the question of possession is in process of arbitration between the two governments. The island was inhabited by the governor, Ramon Arnaud, and family, a company of soldiers, with the officers and employees of a guano shipping company. The island is surrounded with reefs, and it can only be approached in fair weather. There are no means of communication other than the occasional visit of the ships which convey the guano produced on the island. The island is, in fact, the peak of an extinct volcano, and in the centre of the island is a deep basin.

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 17.—Chas. Gibbon, of Lynden village, was fined $5 at Dundas, on Monday for working on his land on Sunday. FREIGHT WRECKED NEAR NEW GLASGOW

Special to the Morning Chronicle. New Glasgow, Aug. 24.—Eight miles east of New Glasgow a special freight train running from Stellarton to Mulgrave went into the ditch, causing heavy damage to the cars and track. The train was in charge of conductor McKay and Driver J. Shaw on the engine. The tender and fourteen cars ran off and several went down a steep bank to the water's edge. Some of the cars containing the brick and flooring were badly broken up. The auxiliary train was hurried to the scene from Stellarton and by noon had a new track laid, and No. 19 express passed safely by. The passengers and mails on the morning train were transferred at the wreck. No one was hurt in the mishap, and no cause had yet been ascertained to account for the accident.

New Lettlers Here to Seek Homes

"In all 54 settlers for Nova Scotia arrived on the steamer Mongolian," said A. S. Barnstead, Secretary of Industries and Immigration, to a reporter of The Morning Chronicle. When seen, Mr. Barnstead was very busy at his office at Deep Water, making arrangements for the new Nova Scotians.

"Most of these people," said Mr. Barnstead, "are here with the intention of taking up farming, so have come to look over the country with the idea of bringing out their families later, some to engage in other occupations, and there are also thirteen girls who will work as domestics or some similar occupation."

Those who intend to take up farming are well supplied with capital and most of them intend to hire out for a time in order to become acquainted with the methods and the country, before purchasing a farm of their own. One man, with his son, is here for a few weeks to look around and to see the country first hand. The son will likely take up engineering next year and will likely be a student at the Technical College. An other son will follow farming and will take a course at the Agriculture College. Another man has with him his wife and three children, two boys and a girl. The father will purchase a farm and the boys, who both have had experience, will hire out to gain experience in Nova Scotia farming.

There are also four young men, all of whom have had experience on farms in the Old Country, have come here with the intention of locating. They will hire out for a time before buying farms of their own. Another young man has had six years experience in South Africa, he is well supplied with cash, but will work on a farm for a time before purchasing one of his own.

A Scotchman, who has retired from active work, with his wife and two children, a son and a daughter, are here with the intention of locating and making for himself a new home in Nova Scotia. There is also a young man in the party, though inexperienced in farming is willing to adapt himself to the work. He is a fine, sturdy chap, one of the kind who is bound to get along. A son of a retired Scotch business man came on the steamer with the intention of locating here and his parents will join him later.

Two married women, one of them with three children, came to join their husbands, who are now settled on farms in the Valley, having come here a couple of years ago and made good.

There is more catarrh in this part of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the past few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case if it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

DESTROYING MAPLES

Some of the maple trees on Waverly street are dying and several of the property owners called one of the Central Experimental farm experts to ascertain the cause. It was found that the tree was full of the larvae of the flat-headed borer. These worms eat into the wood of the trees and by destroying the vessels which carry the sap from the roots upward they kill the tree. The only remedy known is to dig out the borers with a knife, which is impossible where they are so numerous.—Ottawa Citizen.

FOUR LOSE LIVES; AUTO PLUNGES THROUGH TRESTLE

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 20.—Three young women and one man, driver of an automobile, met death, and two young women narrowly escaped hernia last night when a touring car crashed through the railing of the long trestle over the tide flats. The party were from Vancouver, except the driver of the car, who was a Seattle man. The tide was at flood and the victims were hurled into several feet of water.

Miss Mary Paul, a sister of one of the dead, and Miss Kate Hiscock were rescued by a boatman, who found them clinging to the wrecked auto. All the young women are said to belong to prominent families in Vancouver.

NEAR DEATH'S DOOR

Mi-o-na cures dyspepsia. If any of the readers of Monitor-Sentinel are suffering from stomach trouble of any kind S. N. Wearo will sell you a box of Mi-o-na for 50 cents with an absolute guarantee of relief or money back.

Neil Murray, of Huron Road, Godrich, Ont., says: "I suffered with indigestion for over four years and had been eleven over as incurable by many doctors. I had become a nervous wreck through loss of sleep, and whatever I eat did not remain on my stomach for over two hours. I would suffer from vomiting spells that would almost kill me, pretrials as large as beads would break out all over my body and leave me in so weakened a condition that I would be unable to stand, not a rest in over six months and was so weakened and run down that my heart was greatly weakened and would flutter and a sharp pain would come through me and cut off my breath. I was reduced in weight from 150 to less than 110 pounds. Doctors would give different causes for my trouble, yet none of them gave me the slightest relief. I commenced treatment with Mi-o-na and when one-half of the first box was used I could eat my meals without suffering the dreadful vomiting spells I used about ten boxes in all, and I am entirely cured. My stomach is as strong as ever and there is not the slightest trouble with digestion. I have gained about forty pounds in weight, and strong and healthy and like a new man. I will always speak highly of Mi-o-na, as it cured and I believe kept me from sure death when all else had failed."

SHORT HAIR FOR GIRLS

London, Aug. 19.—A considerable stir has been made among parents by a circular issued to them by Dr. Outler, medical officer to Willesden Education Committee, in which he urges them to send their girls back to school after the summer vacation with their hair cut short. The medical officer states: "There is absolutely no need for girls to wear their hair long, and if the cleanly parents will set the example of having their girls' hair cut short while at school much more hygienic conditions will be established in our public schools. On the eve of the holidays I venture to make this appeal to parents to send all children to school with short hair."

DESIDENT LICENSE INSPECTOR - SUICIDE

Despondent over continued and bitter criticism of his work as license inspector by a local paper, the temperance people and the liquor dealers, L. C. Musgrave, of North Sydney, on the 12th attempted to end his life by shooting himself in the head. The act was committed in his home after his family had retired, but the report of the shot brought Mrs. Musgrave almost instantly to the side of her husband, whom she found standing in the kitchen with the smoking revolver in his hand. The bullet entered his forehead a little above the eye, and two doctors who were summoned, failed to extract it.

Mr. Musgrave is still alive, but it is thought he cannot recover. We have license inspectors in Truro of a very different stamp. Oftentimes their actions are misconstrued and misinterpreted, but they do not lose heart and get discouraged. They only brace up the more for the campaign that has been assigned them a gainst the illicit sale of demoralizing drink, gird on their armor and rush to the field; and, in proportion to the extent of their raids on whiskey dens do they increase in respect and support of the great majority of the best citizens of our town.—Truro News.

IN SUNLESS CAVES.

A Weir Forest in the Ghat Described by Writer.

Describing a scene in the Ghat, a writer in The Times of India says: Five miles south of Vaishakhare is the village of Sonavle. From the main street of Sonavle, if the eye be turned to the south, right upon the face of the precipice, and about one-third of the way up, will be seen a row of caves, with square cut mouths looking for all the world like the stopping holes in some titanic instrument. Thither let us wend. At first the path leads through rice lands and pastures. But at last cultivation ends, and we are on the edge of some of the wildest forests that the mind can conceive. All along the foot of this seven-league precipice runs a belt of wood. From a little way off a strange sound is heard, like a wild continuous sigh. One can almost imagine that he is on the floor of the primeval sea, and that the sigh is the breathing of the breakers on the cliff. But as he enters the wood the cause becomes apparent.

In this mysterious wood there is no peace. On the sunlit plains which we have just quitted the air is cool and still. But in this wood, although shadowed from the sun by the precipice, a close, hot, stifling wind is always blowing, or, rather, whirling, up and down the deep carved hollows, and ragged ridges little whirlwinds suck the fallen leaves. They never weather the sheet of water running off the face of the cliff above forms a natural veil, shutting off the caves from the outer world. On each side are rows of cells, and the central cave is a temple, with a shrine, and carved pillars. The carving has been partially torn from the pillars, leaving the rough core. Who has done this thing? Not the Mussulmans. Oh! a tree, you suggest? No. You forget; trees do not grow in caves. Who then? Devout Hindus. Time and again has some cultivator come hither whose hair perhaps has been too long expected in vain. Hacking off a figure from the pillar, and toiling down the slope again, he returns to his hut. Covering the figure with red lead, he stands it in a corner. After some days the hair is boring, and the figure becomes the household god, the deity of these pillars. And it is in these pillars, and in the actions of the houses of "Sonavle" appear in the world when desired.

The cells on each side of the main cave once held hermits. They drank the water that gathered in these cisterns, and ate the grain that was brought to them by the temple visitors. When they had no grain they fasted, or smoked themselves into insensibility. All the lifelong day they sat and looked out, as we are looking, on to the stretches of rice fields far below, blotted from view here and there this February morning by smoke from the red fires; and listened, to the dolorous churning of the wind in the wood below. Thus they sat on, without bodily comforts, and without passions, meditating themselves into oneness with the all-pervading Brahma. The minister went, and the merchants went, and still they meditated on. But with the departure of the worldly ones the visitors to the cliff temple became less frequent. There was no grain to eat. One by one they rose and went to another place. They are gone, and the carving on the pillar is going. Only the all-pervading Brahma remains and the dolorous churning of the wind in the wood, and the dripping veil of monsoon water from the cliff.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1909

Press despatches announce the fact that British shipyards will furnish the first cruisers to establish the Canadian naval fleet. The establishment of shipyards in Canada would be an undertaking of great magnitude and it is believed unless some venturesome British shipbuilder launches forth capital and equipment for the Canadian enterprise it will be some years before Canada will own her own shipyards for building naval vessels. When eventually established, as doubtless they will be, Halifax and Vancouver will probably be the sites of the naval yards.

The policy of organizing the military forces of the Crown so as to allow each Dominion complete control over its own forces while these units may unite to form a grand imperial army is an arrangement which gives satisfaction.

There is nothing in this arrangement inimical to the universal hope that peace and concord among nations may long reign unimpaired. Like a vast police force the great British Army patrolling all seas will be the greatest factor in the preservation of the world's peace.

As a result of the recent disastrous fire at Glace Bay, when the property of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co. was burned, wireless communication between Canada and Europe will in all probability, be cut off for several months. The station which was destroyed was the only one possessed by the company in Canada with facilities for transmitting messages across the Atlantic. Their other stations are smaller and will not do the work of the Glace Bay one.

THE PATHS OF PEACE.
Eastern Chronicle:-Of all countries in the world Canada is in the best position to pursue the paths of peace. No doubt Providence willed it; therefore its people had better be advised and not quarrel with Providence. An army and navy for Canada! In the name of heaven, what for?

The Nova Scotia Press Association annual meeting will be held in Amherst on Thursday and Friday, Sept. 9 and 10. The New Brunswick Press Association annual meeting will be held at the same time in Sackville, with the object of meeting with Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island representatives for formation of a maritime provinces association.

The Canadian Associated Press learns that one of the results of the conference on imperial defence will be a provision for the sum of $2,500,000 for the further development of the defences of Canada. It is understood that the Canadian delegates have submitted to the imperial authorities a compromise scheme in this regard.

If the coal company at Springhill is serious in its statement that there is no great anxiety to continue to operate the mines under even the conditions which existed before the present strike, the outlook for the town is extremely dark, and the strike has occurred at a most inopportune time.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES DISTEMPER.

Where Will Canada Get Her Warships?

Ottawa, Aug. 24.- In connection with the reported scheme for a Canadian navy, the question is being asked as to where the ships will be built. An outlay of many millions will be necessary if the proposal is to be carried out on the line indicated, and shipbuilding concerns in the country are already making enquiries here concerning it.

As far as can be learned, no definite decision on that point has been reached and may not be until such time as the principle of any naval policy is ratified by parliament. It is thought, however, that the large cruisers will be built in the old country, but if at all possible, the others will be constructed in Canadian shipyards.

ALL HEROES IN THE DEFENCE OF EMPIRE

London, Aug. 24.- Premier Morris, of Newfoundland, prior to sailing this morning said that the Imperial Defence Conference had been a wonderful success. It would be regarded as the most effective step taken in our day to preserve peace in the world by maintaining England as mistress of the seas.

During the conference, he said, there was not one discordant note. Every British colony was anxious to share the burdens of responsibility of the Empire and contribute to the central fund for the maintenance of the whole family. They did not want their lives, trade and liberty any longer to be protected by the British tar and soldier without contributing to the maintenance of both, and sharing in the work of both.

To Whom It May Concern: I have been selling Empire Liniment for the past two or three years and have found the sale to be steady and the Liniment has given entire satisfaction.

MONCTON, N. B. DON'T SNUB CHILDREN.

Children love to be treated with courtesy and respect. They resent having their opinions and sentiments snubbed, and parents might learn a good deal from them and about them if they would encourage them to talk more freely of all they think and feel. We are hardened by the gathering years, and we have lost our keenest sense of what is the very truest and the very best. The contact of a child's mind with its pure vision is like a message straight from God.

WISE TOMMY

Tommy was a very sound sleeper, and wouldn't get out of bed earlier than ten o'clock, no matter what his mother said to him. So one morning, she tried coaxing and said to him "You have heard of the little boy who got up at six o'clock in the morning and when he went out he found a purse of gold?" "Oh yes," said Tommy, "but what about the little boy who got up before him and went out and lost it?"

Rev. H. R. Grant pays a high compliment to the work being done for temperance by the Roman Catholic church. He said that Archbishop Bruchesi, of Montreal, was doing more for the cause than any other one man in Canada. Recently in giving his benediction to 20,000 boys in Montreal he required of each a pledge to abstain from intoxicants. He paid a high tribute to Archbishop McCarthy of Halifax.

Body of Joseph Gregory Found

Dr. Armstrong was summoned to Phinney Cove Tuesday morning to hold an inquest over the body of a man discovered on the shore at Bay-side, supposed to have been floated up by the tide. The body was fully clothed excepting one shoe which lay beside the foot, but the head and hands were fleshless. By the clothing however the body was identified as that of Joseph Gregory, who fell from his boat while sailing out of Phinney Cove, on July 26th. The accident was witnessed by Robert Young and Minard White, who made all speed to reach him in a dory but failed to find the body. He was a man 76 years of age and hardly capable of manning a boat. The remains were interred at Phinney's Cove.

Yellow Journalism

(New York Times) If any considerable number of persons read the "Experiences of a Woman Reporter," a "yellow" article of the confession type, appearing in the current number of Collier's Weekly, it will be necessary only to remember that some of the things the writer says are applicable to about six out of the more than 30,000 newspapers in the United States.

She does not always make this plain, and those who might take her alley-view of a calling in which there is only about one of the disreputable kind in every 5,000, and having no direct means of knowing better, should be put on their guard.

"Here are eight questions," this woman reporter writes, "I wish to ask the girl candidates for journalistic honors." "Would you be willing to sacrifice a sister woman's reputation in order to gain a piece of news?"

"Could you follow a man about in a cab, striving to waylay him and compel an interview; and, as a final desperate move, deliberately block his automobile in order to force his attention?"

"Lastly, could you endure the personal humiliation of being bodily ejected from a private home—literally pushed out of the door by the head of the house?"

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND CHAMBERLAIN'S COLIC, CHOLERA AND DIARRHOEA REMEDY Mr. Frank C. Hanrahan, a prominent druggist, of Portsmouth, Va., says: "For the past six years I have sold and recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is a great remedy and one of the best patent medicines on the market."

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 25.—The Omaha World-Herald announced yesterday afternoon that E. H. Harriman has cancer of the stomach and has been given only a few months to live. The information is given the newspaper by an insider who stands so close to Harriman that there is no doubt of its authenticity.

Schooner Orinoco Lost

Lunenburg, Aug. 20.—Eleven men were added to the death roster of the Gloucester fleet, when the schooner Orinoco capsized on Wednesday morning, about twenty-five miles off Sambro. Thrown on her beam ends by the jib sheet jamming, the schooner filled and sank in three minutes.

The jib-sheet was off too far, and the sea brought the vessel up in the wind; then the sheet was hauled to windward and caught in the anchor stock, slipped off, and the vessel commenced going down, turning on her beam ends, when full of water.

The Orinoco went down very rapidly and in three minutes there was no part of her to be seen. The lashings were cut from the dories and they were turned up, and by this time they were floating. Five dories went down with the vessel, and the remaining three were afloat. All the survivors got into the top dory which was half full of water.

James P-bine, the only man asleep in the cabin, who was saved, tells a thrilling story of his experience. When he woke up the cabin was filled with water, and Wm. Muise was trying to get up the companion-way, but was forced back by the force of water.

GOOD FOR BILIOUSNESS

"I took two of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets last night, and I feel fifty per cent. better than I have for weeks, says J. J. Firestone of Allegan, Mich. "They are certainly a fine article for biliousness." For sale by W. A. WARREN'S, BRIDGETOWN, A. E. ATLEE'S, ANNAPOLIS ROYAL, and BEAR RIVER'S DRUG STORE.

MARCOVI PLANT BURNS.

Sydney, Aug. 21.—An alarm of fire was sounded this morning which proved to be a blaze at the Marconi wireless station. The Glace Bay fire department sent its equipment out to the scene. On arrival of the brigade the station buildings were in a mass of flames. Every effort was made to save something of the valuable plant, but the fire had made such headway that little could be done.

The flames started in the sparking room. Just how it is hard to state, but when discovered it was too late to do anything to stop the progress of the fire. The power house, and consequently the power necessary to send the wireless messages, was not injured. The dwelling houses are all safe and also the barns and other buildings. Where the building was standing is now a mass of red-hot cinders. The loss will be heavy as the buildings destroyed contained valuable machinery and other apparatus in connection with the wireless system. The loss will amount to thousands of dollars and it will be some time before the buildings can be replaced. The buildings were insured. Marconi is expected in Cape Breton some time soon.

Dined the King Cost $50.000

London, Aug. 14.—"Town Topics" has this to say concerning the entertainment of King Edward and Queen Alexandra by the American Ambassador to Great Britain and his wife, Ambassador and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, in entertaining the King and Queen of England at dinner, have undergone an experience which, like the Scotch lassie in the story they are not likely to repeat.

Having complied literally with all these regulations which render the host and hostess nonentities in their own house, and having engaged Madame Nordica to sing for a $2,500 cheque, the Ambassador and Mrs. Reid and the assembled company were startled by the non arrival at Dorchester House of the King and Queen, who are proverbially punctual. Had some accident occurred? Was there a mistake as to the date of the dinner? No, the telephone revealed that the tardy King was much interested in a game of bridge and would play out the rubber. The dinner was spoiled, but their majesties were pleased to express their gratification at the splendid entertainment. When the royal carriage had rolled away, and Mr. and Mrs. Reid had counted the cost—about $50,000—they must have wondered whether it was worth while if they do not intend to reside in England permanently and thus secure some social advantage from the expenditure.

THE HOME

SHORTENING OUR LIVES

A writer in Pearson's enumerates some of "the every-day things one does that shorten life." Immorality he cites as the foremost cause, more destructive to the race than "stille and war, since "its effects are felt long after he who caused and transmitted them has been forgotten."

This writer's list of things injurious to their health and the enjoyment of life which people do wantonly might be extended almost indefinitely. We suspect that the average city man does not sleep as long as nature requires. Men in sedentary occupations take less exercise than they need to keep the body to its role of cheerful servant.

RHEUMATISM

To cure rheumatism it is necessary to rid the system of the excess of uric acid, and to do this a proper diet is even more important than the use of drugs, though in very severe cases the latter are not to be despised in conjunction with the dieting that is absolutely essential.

The Massachusetts General Hospital of Boston, allows the following diet for rheumatic patients: Graham bread, white bread (limited), one-half slice daily; corn, rice, milk, eggs, flour, puddings, crackers, beans, peas, all kinds of vegetables; except potatoes, tomatoes and asparagus, rhubarb, fresh fish, butter, cheese, buttermilk, cream, alkaline waters and toast. Avoid red meats starch or potatoes, white bread and sugars.

The sensible use of water both internally and externally plays a large part in the prevention or cure of rheumatism. One or two "lasses, either hot or cold, taken before breakfast every morning is excellent to start the organs of digestion for the day, and at least one glass should be taken before meals. Often the plain water will be enough to move a slightly constipated person, but if not a mild medicated water may be taken instead. It is very essential to keep the bowels open in cases of rheumatism.

Uric acid in the system is a poison, and it must not be forgotten that poisonous waste matter is also eliminated through the skin. The pores of the skin must be kept freely open and not allowed to become clogged if we hope to obtain the best results with rheumatic cases. A hot bath at bed time is often very helpful.—Delmeator.

POLENTA

A woman Tells of Her Introduction to the Italian Dish

Did you ever eat polenta? Hear what one woman has to tell you before you say no.

"Just let me tell you about my introduction to this Italian dish. Last summer, after I had closed our camp in the mountains, I was invited to spend the night with an acquaintance who had the next camp."

"She is a charming woman, one who has lived abroad more than in this country. She is devoted to Italy and things Italian, and her cook from southern Italy has been with her several years."

"As I was about to retire my hostess said to me, 'Pardon me, but I didn't think to ask you what you preferred to have for breakfast.' Really, before I had opportunity to frame a reply, she continued, 'We always have polenta; Antonina makes delicious polenta; so I always have it.' I did not know polenta. I was quite sure, but it certainly sounded most attractive, and so I replied, 'I am sure I should like it, especially if Antonina makes it,' and I went to my room with my appetite already whetted for polenta made by Antonina."

FASHION JOTTINGS.

Parasols Are Now Made of Raffia. Apricot a Favorite Spring Color. The newest parasol is made of raffia in natural color, with raffia fringe. The handle is long, in the director's style.

Hints of coral clip as well as the once more popular crimoline are seen with wide spreading brims curled up on one side. Apricot is a color that is being worn extensively this spring not only in materials, but in accessories. There are lovely silk stockings in this shade beautifully embroidered with a design in bowknots in a darker tone. It is daring enough for some women who are not at all good to look at to attempt bangs, but the climax is reached when a bunch of loose curls protrude from the back of the hat. These are tacked loosely to the hair at the back of the head in an effort to be natural, but the effect is that of a bunch of curls in the wrong place.

For street or dress wear the new shoes of cloth in dark tones to match the gown worn with them are very smart. The costume seen in the illustration is most attractive in that it provides for a dress that can be worn separately or in combination with the coat to form a suit. The dress is sempleire, and the waist is joined to the seven gored skirt. The coat is simple and easy to make. JUDIC CHOLLET.

A pattern of this costume may be had in six sizes—from 32 to 42 inches bust measure. Send 10 cents to this office, giving number 4630, and it will be promptly forwarded to you by mail.

THE MIRROR OF STYLE.

The Costume Idea For Summer Gowns. Beware of Eccentric Hats.

If a woman wants to be in the style next summer she will make every effort to have her clothes carry out the costume idea—that is, having decided upon a period for her frock, she must have hat, shoes and all accessories to correspond.

For the girl who can put on any old hat and look bewitching the new hats have no terror, but for her sister who has to go easy—well, the least said is the better about her prospects. Among the attractive ponce weaves coming directly from the orient are the robe patterns in the natural color, which, despite the dresser's decree, is always rich and elegant. Black and white shepherd plaid suits are on hand again this season, and they are more attractive than ever. Even these suits have not escaped the jet set, for some of the smartest models are in medium sized checks, with pipings of black satin and decorated with large flat buttons.

The stunning little bolero is a dainty wrap for spring and summer. It can be made either from the dress material or from material in a matching color. As seen in the illustration, the bolero is of dark blue broadcloth heartily braided in black soutache and is to be worn over a blue foulard silk having a white polka dot design. JUDIC CHOLLET.

A pattern of this coat may be had in six sizes—from 32 to 42 inches bust measure. Send 10 cents to this office, giving number 4631, and it will be promptly forwarded to you by mail.

MISUNDERSTOOD THE MINISTER

The Fulton Gazette recounts the following conversation between a minister of that place, and a man whose wife had been buried that day. "My brother," said the preacher, "I know that this is a great grief that has overtaken you, and, though you are compelled to mourn the loss of this one who has been your companion and partner in life, I will console you with the assurance that there is another who sympathizes with you and seeks to embrace you in the arms of unfeeling love."

To this the bereaved husband replied by asking, as he gazed into the minister's face, "What's her name?"—Kansas City Star.

HIS LAST CARD

A certain venerable archdeacon engaged a new footman, a well recommended youth who had served as stable boy. The first duty he was called upon to perform was to accompany the archdeacon on a round of formal calls. "Bring the cards, Thomas, and leave one at each house," ordered his master. After two hours of visiting from house to house the archdeacon's list was exhausted. "This is the last house, Thomas," he said, "leave two cards here."

"Begging your pardon, sir," was the reply, "I can't. I've only the ace of spades left."

A DRINK OF COLD WATER NEARLY CAUSED HIS DEATH But Father Morrissy's Treatment Saved Francis Cassidy.

Here is his story:—Burden, York Co., N.B., Dec. 3, 1908. "At the age of 18, while laying on a very hot day, I got thirsty and took a drink from a spring. I was taken suddenly ill, and consulted a skilful doctor, who treated me for indigestion for four months. But I grew worse, got so weak I could not walk, had no appetite, could not digest anything, and lost 30 pounds. I was almost dead, but as a last hope went to Father Morrissy. He gave me two months' treatment, and from the first day I began to recover. Now I am 21 years old and a very strong, healthy man. Only for the Rev. Father Morrissy I would have been dead now."

Thousands of people have used Father Morrissy's "No. 11" Tablets for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Sick or Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Fullness or Weight in the Stomach, Belching of Wind and other Stomach Troubles, with most satisfactory results.

One "No. 11" Tablet will digest 1 1/2 pounds of food. 50c. at your dealer's, or from Father Morrissy Medicine Co., Ltd., Chatham, N.B. 47
