ERECTING TABLETS

Nova Scotia Historical Society Preserves Records of the Past.

(From a Toronto paper.)

"A wise nation," said Joseph Howe, "preserves its records, gathers up its monuments, decorates the tombs of its illustrious dead, repairs its great structures, and fosters national pride and love of country by perpetual references to the sacrifices and glories of the past."

As far as its means permit, the Nova Scotia Historical Society is doing for its province the work Howe so highly valued—doing it not only for the people of Nova Scotia, but for the people of Canada, because much that their collections contain rise to the level of national interest. The scope of this volume of collections and the value of the work carried on by the society can be indicated by a few gleanings from the volume, which will also be interesting reminders of important chapters in the history of the province that was the first to fly the British flag, and that led the way in the matter of representative institutions.

The past year has been especially fruitful in regard to the placing of historical tablets. The society marked historic sites in six counties of the province.

One tablet was to mark the birthplace of Joseph Howe and was erected on the gatepost of "Emscote," on the Northwest Arm, Halifax Harbor, near the residence of the Hon. B. F. Pearson.

On this spot Howe first saw the light of day, and from this home he used to walk into the town to attend school. The inscription on the tablet speaks of Howe "as Nova Scotia's leader in obtaining responsible government"—the work that ensures the name of Howe a permanent place in the history of his province. That humble home was Mowe's birthplace. It was in Government House, across the Arm in the city, that the life of the Tribune of the people came to an end almost seventy years later.

Another notable tablet is that placed at 173 Grafton street, Halifax, to commemorate the establishment of the first printing press in Canada and the place of publication of the first newspaper in the Dominion.

The tablet bears this inscription—"The site of the first printing press in Canada, established by Bartholomew Green, Jr., 1751; and of John Buebell's press, where the Halifax Gazette, the first newspaper in Canada, was published, 1752."

The site of the first Court House in Halifax, erected about the year 1754, has also been marked. The building that once stood on this site was not only the first Court House but it was also the meeting place of the first Legislature which convened in this building on Oct. 7, 1758—the year in which Louisbourg was taken, and a little less than a year before the fall of Quebec.

The work of the Nova Scotia Historical Society has not been confined to the provincial capital. The towns and villages have not been forgotten, for here and there remembrances have been erected to the memories of men who had a hand in the making of Nova Scotia, or who went from Nova Scotia to assist in the making of other parts of Canada. For instance, in Windsor there is a tablet marking the residence of Judge Halliburton, "the creator of 'Sam Slick,' historian, jurist, legislator."

In Annapolis Royal, the spot where Champlain founded a settlement four years before he was at Quebec, there is a tablet announcing that it marks the birthplace of a soldier who left his mark upon the history of his time. That man was Sir Fenwick Williams, the hero of Kars in the Crimean War.

The American Simplified Spelling Board announces that it has changed the spelling of some eight thousand words.

POINTS OF INTEREST IN OTTAWA

As Seen and Described by a Former Annapolis County School Master

Mr. Editor:—

It occurred to me today that a blow over, men forgot their passions and interesting paper may be read with some interest by your numerous readers. I can assure you the letters which are appearing from time to time from your correspondents both in New York and Europe are read with great pleasure by me. None can fully realize what these letters mean really, until separated from the dear home land. They not only refresh and edify the mind, but awaken a train of thought full of reminiscence, and shall always hail with pleasure those highly edifying letters which appear in your columns.

And now for something to write about myself. Last Sunday I took a stroll around Parliament Hill, and I halted before the new monument that has recently been erected to the memory of the Hon. George Brown, of historic fame, particularly in this fair province of Ontario, and as I gazed upon that bronze statue of that once mighty man, and thought of the mighty political battles he had passed through over a half century ago, I thought it just one fitting that the country was awakening to place its statues to the memory of our departed great men. Not far from his stands one to the Hon. Alexander MacKenzie, and those who can remember them in their days of greatness, say the pose the artist has brought out in both cases was very much like theirs when addressing great audiences. I feel that both of those great patriots had not lived in vain, that they sowed the seed of true manhood and statesmanship, that many young men stimulated by their career have tried to emulate, and can say with Longfellow

"Lives of great men all remind us. We could make our lives sublime, And departing, leave behind us Footprints in the sands of time."

Near these again are the monuments of those old patriots who figured so conspicuously in the early days of the development of this young giant Dominion of ours, namely, Cartier and Sir John Macdonald. How one's mind is carried back as he views the faces of those veteran war horses of political fame, Surely Canada produced giants in those days, and true, honest men they were, and even truly in politics for the good of the country, and not for any selfish motives. The last addition that has been made to the monumental list is one to Baldwin and Lafontaine, statesmen who, I presume, the general public are not quite so familiar, and yet the present administration has seen fit to honor them with a splendid monument. The two old warriors stand side by side upon the same pedestal. Probably it would not be out of place to review briefly the career of those two men, for surely their days were cast upon troublesome times, times outlasting Confederation, when Canada consisted of what was Upper and Lower Canada, "now Ontario and Quebec. These two old veterans came into power, I think, A.D. 1849, succeeding the Traper Ministry. During the regime of the Draper Ministry they passed a bill to reimburse all those who had met losses during the rebellion of A. D. 1837 in Upper Canada. A storm of opposition was set up by the people of the lower province, claiming they, too, should be reimbursed, and the cry was the downfall of the Draper Ministry. When Baldwin and Lafontaine assumed office they brought in a measure to vote $100,000 to reward those who had suffered losses in Lower Canada. A storm, which, in a way, reminds me of the storm which is raging in Ulster at the present time, began. Men's passions got the better of them; and they did not stop to reason. The parliament at that time was sitting in Montreal, a mob was formed; they paraded the streets of the city and then approached the parliament buildings, and after driving out the members, they set fire to the buildings, and they were burned up. They saw the Governor of the day, Lord Elgin, driving in the streets, and their passions were turned upon him. He was pelted with rotten eggs, and his coach was overturned because he had signed the bill to reimburse the people for their great losses. He resigned, but the sovereignty of Great Britain, the good Queen Victoria, would not accept his resignation, that he had only done that which was right. The storm blew over, men forgot their passions and the Baldwin and Lafontaine government continued in office. The seat of government for the time was held alternately in Toronto and Quebec. Had it not been for this much regretted event I suppose Montreal would have continued to be the capital of our Dominion. So in A.D. 1868 the people of Upper and Lower Canada requested Queen Victoria to select a permanent place for the seat of Government, and such to be the appointment of the larger cities. She chose the then small town of Ottawa. But time has shown that she chose more wisely and well, for no more beautiful sight could have been chosen in our whole broad domain than the present site where our parliament buildings now stand, and it has been the means of building up a beautiful and modern city.

On the 23rd inst St. George's Day was truly and loyally celebrated by the societies of St. George in our city, and the red cross was conspicuous upon the coat of every true Briton. And why should they not reverence their patron saint for he truly was one. It is said he killed the dragon, but of the three crosses upon our dear old Union Jack, the first one to appear was the cross of St. George, and, as everyone knows, wherever that flag is thrown to the breeze it commands respect, and progress and civilization follow in its train. How well that was illustrated a few days ago when in the embryo between Uncle Sam and Mexico, the American refugees who were fleeing from Mexico City to Vera Cruz. Upon the train was thrown the dear old Union Jack, and the passengers passed safely, although the train was stopped three times, but when their attention was called to the flag which protected the train they permitted it to pass on in peace.

Parliament is still digging away at Legislation and yet have some of their very heaviest work before them, so they cannot possibly get through before the first of June, if they do then. The redistribution bill, the bill to recoup the deferred Farmers' Bank and the loan to McKenzie and Mann Railway, will produce a long and probably bitter debate. We are now enjoying beautiful spring weather. The lawns have put on their beautiful green verdure, and the buds are beginning to uncurl on the trees. We all welcome it after our long, cold winter. But I am beginning to think I have already made this letter too great length, so I will close, trusting it may prove of sufficient interest for your publication.

CANADA MOURNS DEATH OF THE DUKE OF ARGYLL, EX-GOVERNOR-GENERAL

Better Known as the Marquis of Lorne, He Made Himself Beloved to Canadians by His Unfailing Tact and Ready Sympathy With the Aims of the Leaders in the Dominion During His Term.

Ottawa, Ont., May 4.—The following message of sympathy has been conveyed to the Princess Louise upon the death of the Duke of Argyll by His Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught:—

"Princess Louise, "Gowen, England: "In the name of the Government and people of Canada, I am desired to express to you their deepest and most heartfelt sympathy on the terrible loss you have sustained. Every one here remembers with affection and gratitude the time when Lorne was Governor-General. (Signed) "ARTHUR."

Cord will also be furnished free of charge to enable the housewife to have her telephone at her elbow, whether she is in her kitchen, laundry parlor or bedroom, while the father of the family will be able to answer calls in the cold gray morning without having to get out of his warm bed and risk stepping on a tack.

CORRESPONDENCE

(We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions of our correspondents)

The Apple of Discord

I have been asked by friends, not members of true cooperation, to make a comparison between the position of members of cooperative associations in the valley and those belonging to the three or four companies controlled by old time operators and speculators in this vicinity.

I am doing this because I believe I am doing right. No one belonging to the United Fruit Company has asked me to do so. I am getting nothing out of it, but the hard feelings of those who are doing wrong, and who are deliberately going around leading other men against a right principal for the sake of filling their pocketbooks, I would rather incur their displeasure than their favor.

In the first place these companies are not cooperative associations in the true sense of the word.

In the second place the farmers belonging to the privately controlled companies are not as well situated as they were before organization while they sell to the same speculators. The packing, though uniform, costs more than it did at home, and we have the additional burden of the warehouse, the expense and upkeep of which were formerly borne by the speculators.

In making a comparison of prices it seems almost to compare the net prices received by the grower, that is the money per barrel actually pocketed by the grower after all expenses are paid.

As our company has done as well if not better than the other three in prices, it will be unquestioned if I give my own net prices in comparison with those received by a member of one of the cooperative associations. Last year, 1912-13, for my own satisfaction I made the same comparison and while I will not take space to go into detail I found that my varieties, member for member, netted me 8c per barrel on an average less than those of the member referred to who belonged to a cooperative association.

Our warehouse expenses this year were 23c per barrel. The average of the cooperative associations was less than 20c.

Fallwater	2.90	2.54	2.00
Ben Davis	3.37	2.68	2.23
Nonpareil	3.95	3.40	2.53

It may be seen by the above that averaging the 1's, 2's and 3's the cooperative losses and gains were per barrel—

Gravenstein	gain .06	per bbl.
Blenheims	loss .46	" "
Kings	" .51	" "

Northern Spy	loss .07	" "
Red Russet	gain .75	" "
Fallwater	" .79	" "
Ben Davis	" 1.06	" "
Nonpareil	" .44	" "

In the above figures I have made a little better showing for our company than really exists since from the Gravenstein, Blenheim, Ribbons and King there should be deducted 25c per barrel for all No 2's in excess of forty per cent of 1's and 2's. In Nonpareil also 25c per barrel was deducted from excess No. 2's over thirty per cent.

In answer to the possible criticism that the subsidiary companies put up a poor class of No 3 which I have not taken into comparison, I would say that I am comparing our prices with cooperative prices, not with those of the individual companies. It would be unfair also to compare these poorer No 3's with ours, since our No. 3's contained the same quality as the cooperative No. 3's. The time will soon come, when these poor No 3's cannot be sold and every one will acknowledge that they should not be raised.

The Cooperative pack is better than ours. This means that in a year of large crops the former pack will sell on its merits, and our companies will go begging for a market.

I have heard of individuals, who this year have belonged to cooperative companies whose prices were lower than ours. It will be readily seen that such could happen if these men had a large proportion of Ribbons, Blenheims and Kings. I know of one man in our company who had a comparatively large number of Nonpareils, Ben Davis and Baldwins, who had lost over three hundred dollars because our company did not belong to the Cooperative. My own loss is in the neighborhood of one hundred dollars.

While I cannot compare prices of other fertilizers, I know we are losing fifty per cent on our Slag by being outside the Union. Members of Cooperative Associations are getting their grass seed, flour, feed, etc. cheaper than we are.

One more point. While our companies here are fighting cooperation and vainly trying to put it down, we're meanly taking advantage of the benefits caused by the competition raised by the large buying and selling of the Union. I am safe in saying that we would be paying from ten to twenty per cent more for everything handled by the cooperative if it had never been organized.

On the other hand the same competition is compelling the speculators to give us better prices for our apples than they otherwise would.

The most intelligent men in the valley are glad they are in the Union. All the new companies being formed are joining the Union.

The cry against big salaries is ridiculous when we place the prices of necessary salary expenditure of five or ten thousand dollars against the fifty or seventy-five thousand dollars that was yearly kept out of the farmers' pockets by the operators.

The principle is good and spreading. If, as has been objected, these in office are corrupt, they help them out. Personally speaking, I do not know of a man in Nova Scotia who could take Sam Chute's place from a point of view of honesty and square dealing.

I have tried to place the facts fairly. I consider it a shame that the farmers of this vicinity should keep up a losing fight financially and otherwise, at the will of interested parties instead of helping one of the greatest movements for the benefit of the farmers ever instituted.

R. J. MESSENGER.

An Opinion on Good Roads and Taxes

There has recently been so much said about good roads, and we note there has also been something done along the line of progress. This is the amendment which we understand has been put through the House this year thereby placing the exemption of sixty years tax payers at $500, instead of $1,000 as formerly. This we consider progressive, but why the exemption at all? It is the sixty-year men in this country who own the properties, the large farms, etc., and we think it quite unfair to put all the statute labor on the young men, and beside the paltry dollar will not go far. It is our opinion, and we believe we are voicing the opinion of the average rate-payer, that every foot of land situated on the highway should be taxed, irrespective of age, widows or what not. This is only fair as the price, desirability and attractiveness of the home depend largely on the condition of the highway.

There should be no exemption in regard to road tax or the levy of same. This will certainly be seen in the near future, as there are many districts where the assessments do not exceed $800, and as the young men are usually away the greater part of the year. Direct taxation must be the result. This playing with highway labor should have been done away with ere this. "Good Roads" is being sounded from the house tops, but so long as the greater part of our citizens are exempt from taxation, just so long will the condition of the highway remain as they are.

We would like to hear from other correspondents re this matter. And we will remain,

The "Alsatian," Handsome New Allan Liner

The march of events which go to make Canada a great nation has been so rapid in recent years that it is difficult to realize the importance attaching to the country, which, only a short time since, occupied so insignificant a place in the world's economy. Though the suddenness of its uprising is phenomenal in the history of nations, the solidity of the foundations of its rapid progress is undoubted. No mere stroke of a rich lode of the precious metal, or other exhaustible source of attraction, is responsible for the unprecedented rush to Canada, though gold, in ever increasing quantities, is being won in parts of the vast Dominion, and other valuable and useful minerals have been, and are being, located by the Government Geological Survey Department and by private enterprise.

THE CAUSE OF THE ATTRACTION

The real and lasting cause of attraction is the land, which has productive capacity admittedly superior to anything on earth, for soil and climate together produce food and grain which occupy the premier positions in competition with those grown in any other part of the world. The richness of the soil and the incomprehensible extent of productive area constitute the explanation why so many people are travelling from Great Britain and all parts of Europe to the New World, and why, practically within a decade, a million of astute Americans have crossed the border into the land that claims allegiance to the British Throne. It is confidently anticipated that something like 200,000 people will cross the border from the United States and make their homes in Canada within the next few months, while the stream from all other quarters is likely to increase continually. To meet the rapid development of the trade and to anticipate the future, the Allan Line directorate placed the order for the steamships "Alsatian" and "Calgarian" with two renowned shipyards on the Clyde, and thus added to their already splendid fleet vessels which, from every point of view, surpass anything engaged in the Canadian service, and that will, in point of luxury, constitute the last word in floating palaces.

ENORMOUS STRIDES MADE BY ALLAN LINE.

It is difficult to comprehend the enormous stride represented between the "Canadian," the first steamship built for the Canadian trade by the Allan in 1853, and the "Alsatian" and "Calgarian." The progress has been more or less gradual, but it is worthy of note that several striking landmarks stand out, marking epochs in naval architecture and marine engineering achievements, for which the Allan is responsible.

The history of the Line ever since the sailing of the brigantine "Jean," of 169 tons burthen, from Greenock for Quebec, in June, 1819, under the command of the shipowner-mariner, Captain Alexander Allan, down to the present time is one of enlightened advancement and enterprise.—Toronto Globe.

Sicilian Earthquake

Catania, Sicily, May 9.—A great earthquake last night brought death and destruction to many villages near Mount Etna. The number of dead up to this evening is officially placed at 183 with about 350 injured but as yet a large portion of the devastated territory has not been inspected.

The affected zone extends from Haflarano, the highest village on Mt Etna, to the sea between Acireale on the south and Giarre on the North. It includes Lingera, the centre of the disturbance, Pizzano and Santa Venerita.

In Lingera alone 110 persons were killed and 300 injured. In the village Bonagardo, thirteen dead and twenty-seven injured have been taken from the ruins.

At Cosentini sixteen were killed and many injured. The villages and many smaller places were virtually levelled.

Potato Diseases

There has been issued by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa a remarkably well executed folder, Farmers Circular No. 4, entitled "Potato Diseases transmitted by the use of unsound tubers," showing in natural colors, representations of specimens of potato canker, powdery scab, hollow potato, internal brown streak, little potato disease, dry rot, wet rot, common potato scab, and stem end rot. Special reference is made to potato canker and powdery scab, the latter of which occurs already in Canada and should be carefully avoided. The folder points out that, under the destructive Insect and Pest Act of Canada, any person using for seed potatoes infected by potato canker or powdery scab is liable to prosecution. Potato growers who suspect the presence of either of the latter diseases are requested to send specimens to the Dominion Botanist, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. This folder, prepared by Mr. H. T. Gussow, Dominion Botanist, will be sent free to those who apply for it to the Publication Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa.

SUMMARY OF RESULTS OF EXPERIMENTS WITH FORAGE PLANTS.

As has been the practice ever since the work with forage plants was undertaken by the Dominion Experimental Farms, the principal varieties of the different kinds of forage plants have been grown during the past year with the object of determining their relative value. During the season of 1913 the tests conducted in duplicate by the Division of Forage Plants at the Central Experimental Farms and Stations throughout Canada consisted of eleven different varieties of Indian corn, nineteen varieties of mangels, six varieties of carrots and three varieties of sugar beets. The work with leguminous forage plants and grasses including alfalfa and clover, consisted of breeding for increased hardiness, breeding for high yielding strains of a superior quality, and experiments with timothy, orchard grass, western rye grass and some wild grasses. In order to place the more important results of the season's work before the public in a summarized form, bulletin No. 76 has been prepared by M. O. Malte, Ph.D., Dominion Agrostologist and the Superintendent of the Branch Experimental Farms and Stations. This bulletin of thirty-four pages is available to all who make application at the Publication Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

The Womens' Institute will meet with Mrs S. T. Jefferson on the afternoon of the 19th inst. at three o'clock.
The road making or mending, has begun. Sometimes we wish it would wear out completely so we could have a new one.
Mr. Wakeman Daniels met with rather a serious accident on Thursday last. While unloading some hay, he slipped and fell; cross the girl, starting a couple of ribs from the back. Dr. Morse is in attendance.
We regret to announce the death of Mr Isaac Longley. Though properly belonging to Paradise, the many friends in Lawrencetown will miss the kindly gentleman, who was bright and cheerful and youthful to the last, though more than ninety years were spent here in the vicinity.

IN A FIT OF INSANITY A SON MURDERS HIS MILLIONAIRE FATHER.

New York, May 5.—Hiram Duryea, eighty-one years, retired millionaire starch manufacturer and civil war veteran, was murdered today in the Bay Ridge Section of Brooklyn by his son Chester. Seven shots were fired into his father's body, causing instant death. The murder occurred on the porch of the rear of the Duryea home, where both father, mother and son were in the habit of sleeping. About one o'clock this morning Chester, who is forty-three years old, slipped from his cot into the house, where he kept a number of rifles and other guns for hunting. He selected an automatic pistol and a magazine rifle, both of which he loaded, and returned to the open air. Standing within a few feet of his sleeping father he fired the rifle and then emptied the revolver. He gave no reason for the killing and it is supposed he became insane. The servants told the police that he had acted strangely for some time.

SUBWAY CARRIES TWO BILLIONS WITHOUT A FATALITY.

The Interborough Rapid Transit Company, which operates the New York Subway, points with justifiable pride at the fact that the present subway has transported 2,198,000,000 persons in the last nine years—with out a single passenger fatality, and this in spite of the fact that the speed and frequency of this train service is unsurpassed in work of this character. The subway is undoubtedly the most efficiently operated railway system in the world, and there is no doubt that this wonderful record for safe travel is due to the mechanical side, mainly attributable to the efficiency of the automatic stop.—Scientific American.

"A Tale of Two Cities," wherein is explained how each might well set an example worthy of the emulation of the other and how both would thereby contribute their share toward a solid Maritime front.

(By Edgar E. Kelley, in "The Busy East")

The omission of the customary "veritas" from the title of this effort and the substitution thereof of a plain and noncommittal printer's dash would seem to suggest more forcefully than could mere words, the purpose herein attempted to be served. And, as further suggested in the subtitle, we will undertake to weave in word-fabric "A Tale of Two Cities," the citizens of which have for more years than we care to contemplate, nourished and fostered a narrow provincialism that smacks of childishness--detrimental, as it is, to the.

"Halifax versus St. John; St. John versus Halifax"--What school child is not familiar with that rivalry?--a rivalry that has for its origin--what? I will tell you. A rivalry arising out of pure, sheer sectional jealousy. A rivalry in which in a sense both ends are often played against the middle, to the lasting detriment of the entire Canadian East. Is not the time come when we should put aside these childish ways, assuming an attitude toward one another that will better fit us to receive and profit by the wave of expansion due, the first ripples of which we have already noticed?

Dickens wrote "a tale of two cities," and sought to show in his opening observations that in London as in Paris, centres of gravity in two great countries, it was generally accepted that "things were settled forever." For, were there not "a King with a large law and a queen with a plain face upon the throne of England?" and did not a king with a large law and a queen with a fair face grace the throne of France?

What reason was there for doubting that things in general were settled forever? Large jaws in kings, and fair faces in queens, are not the characteristic mirrors that reflect a disposition to look beyond the scenes on the part of their possessors. But, still, behind those scenes in England was turmoil and violence; and behind those scenes in France was an unrest that precipitated the most awful scenes yet recorded on the pages of World History. The "lords of the preserves, of leaves and fishes" in England seemed unaware that crime was running rampant; and those who helped France to "roll smoothly down hill, making paper money and spending it," doubtless overlooked the necessity of supplying bread for hungry mouths, clothes to cover ragged bodies. The "Queen with a fair face" wondered why that mob "did not eat cake!"

Dickens has summed up for us in his tale of two cities a splendid lesson. He has impressed us with the advisability of giving some consideration to others. It is a lesson we should own well.

Since long before this hand clutched at swaddling-clothes, the columns of the press of the cities of Halifax and St. John have ever and anon seemed to vie the one with the other in the matter of (in language more forceful than elegant) "tooting their own horns." This has not been well. Both have seemed obsessed of the deep-seated conviction that the advantages and possibilities of either could not be fanned save in language and attitude as this is not to be regarded as wise and prudent. For, what benefits St. John in an industrial, a commercial, and a social way, is of necessity benefit Halifax, and vice versa. While that which inures to the betterment of both St. John and Halifax, certainly must inure to the betterment of the Maritime Provinces as a whole.

When Halifax advertises to the world that St. John as a port is no better than it might be, Halifax strikes a direct blow at the warp and woof of the Halifax business fabric; when St. John in a fit of for-

Neglected a Pin Stratch--Dead

A boy died last week in hospital from blood-poisoning, the result of a pin scratch!

Do you ever think such a fate might easily be yours? Suppose you knew that although you have had scratches, cuts, burns, sores, and have escaped blood-poisoning so far, the very next time you sustained such an injury blood-poison would set in and you might die! Wouldn't you be very careful to see that the next wound, although only slight, received prompt attention? Certainly.

Now get this further thought. You can't say that the very next cut or scratch or burn or insect bite you get and neglect will not turn to fatal blood-poisoning. Did it ever strike you that way? The same applies to your children.

The surest safeguard against blood-poisoning is Zam-Buk. No single poisoner's term has yet been discovered that Zam-Buk does not kill. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a cut, burn, scratch, tear or sore place, that injury is insured against blood-poisoning from the germs in the air. Not only so, but Zam-Buk stops the smarting and pain. Healing is set up right from the first application, so that at the same time Zam-Buk is antiseptic, soothing and healing. No other salve acts so splendidly. This is why in every country in the world Zam-Buk is now the most widely used ointment. For cuts and wounds, eczema, piles, ulcers, abscesses and all skin injuries and diseases Zam-Buk is without equal. Sylvester Horne and his Mess-age of Brotherhood

(By J. A. M., in the Toronto Globe)

It was in June, 1909, I first met Sylvester Horne, who comes as a guest of Toronto today. The First Imperial Press Conference met in London. Sixty delegates from overseas were guests of the newspaper fraternity in Britain. Princes and potentates, noblemen of all grades, Dukes, Earls, Knights, lords and ladies gay, Imperialists all--these were our daily and nightly friends and familiars. The jingo microbe might have found in me a responsive, corpulent had it not been my fate to be shoved to the platform in opposition to the "conscription" idea so cleverly suggested by Lord Roberts and hurrahed for by a small but aggressive group of London journalists. The idea got its final knockout from Mr. Balfour, who presided that day. For me two results followed: Max's of The National Review described me as a "damned Socialist," and Sylvester Horne invited me to speak at a Sunday afternoon at Whitfield's. Men's meeting in Tottenham Court Road. I recall both with pleasant satisfaction.

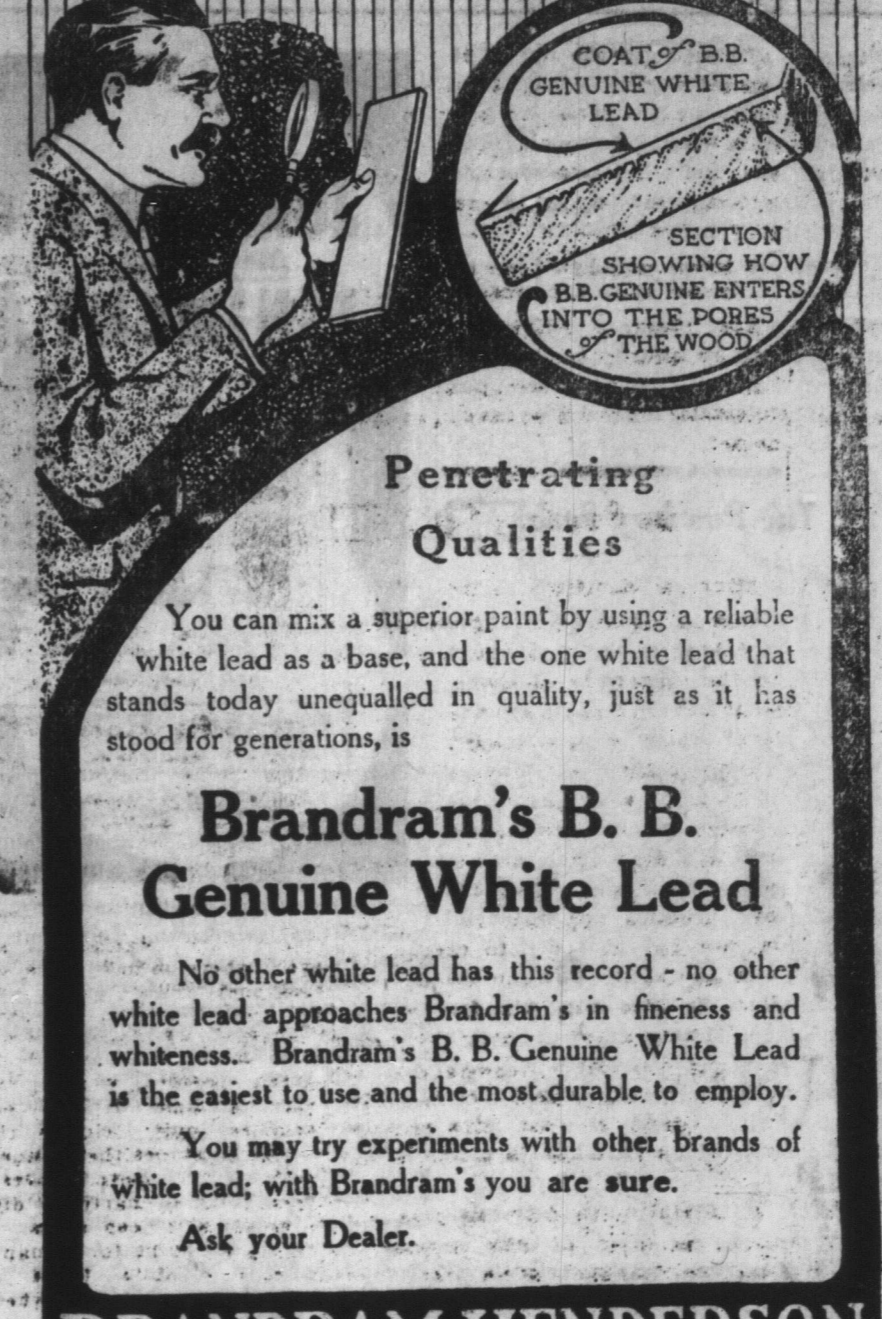

Since that first meeting the man who then to me was little more than a name, has become the living embodiment of the Christian idea in its relation to the age-long social problem, the virile incarnation of the new spirit of the Church Militant, the democratic citizen who believes "it is better to fight for the good than to rail at the ill," but whose fighting is never with the outgrown and impertinent weapons of brute force, but with the sword of spiritual impulses and the revolutionary power of a vital idea.

His clerical standing is among the English Congregationalists. His university degree is from Glasgow. As M.P. he is an unbigoted and positive Liberal, representing the life-long life of Ipswich, in the British House of Commons. In the pulpit he is a prophet with a message as well defined as that of his Puritan ancestry. On a hundred platforms he pleads for whatever boldest makes for social justice and gives the common man a man's fair chance. Into Parliament he went in those days of crisis when democracy itself again was challenged and the rights and liberties of Englishmen had to be fought for once more.

There is no contradiction or incongruity in Sylvester Horne speaking one day from the pulpit of Whitefield's, the next day from a platform at Hyde Park, and on the third day from his place in the House of Commons. The themes may vary, but there is one purpose. The form of words may be different, but there is one spirit. On all occasions he is an agitator, a Christian agitator. In a book just published by Hodder & Stoughton, "Pulpit, Platform and Parliament," he quotes with glowing endorsement a great sentence from Dr. Hatch: "The unaccomplished mission of Christianity is to reconstruct society on the basis of brotherhood." Because he believes in that mission, believes in it with no however or notwithstanding, he enters with eager step through those wide doors to democratic public opinion and public action. With three such springs to his bow, and with his quiver filled with sinewy and well-leathered shafts, he puts up no sham fight when he enters the lists.

To be sure, there are preachers who would be out of place on a political platform or in Parliament, but that depends on the preacher and his purposes. When I saw Bishop by the dozen in the House of Lords, and observed their seeming omnipotence, which availed so little for the common good, I rather rejoiced that in the House of Commons is one non-conformist who holds his place not by special privilege, but by the free votes of the common people.

When one listens to Sylvester Horne, feels the human touch of his life, and knows that his message has blood in it and has been bathed in the blood-sweat of his own personal experience, one could wish that such voices from the pulpit were oftener heard in politics, and such voices from Parliament in the pulpit. It is a man's voice to man. His place is not with John the Baptist in the wilderness, but with Jesus in the world of men.

Lincoln the Noble Unable to Let Feelings of Animosity Rule

Ignored Rebuff He Had Received in Early Days.

(Brooklyn Eagle.)

Chicago--Another story illustrating the forgiving spirit of Abraham Lincoln is told by John T. Richards, former President of the Chicago Bar Association, who had it from the lips of the late John Bigelow, to whom it was told by George Harding one of the principals.

The story has to do with the appointment of Edwin M. Stanton as Secretary of War after Lincoln was the latter was a young lawyer. The story, as told to Mr. Richards by Mr. Bigelow, follows:

"In 1856 Lincoln was retained by defendants in the case of McCormick versus Manny, then pending in the United States Circuit Court. Reverdy Johnson and E. M. Dickerson represented the complainant. Edwin M. Stanton and George Harding, of Philadelphia, were leading counsel for the defendant. By agreement of the parties the case was to be heard by Judge McLean at Cincinnati.

"Lincoln was standing in the doorway of the Barnett House in Cincinnati on the day before the hearing when Stanton entered.

"Mr. Harding said Lincoln was clad in a shapeless suit of ready-made clothing; he wore heavy boots; his trousers reached a point four inches above his instep. He wore no beard and his general appearance was ungainly and awkward.

"The two distinguished lawyers determined that it would not do to permit a man of Mr. Lincoln's type to appear as counsel, and decided they would tell him it would be unwise to have more than two counsel appear on behalf of the defence. He replied:

"Very well, gentlemen, I have prepared some notes which I had intended to use in my argument, I have them here," and drawing a manuscript from his pocket he handed it to Mr. Harding, saying, 'You are at perfect liberty to make such use of these suggestions as you may deem proper.'

"Mr. Harding, without looking at the manuscript, tossed it subsequently into a waste basket. Later Stanton and Harding arranged a dinner to which Judge McLean and the other counsel in the case excepting Mr. Lincoln were invited.

"Such an experience would have embittered the average man, but not so with Lincoln; for, when time came for the selection of a new Secretary of War, he brushed aside every personal consideration and named Edwin M. Stanton.

"After years of service Stanton became his devout worshipper, and after the assassin's bullet had struck the President down it was Stanton who, standing at the bedside of the great emancipator as his soul took its flight, uttered the words, 'Now he belongs to the ages.'

"It is said by some of Mr. Lincoln's associates at the bar that he was not well grounded in the principles of law, and that he was not a well read lawyer," said Mr. Richards. "It is doubtless true that he was not what is called a 'case lawyer.'

"His strong common sense enabled him to see what the law ought to be, and with all the force of his great mind he endeavored to win the court to his view of the law."

WEDNESDAY, MAY 13, 1914.

An historical contest, particularly in the hands of the United College, Winnipeg, the gold medal
was won by a Russian girl, Sara Romanovsky, who came to this country four years ago, and could not then speak a word of English.

In our issue of April 29th we referred to an article received for publication, entitled "A New Orchard Pest.—Tar and Feathers Recommended."

We declined the publication of the article for one reason, that it was anonymous. Believing, however, that the charges preferred were of a good faith, we remarked upon their very serious nature, and expressed the opinion that the case demanded investigation which could not be made through the columns of a newspaper.

The writer has since given us his name, and again requested publication, but we are still of the opinion that the end desired cannot be gained by this method. The charges are such as can be successfully dealt with only in the courts. We think the aggrieved parties, upon consideration will see that such is the case.

Queen Eleanor of Bulgaria, has expressed her purpose during the coming summer to visit the United States. She intends to come without any of the pomp and ceremony which is customary with royalty, but, in a very democratic manner. During the recent war, her interest in the wounded and sick soldiers won for her the name of the "Nursery Queen"
and while she desires to study American Institutions, such as hospitals and charitable and humane enterprises, her especial wish is to correct
the current impression of the cruelty
of the Bulgarians on the battle fields and to show their kindness and industry. She would certainly draw large audiences if the general public were permitted to attend her lectures, but she purposes to issue
tickets to persons whom she desires to reach. This is a very unusual course for a Queen, and will certainly awaken a wide interest in the people of the United States in general, but especially in the Bulgarian immigrants to this country, several thousands of whom at the call of their homeland returned to engage in her battles.

The Fire Commissioners of New York City, suspecting that insurance against fire was often effected for improper purposes, and without careful examination by the Insurance Companies, determined to make a trial on his own account. He secured a flat in a part of the city where fires were frequent, and on account of which was spoken of as the "fire zone," furnished the flat with two wooden chairs, one small gas-heating stove with tube, three sash curtains and one cupboard, all of which cost him $3.44. On these articles he obtained insurance for $60,500. Altogether he secured one hundred and thirty-seven policies on articles which cost him only $3.96. The conclusion was irresistible that carelessness
on the part of the Fire Insurance Companies in the matter of investigation has been a great encouragement of incendiarism. The Commissioner does not state the amount of the premiums he paid to obtain this insurance. But, he has plainly shown that the laws governing insurance in this country are not compacted with the safeguards which are found in the insurance laws of European lands. Rich harvests have been reaped by crooks and firebugs, and the lives of firemen unnecessarily sacrificed, when such loss might have been averted.

Another woman deserves notice.
"Mother Bird," as she was affectionately called from her interest in the men of the Bowery Mission, New York, and other philanthropic work
passed away on the morning of April 15th, at the advanced age of eighty-
two. She was the wife of a successful New York merchant, and after her husband's death devoted her time and means to the benefit of the unfortunate and the prodigal. Hundreds of men and women look upon her as the instrument by whom they have been saved from the doom of the drunkard or the suicide. Sometimes to awaken sympathy and help,
she gave her experience to the public, as in the story of her visit to a somewhat famous or infamous club, called the "Suicide Club." Alone and unattended she sometimes walked the streets of the great city in the small hours of the morning on her errands

of mercy. Sometimes she found it necessary to "peep" in the "kib" of a beggar in order to find access to persons whom she desired to reach. And she had the right idea respecting reformation, viz, that expressed in the couplet of Longfellow—
"Never yet abyss was found Deeper than the cross and sinner."

The story of "Mother Bird's" life will no doubt be told by some of her friends. It will serve as a stimulus to similar unselfish endeavor so much needed.

The Powdery Scab

Editor, the Maritime Farmer.—
The attention of all those growing potatoes for export trade is called to the immediate necessity of taking some action to prevent the loss of a large part of their export trade.
Owing to the discovery of Powdery Scab in different parts of Canada, a quarantine was established against the Dominion by the United States, whose example was speedily followed by Bermuda. Though our principal marketing has not up to the date of writing taken a similar action, the fear that this might be done will no doubt have a serious effect upon this spring's planting. Growers will be relieved to know therefore, that there is a possibility that this embargo
may be removed, as Bermuda is considered.

A careful inspection to determine the prevalence of this disease in Nova Scotia, has lately been conducted by the Dominion Division of Botany, which shows that it is not at all common in this province, and in particular Kings, Colchester and Hants Counties are also free from
it. The only cases reported being two from Burlington, one from Har-borough and one from Black Rock.
From the remainder of the Province
we have one record from Yarmouth,
a number from Cumberland a number from Guysborough and one from Antigonish. The fact that the chief potato producing centres of Nova Scotia are practically free from the disease has been brought to the attention of the provincial authorities in Bermuda. As a result of the representations made, it is probable that the embargo on our potatoes may be removed under certain conditions.
Though not giving a definite decision
they stated that arrangements could probably be made to allow the importation of potatoes from this Province, provided such potatoes were guaranteed to be free from the disease.

1. Free from Powdery Scab and other dangerous potato diseases.
2. Grown in areas known to be free from Powdery Scab or other dangerous potato diseases.
It is altogether likely, therefore,
that potatoes from disease-free districts can be shipped to Bermuda, and vice versa. While we are not in a position at present to say whether similar arrangements can be made with the United States authorities,
it is possible that this may eventually be done.

Under the provisions of the Destructive Insect, Pest and Plant Disease Act, 1911, regulations may be passed laying down certain quarantine lines within the Province, over which potatoes may not be shipped.
If, therefore, the majority of the farmers of any county or district practically free from the disease, declare that for their own protection
and to reserve their export trade,
they desire to have the importation from outside points prohibited, the provincial government would undertake to proclaim and establish such a quarantine. Those interested should take prompt action.

The administration of this act is in the hands of the undersigned, who will be glad to hear from anyone regarding this matter. In the meantime, the Department of Agriculture is willing as far as their means permit, to inspect the red potatoes of growers catering to the export trade, in order that they may be certain that only clean seed is planted. In the fall, inspection of export potatoes may be arranged for, though it may possibly be necessary that a small inspection fee be imposed to cover the cost of this inspection.
As the further distribution of this disease is likely to be attended by serious consequences, the grower
is earnestly urged to take the following precautions:—

1. Use only clean, smooth skinned potatoes for planting. Reject all infected potatoes, or those showing any signs of disease of any kind. Do not run the risk of infecting the land
even though you believe the disease
to be only the common scab.
2. Do not pick apparently clean seed out of a lot affected with Powdery Scab. It is impossible to detect this disease in its early stages
and no seed treatment is known.
3. Never grow potatoes on land that has previously grown an affected crop. The disease may remain in the soil for years and the only treatment is to plant cleaned up disease free seed.
4. Use only locally grown potatoes for seed except in localities where disease has been found. If it is desired to buy from outside points, purchase only such as has been inspected and certified free from powdery scab by some recognized government official.

Whether we are to free ourselves from the disease of whether we are to become more and more affected
and eventually lose our export trade,
rests with the growers themselves.
For the benefit of those who are not familiar with the appearance of Powdery Scab the following short account is given:—
Though in its early stages the disease bears a close resemblance to the ordinary potato scab common everywhere they can usually be distinguished by a fair degree of accuracy
by even a superficial examination.
The "scabs" of the common potato scab are flatter, more irregular in shape and tend to run together to a greater extent than with the Powdery Scab. In the case of the Powdery
Scab, the affected areas are more

Sudden Death of Mrs. Wanford
Dodge
The community was startled yesterday morning, the 12th inst., by the announcement of the sudden death of Mrs. Wanford Dodge, of this town. Relieved of her former domestic cares, it has been Mrs.
Dodge's habit of late to take daily walks accompanied generally by her daughter or friend. This was the case on Monday. She then seemed quite strong and well. On Tuesday morning her daughter found her lifeless in her bed. So short is sometimes the step between time and eternity.

By a somewhat unusual coincidence,
her husband dropped dead in his home on a Sabbath afternoon, about two years ago, after having attended in his apparent usual health, two religious services.

Mrs. Dodge was the daughter of the late Samuel and Harriet Bath of Granville. She was sixty-eight years of age, and the mother of a large family, some of whom preceded her to the world of spirits.
Her sons Alfred and Arthur are in California, James in Yorkton, Harry in Edmonton, Frank and Kenneth in Bridgetown. Her daughters are: Mrs.
Joseph Chetley, in Ontario, Mrs.
Florence in California, and Mrs.
Mary Blanchard at home.

The members of the family have the sincere sympathy of a very wide circle of friends.
The funeral services take place tomorrow (Thursday) afternoon, at two-thirty o'clock, at her late home.

Mr. Geo. H. Vroom, chief fruit inspector for Nova Scotia, anticipates 1914 will be a record breaking year for the apple crop in this Valley. He bases his hopes on a well-kept record of other years, which shows that the winter preceding the great crop of 1911, was almost identical, day by day with the winter just passed, being especially marked during March and April. We sincerely trust Mr. Vroom's anticipation may be realized.

SHELIVING THE DIFFICULTY.

Dr. Griffith Thomas, of Wycliffe College, tells an amusing story of his little girl when she was six years of age. She was fond of playing church with her dolls.

"If what she said was so grand On again! the victory lies Turned to ashes in the hand; In the struggle, not the prize."

The Suez Canal will be dredged to a depth of forty feet and other improvements are contemplated which will make the canal available to any ship likely to be built for the Eastern trade in the immediate future.

The Story of a Testament

This story will not only inform us of the good accomplished by a single copy of the New Testament, but, will also throw light upon Muhammadan opinions in Afghanistan.

The Kurram Valley is situated just half-way between Kabul and Bannu, and is a fine strip of land made fertile by the Kurram River, which rises in the high mountains south-east of Kabul, and it is inhabited by the Turi tribe of Afghans, who, unlike their Sunni neighbors, belong to the Shia sect of Moslems.

Hearing of this circumstance from the officer himself, I thought I would look the man up, so as to give him some instruction and Christian books, therefore I went with two Afghan converts to seek him.

Needless to say, we enjoyed our stay there very much, and the people were hospitable to a degree, so that every meal was a feast given by a different headman, and we never had two meals at the same house.

However, to return to the point,

Not having given our guides to understand that we were any of us particularly holy people (at least not in a Moslem sense), we reached our destination on the fifth day in safety, and discovered the object of our search in one of the villages there.

"The first time of reading," he said, "I understood but little, the second and third times rather more, the fourth time the truth began to dawn on me, and the fifth and sixth times I was able to see the salvation and life of Christ in all its glory."

Needless to say, we enjoyed our stay there very much, and the people were hospitable to a degree, so that every meal was a feast given by a different headman, and we never had two meals at the same house.

What Cigarettes Will Do to a Boy

Dr. Elmer S. Rodman has been many years High School Principal at Hornell, N. Y., and Superintendent of the Public Schools in that flourishing city.

First. They make him egotistical and unreasonable. He becomes a bluffer and thinks that he knows more than his father, his mother, his teacher or anyone else who is an authority.

Second. They make him cowardly and secretive. He knows his own weakness and cannot help his "hang dog" look.

Third. They make him unreliable and changeable. They arouse his excitement. He easily confuses dates, and he does not appreciate the value of time in his work.

Fourth. Cigarettes destroy the moral sense of the boy. It is hard for him to distinguish between right and wrong. It is very easy also for him to become a criminal.

Joker's Corner

FASHIONABLE FEATHERS.

How pleasant it is in the trolley car riding. Behind some fair creature as sweet as a rose.

A young man, who needed false teeth wrote to a dentist, ordering a set as follows: "My mouth is three inches across, five eighths inches throw the jaw. Some hummocky on the edge. Shaped like a hoarse-shew, toe forward. If you want me to be more particular, I shall have to come there."

Mr Brown has just registered and was about to turn away when the clerk asked: "Beg pardon, but what is your name?"

"Name!" echoed the indignant guest. "Don't you see my signature there on the register?"

An Irishman whose face was so plain that his friends used to tell him it was an offence to the landscape, happened late to be as poor as he was homely.

The seven ages of man have been well tabulated by somebody or other on an acquisitive basis. Thus: First age—Sees the earth.

A foreman in a saw-mill named Sandy, who was very miserly in his habits, had two fingers taken off by one of the saws.

While waiting between trains at a country town a drummer walked into the cemetery. He saw a monument, one of the largest in the cemetery, and read with surprise the inscription on it: "A Lawyer and an Honest Man."

At 60 Years Of Age THE KIDNEY NEED HELP. Gin Pills give them the strength of youth.

"Sandy," said Mrs Simpson to her eldest olive-branch the other day when he returned from school. "I forbid ye to play or rin' about wi' that Bobby Wilson o' yer mair. Mind that, an' if I ever hear o' yer playin' wi' him again I'll gie ye a guid lickin'."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are not a new and untried remedy—our grandfathers used them. Half a century ago, before Confederation, they were on sale in nearly every drug or general store in the Canada of that day.

Feeding Young Chickens

A Few Suggestions Given by the Poultry Division, Experimental Farm, Ottawa. DO NOT FEED TOO SOON.—When the chick is hatched it has a sufficient supply of nourishment in the yolk of the egg to last it for several days.

A LITTLE SAND OR GRIT FIRST.—When the chicks are removed to their brooding quarters there should be some coarse sand or fine chick grit scattered where they can have free access to it.

May be the dough had forgotten to rise.
Or had risen quickly overnight and fallen again—
To rise nevermore.
Twas weak flour, of course.
Meaning weak in gluten.
But FIVE ROSES is strong, unusually strong.
With that glutinous strength which compels it to rise to your surprised delight.
Stays risen too.
Being coherent, elastic.
And the dough feels springy under your hand.
Speaks and cracks as you work it.
Feel the feet of a FIVE ROSES dough.
Great is the bread born of such dough—
Your dough!
Try this good flour.

Heart Training Through the Animal World

(By Ralph Waldo Trine)

It is an established fact that the training of the intellect alone is not sufficient. Nothing in this world can be truer than that the education of the heart, without the training of the heart, simply increase one's power for evil, while the education of the heart, along with the education of the intellect, is the true education. Clearly we must begin with the child. The lessons learned in childhood are the last to be forgotten. The potter moulds the clay only when it is soft; in a little while, when it begins to harden, he has no more power over it. So it is with the child. The first principles of conduct instilled into his mind, planted within his heart, take root and grow, and as he grows from childhood to youth, and from youth to manhood, these principles become fixed. They exert their influence. Scarcely any power in existence can change them. They cling to him through life. They decide his destiny. How important then, that these first principles implanted within the child's heart, be lessons of gentleness, kindness, mercy, love, and humanity, and not lessons of hatred, envy, selfishness, and malice! The former make ultimately our esteemed, law-abiding, law-loving citizens; the latter law-breakers and criminals. Upon the training of the children of today depends the condition of our country a generation hence.

In crimes against the person the passions play the most important part, and this is true, also, even in many crimes against property. How important it is, then, that the child be taught to govern its passions! How important that it be taught to be kind, gentle, loving, and humane; and in all the range of human life this higher influence, at once thought there is not a better, wiser, or more expedient way of accomplishing this end than by teaching kindness towards God's lower creatures. If children are thus taught they will have instilled into their hearts those principles of action which will make them kind and merciful not only to the lower animals, but also toward their fellow-men as they attain to manhood. Let them be taught that the lower animals are God's creatures, as they themselves are, put here by a common Heavenly Father, each for its own special purpose, and that they have the same right to life and protection. Let them be taught that principle recognized by all noble-hearted men, that it is only a depraved, debased, and cowardly nature that will injure an inferior, defenseless creature, simply because it is in its power to do so, and that there is no better, no grander test of true bravery and nobility of character than one's treatment of the lower animals.

It is impossible to overestimate the benefits resulting from judicious, humane instruction. The child who has been taught nothing of mercy, nothing of humanity, who has never been brought to realize the claims that animals have upon him for protection and kindness, will grow up to be cruel to his family, to his fellow-men. On the other hand, the child who has been taught to realize the claims that God's lower creatures have upon him, whose heart has been touched by lessons of kindness and mercy, under their sweet influence will grow to be a large-hearted, tender-hearted, many man. Then let the children be trained, their hands, their intellects, and above all, their hearts. Let them be taught to have pity for the animals that are at our mercy, that cannot protect themselves, that cannot explain their weakness, their pain, or their suffering, and soon this will bring to their recognition that higher law, the moral obligation of man as a superior being to protect and care for the weak and defenseless. Nor will it stop here, for this in turn will lead them to that highest law—man's duty to man.

And so, instead of putting into the hands of the child a gun or any other weapon that may be instrumental in crippling, torturing, or taking the life of even a single animal, I would give him the field-glass and the camera, and send him out to be a friend to the animals, to observe and study their characteristics, their habits, to learn from them whose wonderful lessons that can be learned, and thus have his whole nature expand in admiration and love; and care for them, and become thereby the truly manly and princely type of man rather than the careless, callous, brutal type.

All fellowships thus fostered, and the humane sentiments thus inculcated, will return to soften and enrich the child's and later the man's or the woman's life, a thousand or a million fold; for we must always bear in mind that every kindness shown, every service done, to either a fellow human being or a so-called dumb fellow creature, does us more good than the one for whom that for which we do it. The joy that comes from this open-hearted fellowship with all living creatures is something too precious and valuable to be given up when once experienced. To feel and to realize the essential oneness of all life is a steep, up which the world is now rapidly coming. Through it ethics is being broadened and deepened and even religion is being enriched and vitalized.

Were I an educator, I would endeavor to make my influence along the lines of humane, heart-training my chief service to my pupils. The rules and principles and even facts that are taught them will, ninety-nine times out of a hundred be forgotten, but by bringing into their lives this higher influence, at once the root and the flower of all that is worthy of the name "education," I would give them something that would place them at once in the ranks of the noblest of the race. I would give not only special attention and time to this humane education, but I would introduce it into and cause it to permeate all of my work. A teacher with a little insight will be able to find opportunities on every hand.

Then, were I a mother, I would infuse this same humane influence into all phases of the child's life and growth. Quietly and indirectly I would make all things speak to him in this language. I would put into his hands books such as "Black Beauty," "Beautiful Joe," and others of a kindred nature. I would form in my own village or part of the city, were there not one there already, a Band of Mercy, into which my own and neighbors' children would be called; and thus I would open up another little fountain of humanity for the healing of our troubled times.

"NA-DRU-GO DYSPEPSIA TABLETS"

Proved of Great Value to Me

There is only one explanation for the numbers of enthusiastic letters that we receive praising Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets, and that is that these tablets certainly do cure any kind of stomach trouble.
Here is a typical letter from Miss Eliza Armsworth, Canso, N.S.:
"It is with pleasure I write to inform you that your Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets have proved of great value to me. I tried remedies after remedy but without any lasting good. Having heard of your tablets curing such cases as mine I decided to give them a fair trial. They proved satisfactory in my case."
The remarkable success of Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets is such a success as can only come to an honest remedy, compounded according to an exceptionally good formula, from pure ingredients, by expert chemists. If you are troubled with your stomach just ask your Druggist about Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets, compounded by the National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, and sold throughout the Dominion at 50c a box.

Maritime Home for Girls

Board of Temperance and Moral Reform of the Methodist Church and the Board of Social Service and Evangelism of the Presbyterian Church, acting through a local Board of Management have in view the establishment of a "Home for Delinquent Protestant Girls." A property which includes a house, farm, etc. has been procured in Truro.

The Home will be Protestant on broad non-sectarian lines. Its object will be the physical and moral rehabilitation of girls that they may be restored to society as good citizens. They will be taught the usual school branches, together with such useful arts as homemaking, dress-making, etc. There will be no trade taught which presents few opportunities for earning a living.

The establishment of this home has covered a long felt want in Nova Scotia. The Roman Catholic Church have had for years institutions of this kind, but there has been nothing done until now for the Protestant girls of the Province.

Because the initial cost will be considerable, money must be raised. Twenty Halifax men have given $4000. The Home will be supported chiefly by Government grants from the Provinces sending girls. The Maritime Provinces have engaged to do this. Newfoundland will also be asked to contribute. Any further amounts needed will be provided by the churches in control.

This worthy movement is one which deserves the sympathy and support of all right minded citizens.

THAW TECHNICALLY FREE, FOR FIVE MINUTES.

Concord, N.H. May 8.—For five minutes, yesterday, Harry K. Thaw, the Mattewan fugitive, was technically free.

This was after Judge Aldrich had signed an order for his release from custody on a Habeas Corpus warrant previously issued by him in the Federal Court.

Immediately afterwards, however, Judge Aldrich remanded Thaw into the custody of Sheriff Holman Drew, pending the outcome of his case before the United States Supreme Court.

The appeal of New York from the decision was filed at that court and contends that the court had erred in nine points.

Keep your buggies, waggons, farm implements and tools well painted and you will save money.

There is economy in the use of paint on your farm equipment. Paint keeps wooden parts from checking and cracking and iron and steel parts from rusting. Use Sherwin-Williams Buggy Paint on your buggies, automobiles (it is also good for painting boats, canoes, porch furniture, flower boxes, etc.). Use Wagon Paint for the waggons, mowers, binders, and all kinds of farm machinery. Use Sherwin-Williams Commonwealth Barn Red on your barns and out-buildings.

One of the greatest economies on the farm is to have everything well painted. Come and see us about your painting and ask us for color cards.
