EMPLOYMENT AND MORTALITY STATISTICS.

Dr. John Tatham, of Glasgow, has prepared for the Registrar General of Scotland, a report on the mortality in certain occupations, compiled from statistics covering three years. According to his figures the best assurance of long life which a man can possibly attain is to become a clergyman. The denomination does not matter. Finding this he should endeavor to qualify as a gardener, a game keeper, a farmer, or a railway engine driver. If however, the individual in question, desires to take a chance of living only to middle age, he should be a physician, an undertaker, or a tobacconist, while should it be his aim to shuffle off his mortal coil at an early stage of the game it is his best plan to become a general laborer, miner, peddler, or a hotel clerk. The conclusions reached by Dr. Tatham are the outcome of prolonged and careful investigation and he finds that the proportion of clergymen living to ages beyond sixty-five enormously exceeds the average, and the death rate between the ages of twenty-five and sixty-five is very much below the average. Lawyers die earlier than clergymen and doctors earlier than lawyers. The death rate among liquor dealers, and those employed in this line of business, is higher than the average in the building trades the rate is low, but among textile manufacturers the opposite is true. The striking statement is made that commercial travellers fall victims to alcoholism in greater proportion than do all other occupied and retired males by 38 per cent, while their mortality from liver diseases is more than double the standard. The average is, however, better than it was twenty years ago. A valuable section of the report deals with the causes of death in various occupations, from diseases engendered by conditions found in the mines. Plumbers suffer from lead poisoning, iron miners, printers, potters, and quarrymen, as well as those engaged in the manufacture of woodens, suffer from lung weakness. This section should be valuable in guiding governments in the enforcement of existing laws controlling factories. The press has a grievance against Dr. Tatham in that he has wholly neglected to mention the occupation of journalism and has thus left the newspaper men in the very uncertain condition of not knowing whether it will be better for them to buy life insurance on reduced premiums without profits or gamble on the chance of living the full insurance term and reaping the benefits of investment.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

In Bulletin 147, issued by the Inland Revenue Department—statistics are given which show the value of wild directed prosecution on the part of the government. This Bulletin deals with maple products and contains a review of the results during the past three seasons. In March, 1906, out of 23 samples of maple sugar taken, only 55 per cent. were genuine. No prosecution was then arranged. In March, 1906, out of 25 samples, only 42 per cent. were genuine. Then notice was given that in the future, any adulterated maple sugar, sugar, a product which was found to be adulterated, would be prosecuted. The result is very apparent. Out of 267 samples taken in May, 1907, 72 per cent. were genuine, and of seventy-one samples taken in May, 1908, 97 per cent. were genuine. In maple syrup there has been an even greater improvement, for while the per cent of genuine product in 1905 was only 18 per cent. in May, 1908 it had risen to 87 per cent. During the four years the department has examined 448 samples of maple sugar and 327 samples of maple syrup. In the Maritime Provinces and in Quebec, there were not, during the present year, any samples taken which were afterwards found to be adulterated.

The attendance at the provincial normal school is the largest on record. And still teachers who have been out of training for years are being induced to again take up the work; students who have not passed the qualifying examinations are allowed to teach until they are properly licensed, and there yet remain vacant schools. New Brunswick is simply training hundreds of men and women every year to fill positions in the western provinces.

Not even their most enthusiastic opponents ever believed the Marathons could put up such a deplorable exhibition as they did on Saturday at the Shamrock grounds. The St. Peters boys played poorly enough, but, in comparison with the article furnished by their opponents, put up magnificent ball.

The great popularity is sometimes unfortunate. Mr. F. W. Sumner now understands what it means to be run after by the ladies.

St. John used to be the leading sporting town in the province. How long are we to remain dead?

Will the Colchester purity platform be adopted by St. John Conservatives at this evening's convention? If so, the temperance federation had better get busy.

And still there is no explanation from the aldermen regarding juggling of tenders for the street signs.

Tonight some guileless lamb must be chosen for the slaughter.

THE BRIDES OF MAY AND SEPTEMBER.

I saw my sisters meeting along the shady way That led between the houses and the sea; The bride of late September and the bride of early May. They met before the church of Clover-dea.

The springtime bride was laughing on her young suitor's arm. Pink as the rosy bonnet that she wore:— The autumn bride trudged slowly the long mile from the farm. Her nine stepchildren walking on before.

And oh, the little lone one had all her hair in curls. And spruce was all the newly mothered band: A feather in each boy's hat, a flower in each girl's. And each child had a comfit in its hand!

They were on their honeymoon and were climbing the Schnapfgaßenspitzen Peak, and she stood above him some twenty feet. "What, he?" he gasped. "What do you see?"

"Far, far below," she cried, "I see a long, white streak stretching like a paper ribbon back almost to our hotel!"

"Ha, ha!" he ejaculated. "It'll be it's that blessed hotel bill overhanging us!" And they proceeded onward and upward.

"You can always tell an actor whose season has not been prosperous," said Mr. Stormington Barnes.

"He won't talk with you five minutes without saying that the public doesn't appreciate art."

Uncle-Uncle, what's chagrined? Uncle-Well, it's what a stout man feels when he runs and jumps on a car that doesn't start for half an hour.

Tom-Of course the bride looks lovely, as brides always do. Nell-Yes, but the bridegroom doesn't look altogether fit; seems rather run down.

Tom-Run down? Oh, yes, caught after a long chase. The infant of the household was in its cradle. The head of the house was at home, peaceful and fastidious. At length he became unendurable.

AN INDIAN LADY MAKES HISTORY.

It has been given to Mrs. Dosebal Cowsaji Jehangir Jessawalla to make history. A somewhat tall, old, lady, rather slow in her movements, but dominated by an energy of spirit, evidence of her dark, flashing eyes, clad in the fashion of Indian women, with an embroidered sari over her head, it is small wonder that during the past six months she has attracted special attention in London, from the King and Queen downwards, for it was largely to this veteran of seventy-six that the education of women in India has been made possible.

THE WEDDING OUTFIT.

Seventy years ago when the courageous mother of little Dosebal determined to send her daughter to an English school in Bombay, there was considerable opposition among the leaders of the Parsi community. The unconventional was considered irreligious; there were threats to ostracize the family and, worse, for it was declared that Dosebal would find no husband! But, nothing daunted, the child's education went on. Her husband's position ceased leaving victory with the women. Even the desired dowry in his views with regard to women's education as Dosebal's mother. The dowry was how to make use of the Western articles included in the wedding outfit in an orthodox household on the patriarchal plan. The solution was found very soon.

GOING ROUND THE WORLD.

Mrs. Jessawalla is now a widow, but during her husband's lifetime she was able to gratify her desire to travel. "Travel as Teacher," appeals to her strongly. She saw her own country first, when journeys had to be made in tongas, not in trains. Then she came to Europe and on her first visit had a private interview with Pope Leo XIII. at Rome and made a balloon ascent at the first Paris Exhibition, receiving a medal for her courage. Queen Victoria, knowing of her pioneer work in the cause of women's education, paid her the honor of inviting her to participate in the Jubilee festivities of 1887. And now, in her seventy-sixth year, she is completing a tour of the world in China, Japan and America. The Paris pioneer has been received with warmest welcome.

QUEEN FOR THE UNITED STATES.

"Within three years this lady will be crowned Queen Helen of the United States of America at Washington, after one of the most famous coronations the world has ever seen." The speaker was quite the nicest and "Edward," he thought, but that is what I am aiming at. "Now you want to know about Helen of New York. Well, she thought it would cause less antagonism if we set a woman on the throne, so this lady was selected. I may not give you her name, as publicity would be premature, but I may say she is a handsome, intellectual, young, single woman, of queenly bearing. As regards her marriage, which will be necessary to secure an heir to the throne, that will be left to her; but, of course, we would rather she married a European prince than an American street-sweeper.

"The movement is being run by practical men—I myself am a successful organizer—and as we are not visionaries we do not expect to attain our ends without bloodshed. But within three years we look to see Helen crowned Queen at Washington. "The movement is being run by practical men—I myself am a successful organizer—and as we are not visionaries we do not expect to attain our ends without bloodshed. But within three years we look to see Helen crowned Queen at Washington.

TO BE KEPT POSTED. I secured a promise that I would be kept posted as to these stirring events, and took my leave, hoping for a front place in the battles, and a presentation at Queen Helen's Court.

THE PLOTTERS. "Then, look at our Justice! There's the Thaw case still dragging on. Over here you'd have hanged or hanged and our annual state is all rotten, with the feeling of insecurity that a constant change of rule brings. We neither rule ourselves nor have an autocrat to rule us. We're just between two worlds. It was in 1893 that some of us decided that a monarchy was what our country wanted. So in a quiet way we began pushing our ideas till today, with a total following of nearly 3,000,000 people, spread over all the States, we feel the time is ripe to go ahead. "Seven of us came over in the Lusitania on Tuesday morning at 8:45 from her late residence, 238 City Road, on Wednesday, at 2:30, friends and acquaintances are invited to attend.

MEETINGS OF AGRICULTURAL COMMISSION IN RESTIGOUCHE CAMPBELLTON, Aug. 29-Being on Tuesday last the Provincial Agricultural Commission made a brief inspection of Restigouche County and met the farmers at various points. On the 21st the Commissioners went over the International Railway, being the guests of Mr. Macdonald, who placed his car at their disposal and afforded them every opportunity of seeing the country along the line. The Commissioners expressed themselves as well pleased with the roadbed of the new railway, the train running as smoothly as on the I. C. R. For the first 40 miles out of Campbellton the country is not well suited to agriculture, though to the southward it is said to be "good for settlement." After the height of land at the head of Gros Brook is reached the country opens out and the land looks like first class agricultural land. A large number of applications have been made for grants in this section and it is likely that the Government will have an examination of the country made with a view of setting apart certain tracts for settlement. On Tuesday evening a meeting was held at the Temperance Hall, Tide Head, on Wednesday afternoon at Shannon Vale and the same evening at Balmoral, where Hon. Dr. Landry was presented with an address and there were between 200 and 300 farmers in the school-house with almost as many more outside. Rev. Father Melanson presided and there was an animated discussion upon the various questions brought before the meeting.

HIS TOAST. The difficulty of finding a suitable thing about an unprosperous person was once cleverly surmounted by the great Duke of Wellington. At a Mansion House dinner he was called mayores, whom he had never seen, on to propose the health of the lady. The duke got up and proposed the duke, describing the subject as "the model of her sex."

LEFT THE KING ON THE DOOR-STEP. When King Edward desires to pay a call on a personal friend a message to this effect is sent earlier in the day. This rule is almost invariably but on one occasion his Majesty neglected the precaution, and on arriving at the house of the friend found the host out of town and the charwoman in charge. The King desired to go in and write a message, but was rebuffed by the cautious caretaker for his card and as that was not forthcoming she declined to let him in. He was a very pleasant, civil-spoken gentleman," she told her employers on their return, "but as he hadn't a card I left him outside." It was only some time afterwards that the master discovered to his horror the identity of the visitor.

Robinson Cruise honored his man Friday. "I wanted a week-end party," he explained. Herewith joy reigned unconfined.

The Idyl of a Clothes Line

By MARION WARNER WILDMAN.

It began on a Monday morning in April, when the first exquisite savor of Spring was in the air. Regulated by the balmy wind that shifted the papers on her desk and ruffled her smooth gray hair, the editor's stenographer let her hands fall idly on the keys of her typewriter, while her gaze wandered dreamily out across the murky, sunlit river flats; past the gigantic chimneys that trailed their dusky banners across the sky; past the gleaming spire that lifted its golden cross into the full radiance of the morning; past the hills that lay along the horizon, were the hepticas in blossom, and the adder-tongues? Had the hermit thrushes and the foxgallows come?

Then it was that a laugh, bright and unlooked for and clear as the "foxgallows" song, floated up to the open office windows from the tiny back yard of a cheap cottage. Miss Morgan leaned an elbow on the window-sill and looked down.

Enough her the clothes-line was being hung. Two persons were engaged in the ceremony. One was tall, broad of shoulder, with thick yellow hair and a sunburnt, handsome, boyish face. The other was small and eyesp-dark as to her eyes and her blowing curls. Both were very happy, very good to look upon, very young, and, obviously, an idyl of No. 2.

Their clothes-line, white and kinky and immaculate, was no newer than their wedded bliss.

The editor's private secretary had to speak twice to the stenographer before she heard.

"Those letters, Miss Morgan—are they ready for signature yet? No special hurry, only—"

Back to their task flew the stenographer's competent fingers.

It was noon before she paused and looked down again from her window. No one was in sight in the little back yard below, but the clothes-line yayed trippingly back and forth in the April gale and secured to its length by clothespins as gleamingly new, fluttered and flouted a row of freshly wrung garments. There was something deliciously jolly about the scene. "Hiss sound!" blustered the big blue flannel shirt to the snowy white night-gown that the pink shirt and the white pair of long woolen drawers kicked up such hilarious heels that the ruffled petticoat beside him gave up as a pair of sheets and a small red table-cloth snuffed and snapped and rowed of socks and stockings danced an airy ballet till they wound themselves hopelessly around the line.

The stenographer, left alone in the office, unwrapped a dainty luncheon and ate it very deliberately, her eyes returning now and then to the honey-moon washing that fluttered below her open window. Not that Miss Morgan was a sentimentalist, but because it was April and in April an enchantment of love and joy is worked upon all the earth, even the heart of a middle-aged business woman, who has long since accepted the fact that she is too old for romance, must needs thrill in response to the mystery of April, with the happy sales blue on the far away hillside; April, in green, green, green, green, sunny city avenue; April, not less in the ugly, trawled, turtless little back yard of a cheap cottage tenement, where a honeymoon washing slapped itself dry in the sun and wind.

After the private secretary had been back from his lunch for ten minutes, "Please, Miss Morgan, he begged, 'tell me what's so fascinating down below? I've been trying to find out without bothering you, but all I've discovered is a rag-picker and two stray cats!'"

"They had been off-camera for years, had the editor's stenographer and his private secretary, but it had been left for a humble clothes-line to draw them into mutual understanding."

"Only the idyl of a clothes-line," she replied, smiling. "I'm very willing to share it with you, Mr. McClure. See, there they come now with the basket rather in the clothes! Isn't everything absurdly new, and aren't they a bonny pair of lovers?"

The stenographer and the private secretary fell into the habit of looking down every Monday morning from their respective windows for a glimpse of a curly haired head bobbing about among the wet clothes that a pair of small reddened hands were pinning to the clothes-line. Often the tall boy with the yellow head of hair and the boy with her, helping a little and hindering more, with his masculine clumsiness and his interfering caresses. They had guessed that he worked on the night force of the great steel plant in the river flats. Late every afternoon, the bride walked with him to the alley gate, her arm linked in his, and there, when he had kissed and left her, she would stand and watch till he turned at the corner and waved goodbye with the shining new lunch-pail she had filled. Then she would go slowly back to the cottage, hesitating a moment at the door, as if dreading the lonely night that waited her within.

The midsummer weather proved stiffly hot in the city, but the little wide, hanging out her washing each Monday with praiseworthy regularity, seemed not to mind it. A blue gingham sun-bonnet shaded her face, and her cheeks and her sleeves were rolled back to the shoulder from her plump brown arm, as she fitted about her task in a sweet childish apron. The private secretary, who was distinctly unmusical, came to know all her songs by heart and could be heard humming them over his writing, unconsciously and out of tune. The stenographer had come to know just how many ruffles there were on the bride's best and only muslin gown, and which petticoat was only modestly tucked and which was frivolously lace-trimmed.

Autumn came and went quickly, leaving a bitter winter behind. On stormy Mondays when sleet and rain drove fiercely against the windows of the editor's office, Miss Morgan felt herself absurdly cheered because a certain washing must of necessity be dried indoors. And on clear, cold, bitter days, Mr. McClure turned anxiously at the sight of a well-shawled little figure bending over a steaming basket or pausing to wring stiff blue flannels as she took down the frozen clothes.

It was April again, when first the stout Irish neighbor with the kind and stout countenance came to hang the clothes on the honeymoon line. Very snowily white had she made them, and up they went to the drying wind in half the time it would have taken a pair of smaller hands to accomplish it. "You don't think they're moved away?" queried the secretary anxiously on that first Monday, as he laid a budget of copy on the stenographer's desk. But Miss Morgan smiled doubtfully.

June came and still the washing was pressed over each Monday by stout Hilbertian hands. For a week now the inquisitive windows of the editor's office had caught no flutter of a certain blue gingham apron with ruffles, no glimpse of a certain curly dark head. Each afternoon the tall lad with the yellow hair came down to the alley gate along with his lunch-pail, and always he turned to look back at the little home in a way that stirred the stenographer's heart with great gain and sent the secretary back to his proof-reading with spectacles annoyingly blurred.

One Saturday in midsummer the boy husband did not go to work at all. They saw him sitting for a while on the steps of the little back porch, but a short time, and while it was known that she could not recover her death was hardly looked for at the present time. Mrs. Morris was a sister of the late William Holt, and was a very estimable lady, beloved by all who knew her. She is survived by her husband, three daughters at home, and two sons. One is Dr. Richard Morris, of Everett, Mass., who visited St. John only a few weeks ago.

F. W. SUMNER RUN DOWN BY A TEAM

MONCTON, N. B., Aug. 30.—While standing at the corner of a street in front of the Bank of Montreal talking to a citizen last evening, F. W. Sumner, a well known merchant, was run down by a team driven recklessly by three young women.

Mr. Sumner was badly shaken up, one ankle was sprained and he sustained other bruises which may lay him up for a time. He was able, however, to proceed to his summer cottage at Shediac Cape Saturday night, but will be compelled to use crutches for some time.

Two casks of beer were poured into a sewer Saturday night by Officer Boudreau, by order of the police magistrate. The beer was seized some time ago in R. Hebert's place of business at the corner of Main and Robbison streets. Hebert was convicted of a street act violation Saturday and fined fifty dollars.

One of the bold robberies yet reported occurred during the busy hour when the streets were crowded a party unknown entered a boarding house and stole a book belonging to one of the boarders. A pocketbook found in the room was searched, but the thief got no preference so he had taken precaution to take this with him when he went out. Between nine and ten o'clock the proprietor of the house heard some one going up stairs, but supposed it was one of the boarders and knew no better until the theft was discovered. Other rooms were searched, but nothing of value was found.

WANT TO ENCOURAGE TRADE WITH CANADA

OTTAWA, Aug. 30.—E. H. Flood, Canadian trade commissioner in the British West Indies, in his report to the department of trade and commerce, Ottawa, states that it is probable that the Leeward Islands will follow the example set by Barbados in granting tariff preferences to imported Canadian goods.

There is, he says, a strong Canadian sentiment on the Leeward Islands, and an effort is now being made to bring the various islands to a common understanding in regard to the encouragement of Canadian trade.

The present bulk of the imports come from Great Britain and the United States, but there are distinct openings for Canadian trade in manufactured articles, provisions and breadstuffs, and Mr. Flood advises Canadian exporters to devote part of their attention to this growing market.

RECENT DEATHS.

HAROLD WILSON.
The death took place Saturday morning of Harold Wilson, youngest son of Thomas H. Wilson, of Fairville. The deceased lady has been in poor health but a short time, and while it was known that she could not recover her death was hardly looked for at the present time. Mrs. Morris was a sister of the late William Holt, and was a very estimable lady, beloved by all who knew her. She is survived by her husband, three daughters at home, and two sons. One is Dr. Richard Morris, of Everett, Mass., who visited St. John only a few weeks ago.

MRS. WM. WASS.
MRS. STEPHEN, Aug. 30.—Mrs. Wass, wife of Rev. Wm. Wass, Methodist clergyman at Oak Hill, St. James, passed away at an early hour this morning after a lingering illness from cancer. She leaves a husband and four children, Percy, of Toronto, Mrs. Gouchar, of Halifax, and Evelyn and Marie, at home, and two sisters, Mrs. Reed, of Woodstock, and Mrs. Jones, of St. John. Her funeral will take place at her former home at Woodstock on Wednesday afternoon.

Dalhousie

DALHOUSIE, N. B., Aug. 30.—The four Italians who were found guilty this week of obstructing work on the International Railway near Campbellton, causing a strike, were sentenced today by Judge Landry to serve two years at Dorchester penitentiary.

A post-mortem examination was held, and it was found that several porcupine quills were stuck in the lion's throat in such a manner as to prevent the passage of food.

KEPT THEM ALL ON EDGE.
One of the favorite devices of Lord Nelson when ships were cruising in company was to signal to a given craft that Lieutenant Smith or Staff Engineer Brown or Captain of Marines Jones had been put out of action. The author of "Traveller's Bologn" says that the result was very good, for no one knew when he might be called upon to take command, and every cook hereafter made a point of trying to make himself fit to carry out the duty should it ever be assigned to him.

A ragged little urchin selling papers on a busy downtown corner saw a stylishly-dressed woman amid the hurrying throng drop her pocket-book. Quick as a flash the boy seized it and hurried after her. Touching his cap, he handed her the heavy purse.

She thanked him very graciously and handed him a nickel. In a tone equally gracious he responded, "Ah, keep your nickel; I was poor once myself."

It has never cooled a beverage so deliciously and healthful in its absolute purity as the one effervescent mineral water combining every essential of perfection. The ideal summer drink which imparts the final touch of refinement to any social event.

CHILD PICKS UP MATCH AND SETS HER CLOTHING ON FIRE

The bright little daughter of Harry McConkey died on Saturday as the result of burns received the day previous. On Friday evening the mother of the child, after lighting a lamp, threw the match on the floor and left the room. The child picked up the burning match and her clothing soon caught fire. Her cries attracted the mother. The child ran to the woodshed, and when the mother overtook her, her clothes were a mass of flames. Mrs. McConkey undertook to beat out the flames with a mat, but before the flames were extinguished the child was horribly burned. She suffered intense pain and died on Saturday morning.

Mr. McConkey is employed on the tug Champlain and was absent at Gasqueton at the time of the accident. Louis Whelpley went up to Gasqueton in a launch for the father. Great sympathy is extended to the parents in their sad affliction.

The funeral took place at Public Landing yesterday and was largely attended.

PAY OFFICIAL VISIT TO LORNEVILLE LODGE

Rev. R. G. Fulton, R. M., grand master of New Brunswick, and Wm. T. Galbraith, county master (West), accompanied by a number of the brethren from St. John West and Fairville, paid an official visit to Coronation L. O. U. No. 121, at Lorneville on Saturday afternoon. The annual meeting of the lodge was held and the following, having been declared elected, were duly installed by the grand master: Wm. T. Galbraith, W. M.; Samuel R. Venne, D. M.; George H. Galbraith, chap.; Samuel Ferguson, rec. sec.; Austin Galbraith, fin. sec.; James McAfee, treasurer; Robt. J. Ferguson, D. of C.; Wm. J. Wilson, lecturer.

The officers then addressed the meeting. The grand master on the principle of the L. O. U. Brief speeches by the following officers of other New Brunswick lodges were also delivered: H. G. Kingsbury, Wm. M. Campbell, R. J. Anderson, W. V. Turnbull, John Baird, William T. Galbraith and Samuel Ferguson. During the evening refreshments were served and the proceedings finished about midnight.

LION EATS A PORCUPINE.

The question has been arisen among Rhodeston hunters whether lions make it a habit to eat porcupines, and if they do does it often happen that the lion, in his death agony, leaves the fatal dart in the throat of his destroyer? It seems that recently two "Rhodeston" hunters, natives of Holland, shot an antelope. Returning to the spot an hour later the carcass was nowhere in sight.

The animal, it was seen, had been dragged away, but the men declared that a lion was not the thief. However, a lion was found to be the culprit, for the hunters discovered the animal with the booty in his mouth. The men shot the lion, which was in an emaciated condition.

A post-mortem examination was held, and it was found that several porcupine quills were stuck in the lion's throat in such a manner as to prevent the passage of food.

WHAT GREAT MEN ATE.

Venison Was Favorite Meat of Sir Walter Scott.

Peter the Great consumed baked goose stuffed with apples, and considered it a fine dish.

Frederick the Great made a satisfactory meal on salt beef or pork and cabbage.

Henry VIII could always eat himself into a condition of sleepiness on a haunch of venison.

Alexander the Great, when on a campaign, ate the rations of a common soldier.

Plus IX., during most of his pontificate, ate only an egg and bit of toast for breakfast.

Macaulay said that no man need ask for better food than plain roast beef and baked potatoes.

Fielding said that tartar made with currant jelly were "heaven's own food."

Kaulbach enjoyed sauerkraut and pork beyond all other kinds of food. He once said that "cabbage and German go well together."

Have Ben Johnson asked no better treat than a pork pie with an abundance of Canary wine.

Locke considered that the proper breakfast for a studious man was a bit of fish and a piece of bread.

Michael Angelo, during the most part of his life, lived plainly on the food of an Italian peasant.

Five Men Break Into Bank at Ste. Eustache, Quebec

Blow Open the Safe and Steal $12,000 in Bank Bills

MONTEREAL, Aug. 30.—Five desperadoes broke into and robbed the Provincial Bank at Ste. Eustache, about 50 miles from Montreal, Saturday morning, setting clear away with twelve thousand dollars in bank bills, $5 for no definite trace of the robbers has been discovered, although they have been traced as far as Ste. Rose, and it is thought they were heading for Montreal, with the intention of getting across the border as soon as possible.

Apparently Experts

The men were apparently experts at the bank cracking profession. They broke into the premises, which are in the largest building of the village, the post office and other offices being in the same block, shortly before two o'clock. The notes they made awake the postmaster and other citizens but when they came near they found that three men with a couple of revolvers apiece were standing outside, while the other two were inside blowing the safe open. The citizens did not care to get too close to the guns, and did not interfere with the operations of the quintette. In a few minutes the men inside had drilled a hole in the door of the safe, poured in a charge of nitroglycerine, ignited a fuse, and then came outside to await its explosion. So confident were the robbers that they did not take any precautions to muffle the sound, and when the charge exploded it not only wrecked the safe, but broke a number of windows in the building. The two men then returned to the bank and broke open the drawers, the explosion having torn the safe door completely off.

$12,000 in Bills

In the vault were $12,000 in bills and a large quantity of checks and other negotiable papers. The robbers did not touch this, but took all the bills, even leaving the silver money in the safe so too heavy to be handled with comfort. Having secured the money they started off in the direction of the C. P. R. tracks, apparently in the direction of Montreal. Some of the Landing yesterday and was largely attended.

Immediately after the robbers had escaped word of the affair was telephoned to Montreal and a number of city and provincial detectives left for Ste. Eustache, while later on several Thiel detectives also went out in an automobile. Word was telephoned into the city this evening that the men had been traced as far as Ste. Rose, and the detectives of the city are on the watch for any suspicious characters.

PACKING COMPANY'S PLANT IS DESTROYED

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 30.—The Canadian Packing Company's plant at London, Ont., was destroyed by fire Saturday afternoon. LAWLESS ELEMENT TRY TO WRECK A C.P.R. TRAIN

MONTEREAL, Aug. 30.—There are no new developments in the strike of the Canadian Pacific railway's shop workers. An attempt to wreck a train at St. Martins Junction, just outside of the city, is placed to the credit of the foreign and more lawless element among the strikers. The lock of the switch had been broken and stones placed in the switch so as to hold it open. A freight train, running at a fair rate of speed, ran into the siding, which, fortunately, was empty at the time, no damage being done.

A horse attached to a dump cart while passing along Mill street in front of the depot this morning, caught its shoe in one of the diamond crossings in the railway track. The animal was stuck fast, and it was with considerable difficulty that it was released. It kept the 8.25 suburban train a few minutes late in starting.

THE HALF HOLIDAY HAS COME TO STAY

Early Closing in Summer Now a Fixture.

Saturday Marked the Last Outing for the Retail Clerks—Mid-week Holiday Suggested for Other Stores.

Last Saturday afternoon brought to a close the summer half-holiday which have been enjoyed for the past two and three months at the various retail stores of the city.

Since the first of June the hardware employees have been enjoying their holiday in the open, and since the first of July many of the other larger retail stores have been giving their clerks a similar privilege.

While at the first of the season the dry goods stores still viewed the half-holiday as somewhat of an experiment, it has now come to be looked on as a permanent feature of the summer's business.

Each year the number of St. John people who are going to the country for the summer has been increasing. In addition to those who spend the whole season in the country there are many more who make a point of getting out of town for the week-end or at least for Saturday. Those who do not get away from the city have to a large extent been patronizing the ball games and the park attractions.

With the steady increase of this movement there has been a corresponding decrease in the number of possible customers for the city stores, and in that not very much trade has been lost by the half-holiday.

This, however, applies only to city trade and some of the merchants who get a share of the country trade have been somewhat worried over the inconvenience to their outside customers who are in town on Saturdays, and on this account a number of the merchants have found it impossible to close.

The suggestion has been made that these stores might take the half-holiday on some other day of the week in order to give their clerks the benefit of the summer days.

This is done in many places in Nova Scotia where it has been found impossible to close on Saturdays. If the movement was introduced here and made general among the stores that do not close on Saturdays there is no doubt, but that the amusement caterers would supply enough diversion to make the holiday a pleasant one.

A THREE HORSE RUNAWAY

Lively Doings at Indiantown This Morning.

With three horses running away at the same instant there was a lively time around Indiantown for a few minutes this morning.

A horse attached to a light wagon, owned by the St. John Iron Works, took fright while standing near the wharf and started to run up the street.

It collided with another horse and scared a third. The latter two started to run, but were easily caught. The animal which began the trouble got a good start and turned up Bridge street at a lively pace. Peter Parren, who saw it go by, reined the horse for a few yards and then succeeded in grasping the bridle and after some difficulty succeeded in stopping it.

W. S. FISHER LIKELY TO BE THE CHOICE

Though There are Several Actively Working for the Nomination.

Conservatives Liable to Meet Before Their Man is Chosen at Tonight's Convention

St. John Conservatives meet this evening to select from a large field of applicants a running mate for Dr. Daniel, M. P. During the past couple of months the leaders of the party here have had troubles of their own in trying to appease all those who demand recognition, and even this afternoon there are prospects of some sharp squabbling when the delegates come together.

Mr. W. S. Fisher was first mentioned as the possible candidate, but Mr. Fisher failed to give a decided answer and kept the party in suspense for so long that after a time it was decided to look up someone else. Then Dr. Quigley forged to the front, and the Quigley boom was quite a feature for a few days, though the chances now seem to be strongly against the learned doctor.

Then came the Hatheway whirl. It appears that Mr. Hatheway is looked upon as a horn-pot a W. H. Thorne in the flesh of the party, and his ardent and imaginative ideas do not find general favor. So the proposition thus free the provincial legislature. The plan was to run Mr. Hatheway with Dr. Dantel and then to appear in Mr. J. B. Baxter by giving him the nomination for the local house. But Mr. Hatheway kicked. He would rather be safe in Fredericton than defeat-Dr. Quigley. Yet Mr. Baxter had to be given something, for although he very gracefully took his defeat in the provincial convention he could hardly be expected to smile indefinitely when seeing himself turned down. So the merry war ran along enlivened by the activity of Dr. A. W. Macrae. The doctor has had aspirations for years; but for some unknown reason he has not gained the support of the younger members of the party, who favor either Mr. Baxter or Mr. Hatheway. The Borden Club objects to Dr. Macrae without any clear and sufficient reason, yet he is supported by a large number—perhaps even a majority, under certain conditions—of the older men of the party.

Now, however, it develops that Mr. W. S. Fisher has at last made up his mind and is willing to become a candidate. Mr. Thorne, who directs the policy of the party here, does not state definitely what Mr. Fisher's answer has been, but intimates that he will probably be available as the candidate. Yet there are many who believe that Mr. Fisher should now be left to go as he has left the party in doubt for so long, this uncertainty having led to disastrous squabbles between other factions.

Mr. H. A. Powell was once inadvertently mentioned as a possible candidate, and a few people smiled. But then a chilly silence followed, and it was intimated that Mr. Powell would never, never do.

So tonight there will be several possibilities. If the delegates find it in their hearts to forgive Mr. Fisher for his long delay in making up his mind, he may secure the nomination. If not, there will be trouble between the Hatheway, Baxter and Macrae groups, for Dr. Quigley has been quietly eliminated.
