Woman's Power Over Man

Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organization soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for women's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and strengthen Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

JAPANESE HEALTH RULES. Recommended to Those who Hunger after Long Life.

The following sanitary regulations appearing in a recent issue of the Jiji are recommended by the Japanese Herald to those hungering after long life:

First—Spend as much time out of doors as possible. Bask much in the sun and take plenty of exercise. Take care that your aspiration is always deep and regular.

Second—As regards meals, eat meat only once a day and let the diet be eggs, cereals, vegetables, fruits and fresh cow's milk. Take the last named as much as possible. Masticate your food carefully.

Third—Take a hot bath every day and a steam bath once or twice a week if the heart is strong enough to bear it.

Fourth—Put on roughly woven underwear (cotton fabrics are preferable) and clothes; a comfortable collar, light hat of any material and well fitting boots.

Fifth—Early to bed and early to rise.

Sixth—Sleep in a very dark and quiet room, with windows open. Let the minimum of sleeping hours be six or six and one-half hours and the maximum seven and one-half hours. In case of women rest of eight and one-half hours is advisable.

Seventh—Take one day of absolute rest per week, on which you must refrain from even reading and writing.

Eighth—Try to avoid any outburst of passions and strong mental stimulations. Do not overtax your brain at the occurrences of inevitable incidents or of coming events. Do not say unpleasant things, nor listen, if possible, to disagreeable things.

Ninth—Be married. Widows and widowers should be remarried with the least possible delay.

Tenth—Be moderate in the consumption of even tea and coffee; not to say tobacco and alcoholic beverages.

Eleventh—Avoid places that are too warm (especially steam heated) and badly ventilated rooms.

Twelfth—In order to promote the functions of those bodily organs which are liable to be weakened by age and disease, supply yourself with nutriment taken from the same organs of other animals. But in such cases the advice of the most competent medical authorities should be carefully consulted.

The Japanese Herald adds: "The Jiji might have made up the round dozen of suggestions by informing its readers how—in these days of high duties and coming higher ones, they can obtain the money to purchase the various articles of food stuffs calculated to lengthen life.

A Japanese workman, keeping a wife and children on something under one yen a day, would doubtless be quite satisfied with meat at one meal per diem. When rent, doctor's bills, clothing, fuel and the thousand and one minor expenses falling to the lot of the housekeeper had been met there would be little chance of the family surfeiting with eggs, cereals, vegetables, fruits and fresh cow's milk."

The Useful Cedar.

The Indians trade much use of Western Red cedar before white men became acquainted with the region in which it grew. From it they obtained food, clothing, shelter, means of transportation and apparatus for fishing and the canoe. From the tree trunks the savages made canoes of all sizes, from the small trough that carried two men to the enormous dugouts that transported fifty or more upon long expeditions in war and peace.

Before the Indians obtained metal tools from white traders they hallowed their canoes with fire and with their primitive stone and bone implements. Some of their dugouts are of enormous size, hewed from single trunks and with lines so perfect that civilized men can scarcely suggest improvement. The making of a canoe of moderate size, by the crude means at the Indians' command in the early days, required several months of hard labor with flint adzes that chipped away pieces of wood not much larger than grains of sawdust.

When Lewis and Clark crossed the Rocky Mountains and reached the tributary waters of the Columbia River in the summer of 1805, they saw for the first time the canoes of the Indians made of this wood. Some months later, when the explorers to the ocean. So common their pack animals and trust to the rivers to carry them to the Pacific, they made their canoes of cedar, and the small fleet successfully descended the Columbia and carried the explorers to the ocean. So common was the use of this wood for dugouts that with many persons its only name was canoe cedar.

The Indians nearly always made their tottem poles of this wood, because it is soft and they could work it easily with their rude tools. It was valued likewise because it resisted decay a long time, and when the grotesquely carved pole had once been set up in the village or at the cemetery it could be reasonably expected to stand at least during the lives of those who made it and set it up. Some of these gigantic trunks, hewed in forms of men and beasts, often with considerable skill are the largest pieces of wood carving in the world, greatly exceeding in size the largest columns and doors of European cathedrals.

The Indians of the region where western red cedar abounded generally chose it for such carpentry as they were capable of doing. Their choice was due to the softness of the wood, which meant a great deal to men who hewed and shaped their beams and doors with no better tools than fire, flint, bone and shell. They made fully as much use of the bark as of the wood. With it they roofed, ceiled, floored and papered their huts. They wove long strips of bark—some times thirty feet in length—into mats which they used for beds, tables, blankets, and on ceremonial occasions. They made clothing on the same material. They twisted the bark into ropes for dog harness, ladders, shingles and snares for wild animals and nets for catching fish. The list of uses for the bark did not end there, for they were able to make food of it. They beat the bark to a pulp, baked in cakes, and after completely saturating it with salmon oil they pronounced it a palatable and nutritious article of diet. It is believed however, that the food value of the cakes were derived more from the fish oil than from the bark.

St. George, N. B., Aug. 17.—The position of director of Mount Allison Conservatory of Music, left vacant by the resignation of Prof. Harry Horstall, has been filled by the appointment of Prof. J. Noel Brunton, late professor of piano at the Metropolitan Academy of Music, Forest Gate, London, England. Prof. Brunton studied piano and the theory of music at the Stein Conservatorium, Berlin, Germany, from which institution he took his diploma as performer and teacher. He was subsequently a pupil for four years of the great Leopold Godowsky in the same city. He teaches according to the modern school of piano, working on the Leschetzky method. He is spoken of as being an exceptionally good pianist and has had a great deal of success in experience both in teaching and in concert work. Before studying in Berlin Prof. Brunton held the position of Master of Music at the Bangor Grammar School, Ireland. While on the staff of the Metropolitan Academy he passed pupils through the higher examinations of the Royal Academy and Trinity College and 95 per cent. gained honors, a record exceedingly hard to beat.

Dr. Paul Lutzenko, of the Stein Conservatorium, says: "During the time he has been here Prof. Brunton has proved himself to be a most diligent and earnest student. His work was always exceptionally well prepared, consequently he has now succeeded in bringing his technique to a high standard of perfection as well as obtaining a thorough knowledge of classical and modern literature. At the annual examinations Prof. Brunton gained high distinction both in harmony and piano forte."

GROWTH OF HANKOW. Some of the Unusual Pro- ducts That Fill Its Store- houses.

An astonishing impression of the variety and peculiarity of the natural riches of China is given by the storerooms and factories of the Hankow export firms. Whereas the export of tea, the monopoly of a few large Russian houses, has for some years remained almost stationary, the value of the export of oil seeds from Hankow, to take one example of a comparatively unimportant article, rose from 3.8 million taels in 1907 to 10.5 in 1909!

Boats bring wood tar from the Upper Yangtze in big round baskets lined with paper to be refined and remelted in the factories; they bring as astonishing masses of the greasy product of the tallow tree used in European technical industries, also cotton and beam, gallants, pig-bristles, also skins, which are sun-dried in the yards of the stores and packed by means of hydraulic presses for sea transport.

Millions of ducks' eggs are, during the few weeks of the season, manufactured by the hand labor of coolie women and children into masses of pure dried yolk and albumen, smelling like burnt. The albumen is used in the photographic industry, the yolk in the European staff manufacture. On the same bank of the Yangtze are the new cold storage houses and the great tobacco factories of foreign firms, and near by are ore refineries, in which antimony, lead and zinc are prepared for export.

In this rapidly increasing export trade of China, says the Journal of the American Asiatic Association, the Germans are taking a great share. Both in Hankow and Shanghai nearly 75 per cent. of the export is handled by German firms, which look upon Hankow as the most important of their branches which are spread like a net over China. The capacity of the German merchant, thanks to his knowledge of the world market and his zeal to discover new resources, to which even unworked articles of export gradually present a lucrative side, has given him a leading position in the Chinese export trade which the more conservative and less experimental English and the Americans, thinking far more exclusively about "big" things, are not likely to win except by following similar methods.

GREAT CONSTITUTIONAL CHANGES.

By a small but sufficient majority the House of Lords has passed what will be known in constitutional history as the "Parliament bill," but is better known to common people as the "veto bill." With its own consent, given under pressure too great to be withstood, the powers of the House of Lords as a legislative Chamber have been materially lessened, and as the alteration has been effected by statute it cannot be annulled except by a similar process. For some time to come popular elections in the United Kingdom will probably turn very largely on proposals to repeal the "Parliament bill" or so amend it as to render it nugatory, and thus restore the former legislative relation among the three estates of the realm: the "Lords Temporal," the "Lords Spiritual," and the "Commons."

Until the enactment of the Parliament bill the House of Lords had a legal right to veto any financial bill sent up to it by the House of Commons. No proposals to raise a revenue or to spend it in the public service could become law without the Lord's consent given by three readings of the measure in the regular way. It was open at any time to a majority of the Peers to throw out either a revenue bill or a supply bill, but the right to do so had not been exercised for more than a century prior to 1910. In the session of that year the revenue proposals embodied in what is known as the "Lloyd-George Budget" were thrown out by the Lords. No one could question their power legally to defeat the Budget, but, as the event proved, the Lords have paid dearly for their rashness. The Parliament bill provides that their House can never again interfere with the enactment of a "financial" bill, the right to say whether a bill is or is not financial being vested in the Speaker of the House of Commons.

Heretofore the House of Lords has had a legal right to prevent absolutely the enactment of any measure of general legislation. The Lords have frequently exercised this right, and no one ever questioned their possession of the power they assumed to exercise. The final proof that they had it is that no measure ever became law without their consent given in the usual way, and that their formal consent had to be extorted for the passage of the Parliament bill, which greatly curtails their control over general legislation. All they will be able to do, unless and until it is repealed, is to delay the progress of a measure for two years, after which it may become law without their consent.—Tor. Globe.

CANADA AND THE FOOD TAXES.

A tariff on foodstuffs means a tax on a food. Britain learned that primary economic fact through sore experience. For this reason no British Government will dare tax the food of the British people. Such a proposal was made under the guise of a preference on Canadian wheat. I purpose Mr. Chamberlain said, was to build up the Empire. But three times over the people of Britain refused it. Every Liberal and every Radical fought it. To-day inside the Unionist party itself it is being strongly opposed and openly abandoned. The younger men are coming to see, what Mr. Balfour never doubted, that freedom to import foodstuffs from the wisest, the best and the most convenient markets is absolutely necessary not only to Britain's commercial stability, but also to the very life of the British people. Britain will not tax her people's food, and therefore she cannot give a preference on Canadian wheat.

And in Canada of all places this food tax policy is of all things the most inexcusable. There is for it not even the poor excuse of "protecting an infant industry." Agriculture and dairying and lambing and the fisheries are not puny infant industries to be spoon-fed. They can protect themselves by the robustness of their own superiority. All they ask is that the Government see to it that the canals are adequate, that the railways are efficient and just and that tariff obstructions are taken out of the way. The farmers scorn the notion that they cannot protect themselves. They mock at the idea that a tariff can protect them. If any Canadian workman can buy meat or flour or cheese or fruit at cheaper prices or of better quality in the United States than he can in Canada the farmer will not stand in his way. They are quite willing to take their chances with their products in a market open to the world.

The food-tax folly is even more foolish still. Under the reciprocity agreement not only would the consumers have all the advantages of the choice and quality and price provided by the wide range and variety of soil and season and climate given by God to this American continent, but there would also be opened to the farmers and fishermen and lumber dealer of Canada at their very doors the enormous and profitable markets of the United States. The almost prohibitive duties along 3,700 miles of boundary would be removed. Anything the Canadian producer has to sell would find readiest market without tax or loss. The same agreement that would give freedom to the consumers in the city would open wide the doors to the men on the farm.—Tor. Globe.

Potted Philosophy.

The greatest ambition any man can have is to be happy. Talent has a gay time spending the coin earned by genius. The man who undervalues himself is never overrated by others. He who is ashamed of honorable poverty would be proud of dishonorable riches. The young man needs an old man's head, and the old man needs a young man's heart. The man who hopes to wake up and find himself famous shouldn't depend upon an alarm clock.

EARTH CHILD OF SUN STORM.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—A new and startling theory of the formation of the earth is advanced by E. R. Moulton, associate professor of astronomy at the University of Chicago.

Prof. Moulton has been spending a good part of the summer at Williams Bay, where is located the Yerkes observatory and the giant telescope. He has been studying the sun and has taken daily observations.

"We have seen in the last few days," he said, "great storms on the sun. Matter during these storms has been thrown from the sun for a distance of 1,750,000 miles into space.

"I believe," he said, "that the earth was formed in a spiral nebula. The sun whirls very fast. The eruptions such as we have seen lately are not uncommon. The power of gravitation of the sun is so great that the matter thrown away from the sun is drawn back to it.

"But there is another sun that once in a million years approaches quite near to the sun we know. I believe that at the time of the formation of this earth the other sun was so near to our sun that it overcame the great power of gravitation of our sun. The missiles thrown from the sun were drawn away from it, left whirling in space and formed the earth on which we live.

Asaya-Neuralin
THE NEW REMEDY FOR
Nervous Exhaustion
Whipping an exhausted nerve system with alcoholic stimulants only shortens the road to physical collapse. The only remedy is Food, Rest and nerve repair. "ASAYA-NEURALIN" is and makes possible this cure. It feeds the nerves, induces sleep, improves the appetite and digestion; and soon full nerve vigor is regained. $1.50 per bottle. Obtain from the local agent.

A party of Norman peasants, eight stalwart men, set out one day to gather jagots. They worked long enough to have gathered 400 but returned with 57. And the Medical Journal, which narrates the incident, no doubts hits upon the right explanation of the small accomplishment: it tells what the party of eight men ate and drank for dinner: Twenty pounds of meat, 80 quarts of pear cider, 16 bottles of wine and eight quarts of cider brandy.

"How pretty and careless Mabel's hair looks." "Yes; and it takes her two hours to make it look that way."

On Its Good Behavior

ENGLISH SOCIETY DRINKS LESS AND GOES EARLY TO BED

"It looks as if the younger generation would soon become altogether given up to temperance," says a writer in the English Gentlewoman. "Not only at clubs and places where men most do congregate does one remark this, but even at dinner parties and balls, where lemonade and barley water are far more in demand than alcoholic beverages without which our fathers and grandfathers never thought of eating a meal.

"I hear, for instance, that a dinner party to a dozen guests was given by a very exalted couple indeed a week or two ago, and no champagne at all was provided, because experience had shown that hardly a glass would be consumed. Such a state of things would certainly make hosts and hostesses of the Victorian era rub their eyes in astonishment, and it remains to be seen what effect it will have on the coming generation; whether the boys and girls of the future will be stronger and better or per contra with much less grit and stamina."

English society is witnessing other significant changes, like the advancement of the dinner hour, and now it is declared that social celebrities are not seen as much at restaurant suppers as they were. The change is said to be so noticeable that it is concluded that supper parties may become bohemian again instead of smart, as they have been for a number of years.

The Coming Transatlantic Air-Liner.

(New York World)

When Grahame-White, the English aviator, was interviewed here recently, he certainly rose to the occasion. There have been timid predictions about dirigibles crossing the Atlantic, and one actually attempted it; but Mr. Grahame-White asserts not only that aeroplanes will cross but that they will have a length of 1,000 feet and a cruising capacity of 4,000, with comforts of travel equal to a transatlantic liner's. The time will come he thinks, when one may dine in New York and breakfast in London the next morning, possibly at late breakfast.

It is significant of the general expectation of greater events to come in aerial transportation that there may be few who will scoff at this. Yet even the scoffers would do well to read the contemptuous remark which greeted predictions less than a century ago of what would be accomplished by railway trains and steam ships. There is even less reason for incredulity now when only the other day in the around-England race persons took the express train from London to Edinburgh, 290 miles distant, to be there when the aviators arrived several hours before them. Atwood on his flight from St. Louis to New York has several times distanced the express, and he would have made a still better record were it not that his engagements en route compelled him to make "hopping flights" from one city to another.

Still, Atwood relates the peril he was in because he had to sneeze, and ascribes the probable cause at many accidents to loss of balance and control of the aeroplane due to a sneeze. Wherefore it would seem that the fifteen-hour transatlantic aeroplane is some distance off. Yet it is not altogether to be sneezed at.

The Power of Tears.

The explorer was entertaining his friends with some yarns of the Arctic regions.

"And once" he related, "I was cornered by a huge polar bear, and didn't have a bullet to protect myself. Tears came in my eyes as I thought of the home I should never see again."

"What then?" asked his breathless friends.

"Why the tears froze as hard as a rock and, ramming them in my gun, I fired, and killed the bear."

And then the tears fell from the eyes of the listeners also.

Lover—"I thought you were going to scream for your mother when I kissed you."

Mabel—"I was afraid to. Mother is in the next room, and she would have heard me!"

Election Card

To the Electors of the County of Charlotte Gentlemen:

I have been selected by a very large and representative convention of the Liberal Conservative Party of Charlotte County, to contest this Constituency, at the approaching election of a member to represent the County of Charlotte, in the House of Commons of Canada. I therefore solicit your support at the polls on the 21st of September next.

For nine years I have been honored with your confidence, as one of your representatives in the House of Assembly of this Province, and during that time have spared no efforts to advance your best interests and the interests of this Province as a whole. Should I be honored with enough of your votes to elect me, on September 21st next, in the higher arena, of the Dominion Parliament, it shall be my constant endeavor to advance the commercial and material interests of this County; to promote such measures as will secure to the people of this province a just recognition of their industrial interests and rights; and to support every principle that will strengthen the tie that binds this Dominion to the Mother Land.

I believe the splendid ports of Charlotte County have always been shamefully neglected in connection with all questions of transportation, which have engaged the attention of the Government of Canada. If honored with your confidence, on election day, that all important subjects shall receive my unlimited attention.

I believe that the adoption of the so-called Reciprocity pact, which is an important issue in the campaign, would materially and disastrously affect the great natural resources of Canada, including those of the farm and forest and the fisheries, that its tendency is to lessen interprovincial trade and trade with the mother land, which have contributed so largely to the prosperity of Canada during recent years, to open the country to the great trusts and combines, against whose excesses the people of the United States have been protesting so strongly of late, and to weaken the imperial tie.

For these and numerous other important reasons, which I hope to have the opportunity of discussing with the Electors of Charlotte during this campaign, I am so tiredly opposed to the adoption of the Reciprocity Agreement, and if elected as your representative, will use every influence that I can command to defeat that measure.

This issue is a very important one in the history of our Country. I ask you to weigh it well before you deposit your ballots. If honored with your confidence, I promise in the future, as in the past, I will give you the best of what is in me to prove myself worthy of the trust.

I am, Yours Sincerely and Faithfully
THOMAS A. HARTT.

Great Strike Has Been Settled.

RECOGNITION OF UNION CONCEDED BY BRITISH RAILWAYS.

London, Aug. 21.--Through the efforts of Lloyd George and the board of Trade officers the great English strike was settled last Sunday. A joint committee of five, composed of two representatives of the railway companies, two of the men and a non-partisan chairman, will be appointed Tuesday to investigate the workings of the conciliation act of 1907. The men claim a victory of unionism on the point of recognition of the unions, which was one of the most vital principles at stake.

The settlement was reached at a conference with Lloyd George and the executives of the men's societies.

The railway interests have empowered G. H. Claghton and Sir Guy Grant, general manager of the Midland railway to confer on their behalf.

The terms of agreement are:
1. The strike to be terminated forthwith and the men's leaders to use their endeavors to induce the men to return to work at once.

2. All the men involved in the present dispute, either by strike or lockout, including casuals who present themselves for work within a reasonable time, to be reinstated by the companies at the earliest possible moment and no one to be subjected to proceedings for breach of contract or otherwise penalized.

3. Conciliation boards to be convened for the purpose of settling forthwith all questions of the dispute so far as they were within the scope of such boards, provided notice of such questions be given not later than 24 days from the date of this agreement. If the sectional boards failed to arrive at a settlement, the central board is to meet at once. Any decisions arrived at are to be retrospective as from the date of this agreement. Rates of wages include remuneration whether by time or piece work.

Cardiff, Aug. 21.--Two men were killed and a third wounded when the troops fired into a mob at Llanelltyd Saturday. Those killed were non-strikers watching the scene.

Rioting continued throughout the night and three more deaths were added to the list. These casualties resulted from an explosion during a fire started by rioters in the railway sheds. The rioters marched into the town and broke in the business premises of the justice of the peace who had read the riot act and then threw his goods into the street. The troops dispersed the rioters but they returned to the freight sheds and set fire to freight there. As the flames were licking on the buildings a series of explosions occurred. While searching the ruins the bodies of three men were found. The troops made a number of bayonet charges and many persons were more or less injured.

Berlin Aug. 18.--Lieutenant Graetz, a German officer who has undertaken a motor-boat trip of 6,000 miles across the Atlantic Ocean, by the way of the Zambesi River, Bangweolo Lake and the Congo, is now on his way into the interior of the Dark Continent.

His first letter home, written from Chimbe, in Portuguese East Africa is dated April 25, and tells of his arrival there, his reception by the Portuguese authorities, and the preparations for the start up the river. The party was accompanied by a French cinematograph operator and a native cook. Their boat was plentifully stocked with provisions and drugs, and at certain places on the route food depots have been provided and from that they will be able to replenish their stores.

The Awemba tribe of natives told Lieut. Graetz marvellous stories of the mysterious inland sea known as the Bangweolo Lake.

This sheet of water, except at the point where the Zambesi River leaves it is surrounded by miles of reeds, and no white man has ever sailed its surface. The natives tell curious tales of what is to be found within its swampy enclosures. On the islands which they aver, stand the lake, are to be found colorless elephants and tall giraffes, with in the waters sea serpents and other strange and terrible creatures are concealed.

From the surface of the lake itself, declare the natives, hot springs spout into the air and pestilential winds sweeping across the marshes carry death and destruction to all living things.

Of the few natives who have ever ventured out upon the Bangweolo Lake in their small frail canoes, none have ever returned to tell the tale of their adventures. Lieut. Graetz thinks that unknown to animal and marine life may possibly exist in this hitherto unexplored region and it is to test this supposition that he has started out in a thirty-foot boat fitted with a two-horse-power petrol motor to cross the African continent.--Ex.

The Standard Oil Company has declared a dividend of $6 per share, payable September 15 to stockholders of record August 18. The dividend is the same as declared for the corresponding period a year ago. The point of public interest is that it will be the last dividend the company will pay before it distributes the stock of thirty-three of its subsidiary companies to its stockholders.

WOMEN SUFFER

More than Men.

Women have more than their share of the aches and pains that afflict humanity. They must "keep up" in spite of constantly aching backs, headaches, dizzy spells, etc. Mrs. Edward Calwood of 123 S. Harold Street, Fort William, Ont., says:

"I have suffered with dull, miserable pains, soreness across my back and in my sides for months. They would catch me badly at times I could scarcely move around. I would have dizzy spells and altogether, felt generally run down. After using a number of remedies without finding relief, I learned of Booth's Kidney Pills and found them an excellent remedy. They not only relieved me of the miserable pains and soreness in my back but cured me of my kidney trouble."

Booth's Kidney Pills cure Backache, Dull Shooting pains, Thick and Cloudy Urine, Gravel or Stone, Rheumatism and all diseases of the kidneys and bladder.

All druggists and dealers, a box or postpaid from the R.T. Booth Co., Fort Erie, Ont. If you derive no benefit your money will be refunded. Could we say more? Sold and guaranteed by J. Sutton Clark.

Arctic Hygiene

(From Health.)

Even at this late day, with the many statements of recent and wonderful alleged progress made in medicine and surgery, there is nothing really new under the sun. The diseases which beset the human frame in these days afflicted the world 2,000 years or more, and the leading doctors of that period treated them on the same general principles, if not with such full medical knowledge. The Old Testament is full of commands of great sanitary value, and they were an adaptation of the medical knowledge of Egypt, elaborated and developed. The law provided for personal cleanliness, the isolation of cases of infectious disease, and healthful diet. By prohibiting the use of blood as food, it held that there was a communicability of disease between cattle and men, as physicians even at this date are upholding against Dr. Koch of Berlin. The law forbade the eating of quadrupeds which did not divide the hoof and chew the cud, thus bespeaking digestive qualities, enjoined the fighting of infectious disease by fire, forbade the use of food of animals that had died a natural death, of carrion-eating birds and of fish without scales and fins. The sanitation and hygiene of the Bible is amplified and developed in the Talmud, which still gives hygienic law to the Jews. How complete is this conception of hygiene, physiology and medicine in this work of the pre-Christian era can be seen by a few of the diseases diagnosed in the Talmud 2,000 years before the present time when the physicians are still struggling with them; malignant throat trouble (probably diphtheria), jaundice, colic, nervous prostration, hydrophobia, gastritis, nosebleed, hemorrhage of the lungs, congestion of the brain, dropsy, malaria, ophthalmia, convulsions, tonsillitis, cancer, gout, carache, toothache and headache, and a thousand other ills. In one place the Talmud gives five symptoms of rabies in a dog: Its mouth continually open, its saliva flows freely, its ears dangle, its tail is held between its legs and it walks in by-paths. It is ordered that such a dog be destroyed by means of an arrow or a knife thrown at it. Personal contact with it must be shunned, because injury will be the result of contact; death that of a bite.

A letter about the respective value to society of bachelors and married men, written to the editor of the New York Times, has so much pungent good sense in it that it deserves to be remembered: "Who is the more useful in this community, a man like Edward M. Shephard, who worked hard all his life and devotes his profits (frequently ill-gotten, because he must bring home the money) in the rearing of a family of extravagant daughters, who chief aim in life is squandering his substance in useless frivolities?"

No mean raconteur himself, Kirby ransacked his vast store of personal experience for interesting topics of conversation that would bear rehearsal in the present company, and even Bance, finally and unwillingly drawn by some mysterious spell into the vortex of small talk, carefully selected, as befitted a "secretary," the least innocuous of his many escapades and ventured to confide it to the demure ear of his dinner partner, Miss Pleydell. This heroic action of the old river gambler—for he was desperately embarrassed at the honor shown him and thoroughly cognizant that what must be the inevitable and tragic ending of his partner's reckless and indiscreet testimony to the fact that the present company of M. Veaudry, compiled with Mr. Randall's grave silence and stolid countenance toward Kirby, had no effect upon the spirits of the company. It, indeed, their demeanor was even noted by the majority.

Before entering the house the two gentlemen in question had come to an understanding regarding the nature of their guest, concurring in the opinion that he was impersonating the gentleman in whose honor the dinner had been planned. But Aaron Bance had found a sinister significance in the general's observation to the effect that Kirby was a quantity of cannon, and although he lacked authentic evidence upon which to erect his suspicions while likewise granting that it was an amazing and unbelievable action for one to deliberately walk into the house of his enemies, he vaguely sensed that the pseudo Colonel Moreau was none other than the notorious Eugene Kirby.

Still, Aaron Randall was a strictly just and upright man, who was fully aware of the many crimes committed in the name of circumstantial evidence. Slow to pronounce judgment, he was quick to note when once assured that in no sense would justice be violated. Moreover, Adele, in whose integrity and fortitude of character he had the firmest belief and for whom he had the highest regard and proof of whose enemies he had had ample testimony, vouches for this imposture and even confessed complicity if not actual initiative in the same. In the absence of Tom Randall she was absolutely mistress with the right to act as she deemed fit, and had, moreover, exacted his word of honor that he would trust her until the arrival of her brother. Even had he been satisfied with the truth of his conjectures regarding Kirby's identity this promise to Adele would have pledged Aaron to secrecy, and M. Veaudry, being subsequently acquainted with the compact, likewise agreed that it could not be violated.

For the young creature this passive role was extremely difficult, and it was eloquent proof of his self-command and personal integrity, coupled with those refined instincts bestowed by gentle birth and breeding, that he considered Aaron's promise equally binding upon himself and, repressing all pronouncements of jealousy, refrained from denouncing Kirby as an impostor. The successful suit of an honorable rival would have been difficult enough to recognize, but this encroachment of a stranger who at the best was a masquerader if not a character more sinister and disreputable was intolerable. For M. Veaudry had gathered from Mr. Randall's manner that he suspected their guest of being guilty of something more criminal than assuming a name to which he had no right.

Thus, even while the young creature and Aaron prayed that Tom Randall's arrival would be hastened and coincident with it free vent could be given to their suspicions, Larkin Bance earnestly hoped to the contrary—hoped that Kirby would suddenly realize his danger, growing the more deadly and certain as every minute passed, and would ride for the river before the coming of Seneschal.

But evidently nothing was more remote from that reckless young gentleman's intention, for unimpaired of his partner's increasing uneasiness and that both were the object of watchful, hostile eyes, he continued to act as if time and opportunity had been created solely for Adele and himself. Dinner finally at an end, he and his young mistress, entirely absorbed in each other's society, sought the drawing room balcony, while the others, with the exception of Bance, indulged in a game of piquet. M. Veaudry, proving a wretched partner, his entire attention being occupied with the couple on the balcony.

M. Veaudry, owing to his preoccupation, proving such a thankless partner, Mme. Davenez at last turned to Bance and suggested that he and Kirby join the game in lieu of the young creature and the ladies.

"Oh, truly, Anatole," she added, with some asperity, tapping the other's arm with her fan, "you cannot keep your mind on the game and so we are unable to play. Will you surrender your place to Colonel Moreau?"

"It seems to me that I have already done that," he responded gloomily. "With as good grace as possible yielding to the dictates of courtesy, Kirby unwillingly terminated his tete-a-tete with Adele, and as he approached the card table his place was promptly preempted by the young creature, who followed Miss Randall to the balcony. It was the first time he had been alone with Adele, and his long repressed emotion and bitterness found vent.

"Ah, mademoiselle, it is true," he said reproachfully. "You are changed—so quickly. Yes, you will say I waited to see you happier, but I also had wished to be the one to make you so. Adele," he added earnestly, striving to take her hand, "if this difference in you comes only from the gratitude you feel to Colonel Moreau because he tried to protect your father I shall be happy. But how have this man been wretched you that?"

"I don't understand you, Anatole," she said quietly, drawing away. "The I that do not understand you, Adele. I think you know from the first he is not Colonel Moreau. I have some very strange suspicion of him."

Instantly the woman in her was up in arms, seeking to defend, eager to go to battle for the object it sought to shield. "It is enough that I know he is a man who has had a great wrong done him. That's one way of making a woman believe that you love her—when she's trying to help some one in trouble, make it harder for her—be jealous," she finished, with a bitter laugh.

"I am jealous—I do not deny that. But I am, first of all things, a man of honor," he said quietly enough, although white with anger. His voice trembled with emotion as he added, with simple dignity: "Do you think a man of honor has suspicion of a rival only because he is jealous? Do you think I would suspect him only for that?"

"I can't discuss it with you," she returned coldly, leaving on the balcony railing, she promptly became absorbed in the wonders of the night. Recognizing the sign of dismissal, he yet hesitated, miserably conscious that he had offended, but still feeling justified in the position he had assumed, still holding that those emotions which had prompted his words were but natural, impulsive and sincere. It was his right to protect the girl he loved from the wiles of a nameless adventurer, of whose integrity he had the gravest doubts. It was his right to protect her from herself, for deny it as she might, it was all too vitally apparent that this debonaire impostor had succeeded where others had failed and that Adele had discarded all sorrow with her mourning and was yielding to a fascination that he firmly believed would prove her ruin.

While he still hesitated, afraid to get stubborn in his resolution to thwart Kirby, Aaron Randall, suspecting some such controversy as had taken place, joined them on the balcony, and Anatole, with evident relief, turned again to Adele.

"Mademoiselle, here is your cousin," he said gravely. "I ask him to tell you what he will not tell me. I ask him to tell you what he thinks about this gentleman."

"Cousin Aaron," replied the girl, turning and confronting the two from whom she had most to fear, "my brother's absence you respect my authority here do you not? Very well, then. My introduction of this gentleman as Colonel Moreau is enough for you."

"It must be, Cousin Adele," replied Aaron, evidently greatly perplexed and troubled.

"And I am responsible for my actions only to my brother," added the girl, looking directly at M. Veaudry. He finished under the scrutiny of her eyes and the significant infection of her voice.

"In his absence I would protect you, I would act for him," he protested desperately.

"You may when you have his authority. Until then I bid you adieu." And, with an elaborate courtesy and pleasant smile, she vanished through the doorway.

"I CAN'T DISCUSS IT WITH YOU," SHE SAID GOLDEN.

the window, while the gentlemen remained on the balcony, a prey to the most disquieting thoughts.

"You see how she have change—in this one day—with him," bitterly exclaimed Adele, pointing through the open window to where in a distant corner of the room Kirby sat at the card table. Mr. Randall merely nodded and gloomily eyed his chessboard. He was facing a difficult problem and praying for the arrival of young Randall.

Presently from the music room there came the subdued harmony of a guitar and harp, and when the soft prelude had finished Adele's fine contralto took up the theme, singing, "I soon see late a rose wreath, not so much honoring there." It was Kirby's favorite song, snatches of which Anatole had heard the other humming at intervals since his arrival. Clearer, sweeter, purer sounded the words until the music ascended like an anthem and came stealing out of the window to mingle with the soft murmur of the night, to blend with the unheard, far distant harmony of the stars. Anatole stood transfixed a prey to the highest emotions to which man was ever hostage.

"You hear?" he cried passionately, turning to Aaron. "For the first time since how long? Now she is no more silent. Now she sing, not for her brother, not for those who love her, not for me!"

"No; it's for Colonel Moreau," finished the older man, throwing away his cigar.

"The crowd laughed harshly, contemptuously, his back eyes snapping with passion. "For Colonel Moreau? I dare you—look me in the face and say that man is Colonel Moreau?"

"I shall tell you nothing," replied Aaron sternly. "No matter what I suspect, I don't know. And I won't let a man be killed until I do know."

"When you met this man you did not know him," said Anatole, with slow significance. "I think to myself—who can he be? I make a guess and another guess and another guess, but I am not sure."

"Exactly," commented Mr. Randall, with some sharpness. "There you are. You are not sure. Neither am I. There is nothing to do but to await Tom Randall's arrival or, falling that, see another from him, trusting in how to act; otherwise our honor binds us, and we must meet this difficult matter with such patience and fortitude as we may possess. At the same time I thoroughly understand your feelings, and you have my entire sympathy. Let us pray this unbearable suspense will soon be terminated, for I make a poor and unwilling conspirator."

Meanwhile, at the card table, Messrs. Lark and Bance had been acting, for the benefit of the audience, a farce comedy bordering on the burlesque. Two seasoned gamblers, men who knew every game and trick, obtained in cards and to whom the pastebards were as familiar as one's knife and fork, it was somewhat difficult to simulate that abject state of ignorance for which their self-relegated position in society should attest.

Moreover, Kirby's native histrionic ability was badly handicapped by his thoughts being solely centered upon the now absent Adele, while the worthy Bance's natural clumsiness was greatly enhanced by anxiety over the mutual safety, re-enforced by a perpetual embarrassment at finding himself a unit of such society. Happily for them their partners were not of a suspicious or inquiring turn of mind and were entirely engrossed with the game.

"You gentlemen know the cards a little?" Mme. Davenez had ventured, with a charming and guileless belief in their ignorance. "Well, we shall each you something new of the game, my dear."

"I'll be glad to learn something new about it," Kirby replied, with gravity and perfect truth.

Mme. Davenez, with sadly amateurish fingers, assisted with many a flourish, intended to impress the presumable tyros with a fitting admiration for her skill, proceeded to cut the deck, while Bance eyed her gloomily and mentally criticized what he termed a "clerk's rife." His professional dignity was outraged by the fact that she had cut to the last card and then serenely demanded the deck, and forgetting himself, he was about to assert his rights and demand a new shuffle when a warning kick from Kirby checked him.

"Ah, 'tis your deal," Mme. Davenez at length exclaimed, tendering the cards to Bance. "First you must make the cards well—mix them, so—like you saw me. See, you suffel, as they call it. You think you can do that?"

"Yes, I reckon I can get that far," he ventured modestly. Taking the deck, he promptly forgot his role and proceeded to give a very fine demonstration of the professional shuffle, spreading the cards in the air between his hands until he resembled an expert bartender mixing drinks. This completed to his entire satisfaction, he spouted out the pastebards in a deal of lightning-like rapidity, while Mme. Davenez and the old judge sat bolt upright with astonishment. At length an extra desperate and well executed kick from Kirby checked the old gambler's stirring exhibition, and, covered with confusion, he dropped several cards to the floor and, in order to hide his flaming cheeks, stooped and began to miserably grope for them.

"You see," exclaimed Kirby, "my secretary is not so experienced as he might be. To speak confidentially, I would have let him go last month if it weren't that he is the only support of a wife and eleven children."

"I wish I was in the lower regions," groaned Bance sotto voce.

"I'll see that you get your wish if you don't sit up here," replied Kirby. But soon it was Kirby's turn to enter

Morey in Automobiles

Halifax, N.S.—Nova Scotia people have spent nearly three-quarters of a million dollars so far in motor vehicles and still they come. Included in the estimated total is Halifax, which about 125 motor vehicles, valued at $150,000 or $175,000. There are now registered in Nova Scotia, 206 vehicles and additions to the register are made weekly. Later Halifax has not figured so prominently in the registrations as earlier in the season, and Yarmouth, Amherst and Pictou County have been more in evidence in this respect than of yore. Notwithstanding the large number of motor vehicles now in use in Nova Scotia, the price of good horse flesh is as high, if not higher than ever. This seems to have been the experience everywhere with the introduction of automobiles, and is somewhat difficult to explain. But the fact remains that to day good horse flesh commands much money, and is none too plenty.

THE COLLAPSE OF GOLD KING MINE

Final Act in a Tragedy— "Hopes not Realized."

The Globe announced on Friday last the collapse of the Gold King Mine, in which so many thousands of St. John and St. Stephen dollars have been sunk. The following is the circular sent to stockholders recently:

Boston, Mass., August 8, 1911.

To the Stockholders, Gold King Development Company.

During the progress of development work undertaken by the Gold King Development Company, extending from August, 1910, to February 17, 1911, the ore veins in New Gold King Mines were again encountered, and large bodies of available ore opened up on the different levels.

From the report of our consulting engineer and the daily reports received from our superintendent we were kept in close touch with the development work as it progressed, and these reports assured us that though some of the ore bodies were of low grade, we were opening up pay ore on the different levels.

The development work was closed February 15, 1911, as our superintendent assured us that we had about 40,000 tons of available ore in sight—sufficient to run the mill for some months, of the value of $7 to $9 per ton, and that the mine samples in the new Becker vein, 6 feet wide, showed values of from $12 to $15 per ton. Having received such encouraging reports, we naturally felt that there was every prospect of success in the undertaking, and that we would be able to put the property on a paying basis again.

Owing to the fact that the mine had not resumed shipments, the railway was closed down January 1, 1911, and owing to the heavy fall of snow during the winter, they were not able to open it up until the 19th of April.

The snowslide of March, which carried away the boarding house with its consequent disastrous results, necessitated our providing accommodations for the miners before work could be resumed in the mine, and as this could not be accomplished until the railroad was opened, we were delayed in starting up the mill until April 29th.

The manager, Mr. Johnson, went out to Silvertown early in April to hasten the resumption of operations, remaining there until after the railroad was opened, the mill started, and everything running satisfactorily.

The result of running the mill through May proved so unsatisfactory, Mr. Johnson son immediately returned to the property, and finding that the ore instead of being of the value of $7 to $9 per ton as reported by our superintendent, only showed an average value of $4.40 per ton when run through the mill, and as we only saving 70 per cent. of the value, the net results were too low to pay the expenses of mining and milling, and as we losing money every day we continued, he ordered the property closed down.

This was certainly very disappointing to us all, but as it was generally felt by those familiar with the mine, and from the prospects in sight that we would find on making the upraises, ore of better value, and as Mr. Johnson was able to obtain reductions from the Smelter Company on the treatment charges— from the San Juan Water and Power Company for power—and also from the railroad companies, on the understanding that we started up again, and feeling that with the reduced cost of mining and milling, and also with the hope that a better grade of ore might be encountered he started the mill again on the 19th of June.

Unfortunately our hopes have not been realized, and after giving the property another fair test and finding that the results will not justify us in continuing operations, we have been forced to cancel the lease and hand the property back to New King Gold Mines.

During the time the property has been under lease to Gold King Development Company we have devoted our time and best energies in an endeavor to reconstitute and place it on a paying basis and though we have been able to reduce the cost of mining and milling to less than $4 per ton, which would have given us a good profit on ore of the average value of $8 per ton, we regret to have to state to the stockholders that the ore opened up is of such low value it will not pay expenses, and in consequence we have had to abandon the lease as stated above.

As we have not received enough money to enable us to pay the bills contracted by this company, we have asked the First National Bank of Silvertown, Colorado, to act as trustee in settling with our creditors, and they have agreed to divide our assets pro rata among them.

Yours respectfully,

I. M. JOHNSON, President.

JOHN D. CHIPMAN, Treasurer.

P. S. Mr. Otto Meers, President of the Silvertown Northern Railway offered to lease the property, as he feels that there is still value in the mine, and at a meeting of the directors of New Gold King Mines held on Friday, August 4, 1911, they voted to give him a three years' lease on the basis of 15 per cent. royalty on the smelter and bullion returns.

Mr. Chipman leaves Boston on the 15th of August and Mr. L. E. G. Green, of 53 State St., Boston, Mass., has been elected acting treasurer of New Gold King Mines.

BENEFICENT RAJAH.

Portion of King's Fund Goes to Slum Children.

London, Aug. 11.—The King's appropriation of $5,000 to the fresh air fund from the Maharajah of Gwalior's munificent $40,000 gift is a striking tribute to the splendid work the fund is carrying on among the poverty-stricken children in the great cities and town of the United Kingdom.

With characteristic wisdom and thoughtfulness, every section of his people was remembered by the King in dividing the $40,000. The army, the navy, the civil service, and the police will all benefit by handsome additions to their various benevolent funds. The general public will benefit from the generous sum allotted to King Edward's hospital fund. When it came to consideration of his child subjects, His majesty selected the fresh air fund.

The Maharajah's record of imperial service is a magnificent one indeed. He provided a special transport corps in the Chitral and Tirah campaigns. During the Boxer rebellion he spent $700,000 in fitting out a hospital ship for the Indian tropics. But of all his noble deeds of patriotism and charity none will be of greater worth to the empire than the $5,000, which, by the King's advice, has allotted to the fresh air fund.

Every breath of fresh air means new life to slum child, and the upbringing of healthy, happy children means new life to the empire.

THAT BALD SPOT.

Don't let that bald spot grow!

Go to your druggist at once and get a bottle of Parisian Sage and if that don't check the falling hair, and cause new hair to grow then nothing will.

Dandruff is the cause of baldness; dandruff germs cause dandruff. Parisian Sage kills the germs, eradicates dandruff, stops falling hair and itching scalp. We will refund your money if it fails to do this work in two weeks. Parisian Sage will cause the hair to grow, if the hair root be not dead. It causes the hair to grow thicker, more luxuriant, and puts new life into it.

The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package of Parisian Sage. It is sold for 50c. by all druggists or sent postpaid by The Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont., on receipt of price. Sold and guaranteed by J. Sutton Clark.

Appointment of the Prince of Wales.

WILL SERVE AS MIDSHIPMAN ON H. M. S. HINDUSTAN.

London, Aug. 16. The Prince of Wales is to go afloat for the first time as a naval officer.

The Prince was appointed a midshipman in the navy on June 22nd last and less than six weeks after being entered as an officer of the fleet has been appointed to join H. M. S. Hindustan, a battleship in the second division of the home fleet.

There are, of course, no responsible duties attaching to the rank of midshipman, but it is a rank in which the young naval officer gets his first experience in the handling of men, and in which the foundations are laid which govern the success or the failure of his future career.

Under the scheme of naval training introduced under Lord Selborne in 1903 officers for the three branches of the navy-- executive, engineer and marine, are entered together and trained together until they specialize in one branch or another in the rank of lieutenant.

When, therefore, a midshipman is examined for the rank of lieutenant, as he is after serving for three years as a midshipman, he must display a close acquaintance not only with seamanship, navigation, gunnery, torpedo electricity, physics, French mathematics and naval history, but also with steam engineering and with the duties of a military officer ashore. The groundwork of knowledge in these diverse attainments has been laid at Osborne and Dartmouth, and when the young officer goes afloat it is continued by the ship's officers, aided by a qualified naval instructor, who, in the case of the Hindustan, is Mr. George Andrews, M. A.

It is by no means certain that the Prince of Wales will remain in the navy long enough to be called upon to take this examination, but it is known to be the desire of the King, no less than of the Prince himself, that he should in such time as he may be allowed, learn as much as it is possible to learn of the multifarious duties which fall to the lot of the modern British naval officer.

The King, who entered the navy in June, 1877, was appointed midshipman on January 8, 1880, at which time His Majesty was serving in the Bacchante in the Atlantic. The first ship to which, after being made midshipman, he was appointed was the corvette Canada, on the North American station. The following comparison between this ship and the Hindustan, in which the Prince of Wales will embark, is interesting.

Canada Type, corvette; tonnage, 2,380; date of launch, 1881; length, 225 feet; beam, 44.5 feet; horse power, 2,000 speed, 12.75 knots; cost, $525,500; armament, ten 6 in.; crew, 263; coal supply, 470 tons.

Hindustan Type, battleship; tonnage, 16,350; date of launch, 1903; length 425 feet; beam, 78 feet; horse power, 18,000; speed, 18.9 knots; cost, $7,272,625; armament four 12 in., four 9.2 in.; crew 781; coal supply, 2,150.

Plants Need Sun.

A remarkable influence of the weather on the quality of medicinal plants has been noted by J. Burman, a German pharmacist. Low temperature and lack of sun's shine diminish the active principles to a striking degree but variation of rainfall apparently has little effect, as the moisture in plants remains the same, in dry as in wet years. Observations during the last five years showed that the acotine yielded by aconite ranged from 0.042 per cent. in 1900 to 0.104 in 1907. Other plants gave like results, and proved that 1909 and 1910 developed only half as much of the active principles in German plants as the two preceding years.

Chinese Sailors.

London, Aug. 16. Forty-five thousand Chinese and Lascar sailors are employed on British ships. During the past two years 10,000 Chinese sailors have been brought into this country and the number increases every year. These are the figures published by the Seaman's Union Havelock Wilson, the head of the union declares that British sailors must fight this Oriental competition. He does not believe in an appeal to Parliament for many of the Chinese, and practically all of the Lascars are British subjects a fact which makes legislation against impossible. His plan is to have the labor unions combine to prevent any ship from being loaded or discharged in the ports of the United Kingdom.

On the part of the ship owners the arguments are urged that Chinese sailors are more faithful, more amenable to discipline and a point which the English sailormen resent bitterly, are more efficient. That they will work for lower wages and that their cost for food and other necessities is below that of white sailors, is unquestionable, but those are points upon which the owners from motives of policy, put as little stress as possible.

Every man wants his innings--- likewise also an occasional outing.

FRIDAY, AUGUST, 25 1911

HOLLAND'S WEALTH.

Tucked in between two great military states, Germany and France, the low countries, the Netherlands and Belgium have long been flourishing greatly in their neutral position, their security without heavy armaments and their commerce and industries. Recent statistical flattery to the public.

Holland, especially, makes a remarkable demonstration of growth and prosperity for a country so little favored, in many ways, by nature.

With much land subject, originally to overflow by the sea and with a soil thin and poor in many districts, the problems of the Netherlands called for much enterprise and public spirit from the start.

Harbors sufficient for small sailing ships have proved inadequate for big steamers, and artificial accommodations for modern shipping have been provided at great cost. The lands subject to inundation by the sea and by tidal rivers have been protected and reclaimed by dikes. Diseases common in low and damp regions have been almost radiated by careful drainage and excellent sanitation.

The Dutch claim, with reason, that their largest city, Amsterdam, is the healthiest big centre of population in the world. The death rate last year was only twelve in every thousand inhabitants. Contagious diseases never become epidemic in the Dutch metropolis.

Equally remarkable, in another direction is the fact that Amsterdam has reduced its municipal debt from $51,000,000 in the last decade or so. The handsome sum of $1,200,000 was sliced off the debt last year, and practically all of it represents municipal investments in water-works, electric plant, street railways, harbor deepening, and enlarging and other public property and betterments of a productive nature.

Rotterdam, the second city of Holland and one of the ten greatest seaports in the world, has created a channel thirty-three feet deep from the sea, sixteen miles distant, to the city's expensive and splendidly equipped docks, and now that the capacity of the harbor is becoming inadequate, no less than 800 acres of the low plain near River Maas, on which the city stands are being converted into immense docks capable of accommodating the largest ocean steamships. Already the town has twenty-five miles of quays' the new docks will provide much more than an additional square mile of water for shipping.

These conditions in the two greatest cities of the Netherlands are typical of the country. Its wealth is rapidly increasing and its investments in foreign countries are fast rolling up to unprecedented proportions.

The result is that even the splendid advance of Germany is by no means evidence of superiority over the Netherlands in the rate of trade and industrial development, or in any respect except size. On the contrary, Holland has the better of comparisons in conditions vitally affecting the cost of living and the comfort of the people in the two countries.

At Waschede, in the Netherlands, there is a cotton mill owned by the same company which owns another mill of about the same kind across the frontier in Gronau, Germany. The wages paid in the two factories are the same, but the cost of the necessities of life is not.

Freight rates are calculated to be 25 per cent. less in Enschede than in Gronau. The cost of machinery is 12 per cent. lower and materials for repairing machinery are 12 1/2 per cent. below the Gronau figure. The difference in favor of the Dutch town is four per cent.

These are points affecting the manufacturer rather than the wage earner. Other contrasts are quite as great in respect to the cost of commodities consumed by families.

Flour and bread are 25 per cent. lower in the Dutch town than the German. Pork is about 25 per cent. cheaper and bacon 30 per cent. Cheese is 35 per cent. below the German price. Butter is four per cent. less and milk even.

Coffee is 15 per cent. cheaper in Hall fax and tea 30 per cent. In petroleum the difference is 40 per cent. and tobacco 60 per cent. Matches cost half as much.

The income tax is only 25 per cent. as much in Holland as it is in Germany. House rent shows the advantage on the Dutch side by 10 per cent. Water and sugar cost less in Gronau than in Enschede, thus scoring two points for the German town.

Clearly, it is hard to beat the Dutch. They have enterprise and prudence, thrift and liberality in wise directions, public spirit and common sense. Their great success is merited by their character and intelligence. Benjamin Karr in Cleveland Leader.

WAR MAY COME OVER MOROCCO

Absolutely No Progress Made Towards a Settlement.

Paris, Aug. 21.—Although negotiations between France and Germany looking to a settlement of the Moroccan dispute have been suspended for the present, the attitude of the French foreign office is that a settlement will be arranged ultimately if inexhaustible patience and moderation on the part of France can bring it about.

Conferences between Premier Caillaux and Foreign Deselvs upon the subject are frequent. Public opinion appears to trust the government implicitly. The newspapers are cautious in their comments to a degree that is rare in France. They refrain because of a desire not to embarrass the government in the least from the military preparations which are being made steadily in consequence of ministerial orders.

The naval ports are busy making the vessels ready for active service. This activity is partly explained as a preparation for the naval review off Toulon on Sept. 4, when President Fallieres will review eighteen battleships, six of which are of the Dreadnought type, nine armed cruisers and thirty war vessels belonging to the small classes.

New York, Aug. 21.—A Paris cable to the Tribune this morning says: Though there is no foundation whatever for the rumor current in London last night, that Germany had declared war against France, it is a fact that the Franco-German situation is most unsatisfactory. No progress whatever has been made in the negotiations and a settlement is as remote as when the conversations began. German claims for compensation offers no basis for a compromise. They extend not merely to territorial concessions in the hinterland of Camerouns, but also to a recognition of German industrial and commercial rights in South Morocco. An disposition that the German foreign minister may have shown to abate these excessive demands, is believed to have been arrested by England's domestic troubles. "The Berlin view is that the recent epidemic of strikes has caused a weakening of Great Britain as a factor in the European balance of power. This idea is implied in many different quarters, and is openly expressed in the following words of the Berliner Neuer Nachrichten: "England would not at the present moment be able to oppose a more decisive attitude to Germany on the Moroccan question with the same emphasis as say shortly before Mr. Lloyd George's Mansion house speech."—Ex.

Election Card

St. Stephen, N. B., Aug. 22 1911.
The Electors of The County of Charlotte.

Gentlemen:—

I have been chosen, by a very large and representative convention of the Liberal Party of Charlotte County, as the Candidate to solicit your support in the approaching election, in behalf of the policy of that Party and the Reciprocity Agreement now before the people for their decision.

During the three years I have had the honor of being your Federal representative, I have labored diligently for the interest of Charlotte County in legislation, public works and betterments, that would be helpful to the business, safety and comforts of our people.

Should I again be honored by you on Sept. 21st next by being elected your representative to the Federal Parliament, I shall use every effort to advance your interests as well as those of the Province and the Dominion; large. In thorough accord with the Government, who will rule the next Parliament, I feel I can assist greatly the many interests of the people of Charlotte County if elected their representative.

I believe very strongly in the great good that will come to our County and the whole of Canada by the adoption of the Reciprocity Agreement, which is the great and sole issue before the people in this election.

Both parties have tried to get fair reciprocal trade relations with the United States for many years, and it is now our chance, if we so elect, to profit by this agreement. Any tariff put upon the products of the soil and sea, give not the slightest gain or assistance to the farmer or fisherman. It lessens the great value of his labor, in the home market, and bars him largely from getting into a foreign market. Not tariffs, but larger markets are what the farmers, lumbermen and fishermen need for their best prosperity. Under the proposed Reciprocity Agreement one of the very best and largest markets will be opened to us. Our farms and homes will increase largely in value and our present prosperity greatly enhanced. The heritage of fair and just trade taken from the farmers, the lumbermen and the fishermen by hostile tariffs will be returned to them by the adoption of this Reciprocity Agreement.

I desire, dear sirs, above all things, to be your chosen member to assist in Parliament, in obtaining this great boon for you.

I am, Yours sincerely,
WILLIAM F. TODD.

TYLAR B. THOMPSON MAY BE GOVERNOR

St. John Man Boomed for Important Post in the West.

Mr. Tylar B. Thompson, a former St. John man and brother of Mr. LeBaron Thompson of the Eastern S. S. Company is a possible candidate for Governor in the interests of the democratic party in Montana. A Missoula paper of recent date says:

Tylar B. Thompson, assistant manager of the Missoula Mercantile Company, of Missoula, is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor. This announcement was made yesterday by Attorney Charles H. Hill of Missoula, who was in Hamilton visiting friends.

"Mr. Thompson's Missoula friends are going to do all in their power to promote his candidacy," said Mr. Hill yesterday. We believe that his business ability and his state-wide personal popularity stamp him as a man who meets the requirements of the high office.

"Mr. Thompson is popular in Missoula and he is popular here. But it is just the same all over the state. Everybody likes him. With Governor Norris a candidate for the United States Senate to succeed Dixon, Missoula will offer the name of Mr. Thompson for governor and do all it can to get him the nomination."

A Big Combine.

Ten Million Dollars to be Spent on Music Halls

London, Aug. 15.—Twenty-nine music halls, representing a total value of $10,000,000, will shortly be brought under one ownership and management as the result of an important agreement arrived at between Mr. Oswald Stoll and Mr. Walter Gibbons. Twenty-four of the properties are dotted about London, and there are five in the provinces.

The details of the agreement are in course of settlement, and it is the firm opinion of Mr. Stoll that the huge combine will prove a benefit to the public, the variety artists, and to the interests both of himself and Mr. Gibbons, the chief point of advantage being that the amalgamation will put an effectual stop to any "cut throat" competition in which either of the variety magnates might have been engaged.

Mr. Stoll, it is understood, will be chairman, and Mr. Gibbons managing director of the association of the halls, and it is intended to build three or four new places of amusement in London, one at Remington, as well as in the provinces.

War on Ritualism in Great Britain.

Surrey Church Stripped of its Altar Fittings.

London, Aug. 16.—The anti Ritualist disturbances at the little Surrey village of Thorpe, near Chertsey, have had as a sequel a serious case of sacrilege.

The doors of the church are always left open, and the village school-master, Mr. J. C. Windo, found that a raid had been made on the church. The High Altar had been completely stripped. From it were removed eight large candlesticks, the altar-cloth, the processional cross, and four large vases of flowers, while from the vestry were taken a censer and censer boat. The purgatorial board was taken from the chancel and from it were torn the names of persons for whom the prayers of the congregation were sought. On a search being made in the churchyard all the articles were recovered except the altar cloth.

The Bishop of Winchester has received the following telegram from Thorpe: "Your lordship having failed to redress grievances of parishioners of Thorpe you must be held responsible for removal of idolatrous images from St. Mary's church, Thorpe. Prosecution will be forced, and your lordship subpoenaed for evidence."

PEOPLE who sing because they want to are powerful factors in cultivating self-restraint in their hearings.

Some people are so exceedingly moral it makes you want to be bad just to even things up.

A man with a grooch is a sort of self-propelling wet blanket.

Opportunity laughs at some of us and plays tag with others.

The man who knows enough to keep still has the rest of us guessing.

Don't give advice for fear you may be called upon later to minister to the victims.

A girl's idea of a hero is a man with long eyelashes and a curly black mustache.

Luck is a good thing to have, but you are lucky if you can ditch up with it.

One way to discourage gossip is to keep on good terms, but not too good with your neighbors.

The world's all right to a man who is on good terms with himself.

The Answer: When does the honeymoon come to an end? That was through all of the years to extend?

What is the sign by which experts may read Billing and cooling have slackened their speed?

That the new model Really are sated?

Here is the truly infallible way—When he quits shaving his beard every day.

When it takes twenty-four hours for a kiss in the first flush of exuberant bliss, Souls of one thought and two heads with one mind.

Then does the barber his harvest time find?

There is no stubble Left to cause trouble.

He is her abject, obedient slave.

Least he can do every day is to shave.

But as the days run along and they find Business and household concerns on their mind.

Down to his office some morn he escapes, Leaving his whiskers to do without scruples.

Scissors dressing Has his carressing.

End of the honeymoon then is in sight.

Of her objections she makes no disguise.

"Never again!" is the way he replies.

But in a week he forgets what he said—Goes off again with his whiskers unshaved.

Useless complaining.

Honey-moon's waning.

May be annoying, but he doesn't care.

When she quits minding the end is right there.

Unfalling.

"What do you regard as an unfailing sign of spring?"

"Unfalling."

"Yes."

"When mother announces that these are absolutely the last buckwheat cakes we will get until next winter."

Her Toilet.

"Why doesn't she go out more?"

"She doesn't have time."

"Why, what has she to do but get ready and go out?"

"But, you see, getting ready to go out is a continuous performance with her."

A TALENTED ADMINISTRATOR.

Ralph Connor is a Man with a First-Hand Knowledge of Men.

Rev. Charles W. Gordon (Ralph Connor) of Winnipeg, the famous novelist, who has been appointed Chairman of the Board of Cancellation which will seek to settle the big struggle of our times in the West, is noted for his tolerance. That quality stands out prominently among his characteristics as a man, a minister, and a writer.

As good an example of this as can be found is an amusing incident in his novel, "The Foreman". The Anglican bishop in the story was being driven over the Edmonton trail by Sam Macmillan, a very competent but very genuine frontiersman. Every time the horses became wild in a slight panic would let loose a string of original oaths which made the bishop's blood curdle. The latter implored the man to desist.

"Just as you say, your reverence," replied Sam. "I ain't hurried this trip, and will do our best."

At the next sleigh the experiment was tried. Ordinary language was used, but the horses social in an hour and a half passed with no results.

"It's getting late, Mr. Macmillan, and it looks like rain. Something must be done," said the bishop.

"It does your reverence," answered Sam. "But the first way is to let them do their own worst, without I speak to them in the way they are used to."

More time passed. Then the bishop gave in.

"Well, well, Mr. Macmillan," he said, "we must go on. Do as you think best, but I take no responsibility in the matter."

He retired from the scene and Macmillan selected the reins from the ground and, walking up and down the length of the six-horse team, began to address them singly and in the most intimate and friendly manner. He spoke of their ancestry, their habits, and their physical and psychological characteristics, so that when he gave the word in a mighty enthusiastic roar of blasphemous expletives, each of the beasts seemed to be inspired with a special vigor and so covered their tracks in a single minute. The stand high and dry on solid ground.

A clergyman who will write like this might be the man to command all the circumstances and provocations on both sides of a labor dispute.

BEVERAGES SERVED WITH MACHINE.

Wonderful Apparatus Devised by an English Scientist.

A Mr. Gray has devised a "fluid motor" and among the persons already tested by him are Lord Russell, Sir William Crookes, Lord Kelvin, and Lord Kelvin, the Duke of Devonshire, and many of the members of the House of Commons.

Commenting on the results of these tests, he says that, generally speaking, the machine is not very sensitive to the state of mind of the person who is tested. He is a man of thought, a man of dramatic expression, a man of great strength of mind, and a man of great strength of mind. He is a man of thought, a man of dramatic expression, a man of great strength of mind, and a man of great strength of mind.

The apparatus consists of a box, the interior of which is fitted with a revolving mirror, on which powerful colored lights are made to play. The eye of the person to be tested is placed against a hole in the side of the box. The mirror is set in motion, and the length of time taken for the sensation of flickering to disappear from the subject measures his mental persistence, thus giving indication of his intelligence.

A Year Ahead of His Time.

Luxemburg was not so long ago the scene of an incident which has become a legend of comic opera. When the late ruler of the Grand Duchy was Duke of Nassau he was suddenly informed of the death of his cousin, the King of the Netherlands, and promptly journeyed from Vienna to Luxemburg, to which state he was next in succession owing to the operation of the Salic law. A ceremonial entry was made into the capital, and the new Grand Duke had already received personal congratulations from many of his most prominent subjects, when he heard that Kink William's physicians had been misled by a caustic tranche, and that, so far from being dead, he was on the road to recovery. So Duke Adolphus had to return to Vienna, and when, a year later, the King really passed away, several weeks elapsed before the new ruler of Luxemburg assumed the reins of government.

A Trick of the Sun.

Upon a mountain in Andalusia's quaint spectral forms are frequently seen. Whenever there is a heavy mist and persons are ascending the mountain they appear in all their shaggy splendor and sometimes so suddenly disappear into the hearts of those who see them for the first time. Of course it is all a trick played by the sun. When a hill party shrouds the mountain the sun is naturally obscured, and then he reveals himself by projecting the shadow of any person who is ascending the mountain into the clouds of the form of a gigantic spectre.

A Pedigree box was killed by an American child and a jury award of $19,000 damages. And with consequence that for tea good section men.

LOCALS

On Saturday afternoon the Calais team are slated to play here, game to be called 5.30.

It is reported that the American prize crop will be short this season 90 million bushels.

The Carson motor boat brought a party of about 20 from St. Andrews arriving here at noon Thursday, leaving again about 2 p.m.

The Scotch "Paksan" of St. Andrews was in the harbor last Saturday, the owner, Mr. Wheeler, who is summering at St. Andrews being absent, they remained for a few hours in town.

The Pulp Co. have purchased the Perry dwelling across the upper bridge and one of their workmen will take possession and the Perry family vacating it Sept. 1st when they leave for N. S.

The Baseball team go to Eastport to play the Quaddy's a return match. The Viking has been secured for an excursion fare $1 and will leave here at 11 a.m. returning will leave Eastport at 6 p.m.

The Camp Utopia Ball team played the Quaddy's at Eastport last Monday the score resulting in 4 to 0 in favor of the Quaddy's and on Wednesday they went to Lord's Cove playing the Crescents score 4 to 3 in their favor.

Dr. Russell of Buffalo, N. Y., has purchased the farm owned by Geo. Mathews and known as the Saints Rest for a summer house. Mr. Mathews will move to his house at Letete, while Angus McVicar who has been living with him has moved into town.

Henry Sherrard of Beaulieu has a fine new barn almost finished which when completed will be one of the best and most convenient in the county.

It has a good stone and concrete foundation and the quarters for the cattle which are in the basement is entirely of concrete as is also the manure shed.

J. A. McLe-4 left this week for St. John St. Stephen where he has accepted a clerkship and will probably remain a while. Mr. McLe-4 is a man of some means, a citizen whom the town can ill afford to lose, and while wishing him success all will be glad should he decide to return among us again.

The Charlotte County Exhibition will be held at St. Stephen on Sept. 12, 13, 14 and promises to be a bigger and better show than any held in the county.

The management promises to provide a very attractive programme of entertainments and all will do well to bear in mind the dates and make arrangements to take it in.

Geo. P. Taylor of Los Angeles, Cal., accompanied by his mother Mrs. J. K. Taylor of St. John West and cousin Miss Marguerite Taylor of Yarmouth N. S., have been guests at the Victoria during the week. Mr. Taylor who is a brother of Dr. Taylor is one of St. John's sons who have made good in the golden state, going out there from Carleton about 23 years ago.

F. M. Cawley has had a crew clearing up and painting the school building during the past 8 or 10 days and when the schools open the building will present a clean and bright appearance. It is something odd the manner in which public business is attended to, in this case the building has been lying closed during the holidays in its dirty state and just as the schools are to start the work is commenced and the scholars will go into freshly painted rooms which should have been finished some time ago and the paint allowed to harden.

Two of a Kind.

"Yes, he killed the goose that laid the golden egg."

"And ate it, I suppose?"

"I suppose."

"The cannibal!"

Simmons College To Have Novel Course.

(Boston Advertiser)

Simmons College will inaugurate a novel course next term. It is one that will fit young women to become proficient levels of households and public or private institutions. Miss Alice F. Wellesley, Wellesley, 1906, who recently resigned as manager of Wellesley Inn, has been secured as house superintendent and instructor of this course.

This course prepares a young woman to take the entire management of a household or institution to enable her to buy economically and intelligently, to see that the house or institution is at all times in perfect sanitary condition and to know how to properly prepare food so that the members of the household or the inmates of the institution will eat fat and healthy.

Among the subjects that will be taught by this talented young woman are administration, dietaries, household management, cooking, sanitary science, household sanitation, chemistry and bacteriology.

At the close of the course the student is given practical work by actually attending to the buying of the supplies for the college dormitories under the direction of an instructor.

Wife Sayings.

Reliability is the essence of success. Men make houses, but women make homes.

A hearty laugh is one of the best soul-restorers in the world.

Unless we believe that we are in the world for some great purpose, and that every human soul is of supreme value, we shall not get social evils swept away.

Women are just as old as they look and they look as young as they can.

We shall make little progress against the sins of society unless we learn to be stern about the sins ourselves.

Humor is God's universal medicine for the alleviation of human ills.

The writer of a good book suffers upon his country an incalculable benefit.

If civilized man has any one real article of faith, it is his conviction of the littleness of the rest of his fellow-beings.

Does Your Stomach Work Properly.

There is no complaint so humiliating and tiresome as stomach complaint. The reason so many people suffer with their stomach is because they overwork it and do not give it a rest.

Mi-o-na Tablets will tone the stomach and speedily remove the disagreeable belching (gas on the stomach) sour taste and flatulency or path. Dizziness, biliousness, and headache all disappear when you begin to take Mi-o-na.

Mi-o-na is guaranteed by J. Sutton Clark who will refund your money if they fail to cure or do what we claim. Postpaid from R. T. Booth Co., Limited, Fort Erie, Ont., on receipt of price, 50c.

A stitch in time saves nine, and every house fly killed early saves a thousand at least later on. Wilson's Fly Pads will kill many times more flies than any other article.

"What did your wife say when you got home the other night?"

"Nothing at all. She just sat down at the piano and played 'Tell me the old, old story.'"

Men Too Often Form a Habit of Constant E. Proof.

Although conscious of the power of a steady, manly living but over-often they are not ready to give up their old habits. Naturally enough, the child, unless exceptionally callous to his surroundings, will come to realize that the manly life is an expression of his own nature.

When Johnny comes rushing into the house full of enthusiasm over some new plan or new idea, and eager to tell his father, such a mother exists, "at many times have I told you to wipe your feet before you get on the door!" The greetings still ed, he sneezes, and, hurt and wounded, goes back into himself, and will never again expose himself to such a snub.

He considers in her less and less as he grows older, and she wonders why.

There is sound psychology in the argument that if you believe a man honest he will be honest; that if you trust a young man he will prove trustworthy; that if you praise a child he will deserve praise. Benjamin West's mother kissed her boy when he showed his drawings to her, and the boy, when grown to manhood, said that her kiss made a painter of him.

Fair Girl--"My father made his fortune when he was a young man. Would you like to know how he did it?"

Gallant Youth--"Not particularly; but I would like to know if he still has it."
