The fact that country people do not have the advantages of the town people, that farming at the present does not hold out such strong inducements to young men as other occupations, not only prevents the town bred boy from becoming a farmer, but it also draws a large proportion of the bright-

that the smarter men secure the larger share of the proceeds of the industries. Another disadvantage that the farmers labore under -the outcome of greater ability possessed by men in other industries—is the fact that improvement in methods of manuacture, trade, transportation and disribution has been very much more rapid than in farming. During the past fifty years the power of one man to turn raw products into manufactured goods and distribute them to consumers, through the introduction

the introduction of large implements. and the binder and header, has increased the capacity of one man ten fold in growing and harvesting wheat and in haying machinery to nearly as great an extent in making hay. There is still another factor that is detrimental to the interests of the farmer, and that is the exhaustion of the virgin fertility of the soil. Except in tae older settled parts, farming has been largely of the pioneer order, which means clearing up the land and cropping it in such a way as to produce a crop with the least labor, regardless of the exhaustion and loss of he fertility of the soil, compelling us now to adopt some system of fertilizaation that is necessarily expensive to make the land produce as much as it to discontinue the importation of Canadian horses for the army. In a previous issue we described the classes of horses demanded for the British army, and showed that suitable animals were extremely scarce. The consignments from Canada already made have given excellent satisfaction; but the present complaint is that our horses are too dear. One cause of the high price is the expense incurred in travelling over so large a territory for so small a number of suitable horses. Our farmers should not relax their efforts in breeding the class of horses required for army purposes, for such animals are also best suited for all other purposes, except as heavy drafts, and there will always be an active demand for them whether required for the Brit ish army or rot. Even granting thet a good class of horses is bred, which s not suitable for cavalry or artillery purposes, a demand for army horses would leave a vacancy which could readily be filled from the class unsuited for the army, the consequences being that the prices of all classes of light horses would advance. Lighter horses can be raised more cheaply, and are likely to command a higher price. It is to be regretted that horse preeding is not engaged in more extensively than it is. A horse can be raised as cheaply as a steer or a cow, and who does not know the difference in price? Another advantage in horse preeding is that the army officers seldom ask for the pedigree of the horse; individual merit settles every point, Hardiness, freedom from disease, and

A BORDER WEDDING

Mr. Fred. B. Edgecombe and Miss Nellie Eaton are joined in wed-

(From the Calais Times Oct 27th.) other brilliant event in this, the great est matrimonial season in local annals, occur-red last evening. At the residence of the bride's parents, in Milltown, N. B., Nellie L. Eston, only daughter of Charles H. Raton Eeq., was united in marriage to Frederick B. Edgecombe of Fredericton, N. B. The bridesmaid was Miss Gertrade Eaton of Calais, and Mr. H. V. Edgecombe, brother of Calais, and Mr. H. V. Edgecombe, brother of the bridegroom attended as best man. The bride wore white ottoman silk, elegantly trimmed with point lace, and her gracefully veil of tulle was addrned with white ostrich tips. Superb diamodds, the gift of the bridegroom, and an exquisite bouquet of Nephelos roses enhanced the effect of the contame. The bridesmaid was charmingly attired in a dress of white cashmere combined with surab, and carried a fine bouquet of half-opened blush roses. The floral decorations provided for the occasion were surpassingly profuse and beautiful. Banks of ferms, smilex and rare exotics filled the air with fragrance. In an embrasure were flower-entwined pillars and a hanging bell of Marshall Neil and Jacquemonet roses. The marriage service was impressively performed by Rev. Mr. Orose. After a reception that followed the ceremony, the party enjoyed a collation of Cross. After a reception that followed the ceremony, the party esjoyed a collation of delicacies gathered from far and near. Before the hour of departure felicitations and good wishes were showered upon the happy couple. Mr. and Mrs. Edgacombe left by the late train for Niagara Falls, and will then proceed to Montreal, subsequently in their teur visiting other cities. Their home will be in Frederiction. A feature of this notable readding was a display of alcount and costle wedding was a display of elegant and costly gifts quite unprecedented in this community. It was an ideal wedding from every view, and the congratulations of the guests were tendered to the parents of the bride as well to the the couple whose happiness had been consummated.
