The turmoil bewildered her. Weighted with the big old fashioned carpet-bag, hand satchel and lunch box, her progress through the crowd was slow, and she reached the steps only in time to be dragged aboard by the porter and conductor. As she entered the car the train started with a jerk, and she would have fallen but that a hand caught her and helped her to a seat. She wiped away a few bitter tears. Charles might have waited and put her on the train. He might have spared her that much time, considering she was to be gone so long. Three miles up the road the cars would pass the corners, and the house would be in sight. She leaned out, watching hungrily. There it was! The windows of her room were open, the curtains gone. Already the girls were tearing things out! Her few old, cherished pieces of furniture were probably in the garret by this time. Herself and all her belongings were as effectually swept out

Physicians are calling attention to the fact that influenza or grip has come to stay. In the larger cities there has been a marked increase in diseases affecting the organs of respiration, which increase is attributed to the prevalence of influenza. Persons who are recovering from grip or influenza are in a weak condition and peculiarly liable to pulmonary disease.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures coughs, bronchitis, lung "trouble" and other diseases of the organs of respiration. It is the best tonic medicine for those whose strength and vitality have been exhausted by an attack of grip. It purifies the blood, cleansing it of the poisonous accumulations which breed and feed disease. It gives increased activity to the blood-making glands, and so increases the supply of pure blood, rich with the red corpuscles of health.

Cook's Cotton Root Compound. Ladies' Favorite. Is the only safe, reliable regulator on which woman can depend. Prepared in two degrees of strength. No. 1 and No. 2. Take no other as all pills, mixtures and imitations are dangerous. No. 1 and No. 2 are sold and recommended by all druggists in the Dominion of Canada. Mailed to any address on receipt of price and four 2-cent postage stamps. The Cook Company, Windsor, Ont.

THE RIGHT TO LABOR IN JULY.

Out on the roads they have gathered, a hundred thousand men. To ask for a hold on life as sure as the hold of the wolf in his den. Their need lies close to the quick of life as the earth lies close to the stones. It is as meat to the slender rib, as marrow to the bone.
They ask but the leave to labor, to toil in the endless night
For a little salt to savor their bread, for houses water-tight;
They ask but the right to labor, and to live by the strength of their hands— They who have bodies like knotted oaks and patience like sea sands.
And the right of a man to labor, and his right to labor in joy—
Not your laws can blot that right, nor the gates of hell destroy.
For it came with the making of man, and was knesed into his bones.
And it will stand at the last of things on the dust of crumbled thrones.
—Edwin Markham.

THE LATE DR. DEWART.

A Good Story of His Youthful Determination and Zeal.
A good story of the determination and zeal of that great, brave and good man, the late Dr. Dewart, is told by Mr. Buchanan says The Toronto Sunday World. Dr. Dewart, when he was young, was little less than a "bushwhacker," or lumberman, and as that class are usually under strained circumstances, he was not exceptionally well to do. He was working near Peterboro, when he made up his mind that he was going to attend the Grammar School, in Toronto, and study to be a Methodist minister. But his pocket was so empty of the coinage of the realm that he had to walk all the way. He went through Bowmanville and had a breakfast there, the kind wife of the innkeeper refusing to accept any money from him as he had told her of the reason that he wished to go to Toronto and the condition of his pocketbook, if he had any. Later in his life he always remembered this kind lady when he went to Bowmanville. As he neared the outskirts of the city he was very tired and despondent and sat down on a stone to rest his weary limbs. A man came riding by and questioned him as to his destination, purpose of going there, and, in fact, all about himself in general. Dr. Dewart, then, young Dewart, answered the questions readily enough, and the horseman told him that when he arrived in town to seek him out, and stay with him until he was better situated to cope with the necessities of life, and gave him his card. Dewart was very much surprised to see the name of Egerton Ryerson, M.D. He wished to speak to the illustrious promoter of education then, but he had ridden away; but he remained one of the firmest friends of the prospective Methodist as long as he lived.

Told by a Drummer.
A drummer in a hotel lobby felt this tale loose on a patient audience:
In the west the drummer was making a run on a train through a mountainous territory. At one point, between two elevations, there was a valley, steep on both sides and forming a well rounded hollow.
The drummer was riding on a train through this valley when the train broke its coupling, and the car in which he was seated got separated from the engine. This was the descent of the first side. The engine could not stop on the down grade to await the rear car, for that would have caused a collision. Neither could it catch it on the up grade. The engine ran to the top of the hill and there stopped.
The story then continues that the detached car went down one hill and up the other, then before the car could get over the incline it would lose its force and would begin the descent again. Back and forth went the car for about an hour. The inclines on both sides were so even in steepness that the car just balanced in running up one and down the other. They had to wreck the car to stop it—Boston Journal.

Appropriate.
There was a great discussion in progress among the members of the faculty of a certain college. They wrangled long and raised their voices to too high a pitch, each eager to have the measure in question embody his particular variation of the idea.
Finally a professor of large mind and calm voice, who had been silent, rose and made a tactful, conciliatory speech. As the effect of his words began to show in the peaceful quiet that settled over the jangling members, another professor, who also took things calmly, turned to his neighbor and whispered the line from Kipling:
"The oil can soothes the worrying cranks."
When the speaker had finished, the more aggressive members took up the discussion again. Presently the professor who had Kipling in mind leaned over once more and quoted the line from "McAndrew's Hymn":
"And now the main eccentrics start their quarrel."

A Justifiable Protest.
"What's that?" cried the convicted incendiary. "Five years? Well, if you people ain't the worst I ever ran up against! Here I goes out in the evening 'n' sets fire to the tallest buildin' in town—sets fire to it so that in less'n a minute the thing's a shootin' blaze a hundred feet up into the sky. The whole population is there quicker'n scat all of you tickled to death at the sight! For four 'n' five hours you stood there watchin' the fire—hours of solid enjoyment, too—'n' it not costin' you a cent! Why, a circus or the theater or a scandal trial wouldn't have given you half as much fun, 'n' you know it! An' yet you sit there 'n' bring in a verdict givin' me five years in the penitentiary—me that's shown you all a good time 'n' ought to be considered as a benefactor if there was any gratitude in the human boozum!" —Kansas City Independent.

He waited on her with pleased alacrity. He had spells of meditative silence, and finally he leaned toward her, a look of keen eagerness on his face.
"Miss Smith, ma'am, why should we do any more passin' around? I mean," he hastened to explain, "why shouldn't we have a home? I've got a little place back there. Robert's been tryin' to get me to let him have it; says I'm too old to be botherin' with it, but I've kept it. There's pasture for a couple o' cows 'n' plenty o' range for chickens 'n' several acres besides. There's lots o' work in me yet. Let's go back 'n' get married 'n' set up for ourselves. I ain't hard to get on with, 'n' I like you," he ended, with childish openness.
Her heart leaped. She liked him, too, but she offered objections: "We don't know a thing about each other."
"We'd have plenty o' time to get acquainted 'n' lots o' interestin' things to tell each other about our lives. There's a little orchard 'n' small fruit 'n' a stone mill cellar. We'd have Jersey cows 'n' make butter. I'd help. We'd have all the vegetables we wanted. I'd fix it so's you'd always have a home if I went first." He was almost incoherent with eagerness.
"I've got some bedding and table linen and dishes and so on boxed, and a friend took them to keep for me," she supplemented as eagerly. Then the light faded from her eyes. "But what would they say?"
"We'd not tell 'em till after, neither mine nor yours. It's none o' their business where we stay as long as it ain't on them. Think of havin' a home again where we belong 'n' everything's ours; no cold looks 'n' hints o' being crowded. Seems to me I could live on mush in a home o' my own."
"So could I, or potatoes and salt. But we wouldn't have to. We could make a good living. I'm first rate at butter making. I always get good prices. A home, not a place to stay! I'm a good housekeeper," she declared candidly, with a flash of pride.
"I knowed it," he laughed. "We'll change cars at Quinby 'n' go right back to my county seat—we're from the same state—'n' get the license 'n' be married tonight at the squire's, 'n' when we're settled we'll invite 'em all to visit us. We'll come out with colors flyin'!" he crowed.
"But that'd be eloping. Running away at our time of life!" she fluttered, with smiles and tears.
"Think of a home 'n' you a-settin' the tea table 'n' the cat 'n' purrin' by the fire, a canary a-singin' in the window 'n' me a-bringin' in the foam'n' buckets o' milk 'n' no more passin' around."
He laid his open hand beside her on the seat, and after a moment's hesitation she slipped hers into it.

ANCIENT COFFEE.
The Way the Beverage Was Brewed in the Seventeenth Century.
There are in existence in Great Britain a few copies of an ancient cookbook, published in 1692, that gives what is perhaps the first English recipe for coffee. The recipe reads:
"To make the drink that is now much used, called coffee.
"The coffee berries are to be bought at any Druggist, about seven shillings the pound. Take what quantity you please, and over a charcoal fire, in an old frying pan, keep them always stirring until they be quite black, and when you crack one with your teeth that it is black within as it is without, yet if you exceed, then do you waste the Oyl, and if less, then will it not deliver its Oyl; and if you should continue fire till it be white, it will then make no coffee, but only give you its salt. Beat and force through a lawn sieve.
"Take clear water, and boil one-third of it away, and it is fit for use. Take one quart of this prepared water, put in it one ounce of your prepared coffee, and boil it gently one hour, and it is fit for your use; drink one-quarter of a pint as hot as you can sip it. It doth abate the fury and sharpness of the Acrimony, which is the gender of the Diseases called Cronical."

A Coming Lawyer.
A young lady teacher in a West Philadelphia kindergarten thinks that she has discovered a "Palladium lawyer" in embryo. She made the discovery in one of the exercises incident to teaching the young idea how to count. After drawing five ones on the blackboard and writing beneath the five successive numerals, one, two, three, four, five, together with a painstaking verbal explanation, she attempted to test the understanding of the little ones by turning to one bright-eyed little fellow and putting the question:
"Now, Donald, which would you rather have, five pennies or a five cent piece?"
"Five pennies!" Donald promptly replied.
"Why, Donald?" asked the teacher patiently.
"Because," said Donald, "you see, if you lost one of the pennies you'd have four left, and even if you lost four you'd have one left; but if you lost the five cent piece, why, it would all be gone—every penny!"

Till Dodd's Kidney Pills Drove Away His Rheumatism.
Story of W. J. Dixon, has set the Rainy River Settlement Talking.
Barwick P. O., Aug. 3.—(Special).—Among the settlers here the cure of William John Dixon of Rheumatism is causing much talk. The story of the cure, as told by Mr. Dixon himself, is as follows:
"During the summer of 1901, I had an attack of Typhoid Fever, and after I got over it Rheumatism set in. I had pains in my back and in my right hip so bad that I had to use a stick to walk and had no comfort in sleeping.
"I could scarcely dress myself for nearly two months, and for three or four weeks I could not lace my right shoe or put any right leg on my left knee.
"My brother advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills and after taking three boxes, I began to walk to work and lace up my shoes. And the best of it is, I have had no Rheumatism since."
Dodd's Kidney Pills take the uric acid out of the blood and the Rheumatism goes with it.

WHERE IS QUALLINS?

Something should be done in regard to the shooting of ducks on the Erieau marsh. Every night at sundown, as regular as clock-work, reports of gun come from the marsh and following every report ducks are seen coming from the marsh. There are a large number of ducks on the Erieau marsh this year, and it is too bad that they are being killed and scared now before honest sportsmen can have a legitimate chance. If Mr. Quallins cares to visit Erieau he can easily find out who the offenders are.

COMRADES

Copyright, 1902, by T. C. McClure

Anice made a face at her image in the glass, saying as she shook a dainty fist at it: "You idiot! Why don't you make yourself look as ugly as you feel?"

"I think, my dear," Aunt Margaret said, sticking her head through the open door behind, "it is because vanity is a trifle stronger with you than apprehension. You think you don't want to marry Charley Cliffe. I know you don't want him to find you a fright."

"Isn't it horrible, being so vain, with one's whole future in the balance?" Anice said, trying hard to be tearful. Aunt Margaret only laughed. After a little she said with twinkling eyes: "I have always thought vanity was among the heaven implanted instincts which help to save women from themselves. Now I am sure of it."

"What do you mean?" Anice cried. "Surely you don't, you can't, think I'm shamming?" Again Miss Gordon laughed and said: "Not consciously, my dear. The truth is I think you resent the fact that you have no choice in this made to order match."

"Well, wouldn't that gall any girl with the spirit of a mouse?" Anice demanded. Miss Gordon looked thoughtful. "It is unfortunate, as I see it," she said. "That, however, does not alter facts. Instead of cultivating a hostile mind, you had much better be fair. Remember, it is not the young man's fault. The blame, if blame there is, lies wholly with old Mme. Boynton. She wanted her fortune to go to you two, her step-grandchildren, the sole descendants of her two husbands. Besides, I think she reasoned that as Charley, whom she petted, would certainly marry somebody, it was just as well to put him in the way of marrying you."

"So if I say 'No' he gets the whole fortune, whereas he may relinquish me and keep two-thirds of it," Anice said. "Aunt, I have the greatest mind to stain my face and dye my hair red and wear a grass green gown and a yellow stock."

"A rainbow would become you ever so much better," some one said, coming through the door—some one tall and slim, with merry eyes and firm, muscular hands. He went straight up to Anice and kissed her upon both cheeks, saying: "Stars and garters! What a beauty you have turned out to be! Why didn't I come straight to see you? Nan, dear, I'm in the confessional. I've gone and courted another girl without ever giving you a chance!"

"Oh, how jolly!" Anice cried. "With all that nonsense out of the way I am awfully glad to see you. I remember you as a real nice boy ever so many years back."

"I think you were a tartar, and I know you were ugly," Cliffe said, his eyes twinkling. "That's why I made up to the other one. What have you done to yourself? The girl I left behind me was sallow and scrawny and green eyed, with no hair to speak of, and fingers like talons!"

"And just up from six weeks of fever," Anice interrupted, shaking a mop of yellow brown curls at him. "I have spent an hour a day ever since forgetting how I looked just then. If I had known how faithfully you remembered!"

"Well, what?" Cliffe asked as she made a tentative pause.

"Oh, nothing," Anice returned. "I almost said I would have made myself live up to your recollections."

Cliffe laughed, then ran on: "Now that under our granddam's nightmare of a will we have duly arrived at years of indiscretion let's settle money matters out of hand. I'm going to relinquish you in the presence of witnesses. You may marry whom you please for all of me. I shall also give you half the money!"

"Oh, I think you are a dear!" Anice interrupted, dimpling all over her rosy face. "And you'll stay here a month, and we'll be the best comrades going. You'll tell me all about your sweetheart!"

"On one condition," Cliffe broke in. "That you get engaged to somebody before I go away."

"You are a trifle unreasonable," Anice said with a softly brilliant smile. "I want to be free—free as air for six whole months—before I even think of bondage."

Comrades the two became, comrades so close and congenial Miss Gordon looked after them sometimes with eyes that were not quite clear. "They were made for each other and will find it out too late," she said in her heart. Outwardly she kept silence. Fate had taken up the cards, and she had no mind to try crossing the deal.

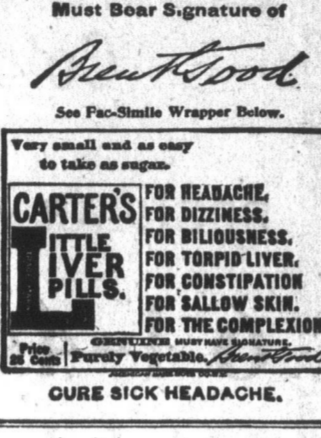

Cliffe spoke often of his betrothed, but always vaguely—she was as high as his heart, her eyes the color he loved best in all the world. When the wedding day was set Anice and Aunt Margaret should know. He had no sort of doubt they would come to love his sweetheart as she so well deserved. Now and again he gave them messages out of her letters. Anice was insanely curious to read one of the letters through, but Cliffe would never agree to it.

arms to her, saying a little huskily: "Come! I will carry you to the very tip of the rocks."

Anice felt him tremble as she slipped into his arms. Her own heart beat furiously—she was beginning to find out what his presence or his absence would mean in her life. But she smiled back at him bravely when at last they stood hand in hand upon the craggy pinnacle. The sun sank, a globe of crimson, filling the whole world with rosy radiance. In that transfiguring illumination Anice had the face of an angel, serene, transparent to inner light. Cliffe laid his hand softly over hers and said very low, "It is hard to go down from all this to utter darkness." As he felt her shiver faintly he went on, "Anice, must a man suffer his whole life long because of a mistake?"

"I do not know what you mean," Anice said untruthfully, turning away her tearful eyes. Cliffe caught both her hands. "I think you do know," he said. "Anyway you know we love each other. Now, the question is, What shall we do?"

"Easily answered—for you," Anice said, her lips trembling. "You are going away—to keep your pledged word!"

"But you and my heart? Dare I leave both behind me?" Cliffe said very low, his voice thrilling strangely.

"I could not love thee, dear, so much loved I not honor more," Anice quoted almost under breath. "We—we are comrades," she ran on a little tremulously. "Comrades stand by each other, keep each other up to the mark!"

"Comrades indeed and sweethearts and shall be plighted lovers," Cliffe cried, catching her to him in a breathless clasp. "Anice, darling, forgive me. I deceived you. I said I had courted another girl and spoke the truth. But it was with the understanding that she refuse me. I had your picture, dearest—even that had taken me captive—but I knew you well enough to understand how little chance there was of making you love me if I appeared in the light of a necessary evil. I kept it up thus long because—well, because I wanted to find out how well you loved me. Dear heart, sweet one, say you forgive the comrade who tricked you because he feared to lose you."

"I do not see anything to forgive," Anice said, nestling to him with a little happy smile.

Hats of Rough Straw—Pretty Linen Costumes.

Cherries and currants are quite popular on the rough outing hats, and hats in burnt or champagne straw are decorated with a little coarse lace and clusters of foliage.

Linen canvas makes up charmingly with touches of ingrain embroidery and smart strappings. The pale pastel blue looks well with dark blue and yellow embroidery on a white background. Biscuit canvas is charming with red embroidery. Little tasseled motifs are shown in cotton for wash gowns, and the pale biscuit and beige tints accord well with the coarse lace used on such costumes.

Although the blue gown trimmed with green is no longer modish, yet a pale green lawn or batiste gown is charming with a blue hat, and the prettiest blue hat is of rough straw, with plenty of light grass green foliage and blue silk cornflowers. A gown of pale blue green cambie is also effective with a deep willow green straw trimmed with pale blue forgetmenots and a deep purple iris or two.

The ruffle is no more, but last season's cape ruffle with longer ends is the fashionable "stole" of the present season. Three or four frills headed with lace or a flat collar put on to form a heading is sufficiently deep to widen the shoulders in the accepted style, and with long ends decorated with frills, ruchings or ribbon, and sometimes with all three, the stole is complete. Some of the newest stoles have capes with numerous frills, and these are already copied in common lace and will have but a brief reign. Flat stoles of ostrich and marabou feathers are very handsome. These have many tails and are altogether fussy and becoming.

The illustration shows a sailor of beige colored straw trimmed with cherries.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

GRASS LAWN AND ALPACA.

The Former Makes Smart Dresses and the Latter Model Coats.

An unlined coat of white alpaca is pretty for sailing or seashore wear.

Motoring coats are very smart in pale biscuit or ivory shades, with a chic little collar of velvet, white moire or white kid.

The craze for fougard is growing in favor. There is a good deal of distinction to it, and its wearing qualities are fast. The deeper shades are the most fashionable and also combine best with the ecru tints in straw which are the fad this year.

FOUGARD WAIST.

A good many Parisian dressmakers are turning out skirts of plaited grass lawn with blouse bodices and large collars, adding at the neck and waist a touch of grass green or old rose. These are sure to have a fair share of popularity, owing to the rage for biscuit and fawn shades.

Grass lawn can look very charming for a simple frock, combined with entre-deux of coarse lace around the hem of the skirt and a wide lace collar.

Fanne of plush ribbon, fancy and broadened, is accounted a novelty and is quite a host in itself for trimming purposes. A belt of it worn the other day was in a rich shade of green, with a delicate gray cloth costume, fastening in front through an immense square buckle of plain dull gold. These buckles, by the way, large, massive and severely plain, carry the mind back to the Stuart period. They are details accounted smart in Paris and seem to fit in with peculiar aptness to the style of the gathered skirt and waist bodice. Black belts with these great dull gold buckles are immensely chic and are to be worn with all manner of toilets, silk alike with cloth.

The picture shows a simple waist of blue and white foulard trimmed with embroidery.

But in Elizabeth there was too small a field. Her work was too varied in the Elizabeth hospital, with too little of a chance to bring her scientific acquirements and practical theories into play.

At the Kings County hospital Miss Corbett was dietitian, and she still remains on the city pay roll as such, though now in the charities department central office her duties are very different.
