A Child of Sorrow.

CHAPTER XXIII.

"She is splendid, but mad!" said Mr. Coburn.

"Yes; but it's the kind of madness which defies us sane men," retorted his partner.

It is to be feared that Mr. Coburn swore under his breath, perhaps for the first time in his life.

"We must go to this man at once and make the best terms we can. Unfortunately for everybody concerned, poor Carrington left no money to anyone excepting the two girls; if he had done so, the other legatees or legatees could have disputed this deed of gift; at any rate, there would have been some proceedings which would have afforded us time. But, as it is, this girl will succeed in ruining herself; and not a soul can prevent her!"

Half an hour after the lawyers had gone a telegram came for Carrie. She ran with it to Maida's room.

"Ricky has got the rooms, Maida," she said. "There is time to catch the two o'clock!"

Maida covered her face with her hands for a moment. Then she stretched them out with a gesture of assent.

"We will go!" she said.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Heroncourt was tramping slowly through the plantation in which Maida had so nearly met her death, and in which he had avowed his love for her. It was raining in a drizzling and uncomfortable fashion, so that he could scarcely keep his pipe alight; and he trudged along with the collar of his shooting jacket turned up, his head bent and gun under his arm. Every now and then a pheasant rose and whirred well within shot; but he merely glanced at it in a listless fashion, as if he had forgotten that he had come out for the Englishman's pastime, to "kill something."

A month had passed since Mr. Carrington had been carried to his grave in the little church yard, a month which had told pretty severely upon Heroncourt. He looked thinner, his face was haggard and worn, that expression of care which distinguishes the faces of those who are fighting against a bitter sorrow; the happy light had left his eyes, and there were lines about his mouth which carking care draws with a depth and precision which the most skilful draftsman might envy.

He had lost the hope which is the light of life. His love for Maida had absorbed his whole being, and having lost her he felt like a shadow moving amongst shadows in this dreary pageant which we call the World; and his present misery was accentuated and intensified by the happiness which had been his only a few short weeks ago.

He was living alone at the Court, for Glassbury had been compelled to go back to town to attend to his political duties—he was in the Cabinet again, and there was an autumn session—and, of course, Lady Glassbury had accompanied him. They had begged him to go with them; but he had refused, for he knew that if he went to London he would haunt Colebridge Street—and Maida had refused to see him.

It was better for him to remain at the Court than to show his haggard face at his club, to meet the curious, though sometimes sympathetic, eyes of his friends and acquaintances; besides, there was a mournful pleasure to be extracted by visiting the spots where he and Maida had known such perfect happiness.

Presently he came to the very place where Maida had rested in his arms after he had rescued her from the falling tree.

It still lay there, for he had given orders that it should remain, and he sat down on it and relit his pipe, looking round him with knitted brows and aching heart.

Presently he took a letter from his pocket and read it for the third time that morning. It was from Lady Glassbury, and ran thus:

"Dear Byrne—I saw her yesterday; she is very pale and thin; but she says that she is well. I spoke of you to her and she talked of you quite calmly—alas! too calmly—but she still adheres to her resolution not to see you. 'What would be the use,' she said, 'in that sweet, low voice of hers, I want Lord Heroncourt to forget me.' She always calls you Lord Heroncourt, poor child! It would not help him to do so, if we were to meet, even occasionally. I should not be worthy of his love if I did not do all I could to save him from myself. Tell him that I am quite well, that I have got to work again, and that I have many engagements. I am afraid that I shall not be able to see her often, for several times when I have called the little servant who is devoted to her and Carrie, told me not to see her, and Maida wrote me a note telling me that she would rather not see me. It is not pride, but her dread of being reminded of the past and of you. Both the girls are cheerful—Maida is not one to wear the willow—she is the bravest girl I ever met—and Carrie, well; she does her best to be bright and merry for Maida's sake. I met Mr. Coburn the other day and he was full of the 'Carrington affair,' as he called it. He made out of the deed of gift—as he said; 'if he did not do it, someone else would'—but, as you know, the man Josiah Purley has disappeared and cannot be found, though old Mr. Coburn has made every endeavour to discover him. It appears that he did not return to the hotel after the funeral and all trace of him has been lost. Mr. Coburn says that it is quite easy for a man like Purley, who has nothing up against him and is unknown to the police, to leave England and leave no clue behind him. But does it not sound like a romance? Here are you and Maida separated by this quixotic resignation of a vast fortune which, at present, lies absolutely without an owner? What are you doing and what will you do, dear Byrne? My heart aches for you! Your case is even worse than Maida's; for she has her work, poor child; and you have none. Glassbury says: 'What about politics?' Would you like to go into the House? The party would look after you and find you a place. I don't know what to advise. Come up and let us talk it over. But, understand, you must not hope to see Maida, unless it be at a distance; her firmness is adamant. It is wonderful how so tender and sweet a girl can be so resolute."

Heroncourt folded the letter and put it away with a smile. Politics! He knew that he was quite unfitted for such a career; he hated a public life, publicity of any kind; and, though he was not averse to work, he knew that the drugery of a public office would be intolerable. He could have driven a plough or turned brick-layer with profound satisfaction—if he could have Maida to go home to after his day's toil.

He went home and dressed for dinner, and the faithful Baxter, whose devoted, old heart ached for his master, noted Heroncourt's listless pre-occupation. Heroncourt scarcely ate anything at dinner, which was served with due state by the butler and a couple of footmen, who placed the many dishes on the table, and removed them, for the most part, untouched; and after the pretence of a meal was over, Heroncourt called for his overcoat and tramped up, and down the terrace until he had worn himself out, and could face the silence of his own room, where he would probably lie sleepless until the morning.

Now and again he wandered to the Towers, which was now closed and silent as a tomb, and where the caretaker—an individual as gloomy as the place itself, eyed him with an awed curiosity. Day after day passed in this way, until the life became intolerable, and he felt that he must go to London, if only to be near Maida, to breathe the same air.

He and Baxter went to his rooms, and Heroncourt walked round to the Glassburys. Ethelreda was at home, and could scarcely refrain from starting when she saw his face, could not refrain from muttering a shocked exclamation.

"Oh, Byrne!"

"Have you seen her again?" he asked.

She shook her head.

"No; she will not see me. And, Byrne, she is quite right."

"I must see her," he said.

"You cannot. You cannot force your way into the house. Byrne, you must be patient; you would only pain and torture her by the sight of you. Do you think I do not know?" she added, with a sigh.

"I must see her; if only from a distance," he said, stubbornly. "I am simply starving for a sight of her. That sounds like a love-sick boy, doesn't it? But, by Heaven, it's the simple truth!"

Lady Glassbury was silent for a moment, then she said:

"She is reciting at the Heathcotes' to-night; you shall come with me—but, Byrne, you will not attempt to speak to her? You will promise me?"

Ah, Byrne, you see I love her as well as you, and I cannot have the poor girl made more unhappy than she is. You must keep out of sight, or she will break down; perhaps be made ill, and so unable to work."

"I promise," he said; "but I must see her."

He went with Lady Glassbury to the Heathcotes'. It was a "small and early," but of course it was late and the rooms were crowded. He took up a position in a corner, almost hidden from view, and waited. He had to sit through several items of the programme, and then Maida appeared. The blood rushed to his face at sight of her, then ebbed back to his aching heart. She was dressed in black—his heart ached afresh at the thought that she would have to face the world, work for her living in this public way, in these early days of her mourning—and she was very pale; but she looked lovelier than ever, and the desire for her throbbled in his every vein. Her appearance stilled the conversation, as usual, and everybody watched her eagerly.

Grief had not robbed her of her wonderful art; indeed, her sorrows had endowed her with an additional force, that of experience, and she recited with a power and an intensity which held the audience spell-bound. He himself was carried away by her power; but as she finished, the sense of her personality came back upon him, and he scanned her with a lover's eagerness and minuteness. The black dress was unrelieved by a single ornament, excepting the plain gold bracelet which he had restored to her; and this link with the past brought a lump into Heroncourt's throat. How could she forget him while she wore that? "Oh, my darling!" almost broke from his lips.

TO-NIGHT'S BASEBALL.

To-night's ball game between the B. I. S. and Cubs should attract a large gate, as apart from the exciting clash expected, the entire proceeds are for the Orphanage funds. The winners will play yesterday's victors at the Garden Party for the H. D. Reid Cup. Major Montgomerie and Mr. Cheaman will umpire, with Messrs. Osterbridge and Mullings in charge of the score sheets. The game starts at 7 o'clock with the following players:—

B. I. S.	CUBS.
Carew	Hall
Brazie	Clouston
French	Catcher
1st Base	St. John
Brien	Duggan
2nd Base	Canning
Doyle	Thomas
McGrath	Short Stop
Williams	Roberts
P. Grace	Right Field
C. Grace	Carter
Centre Field	Channing

with the winners of the B. I. S. Cubs game to-night for the Reid Cup. The game was handled to everybody's satisfaction by "Chief" Cheaman and Major Montgomerie, while Messrs. Ring and Grace had charge of the score sheets.

Obituary.

WILLIAM J. ENGLISH.

Mr. W. J. English, proprietor of the 'Bell Island Miner,' passed peacefully away at one o'clock yesterday morning. Mr. English, for the past two years has suffered from an old complaint which eventually terminated in his death. He was in his 55th year and was one of the old school of printers and studied the case with his father the late Joseph English, who at one time published the Weekly Advocate. Later he was attached to the staff of the Colonist and for several years was foreman of the Daily News. Besides being an expert printer he was also the author of several poems. For upwards of ten years Mr. English has been a resident of Bell Island, where he was held in the highest esteem by all who knew him. His publication, though small in size, had a ready sale among the miners, for to them and to the people of the Island William English was a staunch friend. Left to mourn is a widow, five daughters, two brothers, Joseph, in the city and Valentine in the United States, to whom the Telegram offers deep sympathy.

NEW CUSTOMS ORDERS.—With the work of salving the valuable cargo of the big liner Kristiansford, wrecked at Mistaken Point, going on, the Customs authorities have taken precautions to protect the tariff. Accordingly the Customs boatmen are instructed to board all local schrs. now arriving until further notice. Several loads of the salvaged cargo, including sugar and flour, have reached here since yesterday.

YESTERDAY'S GAME.

Yesterday afternoon's preliminary Mount Cashel baseball game between the Wanderers and Red Lions for the H. D. Reid Cup, attracted a large number of fans, and much to the surprise of even their most sanguine supporters, the Hiltz crew put it all over last year's champions by a score of 8 runs to 1. The absence of Punky Brown in the box for the blue-and-white aggregation no doubt considerably weakened their team as the Lions found Britt quite easily and in 4 innings piled up 7 runs on him. Hartnett replaced him in the 5th, and for the 3 innings held them to 1 run. The surprise of the evening, however, was the magnificent twirling of Nuts Ellis for the Lions. Nuts has been a tried and true pitcher for the League, and no one imagined for a moment that he could do effective work on the mound. The ineffectuality of McAskill and injuries received by Cooney, forced them to take a chance on Ellis, and his work yesterday afternoon made all supporters of the team sorry that his services were not requisitioned at the beginning of the season. He has a very fast ball with a vicious break, and the inability of the Wanderers to find him was proved by the fact that he had 9 strikeouts to his credit, whereas Britt hailed for 2 only, and Hartnett 1. Features of the game were Heath's long hit for 3 bags, and Mullings' two bagger. Brien and Berteau pulled a clever double play in the 5th. The Red Lions being the winners will therefore be one of the contesting teams at the Garden Party on Wednesday, where they will clash

OVEREATING.

Overeating is a dangerous habit which is caused by allowing the appetite to roam at will without a bridle on. If a law could be passed requiring the owner of every appetite to drive it with a Mexican bit, people would listen to the after dinner speaker with more interest and the members of the medical fraternity would have to take in washing in order to pay the rent.

In pioneer days overeating was not practised to any great extent. The six o'clock dinner of nine courses and there was little incentive for a man to go out and become thoroughly congested with free victuals. There was not so much variety in the food line, either. There would be less overeating to-day if people had to face the cold, still remains of a batch located near the waistband, and will never be confused with the toothache by one who has both in a firm and decided manner. The church supper is highly productive of overeating en masse, and should never be held on the night preceding prayer-meeting. The best time to overeat is on Saturday, which will allow Sunday to be observed as a day of fasting and prayer, as was originally intended.

Overeating is a fertile cause of long-distance dyspepsia, which hangs around the premises long after the victim has taken to drinking bouillon in stick form. Dyspepsia is produced by the stomach becoming disatisfied with its surroundings and refusing to become acclimated to any kind of food. It is a mournful, unhealthy disease with a high temperature and a nagging disposition, and is harder to discourage than the hay-fever germ. People who overeat with great violence are particularly subject to it, and have to be put on a diet of sackcloth, ashes and scalded milk.

One of the most discouraging things in the life of a sensitive housewife is to possess a husband who is always finding fault with home cooking, but who can't sit down at an outside dinner party without overeating in a shameless and defiant tone of voice. When we consider how much married women have to put up with in this line, it is no wonder that bachelor maids are getting thicker than drug-stores in Kansas.

Died at St. Agathe Des Monts, Canada.

It is with sorrow that we have to announce the death of Hubert, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Saunders of Grand Falls. This is especially sad because of the fact that just one year ago they experienced the loss of their eldest son. Some two years ago Hubert developed a disease for which the doctors here could do little, so he decided to seek special treatment at St. Agathe Des Monts, health resort, Province of Quebec, Canada. After spending a year there he returned apparently much improved in health, but such was the nature of his illness that at the end of two months he was obliged to return to Canada again. His health again improved, and until a fortnight ago he was confident that he would soon be well enough to return home. But Divine Providence had not so willed it, for on Friday, June 29th, his father received the sad news that there was little hope of his recovery, and he left for St. Agathe Des Monts by Monday morning's express. Even when his father arrived Hubert thought it was to take him home and was even wondering what work he could do next winter. Two hours after expressing himself thus, however, he had passed to the Great Beyond. His disposition was always quiet and unassuming and he bore his illness without repining. The remains arrived by Friday night's express. The funeral took place Sunday afternoon, and the large representative gathering of all denominations which attended it showed the respect, in which he was held by the people of the town. To the bereaved parents, and especially to the stricken mother, we extend our heartfelt sympathy in this their great loss, but they will be comforted by the knowledge that their loss is Heaven's gain.

Thus time, unheeded, steals away
The life which nature gave;
Thus are our bodies every day
Declining to the grave;
Thus from us all our pleasures fly
Whereon we set our heart;
And when the night of Death draws nigh,
Thus will they all depart.—COM.

The Gas Range!

The Gas Range means comfort for the housewife; shorter kitchen hours for her, and a cleaner kitchen. It is a great mistake to think that cooking with gas is expensive.

Whenever a woman becomes used to gas for cooking, thoughts of a coal or wood stove fill her with gloom. A Gas range is so much easier to operate, so efficient for all kinds of cooking, and so much cleaner, that the idea of going back to the old style methods is decidedly unpleasant. Yet in winter many housewives think they must use a coal or wood stove, because there is no other way of heating the kitchen. THERE IS ANOTHER WAY AND IT IS FAR BETTER THAN THE OLD. THE CLOW GAS STEAM RADIATOR WAY. may 23, tf

OUR COUNTRY

This is the country of our birth, the fairest land on all the earth. Here freedom is a living thing, no fake invented by a king. No gallant yokes are on our backs, we groan beneath no unjust tax, the government is all our own and not the ukase from a throne. The great republic of the west! The haven of the world's oppressed, the vital text of all who plan a worldwide brotherhood of man. America! Ten million eyes are gazing where her banner flies, and countless hearts forevermore make plans to reach the freeman's shore. Beside the Ganges' sullen flow, and by the winding, storied Po, wherever men are tired and worn, wherever heartsick tollers mourn, wherever life is sad and gray, the eyes of thousands turn this way. And that their eyes may to us turn, and that our beacons still may burn, informing all upon this sphere that freedom's still existing here, we take once more the sword and brand to battle for our native land. For freedom, in the people's sight, if we surrendered what is right, would be as dark and foul a thing as though invented by a king.

Fashions and Fads.

Tulle dresses are elaborately embroidered. The waist line is still not a definite line. Foulard is fashionable, cool and practical. Embroider the black satin frock with blue. Lace dresses are worn over colored linings. Moire will be used as a trimming for fall frocks. Many summer frocks are of polka-dotted material.

THURSDAY, July 19th, 1917.

Opening of the Session.

Our title is not an attempt at an epigram: it is the expression of a plain truth which very much needs to be recognized. In the first place, since an entirely new Government has emerged from the negotiations of weeks past, it is literally correct, in the second, and more important, place, even if we consider the whole session as one, no legislation of real importance has yet been initiated. In view of much that has been said and rumoured and of a little that has been written, we cannot too strongly emphasize that fact.

The rumours have been to the effect that the remainder of the session will be brief, and have fixed August 1st as the date of adjournment. What the Daily News says this morning would seem to confirm them, and the editor is in a position to know his subject. He says, "The remaining days of the session will probably be marked with brief discussions and an effort to put through the legislation in the shortest possible time." A very comfortable programme indeed for the legislators, many of whom, the News states, have found the past six weeks very trying. How has the country found them? We ask the question in all timidity, knowing that the feelings of the country are of no importance anyway. Whose fault has it been that six weeks have been consumed to no purpose except to evolve a new Ministry which, holding its seats secure, now apparently proposes to dismiss its grave responsibilities with the least possible trouble to itself?

We may be speaking prematurely, and we would have preferred to wait until the legislative programme had been made known, had we not felt the danger of the situation and known that some attempt at prevention was better than useless criticism when all hope of cure was past. We take the occasion here to warn the Government solemnly that they are the trustees of the people and that they have grave duties to perform in a time of great national seriousness, if not peril. The people will not brook the least attempt to evade or treat cavalierly those duties. They cannot possibly be performed, even in the most perfunctory manner, within the time that has apparently been allotted to them. The Premier, in his statement on Tuesday, gave the impression that both parties had been actuated in the negotiations just ended by purely national considerations, a sense of the greatness of the times and other equally laudable motives. We would have admired him more if he had been sincere enough to confess the plain truth of what had happened—that the war and its problems had not the smallest place in the discussions, that personal questions, so far from being absent, were altogether predominant, and that the discussions had to go on until a nice balance had been struck between the two parties and (save the mark!) the different dominations. Everybody knows this, but knowing also that any Government would be better than the last and that some real business might yet be done, kept silence. It will not take the country long to see whether it has been deceived and betrayed.

Does any member of the new Government, introduced with such a flourish of trumpets, imagine that any among the people cares a jot for the shuffling of office that has gone on, is in any way concerned because one minister has been ousted and another put in his place? If that is all that the pother has been about, it is time for the people to make one of their own. The situation is quite plain. The circumstances of the Colony are such as to need legislative treatment of the greatest importance. The Act necessary will require a care in discussing and framing them in keeping with their importance. Any attempt to omit them or to railroad them through will be an open contempt of the people, which we will spare no pains to make the people see. One member of the late Opposition threatened at one stage to talk until September. If he does his duty he will carry out the threat, and will be able to add to the performance the unusual feature of talking to the point.

Salvaging Cargo From Wrecked Ship.

The salvaging of the cargo of the wrecked Scandinavian Liner Kristianiafjord was continued all yesterday and again today, several vessels as well as a number of Tropic Bay boats engaging in the work. Contractor Godden also left here yesterday with twenty-five men to assist in the work. The steamer Tremblay arrived this morning with some cargo and luggage and a couple of schooners, towed by the steamer Hawk, brought loads of goods here yesterday. A baggage car full also reached the city this morning. The Ranger Hawk, Schile L. and several schooners and motor boats are still alongside the stranded steamer and taking cargo on board. All the goods brought here so far have been landed at the Nfld. Produce Co.'s premises. Hon. M. P. Cashin, who was at the scene of the wreck, arrived back to the city this forenoon. In his opinion the work of salvaging all the dry cargo, comprising luggage and barrels of flour and sugar, will be completed this evening. The condition of the sea where the big liner is on the rocks is moderate. Capt. Larder, of Halifax, in the wrecking steamer Stella Maris, well known here, is now standing by, to aid in refloating the liner. The Lord Strathcona and another Canadian wrecking tug, with powerful air compressors, are on their way to the wrecked steamer. Divers, who were down and examined the bottom of the ship yesterday, allege that her chances of being refloated are bright, under prevailing circumstances.

The passengers of the Kristianiafjord are eagerly awaiting the arrival of the ship to take them to their destination. Most of them spent the half holiday yesterday sight seeing in the suburbs. Many of them attended the baseball match and the theatricals and all were delighted with what they saw. The women are enjoying their quarters at the British Hall immensely, while there is no complaint from the men at the Rinks where they are well looked after. A male passenger named Christian, a Norwegian, is seriously ill at the General Hospital. He is suffering from chronic heart trouble and was visited by a Norwegian clergyman who is also a survivor of the wreck. There are a number of Red Cross nurses, of various nationalities, amongst the passengers of the Kristianiafjord. Many of the survivors, who were travelling first class are quartered at the Cochrane, Balsam and Crosbie Hotels.

The C.L.B. Band.

The C. L. B. band, under Bandmaster A. Morris, furnished the music for the "At Home" held at Billy Haley last evening in aid of the French Red Cross Fund. The affair, which we refer to elsewhere, was largely attended and greatly enjoyed. The bandmen were driven to the beautiful grounds in motor cars. We learn from a well known music critic who was present on the occasion that he is now fully convinced that the C. L. B. band has again come back to us with many difficulties. Considering the band had to contend with the war it is indeed gratifying to know that it has regained its former position as the art of discarding high class music.

Newfoundlander Killed

BY FALLING BEAM.
NEW GLASGOW, July 12.—George W. Bradbury, an employee of the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company's ship building yard, was instantly killed yesterday by a large stick of timber falling upon him. The men were at work clearing up the location upon which the "War Wasp" was built preparatory to laying the ways upon which to place another keel. While hitting one of the great sticks, used in the launch-ways, the wire rope on the crane parted and poor Bradbury was caught under the timber. Death was instantaneous. He was 35 years of age, unmarried, and a native of Newfoundland. The "War Wasp" has not yet taken her initial trip to sea. The last strokes toward her completion are now being made, as she is moored alongside one of the canal locks. The trial trip will be made next week.

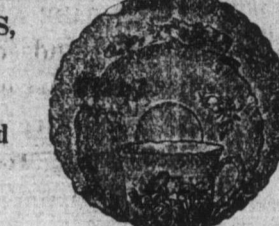

Reid's Boats.

The Argyle left Burin at 8.50 p.m. yesterday. The Clyde left Beaverton at 11.15 a.m. yesterday. The Dundee left Westleyville at 5 a.m. yesterday, outward. The Ethie left Humbermouth at 6.25 p.m. yesterday. The Glencoe left Burgeo at 4 p.m. yesterday, coming east. The Home not reported since leaving Springdale on 17th. The Wren left Port aux Basques at 5.30 p.m. yesterday. The Thetis sails this afternoon for the Labrador mail service.

GERMANY MAY OFFER DISARMAMENT.

PARIS, To-day. A despatch to the Temps from Geneva says that the German Government, according to reliable information, meditates a dramatic proposal to its enemies and to the world of complete disarmament, except for sufficient forces to maintain compulsory peace by compulsory arbitration. The German Government, says the Temps, while allowing the solution of the internal crisis to appear as a success for the pan-Germans has in view a manoeuvre of a quite different aspect. The bellicose declarations which resound and will perhaps continue in Berlin will be nothing but the prologue designed to represent Germany as invincible; afterwards, perhaps sooner than is expected, will come the theatrical initiative in which Germany will show a disposition to disarm.

WILL BE ACTING PRESIDENT.

LONDON, To-day. According to the morning press's Tien Tsin correspondent, Peng Kwo Chang has yielded to Li Yuan Hung's urgent request that he accept the post of acting President of China.

WORKMEN AND SOLDIERS STAY LOYAL.

MOSCOW, To-day. The Local Council of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates, after discussion of the disturbances in Petrograd, by a vote of 442 against 242 decided not to allow street demonstrations in Moscow. The Maximillians, who desire armed demonstrations in the city, protested that the Council was placing obstacles in the way of their participation in current political life, and quitted the hall.

Green Gives Bride, 'Most Sensible Lady,' 625,000 Dollars.

Proposed to Nine Thousand Times, He Marries at Last to Obtain "A Real Home."
Chicago, July 12.—Edward H. R. Green, son of the late Healy Green, and Miss Mabel E. Harlow, of Highland Park, a suburb, were married here yesterday. The ceremony was performed at Trinity Episcopal Church by the Rev. P. C. Wolcott. The couple have known each other for fifteen years.

Colonel Green gave his bride a wedding present of $625,000. Five hundred thousand dollars was in the form of a check and the remainder in Liberty bonds.

Colonel Green, who shares the $100,000,000 estate left by his mother with his sister, Mrs. Matthew Astor Wilks, said that he was marrying for something millions can't buy—"a real home."

Colonel Green, who said he had been perhaps the "most proposed-to man in the world," and who declared that the newspapers had caused him to receive 9,000 letters of proposal in the last fifteen years, showed a human and democratic side in discussing his marriage.

"I am marrying the best and most sensible little lady in the world," he said. "I am marrying a quiet little lady to whom I can go when I am burdened with the troubles of the world; I am marrying for a real home. I want to say right now that I am not marrying a society girl; I am marrying a truly sensible woman. I do not know who is going to be the boss. All that I can say is that I am going to try to be."

Passenger Returns to the States.

Mrs. Wright of Toledo, U.S.A., one of the passengers of the wrecked steamer Kristianiafjord, who intended visiting Norway, returned to the U. S. A. by to-day's express. Mrs. Wright is fully assured that her experiences in connection with her eventful trip are sufficient to assure her of what might have happened had the big liner met up with a German sub.

TORIC LENSES

ARE MORE BECOMING THAN FLAT LENSES.
The edges of Toric Lenses do not show as prominently as those of flat lenses. They fit in close to your eyes. You will find Torics much more becoming and useful. They give you a wider, clearer field of vision. You should know about Toric Lenses. Let us explain them.

Milady's Boudoir.

DEODORIZERS FOR DAINTY WOMEN.

Salt baths for the entire body are excellent deodorizers. Empty a bag of salt in a tub and have the body thoroughly, or make a strong solution in a wash basin and sponge the body surface.

Moist hands are an unpleasant affliction, and if the summer months produce this condition adopt the practice of using a little spirits of camphor in the water. If the condition persists, rub into the hands a lotion made of four ounces of cologne and half an ounce of tincture of betadonin, afterward powdering with rice powder.

Excessive perspiration of the feet is apt to produce corns between the toes in warm weather, after bathing and drying the body powder thoroughly between the toes with corn starch or good talcum powder. Perspiration also makes the feet so tender that they blister easily.

To ward off this catarrhic, bath with a lotion made with two ounces of bay rum and four grams of tannic acid. A very offensive odor from the feet which fails to correct itself with the most scrupulous attention to cleanliness of the body, may be mitigated by rubbing with the following compound: Powdered talcum, 5 ounces; starch, 1 ounce; salicylic acid, 4 scruples.

Sometimes rubbing the feet with alcohol after the bath will destroy the odor of perspiration and tend to prevent its occurrence.

Household Notes.

Grind your tea leaves before using. They go twice as far, and some think the flavor more delicate after grinding.

All stale bread can be put in the warming oven until dry. It is then dry enough to roll with crumbs or to use as twice-baked bread.

Count carefully the cost of buying fruit to eat. Sometimes when labor, sugar, fuel and cost of the fruit are considered, it does not really pay.

When taking the snaps from a garment, a convenient way to keep them for future use is to cut the goods around them in a button box. In this way the snaps that match are kept together.

The Arrogance of Ignorance.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

There is nothing in the world so arrogant and so unappealing as ignorance. And there is nothing in the world that can make one more humble and more understanding than experience. A young business woman whom I know has recently married. Previous to her marriage she always had her sewing done for her. She had never made a garment. One of the first usages to which she put her newly acquired leisure was to try to make her own dress. She found out how many stitches there are in a gown. She told me about it the other day. "It wasn't a success," she said, "and I may never try it again, but I'm glad I did it once. It was such a lesson to me. You know I never could understand why the dressmakers and the seamstresses I hired took so long to make a dress. They'd progress fast enough up to a certain point and then it would take them forever. But now, well I'll never be impatient again. I know what finishing off a dress means."

Her story struck several chords in my memory. The loudest was this. When I was a young girl we used to have a good sized lawn and garden. It took two men a whole day to cut the grass and tidy up the place. Now I had sometimes run a lawn-mower a few feet and I knew how easily it could be done and it seemed all nonsense to me that it should take so long. "I knew I could do it in less time," I said. "They're simply putting me down."

Improving Crop Prospects.

There are improving crop years as well as years in which crops deteriorate as the harvest approaches. This year is of the improving variety. Like 1912, when the June indications were falsified by an increase of a hundred million bushels of wheat, and 1915, when the increase was a quarter-billion bushels to the record record billion bushel yield. To the earlier prospects of a wheat calamity there now succeeds on the July indications a prospect of 29,000,000 more bushels in the total yield than last year. The extraordinary loss of 79,000,000 bushels of winter wheat is recouped by a gain of 117,000,000 bushels in spring wheat, and the season is still improving.

Fishery News.

From B. Perry-Catalina S. Head to Northern Head.—The total catch is 6,000 qts. and for the last week 1,000. Seventy-three traps, 20 dories and skiffs and 12 boats are fishing. Prospects are very poor, but there is sufficient bait, and the weather is favorable for operations.

From J. Bishop-Cape Freels to Safe Hr.—Bait is plentiful, but prospects are poor. One hundred traps and a few dories, skiffs and traps are fishing. The traps average from 2 qts. to 300. The catch to-date is 4,500 qts. and for last week 1,000.

From R. Lawton-South Head of Keels to Knight's Cove Pt.—With hook and liners, the fishery to date is practically a blank, but traps are getting from half to one quintal on trawls and codnets. A few of the traps secured from 10 to 18 qts. one day, and all the others during the week had from 2 to 4 qts. a haul. Prospects are not good, and there is only a small supply of caplin bait. Twenty traps and about 25 dories and skiffs are fishing. The total catch is 1,500 qts., with 350 for last week.

How New Russia Fights

(New York Herald.)
Eloquent tribute to Russian valor is paid by German war correspondents telegraphing from the Galician front. In the minds of those observers there is no question that the Russian drive is the real thing. "Their air service," explains one correspondent, "quoted in a cable despatch to the Globe, 'was quite prepared for the most difficult tasks. Their railroads were ready, efficient and resourceful. They had plenty of big guns, greater than ever before. They had many tanks.'"

The people of Germany are advised that this Russian advance bears no semblance to a flash in a pan. "Worse days are coming," predict the correspondents, and one of them adds by way of explanation:

"It was obvious that the Russians knew what they were fighting for. They fight like people who no longer fight for a tyrant."

There is something ominous for the Kaiser in that.

WELLINGTON

Giant Submarines For Britain—Able to Fight Cruiser.

By Arthur S. Draper.

BARROW, July 14. — Alongside a light cruiser in the naval construction yards of Vickers Limited, I saw a long, whale-backed craft which looked for all the world like one of the grain-carrying ships of the Great Lakes; in the office of the plant I saw a model of an undersea boat built in the same yards a few years ago, and it looked like one of the toys of the Prospect Park lake in Brooklyn.

Put these submarines side by side and one begins to appreciate the development in undersea construction in the short span of years since the war started. The latest type of British submarine is a credit to the greatest navy in the world. Perhaps Germany has something better to show, but if so it still remains a secret.

From the first days of the war everything appertaining to submarines has been enveloped in secrecy. For a time we received reports of ships that had been torpedoed, but now the Admiralty supplies the public with no names of the ships lost or their tonnage. Much has been written about the various devices employed in snaring submarines, but never has there been any official statement for public consumption. Columns and columns have been published about the activities of the U-boats, but rarely is there a line printed about British submarines.

I had an opportunity of seeing the interior of the latest British submarine, but even if I was permitted to describe it the job would be more difficult than putting together the wheels and springs of a clock. Batteries and bunks, wheels and levers, speaking tubes and electric buttons are so mixed up that all the novice gets is a feeling he has stepped inside the storeroom of an overstocked hardware store. But even a novice can see at a glance that everything has a certain function to perform, and that the multiplicity of devices forms a harmonious whole. It takes considerable time to build the hull of a submarine, and even longer to construct and install its "vitals."

Could Fight A Cruiser.

Vickers were building submarines for the British and Japanese navies before the war. In the last three years the product of their yards in number and size makes their pre-war output seem almost negligible. Today they are making work on submarines just as if Admiral Jellicoe had Admiral Capelle's job to do. If the Vickers yard were in Bremen, instead of Barrow, the new British Food Controller would have a whole lot more to worry him. Some of their boats are big enough to accept a challenge from a destroyer, or even a light cruiser.

I am not permitted to state the number of submarines Vickers have built since the beginning of the war nor can I give the length and tonnage of the latest, but you may get some idea of the size when you know that it takes a crew of nearly fifty to run one. They can submerge in less than a minute and they have a surface speed considerably exceeding that of a Sandy Hook steamboat. These undersea boats can remain away from their bases as long as, if not longer than, the best Germany has produced. Every one has a phonograph and some miniature cinemas to amuse the men while the boat rests on the bed of the sea off a German port sometimes for a period of twenty-four hours. At best life aboard a submarine is tedious, dangerous and irksome, but the new boats are equipped with a number of comforts it was impossible to install in the cramped quarters of the earlier types.

Pre-War Boats Pygmies.

There seems to be no limit in size in the building of submarines. The last three years have brought a type which makes the pre-war boat look like a pygmy, and still the naval constructors are not satisfied. The development in submarine construction has been as rapid as the progress made in aeroplane building. Some day in the near future there may be a submarine as long as a trans-Atlantic passenger steamer.

Though they commit cruel acts, the German U-boat sailors are brave and skilful men. One of Germany's greatest difficulties is to find the right men and to train them for submarine work. The motion of a submarine makes for seasickness, no matter how experienced the sailor. Before a new crew goes out it is necessary for it to spend a month or six weeks in training under conditions approximating as nearly as possible those at sea. Germany has lost a great number of submarines, and she has been compelled to draw heavily on her regular navy to make good the losses in men.

On the other hand Britain, primarily a nation of seamen, has a much larger supply of material from which to draw submarine crews. The independence and excitement of the life of the submarine appeal to the average British sailor, and the Royal Navy finds no difficulty in forming crews as fast as there are boats to fill. If conditions were reversed, and Britain had the submarine offensive instead of the defensive, the toll of shipping would undoubtedly run much higher.

And the Worst is Yet to Come—

German Collapse Likely, Says Paris.

KAISER IN TIGHT CORNER.

(By Charles H. Grasty.)

Paris, July 10.—Paris is speculating pleasantly on the evidences of internal troubles in Germany. The secession of the Reichstag, the flitting hither and thither of the Kaiser and his Generals, the evident unpopularity of Von Bethmann-Hollweg, and above all the Erzberger attack and the sensational coalition between the Catholic and Socialist Party fit into the theory of the war's sudden ending this year by a German collapse, to which many well informed people hold tenaciously. Such theorists admit that the present storm may blow over, but they assert that the meteorological conditions will produce another and more serious one, and finally militarism and Hohenzollernism will be engulfed in a hurricane.

Erzberger's recent visit to Switzerland gives point to his present attitude. Paris observes that he has ascertained a few unpleasant truths when he went outside the German embargo for information. He was unsuccessful in his attempt to enlist the Vatican in a peace effort, but as the result of what he learned by contact with the outside world the scales fell from his eyes, and he went back home prepared to make sacrifices.

The depreciation of Erzberger's attack in the German press cannot hide the fact that he represented a solid block of German opinion, and the threatened consolidation for peace of the two leading parties hitherto standing at extremes has created something like a panic at Potsdam. The German rulers have been playing a dangerous game. They depend on public discipline for sustaining the weight of the war. For months they have been stretching discipline to the breaking point. They have been telling the people to be patient as the submarine would reduce England in two months.

Five months have passed, and England has grown far stronger. They took a gambler's risk on the submarines. Not only have the submarines fallen short, but their lawless employment compelled the United States to enter the war. Erzberger and other German observers going to Holland and Switzerland undoubtedly have taken home some information about the scale and speed of American preparations that has brought at least partial sight to the wilfully blind eyes in Berlin.

The submarine drive has almost reached a point where it may be definitely regarded as a military failure. Having built so largely on its success, the people having taken the assurances at their face value, the Kaiser's Government is now confronted by the problem how to let the public down. Paris opinion leans to the belief that herein lies the explanation of the air raids on England. Their spectacular character and comparative success may dazzle the German people so as to divert their minds from the U-boats. To the sole necessity of bemusing the German public is attributed the Kaiser's tremendous bluff a short time ago, which events called most embarrassingly within two days. His telegram to the Kaiserin proclaiming the end of the western offensive was followed immediately by Messines.

The threatened change in the Berlin Government is pointed to here as most significant. It is ridiculous to talk of the Government falling because it is all in the hands of the Kaiser, and he never turns out civil officials except because they do not suit him. What carries meaning now is that popular clamor seems for the first time to be having an effect on the Government. It looks as if the Minister of Marine, Von Capelle may have to pay for the submarine failure with his head, and even Bethmann-Hollweg may have to resign at last. Discipline works splendidly while it works, but when confidence in trusted leadership fails the effect of the disillusion may be sudden and disastrous.

All eyes here turn expectantly toward Berlin. The leaven of doubt is working. Whether now or somewhat later, Germany may crack from the aggregate pressure of submarine disappointment, the Russian revival, the western offensive, and American activities. One encounters here real apprehension over the new German peace effort resulting from these conditions, and the fear is expressed of a "white peace"—otherwise peace stopping short of the excision of militarism.

It is believed by many that serious internal troubles would lead to Germany's offering Alsace and Lorraine, Belgian and Serbian indemnities, and perhaps even the abdication of the Kaiser in favor of his son. Nobody doubts here the willingness to carve Turkey and parcel out Austria. She is known to be feverishly active in efforts to pacify Russia and France through self-constituted representatives in Switzerland by assuring each that her designs are only on the other—that is, playing both ends against the middle. Making full allowance for a specific margin, the possibilities of a breakdown in Germany are more real than at any time since the war begun.

Novel-Reading Sultan.

Although the Sultan of Turkey is reputed to be the latest potentate in Europe, he is passionately fond of reading. For weeks at a time he will shut himself up in his private suite at Yildiz Kiosk—the Turkish Buckingham Palace—surrounded with literature of all kinds, classical works, novels, magazines, and newspapers. With the exception of his personal attendants, Ministers of State, and foreign Ambassadors, no one is allowed into the Imperial sanctuary during the Sultan's literary "fits."

But the "Sick Man of Europe" is somewhat handicapped, as his knowledge of European languages is limited. In order to overcome this difficulty he employs a translation office. Here there are a crowd of officials, who speak all the languages of Europe and the East, and for their use all the political and illustrated newspapers of importance are procured, from which extracts are made and translated for the Sultan. There are fifteen superior translators, called dragoman secretaries, in this office, and their pay is from ten to forty Turkish pounds monthly.

The translations are not limited to political publications; novels and romances in all languages are also translated for the Sultan, and many thousands have found their way into the Imperial library. They are all written on thick white royal octavo gilt-edged paper, and are fastened together with green and red ribbons by the translators themselves.

After circulating through the hamper they are preserved in the library. The Sultan's favorite reading is criminal romances. He subscribes to all newspapers containing reports of the proceedings in the Law Courts, and there is no famous writer of stories of crime in any language whose works have not been translated for him.—Tit-Bits.

THE RUSSIAN SITUATION.

PETROGRAD, July 18.

At a conference of Ministers and Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates it was decided to place the city under martial control. General Polovtzev, Governor of the military district was summoned and instructed to use all loyal troops to put down the insurrection. The first clashes between the opposing forces occurred on Trditsky Bridge, where Cossacks met a body of armed demonstrators. The Cossacks were armed only with sabres. A brick fire was opened by the insurrectionists whereupon the Cossacks fled up Liteyny Prospect, many abandoning their horses. Several Cossacks and twelve horses were killed. A later brush between armed Government troops and Maximalists occurred in the neighborhood of the Duma. The Maximalists were quickly dispersed leaving behind 17 wounded. The majority of the regiments of the Petrograd garrison and most of the armored motor detachments are supporting the Government. A machine gun regiment at Striatne signified its willingness to come to the Government's aid. Premier Lvoff sent this telegram to all Provisional Government Commissioners: "In reply to your inquiry the Minister of the Interior informs you that reports regarding arrests of members of the Provisional Government are false. As to the appeals to overthrow the Government by force of arms and the transfer of all powers to soldiers and workmen these appeals had the character of irresponsible acts on the part of members of the extreme minority and were received in an unfriendly manner by the people."

BRITISH IN RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE.

WASHINGTON, July 18.

British armed motor detachments are taking part in the Russian offensive in Galicia, according to a semi-official report received to-day from Petrograd by the Russian Embassy here.

NO JUDICIAL ENQUIRY.

LONDON, July 18.

Announcement was made in the House of Commons to-day by Andrew Bonar Law, that the Government had decided not to proceed with the proposed judicial inquiry into the report and shots were fired across their bows to emphasize the order. The order was disregarded, and all the enemy made for the Dutch coast. The two rearmost ships reached the shore having been badly damaged by gunfire. The other four, however, were intercepted and captured by destroyers, who placed prize crews aboard and brought them away under their own steam. Two of these were abandoned by the crews. The other two crews were brought back as prisoners. The four are now in harbor in this country. Their names are, Pellworm, Bristzig, Marieloren and Heinsblumberg.

TO STOP AND ABANDON SHIP WAS HOISTED,

CANADA TO HAVE GENERAL ELECTION.

OTTAWA, July 18.

The die is cast. Within the next two months Canada will witness a general election. By a vote of 82 to 62 the House of Commons at midnight approved the extension resolution submitted by Premier Borden. Six Liberals voted with the Government, six Conservatives voted with the Opposition. Sir Robert told the House that unless the resolution carried with practical unanimity it could not go forward to the Imperial Parliament at London. The division leaves members speculating as to whether they will go before their electors in August or September. A few look for an election as late as November.

EXPLOSION IN GERMANY.

AMSTERDAM, July 18.

The Neues Tagblatt, of Stuttgart, Germany, reports that on Saturday a great explosion occurred at Wilhelm Weissenbach factory. The building was destroyed and neighboring houses were damaged, and windows were broken in the nearby village of Suedheim.

APPOINTMENTS CRITICIZED.

LONDON, July 18.

The new Cabinet appointments get a mixed reception in the morning newspapers. The majority, however, are indulgent, and express the willingness to give the appointees a chance and to judge them by results. The selection of Sir Eric Campbell Geddes, who has been Director General of Munition Supply, to the head of the British Admiralty, arrests a large share of editorial attention. It

ITALIAN LOSS.

ROME, July 18.

One Italian merchant steamer and four small sailing vessels were sunk by submarines during the week ending July 15.

REICHSTAG MEETS TO-DAY.

LONDON, July 18.

A despatch from Berlin, via Amsterdam, announces that Chancellor Michaelis has asked the President of the Reichstag to summon Thursday afternoon a session for a communication from the Government.

THE CHANCELLOR'S SPEECH.

COPENHAGEN, July 18.

The German Chancellor's speech is not expected to go exhaustively into the question of reform or peace, as the time is too short for him to elaborate a definite programme. The Socialist agency reports that in all probability he will ask six weeks' grace to inform himself and work out a detailed policy. The agency, undoubtedly speaking for Scheidmann, the Socialist leader, demands that Michaelis immediately make clear his attitude on Prussian franchise reform and peace formula. The Lokal Anzeiger reckons with deferred presentation of the Chancellor's programme, and instances the question of Parliamentizing the Government as one of the problems Michaelis will avoid, because it cannot be approached until after exhaustive discussion by the federal governments. Fearing the Chancellor will refuse to accept it as a basis of his policy, the Vorwaerts, Socialist newspaper, warns Michaelis of the danger of temporising on either question. It says the crisis is not over and may redevelop after a short pause. It is even conceivable that the next manifestation may not pass with the complete order characterizing the last.

RECRUITING SATISFACTORY.

LONDON, July 18.

It was said here to-day that the results of the British recruiting in the United States has been very satisfactory, and that the quality of the recruits was high.

FEAR BRITISH DESTROYERS.

LONDON, July 18.

It is announced from Rotterdam that Germany has decided to lay up thirty coast steamers there instead of attempting to run them home through the sea lane.

MERELY A STOP-GAP.

AMSTERDAM, July 18.

According to news brought by arrivals from Berlin, the belief in Liberal circles there is that Chancellor Michaelis is merely a stop-gap who will prepare the way for something in the way of a dictatorship, with General Ludendorff in supreme control.

Summer School Notes.

TUESDAY, July 17th.

General.—For the purpose of attending the lectures and special subject lessons the teachers are arranged in professional course groups, A and B.
Morning Session (St. Bonaventure's College).
From 9 to 10.30 group A attended Dr. Brunt's lecture on the "Science of Education." During the same period Mr. Morehouse gave a lecture to B group on "School Organization and Management."
Then followed recess which most of the teachers spent in taking a walk in the beautiful grounds in front of St. Bonaventure's College.
The school reassembled at 11 when professional group A was given a lecture on "School Organization and Management" by Mr. Morehouse, and group B a lecture on the "Science of Education" by Dr. Brunt.
The teachers of both groups then (11.45) went to the Methodist College Hall where Dr. Campbell gave the third of his series of lectures on Hygiene, taking as his subject "Fractures of the Bones."
Afternoon Session (St. Bon's College).
From 2.15 to 3 Dr. Brunt continued his lecture to group B on the "Science of Education," dealing particularly with Memory.
During the same period Mr. Morehouse gave a lecture to group A on "School Organization and Management."
The teacher students were then lined up on the College Campus in their groups for Physical Culture. Group B ladies were taken by Miss Worrell, group A ladies by Miss Curtis; and the men were taken in Swedish exercises by Seret. Major Hussey.
From 3.30 to 4.15 Mr. Morehouse gave a lecture on Nature Study to group B in the Aula Maxima, while Miss Kelly took the ladies of group A in Art.
In response to the very kind invitation of Mr. F. J. King, many of the teachers attended the first of the two organ recitals given to the teachers attending the Summer School in the Presbyterian Church at 5.15. The following programme was rendered:—Prelude in C sharp minor, Rachmaninoff; Spring Song, Hollins; Marche Heroique, Lemare; Song, "Lead Kindly Light," Pugh Evans, by Mrs. F. J. King; Reve d'Amour, Corbett; Overture to Raymond, A. Thomas; God Save the King.
Evening Session—7.30-9.
Special lessons were given from 7.30 to 8.15 in Navigation by Mr. Doyle, Latin by Miss Mansfield, History and Geography by Mr. Whiteway. From 8.15 to 9 lessons were given to the two groups in Arithmetic by Mr. Goodman (B) and Mr. House (A).
Wednesday's programme will also be a very full one. At 8.30 p.m. at Reception at the Episcopal Library.

The reception held last evening at the Episcopal Library by His Grace the Archbishop was attended by a large number of the Catholic teachers at present in the city. To meet the teachers beside His Grace the Archbishop were also His Lordship Bishop Power, Rt. Rev. Monsignors St. John, Reardon and McDermott, V.G., Fathers Donnelly and Finn of Harbor Grace and the Priests of the Cathedral and St. Patrick's.

After the teachers had been presented to the Archbishop by Dr. Burke refreshments were served and a very enjoyable musical programme was gone through under the direction of Mr. C. Hutton, assisted by Mrs. Cahill, Misses Ryan, Browne and Harris.

Towards the close of the evening His Grace made a short address to the teachers. He said he was very pleased and that the teachers were welcome to St. John's so many Catholic teachers from all parts of the island. He felt that the occasion should not be allowed to pass without a word of welcome and an expression of appreciation on the part of the Church of the very important and noble work which the teachers were performing throughout the Colony.

His Grace then referred to the purpose for which the teachers had assembled at this time and said that it was one that was highly commendable and praiseworthy, and one that had the sympathy and active support of the church. He was pleased to know that the Summer School up to the present time had been a very decided success, that the lectures were of a highly instructive and inspiring nature and that the teachers were taking such interest in the course. He had no doubt that the school would be productive of the most excellent results. Not only would it have the direct effect of promoting better and more scientific methods of teaching, but it would have the further effect of giving the teaching profession a higher conception of its very important and responsible duties. The training of the young, he said, the developing of the opening minds of children, the formation of their character and habits was the work second only in importance to the work of the church itself. The importance of what he might call the mission of the teacher was the lesson he would wish most strongly to impress upon the minds of those who were listening to him. He would wish to impress strongly upon the teachers their responsibility towards the children under their care. The Church expected the influence of the teacher to be always of an uplifting, elevating nature, and, furthermore, looked to the teachers to teach by example as well as by word. His Grace then went on to refer to the importance of religious instruction and the teaching of the Catechism as being amongst the most important duties of the teacher. He announced that arrangements had been made for a series of papers to be read by some of the city priests to the Catholic teachers during their visit here on subjects bearing upon religious instruction. Before concluding, His Grace said that he was pleased to learn that the Government was likely to accede to the request which had been made by the teachers that the increase in their salaries should become effective as from the First of January 1917. He said that he was in sympathy with this eminently reasonable request of the teachers and he was gratified to know that the Government had sympathetically considered their demands. Bishop Power followed along similar lines, speaking words of encouragement and advice to the teachers, and emphasizing the importance and responsibility of the teachers' calling. He also spoke of the pleasure it gave him to be associated with the Archbishop in receiving the teachers this evening. Dr. Burke speaking for the assembled teachers, expressed their appreciation of His Grace's kindly thought in arranging for their reception. He spoke of the Archbishop's intimate knowledge of educational problems, of his unflinching interest in the welfare of the teachers, and he assured him that that interest was fully appreciated. The singing of God Save the King by the assembled gathering brought a very pleasant evening to a close.

"Scots Wha Hae."

(From the Liverpool Post.)
At a Scottish watering place Macpherson was found straggling in a contented mood on the sands, puffing his old pipe.

"Come n, Mac," said his companion, "let's go for a sail!"
"Na, na," replied Macpherson, "I hae had a guid dinner at the cost o' three an' saxpence, an' I'm takin' na risks."
