IN THE TOILS; But Happiness Comes at Last.

CHAPTER XXX.
PAVING THE WAY.
"He spoke of you nearly every day," said Olive. "He will be very glad you have come home."
"I am sorry I did not come home in time for the fete," said Lady Florence. "It must have been worth traveling many miles to see; but we read an account of it. How happy you must be!"

Olive suppressed a sigh.
"I am very happy," she said.
"Yes, I am sure of it," assented Lady Florence, with a smile. "Your face tells me that. And we have met at last! Do you know I have heard so much about you that I seem to have known you for a long time—"

Olive looked up quickly; but there was nothing but a placid, amiable smile on the handsome face.
"Heard so much of me?" she said.
"Yes," nodded Lady Florence; "every one I have seen has had something to tell me of the general favorite, Lady Heatherdene—and, are you going to stay long in town?"

And so, with a running fire of questions and comments, she played her part, Olive having occasion to say very little, but listening, with downcast eyes and pale face. Presently Hastley Derrick, who had been talking to Charlie, crossed over to her assistance.

"I'll say adieu, marchioness. By the way, can any one give me a seat at the opera to-night? I have left my ivory."

"Come in my box," said Charlie. "We will go to-night, eh, Adrienne? Florence, if you are not engaged, come with us. I'll go down to the club and tell Ellinton."

"I shall be delighted," said Lady Florence, at once. "We must see a great deal of each other, dear," she added, turning to Olive. "We must be great friends. I am so very glad to get back again, and find you in town. Must you go?"

For Olive had risen and looked across at Lord Heatherdene.

"Good-by, then, until to-night," and once more she took Olive by both hands and kissed her.
Derrick accompanied them to the brougham, and kept Lord Heatherdene occupied until Olive had entered.

ROYAL YEAST

"Let me see," said Charlie; "if you don't mind going on alone, Addy, I will go down with Derrick to the club."

Olive smiled affirmatively, and the brougham drove off with her alone—alone, coiled in a corner, her whole face hidden in her hands, and the low, measured voice of Hastley Derrick ringing in her ears, together with the false, mocking voice of Lady Florence, making a threatening discord.

"Was she safe?—had the threatened cloud blown over? Would they leave her in peace, these two—the resolute, inflexible man, the proud, injured woman? These were the questions which haunted her and caused her to cry out:

"Oh, my husband, my love! Don't let them turn you from me."
Lord Charles was delighted at the way in which Lady Florence had received them. Innocent of the slightest taint of guile himself, he had rejoiced at the prospect of another friend, and a close friend, for his darling wife. He went down to the club in the most genial of humors, and was greeted with the usual welcome.

"Florence is the right kind of woman," he said to Hastley Derrick. "I fancied and feared that there might have been a sort of coolness—you understand?"
Derrick smiled.
"But I did Florence an injustice. How could there have been anything nicer than the way in which she made up to Adrienne?"

Her maid had chosen a costly and magnificent costume for her, but she had set it aside, and selected a quieter one of black lace. Upon this, here and there, a diamond gleamed brightly, and in her hair she wore one white camelia. She could not have chosen a toilet more effective, or in greater harmony with her beauty, and, as Lord Heatherdene looked at her, admiration found vent in a few whispered words, that brought the hot blood to her face, and the moisture to her eyes.
"My darling, you grow more beautiful every day!"
That was all, but Lady Florence heard them, and the quick frown flew to her face.
She was magnificently dressed, and there were diamonds enough and to spare upon her white dress and on her bosom; but the peculiar charm about Olive's beauty asserted itself, and vanquished the cold beauty of her rival.
"There is a picture for a painter," said a great artist in the stalls. "What other country could show such beauty, and of two such distinct types! Which do you admire most?"
"I know which I could love best," answered his friend, a poet.
And in those few words, poetlike, he had hit the great distinction and difference.
Charlie, behind his wife's chair, nodded greetings all over the stalls and boxes. Hastley Derrick stood at the back of the box, listening to the chatter of the marquis, but dissecting the house from gallery to stalls as he listened, and every now and then looking down at the two women with a curious, watchful glance.
For Olive there was no greater delight than the opera; divine music wedded to acting. She was no mean proficient in the former, and in the latter her skill and knowledge always occasioned her delight.
Before the first act—it was the "Huguenots"—was half over, she had lost herself, and over her face stole that sweet, absorbed, wistful expression which added so much to its charm. At the close of the first act, Charlie went to pay a visit to Lord Hamilton, who was in an opposite box, and Hastley Derrick naturally took his seat.

"Titbits is in fine form to-night," he said, and, at the sound of his voice, Olive came back, with a start, to real life.
"It is a full house," she said; "it is a grand incentive."
"So I should think," he said.
Then he talked on in his quiet, impressive way, not demanding an answer, but keeping her amused in spite of herself, until Lord Charles came back, when he rose to give him the chair, but Lord Heatherdene would not take it.
"Keep your seat, Derrick," he said. "I shall be in and out. They don't give you a better opera at Vienna, do they, Florence?"
So Hastley Derrick kept at Olive's elbow watchfully attentive with the bouquet, opera glass, fan—no movement of her escaped him, and Lady Florence watched them both.
With a burst of applause, the opera ended, and Hastley Derrick was ready with Olive's cloak. As they passed out of the box and down the corridor, he found an opportunity to whisper in her ear:
"Was I not right?"
Olive did not answer, but her face paled, and she glanced involuntarily at Lady Florence, who was in front.
"Do not fear," he said, "it's the same low voice; 'you have nothing to dread while I am by your side to help you."
"—I am very grateful," she murmured. "But—"

Olive shuddered, and looked round for Heatherdene.
"Do not fear," he said, in the same low voice; "you have nothing to dread while I am by your side to help you."
"—I am very grateful," she murmured. "But—"

CHAPTER XXXI.
A READY TOOL.

IT was a favorite opera that night, and the house was crowded.
"Town was full, the season at its height, and stalls and boxes were filled with the representatives of rank and fashion. As the occupants of the various boxes entered, opera glasses were leveled, and nods and smiles of recognition went round.
Just as the orchestra was finishing the overture, the attendants drew back the curtains of the Livermore box, and a volley of glasses was turned upon it.
Lady Heatherdene is to be here to-night," was the whisper that went round, and those who were fortunate enough to possess her acquaintance were eager to secure a recognition, while the less fortunate were all curiosity to see her. There were many of higher rank, and greater beauty in the brilliant house, but, as Hastley Derrick said, none more popular. To those outside the circle in which she moved, she was still Adrienne Haldine, the famous actress, and but for the respect for her rank there were many among the humble portion of the audience who would have greeted her appearance with a burst of applause.
As it was, when she entered the box, there was a distinct hum and buzz of attention.
To many, she had never looked more beautiful than she did that night. Her perfectly oval face, made more striking in its impressiveness by the slight paleness which showed up the deep, thoughtful eyes, and the dark, clearly defined brows.

Hastley Derrick stood at the back of the box, listening to the chatter of the marquis, but dissecting the house from gallery to stalls as he listened, and every now and then looking down at the two women with a curious, watchful glance.
For Olive there was no greater delight than the opera; divine music wedded to acting. She was no mean proficient in the former, and in the latter her skill and knowledge always occasioned her delight.
Before the first act—it was the "Huguenots"—was half over, she had lost herself, and over her face stole that sweet, absorbed, wistful expression which added so much to its charm. At the close of the first act, Charlie went to pay a visit to Lord Hamilton, who was in an opposite box, and Hastley Derrick naturally took his seat.

"Titbits is in fine form to-night," he said, and, at the sound of his voice, Olive came back, with a start, to real life.
"It is a full house," she said; "it is a grand incentive."
"So I should think," he said.
Then he talked on in his quiet, impressive way, not demanding an answer, but keeping her amused in spite of herself, until Lord Charles came back, when he rose to give him the chair, but Lord Heatherdene would not take it.
"Keep your seat, Derrick," he said. "I shall be in and out. They don't give you a better opera at Vienna, do they, Florence?"
So Hastley Derrick kept at Olive's elbow watchfully attentive with the bouquet, opera glass, fan—no movement of her escaped him, and Lady Florence watched them both.
With a burst of applause, the opera ended, and Hastley Derrick was ready with Olive's cloak. As they passed out of the box and down the corridor, he found an opportunity to whisper in her ear:
"Was I not right?"
Olive did not answer, but her face paled, and she glanced involuntarily at Lady Florence, who was in front.
"Do not fear," he said, "it's the same low voice; 'you have nothing to dread while I am by your side to help you."
"—I am very grateful," she murmured. "But—"

Olive shuddered, and looked round for Heatherdene.

The 'Forizel' Inquiry.

Alexander Campbell, physician, sworn and examined by Mr. Dunfield, said: I had to identify the bodies of the victims of the Forizel. There were two bodies at Bay Bulls I did not see. I gave Miss Bowden authority to go out and identify the body of Miss Betty Munn. I have here the list of unidentified bodies. (The list is submitted by Dr. Campbell.) There are six bodies still in the water, two boys and four men. The body of a man buried at Argentia in mistake for Power is, I think, a Spanish friend. There was a record kept of every survivor and we concluded that the remainder lost their lives. We are leaving the body of the unidentified man at Placentia until such time as the other bodies are recovered. I was at the wreck myself. My first duty was to look after the survivors and see if they were properly clothed and housed. Constable Lynch would know in what position the bodies were found at Capahayden.

Marcus C. Simonsen, captain of the whaler Hawk, further examined by Mr. Dunfield.—When steering for the fire I cannot say in what direction I was going, unless I had a chart in front of me. (A chart being produced he gave his course west 1/4 north.) I was proceeding at slow speed, 2 or 3 knots an hour. The wind was light, west. The current was running to the north. This I can prove by judging my position from the shore. Light slob ice would stop a ship much quicker than sheet ice. I think in slob ice the ship could jam tight. She has to put slob ice under her. Hard ice she would break.
To Mr. Gibbs.—The slob ice was packed tight as far as we could see. I have seen slob ice 3 inches thick. I met some slob ice on the way down to the wreck. The wind had been blowing off the shore. The heaviest body of ice had been blown off the shore. The string of ice extended 3 or 4 miles. There was clear water between the strings. It did not interfere much with the Hawk's speed. Leaving the Narrows I steered S. by E. 1/2 E. till I cleared the Harry's Cleared Cape Spear S. by W. and then hauled S. W. 1/4 S. was 2 1/2 miles off Bay Bulls' Head. It was a clear fine evening when I left to go to the wreck, so I made as short a course as was possible. After leaving the Home I steered at 1/4 speed towards the light on the land but found it was carried to the north for some distance. When told by Pilot Malone the Hawk is about 50 h.p. and steams 11 knots; is 111 tons net. Going on six years I have been on that coast and have been in every second cove on that shore. The best part of the summer you are running in a fog. I was at the wreck of the Kristianfjord in the Hawk. I experienced unusual currents one trip when I had two schooners in tow. I found my dead reckoning a long way out. The currents were very strong near the Kristianfjord. The current always sets more from the north to northeast on this side of Cape Race. On the other side to the N. W. to W. When I ran my distance down I hauled her in N. W. I expected to make Cape Spear. I found I was ten miles off the Cape. Instead of two, I made Petty Hr. Motion and at that time the current was running to the south very strong. Others times I saw the current at Cape Race running in the same direction east and west of the Cape. Lots of times it has taken me close to the land. I have reckoned to be 2 1/2 miles off Petty Hr. Motion and have found myself in Shoal Bay. I have seen the fishing boats tailed south in Petty Hr. Bay by the current, while further off the current was in the opposite direction. Mr. Tessier phoned Commander MacDermott for Naval Reservists. Commander MacDermott said you can have them whenever you want them. He asked how many I require. I said four. There was no delay on the part of the Naval Reservists.
To Mr. Winter.—I had steam up ready to go to Hr. Grace at 6 o'clock. I telephoned Cape St. Francis to see about the sea outside. While telephoning at Bowring's Southside, Mr. Kennedy told me about the Forizel. I went back to the ship and a short time after I left the same way with Mr. Cyril Tessier. He wanted to know if everything was ready to proceed to the wreck. That was about nine o'clock. I understood I was getting ready to go to sea. While we were at Bowring's Southside, Mr. Crosbie and Capt. A. Keen came down. Mr. Crosbie said we were taking the Hawk and was putting Capt. A. Keen in charge, also his son West. I don't remember getting any orders from Mr. Stone, Minister of Marine and Fisheries. I hailed to Bowring's North Side about 10 o'clock where I took on board rockets, ropes, etc., and all things necessary. I had two sailors and a mate. The mate was not feeling well so I left him on shore at the time. The engineers were on board coming from the South Side. I took an extra engineer and a fireman from the Cabot on board. I thought by taking a double engine that I would be prepared for standing by at the wreck. Mr. Crosbie came down and took Capt. Keen away about 12 o'clock as it was feared the Forizel had been submerged. Mr. Crosbie said it was quite understood that Capt. Keen is to have full charge of the Hawk. The earliest hour we could proceed to the wreck was nine o'clock had we been notified in time. Capt. Keen said she was not so worthy in her present condition. We were stopped discharging coal for a couple of hours when we were informed that the Hawk was not so worthy. I would have gone to the wreck as the ship stood to save life. I had two lifeboats on my deck at 6 o'clock. A tank boat and a pram. I got a dory from Bowring's wharf and all other supplies. It would take me an hour to get the necessary supplies from Bowring's. I left a few minutes after four o'clock for the wreck. William F. Carter, Shipping Master, sworn and examined by Mr. Dunfield, said: I am Shipping Master of this port. (Mr. Carter submitted list of the Forizel's crew.)
David M. McFarlane, Assistant Boiler Inspector, sworn and examined by Mr. Dunfield, said: I was born in Glasgow. I hold a first-class English Board of Trade certificate.

Had Piles for Ten Years

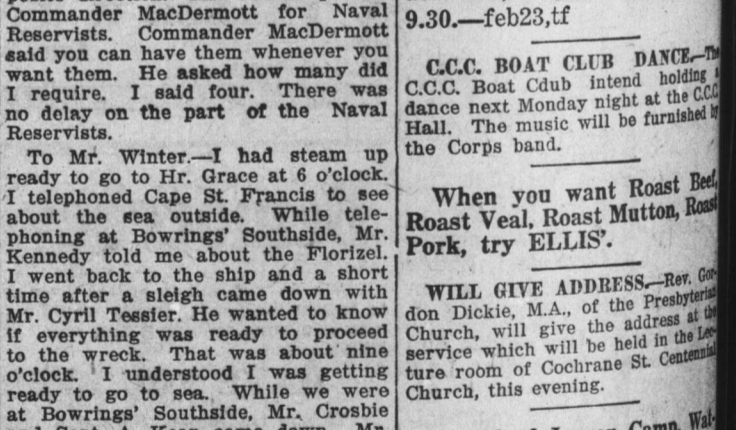

And Tried Nearly Everything Except a Sarsaparilla (Preparation Without Obtaining Belief) Until I Got a Complete Cure Was Effected.
There are reported here three cases of chronic cases of piles. In all three cases many treatments were tried before it was found that Dr. Chase's Ointment is about the only real cure for this distressing ailment. Mrs. A. Oates, 22 Gilkinson street, Bradford, Ont., writes: "I have used Dr. Chase's Ointment as a household remedy for ever so long, and am particularly indebted to it for a cure from Piles. I had suffered from this annoying trouble for ten years, and tried nearly everything I heard of. After using Dr. Chase's Ointment a short while I was completely cured. Mrs. Wm. Shantz, 155 Albert street, Kitchener, Ont., writes: "For several years I was troubled with bleeding piles. I tried different remedies but relief without success. I read in Dr. Chase's Almanac of the benefits of his Ointment for piles. I purchased a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, so I sent to your office for a sample box. I found it gave me such relief that I went to a drug store and purchased a full-sized box. I have used several boxes since, and have derived more benefit from its use than any remedy I have ever used."
Mrs. F. Cassons, Victoria street, Ingersoll, Ont., writes: "About two years ago I was suffering from piles. I had tried many different remedies for this distressing trouble, but nothing helped me. Finally I got a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and after using it for some time I was completely cured and have not been bothered in this way since. I can cheerfully recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to anyone suffering as I did."

Evening Telegram

W. J. HERDEK, Proprietor

THURSDAY, March 28, 1918.

The Beginning of the End.

That the remnant of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment is participating in the present battle, which might well be termed Armageddon, is evidenced by a dispatch to the Minister of Militia published in Tuesday's dailies, in which it is announced that Headquarters War Correspondent in France, writing to London, reports that on Sunday "the Newfoundland Regiment has been fighting magnificently." That this is so needs no further testimony as all are well aware that wherever the Newfoundlanders are engaged they have again distinguished themselves and added fresh laurels to their other well earned honors. Time and again the Regiment has proven its mettle and the battle fields of Europe are dyed red with the blood of our bravest and best. Proclaim it from the houseposts, tell it from the towers, shout it from the mountains. Our bravest and our best. For only the bravest and the best responded to the Call of Empire and went forth to engage in the struggle of democracy against autocracy. But it is to be feared that in this display of magnificent fighting many of our boys have made the Supreme Sacrifice and many others have received such wounds as will incapacitate them from further fighting, thus diminishing the already scanty strength of the battalion, if not jeopardising altogether its standing in the battle line. It needs no prophet now to foresee that this is the beginning of the end, and no one need be surprised if the next news we hear does not announce the extinguishing of the Regiment as an entity. Distinguished to be extinguished! Think it over you men upon whom the responsibility will lie and take it in your thoughts, that the odium of eternal shame and everlasting disgrace will be yours, if the Royal Newfoundland Regiment loses its identity because the Government of Newfoundland is a government of politicians and profiteers, rather than a Government of statesmen and empire builders. The price of seals against the life and existence of the Regiment. Filthy lucre against the blood of Newfoundlanders poured out that office seekers may hang on to the spoils. The lives of our bravest and best against the greed of parasites and political trimmers. What a heart-searching there will be when the lamed and maimed return; when those who come home shattered and broken curse the men who left them in their hour of distress and need, and refused to exert the power which they possessed to send the much needed reinforcements. In England to-day the press demands the immediate convening of Parliament for the purpose of sanctioning the extension of National Service, raising the military age and abolishing all exemptions, including conscientious objectors and departmental indispensables. The crisis is as near Newfoundland as it is to England, and in the name of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment and of the people of Newfoundland we demand the immediate convening of the House of Assembly to take up matters more vital than the price of seals or the chartering of steamers. The Regiment needs men! Away with subterfuge and political expediency. Action is now demanded and promptly, and if it will be the Government's good to know it, we will tell them now that no matter how they act in the present situation, the vengeance of a flouted and offended electorate is sure to fall upon them and send them into the limbo of political oblivion. Whether they prefer to go down with colors flying remains to be seen!

Correspondence

BETWEEN N.F. BOARD OF TRADE AND N.L.W.A.

Sir,—I shall be glad if you will publish for the information of the public, the enclosed correspondence, which has taken place between the Nfld. Industrial Workers' Association and the Council of the Nfld. Board of Trade.

I have the honor to be, Sir, Your obedient servant, ERNEST A. PATN, Secretary. The Editor, Evening Telegram.

(COPY.) N.F.L.D. INDUSTRIAL WORKERS' ASSOCIATION. March 22nd, 1918.

The President, Nfld. Board of Trade. Dear Sir,—We are directed by the Executive of the Nfld. Industrial Workers' Association to bring before the Board of Trade the fact that there are certain matters in dispute between the Association and the Nfld. Company. Matters are now arrived at the straining point and the Association is unable to get any satisfaction from the Company. We approached the Company over a month ago and we have been put off from time to time. Now, owing to the action of the Company's officials in laying off men and threatening to lay off others, we find ourselves compelled in self-defence to take drastic action.

As such action would involve serious consequences to the commercial interests of the Colony, we deem it advisable to acquaint the Board of Trade with all the facts in dispute. We shall be ready to send a deputation to meet a deputation from your Board, and discuss these matters, feeling sure that in your body there are men who are public-spirited enough to view these matters impartially.

Can you arrange to meet us not later than Monday, 25th inst., at 8 p.m.? Being working men we are unable to attend during the day time.

Yours truly, (Sgd.) P. BENNETT, President. W. J. NAUFFTS, Rec. Secy. 234, Theatre Hill.

(COPY.) March 22nd, 1918.

Sir,—I have to acknowledge receipt of your letter of even date, which was placed before the Council of the Board of Trade, at their regular weekly meeting to-day, and considered by them.

I am directed to say in reply, that as the Council are ignorant of the facts of the dispute between your Association and the Nfld. Co., which you think it better before meeting your deputation, that you write me stating these facts, so that the Council may be in a position to decide the case in such a way that would call for action by the Board of Trade.

I have the honor to be, Sir, Your obedient servant, (Sgd.) ERNEST A. PATN, Secy. W. J. NAUFFTS, Rec. Secy. Nfld. Industrial Workers' Ass'n.

(COPY.) N.F.L.D. INDUSTRIAL WORKERS' ASSOCIATION. March 25, 1918.

Mr. Ernest Patn, City. Dear Sir,—In reply to your letter, I beg to say that our deputation is ready to meet you to-night at 8 o'clock, or any time to-morrow (Tuesday) after 3 o'clock. The deputation will lay before you all the facts together with copies of all correspondence. I need hardly point out to you that this matter is most urgent.

Yours truly, (Sgd.) W. J. NAUFFTS, Rec. Secy. (COPY.) March 25, 1918.

Sir,—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your favor of even date, enclosing correspondence between your Association and the Nfld. Co. It will be quite impossible to meet and discuss the matter intelligently before carefully considering the correspondence, therefore I am having copies of same made for distribution to the various members of the Council, who will then be in a position to discuss same at their next meeting on Thursday morning.

I shall then advise you immediately regarding the decision arrived at by the Council.

I have the honor to be, Sir, Your obedient servant, (Sgd.) ERNEST A. PATN, Secy. W. J. NAUFFTS, Esq., Recording Secretary N.L.W.A., City.

(COPY.) N.F.L.D. BOARD OF TRADE. March 27th, 1918.

W. J. NAUFFTS, Esq., Recording Secretary, N.L.W.A., City.

Dear Sir,—As a result of a special meeting of the Council held this morning, I am instructed to inform you that it is a matter of some surprise that your Association after asking for the intervention of the Board of Trade, should decide upon calling a strike, before giving the members of the Council time to consider the points in dispute between your Association and the Nfld. Co.

The correspondence furnished by you on Monday was distributed to the members of the Council as speedily as circumstances permitted, in order that, as stated in our letter of the 25th, instant, the members might be more conversant with the details of the dispute in question, and so be in a position to decide if they could be of service or not.

Whether or not this action of your Association is intended as a refusal of the services of the Board of Trade, is not perfectly clear. The Council, nevertheless, wishes me to state that it is still open to consider the matter in dispute, provided that reasonable time is given to come to a clear understanding of the points in question, and provided also that the strike be called off while the matter is under discussion.

I have the honor to be, Sir, Your obedient servant, (Sgd.) ERNEST A. PATN, Secretary. Only One "BROMO QUININE." To get the genuine, call for full name L.A.S.T.Y.E. BROMO QUININE Tablets. Look for signature of E. W. GROVE. Cures a Cold in One Day. 25c.

Fogota Arrives With Bumper Trip.

RAILS FOR THE WEIGHT OF 18,000.

At 7 o'clock this morning the s.s. Fogota, Capt. Dalton, arrived from the north, according to the weight of 13,000 seals. On Monday morning, March 18th, Capt. Dalton steered his ship into a patch of hoods from which 300 were taken. The ship's position was then 30 miles S. E. of the Funks. Three days later, Thursday, the 21st, he struck another patch of hoods about 60 miles S. E. of the Funks, and up to Friday afternoon had accounted for 2,000 more old and young hoods. At 4 o'clock on Friday he left the hoods in quest of the whitecoats, and steaming N.W. ran into a large patch of whitecoats at 10 o'clock the same night. By 11 o'clock the next day 3,000 pelts had been secured, when they had to quit working owing to a severe snowstorm.

Later on in the day the storm abated and Capt. Dalton again ordered his men on the ice, and before midnight had secured the morning's kill. Had the day been favourable the Fogota's crew would have killed their load. On Sunday, March 24th, the Fogota steamed away 15 or 20 miles to the westward where a heavy snowstorm was blowing but could not kill owing to the day being the Sabbath. March 25th, the following morning, the seals were plentiful but dipping and the Fogota's difficulty in hunting 2,500 prime young hawks were taken. On Tuesday morning all pans were picked up and a few scattered seals killed and hauled aboard and at 2 p.m. Capt. Dalton bore up for home. The Fogota was then 110 miles E. by S. of Bacallieu, and searching for seals until 11 a.m. yesterday she ran into clear water. His ship being heavily laden, Capt. Dalton experienced some difficulty in making the land. There was a strong gale blowing from the westward and at 11 o'clock last night the Fogota was forced to shelter on the east side of Bacallieu. At 3 o'clock this morning the anchor was weighed and at 7 a.m. sharp the home port was reached.

The Fogota carried a crew of 83 men who will make a big bill. One of the crew strained his ankle the first day on the ice and had to be attended to by Mr. Walter Croshaw, who acted as medical officer. The injured man was unable to go on the ice for the remainder of the voyage but will nevertheless share equal credit with the crew. Capt. Dalton, who was badly injured in the chest while performing heroic work in rescuing the survivors of the Florida, suffered from the effects of the cold while at the icefields, but after a well earned rest hopes to regain his former health in a few days. The Fogota's skipper, Capt. Dalton, on his success, this being his first spring in command.

Eagle Reaches Port.

19,000—LOG LOADED.

The s.s. Eagle, Capt. Bishop, arrived in port this morning at 11.30, hauling for 19,000 young and 2,500 old. Interviewed on board the vessel this morning the Telegram elicited from the captain the following story of his successful trip. Sailing from here in the morning the Eagle secured her first seals on Saturday, the 16th, taking on board 350. The weather was very bad, but for that, Capt. Bishop was spent most working, including the Fogota, and secured another 3,000. The sea was very high and it was difficult to do any work. Sunday was spent making room for more seals, which the captain felt sure he was going to get, and on Monday they took on board the record number for his trip—7,000. On Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock Capt. Bishop bore up for home. The captain and crew are enjoying a day of rest. We congratulate Capt. Bishop on his bumper trip.

Recruiting Indeed Dull Infantile Mortality Alarming

The present month has not been "one of the best" for recruiting. Only four men offered their services between the first and twentieth instant. Almost the first news we received of the present "Hun" offensive was that the Royal Newfoundland Regiment had been fighting magnificently. It is only logical to conclude that their casualties have been high. How long, then, at the rate of four recruits for twenty days will it take to fill up the gaps which will, no doubt, be made in our regiment during the present gigantic offensive. A recruiting committee has been formed for some time and if the numbers of recruits secured as intimated above is the result of the committee's formation, then we do not see how they can justify their existence. The war is by no means finished and while we are genuinely optimistic concerning the ultimate result, we do feel that there will be need for men and still more men. That the great need is men, is seen by a despatch from Premier Lloyd George and read by Lord Reading, British High Commissioner to the U. S. A., at a dinner given at New York in his honour on the 27th. This message calls upon the U. S. A. to send American reinforcements across the Atlantic in the shortest possible time.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—The Registrar General, Mr. Doyle, has kindly given me the exact figures of the Infantile Mortality for 1917 and the rate per 1000 Births which were not available when I last wrote on this subject:—

Table with 2 columns: Year, Infantile Mortality Rate per 1000 Births. Data: 1915: 184.25%, 1916: 183.07%, 1917: 183.58%, 1918: 220.89%, 1919: 171.53%, 1920: 220.79%.

It is well perhaps to repeat once more that an Infantile Death rate of over 100 per 1000 births is absolutely disgraceful to the community. The regulations for the sale of Milk prepared by the Board of Health last week in the Royal Gazette should cause some improvement in the present year.

Yours truly, W. G. GOSLING, St. John's, March 28th, 1918.

THE SITUATION REVIEWED.

LONDON, March 28. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—The papers continue to urge the Government not to hesitate in taking the strongest measures to reinforce the armies in France. Some are demanding the convocation of Parliament in order to sanction a review of the whole manpower position. It is pointed out that the whole nation is rallied to the Government and that the spirit of 1914 is revived. Thousands of munition workers have volunteered to work on holidays and industrial disputes have been settled automatically, thus the plans for the National strike of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, scheduled for April 6th, was abandoned yesterday, when a committee appointed at an unofficial conference at Manchester called it off. All the engineers will do their utmost to replace the loss in the offensive. The Minister of Munitions acknowledges the general response. The Times anticipates that an equilibrium in the fighting will be established in the next two days. The most encouraging change is that in the counter-attacks twelve miles from Arras, the British troops yesterday were winning back and holding this ground. With reinforcements rapidly coming up messages from France are cheerful, while the note of elation has vanished from the enemy bulletins. Both the Allied flanks are now holding fast and assurances from Paris of the imminent intervention of reserves are the most welcomed news; for experts emphasize that the fate of the battle largely depended upon their concentration. The critical test will come when either side attacks or counter-attacks from their present positions. In such an encounter the Allies will have the advantage of fresh troops. The enemy apparently has paused on the northern front in order to reorganize his line and bring up artillery, while cautiously advancing on the old Somme battlefields. Here his tired masses, shelterless, in a month's wilderness, pounded all night long by British big guns, and bombed by airplanes, are suffering gravely. The enemy's main attack is now apparently pressing south of the Somme. Percival Phillips says that the enemy have brought up ten divisions from Flanders, four from Lorraine and from Lens as if he intends making his principal attack on the British right flank, instead of extending his activity north of the Scarpe, he is thus concentrating his strength in the area covered by the Crown Prince's army.

ENGLISH EXPERT'S REVIEW.

LONDON, To-day. One remarkable feature of the whole battle, has been the work of the Allied airmen, said General Maurice. Last night we dropped 22½ tons of bombs on enemy reserves around Peronne and Bapaume. During the day low flying machines operated constantly and almost without inter-

New Friends and Old

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

"Why don't I ever see you with Edith R. nowadays?" I asked Molly the stenographer today, the other day, mentioning a young person with whom she had formerly been very intimate.

"Oh, we're on the outs just now," said Molly.

"What's the matter, isn't she as nice as you thought?" I asked.

"Oh, yes, I guess so," said Molly cheerfully, and then added with a common sense and philosophy far beyond her years. "We just get on each other's nerves. We'll take a rest from each other and then we'll get over it and like each other as much as ever."

A Time When Nothing Goes Right.

I think there comes into every friendship, into every human relationship, certain times when the parties suddenly find that nothing goes right between them. Misunderstandings keep arising; they surprise meannesses and little-nesses in each other, and are astonished to find each other not at all the complacent, agreeable personalities each fancied, in the first flush of their intimacy.

The instinctive thing, at a time like this, is to decide that the person was not what you first thought him or her—to throw the whole connection overboard, and turn eagerly to some new friend whom one fancies, in the fullness of one's ignorance of him, has none of these mean and selfish ways.

A Phase Not The End of Friendship.

It is only as one grows older (and most people have to grow much older than Molly) that one comes to realize that this stage is not necessarily the end of a friendship—merely a phase of it.

We are all (or almost all) weak, faulty human beings; we have our good sides and our bad; our nobilities and our vanities; our unselfish moments and our mean ones. If a few of us are too much together, there are sure to come times when we "get on each other's nerves," as Molly says.

Just Get Off Each Other's Nerves.

And the thing to do at such times is not to think that all is over, but simply to get off each other's nerves.

Don't blame the other person and don't blame yourself. Don't have hot words. Simply seek out other friends, renew yourself with new contacts and come back to the old in a new mood.

Doubtless, by that time, the new friend will have given you such a distaste for his particular faults that you will decide that the old friend was not so bad after all.

NEIL FERGUSON.

Your Boys and Girls.

What most children need is more fancy, more poetry, more food for imagination. Every day the need becomes more apparent. Magazines, moving pictures, the average juvenile books, the talk of all about them, all tends to tether their thoughts to the world of here-and-now and has-to-be, the world we know with our five senses.

But shall they, therefore, lose their rightful inheritance in that other realm of loveliness, the world of yesterday and to-morrow, or the world of faraway or maybe. This realm is intended to be loaned to them indefinitely, prefigured in the glory of the gleam of the rainbow prism.

When I have exhausted every other means of entertaining the children on stormy days, I resort to my never failing one, which is to take one of our beautiful magazine covers and paste it on a piece of cardboard, then cut it up into a number of zigzag shapes for a picture puzzle. The older the children the more difficult I make it and they all enjoy trying to piece the puzzle together.

Our Daily Story.

THE METAMORPHOSIS OF HENRY SNEEK.

"Henry!" his wife called up to him while he was shaving, "it's starting to commence to rain. Don't neglect to put on your rubbers when you leave the house."

"Yes'm—no'm" replied Henry Sneek, whom other men's wives looked at curiously as a model henpecked husband.

When he sat down to breakfast his wife said, "Now don't you forget your rubbers, Henry!" And while he was taking an extra lump of sugar under cover of his newspaper she said, "Mind you remember your rubbers, Henry!" And while he was carrying the breakfast things out into the kitchen to wash them she said, "Don't you dare forget your rubbers, Henry!"

It wasn't until he was two blocks away from the house that he realized he had forgotten them after all. "Mercy!" he thought. "I darsn't go back now—she'd give me a dreadful scolding. I know—I'll walk on my heels all day so as not to get my feet wet, and maybe she'll never find out after all."

And all day long he walked on his heels. It came hard at first, but after several hours—he was a rent collector and walked continually—it seemed quite natural, and as he walked home (for he had bought dessert for lunch and used up his cartage) he really did it quite gracefully. Noticeably so, in fact, for a man in a thousand dollar fur overcoat stopped him and addressed him thus:

"Excuse me, sir, but would you mind if I offered you a job in the Russian ballet at eighty dollars a night to start? A man that can walk on his heels with such airy abandon would make a perfect Russian dancer."

Henry Sneek accepted joyfully, signed the contract immediately, changed his name to Henkal Sneekskin, became famous as an imported Russian dancer, and never saw his wife again.

DRINK MILK FOR FLESH.

The milk diet is the best flesh producer that I know of. Drink a couple of glasses of hot water when arising and fifteen minutes later eat half a dozen prunes that have soaked all night in warm water. Also drink the prune juice. Fifteen minutes after this take a glass and a half of milk and, thereafter, take the same amount every hour until late in the afternoon. Eat your evening meal as usual, letting it consist of plainly cooked foods. Do not drink the milk hurriedly, but remember that it has just as much nourishment as beefsteak and requires the same amount of chewing. Swish the milk around in the mouth before swallowing, as in this way it is almost entirely digested before it reaches the stomach.

Do not take milk too cold but let it stand until the chill is off. Also do not drink it too close to bedtime, rather get up a little earlier in the morning. The first week take three to three and a half quarts of milk, the second week five quarts and the third and succeeding weeks at least six quarts.

For the first week take two glasses of hot water before retiring. The second week drink a glass and a half of milk every hour during the day. Continue the hot water and prunes as directed for the first week, but omit the evening meal the second week and the peaches in the third week, and take two glasses of milk every hour as well as continuing the hot water and prunes.

The Great Battle Has United All Classes in England.

Press Urges Government to Take Strong Measures. Industrial Disputes Ended. Workmen Will Give Up Holidays. German Advance Checked. Enemy Given No Rest. Night and Day He is Being Pitilessly Pounded With Gun-Fire.

THE SITUATION REVIEWED.

LONDON, March 28. (Via Reuters' Ottawa Agency.)—The papers continue to urge the Government not to hesitate in taking the strongest measures to reinforce the armies in France. Some are demanding the convocation of Parliament in order to sanction a review of the whole manpower position. It is pointed out that the whole nation is rallied to the Government and that the spirit of 1914 is revived. Thousands of munition workers have volunteered to work on holidays and industrial disputes have been settled automatically, thus the plans for the National strike of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, scheduled for April 6th, are abandoned yesterday, when a committee appointed at an unofficial conference at Manchester called it off. All the engineers will do their utmost to replace the loss in the offensive. The Minister of Munitions acknowledges the general response. These anticipations that an equilibrium in the fighting will be established in the next two days. The most encouraging change is that in the counter-attacks to trench miles from Arras, the British troops yesterday were winning back and holding this ground, with reinforcements rapidly coming up from France and cheerfully while the note of elation has vanished from the enemy bulletins. Both the Allied flanks are now holding fast and assurance from Paris of the imminent intervention of reserves are the most welcomed news; for experts emphasize that the fate of the battle largely depended upon their concentration. The critical test will come when either side attacks or counter-attacks from their present positions. In such an encounter the Allies will have the advantage of fresh troops. The enemy apparently has paused on its northern front in order to reorganize his line and bring up artillery, while cautiously advancing on the old Somme battlefields, here his divisions, nevertheless, in a moonlit wilderness, pounded all night long by British big guns, and bombed by airplanes, are suffering gravely. The enemy's main attack is now apparently pressing south of the Somme. Personal Phillips says that the enemy has been ordered to extend his activity north of the Scarpe, he is thus concentrating his strength in the area covered by the Crown Prince's army.

ENGLISH EXPERT'S REVIEW.

LONDON, To-day. The whole battle, has been the work of Allied arms, said General Maurice, last night we dropped 22½ tons of bombs on enemy reserves around Berny and Bapaume. During the day low flying machines operated constantly and almost without interference on the part of the enemy, and with their machine guns they inflicted heavy losses on him and constantly interfered with his preparation. The opposing forces on the whole front are as nearly equal as possible. The enemy being on the offensive gets his reserves on the scene first. What we require is time to get up our forces to the right place as every day that the enemy is held is a tremendous advantage to us. The battle is far from over, and I wouldn't like to say that we are not likely to be faced with another crisis, but time is on our side. The enemy is getting far from his iron rations but this process of his lines is getting more congested and his supply of men also wearing down. Thus far, the Germans have kept their troops in Echelon, throwing in fresh men from the rear as the front line is exhausted. Meanwhile the men carry full equipment, and exist on iron rations but this process of handling troops is now growing difficult, and meanwhile the Anglo-French reserves are getting nearer the battle front. The situation to-day is less critical than has been in the last few days. General Maurice laid map of West front on a table in his Headquarters, while making his customary statement to-day, and continued, "The blue line represents the front as outlined in last night's Communiqué, while tonight the green line shows the line at 1 o'clock this afternoon. Changes to-day include a light enemy advance along the Somme, both North and South of River and a similar enemy push further south around Arches and Locelle. At Arras during the night, continued General Maurice, the enemy attacked just North of the Somme and drove us back to Marcourt and Bally, but fresh allied troops arrived on the scene this morning and counter-attacked, regaining a considerable part of the ground the Germans had taken. On the remainder of the Northern part of the front, or line holds steady."

ON THE ITALIAN FRONT.

WASHINGTON, To-day. Artillery duels are growing in intensity all along the mountain section of the Italian front. In Val Magarini, Guldacase and Astico, the Austrians have numerous pieces of heavy artillery and great movements of Austro-Hungarian troops are reported by Italian aviators in Val Sagana. Everything points towards a new effort on the part of the enemy forces to break through the mountainous zone of the Italian front towards the plains.

PREMIER'S MESSAGE TO AMERICA.

NEW YORK, To-day. We are at a crisis of the hour, being attacked by immense superiority of German troops, said Premier Lloyd George, in his message, and our army has been forced to retire, but our resistance is being carried out methodically, before the pressure of a steady succession of fresh German reserves, which are suffering enormous losses. The situation is being faced with Allied courage and resolution. The dogged pluck of our troops has for the moment checked the ceaseless onslaught of the enemy, and the French have now joined in the struggle, but this battle which is the greatest and most momentous in the history of the world, is only just beginning. Throughout it both the French and British are buoyed up with the knowledge that the great Republic of the West will neglect no effort which can hasten its troops and its ships to Europe, which assistance is vital. It is impossible to exaggerate the importance of getting American reinforcements across the Atlantic in the shortest possible space of time.

BRITISH OFFICIAL REPORT.

LONDON, To-day. (Official.)—During the night our troops were pressed back a short distance on both banks of the Somme and early this morning were holding the line, approximately at Rosieres, Barbonnettes, Sully Le Sec, Merricourt and Labbe, thence up to the railway embankment Southwest of Albert. The enemy is in Albert. One time yesterday afternoon, the enemy crossed the Ancre near Meuil, North of Albert, but was counter-attacked and driven back across the river. North of this point there is no change in our positions. This morning our troops counter-attacked North of the Somme between the angle of the Ancre and Somme, and recaptured Mortancourt and Chipilly; at the same time our troops South of the river again advanced their line to Broyart. The enemy was attacked in the neighborhood of Baucquey and a fresh guard division has been brought up. Up to the present this attack has made no impression. A number of other attacks were made to-day on our front both North and South of the Somme and latest information is that the enemy had been repulsed with heavy loss. West of Roye the French have been heavily engaged and have been forced to give some ground, but reinforcements are arriving and the situation is being held. This afternoon enemy attacked in great strength in the neighbourhood of Burguey and Abiaulville and gained a footing in the latter village. At all other points his infantry was beaten off with great loss. Our troops have fought magnificently, and have shown in above account, have to-day thrown back the enemy all along the front with heavy losses, despite most bitter and determined enemy attacks and his superiority in numbers. Heavy fighting continues on the whole front.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

PARIS, To-day. (French official.)—The Germans throwing into the battle fresh new troops to-day, attacked with the double intention of breaking through the front of the Somme and of the Ancre. Our troops with praiseworthy tenacity checked the assaults of the enemy who succeeded in advancing, only by reason of their superiority in numbers. In the region of Les Igny and Noyon, attacks not less powerful, suffered a complete check, and were broken down by the heroic resistance of our regiments.

ACTIVITY IN THE EAST.

EASTERN THEATRE.—Between Lakes Prossa and Orchida, the enemy attacked a salient of our positions, but was completely repulsed, leaving on the ground a great number of dead. A surprise attack at the same time, against one of our advanced positions, three kilometres further West, failed completely. Allied aviators successfully bombed enemy depots, communications and encampments south-east of Pesana.

HOPEFUL IMPRESSION CONFIRMED.

LONDON, To-day. Last night's news from the front confirms the hopeful impression formed early in the day, that the British now appear to be on a line that they are able to hold firmly, at least on the Somme and Ancre rivers. Further South in Roye-Noyon region, the situation is less well defined, but it is stated that both French and British are bringing up reserves there. Correspondents also are showing greater confidence that the enemy will be held on this terrain. A German official, of last night was significantly brief and reserved; it reports the crossing of the Ancre, but only refers to Tuesday's events, while British War Officials show that the Germans who crossed the stream, were thrown back to-day in counter-attacks. News from the Somme is encouraging. The British have recaptured Merlancourt and Chipilly and advanced to Proyar.

GERMAN PRISONERS SICK OF FIGHTING.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE.—(By A.P.)—The faith of our men in their ability to cope with the hard hitting Germans has never flagged from the start. These troops which are coming back from the fierce battles of the past few days, which they fought as they have never been called to fight before, are filled with confidence and one reassuring sign is that the enemy is beginning to use his old troops in continuing his assault. German prisoners declare, that never before have they seen such fighting as they have experienced. Since last Thursday they battled like demons, and like flies, they are coming into the prison camps, hungry and sullen, and declaring that they are sick of the whole business. The British army continues to exact a great toll of life from the enemy. Last night the entire area of the Somme battle field, over which the German Emperor's troops have spent themselves, was subjected to a most terrible bombardment lasting until daylight. The gunnery along the front for the past week has been appalling, and the zone is shrouded with a hovering grey haze from the bursting explosives. There has been practically no change in the British line since yesterday morning. Most sensational rumors are continually coming back from the direction of Albert, but were thrown away by the Germans were well on their way to Amiens, but the Germans were still sitting under the gunfire of the British artillerymen and machine-guns this morning. During the night the enemy tried to advance on the camps Northwest of Albert, but was thrown against the neighbouring village of Auchin-Villiers and met a like fate, and the British captured many prisoners. The Germans were in force in this sector and Bavarians were included among their troops. Another attack was delivered at Ablainville, but was repulsed with heavy loss. Touching scenes were witnessed among civilians in the area affected by the offensive, and for days these people have been coming back from their homes, following one another, dumbly like sheep, towards the havens of safety. There, they have had to prepare themselves, for they have been brought out under the guidance of the British military authorities, and many of them, had to be taken to the hospitals in preference to taking advantage in the outside world, if the ever had time to prepare themselves. hadn't forced them for their own good to move into the quiet zones.

TOMMIES ARE OPTIMISTIC.

LONDON, To-day. Infantry fighting along the major portion of the British front in the new battle zone, showed marked slowing this morning, indicating that the first phase of the German offensive here had been finished. From the Southern sector, however, came word that the Germans were still pressing their attack with great fury against our unwavering defense. The enemy has paused in the North sector, probably because of their own losses, but the spirit of optimism is high all along the front to-day.

OPERATIONS REVIEWED.

The strength of the great German offensive in France apparently is fast diminishing on this the seventh day of the titanic struggle. There were reports that the enemy was feeling the strain he has undergone, and that his power had been greatly impaired through hard usage. While hard local battles are still in progress the line at Sully Le Sec, where the Germans last night gained a footing, but the British this morning delivered a smashing counter-attack which pushed the invaders back. The spirit of optimism is high all along the front to-day.

attacks north of Noyon, and south of the Somme have also driven across the river the Germans who forced a retreat on Wednesday. Fighting still continues on all sectors, but everywhere the British and French are holding the enemy, and especially severe has been the fighting west of Albert, where the Germans in an endeavour to debouch outward were repulsed by Field Marshal Haig's men with heavy casualties. British gains in the Somme and Ancre regions are represented by the capture of the towns of Mortancourt and Chipilly, and south of the Somme they have advanced to Proyer, which lies south of Bray. All along a 50 mile front, from the region of Arras to the south of the Ancre, near Noyon, effects which were to have been the final stroke to end the war in victory for the Teutons are only too plainly in evidence in the redevastation of the countryside and the wreck and ruin of the towns, villages and hamlets through which our army have passed. Westward from where the old battleground reared itself, the Germans everywhere have pushed forward for months, but with loss before them who fought with the greatest bravery and stubbornness, and ceded no ground unless recompensed at a numerous rate on men killed, wounded or made prisoners. It is estimated that in the great attacks delivered in massed formation more than 400,000 of nearly one million Germans thrown into the fray are dead or are in the hands of the foe. About 25 miles represents the greatest point of penetration made at any place by the enemy. In his flanks, which are dangerously open to counter attacks, the same, if successful, might result in a greater than in the 1916 retrograde movement of Hindenburg, and nullify in its entirety the drive which has been accomplished. It is not improbable that the British and French reserves, and possibly American troops, known to be behind the battle front, soon will be thrown against the weakened enemy. Notwithstanding the extent of the German drive, nowhere has the British or French front, along the line of which American troops have given a good account of their ability as fighters, been even bent. Just who is in command of the German force, seems somewhat doubtful. Late despatches report that Field Marshal Von Hindenburg has been at Drive in the Russian theatre, and the German war correspondents assert that General Von Ludendorff not only planned the offensive, but was on the ground last Friday, personally, to control the attack. On the other battle fronts, operations continue of minor character, but daily the situation in Italy gives greater indications that an offensive against the Italians on the prospects of large reinforcements being drawn up with artillery on the whole front, is growing more intense. Fresh men are being sent into this theatre and are said to have been drawn heavily from the Romanian line. In Russia the situation again attracts attention by the fact that Ukrainians and Bolsheviks have recaptured Odessa from the Teutons, in addition, now hold the important towns of Mikelaye, Kherson and Ammanka. Reports also have it that Cosack General Korniloff's troops have been surrounded by Bolsheviks. As was to be expected, the Germans synchronously with attack in France, re-opened last week, strong submarine attacks against the British and Allied ships, 28 merchant ships lying the British flag were sent to bottom, 16 of them 1,600 tons, and 12 of smaller tonnage. The previous week, 17 British merchantmen of both categories were destroyed. Italians during the week lost three submarines and six sailing ships in submarine attacks.

Patriotism Discounted.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir,—We have just been honored with a visit from His Excellency the Governor, and we trust His Excellency was pleased with the reception and entertainment proffered him in Old Carbonear.

In reading of the proceedings at Harbor Grace upon the occasion of His Excellency's visit it struck me that the contrast between the actions of the Harbor Grace Committee and those of Carbonear was very marked. Every loyal Newfoundland must appreciate and endorse the forethought and diplomacy of the Harbor Grace Committee in recognizing the patriotism of its boys at the front and in the navy. Better still in perpetuating the memory of the noble lads who have given their lives in their country's service by having the brave mothers of those noble men presented to His Excellency from whom they received words of comfort. This thoughtful and diplomatic action upon the part of the Harbor Grace Committee tends to foster the patriotic and self-sacrificing spirit, and one does not wonder at the response to the call for King and Country from that patriotic town.

So far as one could judge of the actions of the Carbonear Committee there was not the slightest attempt made to recognize the patriotic and noble spirit of the boys in khaki and blue from this old town, while the noble mothers were alike unrecognized. No one in Carbonear wonders at the poor response to appeals for recruits in this district for this is an example of the proceedings of all attempts at recruiting and they all spring from the same source.

His Excellency went away from Carbonear with the impression that we were a community of shirkers and our representative Mr. Goodison told us publicly for the first time "he was ashamed of us." I wonder why Mr. Goodison is not ashamed to accept his cheque every quarter for the "hard work" he puts in for King and Country, "and which he owes to Carbonear District."

There are families in Carbonear who have 4 sons out of 5, 3 out of 4, 2 out of 3, and one only son at the front. There are spots in Gallipoli and France sacred in memory to mothers and fathers of Carbonear.

If Old Carbonear is not as well represented as it should be in the army and navy there is a branch of the service in which we have a good representation. The sailors of Carbonear, second to none, are doing a full share in manning our foreign-going vessels which is a very necessary service at the present time. Take Carbonear sailors and master mariners from our foreign going vessels to-day and the owners would need to do some recruiting. Old Neptune is taking large toll of those seamen this season and there are mothers in Carbonear to-day with broken hearts because of the boys who are quietly slumbering in ocean depths.

I trust Carbonear will respond better to the next appeal for recruits and that those who take upon themselves public duties will develop a larger heartedness and sacrifice a little of their domineering selfish spirit which will allow the public to discern some patriotism in their make up.

Very truly,
MARINER.

Carbonear, March 25, 1918.
Newfoundland Scotch Cured Herring.

The almost complete exhaustion of Newfoundland Scotch cured herring in the New York market has had little effect upon conditions here, there being little demand for this grade at present. Merchants report that they have had few inquiries since the sinking of the steamer Florida at Cape Race with a large quantity of this grade. It is apparent that the Lenten season has had some influence upon the market also. New supplies of fall Newfoundland herring are on the way to this market on the steamer Prospero, which left St. John's on Tuesday, and it is expected that with her arrival there will be a renewed interest in this trade. Quotations have been little or no changes since last reports, although importers have given evidence of their intention to advance prices. Recent sales have been on the basis of $37 and $28 per barrel, while in some instances $30 has been asked for large fancy fish. The supply coming forward via the steamer Prospero will probably clean up the holdings of several New York importers, although it is understood that there is a liberal quantity yet to be shipped from the outports when navigation is resumed this spring. Other cargoes are also reported to be on the way here. The supply of Newfoundland Scotch cured herring is reported to be of fair average. The total pack at Bay of Islands is reported to have been 17,000 barrels, while the total catch was approximately 22,000 barrels. Prices prevailing in St. John's at present are $22 and $23, according to reports received this week.—N. Y. Fishing Gazette, March 16.

Easter BACON

It is not the intention or desire of the W. P. A. or Food Control Board in advocating the restriction of the use of Bacon to ask you to do without this satisfying foodstuff altogether. It is merely a request to "let up" on your usual consumption to some extent in order that war stocks may accumulate for the Allies. Realizing the fact that most of our customers would find it

A Great Hardship To Do Without Our Delicious "Berkshire" Bacon Entirely, we imported a small shipment to-day and are fully prepared to fill your Easter order promptly, and at Lowest Prices.
