CHAPTER XIV.

"There, it is down!" she said, with a laugh. She shook her hair loose, and smiled up at him as one school-girl smiles at another. "That is how I looked a few months before you saw me at the Zoo," she said.

He looked at her, and then suddenly away from her, lest she should read his secret in his eyes.

"You must have been rather a nice-looking girl," he remarked, with an effort at careless badinage.

"I wasn't, really. I was a very ugly child," she said. "I remember Bobby used to call me the plain bun, and saw you about his expecting to see a long-legged, ugly little girl at the railway station haven't I?"

While she was speaking, she was doing up her hair rapidly and carelessly. He stooped to pick up some of the hair-pins which had fallen, and saw a piece of brown ribbon which had either fallen from her hair or some part of her dress.

He waited until she had finished, then he picked up the ribbon.

"Do you want this?" he said.

"What is it? Oh, thanks!"

He held it in his hand.

"If you don't particularly want it, I'll tie up the plans with it," he said, with an air of indifference.

"No, I don't want it. Is it long enough?"

"Quite," he said, as he rolled up the plans and wound the ribbon round them. "I'm going down to the village to see Cobbet. Could you—will it be convenient for you to meet me there this afternoon? There are some things Bright wants to ask you about. You and Bobby might come up to tea afterwards, if you'd be so gracious."

"Very well," she said at once and brightly. "I am going in to help to make a pudding. I am learning to cook, you know. Bobby says I always forget the principal ingredient—generally the sugar—but he always has two serves, and the proof of the pudding is the eating thereof."

She talked on—the talk of a happy, care-free girl—and he listened with a mingling of pleasure and pain. Her innocence and unconsciousness hurt him that morning. He got up almost suddenly.

"I must go," he said, abruptly, and left her.

They met in the village in the afternoon, interviewed Mr. Bright, and then met Bobby, and went up to the Hall to tea. It was served on the terrace, and she presided, as she had done on several previous occasions. Gaunt watched her. Never had she seemed more perfect in every tone and movement. Looking at her was like listening to an exquisite piece of music which makes the heart ache with an infinite longing.

"Show Bobby the plans, Lord Gaunt," she said, presently.

Gaunt went into the library and brought them. They were untied and in confusion.

"Why, what a jumble you have got them in! Where is the ribbon you tied them up with?" she asked.

He colored for an instant and looked round with the awkwardness of a man.

"I—I must have dropped it," he said. It was folded neatly in his waistcoat pocket over his heart.

"Ah," said Bobby, "want my opinion? Well, my opinion is that you are pauperizing the whole place between you; and I'm rather glad that I'm going out of it, and so can chuck what little of the responsibility that has fallen to my share."

"Going out of it!" said Decima. He nodded as he lighted a cigarette.

"Yes, old Brown"—Brown was his coach—"thinks that I ought to go up to London to polish up my French and German; so I'm going right away; that is, in a week or two."

"Oh, Bobby!" said Decima, aghast. "Don't cry. Is its brother going to leave it for a few weeks? Never mind! He'll come back soon and bring his little sister a nice little doll."

"Going up to London," said Gaunt. His heart sunk, for he knew that Bobby was away, he should not be able to see so much of Decima, for Bobby had played the useful part of chaperon.

"You'll go into diggings, I suppose? See here, I've some chambers in town, you go up to them. You'll be doing me a service if you will."

Bobby stared.

"You—you mean it?"

"Of course, I mean it," said Gaunt, rather curtly. "It's better for the rooms to be occupied." He gave Bobby the address. "And I'll put you up for the—what club would you like, I wonder? What do you say to the Orient?"

Bobby dashed with pride and pleasure.

"Will you really? How awfully good of you! The Orient!"

He had heard and read of the club—one of the best—but had never hoped, never dreamed of becoming a member.

"Not at all," said Gaunt, briskly. "I'll write to-night."

Bobby was so moved and excited that he jumped up and paced away. Decima looked at Gaunt with a sudden moisture in her eyes.

"I wonder why you are so kind to us?" she said, with a little catch in her voice.

He could not have found a quicker road to her heart.

He raised his eyes to her face for a moment.

"Nonsense!" he said, almost roughly. "What is there especially kind in that? I should do it for any one."

"Yes," she said; "I think you would. There is no one so kind, so thoughtful, so generous. Bobby can't thank you, I see; and I—Oh, I wish I could tell you just what I think!" She leaned forward and touched his hand.

He drew it away sharply, and his lips twitched, then—as she looked at him half startled by his sudden gesture—he slid his hand back and laid it on her arm.

"You—you forget all that you have done for me, Decima." He bit his lip. "I beg your pardon, Miss Deane! The name slipped out, I—I hear your brother a-calling you so—so often."

"But does it matter?" she asked, smiling at him innocently. "Why shouldn't you call me Decima, if you like? It is better than Miss Deane. And Decima is better still."

He looked at her steadily, his lips compressed. She was torturing him; and all so innocently!

"I'm afraid that—that it wouldn't be quite the thing," he said. "But—well, you must let me think of you as—the name seemed too dear, too sacred to be spoken—as Decima—sometimes."

As he walked up with them to The Woodbines—he gained another half hour with her by doing so—he gave some keys to Bobby.

"Use anything there as if it were your own," he said, in a casual way. "The woman cook very fairly, and can manage a little dinner-party; it's more comfortable than dining at the club. You'll write to me for anything you want." And so on, and Bobby could only stammer his thanks.

Decima said not another word, but as he wished them good-bye, she gave him her hand and looked at him with all her grateful soul in her lovely eyes.

He took the look home with him—it haunted him as he sat, smoking endless pipes, in the chair she had bought for him. It followed him to his room, where, having dismissed Hobson, he stood with her ribbon in his hand.

"I am a fool!" he said. "I am living in a fool's paradise, and I shall wake presently to find myself in—the other place. I'll burn this. Yes; I'll burn it—and try and forget her." He held the poor little ribbon to the candle—but drew it back with something like a groan on his lips. The ribbon slept on his heart that night—and every night; and his heart said to it: "I love her—I love her!" and the ribbon murmured back, "I know it!"

CHAPTER XV.

In the morning he cursed his folly. Was this the way to forget her? To brood in the solitude of the great house over his secret love? After breakfast he came to a sudden resolution. He would go into society; he would meet the people he had avoided, see fresh faces, "divert his mind."

In the afternoon he had out his mail phaeton and pair and drove round paying calls. The Cattermores, the Pattergills, and all the rest of them received him with great, and scarcely concealed, joy. They thought him rather absent-minded and grim; but they were only too delighted to have him in any mood. He came back wearied to death, and in a very bad humor; and in a few days the usual invitations poured in. He accepted them one and all, and went the round of the dinner-parties and festivities which, all too palpably, had been got up in his honor. And he did his best to be agreeable, and harder still, to be amused and "diverted." There was a large family—mostly girls—at the Cattermores', and they were all mad over him. Gaunt was the sort of man to catch a girl's fancy. They raved about his good looks, his distinguished manners, his travels and adventures—his very grimes—for sometimes when he was more than usually bored, Gaunt was almost as grim as death—was voted an added charm; and his reputation for wildness—well, when women cease to be women, and only then, will the wickedness of man lose its fascination for them.

He kept away from The Woodbines, and avoided the village while he was going through this course of "diversion" and making the attempt to forget her. But instead of forgetting her, his mind dwelt on her day and night. She came upon him as he sat at a big dinner-party, and he would lay down his knife and fork and look straight before him with an expression of abstraction which not seldom startled the lady who sat beside him, and to whom, a few minutes before, he had seemed all attention.

He avoided Decima. But one day he met her coming through the village. He was striding along, his head bent gloomily, the dogs running silently at his heels—how quick dogs are to understand and harmonize with their master's mood!—and he saw Decima coming toward him. She had a small basket on her arm, for she had been visiting some of her sick people.

As he raised his eyes, something shot through his heart—a dull, aching pain—for he thought she looked pale and sad. But her sweet face brightened as she saw him, and her eyes darkened with pleasure as he stopped and regarded her awkwardly and in silence, for the sight of her unnerved him.

"You have been in those cottages again. There is measles or something, isn't there?" he said, by way of greeting.

"Oh, yes; but I've had the measles long ago. And they're nearly over now, you know. But you haven't been into the village lately, have you?"

"No," he said, looking away from her. "I—have been busy—"

"I know," she said, quickly. "We have heard of your visiting and—dining out; and I am so glad."

ANOTHER HUNGER STRIKER DIES.

CORK, Oct. 25. Joseph Murphy, one of the hunger strikers in Cork jail, died to-night. He was 25 years old and unmarried. Murphy was a member of the Irish volunteers and was well known as an athlete.

BIG BOXING MATCH LIKELY.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25. The terms for a boxing bout between Jack Dempsey, the world's champion heavy-weight and George Carpentier, French pugilist, have been practically agreed upon, according to Kearns, Dempsey's manager. Probably the bout will be held in New York in June or January.

PROBABLY INSANE.

MERIDAN, Conn., Oct. 25. John A. Taylor, forty years old, of this city, shot and killed his two sons, Arthur, aged fourteen, and Frederick, aged ten, late to-day and then committed suicide. A week ago Taylor appeared in a police court here on a complaint charging him with neglecting to properly care for his two sons. He was placed on probation. Taylor, the police say, had not been living with his sons for two weeks.

ARTICLE TEN.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 25. Leon Bourgeois, President of the Council of the League of Nations, talking to United States newspaper correspondents last night said that article ten of the Covenant of the League of Nations, is not considered by European statesmen as a vital and essential element of the Covenant. Bourgeois said he had been surprised that this article ten had caused so much emotion in the United States. He stated that article ten could be eliminated without any way modifying the effectiveness of the League of Nations. Article ten, said Bourgeois, is scarcely more than a moral background to the Covenant. It is not considered so important by Europeans as by Americans. There is really no sanction or penalty in this article.

All penalties provided by the Covenant in order to make the League's action effective are in other articles. Article ten provides that nations of the League undertake to maintain the present boundaries of its member countries by whatever means may be deemed necessary.

SETTLEMENT CONFIDENTLY EXPECTED.

LONDON, Oct. 25. Conversations between Lloyd George and miners' leaders were renewed to-day and were confidently expected to lead to a settlement of the miners' strike. It is believed an agreement can be reached by which each side can claim it did not yield its main contention. The miners' leaders are quoted as saying they are confident the government will find a way soon to concede the miners' claims. It is understood there will be no railway strike before Wednesday in any case, and it may be rather half-hearted even if finally called. In a speech delivered Sunday, J. H. Thomas, Secretary of the Railwaymen, warned his audience of the dangers of a strike which might lead "to the downfall of us all."

WILL BE ENTERED IN IRELAND.

LONDON, Oct. 25. After MacSweeney's death in Brighton jail, Father Dominic and John MacSweeney say they were not permitted to leave the prison till six-fifteen, when they summoned the Mayor's widow and Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien, and the London Executive of the Irish Self-Determination League. It is said the body is to be taken to Ireland for interment. There were no unusual signs of activity near Brighton this morning. There was the usual large contingent of police.

DEADLOCK CONCEIVABLE.

LONDON, Oct. 25. In the House of Commons this afternoon Lloyd George said he was hopeful the government and the miners would obviate the necessity of setting up a tribunal to inquire into the best means of increasing coal production. Contrary to expectations it was announced in the House by Mr. Bonar Law that the government intended to proceed to-day with the bill introduced last week, granting the government unusual powers for dealing with an emergency such as might grow out of the strike situation. He moved the second reading of the measure. In discussing his motion Bonar Law said the strike negotiations had reached a point where it was impossible to say anything whatever about them, but that it was conceivable that a deadlock might arise.

APPEALING AGAINST VIOLENCE.

CORK, Oct. 25. Feverish interest in possible developments in connection with MacSweeney's death is mingled with grief this morning. Although the people are stirred to the highest degree of bitterness, it is regarded as extremely improbable there will be any outbreaks or disorderly demonstrations. The military are exceptionally strong in Cork, and the jail where several hunger strikers are in a grave condition, is guarded inside and outside by soldiers with machine guns. It is understood the Irish Parliament is making strong appeals to the people to refrain from violence.

FLAG HALF-MAST ON CITY HALL.

NEWARK, N.J., Oct. 25. Mayor Gillen to-day ordered the United States flag over the City Hall half-masted out of respect for Lord Mayor MacSweeney's death. He also made a statement to the press in which he attacked the British government in connection with the Lord Mayor's death.

MANIFESTATIONS SUNDAY NEXT.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25. Diarmuid Lynch, National Secretary of the Friends of Irish Freedom, to-night telegraphed all state and local branches of the organization calling for organized manifestations of indignation and sorrow next Sunday over "the murder of Lord Mayor MacSweeney of Cork and Michael Fitzgerald, who died recently after a hunger strike in Cork jail." Demonstrations are to be uniform throughout the United States, with funeral services, in cathedrals and principal churches and corteges. Banners are to be draped in black, no mottoes are to be carried and no speeches made on that day, according to the orders of the National Executive decree, Lynch stated.

KING ALEXANDER OF GREECE IS DEAD.

ATHENS, Oct. 25. King Alexander of Greece died this morning. His death was due to wounds which he had received in an attack on him by a pet monkey early in October, the King being badly mutilated. Throughout the night the heart action grew weaker, his general debility became more pronounced and pulmonary symptoms were intense. Breathing at times was most difficult and weakening, and at noon to-day it was announced that the King's condition was hopeless.

Bootlegger Shot in a Running Fight.

Lethbridge, Alta., Oct. 20.—As the result of a running fight between Alberta Provincial police and bootleggers along the Alberta Montana border last Sunday, Victor Ryberg, bootlegger, was killed. It became known yesterday, when his body was found in a haystack on the Montana side of the line.

MRS. ELLA LEFTWICK, another Kansas City woman whose remarkable restoration by Tanlac has astonished her neighbors, many of whom have begun taking the Master Medicine. "They all agree with me that it is the greatest medicine on earth," says Mrs. Leftwick.

A number of my friends, after seeing the wonderful good Tanlac did me, began taking the medicine, and now they all agree with me that it is the greatest medicine on earth," said Mrs. Ella Leftwick, 722 Pile St., Kansas City, Kans. "Tanlac completely restored my health," she said, "and just seemed to give me a new lease on life. If I could talk personally with every woman suffering as I did, I would urge them to take this medicine. For the first time in three years I am able to eat and enjoy three hearty meals every day and not suffer in the least with indigestion afterwards. I am never troubled now with the awful smothering spells that used to frighten me so much, and the dreadful headaches that came upon me every day have been entirely broken up. I was extremely nervous and couldn't sleep well, but now my nerves are in splendid shape, and I sleep like a child every night. My strength has been so wonderfully increased that I can now do all the housework in my eight-room house and attend to the children besides. I feel just splendidly all the time now. Tanlac is certainly worth its weight in gold."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, in Paradise by Mrs. Martin F. Byrne, in Upper Gullies by Heber Andrews, in Portland by H. C. Haines, in St. Joseph, Salmonier, by Mrs. J. Gushue, in Millertown by Exports Valley Royal Stores, Ltd., in Flat Island by William Samson, in Jamestown by Christopher Haines, and in Lewisporte by Uriah Fraeke.

Must Take Their Medicine.

(From the Montreal Gazette.) But refiners must be prepared to take the risk of trade. Their case is unfortunate and unusual. Not often does the bottom fall out of the market of a staple commodity in the short space of a few weeks, as has happened to sugar. But the public interest is supreme, and no greater folly can be committed than to fly in the face of public opinion, which in this particular instance is wellnigh unanimous and immovable. The Board of Commerce was wrong in hampering the operations of refiners a year ago; it is equally wrong in rescuing the refiners now. At what point does the Board of Commerce propose to stay its hand? The sugar refiners' case may be acute, and of an exceptional character, but other manufacturers are confronted with prospective losses on stocks in hand by reason of declining prices. Have not these manufacturers an equal claim to paternal intercession to protect them against loss by prohibition and imports? At what point is Government intervention justified, and at what point should it cease? The answer is obvious. There should be no intervention against the natural current of prices. Markets rise and fall in accordance with supply and demand; merchants and manufacturers take the risk of profit or loss; and by no sound rule nor to any ultimate advantage can the authority of any branch of Government be exercised in the regulation of market prices. If sugar can be imported below Canadian refiners' prices, the refiners must meet the competition. They made money on the rising prices and must accept the consequences of declining prices. Above all, the whole is greater than the part, and the whole is the pocket of the Canadian people.

Time and Talents.

GENERAL REPORT.
Since its formation on February 27 of this year Time and Talents has been surely and steadily forging ahead. It is flattered by the outside interest raised and the numerous questions that members are frequently asked about it. The best way to know more about Time and Talents is to become a member! But for the benefit of those who are debarred from membership—and we receive interested enquiries from men as well as from women and girls—the following short report will give an idea of the work being done by members of T. and T.

List of Members.

Executive Committee:—Pres. Miss Armorer Harris; Vice Pres. Miss Malmie Emerson; Sec. Treas. Miss D. C. White, Miss Dorothy Ayre, Miss M. Benedict, Miss M. Cashin, Miss N. Crowbie, Miss E. Cleary, Miss M. Doyle, Miss J. Dunfield, Miss M. Duley, Miss M. Frew, Miss C. Furlong, Mrs. Love, Mrs. Alex Mews, Miss M. Mare, Miss B. McNeil, Miss J. Milley, Miss M. Mitchell, Miss L. Orr, Miss H. Reid, Miss M. Rogerson, Miss C. Rendall, Miss J. Rendell, Miss J. Stevenson.

Time and Talents is a society for girls of all denominations. It is world wide, having branches in India, Australia and New Zealand and any girl who cares to join is welcome. It strives to work for any need brought to its notice which is within its scope. The annual subscription is $1.40 including the quarterly magazine "The Road," but owing to increased cost of the magazine a request from headquarters England, has been made for 50c. extra per annum from each member making the annual subscription $1.90 in future.

Work Undertaken.

1. The branch has adopted a god-child which the members are responsible for dressing entirely summer and winter. They only know her by her christian name and that she is 8 years old, one of a family of four who has no father. This is done out of each member's own pocket and the funds are not drawn upon. Nearly all the members work for their god-child. A few who have no talent for needle work give of their spare time to—

2. Correspondence. Several members correspond with lonely old men and women in Great Britain, writing to them regularly and sending a monthly magazine. They receive most interesting and delighted letters in return.

3. From June 1st to the end of September a small games club of Time and Talents members went out almost regularly two afternoons a week to the C. of E. Orphanage to teach the girls games—cricket, basket ball, etc. Many non members were exceedingly kind in offering their cars to take the games club to and fro. During the winter it has been decided to continue visits to Exon as far as possible, recitation, painting, etc. The idea is to divide the children into groups of three or four whose tastes are similar, each group to be taught what it shows preference for by a member of T. & T. whose special talent lies that way. It is hoped about Christmas time if the Executive Committee of the Orphanage will allow it, to hold a small entertainment to show what the children can do themselves. At the last meeting of T. & T. one of the members was asked to find out if any help would be acceptable at the Belvedere Orphanage on similar lines.

4. Two lonely outpost clergymen—one Church of England and one Roman Catholic—have been put in touch with Headquarters in London from which they receive church literature, etc. The name of a Methodist clergyman has been asked for, but not yet given.

5. On the first Thursday evening of every month throughout the winter, members of T. & T. are hoping to fraternise with the members of the Girls' Friendly Society at their social evenings and on the first Saturday mornings of each month two or three T. & T. members are going to the children's club rooms to play with the girls.

ARMOREL HARRIS, President.
D. C. WHITE, Hon. Sec. & Treas.

Appointed Supt. of Lunatic Asylum.

We understand that Major W. H. Parsons, M.C., of the Pension Board, attached to the Dept. of Militia, has been appointed Superintendent of the Lunatic Asylum in succession to Dr. Duncan, who is being retired on a pension. The new superintendent takes up his duties on Nov. 1st. Dr. Parsons is a son of Mr. Edward Parsons, of Harbor Grace, and a graduate of the Medical College of McGill University and is one of the 1906 class. For nine years he practiced his profession in Harbor Grace where he built up a lucrative business. On the outbreak of war, Dr. Parsons was amongst the first to offer for overseas and saw considerable active service. He was attached to the 16th Irish Division and it was whilst with this Division in the Somme operations of 1916 that he received the Military Cross for dressing and attending wounded whilst under shell fire. On his return to Newfoundland Major Parsons took an active interest in connection with our returned men and has been chief medical advisor to the Board of Pension Commissioners. Congratulations.

HOW YOU CAN TELL GENUINE ASPIRIN

Only Tablets with "Bayer Cross" are Aspirin—No others!

If you don't see the "Bayer Cross" on the tablets, refuse them—they are not Aspirin at all. There is only one Aspirin, that marked with the "Bayer Cross"—all other tablets are only acid imitations. Look for the "Bayer Cross"! Then it is real Aspirin, for which there is no substitute.

Aspirin is not German but is made in America, and is owned by an American Company, all rights being purchased from the U. S. Government.

Genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" have been proved safe by millions for Pain, Headache, Neuralgia, Colds, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Neuritis.

Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets—also larger "Bayer" packages, can be had at any drug store. Aspirin is the trade mark (Newfoundland Registration No. 761), of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacid-ester of Salicylicacid. The Bayer Co., Inc., U.S.A.

Inter-Collegiate Football

St. Bon's Won Over Collegians 2-1.
Yesterday the postponed match between St. Bon's and the Collegians took place. At four o'clock the referee, Mr. Ern Churchill, lined up the two teams and the battle commenced. From the very start the game was fast and it was some time before St. Bon's notched the first goal. The scoring remained at 1 to nil, despite the fast and furious play, until nearly the end of the first half O'Reilly of St. Bon's came down the right wing and passed to Bransfield, who scored their second goal. The Collegians during the second half rallied round the St. Bon's goal and it required the united efforts of the backs, Ryan and Murphy to make them 'keep their distance'. The St. Bon's forwards were also many times repulsed by the backs of M. C. About five minutes before the whistle went young "Dickie" Johnston got in a piece of excellent head-work and scored a goal for the Collegians, thus saving a blank. During the game the 'rooters' of both colleges, notably of the victors, encouraged their players with doggerel composed on the field.

Big Fraternal Gathering

Three Lodges of Oddfellows Hold Joint Meeting.

Last night marked another epoch in the history of Oddfellowship in Newfoundland. It was the first time in the history of the Order in this Dominion that three Lodges met together in fraternal union. The immediate occasion for this event was the first official visit to Atlantic Lodge, No. 1, of the newly-appointed District Deputy Grand Master, Bro. E. D. Spurrell and suite. Wabana Lodge, No. 136, of Bell Island, came along with a large class of candidates, as also did Colonial Lodge, No. 135. The Bell Island brethren were met at the Cove and motored to the hall where they were given a hearty welcome to Atlantic Lodge by the Noble Grand, Bro. N. A. McLeod. Colonial Lodge also entered in form, after which the D.D.G.M. and members of the Grand Lodge were officially received and greeted with the Honors of the Order. Degree work was then taken up and the first and second degrees were conferred on a large class of candidates. The work of the degree teams was up to the usual high standard of Atlantic Lodge, and won the praise of the visiting brethren. A very pleasing incident then took place, when Bro. I. Sparkes, N.G. of Colonial Lodge, No. 135, requested the D.D.G.M. to present Bro. Arthur Tilley with a handsome gold watch fob as a slight token of appreciation of his services to Colonial Lodge. Bro. Tilley, although taken by surprise, rose to the occasion and suitably replied. Lodge then closed in form and a very pleasant social hour was spent. Bro. MacLeod took the chair and the following programme was discussed: "The King"—Prop. The Chairman; Resp., "God Save the King." Pianoforte Solo by Bro. M. Colton. "Grand Lodge"—Prop. Bro. H. C. Carey, P.G. P.C.P.; Resp. Bro. E. D. Spurrell, D.D.G.M. "A Little Bit of Nonsense," by Bro. Wm. White, P.G. "Visiting Lodges"—Prop. Bro. J. C. Phillips, P.D.D.G.M.; Resp. Bro. Barnes, N.G., Wabana, No. 136; Bro. I. Sparkes, N.G., Colonial Lodge, No. 135; Bro. G. Soper, C.P., Premier Encampment, No. 1. Song by Bro. J. Humber. "Absent Friends"—Prop. Bro. W. Garth. The speech of the evening was made by the D.D.G.M., Bro. Spurrell. Proceedings terminated at 9 a.m. with Auld Lang Syne and the National Anthem. The Bell Island brethren then left for the Cove by motor, accompanied by the cheers and good wishes of the St. John's Oddfellows. Last night's was truly a memorable gathering. Over 300 brethren of the Mystic Tie united in a grand outburst of fraternity. It showed that Oddfellowship in this Dominion is a strong, living institution and last night's reunion is destined to have a great upward and forward effect on the Order.

To Launch Schooner.

The 48 ton schooner Catherine B. which was driven ashore one morning last week while on her way here from Newfoundland, and ever since has been high and dry at McMullin's Cove, near the entrance of the harbor, was "jacked up" this week by Capt. Greg, of Grand Bank, who was sent here for the purpose of saving the little craft. Although she was at various times threatened with destruction by the terrific wind that prevailed last night and this morning, the schooner weathered the gale, and as soon as the wind moderates Capt. Greg is confident he will successfully launch her. The vessel, which is owned by the Marytown Trading Company, of Newfoundland, was launched at that place in 1918.—North Sydney Herald, Oct. 23.

Runaway Horse.

Yesterday shortly after noon a horse belonging to a West End truckman took fright near the Long Bridge and started full gallop down Water Street. The animal did not go far when the wheels of the car came off, but this did not check the career of the frightened equine which continued to near Jackman the Tailors, where the shaft of the vehicle getting caught in a pole stopped the runaway. The wheels of their own momentum spun to where the horse was caught.

To Search for Remains of "Missing Link."

New York, October 19.—An expedition which it is hoped will result in the discovery of the remains of the "missing link" between monkey and man, somewhere in the remote plateau regions of Central Asia, will leave here about the first of next February under the leadership of Roy Chapman Andrews, Associated Curator of Mammals in the American Museum of Natural History, according to an announcement from that institution yesterday. The expedition will be the greatest scientific investigation of its kind ever organized by an institution, and it has been made possible by a fund of $250,000, raised by the Museum of Natural History. The search for the most primitive of human remains in the region where the origin of humans is supposed to have been, will consume five years, if the entire time allotted to the expedition for its work is necessary to the completion of the explorations.

Shipping Notes.

Schooner Natoma cleared from Bay Roberts yesterday for Sydney in ballast.

S.S. Volunda left Sydney yesterday evening for this port and is due Wednesday forenoon.

S.S. Lady of Gaspe finished discharging her cargo last night and sailed this morning for Boston.

S.S. Sneffeld which sailed from this port early in the month taking 32000 qtls. of codfish arrived at Malaga on the 22nd.

Schooner Ruby and Dorothy bound from Alexander Bay to Burin put into port yesterday and resumed her voyage to-day.

Dominion Poultry Exhibition.

Leaving the city by motor in time to catch the 4 o'clock steamer for Bell Island to-morrow, a deputation from the Newfoundland Poultry Club, accompanied by the Minister of Agriculture and Secretary Bayly, will visit the Iron Isle, and be present at the opening of the Dominion Poultry Club Exhibition, which will be on during Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. We understand a large number of entries have been made and the exhibition promises to be an entire success. Judge Walter Reid, will select the prize winners.

A BOOK WORTH HAVING.

RUTH CAMERON

A friend of mine showed me a very interesting book the other day. It was a little brown paper covered note book. It was filled with names in alphabetical order, and after the names were brief descriptions. Here is an example of one entry:

"Mrs. Richard Markham. Tall light woman with lots of hair. Has several children. Comes from New York. Very much interested in old china. Had a sister who went to college in my cousin's class. Sent me a New Year card."

"People I Have Met." I'll tell you the book's name and then you will know whether you guessed right. My friend has pasted a little label on the cover: "People I Have Met."

Being a member of a peripatetic family who lived in five different cities and spent their vacations in several different summer places before she grew up, and having attended several schools, this woman's list of friends and acquaintances is unusually large. As she was not blessed with a good memory and was forever making breaks when she met people again, she took up this method of helping herself out.

The Name and a Little Description. She noted down every person whom she met, except the most casual acquaintances, and also wrote a little description of his or her appearance, particular interests, the things they had found they had in common, and by other facts she particularly wanted to remember.

Writing these things down helped, of course, to fix the person in her mind. Furthermore, when she was going back to some summer resort she had previously visited, or some town where she had once lived, or to a reunion at one of the schools she had attended, she would read over in her book the names and data of the people connected with that chapter in her life. (The names were listed alphabetically, but she had a reference index which enabled her to do this, and thus refresh her memory.)

What do you think of the idea? It seems excellent to me.

Wouldn't This be Fun!

Of course most of us do not have quite such a wide circle of acquaintances as this woman, and some of us have such excellent memories that we keep the book in our brain and do not need to keep it elsewhere. But the most of us are frequently troubled by not being able to remember names and data of this sort. Wouldn't it be fun to be able to say when you meet Mrs. Markham, "Why, I'm so glad to see you, Mrs. Markham. I saw some wonderful old china that made me think of you just the other day." And then to follow it up with, "How is your sister who went to Vassar?" What a glow of pleasure at thus being remembered, Mrs. Markham is going to feel! And how much more comfortable you are going to be than if you were only able to say helplessly, "Yes, I remember your face perfectly, but I can't seem to recall your name."

For anyone to whom it is a matter of business, as well as of pleasure, to remember people, it seems to me such a book would be more than valuable—it would be invaluable.

Drear October.

October is a month with a bad reputation. An old and widespread belief, not confined to this country only, is that an October bride will make a shrewish and jealous wife.

That may, or may not, account for the fact that October has never been, and is not now, a favoured month for marriage.

October's stone, too, is the unlucky opal!

Astrologers of old say that October 6th and 12th are to be banded for all enterprises. On October 2nd, too, all are to be greatly cautious, for the 2nd is one of the six days in the year that are "perilous of death." A child born on the 2nd would, they said, die a wicked death. For adults, blood-letting was barred, no drinks were to be taken, and no goose eaten. Otherwise, death within forty days was promised.

Those born in October will have a troubled and short life, and be of melancholic temperament. That for men. A maid born in October will be pretty, coquetish, but "likely to be unhappy."

Old Moore, following precedent, predicts for this October a terrible railway disaster, a dreadful crime, and the sad death of a notable painter, and trouble in the East. We will wait and see!

THE SPEED FIENDS.

In vain I stand protesting to speed fiends as they pass; they seem to think I'm jesting, and give their boats more gas. The coroner is busy, he's checking up the dead, run down by truck or lizzie or auto painted red. The coroner is weary, he toils by day and night; his task is sad and dreary, and there's no end in sight. The village cops are chasing the fiends o'er hill and dale, and after bitter racing they put a few in jail. And then they're fined so lightly they think it all a joke, and leave the court room brightly, and make their autos smoke. Through highways residential, through traffic's busy marts, with ardent pestilential they run their deadly cards. They wing the fleeing baker, they maim the frightened clerk, and now the undertaker gets in his gruesome work. The doctor's nerves are busted, so many victims yelp, the coroner's disgusted, and wildly calls for help. And still the crazy motors go rushing through the town, and slay the adult voters, and mow the children down. And when I stand protesting the speed fiends scorn my rhyme, and jauntily go questing for some one they can climb.

About Persia.

In these enlightened days, it is quaint to recall that when the old Shah of Persia visited this country in 1875, some 8,000 begging letters were posted to him during his sojourn. He was very pleased with them, and felt highly honoured to receive so many letters—each of which he treated as a compliment.

He had all of them securely packed into a trunk and despatched to Persia, where they were deposited in his mansion!

An apron is the royal standard of Persia. A Persian named Goa, who was a blacksmith by trade, successfully raised a revolt many years ago, and his leather apron, covered with jewels, is still borne in the van of Persian armies.

In 1896 the Persian Court pianist was a wonderful child musician, Raoul Koczalski, then only eleven years of age. He held several distinguished orders, which had been conferred on him by crowned heads, and not only was he a brilliant performer before the Shah of Persia, but also a talented composer, having then written no fewer than sixty pieces of music.

A cashmere shawl weaver in Persia at one time was able to earn by the hardest labour about 1s. 6d. a day only.

The Persian desert dog is one of the very few species which never bark. A Persian carpet was in use for over two hundred years in the music hall of the Shah's palace in Teheran.

His Philosophy.

Don't want to complain, too much. When I'm put to sorrow's touch Or am weighted down with care— Reckon I must have my share. Things can't always go my way; Now an' then there comes a day When it seems the Fates are all Drivin' me against the wall, Killin' every joy I'd clutch, But I never grumble much.

Don't know any reason why Care should always pass me by; Others grieve and others weep, Lose the joys they want to keep, Others have to stand to care, An' the burdens I must bear Are not any bigger than Those that come to every man, So I reckon I should be Patient when mine comes to me.

Patient! that's the very word! When your soul by grief is stirred, Or the road is rough an' you Scarcely know what to do, Jes' be patient. By an' by God will sort o' clear the sky An' bring out the sun, or send You a strong an' cheerful friend. Seems that when I've stood in doubt, God has always helped me out.

Lord, I fancy, I've not met Half life's disappointment yet; I've had troubles, hurts an' woes Like what everybody knows, But when I run down care's list 'There's a lot that I have missed; Maybe my share's really small. When you come to count it all, So when it's my time for rain Lord, I try not to complain.

Household Notes.

Serve a clear soup with a heavy dinner.

Cream left-over chicken and serve in popovers.

Always dust scrapple with a little flour before frying.

Slip a marble in the finger of a glove and darn over it.

Stewed dried fruits are delicious with cereal and cream.

When steaming a pudding, never have the mold quite full.

Cranberries are good as a conserve with seeded raisins.

Add a teaspoonful of sage to the gravy of a roast loin of pork.

String beads on dental floss, which is stronger than thread.

A good meat substitute is a baked bean pie. Season the beans with onion, salt, pepper and parsley.

Sprinkle the top of banana corn-starch with grated orange peel.

Cranberries are delicious cooked with honey and chopped raisins.

Pork, sweet potatoes, hominy and applesauce make a delicious meal.

Add one-half cup of finely cut figs to a tapioca pudding mixture for four.

Your Thanksgiving turkey should have an unbroken skin, and dark plump legs.

A novel way to serve a tomato on a salad is with its skin turned back like rose petals.

The addition of a little caramel to clear soup makes its appearance more attractive.

Soak nuts in salt water overnight and use hammer on ends. The meats come out whole.

Brush the top of a covered pie with milk before putting in the oven. This gives it a gloss.

An excellent way to cook prunes is to cover with water in a covered jar and cook in oven.

If the ribbon ends of a blanket are worn, finish with a double crocheted edge with a bone hook.

Chopped apples make a delightful addition to cornmeal spider bread. Serve with fruit syrup.

Mushrooms, cut in rings, and finely chopped green peppers are delicious in jellied chicken.

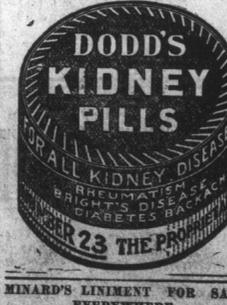

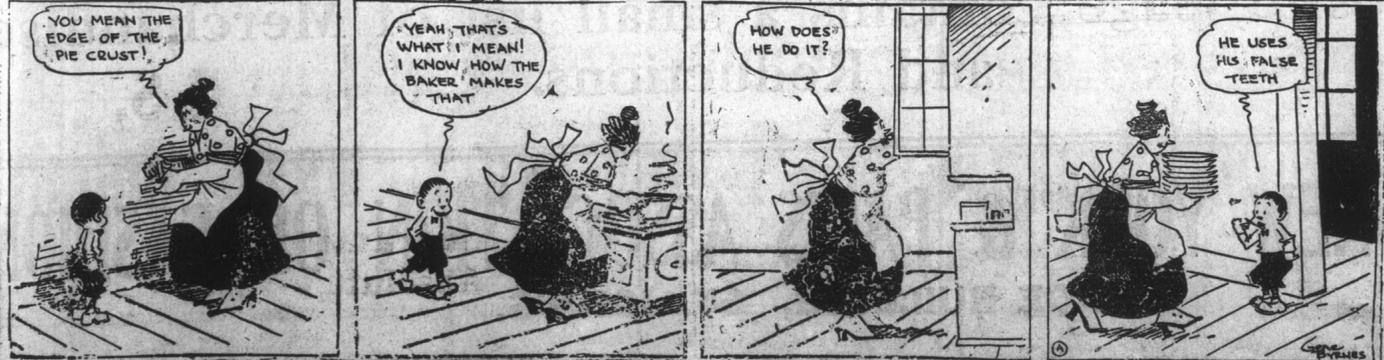

When baking stuffed peppers, cut the ends so that they will stand straight in the baked dish.

Home-made fondant candies may be brushed with bitter chocolate or cocoa, instead of coating.

To be used to help adjust the unnatural differences between the decreased prices of our fish and the increased prices of our every day requirements!

To the Public of Newfoundland--St. John's in Particular:

Our main industry—fish—is not bringing prices that it has the past four years. Canada is not getting the same prices for her dependable products, the United States of America is still worse off than Canada and Newfoundland, losing her enormous export trade due to the war; consequently the immediate depression in all three countries, and from same causes the whole world.

In Canada and the States merchants are trying to adjust the purchasing power of the people with their earning power, by disposing of the millions of dollars worth of Merchandise at unprecedented reductions.

Here in Newfoundland face the same conditions that other countries are now going through.

CONTINUING FROM TO-DAY UNTIL NOV. 5TH

We, THE LONDON, NEW YORK and PARIS ASSOCIATION OF FASHION of St. John's, connecting ourselves with no other firm in this town, have decided to offer to the general public of this country a weapon in the form of $120,000 worth of wearing apparel for Men, Women and Children at prices that will forever be remembered by our population as a duplicate of prices gone by.

Words and unfulfilled deeds are not worth the paper they are written on these days.

The only method to adjust things to-day in our Newfoundland is by our method.

We Offer Merchandise at an Immense Loss to Ourselves

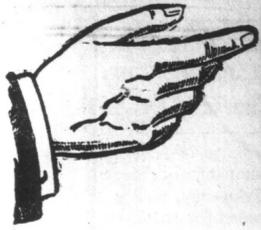

but we do it merrily, because we are compelled to do it now or later; and just when everybody requires their Fall and Winter Wares, we feel justified in giving the public the benefit now, because later our effort would be as nil, because the public would be all bought up and consequently would not be able to stand behind this most beneficial movement for all concerned.

WE WANT THE WHOLE TOWN TO MARCH DOWN HERE FOR THE NEXT 3 WEEKS. We must have the backing of the whole town, otherwise our effort will be useless; and we believe every Man, Woman and Child in this town are waiting patiently for the day when everybody will do as we are to do.

Here is YOUR OPPORTUNITY! Come Down Here and See If You Cannot Buy All Your Requirements in Our Line for the Next Three Weeks. Then Watch Results!

A Nebulous Proposition.

There is talk on Water Street of a Government guarantee for the purchase of Labrador Fish. It is very nebulous—one might say a very "shady"—proposition, and details are hard to get. But one thing is certain—a raid on the Treasury is being concocted. A guarantee is a pledge that if the other fellow does not pay, you will. It is usually given when the guarantor's credit is better than that of the fellow who wants the money. Usually, too, the guarantor runs all the risk, and the other fellow scoops all the profit, if any. That is how we understand the present project.

It is said that the Banks are willing to advance Five Dollars per quintal on the purchase of Labrador Fish, and that the Government is to guarantee a loan of FOUR HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS, and that with combined Bank and Government money, ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND QUINTALS of Labrador fish are to be purchased, and held, the Banks having a first lien and the Government a second lien on this quantity for repayment. This fish would then be marketed by somebody or bodies, who would pocket any profits, and the Government would be naturally, the only possible loser. The first objection, and about the only enforceable one, is this—the Government has no legal authority to give any such guarantee, and it would not be worth-in-law—the paper upon which it was written. So that no lenders are likely to be found. There are men in the Colony, however, who are prepared to take all necessary legal steps to protect the Treasury.

In case of a legal guarantee and loss thereunder, the property of the Colony would be primarily liable, but private property, as well, would be indirectly endangered. The public credit is lowered by giving public guarantees. Every public obligation assumed decreases the value of the security for the Bonds of the Colony. The depositors in the Government Savings Bank have their securities decreased every time a Government guarantee is given. Under the wild and reckless financing of the day, security becomes less every day, and alarm may well be felt when it is proposed to use public money or public credit for the purpose of buying fish to be juggled with by speculators.

Blocking Purchases.

If New York and other United States buyers are ready and willing to purchase fish in Newfoundland, why block them by the imposition of regulations and restrictions, which have only a tendency to exclude them from our ports, thus reducing competition and narrowing down the number of ready money men to a few local merchants, who may or may not pay cash, and, with no active competitors, offer the fishermen the barest pitance for their produce. Such a course can have but one possible end—a reversion to the Truck System, that evil trading which was for years and years the bane of Newfoundland. And has the country only gotten out of it to be thrust back again by those in power? The removal of competition means the death of fair trade and fair prices. Yet that is the end which is being sought by the means of restrictive legislation and reactionary enactments. Friends of the Fish Regulations may say what they will, but not a scintilla of proof has been adduced to show the benefits derived by the fishermen from the passage of all the Acts of the present Government bearing upon the fishery. These men will tell that so far from resulting to their advantage, the regulations have been alarmingly detrimental, and nothing has accrued to them in the way of extra prices or profits.

It is not wise to frighten away prospective buyers at any time, but more particularly is it dangerous at the present, when Newfoundland has thousands of quintals of fish to market, and the markets are not over-responsive, with dealers waiting for prices to drop, and sellers holding stocks for a rise. In addition there is a glut of fish in various United States ports, immense quantities of home fish being in the stores of dealers, who are looking for more profitable prices than are being offered. As a consequence of such a condition, there are no buyings being made on the West Coast, as formerly, by United States purchasers. Nor have there been any sales of fish from the knife, or salt bulk, made to Canadian buyers on that coast for similar reasons. One of these, early in the season, loaded several cargoes for shipment to United States centres, but recent advices tell that up to the present only one small lot of this has been disposed of, the remainder being held in storage at Gloucester and other New England sea ports. By reason of this, it is not possible for any new season's transactions to be made, and the consequence is that there is no fishing now being done on the West Coast, because there are no purchasers. Is it wise then, in view of this, to drive away from St. John's a trade that has been so profitable? Is not the purpose of shutting out Americans proof that certain people in St. John's abhor competition, and desire to get everything into their own dragnet to the loss and disadvantage of the fishermen as a class?

Our Elusive Premier. Is the Prime Minister lost? If not, where is he? What has become of him? Does anyone know? Some few months ago he went to England. We hear of him at Bristol next. Will-o'-the-wisp-like, he is visiting the battlefields in France—now he is in England again—now we hear of him in Canada—lastly we are told he has gone to Italy. Surely he is not being held to ransom by Italian brigands! In the meantime the country is facing a crisis. Not only the Premier, but the Minister of Justice is away. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries is trying to pilot the country to safe anchorage, unaided. How can he succeed? The country wants as leader the man they elected to lead them, but he is missing. He, the appointed leader, has been tried and found wanting. Imagine a ship without the captain and first mate trying to enter a dangerous harbor. In the same way the ship of state is trying to weather the tempest minus its captain and mate.

Does not the Premier realize his duty to the people who elected him? If he does, why is he not here trying to bring the country through these perilous times? He may succeed, and he may not, but his duty lies here and here he ought to be. Let him come back to do what he can to avert the financial disaster which threatens this country, and let us not say a la Baronesse Orczy, "We seek him here. Our demmed, elusive Premier."

Attempted Suicide While Mentally Depressed.

On Wednesday last, Oct. 20, the community was shocked to hear that a young woman of Bluff Head Cove, daughter of Mr. Manuel Brown, had attempted suicide with a razor. The girl, who was about twenty five had been ill and low spirited and was thought to be getting better. During the absence of her people, who were digging potatoes she evidently procured a razor and slashed her throat. Her mother returning to the house for bags for the potatoes heard groans and found the poor girl on the floor. The doctor and clergyman were summoned and the former stitched up the cut, which fortunately was not fatal through dangerous and hopes are entertained for her recovery.—Twillingate Sun.

Firemen Called Out.

Last night an alarm of fire was sent in from the box at the junction of King's Road and Duckworth St. calling out the Central and Eastern companies. The alarm was rung in by a gentleman of the East End, who saw a body of smoke issuing from Johnson's Bakery. When the firemen arrived they made an entrance to the rear of the building to investigate, but found that their services were not needed as the only thing wrong was that the furnace was smoking.

Motor Car Kits Stolen.

Last night while the owners of three motor cars which operate for hire from Fortugal Cove to the city were having a lunch, some sneak thieves ransacked their vehicles and took away all the tools and emergency kits. The cars were left by the owners near the Post Office, and the theft was not discovered until preparations to return to the Cove were being made. The matter was reported to the police, who will no doubt locate the culprits.

To Beat H. C. L.

READ THIS, AND ACT. We would refer our readers to the sale of stock now taking place at Eden's store. This seems to us an ideal way in which the housewife of St. John's may deal the H.C.L. a serious blow this winter, as they are selling off all their stock at practically cost price and much of it below even cost. The sale only lasts till the end of this week and possibly the following week. So we would advise everybody to take advantage of the offer as soon as possible as everything is going very quickly.

We have in stock a large assortment of Electrical Goods, consisting of Table Lamps, Brass and Oxidized Fittings, Shades, Globes, Electric Bulbs, Switches, Lamp Cord, Rubber Covered and Weatherproof Wire, Toasters, Grills, Percolators, Warming Pads, etc., etc. We are prepared to make contracts for wiring and fitting buildings of all kinds. Tuned for Great Race.

Gloucester, Mass., Oct. 22.—The final tuning up of the schooner Esperanto, was pushed to-day in anticipation of getting her off the ways by Saturday. It is planned to give her a trial spin on Sunday, and on Monday she will sail for Halifax to meet the Delawana, in the international races to decide the highest honors among the fishing craft. Eight tons of pig iron and chain have been stored in the bilges and over this a platform has been laid to carry two tons of sand bags. The sand bags will be shifted on the trip to Halifax to give the schooner the proper trim, but in the race, according to the rules, the ballast cannot be shifted.

The Sugar Bungle.

So far nothing has been done regarding the 500 sacks of brown sugar imported by the S. S. Venator. It has been offered for sale at 18 cents, but storekeepers who purchase can not get a delivery permit, consequently it has to remain stored. An effort is being made to have the Food Control Board handle the lot, but it appears that the new law, which the Government enacted, prevents the F. C. B. itself from importing, consequently the lot must remain stored at a loss to everybody. The Food Control Board is in a like position with regard to any sugar they had purchased in the foreign market, yet unshipped, and unless the law is altered none can come in, and we may look for cheaper sugar sooner than we expect. Some of the F. C. B. granulated sugar in sacks, which was distributed, is being turned back by purchasers to dealers owing to it being unfit for use. The dealers in turn put the loss on the Food Control Board. Altogether there are some thousands of dollars' worth of this fish-smelling and dirty sugar turned back, one firm alone returning over a ton to the distributors. What will be done with it is a puzzle.

A Thrilling Drama.

Klark-Urban Company in "A Tailor Made Man." Those patrons of the drama who had assembled last night in the Casino Theatre to accord a welcome to the ever-popular Klark-Urban Co., were not disappointed with their favorites. Though having undergone some reorganization since the last visit here, the new artistes added to the troupe have enhanced its already high reputation, and received a welcome not less than that given older acquaintances.

The opening play of the engagement "A Tailor Made Man," is one of the best ever put on in St. John's by a visiting company, the performers taking advantage of every good situation and maintaining consistent acting, the whole two hours and a half occupied by the presentation containing not one dull moment. Into the plot of the play entered to some extent labor questions, the settlement of a strike being one of the principals. There is also a strong love interest and a complete vein of humour, which greatly amused the audience.

Miss Maisie Cecil starred as Tanya Huber, and added to her laurels. She was ably supported by Mr. Harden Klark, who has lost none of his old-time histrionic talent, and as John Paul Bart, tailor's worker and manager of the Oceanic S.S. Company, gained new fame in his chosen field. Billy Webb, as Peter the stitchee, was great, and his excellent acting received thunderous applause. Mr. Craig Nelson, as Dr. Gustavus Sonntag, Mr. Thomas Brown, as the great Nathan, Mr. J. W. Burrows, in the dual capacity of Anton Huber and Mark Stanlaw, Miss Lillian Dean, as Mrs. Stanlaw, Miss Dot Jewell, as Corinne Stanlaw, Mr. Louis Everette "the newspaper man," played good parts and kept up the characters portrayed by them very effectively. Pomeroy, the English valet of Mr. Theo Jellicott (Nesbitt Scoville) the aspiring yachtman, was played by Charlie Palazzi. The strike committee, Messrs. Fox, Webber, Russell and Gardner, were "it" to the letter. Miss Nita Mack, as Mrs. Fitzmorris, did not have a leading part, but will make good when appearing in other plays. Miss Leona Leslie, as Miss Shanna "the ever ready and unperishable" stenographer of "Oceanic," was exceptional. Altogether this comedy-drama, which will be repeated to-night is well worth seeing.

Fractured Collar Bone.

Yesterday afternoon, while coming from school, Stanley G., youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Lumsden, attempted to walk the top of a fence on LeMarchant Road, with the result that he fell some considerable distance, suffering a fracture of the collar bone and receiving some other injuries. He was unconscious when taken home and only came to himself at 1 o'clock this morning. All the skill that can be given is being applied to the case, but it will be some time ere the little fellow will be about again.

Horse Took Fright.

A horse owned by James Murphy of Kilbride took fright on Queen St. this forenoon and dashed down to Water St., where it fell on the sidewalk opposite Slater's dry goods store. The animal was not injured, but the express to which it was attached was shook up and the shafts broken. The driver, who held on in the wagon, escaped without a scratch.

BURT & LAWRENCE.

The Late Lord Mayor of Cork.

Alderman Terence MacSweeney, (or MacSwiney as the Sinn Fein spelling has it) news of whose death at Brixton Gaol, London, following the seventy third day of his hunger strike was received yesterday, was born on March 28, 1880 and was therefore in his 40th year. His father was the late John MacSweeney of Cork. The early schooldays of the late Lord Mayor were spent at North Monastery, Christian Brothers, Cork, and the Royal University of Ireland conferred upon him the degree of Bachelor of Arts, for proficiency in Mental and Moral Science.

Beginning his business career in the office of Messrs. Dwyer & Co's Counting House at Cork as a clerk, he subsequently became Technical Inspector in Commerce under the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction for Ireland. Keenly interested in politics and ever a worker for the independence of Ireland it was but natural that he should be a member of many political clubs and societies, so his name was soon to be found on the rosters of the Celtic Literary Society, the Gaelic League, Wolf Tone Club and many others. Entering active politics he was elected Sinn Fein candidate for mtd Cork in the General Elections of 1918 and, in common with all other returned Sinn Feiners at that election, was pledged never to attend at Westminster and to work for complete separation.

He attended the first meeting of Dail Eireann (the Irish Republican Parliament) on January 21st, 1919, when the establishment of the Irish Republic was confirmed, and after that time, he was a regular attendant at all meetings of the Dail.

He was elected Lord Mayor of Cork in March, 1920, in succession to Alderman Thomas MacCurtain, who had been killed seven days previously.

Prison Sentences. He was sentenced to the following terms of imprisonment for his activities: January, 1916, he was arrested and detained for five weeks in Cork Jail; when brought to trial at the end of this time, he was acquitted.

PRISONER REMANDED. Sydney, N.S., Oct. 22.—The young Newfoundlander arrested yesterday at the corner of George and Townsend Streets for assaulting the police appearing in police court this morning and was remanded until this afternoon. In the meantime the local immigration officer is to make investigation and he may be deported. Snooks has five charges preferred against him as a result of yesterday's little mix-up.

HEAVILY FINED. Sydney, N.S., Oct. 23.—Snooks the young Newfoundlander arrested on Thursday afternoon for assaulting the police and several other offences came up for a hearing before Magistrate Muggah yesterday afternoon on five different charges and was fined the sum of $110 or four months in jail. He was not able to pay up yesterday but has announced his intention of doing so as soon as his ship, the steamer Coban, arrived back in port again. The Coban, arrived back in port again. The witnesses against the sailor were Sergeant McNeill and Officer Archie McLellan of the local force and the charges preferred against him were those of being drunk, drinking on a public highway, resisting arrest, assaulting an officer and damaging an officer's uniform. All told the amount of the various fines reached the sum mentioned above. He pleaded guilty to all five charges. Both officers who testified against the accused aided in arresting him on the corner of George and Townsend Streets and they will bear marks of battle for some days to come.

Literary Activities. MacSweeney was always of a literary turn, and it is said that if circumstances had been propitious, he would have devoted himself to poetry and literature altogether.

In 1914 and 1915 he produced a paper of his own, "Fianna Fail," of which he was proprietor, editor and chief contributor. It was suppressed. The Mas. of several numbers were found in the house on the occasion of his first arrest (January, 1916), and were quoted as evidence of his seditious inclinations. For years he had been collecting a library and had many valuable books, but he auctioned them all off in order to get money to keep the "Fianna Fail" going.

While the Celtic Literary Society was alive, the members produced a manuscript magazine, and also wrote and read essays for their meetings. In all this work Terence MacSweeney was very prominent. He wrote many poems during this period, some of which appeared in papers and magazines. He wrote plays which were produced by the Cork Dramatic Society: "The Last Warriors of Cumbal," and "The Wooings of Emer"; "The Holocaust," a play dealing with the sorrows of the poor, and a comedy, "Manners Maketh Man." A longer play, "The Revolutionist," was published but not acted. His other published works were, "The Music of Freedom" and "Battle Cries." He wrote several articles in the various papers, and a series of these articles which appeared in "Irish Freedom," entitled "The Principles of Freedom" were in course of preparation for separate publication at an early date.

Newfoundlander Gives Local Police SOME EXCITEMENT.

A young Newfoundlander named John Snooks who is employed as a fireman on the steamer Coban at present in port got into a mixup with the police yesterday afternoon at the corner of George and Townsend streets and damaged the appearance of several officers before he was finally landed in jail. He will come up for trial this morning and five charges are to be preferred against him. They are those of being drunk, drinking liquor on a public highway, resisting arrest, assaulting a police officer and damaging the uniform of a police officer.

Snooks was standing with a fellow seaman on the corner mentioned when he was told to move along by officer Archie McLellan. They refused and as one of the men was carrying unopened a bottle of liquor the officer started to place them under arrest. Snooks' chum escaped. Snooks being unable to do this resisted arrest. When the patrol came along he was placed in it, but started to fight as the 'Maria' moved away. He hit Officer McLellan a severe blow in the face which split open his lip and he kicked Sergeant A. J. McNeill from the door of the automobile. The Sergeant was taken off his guard and fell into the street bumping his head and being otherwise badly shaken up.—Sydney Post, Oct. 22.

PRISONER REMANDED. Sydney, N.S., Oct. 22.—The young Newfoundlander arrested yesterday at the corner of George and Townsend Streets for assaulting the police appearing in police court this morning and was remanded until this afternoon. In the meantime the local immigration officer is to make investigation and he may be deported. Snooks has five charges preferred against him as a result of yesterday's little mix-up.

To-Day's Messages.

NOVA SCOTIA VOTES PROHIBITION.

HALIFAX, Oct. 25. By a majority of forty thousand, Nova Scotia to-day voted to prohibit the importation of liquor into the Province. Halifax was the only city to vote "wet" by a thousand majority. Pictou, Cape Breton, Hants, Cumberland, Chester and other counties rolled up majorities of four to six thousand each for the "drys." The victory for temperance forces was overwhelming.

BELGICA WINS.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26. The winners of the international balloon race for the Bennett trophy are Lieuts. De Myster and Labrousse in the Belgica, according to an unofficial announcement.

A PROUNOUNCEMENT.

CORK, Oct. 26. Deputy Lord Mayor Callaghan said yesterday, he had received notice of official origin, threatening him with death similar to late Lord Mayor McCurtain. "Republican hold over the Municipal chair in Cork ceases only when the last Republican has followed McCurtain and MacSweeney into the grave. Murder will not terrorize us," said the deputy Lord Mayor.

THE FIRST PROTEST.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26. Irish sympathizers numbering more than ten thousand, attended mass meetings here yesterday, protesting against what they termed murder "by the Imperial Government of Great Britain" of MacSweeney.

BOLSHEVIST USURPATION.

BOMBAY, Oct. 26. A Bolshevik envoy has occupied the place of the Emir of Bokhara, and the Emir and Governor of Guzar have fled to Afghanistan with five hundred followers. Bokhara is a vassal state of Russia.

PATROL HAD EASY TIME.

LONDON, Oct. 26. Heavy police reinforcements patrolled Brixton Prison area last night, as a precaution against possible disorders of Irish sympathizers. A small crowd gathered, talking of MacSweeney, but no disorder occurred.

REPRISAL RAIDS.

BANDON, Ireland, Oct. 26. More reprisals occurred here last night, when men, said to be soldiers, burned a large hosiery factory. Hundreds of terrified townspeople again remained throughout the night in outlying country districts.

NOTHING DEFINITE ACCOMPLISHED.

LONDON, Oct. 25. After conferences of miners' leaders with Lloyd George and other members of the Government to-day, and prolonged consideration of the Government's new offer by the Executive of the Miners' Federation, no definite decision had been taken to-night. The Executive will meet to-morrow morning, to renew its consideration of the matter. Both sides continue secretive regarding the nature of the Government's proposal, which, however, is believed to be framed along somewhat similar lines as those suggested by Wm. Brice, President of the South Wales Miners' Federation, in the Commons last week. This was to the effect that the two shillings demanded by miners should be granted temporarily.

SASKATCHEWAN GOES DRY.

REGINA, Sask., Oct. 25. Saskatchewan will go "dry" but the final count will be a fairly close one. Contrary to expectations, Regina City went in the wet column but the other principal cities in the province, Saskatoon and Moosejaw have voted dry by close majorities. It is in the fifteen rural constituencies that prohibition forces will secure their lead. Returns from many polling stations indicate that the "wets" will be about seven thousand short of victory.

ANOTHER PROHIBITION VICTORY.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 25. The Province of Manitoba has voted out liquor importation in a referendum taken to-day. Approximately fifty per cent of the whole electorate voted. The majority voted "yes" on their ballots, which will cause the cessation of the liquor supply of the province from inter-provincial houses. The city of Winnipeg voted "wet" by a round six thousand majority, but this figure was killed by the vote outside its limits. There were a few places besides that voted "wet."

GREENWOOD'S STATEMENT.

LONDON, Oct. 26. In reply to T. P. O'Connor in the House last night, Sir Hamar Greenwood said he had no convincing evidence to show of men being wounded and flogged in Ireland by servants of the Crown. He had seen a reported speech of Governor Cox, Democratic candidate for United States Presidency, and Governor Cox had obviously obtained his information from those hostile to Great Britain and Anglo-American relations.

MOURNING PARADE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26. Four women, dressed in mourning, paraded yesterday in front of the British Consulate here carrying placards bearing the words, "Terence MacSweeney is dead. He will be remembered for ever."

HOPEFUL SIGN.

LONDON, Oct. 26. Formal negotiations with a view to settlement of the coal strike reopened this morning, indicating that informal discussions since Sunday, in some measure, has been satisfactory.

ALBERTA FALLS IN LINE.

EDMONTON, Alta., Oct. 26. Returns compiled up to nine o'clock to-night indicate that Alberta will go bone dry by a majority of from fifteen to twenty thousand. All the cities have gone dry, according to indications.

American Ship in Distress.

At the mercy of a stiff gale of wind which is blowing outside, the American steamer Dertoma which left the port of Sydney yesterday for a port in the Gulf, is drifting helplessly towards the land and probably destruction.

The exact position of the distressed steamer is not known exactly. A message received this morning by Vincent Mullins local agent of the Department of Marine stated that the steamer was in distress about 100 miles off the Cape Breton coast in what direction it is not known. As the steamer was bound north and at the time of her departure from port of Sydney it is known it is deduced that she is in a position somewhere off Cape North, about 100 miles north of Sydney harbor. The wind outside is blowing in an easterly direction and this would bring the steamer up somewhere on the coast of Victoria.

Her engines are down as a result, it is said, of bad coal taken aboard which will not keep her in sufficient steam to allow her to make any progress against the storm.

As soon as the exact position of the Dertoma is known a steamer will be sent out to her assistance.

According to a message received at noon to-day by Vincent Mullins, the steamer Dertoma has cleared Cape North and is now proceeding on her voyage up the Gulf of St. Lawrence with the wind in her stern. The gale is also reported to be moderating. Later particulars regarding the steamer's condition as reported this morning are to the effect that she was drifting light and became unmanageable on account of the high wind and heavy seas. Her engines were working but not enough power could be developed on account of an inferior grade of coal to keep her under control.—Sydney Post, Oct. 23.

Her work is bringing astonishing success, for her people "want to be Americans in style and work."

One of the sages of the financial world as an authority on coal, coal stocks, coal mines and coal transportation, is E. J. Berwind, of New York, who is now in his 70th year. A dozen years ago he was said to be worth $100,000,000. It may be $300,000,000 by this time. He was in his youthful days a cadet in the United States military academy. Berwind to-day has taken Shonts' place behind New York's interborough rail system.

Miss Pauline Buenzie, a young California girl, has a unique job—that of holding hands and being paid for it. She is but 18 and has been placed in charge of the California State finger print department. The hands she has the privilege of holding are those of criminals or suspected criminals. She is a pioneer in a work offering great possibilities to women.

The former Mexican bandit, Francisco Villa, is now for the first time in many years a peaceful farmer. It cost the Mexican Government $2,000,000 in gold to get Villa back on to the land and induce him to stay there. He is just as alert as in his saddle days and sizes up the intentions of all who approach him with hand on revolver ready for action. He wants peace but doesn't mind war.

Sarah Bernhardt has a beautiful country home at Belle Isle, France, and one of her occasional recreations is a motor trip to Paris. Her endurance is remarkable. On a recent occasion, owing to 16 punctures, the trip took up a whole day, but soon after arrival the aged actress was out shopping, showing no signs of fatigue. She will open her own Paris theatre in "Daniel," a play by an anonymous author.

Archduke Joseph and his consort, the Archduchess Augusta, are the only members of Austria's historic Hapsburg dynasty now living in the territory of the former Hapsburg empire. The Hungarians wanted to make him a king and that nearly cost him exile. All remaining members of the Austro-Hungarian reigning family are to-day nearly fotsam and jetsam on the sea of European politics.

Prelate Honoured.

Silver Jubilee of Archbishop McNeil. Toronto, Oct. 21.—One of the great ceremonial feasts of the Roman Catholic Church, the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Episcopal consecration of a Prelate, distinguished for ability and devotion to his Episcopal duties, occupied the attention of representatives of the church from almost every section of the Dominion here yesterday, when the Episcopal Silver Jubilee of the ordination to the priesthood of the Rev. Archbishop McNeil, of the Archdiocese of Toronto, was celebrated. His Grace was presented with a purse of gold amounting to fifty thousand dollars.

Britain's "Most Sacred Spot."

The "most sacred spot in Britain," according to the judgment of John Richard Green, has passed under the hammer. For Cliffs End Hall, Ebbwfleet, is located at the spot where Henslet and Horsa landed in 449 A.D. But the place is doubly sacred by reason of the fact that it was here, a hundred and fifty years later, that Augustine and his forty monks arrived on that mission to the Saxon Ethelbert which was to be fraught with such momentous consequences. The spot where Augustine first met the King and his Christian wife, Bertha, is marked by a handsome Runic Cross.—London Morning Post.

CAPT. HIMMELMANN WILL AGAIN TAKE THE HELM.

Interest in the great ocean schooner series of races off Halifax Harbor on October 30 and November 1 and 2nd, is at fever heat, not only in Canada, but through the Eastern States. The American yachtsmen and fishermen have taken up the challenge with the determination to have the Esperanto sail back to Gloucester, the winner of the Championship of the fishing fleets of the Western Atlantic. Hundreds of enthusiasts are expected to be in Halifax during the races and Boston, New York and Gloucester will be well represented.

The committee who are handling the event, are meeting with every success, except that of receiving contributions for the prize money. The championship cup has been donated and $5,000 is needed for prize money, of which amount the winner takes $4,000 and the loser $1,000. To date the treasurers, Messrs. R. A. Corbett and H. R. Silver, have received only a few contributions, the principal one being that of $500 from the Halifax Hotel management. The races promise to be the greatest international attraction that has ever been staged in Halifax Harbor, and firms and individuals in Halifax and throughout the Province, who are desirous of seeing the series a huge success, should forward their contributions immediately to the treasurers. These races will be the greatest advertising Halifax has received for years. Interest in the series will not be confined to the North American Continent, but the people of all the Dominions of the British Empire, and Great Britain will watch and hope that the Canadian fishermen will be victorious over their friendly rivals. It will be a great event and the funds required should be subscribed without delay.

Again in Command.

Captain Thomas Himmelmann, who guided the Delawana to victory over the eight other contestants in the race on Monday, Oct. 11th, will again be at the helm of that vessel when she meets the Gloucester challenger. This announcement was made by Mr. C. Smith, of W. C. Smith and company, Lunenburg, owners of the Delawana, when interviewed over the long distance telephone quite recently.

Mr. Smith said that Lunenburg was taking a great interest in the races, and hundreds would probably come to Halifax for the event. With Captain Himmelmann, would be his brother, Captain Albert Himmelmann, who sailed the Independence in last week's race, and a picked crew. It is likely that when the Delawana comes to Halifax for the races she will be manned by a "Skipper" crew, the pick of the Lunenburg fishing fleet.

Preparing For Contest.

At present the Delawana is at Lunenburg, where she is being cleaned and overhauled for the races. Her ballast has been discharged, and Mr. Smith said yesterday that it had not been decided whether his vessel could carry rock or iron ballast, either of which will be allowed. No change will be made in the Delawana's rig, except that a new jib will replace the one which carried away as she was crossing the finishing line in the first race. The vessel probably will leave for Halifax early next week.

Mr. Smith was delighted to hear that the Americans are taking such an interest in the coming series, and when informed that the dates had been set for the races, he said his vessel would be here several days before October 30th, the first race day. He will also come to Halifax next week to witness the series.

The Delawana is a typically a Nova Scotian craft, designed by Mr. G. A. Rhuland of Lunenburg, and built in Lunenburg County.

Expect Big Crowd.

The members of the Halifax Committee, who went to Gloucester to confer with the officials there, found that there was great enthusiasm there. Mr. H. R. Silver, Chairman of the Halifax Committee, received a telegram from them yesterday, in which they said that the affair had gone bigger in Boston and Gloucester than they had ever expected. The committee warned the Halifax members to prepare for a big crowd, for they said that it may be possible that a large passenger liner would be chartered to bring down the American enthusiasts. The Government of Massachusetts were co-operating and it was hoped to get the U. S. Navy Department to send a destroyer or a Revenue Cutter to Halifax.

The message said that all the details had been arranged and the first race would be sailed on Saturday, October 30, the next on Monday, Nov. 1st, and the third, if necessary, on Nov. 2nd. The race would be between two boats, as a second boat from Gloucester could not be made ready in time.—Halifax Morning Chronicle.

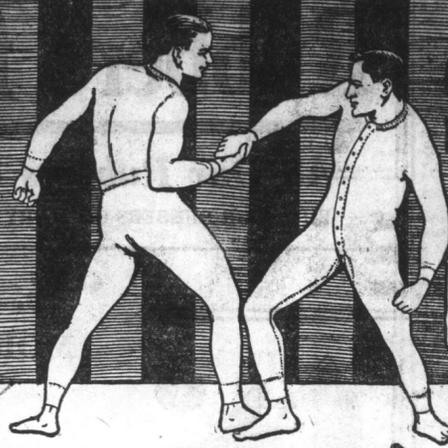

EXPERTS FOR ESPERANTO.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Oct. 20.—The Esperanto, Gloucester's entry in the international race for fishing schooners, will be manned by an expert crew. Selection to-day of 18 of the 25 men whom she will carry in the race with the crack Canadian fisherman Delawana, showed that six master mariners would ship as foremast hands. The captains who have placed themselves under the orders of Skipper Marty Welch are John Mattoon, Roy Patten, Lee Murray, John Barrett, Wallace Bruce and Thos. Brenham and the seven berths that remain to be filled probably will bring several more captains to the crew. Like Captain Welch, many of the Esperanto's crew who will represent Nova Scotia, which contributed Canada's challenging champion and its crew.

To the prize of $5,000 and a cup provided for the winning schooner by W. H. Dennis of Halifax, has been added a silver cup for the skipper of the winning vessel, the local committee on arrangements having accepted the offer of the colonial Fisheries Company to give such a trophy.

Will Eclipse Cup Races.

Halifax, Oct. 25.—The coming great international ocean schooner race between the Gloucester and Lunenburg craft promises to be the nautical sporting event of the year. Interest in the contest throughout Canada and the United States is rapidly growing and the event promises to surpass the America's Cup classic in popularity.

The leading New York and Boston papers give much editorial space in commending favorably on the race, and hail it as a greater yachting affair than the Shamrock-Resolute series. American yachtsmen as well as New England fishermen are taking a deep interest in the race, and many are expected to come to Halifax to see the race.

While it has not been officially announced that the coming race will be between two or four boats, it is believed that the Delawana will uphold the honor of Nova Scotia against the Esperanto, the Gloucester craft. Should this be so it is believed that they will race "the best two out of three."

The dates for the event will likely be arranged at Gloucester, before the members of the Halifax committee returns. The challenge provided that the race be sailed within three weeks, which time expires the first week in November. It is hoped to stage the event off this harbor the last of the month.

Yachting enthusiasts and fishermen are eager for the event to take place within the next three weeks. This is considered the best time of the year for a good sailing breeze, and the stronger the breeze the better they will like it.

Ocean Greyhounds of the Past.

(From the Boston Transcript.)
 The ending of the weekly Transatlantic mail service which has been maintained by the steamers of the American Line for the past twenty-five years will be regretted by that host of Americans who during that period have had occasion to journey to Europe through the call either of business or pleasure. Announcement was made recently that the twenty-five-year-old contract of the American Line with the Government is soon to expire, and that its renewal is impossible in view of the present high cost of operating a steamship on the high seas. In the decision not to renew the mail contract of the American Line with the Government, the ocean-going public will see the passing of a historic quartet of transatlantic liners. A generation ago the Philadelphia, the New York, the St. Louis and the St. Paul were in truth greyhounds of the ocean. Their 20-knot speed was then phenomenal, and made these four vessels an object of wonder to the voyager, and an object for a pardonable national pride. Nor were these ships merely the cynosure of the discerning globe trotter. They performed, on more than one occasion, distinguished public service. Two of them, during the Spanish War, served as auxiliary cruisers under the name of the "Harvard" and the "Yale." And throughout many months of the late war these four vessels kept in operation, despite terrific handicaps, the only regular mail service between the United States and Great Britain, in addition to carrying overseas many thousands of American doughboys. Of these historic vessels of the American Line it may truly be said that they have seen "their day." The vast strides which recent years have made in ship construction have caused the St. Louis, St. Paul, New York and Philadelphia to join the ranks of the "second class" boats.

celled has been received. If the strike affects trans-Atlantic shipping it will also hold-up shipment of apples from Canadian ports and principally from Halifax. This would be a serious situation. However, several steamers are now in port loading apples and thousands of barrels will be shipped this week. The coal scarcity in Nova Scotia is also serious, and little is available for export or for bunkering trans-Atlantic freighters. With the big strike on in England and the difficulty of obtaining bunkers there shipping lines naturally are endeavoring to supply the ships, now on this side of the Atlantic, with sufficient coal for the trip to the United Kingdom and return. At present coal is scarce here and steamers can only receive about enough to carry them across. A steamer bound to an United Kingdom port will now take all the coal she can carry in her bunkers provided it is available. The trans-Atlantic passenger traffic will not suffer by the strike, as the majority of the big liners are now oil burners, and do not depend on coal.—Halifax Morning Chronicle.

Have the knife blade hot when cutting any kind of hot bread.

While the strike of the British Coal Miners has not interfered with shipping activities on this side of the Atlantic, it is believed that should it continue, trans-Atlantic shipping in and out of this port will be almost paralyzed. As yet no word of any sailings from the other side being can-

Sinn Fein Decree Disregarded.

Dublin, Oct. 19.—The proclamation of Dail Eireann prohibiting emigration has only had a slight effect, and the American Consul is daily dealing with applications for passports. On the landing of the consul's office the decree is displayed forbidding the emigration of Irishmen of military age, and of all citizens of the Irish Republic without the written consent of Dail Eireann. Intending emigrants are supposed to apply to the local Sinn Fein justices, giving their reasons for leaving Ireland, and all explanations must be forwarded to the Republican Minister for Home Affairs. Nevertheless the applications to the American Consul continue, most of them, however, from women. From 100 to 150 is the daily average. Third class passages to New York are said to be booked months ahead.

Blackheads are a confession

Blackheads are caused by excessive oil collecting dirt in the pores of the skin. Their presence is a confession that you are using the wrong method of cleansing for your type of skin.

To cleanse thoroughly skins liable to this disfiguring trouble, use the following special treatment. Apply hot cloths to the face until the skin is reddened. Then with a rough washcloth work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and rub it into the pores thoroughly, always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with clear hot water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice. Dry carefully.

To remove blackheads already formed, substitute a flesh brush for the washcloth in the treatment above. Then protect the fingers with a handkerchief and press out the blackheads.

Keep your skin free of blackheads by the above treatment and gain the clear attractive skin that the regular use of Woodbury's brings.

Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap and begin tonight the treatment your skin needs. You will find Woodbury's on sale at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States or Canada. A 25 cent cake will last a month or six weeks.

Transparent Marble.

Experience shows that marble cut into thin sheets, 0.02 to 0.01 inch thick, is sufficiently transparent to be used instead of opal glass for electric light shades. Such sheets, however, are too thin for use, but by a special treatment with oil, at a high temperature and pressure, marble shades can be made transparent and give beautifully clear effects. Comparing the transparency and diffusive properties of such marble sheets and opal glass, it was found that the amount of light transmitted was approximately the same in both cases, but that the diffusive power of marble was distinctly better—55 to 11 in one case and 70 to 49 in another.

British Miners' Strike May Affect This Side.

While the strike of the British Coal Miners has not interfered with shipping activities on this side of the Atlantic, it is believed that should it continue, trans-Atlantic shipping in and out of this port will be almost paralyzed. As yet no word of any sailings from the other side being can-

LONDON GOSSIP.

THE HAPSBURGS REVIVED.

LONDON, Oct. 2nd, 1920.
We are suddenly threatened not only at Budapest but even at Vienna with attempts to restore the Hapsburg dynasty in the person of the ex-Kaiser Karl. At Budapest the Magyar magnates, undoubtedly encouraged by M. Paleologue's recent project to mobilize the Magyar army against the Bolsheviks, talk openly of their intentions to flout the Supreme Council. In Vienna the Hapsburg partisans, bearing in mind the strong German Social Democratic Party, which is anti-monarchical, though anxious for reunion with the German Republic, are proceeding more cautiously. But that Count Czernin, who is to figure in the coming elections as a Liberal, has any other interests beyond the dynastic to promote is inconceivable. And Karl's refusal to renounce his rights as Emperor of Austria in order to become once more King of Hungary lends point to Count Czernin's probable orientation. It is high time that the Supreme Council awakened to these facts, and recalled both Budapest and Vienna to the fact that the restoration of any Hapsburg on the Danube has been vetoed and that if necessary steps should be taken to enforce that veto.

HOW FRANCE IS WORKING.

A well-known London architect, who has just returned from the Continent, where he was on business connected with the reconstruction of the devastated areas, is full of admiration for the way the work is being done, despite the enormous difficulties which confront the rebuilders. He repeated many of the stories already known here, how the Belgian workmen are refusing to curtail their hour of labor to what we should call normal. But while he gives every credit to the Belgians, he says that similar conditions have prevailed in many parts of France for some time past, and that this country has heard too little about them. He is full of instances where the French masons and carpenters are voluntarily working ten and eleven hours a day, and even longer when they can complete a job before going home. In many cases they have refused overtime payment, and in others they have never asked for it. When questioned about it, many of the French workmen merely replied that it was necessary, leaving it to others to explain that behind their sacrifice were humanitarian thoughts for France's houseless families, and need for her to regain her old prosperity.

AN AMERICAN TRAMP POET.

Yachell Lindsay, the American poet whom admirers call the modern Whitman, is over here. His sensitive brain is recording our London sights and sounds for the purpose of one of those panoramic symphonies that have made him famous in his own land. The English-speaking Union gave a reception in his honor one afternoon this week, when he put his poetry to the good test of reciting it. Like Homer, to whom also he has been in the tramp sense compared, Lindsay chants his own words. He has tramped across the States from Atlantic to Pacific, paying his way in the manner of a Greek bard, by chanting his poetry at fire-sides. He has an admirable equipment in a voice ranging easily from a harsh outcry to a flute sweetness. He is a young man with gleaming blue eyes in a mobile actor's face. He tells you first in easy conversational style how he came to write the poem and then, throwing his head far back and shutting tight his eyes, he becomes the sensitive instrument through which his emotions blow into music. At first hearing one was quite sure at any rate that these strange phantasmagoric poems stand the test of sound. Like the best of Whitman, they have a deep rhythm. The broad rhythmic efforts are more evident than verbal felicity. They have a rush, and real life is in them. He has an eye for the large and the spectacular. The sight of the countless motor cars on the long Pacific roads evoked a poem which is a parade of all America. Another striking poem is a sort of rhapsody describing a march of the old Red Indian gods and after them the ghosts of the vanished buffaloes of the plains.

SUBURBAN BURGLARS.

The London suburban burglar season has set in rather earlier than usual this year, and the northern outlying districts seem to be the favorite hunting-ground. Two women and a man were sentenced heavily at the present Middlesex Sessions, but their colleagues are still busy, especially on Saturday evenings. One individual who has been seen twice and spoken to once in the same district flies at small game but is doing well. His method is to watch a house until the occupants—generally an elderly husband and wife—have gone out shopping or to visit friends or to the local cinema and then to push a pane out of the fragile front door and quietly enter. In every case he makes for the bedrooms, turns the drawers out on the floor, and departs with anything that he can find in the way of money or jewelry. His overcoat is usually exchanged for another, but his dark trilby hat seems to be always retained. In the one case where he was met by a man who returned unexpectedly he calmly remarked: "It's all right, sir, I'm a detective officer—you've had somebody in here" and bolted through the front door before the astonished owner had time to recover. In this instance the intruder had changed his overcoat, but he left a mackintosh taken elsewhere, with a lady's brooch in one of the pockets.

ART AND THE PUBLIC HOUSE.

There is a Continental flavour about John Galsworthy's suggestion that artists should be employed to decorate not only schools and railway stations but even the public house. In France and Germany it is quite the custom for municipalities to call in the aid of artists for work of this kind, and in many cases to give them carte blanche in design and execution. It was a Frenchman who had the humorous idea to enlist the help of artists in decorating the "Six Bells," a well-known public house in King's Road, Chelsea (the artistic quarter of London). The house stands upon its property, and he only allowed it to be built, having a great aversion to its temperance, on condition that its design should be left to his own taste. The demand had to be conceded, whereupon the French landlord covered the outside of the "Six Bells" with devils, horns and tall complete, who were represented as bearing the structure upon their shoulders, grinning diabolically the while. Possibly Mr. Galsworthy had this building in mind when he made the above proposal.

ATLANTA, LIMITED.

Atlanta, Ltd., is not the name of a new musical comedy, but the attractive title chosen by a dozen women engineers for their new engineering firm, whose factory is to be staffed and managed entirely by women. The works manager is an educated girl who served her three years' apprenticeship to a mechanical engineer, and who during the war was in charge of a machine shop in a big works. The secretary was technical supervisor in another factory. One of the directors has had five years' experience of the commercial side of engineering, and Lady Parsons is the chairman. The idea originated among several girls, qualified engineers, keenly interested in their work, who saw no chance in present circumstances of enlarging their scope unless they opened the door for themselves. They have the blessing of the Women Engineers' Society, which as an incorporated society is debarred from giving financial help, but that will come from individual interested women, and I believe that the girls themselves are putting all their savings as well as their whole energies into the venture. They are already looking forward to two contracts, one for machinery parts of a pump ordered by the French Government for draining the devastated areas and the other for making parts of hostery needles. Plenty of war-trained engineers are available for the works—women who for lack of such opportunities have had to take up teaching or other occupations and who want to get back to their former sphere.

THE COMMERCIAL MOTOR SHOW.

Men in the commercial motor trade are talking with great enthusiasm about the show which is to be held at Olympia, London, in the middle of October. And there are quite good reasons for their eagerness. They have done wonderful business since the war finished, and there are no signs that the demand for commercial motors is slackening off. It is a fact, too, that many people in the trade cannot estimate the progress that has been made in mechanical transport in recent years, and they are looking forward to the show to provide them with the necessary data. It is certainly going to prove the biggest exhibition of its kind ever held. Though the main part of it will be occupied by British firms, it will have a very pronounced international flavour, for there will be representative models from the United States, Canada, France and Italy. In the trade they are talking in a way that seems to indicate that the feature of the show will not be the charabancs or any of the other passenger-carrying vehicles, but the heavier types of motor lorries, especially those designed for long-distance work.

Sporty Trip.

The old spirit of the West Coast Englishman, who like John Cabot or Humphrey Gilbert set out to cross the Atlantic in twenty ton boats is not dead, though it only evinces itself once and a while says the Twillingate Sun. Such was the spirit of these men from Bonavista Bay who arrived here in a thirty foot motor boat on Wednesday from Battle Hr. Leaving Battle Hr. Sunday, Crouse Tuesday they hove up under Cape John on Tuesday night. When the gale struck them Wednesday morning they were in mid-bay. Seas broke on them three times, and their faces were salt-encrusted with the spray. It was a bold and daring trip for this time of the year, and a little bit foolhardy, but a sporty deed and one that makes the pulses thrill.

Obituary.

There passed peacefully away at the Escasoni Hospital, on Oct. 20th, 1920, after a long illness, another of the brave in the person of ex-Private Frank Levigne. During his long illness he was always of a cheerful disposition. Deceased was a native of Bathurst, New Brunswick, and only came to this country five years ago, during which time he made many friends. He was with the Regiment in 1916, when he was wounded at Ypres, Belgium, spending 8 months at Wandsworth Hospital. He was then transferred home and sent to Waterford Hall where he underwent treatment for 3 months; was removed from there to the General Hospital where he had the 9th operation performed on his arm, and for the past

8 months was being treated at Escasoni Hospital. He leaves a widowed mother, Mrs. Samuel Levigne, of St. John, N.B., and 5 sisters, Mrs. A. W. Frost, Mrs. Stanley Rackley, Mrs. John Boggie, Mrs. Wm. Clayton and Miss Lizzie; also 3 brothers George, James and Samuel of the Canadian forces; he also leaves a widow and 3 children to whom the writer extends sincere sympathy.—A Friend of deceased.

Harbor Grace Notes.

Mr. Leslie Chafe of the Cable Staff, Heart's Content, was in town last week on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Chafe.

Mr. E. Simmons returned from the city by Thursday night's train, having spent a day there doing business.

The Tug D. P. Ingraham, M. Rose, master, arrived in port on Friday afternoon, 22nd inst., with the schooner Union Jack in tow. This schooner will go on dock the first opportunity.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Heater and two children arrived here from St. John's by motor car on Wednesday, on a visit to Mr. John Heater of Woodville Road. The party motored back to the city again on Friday after having spent an enjoyable time here. Mr. Heater leaves shortly for Sydney, where he will undertake work for the winter. His many friends wish him well.

The second case of Typhoid Fever was reported in town last week, the sufferer being the wife of Mr. Reuben Gordon of the East End. This case is not of a malignant type, and it is thought the worst is over. We are hoping that this disease will not spread, as so far the town has been in a pretty healthy state.

Miss Marion Simmons of E. Simmons, has been confined to her home for the past few days suffering from a slight cold. Her friends are pleased to see her about again to-day.

Dr. Anderson of Heart's Content was in town last week.

The S.S. Prospero arrived here on Saturday night last at nine o'clock, and having landed a large amount of freight and a number of passengers, among them being Mr. and Mrs. Robert Tefford from St. Anthony, left port again after a short stay.

Mr. R. F. W. Strong of the Nfld. Co-operative Corporation, Ltd., Benton, arrived in town on Friday. He was a passenger from New York by the S.S. Rosalind on her last trip to St. John's.

Mrs. Don Moore (nee Miss Bessie Tefford) and infant were among the passengers to land here on Saturday last from St. Anthony by the S.S. Prospero. We are sorry to say that Mrs. Moore's mother is very ill at the present time, but we trust there will soon be a change.

As the North Sees It.

(Twillingate Sun.)

ECONOMY—In an issue of the Advocate last week an item is devoted to the remodeling of the Marine and Fisheries office in St. John's. The item says that a "partition" has been removed, new furniture "has been installed," and also adds "it is now one of the most-up-to-date offices, (which we presume is a polite way of saying "the most expensively furnished) in the city—and codfish can only realize five dollars a quintal in St. John's."

A former politician, the late E. M. Jackman, once remarked that politically Newfoundland had the "trappings of an elephant on the back of a cat," meaning to say that our system of government was suitable for some wealthy nation, but entirely too expensive for a little country like this.

How is it that outport members as soon as they get snugly settled in some Departmental office in St. John's want walnut furniture and velvet pile-carpet for their offices? It should not be; and the amount of money wasted on government office suites in St. John's is out of all proportion, while the outports are told, when they hint of their wants, that the government of the day must "cut the garment according to the cloth."

COST OF PENSIONING FISHERMEN—Take another case. When the government of Sir E. P. Morris made a start by cutting out $20,000 for pensions for worn out fishermen, they gave it to be understood it was only a start. We are not prepared to say that the Morris government would have done anything better had they been in power, but no one protested more than Mr. Coaker against the inadequacy of the amount, nor clamored louder for pensions for aged women as well.

Now what do you imagine it costs under the Liberal Reform Government to write those few cheques of twelve-fifty a quarter for a few—few too—old men? Nineteen thousand, one hundred and eight dollars. Put it in figures, $19,108. And there are thirteen officials whose salaries range from $4000 a year down. What does the man bent and crippled with age think of that when he receives his twelve-fifty quarterly?

LABRADOR'S REPRESENTATIVE, WHEBEL—Twice within the last couple of years the Sun has spoken of the injustice of the people of Labrador being left entirely unrepresented in our Legislature. They Schooner Race Will Be Annual Affair.

Gloucester, Mass., Oct. 19.—Two schooners, one representing the United States and the other the Canadian fishing fleets, will meet annually in a series of races to determine the sailing supremacy of the North Atlantic. This decision was announced last night after representatives of the Royal Nova Scotia Yacht Squadron, Halifax, and a local fishermen's committee had completed arrangements to make the forthcoming contest between the Gloucester schooner, Esperanto, and the Halifax challenger, Dista-wanna, the first of the series.

There will be three races in each annual series, the competing vessels to be chosen after elimination trials, and the winner of two races each year will be custodian of the cup offered by the Halifax Herald to-day. The races will be sailed alternately in Canadian and United States waters. It was decided to-day that the Dista-wanna and the Esperanto should sail two races off Halifax on October 29 and November 1, over a forty mile triangular course. If a third is necessary to decide the winner, it will be to windward and leeward, wind conditions permitting.

Gloucester Men-Coming.

The course must be covered in nine hours to constitute a race. "There will be sailing rules," said the committee, "but not the new-angled regulations of the International Cup Races. We'll use the rules of the road that seamen know, and let the best boat win." Each schooner will be allowed to carry four lowers, two topsails, one daysail and a jib-topsail. The ballast may be either rock or iron. Gloucester plans to send a delegation of local fishermen to the race, and it was said to-night that a party of fifty might accompany the Esperanto when she sails north to meet her challenger next week.

The Harvest is Great.

There is reason for general rejoicing in the prediction of bountiful crop prospects for the present year. The latest estimate by the Department of Agriculture places the yield of corn this year at nearly 100 million bushels above the previous record, the indicated total being well in excess of 3 billion bushels. Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri will contribute practically all the increase of 200 million bushels over the crop of last year. But corn does not tell the whole story. The yield of oats is near a record, and nearly 200 million bushels above last year's showing; and although the yield of wheat is short compared with the big crop a year ago, the harvest of this cereal is well in line with good crops of the last decade. Potatoes have been plentiful and will be for the coming winter, and the season now closing has been most favorable for vegetable crops generally.—Kansas City Star.

Keeping An Ear to the Ground.

Probably the safest attitude for the manufacturer to-day when faced with the downward movement in commodities is to put himself in the closest touch with the distributors of his goods, the jobbers and the retailers. There is a much abused proverb in the retail world of merchandising that "the customer is always right." Applied to the present situation it means that the retailer is probably the one who can judge most accurately the feeling of the customer towards existing prices, and how far those prices may be adjusted before a healthy level is reached.

The shoe manufacturers of Canada and the States evidently waited too long, and their market slipped suddenly away from them, and their attempt to-day through consumer advertising to prop up those old prices is probably the most glaring instance of a hopeless and unintelligent effort to thwart the determined will of their customers, the consumer. The sugar refiners have displayed a keener insight into conditions and have made successive cuts in their commodity; to-day they would have been prepared to face the unusual conditions in that industry had they not been hampered by price-fixing that dogged them during the past two years. The woolen men waited too long, declared prices could not come down, and then when cancellations flew in, dropped their prices. The cotton textile men are in a better position technically, but they will take a wise step in a few days and down will come the prices of cotton goods; this should save their market and stimulate buying.

Meeting the ultimate buyer, the consumer, half way, looks like the wisest course for the manufacturer to-day. And the fact needs no further to-day. And to find out what are the wisest of these consumers he should get in immediate touch with the retailer, and where possible, with the consumer himself.—Financial Post.

Veterans' Reunion.

ARRANGEMENTS BEING MADE.

Arrangements are now being made to have a re-union of all returned men in the C.C.C. Hall on Armistice Night, November 11th. This re-union which will include a dinner and smoker, will be open to all men who have served during the war in any of the Allied forces, and covers will be laid for 250 persons. The Jazzola Orchestra has been engaged for the occasion, and all the popular old time march songs will be played and sung. His Excellency the Governor, who is the Colonel of the Regiment, will be the guest of the evening, and the Regimental colors will also occupy a prominent place in the hall. It is also intended to have a display of fire works and decorations, and on the whole Armistice Night, 1920 will be a memorable one amongst the Veterans. As this is the first re-union of returned men since the war finished, the committee in charge are doing all in their power to make the assembly an enjoyable affair.

number souls. They pay taxes as we do; have their needs as we have them; and yet the Little Sun—praise be it is getting more powerful every day in its fight for others—is the only paper in all Newfoundland that has so much as mentioned it.

Dr. Grenfell has now taken up the matter as well, and it is to be hoped that the people of Labrador will have their claim to representation heard before long; for the Doctor has a very direct way of getting at things, and is apt to kick over a few precedents in the process if they get in the way.

It probably pays the big Labrador fishing interests of St. John's to block any such move, but Dr. Grenfell has more than once made the big fishing interests of St. John's crawl into a knot hole and pull the hole in after them.

This matter of the representation of Labrador in our House of Parliament is one that ought to be at heart with the people of this country. The people are mostly poorly off and are at the mercy of the big merchants who have their fishing plants there. They are all of good British descent, and there is no fair minded man but would like to see them properly represented.

SUGAR SWEET.—In Revelations there is a story about prophet who ate the little book which was sweet in his mouth but bitter in his stomach. That is just the position of this country, and the name sugar has turned to bitterness in the hearts of the people.

The United States market is swamped with sugar at the present, and prices are still going down, down. The reasons for this was chiefly that Cuban sugar holders thought to do with their sugar what the Newfoundland Government is seeking to do with their codfish—force the market by withholding. The result was that stocks of sugar accumulated in Cuba, and when prices slumped in U.S.A., the Cubans hastened to unload their sugar on a falling market, still further lowering the price.

The Cubans were so badly hit that some firms and at least a couple of Banks closed their doors.

Now in addition to all this sugar, the American beet crop is now coming in, so that there is no lack of sugar, and no bottom is yet reached to prices.

In the meantime this country must go on paying over thirty cents for its sugar till the end of the year at least, because a muddling, bungling government insisted on fleeing the people.

FLYING—Premier Squires, picnicking in Europe at Newfoundland's expense, flew from London to Paris recently on his way to Italy. The way he flew then will be only an incident to the way he will fly out of the government when next the electors get a chance to mark their ballots.

If a Testator

although seeing the benefits to be derived from a Trust Company's administration, hesitates about cancelling any appointment he may have already made, the Montreal Trust Company can be named to act with the Executor or Executors already appointed. In this way the Trust Company co-operates with the Testator's appointees in the administration of the Estate.

This plan is very acceptable when the Testator's wife is named as Executor. Few women have the necessary business training to enable them to carry on the administration of an Estate, but with the co-operation of the Montreal Trust Company the Testator's wife can be appointed with full assurance that the Estate will be well looked after.

The World's Most Beautiful Women.

Goddesses Who are Now Dust

(Glasgow Weekly Herald.)
The beauty of thousands of the world's fairest women has long been dust, but the very names of many of them still have the magic to stir the pulses as their loveliness fired the blood of men who worshipped at their shrines in the days when they trod daintily and smilingly over hearts to ever renewed conquests.

In fancy we can still see them moving down the centuries in dazzling procession. We can see the flash of eyes, the roguery of red lips, the white gleam of shoulders, the coquetry of fans, as they pass in review before us, with gay laughter on their lips and the mingled dignity and grace of queens.

Never, surely, did woman assume a guise more perfect in its seductions than Virgine, Countess Castiglione, whose charms M. Lollie thus pictures:—"Her blue eyes had a magic softness; her brown hair, rich and abundant, clustered round the pure lines of her brow; the arms and bosom had an indescribable grace in their exquisite curves; the dainty dimpled chin; the lovely parted lips, like an opening crimson flower, appear to invite caresses. Even more beautiful, if possible, was her figure, which was faultless in its symmetry and its grace of outline; while her arms and hands in their perfect modelling were the despair of sculptors."

Small wonder that a woman so superbly dowered by nature was hailed as the unapproached queen of the world's lovely women; that when she appeared at a State ball at the Tuilleries, both dancing and music ceased as if at some magic and mysterious bidding, and every eye was turned to her in breathless admiration; or that, whenever she took her walks abroad, she was mobbed by festling crowds, eager to catch a glimpse of her peerless face.

A Quintette of Queens.
But, superely lovely as the Italian countess was, she has had many a rival no less supreme in her own day. Every one of Cardinal Mazarin's five nieces was a queen of beauty; but, lovely as her sisters were, Hortense, by universal consent, eclipsed them all. Seldom, if we are to believe Saint-Evremond, has woman's beauty attained such perfection. "The colour of her eyes," he tells us, "has no name; it is neither blue nor grey, nor altogether black, but a combination of all three; they have the sweetness of blue, the gaiety of grey, and above all the fire of the black. There are none so sweet in the world."

Her smile would soften the hardest heart. Her nose gives a noble and lofty air to her whole physiognomy. The tone of her voice is so harmonious and agreeable that none can hear her speak without being sensibly moved. Her complexion is so delicately clear that I cannot believe that anyone who examines it closely can deny it to be whiter than the driven snow. Her hair is of glossy black, whose curls seem to rejoice to shade so lovely a head."

But even the Cardinal's niece has had many formidable rivals at the Court of France, from the long-gone days of Gabrielle d'Estrees—a "dainty little fairy with big blue wonder eyes, golden hair, the sweetest rosebud of a mouth ready to smile or pout as the mood of the moment suggested; with soft round baby cheeks as delicately flushed as any rose"—to the Court of Napoleon III., and of which the Duchess de Morny and the Countess Le Hon—"who captured the gods and men of her day in the meshes of her fair hair"—were perhaps the brightest stars.

Louis XV.'s involuntary exclamation when he first set eyes on the loveliness of Madame de la Tour-nelle—"Heavens! how beautiful she is!" becomes intelligible when we look on Nattier's picture of this fairest of the de-Noule sisters, in his "Allegory of the Daybreak," and read the contemporary descriptions of her charms.

"She ravished the eye," we are told, "with her skin of dazzling whiteness, her elegant carriage, her free gestures, the enchanting glance of her big blue eyes—a gaze of which the cunning was veiled by sentiment—by the smile of a child, moist lips; a bosom surging, heaving, over agitated by the flux and reflux of life; by a physiognomy at once passionate and mutinous." It is little wonder that in the reaction which followed his stormy grief for his dead love the Countess de Vintimille, Louis should turn to bask in the sunshine of the third of the beautiful sisters.

Fashioned for the Gods!
When Voltaire first saw the portrait of Madame du Barry he exclaimed—"The original was fashioned by the gods." And one cannot wonder as we look on the ravishing beauty that wrung this eloquent tribute from the cold-blooded cynic—the tender, melting violet of the eyes, with their sweeping brown lashes, under the exquisite arch of brown eyebrows; the dainty little Greek nose; the bent bow of the delicious face; the complexion "fair and fresh as an infant's"; and the halo of golden hair, a "stream of fascinating curls and tendrils." It was to this bewitching picture, "with the perfume and light of a goddess of love," that Louis XV. succumbed at first sight—to be her slave and shadow until the hour when, faced by death, with fear in his eyes and a tardy penitence on his lips, he took the sceptre from her hand, with the words—"Madam, it is time that we should part."

It is doubtful whether even Madame du Barry, grisette and uncrowned Queen, was more beautiful than Pauline Bonaparte, that "extraordinary combination of the most faultless physical beauty and the oddest moral laxity," who dazzled the world by her loveliness while she shocked it by her defiance of the most elementary decorum. "It is impossible," wrote one who knew her, "to do any justice to her charms—the brilliance of her eyes, which thrilled all on whom they fell; the glory of her black hair, rippling in a cascade to her knees; the classic purity of her complexion, the proud poise of her head, and the exquisite modelling of the figure which inspired Canova's "Venus Victrix."

Thus the fair daughters of France pass before us in brilliant and bewildering succession. We watch with fascinated eyes Madame de Prie drawing lovers to her feet as a candle-flame lures moth to their destruction, and holding the Regent d'Orleans in the palm of her pretty hand; and Madame de Prie, of whom d'Angenson wrote, "I do not think there has ever existed a more celestial creature. At the very first glance of her glorious eyes, the sweet red lips parted in a smile that revealed two rows of pearls; the dimples nestling in the soft, rounded cheeks, the exquisite features in the perfect oval face, the sourest anchorite would be undone."

We see Mlle Georges, the superbly lovely actress, playing with the great Napoleon as a cat plays with a mouse, revelling in the conquest of the conqueror of Europe—a woman of whom Theophile Gautier paints this seductive picture:—"The black eyes comparably pure arcs of her eyebrows; a nose straight and narrow, cut by oblique nostrils passionately dilated; the mouth, now superbly disdainful, now ravishingly tender and sweet; and the firm chin, by a majestic contour terminating a profile which is more that of a goddess than of a woman. The opulent bust, the exquisitely-modelled arms and sweet little hands, broken by dimples, regular little roval hands, made to carry a sceptre."

We see Adrienne Le Couvreur, Queen of the Stage and of Beauty—a woman perfectly fashioned, from her small, beautifully poised head to her exquisitely-modelled arms and delicate fingers; with eyes the mirror of a hundred moods; a mouth like a rosebud, and a slightly aquiline nose—chasing phantom Love, which always eludes her grasp, making conquest after conquest, only to find disillusion in each in turn. And Sophie Arnould, lovely, gifted and pleasure-loving, dances her way across the stage, playing terrible havoc with those glorious eyes of hers, "the eyelids exquisitely narrowed at the corners, eyebrows sweeping like the wings of a daintily flying-bird; a face of pure oval, with exquisitely-cut features; and a figure slight and graceful as that of a fawn."

A Coquette at 80!
For more than two centuries Ninon de Lenclos has been dust; but her name still brings with it a waft of perfume, and conjures up a picture of one of the daintiest, gayest, most irresistible and irresponsible of all the women who have made playthings of the hearts of men. At fifteen, it is said, she had two avowed lovers; and sixty-five years later she refused to give an answer to one enthusiastic admirer until a certain day, "because it was her eightieth birthday, and she wanted to boast of having a lover on it." And through all the intervening years this queen of witcheries never lacked her retinue of admirers. As Saint-Evremond wrote to her, when old age was powerless to rob her of her fascinations, "You have been loved by the best fellows in the world, and you have loved them just long enough to leave nothing in the way of passion untasted—you were born to love all your life."

Ireland has cradled many beautiful women, but none who can compare with the two daughters of John Gunning, a happy-go-lucky, dram-drinking squireen of County Roscommon, whose appearance in London, to quote Horace Walpole, "made more noise than any of her predecessors since the days of Helen." Their conquest was immediate, electrifying London raved about the new beauties; they were the theme of every tongue, from the Court to the meanest coffee-house. Even Grub Street rubbed his eyes in amazement at the wonderful vision, and ransacked its dictionaries for superlatives; and the poets, with one accord, struck their lyres to a new inspiration. Whenever the sisters took their walks, multitude, the press being once so great that one of them fainted and had to be carried home in her chair, while on another occasion their beaux were compelled to draw swords to rescue them from the mob. Such was the sensation caused by Elizabeth and Maria Gunning in the summer of 1751 by a loveliness which is rightly said to defy description. But, although each was equally fair, the sisters were by no means alike in their charms. Maria, all gladness and mirth, was a sprightly brunette, in whose laughing glances shone the fires of a pleasure-loving soul; while Elizabeth, the younger, with soft blue eyes and dark golden hair, although infinitely more placid, was no less radiant than her dashing sister. The World's Most Beautiful Women.

 of dignity enhanced by the poise of the small Grecian. Faultless also were the round arms and the hands with their slender tapering fingers.
 The Sheridan Graces.
 No less lovely, in the opinion of the world, were the "Three Sheridan Graces," granddaughters of Richard Ashley Sheridan and Elizabeth Lindey, the "Nightingale" of Bath, of whom Fanny Kemble said, "I never saw such a bunch of beautiful creatures all growing on one stem." "The Beauty of the World," said the late Lord Byron, of Helen Sheridan, "was a different type, but they were all equally tall and stately. The Duchess of Somerset had large, deep blue eyes, black hair, black eyebrows and eyelashes, perfect features, and a complexion of lilac and rose. Mrs. Norton, on the contrary, was a brunette, with dark burning hair like her grandfather's, a pure oval profile, and a clear olive complexion. My mother, though her features were less regular than those of her sisters, was equally lovely and attractive. Her figure was divine, the perfection of grace and symmetry. Her hands and feet were small, many sculptors having been called to model the former." If one saw the palm of beauty to be of the "Graces," it should probably go to the Duchess of Somerset, who was considered by many to be the loveliest woman of her age in Europe.
 Even the Sheridan Graces had formidable rivals in the three daughters of Edward Walpole and Mary Clement, the Pall Mall sempstress, of whom we read—"Nowhere in England or out of it could be found three sisters at once so beautiful and so richly dowered with intelligence, amiability, and wit." As the "lovely Misses Walpole" they created as great a sensation as even the beautiful Misses Gunning. They were feted and petted by society; each had her retinue of high-placed wooers, eager to lay coronets and riches at her feet; and when they took their walks abroad they were followed by crowds of curious admirers, anxious to get a glimpse of them, and, maybe, to win a smile from their pretty lips.
 Played Harvee With Kings.
 Through the centuries we see these fair women of England pass before us, and supreme in her day—La Belle Stuart, "as sweet and fragrant a flower as ever blossomed in woman's guise," fair and graceful as a lily, with luxuriant brown hair, eyes of violet, and a proudly-carried little head, who played such havoc with the "Merry Monarch's" heart; my Lady Castlemaine, who allied the "temper of a fiend" to a bold, dark beauty and a voluptuous physique before which Charles II. was ever weak; and La Querouaille, "of the black heart and beautiful face." Pretty, saucy Nell Gwynn, of the dancing blue eyes, laughing red lips, and auburn hair, all curls and tendrils; Frances Jennings, who drove every gallant at Charles's Court to distraction by her charms and caprices before she married "handsome Dick Talbot" and blossomed into a duchess; Lady Sarah Lennox, the haughty and capricious beauty, who refused a crown when the boy-king, George III., laid it at her feet—and so on through the long list of fair women who have graced it at our Royal Court.

 Thus they leap to life again for us, these fair women of a dead past, almost as vividly as when they trod the earth in their pride and splendour and beauty—Perdita, whom the "first gentleman in Europe" loved one day and left the next; Mrs. Jordan, the "little pickle," whom our sailor King led to the altar; the "gorgeous Lady Blessington"; and Lady Hamilton, the blacksmith's daughter, who lived to be an ambassador, the bosom friend of a Queen, and Nelson's "Emma" and idol.
 Lady Hamilton still looks down on us from many a canvas by Romney and Reynolds, Lawrence and Hoppner; and we can feast our eyes on the charms which won for her Romney's description of "the most perfect woman in the world," and which are thus catalogued:—"A profusion of auburn hair, which fell to her very knees; a broad forehead; finely-arched and pencilled eyebrows; blue eyes, whose shyness was strangely winning; a delicate aquiline nose, a short upper lip, and a dainty mouth; a chin of incomparable shapeliness, good teeth, a complexion pure and bright as an angel's colour; an expression of seraphic sweetness; a head set like a piece of antique art on a long fair neck; a figure tall and slight, and perfect in its modelling. Nor in our list, necessarily incomplete, of this world's most beautiful woman, must we overlook Peg Woffington, "the most fascinating daughter of Eve," of whom Charles Roade draws the following charming picture:—"She had a head of beautiful form, perched like a bird upon a throat shapely and smooth, as a column of alabaster; a symmetrical brow; black eyes full of fire and tenderness; and a delicious mouth with a hundred varying expressions. But she had one feature more remarkable than all—her eyebrows, which were jet-black and arched like a rainbow, with a flexibility that made other faces upon the stage look sleepy beside Margaret Woffington's. In person she was considerably over the middle height; and so finely formed that one could not determine the exact character of her figure. At one time it seemed all stateliness; at others, elegance personified and flowing voluptuousness. She was Juno Psyche, Hebe by turns; and, for aught we know, at will."

Parties desiring to reserve tables at the Blue Puttee may do so any time during the day, and if a special after-theatre supper is desired (Chicken, Partridge, Oysters, etc.), we will serve it by getting a few hours' notice.—Oct 25, 1920

NOTICE.

Under and by virtue of "An Act respecting the General Hospital" (6 George V., Cap. XIX.), and with the approval of the Governor-in-Council, the Board of Governors of the St. John's Hospital hereby give notice that they have fixed and prescribed the following scale of fees to be levied from and paid by all persons who occupy beds or undergo treatment at the Hospital. The scale is to come into operation on the 1st day of January, 1921.
SCALE OF FEES.
 Every person receiving treatment in the General Hospital shall, after December 31st next, pay fees according to the following scale:
 Persons admitted to the public wards $1.00 per day; persons occupying private rooms $10.00 per week, in addition to the daily fees of $1.00.
 Every applicant for admission to the Hospital must bring with him or forward to the Superintendent of the Hospital certificate signed by a duly registered physician that such applicant is a proper subject for Hospital treatment.
 Under the provisions of the General Hospital Act, 1915, all patients who are unable to pay fees shall be required to bring with them a certificate of their inability to pay, which shall be signed by the resident Relieving Officer, or where there is no such officer, by a Justice of the Peace, or Clergyman or other responsible person. The fees of such patients thereupon become payable by the Commissioner of Public Charity by virtue of the said Act.
 By order of the Board,
 J. W. WITHERS, Chairman.
 H. M. WOODS, Acting Secretary.

One thing essential in your Winter Coat is QUALITY. One has to wear their Winter Coat for many months, and to stand against this you require the best of material in it.

We have carefully selected our stock of Winter Coatings and feel we have goods that merit your approval. You can purchase enough excellent material to make a coat for $24.00, and if you wish we can make it up for you, and deliver the finished garment in a week or less if necessary. The material is equal in quality to that in coats which retail at $70.00 to $90.00.

We ask you to come in and see the goods, examine them, get samples and prices, compare with others, and come back and purchase the goods.
