CANADA'S YACHTING CUP AGAIN RETURNS HOME

Invader Defeats Cadillac for the Third Time in a Grand Race—Five Challenges Already Received by the Winner.

Chicago, Aug. 14.—The officials of the Chicago Yacht club had the Canada's cup brought out and polished up this evening, and at a banquet given at the Chicago Athletic club presented it with many regrets, but with sportsmanlike courtesy to Commodore Gooderham, of the Royal Canadian Yacht club, of Toronto, the challenger Invader having won the third race of the cup series to-day.

The Cadillac sailed to-day much better than would have been expected of her in such weather. It was to be a windward and leeward course, and on the first leg the defender and challenger were playing a game of cat-and-mouse. With every puff of wind Cadillac forged ahead of Invader, though not pointing so high, but would lose her advantage between puffs and gradually but steadily the Canadian boat worked to windward against the east wind that was gently rippling the lake.

SHIFT IN WIND.
As the boats neared the windward buoy the wind shifted into the north so that the last leg was a reaching instead of a run before the wind. Only on Saturday did the yachts really get a run, before the wind though the course was expected to be windward and leeward Monday and to-day. The Cadillac's position was south of the buoy when the wind changed, and she had to beat up into the wind to turn the stake. The Invader was more to the north, and while honors were even and probably a little in favor of the Detroit boat before the wind shifted the change gave the Invader a lead of two minutes at the Windward buoy, which the defender could not be expected to shake up on the reach home.

Everything was against the Cadillac. The wind was hardly nine miles an hour. The Invader's best work was in reaching, while the fact of the second leg turning into a reach in steps of a run deprived the Cadillac of the use of her spinnaker, and the strengthening of the spinnaker pole had been the only means taken for making the Cadillac measure up to the Invader. The Cadillac's tack close to the class in a wind and on a course altogether favorable to her opponent. There could be only one result at the cup.

WIND DIED DOWN.
An hour before the race to-day there was a smart breeze blowing from the southwest, but at 11 o'clock it was dying away. When the judges began the race, the wind was a new starting place the last gun was not fired until 11:30 a.m. instead of 11 o'clock as at the other races. Skipper Thompson was out in a very freer play of jockeying for place. The signal was that the yachts should leave the buoys to starboard. Thompson played running across the line and back. At the last minute Invader shot after Cadillac on her last trip around the buoy, but Thompson was on the starboard tack close to the buoy when the gun was heard, and there was no room for Invader to pass between.

It was as pretty a sight as was ever seen. The two yachts slowly crossed the line nose and nose, and hardly five feet apart from each other. From the guests' boat, the Bradwell, the spars of the two yachts appeared to be coming in. Then the proximity of the Invader might be able to point higher, and thus get another race on a foul.

INVADER GOT POSITION.
Cadillac was to windward, and if the Invader could have run into her without spilling any wind the Cadillac would undoubtedly have been disqualified for getting in the way. But Skipper Thompson had judged the situation well. The Cadillac had the Invader blanketed and immediately walked away from her. Then the Invader turned on the port tack astern of the Detroit yacht, and in a minute turned on the starboard tack again, tacking at 11:46, but Invader had gained the weather position and was a length ahead. They continued on this tack until 1:32.

This was an exciting hour of the race. The wind varied from five to eight miles and with every puff of wind Cadillac would jump ahead. Several times when she came up the Invader blanketed her, and she would fall back as the puff died away. At 11:57, however, she got clear of the blanket and maintained a lead to leeward for half hour, but from this on until the wind changed and the yachts were nearing the turn, it was hard to see where the advantage lay, as the Invader worked over a quarter of a mile to windward while the Cadillac maintained an apparent lead, but to leeward.

The sidewalk Milwaukee, which had started on her course five minutes behind the defender and challenger, caught the change of wind off to the north of the stake, and it brought her down around the buoy three minutes ahead of the Invader. The Milwaukee was two miles on her way home, and the Invader nearly a mile in the lead when the Cadillac made the turn.

THEY WERE OPTIMISTIC.
There were some friends of the Cadillac optimistic enough to believe she would make up this lead, but gradually it became apparent to everyone that she was hopelessly behind. The lead of two minutes at the turn was increased to 2:30 at the finish. The Cadillac carried her big spinnaker for a balloon job on the run home. Both boats had tried spinnakers at the turn but had to take them in.

At 3:37, the boom of the cannon and the furious whistling of steam yachts told that the international trophy was going back to Canada.

As soon as the cannon was heard Dan Griffith, who was on the steam yacht Pathfinder, with Commodore Gooderham of the Royal Canadian Yacht club, hastened to the latter a challenge for next year in behalf of the Chicago Yacht club. A. I. McLeod, of the Detroit Yacht club was next in line, taking the challenge of his club out to Commodore Gooderham on a steam yacht. Challenges were also made within an hour in behalf of the Detroit Boat Club Yachtsmen, who brought out the Cadillac, the Columbus Yacht club, of Chicago, and the Rochester Yacht club, that brought out the Genesee.

CRITICISED NEWBERRY.
Commodore Gooderham said action would be taken on the challenges before October 1. He would not indicate which challenge would probably be accepted, although he remarked that the one from the Chicago Yacht club was received first.

People who followed the race to-day saw a beautiful mirage when the Thistle and Truman H. Newberry's yacht Truett reached the windward mark. Over both boats hung an inverted rainbow of each, easily discernible with the naked eye. Newberry was severely criticised here for flying New York Yacht club colors all through the races in spite of his being a local member of the Detroit Boat Club.

Both defender and challenger will probably leave for their respective homes to-morrow. The Invader will be loaded on a flat car at South Chicago in the morning, and the Cadillac will be put on the deck of a lake steamer. The Cadillac's crew will leave for Detroit to-night, except the boat men, who will accompany the boat.

BRAVE BOY SAVED LIFE

North Chatham lad who Rescued Comrade From Watery Grave.

Little Fellow was Unable to Swim and was Pulled to Shore by his Playmate.

For promptness, pluck and staunch manliness, little John Morrison—a young North Chatham lad—distinguished himself yesterday afternoon.

Several boys had been enjoying a swim in the river to the rear of the Canada Flour Mills, when little Willie Delahanty made his appearance. He watched his playmates for some moments and then disrobed and plunged in.

He rose and sank, rose again and sank once more, ere the other lads realized that he could not swim, and was in peril of drowning. Immediately young Morrison sprang into the water and a few strokes brought him to the place where his comrade rose for the last time. He secured hold of the drowning boy and slowly made his way to the dock.

Arrived there he was altogether too weak to get ashore and clung to one of the poles.

Meanwhile the shouts of the young son of Louis Keyes, Joseph street, attracted the attention of his father, and Mr. Keyes, accompanied by John Brady, hurriedly made his way to the dock. The two men quickly released the boys from their perilous position. The lads were completely exhausted, but young Morrison was warmly commended for his brave action.

A CONTRAST TO AVOID.
"I don't want to see Lydia when she comes back from that summer school."
"Why not?"
"Oh, she'll be bursting with knowledge while the rest of us have been sitting around here in the heat forgetting what little we know."
"Every avenue to success is now open to you!" said Fate.
"And I haven't a decent street dress to my name!" faltered Woman, tears dimming her eyes.

BODY FOUND

U. S. Consul Martin, of Amherstburg, Investigating.

Amherstburg, Aug. 14.—A passing tug reported the body of a badly decomposed man in charge of the Bar Point lighthouse keeper.

C. W. Martin, the U. S. consul here, has chartered a tug and with an undertaker, started for the body about nine-thirty. Mr. Martin is taking the chances of getting the expenses paid by the friends of the dead man, otherwise he will have to pay it himself. This humane act of the U. S. consul is greatly commended here.

A CLEVELAND FIRE HORROR

The Flames Destroyed a Temporary Water Works Crib.

Heroic Workmen Rescue Many From the Treacherous Tunnel.

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 14.—Five men were burned to death, four were drowned, three and possibly four, were suffocated and several injured as the result of a fire which destroyed a temporary water-works crib two miles off the Cleveland harbor early to-day. The dead, so far as known, are: Arthur Hasty, drowned, body recovered; Mark Snyder, drowned; Arthur Hastings, burned; Plummer Jones, suffocated; John Martine, drowned; John Kowalsky, drowned, body recovered.

Four unidentified men burned. The injured, so far as known, number four.

Still imprisoned in tunnel: Victor Kaufman, Canton, probably dead; John Enging, probably dead; Adam Kent, probably dead.

Twenty-six men obeyed the order of Manager G. C. Ventresca, when the flames broke out, and took refuge in the water on floating pieces of wreckage. Four of them lost their lives more, who had drifted to the west of the crib on their floats, and sank beneath the waves just as help reached their comrades.

The crew of the tug J. R. Sprinkle heard the fire whistle blow from the crib, and raced to the scene from the harbor. She picked up 18 of the survivors who had drifted to the west of the crib on their floats of board and wreckage.

Vandusen and three of his men were hanging in the water from a two-inch iron suspended from the crib. Just as the time was burning away above the men's heads, a yawl boat from the barge Wagon, manned by two men, dashed into the veil of heat and smoke that enveloped the crib and rescued the four men on the rope as the risk of the boatmen's lives. The men picked up in the water were brought to the city on the tug Sprinkle. They were naked, exhausted and badly burned.

CRIB A TOTAL LOSS.

Many of them were cut by falling timbers. The crib is a total loss. It was a frame building 200 by 50 feet, the sides sheathed with iron. It contained valuable machinery. It is now a charred, shapeless mass of wreckage and mingled with the blackened timbers are blackened, rusted and twisted pieces of plates of iron and steel. The crib and machinery were the property of Shaffer & Seimigian, contractors. Their loss will exceed $200,000.

CHATHAMITES

They Will Assist the Aylmer Cricket Club in Their Tour.

Aug. 15.—E. A. Caughell, secretary of the Aylmer cricket club, who has been arranging with cricketers through the west to visit Toronto on August 21, 22 and 23, to play Toronto, Rosedale and Gordon-McKay clubs, writes that it is now settled that a team of western players will visit that city on the above dates. The following players have been selected by the mate committee: London—Williams, Morris and John Lakout; Chatham—Allen, Kenne and Wey; Aylmer—Horswood and Coughell; Toronto—Dr. Dean; Forest—Van Vleet; and other players are to be selected from the list of applicants. Richards, of Chatham; Marston and Stewart, of Windsor; and Richardson, of Chatham, all strong players, are being considered.

A party of trackmen approaching on another handcar from the opposite direction nearly collided with them, when the frightened youths decamped. This is a dangerous practice of the boys and must be stopped the instant they are caught.

GOOD COURSE

Major Scholfield, of the 24th, Speaks Well of the Officers' London Drills.

Major Scholfield, Captain McLaren and Spry, and Lieut. Stone, have returned from London, where they have been attending a special two weeks' course in the London Military School.

This course was granted exclusively to the officers of the 24th Regiment, other officers from other regiments were present, attending the summer term of the school, but were not allowed to take this special course.

Major Scholfield, when interviewed by the Planet this morning, expressed himself as immensely delighted with the course.

"I spent a very pleasant time in London," said he, "and found the work to be very interesting. The course was given a number of lectures on military work. The lectures were very interesting indeed and many of the points brought out will prove very helpful to the officers during the fall months."

It is expected that the regiment drills will commence early in September. The Regiment will no doubt go ahead this fall and soon become one of the crack regiments of this province.

City Jealousy.

The jealousy between Glasgow and Edinburgh, so old and so natural, is one of the stock instances of the kind, still manifesting itself in varying ways. At one time the English used to be said to be as jealous of the Scotch as the Scotch are of the English.

Now it is the turn of the Edinburgh men to complain of the Glaswegians. At the annual meeting of the Scottish Artists' Society, dissatisfaction was lately expressed that at the Glasgow International Exhibition only six artists from Edinburgh had been selected to send their work, as compared with thirty Glasgow artists.

Of course Glasgow has the larger population, though scarcely in the proportion of sixty to six.

Scotland's Friend the salmon.

It has been said that more laws have been passed for the protection of the salmon than for that of any other living creature save man himself. But, then, to Scotland the salmon is worth a good deal. The value of the fish alone runs to over £20,000 a year. Indeed the amount paid to Scottish lairds for the privilege of catching the salmon and his lesser kinsman, the trout, is believed to be considerably over £100,000 a year. And, the benefit, to Scotland does not end here. Sportsmen must live. They usually live well, and have to pay well—People's Friend, Dundee.

MUST PAY UP

The Select Knights Organization Suing the Chatham Members for Payment for Dues.

Some time ago a society was formed with headquarters in St. Catharines and named the "Select Knights." Agents were sent out all over the province to solicit members in the different cities. One of these came to Chatham with the result that a goodly branch society was formed here.

The society did not stand very long and very soon fell through and the lodge here disbanded and thought no more about it.

About three or four months ago some of the Chatham members, who comprise some of Chatham's most popular citizens, were surprised to receive notices of back dues. Upon enquiry it was found that the members in other cities were being treated in a like manner.

The most of the members who understood that they had become disconnected with the lodge refused to pay and an action was entered and judgment was given against them.

To-day the Select Knights of Chatham are receiving visits from Charles Moore, bailiff, with the request to settle. Of course, there is no alternative and the Knights are compelled to pay up.

The Maple City Select Knights are about 30 in number.

BLANCHET

Aug. 15.—Wm. Smith, a former resident here, now of York State, is visiting friends in town.

Our carrier calls each week and merchants created quite a sensation for a few minutes last evening by flourishing a revolver in front of his place of business, compelling the boys to scatter in disorder. Mr. Vester very cleverly disarmed him of this weapon, being told in this attempt at shooting, made a run for a shop, gun, and not all Chief Grant arrived on the scene was order restored.

Alex. Tall, arrived last evening from the South and will spend a couple of weeks at his home on Communipaw Road. The atmosphere of the northern town has evidently agreed with Mr. Tall, as his weight has been increased by several pounds. He spent the night of the 14th at the John Knight, at having a stone foundation and cellar placed under his house.

THE UNDOING OF A DOUBT BY HUGO ST. FINISTERRE, M.D.

AUTHOR OF "WHO'S WHO, ETC., ETC."
COPYRIGHT, 1898 BY AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

Not once during all those trying minutes did the single star far away in the horizon fail to beam upon me. The sky was cloudless, but without a moon. It was instinct rather than reason that led me to look for the twinkling orb at the moment of rising from the chair. It had suddenly become invisible and was under an eclipse.

Something intruded in the field of vision and shot out its light. The object was outside the window and had come up from the ground. I saw the outlines and the reflection of a pair of eyes. A person was crouching at the ledge and peering in at me, his coming being as noiseless as that of a shadow itself.

He might be a friend, and he might be an enemy, but the probabilities were in favor of the former. First glancing at the grim Cy Walters, I waved my hand in salutation to the stranger outside, and he made a gesture by way of reply, but in the gloom I could not clearly make it out.

While still puzzling over the matter the window sash slowly rose for an inch or two. The stranger must be a friend or he would not do that. The stillness was profound, and the individual was working with consummate caution and skill, for with my sense of hearing keyed to the highest point and able to hear the rustling of a leaf it was impossible to detect the slightest noise.

Again the sash began rising, the motion continuing until it was at a height of six inches, when it rested. My impatience became intolerable. Why did not my friend lift the sash high enough for me to make my plunge before either of my enemies awoke? I was ready to start across the floor, but was restrained by the belief that I would receive the signal when it was safe to give it.

Again the window frame began climbing like the movement of a sash, but to my exasperation it halted before reaching the necessary height for me to pass beneath. Then an arm was thrust through the opening thus made and a hand extended toward the sleeping Archie Hunter. The hand was reaching for the revolver in the loose grasp of the sleeper, and it belonged not to a man, but to a woman.

The hand and bare arm partly revealed were such as were chiseled by Phidias or limned by Angelo. White, symmetrical and delicate, my admiration was unchained even in that terrible moment, and, following up the vision, I saw the face and the head without any covering except the wealth of black hair that clustered about the neck and shoulders.

The countenance of a beauty would have appeared sweet under the circumstances, but that which was dimly revealed to me in the partial reflection of the lamplight fairly held me breathless. But I should have been a fool to give way to any emotion of sentiment at such a time, and I intently watched the action of her whose appearance to me was as the coming of an angel.

The knees of Archie Hunter were so high with the feet resting on the rounds of the upturned chair that the hand of the young woman was hidden for the minute or two during which it was busy. Then it was withdrawn with the same noiseless stealth, and as it passed through the air toward the window I perceived that the pistol of the sleeping Archie was grasped by the fingers.

The fact that all this was permitted was proof that Cy Walters was sleeping heavily. The moment for my decisive attempt had come.

The free hand pushed upward against the sash, which did not stop until it could go no farther. At the moment of stoppage the frame gave out a slight creak. My heart stood still, and I glanced at Walters. He did not move. The white hand was lastly beckoned, and I started across the floor toward the window.

My eyes were fixed upon the dimly revealed figure, which slowly reached out her white hand and drew it toward her face as a gesture for me to advance. Fortunately I was able to walk on tip-

My eyes were fixed upon the dimly revealed figure, which slowly reached out her white hand and drew it toward her face as a gesture for me to advance. Fortunately I was able to walk on tip-

My awful fear was that Cy Walters would open his eyes and, instantly detecting what was going on, shoot me with lightninglike quickness before I could spring out into the darkness. Thrilled by this dread, I stopped at the very edge of the window and looked searchingly at him.

So far as I could judge, he was sunk in as profound a sleep as ever. My arm was but a glance, when I turned back and reached forward to rest my hand on the sill preparatory to leaping out. As I did so I saw that my unknown friend had vanished.

CHAPTER VIII.
The young woman left a souvenir, however, of her visit on the window sill in the form of the revolver of Archie Hunter. A single step, and I seized it with the feeling that in doing so I was grasping life itself.

Inspired by its possession, I faced toward Cy Walters, ready to shoot him, he made a movement of body or limb. The younger man was beneath notice. The massive sentinel still slept.

Resting my free hand against the side of the window frame, I thrust one foot through the opening and with a coolness and skill that surprised myself leaped clear, landing on the soft carpet outside, only a few feet below the window sill. So far as I knew I made no sound whatever other than the dull thump of my shoes as they struck the greenward, but a sound from the room behind me, which I had been heard, and I started off in the gloom, not pausing until I had run several rods and knew I was beyond sight of any one behind me.

The rear of the building opened upon a plot of ground used for a garden, but at the late season there was little growing to obstruct my progress, though my feet made some noise in sweeping away the vines that were tangled about my ankles. It was at the opposite side of this plot that I placed one hand on the paling fence, leaped over and then turned about and looked back.

It must have been considerably past midnight. The only light burning in the inn was within the room I had just left. There was the window, with the lower half open and the flood of yellow lamplight behind it, and within the glow loomed the gigantic figure of a man in a slouch hat, whose enormous shoulders almost filled the space as he leaned outward and peered around in the gloom, his hand searching for his human target.

"You're just too late, Cy," I muttered. "You ought to have awakened a minute sooner if you wished to see lively times."

But if Cy Walters had discovered the flight of his prisoner while his jailer slept he did not show it. He stood motionless, his eyes fixed on the effort to recapture him. I saw the huge form crouch together and clamber heavily but quickly through the window. Then, being still between me and the light, the head and shoulders were seen swaying grotesquely about as he strode through the garden, and, as if impelled by perverse fate, came in as direct a line for the spot where I stood as if the sun were shining. It was a good time for me to make a change of base, but I stood my ground.

Doubtless the army experience of Cy Walters helped him in outwitting his foes at night, but it was an extraordinary feat, which none but a mathematical true life until he came directly opposite me with only the paling fence separating us.

I had the advantage, inasmuch as the dim light beyond gave me a partial glimpse of his gigantic figure, but his eyes were keen, and he saw me before attempting to leap the obstruction between us. That keen vision, too, showed my revolver leveled at his head.

"Hands up!" I commanded in a voice whose earnestness could not be mistaken.

Cy Walters was unquestionably a brave man, and it is such who know when to fight and when to surrender. Up went both huge hands, one grasping the Winchester, so that it was interposed like a rude cross against the faint background.

"Drop that gun!"
Down it went with a thump to his feet.

"My man, as you see, I have the drop on you. It would serve you right if I stretched you beside your rifle, but I have never committed murder and don't intend to begin now. You take me for Hank Beyer. If I were he, there would be no sense in denying it when it would bring me no danger, but I repeat that I am another person. Everything that I causing Frequent Rising at Night, is Completely Cured by Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets.

Many people are troubled with an irritable condition of the Kidneys and Bladder, that compels frequent attention during the day and frequent rising at night.

For such an annoying and serious Kidney trouble, there is no remedy so beneficial as the modern Kidney medicine, Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets. They allay all irritability, regulate the kidney action and permit undisturbed rest at night.

Mr. Isaac Hotel, an old and highly respected resident of Mount Forest, Ont., has this to say: "For some ten years past, owing to hard work in my younger days on the farm, I have had a constant pain in my back that ran at times up into my shoulders. The kidneys bothered me very much and my liver somewhat also. I tried a good many remedies with only insignificant success, until I got a bottle of Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets at Yeoman's drug store in this town. The result of using these Tablets has been beyond my expectations. They stopped the pain and soreness in the back, and allayed the kidney irritation, so that I can now rest well at night. They have also regulated my bowels and stirred up my sluggish liver, so that I am feeling better than I have in a long time, and I am only too pleased to give this testimonial as to the good the remedy accomplished in my case."

Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets are 50 cents a box at all druggists. The Dr. Zina Pitcher Co., Toronto, Ont.

CHAPTER IX.
It will be remembered that the night was clear and starlit. There would be no moon until near morning, and it was so new that the additional light was not likely to be appreciable. There was scarcely a cloud in the sky, so that it was easy to distinguish objects at a distance of 15 or 20 yards.

The gentle wind was crisp and pleasant, and I breathed deep drafts of the long confinement in the stuffy room of the inn. The moon, with the reawakened joy, filled me with delicious joy. I was strong and brave.

Such was my mood when I was startled by the unmistakable sound of a footfall behind me. My first thought was that Archie Hunter had joined his parent in the search and was trying to steal upon me from the rear. I wheeled, revolver in hand, and faced the new danger.

I was looking over an undulating meadow which sloped away in the gloom beyond sight. Neither on the right nor left could its boundary be detected. It was at the rear of the inn, and therefore led away from the main road, which I dared not travel, since the indignant citizens, determined not to be balked of their prey, would scour the whole country for me, and it would be impossible to show them off my track.

Though I had heard the stealthy footfall, I could not see anything to explain it. So far as I was able to judge, no man was in sight and yet it was incredible that my ears should have deceived me.

Scanning my surroundings, I observed that the field upon whose margin I was standing was uncultivated, and a little to the left was what appeared to be a natural hummock. With no special object in mind, I walked toward it, when, to my astonishment, it rose to its feet with the question:

"Hello, dat yo', Mars Hank?"
It was a short, stocky negro who thus addressed me, and without stopping to explain his blunder as to my identity I demanded:

"Who are you?"
"Huh, don't yo' know Rastus Brown, Colonel Manley's nigger?"
The question seemed to strike the African as excessively funny, for he hunched his shoulders and chuckled.

"Who yo' s'pose sent me?"
"Hain't, eh? Yuh, yuh! Why, Miss Esther done sent me."

"Who sent?"
"Wid her compliments, and de special obsequy dat yo'll run like de debil."

TORONTO GRAIN MARKET.
Toronto, Aug. 13.—The wheat market was somewhat excited at 2c, to 3c higher to-day for Canadian wheat. Red and white were held at 8c, higher at 70c, middle freights. "Goose" was quoted at 65c, for No. 2 middle and No. 2 heavy. Spring wheat was firmer at 72c, for No. 1 east. Manitoba wheat was 3c to 4c higher at 87c for No. 1 hard grinding in transit, 86c for hard and 2c, less for local delivery, Toronto and west.

Flour—The market was firmer to-day at an advance of 5c, for Ontario 90 per cent patents, and some sold at $2.95 in barrel middle freights. Choice brands are held 15c to 20c higher.

such an act would invite my own ruin. My escape was known to Cy Walters and Archie Hunter, and they would be on the alert for anything of that nature. Standing just outside the garden of the old inn, I decided that my best course was to push inland until I reached some town or village where I was unknown or could communicate with the authorities should it prove necessary. It would seem that the facts being as I have given it should be an easy matter for me to escape the punishment due another man, but unfortunately Snatched up his rifle and let fly at me. Lynchings have been and are still common in some parts of our country for the most innocent person to be also lutely safe.

It did not take me long to reach this conclusion, and simultaneous with it came the alarming discovery that I was mistaken in believing I was alone.

FIRE DOES MUCH DAMAGE

Yesterday Afternoon's Big Blaze Devours Many Buildings.

John Milner the Heaviest Loser—Four Vicims—Good Work by Fire Department.

One of the largest fires that has visited Chatham for some time occurred yesterday afternoon about four o'clock. The alarm was sent in by telephone from Hatley's and very shortly afterwards the firemen were on the scene. The fire was located in the barn in the rear of Thomas Combs' grocery store, near the corner of Wellington and Harvey streets. The flames had gained considerable headway before the firemen arrived and had spread to two other barns, which were situated dangerously near the burning one. Milner's warehouse and his second-hand store were also victims of the spreading flames.

Five streams of hose were brought into use and the fire was confined to these buildings and, after the firemen had worked for about an hour, was extinguished.

The origin of the fire is a mystery. It is supposed, however, that some little children had been playing with matches and had thrown a lighted one near a barrel of oil which was left in the shed where the fire started.

Mr. Milner's loss is very heavy. He had a very large stock of second-hand goods on hand at the time and had no insurance whatever. The other buildings were owned by Wm. Richards, Mr. Wainwright and Thomas Combs. These latter were almost totally destroyed, but were partly covered by insurance.

It was thought at one time that the whole corner would be destroyed. The burning buildings were very dry and burned like matchwood. At different times the market sheds, the Rutley House, the English chandlery and Richards' bakery caught fire, but all was soon noticed by the alert firemen and speedily extinguished. The firemen deserve great credit for their splendid work yesterday.

CONFERENCE

Local Delegates Take Part in Baptist Bible Gathering.

The Summer Conference of the Egna Baptist Association was opened at Port Burwell on the 4th inst. Port Burwell has a naturally beautiful situation on Lake Erie, and affords good boating, bathing and fishing. It is well chosen for such a conference, as it affords not only a quiet place of meeting, but also rest and recreation for those attending. The meetings are held under a tent in a grove some distance back from the lake, and have been well attended by the people of the town and surrounding country.

On Sunday, Aug. 4th, Rev. J. J. Ross, of Chatham, opened the conference by a sermon on "The First Ray of Christ's Glory." On Monday afternoon a welcome and fellowship service was held, when Rev. S. E. Grigg, of Titonburg, gave an address on "Christian Fellowship." This was followed by short addresses from Revs. J. H. King, J. J. Ross, V. H. Cowart and W. H. Wallace, of Hamilton, Ohio. In the evening Rev. V. H. Cowart, of Bradford, gave an address on "The Christian's Life." On Tuesday, Aug. 6th, Rev. W. H. Wallace, of Hamilton, gave an address on "The Christian's Life." On Wednesday, Aug. 7th, Rev. J. J. Ross gave an address on "The Christian's Life." On Thursday, Aug. 8th, Rev. J. J. Ross gave an address on "The Christian's Life." On Friday, Aug. 9th, Rev. J. J.
