POETRY.

The Love of God.

Like a cradle, rocking, rocking, Silent, peaceful, to and fro Like a mother's sweet looks drooping
On the little face below,
Hangs the green earth, swinging, turning,
Jars, noises, safe and slow;
Falls the light of God's face bending
Down and watching us below.

And as feeble babes that suffer, Tom, and cry, and will not rest,
Are the ones the tender mother Holds the closest, loves the best, So when we are weak and wretched, By our sins weighed down, distressed, Then it is that God's great patience Holds us closest, loves us best.

O great heart of God! whose loving Cannot hindered be, nor crossed, Will not weary, will not even In our death itself be lost; Love divine! of such great loving Only mothers know the cost—Cost of love, which all love passing, Gave a Son to save the lost.

SELECT STORY.

SQUIRREL.

In a flood of yellow sunshine stood Abbot's Grange early on May afternoon, looking the very picture of smiling ease and comfort; spring flower beds dotted about its sloping lawns, budding woods thick with bright blue hyacinths sheltering it carefully from northeast winds, and a soft sweep of corn cropped, hawthorn hedged valley nestling, as it were, under the protecting shadow of its gray gables and many windowed front.

But its seeming quietude was only —to put it quite correctly—brick deep-within the quaint old rooms of the dwelling a very peculiar turmoil was going on; a terrible upsetting of things as they had been; amazed submission to things as they now appeared to be; dismay and blank dread of what might yet be coming.

For in the last week of April, before April, Miss Pleasance Westbrook, spinster mistress of Abbot's Grange, had suddenly resigned control of all her worldly possessions. A nipping night frost, and a firm refusal to have a fire in her bedroom because the right date for such luxuries was past by five days, had proved too much for the lady of four score. A swift attack of bronchitis afforded her a rapid and almost painless exit from mortal scenes, but the unexpected summons created strange disturbance among survivors that began almost as soon as the last "Amen" was said over her grave. Then, as one of the carriages turned out of the churchyard gate, said Mr Westbrook, of High Courts, Gloucestershire, the rich merchant nephew of the departed lady, to her solicitor, John Foster:

"I suppose these young connections of mine come in for pretty near everything of the old lady's, don't they?
Do you happen to know it she's paid me the compliment of a diamond ring or a silver soup ladle? Of course you've got her will?"

"Really," was the answer, "I can give you no information at present.
My father had entire management of the Abbot's Grange business, and he died some six months ago."

"But you stepped into his shoes, didn't you?"

"Only partly. Miss Westbrook looked on me as comparatively juvenile, I fancy, though I have been in the firm the last five years. She never honored me with any confidential communications, and even took all private papers from our office, the will most likely among them."

"Ah, then that elder girl yonder will know it whereabouts. She's rather a good looking young party. Ought to marry well if she's got a third of the old maid's hoard. Got any engagement made, do you know?"

"No, Mr Foster did not know. Perhaps the question struck him as unseasonable, coming the minute after the service where half the village had been crying over the loss of her kind, if eccentric old friend. Anyhow, the young lawyer gazed steadily out of the carriage window as they wound slowly up the hill, and turned the conversation to the beauty of some noble oak that skirted the road right and left.

"Ah! I had good timber that," commented Mr Westbrook critically. "I'd have it down if it was mine and turn it into capital that fetched 20 per cent.
Can't see the good of trees standing sucking up the land any more than lazy horses eating their heads off in the stable. My father, you know—brother of the old lady yonder," with a nod towards the church, "only got as much as his sister when his father dropped.

On the little face below,
Hangs the green earth, swinging, turning,
Jars, noises, safe and slow;
Falls the light of God's face bending
Down and watching us below.

Every likely place was ransacked within the next hour. Every errand questioned. The coachman remembered driving his mistress from the late Mr Foster's office, some time last autumn, to Baraby's bank, and they took a tin box in the carriage with them. Off to Baraby's bank went the coachman now again, returning with the said depositary, which the late Mr Foster's son searched through with the deepest anxiety. Bonds there were of railways, and canals, and gas companies, a mortgage, stock of half a dozen kinds but alas! no will. Mr Westbrook telegraphed to his home that he should not be back until further notice.

"It is desirable that I remain to see this through," he said, and ordered the butler to have a room prepared for him for an indefinite stay. The butler carried the command to the housekeeper in high affront.

"He speaks to me as if I was a boy in buttons," said he. "You and me ain't used to such masterful ways, Mrs Wicks."

But as one day after another, and then a whole week, went by, and still no will was forthcoming, Mr Westbrook felt a growing right to indulge in as much masterfulness as he pleased, which was a good deal.

"The probability is," he said loftily to John Foster, who was there every day, conducting a rigorous search through every room, "my deceased aunt came to her senses at last. We had a few words about these young Ferrers last time I saw her. I told her plump and plain they'd no right to a penny from her. She was a spirited old party, though, and said she would do what she chose with her own, for I and my children had enough without being her heirs. After that there was a coolness between us, but she'd plenty of sense, and no doubts she saw I was in the right, and so died intestate purposely that I should step in and take my due.
Till anything else is proved, Mr Foster, I shall act on that supposition."

Mortified that he could not gain this arrogant gentleman, yet deeply excited on purely personal grounds, John Foster could only acquiesce in this unlucky inference. Miss Westbrook must have died without a will.

"I'm driven to that conclusion unwillingly enough," he said to pale Olive Ferrers one morning, when after hours of turning over half a century's collection of old letters and worthless savings, they stood together in the littered drawing room, each feeling blankly that no more was to be done; "most gratiously unjust as she has been to you"—but Olive stopped him.

"You are not to say that even to me, please, Mr Foster; we owe too much to Aunt Pleasance. Now, as we have no one else in the world, we must try and make our own way."

"But, good heavens! how!" exclaimed the young man almost imperturbably.

"My dear Miss Ferrers, you can't calculate the difficulties that lie before you. Surely Mr Westbrook"—but there John Foster had to end abruptly.
What would be the use of his holding out hopes about a division of property, if of any liberality whatever on Mr Westbrook's part, when he very well knew he had not a generous spark in him, from the crown of his head to the sole of his foot!

Truly, when ownership had first appeared possible, the gentleman had vaguely dropped hints about allowing the young people a few thousands, but as time went on and no will was urderstood, another casual mention of this carob had diminished it to a few hundreds. What ultimate point of contraction it might reach the young man feared to think. So he checked himself with a violent effort, and could only wind up with a rather incoherent remark about arrangements being made for Miss Ferrers' comfort, and if there was anything he could do—afraid Mr Westbrook does not much like"—

Here Olive's half uttered opinion was unexpectedly emphasized from without. Through the door, standing ajar, came Mr Westbrook's voice, ringing with anger:

"Cyril! What are you up to there?
Kick that beast down stairs this moment."

"Toots is doing no harm, sir," answered the boy's clear voice. "Aunt Pleasance always let us play hide and seek on the gallery."

"Your Aunt Pleasance, as you call her, could do as she liked. Now I order what I choose. The clumsy brute will sunn these cases of birds.
Send him down this moment. Do you hear, you young rascal?"

Cyril's temper, frank and pliant enough under decent civility, had been brushed in every possible wrong direction by Mr Westbrook during these last few days. Now it suddenly bristled up like a hedge hog's prickles.

"I'm no more a rascal than you are, sir! I love Aunt Toots and I could wait here till she'd done those old papers, so I shall not come down till she calls me."

Here Olive turned into the hall.
Mr Westbrook, purple with rage, was storming up at Cyril, who, with flaming cheeks and bright eyes, stood defiantly at the top of the broad old stairs; Toots, a knowledgeable little fox terrier, sniffing excitedly between the balu-strades, as if only waiting the word of command to make for their mutual enemy's calves.

"I'll put a brick round that old neck and have him dropped in the nearest pond," cried the irate gentleman; "or, if you prefer, she's perfectly awful, or ought to be, that she's no more right to give orders in this house than the scullery maid." (John Foster here made a quick step forward.
Olive silenced his indignation with an outreaching glance.) "I am master here. Now come down, or I won't horsewhip you."

"You'll have to catch me first, sir," said Cyril coolly; "but I'll do as Olive tells me, of course."

"You shall be looked up till you eat humble pie," cried Mr Westbrook, advancing furiously on Cyril, but rapidly retreating as Toots rushed to the fore with a vicious snap. "Miss Ferrers, I presume you have some control over your brother? I require him to stay alone in the library yonder till he comes to his senses and apologizes to me. Will you desire him to go into that room, or must he be taken there by force?"

"My brother never disputes a wish of mine, Mr Westbrook," said Olive painfully excited, yet wonderfully self-controlled. "Squirrel, dear, not because I consider you require punishment; but for peace sake, please go in the library. When I have spoken to Mr Westbrook presently I will come for you."

She stooped and laid her cheek on the lad's early head a moment. Then off he stalked with a lump in his throat to the little room at the left of the hall. Mr Westbrook triumphantly turned the key upon him with "Stop there, sir, till I let you out."

John Foster walked forth among the filices and syringes to keep himself from making unprofessional remarks, and Olive went upstairs to treat her for-doomed to a good cry before recounting this fresh misadventure to her young sister Helen.

When John L. Sullivan was whipped by Corbett's fall, he exclaimed mournfully: "I tried it once too often. I was too old." Sullivan was 34. All prize ring experts agreed with him, that he was past the age when man is at his best physically. In brief, man is getting old at 34, according to prize ring judgment.

Mr Jay Gould died in the 57th year of his age. Nobody called him old. It is noted, however, that nobody spoke of him as being called from life too soon —before his best work was done. Perhaps nobody thought so except his own children and immediate family, who were tenderly attached to him. His greatest work had been accomplished.
A little more than a month after Mr Gould there died in Boston a man who was 67 years old in December, the month the millionaire took leave of this life. It was Bishop Phillips Brooks, considered, by many the greatest preacher of his time after Beecher.

Bishop Brooks was 5 months older than Jay Gould. Yet at his death, chief, after expression of loss at the departure of so great and good a man, was the lament that he had been matched away in the prime of his life with his grand powers in full possession. It was counted an irreparable loss, the untouches years before him, which he would have filled full of work for mankind. He preached the gospel of brotherly love, the theology of the brotherhood of man, and it was counted that he died young, all too young.

So here we have the three—the prize fighter who is an aged man at 34, the millionaire who had finished his life work at 56, and the preacher whose men loved young at 67. "Who know the names of the millionaires of even a century ago?" asks somebody. "Aunt Pleasance would average a man rather be, the millionaire, or the preacher?"

Plain Spoken Persons.

There is a class of people who pride themselves on their honesty and frankness, but cause, as they tell us, they "say just what they think," throwing out their opinions right and left, just as they happen to feel, no matter where they may strike or whom they may wound. This barefaced frankness, however, is not honesty, but is rather misérable impertinence and reckless cruelty. We have no right to say what we think, unless we think kindly and lovingly; no right to unload our jeal-ousies, envies, bad humors and miserable spites upon the hearts of our neighbors, if we must be bad tempered, we should at least keep our ugliness locked up in our own breast, and not let it out to wound the feelings and mar the happiness of others. If we must speak out our dislikes and prejudices and wretched feelings, let us go into our own room and lock the door and close the window, so that no human ear but our own shall hear the hateful words.
If any one seems to be religious, or even morally decent and brilliant, not his tongue, that man's religion is vain, and his character is unprincipled and base.

The Tireless Stormy Petrel.

During a recent trip across the Atlantic, the passengers on one steamer had a vivid illustration of the endurance of the Stormy Petrel. Shortly after the ship left the Irish coast two or three of these birds were sighted at the stern of the ship. One had been caught at some previous time and its cap had a bit of red flannel or ribbon around its neck and let it go. The bit of red made the bird very conspicuous, and it could be easily identified. That bird with others that could not be so easily distinguished, followed the ship clear across the ocean.
Rarely, during the daytime at least, was it out of sight, and if for an hour or two it was lost to view while feeding on the refuse cast aboard, it soon reappeared, and the last seen of it was a few miles off Sandy Hook, when it disappeared perhaps to follow some outward bound steamer back to Ireland.
When the fact is considered that the ship day and night went at an average speed of twenty miles an hour, the feat performed by the daring ocean traveller can be better appreciated. When or how it rested is inexplicable.

For Bronchitis.

"I never realized the good of a medicine so much as I have in the last few months, during which time I have suffered intensely from pneumonia, followed by bronchitis.
After trying various remedies without benefit, I began the use of Ayer's Cherry Peppermint Cure, and the effect has been marvellous. A single dose relieved me of choking, and securing a good night's rest.—W. H.
Higginbotham, Gen. Store, Long Mountain, Va."

Lung Trouble.

"For more than twenty-five years, I was a sufferer from lung trouble, attended with coughing so severe at times as to cause hemorrhage, the physicians frequently leech-ing three or four times a week. I was induced to try Ayer's Cherry Peppermint Cure, and after taking four bottles, my cough was entirely cured, and my health improved.
I am confidently recommending this medicine."

THE ACADIAN

WOLFVILLE, N. S., MAR. 10, 1893.

Experimental Fruit Station.

Probably there is no branch of husbandry at the present time which so largely interests the agriculturists of the counties of Hants, King's and Annapolis as that of the propagation and cultivation of fruit.

A number of real gems are contained in the latest issue of The Acadian Magazine.

School for the Blind.

The annual report of the Institution for the education of the blind of the Maritime Provinces has been issued, and shows the school to be in a flourishing condition.

The Colt Stakes.

Horsemen throughout the Maritime Provinces will be interested in the announcement that entries for the Maritime colt stakes must be made on or before March 15.

Literary Notes.

"BARNISIA."

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to the second volume, just published, of "Barnisia," a collection of literary odds and ends relating to the poet Burns.

THE LAKES MAGAZINE.

The Lakes Magazine for March is another step forward and upward in the happily rejuvenated title, and presents an array of interesting features.

A Cause of Rural Deceadence.

The following extract from an article by John C. Rose in the Popular Science Monthly for March, on "The Decrease of Rural Population," will interest those who are studying the question in Nova Scotia:

Another cause of decrease in the aggregate population of rural communities, and one perhaps as potent as either of those already mentioned, is the ever increasing competition of factory-made goods with the products of the handicrafts.

The social and intellectual attractions of city life, especially for the brighter and more active-minded of the country youth, are unquestionably powerful factors in building up the cities at the expense of the country districts.

Dock Blood Purifier.

Victory after victory is the record of Dock Blood Purifier, which never fails to do good. Read what Mrs. Outhouse says about it!

From MRS HENRY OUTHOUSE, TIVERTON, N. S.

About three years ago I was sick with consumption, which was brought on by a heavy cold. I employed a doctor who advised me to use medicines. I did so but they did me no good. I was growing weaker fast—my cough was very bad with night sweats; in fact my parents had given me up as I belonged to a consumptive family.

Two of my sisters and one brother have already died of that dread disease. As my appetite was very poor, a friend advised me to use Dr. Norton's Dock Blood Purifier. I got six bottles, the use of which soon gave me a craving for food. Soon my cough was better and I began to gain in strength. I used twelve bottles of the medicine and by that time had gained forty-four pounds in flesh with good health. I have had no symptoms of any lung trouble since and believe that Dr. Norton's Dock Blood Purifier saved my life.

To MAKE A PERFECT CUP OF TEA—Boiling water is the secret of good tea making.

Put fresh water in the kettle every time you start to make tea.

Don't use water that has been some time in the kettle.

Of all teapots, the little Brown Earthenware one is the very best for the purpose.

Use about a teaspoon to each person. Allow the infusion to stand only from five to seven minutes before pouring out first cups.

Very long infusion spoils good tea, bringing out the tannin which imparts a bitter flavor.

Next meeting in Temperance Hall, Thursday, March 16, at 3.30 p. m.

Gospel Temperance meetings, conducted by members of the W. C. T. U., are held every Sunday afternoon at 4.15 o'clock.

Since the formation of the Women's Christian Temperance Union in this place, one year has passed swiftly by, and is now beyond recall.

Another year lies before us now, all untold as yet; but we need not falter or turn back because we cannot see the future; God sees, and in wisdom and love He will reveal the path to us.

It is given to every physician, the formula of Scott's Emulsion being no secret; but no successful imitation has ever been offered to the public.

It is desirable to know that for Canadian Union in general feel encouraged by the results of the year's work.

The year 1892 has been a wonderful year of progress for the Canadian W. C. T. U.

The passing of the bill for Scientific Temperance Instruction in two legislatures in the Maritime Provinces, and the appearance of a woman before the bar of the House to plead for this most important measure.

The department of Scientific Temperance Instruction in National W. C. T. U. under the able supervision of Mrs Mary H. Hunt, of Massachusetts, is continuing its important work.

The receipts of the W. C. T. U. of the House at Bozeman, Montana, were four thousand dollars during the year 1892.

After ten years of prohibition in Kansas the number of convictions in the State prison has fallen fifty percent.

The next World's W. C. T. U. Convention will be held in Chicago, immediately following the National W. C. T. U. Convention in October.

A member of the W. C. T. U., Mr Lambert, in moving the address in the British House of Commons, referred to the "startling fact that £140,000,000 was expended annually by the people of this country upon intoxicating liquors.

Whatever momentary advantage politicians may gain by sneering at the temperance reform, the hour is not far distant when any politician leader who does that will sign his own political death warrant.

The temperance workers of England have at last made an impression in the political sphere, it is proved by the fact that in the Queen's speech local option is promised!

The Supreme Court of Nebraska has decided that if any person commits a violent death at the hands of a man who is intoxicated, under the civil damage act the dependents of the deceased person can recover damages from those who sold the liquor which intoxicated the one who committed the violence.

A CALGARY MIRACLE.

The Most Wonderful Case Ever Recorded in the Northwest.

Miss Lela Cullen is Rescued from What Her Physicians and Friends Thought to be Her Death Bed.

Winnipeg Tribune. Calgary, N. W. T. Oct. 20, 1892.—For some time past the residents of this town have been deeply interested in the case of Miss Lela Cullen, a young lady, who had so nearly approached the portals of the great unknown, that her friends despaired of her recovery, and who has now fully, indeed almost miraculously, regained her health and strength.

Having read on various occasions in The Tribune the particulars of what appeared to be miraculous cures, your correspondent determined to investigate the case of Miss Cullen, and now sends you the particulars fully believing that you will be justified in giving them the widest publication.

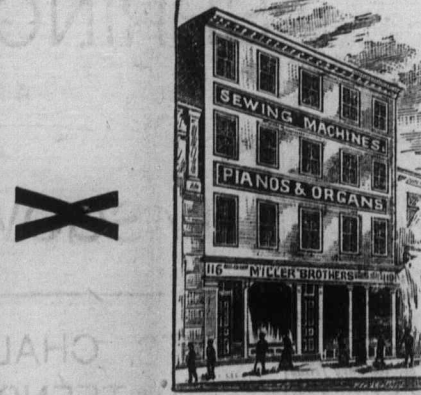

When your correspondent visited the residence of Mrs Cullen, the mother of the young lady, he was courteously received, and in reply to his enquiries as to whether she would be willing to give the facts of her daughter's wonderful recovery, for publication for the benefit of other sufferers, Mrs Cullen readily assented.

"My daughter's first illness," said Mrs Cullen, "was in June 1890, when she was taken with the measles. At that time she was seventeen years of age, tall, fine looking and exceedingly healthy, weighing about 140 pounds. All the family took the measles, and all got over them without trouble, except Lela.

Here comes from the first baffled all the ordinary remedies used for that disease, and as the measles did not come out, a physician was called in. He administered remedies, but with no better results, and her case seemed to baffie the physician's skill. After a few weeks my daughter began to improve somewhat, but did not regain her former strength, and six weeks after she was first taken ill, her face, neck, and limbs broke out in blotches. The doctor was again called in, and said it was the measles getting out of her system, and that she would soon be all right again. The doctor's statement was not verified, however, for not only did my daughter not improve, but she gradually grew worse. Soon after she began to swell, first the feet, then the limbs, breast and face became puffed up. Another doctor was called in and he pronounced it dropsy, resulting from the measles. The doctor attended her all winter, and although he seemed to do all in his power for her, she gradually became weaker and weaker, she did not eat, and tones failed to improve her appetite, and as she gradually grew weaker she lost her courage, felt hope of life was fast slipping away. In the spring the doctor's medicine having done her no good was discontinued, and instead he gave her preparations of beef, iron and wine, hypophosphites, sarsaparilla, etc. In fact stimulants of the kind had to be constantly forced upon her to keep her alive and I grew up all hope of her recovery, and in my mind waited for her death. She was now so weak that she could not walk across the floor, and in order to rest her we would lift her into a chair where she would sit for a short while when we would again place her in bed. She was slowly but surely dying before our eyes, and nothing we could do for her was of avail. She was still puffed up, and nothing the doctors could do would reduce the swelling. Her limbs would no longer support her and she could only sit up a very short time each day. In this condition she lingered on until August, 1891, some fifteen months after she was first taken ill, and while we were sorrowfully awaiting what seemed the inevitable end, a ray of hope came. I read in a newspaper of a remarkable cure from the use of Dr Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and while I feared I had heard of it, I was nevertheless glad to see it. I hoped almost against hope and sent to the headquarters of the company at Brockville, Ont., for a supply. At this time her hair had become so matted that she was not able to be removed from her bed; her weight was reduced to 90 pounds, and her lips were blue. You will thus see how little hope there appeared for her when she began the use of Dr Williams' Pink Pills. After she had taken the first box, although there was no visible improvement, she thought they were doing her good, and her spirits began to rise. At the end of the second box I could notice the improvement and Lela was very hopeful and felt life was returning to her again. After she had taken taking Dr Williams' Pink Pills for a month, she was able to get up, and by October she was so well that she could superintend work about the house. She still continued taking the Pills, and rapidly recovered all old time health, strength and spirits. I cannot tell you," continued Mrs Cullen, "how deeply grateful I am for the wonderful medicine that saved my daughter's life. You may be sure that both I and mine will always warmly recommend it, as we have every reason to do."

Your correspondent then called upon Mr J. G. Templeton, the well-known druggist on Stephen avenue. In reply to an enquiry as to what he could tell me about Dr Williams' Pink Pills, Mr Templeton replied: "What can I tell you about Pink Pills? Well I can tell you they are the most wonderful medicine I ever handled, I had experience with them in Ontario before coming out here, and in all my experience as a druggist, I never knew any medicine have
