Canada Legislating Against Unlawful Organizations --- Unrest Again Spreading in Germany --- Bulgars Have Remobilized Army.

URGES SIGNING OF TREATY. COPENHAGEN, June 6. Mathias Erzberger, head of the German armistice commission, according to the Deutsche Tages Zeitung of Berlin, is preparing a memorandum which after discussing the peace terms in all its aspects, advocates signing the treaty.

CALL FOR RUSSIAN REGENERATION. OMSK, June 6. The social revolutionists, the social democrats, and labor unions in Perm have united in a block and published a declaration calling upon all democratic and socialist organizations to participate in the regeneration of Russia and in the building up of any army capable of fighting against the enemies of the Russian state. The declarations announce that the organs of local self-government, municipalities, and Zemstvos, as well as all other public bodies will support the Omsk Government against all anarchistic elements.

PART OF BULGARIAN ARMY MOBILIZED. COPENHAGEN, June 6. A part of the Bulgarian Army has been mobilized and is marching toward the Serbian frontier, the Balkan News Agency reports.

CANADA GETTING AFTER AGITATORS. OTTAWA, June 6. Some sweeping amendments in the criminal code are recommended by the special committee of the House of Commons on seditious propaganda. The committee recommends the insertion of new sections in the code. Associations proposing to bring about any governmental, industrial or economic change within Canada by use of force are, it is recommended, to be declared unlawful. Any property belonging to such an unlawful association may be seized and forfeited to the Crown.

WHO STOLE THEM? PARIS, June 6. The members of the American Peace Delegation, disturbed by the report that copies of the German Peace terms have reached New York, are undertaking to check up all the copies issued in order to ascertain if any are missing.

AGREES WITH FOURTEEN POINTS. PARIS, June 6. "I am convinced that our Treaty project violates none of my principles," President Wilson is quoted by the Matin as having said when he was made acquainted with the German counter proposals to the Peace Treaty. "If I held a contrary opinion I would not hesitate to confess it and would endeavor to correct the error. The Treaty as drawn up, however, entirely conforms with my fourteen points."

BOLSHEVIK AGITATOR EXECUTED. MUNICH, June 6. Levine Nissen, the Bolshevik agitator, who was one of the leaders of the Munich Communist Soviet regime, was executed at noon to-day at Stadelheim, outside the capital. He was convicted yesterday and the Bavarian cabinet refused to commute his sentence, maintaining that he was the cause of the civil war in Bavaria, and deserved no mercy.

OFFERING SYMPATHY. LONDON, June 6. The execution in Munich of Levine Nissen is resulting in unrest throughout Germany, an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Copenhagen says. The Majority Socialists are joining a strike movement begun by the Soldiers' and Workers' Council and executive committees of the great Berlin factories who protested against the sentence of the Bavarian communist. Strikes have occurred in Nuremberg and Munich. A strike at Leipzig has resulted in street fighting. The German Government, it is added, is making military preparations in Berlin and elsewhere.

The Irish Question Sowing and Reaping.

(Christian Science Monitor.)

The Irish question seems to be approaching what Lord Rosebery might perhaps term its last phase. The shooting of the police at Knocklong station may seem to indicate the exact contrary, but it must be remembered that Knocklong is in Ireland, and not in England or the United States. How, precisely, a settlement will be reached, only a schoolmaster, him peradventure of Auburn, would dare to predict, and then only in his most ex-cathedra mood. But if a less enlightened being were to hazard an opinion, it would probably be that Sir Horace Plunkett's suggestion of Dominion Home Rule might afford at least a jumping off ground. The difficulty, of course, is that Ireland is no more Canada than Dublin is Melbourne. There is a vast difference, that is to say, between the Irish Channel and the Atlantic. An invasion of Australia or Canada, by a power at war with the United Kingdom, for the purpose of getting a strangle hold on the Commonwealth, is not worthy of serious consideration, whereas an occupation of Ireland, on the lines attempted by Roger Casement, was proved to be a political and strategic possibility during the Great War.

Now the Sinn Fein Party demands an Irish Republic, whilst the Unionists insist on the status quo. The two ideals appear hopelessly irreconcilable, and so they would be if they were irreconcilably adhered to. It is just here, therefore, that Sir Horace's via media may be taken: not necessarily with a view to continuing along it to its ultimate conclusion, but with a view to finding another road along which the Unionist and the Sinn Fein may agree to travel together. This idea is not so near midsummer night's madness as may at first appear. It is quite true that action has never been waged more fiercely than in Ireland; that the Irish have never proved capable of sustained unity; and that the informer has flourished where the snake has never posed Home Rule in any form, and made it plain that its opposition would have to be broken down by force, and it is just that force which the predominant partner has declined to apply. To attempt to confound Sir Edward Carson with Ulster is the most foolish of nonsense. Sir Edward is merely the latest Unionist leader, as Mr. de Valera is the latest leader of Nationalism. If there had been no Craigs or Sandersons, Sir Edward might never have been, just as Mr. de Valera is the lineal descendant of the O'Connell and Parnells. As a matter of fact, however, all these men were effects, not causes: the effects of systems summed up on the one side by the Irish plantations, and on the other by the sense of national injury. The one produced "the Castle," the other the secret society; the one found expression in "the Orangemen," the other in "the White-boys."

Now it is no good at this time of day to visit the sins of the fathers upon the children: to make Sir Edward Carson responsible for Strongbow, Cromwell, or Dutch William, any more than to invest Mr. de Valera with the halo of Michael, and to set out to whitewash the rapparee, the ribbonman, or the land-leaguer. The same critic knows well enough that in the past, outrage has been piled upon outrage by the British administration in Ireland, and that outrage has been answered with outrage by the promptings of the emotions. Then he may learn why the Romans built Watling Street, and quartered the XX Legion at Deva, which is to-day Chester. Really what is imperceptibly bridging the Irish Channel, in spite of all appearances to the contrary, and insensibly blending the Orange and the Green into the national blue, is Principle. The wise men are growing daily more weary of the warring factions, and the wise men are growing silently, but in numbers, every day. To them it is futile for one side or the other to assume virtues which they do not possess, or a freedom from mistakes which they have not achieved. The wise man knows that every one reaps as he sows.

Cumulative. (From the Cleveland Plain Dealer.) A story is told about a citizen whose daughter is about to be married, and who has been trying to get a line on what the expense of the rather elaborate ceremony will be. He approached a friend of his, seeking information.

"Morris," he said, "your oldest daughter was married about five years ago, wasn't she? Would you mind telling me about how much the wedding cost you?"

"Not at all, Sam," was the answer. "Altogether, about five thousand dollars a year."

BUSINESS 100 YEARS AGO.

(H. F. SHORTIS.)
ARTICLE XVII.

In the last article (XVI.) Mr Kelton mentioned the arrival of the Actre, and that all forward she appeared like an island of ice, and on getting into the harbor her anchors, etc., were frozen to her bows, so that it was impossible to let them go. The blocks and rigging were in the same state, and nothing could prevent her from going ashore in the harbor but a warp which was quickly got out from the John and Elizabeth, and which held her until by the assistance of a number of hands from the Room the ice was cleared and the anchors and cables cast loose. Well the good ship Active was more fortunate upon that occasion than she was some time later, on a voyage from Poole to Catalina. Upon this occasion she had a fairly good run out and arrived at the Pigeon Rock to her destination, Catalina, when a terrible gale arose and she was driven off, and had to run for it, and the next place she found was back to Poole. Upon another occasion one of Brookings' vessels (Capt. Downing) on a passage from Poole to Greenspond, which took 10 days to accomplish, made the Puffin Island, a few miles from her destination when a gale sprung up and she was driven off, brought up in Poole and did not arrive in Newfoundland till the Spring. In the sixties the splendid barque Fleetwing, Capt. Richard Kearney, was almost to the Bar at Harbour Grace, when a sudden gale sprung up and she was driven off, and did not get back until nine days afterwards. I could mention numerous such circumstances that have occurred during my own time, but our hardy mariners took them as all in a day's work, and forgot all about the dangers, hardships and escapes the moment they got ashore. But the longest passage on record in our mercantile marine was that of the brig Brox, Silvia, Cap. Isaacs, which was 200 days from Falmouth to St. John's, arriving here on April 25th, 1832. Of course there have been many other long passages, for instance, Capt. John Fitzgerald, of St. John's, in the brig, Victoria, owned by McBride, St. John's, was 115 days from Queenstown to this port. The Glengarry (brig), Capt. Nicholas Hanrahan, in the sixties was 110 days from Cagliari, Sicily, with 11,000 lbs. of the very few vessels to make the passage upon that eventful year. On his arrival he went to the merchant's office and after being welcomed home and congratulated upon his success, the merchant asked if he required anything? "Yes," answered Captain Hanrahan, "I want twenty dollars." "Twenty dollars, Captain," said the merchant, "what do you want that small amount for, you had better take more." "No," said he, "I want twenty dollars to get a new pair of hands for Bill Sandies, for, by Jupiter, no business man could stand what he stood in December." It is needless to say that the famous old mariner's request was acceded to, and as much more as he required. This was the same Capt. Hanrahan, who in 1872 brought in the largest trip of seals ever landed from a sailing vessel, a few short of 11,000, and this occurred also in the same vessel the Glengarry. The next Spring Capt. James L. Keefe, master of the Glengarry, and he arrived with a few short of 10,000.

Libelling Newfoundland.

There was never a country so misrepresented to the outside world as Newfoundland. From time immemorial this state of affairs has been kept up. At the very time Mr. Kelton has written about, a parliamentary committee was appointed, and a certain number of members were given evidence as to the possibility of cultivation of our soil, and during his examination he stated: "The island is composed of rock of granite and slate, with a very small surface of soil; in many places none at all, and in very few above two or three inches. There is no soil sufficient for cultivation are the bogs; but these cannot be drained. There is no limestone in the island, and no source of manure except a little seaweed or the refuse of the fish. I beg, therefore, to suggest how much more eligible it would be for the Government to let the inhabitants (at this time 70,000 in number) to New Brunswick or Upper Canada. Sir John Harvey, the Governor, was not of that opinion, because His Excellency stated that, "Here I will not deny myself the satisfaction of recording this public declaration of my conviction, derived from such observation and information as a residence in the island of upwards of a year has enabled me to acquire; that both as respects climate and agricultural capabilities Newfoundland, in many respects, need not shrink from a comparison with the most favoured provinces of British America. Its summers, though short, enjoy an extraordinary degree of vegetative power, which only requires to be duly taken advantage of; its winters are neither unusually long nor severe, and its autumnal seasons are as open and as fine as those of any of the rich natural grasses no part of British North America produces a greater abundance. Newfoundland, in fact, appears to me to be calculated to become essentially a rich grazing country; and its varied agricultural resources appear only to require roads and settlements to force them into highly remunerative development."

Will Return to the Attack.

Time and again we hear of the severity of our climate, of ice being on the coast and fog on the Banks. As if Almighty God did not regulate our climate for his own purpose. If we had no ice, we would have no seal-fishery, and if the climate was different from what it is we would not be the greatest fishing country in the world. Let us hope that those who have in the years past done so much to misrepresent Newfoundland, her resources, her people and her climate are now more comfortably situated in a region with a temperature more in conformity with their earthly ideals, where ice never shapes themselves and snowstorms are unknown. But I must get on with Mr. Kelson's letters, and must owing to unforeseen circumstances go back to 1811. I shall have more to say about the defamers of our country in future issues.

Three Years Earlier.

Trinity, April 16, 1811.

Mr. Robert Slade,
Sir—I have been for some time past anxiously looking for an opportunity of writing you via St. John's, but could not get one until this date, which is so much later than my first letter last year, however I embrace it now with pleasure, as I have not to inform you of any disagreeable incident having befallen me during the winter. The weather for the most part was severe and tempestuous with a large quantity of snow and but little done in the seal-harvest. The severest frost we had was in March and on the 20th the Cosmopoleite being ready, we began to save her out of the ice, which was 2 feet thick, for a distance of nearly half a mile, but the winds did not answer until 27th when she sailed (with a good crew, 12 in number) in company with two of Mr. Garland's schooners and Slat and Read's two, being the first craft out of this place. The weather still continued severe and immediately after they sailed the harbor was frozen over again, so as to be passable on foot. Four hands—part of our wood crew—returned the 30th March upon the ice and by land, by whom I find James Dwyer has nearly completed with stuff for the room, firewood, etc.) what I directed him to cut for a new schooner, and I hope the Alpha and Falcon will soon be here to help us to get it down. On the 1st of April the Iris came appeared in the bay and I sent out a crew in our own skiff (built this winter) to see if any seals were on it, and they returned with 1 seal. Next day I sent her again and she returned with 12 young ones, not being so fortunate as Wm. Sweeny (Planter) skiff, which brought in 100. On the 3rd, as there seemed to be a favourable prospect, I sent out 2 skiffs and a punt with all the hands I could muster and they killed 160 young seals, but the skiffs got jammed up in English Harbor and could not return. The hands belonging to them went next day from thence by land to Green Bay to go off upon the ice and hauled 52 upon the rocks, from which time until the 7th they had no success, but the ice slackening a little they returned here. On the 6th I was off on the ice myself with the punts' crew and every man belonging to the Room (excepting only the boys who were sent to the crew at Green Bay) we hauled in but 14, the weather coming on foggy 2 of our hands missed their way and with much difficulty by firing signal guns, etc., we got them safe on shore in the course of the night. Mr. Garland lost one man the same day who was drowned by breaking through the bay. On the next day the wind being easterly, and part of the Bay and harbor being jammed up, the skiffs could not get out. Mr. Garland's people, Slat & Read's as well as ours and the Planters, went to Green Island Cove, but all returned (without venturing off on the ice thinking it too great a risk) except ours, who persevered and hauled 105 young seals up on the rocks off Mr. Adams' and the Devil's Rocks, which were the only seals taken by Trinity people this day. The next day being the 9th (every year hearing of our success the day before) the wind being from Trinity, being high being driven off, however no lives were lost and all our hands, except one, returned without any accident, which one in endeavouring to get on shore, got down between the punts of ice in the surf which was increasing very fast in the landwash and being sinking and being sinking and all but drowned, he was rescued by the crew of his own life, who stuck a gaff through his arm and hauled him up. He is still unable to walk and will be so I fear for some time.

Sea Washed Away Seals.

From the time the ice was clear from Trinity, being high being driven off, however no lives were lost and all our hands, except one, returned without any accident, which one in endeavouring to get on shore, got down between the punts of ice in the surf which was increasing very fast in the landwash and being sinking and being sinking and all but drowned, he was rescued by the crew of his own life, who stuck a gaff through his arm and hauled him up. He is still unable to walk and will be so I fear for some time.

Almost Obtained It.

In one of your last Fall's letters you wished me a pleasant winter and plenty of seals. About the 5th of April the prospect was very bright indeed, and I entertained the most sanguine hopes of obtaining your wish and instead of catching plenty of seals many of those who had been taken away as I have stated, but it was a general thing and upon the whole we came off better than some of our neighbours. We hauled 222 and got in the skiffs and punts 189 making in all 411 up to this date, out of which were washed away by the sea 89 which reduces the number to 322, more than the 311 which killed last year. From the best information I can get I calculate as from under the catch which was being punts and hauled on shore. The catch of winter seals was but trifling: Young Seals Washed away by the sea
2,500 Trinity Hr. 600
2,000 English Hr. 500
3,000 Bonaventure, Trouty etc. 600
7,500 1,800
9,300—Total.
The above calculation is perhaps a little low, but it is impossible to tell yet, exactly, and if it varies, I am inclined to think that the numbers in each case are more, that is, more killed and more lost. We have not yet heard from Bonavista nor Catalina, but most people are of opinion that they must have done well, for the way the winds have been, and it is reported that the people at New Harbor and Scilly Cove have killed a good quantity of seals this winter.

Schooner Crushed in Ice.

On the 12th inst., the crew of one of Slat & Read's schooners which sailed in company with the Cosmopoleite out of this Harbor returned by land from Bonavista Bay, having lost their schooner two days before in the same gale which we felt so much of here. She was jammed in the ice and literally crushed to pieces. They saw a Conception Bay schooner that had hove up on the ice, and was covered with water and was on board of another very much damaged, also saw one at a distance which disappeared on a sudden and which they conjecture shared a similar fate with their own. As they had not seen Spencer for 9 or 10 days before and he was to the southward of them, I am in hopes he was not in the Bay at the time of the gale. Slat & Read's schooner had in, when they met with the accident, upwards of 400 young seals and was surrounded by thousands, and, of course, would soon have been loaded. We have not collected many pelts yet, but expect at least double the quantity we collected last year, and should Spencer be fortunate, I hope to raise a small cargo of oil and skins. The price of young seals will be 6-1, bedlamers 8- and harps 13 and 14, but most of the planters have not yet made their winter catch. On the 4th of March a schooner belonging to G. Garland arrived here from St. John's, having been blown off last Fall on her passage from Greenspond to this place. By her I received a letter from H. E. G. & R. (which is the only news we have yet had from any quarter) informing me that their last arrival from Europe was the Caesar, Pike, from Lisbon in January, at the time of leaving which the great battle had not been fought and that they were at the time (2nd March in St. John's) loading a vessel with Madeira for the West Indies at 18- per cent. They were of opinion that they would sell well in St. John's in the Spring.

A Changed Opinion.
I said last Summer that I did not see any real necessity for our having two schooners for any other purpose than to do this Spring and I hope one of the small brigs will soon arrive to assist us in it. The Room is rather extensive for the Trade and requires a great deal of repairs, if we do not do half the business we do, it would be the same expense to keep it up, and if we were to do half as much more than we do at present we would be in a better position to do it now, so that I think it would be best to proportion the Trade to the extent of the Room. One of the reasons why it will always be continual repairs is the extent of the water works and the posts and shores being liable to be cut or eaten away in such a short time by the worms, etc.

A Disastrous Spring.
April 21st, 1811.
The skiff which was intended to cross the Bay on the 16th inst., being prevented by the ice, I now send what I then intended by an ice-burner bound to St. John's with the addition of what has occurred since that period. On the 17th inst. a schooner by the name of the youngsters came overland from Bonavista being a part of 120 which were brought out by the brig, Swift (from Fouchall), and which vessel was lost in the ice in that Bay. On the 19th one of Mr. Garland's schooners which sailed with Spencer returned much damaged with 540 young seals, also the crew of another schooner belonged to Slat & Read, fitted out at Greenspond, and wrecked in Trinity Bay. It is reported here, that there are many schooners in this bay—very much damaged besides 2 driven on shore, and 5 schooners lost in Conception Bay, also that 6 men were frozen to death in the ice on the shore—all strangers to the people of that Bay. To these melancholy accounts I fear we shall soon hear of a great addition. Spencer, one of Mr. Garland's, and one of Slat & Read's (the only one they have left if she is) we have heard no account of, but am in hopes they will return loaded in a few days.

D. D. Makes a Scoop.
Mr. Durrell is again to windward of every other person in this place with regard to late intelligence from Europe. Yesterday a small skiff crossed the Bay with 2 English youngsters, brought out (as he himself says) by the brig John and landed on account of the ice in Conception Bay from whence they came by land to the other side of Trinity Bay, of course by the same conveyance he has all his English letters, Mr. Lesler I find got in safe, and I have therefore no doubt but that you have

"THE INSUPPORTABLE"

"The rich are too indolent, they never too well, they hear the innumerable portable factories of thinking,"—Cowper.

I was teaching my small nephew a game the other day when a poem came up which I thought he ought to understand by me. I read without a prepared explanation on my part.

"If you'd think you could do it as a right, Phillip," I said.

"Why, that's just what teachers always saying," I said.

"And isn't it true?" I asked.

"Most always," he answered, "most of the time."

"Then why don't you think in that first place?" I asked.

"I don't know," he answered, "I expected when I asked the question."

The Mind Slies Away From It.

Why should a nine year old boy know what half the adult world doesn't know,—that it doesn't think because thinking is hard, and the mind slies away from thinking just as naturally as an untrained horse rears up.

It's so much easier to ask questions, to read, to accept other people's conclusions, to follow old paths than to force one's brain to the labor of thought.

"But doesn't one think all the time?" asks someone.

Dreaming Is Not Thinking.

Yes, of course, in one sense of the word. Idle thoughts, aimless musings, undirected fancies pass continually through the mind, but to think in its higher sense, "to form an opinion by reasoning," is a kind of mental exercise which the average person is too lazy to enjoy.

A man at the information window in a large bank once told me that at least three quarters of the questions which were put to him did not require his technical knowledge, but were perfectly simple questions which the people who asked them could easily have answered if they had only

White Africans.

A Methodist Episcopal missionary writing from Algeria says: There are no Negro tribes north of the Sahara desert. That dry spot is as large as the United States and more difficult to cross than the Atlantic.

North of the Sahara live 15,000,000 Berbers, inhabiting what were the Barbary States of the Roman Empire. Some historians say they are the ancestors of the European races. At any rate they are white Africans and their known history goes back to Joshua's day.

North Africa is nearer to Europe than any other non-Christian land. (Tangiers is twenty miles from Gibraltar; Algiers is three days from London.) Yet these descendants of the early Christians have waited long, watching from their moral prison the ships sail down the Blue Mediterranean laden with their white cousins carrying the Bible to far distant peoples of black and yellow hues. Their case was thought to be hopeless because they were Moslems.

Since the French occupation the country is quite open to foreigners and tourists flock to mountains, deserts, and unearthed ruins of Christian civilization.

Only of late years has modern Christianity turned its attention to them. The Methodist Church began work ten years ago and is the only organized body working there.

Progress has been made, but the Centenary programme provides for the first adequate attempt to carry back the gospel to the fine Berber races. Their moral ideas are now in a low state. Shall they be reset into the mould of a Christian civilization divorced from her Lord? Or is the Church prepared to give them back of the real thing they so generously passed on to our ancestors long centuries ago?

Daniel in the Lion's Den

Mr. Josephus Daniels, the United States Secretary for the Navy, is in England.

"I have only temporarily retired from newspaper work myself," he said, "and I find the task of a managing editor is not unlike that of the manager of the United States Navy."

Mr. Daniels said that during his recent visit to Scapa Flow he was living in the Lion. "It is a repetition of the old story of Daniel in the Lion's den. I was not harmed, and if Daniel had as good a time as myself he would have wished to remain in the Lion's den all his life."

ACTION AND IDEALS.

Roses will bloom for him who cares to toil. Men cannot gather blossoms from afar. Who longs for flowers must struggle with the soil. And battle with conditions as they are. We cannot sit contentedly and dream. Our thoughts must be recorded in our deeds. Unlighted candles never cast a beam. Unguarded gardens quickly run to weeds.

The buried talent was a talent lost. "The wish for beauty in itself is vain. Unless for beauty we will pay the cost. The ugliness and horror will remain. Who longs to see the dew-kissed roses grow. Must brave the sun and fight the stubborn clay. Must bend his back and labor with the hoe. And fight with weeds and insects day by day.

Lost is the truth for which men will not fight. Vain is the dream for which men will not dare. 'Tis not enough to know and love the right. All that is good needs man's protecting care. We must be strong and vigilant and brave. Hard-working, patient and determined save. The tyrant weeds are quick to grow again.

In action must our purposes be told. In deeds of glory we must write our views. Must gird with might the visions that we hold. Or all our sons have fought for we shall lose. Roses will bloom for him who cares to toil. Who fights the weeds and insects day by day. And we, within whose care, is freedom's soil. Must keep the weeds of anarchy away.

Raffia is an excellent thing for tying packages when you wish them to have an odd and pretty appearance. A simple frock of dull blue chambray was trimmed with bias inserts of brown and blue striped gingham.

The Victorian Century.

(From the Boston Transcript.)

One of the remarkable people who were born in the year 1819 was Victoria, daughter of Edward the Duke of Kent, and granddaughter of King George the Third, who, on the death of William the Fourth, in 1837, became queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland. The Princess Victoria was born on the 24th of May, and this day throughout her beneficent reign of more than sixty-three years became so firmly established as a national holiday in Britain that it has been found well-nigh impossible to replace it with the natal day of either of her successors. Indeed, the name and thought of Queen Victoria became so intimately associated with public and private life, even with people's trappings and belongings, that the actual faults of our taste in that burgeoning time, here as well as in England, became "Victorian." The use of the word is actually a tribute to the world's affection for this simple woman who was the greater British sovereign for her simplicity. The most amazing events in the world's history, short of this amazing war which is so hard to bring to a formal end, were associated with Victoria's reign. It covered the period from lumbering stage-coaches to automobiles. It witnessed the developments of railways, telegraphs, telephones, electric lights, and paused only at the vestibule of air-flight. In politics, it traversed the world's and civilization's width, from genteel aristocratic rule to horny-handed democracy. It saw the English language become the imperial speech of mankind. Measured in its events, Victoria's was the greatest reign in the history of England's sovereigns. But through all its events the Queen held the throne rather of the woman and the mother than that of the sovereign. She died in 1901, while the Boer war was raging, and it is that circumstance which inspired these strong lines of Sir Owen Seaman's funeral tribute: :

And of the dregs to drink from sorrow's cup
This is most bitter, that with life's release
She might not leave her children folded up
Between the wings of Peace.
Yet, for a solace in that darkest hour,
When even kings have found themselves alone,
Over a people's love she kept her power.
Firm as her father's throne.
These lines appear prophetic now.

In no small measure is the fact due to Queen Victoria's character that the British throne, when others are tottering, remains firm. And this in spite of the fact that at least one of Victoria's rare intrusions into the field of government was extremely harmful to the nation—to wit, when in 1864, she objected to the proposal of Lord Palmerston to support Denmark against Prussia, and succeeded in preventing help to the little kingdom, thus directly and powerfully paving the way for the subsequent attacks of Prussia upon Austria and France and for the great war of German aggression which has cost Britain a million lives and forty billions of treasure. This act of Queen Victoria's was undoubtedly inspired by personal friendliness for the house of Prussia, with which she was so closely allied personally. The sequel is found in the fact that the Royal House is no longer that of Hanover, but of Windsor, and that the German royal tie is broken forever.

Hun Helmets for Cutlers

London, May 23.—A steamship landed in Wales with a cargo of German helmets for remelting at steel works in Llanelli into knives, forks, spoons and other utensils. In addition to the thousands secured in capture in war, the retreating German soldiery left a trail of military headpieces from Mons to the Rhine, apparently discarding them along the route of their return to Germany. These, together with other war debris, have been gathered by the British clamorion corps. The hundreds of thousands secured destroyed the specific in souvenirs, and the Allies decided to turn them to practical account.

Newfoundland Contingent.

Report of Tour of Fishing-Centres in United Kingdom by Party From the Royal Newfoundland Regiment.

The tour to the fishing-centres by a party of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment arranged by the Imperial Educational Council with the concurrence of the Newfoundland Government has been completely successful, providing as it did an excellent opportunity for comparison of the different methods of the catching and disposal of fish as adopted in the United Kingdom and in Newfoundland.

All ships from ports in the United Kingdom fish by means of trawl nets, drift-nets and, in a few cases, with long lines. The drift-nets are used for the herring-catch exclusively, whereas the trawl net deals with all kinds of fish. Newfoundland fishermen on the other hand, gather the harvest of the sea by fixed nets. The cod is caught by long lines used chiefly on the Grand Banks and by hand lines and cod traps for coast-fishery.

The party of Newfoundland soldiers-fishermen arrived at Lowestoft on the evening of April 28th and were met by Lt. Col. E. P. S. Ruppell, of the Board of Fisheries who arranged for their accommodation overnight. The following morning the party proceeded to the docks where they were received by Colonel Ruppell, Lt. Atkinson and Mr. Halfyard of the Board of Fisheries and members of the Lowestoft Fishing Vessel Owners Association. The trawl and herring markets, Gourcock Rope Works, Fishing-curing factories and net-braiding works were all visited. The afternoon was spent at Yarmouth where an instructive and interesting account of the herring industry was explained in detail by Messrs. Smilling and Beady.

On the following morning the party were at Grimby. Lt. J. Sutton, Secretary to the Grimby Fishing Vessel Owners Exchange Co., conducted the men through an extensive program. A visit was made to the Great Pontoon or fish-docks. The average of fresh fish landed daily is nearly 400 tons, equivalent to 8000 quintals. The huge ice-factory, the smoke-curing plant of Mr. J. L. Green, the Direct Fish Supply Co., and the networks and Oilskin factory of the Coal Salt and Tanning Co., were visited in turn. At Hull, representatives of the Fishing Vessels Owners Association escorted the party to the docks, the ice factory, Humber Shipwright Co., Ltd., and the factory of the Hull Fish Meal Oil and Manure Co.

Scarborough was the next port. Here the party felt more at home as it were, for the fishing was done by methods similar to those in vogue in Newfoundland. Motor-boats took the place of sailing-smacks and steam trawlers which had predominated in the places previously visited. Councilor Whitehead very kindly placed bobbie boats at the disposal of the party who greatly appreciated the opportunity of "putting to sea." A visit was also made to the picturesque little fishing town of Filey, where the Chairman of the Council, Mr. Simpson, entertained the party to tea.

The last port visited was North Shields, The Tyne Improvement Commission of Newcastle provided a steambot to take the party down the Tyne. At Aberdeen Pier, the party were met by the Harbourmaster to whom they were indebted for the history of the famous ships and shipyards which were passed enroute. The Mayor of North Shields and other members of the Corporation welcomed the Newfoundlanders and conducted them to the Fish Meal and Guano Works, the Shields Preserving Co., and the Engineering Dry Docks Co. An excellent luncheon was provided by the Tyne Improvement Corporation, at which the Mayor and other officials briefly addressed the men and expressed the pleasure in being able to give the Overseas guests an insight into the local fishing industries.

The tour terminated on May 7th and will undoubtedly prove to be of inestimable value to those who took part in it. Special thanks are due to Lt. Atkinson and Mr. Hefford of the Board of Fisheries for their unfailing courtesy and to the representatives of the various towns for their hospitality and co-operation.

An Appeal to Britain.

On the night of June 8, 1808, two Asturian deputies landed at Falmouth, bringing to England an appeal for help from the local Junta against Napoleon. Never were the messengers of a people attended with less pomp. The two Austrians had actually started from the Spanish coast in an open boat; they had been picked up by a casual privateer and brought after midnight to Falmouth, and by 7 o'clock the morning after they landed they were pouring their tale of woe into eager ears at the British Admiralty. Spain and Great Britain, as a matter of official fact, were at that moment at war, and five thousand troops were on the point of starting to attack the Spanish islands—the very troops it may be added, which, two months later, were fighting for Spain at Vimeró. The Asturian deputies in a sense, had no credentials—they represented no official Government—they spoke not for Spain, but only for a tiny patch of it. Yet these two vagrant ambassadors actually took captive not only the English ministers, but the generous sympathies of the common people of the three Kingdoms. The rising of Spain against Napoleon was a portent visible to all Europe. It changed the whole aspect of the world's politics. The Asturian deputies were received not merely as the spokesmen of a nation, but as the symbols of a totally new force which had suddenly emerged in the struggle against Napoleon. The British public it is hardly necessary to add, was kindled with a flame of generous sympathy at the spectacle of a nation deserted by its King, and practically without a Government or an Army, yet rising in audacious revolt against the master of so many legions.

PRICKLY.

Betty had been to her first party, and had drunk long and deep of "fizzy" lemonade. When she got home her mother asked her what she had had to eat. She gave a faithful account. "And what to drink?" her mother asked. "It was very nice stuff," said Betty, "but I don't know what it was."

"What did it taste like?" asked her mother, interested. "Well," said Betty, "it tasted just like when your foot's gone to sleep."

The Port of Fiume.

(By the Italian-Canadian News Bureau.)

MILNO, Italy, May.—Hon. Luigi Luzzatti, former Italian Premier, publishes a sensational article in the "Corriere della Sera" regretting in the name of British-Italian friendship, that there be a partition, however small, of the British people who are not led by entirely altruistic reasons when dealing with the Fiume issue; and he quotes the following from the "Shipping and Shipping Record" of May 10th to prove his assertion:

"British Steamship Lines cannot overlook the Italian crisis. The 'problem of Italianity of Fiume is of an international character. As a seaport of the Balkans as well as of the regions situated immediately north of it, and which are inhabited by peoples whose increase is speedier than their merchant marine, the 'port of Fiume offers an interesting traffic to English lines. The Cunard started, before the war, a Fiume-New York service which left grateful southerners and which could be the basis for larger business. But should that port become Italian, this interesting preparation would be lost and the result would be altogether different. 'Already before the war it was difficult to deal with Italian authorities, but now their ambition of having a 'national merchant marine has revived itself, foreign competitors would surely not be welcomed. Italian authorities know how to reach their objects, and it is not easy to counteract them, as archives of the Marine Bureau of the Board of Trade can show. In 1914 Italy ruled that third class passengers be treated hygienically and alimentary with better care than was used on English steamships.' It is finally important to note that the port of Fiume is the outlet of regions which furnish a good amount of traffic of emigrants bound for North and South America." Former Premier Luzzatti's article has aroused much interest in political quarters in Italy, and the Italian press now takes the position that commercial interests should not interfere with the rights of peoples to self-determination.

Mt. Carmel Cemetery Committee.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Mount Carmel Cemetery Committee was held last evening at the residence of the Secretary. The Treasurer's report showed the cemetery free from all encumbrances at present, but new obligations will have to be assumed in view of the fact that the new ground which was acquired a few years ago is now nearly half taken up in family plots. The committee had been offered an adjoining piece of property, which they decided to accept, depending upon the generous and practical support of the Catholic community as in the past to eventually liquidate this obligation. The continuation of the concrete wall along Quidi Vidi Road was also discussed, and not very long will elapse before this important work will be completed if finances permit. Last year there were 312 interments at the cemetery, and the committee is now expending a great deal of money to put the resting place of so many of our loved ones in condition after the winter. The election of officers resulted in the old executive being returned as follows:

Chairman—Mr. M. J. Malone.
Treasurer—Mr. John Dalton.
Secretary—Mr. P. Grace.

His Grace the Archbishop has sanctioned the appointment of the following gentlemen to the committee to replace deceased members since its formation some twenty years ago: Messrs. M. F. Caul, Martin Cole, David Whittle, John Leary, Wm. E. Brophy, John Power, John F. Cluney, Ed. J. Ring, M. J. MacDonald and M. Tobin. They with the old members: Messrs. James J. McGrath, James Kenna, Patrick Maher, N. Callahan, S. Angel and M. Bolger form the committee. With such an active and representative body assuming management, no effort will be spared to make Mount Carmel Cemetery a worthy resting place of our dear departed, and in this, the new, as well as the old members of the committee, ask the kind co-operation and sympathy of the community as heretofore. In this connection the public are reminded of the collection which is to be taken up at all the Masses to-morrow in aid of both cemeteries.

Upsets Former Ideas.

A STARTLING THEORY.

We had a talk on fishery matters with Mr. Luke Chafe, of Rose Blanche, who was in town last week. He says that the winter fishery at Rose Blanche, Channel, this season was the best on record. The fish, however, (cod) were the poorest in lives in all his experience.

Mr. Chafe tells some strange things about the codfishery which upsets all our former theories. He says that trawl fishing brings the fish to the ground instead of driving it away, and since this process of catching fish became general on the S. W. Coast fish are more and more plentiful. He gives plausible reasons for his theory which seem convincing.

Another startling theory of Mr. Chafe's is that spitting fish on the ground and coming in from the ground is about the best thing that could happen to make fish plentiful and keep it on the fishing grounds. This is quite contrary to what most people have been believing, but after Mr. Chafe has submitted his facts and related his experience of forty years at Rose Blanche, one cannot well gainsay his arguments.

We should like to hear from any of our readers (fishermen) what they think of these theories of Mr. Chafe's.—Trade Review.

A Love Idyll.

(Air: Sweet Teddy O'Neil)

There came to Trepassey
When May winds were blowing,
A fleet of brave ships that
The Stars and Stripes flew,
And many a sailor,
With buoyant youth glowing Came landward at evening,
That hamlet to view.

Amongst that gay band was An Irish-eyed lad:
The leader in fun and frolic was he,
He was known to his comrades
As glad hearted Paddy
And hailed from the highlands
Of fair Tennessee.

But many a ship that the Bright fates have guarded,
From tempests and dangers
For many a day;
That long with the weight of
Which seem to be rewarded,
Have met with disaster
In Trepassey Bay.

Such oft is the fate of
The light hearted lad:
Who loves as he sails
He they dusky or fair—
So 'tis known in this village
That Tennessee Paddy
Has left his affections
In Trepassey's care.

Yes, he's gone but his heart
Still remains in Trepassey.
He dreams as his ship proudly
Ploughs the blue main
Of a blue eyed and rosy checked
Newfoundland lassie,
And sighs for the day
When he'll sail back again.

He shall come back again,
And this village shall welcome
His coming with gladness,
Shall hail him with pride,
And the church bells their sweetest
Of chimes shall outline as He leads from the altar
His Trepassey bride.

At the Majestic.

The above theatre was crowded to its utmost capacity last evening to see "The Mad Lover," featuring Mr. Robert Warwick and beautiful Elaine Hammerstein. The scenes in this picture were superbly staged and exceptionally well acted. Mr. John O'Reilly sang "Mother Machree" and "The Minstrel Boy." Mr. O'Reilly is one of the best singers ever heard on our stage, and last night he received much applause. Beginning Monday there will be a violinist in the Majestic orchestra in the person of Mr. David Swedlin, late of the Boston Conservatory of Music. Hear him, for he is a wonder at the violin. The orchestra at the Majestic compares with those in the American and Canadian theatres.

Awarded $250.00.

In the Supreme Court yesterday the case of Christina Neal vs. W. H. Trask was concluded. The plaintiff, whose husband was killed by Trask's motor car last year, claimed $5,000 damages, but agreed to accept $250. Each party must pay their own costs. W. R. Howley, K. C. appeared for plaintiff and J. A. Winter for defendant.

The Adjutant's Warning
(From the London Morning Post.)
With the demobilization of the army some new stories are being demobilized here. One is the story of the bright thought of an adjutant. The commanding officer of a force behind the lines had acquired "won" (as they say in the army) a cow, and he was much envied in all the messes.
The adjutant had a cottage with a garden, in which he had some good strawberries. One day the C. O. without a word went into the garden and helped himself to the adjutant's strawberries. The adjutant could not, of course, rebuke his chief, but he put up this notice:
"Trespassers in this strawberry garden will have their cow shot."

Honor the Nurses.
(From the Boston Herald.)
No nobler work than that of the nurses was done in the great war.
The nations whom they honored with their services cannot honor them too highly, and the sick and wounded whom they helped will never find words too warm for grate-tude. It is a pleasing coincidence that in America and England public tribute has been paid on the same day to women who were leaders among the soldiers of mercy and gave their lives in the service, one in France, the other in Belgium. It was the nurses of Greater Boston who organized the memorial celebration in honor of Miss Jane A. Delano, but the public needed no invitation to take the opportunity to join them. As director of the department of nursing of the American Red Cross, Miss Delano worked for years with rare interest and influence to many countries, where her good work for nurses and nursing was gratefully acknowledged.
She had hospitals ready for duty in the war overseas before our army was ready, and when the war was ended she passed away at a French port in one of the hospitals which she herself had organized. Having assembled and directed the nursing forces of the nation in the great struggle, she certainly deserved the national honor bestowed on her in the shape of the distinguished service cross. In the war against war the bestowal of a military decoration on a nurse is not unfitting. Rather it may be thought peculiarly appropriate. And the martial pomp which marked the funeral services for Miss Edith Cavell in London and Norwich was intended as the proud expression of love and solemn manifestation of mourning by the army and the nation. Edith Cavell, gentle and kind, loyal and brave, endeared herself to the Belgians during her eight years as directress of the school for nurses in Brussels.
When the Germans occupied the city they made her loyalty their crime. She had directed a few struggling Belgian and British soldiers how to get across the frontier from the invaders.
That they called "war treason," for that a German court-martial sentenced her to death, and the German military governor hurried her murder by a firing squad, refusing the stay of execution which was asked for by the American and Spanish diplomatic representatives.
She had nursed as carefully the German wounded as the British or the Belgian, but that was nothing to General Von Sauberzweig and his ruthless gang. Possibly their mental perversion and petrification is such that they cannot understand why the nurse they murdered has been honored in Westminster Abbey and Norwich Cathedral, or why they are execrated for having killed her.
But all the world, outside Germany understands, and the Cavell national demonstration attests, the respect and veneration to call the criminal a coward. Bombers of hospitals and shelters and torpedoers of hospital ships also will have to answer for the outrages. The day of maltreatment of nurses in war has passed.
They will never lack protection.

Advice to Motorists.
Don't start on a trip without attention to lubricating oil, gasoline, and water.
Stop when there is an accident, whether it is your fault or not, and render all the assistance possible.
By taking out the inner tubes once in two months and reversing their position in the tire the danger of having the tubes rubbed through by the edges of the tire flap or by any other slight projection in the casing is removed.
Do not think that you demonstrate skill or driving ability by making a quick getaway. You will have visible evidence of the inadvisability of this when you see your tire bills; but there is greater harm done, which you are not apt to see, in the rear end and transmission of your car. Nine out of ten stripped pinions and rear axle keys can be attributed to this foolish practice.
Excessive play in the main shaft of the great-set may cause the gear shifter lever to be forced out of position. Usually the front bearing on the main shaft is shimmed, so that the condition is easily remedied. End

Never Again.
Memory of the "old-fashioned" celebration of the American Fourth of July, not many years back, is still vivid enough to raise immediate opposition to the idea of restoring that saturnalia of explosive noise and fire in the larger cities. The "celebration" grows more and more undesirable, the yearly recurrence of the holiday became more and more a subject of dread to great numbers of people, its annual record of destruction of property became a convincing argument against it, and city after city, under the slogan of a "Safe and Sane Fourth," did away with the sale of the worse forms of explosives.
The first signs of an effort again to legalize such sales has stirred protest, and it may reasonably be believed that the Nation will not return to a method of celebrating its birthday that had been allowed to grow into an excuse for hoodlumism, and to which the better thought of every community objected.—Christian Science Monitor.

An Ancient Windjammer.
Now and then an old vessel sails in and out of port and sets the few who knew her along the waterfront gasping over her long life and saltwater adventures. So they gossiped, the other day, when the coasting schooner Joanna Durgain came into harbor at Baigor, Maine, and attracted attention by her spick-and-span appearance. Over ninety years ago she had been built at New York, sloop-rigged, and setting sail on her first voyage under the name of Hudson. For forty years, more or less, she coasted the United States, carrying cargo, while on shore the Nation expanded, met and passed through its crisis of civil war, and opened up its great west. Then she came to Maine, was refitted as a schooner, re-named,
went back to her work, and was apparently wearing out. But twice more the old schooner was bought and restored, and the other day came into port, to the wonder of those who knew her, looking as young as ever.—
Christian Science Monitor.

One on the Censor.
(From The Morning Chronicle.) Probably the general reputation of the British censorship suffered from the first few months of the war when an overburdened and anxious Cabinet found no time for the affairs of the newspapers, when the ruling powers had not begun to grasp that co-operation with the press was as necessary and important as any other line of wartime diplomatic activity; when the organization of the Bureau was in a shifting and experimental stage, and the watchword of the working censors was, "When in doubt, suppress." Then came experiences of uncertainties and shocking surprises which whitened the heads of newspaper workers. Some were tragic;
others were comical.
On the comedy side one classic incident still shines. A correspondent with the British Army had quoted from Kipling's "Recessional":
"The shouting and the tumult dies,
The captains and the kings depart."
The censor did not recognize this on a telegraph form as a quotation, and being a literal minded man he erased "the kings" because, as was afterward explained in Parliament, there were no kings present at the front, hence the statement that any had departed was untruthful.

Bolshevism and Women.
(C. R. A. Press Service.)
While the British White Paper on Bolshevism give no specific account of the nationalization of women, General Knox in a special report from Vladivostok to the War Office on March 4, gives the text of a document belonging to a Red Commissar captured at the front, and quoted in the local press: "Herewith I certify that the bearer, comrade Erdomikof, is allowed the right of acquiring a girl for himself and no one may oppose this in any way, he is invested with full power which I certify."
Specific accounts of the nationalization of women, however, have been printed from various sources. A Bolshevik decree issued by the Bolsheviks of Vladimír and published in the official Socialist organ, "Izvestya," at the end of last year, states that all girls having reached their eighteenth year are to be announced as the property of the State and that any such girl not having married is obliged under the most severe penalties to register at the Bureau of Pro Love at the Commissariat of Surveillance. Having registered at this Bureau, she has the right to choose a co-habitant husband from among men between the ages of 19 and 50. The consent of the men in the said choice is unnecessary, and the man on whom such choice falls has no right to make any protest. On the other hand the right to choose from a number of girls who have reached their eighteenth year is given also to men. The opportunity to choose a husband or a wife is to be presented once a month.
A special correspondent writing to the London Times from Helmsingore on March 11, stated that Stucka, president of the Bolshevik Government of Lettland, had issued a proclamation nationalizing women, and free love without restriction has been decreed for women from 17 to 45 years of age.
The London Times has published a translation of a proclamation that was posted in Saratoff, East Russia, and was given effect to in a limited degree. The same proclamation was posted in Ekaterinburg, where effect was also given to it for a few days before the advent of the Czechs.
"There need be no hesitation," the Times says, "in accepting the decree as a genuine document." The proclamation read in part:
This decree is proclaimed by the

The great aim of the Buick Motor Company has been to produce a good car—and to the attainment of this object, everything else has been subordinated.
Their ambition is to hold and increase the good-will which the high quality of the car has created.

buy a Buick you get the best that an organization with an enviable record for honest effort can produce.

free association of Anarchists of the town of Saratoff.
In compliance with the decision of the Soviet of Peasants' Soldiers', and Workmen's Deputies of Kronstadt the private possession of women is abolished.
From March 1 the right to possess women of the ages of 17 to 22 is abolished.
The former owners may retain the right of using their wives without waiting their turns.
All women according to this decree are exempted from private ownership, and are proclaimed to be the property of the whole nation.
The distribution and management of appropriated women, in compliance with the decision of the above said organizations, are transferred to the Saratoff Anarchists' Club. In three days from the date of publication of this decree all women, given by it to the use of the whole nation, are obliged to present themselves to the given address, and to supply the required information.
Men citizens have the right to use one woman not oftener than three times a week for three hours, observing the rules specified below.
Each man wishing to use a piece of public property should be a bearer of a certificate from the Factories Committee, the Professional Union, or Workmen's Soldiers' and Peasants' Council certifying that he belongs to the working family.
The chief of the Anarchists will be in charge of the temporary technical measures relating to the realization of this decree.
All refusing to recognize and support this decree will be proclaimed enemies of the people and counter-Anarchists will be held strictly responsible.

DISEASED GUMS AND TEETH.

Of all the poison taken into the blood, the germs and pus contributed by the diseased gums and teeth are the most destructive to the human system. If every red blood cell is forced to fight against numbers of germs to the cell, the blood cannot attend to the building up of the body, and if allowed to continue the system is bound to break down and eventually you are an invalid. Kidney, stomach, heart trouble, rheumatism and many other diseases are brought on by diseased gums and teeth.

Mystery Stories and Detective Novels.

THE AFTER HOUSE—A Mystery Story by Mary Roberts Rinehart. It is a capitally done story of murder, mystery and love; its pages are full of the spirit of adventure, the buffeting of the gale and the atmosphere of the Sea. Price $1.35.

AT 1.30—A Mystery Detective Story by Isabel Strander. A man is found murdered in his study at 1.30 o'clock. Who did it? His brother, his wife and even his mother come within range of suspicion, but owing to the wonderful gift possessed by a blind detective the real murderer is at length detected. Price $1.35.

THE BLUE LIGHTS—A Thrilling Detective Novel by Arnold Fredericks. A mystery story of compelling interest. The story is filled with action and moves towards its climax with that cumulative interest that stamps its author as a master of construction. Price $1.35.

CLEEK'S GREATEST RIDDLES—A book of most enjoyable detective stories by T. W. Hanshaw. Price $1.35.

THE IVORY SNIPER BOX—By Arnold Fredericks. A book that goes with a rush from the first chapter to the last. Price $1.35.

THE LITTLE FORTUNE—By Arnold Fredericks. "The Little Fortune" may be only a little silver franc piece of the great Napoleon, yet its potency was sufficiently great to cause the death of at least one man, to bring about an international plot and in the end to engage the attention not only of Richard Duval, the famous American detective, but the secret police of Paris as well. Price $1.35.

THE RED STAIN—By Ahmed Abdullah. A story in which murder, mystery and crime prevail. One of the best detective stories ever written. Price $1.35.
