CHAPTER XXX.
REMORSE AND REPENTANCE.

"A pleasure! Oh, God!" and his husky voice almost broke as he continued: "Let me speak; let me tell you my real motive, and then you will see that I am not quite a fiend!"

Without waiting for her permission, he went on with his reasons in such an eloquent voice that she could not doubt his truth.

"Do you think it does not stab me to the heart to look on my accursed work? Do you think I am so vile I cannot repent and wish to expiate the deed by a life's devotion? Yes, I am a changed man, Annette. My former madness would not be possible to me now. I am a crushed and broken man, sin-stricken, sorrowful, repentant. I wish to devote my life to Royall Sherwood, so as to alleviate as far as possible the sufferings I have caused. Could remorse and repentance further go? I ask nothing of you or any one but the privilege to remain near him and give up the best that is in me for his comfort. Will you grant me that longed-for boon?"

"Yes," she murmured, very low; then added: "But you and I, Ray Der- ing, must meet hereafter as the care- less strangers we appear to our friends."

"Oh, yes; I understand all that. I shall not presume, believe me, al- though," with stifled bitterness, "there might be women tender enough to forgive even such sins as mine when a man was driven mad by love of them."

"I am not one of them," Annette an- swered, with cruel frankness. "You were not worthy of my love; you dis- trusted it, and now it lies cold and dead in my bosom, never to awake again!"

"I deserve your contempt and scorn. I cannot resent it," he answered hum- bly; adding: "And you were noble enough to keep my secret. It was great of you. Let me thank you."

"I did it because—I had loved you once!" she murmured, hastily leaving him to his own unpleasant reflections.

CHAPTER XXXI.
THE CRUEL TRUTH.

That afternoon the sun came out as bright and warm as in April, and tempted Daisie and Annette to go out for a spin on their bicycles.

"And let us call for Luttie. Perhaps she will like to join us," said Daisie, who had grown almost fond of the deceitful little widow who had chosen to be very kind to her since her treachery had succeeded so well.

As they pedaled along on their shining wheels, both so beautiful, though as different as night and morning in their dark and light types, they attracted much attention and admiration; but their thoughts were too busy with recent events to notice it. Daisie seemed to be charmed over the knowledge that her afflicted husband had secured so suitable a companion.

"He will have no more lonely hours now, with this delightful man to amuse him. Oh, what a burden it lifts from my mind!" she cried gladly.

"Are you learning to love Royall at last, Daisie?" exclaimed Annette.

The dark-blue eyes turned a sweet, sad gaze on the other's face.

"I love Royall as a friend or a brother—that is all; but I pity him so— I pity him so!" she sighed.

"Perhaps, if he should grow strong and well, some time you might learn to love him as a husband?"

A sudden pallor drifted over the blooming face, flushed by the exercise of wheeling.

"I—I am afraid not," Daisie answered sadly; adding: "Oh, Annette, all my love was given once, and thrown back upon my heart! After such a shock I can never love again."

And her thoughts flew back in an- guish to that night when she had been so cruelly sundered from Dallas Bain by the plotting of Royall and his cousin—plotting that she never could have forgiven had it not been proved to her afterward that Dallas Bain was unworthy of her love.

Oh, the bitterness of that knowl- edge! Could she ever forget the anguish of the first days after she woke to the truth—the crushing struggle between love and pride—the humiliation of knowing that he had de- serted her for silly, chattering Letty, Mrs. Fleming's servant?

Suddenly she gave such a start that she nearly lost her balance on the wheel.

As they wheeled around the corner, toward Mrs. Fleming's elegant brown- stone mansion, they came face to face with a man loitering on the corner as if waiting for some one, and—the man was James Cullen!

Yes, it was Mrs. Fleming's old ser- vant, whom no one had heard of since he left Sea View, swearing that he would find Letty and her lover, and kill them both.

Impulsively Daisie flung herself from her wheel. Annette following her example, and beckoned the man to ap- proach.

He slouched toward them sullenly, looking as if he had far rather run away. He was well dressed, in a loud, flashy style, with rings on his stubby fingers, and a thick gold watch chain ostentatiously paraded across his plaid vest.

"How do you do, Cullen? I'm glad to find you looking so prosperous. Did—did you ever find Letty Green?" de- manded Daisie breathlessly.

Cullen turned red and pale by turns, and shuffled his feet confusedly, giv- ing a rapid, furtive glance down the street toward Mrs. Fleming's mansion; then he blurted out eagerly:

"No, madame; I swear I've never caught up with the little baggage yet!"

With that, he turned quickly from them, and hurried around the corner, losing himself in the crowds on Fifth Avenue.

"The man looked as if he were ly- ing!" exclaimed Annette, as they re- mounted their wheels.

A few more turns brought them to the widow's house, and, to their amazement, they saw Letty Green coming down the marble steps, gayly dressed, and looking quite as prospe- rous as Cullen, a look of satisfaction on her pert little face.

Daisie and Annette looked at each other with a vague suspicion in their eyes, and the latter cried, in a trou- bled voice:

"Don't let us speak to the girl—oh, don't!"

But again Daisie sprang from her wheel in front of the approaching girl, exclaiming sharply:

"Stop, Letty Green, I wish to speak to you!"

Letty paused, with an insolent smile, and swept them both a curtsey.

"I'm sure I'm glad to see you again

Mrs. Sherwood and Miss Janowitz."

Daisie spoke again, and a strange impulse made her exclaim coolly: "Letty, we saw Cullen waiting for you at the corner. So you married him, after all?"

Imposed on by the quietly assertive tone, and supposing Cullen had con- fessed the truth, Letty answered fal- teringly:

"Yes, madam."

"And," pursued Daisie gaspingly, her face death-white, "perhaps—per- haps—you didn't elope with Mr. Bain—after all. It—it—was a lie you wrote to Cullen, was it not?"

"Come away, Daisie," pleaded An- nette; but she shook off the gentle hand impatiently.

"Answer me," she said imploringly, to Letty, a wild hope springing in her tortured heart. "Did you go away with—him—or not?"

The girl hung her head in shame, and muttered defiantly:

"Yes, madam, I did elope with Mr. Bain. I can't deny the truth."

But falsehood was written on her face and in her eyes that she dare not uplift to the girl she had wronged.

Daisie cried bitterly:

"Then where is he now? Why are you with Cullen instead of—?" Her voice broke with emotion, and the crafty Letty rejoined meekly:

"Oh, Mrs. Sherwood, can't you un- derstand? He—that Dallas Bain, was a—betrayer of innocence! After he persuaded me to go away he wouldn't marry me. He got tired of me in a month, and then he disappeared, the wretch! Then I was starving—I tried to find him, but I could not, and I was going to drown myself when I chanced to meet Cullen, who had come to the city to look for me—to kill me, as he said. But my misery melted his heart. He forgave me, and agreed to make an honest woman of me if I would behave myself. So I married him, the good, kind soul, and—oh, there he is waiting for me now. Excuse me, ladies;" and Letty darted away to join her husband, who had sneaked back to the corner.

Annette felt like a criminal before her friend that she did not cry out that Letty's story was a falsehood, that Dallas Bain was true and good, and that his sweetheart had been run- ded away from him by the most dastard- ly plot in the world.

She could have wept as she saw the white agony of Daisie's face—poor Daisie, whose springing hopes had been so cruelly dashed to earth again, for it did not occur to her to cast doubt on Letty's specious story.

But again Annette said to herself that in this case ignorance was bliss. She dare not speak, for Daisie's own sake.

But she put her arm around the girl's trembling form and supported her up the steps.

"Oh, my poor dear, you are almost fainting! I wish you had not spoken to that husky!" she lamented.

Mrs. Fleming was startled at the pailor of her visitor, and exclaimed: "You have had an accident?"

"No; she has seen Cullen and his wife, Letty, outside your door," ex- plained Annette, as she held Daisie's head against her breast and patted her cold cheek.

Mrs. Fleming rang for wine, and helped Annette to fuss over agitated Daisie.

"No wonder she is unnerved, poor child!" she said. "I suppose they told you their romantic story—that Mr. Bain deserted Letty, and Cullen found her about to drown herself, and married her offhand. Well, this is the second time that they have come here begging to be taken back into my ser- vice. Of course, I refused, although they were very good help when I had them. But I knew Daisie would not wish to see them about. Drink a little of this wine, dear, it will help you. Now, tell me how Royall likes his new companion. Finds him charming, does he? I am very glad of that. He is very handsome and distinguished-looking, is he not? Do you know there is some- thing familiar about him, as if I had seen him before? And it almost seems to me it was at Gull Beach? Can you recall anything familiar about him, Annette?"

The girl hung her head in shame, and muttered defiantly:

"Yes, madam, I did elope with Mr. Bain. I can't deny the truth."

But falsehood was written on her face and in her eyes that she dare not uplift to the girl she had wronged.

Daisie cried bitterly:

"Then where is he now? Why are you with Cullen instead of—?" Her voice broke with emotion, and the crafty Letty rejoined meekly:

But again Annette said to herself that in this case ignorance was bliss. She dare not speak, for Daisie's own sake.

But she put her arm around the girl's trembling form and supported her up the steps.

"Oh, my poor dear, you are almost fainting! I wish you had not spoken to that husky!" she lamented.

Mrs. Fleming was startled at the pailor of her visitor, and exclaimed: "You have had an accident?"

"No; she has seen Cullen and his wife, Letty, outside your door," ex- plained Annette, as she held Daisie's head against her breast and patted her cold cheek.

Mrs. Fleming rang for wine, and helped Annette to fuss over agitated Daisie.

"No wonder she is unnerved, poor child!" she said. "I suppose they told you their romantic story—that Mr. Bain deserted Letty, and Cullen found her about to drown herself, and married her offhand. Well, this is the second time that they have come here begging to be taken back into my ser- vice. Of course, I refused, although they were very good help when I had them. But I knew Daisie would not wish to see them about. Drink a little of this wine, dear, it will help you. Now, tell me how Royall likes his new companion. Finds him charming, does he? I am very glad of that. He is very handsome and distinguished-looking, is he not? Do you know there is some- thing familiar about him, as if I had seen him before? And it almost seems to me it was at Gull Beach? Can you recall anything familiar about him, Annette?"

DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS FOR PALE PEOPLE

Education.

5.—PROPOSALS.

The Educational experts, after reviewing the whole situation here, decided that the feature which was most important and required the earliest action was that of the Elementary Schools. The Interdenominational Committee agreed with the experts in this. Not only was it necessary to provide buildings that were suitable for the work and not inimical to the health of the children, but it was absolutely essential that something should be done for the accommodation of the 1,000 Protestant children for whom there was now no school accommodation whatever. While the question of Higher Education was of importance, it was held that first action should be of the good of the children, who would otherwise grow up without educational advantages, and who would to a large extent, be a drag upon the body politic.

In this city, which is two miles long and less than a mile wide, the cost of adequately maintaining fourteen Protestant schools in which children are being taught in the elementary fields, in a prohibitive one. The School Boards of St. John's have accordingly found it impossible, under such conditions, to maintain the plan quietly. In the same degree, it is unreasonable to expect a city of this size to maintain more than one plant of secondary rank or of the rank of the present colleges in St. John's. The cluster of schools in the central part of the city is condemnation enough of any educational program in a community which includes the offering of like opportunities to all children. The buildings in which children are being taught in the elementary grades are clustered within a radius of 1,000 feet. The overhead cost of maintaining quietly such a battery of schools within such a small area is such that no business man would tolerate it for a longer period than was involved in making the change.

In view of the conditions here and the time that would be required for the carrying out of an advanced educational policy, the Educational experts recommended that the present buildings should be made as habitable as possible, but that no expenditure for alterations in the buildings be incurred, except those which are necessary for safety and sanitation. The following standards should be observed in this connection.

1. Each child should be given 18 square feet of floor space and 200 cubic feet of air space.
2. The best possible provision under the circumstances should be made for ventilation of all classrooms.
3. All class-rooms and corridors should be thoroughly cleaned every day of the year. Soap and hot water are much needed in many of the schools on the floors, walls, desks and windows.
4. The toilet conveniences should be much improved, and where possible, new fixtures should be installed, such fixtures to be later utilized in any new construction which may be undertaken. A maximum of labour, hot water and paint are much needed in connection with the toilet systems.
5. Provision should be made for safety of children in cases of fire.
6. Suitable desks and seats for the children of various ages should be provided; where possible, additional windows, properly placed, should be provided; teachers should be given modern desks, so that they may work with ease and have desk room for storage of papers, etc.; Educational equipment such as maps, etc., should be provided; there should be taken that the text books used by children, especially in rooms adequately lighted, should have large type; the heating arrangements in a number of the schools are very primitive and badly placed.

The experts recommended the adoption of a new, up-to-date educational program to be commenced at once and to be completed within, say five years if possible. The program which they recommended involves the construction of two elementary school buildings, (one in the West and one in the East), a Junior High School Building and a Senior High School Building. The Elementary School Buildings should house, approximately, 1,200 children each, and with such number of children it would be possible to carry out a proper system of classification in grading. They recommended the first building to be erected in the West End of the city, as the children of that section are in most need of improved accommodation, and have had very little consideration in the past. The facilities which they recommended should be provided in these elementary schools were, kinder gardens, play rooms, auditoriums, a Lunch Room, Science Rooms, Rooms for Domestic Science and Manual Training, a Library, Rooms showing model home conditions, and provisions for Medical and Dental Service.

One matter which engaged the attention of the Interdenominational Committee was the question of religious instruction. Under the present system of denominational schools, it might be thought that the best opportunities were offered for religious instruction. As a matter of fact, however, the denominations are deploring the laxity in this respect, and the Superintendents of Education, while endeavouring to cure conditions, have not had a large measure of success. The Interdenominational Committee unanimously hold that definite religious instruction should be given in every school in St. John's. That does not mean the opening of a school with religious exercises only—it goes beyond that. A resolution was carried that a definite number of hours each week should be given to such work when the children of each denomination would be gathered in separate rooms to receive the instruction to be imparted by the persons appointed by the respective denominations. The resolution also provided that the clergy of the respective denominations would have right of entry. The committee held that this matter is of the first importance, and decided that so far as the Protestant schools in St. John's are concerned, it could have a definite place in the program of a new educational policy.

If possible, each of the above elementary buildings should be located on a site of not less than four acres. The experts, from the spirit shown by the people of St. John's in the Educational Campaign, felt sure that the inhabitants of this city are desirous of providing for their children the housing conditions which will give them a reasonable opportunity for an adequate and essential education. Both of these elementary school buildings are as necessary to the welfare of the City of St. John's as light and air and water are necessary for the actual existence of its inhabitants.

The new High School Building, to house approximately 1,200 children should be begun during the second or third year of the development of the building program. This building should provide, beside the equipment outlined for elementary buildings, the facilities which will give opportunities for vocational outlook as well as University preparation. There will be shops for both boys and girls and the school work will begin to correlate with the industries of the country, so that the boys and girls may begin to appreciate the opportunities which lie dormant in the large, undeveloped resources available in Newfoundland.

The Senior High School Building to accommodate from four to six hundred scholars would take up the work below the Senior Associate year, which is at present being done in the Colleges. It might be possible and advisable to plan one building for both Junior and Senior High School work which would lessen the cost in the building and prevent much duplication of equipment. The High School should provide opportunities for University entrance, for Normal School entrance and for the highest possible training in the commercial field (so badly needed in Newfoundland), for a maximum of training in preparation for scientific work, for the training of girls in all of the household sciences and the training of boys in all forms of hand work involving a knowledge of machinery.

In St. John's to-day, three different institutions are attempting to give to the boys and girls the first year of University work. The division of effort very largely discounts the result, and the comparison of the opportunities offered here with those given the boys and girls in their first collegiate year elsewhere may be considered as nothing less than pathetic.

No one Educational Institution in St. John's has provided an adequate and up-to-date laboratory for the teaching of chemistry and physics; there is no institution equipped to give a complete course in commercial training; there is no adequate provision for the teaching of Manual Training in the Department; a full course in music or art in all their branches can be obtained, and no adequate provision for the teaching of Domestic Science to the large numbers who should be taking such study. Each denomination is unable of itself to provide these things, which are really necessary in the education of the present generation of children. It is the opinion of the experts, in order to do the first year of University work successfully in a community as small as St. John's, it will be necessary to consolidate all of the interests involved—the Roman Catholic as well as the Protestant—and to build one institution which would take care of boys and girls for a longer period than is being done at present. Newfoundland should endeavour to keep its best intellects within its own borders. Boys and girls training for collegiate work in Newfoundland, will tend to remain in their own country to a far greater degree than boys and girls who are given all their University training elsewhere. The best intellects under a properly organized educational system, tend to go to the University. It is highly desirable, therefore, that the people of St. John's with the aid of the Government, develop an institution of University rank which will adequately provide for young men and women who are desirous of continuing their study beyond the High School period. The number of boys and girls who would avail themselves of this opportunity would be considerable if they could remain in Newfoundland to continue their training.

PEOPLE WE DON'T FORGET.

RUTH CAMERON

I heard the other day of a woman who used to do dressmaking for me some years ago. I cannot tell you how many times the sense of the loss has come crowding up to the surface of my thoughts since then. I can't think of that woman as dead. It doesn't seem possible that she is somewhere on the earth making garments and gawdy in somebody's home. Because she had the Vital Spark. Several people nearer to me have gone away in the last few years but not one passing has so filled my thoughts as this one. Why is it? I asked myself that question when that sense of loss came over me again at the mention of Miss H.'s name, and I answered my own question—because she was one of those people with the vital spark in her. Do you know the sort of people I mean—the people whose coming into a house seems to fill the house with life and interest, the people who are always having a little interesting thing happen to them, whether they go for a trip abroad or just walk down town, the people who are always keenly interested in and intelligently sympathetic about the things you are doing, and who (as a natural result) if you stop to think of it) are always full of interesting bits of the doings of other people. Don't you recognize the type? Of course I realize that all this is not a proper definition of the type, but just signs by which you may recognize the sort of people I mean. And don't you? Don't you look over your own circle of friends and say, "Yes, that's just the sort of person she is," or "Isn't that just the way she makes you feel?" And don't you feel a warmth in your heart as you think of Jane or Ed or her right now, and be lifted up of yourself by contact with that vital spark.

How Will They Go On?

"An amusing story comes from a certain juvenile employment bureau. "It was proposed that one of the boy applicants should go to the General Post Office, to begin work as a telegraph messenger. After being interviewed he was engaged, but on going home to tell his mother found that she preferred him to go to other work. The boy came back to report this, and on being told that the bureau would make it right, said: "But how will they go on at the Post Office if I leave them in the lurch?"—Journal of Industrial Welfare.

Sweden for Prohibition.

"The Swedish Royal Commission on the Liquor Traffic, which was appointed in 1914, has issued a report in favor of a referendum on the subject of Prohibition. It recommends that no intoxicating liquors of any kind shall be permitted to be sold if 60 per cent. of the voters are in favour of that course."

Origin of 'French Leave'.

During the hearing of an action for alleged slander and false imprisonment, brought by an ex-private against his former commanding officer in the King's Bench Division, Justice McCardie explained the origin of "French leave."

It did not arise, he said, out of the former French wars, consequent upon the escape of French prisoners, but in the early part of the 18th century in the salons of France.

Certain guests, not aware of the higher acts of courtesy, were in the habit of leaving without saying good-bye to the host or hostess, and it became a practice. Unfortunately that practice was adopted in certain circles of English society about the same time, and, therefore, it was said that if a man left without saying good-bye to his host he took "French leave," following the practice in France.—London "Chronicle."

WHAT WE CANNOT DO.
The cheerful man can help the sad and win him back to laughter glad. He can go forth and freely share His joy with those beset by care.

The strong man walking on life's way Can lend his strength from day to day To weaker men in trouble's clutch And give the help they need so much.

The rich man from his lavish store Can aid the poor man at his door; And by one kindly helpful deed He can become the friend in need.

But we who have good health must stay And watch a loved one, night and day, Making a desperate fight to live And what we would we cannot give.

Oh, we have gold which we can lend And strength at times to play the friend, But in those hours of true despair The health we own we cannot share.

DAINGEROUS TEETH.

WALT MASCOLO

Now the docs, those wise old cheeses, say our teeth should all come out, for they cause all our diseases, from the measles to the gout. Once my teeth like pearls were gleaming and I viewed the same with pride, as I chewed the sirloin steaming, with potatoes on the side. Now my teeth are all departed and no hope on earth I see, though the dentist says he's started on a bakelite set for me. I had colic in Toronto, and the doctor said, said he, "You must see a dentist, pronto, who will pull out molars three." I had measles in Hoboken, and the doctor said, "You gink, all your symptoms are a token that your teeth are on the blink." And my whiskers, in Empory, fell and fell, and soon were gone, and it was the same old story—'twas because no teeth were drawn. Passed around by stern physicians from one dentist to the next, I am filled with vain ambitions and my soul is sore perplexed. Now that all my teeth are missing, what resource is there for me, when some new disease goes hissing through my shoulder or my knee? When I'm sore in bone or tissue, chafed from carrying my wretch, how will doctors dodge the issue, when they cannot blame my teeth?

Dried Fish.

The world will never be clear of worries of one kind and another; like the poor, they will always be with us. And one of the striking things about them is that the latest variety is always the worst; those that one has had before may have been had enough, but dear me, they are as nothing compared with the new one.

The above we fancy is the feeling of the average fish exporter at the present time. He has had his own troubles in the past five years, such as badly cured stock, delays in deliveries, labor strikes, and a dozen other distressing things. But at the moment these are forgotten entirely. The only real trouble he ever had is now. Briefly of course, the diagnosis is "falling markets." Norway has too many old fish. And to has Newfoundland. Foreign consumption too is not as active as it might be, and perhaps will be later on.

There is no doubt about it, the dried fish situation is distressing, but still there is no occasion for being downhearted as to the future of the industry, for nothing has happened to make one chary about that. What is going on, in fish to-day is the same that is going on in many other commodities, and when the finish of the readjustment has been reached, we shall then proceed to business along the usual lines. This year was marked to be an off year in the merchandising world, and we might as well make up our mind to make the best of it. Some trades are not yet feeling it as much as others, but no doubt their turn will come in due season.

Down in Lunenburg, we understand, the fishermen are feeling injured because the opening price of the summer catch was set at $9.25 per quintal. They were expecting it to be at least $11.00, it is said. But as things look to-day $9.25 is a high figure, for if fish are like other foodstuff commodities, they are certainly going down. Lunenburg fishermen will no doubt in time readjust themselves to the new level of values. As sugar, flour and other foodstuffs get cheaper, $12.00 for codfish will not seem so necessary as it does to-day. Some day, too, it will be possible for them to build a vessel at less cost than to-day. The drift of things now is in that direction; in fact our sufferings of the moment are the surest indicators to that effect.

In our last issue we referred to the legislation of the Newfoundland Government prohibiting exports of dried fish to Canada unless a price of $12.00 a quintal had been guaranteed by buyers here. We have just learned that this odious act has been withdrawn.—Maritime Merchant, Sept. 2.

Ancient and Modern

Years ago there lived in Athens, the capital of Greece, a most extraordinary man named Pericles, who, according to his lights was a democrat of democrats. His object in the political business of the nation, to which he belonged was to benefit the people in such measure that they would applaud his name whenever and wherever it appeared, notwithstanding that they had no public press in these days. Still this man, Pericles, like some of his more modern types, was always in a position to fool the people. Eloquence of the modern demagogic style fooled the people of Athens just as freely as the eloquence of Mr. Coaker beguiles the populace of Newfoundland to-day, and the result will be exactly, in the case of this Dominion, as it was in the days when this early demagogue, Pericles, seduced the inhabitants of the Grecian Province which believed in him to their utter loss and obliteration. History goes on to prove the foregoing.

Shakespeare was most profound in his knowledge of this man, who had a most evil effect on the people, and in his play "Pericles," the immortal poet shows the Greek tyrant to be exactly that which he is, a demagogue capturing the fancies of the people and leading them to extremes; in other words Pericles is the archetype of Coaker, and the warning of Antiochus may well be applied to the dictator of Newfoundland:

"Touch not upon thy life,
For that's an article which our law
As dangerous as the rest. Your time's Expired:
Either expound now or receive your sentence."

So it is up to Coaker in this twentieth century to expound his policy or receive his sentence, because "few love to hear the sins they love to act," and our good friend—heaven save the mark—Coaker—is such an enemy of the people whom he affectionately desired to make wealthy that his real explanations may rather be heard than heeded, for

"Vice repeated is like the wandering wind,
Blows dust in others eyes to spread itself," and the policy of Mr. Coaker is of that nature, because he is blowing dust into the eyes of the men of Newfoundland in order to further the insane policy which he has fathered, and which will, if persisted in, bring ruin and desolation to this island.

Pericles was a democratic agitator. His objects were exactly identical with those of Mr. Coaker. As a matter of fact Pericles has been duplicated in the person of this democratic demagogue who to-day rules Newfoundland with a rod of iron, and who, apparently, has so frightened those who are opposed to him that they tremble like sheep when he approaches near their flock, and they are quite willing to be led to the slaughter or the shearing accordingly as it pleases the butcher. Pericles introduced the system of payment for the performance of public duties. In that Mr. Coaker has postdated him, for everybody knows that Mr. Coaker insisted upon the irrational advance in the sessional pay of the members of the House of Assembly, in order that the followers of himself should be sufficiently recompensed for their wise and able services to the Colony. In foreign politics the aim and object of Pericles was imperial. Ditto with our modern Pericles, except W. F. Coaker, Minister of Marine and Fisheries. His object is to subordinate foreign markets to his own will and wishes so far as the sale of codfish is concerned, and he has done this so well that the whole Dominion is crying out in protest against his usurped domination. There are other aspects in connection with the life of Pericles which could be, with truth and reason, applied to Mr. Coaker, but for the present we shall leave them for further reference, if need be.

Avoiding the Regulations.

We have, as yet, received no answer to our question asked the Minister of Marine and Fisheries on September 14th, as to whether it was not true that a member of the Advisory Board had chartered and sent a vessel to Canadian-Labrador to load fish for the foreign market, thus avoiding the regulations? We again call the attention of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to this charge and request him to say whether the report is true or not.

Queen's College Re-Union.

The Biennial Re-union of the Alumni of Queen's College, to which the Alumni of the other colleges were invited, took place at the College on Saturday at 1 p.m. After a most sumptuous repast had been partaken of, His Lordship the Bishop proposed the health of His Majesty the King, which was responded to by the signing of the National Anthem. The Bishop then proposed the toast "Floreat Domus," and took occasion to refer to the fact that the College had entered upon a new stage of development, inasmuch as the campaign had met with a great measure of success. It was not intended that the College should simply go along in the same groove, but that it should grow and develop to meet the growing needs and demands of the times. He forcibly argued for the continued existence of the College, and said that the Alumni of the College were doing splendid work in the Diocese.

The Rev. G. S. Chamberlain, the senior priest of the Diocese, to whom the Bishop referred as "youngest man in the Diocese," responded with his well-known felicity of expression, reviewing the history of his connection with the College and his subsequent work as a priest in various parts of the Diocese. He closed his magnificent speech with a most eloquent and rousing peroration, expressing the hope that the College will, as a result of the Campaign, "wear the laurels of victory upon its plumes."

Mr. Chamberlain was followed by the Rev. Canon Smith, Episcopal Commissary, whom the Bishop called "the historian of the Diocese," a title he rightly deserved. The beloved Canon spoke most feelingly of the College and of his work as a priest in the remote and unwieldy portions of the Diocese, and concluded by thanking his hearers for their hearty reception, which, he said, was "a comforting kindness to an old man."

Canon Bolt proposed the toast "Our Visitors" and spoke of the value of gatherings of this kind. Homologous remarks that they constituted a sound argument for an annual Synod. He hoped the visiting clergy would return to their various parishes and missions with very pleasant memories of this Re-union.

Canon Smart replied on behalf of the visitors, and said that he had fully intended to be present at this gathering, no matter how he got there. Now that the college doors have been re-opened, they must be kept open by the determined efforts of all.

Mr. H. E. Knight, one of the College's warmest friends, and a lecturer for many years, spoke most kindly of his associations with former students, and hoped that he had helped to make Literature helpful to them, if only as an incentive to reading good books. He urged the clergy to back up the College, which has such a good record, and is capable of supplying all the clergy required for the Diocese.

The Rev. H. J. Read, Rural Dean of St. George's, spoke of the bond of fellowship which has ever existed between all Queen's Alumni and the Alumni of other Colleges, and always felt like making Queen's his home when in St. John's.

Dr. Facey was the final speaker, and took advantage of the opportunity to tell of the progress of the campaign both in the Outports and, so far, in St. John's. He referred at length to the efforts which various parishes and missions had made and of the enthusiastic way in which they had entered into the campaign. He said that Canon Smart had thrown a vast amount of energy and enthusiasm into the campaign, and was a tower of strength to the cause. Dr. Facey thanked most sincerely the clergy who had done so much for the campaign, the ladies who so kindly provided such a bountiful feast, and the press, which has given so generously of its space to propaganda for the campaign. He concluded by reminding his audience that the campaign is not by any means over. It must buckle down to work and see it through to a glorious conclusion.

An Honest Citizen.

On Saturday last a well known citizen found a little child, who had strayed from its home, and brought it to the police station, and shortly afterwards the same citizen again returned to the station with a handful of money, which he had picked up. The money is awaiting its owner at the lockup. The child was taken away by its parents Saturday evening.

Queen's College Endowment Campaign

CATHEDRAL CHURCH OF ST. JOHN THE BAPTIST.

Sunday, Sept. 19, (16th after Trinity), saw the second Sunday's work in connection with this great campaign. The early Eucharist with its large number of intercessors, was not the least important part of the day's efforts. Those who approached the Theological College (Queen's College) campaign by the avenue of the great Eucharistic Intercession, saw the marvellous possibilities opening out before the institution, and were braced for arduous and self-sacrificing service for the cause.

The morning service at 11 o'clock will long abide in the memories of those who were privileged to be present. The large number of ladies and officers of the C.L.B. at the service gave the preacher of the day a unique opportunity of influencing the rising generation of churchmen. The Rev. Andrew Tulk, Rector of Burin, a graduate of Queen's College, was the preacher. It is no exaggeration whatever to state that if a tree is known by its fruits, then Queen's College as an institution for training men for the sacred ministry, is too fruitful and valuable a tree to be cut down or left to perish of neglect. "Why has such a man been kept in the back-ground?" "A splendid effort," "a convincing plea earnestly and eloquently put," "if Queen's College has many sons who hold such a brief for their Alma Mater, and can plead her cause so effectively, she will never go under." These are a few of the comments made as the large congregation dispersed after the service.

The preacher riveted the attention of the large congregation including the ladies of the C.L.B. and we know that ladies are proverbially restless, as he unfolded his theme. His sermon was an appeal based on the grounds of the great present need for men to serve in the sacred ministry owing to the stressful days in which we live—days which ring with an insistent challenge for a new focus. The demand of the present is for a readjustment of the old order so as to make impossible the past shadows and to hand on to future peoples the high ideals of fellowship and service gathered from the cataclysm of the past.

The Church is in a unique position to accomplish this task because she has proved herself a supernatural force in the great upheaval, and her appeal for means to provide a more effective ministry comes as a call from God. In terms of practical churchmanship, his call voices itself in a request to provide more priests to minister in the large areas of the Diocese so that the hungry sheep of the flock might be fed and it was an echo of the past in which the vision of those great Apostles of the Church, Bishops Spencer, Kelly, Field and Jones played so large a part and into whose constructive policy the Theological College was woven. The preacher referred to the unique opportunity of the present to voice the call of the Church owing to the presence of the C.L.B.—young soldiers of the Cross—and exhorted those present to live living members of a living cause and to carry into every day life a personal consecration to a great cause. It is possible to give the answers of indifference and emotion, but only the Christian answer of service of which the Cross is so supreme an example is worth while. This answer alone could meet the new and gladden the heart of Him who died that men might live.

Police Court.

A bookkeeper was charged with appropriating the sum of $206 from a letter sent to a well known business firm by a lady of Harbor Main. Mr. W. J. Higgins appeared for the accused and asked for bail. It was granted in the sum of $4,000, $2,000 self and two sureties for $1,000 each. A drunk was released.
Richard Grey, charged with breaking and entering the store of Franklin Agencies, pleaded not guilty. The charge was changed to one of larceny. Sergeant Furlong going night duty gave evidence and said he found a pane of glass broken in the window, and a rubber boot, an empty rum bottle and the accused on the premises. The prisoner was put in the witness box and stated that on Saturday evening he drew five dollars to procure a boarding house, as it was too wet to go to his country residence. He was unable to find lodgings, so he went to Franklin's and laid down on a pile of hay. During the night a noise was heard by him and he supposed it was fellows fighting. The bottle found on the premises did not belong to him, as he did not drink anything since Regatta Day. The accused, addressing the judge said: "Look here yer honor I'm losing me work to-day, because I slept last night on a pile of hay." The evidence for the prosecution did not convince the judge of the man's guilt, so he was allowed to go.

At St. Thomas's.

At St. Thomas's morning service yesterday, Rev. H. J. Read, Rural Dean of St. George's and Rector of Channel parish, delivered an interesting discourse dealing particularly with the need of support for Queen's College. He referred especially to Rev. J. T. Richards' circular letter and also to the need for priests in his own deanery, which covers a stretch of 200 miles, some of the settlements within that area having only two or three services during the year.

The service at night was attended by a large congregation despite the downpour of rain. The service programme was in shorter form than usual, and instead of the regular sermon which was to have been preached by the Rector, there were three addresses delivered by the Bishop, Revs. Canon Smart and Dr. Jones. These addresses directed special attention to Queen's College and the campaign being conducted in its behalf. The Rector of St. Thomas's spoke briefly and dealt with the secret of the Church's success, holding that it was to be found in the opportunities opening for the better accomplishment of the Master's will and work. Canon Smart referred to several present priests of the Church who, having faced many difficulties and drawbacks in youth, had seized their opportunity and were now honoured and successful workers for the Church. He made a stirring plea for the continuation and upbuilding of Queen's College, whose existence had been more than justified by her contribution of men to the sacred ministry in this Diocese. The Bishop, who was the last speaker, endorsed all that had been said in behalf of the College. His Lordship referred to the need of more men and thought they must come from his own Diocese, since former avenues of supply had been interfered with, chiefly by the war. England, Canada and other large countries had been denuded of men, and additions to the ranks in the Dominion from outside sources were not to be expected. His Lordship hoped and believed that from the Church of England people in Newfoundland would come such generous response, and to properly establish the College and pave the way for a future supply of clergy, whose work would more than repay any outlay now made. There were present at the service about twenty of the clergy, besides those who occupied seats with the congregation.

The Question of Union.

Some Eastern Canadian Opinions.

(From the Financial Post.)
 These Toronto journals which have been advising the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland to get together and form one province of the Dominion have not made any profound impression upon eastern opinion. Some Maritime editors sarcastically observe that when Ontario learns how to keep its own people at home it will be time enough for the East to sit at the feet of Toronto and learn wisdom. And while the Halifax "Chronicle" blames the Federal Government for taking Maritime money to buy territory for the Western provinces, and for an immigration policy which has overlooked the Maritimes and even attracted the young men from the East, the Montreal "Transcript" suggests that perhaps the Government's great interest in the West was due to a laudable desire to help the great number of business men of the Maritimes, who, in the past have put their good money in Western lands and wild cat mining schemes, realize something on their investments. It says the "Transcript" the business men of the Maritimes had shown more faith in their own province than the Federal Government would probably have shown more interest, and the opportunities opened might have sufficed to keep most of our young people at home.

An Academic System.
 Maritime union is at present regarded as an academic question. Newfoundland, in the opinion of the St. John "Telegraph" will not want to cast in its lot with the Canadian confederation until the Maritimes show greater development than they have done in the past. Newfoundland appears dubious about trading with the Maritimes. The Government of the Ancient Colony has imposed an embargo on the export of dried fish to Canada unless a price of $12 per qtl. is guaranteed, and at present the Maritime dealers are only offering their own fishermen about $9. Newfoundland evidently considers itself a powerful factor in the salt fish market, and for the present at least the rivalry of the fishing interests of the island and the Maritimes is not likely to promote any enthusiasm for the idea of political union. As for the Maritimes, their people are intensely provincial, their politics in different stages of evolution, and their economic interests somewhat different. Nova Scotians who believe they have a faculty of electing moderate and reasonably honest men to run their provincial affairs are not yet satisfied that New Brunswick has repeated its political past and determined to lead a new life; and they note with some concern that about the only advocates of Maritime union in New Brunswick are discredited politicians—men who have shown a penchant for removing public affairs as far from the control of the people as possible and for putting through dubious deals. Moreover, Nova Scotia is not anxious to share the probable future revenues from her large mineral resources with the other provinces. Probably a union of the Maritimes and Newfoundland would make in the long run for the better development of the fisheries, but the Maritime fishing interests are hardly likely to want an arrangement which would bring Newfoundland within the scope of the new ocean services which are opening up new markets all over the world.

The Fisheries Interests.
 Newfoundland sells large quantities of fish to South America and to Spain and other countries on the Mediterranean. To handle this business it has built up a fleet of small sailing vessels, which, as return cargoes, bring salt from France or Italy and molasses and other tropical produce from the South. The interests that control these vessels would be affected if Canadian steamers called at Newfoundland ports to load fish for foreign countries, or if the fish was sent to Sydney or Halifax wholesalers for transshipment to distant markets. Probably Newfoundland's decision to place an embargo on the export of fish to Maritime wholesalers without the guarantee of a price greater than market conditions warrant was not unconnected with the influence of the vessels owners, though, of course, the island fishing interests generally do not want to see the base of marketing operations transferred to the Maritimes.

The present policy of the Newfoundland Government is to assist the fishing interests to carry stocks till they are able to command a good price and this policy under recent conditions has meant millions for the island. With other countries now revising or extending their fisheries and Canada achieving direct steamship connections with new markets, Newfoundland may not be the big factor in the fish trade she has been in recent years, and her fishermen may again be glad to sell their product to the Maritime wholesaler. If, through the medium of new ocean services the Maritimes are able to attain a dominating position in foreign fish markets and get control of the business of marketing the Newfoundland catch, the island fishing interests may begin to think that there may be something in a political arrangement which would permit them to prevail upon the Canadian Government to have its ships call at Newfoundland ports and enable them to maintain control of the business of marketing their fish in foreign countries. But it does not seem likely that a new province embracing the Maritimes and Newfoundland will be formed in the near future.

To-Day's Messages.

EMULATING DR. TANNER.
 LONDON, Sept. 19.
 Considerable talk was occasioned to-day by a paragraph appearing in the Sunday Times under the heading "Who is Feeding Mr. MacSweeney?" Everybody is asking who is feeding him. There is no doubt at all that the government is not giving him food, or any of the prison officials, priests and relatives are giving him sufficient food to keep him alive. Pointing out that Mr. MacSweeney and the Cork hunger strikers have virtually equalled Dr. Tanner's forty days fast, the paper asks how Mayor MacSweeney and the eleven in Cork, when they tried to go without food, which excited the wonder of the world. In reply to this, Arthur O'Brien of the Irish Self-Determination League, said to-night: "No nourishment or food of any kind is being given to the Lord Mayor."

SITUATION IMPROVING.
 ROME, Sept. 19.
 On the invitation of Premier Giolitti, the employers and metal workers have sent representatives to Rome to continue the negotiations on points not yet agreed upon, looking to a settlement of the strike. An accord already has been reached on a number of points.

HORSE SHOE IDENTIFICATION.
 NEW YORK, Sept. 19.
 John Haggerty, a blacksmith in lower Manhattan, it was learned to-day had identified the front shoes of the dead horse which drew the death wagon to Wall Street, as two he had put on about two weeks ago. Haggerty, however, told the police he doubted if he could recognize the man who brought the animal to him, as he usually shod from eight to a dozen horses daily, and nothing had attracted particular attention to this customer.

NO CLUE TO PERPETRATORS.
 NEW YORK, Sept. 19.
 Department of Justice agents and the police were still without any definite clue to-night as to the identity of the person or persons responsible for Thursday's explosion in Wall Street. Alexander Brallovsky, a Russian journalist, who was arrested late yesterday on information furnished by an anonymous correspondent, and who admitted passing the financial district a short time after the explosion occurred, is still being held without bail on a charge of being an undesirable alien. The only other important development within the past twenty-four hours is a suggestion by medical examiners that the sole remaining unidentified body, that of a blond haired boy about 19, may be that of the driver of the death wagon which was abandoned near the Assay office just before the detonation took place, and which is believed to have carried the time bomb that caused the disaster.

WILLING TO ARBITRATE.
 PARIS, Sept. 19.
 Representatives of Italian employees and the striking workmen who have seized the factories, have accepted Premier Giolitti's offer for mediation, it is stated in advices from Rome.

WORKMEN TAKE CHARGE.
 ROME, Sept. 19.
 Thirty thousand workmen have occupied the factories at Terni in southern Italy. This is one of the most important industrial towns of the country.

HORSE SHOES STILL.
 NEW YORK, Sept. 20.
 The thirty fourth victim of the Wall Street explosion was identified to-day as Wallace Kopper, chauffeur. Interest was attached to the further examination of Alexander Brallovsky, Russian journalist, the only man in New York detained by the authorities. John Haggerty, farrier, identified the shoes of the horse supposed to have drawn the wagon carrying the infernal machine, but there is faint hope of being able to trace the owner.

POLES DRIVE BOLSHEVS.
 WARSAW, Sept. 20.
 Russian Bolsheviki forces have been driven out of East Galicia by a general Polish advance along the southern front.

STILL ALIVE.
 LONDON, Sept. 20.
 Macsweeney's condition is virtually unchanged, according to the report of physicians at Brighton this morning. A bulletin by the Irish Self-Determination League declared Macsweeney had a bad night and was very weak this morning.

Wedding Bells.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Thomas's Church, on Friday, the 17th inst., at 7.30 p.m., when Mr. Victoria, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hanebury was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. James Dwyer, second steward on the s.s. Rosalind. The bride entered the church leaning on the arm of her uncle, Mr. James Hanebury, who acted the part of father-giver, and was attended by her cousin Miss Alice Pippy, while Mr. J. Johnston supported the groom. The bride was attractively attired in a dress of cream georgette crepe and mervé satin, black picture hat and fox furs the gift of the groom, and carried a bouquet of white caryanthemums and maiden hair fern. The bridesmaid also attracted favorable attention, dressed in pink crepe de chene with hat to match. The groom's present to the bridesmaid was a cameo brooch and to the best man gold cuff links. Following the ceremony the party retired to Topsail where the reception was held at Holland's hotel. The guests included Capt. Mitchell, Purser Warm, Asst. Purser McLean and some thirty others of the Rosalind's crew beside a number of guests from the city. The health of the bride and groom was honored with the greatest enthusiasm and a very pleasant evening was spent. The newly-weds are the recipients of many useful and costly presents including a large number of cheques, all of which goes to show the esteem in which they were held. Mr. and Mrs. Dwyer sailed for Saturday's Rosalind on their honeymoon trip which is to be an extension tour through the United States and Canada. The many friends of the happy couple join in wishing them bon voyage and uninterrupted happiness in their married life.—Com. 41 006 1 clever heads and good hearts. Learning comes almost fatally easily to them, and for this reason they are apt to be indolent and to gain a smattering of many subjects while really mastering none.

Their Good Points.

But if they lack power of concentration and pertinacity, they are quick-witted, and, at least, superficially brilliant.

They have a strong will when they choose to exercise it. They are honourable and straightforward in their dealings, and have an uncanny way of detecting the lack of these qualities in others; and they have an often dis-concerning way of saying what they think in unmistakable language—a trait which makes enemies at times.

As a rule, they have very tender hearts open to every appeal of sympathy, and are apt to allow their feelings to run away with their prudence. And when once they love, they love devotedly and loyally.

The September women are often beautiful, and they retain their youth and good looks longer than their sisters born under other signs. In fact, many of the loveliest women in history were born in this month.

They have, too, a rare gift of fascination, and often have a train of admirers, while more beautiful, but less magnetic women are left alone. They have clever heads, too, and witty tongues, with a flow of high spirits which is infectious.

As Wives and Husbands.

When they love, they give their whole heart and life to the loved one, and find a pleasure in self-denial for him. They are good and careful housewives, proud of their home, and finding a great pleasure in making it attractive alike to their husbands and their friends; and they are devoted, if perhaps too indulgent as mothers.

Altogether, the man who weds a September-born maid can consider himself one of the thrice blessed mortals.

As for the September men, they, too, have a good average of excellent and lovable qualities. They are magnetic, and have a considerable power to attract women, and the girls to win them. They are generally clever, and with suitable encouragement—which they need—are pretty sure to do well in life.

They usually make devoted husbands, proud of their wives and their homes, affectionate, considerate, and loyal; and they are no less devoted to their children, and prepared to make great sacrifices for their welfare.

With men they are usually popular, and make the best of friends and most genial of companions. They "run straight" in their dealings with the world, and thus win respect and trust. They have the equipment to succeed in a wide range of callings—as lawyers and journalists, inventors and musicians especially.

The Perfect Match.

They have their moods, of course, like other men—moods of gloom and depression, for which there may be no apparent cause; but these soon pass, and they emerge from them light-heartedly.

They are inclined to be lazy, and want "prodding" not a little. Set them a task and see that they stick to it, and they will do that task right well.

The Surgeon and Alcohol

Captain Courtenay C. Weeks, representing the National Temperance League, said "his experiences as a surgeon during the war showed how alcohol used up the reserves of the human frame. He was at Malta in November, 1915, when thousands of cases of frost-bite came from Gallipoli. The frost-bite spread with terrible rapidity from the feet of the soldier to the body. It was astonishing how the man who had no alcohol in his system was able to resist the blood poisoning that accompanied the frost-bite. In operations the man with alcohol in his blood made a very bad patient. Not only the physical qualities, but character, strength of will, and mental quickness were undermined by the taking of alcohol, even in doses far short of anything like excess."

Black Letter Day.

"September 1, 1920, will be remembered by most of us as a 'black letter day,' says the Morning Post. 'For to-day sees:

(1) The beginning of the shilling telegram at home, with increased rates for telegrams to Belgium, France, Holland, Algeria and Tunis;

(2) The abolition of the half-penny and the introduction of the penny stamp on all registered newspapers;

(3) The commencement of the new railway rates on freightage;

(4) The closing day for the surrender of old currency notes which have now ceased to be legal tender; and

(5) The introduction of a two-penny stamp instead of a penny one on all receipts.

"It is not yet coal-black, however; that depends on the miners."

The Moral Position.

"The real want of England at this hour is a Leader of opposition who can and will stand up to the Prime Minister," says the Saturday Review.

"Neither Mr. Asquith, nor Lord Robert Cecil, nor Mr. Adamson, seems willing or capable of performing this function."

"The nation is suffering from a moral and financial collapse, of which the Prime Minister is either ignorant, or to which he is indifferent."

"The moral position is this. Christianity is in much the same plight as Paganism in the third century; it gets lip-service, but has no real authority. Nobody will obey orders; duty and service are objects of derision. The financial position is one of universal extravagance and unlimited debt."

The Reason Why.

Mr. J. H. Davies, a local miner, said "the reduction in the output of coal in South Wales was due to the determination of the younger colliers not to work as hard as their fathers had worked. They wanted more leisure and more facilities for education and travel—in a word, they wanted to live a pleasanter and better life; and had decided not to work more than six hours a day and five days a week. In his view, the way to increase the output was to introduce more efficient machinery and substitute a few large mines for the present large number of small ones."

Market Report.

(From Saturday's Trade Review.)

COPPER—Nothing doing this week. The recent changes in the Regulations provide for four qualities: No. 1 Prime White Nape $1.00, Mercantile $0.90, Madeira $1.00, and No. 2 $0.80. These rates will probably average about Madeira price for the fishermen not counting West India. There is an abnormal quantity of sun burnt fish. There will also be a reduction of $1.50 on all dump fish. The price for Labrador fish according to circular of one of the large firms here from which we quote are $11.00 for choice, $9.00 ordinary, Prime $8.00 second quality, and $5.00 for Cullage delivered at wharf in St. John's, and $5.00 of the West Coast. Export for the week 1340 dry for St. John's and 3322 from West Coast.

COB OIL—There is no life in the foreign market, and local buyers are refusing to operate extensively. The price generally offered is $200.00 per ton but most sellers are looking for prices a shade higher than $200. If there was any large quantity offered here we would certainly see lower prices. The quantity exported this week amounted to 15,000 gallons, nearly all to New York.

COB OIL—Reports from New York this week state that Norwegian Brokers there have reduced their price about fifty cents per gallon within the week. This will show how hard it must be for them to sell their oil and indicates that we shall undoubtedly see lower prices here. The best of sales this week at $1.20 per gallon, and shall not be surprised to see the market still lower. The report for this week was 750 gallons to New York.

LINSEED OIL—The price of Linseed Oil has declined to 40 cents a gallon, the lowest point reached for three years. It was so high as $3.00 a gallon in 1917.

FLOUR—The wheat crop throughout Canada and the United States is turning out excellent. The weather has been favorable that the crop has been secured in perfect condition. The demand for Europe has been exceptionally heavy and as everybody has been selling, the last barrel of the season at lower prices, it has resulted in heavy orders. We have the following from the most reliable authority, and quite agree with the prediction: "For the coming autumn and winter seasons it is likely that this downward movement will be evident to a comparatively small degree. The change in prices will show more effect early next spring." We have to be thankful that we are going to get a splendid quality of flour; this winter, and there should be no reason to delay purchases at $17.00 to $18.50 for High Manitoba Patents.

SUGAR—The Trade is now in a demoralized condition, awaiting the final action of the Government in connection with the recent Supreme Court decision. A shipment of cheap sugar has been admitted under the Court's ruling, and the price fixed by the Food Control Board has not yet been altered by the Government. Under these circumstances sugar dealers are at a loss to know what prices to ask. They are also alarmed at the prospect of having to meet sharp losses on sugar that they hold, bought in good faith under the Government guarantee. The new Hickman sugar will, we understand, be offered at 24 cents, subject to being able to make delivery.

PORK—The American market continues lifeless with a weak tendency from day to day. It must be recognized that present quotations are attractively low, and an end must come to all the declines that have been going on for months past. Mess Pork, which has always been a popular brand with Newfoundland, is now $20.00 less in price than it was a year ago. Ham Butt is about $10.00 cheaper, and can be bought for $54.00 per barrel. The imports for this week to St. John's amounted to 695 barrels, which gives a total of 21,749 barrels. Brokers complain of the slow pork sales amongst the merchants, and the shortage in imports to the end of the season is inevitable.

BEEF—The market continues firm at last week's advance. The dullness of the local trade amounts almost to stagnation, due it is thought, to the finalizing and adjustment of the fishery rules. The unsettled condition of fish prices—the past month prevented the purchasing of supplies. As the fish did not come in there were little or no purchases made. Local stocks of Beef are fairly large and present prices will likely rule during the fall. During the week 618 barrels were brought in, making the total for St. John's to date 18,026. Prices to-day range from $29 to $36.00, according to grade.

POTATOES—The price of potatoes has further declined in Canada this week, owing to large crops. Canadian quotations this week show that new potatoes can be imported to St. John's for $5 per bag of 180 lbs. or a barrel. We are inclined to think that they will be even lower in October in P.E.I., St. John, and Quebec, where unprecedented crops are coming in. Home grown potatoes are selling now in St. John's from the farmers at $5 to $5.50, and from the stores $6 and $7. Retail is 20 cents a gallon.

DRIED FRUITS—There has been an extra good demand for Greek Currants as a result of the very high price of Raisins. Currants are now held at 25 cents per pound to arrive and market very strong. California Raisins are held at prohibitive prices, and as the new crop cannot arrive before next February or March, it is only being considered for the possibility of next year's business and many hope to see lower prices by that time.

Spanish Raisins have advanced in sympathy with California Raisins, but we hear of several shipments now on the way due here about the end of November.

HAY—The market is very firm and prices locally range from $52 to $54 a ton. Large shipments arrived here by the S.S. Canadian Farmer this week. As this hay was purchased at a time and sent forward when freight rates were low, it can be sold at the above figures. As higher freight rates will rule the balance of the season, hay is likely to be higher in price. There will be no big consignments from this time onward, owing to scarcity of freight space.

OATS—The oat market is weak and shipments due next week will be lower than the present holdings. This decline in oats comes about in sympathy with other grains. The question now is, has oats reached the bottom price. The answer that one of the largest city importers gave the Trade Review yesterday is, that the dealer is entirely in the hands of the farmers. If they look for higher prices, the market will advance, whereas if they are satisfied with to-day's rates we shall get our oats here at a reasonable figure. The local price to-day is $6.50 to $7.00.

THE "GRUB" PEST.

Things Seen in Three Long Lives.

There are living in England to-day three grand old men, all famous lawyers and judges, who were born in a world that is now forgotten except in history—a world before railways, or telegraphs, or matches, or policemen, or hansom cabs, or buses, or fire brigades, or photographs, or sewing machines, or steam ploughs, or saccharin, or income tax, or chloroform," says the children's Newspaper.

When They Were Born.

"When they were born slavery prevailed all over the British Empire, Jews and Catholics could not sit in Parliament, newspapers had to have a fourpenny stamp impressed on them as a tax, children worked sixteen hours a day in the factories, and there was a tax on windows, so that houses had their windows bricked up to keep out the light, and thus allowed harmful microbes to multiply and disease to thrive.

"The German Empire had not been born.

"The old Houses of Parliament, in which all the great scenes of English history had taken place, and in a vault of which Guy Fawkes had been captured, were still standing, and the present London Bridge and Houses of Parliament, Trafalgar Square and the Nelson Monument were not built.

Fame That Has Come And Gone.

"It was a strange world, far remote from to-day; and these three grand old men, still living and working and thinking with keenness and energy, have seen such changes as have never before taken place in any single life.

"The three men are Lord Halsbury, for ten years Lord Chancellor of England, who was born in 1825; Lord Lindley, formerly Master of the Rolls and a Lord of Appeal, born in 1828; and Sir Harry Pollock, K.C., formerly Counsel to the Treasury, and Recorder of Dover, born in 1829. All these famous men have lived in the reigns of George IV., William IV., Victoria, Edward VII., and George V. It must be truly amazing for them to look back to the days of their youth and recall all the changes that have taken place, and all the famous people they have seen move across the stages of Life.

"Think of it! When Lord Halsbury was born Africa was an unknown continent, and none of its great lakes had been discovered. In fact, the great explorers, Livingstone, Speke, Grant, Baker, and Stanley, were either not born or were unknown.

"Lord Halsbury has seen no fewer than 19 Prime Ministers in power, and has seen the British Empire expanded amazingly. These are the colonies which have been added to the flag during his lifetime: Cyprus, Borneo, Hong Kong, Burma, Punjab, Soudan, Oude, Aden, Perim, Queensland, South Australia, Western Australia, New Zealand, Fiji, New Guinea, Natal, Zululand, Bechuanaland, Basutoland, Transvaal, Orange River Colony, Lagos, Niger Districts, Falkland Islands, Straits Settlements, British Columbia, and many minor possessions.

"He and his two friends have seen the Reform Bill pass, the repeal of the Corn Laws, the rise and decline of the Chartists, the three wars with China, the rebellion in Canada, the American Civil War, the Indian Mutiny, the emancipation of the serfs in Russia.

Great Writers Who Lived in Their Time.

"Think of the famous people living when this wonderful old man was a boy. Among writers and thinkers there were Goethe, Sir Walter Scott, Southey, Tom Hood, Canning, Coleridge, Charles Lamb, Mrs. Hemans, Maria Edgeworth, William Wilberforce, Wilkie Collins, Wordsworth, Marryat, William Cobbett, Fanny Burney, Lord Lytton, Dickens, Thackeray, Macaulay, the Brontës, George Stephenson, Sir Humphry Davy, Sydney Smith, Elizabeth Fry, Thomas Campbell, Sir John Franklin, Daniel O'Connell, Hawthorne, Poe. Other prominent people then alive included the Duke of Wellington, Mrs. Siddons, Edmund Keane, Beau Brummell, Sir David Wilkie, Jenny Lind, Constable, Landseer, Lawrence, and Beethoven, Schumann, Mendelssohn, Chopin, and Verdi, Lord Brougham and Faraday and Longfellow and Huxley.

People Who Became Famous.

"But, more wonderful still, here is a list of famous people who were not even born, but whose birth, life, and death all occurred within the compass of the life of the living Lord Halsbury: Holman Hunt, George Meredith, Dante, Gabriel Rossetti, Sir John Millais, Robert Louis Stevenson, Christina Rossetti, Dean Farrar, General Gordon, Lord Wolseley, Lord Avebury, C. H. Spurgeon, Whistler, John Richard Green, Swinburne, Parnell, Edward VII.

Heligoland in the Melting-Pot.

Heligoland is now in the melting-pot, and visitors on Sunday may see the vanishing fortifications.

"If Heligoland is not already quite useless as a fortress, at any rate its teeth have been drawn," says the Telegraph Hamburg correspondent. "It is almost a pity that its fortifications could not have been preserved as a curiosity of misapplied labour. They were a model of that Grundlichkeit with which the Germans did the wrong thing. The constructors of the latter works seem to have taken a battleship as their model. In fact, they transformed Heligoland into something very like a stationary ship of war.

"From one end to the other the island, which is little more than a mile long and only about one-fifth of a square mile in area, was tunnelled and honeycombed with subterranean chambers. In these there was accommodation for officers and men, hospitals, engine-room, and everything needed to fight the fortress—living apartments for officers and men, hospitals, engine-room, and everything needed for the construction of the war harbour, quays, and other works on the beach level.

"The demolition has been put out to contract with German firms, which receive for it a 15 per cent. addition to their wages bill. In the dissection of the guns and armour plates a new oxy-hydrogen process is being employed. It is, I am told, a German invention, and was first put into practice only a few months ago. The flame by which the cutting is done is so hot that it bites its way through the centre of the breach of a 12in. gun in about a minute. Under the influence of the high temperature the rings of which the barrel is built up become detached from one another.

STRENGTH FOR YOUNG MOTHERS

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restores Health and Strength.

Lansing, Mich.—"After the birth of my child I was not able to stand on my feet. I was so weak I could not get up. I suffered such pains in my back I could not work or hardly take care of my baby. One of my neighbors recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash, and I got better right away and was soon a new woman and could work hard, and I can recommend these remedies to other young mothers who are weak and ailing as I was."—Mrs. ORA O. BOWERS, 621 S. Hooper Street, Lansing, Mich.

Women who are in Mrs. Bowers' condition should not continue to suffer from weakness and pain—but profit from her experience and give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial.

For suggestions in regard to your condition write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of their 40 years' experience at your service.

"By this process the armour plates of the turrets and cupolas are being cut up into practicable sections and the guns into lengths of three or four feet each. With steel at its present price the debris will realize a large sum, though the cost of transport to the mainland will be heavy. At the time of my visit seven of the big howitzers and the southern battery of twelve-inchers had been destroyed. Apart from the breech-blocks, which had been removed, the big guns at the other end of the island were intact, but the greater part of the turrets had been taken to pieces.

"To get rid of the concrete will be a much more delicate operation. Unless the blasting is done with small charges and great care, it may literally destroy Heligoland, for the works are like a net spread over the whole of the island. Except for the disengagement of metal work, the concrete has as yet hardly been touched.

Woman's Magnetic Power.

A GIFT OF THE GODS—HOW IT SHOULD BE USED—SHE IS IT.

(By the Baroness de Bertouch.)
 What is the magnetic power about women? This is a problem that has puzzled men from the days of Eve, and is still engaging their attention. The gifted writer, the Maroness de Bertouch, has in this article faced that problem, and has thrown much light upon it. She submits that a man who possesses innate magnetism is, generally speaking, a far less dangerous being than a woman similarly endowed. She tells how in women that spark, divine in some cases and satanic in others, can be the means of even making and unmaking kingdoms. Women at times possess this gift of the gods in such abundance that she might really be called "It." She must remember, however, that great gifts bring great temptations, as well as great opportunities.

SEX ATTRACTION.

Putting the Match to Human Gunpowder.

What is the energizing force in the polarity existing between the sexes—the subtle something which puts the match to human gunpowder and sends us all upon the "arpath in the hope of taking scalps." Is it the word in obscure psychology, or the perfection of an acquired art—in other words, a glorified species of monkey-trick played by men and women (especially women) upon their fellows, ever since the world ceased to be without form and void? Possibly neither of these surmises may hold water, but in all probability the keynote of the whole matter lies in the ever-lapping of them both. Certain it is that mere physical beauty is seldom magnetic, still less is personal excellence, or even magnificent mental achievement. The polarity I speak of is an inexpressible possession which slips through the fingers of analysis, and resolves itself into the ambiguous but greatest of all little words—"It."

The Gift of the Gods.

Any man or woman who is not born a Caliban or screech-owl may be the recipient of this nameless gift of the gods. We have only to take a look around at society in general to see the justice of this remark. We could all enumerate more than one beauty and the beast marriage, besides countless instances where really ugly men have devastated the homes of beautiful young wives by sheer force of an attraction which no one else could understand but only condemn with horror and disgust. And these samples of polarity are relatively rare when compared with the companion picture—that of the magnetic woman (for lack of a better name)—not necessarily either beautiful or highly gifted, who, if she chooses, can almost make and unmake kingdoms, because of the one little spark, divine in some cases and satanic in others, with which she can at will enthrall or inflame the man whose soul she has drawn into polaric affinity with her own.

Man the Incomplete Entity.

A man who possesses innate magnetism is a far less dangerous being than a woman similarly endowed, that is to say with rare exceptions. As a rule his polarity is an individual expresses itself in the diffusion of a certain sense of power and masterfulness which in the eyes of most women is of great price. In public work it gives him the control of many, glides the edges of his speech, and often forms the corner stone of a successful walk through life. But man, no matter how magnetic, must be and always will be an incomplete entity. The creation of Eve, as the crowning supplement to the almighty scheme of Eden, has bequeathed a precedent to posterity which the life of almost every great man past or present has proved to be an undeniable fact—not one of the theoretical fictions which these primeval precedents so often turn out to be. Woman is a complete entity. In herself and of herself, she can make her own life and the lives of others too. She will set her teeth and fight it out alone, whereas man can ill dispense with that sympathy and support which through the polarity of kindred souls a woman only can give him. In his ascent of the ladder of fame, it is her hand that upholds and encourages, but except perhaps for a matter of financial "backing" there are few, if any women on record who owe their "lift" in life to anything but their own efforts, plus that supreme gift of magnetism which they have known how to turn to unlimited account.

But the polaric lady is not altogether an unmixed blessing. She knows her power, and in using it is not above abusing it also.

Woman Is "It"

"I cannot think what anyone can see in Mrs. or Miss So and So," is a remark which we are always hearing on other women's lips, yet all the while we note that a queue of men is waiting to worship at the shrine of the above, and that the lady herself is daintily engaged in picking out the trumps from her sister women's tricks. Far more beautiful women surround her, far better and sweeter souls, but they just lack what she possesses—the responsive polarity which calls from sex to sex—and so as a natural sequence they drift wallwards while she sails out into the sunshine amid a chord of incense that is reminiscent of delicately distilled brimstone and Victorian lavender, mingled together in equal parts. It is a pity that human frailty must always have its say, but it should be remembered that great gifts bring great temptations as well as opportunities; so we should not be too hard on the poor priestesses of It, even if they do dip their fingers into their fellow-women's game-bags, or nourish their men friends' mentality on savoury morsels instead of a skim-milk diet.

The Magnet and the Needle.

No matter when or where, the polaric woman will always take the front seat in the education of man. Rightly or wrongly she will dominate him just as the magnet dominates the needle, or the tide the waves. Whether the soul of man embodies the negative pole and that of the woman the positive, I know not, but they may be relatively compared to the pillar of cloud and the pillar of fire, each potent in its individual way, yet of a widely different intensity and significance, in accordance with those mystic laws of Nature about which we know just enough to make us realize our profound ignorance. This much, however, we do know, and that is that from the point of view of polarity, man and woman can never stand on the same plane, for the reason that whereas he may be endowed with It to the point of overflowing she is It, the living incarnation of that delightful but dangerous magic to which no one has yet discovered an adequate name.

What Do the Miners Want?

FAMINE AND DEATH WILL FOLLOW A STRIKE.

Though of late a good deal of public attention has been focused on coal miners, there are still many people who do not understand their claims. "What do they want?" such people ask. A sufficient reply to the question, is that the miners must feel sure of the justness of their demands, or they would not threaten a general strike. For the mere probability of a stoppage throughout the country has a serious effect on trade, and when one actually takes place creeping paralysis sets in immediately. The only measure of a miners' strike now is that which occurred in 1912, lasting for six weeks. On the very first day that the pits

J. F. Mackenzie Gains 25 Pounds and Feels Fine

"The Way Tanlac Built Me Up Is Simply Remarkable," Says St. John Man.

"Tanlac has not only put me back on my feet, but built me right up to where I have actually gained twenty-five pounds in weight," was the emphatic statement made recently by James F. Mackenzie, well-known carpenter, living at 42 St. John St., St. John, N.B.

"About a year ago I began to have indigestion very bad, and lost my appetite, fell off terribly in weight and got into a very run-down condition. My stomach was in such a bad fix that everything I ate soured and bloated me up with gas until I was in perfect misery, and I dreaded for meal-times to come round. I had such pains across the small of my back that when I sat down or stooped over it made me almost cry out, and I had such spells of dizziness that sometimes when walking down the street everything would suddenly seem to swim before my eyes and I could hardly stand up. I got no more sleep at night than an owl, and became so weak and run-down I often had to lay off from work for three days at a time.

"But the way Tanlac overcame my troubles and built me up was nothing less than remarkable. In a short time I could eat like a horse and never suffer a particle from indigestion, and I rapidly picked up in weight and strength. I haven't had a headache or dizzy spell since I first started on Tanlac, and my back is so much better I can work all day and never have an ache or a pain. I can't say enough in praise of Tanlac for it gave me back my health and strength."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, by Reg. Sullivan, Pouch Cove; Sound Island Store, Sound Island; Dennis Flynn, Avondale; J. J. O'Brien, Cape Broyle; J. W. Smith, Baine Harbor; W. A. Burdock, Belleoram; John Morey, Fermeuse; Mrs. Jos. Quinn, Renews.—adv.

were deserted, notwithstanding that most manufacturers had for some time previously treated coal as a precious commodity, many blast furnaces were damped down in the North of England, and thousands of men engaged in small industries had to be discharged. Next day more than 40,000 tinplate and mill-workers were thrown idle in South Wales, while pottery works, woolen mills, brick-yards, etc., closed down in great numbers. Food prices, too, began to soar.

By the end of the first week of the strike 1,600,000 men were unemployed, and when it had dragged on for a month the country was at a standstill, and on the verge of famine.

Everywhere there were hunger-marches of the unemployed, and in numerous towns bakers' shops were raided. Soup kitchens and relief stations, plentiful and well organized as they were, could not satisfy the hunger of the workless people.

No less desperate was the quest for fuel. Small pits were sunk on a common in the Midlands; stocks of coal on the railways and elsewhere had to be guarded day and night; and in thousands of homes agonized mothers broke up the furniture to provide warmth for their hungry children.

One of the most successful forays for fuel was carried out in Staffordshire. A certain canal was systematically dragged, and from it was recovered a large quantity of coal that had dropped from the boats. The strike lasted for six weeks, during which our industries lost more than 50,000,000 working days, representing upwards of £12,000,000 in wages. In the same period, moreover, the trades unions lost £200,000 a week.

But if the miners strike now the consequences will be even more disastrous than they were in 1912, because of the abnormal times through which we are passing. The former evils will be intensified, and we shall have to cope with new ones in addition.

There are now at least 3,000,000 people whose employment depends on a regular supply of coal, and if it is interrupted they must suffer immediately. If, again, coal traffic on railways is wholly suspended, there will be a heavy fall in receipts, and this will involve a further increase in passenger fares and goods rates.

Millions Lost in Wages.

And what will be the effect on railwaymen? If another national strike of miners lasted some time, they would, according to Sir Robert Horne, President of the Board of Trade, all have to be discharged.

The direct pecuniary loss will also be unprecedentedly heavy, since the miners alone will forfeit wages amounting to at least £3,500,000 a week.

But the consequences of a general stoppage will be most appalling in connection with those things which no statistics, however elaborate, can show—sorrow and suffering, famine and the illness which death alone can relieve. For one thing, who can for a moment forget that bread, cheap and plentiful in 1912, is already at a price which is almost ruinous to parents with big families.—Tit-Bits.

This is to certify that I have used MINARD'S LINIMENT in my family for years and consider it the best liniment on the market. I have found it excellent for horse flesh.

Clean -- Sparkling -- Inviting

A GOOD meal, daintily served, is most fully appreciated when eaten in a room that sparkles with sunshine and cleanliness. Your dining-room will always have this much-to-be-desired appearance if you use O-Cedar Polish, as directed, on the wood-work, floors and furniture. A few drops of O-Cedar on a wet cloth will form a soft lather which removes any dust and grime the furniture may have collected. Over this clean surface simply rub a dry cloth. The "polish" that results from this treatment is bright and lustrous—it will cheerfully reflect the rays of sunlight that enter the room by after sunset. Both at your Hardware or Grocery Store.

How Fortune Bay Views It.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir—Allow me space in your valuable paper for a few remarks with regard to fish control.

I have been a reader of the Advocate for the past three years, and a strong supporter of Mr. Coaker, although I have never seen him; but judged by his press come day this Colony would benefit by his work. To my regret that of a great many more on this coast, and no doubt among his own men north, we see the gradual destruction of our Colony. A great many families will suffer this winter through Mr. Coaker's policy. If the West Coast people were being treated as Capt. Edwin Kean (one of Mr. Coaker's planters) stated in the Advocate that northern people were treated with regard to cull of course we couldn't go back on Mr. Coaker. According to a letter written by the above-mentioned captain to the Advocate he is perfectly satisfied with the cull of fish. I assure Captain Kean that if he were a fisherman on this coast where he could see and handle just as good a No. 1 fish as he will handle north, and had to contend with the cull as we have, he would not be so satisfied as he appears to be, and instead of 75 per cent. of his fish going as No. 1 he would have to be satisfied with less than 25 per cent.

afraid, looking at things as they exist at present, that Mr. Coaker would be a poor friend to whom to appeal. Take the food control, for instance. We learn to-day that sugar can be imported and sold for 22 cents per pound, but we are not allowed to buy it unless we pay 35 cents. Is this helping the underdogs, the fishermen, as they claim they are doing? Not on this coast at any rate. It is no doubt helping them down to poverty, and helping others to fill their pockets. It's now come to this, Mr. Editor, to him that hath shall be given, and to him that hath not, even that.

I am now ready to take some repair work. Any part of the house from sill to roof I can handle. If you intend putting up a New Building why not have me superintend it. You can save money and get a better job than if you put it out on contract. I also have a Pile Driver and all equipments for wharf building and would be glad to take on a job at that work. I will be glad to call and see anyone who may have work to be done.
