HANNA'S ORDER INTO DISCARD

Sir Henry Thornton Removes the Ban C. N. R. Employes May Accept Public Elective Positions—Meets Representatives of 97,000 at Conference in Ottawa.

(Canadian Press) Ottawa, Jan. 6.—The "Hanna order," which debarred employes of the Canadian National Railways from accepting public elective positions, has been rescinded. Yesterday afternoon at an informal conference of chairmen and general chairmen of standard railway organizations, employed on the C. N. R., with members of the executive, Sir Henry Thornton announced the removal of the order. He said that he had recognized that the order should be carefully reviewed. This had been done and he informed the representatives of the employes that he had decided to remove the order so far as the executive of the C. N. R. was concerned. The conference was arranged by Tom Moore, president of the Trades and Labor Congress and representative of labor on the board of directors of the C. N. R. There were present representatives of 97,000 employes spread over the Canadian system. Mr. Moore called after the meeting that Sir Henry Thornton had outlined his policy with regard to the operation of the system, and his attitude and that of his associates towards labor. The representatives of the men made suggestions, and assured the president that he could depend upon the whole-hearted support of the employes. Mr. Moore said that the announcement in regard to the "Hanna order" had been received with enthusiasm by the employes' representatives. Various speakers representing the shop crafts, transportation organizations and general staffs said that they were impressed with Sir Henry Thornton's fair attitude toward labor. Attention was drawn by these speakers to the present dissatisfaction of the president that he would resist political interference in the operation of the railways. It was said that labor organizations in the past had fought against political patronage and interference on the old I. C. R. during government management. Organized workers could be depended upon to give Sir Henry every support in carrying out the pledge that no political interference would be allowed.

OCTOBER WAS GOOD MONTH FOR THE RAILWAYS

The C. N. R. Carried More Freight Than in Any Month in its History.

Ottawa, Jan. 6.—(Canadian Press.)—An increase of more than 107 per cent in net operating revenues earned by the Canadian National Railways during October, 1922, over October, 1921, is shown in tables made public last evening. The statistics covering the operations on the Grand Trunk Railway are not included, although this part of the government system showed a six per cent increase in revenues over October, 1921. The net operating revenues of the C. N. R., exclusive of the Grand Trunk, during October, 1922, totalled $2,158,748, as compared with $1,038,921 in October, 1921. At the same time the operating ratio, which is the amount spent by the railway to earn a dollar, dropped from 91.92 to 84.63. The C. N. R. in October carried the largest volume of freight ever moved over the system. The large grain crop, with the long haul from the western provinces to the elevators, was the chief factor, but heavy movements of coal, lumber and other materials also helped. The C. P. R. also made a record in revenue ton miles during October and showed the lowest operating ratio in the last three years. Revenue ton miles aggregated 2,126,879,127, an increase of 85.6 per cent over October, 1921. Freight revenues increased $729,376, or 43 per cent, over those of October, 1921.

SENSATIONAL INCIDENT AT LAUSANNE MEETING TODAY

Turkish Representative Makes Grave Allegation When Humanity Plea is Made and Then Stalks Dramatically Out of the Conference Room.

(Canadian Press) Lausanne, Jan. 6.—The Turkish delegation to the Near East conference left the meeting hall today as a protest against the allied insistence upon the establishment of an Armenian national home. The U. S. delegation took no part in the debate today. Conference circles were seething with excitement after the incident and wondering whether it forecasted further affairs of the sort calculated to disturb or not disrupt the entire conference. It was pointed out, in any event, as indicating that affairs were reaching a crisis.

Accounts differ as to what actually happened. The allied spokesman declared they were far from insisting on the Armenian home. On the contrary, they had said there should be no question of inserting the Armenian home arrangement in the Lausanne treaty. They had merely asked that Turkey, for humanitarian reasons, give her earnest attention to the question of allocating some corner of Turkey to the Armenians, where they would enjoy some degree of local autonomy under the sovereignty of Turkey and be given certain guarantees concerning the privilege of guarding their national language and customs. It appears that after Chairman Montagna's remarks and suggestions by Sir Horace Rumbold regarding assigning the Turkish representative to the autonomous district for the Assyro-Chaldeans, the French were about to associate themselves with the Italian and British suggestions, when Risa Nur arose abruptly with a statement about the allies' interest in the Armenians and others being understood by the Turks because the Allies had played politics with the minorities. Greek Version.

According to the Greek version of the meeting, Risa Nur used the words: "You are interested in them because they served you as agents and you want to know what you have to say on this subject, and I deem all the declarations made as non-existent." Chairman Montagna intervened, saying Risa Nur's utterances had violated the conference regulations, while the Turkish delegate declared the Turkish representative had brought a grave accusation against the allies.

After the Turkish plenipotentiary had stalked dramatically out of the auditorium, followed by his assistants, the French delegate read a statement expressing the hope that Turkey would give the Armenian home question her consideration from motives of humanity.

What Turks Say About It. According to the Turkish account of the incident, Chairman Montagna read a statement favoring the Armenian home, and was followed by Sir Horace Rumbold of Great Britain, who spoke in advocacy of establishing the home in Cilicia. Sir Horace wanted the Turks to give an independent district to the Assyro-Chaldeans, in the region south of Lake Van and west of Lake Urmia. Risa Nur Bey, the Turkish spokesman, declared he understood the allied interest in the Armenians and others, because the allies had incited them to revolt and therefore felt morally bound to help them. Risa Nur said he must consider to-day's declarations as non-existent because the allies had incited them to revolt and therefore felt morally bound to help them.

BATTLE FOR A TOWN NEAR CORK

Irregulars Make Attack and There are Casualties—Bank Escort Ambushed.

Dublin, Jan. 6.—Irregulars carried out an attack in Millstreet, an important National centre of Cork county last night. Reports of details differ. One says the town was captured, another that outlying points were captured, but that the garrison defending the town itself repulsed the attack after seven hours fighting. A National sergeant-major was killed and five of the National forces were wounded. It is said the irregulars suffered several casualties. Five National soldiers acting as escort to officials conveying money from a bank were ambushed in Waterford yesterday. One of the soldiers was killed and two were wounded.

THE NEW BRITISH PREMIER AND HIS TASK

Well, sir," said Mr. Hiram Hornbeam to the Times reporter, "Me an' Hanner had a good laugh an' a talk about old times las' night. I got a copy of Bradley's Almanack down to the store an' Hanner read the jokes to me just like we used to do with Ayer's Almanack forty or fifty year ago. We read about the eclipses of the sun an' moon, an' run over some of the historical events an' the church calendar—an' about burns an' scalds an' things like that—an' about the patent medicines an' how to keep well—say, it was great. I mind when the Bible an' the almanack was about the only readin' we had—outside of Morse's Juggerty an' the spellin' book. When I pass one of them there shoe-shine places an' see the papers an' magazines the folks hes to pick from now I sometimes wonder if they git any more reel good o' readin' so many than we did o' just a few that we had lots of time to digest. Well—they can't wear away from the old Almanack, anyway—By Hen!"

Mrs. Stillman Is Asking For $120,000 a Year

Record-Breaking Alimony is Sought—Says $50,000 She Now Receives is Not Enough.

New York, Jan. 6.—(Canadian Press) Mrs. Anne U. Stillman has applied to the courts for the record-breaking alimony of $120,000 a year, pending James A. Stillman's appeal of her victory award and Guy's vindication. She alleges that Stillman's gifts to Flo Leeds, a chorus girl co-respondent in the suit, total about $800,000. According to the attorneys for Mrs. Stillman her alimony of $50,000 mended with the report of the referee's findings, and since that date Mr. Stillman has voluntarily paid her at the rate of $50,000 a year. This sum, Mrs. Stillman says, is insufficient to support her and the children, Anne, James, Alexander and Guy.

WOMEN QUAFFED BEER AS THEY BOWLED MATCH

Prohibition Agents Fine Pipe Line From Barroom to Alleys in New York.

New York, Jan. 6.—Prohibition agents announced today that they had found a real beer pipe line leading from a barroom to the bowling alleys of the Yorkville Women's Bowling Club yesterday and that when they raided both places they were threatened with pins and balls by forty irate bowlers. The women, according to the agents, were having a good time bowling and quaffing beer. The owner of the hall and the bartender were arrested, charged with violating the Volstead Act.

FITTLE TO LOOK FOR REPEAL OF PROHIBITION

President Harding's Reply to New York Women's Club is Hissed.

New York, Jan. 6.—Members of the Molly Pitcher Club, some of them prominent society and club women, indulged in a period of hissing when it was announced at a club luncheon that President Harding had declined to meet a delegation named to lay before him the club's arguments for repeal of the prohibition amendment. The storm burst when Ransom H. Gillett, counsel for the New York division of the association, opposed to the prohibition amendment, read excerpts from a letter from the President. The club thwarted the President's desire to avoid "controversial publicity" by the particular. First, it must be a part of his letter. Second, it gave out in advance even of its receipt by the President—a newly adopted resolution, arguing against the validity of his objections to the interview and renewing the request that the delegation be received. The resolution also reminded the President that he had recently received a church delegation "to discuss prohibition."

TOM MOORE IN DEFENCE OF THE LABOR MINISTER

Ottawa, Jan. 6.—That the interests of labor had suffered in the past and would do so in the future from indiscriminate censuring of individuals without justification, and personal attacks of a wild nature was the statement of President Tom Moore of the Dominion Trades Congress to the Ottawa branch of the Trades and Labor Council last night. There had been some criticism of the Minister of Labor for alleged lack of sympathy with the labor union viewpoint on some issues, said Mr. Moore, and he wished to protest against the active trade union work because they have not thought it wisdom to do so.

"Well, sir," said Mr. Hiram Hornbeam to the Times reporter, "Me an' Hanner had a good laugh an' a talk about old times las' night. France Hopes To Win Britain To Her Reparations Plan

Occupation of Essen and Bochum Part of the Project. Customs Cordon Around the Ruhr District, but Belief is That Action Will be in Easy Stages—British Public Looking to Washington.

(Canadian Press) Paris, Jan. 6.—France is proceeding quietly but firmly on a programme of action which she herself is convinced, and which she believes she will be able to persuade others, is the only right course and the reparations question is to be settled once for all. "A person in government circles particularly well placed to speak authoritatively," is quoted by the Echo de Paris as believing that the neutrality of Great Britain will be transformed to co-operation if the French plan proves successful. The same personage cherishes a hope of converting United States opinion. It is understood that the French Premier favors a semi-military plan which is divided into two parts, the first comprising the occupation of Essen, where the Krupp works are located, and the establishment of a customs cordon around the Ruhr, together with the posting of receivers for the mines and the transportation companies. M. Poincaré's ambitious disagreement with Bonar Law, and knowledge that the U. S. may yet take a hand in affairs, will, it is believed, make M. Poincaré see not impressed and as the moves, beginning mildly with limited action and increasing its scope if the German are not impressed and as the efficacy of the movement is demonstrated. This also would make it easy for Great Britain and the U. S. to prepare some substitute plan before the French movement was fully developed.

WEE WILLIE KEELER.

A man died in Brooklyn on New Year's Day whose passing and whose career were made the subject of long articles in the newspapers, many of which also found in this man's record something worthy of editorial reference. He was not a great politician, a great merchant, a great financier, a great scientist or educator or author. His merit was that he could "hit 'em where they ain't"—to use his own quaint phraseology in describing his success at the bat on the baseball diamond.

THE FIGHT GOES ON.

The Toronto Globe says that the rejection of the radial agreement by the property owners of Toronto is merely a check, and that the fight for cooperative municipal ownership of fast electric railways will be continued until victory is achieved. The majority of the new City Council favors the policy and will continue to fight for its adoption. The Globe says: "The public ownership and operation of radial railways must fight for its life as in the earlier days of Sir Adam Beck's leadership the public ownership of light and power services had to fight for its life. But Sir Adam is far from being the obsolete old superannuated his enemies vainly imagine, and the Globe believes that within a comparatively short time, when the case for radials soaks into the mind of the electorate, we shall have in this part of Ontario a well-organized system of radial railways owned and operated under Sir Adam's direction by the associated municipalities."

"Too Many Hindus," Shudders Mazie
The Model, Divorcing Rich Husband

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 5.—Back to earth and the model's stand after a plunge into the occult, Mazie Mitchell, artist, model, is suing Arthur W. Ryerson, Detroit millionaire, for divorce on grounds of the most fantastic cruelty ever charged in a Detroit court. Life was just one Hindu after another, according to Mazie, these turbaned creatures foregathered at her wealthy husband's summer home in Riverside Drive, Detroit, at all hours of the day and night.

THE ASPEN.

Where all the rivers northward run Beyond the Height of Land, And where the law is just a gun, The Judge is steady hand. The feeble aspen of the South Becomes an article king.

And so the man who journeys where The road to Hudson's lies, His wine the sharp Canadian air, His compass in the alder, Grows stronger like the aspen tree That in the North appears— Takes on the stature presently Of arctic pine-trees.

MY FORESTS.

(E. B. Osborne in Canada's Message) External in their pagantry; The white-leaved poplar sue for rains, The birch a maiden-guest remains, The maple flames in a lone hour, Ever the pine's a secret tower. Bird and beast do so abound, My lonely lands seem holy ground; And saw His works there all were good.

LIGHTER VEIN.

Hence Golf Widows. "Your husband is a fine player. Is golf his profession?" "No, his obsession."—Boston Transcript.

None Too Hot.

During an art exhibition one of the artists was receiving the benefit of a friend's criticism. "This canvas," said the friend, indicating a violent bit of impressionism. "Do you not think, after all, the atmosphere is too warm?" "No, it's just what I need, 'not for a pot-bellied.'"—Public Ledger.

F. S. A. McMULLIN AGAIN ELECTED

Remains President of the Trades and Labor Council—Laborers' Wages Considered.

F. S. A. McMullin was re-elected president of the Trades and Labor Council at its semi-annual meeting last evening in its rooms in Prince William street. Some discussion took place on wages for snow removal. It was shown that the city paid $3.25 a day, while the C. P. R. paid only $2.50. It was felt that the C. P. R. should pay the same rate as the city. No action was taken last evening.

REFUSE REPRIEVE.

The British Home Office yesterday refused to grant a reprieve in the case of Mrs. Edith Thompson and Frederick Bywaters, recently convicted and sentenced to hang for the murder of Percy Thompson, the woman's husband. On Tuesday next Mrs. Thompson will be hanged at the Holloway Gaol, and, at the same hour, Bywaters will be executed at Pentonville prison. This will be the first time in fifteen years that a woman has been hanged in England.

MR. DOOLEY ON Gold-Seeking

By FINLEY PETER DUNNE

"Well, ah," said Mr. Hennessy, "that Alaska's th' g-great place. I thought 'twas nawthin' but an iceberg with a few seals roostin' on it, an' wan or two Uncle Warrens when he was a boy. But here they tell me 'tis fairly smothered in gold. A man stabs his toe on th' ground, and lifts th' top off a good mine. Ye go to bed at night, an' wake up with gold fillin' in yer teeth."

"Yes," said Mr. Dooley, "Clancy's son was in here this mornin', an' he says a frind iv his went to sleep out in th' open wan night, an' whin he got up his pants assayed four ounces iv gold to th' pound, an' his whiskers panned out as much as thirty dollars' worth."

"I was a young man in th' ol' country, we heard th' same story about all America. We used to set th' turf-fires of nights, kickin' our bare legs on th' flure an' wishin' we was in New York, where all ye had to do was to hold yer hat an' th' gold guineas'd drop into it. An' whin I got to be a man, I come over here with a ham and a bag iv oatmeal, as sure that I'd return in a year with money enough to drive me own car as I was that name was Martin Dooley. An' that was a cinch.

MOTORS And Their Care

Practical Suggestions for Insuring Longevity of the Car

When ascending a hill, shifting gears before it is actually compulsory will save gasoline and keep from overtaxing the engine.

Valve Stem Lubrication.

Because the valve stems are subject to severe duty, give them a drop of oil occasionally. They wear badly unless lubricated.

A Suggestion for the Cold Garage.

To prevent the radiator of a car from freezing in an unheated garage, if electric current is available, place an electric lamp under the hood and cover the radiator with a blanket.

Never Overload the Car.

An owner of an automobile should never overcrowd his car nor permit objects or passengers to project beyond the sides. Running-board, mud-guards and hoods are not meant to carry persons or property.

Proper Circulation of Water.

An easy way to tell if the water is circulating properly in the cooling system is to feel the top and bottom of the radiator with the back of the hand. With a pump system the water at the bottom will be warm because the pump draws it down. If the pump stops, the water will cool off immediately, owing to the action of the fan.

Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick

Chicago, Jan. 6—It, and when, Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, only daughter of John D. Rockefeller, and divorced wife of Harold McCormick, intends to marry her twenty-eight-year-old secretary, Edward Krenn, is causing the Gold Coast sleepless nights. Curiosity was first fanned into life when Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick returned from Switzerland, where she had been studying 'sympathetic psychology' bringing the young Swiss architect along to lay out the zoological gardens which will be her gift to Chicago.

AN HISTORIC MYSTERY Who carved the totems of British Columbia, how they did the work, their age and meaning, are questions of interest to those who have studied the past. The picture shows a famous totem of the Vancouver Island Swaah Indians. It is the Thunder Bird. The mouth opens and forms an entrance. Tradition tells that they invited a rival tribe to a 'potluch' and as the men were admitted one by one through the mouth of the 'Thunder Bird' they were murdered by their hosts.

CHURCHES ASKED TO COMBAT WAR MENACING WORLD

Declared "Inevitable Unless Better Mind Prevails"

See Kindling of Hatreds—Warn of Nations Turning to Their Old Games of Competitive Imperialism.

Declaring the nations are frankly pushing preparations for another war and that the prevention of such a war is the foremost duty of the Christian Church, a group of 160 prominent Americans, including many well-known clergymen, educators, business men and editors, issued a New Year appeal to church people throughout the United States. They say "another war is inevitable unless a better mind can prevail."

Among the signers are William J. Bryan, Frank A. Vanderbilt, Roger W. Babson, George W. Wickersham, Cardinal O'Connell, Nehemiah Boynton, chairman of the International Church Committee of World Alliance; Arthur J. Brown, secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions; Kenyon L. Butterfield, president of the Massachusetts Agricultural College; John B. Clarke, of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace; Professor Irving Fisher, of Yale University; John P. Frey, editor of "The Moulton Journal," Cincinnati; Bishop Thomas F. Gallor, of the Protestant Episcopal Church; Harriet B. Laidlaw, of the Women's Pro-League Council; Shailer Mathews, dean of the Divinity School of Chicago University; President Thwing, of Western Reserve University; Miss Mary E. Penneybacker, president Chautauqua Women's Club; Judge Henry Wood Rogers, of the Circuit Court, New York; John R. Mott, general secretary of the International Y. M. C. A., and many of the nation's Episcopal and Methodist bishops and other leading ministers of almost every denomination.

COMMUNITY CHEST PLAN IS OUTLINED

Committee Forwards to Various Welfare Organizations a Summary of Proposal for "Federation for Community Service of Halifax."

(Halifax Echo) Federation for Community Service of Halifax is by no means being lost sight of, and an energetic committee is pushing the matter forward.

Proposal for Halifax.

The proposal for the "Federation for Community Service of Halifax," is summarized as follows: Halifax for its size has probably more charitable and philanthropic organizations than any other city in Canada.

THE DEPARTURE OF ERIN

John Bull (to Erin)—Well, good-bye, Erin; and I hope you'll be happy with him.

STRIKE THREAT RENEWS BRITISH COAL SHIPMENTS

American Industries Place Orders for Above 50,000 Tons; Ship Men Expect a Stronger Rate in Spring.

New York, Jan. 5.—Steamship men expect a resumption of coal shipments from the United Kingdom to the United States in anticipation of difficulties at local mines on April 1, when new wage agreements will be negotiated between the owners and union leaders.

While no statement could be obtained from Shipping Board officials, it is believed that the present rate is not attractive. Tramp steamers are willing to accept 7s. 6d. a ton, but the regular liners operated by the board will not be diverted at this rate.

United States; it should be enough to satisfy Halifax citizens that wherever it has been tried out, the results have far exceeded expectations.

1. The independence of the various organizations uniting for community service is not interested with, otherwise than that their annual budgets must be approved of by a central committee, which approval is really of benefit to that particular organization and certainly to the community at large.

2. In the one big annual drive for funds the subscriber is requested to mark the amounts he wishes applied to the various organizations. The total amount ear-marked for each is handed over to that organization to be expended by its own executive exactly the same as at present.

3. Expenditures on capital account are not taken care of. In practically every city where the "give once but enough for all" system has been inaugurated, all of the organizations have had more funds available for carrying on their work than when they put on a separate campaign for funds.

Eligibility.—Any organization applying annually to the general public for funds is eligible for membership in the federation for community service, subject to the endorsement of the central council of the federation as to said organization being entitled to support and the approval by the central council of its annual budget.

Proposed Application to Halifax.—The various city charitable and philanthropic organizations that rely on public subscriptions will be requested to federate under the federation for community service of Halifax as outlined above. It is thought that at least twelve will be favorable, and that it will work out in Halifax as in other places, and that organizations not at first favorable will soon discover that they cannot afford to keep out. Among others it is proposed to put the proposal before: Children's Aid Society, The Halifax Welfare Bureau, Red Cross Society, Children's Hospital, Victorian Order of Nurses, Anti-Tuberculosis League, Boys' Scouts, Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Salvation Army, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Infants' Home, Old Men's Home, Halifax Dispensary, North End Mission.

A central council of the federation will act as a budget committee and trustee board, and will consist of one or more from each of the various organizations that become federated and a group of business men to bring the number up to twenty or possibly twenty-five. The work of the Federation to be carried on by an executive secretary who will be paid an adequate salary and give his entire time to the federation for community service.

among the various bodies that have federated in accordance with their requirements.

"Great Stuff!" Say The Lily-Handed, On First Meeting "Old Man Work"

The general restoring a dirty shirt to its original integrity

New York, Jan. 4.—Honest toil, as such, is not "half bad," in the warm expressed opinion of a number of persons...

For one the colorful career of the dashing Princess Michael Murat (who was Helen Stallo, daughter of Edmund K. Stallo of Cincinnati) has taken a new and unexpected turn.

News that the Ohio princess has opened a restaurant in Nice with a quartette of neatly capped and approved waitresses—all of them impoverished baronesses—was found it "just love."

He's Major General Sergei Yencov, late of the Imperial Russian Navy Establishment (who general in the Russian navy), friend of the late Czar and a former land owner in Russia's imperialistic days.

The general, who was forced to flee from the Bolsheviks is now making a living running a small hand laundry in upper Fifth Avenue.

"Great stuff!" said the general, in equivalent Russian, when the photographer snapped him energetically restoring a soiled shirt to its original integrity.

Joe Page Sees Big Future in Sporting Line For St. John

Looks to World's Amateur Speed Championship Coming Here—Baseball, Hockey and Boxing—Adirondacks Delegation to Carnival and Lily Lake Championships Next Month.

(By Joe Page) Having been identified both as a writer and promoter of sports for more than a third of a century...

The main question, however, in any locality is what are the sports that most appeal to the citizens of their particular community.

But let us go on a little further and we find that "significant little skating meet" is being planned for the place years ago and which no one outside of the city was interested in.

To prove my contention one short year ago the Y. M. C. I. of St. John, N. B., was awarded the Canadian outdoor speed skating championships.

The rank and file of the citizens and all the athletic bodies are each in their own way working on this programme.

I ask again, why? Because it is the only real home of the lover of speed skating and the representatives of the Y. M. C. I. cannot help but note that they have spent years in fostering the game.

Modern Life Lengthened. The average man today has fifteen years longer to live than the man of 1870, thanks to public health progress, according to Dr. Livingston Farrand, President of Cornell University, who delivered tonight the annual Sigma Xi address at a general meeting of the association.

Dr. E. B. Mains of the Purdue Agricultural Experiment Station described efforts which are being made to breed a wheat which will resist rust, a mortality caused by microscopic organisms which during the last two years has destroyed 2,000,000 bushels of wheat and is rapidly spreading.

Dr. Farrand then outlined the organized movements in this country for the improvement of the public health and mentioned as particularly notable the Framingham demonstration under the auspices of the National Tuberculosis Association and the proposed demonstration of the Millbank and Commonwealth Funds of New York in the fields of tuberculosis and child health.

HARVEY PAYS A TRIBUTE TO LORD CURZON

Says, Too, That the British Chancellor of Exchequer is One of the Ablest Men in England.

Col. George Harvey, U. S. Ambassador to Great Britain, returned home last week, to report to Washington on information he was asked to get from London.

"The idea of progress has been almost an axiom in the popular thinking for nearly a century, but now in its stead the conception of inevitable degeneration makes itself heard from time to time.

"We often mistake restlessness for energy. We may be making great display of energy on enterprises that have no permanent value.

"I am merely coming home to report to my editor-in-chief and my managing editor," he said, "and am really nothing but a messenger boy. I can say this, however, the present English government plans to settle and to pay its debts to America. But it is a delicate job. It will require very careful handling.

Convention of Scientists Views Extraordinary Photographs

One Behaves Strangely—Hydrogen Atom, Hit by Helium Atom, Travels in Direction from Which the Blow Came.

Extraordinary photographs of the smashup of atoms were displayed to chemists of the American Association for the Advancement of Science here in Cambridge, Mass., last week, in the course of a session at which many of the chief American investigators of atoms and the electrons that compose them were present.

New calculations as to the size of different atoms were laid before the chemical section by Sheldons H. H. New, a periodic table of elements was explained by Dr. W. D. Harkins of the University of Chicago, which arranges the atoms and subatomic particles of elements called isotopes.

One He Can't Explain. "I have not been able to explain this one," said Dr. Richards, showing a picture of the helium atom striking a hydrogen or nitrogen atom.

January Sale BARGAINS

Some of the most remarkable values among the mark-downs are in large easy chairs and rockers. Not the ones made to sell cheap, but the big, comfy, luxurious ones which are always the most popular in the home. Ones that seem to have the drawing power of a magnet, so surely are the tired ones who come in drawn to their welcoming depths. Sometimes we sell part of a Chesterfield suite, leaving one chair in a covering which cannot be matched and, as we cannot complete the suite we are compelled to reduce prices of the odd pieces, in many cases offering them below cost. If you are looking for supreme comfort, come and look over the red tags.

ACADIAN RECORDER IS 110 YEARS OLD

A Fearless Exponent of the Public Interests Since the Year 1813.

(Acadian Recorder, Halifax) Time—paint me Time! With a golden key He stands, the keeper of the mighty Past The treasure-house of countless Memory; And ever grow its stores more strange and vast; Jewels of thought, dreams half-dissolved in air, Love, hope and transport—and the joys of Youth And sins of Age are duly garnered there And registered within the book of Truth.

The Acadian Recorder with today's number finishes the one hundred and tenth year of its age. It was first presented to the public on the sixteenth of January, 1813, and since then has been regularly issued, without a single interruption—other than may have happened through the observance of a public holiday proclaimed by "the powers that be."

From 1813 to 1820 the proprietorship of the Recorder was vested in A. H. Holland; from that time until 1824 in Holland and Co., and from 1824 until 1857 in F. J. Holland, and from thence up to 1857 in English and Blackadar; and then to H. W. Blackadar to 1883, and from that until the present time in one or the other—in turn—of Mr. Blackadar's sons.

From the commencement, until the Nova Scotian, under the management of Joseph Howe, gained a position in the forefront, the Acadian Recorder was the sole exponent of popular sentiment in the country, and in consequence, the leading journal. It was characterized by fearless independence and the advocacy of sound liberal principles. Emphatically, it was the people's paper, devoted to the people's welfare, and maintained by the people's support. It was the welcome visitor at almost every farmer's fireside, and was as eagerly sought after in the capital.

6285 INSPECTIONS PER CAR

The faithfulness of performance so universally remarked in Dodge Brothers Motor Cars, is due, in no small part, to the thoroughness with which each unit is inspected during the process of manufacture and assembly.

A trained staff of 1100 experts is employed in this work alone, and approximately 5,285 inspections are made on each car.

So exacting and rigid are the standards applied to these inspections that the slightest variation, either in workmanship or material, is sufficient cause for immediate rejection.

Dodge Brothers are almost over-scrupulous in their constant aim to make each car as sound and perfect as is humanly possible.

EARL A PROBLEM
IN LUXURY TRADE
Demand for True Oriental Variety is Growing, But Where to Get Them is the Rub—Cannot Fool Expert

(New York Times)
How to increase the world's supply of true Oriental pearls to meet the continually growing demand is yet unknown to the opinion of Australian pearl experts, who deprecate the Japanese method of producing pearls for a time being, but have solved the problem from the age when pearls first became a considerable item in the world trade. The problem of the Japanese, mankind has had to solve the difficulty of assuring a constant pearl supply.

Following the Hegira, the Moslems left the Arabs, the Holy War and the caliph became the rulers of Mesopotamia, the merchants of Bagdad controlled the pearl trade between the East and Europe. They were the pearl merchants of the world, and extant Arabic literature of the Abbasid Caliphate includes the study of necromancy and the alchemist's art. The Japanese pearl industry is a department dealing with the possibility of making artificial pearls as good as the real ones—a sort of alchemy which appears to have occupied the wise men of those times. The problem of turning baser metals into gold.

Now from Australia comes the verger, H. C. Hopkins, in conjunction with experts of the Australian pearl trade, that the Japanese nurtured pearls so easily distinguished from the natural pearls of the East. Hopkins is a pearl expert in the jewel markets of the world of the true Oriental pearl.

At present the great sources of natural pearls are the Indian Ocean, Persian Gulf, Central America, the West Indies, the Japanese islands and the coasts of Australia. Aside from the Japanese, marine pearl the Japanese fresh water pearls are also important, though not as lustrous as the gems from the sea. The Australian pearl industry is expected to become the most important of its kind in the world. Exquisite pearls of unusually fine luster are found on the coasts of West Australia and Queensland, and fine pearls have also been found in New Zealand.

Japanese Extend Their Quest.
It is curious to note that the pearl divers in the Indian Ocean have extended their activities to Australia, while there are some native Australians engaged in the diving in Australia, the pearl everywhere, save in the Western Hemisphere, is chiefly in the hands of the Japanese. The Japanese pearl industry in Australia, are engaged in pearl diving.

The strongest competitor of pearls of the East have been the pearls from the East, and the Australian pearl exports have naturally been very much interested in pearl propagation, artificial pearls and all other things that would increase the supply of the jewel. Artificial pearls—first manufactured in 1860—have not proved a successful competitor of the real pearls. The Japanese pearl industry, which has been in existence before the Christian era—has long been the first to hit upon a method of nurturing the pearl so that it would be very similar to the natural pearl.

Probably noting that the natural pearl was a mother-of-pearl growth about an irritating substance that had found its way into the mollusk, the Japanese laid upon the plan of introducing bits of wood or mud into the pearl-producing bivalve. The treated animals were stored in vats and fed for a period of three or four years—the pearl-producing period of the mollusk is usually at the age of four. At the end of the allotted time the mollusks were opened and the pearls extracted. The Japanese pearl industry has gone on for centuries. The product, however, is very inferior to the real thing. It is a dull, fine white, the natural pearl being a lustrous white.

Parasite in the Centre.
Scientists studying the Chinese method, as well as the biological process of pearl formation in the mollusk taken from the sea, came to the conclusion that under natural conditions the pearl is not formed around an irritating bit of sand that fortuitously finds its way into the shell, as formerly believed, but around a boring parasite, which makes its way in through the outside surface of the shell. The mother-of-pearl secretion that the bivalve sends out is a medium of defense against its enemy. The parasite, dying as soon as surrounded, is oxidized and disappears by the time the full pearl is formed, leaving the gem lustrous as soon as "peeled" and polished.

The Japanese, learning the lesson taught by science, evolved the plan of introducing into the shell a tiny bit of chemically treated mother-of-pearl, which is the inside shell-lining, an important by-product of the pearl-fishing industry. It was reasoned that this bit of foreign matter, being of the same chemical composition as the pearl itself and similar in appearance, would prove the correct nucleus or the nucleus that the bivalve sends out is a completely successful. For a time the Japanese nurtured pearls were sold as natural Oriental pearls in all the markets of the world. Experts, however, have noted and listed the differences between the two articles, and the perfection by Mr. Hopkins of a machine for the absolute determination of the two kinds of pearls has at last put the nurtured Japanese pearl in its correct place, from a commercial and technical point of view.

How to Distinguish Them.
Here is how the natural and nurtured pearls are distinguished from each other. To the expert, the Japanese

How Women Like to See Men Dressed

By WILLIS STEELL.

If women had the dressing of men all the present contents of the diminutive dark closet where now hang the conventional coats and trousers, insignificant in design and devoid of color, which represent masculine wardrobe, would be thrown out and in their places gorgeous silks, coats of purple, blue and gold trimmed with Valenciennes or duchess lace would be seen. For the consensus among women is that the best dressed man ever seen was on the stage in a costume play.

Only a small proportion of wives and mothers is interested in the clothes the men wear. How could interest sustain it when these clothes from season to season are practically unchangeable? Fashion which now rules the feminine world abdicated the masculine early in the eighteenth century. Before then this article had as much to say about men's clothes as about women's. Her last effort was directed toward keeping the waistcoat or undercoat, as it was called, a brilliant item, either heavily embroidered or trimmed with lace and buttons. For a time this garment remained the high light in an otherwise drab landscape. Then it descended to the stage coach drivers of the early years of Victoria's reign and by steam engine time nobody but a "bouncer" wore it.

As soon as their boys grow out of the Fauntleroy age and fall into the clutches of the tailors, mothers—even the tenderest—lose interest in the youth's clothes and criticize nothing but the necktie. Women in general do not like to admit the defect but they confess to it. They stage an actor in the costume of one of the Louis. They like the wealth of color, the superfluity of embellishment. "Why, oh, why," they sigh, "don't men dress like that to-day?"

Actresses do not hesitate to express this preference. The fact that John Drew is or was the recognized "dress suit" actor of the American stage does not deter his celebrated niece, Ethel Barrymore, from acknowledging her keenest admiration for him in the costume of Paterulo. And she, her brothers John and Lionel don a picturesque period costume.

The best dressed man, the ideal dresser, in the sixteenth century was the man of the Renaissance designed his costume. His recent appearance on our stage occurred in Sim Benelli's play "The Jew," some of the success of which was due here, Miss Barrymore thinks, to the liking of most women to see men in that garb.

By the same interest must be gauged the fact that women want to see time and again that strange visitor to our theater "Clair de Lune." The wardrobe of that poetie peccolanti, including the dresses worn by the men as well as by the women of the cast, proved to be one real attraction.

Miss Jane Cow is fully aware how much the three beautiful costumes, including the gorgeous Spanish shawls, she wears in "Malvaloca" are admired by the women in the audience but she says she has heard hundreds of women express equal admiration of the costumes worn by the men in that piece, adding their wonder that American men do not take some ideas from them. In the last act the three principals in the cast who have been seen in working garb before as "dressed up" They wear tight trousers which give the effect of black satin although they are made of merino; a wide black satin waist, fine white shirt and collar with a simple black cravat and a coat that only reaches to the waist like the bolero jacket well known to women. It is a pretty costume and admired by the men in the audience as well as by the women.

Miss Louise Closser Hale, who plays the life of the Spanish dame of Hidalgo in the same piece, shares the prevailing masculine opinion about men's clothes. The best dressed man she ever saw in the audience, because they were in never noticed, because they were in, conspicuous and worn perfectly, that is, the wearer wasn't conscious of them.

Chauncey M. Depew Follows Crowd.
"I have been wearing man-clothes for eighty years," said Chauncey M. Depew, "and as an eighty-nine year old I looked like a little old man, a miniature of my father, for the garments put on me then were modeled precisely after the ancient daguerotypes of my generation aged so quaint.

"In all the years since then I have been dressed like other men; that is, I have exhibited no originality in the matter of clothes and could not successfully be accused of eccentricity. Like a million of my fellow men I have never designed a vest or a coat but have meekly donned whatever the tailor saw fit that I should wear.

"But in these eight decades there have been many changes and as they affected my comfort, adding to it or taking from it, as the case was, it was natural that I should observe fashion's decrees, whether I accepted them or rebelled against them. But let me admit that I have been pretty meek in these matters.

"To be comfortable is about all I asked throughout my life. Yes, I preferred that to being beautiful. The latter I could not help, nature being in these matters all powerful, but I could put up a remonstrance whenever a tailor sought to truss me up uncomfortably in some new fangled garment.

"So the clothes I best remember are the English tradition of loosely fitting garments has always appealed to me. I don't like to be tight under the armholes even in a dress suit.

"I doubt if the latter garment is ever quite so familiar to a man as his trim sack or business coat, and perhaps I may be right in declaring that that business garment, with its easy lines and convenient pockets, is still my choice. Here, however, custom decrees the length of the coat to be very old to recall advanced years a coat with tails to it. I must submit, of course, but I still prefer the sack suit.

So gradual are the changes in the fashions for men that Mr. Depew found it difficult in remembering in what sartorial epoch he was most comfortably dressed. He did remember certain times when he was distinctly uncomfortable and by eliminating these periods the remainder of his life may be presumed to have been free from clothing troubles. For he was already so much of an elder when the recent light clothes had a short vogue that it left him unscathed.

"I never liked the 'light trouser' epoch," said he, smiling as he recalled the court fight, drab pantaloons of a social crime and fiercer to adopt, seemed to me most uncomfortable. I was presented at court in Queen Victoria's time and again in King Edward's, and I wore the same dress for the same reason of ceremony, but judging from my own feeling I don't believe any ordinary man who thinks less of his calves than his head ever liked them. I keep those clothes, never could make up my mind to give them away, probably for the same reason that exhibits A. B. preserved in a court trial as necessary evidence that I once really wore them.

"For you see the darned things are so hard to get on. To have a wrinkle in one's stock is to have a wrinkle in one's avoid committing it one has to wear a pair of cotton stockings underneath. Then to keep the stockings up one has to wear a contrivance like a woman's garter, that is, the thing is suspended from the waist. Those young men who wear crests with their coat and evening costume are happier with this kind of garter than us old fellows.

"As I recall, my first grown-up suit, made after my father's pattern, was uncomfortable. It was short waisted, had long tails and 'clipped' me in various places. There was a dearth of pockets, too, that damped my ebullient, boyish spirits. In those days there was but one breast pocket in a coat and another in the vest; these were absolutely indispensable.

"My clothes, like everybody's then, were made from good imported woolen cloth, mind you, but without any reference to what styles the rest of the world of men wore. That tailor had no pictures of fashion hanging up in his shop, he cut and stitched from tradition. But he made good clothes, and was wanted to last till you outgrew them. And he charged for a complete suit what would correspond to $25 in our money to-day.

"The men and boys who couldn't afford to pay for the English cloth, which was all we had, or for this tailor's art, had their clothes made at home. Probably three-quarters of the female population at that time tailored their husbands.

"Then the sack suit wasn't worn. Up to I will remember when I was a boy, its only use was for the cut in. Up to some time in the past, for weddings and day-time functions we all, of whatever age, wore a frock coat, the thing erroneously called a Prince Albert. With that, and a swallowtail adorned with big bone or metal buttons, the masculine wardrobe of 1840 was complete.

"As for the trousers, the simple style now prevalent created strong opposition when introduced in London by the Duke of Wellington.

"Without the flap buttoned smoothly about the waist and simple ancestors of the trousers and high stock and the ruff as well as the coat for every occasion. I think men have progressed along the lines of simplicity in dress.

"There have been fads, of course, but these were not generally adopted and hardly belong to memory. For instance, I do not have to be very old to recall when their shoulders were stuffed out so neatly where their real proportions ended, and there was the 'dickie,' a queer little shirt front that one tied around one's chest with tape. I never could imagine what a 'dickie' was meant for unless it was for defense."

Care About Details Makes Good Dresser.
That comfort is the prevailing want of most men and that this desire is being recognized by tailors was acknowledged by a notable member of the guild who 'buidle' for men prominent in society. When he 'graciously' accorded me an interview this man made the acknowledgment fully and said comfortable lines are being followed now in garments for every occasion.

"I refuse," said he, "to turn out an over-dressed man, and if a customer demands something eccentric in his attire I advise him to go to another tailor. I prescribe his shoes, and when these are of the kind that the knot of the strings ties his shoe must never be seen but is to be decorously tucked away inside the tongue of the shoe. I mention this to show how careful a man must be in attending to details if he wishes to have a reputation as a good dresser.

"The tight, wasp waist, the slit up to the middle of the back, the trouser drawers half way to the knees, the selection of fabric, the ordinary observer is kept in a state of wonder as to how this intricate appearance is preserved while the 'keeps wearing the same clothes.'

Major Klaw and Charles Dillingham are well dressed managers, but they possess a few ideas of their own. One partner of Mr. Klaw, favors comfort above all else in his attire. But the manager who looks as if he donned without looking at it almost any garment that is comfortable in the managerial world as a whole clothes are not deemed particularly important. Few of these men, even on the eve of their biggest production, feel it necessary to don the traditional clothes of to-day. It is true that the actor appears in the same garments on the stage as on the street. No self-respecting actor would do this. His stage clothes are for the stage and for nowhere else, as long as he wears them in real life. Once in his dressing room the actor makes a complete change. The way he is garbed on the stage may be absolutely different from the way he prefers to be dressed as a private citizen. The habit of making a 'hit' nowhere.

Before we leave the stage and its clothes it occurs to me to be a fitting time to correct an error that often prevails about the garments worn by men in stage plays of to-day. Men Don't Follow Stage Style.
To a very much less degree than is the case with women is the stage used by men as a way to learn how they should dress. A new style in women's dress frequently forces a style, and especially in Paris actresses are dressed by celebrated costumers sometimes for nothing, the makers of the garments taking their pay in the enhanced vogue of a fashion. There are not many actors on the stage to-day who could be said to serve as models to the men in the audience. What man would aspire to resemble an actor whose hair is reeking with unguent, whose coats hold his chest as in a vise and whose whole attire suggests the stage and John Drew as a "dress suit" actor at the beginning of his starring career and even while he was still with Daly did visualize to countless audiences what a man in evening dress should be. Exactly as his brother-in-law, the late Mark Taper, dressed the most careless actor on the stage of his day in this respect—visualized what most of us are.

What Men Like Themselves.
Faversham in Piner's "Lettie" performed the same service to a younger generation; he was, point device, a wellbred and well-dressed man, with morals, unhappily, not so cleanly cut nor so well worn, due in spite of this success as a "dresser," due to the fact that he gave his custom to a society tailor, Faversham always has preferred "character" clothes on the stage. He has, in fact, a fancy for going with little on and felt perfectly free in the "Lettie" to wear the skin of "The Man." Although of an ideal figure for the fashionable tailor to drape, if Mr. Faversham had his choice he would go most of his stage life in the rough costumes of the "Lettie" and "The Man."

One of the most fastidious among managers of the stage is David Belasco, and for a man so preoccupied with the great things of the drama and equally with the minutest details of production, gives always the impression of careful attention to his dress. It is likely that he does this as most worth while things are done, by a system that is said that the manager regularly four times a year replenishes his wardrobe with the requisite number of suits; but as these are all alike, in style and fabric, the ordinary observer is kept in a state of wonder as to how this intricate appearance is preserved while the 'keeps wearing the same clothes.'

Some English Inns From Long Ago

By MAUD HUNDT CHAPIN.

THERE is probably no way in which the customs of England and America differ more than in the matter of inns, or hotels. Their very names suggest it. Who would expect inns and hotels? Who would expect inns and hotels? Who would expect inns and hotels? Who would expect inns and hotels?

Perhaps in nothing do they present greater contrast to the American hotel than in the question of food. There is no doubt in my mind that the English palate does not demand or sanction our feverish indifference to the demands of modern life; guests may come and guests may go, but they remain.

Looking back over a fairly wide experience of English hostelry I recall an episode which occurred at Penzance. The inn where we stayed was the best and commanded a splendid station on that incomparable blue bay. We had arrived cold and hungry from our journey, longing for something hot, but not daring to expect it. We were wise. Cold joints stood upon the sideboard and boiled potatoes—which must some have felt heat. Bread is mostly eaten dry at luncheon, but when we found this being introduced into the hole bored through the pearl, the nucleus will at once be apparent if it is a Japanese cultivated pearl.

The Japanese often ask if it is possible to distinguish upon the wearer's neck a distance of two yards between a collar of Japanese pearls and one of natural pearls. I find it impossible to say frankly that it is impossible to tell false pearls from the genuine just as it is impossible at a glance to tell an original work of art from a copy.

THE WATER POWERS.
(Toronto Globe).

The Canadian and American capitalists, headed by Sir William Price of Quebec and the Duke tobacco interests of New York, propose nothing impracticable in their plans to develop 1,200,000 horsepower at the Grand Discharge, where the waters of Lake St. John empty into the Saguenay River, and to transmit a large portion of this power to the manufacturing towns of the New England States. The distance from the Grand Discharge, almost directly south as the crow flies, through the city of Quebec to Boston is about 450 miles. The experience of other power shows that it is quite feasible to transmit this power at high voltage to New England. The cost of development will be great and the expense of the transmission high, but the only question is whether electric power under such conditions can compete with locally developed power. The company will expect an annual profit of $3,000,000 or $3,000,000 a year. If the principle of public ownership held in Quebec as in Ontario, the light and power bills of the people might be lightened by this large sum annually from one company alone.

owner's name and which the head waiter deacons with a solicitude seldom displayed in the more important affairs of life.

Among the inn dignitaries Boots must not be overlooked, for it is almost as important as the Head Porter—in fact, can assume both incarnations, and must be entertained for all local information, stamps, telegrams or time tables. The Simon purr Hall Porter wears many glittering medals and appears as a stout and often nervous with the proprietor himself than with his minions, and when the Head Water bent over us—that was before he knew our dispractical drink habit—asked what special wine was as difficult to refuse and as respectable as some great functionary. When we spoke of water a blight was cast upon us, and from that minute dinner came to us tepid and savourless from the hand of a young waiter who was being worked in.

It never seems to dawn on the English innkeeper that on a cold, dreaching day the wandering guest might be appealed to by something hot for lunch. There is an invariableness about cold lamb and ham which leaves one as spiritless as the ununctious. Enough for such a traveler if he is suffered to drink water in the august presence, winning, perhaps, some trifling notice by ordering a bottle of Perrier which, if he take lukewarm, demanding notice, will rescue him from the reproach of the mere drinker of water. How often I have watched these dining room functionaries bowed forward to minister to the palate is the product of generations of two, and even three, bottle men. Nothing, not even a large gratuity, will win this spontaneous tribute to the water drinker and he will look for it in vain. In the dining room of a London hotel I have seen, rows of half-consumed bottles, each bearing the their caps, passed frequently to and fro, exchanging humorous abuse with a young Boots in training who, like Sam Weller, was engaged upon a row of down-at-heel shoes. As I leaned on the window sill looking into the green heart of the cathedral bell strike 4. "Tea time!" I cried irreverently. "Let's go down to the funny old entrance court and have some!"

The Maid's Head, I must tell you, stands with its shoulder to the street which leads to the Cathedral and the Sampson and Hercules House. Through a low archway one enters a glass covered court where all the life and business of the antiquated hostelry center. On one side the homelike office, over which a woman always presides and where bottles decorate the shelves, here and water, or whisky neat, is decanted by the dignified female in charge, whom I hesitate to designate barmaid, and who with the head waiter, or Boots, deacons with the public good, or Boots, deacons with the public good, or Boots, deacons with the public good.

"Tea served in this court at little garden tables was not unattended by a thrill of excitement when a fly suddenly thundered into the small area or a motor sped among the tea drinkers. In England any meal can be dispensed with, but never tea, and those outlanders whose time or appetites forbid their assisting at its cozy little fires beyond the pale. English people eat so frequently that the custom has been laid to climate, dampness, the cold or the east wind, but we simplified the problem by laying it to appetite! At railway stations as many buns and cups of tea are sold as 'bookings' and jolly little refreshment wagons are trundled down the crowded platforms, their steaming brasses carrying with them an atmosphere which stood for a moment enchanted. Night was falling and before this sudden apparition of antiquity we felt that we had found our way back to an age of innocence. Who could imagine making such a haste with the idea of retiring to or of starting for anything else in the world? But for love a man might plaster his low walls across his black timber in quaint designs or weave the brown roof over as a bird years her nest. Through the fog of candlelight it had become a part of nature here and seemed to have taken on color and beauty like the moss green bark of trees.

We saw a curl of smoke ascending from the chimney, a glimmer of candlelight shone out from the embowed casements, and, tired but happy, we passed through the low door, and confident that the Barley Moo would give us shelter.

It was delicious to drop to sleep in our tiny room, with its one candle where for midnight night never wholly obscured the casement's square of light. Setting open the rude lattice and looking out into the garden, we seemed to have retired a time as remote as when Shakespeare had immortalized the cottage at Shroton. By morning the rain, which fell softly all night long, had only wet an inch or two of the furry thatch round the window.

Later when we were dressed and the sun came out a smell of bacon and toast was wafted up the chimney and I was glad to digest the atmosphere of the Barley Moo, or the quaint, beautiful village, just across the river. A bridge—old in seeming as the Canterbury Pilgrims—here spans the Thames and at intervals there are niches in its narrow stone causeway for the pedestrian to tuck himself away and so avoid the hurrying car or motor. A penny toll is collected from each passer by and at the tollhouse I saw an old placard posted up and this is how it read:

"For every Horse or other Beast drawing any Coach, Caravan, Berlin, Chariot, Vis-a-vis, Barouch, Phaeton, Merino, Calasche, Curriclo Chair, Gig, Irish Car, Whiskey, Hearse or like carriage, 6d. For every Ass laden or unladed id. For every Ox, Cow, Bull, Id. For every Calf, Pig, Sheep or Lamb, 1 farthing or for a score read."

We hated to leave the Barley Moo, for we could not rely on finding another lodging as primitive and quaint, but after breakfast the sun came out with authority and the spirit of adventure came with them. We consoled ourselves by saying that another night might find us equal joys and as we slid away from the landing stage out into the rippling, sun showered water and under the low arches of the bridge we looked back on the ideal village with a sigh of regret.

Who e'er has traveled life's dull round, Where'er his stages may have been, May sigh to think he still has had the warmest welcome at an inn."

to tell false pearls from the genuine just as it is impossible at a glance to tell an original work of art from a copy.

I was told the poet scratched these lines on a window pane of the Red Lion at Henley. The night we stopped there I was content to realize their truth as I lay in one of the sleepy old bedrooms listening to the placid flow of the Thames below my window.

Barley Moo Is Something to See.
Who has heard of "The Barley Moo," I wonder—the smallest and quaintest inn of all the rustic brotherhood? It stands a little way back from the river and we reached it after a long, hazy day on the water. It was not, however, our first objective, for we had planned to sleep at the Plough, and once putting our hand to us remembered the fate of his wife turned back.

It was dusk when we reached the remote backwater which glides past its tiny landing, hidden among alder bushes. All day through sun and shower we had talked of the Plough, priding ourselves on being the rare American who got at such places where hardship under a thatch becomes romance. Near the landing several fishing boats floated on the placid stream and meeting branches made an arch of willow over the water. We were not long to find the Plough, priding ourselves on being the rare American who got at such places where hardship under a thatch becomes romance. FACE DISFIGURED NINE MONTHS

Itched and Hard Pimples Broke Out. Cicura Healed.

"My face and neck all broke out in a mass of nasty pimples. My face used to itch and then hard pimples would break out and fester over. They itched and burned dreadfully at times, and my face was badly disfigured for about nine months."

"I tried different remedies without any effect. I saw an advertisement for Cicura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. It helped me so much that I bought more, and after using two boxes of Cicura Soap and two boxes of Cicura Ointment I was healed." (Signed) Miss Hazel E. Cruickshank, Lower Caledonia, Nova Scotia.

From April 1 to November 30, Twenty-six Per Cent. Fewer Newcomers Than in Corresponding 1921 Period.

WOMAN SUFFERED FOR MONTHS

Weak and Nervous. Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Webbwood, Ont.—"I was in a very weak and run-down nervous condition, always tired from the time I got up until I went to bed. Sleep did not rest me at all. My sister recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me and others told me about it, but it was from my sister's advice that I took it. It did not take long until I felt stronger, headaches left me and my appetite came back to me. I am a farmer's wife and have many things to do outside the house, such as milking, looking after the poultry, and other chores. I heartily recommend the Vegetable Compound to all who have the same trouble I had, for it is a fine medicine for women."—Mrs. LOUIS F. ELASER, Hillcrest Farm, Webbwood, Ont.

"I Now Feel Fine"

Mrs. P. G. Murdoch, Box 433, Portage la Prairie, Man., writes: "I was troubled for years with biliousness, constipation, kidney and liver troubles. I tried many different kinds of medicine, but nothing did me much good until I tried Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I now feel fine, but am never without these pills in the house. Dr. Chase's Ointment has relieved my husband of piles, from which he used to suffer badly."

COST OF STOPPING A FREIGHT TRAIN

Twenty-four Cents if it is Moving at Rate of Five Miles an Hour—Speed Increases Expense.

It costs a railway company 24 cents to stop an average size freight train running at a speed of five miles an hour, 69 cents to stop a train running ten miles an hour, and $1.44 to stop a train traveling at fifteen miles an hour, according to computations made by operating officials. The analysis was made, it was stated, to give the laymen an intimation of the highly scientific proportions which transportation management has assumed, and the constant attention which executives are giving to every phase of operation with the idea of saving even the smallest of costs wherever possible.

BOILS Made Him Sick and Miserable

Mr. Richard Zelenski, McLean, Sask., writes: "I had been suffering continuously, with boils, for three years, and during that time I tried many different remedies without any success whatever. In spite of all my efforts I was compelled to go to the hospital. This was in the Fall of the year, and right in the busiest time of the season. Upon my return home I just took about two weeks until my neck and arms were again occupied by the boils which made me feel very sick and miserable.

MIGRATION WITHIN EMPIRE

Interview on an Important Topic with Chief of Dominion Trade Mission.

(London Letter.) Major E. A. Belcher (assistant general manager of the British Empire Exhibition), who has just returned after a ten months' journey round the empire, was asked by a press representative whether he had any observations to make with regard to the recent criticisms on settlement schemes in Australia and elsewhere.

ACID STOMACH, MEALS SOUR, FORM GAS, GAS

Chew a Few Pleasant Tablets Indigestion Gone!

"Could you suggest any of the principal difficulties with which settlement schemes are faced?"

"Difficulties, of course, there are, and of a very varied nature, as they must be in anything which is experimental. In our work at the British Empire Exhibition we shall pay special attention to the elementary fact that problems of migration cannot be solved without reference to problems of production and problems of marketing. It is of no use filling up the empty spaces of the empire with new settlers unless these settlers are going to add to the productivity of the State in which they settle. It is no use their adding to the productivity unless expanding markets can be found for their produce. In fact, the development of migration must go hand in hand with the development of trade within the empire.

HEART AND NERVE PILLS

I can honestly say I am a relieved man. I now feel in the best of health, in fact, the first time in four or five years, and can do any class of work with pleasure where before life was a burden to me.

every prospect of a happy and successful career.

"Most important of all, perhaps, is the effect it has on the physique of their children. My most abiding impression of Australia is a country filled with happy children, and that is the greatest asset that any nation can have.

"There will be failures, of course, and you must remember that the percentage of failures who write letters of complaint is infinitely higher than the percentage of successes who write letters of thanks. Any settlement scheme which can show a definitely marked success of sixty per cent. is worth while, and I believe that some of these Australian schemes will reach eighty per cent."

"Has any Dominion a finally settled policy of migration?"

"If you mean by that, is there a standard policy on Government problems of migration, the answer is probably 'no.' Australia has gone a great deal farther than any other Dominion, but even there the problem is in an experimental stage. One has to consider two types of migrant; the one with capital and the one without. The best thing for the man with capital to do is to go out to the country and spend six months in deciding on the type of farming and the district he likes best. The man without capital cannot do that. He is dependent on some Government scheme which is going to finance him until he becomes self-supporting. The general line of Government schemes is on a thirty years' amortisation basis.

"Of course, quite apart from schemes of this description, no one should talk of Australian experiments without reference to the interesting one which is being tried practically by Sir Henry Barwell in South Australia, where a number of boys are being placed out on farms and will under the eye of the Government until such time as they may become settlers themselves."

"Could you suggest any of the principal difficulties with which settlement schemes are faced?"

"Difficulties, of course, there are, and of a very varied nature, as they must be in anything which is experimental. In our work at the British Empire Exhibition we shall pay special attention to the elementary fact that problems of migration cannot be solved without reference to problems of production and problems of marketing. It is of no use filling up the empty spaces of the empire with new settlers unless these settlers are going to add to the productivity of the State in which they settle. It is no use their adding to the productivity unless expanding markets can be found for their produce. In fact, the development of migration must go hand in hand with the development of trade within the empire.

"There is, perhaps, one other danger, certainly. I picked them out at random without being directed to interview any special one. A typical example was an ex-sergeant who had been in the country eight months and had just got possession of a cottage. He landed with about £10 in his pocket, a wife and two children. When I asked him how he liked Western Australia, he replied: 'I was never so happy in my life!' When I inquired what he knew of agriculture before reaching Australia he said: 'Just as much as you can learn from driving a tram along Lambeth Road!'"

"Then you would not regard previous agricultural experience as essential to a prospective migrant?"

"Certainly not. I hope this fetish of previous agricultural experience will disappear as a result of our educational work at the coming exhibition. It is obvious that if you take two men of precisely the same qualification, and one of them has been brought up in a country atmosphere, life on the land in Australia would not come as strange to him as to the townsman. But the one thing we have to get in our minds is that the personal equation is infinitely more important than the previous occupation. Here in Western Australia a London tram driver is happy and making a success. The best settler I saw in the Queensland cotton fields was a Glasgow carpenter. The most successful of the new orchardists in Tasmania was a London bank clerk, and these are not isolated examples, but quite frequent.

"What the Dominions want are, in the words of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, 'men who are willing and men who will work.' If they have courage, faith and determination, with an average amount of common sense, they will not only adapt themselves to their new life, but with the wider opportunities which that new life presents they have

MYSTERY OF THE BEL

Specimens Found With Spines in Back Fins—Record Spinal.

John T. Nichols, head of the Department of Recent Fishes, American Museum of Natural History, during a trip to England, visited the British Museum where he saw a recent ichthyological discovery. In the fish department of the museum, Mr. Nichols "there was shown a specimen of a fish which he had made in examining specimens of certain West Indian eels, which seem to have several well-developed spines in the back fin. The history of the development of the true eels has always been more or less shrouded in mystery. They have no relationship whatever with the eels of the British Museum, and have been derived from true fishes. In post-geologic times, several dissimilar groups of fishes have developed eel-like degenerate forms which have a certain advantage in the struggle for existence, namely, as Chancellor Jordan of Stanford University has suggested, the ability to slip through the smallest negotiable hole, thus paralleling in human evolution certain types of the underworld.

"It has been known for centuries, however, that the true eels were all rather closely related to one another, and had become eel-like before they appeared in the fish of the present day. The spiny fins were evidence of this fact and showed that they were in no wise related to the spiny eels (masticobela) found in fresh water. The eels and the fish with spines in its back fin, with a remote possibility that our conception of the ancestry of the eel will be upset.

"For a number of years the nations with important fisheries on the North Sea have carried on extensive scientific research in the fish culture of the Great Fisheries, has not long since been published by the Oxford University Press. It seems that the problem is an exceedingly complicated one which is still far from satisfactory solution as the similar one in regard to fresh-water fishes. Fresh-water fish culture has long yielded well worthwhile results in America. But it seems unlikely that work done with such marine fishes as the codfish has been of practical value.

"Such marine fishes have produced an enormous number of eggs and small fry. But at the date when these small fry begin to take nourishment, if conditions are not exactly favorable, they suffer a cataclysmic mortality, so that at any given time the existing cod supply in the ocean is not composed of the usual number of broods of several preceding years, but almost entirely is drawn from some one or two years, when due to favorable conditions much more than the usual number of fry passed the critical stage and were later able to reach maturity. Were it possible for artificial fish culture to tide over the supply of such food fishes, but so far the best art of the fish culturist has been quite unable to do this.

WHAT'S DOING IN THE MONEY AND STOCK MARKETS TODAY

BOSTON HARBOR HAS BOOM TIME

Greatest Shipping Crush Since Days of the World War.

Boston, Jan. 6.—The greatest shipping boom since the days of the world war is now at its height at this port.

The boom started when coal laden vessels from England and Wales arrived in the harbor before obtaining docking facilities.

British coal steamers have been forced to wait a week or ten days in the harbor before obtaining docking facilities.

Since the closing of the St. Lawrence river there has been an increasing flow of grain through this port.

At the Commonwealth pier more than 1,000 men have been employed and nearly thirty vessels were unloaded during the last month.

Files of canned goods fifty feet high and shipments valued at between $10,000,000 and $12,000,000 have been stored at the Commonwealth pier at one time.

Silver was 2,000 ounces higher than in the preceding year and the total production reached 15,200,000 ounces.

IMPERIAL ON MONDAY A Modern Parable of the Lost Sheep

There were ninety and nine that safely lay. In the shelter of the fold. But one was out on the hills away. Far off from the gates of gold— Away from the mountains wild and bare, Away from the tender Shepherd's care, Away from the tender Shepherd's care.

"THE NINETY AND NINE" Or How the Victim of a Great Injustice Vindicated Himself and Saved His Soul.

A GOOD OLD HOMELY STORY: IT'S REFRESHING TO ONE'S HEART, these days of eternal triangles and ultra-gracities to get back to the sweet and simple life of the village and there imbibe of the emotions and facilities that make men and women truly good. Here we have the human document of a young man who fled his home in the city with the assumed blame of a crime committed by a friend. In his bounded state he sinks into drunkenness, but a little village girl sets out to save him. Then comes the great dramatic climax, and climax upon climax. A prayerful lassie is rewarded, a young man's life is started anew, a hero is discovered and hissing snakes are trodden.

CHARACTERS TRUE TO LIFE

TOM SILVERTON—Sought for another's crime, hides in country village, habitual drunkard. Handsomely vindicated. Warner Baxter. ABNER BLAKE—Unbending and orthodox deacon who listens to the gossips and turns own daughter out. Robert Dudley. HUD BRYSON—Village half-wit, innocently keeps the principals posted as to the other's doings. Arthur Jasmine. REDDY—The bright boy of the place, lends a helping arm to Silverton on occasions—his real friend. Ernest Butterworth, Jr. MRS. ARAMANTHA MARKHAM—Victorious-tongued slanderer and gossip with a vivid imagination. Lots of them about nowadays. Dorothy Wolbert. Village Folk, Railway Workers, Police and Detectives, New York Smart Set, Vaudeville Performers, Country Station Master and Hundreds of others, all very real.

BREATH-TAKING SENSATIONAL RESCUE Of a Whole Village Population by a Fire-Enveloped Train, Driven Madly Through a Forest Conflagration —A THRILLER WITH A HEART PUNCH—

I say unto you, that likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentance. —LUKE Chap. 15—Verse 7.

How to Win This Money!

EASY TO UNDERSTAND

Below You Will Find a Coupon Giving a List of Football Teams That Will Play on Saturday, Jan. 13th.

On the left hand side of this coupon are listed all the "Home Teams." On the right hand side, are listed all the "Visiting Teams." To make it more explicit—the Home Team is the team that plays on their own grounds, and the Visiting Team is the team that comes to these grounds to play.

NOW IT IS SIMPLE

Just Mark an "X" For The Winning Teams

Pick out the team that you figure will win (on the first line) in the coupon and if that team's name is under the heading of "HOME TEAMS" — than mark an "X" in the blank box headed "HOME" on the same line. If you pick a name that is under the "VISITING TEAMS" heading then mark your "X" in the blank box headed "VISITING." If you figure these teams should play a draw (or tie) game then mark your "X" in the blank box headed draw.

You do This on Every Line, Marking One "X" For Each Game. In Other Words You Pick a Winner For Every Game — Sixteen All Together.

REMEMBER
