FALL ON THE FARM.

The Storing of Tubers, Cabbage and the Like for Winter Use.

Turnips, parsnips, carrots and beets may be stored in pits outside of the barn or in mounds. One of the methods that has been tried with success, is to store them in bins, using dry sand to fill in between them. This method permits of using them at any time, while, if they are stored in pits, they may be sealed up for the frost.

The usual mode of storing cabbages for winter, is to bury them, heads down and roots up. A better method is to place them close together in a furrow, roots down, then throwing the dirt to them, and adding another layer of dirt, until a compact bed of cabbages is made. Now cover the cabbages with hay, and place corn stalks on the hay. When wanted for use remove a portion of the hay, cut off the heads desired and leave the stalks. If the spring remove the hay and the cabbages will produce early sprouts or greens. All this is necessary is to keep the cabbages from thawing too suddenly. If buried head down they soon begin to rot after the frost is gone and the rains come in the spring.

Regarding the poisoning of fruit by man alone, but to animals as well, even insects coming in for a share of that force which is a grade higher than instinct. Close observers are continually making public examples which show that that class of animal life which has been designated as "the lower orders" when compared with human kind accomplish results the working out of which can scarcely be believed to instinct alone. This reasoning faculty is especially noticeable among dogs, while many other animals evince a power of thought, of ability to reason, really superior to that of man. In connection with the academy of natural sciences some time ago, Prof. Mehan related an incident that came under his own observation which, while not conclusive evidence of reasoning power in insects yet is strongly indicative of it. During a light spring shower the professor, a large insect, was seen to enter a nest in full bloom. While there he noticed an unusual number of bees busily at work among the flowers of the linden, while a tree of another species, close at hand and also in bloom, had no bees about it. The insect was quickly apparent to him. The insect poured a trail of foliage and the rain poured through freely, while the linden had heavy foliage and in such abundance that the rain was shed almost as perfectly as from an umbrella. The bees were evidently aware of this, for they were seen to fly directly to the linden, ignoring the other tree entirely. He assumed, and seemingly correctly, that this could not be purely instinct, but was the result of reasoning, of low order perhaps, but still a line above an "inward impulse" unconditioned and involuntary, which guides to the performance of an action without thought of improvement in the method.

HOW MOODY MET SANKEY.

The Great Evangelist Heard the Sweet Singer by Chance.

It was at Indianapolis in 1870 that Moody and Sankey first made each other's acquaintance, says the Congregationalist. The evangelist was then in the height of his zeal in evangelic work which subsequently made him famous, though then his efforts and his reputation were confined largely to Chicago. Mr. Sankey's home was in New Castle, Pa., where he was then serving as an internal revenue officer. His father was a banker and active in politics, and held under Lincoln's appointment the important position of collector of internal revenue for four large counties in Western Pennsylvania. Young Sankey was then a Christian, having been converted a number of years before during a Methodist revival, and his talent of song had already begun to be used.

Coming to Indianapolis to attend as a delegate from New Castle the National Convention of the Young Men's Association, Mr. Sankey attended one morning a 6 o'clock prayer meeting, held in the basement of the first Baptist church, led by Mr. Moody. The singing dragged and Mr. Sankey, at the suggestion of a minister who was seated beside him, started up the familiar hymn, "There is a Fountain Filled With Blood." It went well and was followed by other songs equally successful, and Mr. Moody became so interested that he looked about to see whence the new impetus in singing came. After the meeting closed, with characteristic quickness of decision, Mr. Moody, hardly waiting for an introduction, said to Mr. Sankey:

"You're the man I have been looking for for the last eight years. Come and lunch with me."

The invitation was accepted, and later in the day the two men got together and the subject of a future combination of forces was talked over in downright earnest. Mr. Moody pressed upon Mr. Sankey the duty of at once joining him in Chicago, but in Sankey's mind there was some practical objection, arising from his business and family connections. "I am a government officer," he said to Mr. Moody, "and may find it difficult to get released."

"There is a better government than that to serve," said the reply. But persuasive as Mr. Moody was he did not carry his point then and there. Mr. Sankey took several months in which to consider the matter.

After the convention Mr. Sankey went back to New Castle and talked the matter over with his wife and family. He did not see his duty clearly at all, but Moody kept writing for him to come to Chicago, and at last persuaded him to go out for a week to look the ground over. Arriving in Chicago in the early morning, Mr. Sankey went to Mr. Moody's house, reaching there just as family prayers were being held. Almost before Mr. Moody introduced him to his family he asked him to sing a hymn, and thus contribute his part toward the informal service of praise.

His Sunday a large meeting was held in the parlour of Mr. Sankey's house, reaching there just as family prayers were being held. Almost before Mr. Moody introduced him to his family he asked him to sing a hymn, and thus contribute his part toward the informal service of praise.

THE BLOODY SUN.

A Strange Scene in the Heavens Friday, 8th Instant.

The sun had many admirers Tuesday, for he had, as Osean says, "Made the beauty of his face to shine upon the earth." All day old Sol rode through a slight gray mist-light that gave his face a bright appearance that varied from deep gold to copper red, as the heavy smoke laden atmosphere grew lighter or denser. The meteorological officers were kept busy answering questions sent by telephone for explanations of the cause of the strange appearance, which was, after all very simple, having its origin in both fire somewhere in the north or northwest of the province. In the dry fall months the sun often assumes this strange appearance, especially in Indian summer days, that drowsy poetical season on which Mrs. Moody sang:

"By the virtue haze that lies
In the amber of the skies."
Though the people seem to forget from year to year the strange autumnal freaks of our solar light, yet the poets have often noticed them, and to them is due many a bright gem of poetic inspiration. At noon yesterday the blood-red of the sun's face realized Coleridge's picture:

"All in a hot and copper sky,
The bloody sun, at noon,
Right up above the mast did stand
No bigger than the moon."

No better description of the general appearance of the sun all day Tuesday could be found than the following stanza from the same poem:

"And straight the sun was flaked with brights,
(Heaven's mother send us grace)
As if through a diamond grate he peered
With broad and burning face."

A PREVIOUS SIMILAR SPECTACLE.

About twelve years ago, it happened in the province of Ontario about 3 o'clock, and the darkness remained more or less intense for the remainder of the day. The fall of ashes killed hundreds of fish in the Mattland and Saugen rivers, which for weeks after lay rotting on the shores polluting the air for miles around. Those who remember that day will have a vivid picture of a mighty sea of lurid, rolling flames, that seemed to fill the sky. So vivid were these flames that I saw two dozen Irish immigrants and their families, who were on their way to a little country town and pray the good Lord and holy virgin to withhold the judgment day for a few hours at least. It was reported that one old woman actually died of fright. All this terrible flame like appearance was caused simply by the shining of the sun's rays through the heavy floating clouds of smoke. This blood red appearance of the sun can be obtained in an artificial manner by simply smoking a glass, however slightly, and then viewing the sun through it.

HAS BEEN KNOWN TO LAST A WEEK.

This same lurid light has been known to cover the face of the sun for a week at a time. The phenomenon always happens about the same time, and generally when the upper currents of the air are almost perfectly still, or moving with a very easy uniform motion steadily in one direction. If the weather is damp the smoke clouds condense and fall at once to the earth. This heavy smoke-laden atmosphere often brings on a violent storm, as it has a tendency to attract the particles of moisture in the air and to condense them.—(Toronto World.)

AT DEATH'S DOOR.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION.
EXTREME DEBILITY AFTER THE GRIP.

Mr. Peter Lingley, Councilor, Peterborough, Queens Co., N. B., says:
"Oct. 21, 1892.—Last winter I had a very severe attack of the Grip, which left me very feeble and reduced in flesh. I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep. I was under Doctors' treatment for months, but received no benefit. My friends thought I had consumption and I got so low that they were expecting my death at any day. At last I resorted to Dr. Hawker's Nerve and Stomach Tonic, and in a few days I began to feel better. I continued to take it until I was completely restored to health. I can now do all my usual work and feel as well as ever. I owe my life to this medicine, as I feel that I owe my life to its virtues."

Farming is a business which depends on many little details and conditions affecting each farm. The frost may appear on a plot of land, while but a hundred feet away its effects if any, may not be noticed. One plot will be more difficult to work than another adjoining it, and the exposure of the land to the sun, its drainage, its nearness to timber, the texture of the soil, the kinds of crops previously raised, and other matters, make a farm entirely different from the next, each farmer being governed by circumstances affecting his farm only.
When a hog is compelled to eat a portion of his food in the shape of filth he will not increase as rapidly as when he can eat on clean and wholesome food. Many supposed outbreaks of hog cholera may be traced to overfeeding on corn exclusively and lack of cleanliness.

FALL ON THE FARM.

The Jersey, and there is no better means than through the columns of some good dairy paper, rich with the experience and counsel of men who have made these cattle a grand success.

Their beauty, their gentleness, and above all, their superior quality of their milk, justify them in their claims to the title "dairy queens" and make them a desirable object in the eyes of the contemplative buyer. To possess a Jersey is to be inspired to nobleness, and to care for one is to be educated to gentleness and an appreciation of beauty.

REASONING POWER OF BEES.
In a Rainsform They Select the Shelter of Heavy Fogged Trees.

A few years ago the person who might give utterance to the idea that any but human beings possessed reasoning powers would have been guilty of rank heresy, says the Philadelphia Ledger. But with advanced enlightenment, there are thousands who have been driven to the belief that the divine light has not been given to man alone, but to animals as well, even insects coming in for a share of that force which is a grade higher than instinct. Close observers are continually making public examples which show that that class of animal life which has been designated as "the lower orders" when compared with human kind accomplish results the working out of which can scarcely be believed to instinct alone. This reasoning faculty is especially noticeable among dogs, while many other animals evince a power of thought, of ability to reason, really superior to that of man. HOW HORSES SLEEP.

"Did you ever notice how horses sleep?" asked a Maine horseman the other day. Receiving a negative reply, he continued: "Well, they don't sleep one way by any means. Some, in fact a good many, sleep standing and rarely lie down. Such a one you may approach and almost touch when he wakes up, if you come at the right time and without much noise. Others lie down, but not all one way. Usually they will settle back and drop over on one hip first. In rising they will get one front foot first, then the other, bringing up the hind parts last.

"But some horses get up and down on fashion, that is, they will get on their forefeet first. Such a one may always be told by the dirty condition of his knees. The dirt on his knees I ever saw in this respect was one I owned for some time. His first movement was to pull back on his hatter as if testing its strength. Then holding it back he would sit down on his haunches exactly like the truck on the circus, and in that position he would sleep, snoring like a man. I thought he was afraid to lie down, and he would not be able to get up, and took this queer fashion as a substitute."

FINDING THE CONTENTS OF BINS.

Every farmer ought to know how to measure his products without taking the trouble to remove them from the bins or other receptacles. For instance, the cubic feet of dry corn in the ear will make a bushel, and to find out how many bushels there are in a crib take the length measurements, multiply the length by the breadth, by the height and divide by two, which will give the number of bushels of shelled corn. In apples and potatoes get the cubical contents as before, divide by eight and point off one figure for decimals. In hay find the cubical contents and allow 512 cubic feet to the ton. The result in each case will be so nearly correct that the difference will be inappreciable.

SAYS HE IS A MESSIAH.

OSSEY BAY, Mass., Sept. 17.—Henry B. Foulke, known as the president of the Mahatmas in this pleasant retreat of theosophists and Spiritualists, announced today that he is the Messiah. He says he has been reincarnated no less than seven times, that he has more or less recollections of them, and that Mme. Blavatsky came to prepare the way for his entry as the Christ, and to straighten out the serious condition of things now existing in the religious and business world. He says that he is in constant communication with the "shades" and that his announcements and actions are placed far beyond his personal control by the shades of the Theban brotherhood.

CLARENCE BROWN'S MISTAKE.

Clarence Brown, a 15-year-old colored boy, was milking a cow for J. N. Wilson of Lexington, Ky., and tied the cow's tail around his leg in order to keep the cow from switching that appendage in his face. When Brown had finished milking he neglected to untie the cow's tail, and started to take the pail of milk into the house. When the cow discovered that all was not right with her tail feeling the pail she started on a long gallop across the pasture, and owing to the fact that the tail was tied to Brown's leg in a hard knot the boy was obliged to follow the cow much against his will. After making two rounds of the two acre lot, with the boy dragging to her tail, the scared animal was headed and brown was jerked up almost dead.

NO COURTSHIP IN JAPAN.

Generally speaking there is no courtship in Japan. The parents settle such affairs. The system has apparently worked well. There are fewer divorces in the country. Europeans residing there informed me that nothing is among wives as it is known. The one thing that explains pretty much everything about this relation is not one of equality. The wife is not only inferior to the husband, but to his parents, under whose roof she goes to live, and whom she is equally bound to obey. As she has never "loved" her own parents, but revered and obeyed them, so now she is never said to love her husband, but to reverence and obey him. "The husband is to love his wife, yet not overmuch, lest he neglects his parents or brothers. The men who have thought much on family and kingdom by disregarding this rule have been innumerable. And yet not to love at all is also an evil, since by the wife he has

THE UNION JACK.

One Man's Life Was Saved by Having it Folded Around His Shoulders.

As I observe much has been said lately about the British flag and various attempts made to cast discredit on the union jack I should like to state a story about it, which I believe to be true, and which shows that when properly used it can do excellent service. The story was told me by the guard of the pullman car, and I believe that I give just as I heard it.

This man was the son of a clergyman in one of the southern states, and after the war broke out his father was forced to break up his home and send his children adrift.

My informant was then about twenty and had just finished his college course, and having a turn for acting he formed a company of his friends, with which he went through the West Indian Islands, acting as each in turn; and I gathered that he had answered very well.

"But I don't tell you this," said he, "to boast of my own proceedings, but because I should like to let you know how well the interests of the English were looked after at that time by their consuls in the Spanish and French islands, and to prove this he gave me the following among other instances:—When he was in Havana there was one evening a great row in the streets, and a man was killed.

Every one ran away except an Englishman, who did not stop to see why he should run off, but stopped to see what he could do for the wounded man. The city was then, as it often was, under martial law, and in a few minutes a party of soldiers coming up, walked the Englishman off. He was tried then and there by a sort of a drumhead court martial, and condemned to be shot at 8 o'clock.

He managed to get the news conveyed to the English consul, and at 8.15 next morning the consul appeared in his coach and four, uniform, cocked hat and sword, and all his orders on. The shooting party were drawn out, and the prisoner was there, too.

CLARENCE BROWN'S MISTAKE.

Clarence Brown, a 15-year-old colored boy, was milking a cow for J. N. Wilson of Lexington, Ky., and tied the cow's tail around his leg in order to keep the cow from switching that appendage in his face. When Brown had finished milking he neglected to untie the cow's tail, and started to take the pail of milk into the house. When the cow discovered that all was not right with her tail feeling the pail she started on a long gallop across the pasture, and owing to the fact that the tail was tied to Brown's leg in a hard knot the boy was obliged to follow the cow much against his will. After making two rounds of the two acre lot, with the boy dragging to her tail, the scared animal was headed and brown was jerked up almost dead.

NO COURTSHIP IN JAPAN.

Generally speaking there is no courtship in Japan. The parents settle such affairs. The system has apparently worked well. There are fewer divorces in the country. Europeans residing there informed me that nothing is among wives as it is known. The one thing that explains pretty much everything about this relation is not one of equality. The wife is not only inferior to the husband, but to his parents, under whose roof she goes to live, and whom she is equally bound to obey. As she has never "loved" her own parents, but revered and obeyed them, so now she is never said to love her husband, but to reverence and obey him. "The husband is to love his wife, yet not overmuch, lest he neglects his parents or brothers. The men who have thought much on family and kingdom by disregarding this rule have been innumerable. And yet not to love at all is also an evil, since by the wife he has

His stereoscopic views are the finest ever shown in this city, and a great New York paper pronounces them the best ever seen in that city, excepting those shown by Prof. Stadler in his Oberammergau lecture. Mr. Phillips is a beautiful singer, one of the best heard here, and his whole entertainment is most enjoyable. All who love good music, beautiful scenery and fine descriptions of pictures and places, should take in tonight's entertainment. S., from there Mr. Crawley will go to Boston to pursue a course of study.

As there was no one present to tell the story of the killing the actual facts are meagre and the details are conjectured. But as far as is known the terrible tragedy is as follows:

Joseph Wheary, his wife, daughter and a deaf-mute son, named Edward occupied one end of a double tenement house, the other being occupied by Hedley Wheary, who is a son of Joseph, his wife the victim, and two little children.

Joseph Wheary and family left the house about half-past one on Wednesday afternoon to attend an ordination service at the Baptist church, of which he and all his many relatives in the district are consistent members.

About the same hour Hedley took his team and went to the grist mill some distance away, leaving no one in the house but the deaf-mute, Bertha Wheary and the children.

Then the murder occurred which for sickening details surpasses anything ever happening in the province.

It appears that while the murdered mother was doing the kitchen work the fender seized her and attempted outrage. A fierce struggle ensued as the appearance of the room and the marks upon the woman's body indicate. Then a sort of a beam weapon was used, presumably an axe, and one cut on the back of the neck through the collar of the dress caused death. There were four other gashes besides. Whether the woman bled to death or whether she was then delivered, or whether being beaten off in his first attempt he renewed the attack and coming behind her unawares inflicted the fatal blow, is not known but the latter theory is generally accepted.

Shortly after four o'clock, the husband, Hedley, returned and was met at the gate by his little four year old child who screamed, "mamma is dead, Eddie chopped her with an axe." Horror stricken he entered the house where in the kitchen of his own apartment he saw his wife lying on her back on the floor in a pool of blood, which had saturated her clothing and had run along the floor in many small streams. Her legs were spread apart and bruises showed that a fiendish attempt at outrage had been made. The murderer shortly after laid the house and it is supposed that he took the fatal weapon with him and secreted it in the woods. Hedley went for his neighbors and returned with John Howard and William Kinghorn, who attest to the truth of Hedley's statement.

The murderer, Edward, is a strong well-nerved negro, light in color and about eighteen years of age. He has been a deaf-mute from birth and was generally regarded as kindly disposed and altogether the reverse of what he has shown himself to be.

He attended the funeral of his mother, here for several terms and was one of the brightest and most intelligent of his inmates. No one in the neighborhood considered him capable of such a crime.

Of the family and connections it can be said that they are all worthy people and respected by the whites, the father of the murderer being a man who is esteemed by all for his virtues and the shock to him is especially sad.

When the father and family returned the scene was terrible in the agony expressed, the colored people being more boisterous in their grief than is the case with white people.

The little boy was questioned but could only give the information that Eddie had taken his mamma with the axe and had then taken the candle into the room and rocked the baby till his papa came.

Dr. Coburn, coroner, was notified and an inquest was held, the verdict being "that deceased Bertha Wheary, had been killed with an axe or other sharp weapon by someone who they could not name." It is the general opinion of all that the deaf-mute is the guilty person, and the police-magistrate being notified of the murder, dispatched officers Roberts and Phillips to the scene.

About dusk Edward returned to the house with a pool of blood in his hand, and it is thought that the fatal weapon may be buried in the fields or woods. What transpired when he came into the presence of his parents cannot be described.

The officers reached the house about midnight and found the deaf-mute huddled in a corner. He stubbornly resisted arrest and was literally dragged from the house to the wagon. He was lodged in jail here and taken before the police-magistrate on Thursday morning when he was remanded till Monday next.

Ground Plan of House.

A. Hedley's end of house. B. Joseph, the father's end. C. Where Victim was killed. E. Front door.

The house where the tragedy was committed stands some short distance from the highway road, with a neat kept plum and apple orchard in front. It is a large and comfortable building, and does not at all present the appearance of a place where such a crime could be possible.

The officers say that the prisoner pointed to the dead body and then made several passes across his own throat, as though endeavoring in his sign language to confess that he committed the deed. A plea is made that he is more or less insane and not accountable, but those who have lived beside him say that he never showed any symptoms of lunacy and is with the exception of his infirmity, as intelligent as any one.

Officer Roberts, on being interviewed said that when he entered the house, the prisoner rose from the corner where he had been lying. He attempted to hand cuff him and got one on his neck but did not fasten the other without the assistance of officer Phillips.

A farmer who visited the house shortly after the crime occurred said that the prisoner did not appear to realize the position in which he stood, as he moved around the house with apparent unconcern. When the body was being prepared for burial he was very willing to get water or food for the stove. The farmer also took the little boy out doors and asked him if Eddie had used an axe or a knife. The boy did not know. He could not tell where the prisoner was before or after the murder. He came to the conclusion after several questions that the child as might be expected knew nothing about the affair. The farmer's theory is that the deaf-mute was out of the house and an extensive ground that the murder had been done.

In jail the prisoner's demeanor is as non-chalant and easy as though he was not in need for a serious case. He is willing to converse with any in the mute language or by writing.

The police and others went to the house yesterday and searched it thoroughly as well as the fields for the fatal weapon, but it has not as yet been found.

The Fair and Bravo.

Miss Blanche Hayes, daughter of Chas. Hayes, bandmaster of the R. C. R. L., and F. C. Beattie, of St. John, were married at St. Anne's church, this city, at six o'clock on Tuesday. A very pretty wedding took place on Tuesday at the residence of Frederick Dunphy, Mouth Kewick, when his youngest daughter, Irene, was united in marriage to H. McColloch, of Spring Hill. Only immediate friends were present. The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss William Jennings, of Fredericton, while William McColloch, brother of the groom, held honors as best man. The bride was dressed in a handsome suit of light blue silk trimmed with white silk and ribbons and looked charmingly pretty and lovely, while the maid wore old rose. Rev. Mr. Crawley, of Fredericton, officiated. Many presents were received, some of the best as follows: Carving set, Dr. and Mrs. Morehouse; majolica tea service, Mrs. Gill; silver butter dish, Mrs. McColloch; perfume case, Miss Nellie Dunphy; chess set, Mrs. W. Jones, and many others. The bride who was a general favorite with all will be much missed, as she carried a ray of sunshine with her. We wish her all, and long and prosperous may her life be.

Tay Creek, Tuesday was the scene of quite a gathering, the occasion being the marriage of Miss Victoria Hawkes, daughter of Mr. W. Jones, and many other farmers of the county, to John W. OUTRAGE AND MURDER

KESWICK

Excited by a Terrible Crime.

THE MURDERER

A Brother-in-Law of His Victim.

The village of Keswick, eleven miles from this city, was terribly excited on Wednesday evening when it became known that a most brutal and revolting murder had been committed there.

As there was no one present to tell the story of the killing the actual facts are meagre and the details are conjectured. But as far as is known the terrible tragedy is as follows:

Their Work Done.

John Alexander, a well known resident of Fredericton Junction, died at his residence there on the 18th inst. at the age of eighty-seven years.

Wm. McCulloch, of Harvey Station, has received the sad intelligence of the death of his father, Peter McCulloch, at Algona on Monday last. He was plowing a field and when found was dying. It is supposed he had been kicked by one of the horses as two of his were broken. He was in his seventy-fifth year.

It was heard with sadness that on Wednesday morning Mrs. Mary Ann Bradley, mother of William Bradley, blacksmith, of Gibson, had passed away by death at the residence of her son there. Deceased was in her eightieth year and has led a life noted for its virtue and usefulness. A Christian in the full sense of the term, she was a member of the church of which she was a member and the people among whom her life was spent feel her loss very heavily. The immediate relatives have the sincere sympathy of all who knew how strong was the bond of love that knit mother and family together. Her funeral took place Friday and was largely attended.

Mrs. David Coy died at his residence at Upper Gagetown on Monday, Sept. 25th, at the early age of forty-six. For some time past Mrs. Coy has been an invalid, but not until the week previous to her death did any alarming symptoms appear. Consequently her death was a severe shock to her many relatives and friends. The funeral took place at Upper Gagetown on Wednesday morning, 27th, at 10 o'clock, and was attended by a large number of people. Rev. Mr. Hopper, the resident Baptist minister, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Reed, of the F. C. B. church, conducted the services, and preached a very impressive sermon from the book of psalms. The several hymns sung both at the church and grave were selected by the deceased previous to her death. The beautiful flowers which covered the casket were sent in by friends of the deceased, and fully testified to her popularity among her neighbors. Among the many contributions of flowers was a magnificent bunch of white roses and maidenhair fern, sent by her brother, Geo. A. Plummer, of Boston. Mrs. Coy leaves a sorrowing husband to mourn her early demise. She also leaves four brothers and two sisters, to mourn their loss—Jo, and Geo. A. Plummer, of Boston, Charles and Wallace Plummer, of Upper Gagetown, Mrs. C. F. Hohen, of St. John, and Mrs. J. F. Richards, of this city.

In the evening a public temperance meeting was held in Bart's hall, Rev. Mr. Young occupying the chair. The meeting was addressed by Rev. Mr. Williams, after which a short program which was prepared for the occasion was well carried out.

Rev. Mr. Williams, of Jacksonville, preached in Matheson's hall on Sunday evening to a large congregation.

The village is about to lose one of its most respected citizens in the person of Dr. Beatto, who goes to Lakelville to take the practice of Dr. McCrea. The doctor and his family will be very much missed.

Invitations are out for a swell wedding at Florenceville next week. Prospects for that Hartland will have another Taylor.
