Sore Eyes
The eyes are sore in sympathy with the body, and afford an excellent indication of its condition.

When the eyes become weak, and the iris inflamed and sore, it is an evidence that the system has become disordered by Scrophula, for which Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best known remedy.

Scrophula, which produces a painful inflammation in the eye, causes much suffering for a number of years. By the advice of a physician I commenced taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After using this medicine a short time I was completely cured.

My eyes are now in a splendid condition, and I am as well and strong as ever. My wife, William Gay, Concord, N. H.

For a number of years I was troubled with a humor in my eye, and was unable to obtain any relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It was restored, and I believe it to be the best of blood-purifiers.—W. E. Upton, Nashua, N. H.

From childhood, and until within a few months, I have been afflicted with Weak and Sore Eyes. I was treated with many remedies, but with no permanent success. On the recommendation of a friend, I commenced taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which my doctor recommended. Before she had used the third bottle, I was restored, and I believe it to be the best of blood-purifiers.—W. E. Upton, Nashua, N. H.

I suffered for years with inflammation in my left eye. Three weeks formed the eye, and I was unable to see. After trying many other remedies, to no purpose, I was finally induced to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and Martyred by Communism.

Mr. Washburn, who was United States Minister to France in the dark days of the 70-71 war, and during the brief reign of the Commune, has described it thus: "It was from the fact that I was the only foreign minister who remained in Paris during the days of the Commune that I was brought into relations with the Archbishop of Paris. Up to that time I had known him only by general reputation, and as a man eminently beloved by all who knew him, sincerely devoted to the interests of his church, and distinguished for his benevolence and kindness of heart. When I heard of his arrest by the Commune, on one of the first days of April, I considered it one of the most threatening omens that had taken place. Yet it was hardly possible to suppose that any injury could come to a man like the Archbishop Dauboy. Still up to the time of his arrest, his person should not be wondered at that I temporarily lost sight of him in the whirl of the terrible events then passing in Paris. On the 18th of April the Pope's nuncio, Flavio Chigi, wrote me a confidential communication, asking me to receive kindly four ecclesiastical canons of the Metropolitan Church of Paris, who would come to me to claim protection in favor of their archbishop from the insurgents; and he asked to be permitted to join his prayers to those of the good canons, and to assure me of his great gratitude for all that I thought I might do in endeavoring, at least, to prevent any danger coming to the life of Monsignor Darboy. This communication was brought to me by the canons, and they made a very strong appeal. Armed with this authority, I immediately started for the prison of Mazas, where we were admitted without difficulty, and treated with respect by the guard. Their calous hearts seemed to have softened toward the archbishop, and they appeared glad to welcome us as his friends. As a special favor we were permitted to enter into his gloomy and naked little cell. He had been in prison more than two weeks, and had seen no person except the jailers, as he had been utterly ignorant of what had been done during his imprisonment. He seemed delighted to see me, and I was deeply touched by the appearance of the venerable prelate. With his slender person, his form somewhat bent, his long beard (by the apparently had not been shaved since his confinement), his face grayed with age, and his eyes sunk and hollow, he had fallen to the most indignant observer. I told him what the object of my visit was, and he at once entered upon an explanation of his situation. I was struck with his cheerful spirit, and captivated with his interesting conversation. He was one of the most charming and agreeable of men, and was beloved alike by the rich and poor. He had spent his whole life in acts of charity and benevolence, and was particularly distinguished for his liberal and Catholic spirit. The cruelty of his position and the presence of his coming fate had not changed the sweetness of his disposition nor the serenity of his temper.

By taking three bottles of this medicine, I have been cured. My sight has been restored, and there is no inflammation, nor any other ailment. I believe it to be the best of blood-purifiers.—W. E. Upton, Nashua, N. H.

added, 'Men who go to meet death ought not to be insulted; some but towards will resist the unfortunate.' When they arrived in the court of La Roquette darkness had already come on, and it was necessary to get lanterns to conduct the victims between the high walls which surrounded the court. Nothing shook the firmness of these men when they were marched to assassination. The Archbishop was the cool and firmest, because the greatest. He shook each one by the hand and gave him his last benediction. When they arrived at the place where they were to be shot, the victims were placed against the walls which inclosed the cell of the prison of La Roquette. The Archbishop was placed at the head of the line, and the fiends who murdered him scratched with their knives a cross upon the stone in the wall at the very place where his head was to be severed. At that moment they fired their fatal shots. He did not fall at the first volley, but stood erect, calm and immovable, and before the other victims came which launched him into eternity, he crossed himself three times upon the forehead. The other victims all fell together. The marks of the bullets that pierced them through their bodies were distinctly visible. The Archbishop was afterwards mutilated and his abdomen cut open. All the bodies were then put into carts and removed to Père Lachaise, which was but a few squares off, where they were thrown into a common ditch (from which, however they were happily rescued before decomposition had taken place). On returning from La Roquette I came by the palace of the archbishop where his body was lying in state. He was changed there, I hardly knew him. Great numbers of the good people of Paris were passing through the palace to look for the last time upon him, who was so endeared to them by his benevolent acts, his kindly disposition and consideration for the poor and the lowly. In all the six or seven interviews I had with him in prison, except the last, I always found him cheerful and sometimes even gay, and never uttering a word of complaint. No man could be with him without being captivated by his cheerful disposition, his Christian spirit and interesting conversation. He was learned, accomplished and eloquent; and, above all, he was good. His religious and political sentiments he was most liberal. He met his fate with the firmness of a Christian martyr, and anyone who knew him could not but join in a tribute of admiration to him. I myself, I can never think of him without being overwhelmed with emotion that I am scarcely able to express. His funeral could not be held, for he had fallen to the hands of the other victims massacred with him, took place at the church of Notre Dame, in Paris, June 7, 1871. The National Assembly at Versailles, was highly indignant that the remains of all France, decided that the interment should take place at the expense of the public treasury. Great preparations were made for the funeral ceremonies, and it was one of the most emotional and imposing funeral services I ever attended.—Republic.

The Work of a Catholic Archbishop.

Some time ago we remarked that more was accomplished for the work of English-speaking people by Archbishop Stephen of London and the Catholic Bishops and nobles who wrought the Magna Charta from King John at Runnymede than by any subsequent English monarchs to the hearts of some Catholic England were the principles embodied in this precious document may be seen by the following article, taken from the Mail. Yes, entitled, "Modern Charter Breakers":

"The veneration in which the principles of the Magna Charta were held in England is well illustrated by the reverence with which they were venerated in the days before the Reformation. Twice a year, as history informs us, in the great Hall of Westminster, in the presence of British royalty and nobility, the Bishops in their pontifical robes, by the light of burning tapers, pronounced the great excommunication against those who infringed the provisions of that instrument. The phraseology of the curse was, 'By the authority of the Almighty God, and the blessed apostles and martyrs, we excommunicate and curse, and anathematize the English liberties, and, secretly or openly, by deed, word or counsel, do make statutes or observe them being made against the liberties, ancient customs and acquiescence from the company of Heaven and the Sacrament of the Holy Ghost.'

"Such a curse to-day probably would not inspire the terror it did six hundred years ago. Yet it is interesting, as showing the sanctity with which, even in the middle ages, the bulwark of liberties was regarded, and it would be perfect, I think, if I could only sleep better. My appetite is very good."

"Moreover, I am very much surprised, as I am out in the sun a great deal, and never bother with an umbrella or gloves; and here, and in Africa, it is warm in the day time, now, as it is in Columbus in June or July. The nights, however, are cool and pleasant."

"If you see *, tell him I will be back about the time the horses have put off their winter coats."

Very sincerely in Christ,
John Ambrose, Bishop.

Letter from Jerusalem.

The following extracts from a Letter of Bishop Waterston, of Columbus, Ohio, are taken from the Catholic Messenger. The Letter is dated February 29, 1887:—

"I know how glad you will be to get a Letter from Jerusalem, this Holy City, which is so interesting and so full of every true Christian heart, not only because it is intimately associated with the history of our people in the Old Law, but especially because it was so afflicted by the presence, preaching, miracles, sufferings and death of Our Blessed Lord."

It is now eleven days since I came here, and my time and attention, my soul and body, have been so taken up in visiting and venerating the holy places in and around the city, that this is the first time I have attempted to write a letter.

The city itself and the towns and country round about are full of so many saints, long familiar to me by name and history, but until the present time venerated by me from a distance only. Never, however, I given me to see Bethlehem, where Our Lord was born, and where He was adored by the shepherds and the wise men from the East.

The Jordan where He was baptized and where He fasted and prayed for forty days and forty nights; the mountain, where He taught His disciples how to pray in the city, where He taught and preached in the temple; the place where He made His triumphal entry on the Day of Palms; the place where He was crowned with thorns and carried to Calvary; the Garden of Gethsemane, where He suffered His agony and bloody sweat; the place where He was scourged, crowned with thorns and carried to Calvary; the place where He was crucified, and where He was buried; the place where He was resurrected, and where He ascended to Heaven, in the presence of His Blessed Mother and disciples. I have had the happiness of saying Mass in the chapel of St. Peter, and of visiting many other spots connected with the Life of Our Lord and His Blessed Mother.

The day after to-morrow I am to set out on horseback for Nazareth, which is a three day ride from Jerusalem; and, after visiting Nazareth, a day and a half, and Mount Thabor and Lake Tiberias, I shall return to Jerusalem, where I will sail for Egypt again, and from thence take ship for Naples on my way to Rome, where I have still some business to attend to before I return to Columbus.

I have made many journeys on horseback among the mountains, in and around Jerusalem; for here there are no railroads, and only two roads in the neighborhood are fit for wagons, camels, horses, donkeys, and women do all the carrying here, for among the Turks and Arabs, the carriage is in a very degraded condition. The Arabs and Turks are also very dirty, and, as they are in a vast majority in these places, the consequence is that Jerusalem is a very filthy city.

The Turks do not want Christians here, and so the Christians can have very little for the cleanliness of the streets. There is not a street in Jerusalem that is as wide as the alley behind the Cathedral of Columbus. Every thing is different from what it is at home. Neither men nor women dress as ours do; and, for some of the natives have scanty clothing. Manners and customs are also different from ours, and also the complexion of the people. You can hear almost every language spoken in the streets. Everything is strange and wonderful. No wagon, carriage or other vehicle is allowed inside the walls of Jerusalem, the streets being too narrow and hilly.

We make the Stations of the Cross in the streets, notwithstanding the Mahomedans; and, as the streets have no sidewalks, and are paved with sharp cobble stones and very dirty, you can imagine that making the Way of the Cross publicly in Jerusalem is quite a different thing from going round the inside of a comfortable church. Moreover, it is the pious custom here, before rising from one's knees, at each station, to kiss the ground that was trodden by Our Blessed Lord on His painful way to Calvary. Every one does it, and I have done it many times myself.

Besides Mahomedans, Greeks, Armenians, Syrians, Copts, Ethiopians, Russians, Italians, Germans, Spaniards, and many other nationalities; there are also many Jews here, and they are ob-durate against Our Lord, and as their forefathers were, more than eighteen hundred years ago.

My health is very good, generally, and it would be perfect, I think, if I could only sleep better. My appetite is very good."

"Moreover, I am very much surprised, as I am out in the sun a great deal, and never bother with an umbrella or gloves; and here, and in Africa, it is warm in the day time, now, as it is in Columbus in June or July. The nights, however, are cool and pleasant."

"If you see *, tell him I will be back about the time the horses have put off their winter coats."

Very sincerely in Christ,
John Ambrose, Bishop.

LADIES, WE MEAN YOU!

"It requires careful management in household affairs for many to make both ends meet satisfactorily. This is largely owing to buying supplies at the wrong prices. To meet this difficulty we ask you not to be satisfied short of the 'Correct Thing.'"

THE BARTER'S DESTINY.

His looks were wild, and with his eyes... "From him? From whom—what murderer?"

When the door closed behind them, she... "From him? From whom—what murderer?"

When the door closed behind them, she... "From him? From whom—what murderer?"

When the door closed behind them, she... "From him? From whom—what murderer?"
