Sovereigns and Their Rings.

While finger rings are among the most ancient emblems of rank, as has been shown by the fact that in the Khedival Museum, at Cairo, and at the British Museum, in London, there are to be seen some found in tombs dating from the Pharaoh of the exodus, there are only two monarchical countries that have retained the ring as an integral portion of the regalia of their rulers, writes "Ex-Attache" in the "New York Tribune." One of these is Russia, while the other is Great Britain, and it is worthy of note that in each of these cases the investiture of the sovereign with the ring is held to endow him with majesty of a more sacred character than that conferred by the placing of the crown upon his head. The Kings of England, like the Emperors of Russia, claim to be not only the temporal monarchs, but likewise the summus episcopus; that is to say, the chief Bishop and head of the State church of his country.

The investiture of King Edward with the ring will, indeed, precede the placing of the crown upon his head, as the Archbishop of Canterbury puts the ring upon the fourth finger of the monarch's right hand, he will exclaim: "Receive this ring, the assign of the kingly dignity, and of the defence of the Catholic faith, that as you are this day consecrated head of this kingdom and people, so enriched in faith and abounding in good works, you may reign with Him who is King of Kings, and whom we honor and glory, forever and ever, amen."

The ring in question consists of a large table ruby, on which the cross of St. George is engraved, set in plain gold. The stone is reset for each successive sovereign, and while it is known as "King Edward's ring," there is no truth whatsoever in the story according to which it dates from the time of Edward the Confessor. True, there was formerly a ring used at the coronation of English sovereigns; which, according to popular legend, is said to have reached Edward the Confessor from St. John the Evangelist. Edward, it is said, was one day asked for alms by a "fayre" old man, and having no money, drew his ring from his finger and bestowed it upon the mendicant. Some years afterward two pilgrims travelling in the Holy Land were met by a "fayre" ancient man with wayte bear for age, who asked them what they were, and whence they came. On learning that they were English pilgrims, he talked to them of the "welfare and holynesse" of their King Edward, and when leaving them he told them who he was and said: "I am St. John the Evangelist, and say ye unto Edward, your King, that I greet him well by the token that he gave me, this ring with his own hands, which ring ye shall deliver to him again," and when he had delivered to them "the ring," he departed from them suddenly.

This ring of Edward the Confessor, whatever its origin, was preserved in his shrine at Westminster as a sacred relic. But it disappeared at the time of the Commonwealth, having perhaps been consigned to the melting pot of Oliver Cromwell, and the one now in existence dates only from the time of Charles II. It must not be confounded with another of the crown jewels which was the favorite ring of Mary, Queen of Scots, and that is likewise set with a ruby. It was sent by her at her death to the sea-ford at the castle at Fotheringay to her son, James I., from whom it passed to his son, Charles I., who on going to his execution at Whitehall, handed it to Bishop Juxon, his spiritual adviser, and requested him to give it to his son James, Duke of York. When the latter was deprived of his throne he carried it off with him to Versailles, and eventually it passed into the hands of his grandson, Cardinal Prince Henry of York, who bequeathed it along with a number of other equally historic Stewart relics to King George IV, in return for the latter's generosity in granting to him, the last of the Stewart line, an annuity of $25,000 a year.

There has always been a certain amount of speculation as to what was meant by the "fourth" finger, and this uncertainty about the matter led to an awkward contretemps at the coronation of Queen Victoria. The authorities of the Royal College of Heralds assumed that the fourth finger was the smallest and last of the hand, and had made the coronation ring to fit the Queen's little finger. The Archbishop of Canterbury, however, declared that the thumb counted as the first finger, and consequently insisted that the proper moment during the coronation in placing the ring by main force upon the third finger of the Queen's hand. He took the ground that any departure from the ritual in the matter might impair the validity of the ceremony of the coronation. The putting of the ring on the third finger of the Queen was only accomplished with considerable difficulty and at the cost of much pain which, as time went on, increased to such an extent that at length the young sovereign could endure it no longer.

The use of the ring by the members of the Roman Catholic and orthodox hierarchy dates back to the earliest day of the Christian era, and already at the Council of Orleans, held in A. D. 511, the ring is mentioned in conjunction with the pastoral staff and the stole as part of the insignia of the episcopal dignity. In 1194 the Pope Innocent III. definitely settled the fashion of the episcopaling ring, ordaining that it should be of solid gold and set with a precious stone, on which nothing was to be inscribed. Toward the end of the thirteenth century the episcopaling ring was enriched by the addition of precious stones set around the principal one. At the consistory in which the Pope opens the mouths of the new Cardinals, it is the custom for him to confer upon each a ring. This practice dates from about the twelfth century. These Cardinals' rings are of gold, set with a sapphire, denoting the high priesthood and the regal dignity. Prelates, according to the writings of the fathers of the Church, never wear rings, because it is their place to "seal the mystery of the Scriptures and the sacrament of the Church to the people, and to reveal them to the lowly."

With the Pope as with the English King and the Russian Czar, the investiture with the ring precedes the coronation, and is indeed the more important ceremony of the two. For whereas the coronation does not take place until several days after the termination of the conclave, the placing of the "Fisherman's" ring upon the finger of the successful candidate immediately follows his election, and is considered to endow him with Pontifical authority. The "Fisherman's" ring is made new for every Pope, and derives its name from the fact that it is engraved with the figure of St. Peter in a fisherman's boat, around which is inscribed the name of the reigning Pontiff.

The use of the "Fisherman's" ring is almost as ancient as the history of the Papacy, and it is employed to seal all the more important bulls and briefs. It is the one seal the Pope invariably retains in his own possession from the time of his election until the moment of his death, the signets and seals and stamps of minor importance being intrusted to certain Cardinals and other prelates. As soon as a Pope breathes his last, the Secretary of State in his role of Perfect of the Apostolic Palace, informs the Cardinal Camerlingo, who thereupon, attended by certain members of the Papal household, proceeds to the death chamber and, after a short prayer removes the white cambric cloth from the face of the dead man. Striking the forehead of the latter lightly three times in succession with a small silver mallet, calling him by his Christian name, he then turns to those present and exclaims: "The Pope is really dead," whereupon all kneel and the Cardinal recites the "De Profundis."

At its conclusion, the Master of the Household removes the "Fisherman's" ring from the finger of the dead Pontiff, and hands it to the Camerlingo, who proceeds to send there to have the name engraved around the figure of St. Peter in his boat affixed thereon. The Camerlingo retains possession of this ring until the assemblage of the conclave, during which time he uses it for the exercise of current business. In bygone centuries weeks and even months have sometimes elapsed between the death of a Pope and the meeting of the conclave to elect his successor, and bells and briefs issued during that period show on their seal merely the figure of St. Peter and his boat, the absence of the name of Pontiff around the apostolic fisherman showing that the bull was issued in an interregnum. The authority of the Camerlingo ceases when the conclave assembles, becomes vested in the latter, and at its first session the "Fisherman's" ring is defaced and destroyed by means of a hammer.

As soon as the final ballot has been taken, and the newly elected Pope has taken his seat on a falstool before the altar to receive the homage and congratulations of those who have raised him to the chair of St. Peter, he begins before anything else by appointing a Camerlingo pro tem, who then invests him with a new "Fisherman's" ring as the first and principal token of his Pontifical authority. The Pope, after receiving the homage of those present, returns the ring to the Camerlingo, in order to have engraved thereon the name which he has taken as Pontiff and by which he desires to figure in the annals of the Church.

The coronation ring of King Edward has been sometimes known as the "wedding ring of England" on the understanding that it was emblematic of the union between the sovereign and his kingdom. Some writers, indeed, insist that the rings of Popes and prelates are indicative of the fact that they are wedded to the Church. In fact, the matrimonial idea has always been associated in some way or another with the rings of office, and it may be remembered that in the days of the old Republic of Venice, its doges were invested on their inauguration, with two rings, one of which they retained while the other they cast with much pomp and ceremony into the sea from the prow of the great state galley, in order to signify the fact that Venice was the bride of the Adriatic.

According to the figures given to the press by the Civil Governor of Madrid, six thousand religious associations registered in Spain between April 9 and June 10.

Senorita Victoria Avellanda, who took the veil last spring in the Convent of the Sacred Heart at Confians, near Paris, is the daughter of a former President of the Argentine Republic.

The Pope is anxious concerning the health of Cardinal Vaughan, Archbishop of Westminster, who continues ill. His Holiness has telegraphed, inquiring how the Cardinal is progressing.

In Cleveland on Sunday last Bishop Horstmann laid the cornerstone of the Church of St. Columbkille, which is to be a splendid structure, 155 feet long and 94 feet wide, in the Romanesque style of architecture.

The first religious reception of Polish Sisters ever held in this country took place the other day in St. Stanislaus' Church, St. Louis, Mo., Rev. U. Stanowski, pastor. The Sisters are of the Third Order of St. Francis. They will teach the parochial schools in Polish parishes. Archbishop Keen officiated at the reception.

Very Rev. F. X. Specht, who has just been made a domestic prelate by the Holy Father, is one of the oldest priests in the Diocese of Columbus, having been ordained over thirty-five years. He has been pastor of St. Mary's Church, Columbus, for twenty-nine years, previous to which he was assistant at Holy Cross, and for twenty years he has been vicar general of the diocese.

Among the most recent reports from Rome is one announcing that Queen Natalis, ex-Queen of Serbia, has by a recent will bequeathed all her wealth and possessions, comprising 4,000,000 francs, or $300,000, to a convent of French nuns, thereby disinheriting her son, King Alexander of Serbia. This testamentary disposition has provoked genuine consternation in the political circles of that country.

At the laying of the cornerstone of St. Agnes' parochial school, in Cleveland, the other day, Bishop Horstmann reiterated his profound belief in the paramount necessity of Catholic education. It was more important than the church because its existence meant the vitality of faith, and without it the churches would soon be empty. Intelligent non-Catholics, he pointed out, are beginning to realize that the Catholic position on the subject of education is the right position, as they have already realized that the church alone is right on the subject of divorce.

A pleasant reminder of the good work being done by the International Catholic Truth Society is contained in the following paragraph from the annual report of the New York Society for the suppression of vice: "A complaint came to our office in the summer that a woman, lecturing against Roman Catholic institutions in a public hall in Brooklyn was selling to young girls, young men and women, a most obscene book. A copy was procured. It was found to be a book that had been legally suppressed by the courts both in England and in this country. The lecturer had the State after warrants had been issued for her arrest. She subsequently sent to our office 1,113 books and forty nine electro plates, with orders to have the same destroyed, which was done later." The woman was Margaret Shephard, and the power behind the prosecution was the I. O. T. S.

Father Bernard Vaughan, S. J., of London was given a verdict for £300 in an action for libel which he brought against the "Rook." Commenting on the verdict, the "Catholic Times," of London, says: "The vituperation and violence with which the 'Rook' has been carrying on a campaign against the Jesuits have far exceeded the bounds of legitimate controversy. The Jesuit, it appears to us, have been much too patient. It is time the vilification were checked, and the result of the action taken by Father Bernard Vaughan will, we feel sure, have a wholesome effect. It will teach Catholic priests that when they are unjustly attacked they may trust a British jury, sense of fair play in claiming damages, and to the Protestant religious press it will give the lesson that in controversy greater restraint must be exercised for the future."

The encyclical letter on the Holy Eucharist, "Mitrae Caritatis," which has just been addressed to the Catholic hierarchy of the world, is one of the most important documents published by the Holy Father in the course of his long pontificate. The Holy Father recalls how he has given his approval to institutes and sodalities engaged in the promotion of Perpetual Adoration, has encouraged Eucharistic congresses, and to all engaged in such work has assigned as heavenly protector St. Paschal Baylon, who was distinguished for his devotion towards the Mystery of the Eucharist. His Holiness then gives a beautiful exposition of the benefits that follow from the adoration and reception of Our Blessed Lord in the Holy Eucharist, and points out that this devotion, which he is happy to observe, has been extending in recent years, is the sovereign remedy for the spiritual indolence and the other evils of the age. Whilst expressing his satisfaction with what has been done of late for the increase of devotion to our Lord in the Blessed Eucharist, the Holy Father in his encyclical urges that Catholics must not be content with this. Their zeal must be ever active. Inconspicuous and unobtrusive, such as Eucharistic sodalities, the prayers of the Forty Hours, solemn processions and visits to the tabernacle, have fallen into disuse, they are to be revived. In this connection every step is to be taken that piety and prudence suggest. But above all the ecclesiastical authorities should strive to make the practice of frequenting the Eucharist table to flourish again in every part of the Catholic world. To this end they should seek to free the minds of adversaries from prejudices and to rid others of vain fears and pretexts for abstention.

Eugene Field's Night Wind.
Have you ever heard the wind go
"Yooooooo?"
"It's a pitiful sound to hear!
It seems to chill you through and through
With a strange and speechless fear.
'Tis the voice of the night that broods outside
When folks should to sleep,
And many and many's the time I've cried
To the darkness brooding far and wide
Over the land and the deep;
"Whom you want, O lonely night,
"Whom you want, O long hours through?"
And the night would say in its
ghostly way:
"Yooooooo!"
"Yooooooo!"
"Yooooooo!"
My mother told me long ago
(When I was a little lad)
That when the night went wailing so,
Somebody had been bad;
And then when I was snug in bed,
Whither I had been sent,
With the blankets pulled round my head,
I'd think of what my mother'd said,
And wonder what by the meaning of it
And "Who's been bad to-day?" I'd ask
Of the wind that hoarsely blew,
And the voice would say in the mean-
ingly way:
"Yooooooo!"
"Yooooooo!"
"Yooooooo!"
That this was true I must allow—
You'd not believe it, though!
Yes, though I'm quite a model now,
I was not always so.
And if you doubt what things I say,
Suppose you made the test:
Suppose, when you've been had some day
And up to bed are sent away
From the mother and the rest—
Suppose you ask, "Who has been bad?"
And then you'll hear what's true:
For the wind will moan in its cruel
tone:
"Yooooooo!"
"Yooooooo!"
"Yooooooo!"

JUST A HINT.

"Father," asked Tommy the other day, "why is it that the boy is said to be the father of the man?"

Mr. Tomkins had never given this subject any thought and was hardly prepared to answer offhand.

"Why—why," he said stammeringly, "it's because it is, I suppose."

"Well," said Tommy, "since I'm your father, I'm going to give you a ticket to the theatre and a dollar besides. I go in and have a good time while you are so young. I never had any chance myself!"

Mr. Tomkins gazed in blank amazement at Tommy. Slowly the significance of the hint dawned upon him. Producing the silver coin, he said:

"Take it, Thomas. When you really do become a father, I hope it won't be your misfortune to have a son who is smarter than yourself."—American Boy.

Here is a poem I ran across which is worth passing on to others. It has a simple pathetic touch to it without any undue "flogging in" of that sickly sentimental "gush" which characterizes so much of the poetry of to-day.

The general run of "poets" now-a-days have an idea that to write good poetry they must clothe it in a style of language which common everyday mortals cannot understand. This idea, of course is quite erroneous.

SO LONG, JIM.

Good-bye, old friend; full many a time together

We've traiped it in the sunshine and the rain

Along life's pathway with unheeded tether,

Through shadowy woods and o'er the sky-bound plain;

And many an hour by row and rushing river

We've watched the started game with sportsman's zest,

Till sunset warned us back to camp and cover

And rest.

Full many a night beneath the whispering oaks

We've lain in camp and smoked the pipe of peace,

And swapped tall stories of departed leaders

On food and field or on the cricket grass;

And if the absent needed a defender

If ever man beneath the starry blue

Walked straight, shot true, ne'er let a friend go under,

'Twas you.

And as we know our Book, we'll try to see you;

By your example paddled, on that shore

Where we by God's sweet mercy may retrieve you

And stand by your forever, evermore,

So, for that little span the turf shall hide you

While we remain to finish up life's song,

We will not say goodbye for good; we'll bid you

"So long."

Islanders in Boston.

The Prince Edward Island Association of Boston, Mass., held its first meeting of the season on June 17th, at the old Shaw Estate, Centre St., Dorchester.

The dancing was enjoyed by all in the two large reception rooms on the first floor, music being furnished by the celebrated Mari Grosse on her piano, and also by John A. Dwan on his violin.

The dancing was in the form of a hardy-gurdy party.

The laubric selections by Miss Grosse was a treat to those who had never seen this artist perform.

Mr. Dwan's selections on the violin were no less popular as it brought back to many of those present the memory of the old fashioned barn party.

Refreshments were served by A. B. Topiano, & Co. caterers of Cambridge.

During the afternoon the party had the pleasure of a call from Rev. Father Morrison, who chanced to be in Boston on his way to California.

Several kinds of races were enjoyed by those present, and when the party broke up at sun set it was the expression of all that they had spent a very enjoyable day.

The success of the outing was due to the untiring efforts of President John C. McDonald and the assistance of such valiant men as Financial Secretary, Francis Murphy, Treasurer, Michael Walsh, Michael P. Quinn, W. W. Doyle.

The success of the association is assured can be seen from the fact that inside of two years it has grown to a membership of about two hundred.

In the fall of 1900 the association held its first ball, which was attended by over six hundred people, and was pronounced by the management of Paul Bevere Hall to be the finest party ever held in that hall.

The Association is working to make it a beneficial Association, and when a stipulated amount is in the treasury they propose to pay a sick benefit to its members.

Although not organized to entertain distinguished Islanders who may be visiting here, the Association will always be pleased to receive a visit from any Prince Edward Islander who may chanced to be in the city.

The present staff of officers are: President, John C. McDonald, Vice-President, Dr. A. J. Donnelly, Treasurer, Charles W. Connor's, Recording Secretary, Dan J. McLean, Corresponding Secy, Jas. Cunningham, Financial Secy, Michael Walsh, Sergeant-at-arms, Edward B. Thornon, Guard, John J. Lynn, Trustees, Ewan McGregor, Teenie Carmichael, Michael P. Quinn, J. McLean, Auditors, Cornelius Gallant, P. S. Mulligan, Charles J. McLean.—Com.

All Stuffed Up

That's the condition of many sufferers from catarrh, especially in the morning. Great difficulty is experienced in clearing the head and throat.

No wonder catarrh causes headache, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, pollutes the breath, deranges the stomach and affects the appetite.

To cure catarrh, treatment must be constitutional—alterative and tonic.

"I was ill for four months with catarrh in the head and throat. Had a bad cough and raised blood. I had become discouraged when my husband bought a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla and persuaded me to try it. I advise all to take it. It has cured and built me up." Mrs. HOUR-ROUSE, West Lincoln, N. S.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Cures catarrh—it soothes and strengthens the mucous membrane and builds up the whole system.

MONSTER TEA PARTY!

At Morell Station, On TUESDAY, JULY 8.

Proceeds in aid of Saint Joseph's Church.

The ladies of St. Joseph's Parish, Morell Rear, will hold a Monster Tea Party and Fancy Fair on Tuesday, July 8th, on the beautiful grounds adjoining Morell Station, and in view of the Morell River. Morell is famous for its large and successful tea parties, and as this one will be the best, at least for many years, no efforts will be spared to make it the peer in every respect of those that have gone before it.

All games and amusements usual at such gatherings will be provided, and the tables and dinner tables and numerous refreshment booths will be stocked with every delicacy to satisfy the tooth of the most exacting epicure.

Should the day prove unfavorable the tea party will be held on the first fine day following.

The Great Wood Farm Sale.

LARGEST AND BEST SALE OF JERSEYS IN THIS COUNTRY FOR YEARS.

The recent auction sale at Hood Farm, Lowell, Mass., dispersed 154 beautiful Jerseys to breeders and farmers all over the country from Maine to Oregon, it being the largest and most successful sale of American-bred Jerseys that has been held in this country for years.

The 48 cows sold brought $9,165, an average of $190, 67 heifers and calves sold for $6,580, and 39 bulls and bull calves brought $2,595.

The remarkably good prices brought by the young heifers of Hood Farm Pogle 9th show that breeders appreciate the great breeding represented in this young bull and his progeny.

In milk. Hood Farm Pogle 9th is retained at the Hood farm herd. He is a son of the famous cow Figgie, by the great show bull Hood Farm Pogle. Figgie herself was the great plum of the sale and was bought by the well known banker and copper magnate, Mr. Thos. W. Lawson of Boston. The price paid was $275.

This sale reduces the Hood Farm to a more convenient basis for business, and young stock from the great producing aires and dams at Hood Farm will continue to be in demand among progressive breeders.

CARDINAL, by the casting vote of the Chairman decided for midsummer school holidays.

The Crown case reserved for the Court of Appeal in the King vs Gillian is set down for argument on Thursday, July 10th.

At Halifax on Saturday evening breake-man Robert McEllan had both legs cut off and died shortly afterwards, by a car running over him.

The soldier's monument was to have been unveiled yesterday. A delay in the casting necessitated a postponement. The pedestal was placed in position on Friday.

TOM KING, the R. C. R. private who attacked the civil and military police with a bayonet at Halifax last week was sentenced to four years in Dorchester. He also got thirty days for stealing a pair of boots.

The troopship Winifredia sailed from Port Maitland on Friday. The second C.M.R. Dr. Johnson, Miss Pope and the non-commissioned officers and men of the Field Hospital Corps are on board.

C. B. Foster, passenger agent of the C. P. R., has arranged for bulletins to be posted on the Montreal express, giving the latest news of the King's health, for the benefit of passengers between St. John and Montreal.

A MONUMENT to the memory of the Nova Scotians who fell in South Africa was unveiled on Thursday, in Halifax by Governor Jones.

At Halifax on Thursday night without a moment's warning, Annie McDonald, aged seventeen, of Lake Avenue, C. B., was instantly killed on Summer Street by stepping on a live electric light wire which had fallen across her path.

The fourth Regiment, C. A., will be inspected at 2 o'clock today (Wednesday) at Victoria Park, by Colonel Wilson, of Que. Col. Wilson is the leading artillery officer in Canada and it was he who inspected the artillery here last year.

A RECENT Winnipeg despatch says—Leopold McCallum, Prince Edward Island, who has been working on a farm in Southern Manitoba, has been taken to Brandon insane asylum. He was driven out of his mind by the fact he thought he was under suspicion of having been the cause of the drowning of one brother and the severe sickness of another.

The department of marine and fisheries has somewhat ticklish problem to solve. For the past few years the exportation of frogs legs, from Canada to the States has developed into a very large business, so much so that unless the killing of frogs is restricted there will be few left in the country in a few years.

The tea party at Mores Station, on Tuesday next the 5th, inst. is the next great social event towards which all eyes are turned. The beautiful locality, the facilities afforded for sports and amusements and the convenient train arrangements and low fares are of themselves sufficient to attract a large throng of people. But when to all this are added the preparations that are making by the committee in charge, for the pleasure and comfort of all visitors, and the excellent viands the good ladies of St. Joseph's parish will provide the prospects of an unprecedented gathering are assured.

Any additional information as to train accommodations or other particulars will be supplied in the posters.

A TRUCK was taken from the Charlottetown station a few days ago and left with some freight upon it at Royalty Junction. On Saturday evening when the train hands of the Cape Traverse branch were about to remove it they found built upon one of the oil boxes a robin's nest containing two eggs. Even the birds in P. E. Island seem to be getting on a hustle and are trying the experiment of hatching as they travel. At this rate, our road will soon require a sleeper.—Patriot.

A DISPATCH received in the city on Saturday announces that the Norwegian bark Isabella 1178 tons with a crew of men, Capt. Mue from London to Bate Veri, to load lumber for Haugestad, Norway, was driven ashore near Bate Veri, about a mile from Harris' factory some two and a half miles from Murray Harbor South. Those who are acquainted with the coast say that the vessel will be floated without damage. Tags from Picton and Charlottetown have gone to the rescue.—Gaz.

This anniversary of the solemn consecration of the beautiful church of Head St. Peter's Bay was appropriately celebrated on Sunday last, the Feast of St. Peter and St. Paul, under whose invocation the church is dedicated to divine worship. At an early Mass about two hundred of the parishioners approached Holy Communion. At ten o'clock solemn High Mass was celebrated by Rev. Dr. Simoni, assisted by Rev. Father McAulay, as deacon, and Rev. Father Gillis P. P., as sub-deacon. A splendid and appropriate sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. Simoni. After Mass the holy relics of St. Peter and St. Paul were solemnly venerated by the clergy and congregation, a most edifying ceremony indeed. There was a very large attendance of people not only from the parish, but from Mores and other neighboring parishes.

ALTHOUGH the King's Coronation did not take place on the appointed date, the great Coronation Tea at Head St. Peter's Bay took place yesterday and was an eminent success. The morning train from Charlottetown consisting of six coaches was well filled at starting and many more were picked up along the line, so that it was quite crowded when St. Peter's was reached. The train from Souris also brought a large number to the tea. Although the sky was somewhat overcast in the afternoon, the rain kept off wonderfully, and the light showers that fell late in the afternoon scarcely interfered in any appreciable degree with the success of the gathering. The tea and dinner tables were all that could be desired and the different games and amusements were all well patronized and much enjoyed. The best of good feeling prevailed and everything passed off most harmoniously. All in connection with the affair have reason to congratulate themselves. The gross receipts must have been in the vicinity of $900.

MARRIED. At St. Joseph's Convent, Charlottetown, on Monday June 30th, by Rev. Dr. Monaghan, Mr. James Kelly, merchant, to Miss Mary M. Green. The bridesmaid was Miss Della Walker and the groomsmen were Mr. John Bradley, of Kelly's Cream. The happy couple have gone on a wedding trip to Boston and New York. Congratulations.

OUR CLOTHING Never have we had such a large sale of Ready-to-wear Clothing. The reason is not far to seek. The fit and finish of our Clothing (just as good as custom made) and our half price is sufficient inducement for any sensible man or boy to buy their Clothing from us, and we must say that the people of P. E. Island are always alive to their interests, as evidenced by the great run on our Clothing this season. If you want a suit you'll find us AT THE OLD STAND, Next to Norton's Hardware Store, Queen Street. J. B. McDONALD & CO.,

We Make It Plain To everybody who wants to understand that the Clothing we sell is superior in cloth, in make and in trimmings to what any other store in the city sells. One big reason is because we buy so much that the biggest and best makers are satisfied to sell us and us alone. Another big reason is that we pay spot cash for every dollar's worth of clothing we buy. Another reason is because when we give a very large order to one firm, their expense in selling the order is very light, and they give us a special discount for that. These are all little reasons, but taken altogether they form a very big reason why we should get your trade. Don't forget that every dollar we save in discounts, means that dollar and the profit on that dollar to you. Now count up and see how much even an extra 10 per cent. discount will amount to on your year's clothing. When you have it figured out, come in and we'll prove your answer correct. PROWSE BROS., The Wonderful Cheap Men.

NEW Dress Goods Discussing any point becomes an easy matter when your arguments are backed up by indisputable facts. In this instance our argument is made doubly easy in being backed up by facts and figures. First, it is an established fact that a woman prefers to buy Dress Goods where they keep the largest stock. Second, where they keep the newest and most up-to-date materials. Third, where you are sure the prices are lowest. These are the reasons why we sell a lot of Dress Goods here. An Historical Romance of the Times of Queen Elizabeth.

Gilbert Gifford belonged to one of the best families in Staffordshire. For the sake of the Catholic faith his father had been reduced from opulence to penury, and had spent long years in prison. In order to secure a Catholic education for his son, a lad of remarkable talent, he sent him across the Channel, at the risk of incurring a severe penalty, to the seminary founded at Douay by Dr. Allen. The fact that the boy early evinced, besides considerable mental gifts, an unruly disposition, a frivolous character, and an utter indifference to religion, may have determined the father to confide his training to Catholic priests. He was removed by the hand of death before he had the sorrow of seeing how vain had been all his care on behalf of his son. In the class room Gilbert easily distanced his fellow pupils; and when the seminary was removed from Douay to Rheims, he was appointed Professor of Philosophy, although only twenty years of age. His lectures were admirable, but his morals left so much to be admired that after repeated admonitions and chastisements, his superiors threatened him with expulsion from the seminary. Thereupon he ran away, taking with him a sum of money which the Duke of Guise had given him as a benefaction to the seminary. In Paris, whither he betook himself, the misappropriated money was quickly squandered in riotous living. Like the Prodigal, he began to be in want; but he did not, like the Prodigal, return in contrition to his father's house. He had sinned before Heaven and before Thee. On the contrary, the unhappy young man took another step on the downward road; he gave up his religion and plunged into the abyss of unbelief.

Such were the circumstances in which Gifford found himself, when he accidentally made his acquaintance about the new year 1588. We had met in a tavern, and hearing who I was, he had requested the host to introduce him to me, as a fellow countryman of good family. As he was well, almost elegantly dressed, and knew very well how to behave, I invited him to sit down at my table, near a warm fire. At first our conversation was on general topics, the state of England, the last news from the Low Countries; but presently, after casting more than once a cautious glance around him, to ascertain whether there was any one who understood English near enough to overhear us, he drew his seat closer and said he wanted to say a word to me in confidence. He then offered his services to me as a spy. No one he asserted, could be found better able to serve England in this capacity than himself, since he came of an old Catholic family, and had the highest references, which would ensure him admittance to the saloons of the Spanish ambassador, of Charles Paget, the exiled Archbishop of Glasgow, and gain for him the acquaintance of Thomas Morgan and other partisans of Mary Stuart. Forwiled, we would promise him the same remuneration which Walsingham's other spies received, we should have every reason to be content with the service he would render us.

I declared myself willing, at least, to test his ability to serve us, and gave him a few sovereigns in advance. It was agreed between us that we should meet at the same place a week hence, for it would be imprudent in the highest degree for him to be seen at the English embassy, since that would awaken the suspicions of Mary Stuart's party. We then parted. I cannot say how distasteful to me was the intercourse with such traitors. It was, however, unavoidable, for the statesmanship of these days consisted to a great extent in the employment of these men, contemptible as they were in every respect. My uncle Walsingham himself expended enormous sums out of his private purse on these vile spies. There were more than a hundred in his pay, and the most valuable, although the most despicable of these were apostates and even fallen priests. The knowledge of this led me to form a very low opinion of the Popish clergy; I do not remember the old saying: "corruptio optima pessima"; the higher the state, the more terrible the fall from it.

To make a long story short, Gifford showed himself to be a practised deceiver, for in a brief period he wormed himself into the confidence of the Archbishop of Glasgow and of Thomas Morgan. The latter had been a primary factor in the first scheme for liberating the Queen of Scots, and Elizabeth would gladly have sent him to the gallows. But he slipped through Her Majesty's fingers, and escaped to Paris. Eliza both sent the Order of the Garter to Henry III., in order to induce him himself beside me, and sipping from time to time the generous liquor with evident appreciation of its fine flavor, spoke thus to me: "Your health, my dear Francis. It has long been my habit when I have any specially important business to consider, to drink a glass of this old port—only one glass, and that slowly. And you would do well to do the same. It quickens ones pulses, and you cannot think how many fortunate inspirations I owe to it. Well, we have an important matter to consider now. You will not be surprised when I tell you, that from the standpoint of a loyal Englishman and a zealous partisan of the Reformation, I consider Mary Stuart as our most dangerous enemy."

With this I concurred, for since her right as the granddaughter of Henry VII., to the throne of England was indisputable, and considering Elizabeth's age it could hardly any longer be hoped that she would marry, still less have any legitimate issue, the probability was that Mary would succeed her, and thereby the maintenance of the reformed religion be imperilled. I said as much to my uncle, who listened patiently and then replied: "I do not think there is much cause for anxiety on that score. Burghley's fair name should be tarnished with a plot of which—whether she is innocent or not—the English Parliament can make use for the purpose of setting aside her right, that you consider indisputable. Our Parliament has brought more difficult things to pass than that during the last half century. No, the only chance Mary Stuart has of ascending the throne would be by a successful rising of the Catholics within the country, or through the invasion of a foreign power, in support of her claims. The first contingency is no longer to be dreaded. The case was very different eighteen years ago, when the Pope deposed Elizabeth, and the most influential lords in the North took up arms. The fate of the new Queen and the new religion then hung upon a thread. Burghley completely lost his head, and the hour of peril showed him to be nothing of a statesman, however clever he may be as intriguer. If Alba had appeared off the coast of Yorkshire at that juncture with half a dozen galleons, and landed a regiment of his redoubtable Spaniards, Mary Stuart would now be Queen, and the Smithfield fires would blaze afresh. That danger was happily averted, contrary to all expectations, and the deluded insurrectionists, by order of the Queen, who on this occasion proved herself to be a true daughter of Henry VIII., executed their folly with their lives. Whole villages were depopulated. Since that time every year renders it less probable that such a rising would end in aught but failure. The number of Catholics has melted away; only in Lancashire and some of the northern counties, are they a small majority, and the nobles who still cling to the old creed, are gradually being ruined by enormous liens. Very soon all the wealthy Papists will be reduced to beggary. Far more cause have we for alarm concerning the other danger that threatens us. As long as Mary Stuart is alive, our Popish fellow-countrymen will exert themselves to bring about a Spanish invasion. You remember the conspiracy of Ridolfi. Two years ago a scheme was afoot of a similar nature; now for the third time we are menaced by the same danger, and in a worse shape than heretofore. Once more I repeat: we shall never enjoy tranquility as long as Mary Stuart is a prisoner in England. Hence her death becomes a political necessity."

Walsingham uttered the last words in a low tone, but with deliberation and emphasis. He then raised his glass to his lips again, and silence prevailed until I remarked: "Uncle, you said, 'as long as she is a prisoner in England.' Supposing she were set at liberty?" "She would have been set at liberty long ago," he rejoined, "if she would have agreed to two conditions, the surrender of her claim to the throne, and the adoption of the reformed religion. During eighteen years of captivity the foolish woman has obstinately refused to do either the one or the other; the first through love for her son, who certainly repays her maternal affection in the most exemplary manner; the second on account of that inconceivable fanaticism which few but Papists display. You will live to see Henry of Navarre turn his back on Calvin and go piously to Mass, though he now denounces it as an abominable idolatry. If Mary Stuart had adopted the tenets of Knox, the Lords of the Covenant would have held her to be a virtuous Queen, even were she in reality guilty of her husband's murder, which those worthy nobles laid to her charge. And if she had abjured Popery when in England, she might perchance have been raised to the throne. In a word, she has rejected the conditions on which her liberty was offered her, and she cannot be dispensed with. If she were released and sent to Scotland, we should be placing her son, who is a Protestant and our ally, in a most difficult position. Fourteen years ago, when Morton was regent, the Lords of the Covenant demanded her surrender; they would have taken her into custody on the frontier, tried and executed her forthwith.

A REFUTATION.

BY ARTHUR BARRY.

How fully have the centuries undone False theories of heretics perverse Who shamed not Mary's honor to asperse; Declared her clients underrate her Son And rob of glory meet that Saving One; Called fond reliance on her aid a curse; Denounced sweet prayers to her as vain, or worse; Proclaimed, in fine, her cult a snare to shun!

Refuted by the probing test of time, These falsities no longer credence claim; One only Church preserves Christ's faith sublime: 'Tis she who aye hath honored Mary's name. Their heirs to-day proclaim the Son mere man. —Ave Maria.

LIFE.

The poet's exclamation: "O Life I feel thee bounding in my veins," is a joyous one. Persons that can rarely or never make it, in honesty to themselves, are among the most unfortunate. They do not live, but exist; to live implies more than to be. To live is to be well and strong-to rise feeling equal to the ordinary duties of the day, and to retire not overcome by them-to feel life bounding in the veins. A medicine that has made thousands of people, men and women, well and strong, has accomplished a great work, bestowing the richest blessings, and that medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. The weak, run-down, or debilitated, from any cause, should not fail to take it. It builds up the whole system, changes existence into life, and makes life more abundant. We are glad to say these words in its favor to the readers of our columns.

There are men in this country too stingy to give anything but advice and a very stale quality at that.

Messrs. C. C. Richards & Co., Dear Sirs,—While in the country last summer I was badly bitten by mosquitoes—so badly that I thought I would be disfigured for a couple of weeks. I was advised to try your Liniment to allay the irritation, and did so. The effect was more than I expected—a few applications completely curing the irritation, preventing the bites from becoming sore. MINARD'S LINIMENT is also a good article to keepoff the mosquitoes. Yours truly,
