CHAPTER IX.

BAROSTAN'S PROPOSITION.

A hot, burning sensation went from Ottershaw's heart as he heard that Barostan had confided his wife to the housekeeper's care.

"He had asked me to look after her, and I am going to stay the night with her, my lord," said the housekeeper. "I have put them in those ground floor rooms in the tower. I would have given them better rooms but he would not have them. He was so masterful. Are you sure I cannot do anything for you, my lord?"

Lord Ottershaw dismissed Mrs. Winter with a kind word.

The mystery of this marriage grew deeper and deeper.

It was impossible for him to try and account for the strange events. Elizabeth's letter threw no light on the matter. The story that Mrs. Winter had given him of Barostan's roughness and then of his change of manner did not impress Lord Ottershaw with any other feeling save that this man to whom Elizabeth had given herself was a man of violent moods.

"But if he thinks to stand between her and me," mused Ottershaw, grimly, "he has to learn a lesson. Elizabeth may be his wife, she may even desire to have no words with me, but she has played a part in my life that will never be effaced, and before I let her go absolutely, I must hear from her own lips why she has done this thing."

When his man came to help him to his room, Ottershaw dismissed him.

"I shall not go yet," he said; "I have some letters to write. I can manage for myself—go to bed."

He sat quietly, pretending to read, but unconscious only of anger and of misery which was utterly new to him.

His love for Elizabeth had been based upon everything that was pure and good. It had awakened in him an utterly new spirit, changed the outlook of life in him, arousing him for the first time to the responsibility of his position. Making of him, indeed, that serious man whom Ellen Griffin had so long looked for and had almost begun to despair of finding in him, and this sudden discovery threatened to act just as swiftly

Schoolgirl's Exhausted Nerves

Headaches, Dizzy Spells and Weakness Overcome by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Miss Gallop.

At about the age that most girls are working hardest at school studying for examinations there are important physiological changes taking place which are an additional strain on the nervous system.

Mrs. J. A. Gallop has had experience in the cases of her daughter and granddaughter, and for this reason her letter is particularly interesting to parents.

Mrs. J. A. Gallop, 135 Victoria street, St. John, N.B., whose husband is a carpenter, states:—"We have used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food in our family for nervousness, headaches, dizziness and nervous dyspepsia, and have found them satisfactory in every particular. My daughter Bessie was going to school, and became quite run down in health. By the time she had used three boxes of this remedy her nerves were steady, her general health was excellent and she was entirely free from headaches and dizzy spells. We are more than pleased with the results of this treatment. "More recently we used the Nerve Food for my granddaughter, who was out of school for nearly a year from nervous trouble, and noticed improvement in her condition at once."

in the other direction upon his nature. It aroused evil instead of good, it awakened the latent possibilities of bitterness that had been disgraceful by his breezy, boyish manner. It threatened to work disastrously. The mere knowledge that the woman he had loved as he had never loved any human creature before should not only be lost to him, but should be actually residing under the same roof with himself at this moment, wife of one who occupied a place of a servant in his establishment, became unbearably galling to Ottershaw. It seemed impossible for him to breathe, spacious as the room was.

He felt impelled to leave the house, to go out into the night, with its mockery of beautiful moonlight and all its luring loveliness.

His room had been chosen so that he could be wheeled on his couch through the windows and onto the terrace.

It aroused the man's anger fiercely to realize that he could not rush forward, but only drag himself on like an old man.

All sorts of wild suggestions floated through his brain as he went.

He told himself that Elizabeth had played a part with him; that, after all, there was no difference between her and her sister—whom he had instantly summed up at her true value—that some one, Ellen Griffin, perhaps, had incited her to lead him on, and then to trick him.

There was a bridge a little distance away, under which the fountain stream broke and tossed in wild, foamy fashion.

The sound of the rushing waters came to his ears as he progressed along, and he felt that it would do him good to stand for a time and let the spray dash in his face. This kind of passion that held him fretted him.

He wanted to drift back into his easy, philosophical self again.

It took him a long time to reach the bridge—which was arched by the overhanging branches of the old trees, through which the moonlight penetrated in fitful fashion—but he stood upon it at last, and he drew a deep breath as he felt his spirit mingle with that rushing torrent of water.

The calmness of the night irritated him, but this turbulent spot fitted in with his mood; moreover, he realized that he was fatigued, and he was glad to lean on the wooden rail and rest. And, after he had stood there some time, getting well drenched with the splashing water and feeling his passion subside, he suddenly became conscious that he was not alone.

In turning quickly, he saw David Barostan standing with folded arms on the other side of the bridge, looking at him fixedly. In an instant the fury that had consumed Ottershaw's heart so impotently rushed over him again. It seemed to him that David Barostan was laughing at him—mocking him!

Forgetting that he was lame, Lord Ottershaw took a step forward, slipped to the wet planks, made a plunge and then fell.

He struck his head sharply in his fall, and, with a groan, he closed his eyes and then lay quite still.

David Barostan stood and looked down at him.

"And this is the man she loves!" he said, to himself. "This lord of many lands, this creature that is almost beautiful compared with me. For this man's sake she would make the greatest sacrifice that any woman could make, and he lies there, at my feet."

A sudden fierce joy took possession of him.

"I could life him up so easily," was the meaning of that joy, "and with one jerk I could throw him into that torrent. At least, if he did not lie, he would be maimed and made hideous in her eyes."

He almost stretched out his hands to grasp Ottershaw, and then he drew back.

"And would that make any difference?" he asked himself, with dull passion. "If he were bruised, and maimed, and disfigured, would she turn from him? Would she not love him, perhaps, even more passionately than she does now?"

He stood breathing heavily. He was fighting a fight with himself.

"Why should I study her? Why should I spare him?" he asked himself at one instant; the next: "What should I gain by using force? Even if he were dead, he would always be stronger than I. She loves him!"

With a moan he covered his face with his hands. Like Ottershaw, the wildness of this spot had drawn him magnetically.

He had been unable to rest in the house; he had been walking for hours, and the wild rushing of the waters, the sense almost of living passion in this corner of nature, had drawn him back to it.

Seeing that Ottershaw did not move, but lay inert and curiously still, Barostan aroused himself.

It gave him a passing thrill of conscious pride to feel that he was so strong, that he could lift this fallen man so easily.

Firstly, assuring himself that the quietness was merely unconsciousness, he took Ottershaw from the ground, and just as he was leaving the bridge, treading cautiously—for the wood was wet—he recoiled; some one spoke to him.

It was Elizabeth.

With her hair loosened on her shoulders, and her dark cloak wrapped tightly about her, she looked like some beautiful spirit of the night.

Her face was deathly white, her lips stiff with fear.

While she had been sitting at the window, lost in those sad and miserable thoughts, she had seen Ottershaw pass so painfully and slowly across the lawn.

The bridge to which he had tended his way was visible also, and only the sound of the rushing waters had broken the heavy stillness of the night.

If it had been possible for Elizabeth to feel deeper emotion, keenest pain, such feelings came to her as she sat there, so near and yet so far from the man she loved.

She had risen and passed out of the long window, watching him as a mother might watch a child.

She thought she knew what was driving him from the house.

"It is because I am here," she said, and once again she shivered with humiliation and anguish.

And when he had stood so long on the bridge, her heart had grown a little calmer.

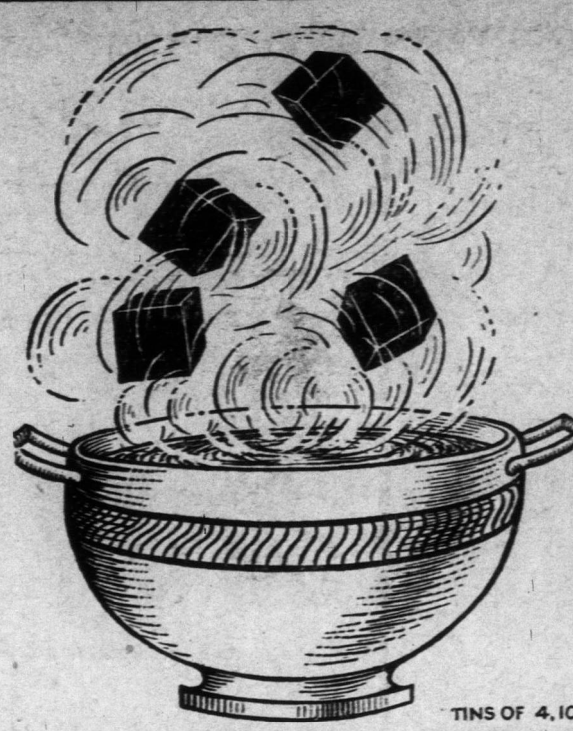

"He will forget soon," she said to herself. "Perhaps, after all, this has only been a fancy with him. Ellen has spoken so much about him and his flirtations. Why should I suppose that this which passed between us was stronger and deeper with him than any other has been? Yes, he will forget," she repeated, but each time she said it she staved herself, as it were.

At times she feared that he would turn his head and see her, and she hid behind a pillar lest he should do this; but Lord Ottershaw had never turned, never looked at the house. He had only stood gazing at the water.

Then all at once Elizabeth's heart had leaped into her throat. She caught sight of that other tall, dark figure, and she had seen how violently Ottershaw had started.

Clinching her hands and trembling she watched him turn and make that advance toward Barostan, and then she saw him throw out his hands and stumble and fall.

For a few moments Elizabeth said nothing; then, acting on a wild impulse, as though comprehending all that was passing through Barostan's mind, she wrapped her cloak tightly about her, and moved rapidly across the lawn to the bridge.

"You are not going to make her travel again to-day, are you?" she asked.

"Yes," said David Barostan, in his abrupt way. "It is impossible for us to remain here. I made a mistake in coming. The best thing I can do is to go as quickly as I can."

"But his lordship," began Mrs. Winter, quite flustered.

Barostan smiled.

"Lord Ottershaw will make no objection. And, by the way," he added, a little artfully, "I think perhaps you ought to go and attend to him. I saw him walking in the grounds last night."

"Walking!" exclaimed Mrs. Winter. "Oh, dear me! and now I shall have him as bad as ever he was. Well, I'll send a maid to attend to your wife, Mr. Barostan, for I'd best go and see after his lordship."

Barostan watched her go, and then he passed into the little sitting room. The door of the other room was ajar. From where he stood he could just catch a glimpse of Elizabeth sleeping.

The wildness of her expression had gone. It was like the face of a child lying on the pillows, with her beautiful brown hair tossed in picturesque disorder about her.

"And she is mine; she belongs to me!" he said to himself. But there was no exultation in the thought now. He turned away, and was sitting

DON'T WAIT.

During changeable weather in Spring and Fall thousands of children contract Sore Throats as result of exposure, getting feet wet, etc. A neglected sore throat is likely to develop into Tonsillitis, Quinsy, Diphtheria, or a chronic state of Rheumatism that will impair hearing. Often operations on the Tonsils become necessary because a simple sore throat is neglected. Stafford's Throatone is the best preparation known for all sore throat troubles.

No Flour Made From One Wheat Only Is Good For BOTH Pastry And Bread.

Western Wheat makes a strong bread flour which, however, lacks flavor.

Ontario wheat makes the best full flavored pastry flour. This is because of the peculiarities of the wheat itself.

Ontario wheat is rich in nutriment and flavor but lacks strength or strong baking qualities. Western Wheat has the strength without the flavor or pastry making qualities.

"Beaver" Flour is a scientific blend of both, giving you all the flavor and nutriment and pastry making qualities of Ontario wheat with the added strength of the Western Spring Wheat.

On Misunderstanding.

BY RUTH CAMERON.

"If an injury cannot be pardoned in silence it is far better then to say what we feel about it."
—Dora Melegari.

A young couple whom I know are planning to undertake a very dangerous experiment; they are going to have a large house and go to housekeeping in partnership with another young couple.

The wife was talking over their plan with me. "I know it's a rather risky thing to do," she said, "but we both like the house and we can't either of us afford to take it alone. So we are just going to try it this way. And there's one thing that I'm going to do that I think ought to help a lot. The day we start I'm going to say to all of them, 'Now if any time I say anything or do anything that any one of you doesn't like, before you get offended or hurt and begin to act cool and stiff, please come to me and tell me all about it, and see if I really meant it the way you thought or if there isn't some explanation that will clear things up, or if I'm not willing to try to do better. I'll do the same by you, and I think that ought to keep the atmosphere clear and prevent any trouble from starting.'"

Now I wouldn't dare prophesy that even with that prologue the undertaking will succeed. It has always been my notion that no one house, if it covers an acre is big enough for two families. But I do think that if the four people concerned honestly follow that plan of action they will have a far greater chance of keeping harmony in the double home than otherwise.

For how many heartburnings, how many coolnesses, how many lifelong feuds start not from any actual unkindness or offense, but simply from a wrong construction put upon some perfectly well meant word or deed.

How many times if the offended one had gone directly to the offender and asked an explanation, a few words would have blown the trouble away like chaff before the wind.

A word in time often saves nine hundred.

I am looking back now to a time when I brooded over what I thought was intended as a cruel criticism from a very dear friend. For weeks I let the hurt fester. Finally I spoke out and she easily explained that the words I thought were intended to hurt me were merely a chance quotation of a catch-word which she thought I knew and would understand.

Why build such tremendous structures of unhappiness and offense on such tottering foundations? Some day they will surely come tumbling down about your ears and overwhelm you in the ruins of shame and wasted friendship.

If you must build these foolish and ugly structures at least make sure that you have some good foundation.

HAPPY THO' MARRIED?

There are unhappy married lives, but a large percentage of these unhappy homes are due to the illness of the wife, mother or daughter. The feelings of nervousness, the befogged mind, the ill-temper, the pale and wrinkled face, hollow and circled eyes, result most often from those disorders peculiar to women. For the woman to be happy and good-looking she must naturally have good health. Dragging-down feelings, hysteria, hot-flashes or constantly returning pains and aches—are too great a drain upon a woman's vitality and strength. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores weak and sick women to sound health by regulating and correcting the local disorders which are generally responsible for the above distressing symptoms.

"I suffered greatly for a number of years and for the past three years was so bad that life was a misery to me," writes Mrs. B. P. Dickover, of Utica, Ohio, U.S.A. "The doctors said me I would have to go to a hospital before I would ever be better. A year ago this winter and spring I was worse than ever before. At each period I suffered like one in torment, I am the mother of six children. I was so bad for five months that I knew something must be done, so I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce, telling him as nearly as I could how I suffered. He outlined a course of treatment which I followed to the letter. I took two bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and a fifty-cent bottle of 'Smart-Weed,' and have never suffered much since. I wish I could tell every suffering woman the world over what a boon Dr. Pierce's medicine are. There is no use wasting time and money doctoring with anything else or any one else."

The Medical Adviser by R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y., answers hosts of delicate questions about which every woman, single or married ought to know. Sent free on receipt of 50 stamps to pay for wrapping and mailing only.

A touch of gold brocade in a mole-colored costume gives the whole a wonderful distinction.

Combinations are fascinating, rich brocades being used with mousseline or beaded nets.

Velour hats are in great favor and milliners usually trim them with picot-edged faille ribbon.

Old gold brocade lined with blue satin and trimmed with skunk fur makes a lovely combination.

Bows of satin lined with velvet are being used, looped at eccentric angles on the new small toques.

The rabbit has this distinction. When you order a rabbit at a restaurant you get rabbit, there being no cheaper substitute.

"Rag time has had its funeral," says Mr. John Philip Sousa. Mr. Sousa ought to know. He was one of the pallbearers.

A good many shoestrings have 100 notches at the end of them.

What has become of the old-fashioned man who cut his own hair?

Stick to the paved streets. As soon as you leave them you begin to meet women who have no front teeth.

There is this to say for women. When a woman makes up her mind to commit suicide she doesn't mess herself up with a shotgun.

A man considers it something of a distinction if his beard is hard to cut.

A young girl looks pretty well in anything. But an old girl has to be mighty particular about her clothes.

The Town Council.

BY H. L. RANN.

The town council is a body of patriotic citizens who are elected for the purpose of improving all the streets except those upon which the aldermen reside. They are chosen by 1 per cent of the people at a select gathering known as a caucus.

Town caucuses are usually held on prayer meeting night, so as to curb the enthusiasm of the church element, and are attended by the aldermanic candidates, the members of their families and those of the office force who owe them money. This arrangement ensures the selection of a ticket which will stand hitherto whenever the franchises expire.

The first action of a new council is to remit the taxes of the aldermen and their immediate relatives and call for a proposed sewer extension which looked as if it might strike the mayor in his coin purse. It is a cheerful sight to see the unanimity with which an incoming council will vote new curbs and gutters, sidewalk assessments and paving taxes upon people who did not support them in the preceding election.

The average councilman works for glory and the privilege of being chairman of the street committee. In some towns his salary consists of a $1 bill and an annual trip to some orgy of the municipal league, where he imbibes useful information and other beverages. Very few councilmen make any money out of office without having to put most of it up for bail.

One of the most hopeful features of American life is the eagerness with which a prominent business man will electioneer for a seat on the council, in order to become a doorman for a community of sad-eyed kickers. If there is anything that will shoot a prosperous business man full of holes, it is to place the owner on the council, where everybody who owes the store on book account can remind him how he voted.

We should have more patience with our councilmen. They work hard and prefer fame to perquisites, although there have been councilmen who went out and hunted perquisites, usually preferring them in currency.

how much will you have accumulated at your present rate of saving? Most men will have little or nothing saved if conditions are at all similar to those of to-day.

Every prominent young man appreciates the wisdom of accumulating for his own benefit at least, and looks forward to an old age of comfort and enjoyment relieved from want and worry. And every thoughtful man endowed with manhood feels that a duty rests upon him to make some provision for others dependent upon him.

The safest, simplest and most profitable way to accomplish all this, and to be sure of a snug competency by the year 1932, is by investing in a Canada Life Endowment Policy for $5,000 or $10,000, according to your means and requirements. The policy can be bought on easy instalments and facilities are provided to assist in carrying and enjoying the insurance.

Send in your name and age and let us submit to you a good proposition.

FRIDAY, November 22, 1912.

An Outrage.

Our attention this morning was called to an outrage committed by the Department of Marine and Fisheries after Sir Edward Morris came into power.

It was the dismissal of Mr. Hudson, the old lighthouse keeper at Cape St. Francis. The old man had been lighthouse keeper for 24 years, ever since the light was placed there in Mr. Neville's time.

He tells us that he was accused of taking an active part in politics for the Liberal Party. But this he absolutely denies. He declares he did not take an active part in politics in the last campaign.

He is a Liberal who has been voting Liberal for half a century, and if anybody asked him about voting, he told them to vote according to the dictates of their conscience.

But at the time Sir Robert Bond was kicked over the wharf at Western Bay, he says that in a conversation he expressed the opinion that Sir Robert's assault was no man, and that no man would ever have committed such an outrage.

He declares that this was the only foundation for the accusation on which he was dismissed. He appealed to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries and told him the facts.

He got no redress and has since that time been out of the lighthouse and received no recognition but this harsh dismissal for his long service to the country.

He says that when the property of the family was given up for the wharf and approach to the lighthouse he was promised the job for life. Now, however, he is dismissed without even a pension.

BROKE HIS HIP.—While ascending the stairs in his home yesterday, Mr. E. Fitzgerald, butcher, fell and broke his hip. He was taken to Hospital for treatment.

War News

Special Evening Telegram.

LONDON, To-day.

The formal suspension of the Eastern war was voted only for a day. Turkey rejected the Balkan terms for an armistice apparently before the plenipotentiaries had time to come together at Hadimlik. Kinal Pascha, Grand Vizier, declared the allies' overtures were impossible. He ordered the Commander-in-Chief to continue fighting "with help from the Almighty" until Turkey obtained reasonable and moderate conditions. This decision came as an utter surprise. Diplomats are not wholly convinced Ottoman troops will really take up arms again in the cholera stricken trenches at Tchatalja. While Bulgarian conditions for Bulgaria is acting as the mouthpiece for the allies, were extremely stipulating the surrender of Adrianople and Scutaria, both of which strongholds are making an heroic defense, as well as the cession of all territory except the narrow strip above Constantinople, they were advanced as overtures. In other words they were apparently put forward as the basis for negotiations, the Porte treated them as an ultimatum. This perhaps is the Oriental method of beginning negotiations, designed to induce the enemy to show his hand. It is pointed out that these terms were submitted merely as an answer to Turkey's demands for an armistice. It is practically certain their rejection will result in more active and determined resumption of hostilities. Probably the allied troops will now refuse to treat with Turkey until they are in a position to dictate perhaps sterner terms in the Capital. The Sultan's negotiations thus far are being conducted through the Russian Ambassador at Constantinople, but the Turkish Ambassador at Berlin, Osman Nizami Pascha, was on his way to join his colleagues, appointed to meet Bulgarian representatives, when the Turkish Government's startling decision was telegraphed abroad. Even yet it would seem that Turkish officials have not abandoned hope that the Powers will come to their rescue and attempt to dictate a compromise, but Sir Edward Grey announced last night the Powers have not gone so far as to arrange a general conference after conclusion of war, their only agreement is to keep their hands off. Continued successful defense of Tchatalja lines would undoubtedly strengthen Turkey's diplomatic position, but defeat after more prolonged fighting of her own choosing would inflame the Bulgarians with a desire to make a triumphal progress into Constantinople. Popular clamor in Sofia is demanding more strongly each day that the advance shall not stop only at the Bosphorus. European military officials consider the allies' terms harsh in one respect, that is, they should concede to the garrisons of Adrianople and Scutaria the right of marching out with the honours of war, which they have asked for in compelling unconditional capitulation.

Beware of Blood Poison.

Zam-Buk is a Sure Cure.

Mr. Jas. Daley, of 786 Ellice Avenue, Winnipeg, says:—"A few months since I was cured of a poisoned finger through the timely use of Zam-Buk."

"I cut a deep gash across the knuckle on the first finger of my right hand in opening a lobster can. I suffered at the time with the soreness and pain, but had no idea it would become a serious wound. However, in about two days I was greatly alarmed; as my whole hand and arm to the elbow became suddenly inflamed, and the finger was much discolored, showing signs of blood-poisoning. The pain was dreadful and I was forced to leave off my work and go home."

"The wound on the knuckle had been poisoned by dust and dirt getting into it. I then decided to start the Zam-Buk treatment, and having first bathed the cut, I applied the healing balm. It soothed the pain almost instantly, and by next day there was a great improvement."

"In a week's time, through perseverance with this wonderful preparation, a complete cure was brought about."

Zam-Buk is just as good for eczema, alopecia, scalp sores, abscesses, piles, ringworm, boils, varicose ulcers, running sores, cold sores, chapped hands, etc. It draws all poisonous foulness from a wound or sore and then heals. Use it, too, for cuts, burns, bruises and all skin injuries. Zam-Buk Soap should be used in conjunction to the balm for washin wounds and sore places. Excellent, too, for baby's bath.

All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk Soap at 25c. tablet. Post free upon receipt of price from Zam-Buk Co., St. John's, Nfld.

Two more chapters of the war are reported. The naval engagement of Varna between the Turkish cruiser, Hamidiyah Bulgarian and a torpedo boat, and the occupation of Florina by the Greeks. The Bulgarians report they did great damage to and probably sank the cruiser. The Turks report that they sank two torpedo boats and the cruiser was only slightly damaged. By the occupation of Florina, which lies south of Monastir, the Greeks, according to Athens, have cut off the rear guard of the Turkish army to the number of 30,000 retreating from Monastir.

Not in Politics.

Mr. Morine, K. C., has taken office in the Board of Trade Building and will be ready to receive clients there on and after Monday next. Young Man Bennett Still Missing.

No tidings of the whereabouts of William Bennett, who disappeared from his home on Signal Hill, over a week ago, are yet to hand. He was seen by companions of his visiting the pier of the Furness Withy Co. and unfortunately, he was intoxicated. The S. S. Almeriana was in port at the time and the belief of his relatives is that he went in her, although Bennett's chums assert that he was thrown ashore before the ship left. Fearing ill had befallen the young man and that he might have fallen overboard a diver was down near the Furness wharf making a search for the body but without success.

DOGS ON RAMPAGE.—A few days ago we noted the fact that dogs destroyed poultry owned by Mr. John Duff Mundy Pond Road. A few nights ago hungry canines made a descent on Mr. William Thompson's farm, Cove Road, and killed several birds which were valued at $20. If those brutes come his way again Mr. Thompson will give them a warm reception.

A Slight Fire.

Last night the Central firemen were surprised that a slight fire was on in the St. Vincent de Paul Hall, Harvey Road. Some of the men proceeded there and with a few buckets of water attached the blaze. It is thought that some hot cinders fell from a fire left smouldering there and caught the woodwork. A class in cooking was being conducted there and the ladies present discovered the fire which might have destroyed the building had they not been there.

Blow Killed Him.

The remains of Mr. F. Keough, of Caplin Bay, arrived by yesterday's express and were taken to the mortuary rooms of Undertaker J. T. Martin where they remained last night. They went forward overland to-day. Mr. Martin accompanying them. The deceased met his death while at work on a tug in the States; a block falling from aloft struck him on the head and he died almost instantly.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 21.
An official despatch from the Captain of the cruiser Hamidieh, which was attacked by Bulgarian torpedo boats in the Black Sea this morning, says he sunk two of them and damaged the third, which was able to draw away. The despatch adds that when at a distance of 2,000 yards, the third torpedo boat discharged two torpedoes, inflicting slight damage to the cruiser, but was obliged to withdraw out of range of the latter's guns.

ATHENS, Nov. 21.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 21.
The terms offered by the Balkan Allies for arrangement of an armistice are unacceptable to the Ottoman Government. Nazim Pasha has been instructed to continue military operations until more acceptable conditions are offered, but at the same time he is entrusted with further negotiations.

ATHENS, Nov. 21.
The Athens newspaper printing a report published in Saloniki newspaper, alleging that Bulgarian officers at Scyres, on the ground that they had been insulted by the Turkish populace, ordered their troops to fire, with the result that five hundred persons were killed or wounded. According to information from Jannina the consuls, after a conference at the Russian Consulate, advised the Governor to surrender in order to avert unnecessary bloodshed.

A New Departure

We hear on good authority that a new departure will be taken this year with Bowring's sealing steamer Kite. The ship, we learn will be sent down to Gronis Islands in December, will remain there all winter and will sail from there to prosecute the seal fishery. Her sealing crew will be taken from the Islands and Captain Yetman, formerly of the Florizel, and her second hand, will be in charge as Capt. Cerroll who is ill will not be able to go.

RUSHING REPAIRS.—The large staff of mechanics and laborers working on the S. S. Wilhelmina work each night till 12 o'clock. A number of plates will be taken out of the ship's hull and replaced with new ones, while others will be taken out and rolled as they are not perforated and will be replaced. The ship will be on the dock for seven weeks.

Anxious About S. S. Morien.

Yesterday the S.S. Morien was anxiously enquired about by Mr. H. C. Burchell, of Sydney, who telegraphed the Premier. The ship, which is commanded by Brother Burchell, is the sender of the message, left Louisburg Saturday night for Placentia, coal laden for the Reid Mfd Co. Mr. Burchell asks that inquiries be made as to the whereabouts of the ship, and this was done but no tidings of her could be had. It is not believed that there is much cause for uneasiness about the ship as the weather has been fine and she should turn up to-day.

Home Facts.

Home facts right under our eyes are the strongest, echoes a thousand miles distant are unreliable. Yesterday Mr. Samuel Wells, of the Battery, gave us his order for a FRASER ENGINE, making our tenth sale at the Battery for next Spring delivery. This is because the fishermen at the Battery know the strongest, most speedy, economical and easily understood engine made is the FRASER. These practical fishermen will have no other and they know all makes. We now have sold for Spring delivery at the Battery many times as many Fraser Engines as all other makes combined have sold. Can anything be more convincing than this of which Engine is the best? The fishermen have decided. nov21 FRANKLIN & CO.

Reducing Labor.

Any kind of a Motor Engine is better than none, as nearly all engines are good, at least for a time, so when a person buys an engine for the first time it is such a departure that he is quite delighted and thinks it is the best obtainable. It is only after a year or so when he has familiarized himself with Motors that he realizes that some motors can be had to run better than others. So it will be with the FAIRBANKS. When you see it running you will at once understand the difference between it and the engine you are now using, and you will realize the superiority of it over all others.

It has displaced all others in the Maritime Provinces, where all makes advertised on this market were for sale, and it will also displace all others here.

A special cable from Constantinople says that the terms of peace offered Turkey by the Balkan Allies are the cessation of the whole of Turkey in Europe, so far as and including the Thetalia lines; the city of Constantinople to remain Turkish, but a friendly entry of a portion of the allied armies to occupy the city until a definite treaty has been arranged. It is stated that the Ottoman Cabinet favours the acceptance of all conditions, except the cession of the coast line of the Sea of Marmora, and the entry of the allied forces into Constantinople; and that it asks guarantees regarding the future of Albania.

LONDON, Nov. 21.
Following the flight which Claude Graham White, yesterday took, with Otto Kahn as a passenger, the aviator to-day gave out particulars as to his plans to fly across the Atlantic. "I have completed plans for the machine, and have commenced to build it," he said. "It will be 4,000 horse power; with four engines, and six propellers. Each engine will be 250 horse-power. They will be so arranged as to be independent of each other, that is to say if two engines break down, the other two will be sufficient to drive the machine. We expect to journey from land to land in something between 20 and 30 hours. The machine is being built so as to remain in the air for 30 hours. All depends on the weather and the course we take. At present we are undecided whether to go by the way of the Azores, or across Newfoundland, but I expect the latter route will be chosen. The trip is arranged to take place in the summer. Although it is just on the cards, we may not make it until the autumn. When the weather will probably be more favourable; but whenever we start I am reasonably sure of success."

OTTAWA, Nov. 21.
The Dominion Parliament was opened to-day by H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught. The occasion was marked with the usual ceremonial including the firing of a Royal salute from Nepean Point and a cavalry escort for the Governor-General from Rideau Hall to the Parliament Building and return. The general expectation that the speech from the Throne would deal with subjects of far more than ordinary interest and importance led to an unusually large attendance. Its outstanding feature referred to the Naval Policy, as follows:—"During the past summer four members of my Government conferred in London with H. M. Government on the question of Naval Defence. Important discussions took place, and conditions have been disclosed, which, in the opinion of my advisers, render it imperative that the naval forces of the Empire should be strengthened without delay. My advisers are convinced that it is the duty of Canada, at this juncture, to afford reasonable and necessary aid for that purpose. A bill will be introduced accordingly." Other important subjects include amendments to the Bank Act; Alteration of the Naturalization laws; West Indian Trade Agreement; legislation respecting the control of Western lands; and the Tariff.

Technical Education.

Editor Evening Telegram

Dear Sir.—As the question of improving our Educational System is under discussion I venture to submit a few thoughts on this great issue. I do not claim to possess any expert knowledge on education, but I feel sure that even practical educationalists will welcome an expression of opinion from the view point of a mere layman.

We are all so warmly interested in this question, it is so closely interwoven with the life of the individual and the Colony, and is so vital to our religious and material development that it becomes a duty of citizenship to aid by every means in the perfection of a system that will train each successive generation to meet the special requirements of the age in which they live.

About twenty years ago the Council of Higher Education was established, its members were in the front rank of the teaching and other professions, and the substantial educational progress that was made during that period is due in a large measure to the labors of that Council, it brought its influence to bear on public opinion and the Legislature, and as a result the reasonable demands of a body of unpaid men urging new grants for the extension of education and better pay for the teachers always commanded the influence of public men irrespective of party. This Council has virtually been a Department of Education, it is the centre that unites all persons interested therein. For a quarter of a century their work has been confined to encouraging educational effort on the present lines. But I ask the question, are we on the right lines?

Are we giving our boys and girls the best and most suitable kind of education? Are we constituting our educational system to meet the special needs and developments of the present age? Have we recognized the breakdown in our apprentice system? Does our present system of training take into account the evolution and development of new industries? Are we in line with the modern methods of Technical or Industrial Education? These are the tests, Mr. Editor, that the present age places on up-to-date education. I have read considerable on the evolution of modern education and my study of the question leads me to the conclusion that the central idea of the educational development of the past quarter of a century is to train boys and girls on technical lines to suit the dominant industries of each country and locally. I claim that while we are aiming at turning out scholars, we are not giving attention to the question of Technical or Industrial Education.

I submit that we should not be satisfied to aim at turning out scholars only, we should aim at the perfection

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

ABSOLUTELY PURE

Cooking is a matter which concerns the whole family, and under modern methods and conveniences it is made so attractive the whole family is becoming interested, if not taking part in it.

"These biscuits are delicious; this cake is excellent," says the father. "I made them," says the daughter, and both father and daughter beam with pleasure.

It is a crime, with our modern agencies, helps and facilities, to have soggy biscuit, or wooden cake, or leaden pastry.

Royal Baking Powder has made home baking a success, a pleasure and a profit, and the best cooking today the world over is done with its aid.

they will not send their sons to a trade, they would not think of sending him to be trained up for the fishery, agriculture, mining or lumbering. No, he is going into office work, and as a result of this false standard, we see fine specimens of physical manhood leaving schools and colleges with a notion that their place is in a library office or warehouse, while the great heritage of the sea and land lies unheeded before them. It is almost pitiable to see so many young men turning their backs on the bracing, invigorating life of the sea, the forest, and the mine for the cramped existence and limited possibilities of a mere clerkship.

To place our country abreast of the times, to give her sons and daughters a chance to fully develop her magnificent resources of sea and land, to teach them in a practical way the true dignity of labor, and to help them to secure better results from their industry and enterprise I propose the establishment of a Technical or Industrial College for Newfoundland, I anticipate criticism; it will be argued that we do not need such a college, we cannot afford such an institution and that it is all mere waste to be talking about the application of science to our fisheries, our forests and our soils.

Mr. Editor, with a view to enlightening such people, I will hurriedly review the plans that the most up-to-date countries have adopted to train their people on Technical lines, it is such a large problem that I can only touch the more fringe of the subject. Let us first take Canada.

In Canada they have nine Agricultural Colleges or Industrial Schools. These schools are established for the purpose of teaching scientific agriculture. The progress that Canada has made since scientific farming was introduced in all her provinces reads like a fairy tale. The yield of her soil has in many cases doubled, and the remarkable growth of her exports in food stuffs can be traced with almost mathematical certainty to the application of science to her soil, her seeds and cattle raising. In a couple of decades her sons have won for their country the proud title of being the granary of the world; she is now the strong right arm of the Motherland, a giant in her strength and outlook. Her progress within the last decade is the greatest event in modern history, and if I read her history aright, a great deal of her progress is directly traceable to the fact that she has led the van in the application of Scientific or Industrial Education to her natural resources, especially her basic industry Agriculture.

In Great Britain there is £1,000,000 spent annually on Scientific Education with a view of training workers for the dominant industries of the respective localities. The Education Department is now organizing Trades Preparatory Schools and Supplementary Classes; the idea of the latter is to provide a better preparation for the practical life the pupil enters on after leaving school. It was also recognized that the sons of the wealthy should be trained to scientific agriculture, and with a view of filling this need, Cambridge University took up the question of scientific research, and with such success that the press of Great Britain recognized the work of Cambridge University as being of the utmost importance to British husbandry.

Germany is teaching in her Engineering Colleges an extremely high grade of Theoretical Instruction coupled with practical experience. The equipment of Germany's Technical High Schools is most complete, expensive and elaborate, and all designed with a view of advancing German industries and scientific research. Mr. Sexton describes the German system of scientific education as "wonderful." Industry, he says, in Canada or America has not yet been put upon as strict a scientific basis as in Germany. The Germans establish schools for training superintendents, bosses and officials of every lesser grade in every industry. These schools exert a more powerful influence in uplifting the masses of German workers, and have done more to bring Germany's progress in Industrial Training and social well-being than any other one thing.

Every country has only a coast line of about 400 miles, yet there are nine Fishermen's Technical Schools within that area. The education offered in these schools is very complete; one of them has a steam trawler of its own, run on as near commercial basis as possible, but primarily for educational purposes. There is a splendid Fishing School at Ostend under the care of a Father Fyfe and three scientific instructors with a special research department for the study of all problems connected with the catching, curing, packing and marketing of all kinds of fish.

The following cities in England have gone in for fishing classes:— Hull from 80 to 100 apprentice boys under 16 are employed on the stages or fish wharf between 7 in the morning and 10 o'clock, and attend a Technical School for the fisheries in the afternoon. In Lancaster County, they give courses dealing with the life history of fish, and at Hull, in the new school, rooms are being provided for laboratory demonstrations in Marine Biology.

In Grimsey seventy per cent. of all apprentices at the fishery attend the Technical School for fishermen, although it is not compulsory as in Germany.

The fish hatcheries in England and Scotland are really Technical Schools for fishermen, the County Councils of young fishermen select promising young fishermen and pay all their expenses of transport and board, and also allow them £1 a week during the time they are attending the lectures and laboratory demonstrations.

The instruction consists of— (a) The training in the use of artificial life plants and curing establishments; (b) The fertilization and the whole evolution of all kinds of fish, their fecundity, rate of growth, of eggs, and feed, the chemistry of air and water, the digestion, circulation of fishes, the putrefaction of fish and elementary biology.

This is a mere hurried outline of what a few countries and cities are doing for Technical Education. No doubt the critics will say these are all large, wealthy countries; but you cannot show a country similar to ours aiming at a comprehensive scheme of Technical Education. To meet this criticism I will show what our next door neighbour, Nova Scotia, is doing in this line.

Nova Scotia has a system of Technical Education under the Principalship of Professor Sexton, the headquarters of the system is the Nova Scotia Technical College of Halifax; it was built in 1907-10 and cost $287,334; its annual cost of management and upkeep is $55,900. In 1911 Nova Scotia had 251 men and women studying Agriculture in her Agricultural Colleges and in her Technical Schools. Technical instruction at night was given in Electricity, Mechanical Drawing, Architectural Drawing, Mathematics, Mining, Engineering, Surveying and Chemistry and a Cutting School for Tailors. The various occupations of the students represented were:—

Bricklayers	2
Carpenters	46
Electricians	44
Plumbers	10
Painters	8
Tinsmiths	8
Blacksmiths	13
Apprentices	54
Machinists	87
Moulders	6
Pattern Makers	12
Chemists	6
Printers	8
Draftsmen	10
Tailors	10
Stationary Engineers	51
Coal Miners	198
Total	545

In view of these facts I ask again the question: "Are we on the right lines in our educational policy?" I propose in my next article to outline the scope of the proposed college, its organization and finances.

Allan Boat's Stormy Trip.

The R. M. S. Carthaginian, Capt. McKillop, entered port shortly after last night. She left Liverpool on the 15th inst. and right at the start a heavy gale from the south west prevailed. The third day at sea the wind increased in velocity while seas all round came over the smokestack of the Allan Liner. One huge 'comber' struck the ship on the port side damaging the aft rail. The ship brought 700 tons of cargo, 30 packages of mail and the following passengers in saloon—Dr. W. S. Armstrong, J. and Mrs. Rorke, Miss Weathers, Rev. W. H. Thomas and family, Miss Lathorn and 13 in steerage.

General Shoots Himself

Before His Regiment After the King of Bulgaria Had Stripped the Epulettes From His Uniform.

Vienna, Nov. 16.—"Die Zeit," to-day publishes a remarkable story of the suicide of a Bulgarian General in the presence of King Ferdinand, after he had been rebuked by the King.

The General had been considered responsible for the decimation of the first and sixth infantry regiments which were mowed down because the General either forgot to cover the charge with artillery, or gave the wrong directions for the advance.

The General, after the charge, addressed the remnant of his men, praising their heroism. King Ferdinand stood by, nodding his approval. When the General had finished, the King said: "General, a word with you."

Then walking up to the General and before the whole army the King stripped the epulettes from the officer's uniform. The General remained at attention for a moment, then saluting the King he took a few paces to the rear and shot himself.

The first regiment is composed of the elite of Sofia, being composed of artists, lawyers, actors and business men. The loss of life in its ranks evoked the bitterest comments.

Triple Killing at Pittsburg.

Pittsburg Man Shoots Wife, Divorced Wife and Self.

Pittsburg, Nov. 14. — John A. Matthews, aged 36, an insurance agent, shot and killed his second wife, Mrs. Pauline Matthews; shot his divorced wife, Blanche Gilger, of Salem, then ended his own life, shooting himself through the head, this afternoon. His first wife died two hours after being wounded.

The tragedy occurred at the Matthews apartment on the North Side. It is said Matthews was despondent over domestic troubles.

How the first wife happened to be in the Matthews' home probably never will be known. When the police arrived both women were dressed in gray travelling suits and Matthews wore a heavy overcoat.

Furniture in the room was overturned. The door leading thereto was open and the blinds were drawn. Matthews was found dead on the floor, his divorced wife dying, lying on a bed, and his wife sitting in a rocking chair in another room, dead.

Matthews left two letters. One to his father, living at St. Petersburg, Penn., inclosed a will, and the second to a brother, living here, said: "At the time you receive this line I will not be among the living. Don't let any one see this letter. I am tired of life."

Mystery No Longer.

Boston, Stenographer Died of Heart Failure.

Boston, Nov. 15.—Marjorie G. Powers, a stenographer, 27 years old, whose body was found in a bath-tub at a hotel under mysterious circumstances yesterday, died of heart failure, according to Medical Examiner Dr. George B. Magrath.

Her employer, who had been held on suspicion, was immediately released.

District Attorney Pelletier, to whom the Medical Examiner made his report, issued a statement in which he said he saw no evidence upon which to base criminal prosecution.

Death was due to natural causes, there was no evidence of drowning, and no physical condition to justify suicidal intent.

What Grandmother Had.

Grandmother used to go and see Folks who were sick, and make them tea.

Of bonnet and of camomile, And fuss around the bed, and smile, And not go till some neighbour came That she was sure would do the same.

Unless they met her at the door And put up an emphatic roar About it's being small-pox, or Some ailment to be watchful for, She never even stopped to ask If, while about her loving task Herself might be endangered. No, She hadn't read her Bible so.

She'd only found the texts that said: "Sick have ye tended," "hunger fed." And such old fashioned foolishness Ere modern wisdom came to bless.

Now, when we hear a neighbor's ill We close our door and wash the sill With antiseptics, so we'll not Get the disease the friend has got. Sometimes I think 'twere not so bad Should we catch what grandmother had!
