CHAPTER XIII.

"Better now?" he asked, presently. "Thank you, I am all right now," she replied, with a smile; it was a smile with a dark shadow of sadness behind it, the shadow that lurked in the slightly drooping lips, and clouded the brightness of her blue eyes. "Oh, yes; I am quite recovered. I will go now. I haven't thanked you really thanked you, for your kindness; and you have been very kind."

"Don't mention it," he said, nodding at her in a fatherly way. "Better wait another minute or two, till you have quite felt your feet. Hope that hasn't come to any harm?" he added, as she examined her portfolio, which had come untied. "Something valuable?"

The question was so devoid of offence that the girl replied at once: "To me, yes; but"—with a sigh—"of not much value to others, I'm afraid. They are some drawings, which I was taking to sell; but I have not succeeded in disposing of them."

His keen eye ran over her plain and inexpensive dress, and he nodded, sympathetically and comprehendingly. "An artist, eh, miss?"

"Oh, I'm scarcely entitled to call myself an artist," she replied. "I make drawings for magazines, and fashion-plates—and these are fashion plates."

"I'm sure they are very clever," he remarked, looking so wistfully at the portfolio that she could not fail to see his curiosity; and, after a moment of hesitation, she untied the portfolio and showed him the drawings. He bent over them, and turned them over with the reverence of the uneducated, touching them gingerly with his thick, strong fingers.

"They're right down beautiful," he said, with unfeigned admiration. "Beautiful, that's what I call them! And you mean to say they wouldn't buy 'em? They must be fools! Why, every one of them—these pictures, I mean, not them flimsy as don't know a good thing when they see it—ought to be framed. And I should like to frame them. See here, miss, I should take it as a favor if you'd sell them to me."

She laughed, colored, and shook her head sadly. "You cannot want a set of fashion-plates," she said.

"That is just what I do want," he responded. "I've spent such a long time in places where there aren't any fashions that this kind of thing is a treat to me, and I'd rather have it than the regular sort of picture. Besides, I should like to have 'em as a" kind of—what do you call it?—souvenere."

The girl shook her head again. "Do you think I don't understand?" she said very gently. "You saw that I was disappointed because I had not sold my drawings; and—and you want to add to the kindness you have shown me by helping me, by offering me—"

"Excuse me," he argued. "Business is business. I'll pay you just what you were going to sell them for; no more, because you're a lady, as I can see, and wouldn't take it; no less, because I'm not the man to take advantage of a low market; that is"—with a grim smile—"where a lady is concerned."

The girl laughed mirthlessly, and, selecting the plate she considered the best, she held it out to him. "Well," she said resignedly, "there is one—if you really want it. You shall buy it, and give me what the publisher would have given me."

"Right you are," he said, taking a five-pound note from his pocket and laying it on the table. "That's about right, I suppose?"

She stared and blushed; then laughed, with sad irony, and shook her head again rebukingly. "It is quite right—barring four pounds ten shillings."

"Why, I am ashamed of myself," he said penitently, as he quickly placed another note beside the first.

The girl regarded him with astonishment, and a touch of offense. "I mean that the price is ten shillings."

"What!" he exclaimed. "You do this beautiful thing, this lovely lady in the swell clothes, for ten shillings? And they call this a just world! Well, I can see you won't take any more," he said, and he pocketed the notes and held out half-a-sovereign.

"Thank you very much," she said, as he dropped the coin in her cheaply gloved hand. "Now, I will say good-by."

"One moment," he said, peering at the corner of the drawing; "there's a name here—Lucy Edgeworth. That's yours, I suppose?"

"Yes; that is my name," she said.

"Now, suppose," he said, trying to speak in a casual way, "suppose I was to want some more of these, to frame and hang up in my room, you know—where should I write for them?"

"I live at—" she began; then she stopped, and, biting her lip, shook her head. "You will not want any more of them," she said. "I—I would rather not give you my address. I am not ungrateful; but—but it is not necessary. Good-by."

She hesitated for a moment; then, with a trustful glance from her child-like eyes to the man's rugged face, she held out her hand. His huge fist swallowed it up, and he patted it in a fatherly way.

"Well, good-by, miss," he said. "I was hoping that I might see you again; but you're right—I am a stranger."

"A good Samaritan," she said, wearily. "Good-by."

He looked after her thoughtfully. "I suppose she'd be about her age," he murmured. "I wonder whether she's as pretty and taking? Ah, well, I shall know some day—soon, I hope."

He called a cab, and told the man to drive to Waterloo. There he took a third-class ticket for Lowminster, and, getting into a smoking-carriage, lit a cigar, and made himself comfortable behind a newspaper. Just as the train was starting, two young men got in, and Garling, from round the side of his paper, examined them, as he examined every one and everything that came within his purview.

They looked like clerks, and they lit the everlasting cigarette, and talked, and laughed, with the beautiful irresponsibility of youth.

Garling listened to them for a time; but their conversation—it was mostly of a sporting character, with football predominating—did not interest him, and he closed his eyes and went to sleep. He awoke, after a time, and heard the two young men still talking, but their voices were lowered, and they were leaning forward to each other, as if they were speaking of something of importance; and Garling instantly closed his eyes again, but opened his ears.

"You see," said one of the men, "it's a touch-and-go thing. We're as certain as certain can be that the line's coming right through the pro-

Dizzy Headaches Cured in One Night.

Quick Relief and Certain Cure Came From Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

"I had terrible pains in my head. My appetite faded away, and when I did eat anything it disagreed and made me very sick for hours after each meal. The pains in my stomach and the dizzy headaches I had to endure almost set one wild. Sometimes attacks came on so severely that I had to go to bed. I would feel so worn, depressed and utterly miserable that for hours I wouldn't speak to my family. My system was poisoned with wastes and nothing helped me till I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Without this grand system-cleaning remedy I would still be sick, but each day brought me better health and spirits. I was cured and made strong, ruddy, and healthy, and will always use and recommend Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

MRS. B. C. CURRAN, Westport P. O.

Thousands who are in an ailing, low state of health need nothing else but Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or the Cattarhous Company, Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

erty. Look here; I'll show you." He drew a paper from his pocket, unfolded it, and the two heads bent over it. "See? Right through it. And just think what a difference it'll make. It will turn a kind of fishing village into a swagger watering place. Everything is in its favor—situation, climate, surroundings. It's one of the most beautiful places in Cornwall; and it only wants this railroad to transform it into—well, into a goldmine, for that's just what it would be. Now, my firm has got scent of this. Oh, they're sharp."

"They're sharp enough," assented the other, with a nod.

"You bet! And, naturally, they want to get hold of the property. Once they had got hold of it, they could easily raise the capital to work the thing. And, I tell you, it's a splendid chance," he went on eagerly. "A lovely bay; a good sea frontage; hills at the back, with pine-trees and all that; no end of sites for a casino, hotels, swell houses, villas, shops—everything you want."

The other man nodded. "I know the whole bag of tricks. You get a swell doctor, one of those Harley Street chaps, to go down and see it, and send his patients there, and write a letter to the Times, saying it's the finest air in England."

"Exactly," assented his companion. "You start a kursaal"—he called it "crase-all"—and a band, and a ball-room, a club, and a pier; make the place pleasant and entertaining, and in less than no time you've got a property worth—"

"Half-a-million," caught up his friend eagerly. "Yes; that's just what could be made of Sunningdale."

Garling's thick lips mutely formed the word—Sunningdale. His eyes were tightly closed; he emitted a faint snore.

"How that old chap sleeps, doesn't he?" remarked one of the men. "A good name, too, isn't it? By George! I believe you get more sun there than in any other part of the kingdom; sun all the year round. Oh, I tell you, it's a big thing!"

"But who does it belong to?" asked his companion, who after a cautious glance at the figure in the corner, replied, in a lower voice:

"To the Wrayborough family. That is to say, they are the owners; but Drake & Drake hold the mortgage; and they're anxious to sell, because they're lent more money than they think it worth, and—here's where the joke comes in—the Wrayborough people have authorized them to sell. They're hard up, you know—the Wrayboroughs, I mean."

"Fine old sportsman, the earl," remarked the other knowingly. "So's his son, Lord Dalesford—splendid chap. 'Pon my word, it seems a pity that they should be so blind to what's going on."

"Oh, I don't know," remarked the other; "business is business, you know. My people will have their claws in this thing presently, and they'll make a mint of money. Hello! Here's the junction. We change here. Tumble out old man."

In leaving the carriage, one of them stumbled over one of Garling's extended legs, and begged his pardon. Garling stretched himself, appeared to wake with difficulty, yawned, and told him not to mention it. When the train was in motion again, and had got well beyond the platform, he sat up, and, with an alert expression in his rugged face, took out a notebook, and wrote down the names of the places and persons he had heard; he composed himself to sleep again, and slept soundly until he reached Lowminster.

Without making any enquiries, he found the quietest hotel in the town, engaged a room, and, having eaten the usual hotel meal of chops, potatoes and cabbage, set out for a walk. Again, without any inquiries, or guide, excepting the finger-posts, he made his way to Wedbury, and, late in the afternoon, stood beside the church, and looked gravely about him. He had all the air of a man who had happened on the quiet, out-of-the-way place by accident; and it was in a manner of easy and casual interest that he stopped an old laborer, and got into conversation with him.

"Pretty place, this," he said.

"Yes; it's pretty enough," replied the old man.

"Not many houses or people here, though," remarked Garling.

"No, not many," assented the old fellow; "most of us goes up to the big town; it's only the gentry as stops on."

"Ah, yes," said Garling. "Have a cigar? Prefer 'bacca, eh?" as the old man eyed the cigar-case doubtfully.

"Here you are, then; help yourself. You're one of the old inhabitants, I suppose—know all the people, eh? Do you happen to know a Mrs. Burton?"

The old man lit his pipe, and shook his head dully.

"No? A lady as lives with her niece, Miss Bourne—Miss Diana Bourne," said Garling, a trifle huskily.

"Oh, you mean Miss Diana, the school-teacher," said the old man. "Why, of course I do; everybody knows she. You're inquiring for 'er, mister?"

"Yes—for a friend of mine," replied Garling, still more huskily. "He asked me to look them up if I was down in these parts."

"Ah, well, then, you're too late," returned the old man. "They be gone."

An Old Story.

The winter's approaching, the sleet and the storm will soon be encroaching on latitudes where a r. a. T h e snowflakes are leaking from clouds that are gray, the winds will come shrieking from Hudson's cheap bay. Then peace to the worker who toiled in the heat, and woe to the shirker who loafed in the street! The man who kept toiling in June and July, has cabbage for boiling, and chickens to fry; with grub in j hisarder, the storm he may dare: "Dad bust you, blow harder—it's little I care!" With coal in the cellar, he says to the storm, "Get busy, old feller—I'm comfy and warm!" But what of the neighbour who's not a live wire, who looks on all labor as punishment dire? He loafs through the summer when farmer and clerk, and painter and plumber are doing their work. He sits in the shadow and dreams by the day of some Eldorado where loafing will pay. And then when the winter is doing its chore, he goes like a sprinter from door into door, assistance beseeching—some prunes or a pie: "My children," he's groaning, "all threaten to die!" The generous toiler, the kindest of men, takes out from his boiler the wing of a 'den; "Give that to the kiddies," he says, "and by heck, I'll kill some more birds to keep them on deck!"

Obituary.

CONDUCTOR HOWLETT.

The passing of Conductor Stephen Howlett, whose death took place at his late residence, York Street, last evening, removes from our midst one of the best known and most popular railroad men in Newfoundland. The deceased was in his 68th year and had been suffering from heart trouble for some months past, from which he rallied at intervals. About three weeks ago his condition became more serious and it could be seen that the end was approaching. He passed peacefully away at 7 o'clock last evening, surrounded by his wife and children, who so patiently watched him during his illness.

The late Stephen Howlett was a man of sterling worth and was one of the pioneer conductors of the Newfoundland Railway. He helped to build the first track that was laid, and was brakeman on the first regular train from St. John's to Harbor Grace. When the Reid Co. took over the railroad in 1898, he entered their service, and had been in their employ up to the time of his death. During recent years he was conductor on special trains, principally on excursions, and during his many years of service held the distinction of never having had an accident to any train under his charge. When His Majesty King George V. visited here as a middy some thirty years ago Mr. Howlett was conductor on the train that conveyed him to Holyrood. By a happy coincidence Prince Albert, the second son of His Majesty, who was here in the summer of 1912, also made a special trip with Conductor Howlett, and anticipated the pleasure his father would feel when informed of the circumstances.

In his earlier years Mr. Howlett went to sea, and because of his intimate knowledge of the geography of Europe gained by his many voyages he was keenly interested in the war. Somewhere about two years ago, when in charge of the waiting room of the station, he saved the life of a child who attempted to cross the track in front of an approaching train. At great personal risk he snatched the little one from the jaws of death. He is survived by a widow, one son, Frank, who is in Western Canada, and three daughters, Mrs. Alex. Saunders at Whitbourne, and Misses Rose and Ida, who live with their parents. To these the Telegram extends sincere sympathy in their bereavement.

Two Big Films at Nickel Theatre.

Mr. Haskins Sings "A Perfect Day." Two more great features will be seen at the Nickel Theatre this evening. One is the "Hand Print Mystery" by the Kalem Players, and the other "The Girl from Prosperity." The first is a romantic story of a girl who steals to save her brother, but she is saved from exposure by a lover. It is a beautiful picture, and Alice Joyce and Tom Moore who are in the leading roles are seen to advantage. "The Girl from Prosperity" is by the Vitagraph Co. with the dainty actress Anita Stewart in the principal character. Her work is of such a high quality that she needs no praise. It is a comedy drama with some of the prettiest scenes imaginable. There will be a full reel of Hearst-Selig News Pictorial showing many interesting events, and a great comedy entitled "Getting Even." Mr. Arthur C. Haskins has another grand song for this evening "A Perfect Day." Be sure and hear him.

The Pantomime Troop To-Night.

Hurrah, Hurrah! for the Christmas ship. As it starts across the sea, With its load of gifts, and its greater load Of love and sympathy. Let's wave our hats and clap our hands As we send it on its trip. May our lads on Salisbury Plain be cheered By the gifts in the Christmas ship.

To-night Mrs. Rossley's clever little pupils will appear in all new and beautiful costumes, and give a performance that is a credit to their training, for they are getting better all the time. They have one number, "Tipperary," that would do justice to many an old-time performer, and the dance that they give for a finish is entirely new and original. Kelly and Mack are expected about Thursday. The little girls will fill the bill until then, when they are quite capable of doing. The pictures as usual are up to the high standard of perfection. There are two complete shows each evening with lots of time for the store people to see it.

C. L. B. Anniversary.

Yesterday being the twenty-third anniversary of the formation of the Church Ladies' Brigade the day was duly observed by holding a Church parade, in which over 300 of the regulars and 30 of the Old Comrades took part. Divine Service was conducted at the Cathedral by Rev. Canon White, and the pulpit was occupied by His Lordship Bishop Jones, who preached an impressive and instructive sermon. During the course of his remarks he paid particular tribute to the work of the local brigades, whose members so nobly responded to the call of the Empire. Several hymns were rendered by the band during the service, and the music along the line of march consisted of stirring patriotic airs. On the return to the armory, Mr. S. Bursell of the Old Comrades, was presented with a medal by Lt.-Col. Renard, for having induced the largest number of members to join that branch during the year.

Three Men Drowned at Herring Neck.

A very sad drowning fatality occurred at Herring Neck recently when three young men lost their lives. The names of the victims were Elias Cassell, Joseph Cassell (two brothers) and Joseph Richmond, and they were the only support of aged parents. On the morning of the 5th inst. the weather was fine and clear and the three young men set out in their trap skiff for a load of wood, and were only going a short distance. As the day advanced the sea began to get rough, accompanied by a breeze of wind from the S. E. and snow showers. A violent storm followed and the three men, who were caught out at night, were discovered at noon on the next day by some residents of Cobb's Arm who found the boat beached nearby. The dead body of Joseph Cassell was found in the boat, Joseph Richmond was picked up dead on an island a short distance away, while Elias Cassell was found by the water's edge. Life was not extinct, though he was unconscious and in a critical state. Dr. LeDrow was called to attend the dying man, but his services were unavailing, as the poor fellow died shortly afterwards without regaining consciousness. The tragic event has cast a gloom over Herring Neck. The occurrence has a mysterious aspect, though the main belief is that the men were returning home when the boat was swamped. However there is a theory that the unfortunate fellows died from exposure.

Slight Fire at Benton Station.

A slight fire, caused by the explosion of a kerosene oil lamp, occurred at the Reid Company's Station at Benton early yesterday morning. It appears that about 6:30 a.m. the station agent left the office for a moment, and in closing the door behind him, the draught must have caused the lamp to explode. When he returned that portion of the room, where the lamp had stood, was in flames. He quickly smothered the blaze however, and very little damage was done, save the destruction of some books and a small quantity of stationery.

Put Back and Left Port Again.

After receiving slight repairs and a supply of coal the French steam trawler La Providence left here Saturday for Pecamp, France, but put back again owing to the roughness of the sea outside and the fact that a storm was approaching. At the Crescent.

The Crescent Picture Palace presents to-day "The Stranger," or "The Romance of a Millionaire." This very effective drama is produced in two reels by the I.A.P. Photo Play Co. It is the story of a millionaire who goes into the mountains away from the city's deceit, and is there suspected by a band of moonshiners of being a revenue spy. They plot to take his life, but he is saved by his own daughter. It is a picture containing many exciting and beautiful scenes. "The Universal Animated Weekly" is a full reel of interesting and up-to-date incidents. "When His Conscience Failed," and "The Tale of a Hat," are two lively comedies out of the ordinary. "Walks with me that pretty Irish ballad "Where the River Shannon Flows" a song he has made good in everywhere he has sung. H. Mr. McDonald sings "Yesterday," written by Chas. K. Harris. This fine ballad has been successfully sung by Mr. McDonald in the large cities of Canada and America.

GALE AT BONNE BAY.—Saturday afternoon fishing was still numerous at Bonne Bay, but operations by the fishermen were impeded by adverse weather, there being a strong S.E. gale raging, accompanied by snow showers.

Trinity Bay Lands.

STATEMENT BY THE MINISTER. (Daily News). The Minister of Agriculture and Mines called at our office on Saturday afternoon and gave us the following particulars in reference to a statement which appeared in the press to the effect that a portion of the land approved of to Mr. Emerson some years ago, situated on the Peninsula of Bonavista Bay and Trinity Bay, has been taken up by the Reid-Nfir. Co., and that on June 1st 1914, the Governor in Council approved to Mr. McNamara 110 square miles out of the original approval to Mr. Emerson of 160 square miles.

THE STATEMENT.

"The whole of the area approved of to Mr. Emerson, acting for Mr. Geo. Roberts, Doer, Tail and others, was 160 miles, and this approval covered every bit of land on the peninsula between Trinity and Bonavista Bays, less the three-mile limit. Out of this 160 miles approved to Mr. Emerson, 81 miles has been approved to Mr. McNamara, within the Emerson grant of 160 miles, but even this 81 miles includes blocks of land between the Reid land blocks and at the head of the Bays adjoining the railway. These blocks were not given to the Reid-Newfoundland Company under the present building contracts for the Bonavista Bay Branch Railway or any of the other Branch Railways, but were granted the Company in the regular way in 1904 under the amended contract of that year, being land due the Company under the operating contracts of 1893, 1895, and 1901. The total quantity of land approved to Mr. McNamara is 110 square miles, including the 81 miles above referred to and 29 miles of this land is situated west of the railway. In other words, with the exception of the 81 miles, the balance of 110 miles is west of the Railway and not included in the land approved of to Mr. Emerson, neither is it on the peninsula between the two bays, and except to the extent already referred to, does not comprise in any way any portion of the land against the granting of which a protest was made by the people residing in Trinity and Bonavista Bays. No portion of this land has been applied for by the Reid-Newfoundland Company to the present Government, nor has any portion of it been approved of or granted to them.

It will be seen, therefore, that the essential difference between the two approvals is that the 160 miles approved of to Mr. Emerson included the whole peninsula from end to end between the two bays, whereas the portion of 110 miles approved to Mr. McNamara is in addition to the portion lying between the Reid blocks adjoining the railway at the head of both Bays and a portion east of these blocks. The area remaining will, of course, consist of a large proportion of bog land, rocky land and water and land containing no timber. Or, putting it in another way, the whole of the 160 miles of land approved of to Mr. Emerson, and to which objection was taken at the time, was east of the railway track. A large portion of the land approved of to Mr. McNamara is west of the track, and only the portion east of the Reid blocks and between the blocks is included in the approval to Mr. McNamara. Further, when the survey, called for under the Act, is made, and a diagram filed and an application made for the issue of the License, the Government may restrict the quantity of land to be granted, situate on the Peninsula, so as to conserve the public interest.

Comment of the Editor of the Daily News.

51 UNANSWERABLE REASONS. Elsewhere is an explanation by the Minister of Mines and Agriculture of the present position of the Trinity Bay Land Grants. We have carefully studied it, and do by no means restrict the quantity of land to be granted, situate on the Peninsula, so as to conserve the public interest.

From Salisbury Plain.

Letter from Frank Bicketts to His Mother from Salisbury, Wiltshire. This is just a sketch of the letter; the full letter was 20 pages.—Dear Mother, We arrived at Plymouth yesterday, and came up to Devonport. We had a very slow trip across. On Monday, after leaving, we fell in with the Canadians and war ships, and it was a sight for the gods, some forty ships in all. When we got outside we were given our pipes and tobacco. I received 28 tins since then; there was something given every day. I am in good health and spirits and look forward to the day when we will get the front with a light heart. We heard there was a report that fourteen of our ships were blown up, the Florizer among the lot, but thank God we are very much alive to-day; all our boys are in good trim. Tuesday was the worst of our trip, blowing a storm; ship rolling rail in; awful lot of our boys sick, but I was in my glee. We were given apples every second day. We got a great reception from the people. They would come to the shore and shout: "Are ye downhearted?" We would answer back, "No." Remember me to all my workmates and friends. Good-bye, and God be with you till we meet again. Private FRANK J. BICKETTS, No. 451, D Company, 1st Nfd. Regiment, Pond Farm Camp, Salisbury, England.

The Swallow Tinker and His Dogs.

Two quaint figures are carved on the two top pews and reading desk of Swallowham church. According to legend, a tinker had a dream bidding him go to London, bridge and a stranger would reveal to him how to find a pot of money. So off he went with his dog, and at the bridge a stranger stopped him, saying, "Last night I had a dream bidding me go to Swallowham and dig in such and such a place and there find a pot of money, but I don't believe in dreams." Then back went the tinker, dug for and found the pot as described and also an inscription bidding him dig deeper, which he did, and found another, and with them restored Swallowham church. The carvings were put up to perpetuate his memory.—London Strand.

The ROYAL STORES, Ltd.

On Not Being Lazy Enough.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"I'd never put any money into a labor saving device for house-keeping," a business man said to me the other day when we were discussing the question of household efficiency. "Why?" I asked. "The average woman doesn't want labor saving devices," he said.

"Why?" I pursued. He shrugged his shoulders. "I don't know why, but she doesn't."

Now I think this accusation must be true, for his author is a man with a wide knowledge of the manufacturing interests, and when he says such a thing it means something. But why is it so?

Why shouldn't housekeepers welcome with eagerness and open arms anything that lightens the routine part of their work. One answer might be that few women can afford such devices, but my informant assured me that this is not the solution. Again and again efforts have been made to introduce labor saving devices into homes where comforts and even luxuries abound—and have failed.

I have thought a great deal on the subject, but to little effect, until a day or two ago when I was talking to another business man, and he told me he had just been calling down one of his foremen for not being lazy enough.

"Martin's a glutton for work," he said. "He hasn't a lazy bone in his body, and consequently he never tries to save himself. I told him if he were a little lazier, he'd try to think out ways to save himself, and would all be the gainers in the end."

Now may this not be just what is wrong with the average housekeeper—that she isn't lazy enough.

She has been accustomed for centuries to working long hours. "Man's work's never done." She has been accustomed to spending infinite time and strength on details and her training has made her not lazy enough physically and too lazy mentally to rebel and find the way out.

Put a woman to work with a tool which is out of kilter and she will patiently plod along day after day, overcoming its inefficiency by spending more time upon her task.

Put a man to work with the same tool and he will be so impatient and exasperated that he will not do his work until he has fixed that tool—and then he will save the time spent a hundred times over.

Patience is the armor of woman-kind, but is an armor that sometimes keeps out good things as well as bad. There is a time to be patient with existing conditions and a time to rise up and change those conditions for the better.

The stigma of laziness has always been a good housekeeper's greatest horror. I wonder what she will say to the accusation that she is not lazy enough.

Stop Coughing.

It's quite as foolish as it is annoying to keep on coughing since "PHORATONE COUGH MIXTURE" is guaranteed to soothe and heal the irritated parts at once, and to rapidly destroy the very cause of this aggravating nuisance. Hundreds of persons are complaining every day about the cough or cold they have had for a long time, and they are not able to get rid of it.

Don't let a cough or cold hang on to you day after day and run the chance of catching and developing the "cough" that is not easy to throw off. You will avoid all this worry (about the cough or cold you have) by obtaining "Phorotone Cough Mixture" at once.

Report on Improvements to Water Supply & Waste of Water, Oct. 30th, 1914.

WASTE OF WATER.

One of the most conspicuous features of the water situation in St. John's is the large waste. The practice of wasting water through house fixtures in the winter time to prevent freezing is common and is freely admitted on every side. Through the total absence of any regulations governing building or plumbing that bear upon this point the plumbing has in many houses been put in situations where the natural protection is not the best. In many houses especially of the poorer class, there is not heat enough in bitter cold weather, to keep the pipes from freezing even with a fairly good natural protection against the cold. The opening of fixtures here and there to maintain circulation of water in the pipes sufficient to prevent freezing, has therefore become a fixed practice and unfortunately, the practice is not confined to the houses of the poorer class. The quantity of water that runs away in this manner is large, although there are no measurements of the water at hand to indicate in the case of St. John's, just how much this amounts to. The effect of this winter waste is to lower the water pressures all over the city, and to reduce the quantity available for legitimate domestic consumption, and for protection against fire. Your Board is familiar enough with these unfortunate conditions. The suppression of this waste is of great importance because it constitutes a large part of the maximum demand and a part which if permitted, cannot be taken care of in any way except by providing larger carrying capacity in the principal supply mains and ultimately a larger supply at the source. Entirely apart from the winter waste there is another class of waste which is going on continually. We have evidence of this from several sources. In the first place if the system were tight the pressure on the hydrants throughout the city during the dead hours of the night when the legitimate use of water is very small, should be almost as great as the pressure indicated by the elevation of water in the basin. This is far from true. The pressure along Water Street, for instance, average slightly under 100 lbs. instead of nearly 170 lbs., indicated by the elevation at the basin, and similarly for hydrant pressures in other parts of the city. In the second place, the measurements elsewhere mentioned which have been taken at weir in the basin, covering a period of about a week show that the rate at which water flows to the city in the dead of night was during that period some 80 p.c. or more of the rate at which it flowed during daytime. Since there is also a heavy night draft, the only inference to draw from this is that a large proportion of the water thus flowing at night is wasted. In the third place actual measurements of the leakage from the system have been made between midnight and 5 a.m., in various isolated portions of the system, and the leakage thus measured has been found to be a large amount. It may be urged on some sides that the waste in winter serves a useful purpose under the conditions that now exist, by preventing the freezing of pipes. No such argument can be made, however, in regard to this waste occurring at the present time. It has the effect of reducing pressures all over the city, as we have seen, so that an extra draft such as that occasioned in the important contingency of a fire, finds a deficiency in pressure and quantity, which deficiency would not exist at least not to the same extent if this unnecessary waste were suppressed. It has the effect also of using a large share of the available capacity of the supply mains, thus requiring them to be larger in size and hence more costly than they would have to be if the waste did not exist. The importance of the detection and suppression of this waste therefor cannot be too strongly emphasized. At the present time the suppression of any considerable part of the waste would result in an increase in supply and in pressure for legitimate uses and a valuable additional margin against shortage of pressure and supply during the coming winter. For the future the suppression of waste means a postponement of the time when large expenditures may be required for still further increasing the available supply not only in the supply lines and mains, but at its source. Elsewhere in this report it is pointed out that the present source of supply, Wind-sor Lake, cannot yield an annual average supply much greater than that now being drawn, which makes this consideration assume increased importance. The means that may most advantageously be used for the suppression of waste are as follows: 1. The use of meters. 2. Subsurface investigations of the distribution system and house service pipes.

METERS FOR THE SUPPRESSION OF WASTE.

Waste of water may best be checked by putting meters on all the services and adopting a schedule of rates by which the payments for water are made dependent upon the amount passing through the meters. If this state of affairs existed, and the measured waste were paid for at a fair price, the incentive to the user of the city would have less occasion to object to the waste. Furthermore, the saving that the individual consumer would make for himself by keeping his plumbing in proper repair and properly protected against cold, or by otherwise preventing waste, and especially the large winter waste, would in a short time repay him the cost of securing this result. I have had impressed upon me since taking up these investigations, the difficulty of universal metering, nevertheless, universal metering is extremely important if the waste is to be cut down to a reasonable minimum. By the effective suppression of the waste in winter the amount of the cost of meters would be justified. The city should adopt a policy at the present time which at a moderate annual cost will within a few years result in the metering of all services. There are certain services that should be metered at once. These are the large services, especially the industrial plants and the services along the water front, where large quantities of water are used. It has been observed that at many such places ordinary care is not used to prevent large amounts of waste. The use of a meter is not intended, ordinarily does not have the effect of reducing the legitimate use of water. It does have the excellent effect, however, of reducing careless waste. The application of meters to a small proportion of the services carefully chosen with reference to the above conditions may be counted upon to save a substantial amount of water. Meters should be applied to all services for another common sense reason. The argument that water should be as free as air is untenable. The investment which enables water to be delivered to the consumers in St. John's, amounts to hundreds of thousands of dollars. Additions to the system must be made from time to time. For the raising of the funds to provide for this system and for its proper maintenance, a logical, business-like system of rates should be formulated. The most equitable basis for this is the actual measurement of the water. All the costs must in the end be paid by the consumers, if not by a logical system of rates based upon actual quantity, then, but just as surely, in some other way. The use of meters therefore appertains the cost according to the benefits derived from the supply, and also enables the water department to make a reasonable definite accounting of the water used, and thereby keep posted on the important item of waste. St. John's at present has about 3,000 services. During the past ten years an average of about 140 new services has been added each year. At that rate, there would be about 4,250 services two years hence. A 3/4 inch disk meter of the type commonly used for house services, can be installed complete for about $25.00. On this basis, 4,250 meters would cost, installed about $52,100. The higher cost of the meters for the large services, relatively few in number, would bring this amount up to about $55,000. In other words with an expenditure of $10,000 a year the city would be entirely metered in a period of between five and six years. SUBSURFACE EXAMINATION FOR THE SUPPRESSION OF WASTE. It is possible to accomplish a great deal in the detection and localization of waste by means of a study of the system by methods outlined below. The fact that much of the pipe is underground and out of sight, makes it difficult and perhaps expensive in some cases to reach the end at which this is aimed, that is, the actual suppression of the waste. But the study yields evidence which is highly enlightening, and when vigorously followed up, will surely produce results. Investigations aimed at the detection and suppression of waste have been commenced consisting briefly in the following: A force of men working at night from midnight to 5 a.m., is installing various devices on the distribution system and measuring the flow into said isolated districts. This flow represents the leakage of water from such investigations as these should be turned over to the plumbing inspectors. The best results may be secured from this work only if the men engaged upon it are able to devote all their time to it. The procedure thus far followed, with men working both day and night, cannot be depended upon to maintain in them the spirit for the active work when this work is taken up in the spring. A force should be organized for the express purpose. The apparatus now used is not the best for the purpose, as it is not sensitive enough to give the precision desired in the results. This may be corrected by getting improved equipment for the work. From the work thus far done it appears to me that a large per centage of the total waste is either within the houses or on the house service pipes, which is in line with experience elsewhere. In some parts of the city there are undoubtedly leaky mains, as the smaller per centage in the above table show, and as the incomplete evidence now in hand indicates regarding waste in Water Street, coupled with the knowledge of unfavorable conditions in that street for the tightness of the main. The large per centage of waste indicated on the house service rather than on the mains, is a strong argument in favor of meters on all services, as the presence of meters would undoubtedly tend to reduce it. A night inspection of all service cocks in the city by means of the presence or absence of sound at the key has been instituted. Any services found by such inspection to be carrying water are subjected the following day to an inspection of the house fixtures. Notice is served on all consumers whose service or fixtures may thus be found leaking. At the end of a reasonable time (this should be followed by another similar inspection to ascertain whether the flow of water has been stopped in accordance with said notice). Some service pipes or cocks have been found leaking at this inspection, and steps have been taken to have them repaired. On some other services reported leaking by the night inspection the house fixtures have been reported in good condition by the inspector the following day. If the inspection was well made the piecing up in these cases was that either a tap was open during the night or that the leak was in the service pipe or possibly even in the main nearby. The service pipes and cocks are presumably examined as far as possible for evidence of leaking by the day inspector. In cases like this if nothing is done during the night, the day inspector will be unable to do what is checked over and the night inspection repeated then if that will show sound of flowing water the day inspector, the house fixtures should be repaired. Care must be used not to be deceived in this. The sound of water at the key always indicates a flow of water. It is possible for it however, to be either in the house, on the service pipe, or on the main, and every means should be used to localize this before going to the expense of digging up either the service or the main. The night inspection by sound at the key should be repeated periodically. So long as meters are not used on all services this is the only means of detecting a great deal of the waste. I would suggest such an inspection at least three times a year, to cover the entire city. Each of these periodical inspections must be followed up by secondary inspections where waste has been found. No such inspection can be made in the winter. Aside from the natural difficulties of winter inspection, it would be quite useless in view of the prevalence of ice and the attitude towards winter waste. In most, if not all the houses in the city, there is a stop and waste cock on the service pipe close to the point where it leaves the ground an enters the building. A very simple expedient to avoid the freezing of pipes, without large waste of water, is to close this cock on cold nights and the pipes empty. There may be conditions in some houses which will make this feasible, but it can certainly be done in a large proportion of the houses. There are a great many service pipes that are known to be in bad condition. A program for the systematic renewal of all such old or defective service pipes should be undertaken. The improvement to the distribution system elsewhere mentioned in this report when carried out will have the effect of increasing the pressure in many parts of the city. A great deal of trouble from burst and leaky services when this increase in pressure is secured may be prevented by an elimination before that time of all pipes known to be weak. There are a number of hydrants about the city for local water supply, which run continuously, and waste in the aggregate something in excess of 100,000 gallons per day. Those which discharge into horse troughs should have their flow reduced to a reasonable minimum, and all the others should be altered so that they will run only when some one requires water from them. The location and suppression of any considerable amount of the waste can be accomplished only by ardent pursuit on the part of the administrator of the water department, accompanied by the most faithful, untiring work on the part of the men engaged in the actual search for waste. Official approval and co-operation in the effort is likely to be not the least important factor in its success. It is not possible to find and suppress all of the waste. The cities which have devoted the most attention to the measurement of and the accounting for the water supplied, with every service metered still show in a general way from 15 p.c. to 30 p.c. of the water unaccounted for. If the campaign for

of water in the mains at night is greatest. The details of the work is in the hands of the City Engineer. Three districts were examined by means of the second method in the early morning hours of Nov. 3rd and 4th. The results were as follows: Locality—Mallock St., William St., Hayward Ave., McDougall Street, Maxse Street, (2490 feet of 8 inch main); total rate of waste in gals. per day, 66,900; rate of waste from mains alone after all services were shut off, gals. per day, 13,000; per centage of total waste in these districts, on house services, 89; on mains, 29. Locality—Freshwater Road, at head of Long's Hill (150 feet of 12 inch main, 570 feet of 10 inch main); total rate of waste in gallons per day, 40,000; rate of waste from mains alone after all services were shut off, gallons per day, 10,000; per centage of total waste in these districts, on house services, 79; on mains, 21. Locality—Harvey Road, west of Rawlins' Cross (1,050 feet of 6 inch main, 250 feet of 4 inch main); total rate of waste in gallons per day, 12,000; rate of waste from mains alone after all services were shut off, gallons per day, 2,000; per centage of total waste in these districts, on house services, 79; on mains, 21. Further work should be done as fast as possible along this line. The figures given in this table are a promise of what may be secured in the way of evidence of local waste. The evidence from such investigations as these should be turned over to the plumbing inspectors. The best results may be secured from this work only if the men engaged upon it are able to devote all their time to it. The procedure thus far followed, with men working both day and night, cannot be depended upon to maintain in them the spirit for the active work when this work is taken up in the spring. A force should be organized for the express purpose. The apparatus now used is not the best for the purpose, as it is not sensitive enough to give the precision desired in the results. Any services found by such inspection to be carrying water are subjected the following day to an inspection of the house fixtures. Notice is served on all consumers whose service or fixtures may thus be found leaking. At the end of a reasonable time (this should be followed by another similar inspection to ascertain whether the flow of water has been stopped in accordance with said notice). Some service pipes or cocks have been found leaking at this inspection, and steps have been taken to have them repaired. waste reduction instituted in St. John's is vigorously pursued the city may be able to cut down a considerable part of the present waste. This is one of the most profitable lines of endeavour that the water department can engage in. RECOMMENDATION AS TO WASTE OF WATER. For the purpose of checking the waste of water and of providing better control over, and more satisfactory means of accounting for the water supply of St. John's, I make the following recommendations: That all large consumers of water be metered at once. That a policy be adopted which in the course of a term of years, say five, will result in the metering of all services. That a service be organized for the systematic study of conditions of waste, which will include the examination at night of isolated districts, followed by the thorough inspection of all services on which there is any suspicion of waste, the ultimate aim being the location and suppression of such waste. That periodical inspections be made of all service cocks at night, over the entire city, at least three times a year, to be followed, where the flow water is indicated, by inspection of fixtures or other procedure aimed at the location and suppression of waste. That regulations be adopted and enforced, aimed at securing reasonable protection of house plumbing against freezing, and reasonable prevention of the large winter service. That all old and defective service pipes be renewed. That all hydrants or fountains used for local water supply, and now running continually, be stopped except when water is required therefrom; and that careful regulation of the flow at horse troughs, etc., be made to prevent useless waste. Respectfully submitted, (Sgd.) FRANCIS F. LONGLEY.

Sulphate of Ammonia.

St. John's Gas Light Company. Dear Sir—I have analyzed a sample of Sulphate of Ammonia made at your Works, and I found 20.5 per cent of NITROGEN, Sulphate of Ammonia and Nitrate of Soda are the two principal Nitrogen manures. Sulphate of Ammonia is less soluble than Nitrate of Soda, consequently it is a safer manure to use during a wet season. Yours truly, D. JAMES DAVIES, B.S.C., F.C.S., Analyst and Assayer. Kyle Returning.

A message from Capt. Burgess of the a.s. Kyle to the Reid Nfld. Co. received on Saturday night last, stated that the ship had reached Hawke's Harbor at 3 o'clock that afternoon coming south. The captain said that very stormy weather was experienced since leaving here, the ship having encountered several snow storms. The Kyle reports the Sagona still north of Hawke's Harbor. The latter ship was scheduled to go as far north as Okak this trip, and as far as can be learned the weather down north is exceptionally stormy, which accounts for the long passage. The Kyle, which left here on Nov. 3rd, went as far as Cartwright.

Reindeer.

Captain Bob Bartlett, of Brigus, Newfoundland, who accompanied Peary on his polar expedition, and has so long been in Assaska, writes:—
"The Reindeer proposition is a great thing in this country. One can get plenty of fresh meat, and there are now over 60 thousand. I have been in several stations. What a great thing they would be on Labrador, for the Eskimo, as well as the Eskimo. The Eskimo use the dogs for going about, just as they always have done, only they chain up their dogs, and of course they have the deer men always to look after the herds. They sometimes are many miles from the village, and where the best grazing is to be found. The system they have, I mean the Government, is a wonderful thing, and easily could be carried on either in Labrador or Newfoundland."

SUEZ CANAL opened 1869, connecting the Red Sea to the Bay of Pelusium; it shortens the distance between London and Bombay about 24 days. It was first projected by Ferdinand de Lesseps in 1852 with the consent of Egypt, Turkey, Russia, France and Austria. The British Government, however, withheld their approval. A Company was formed with a capital of £8,000,000. It has a length of 162 miles and the vessels drawing 26 feet of water. It was the purchase of the Khedive's shares (£2,500,000) for £4,000,000 in 1875 that gave Britain a controlling interest which has proved so advantageous to her commerce. These shares are now worth £30,000,000.

TRIUMPH OF PEACE.
The earth is stained with bloody strife
As empire strikes at empire's life,
For war, its deadly sceptre wields,
And verdant plains are battlefields.
Soldiers have said their last good-by,
And then fared forth to fight and die,
Some for fair truth and honor's sake,
And some dark passions thirst to slake.
And lust of power and lust of place
Have crowned a monarch with disgrace,
And woes are heaped upon his head,
With every increase of the dead.
Up from the wreck of blood and flame
Dire judgments crowd upon his name,
And though he wears an empire's crown,
His name in infamy goes down.
Sweet peace has fallen in the street,
Trampled beneath the warrior's feet,
And warfare's crimes and woes and pains
Are measured with its utmost gains.
Yet truth shall stand and right shall win
Against this black colossal sin,
Sweet peace again enthroned shall be
And men from blight of war be free.
God speed the gallant men who war
Against the thing that men abhor,
And smite forever to the dust
The war-lord's pride and empire lust.

WRECKED IN A GALE.
PARSBORO, N.S., Nov. 15.
The schooner St. Anthony, from St. John for Selmah, with general cargo, went ashore in a gale on Friday night at the mouth of Advocate Harbor, near Parsboro, and is a total wreck. Of the crew of five men, only the mate Samuel Redmond, is known to be saved. He was found on a spar on Saturday. Redmond and two others got on a piece of wreckage but were washed off, and the others were drowned while Redmond caught the broken spar. The vessel was struck by the gale and driven ashore in low water.

PARIS, Nov. 14.
The French official communication given out in Paris this afternoon says: In Belgium the German attack against the head of the bridge at Neuport resulted in failure and various efforts at offensive movements on the part of the enemy in this region between the Canal de La Bassée and Arras our troops have made minor progress. In the region of Lassigny and in the vicinity of the Aisne as far as Berry au Bac the Germans have attacked but without success. In the Argonne the fighting has recommenced with greater spirit. The enemy endeavored but in vain to recapture Four De Paris and St. Hubert. Particularly in the vicinity of Verdun several partial offensive movements on the part of the enemy were checked by the fire of our artillery before the forward movement of the enemy's infantry could be undertaken. In the Woëvre district and in Lorraine there is nothing to report.

Holy Name Society.

The monthly meeting of the Holy Name Society was held yesterday. The members in large numbers approached Holy Communion at the 8 o'clock mass, which was celebrated by the Rev. Dr. Greene, who delivered a touching sermon, taking his text from the Gospel of the day. The Director meeting opened at three o'clock with the ceremony of profession of candidates when several members joined the ranks. The Spiritus Director made a few important announcements and afterwards imparted Benediction during which a select choir chanted the hymns, under the direction of Mr. J. J. Slatery who presided as organist. The singing of the Holy Name hymn by the entire congregation being especially impressive.
Those who could, then repaired to the Aula Maxima, St. Bon's College, where the nomination of officers for the coming year took place, and the usual routine work was conducted. The nomination was as follows:
President—Mr. T. J. Walsh
Vice-President—Mr. J. Hanlon
Treasurer—Mr. J. P. Stapleton
Secretary—Mr. J. C. Chafe
Asst. Secretary—Mr. T. A. Murphy
Librarian—Messrs. W. T. McGrath, A. Cahill, G. Lynch, J. J. Whalen.
Marshal—Messrs. D. Clatney, P. Burke, J. J. Rollis.
Asst. Marshal—Messrs. P. Crotty, R. Stamp, J. Boone, J. Adams, M. Manning.
The election will take place at a special meeting to be held on Sunday, December 27th next. During the night the officers and many of the members met at the Society's room for the purpose of making an address and presentation to their brother member, Mr. W. L. Miller, who is about to depart for Baltimore on the S.S. Mongolia to don the Xaverian habit in the order of the Xaverian Brotherhood.
The Rev. Fr. Sheehan was present and paid a glowing tribute to our departing brother member. The President and others made some complimentary remarks also.
Mr. Miller replied in suitable terms, thanking the Society for its expressions of appreciation of his work in connection with the Society.

You may know a woman who has a reputation for making delicious cake, biscuits, etc.,—who seems to hit it right every time. You may also know a woman, who, no matter how painstaking, can't seem to get the knack of successful baking.

Both use the same butter, same eggs, same flour and sugar. What is the difference? Very likely it's all in the baking powder. Undoubtedly the woman with the knack uses Royal Baking Powder, and the unsuccessful woman uses an alum baking powder thinking it cheaper.

Yet the difference in the cost of a whole large cake is less than a cent.

The Death of Lord Roberts.

LONDON, Nov. 14.
Following from Press Bureau: Lord Kitchener announces, with deep regret, which he knows will be shared by the whole Army, that he received this evening the following telegram from Sir John French: "Deeply regretted to tell you that Lord Roberts died at 8 this evening. Lord Roberts was on a brief visit to France to greet the Indian troops, of which he was Colonel-in-Chief. He contracted a chill on Thursday and succumbed after a short illness to an attack of pneumonia."
HARCOURT.

FRENCH PRESS PAYS TRIBUTE TO "BOBS."

PARIS, Nov. 16.
Yesterday's papers comment at length upon the death of Lord Roberts. All review the splendid career of the soldier at Lucknow, Lahore, Afghanistan and Transvaal, and pay eloquent tributes to his sterling qualities as a man, as well as a fighter. They comment in moving terms on the grave train of circumstances which brought him to French soil to end a well-filled life, and declare he will be mourned in France as much as in England.

LIVED AND DIED FOR THE SERVICE OF HIS COUNTRY.

LONDON, Nov. 16.
The death of Lord Roberts, which occurred on Saturday evening at the Headquarters of the British Expeditionary Force in France, was extremely sudden. He was in his usual good health when he left England on Wednesday last with his daughter, Lady Aileen Roberts, and his son-in-law, Major Levin. The party was on a rough trip crossing the Channel, but the aged General felt no effects and went through with his programme on the Continent. In fact, he was about to return home when his death occurred. Earl Roberts had motored to the British bases and camps, had reviewed the Indian troops and had conferred with the leading officers. It was not until about dinner time on Friday evening that he complained of a slight chill. As he was subject, more or less, to trifling chest troubles, he followed his usual course and went to bed early. As his temperature increased, medical men were called, and pronounced his condition critical. They relieved the General of what pain he was suffering, and he fell asleep. His death occurred during the night. The passing of the great warrior has created profound grief throughout the country, and at all churches and cathedrals where the soldiers are training, touching references were made yesterday in his death, and "The Dead March in Saul" played. A telegram to Lady Roberts, from Field Marshal Sir John French, in the name of the Army serving in France, expressed deep sympathy, saying: "Your grief is shared by us, who mourn the loss of a much-loved Chief, as he was called. It seems a fitting ending to the life of a great soldier that he should have passed away 'midst the troops he loved so well, and within sound of the guns." Lord Roberts' devotion and interest in the Army, his hard work in this connection and his seeming good health, had been the subject of comment since the beginning of the war. He was the most popular military figure in Britain, and a national hero without rival in the affections of the people. Despite his years, he had never ceased from hard work since his nominal retirement. As he had often remarked, he lived a rigidly abstemious life, that he might preserve his strength for the service of his country.

It is hinted that there is to be a decided change from the omnipresent black velvet hat to the albert nets and metal lace.

GOOD NEWS FROM BELGIUM.

PARIS, Nov. 15.
An official statement, to-day, announced the repulse of German attacks all along the line in Flanders.

ST. PIERRE BULLETIN.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—(Official.)
From the North Sea to Lille the day has been good. Two German attacks, one northeast of Zonnebeke, the other south of Ypres, have been repulsed, the latter with heavy losses for the Germans. Between the Le-Basse canal and Arras, and in the Lihons region the enemy made two fruitless attempts. On the remainder of the front there is nothing to be reported.

GERMAN OFFICIAL.

BERLIN, Nov. 15.
Fighting on our right wing made slight progress yesterday, owing to unfavorable weather, but in the course of a difficult preliminary encounter we captured several hundred prisoners and two machine guns. In the Forest of Argonne, we succeeded in blowing up and capturing a strong French fort of support. In the East fighting continues on the East Prussian and in Poland, without a definite decision being reached.

A PETROGRAD STORY.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 15.
Leaving the defence of Cracow mainly in the hands of Austrians, and attempting to hold the Russian advance along the Polish frontier only by desultory rear-guard actions, the Germans, according to the view of the situation held in Petrograd, are, to-day, withdrawing their main body into Silesia, whence many are being sent north to the region between Thorn and the River Warthe. In this territory the Germans, taking advantage of the small number of Russian troops, are attempting an energetic advance, at the same time as they move forward on both banks of the lower Vistula.

AN OFFICER'S FIELD SERVICE KIT
 is naturally a good deal larger than is that of a private soldier. His outfit is fairly elaborate, and among the principal items are the following: Service jacket, trousers, breeches, great coat, drab shirt, puttees, "Sam Browne" belt, haversack, water-bottle, lanyard and whistle. He also has to provide himself with a sword and revolver, a pair of field glasses and a compass. Nearly all the uniform is Khaki—even the helmet and cap, together with the collar and tie.
 Considering this, no wonder at the outbreak of War we were called upon to dye so many helmets, shirts, ties, etc., etc., the famous Khaki color—and we're doing it yet.
