CHAPTER XXXVIII.

Keen as his scrutiny of Stephen Daunt had been since he had arrived at Easthorpe on the morning of the day following that on which Frank Greville had been arrested, he had seen not the smallest indication of the guilt he had firmly believed in. The telegram from Stephen Daunt had caused him considerable surprise, since the inquiries he had already made led him to the conclusion that Stephen was guilty, and had escaped suspicion only through the belief in Frank Greville's guilt which was so general. The interest Mrs. Daunt had aroused and the pity he felt for her position had made him drop the inquiry; but it was too fresh in his memory not to interest him greatly, and he would be glad if he had felt at liberty to pursue the inquiry to the end.

Almost simultaneously with Hoppood's summons to Easthorpe came the news of Frank Greville's arrest, made just as he was on the point of embarking for Australia; and, as the detective travelled to Ashford by the night-mail, he felt that now something would surely come to light. He had had too wide an experience in his profession not to know how often innocent men are convicted through an overwhelming tide of evidence, and Sidney's faith in Greville's innocence had infected him against his will. Then the result of his own cautiously made inquiries had been the suspicion of Stephen, a suspicion increased almost to a certainty by Sidney's evident belief in his guilt; and he felt pleasantly excited and interested as he sat with Stephen Daunt in his study talking over the arrest.

"The evidence against Mr. Greville is overwhelmingly strong," said the detective, after a pause, looking down at his note-book, which lay open on the table before him. "As I said, the chance of his acquittal is infinitesimal. Only the confession of the real murderer could clear him; and that we are not likely to obtain."

Stephen sighed heavily.

"I fear not," he said, sadly. "Your own suspicions point only one way, I suppose?" he added, abruptly.

"They did point one way," was the quiet answer. "They point there no longer."

"You thought I was guilty?"

"Yes."

"So my wife told me. All this has been very hard for her," Stephen continued, sorrowfully. "I would give all I am worth to save her any further distress and anxiety. But even to do that," he added, with a little bitter laugh, "I can hardly confess to a crime I did not commit."

Neglected Coughs
Often lead to serious trouble. Are quickly relieved by Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

Many people regard a cold as a simple incident. But Coughs and Colds when neglected lead on to pneumonia and consumption—the most dreaded diseases common to the Northern Hemisphere. Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is well-known as a most effective treatment for coughs, bronchitis, croup and asthma. For many years it has held its place in the homes of Canada as absolutely dependable and most popular remedy as it is today.

Composed of simple and yet powerfully effective ingredients it is suitable for children and adults alike and is found constantly in most homes for use in case of emergency. Prompt treatment is half the battle when fighting colds.

Dancing Girl's Attackers Hanged
Officers of Maharajah of Indore Die for Killing Merchant—Die Escaped—Mumtaz Begum Incident Closed—Four in Jail—One Insane.

BOMBAY, Nov. 19. (U.P.)—Two of the murderers of the wealthy merchant Abdul Bawla—professor of the pretty Nautch girl, Mumtaz Begum, once favorite of the Maharajah of Indore—were executed to-day, but a third escaped the death penalty because he was now insane.

Shah Ahmed, Commander of the Indore Mounted Police, and Shaw Rao Dighe, captain of the Air Force, were the men who went to the scaffold, while Ponde, an officer of the Maharajah's Household, escaped the noose, at least temporarily. Four other men who participated in the slaying of the Nautch girl are under life sentence. Ahmed went to his death bravely but Dighe collapsed on reaching the scaffold.

Execution of the two men followed the refusal of the Privy Council in London to alter the three death sentences and the life imprisonment terms for the other four, who wreaked vengeance on Bawla because he dared to take for his own the Maharajah's favorite.

The trial, one of the most sensational in Indian history, tended to indicate that the convicted men thought they would be doing the Maharajah a favor by thus avenging the merchant's theft of the dancing girl.

On the night of January 12 last, Abdul Bawla was shot dead while motor-ing with Mumtaz in the Bombay court. Mumtaz stated that she had been a favorite of the wealthy Indore ruler, to whose palace she went at the age of 11. There she dwelt for some years in the greatest luxury.

Eventually she tired of her position and escaped by leaving the Indore Palace retinue at the Delhi station and appealing to a policeman for protection as a British subject.

Subsequently she went to Bombay, where she took up with Bawla, living at his home at the time of the Malabar Hill tragedy.

"Pricking the Sheriffs"
Ceremony Performed With a Golden Bodkin.

Yearly on November 12 there is enacted at the Law Courts in London a quaint ceremony commonly known as "Pricking the Sheriffs."

This title, however, does not quite fit, inasmuch that the actual "pricking" is done at a later date.

What happens on November 12 is that the King's Remembrancer reads out the names of the retiring Sheriffs, after which the presiding judge nominates a number of gentlemen to fill the vacancies, three names being nominated for each country.

Claims for exemption and excuses are then read out by the Clerk to the Privy Council, and these are considered by the Lords of the Council, and the judges who may be present. The latter usually number six or seven, including, as a rule, the Lord Chief Justice of England.

Following these preliminaries, the list of names, as finally approved and recommended, is forwarded to the King, who fixes a date for the "pricking" to suit his convenience.

This ceremony, the last step of all, is performed by His Majesty. It consists in his pricking holes in a parchment roll of names submitted to him. This is done with a golden bodkin, a hole being pricked opposite the names of the gentlemen previously selected for the high office.

Though there is, of course, only one Sheriff appointed for each county, three names are submitted to the King. But this is merely to keep up the fiction that the Sheriffs are actually chosen by His Majesty, who, however, invariably pricks the name indicated to him. Yet there is nothing at all to prevent him pricking one of the other names on the roll.

TO EXPECTANT MOTHERS
Letter From Mrs. Ayars Tells How Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

"Spring Valley, N.Y.—I took the Vegetable Compound before my last confinement, when I got to feeling so badly that I could not sleep nights, my back ached so across my hips, and I could hardly do my work during the day. I never had such an easy confinement and this is my sixth baby. I read about Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound in the 'Farmer's' Telegram and wrote you for one of your books. We have no drug store in our town, but I saw your medicine in T. Eaton's catalogue. I am a farmer's wife, so have all kinds of work to do inside and outside the house. My baby is a nice healthy girl, who weighed nine pounds at birth. I am feeling fine after putting in a large garden since baby came. (She is as good as she can be). Yours is the best medicine for women, and I have told about it and even written to my friends about it."—Mrs. ANNIE E. AYARS, Spring Valley, N.Y.

Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent medicine for expectant mothers, and should be taken during the entire period. It has a general effect to strengthen and tone up the entire system so that it may work in every respect as nature intends. All druggists sell this dependable medicine. Give it a trial.

Amazing Contents of Tutankhamen's Coffin

Cairo, Nov. 15.—The following official statement has been issued concerning the examination of the mummy of Tutankhamen:

"On November 11, in the presence of the government and scientific representatives, Howard Carter began the examination of the mummy of Tutankhamen, which was carried on in the tomb of Seti, since the mummy could not be removed from the coffin without injury.

"The outer surfaces of the wrappings, which were in a very fragile condition, were first consolidated by means of a thin coating of melted paraffin wax, after which Prof. Derry made a longitudinal incision from mask to feet. The outer coverings on being turned back exposed a layer of wrappings which were equally carbonized and decayed. In these circumstances any orderly unwrapping was manifestly impossible.

"As the work proceeded, a large number of interesting and beautiful objects were gradually revealed. At each stage of the proceedings both written and photographic records were taken. Among the objects brought to light the more important were amulet and collaret, a superb gold dagger with crystal handle, bracelets of intricate workmanship, a large number of finger rings of diverse materials, some having scarabs bearing the king's name for their bases (settings); a second dagger, even more beautiful than the first, several large inlaid pectorals, head-work ornaments, gold circlets, etc.

Magnificent Jewels.

"Until the thirteenth day of work uncovering the mummy had proceeded only so far as to expose the lower part of the body and limbs. According to the opinion of the anatomical experts, the evidence to the present reveals without doubt that the body is that of a male, not yet adult, in a much emaciated condition.

"Carbonized on the feet are golden sandals, and upon each toe and finger golden stalls. So far no traces of documents has been discovered.

"Both forearms were loaded with magnificent jewels. The jewelry discovered upon the king, who lies in a coffin of solid gold, is far beyond expectations.

"Work of such a delicate nature must necessarily proceed slowly. The cleaning and restoration of these wonderful objects will begin immediately after the examination of the mummy is finished. For this reason and in order that they may be transported to the Cairo museum for exhibition as quickly as possible, all visits to the tomb and the laboratory must be suspended until the work is finished."

Christmas Gifts From Spencer Girls

Wednesday morning at high noon there was a happy gathering in Spencer College Auditorium. Amongst those present were His Lordship Bishop White, Chairman of the Diocese, Rev. Canon Boli, M.A., Rev. Canon Jones, M.A., Rev. Canon Fawcett, and Rev. E. Leslie Pike, of Felid Hall. Members of the Spencer Club, Lady Horwood, Miss Cherrington, Miss Sandrine, Mesdames Arch Tait, J. Boyd Baird, J. A. Young, Miss P. Hon. Mr. Patterson and several others interested in the institution were present. The occasion was the exhibition of the fourth annual collection of Christmas gifts gathered by the pupils out of their various treasures. The gifts were all from the heart and meant many a sacrifice on the part of the little pupils of Spencer College. Tiny tots from the kindergarten classes up through the various grades to the Associate in Arts as well as ex-students, contributed their share, while the ladies of Spencer Club contributed a barrel of apples. Book gifts of all sorts, huge stockings with Christmas cards attached and loving messages from young Spencerians toys, candies, dolls, warm coats, woolen caps, boots, shoes, gloves and stockings, all made up the huge pile of gifts which will be shipped immediately to White Bay and Fortune Bay to gladden the hearts of many children whose lot is not cast in such pleasant places as those of their more fortunate sisters in St. John's.

Miss Cherrington, the lady Principal, made a very happy speech, in welcoming the visitors present, and extolled the virtue of the children's gifts in making others happy—the real genuine spirit of the Christmas season. It was good for the child to receive early training in this way—that of giving to others—the real secret of true happiness, thus eliminating the vice of selfishness. The pupils sang very sweetly two Christmas Carols. The soloists were Misses Ethel Noonan and Audrey Stirling, whose lovely voices were a treat to listen to. Professor Stirling, who trained them, presided at the piano, and deserves congratulations on his pupils' work.

His Lordship the Bishop of Newfoundland then took the children into his confidence, and after complimenting them on the spirit shown by their offerings each year, told them how happy their little friends in White Bay and Fortune Bay would be to receive them. He thanked each and every one for their gift on behalf of those who would get them. The pupils sang the "Ode to Newfoundland" and the National Anthem, and with the inspection of the gifts by the visitors present, the happy half hour's proceedings terminated, everybody feeling that the pupils of Spencer were forgetting along right lines when forgetting self and endeavoring to pass the word of "A Merry Christmas" on to others.

Balfour Stock Co. in Celebrated Play To-Night

"BABY MINE" THE GREATEST OF ALL COMEDY-DRAMAS, A LAUGH AND A THRILL

Do you like a play that is different—a play that stands out in a class to itself as a big entertainment; well you must see "Baby Mine" which the Balfour Stock Company is presenting at the Casino to-night and for the balance of the week. "Baby Mine" is a play of complications, uproarious laughter and funny situations. It is a story of the trials and tribulations of a young married couple just starting on life's journey. Do they disagree? No, not altogether, but things are not running as smoothly as they should and apparently it is really nobody's fault. Hubby has a little quarrel with wife and leaves home. Wife feels sorry and lonesome and conceives various ways to get him back. Yes, he does come back, but that's when the fun commences. O boy, you'll laugh until your sides ache. This play ran for a tremendously long season in New York and London and delighted many thousands, and it's going to delight St. John's too. See it and enjoy the greatest treat of entertainment you've enjoyed in many seasons. You are advised to book now for next week's great bill, "Cappy Rick" which commences on Monday night. All book lovers are familiar with this story and nobody will want to miss it. Seats now selling at Casino box-office.

Politeness Pays

An annuity of $89 a year was recently left by a customer to a shop assistant "in recognition of the many courtesies received at her hands." Cases of this kind are not uncommon. Years ago a journeyman shoemaker named George Robinson was walking out of Norwich, carrying in his hand a bunch of roses. He passed an invalid lady being pushed in a chair, and heard her say: "What lovely roses!"

He turned at once and gave the old lady the whole bunch. She thanked him, and asked him his name and address. He never saw her again, but twelve years later he received a letter from a lawyer, telling him that the lady was dead and had left him a legacy of £120.

Another charming little story of a similar kind comes from Paris. A London journalist received a legacy of £413 from a distant relation, an old French colonel, because, as the testator said, "he had always listened with attention and politeness to my old stories of my fighting days."

A Rich Revenge

The most celebrated incident of this kind resulted in a huge fortune being bequeathed to a young girl. When old Mr. Coutts, the millionaire banker, married the young and beautiful Miss Mellon, the Irish actress, his daughters by his first wife all treated the step-mother with disdain—all, that is, except Lady Burdett, the mother of the famous Baroness Burdett-Coutts.

After the death of Mr. Coutts, the actress married the Duke of St. Albans, and so became of much higher rank than the ladies who had scorned her. She completed her revenge by leaving two millions in cash and the partnership in Coutts' Bank, worth £80,000 a year, to Lady Burdett's daughter, afterwards Baroness Burdett-Coutts.

Servants have often benefited by bequests from their employers, but such bequests have usually been left in recognition of long and faithful service. An interesting exception is the case of William Whitins, who acted as valet to a certain wealthy Yorkshireman, and who was left the sum of £100 by his employer "because he never lost his temper even under circumstances of the most extreme provocation."

Kindness Well Repaid.

It appears that his deceased master was a kind man to over-indulgence in honor when he became violent and would throw boots, or anything else that was handy, at his servants.

Years ago an American, George Hovsman, fell ill in a strange town, and was nursed through his illness by a certain Mrs. Landis. In those days Mr. Hovsman was poor, but afterwards he made a large fortune by clever speculation. When he died it was found that he had left every penny he possessed to his former nurse. The amount was nearly £1,000,000.

In the year 1902 a child fell into the Thames near Chelsea Bridge, and would have been drowned had not a soldier jumped in and supported him until a boat arrived. When the soldier came to shore, the boy's father handed him £10, at the same time taking his name and address. Ten years passed, then, in July, 1912, the soldier, who had long left the Army and was a musician in a theatrical orchestra, received a telegram to say that the father of the child whom he had rescued had left him £27,000. There are many similar stories, but enough has been said to prove that gratitude is still a living virtue, and that politeness still pays.

DO YOU BELIEVE IN FUNERALS?

Do you believe in funerals? They are an outlet for emotion. They are something to do. Something to do. When a friend dies, all your affection for him or her focuses in pain that he has slipped away and you cannot tell how much he meant. If there were only something you could do and the funeral is in answer to that wish. It gives you a chance to pay a final tribute of respect and affection.

But they're not for the dead. There was a time when I thoroughly agreed with those people. I still agree with them when they say, "It can't possibly do the dead any good to do all that for them after they are gone."

We May Need Harrowing. "Harrowing" is the word a friend of mine always uses about funerals. He doesn't think they ought to be allowed because they harrow people's feelings so. I wonder if it is necessarily a bad thing for people to have their feelings harrowed? The farmer harrows the ground to prepare it for his seed. A soul has plenty of hearts that would not be the worse for a harrowing now and then. Hearts hardened with materialism and self-absorption, hearts too seldom watered by the mists of tenderness.

Red Russia's Rage at "The Concert at Locarno"

(From Literary Digest.)

A new concert of European powers, from which Russia has been significantly excluded, was organized at the Locarno Conference, say the Soviet press angrily, adding that the so-called "lasting peace of Locarno," which European statesmen have been rejoicing over, may prove to be a "masked front" and perhaps "a new war against Soviet Russia." Soviet leaders and newspapers give vent to their indignation over the new international situation resulting from the Locarno negotiations, by such exclamations as "Germany has capitulated," and "England has won a great diplomatic victory." The official organ of the Soviet Government, Isvestia (Moscow), remarks:

"On all chief questions, England succeeded in having her way. She made Germany follow her lead and has brought about tension in Russo-German relations. She has succeeded in weakening the ties binding France to her Allies, by assuming the role of arbiter between Germany and France, and by leaving the subjects of the occupation of the Rhine provinces, of the Saar basin, and of military control, without being settled. The unsettled status of these points of dispute will serve England as a club to hold over Franco-German relations and, at the same time enable England to compromise Germany for sharing England's anti-Soviet policy."

This official newspaper then tells us that Russia's Foreign Minister Chicherin had warned German statesmen of the inevitable damage Russo-German amity must suffer in a case Germany consented to enter the League of Nations without the preliminary abrogation of Articles XVI and XVII. These articles, it is recalled, provide for the co-operation of members of the League upon decisions by the League on military and other measures to be taken against disturbers of the peace. Now Germany, it is charged, has been content with "vain verbal promises" of the Allies that they will show special care in applying these articles to her. She has agreed to enter the League in spite of the fact that they have not been canceled, this newspaper alleges, adding that such action on the part of Germany is a hostile movement toward Russia, and while "it may be that the German press can succeed in making the German bourgeoisie believe that it is not so, they can not fool the Union of Soviet Republics." Pravda (Moscow), the organ of the Central Committee of the Communist party, has a this to say of the effect of the Locarno treaties on Russia's international situation:

"In order to understand the change that has been wrought upon Germany's international policy, one must recall the Russo-German Treaty of Rapallo, which was concluded in April, 1922. The Rapallo Treaty did not contain any general clauses of purely political import. It simply liquidated the heritage of the Great War and provided for the mutual assistance of the two contracting parties in all economic undertakings that would contribute to a Russo-German rapprochement. Why did that treaty provoke the wild rage of the Entente Powers? Why did it give birth to legends of the existence of a secret Soviet-German alliance directed against England?"

"The reasons for such indignation are perfectly evident. Why did this treaty mean to Germany? It did this: authority in Germany was in the hands of the little bourgeois elements headed by Chancellor Wirth. These elements professed loyalty to the Versailles Treaty and tried to abide by it, insofar as possible. Yet, in concluding the Treaty of Rapallo, Chancellor Wirth proved at the same time that Germany had not wholly surrendered, that she was trying to regain her strength so that in time she would oppose the Allied Powers. The Treaty of Rapallo symbolized a policy of mutual re-encasement between Germany and Russia, through economic co-operation. The Allies saw in the Treaty of Rapallo a way not leading to the recovery of Germany, but also to the recovery of Russia, and only the beginning of the liquidation of the Treaty of Versailles, but also the beginning of the failure of their anti-Soviet policy."

"Thus, according to Pravda, the real meaning of the Locarno treaties is a complete capitulation by Germany to England, a capitulation which transforms Germany into "England's political tool," and although:

"Officially speaking, the Locarno treaties do not annul the Rapallo Treaty, after the conclusion of the Locarno treaties the continuation of the policy embodied in the Rapallo document will be hardly possible. The Rapallo Treaty was rather the programme of a policy than a concrete policy. Locarno will undoubtedly stand in the way of the realization of that programme. Locarno is a great victory for the British. This victory is shielded by the peaceful words, but it is full of the seed of future international conflicts."

"No trace of regret over Locarno is found in anti-Bolshevik Russian newspapers, published in Russia, but at least they are not devoid of noting that the Soviet press admit they have lost an ally in Germany, and that now Soviet Russia remains isolated in Europe. One of the essential features of the Locarno treaties, they assert, is that Europe has cut itself off from the realm of the Third International, "a fact sharply realized by the Third International." Vozrozhdenie (The Resurrection), a Russian anti-Bolshevik daily, published in Paris and reflecting the opinions of Grand Duke Nicholas Nikolaevich as well as of extensive nationalist and constitutional-monarchist circles of Russian emigrants, has this to say:

"As we have maintained from the beginning of the Locarno Conference, it would be naive to think that a scheme of international attack against the Soviets would be elaborated in the little Swiss city. Such a foolish conception of the Locarno problem, which was supported by the 'Cassandras' cries of the Bolshevik press, was certainly inasmuch as the Locarno peace embodies no provisions for an immediate fight on the Soviets. But it may bring about conditions which will render such a fight possible."

"The European Powers may bet once more on the 'peaceful evolution of Bolshevism,' and they may try again to include Soviet Russia in the general system of the existing peaceful relations among the nations. Such attempts will always remain fruitless—Bolshevism can not cease to be Bolshevism. Communism, the common enemy of all European nations, will not cease to foster all sorts of international misunderstandings in keeping with the old formula: 'Divide et impera.' Lenin said on several occasions that the Soviets owe their existence to European quarrels and discords. Therefore, a new step toward the establishment of a lasting peace in Europe is undoubtedly a blow to the Third International and to its domination over Russia."

A Liberal anti-Bolshevik Russian paper, the Berlin Rai, declares that it is a mistake to say that Locarno witnessed no defeat, because:

"There was one who suffered defeat there, though he did not participate directly in the conflict and did not witness his own defeat. It was Chicherin, who remain in Berlin during the Locarno negotiations. He and his press did their utmost to keep Germany from signing the treaties by advice, threats, demands and warnings. At the moment when the delegates inked their pens to initial the Locarno documents, Chicherin left for Wiesbaden to restore his shattered health. It was time for him to go there, too, for his presence in Berlin was just as unhelpful to his affairs as it was bad for his health. His diplomatic defeat is obvious, for the pacification of Europe is just as undesirable to the Soviets as it is desirable from the viewpoint of Russia's national interests.

An official Russian opinion, whose purport may be traced to the accomplishment of Locarno, is given to the London Sunday Observer by Mr. Rakovsky, Soviet Russian Charge d'Affaires at London. Referring to Soviet Russia's district of the League of Nations, Mr. Rakovsky pointed to the questions of disarmament and security, which, he said, were considered the League's chief objects, and he continued:

"As for disarmament, our viewpoint is that we are prepared to go very far in that direction, provided that the same measure be applied in all countries. Whether we are in the League of Nations or outside of it, the Soviet Union will faithfully assume its obligation which it may voluntarily assume."

"So far as security is concerned, the word is used mainly with reference to security of frontiers. For us, however, the question is one not only of security of frontiers but security of our existing social structure."

According to Mr. Rakovsky, as quoted in this interview, "the question which arises involuntarily before every Soviet citizen is whether the League of Nations may not be used for forcing us to change our social structure." In preference to the League, he advocates "an international organization for furthering economic and political co-operation between countries," on which subject he remarks:

"In Genoa we express our views on the subject. We considered that problem submitted to such an international association of peoples should be even wider in kind than those dealt with by the League of Nations. Secondly, such an organization would help in the solution of economic ques-

THE EVENING TELEGRAM, PROPRIETORS. All communications should be addressed to The Evening Telegram, Ltd., and not to individuals.

Thursday, November 26, 1925. The New Street Car Service

The replacing of the old street car service with the new has effected a great improvement in transportation and in the general appearance of the town.

One of the chief drawbacks at present appears to be the delay caused at junctions such as Adelaide Street in discharging passengers, a matter which to a great extent can be overcome by the public themselves.

Another way in which passengers can render assistance is by occupying the rear seats as they enter. Not only would this relieve the motorman of the trouble of giving directions to that effect, but it would prevent unnecessary obstruction of the aisle.

We received a complaint recently of a motorman who appears to have been more forcible than polite in directing the passengers boarding or alighting. In view of the fact that the motormen have been themselves learning the ways of these cars, due allowance, we think, may be made for an action that was probably due to nervousness on his part rather than to a desire to be offensive.

One change in the service is not only desirable as soon as possible, but, in the interest of public safety, necessary. The cars on Water Street at present discharge passengers on the traffic side of the rails. This exposes them to accidents by passing vehicles, or causes them to alight in the puddles.

Queen's College Concert

CROWDED HALL AND A SPLENDID EVENING.

Second Programme To-Night. The concert given last night by Queen's College, proved a success beyond the wildest hopes of its organizers.

The Canon Wood Hall was packed by a delighted audience, who manifested their approval and enjoyment by the hearty applause and laughter which followed and interspersed every item of a full programme.

The front seats were occupied by the governing party of the College, including the Lord Bishop of Newfoundland, Sir William Horwood, C.F., and Mr. Leonard Outerbridge.

In the choruses, part-songs, and dramatic sketches, the concert party rose to the occasion and surpassed themselves.

Don't miss this chance of a glorious evening, but call early at the College or telephone 616 for the remaining tickets.

Runaway Auto Hits House

Last night a car owned by Mr. Walter Thistle did some damage to a house on Cookstown Road when it ran off its own accord over the upper portion of Carter's Hill. During his absence the machine went down over Cookstown Road and hit the house owned by Patrick Kelly doing some damage to the frame of the hall door.

Catholic Citizens Arrange Reception for Archbishop

A large and representative gathering of Catholic citizens attended the meeting at the Aula Maxima St. Bon's College last night for the purpose of arranging a reception to His Grace Archbishop Roche on his return from Rome early next month.

The meeting was addressed by Rt. Rev. Monsignor J. G. Higgins, who seconded that Mr. J. G. Higgins be appointed Secretary, and Mr. J. G. Higgins seconded that Mr. J. G. Higgins be appointed Secretary, and Mr. J. G. Higgins seconded that Mr. J. G. Higgins be appointed Secretary.

Opening the meeting, Monsignor Kitchin stated it was imperative that a reception be tendered to the Archbishop on his return this time, for many reasons. The present year is a jubilee year, a thing which happens only once or twice in a lifetime.

Before the close of the meeting Mr. J. G. Higgins proposed that a representative gathering of Catholic citizens be held on an appointing time to tender a vote of congratulation to Monsignor Kitchin on the honor that had been bestowed upon him by the Holy Father in making him a Monsignor and Domestic Prelate to the Holy See.

Following this the meeting adjourned until called together again to receive the report of the Committee.

The City and the Road Grant

Last week I published a fac-simile copy of a letter from the Secretary of the Municipal Council in which it was stated (a) THAT THE CITY RECEIVED FROM THE GOVERNMENTS IN GRANTS FOR THE MAINTENANCE AND UPKEEP OF CITY STREETS, ANNUALLY, THE SUM OF $5,807.50; (b) THAT UNDER THE PER CAPITA GRANT, THE CITY WAS ENTITLED TO $70,000.00.

This statement from the Secretary of the Municipal Council has called for considerable comment and certain amount of unbelief, but read the following from the "Trade Review" of Saturday, November 21st:—

"THERE IS A ROAD GRANT ABOUT $87,000.00 ALLOCATED YEARLY TO ST. JOHN'S EAST AND WEST, BUT THE CITY COUNCIL GETS ONLY ABOUT $5,000 OF IT. THE REST IS SPENT IN THE OUTPORTS NEAR THE CITY BY THE GENERAL GOVERNMENT THROUGH THE MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY."

That's fairly definite, isn't it?

Big Price for Eel Grass

Yesterday the Minister of Agriculture and Mines received a message from the High Commissioner at London, stating that the shipment of eel grass, which was forwarded in September, had been sold at $12 per ton, and that one firm had three repeat orders and required further quantities. The shipment referred to is an experiment on the part of the Minister of Agriculture to test the possibilities of making the export of eel grass a profitable industry. Under the direction of Mr. J. F. Downey, about 20 tons of the grass was collected and packed for shipment at Swift Current, near Sound Island, P.E.I. Nearly a ton of the lot was forwarded and as is indicated by the message, a very profitable figure was secured for it. Owing to the congestion of freight on the Argyle the balance of the twenty tons has not yet been sent on here for transhipment as was hoped. It is possible, however, that arrangements may be made to have it forwarded in time to be sent over by S.S. Newfoundland. The experiment has demonstrated that a profitable business awaits the development by private enterprise, and it is estimated that an industry worth two or three million dollars can be established as the supply is almost inexhaustible and the demand great.

Slightly Mixed

The Earl of Oxford and Asquith, who celebrated his seventy-third birthday recently, made his reputation at the Bar by his work as junior to Sir Charles Russell, counsel for the Irish Nationalist party during the sittings of the Parnell Commission. An amusing story of this time, which throws a lurid light on the old days, is told by Mr. T. P. O'Connor. He relates that an American editor wished to publish a portrait of Pigott, the forger who was exposed during the inquiry. None was available, so the enterprising American simply took an old photograph from "stock" and presented it to his readers as that of the notorious Pigott. Still more sensational was the action of an Irish-American paper at the time of the trial of O'Donnell for shooting James Carey, the informer who had betrayed his associates, the murderers of Lord Frederick Cavendish and Mr. Burke, in the Phoenix Park, Dublin. O'Donnell was defended by Russell, and the Irish-American journal praised the great lawyer most warmly for his handling of the defence. Then it attacked the judge, and suggested that it would be a "patriotic act" for some Irishman to deal with him as O'Donnell had dealt with Carey. In case anyone was disposed to do this, the editor thoughtfully published a photograph which he said was that of the judge. It really it was a photograph of Russell.

The Railway Tie Problem

In reference to the recent conference between the Department of Agriculture and Mines and the operators of the different timber industries, and the discussion over supplying ties for the Railway, it is learned that the management of the latter can fill their requirements for this year independent of the operators. As operating companies make provision in May and June for the coming year, they were unable this season to assist in supplying the ties needed, and it was decided that a meeting take place next May at Grand Falls, when the matter will receive attention.

A New Industry Coming

PROPOSITION TO MANUFACTURE ARTIFICIAL SILK.

We learn that most reliable financial parties are now in negotiation with the Government and Department of Agriculture and Mines with a view to establishing a new industry, that of manufacturing silk from wood fabric. The party in question has valuable timber lands north of which he has already expended several hundred thousand dollars. In the new enterprise he has the backing of well-known American financiers. The artificial silk industry has grown to tremendous proportions in England and there is no reason why this country cannot get a large share of the business, as manufacturing conditions here are more favourable than anywhere else.

A Counter to Land Grabbing Protest

A couple of days ago delegations from Torbay and vicinity came to the city and made protest with the authorities against what they termed "land-grabbing" in their vicinity. This morning another delegation representing those who were claiming the lands in question, called at the Crown Lands office with a counter protest, alleging that those who were opposed to the granting of the lands were already in possession of timber areas which they held in reserve, whilst they took their requirements from the crown lands.

The Artillery Memorial

England in its long history has had many war memorials, but the new Artillery Memorial at Hyde Park differs in form and sentiment from the memorials of other wars. The difference is in the approach of the designers to their subject. War memorials in the past were usually the works of middle-aged sculptors, who know nothing about war and its realities, but were familiar with the classical rhetoric of victory and mourning. Mr. Jagger, the sculptor of the gunners' memorial, served and was wounded in the trenches, and Mr. Lionel Pearson, the architect served also in the war. There are now several memorials in sculpture and in paint done by the young men who fought in the war; this is the most important and significant of them.

Some people criticise the design as the glorification of war, but it is not that. The gun, of course, dominates the monument, but the scenes in the relief and the four bronze figures give it a terrible significance that is not the old-fashioned, hymn to the weapon—something very far from Kipling and Henley. The sweating, straining, suffering men and beasts in the panels have a passionate realism, and the children of a future age will see in them war without the gloss. The bronze figure in the cloak, with the arms outstretched and resting on a shelf of the plinth, carries in his gesture the suggestion of mankind on a sacrificed cross. A resplendent figure lies at the northern end.

Different meanings will be read in this as in all genuine works of art. One meaning that came to me was that the great gun was the symbol of all war in that, once war was started, nothing could stop the doom related in the stately below, just as nothing could stop what would come from a howitzer once the lever was pulled.

Magistrate's Court

Two drunks were discharged.

A man convicted of a breach of Section 14, Sub-section 5 of the Alcoholic Liquors Act, was fined $20 or 10 days' imprisonment, or both, in a case for non-surrender, was withdrawn.

The postponed case of the Board of Liquors Control vs. the Proprietress of a West End store occupied the attention of the court all morning. The accused was charged with a breach of Section 15, Sub-section (3) of the Alcoholic Liquors Act, that is, that she secured from the Controller's name more than one bottle of liquor a day. Six similar charges which had been made against the defendant on the first day were withdrawn. Mr. W. J. Brown, B.L., appeared on behalf of his client and entered a plea of "not guilty." Mr. R. A. Parsons for the Board of Liquors Control opened the case by calling Mr. Bourne, a clerk at the West End Controller's, who in his evidence stated that the defendant visited the West End department on Saturday morning, Nov. 14th, and purchased one bottle of rum at $1.50. A record of the sale was made and a slip was produced with witness's own identification mark. It read: I.G. $1.50. I.G. meant quality of liquor purchased. The slip was then put under drenchest cash register, with others, and was forwarded to head office on Monday. Witness stated another woman was in company with defendant on the same morning, who also purchased one bottle of rum. He could not remember the parties name, but knew that the slip was with the others filed that same day. The two bottles of rum were then wrapped up in one parcel and delivered to defendant.

Thos. J. Walsh of the Central store, was next called and swore that the defendant visited his department on the same day, Nov. 14th, and purchased a bottle of liquor, giving her name as Mrs. John Squires, Duckworth St. In this case the slip was marked by witness: I.R. $1.50, and dated Nov. 15th. Witness recognized the defendant as the party who bought the liquor on the day in question. On being further examined witness did not know if her real name was Squires, but he pointed out to the court that she wore on that same morning a peculiar kind of shoe, turned at the tops, but could not describe whether they were a gaiter or long rubber. He could not be sure as to whether another lady was with her on that occasion.

This concluded the Crown case. Mr. Browne then called the defendant, and on being placed on the stand, she admitted having bought one bottle of rum at the West End Controller's on Nov. 14th, but stoutly denied that she purchased anything from the Central Department. She wore a low shoe with a low over rubber, and only visited the latter department, once in awhile. She swore positively that she had only visited there on one occasion this present month. She said that Mr. Walsh served her the last time, but could not remember the day or date.

On being cross-examined by Mr. Parsons, witness was put through a most searching examination but nothing could be revealed from her that she was the party who bought the liquor at the Central Store on the day in question. After all the evidence had been heard, the Counsel then took issue in addressing the court. Mr. Brown asked for a dismissal on the grounds that the evidence of Walsh at the Central Store, was not corroborated by any other official of the same department. His Honor in summing up reviewed the evidence for and against, and the difficulty, he said, was who he was to believe. Under the evidence submitted, he gave the defendant the benefit of the doubt and dismissed the case. Then followed a second charge against the defendant, by the Board of Liquor Control, that she did commit a breach of Section 25, of the Alcoholic Liquors Act, that is, that she sold liquor at her store on Water Street within the past two months. Mr. Brown also defended his client in this case and entered a plea of "not guilty." The first witness for the prosecution was Detective Lee, who stated that he was instructed to visit defendants store in company with two other officers. The premises was visited in the afternoon by Saturday, November 14th. The proprietress was not present at the time, but a man was found in charge. Witness with the other officers then searched the place and found eight bottles of rum with Controller's label on same, in a cupboard, in a room at the rear of the shop. There was also another bottle found on the premises, only partly filled, but this was claimed to be the property of the man in charge. Witness was sent there by Head Constable Byrne on the complaint that liquor had been sold at the store. There was nothing else found on the premises.

Radio Lighthouses

Navigation in fog and darkness near dangerous coasts, will be robbed of most of its terrors by a new use of wireless with which Senator Marconi has been experimenting.

The new device will supplement the present lighthouse signals, and may even supersede them. It consists of a great, slowly revolving aerial, which will send out signals to enable the ships receiving them to work out their exact position. Weather makes no difference to the working of the device, and the receiving sets are simple affairs which can be carried by the smallest fishing boats. Tests were recently carried out by Senator Marconi's yacht, which sailed right round the Kent coast and up the Thames estuary while keeping in touch with an experimental revolving aerial on the South Foreland lighthouse. The results of the experiments are said to have been highly satisfactory.

Applications by Air

Taking to heart the proverb about the "early bird," an ex-R.A.F. man recently answered an advertisement by flying to the advertiser's home.

A wealthy gentleman had advertised for an experienced chauffeur, and the airman, seeing the advertisement and thinking the berth would suit him, flew from Scarborough to secure it. He landed in a field beside the advertiser's home, and then walked over to the house and proffered his services. He got the job.

Record Attendance at Circus

Despite the records previously established, last night's attendance at the Prince's Rink beat all previous records. Long before the appointed hour all galleries were filled and standing room on the main floor was at a premium. The Pastors opened the act, followed by Ringling. Afterwards came the favorite Marie (the singing girl on the web); then the Paustis, in their marvellous act; the Patersons, who, in their act, as did Margaret New in her singing act. Prof. Wilson's circus, at a concert set evoked unstinted applause. Despite his injury, after falling from the roof of the Prince's Rink, Mr. Ringling with his foot encased in plaster of Paris mounted his aerial despite the advice of the War Vets' physician, Dr. J. St. P. Knight, and did a splendid turn. Unfortunately, however, it will be Monday before he can "get his feet on" "Glow Act" in which he figured so (anonymously from a circus viewpoint) in the opening performance.

Secret of Gold Location Died With Trapper

TELEGRAPH CREEK, B.C., Nov. 20.—T. H. Kinder, a veteran prospector, died here while searching for hidden gold and with him died the secret of where the treasure was planted.

It is a romantic story and pathetic one, the search for hidden gold by Kinder, who died perhaps only a few days or a few hours before finding the long sought fortune that would have made him wealthy and fulfilled his dreams of many years.

Harry Johnson, a trapper on the Naas River, was one of the few men who was told the story by Kinder, but even he does not know the location of the hidden gold. Probably it will never be found, for Kinder was the only man who knew the secret and he is dead.

In 1897 three prospectors started for Dawson by way of the Overland route through Hazelton. They lost their way and landed at the headquarters of the Stikine River. They commenced prospecting here and struck rich pay. They took about sixty pounds of gold altogether before striking out over the trail with the gold. Two of the trio carried out a plot to kill the third member of the party so as to keep the gold for themselves, and at an old log cabin later known as Dead Man's Cabin, another murder occurred, the killer determining to keep all the gold for himself. He lost his nerve, however, and buried the treasure, planning to return later so as to avoid suspicion. But as years passed by his fears grew and on his deathbed he revealed the secret of the murders and of the hiding place of the gold to Kinder, his friend.

Eventually Kinder started for the North to find the gold. Those who followed after him found several notes pinned to the walls of cabins in which he had spent his nights. Each note carried the inscription: "Will be back next summer. In search of the hidden gold."

Technical Error Saves Ute Indian

ACCUSED OF BURYING LIVE BABY WITH BODY OF MOTHER.

FUEBLE, Colo., Nov. 17.—A technical error on the part of the prosecution has saved Plat May, 25-year-old Ute Indian, from conviction of murder for burying his infant daughter Alma in accordance with an old tribal custom.

Shortly before time for Federal Court to adjourn Monday the defense moved that the charge be dismissed on the grounds that the State had failed to prove corpus delicti. The motion was upheld by United States Judge J. Foster Symes.

Thus the legal knowledge of a white man saved the Ute from paying a penalty as required for murder under the white man's modern law.

The State had charged that May, following an ancient tribal tradition, had buried the living girl papoose in the arms of his mother who had died during childbirth.

Plat May's wife died of pneumonia on Feb. 17, 1925. Under threats of death at the hands of Mormon Joe, a medicine man of the Utes, and his father-in-law, Plat May wrapped the baby in a blanket, and placed it in the arms of the dead mother whose body lay in a tepee, according to the confession obtained by police.

The next day both bodies were buried. The papoose, the State contended, still was alive when lowered into the ground.

Dr. E. E. Johnson, coroner of Montevilla County, testified he had examined the body of the child and found evidence of congestion in its lungs caused from pneumonia.

Susan Cathers, mother-in-law of May, testified through an interpreter that the child had died because there was no one to nurse it, and denied that it had been buried alive.

Attorneys for May were prepared to show that the youthful Ute brave had been attacked by Mormon Joe once before for violating a tribal custom and feared to disobey his orders that the child be buried with its mother in order to kill the "evil spirit."

The end of the case that promised to divulge the mysterious legends of the Red Men came suddenly. Only a few persons, chiefly Indians, were in the courtroom when Judge Symes ordered the defendant freed.

"That's fine. I'll go home to-morrow," May said, as he donned a large sombrero while court still was in session.

Mormon Joe, will be returned to prison to complete his sentence as an accessory to the murder.

Queen's College Concert will prove a real treat for lovers of good music and singing, while those who enjoy wit and humour will laugh as they have never laughed before.—Nov 21, 51

The Readjustment of Values

There is abroad a pernicious spirit of discontent and unrest which has aroused in too many a consuming passion for the exotic. The lands beyond the sea, the peoples of sun-kissed shores, being unknown to us, exercise upon us a fascinating charm," says the Yorkshire Post.

"We thrill at the mention of 'Elysium' and Peru. Montmarie calls up wonderful visions of that 'perfectly exquisite' Apache. The mental attitude of the day of us is as lopsided as the Tower of Pisa, famous because it leans rather than because it is very beautiful.

"Perfection and charm, happiness and contentment—all are relegated to far-off lands. The world which immediately surrounds us is, apparently, too much with us.

"The cure of the absurd aberration is the readjustment of values. Travel too often dispels our fond dreams about the exotic without revealing to us the charm of the familiar objects which surround us.

"So that the dissipation of that mist of familiarity which obscures the magic in the commonplace is the only means whereby a zest for everyday life can be acquired or restored. To be, like Rupert Brooke, a great lover of the simple things of the world, and to see all things as they are, is to attain to the wisdom."

French Finance

Whether one wishes to admit it or not, whether or not one is disposed to blame either party, it is a fact which no amount of declaration and assertion will minimize, that a hole was opened in the people's confidence after the elections of May 11, 1924. That hole, which is only the size of a pin's head, was none the less, where the leakage started. And every threat delivered by the Cartel des Gauches against acquired wealth has succeeded in making it a bit larger. Thus, from the very outset the classic experiment of M. Calliaux was doomed. It was no longer a question of absorbing the floating debt, but had become a matter of running after the holders of national bonds who were demanding that they should be redeemed.—Paris Action Française.

Jack Hobbs Cartoon Vexes Moslems

HINDU AND ANGLO-INDIAN PAPERS SAVE TROUBLE BY IGNORING MATTER.

When Jack Hobbs made his hundredth century at cricket, establishing an astounding world record, the cartoonist of the London Star included the great cricketer in his "gallery of the most important celebrities"—along with Mohammed.

This was like fire to the tender susceptibilities of the caliphists, reactionary pan-Islamists to the core, whose agitations at all times cause much trouble to the Liberal Moslems led by the Aga Khan.

In the "gallery" portraits of Charles Chaplin, Lloyd George, Moses, and Abraham had appeared without causing particular trouble at least not in Islam, but the linking of the prophet with a professional cricketer indeed upset the faithful.

They have held protest meetings, rallied in the press and on many platforms against the ill-mannered editor of the Star, and passed resolutions calling upon the Imperial Government to give him such an "ear-twisting" that no other British editor ever will dare risk offending Moslem religious sentiments.

Star Publishes Apology.

The Star cartoon which aroused Indian Moslem anger was published August 18, when Jack Hobbs established his cricket batting record. The cartoonist depicted a sort of hall of fame with a gigantic figure of Hobbs towering over pigmy-like representatives of Adam, Mohammed, Caesar, Lloyd George and Charlie Chaplin. The cartoon was entitled "The Star".

A few days later the Colonial Office told the Star London Moslems were deeply incensed at what they regarded as an insult to their prophet. The Star immediately published an apology stating no offense was intended.

Epstein Scoffs at Trafalgar Square and Monument

LONDON—Jacob Epstein, the American sculptor, in an interview, makes a spirited reply to critics of his design for Rima in the Hudson Memorial at Hyde Park.

"The agitation about the Hudson Memorial," he says, as reported in the "Teacher's World," "rose to a froth of stupid abuse such as I have never experienced before.

"My memorial to Hudson," Mr. Epstein adds, "was defended by artists of importance, like Muthhead Bone, the writer; Cunningham Gramme, the editor; and Sir John Lavery, who proposed me for election in the Academy.

"Of course, the Academy meant nothing to me, but it was a gesture on the part of Lavery, and as such it was generous and fine."

Pointing out that he did not wish to interpret Hudson as an illustration of "Green Mansions" would, Mr. Epstein proceeds:—

"I started with the conception of Rima as a half-wild creature, living in the woods with birds and animals. "Then I had to think how to get this poetic idea expressed within the limitations of my material, the stone, the size of the panel, the shape, and the architectural surroundings. I had to make a decorative thing which would represent movement, flight.

"I wished to have the whole thing moving, in stone. It would have been absurd to come to my job with an idea of illustrating the book."

Discussing London statues, Mr. Epstein says that there are hardly any good ones, and adds:—

"Look at that fearful concoction in front of Buckingham Palace. "And look at Trafalgar Square—what an unholy mess! It is about the worst square in the world. Think of that silly column in the middle, carrying a puny little figure of Nelson, which is out of all proportion and cannot be seen. But the whole square is a chaos."

"He made an exception, however, of the statue of General Gordon, which he described as 'a good, sober piece of work.'"

Ape's Adventure

ORANG-OUTANG WAS PASSENGER IN AIRPLANE.

An orang-outang, travelling with an ordinary ticket, was one of the passengers in a Fokker monoplane, belonging to the Royal Dutch Air Service, which arrived at Croydon from Amsterdam.

The ape, which was travelling to an animal funder in London, was given a passenger's ticket at Amsterdam. In the space reserved for the passenger's name was written "Orang-outang."

The animal was not ill during the flight, although out of consideration for the feelings of the six human passengers he was placed in the luggage compartment. His journey was evidenced by the whistling of parrots which were also carried on this plane with a curious cargo.

Congregational Church Sale of Work

A SPLENDID SUCCESS.
The sale of work and concert, by the Congregational Church ladies, and held in the basement of the Church, yesterday afternoon and last night, was largely attended and proved to be a marked success, both financially and otherwise.
Capt. George Whiteley declared the Sale open at 3:15 p.m. and in doing so, it was a happy moment for him to make a brief address in which he eulogized the work of the Ladies' Aid, and concluded by wishing them even greater success in the future.
The stalls were plentifully supplied with fancy work, plain work, home cooking, vegetables, candy, etc., while the usual grab-bag offered great pleasure for the children, who were present in large numbers. Sales were brisk throughout and, as the evening progressed, very little was left undisplayed. The afternoon teas, which commenced at 6 o'clock, and the most successful of the day, were patronized and a goodly sum was realized from this one alone. A very enjoyable concert took place at night, the Pastor of the Church presiding. Amongst those who contributed to pleasing hymns were: French Horn Solo, Mr. A. Bulley; Solo, Miss Ruth Calvert; Mandolin Solo, Miss Hynes; Imitation Cornet Solo, Mr. P. H. Cowan; Piano Solo, Miss Mary Mealey; A.T.C.L. Solo, Miss Curtin; Recitation, Rev. D. H. Nichol; Misses P. Barnes and E. Sharpe acted as organists. The entire Sale was most successful and a substantial amount was realized. The Ladies' Aid Society feels grateful to all who helped towards the day's success.

The Film You've Waited to See, Now Here

EDMUND LOYE IN "BARBARA FRIETZCHE" AT THE NICKEL

Picturing a story that never grows old—one that is immeasurably richer in romance, dramatic values and other desirable qualifications than the great majority of modern stories written directly for the movies—"Barbara Fritzie" which opens to-night at the Nickel Theatre is entertainment not to be overlooked by the jaded picture-goer. It strikes a different note in photoplay "styles" so courageously that is undoubtedly destined to be one of the most talked of productions of the season.

One might expect to see in "Barbara Fritzie" a great deal of the Civil War fought all over again, with the spectacle of marching men and flashing muskets leaving but slight footage for anything else. But such is not the case. The real emphasis, however, is placed on the story of Barbara Fritzie herself, and her remarkable love for Captain Will Trumbull of the enemy forces, that meant more to her than North, South, family or even life itself. And this inspiring romance, in its transference to the screen, has lost not one little bit of its tremendous appeal.

Florence Vidor, as the lovable "Barbara Fritzie" of '62, is deserving of all the compliments that may be paid her. For no more sincere, life-like and convincing silver-sheet study has ever been enacted by this talented favorite.

Likewise, Edmund Loye creates a tremendously forceful impression in the role of the sweetheart soldier, "Captain Will Trumbull."

"You've seen Syd Chaplin as Charles's brother and as 'Charley's Aunt.' Soon you will see him as 'The Man On the Box,' the big super-special now running in New York and will run simultaneously in St. John's at the Nickel Theatre. Watch and wait for this truly great photoplay. We'll tell you more about it next week.

"Two heads are better than one," so vote for FANNIE McNEIL and MAY KENNEDY.

Earldom and Land Claimed by Retired Tutor

COUNTESS FIGHTS HIS CLAIM.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—A legal dispute with all the romantic trappings of the movies is being laid before a British court to determine the possession of one of Scotland's oldest peerages, and, incidentally, ownership of the 300,000 acres of land that go with the title.

The plot revolves around a marriage ceremony 75 years ago aboard a storm tossed sloop off the Scotch coast, and, whether or not a son was born to the bride a few hours after the vows were given.

Alexander Grant, tells the story of the wedding. He is an aged, retired tutor. He claims the Earldom of Seafield as his birthright, for he says that he was the child born that stormy night in 1850. The 19-year-old Countess of Seafield, who holds the peerage in the absence of a male heir to her father, the eleventh Earl, is the defendant in the suit brought by Grant.

There is no doubt that the Hon. Caroline Stuart, daughter of the eleventh Baron Blantyre, and John Charles Grant Ogilvie, Viscount Reithaven, and afterward seventh Earl of Seafield, were married, publicly in London in 1850. It was a society event of that year. But Grant claims that there was a previous marriage between the couple and this is his story of it:

The Hon. Caroline and Viscount Reithaven met in Scotland in 1845 or 1846. They fell in love. Finally Caroline set sail secretly on a little sailing vessel from the River Clyde en route to Cullen Head, near the Seafield state where the Viscount, as the Earl's heir, was living. The viscount was aboard, as were several other titled persons.

Such a storm as is dear to novelists was described. The sloop was unable to make Cullen Harbor. So urgent was the state of affairs that Caroline and the Viscount went through the form of marriage by verbal declaration, accepted as legal in Scotland—a mere statement that they took each other in marriage.

The sloop managed to anchor at Balf, Caroline and the other women passengers were carried ashore on the backs of seamen, and Caroline was taken to a cottage nearby. That night she gave birth to a son.

One week later the son was turned over to Mrs. Annie Grant, wife of a gardener at Gordon Castle. From ample funds placed at her disposal she educated the boy at private schools and Aberdeen University.

This is Grant's story.

It is denied without reservation by the youthful Countess.

Now, the courts must decide whether Grant, formerly a tutor in army and public schools, or the Countess is the rightful possessor of the title—and the 300,000 odd acres.

Once tried always used is true of "Perfect" Baking Powder.

"Big Bertha's" Nest Finally Scrapped

ALLIED COMMISSION ORDERS DESTRUCTION OF KRUPP'S MYSTERY SHOP.

COLOGNE, Germany.—(A.P.)—"Big Bertha's" nest at Krupp's, where the famous gun was hatched for its task of shooting up Paris, has been destroyed under the direction of the Allied Military Commission of Control.

In war days there were seven "Big Berthas" but only three of these were used, all being blown to splinters by the Germans after the armistice to prevent the secret of their manufacture becoming known to the Allies. Now "Shop No. 10" at Krupp's, known as the "mystery house," has been dismantled and every scrap of machinery used for creation of the "Big Berthas" has found its way into the melting pot. Until recently "Shop No. 10" had more than 200 machines, some of the largest of their kind in the world, among them being the 45 metres long boring machines, which rifled the barrels of the guns which bombarded Paris.

The Magic of Statistics Sees Population Jump for London

Lord Ashfield Estimates 1950 Census Will Reveal 11,000,000 Residents.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—In estimates of Lord Ashfield, submitted to the directors of the underground railways, Greater London in 1950 will have a population of 11,000,000.

Lord Ashfield said that London in 1900 had grown now to 7,500,000. Twenty-five years ago on an average, each man, woman and child travelled 158 times a year—now they were travelling 460 times a year.

Passengers carried by the three principal forms of transport in London—the underground, tramways and omnibuses—totalled about 820,000,000 twenty-five years ago, while this year the total would be more than 3,500,000,000.

ETHELIND TERRY, playing with Eddie Cantor in Ziegfeld's Musical Comedy, "Kid Boots," writes:

"Women of the Latin countries, whose hair is seldom fluffy, are many of them able to wear their hair severely smooth and shining, but American women could never have adopted this charming fashion so generally if that remarkable cream, Glacomb, had not been introduced."

Fighting a Crocodile

Maloo, a young native boy, was bathing in Mahi, in Western India, when a crocodile seized him by the leg and dragged him down. Crocodiles are so strong that they have even vanquished elephants in a fight, but Maloo did not lose his presence of mind. He knew that crocodiles cannot stand pressure on the windpipe, and he managed to swing his right arm round his neck and press till the animal came limp. He dragged it to shallow water, and there made it let go. Then he kicked it hard, and ran up the bank.

No such escape has been known before; it is a capital example of the value of any odd bit of knowledge.

Woman Yawns Once Too Often

The mild weather was the cause of a strange mishap to a woman in the United States. She found it so envying that she kept yawning.

She did it once too often, and before she could close her mouth her jaw became dislocated, and she had to go into a London hospital where a minor operation soon put things right.

Irish Trouble is Expected to Pass

NO REAL CLASH.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The first rumblings of the local thunder that will be heard when the Royal Commission reports on the Ulster boundary question are beginning to disturb the tranquillity of many interested persons. It is insisted in both Dublin and Belfast that there is no likelihood of any real clash in spite of the recrudescence of Republican outbreaks in the Free State.

In Londonderry, Nationalists fearing that the report may be true that they are to remain in Ulster, are already protesting against the ignoring and flouting of the wishes of the inhabitants, while Senator McLaughlin in the Free State Senate yesterday wanted to know what steps were being taken to ascertain the wishes of the inhabitants in disputed territory, for it is alleged he said that the "old Die Hard game of treachery is afoot."

Dublin and Belfast are both full of the strangest reports about the findings of the Commission. The Free State has already found it necessary to deny the ridiculous report that they were ready to take over 20 post offices in as many towns on the border. As a matter of fact there are not 20 such towns. So that the denial is hardly needed but until the report is actually made public these rumors are going to agitate the population. It is obvious, however, that neither side wants any trouble and the shrewdest observers in Belfast and Dublin, while admitting that a storm is brewing, think it will pass quickly.

Meanwhile Bishop Wakefield of Birmingham is urging that the Prince of Wales should go to both Belfast and Dublin, for he believes in the good that would be done by his personal visit. "I believe that the Free State would respond to his splendid longing to see what should be the jewel of the Imperial Commonwealth."

Why Ratepayers Should Vote

There is a great opportunity for boards of trade and similar public organizations throughout the country to perform a valuable community service in directing the attention of the municipal ratepayers to the importance of exercising their votes. The resolution passed by the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce at the Kingston convention recently urging the member bodies to make a determined effort in conjunction with other local organizations, to have a larger vote polled in municipal elections, so that public interests in civic affairs may be stimulated and good men encouraged to offer themselves for election is very much to the point.

It has been estimated that more than $200,000,000 of the $600,000,000 taxes being collected annually in Canada is for municipal expenses. The boards of trade can render much better service in arousing the people to the importance of exercising their right to control these expenditures and seeing that the various municipal funds and departments are efficiently administered through putting good candidates in the field and supporting them.

They should also use their influence to discourage those campaigns for mental improvement which appeal to the pride of the community but which are very often beyond its means.

It is becoming trite to say that the ratepayers of a municipality are in effect the shareholders of a public service corporation, but there is no more apt way of putting the situation.

Not Bright Enough for His Business

A wetland white-wing took his toy to the president of a large bank and said, "I was not to start my boy in the banking business, first as an office boy, next as messenger and on up the ladder as book-keeper, teller, cashier and so on, up to president."

"The executive, not very much impressed with the lad, answered, "That's a good idea, but why not start him in your own line, first as a sweeper, then driver, foreman, superintendent and onto the Street Commission."

"Well," replied the old man, "I'd thought of that, but you see, the boy's not right-bright."

Expenditure Going Up

There is some cause for concern on an examination of the other side of the national accounts, which reveals a heavy increase in expenditure, says Lloyd's Bank Monthly. "The expenditure for the year to March 31, 1925, was $795,777,800, an increase of over six millions upon the final estimates for that year. For the current year the Chancellor budgeted for an expenditure of $795,469,000. The actual

Salmon Pack of B.C. Sold at Rising Prices

GOSSE-MILLERD AND OTHERS ASSOCIATED SMALLER PLANTS.

Directors of B.C. Fishing are expected to meet in the very near future to take dividend action. The company has had an excellent year and sold its large 1925 stock before it was ready for the market.

B.C.'s pack this year will total 1,500,000 cases, which is slightly under the 1924 total of 1,745,313 cases. At the time this estimate was made only cohoes and chums remained and this will be finished this month.

Some Disappointments.

Naas and Skeena Rivers produced a smaller pack of sockeye than was expected, but the shortage was more than made up for by the unusually large run in Rivers Inlet and Smiths Inlet district. The catch of pinks in the northern districts was unsatisfactory despite the large amount of gear in the water. The pink run on the Fraser River was also disappointing, less than 100,000 cases being packed in that area. The odd numbered years are the large years for pinks on the Fraser River and a pack double the size of that put up was expected. The short pack was not due to a failure in the run but due rather to the intensive fishing on Puget Sound (through which the fish have to pass on their way to the Fraser River to spawn). The schools of fish escaping the traps on the American side were broken up at the boundary by large numbers of American seine boats and few escaped to the Fraser River. While the Fraser River packers ended the season with approximately 90,000 cases of pinks, American packers in Puget Sound put up approximately 550,000 cases.

The market condition has, however, been a source of satisfaction to the packers. The 1924 pack did not go well, but this year the United Kingdom, which is the largest buyer of Canadian salmon in normal times, has come back to sock-eye salmon for its first-class labels after a trial of Siberian salmon. The Canadian-Australian treaty, which affords a preference of $1.50 per case on Canadian salmon, also helped to stiffen the market and brought the price of sock-eye up to a point where some profit could be made. Unfortunately for the packers the greater portion of the pack of sockeye was sold before the high prices were reached, but the average price of around $14 per case for sockeye represented an improvement over the $12.50 price reigning in 1924. With the exception of coho salmon, which rose somewhat, the other grades of salmon were unchanged as far as prices are concerned. Up to the end of September approximately 590,000 cases of this year's pack had been shipped.

The trend towards consolidation among the packers continues. Canadian Fishing Co. has purchased the three Kildala plants and now operates eight canneries. Northern B.C. Fisheries, Kimsquit Canneries was taken over by Gosse-Millard Co. which has 8 plants and to-day six concerns are operating two-thirds of the B.C. canneries.

INDIAN SUMMER.

Sometimes when loud the laughter rings
And love and mirth light every glance,
A dainty, old grandmother springs
Upon the floor to share the dance;
Lifting her petticoats she shows
That once she tripped on nimble toes,
While all her children's children see
How beautiful she used to be.

Or strangely in an old man's eyes
A twinkling flashes now and then
Which causes him to rise
To show his skill to younger men;
A ring is made, and small and big
Applaud while Grandpa does a jig,
Giving a brave, but brief display
Of splendor that has passed away!

Thus in the proper time and place
Age oft relieves its earlier days,
Youth comes once more to light the face,
And set the tired-old eyes ablaze.
A brave brief spell of joy is sung
From one who is no longer young.
An old man lifts upon the mat,
And Indian summer seems like that!

Scientists Tell of Oddities of Colors

It would be an awkward world without color if all things were like bubbles and all creatures like soap-bubbles, what endless collisions there would be! No doubt we should avoid one another like electric charges of the same sign—positive or negative; but what of those of different signs that would be mutually attracted? It would be a world of blind experimentation—think of a football match or a railway station, even if all had eyes. Sheets of ice leading to glass houses inhabited by transparent men and women feeding on limped food! In the course of time a diamond statue would be erected to the investigator who succeeded in making soap. It is not altogether easy to get a clear view of the difference between coloration and pigmentation. A soap-bubble may show all the colors of the rainbow, and yet there is no pigment—nothing but a transparent film of soapy water.

White a Blend of All.
On the other hand, writes Prof. J. Arthur Thomson in T.P.'s Weekly, some lower animals have blood that seems colorless to ordinary inspection, though it contains an abundance of oxygen-capturing pigment. There may be color without pigment, as in higher - of - pearl, which becomes chalky powder when pounded up; and there may be pigment without color. It often happens that the color of a pigmented body, like a peacock's feather or a butterfly's wing, is not wholly due to the pigment, but to the physical structure as well. Thus the familiar peacock's feather shows blue and green color, though there is no trace of blue or green pigment. From a source of energy like the sun there is a ceaseless outpouring of radiations into space in the form of waves of varying length from crest to crest. Some of these waves are short, like those of the X-rays, and some are very long, like those of radio waves, but there is only a small section of them that we can see. Of these the longest are those which we call violet, while the shortest are red, at the other end of the spectrum, so familiar to us in the rainbow. A blend of all the rays from violet to red is the white light of a sunny day.

Complementary Colors.

If we write down the colors in two parallel columns:—

VIOLET GREEN
INDIGO YELLOW
BLUE ORANGE
GREEN RED

the pairs grouped together in this arrangement are called "complementary colors." For if by some process of filtering we subtract from the complete white light (one hundred per cent) the balance will be disturbed and the light will appear of the color opposite or complementary to that which we have removed. Thus if we remove red, the light will appear green. Such filtering as we have spoken of may be effected in various ways. Thus, if the white light falls on a sheet of copper, most of the light is absorbed, but in particular is reflected. Then a sheet of the ruddy glow of the copper. But if the sheet of copper is thin enough so that the light can pass through, then the red is absorbed and the filtered light appears green.

Whiteness.

When a body has a highly polished surface, yet not transparent, it reflects, or is made up of numerous minute crystals with entangled air between them, so that the complete reflection of light, and we say that the body is of the quality of whiteness. Thus snow is white, and the snow on a saucer may be white, and the snow very white, and the waterfall is white. The hair of the ormine and the feathers of the partridge are white because of the reflection of the light from the numerous vacuoles among the cells. In the summer dress of these creatures the place of the bubbles is occupied by minute pigmented particles. If we press snow very firmly, we drive out the entangled air and the snow approaches transparent ice. Similarly, if we squeeze out the air from between the cells of the petals of the white narcissus, we make the petals foam transparent.

Pigment.

When the absorption or reflection of certain parts of the visible spectrum is due to some chemical property of the molecule of a substance occurring naturally in plants or animals, we use the term "pigment." But it is a deep and difficult problem to dissect the pigmentary color with chemical structure. When the interference with the white light is due to physical state of the body, as when there is a finely grained surface, a reflection of the light at two different levels, as in mother-of-pearl. But most of all is the combination of the physical and the chemical now so near that it is to say, of structural pigmentary coloration, as in butterfly's and peacock's feather.

THEFTORD, Eng.—With 4,000 partridges and pheasants falling before the King and several other titled guns, the first of His Majesty's three days' hunting over the preserves of Lord Iveagh, was not so bad. From the well stocked covers the birds rose well and the King had a large proportion of the bag to his credit. It is customary to donate most of such kills to hospitals and charitable institutions.

The King left London to visit the Earl of Iveagh, who, notwithstanding his 78 years is an enthusiastic hunter and provides all the luxuries for his guests. His preserves cover thousands of acres of land. Among the other sportsmen who took part in the hunt were the Earl of Albemarle and Lord Claude Hamilton.

China's Tariffs

POWERS CONCEDE HER CLAIM TO AUTONOMY.

PEKING, Nov. 4.—The Powers represented at the conference here on the proposal that there should be autonomy for the Chinese Customs tariff have agreed that this claim should be conceded under certain conditions.

The Japanese and American delegates supported the claim, and the representatives of the other Powers expressed the desire to meet China's wishes generously.

Proposed 2 1/2 p.c. Surtax.
The proposals put forward by the American delegation included the following:

The Powers shall authorize the levying of a surtax of 2 1/2 p.c. on all goods from February 1, 1926, and a schedule of luxuries shall be prepared on which a tax of 5 per cent. shall be effective not later than July 1, 1926.

Provisions shall be made for the levying of the full amount of these surtaxes at the land frontiers, and a new treaty drawn up which shall provide that three months after the treaty is concluded the Chinese Government, until tariff autonomy has become effective, shall be at liberty to impose a new, uniformly enforced schedule of duties at rates from 5 to 15 1/2 per cent. on imports, and 5 to 7 1/2 per cent. on exports.

Likin (provincial transit duty) and related internal taxes shall be abolished.

Subject to the fulfilment of the provisions, the present treaty restrictions shall cease and a national tariff shall come into force on January 1, 1929. It proposed by a majority of the contracting Powers before January 1, 1928, a conference of the Powers shall be convened on May 1, 1928, to decide whether "Hikin" has been abolished and for the purpose of negotiating any further agreements that may be needed.

Natives Refuse to Surrender Liquor

Object to Mandate Powers Imposing Prohibition on Them.

GENEVA, Nov. 18.—Prohibition has gone on the rocks of self-determination and equal rights in many of the mandate areas parcelled out by the League of Nations to the various colonial powers. The fond hope of dry advocates that the educational process under way among the native populations would succeed in inculcating the principles of abstemious living are doomed to disappointment.

"We want our liquor," is the sentiment expressed by native voices from all parts of the globe. It really is not liquor that is so much desired as equality, or the privilege at least of self-determination with regard to beverages.

For a mandatory power to impose on the natives of the various mandate areas a prohibition regime while the power itself permits the sale and consumption of liquor back home is discrimination scarcely in harmony, the natives believe, with the high principles of equality upon which the mandates were to have been administered.

The most emphatic protests of this sort have come from the populations of the Pacific islands under Australian or New Zealand mandates. The same sentiment, however, is almost universally found elsewhere. As a consequence the Permanent Mandates Committee of the League has been obliged to adopt a system of control in place of prohibition. The control becomes less severe in direct ratio to the advancement of the particular mandate population.

The American "Fat Boy"

There is a curious absence of humour and also of dignity in the attitude of some responsible Americans towards the British rubber industry in public utterances are correctly noted. Not for the first time, we find Mr. Herbert Hoover, United States Secretary of Commerce, enjoining the fat boy in an endeavour to make our flesh creep. This time it is in a speech at the Erie Chamber of Commerce, in which Mr. Hoover is alleged to have said that the policy of foreign gains in aiding combinations which control the production and prices of several essential commodities must eventually cause the United States to retaliate. British rubber and Brazilian coffee were specially cited, but silk, nitrates, potash, quinine, iodine, tin and other commodities apparently also come under the ban. The development of such policies will, it is said, affect economic and political relations, and create "malignant currents of international ill-will." The suggested retaliation can apparently take the form of restriction of credits to countries controlling commodities, which would mean a trade war, or the revision of anti-trust legislation to permit of combinations of buyers in self-defence.

Let us hope we still retain a sense of humour on this side of the Atlantic. Does Mr. Hoover know that no combination of rubber-growers exists? On the contrary, it has often been a complaint that while buyers of rubber often acted as if they were, let us say, organized, rubber growers have often competed with each other in selling. Is Mr. Hoover aware of his own country's high protective tariffs? "Malignant currents of ill-will" would certainly be deplorable, but hardly seem justified by the fact that certain American manufacturers, through their own miscalculation, have for once got the worst of a purely commercial bargain.—Truith.

INTERESTING VIEW OF HIS MAJESTY'S OLDEST COLONY.

(By EDITH M. LUKE)

Surely the sky was never as blue as the waters as calm and placid before! So said my companion as we sat on the deck of the ship, watching the sun set over the bay.

Half a day at Quebec City, where we renewed acquaintance with points of interest familiar in other years, and visited comparatively new places, including the splendid Earl Grey Terrace and Battledards Park. We were also taken to the Church of the Perpetual Adoration, where the nuns are in constant prayer before the altar, day and night, year by year. There they kneel, draped in white, and receiving each other at intervals of an hour by day and half an hour at night.

We stopped half a day at Gaspe, and a couple of hours at Ste. Anne des Monts, besides anchoring in the stream at Cap Chat and other points, for the discharge of cargo, including, as the purser laughingly said, "everything from a needle to an anchor." Wonderful to think that we had twenty-five cargoes of freight in our hold, and that these dear little French villages, cut off from us during winter, were eagerly awaiting our arrival to bring them their needed supplies.

The Charismatic Demoselles. There was a charming little French girl in my cabin who was bound for Grande Vallee and who had been up in Montreal visiting her elder brother, a chemist. She told me in her naive, girlish way, all about the death of her mother, and how she had since kept house for her father and helped him bring up the younger children.

"Jal perda ma chere, il ya cinq ans et depuis ce temps, j'essais au meilleur de ma connaissance de s'occuper mes petites soeurs et mes petits freres. Il arrive des fois que j'est tres difficile de jal beaucoup d'ouvrage, mais je fais tout mon possible et mon pere est tres content de moi. Il m'appelle 'la petite mere'."

The boat reached Grande Vallee before daybreak and mademoiselle tripped gaily down the gangway to resume her arduous duties.

One night on deck, when we were admiring the silhouette of the mountains against the blue vault of the heavens, an elderly French gentleman standing near me, remarked quite simply on God's great love of the beautiful, as evidenced in the graceful curves of the mountains, the ruggedness of the rocks, the softness of the snow, and the loveliness of flowers and the beauty of waving grain. I had just been reading Edna Ferber's book, "So Big," and I thought of Solina's admiration of cabbage. The French gentleman said quietly and reverently: "Le bon Dieu a fait toute la nature d'une main experte. Il aime bien la beaute. Nous en avons l'evidence dans tout l'univers."

And now we were in that great gulf across which Jacques Cartier, the Cabots, Champlain, La Salle and Maison-neuve sailed—it must have been with eyes of wonder and awe—in the early days. Across which our men sailed from Valcartier, and over whose waters ocean liners plough their proud pathway eastward and westward in ever-increasing numbers.

About four o'clock in the afternoon of that perfect day, some one shouted, "Land on the right," and through our glasses we sighted the distant green promontories of the beautiful Bay of Islands on the west coast of Newfoundland—that land I had so often longed to see.

Now, first we must get the pronunciation right—the Librarian at the House of Assembly, St. John's, implored me not to say Newfoundland, with the accent on the second syllable. Equally, she scorned the commoner pronunciation, Newfoundland, accenting the first and shortening the second and third syllables, which is the easiest and most general way of saying it. She begged me to say New-Found-Land, with equal accent on all three syllables, just as Cabot must have shouted it, when he sighted Signal Hill in 1497.

Perhaps three hours after sighting land in the far distance, we passed in to the great Bay of Islands, with its lowering promontories on either side, bidding us a majestic welcome. Oh, to be a better geologist and know the life and history of those giants! Will any one agree with me in a tentative belief that the Father intends us to conquer all knowledge at some time—that is, to know all the parts of this great universe. That might involve going from sphere to sphere! One shrills at the glorious adventure of it!

And now the Nayarit docked at Corner Brook, one of the most interesting places in the wide world; here, over night,—that is, in the space of two short years, a thriving town of three thousand inhabitants, has sprung into being. Two years ago the Newfoundland Power and Paper Company was incorporated by act of parliament, since which time, the sum of thirty million dollars has been spent erecting the vast pulp mills, building commodious houses, for the men and their families connected with the mills, laying out streets, putting in sewers, arranging an adequate water supply and an electric light plant. The company has built an attractive staff hotel, Glymill Inn, that would do credit to any small city. They have also erected and equipped a modern hospital, where I met some splendid-looking nurses and doctors. One of the latter being much interested in the blind broom-makers at the near-by town of Carling, which I visited later. He said that these poor fellows have nothing whatever to read when they finish their day's work, and I promised to see Mr. P. E. Layton of the Montreal Association for the Blind, to arrange for books in Braille to be sent to Carling.

Some idea of the immensity of the undertaking at Corner Brook may be gleaned from the fact that the British Government subscribed eight million dollars for construction work, and the bonds of the company are guaranteed by the British Government and Newfoundland Government jointly.

The great firm of Armstrong Whitworth, of London, supplied all the machinery and they control fifty-one per cent. of the stock, a large part of the balance being controlled by the Reids, who formerly operated the Newfoundland railway.

"It takes an hour and a half to walk through the things paper mills, and this much work in three shifts of eight hours each, so that the mills are continuously going, except on Sunday. The paper mill has a capacity of 400 tons of newspaper per day, and on the end of each huge roll of paper there is the head of a Newfoundland dog, chosen as the device of the company. A beautiful new boat, the Humber Arm, was in port while I was there, waiting to bear away the first cargo of paper, destined, I was told, for the Southern States. The annual supply of pulpwood is cut chiefly off the company's own woodlands, comprising 1,914,825 acres, half of which is on the Humber river watershed. During the cutting season over 2,000 men are employed harvesting the pulpwood.

The captain and purser of the Nayarit arranged a delightful picnic for us up the Humber river, the waters of which is almost as famous as the Saguenay which it somewhat resembles. A tablecloth was spread on the sandy beach and after lunch we explored the adjacent woods, to find how many of our Canadian wild flowers are native also of Newfoundland. I found on the banks of the Humber and elsewhere in Newfoundland, yellow, arrowweed, immortelles, meadow rue, gold daisies, juniper with red berry, briar roses, Joe Pyewood in great abundance, golden rod and beautiful elderberry. There seemed to be a scarcity of birds, but that may have been because I did not go far enough into their woodland haunts to find them.

No Government School System.

There is no government school system in Newfoundland, but there is an excellent system of church schools and colleges. Beside the Anglican church one finds an Anglican school, beside the Presbyterian church a Presbyterian school, and there are many Methodist schools and Roman Catholic schools and colleges. At one time the Catholics were as numerous as all the other denominations together, and they are still the largest single denomination.

Church union has taken place jointly with Canada, though the Newfoundlanders like to point out that the Ancient Colony is entirely a separate unit, and the corner stone of the British Empire. After their ancestral crash of 1864 they sent a deputation to Ottawa to arrange to join Confederation, but our government of that day did not like their terms and the great opportunity passed. A chemist at Corner Brook told me that one of the things they resent most is that a Canadian firm should get an agency for Canada and Newfoundland, thereby making it compulsory for the Newfoundland firm selling that product to pay two duties, the duty on the product entering Canada and the heavy duty on bringing it into Newfoundland.

Wherewithal Shall We Be Clothed. Nearly all the people in Corner Brook are comparatively young people, who have joined the great pulp company to better their fortunes. They come from Montreal, from Shawinigan, from different parts of Ontario and the Maritime Provinces. Mr. Meyerbergen, one of the leading men in the company, is a Belgian and, I was told, wore a title in his own land. He received me very kindly in his well-appointed office and told me about the preparations for the formal opening of the company's plant about the middle of August.

I spent the evening at the house of one of the officials and the young women present were dolefully wondering where they were going to get their frocks for winter. They had brought a good supply with them, but there is a duty of seventy-five per cent. on clothing entering Newfoundland and sixty per cent. duty on furniture. There is very little manufacturing, so the Government derives its revenue from levying a high duty.

At the same time I must say that at the dance at Glymill Inn I saw many pretty dresses and many pretty girls—it was a charming scene.

The Newfoundland silver is mined at Ottawa, and we make their government notes, that is, one- and two-

Otherwise the Canadian banking system prevails (since 1895), and one sees in St. John's, for instance, the Canadian Bank of Commerce, the Bank of Montreal, the Royal Bank of Canada, etc.

Stamps are made in Washington, something which I think, our government should seek to rectify, for we are branches of the British family and the trade should be kept within the Empire.

Before leaving the subject of the development of Corner Brook, I should say that the power for the great pulp plant is brought from Deer Lake and that the company has built a canal eight miles long and diverted the course of two rivers.

I did not see any maple, elm or linden in Newfoundland, but the country is thickly wooded with fir trees of all descriptions, which yield an almost exhaustless supply for the pulp mills.

As all the world knows, Lord Northcliffe founded a tremendous pulp plant in 1909 at Grand Falls in the interior, the company being known as the Anglo-Newfoundland Development Company, producing newsprint for all the Harmsworth papers in London. The paper in this case is shipped by the Exploits River to Notre Dame Bay, thence overseas.

To understand Newfoundland one must study the coastline. Here is an island, the tenth largest in the world, about one-fifth larger than Ireland, with a deeply indented coastline of over 6,000 miles. The Newfoundland does not say he came from this town or that, but "I am from Notre Dame Bay" or "I am from Conception Bay" or "My people are located in Placentia Bay." Looking at the map we find that we have Bay of Islands and Bay St. George on the West Coast; Fortune Bay and Placentia Bay on the South Coast; and Conception Bay, Trinity Bay and Notre Dame Bay on the East Coast. The fishing villages are located around these bays and the settlement in the interior is comparatively sparse, the whole great island having a population of only a quarter of a million.

The Newfoundlanders say, "down north," he turns to the left; and when we land on his shores from Canada, we have to set our watches forward an hour and a half, for Newfoundland is only 1,640 miles distant from Ireland and is the nearest point to the Old World on this side of the Atlantic.

Helping Baby to Think

All mothers will tell you that their babies are very wise. They abound in an instinctive wisdom, which being given to them naturally at birth, has as its main objective the obtaining of exactly what they want.

For this purpose in early days the lungs are employed frequently and fully, but gradually the little one begins to think and act for himself. It is sheer delight to all parents to watch this development, the stages of which can be marked by the baby's power to do certain things, and to puzzle out problems which, to the infant mind, are full of pitfalls.

Wise mothers will tell you that as soon as baby is born you can tell whether he is mentally perfect by pulling some small round object—say a ring—into the open palm. If baby immediately closes his chubby fingers tightly over the treasure—well, you have no further need to worry about the little one's mental powers; he is certain to be fully equipped in that respect.

Smiles and Tears. A really healthy baby should begin to take an intelligent interest in things when about six months old. At this age, if a watch is put to his ear, he will smile, and as soon as the "tick-tick" is taken away his sound lungs should come into play.

Between the sixth and ninth months baby should be found trying to lift little things for himself, and as the first anniversary of his birth comes round he should be able to lift quite heavy toys and other things, which were never intended to be toys at all, and quite easily. Also he should be beginning to reason for himself.

At this age a child will copy a parent who sounds a note on the piano, and will begin to see the connection between the striking of the note and the "noise" which follows.

Then, again, his little mind should now be able to tackle problems. He should be able to understand that, if one of his small toys is put inside a box in his presence, and the lid closed down, the treasure is not retrievable.

If the lid is not too heavy and does not stick, baby, after tinkering with it for a bit, during which time he is turning the problem over in his mind, should try to open it.

Learning to Talk. Now, of course, comes the most interesting of all periods in baby's growth. He learns to speak, and copies everything that is said, selecting, if possible, the longest word in any sentence to repeat. Baby's mind is still keeping astir of his development in other directions, and at eight months he should begin to point out and name animals and so on, pictures of which are shown him in books.

At this stage the child memory is continually coming into use, and every week you find that baby remem-

Little Jack Rabbit
by David Cory

"Do you think we shall have a cold winter?" asked Uncle Lucky, as Squirrel Nutcracker slipped a bag of nuts from his shoulder to the floor.
"Guesso, dunno, maybe," answered the old squirrel, with a wink. "But let the cold weather come. I have a big store of nuts hidden away. Mrs. Nutcracker and I always spend a comfortable winter in our cosy bungalow."
All of a sudden a loud knocking came at the front door. Gracious goodness meebus! exclaimed Uncle Lucky. "Another caller?"
"Sure enough, when Little Miss Mousie opened the door, there stood the Big Brown Bear, a big sack over his shoulder.
"Howdy, Little Mousie," he chuckled. "I've brought a few lollypops for Uncle Lucky. Where shall I set 'em?"

"In the kitchen, please," answered the careful little mouse housekeeper. "Then you may walk into the sitting room. Uncle Lucky's laid up with a sprained pinkie toe."
"Mighty sorry to hear that," said the Big Brown Bear. "I heard about his accident this morning. Thought a few lollypops might cheer him up," and into the sitting room he ambled to shake hands with the old gentleman rabbit.
But hardly had the good natured bear sat down than a light tapping came on the front door. "Goodness gracious meebus! It all Rabbitland calling on me?" laughed happy Uncle Lucky. The next minute Henny Jenny, a little basket on her arm, tripped lightly into the kitchen. "I thought dear Uncle Lucky would like a dozen fresh eggs. I only heard this morning that he had sprained his little pinkie toe."
"He's in the sitting room," smiled Little Miss Mousie. Such a sweet smile! And all because everybody was so good to dear Uncle Lucky.
Pretty soon another knock came on the door, and when Little Miss Mousie turned the knob, in walked Peter Pig with a box of big red apples. "Here's a small present from one who feels sorry for your pinkie toe," he grunted. "Thank you," laughed the happy old gentleman rabbit. "Don't feel too sorry, for little pinkie is getting better by the minute."

Just then somebody tapped on the window. "Ha, ha!" laughed Uncle Lucky. "I see the Yellow Dog Tramp's kind face. Let him in. He's welcome although he's not neat as a pin."
"Here's a bunch of asters," barked the good old dog. "They're the last of the season, I imagine. Found them in a sheltered spot. Jack Frost must have overlooked them."
"Dear, dear," cried Uncle Lucky. "How am I going to thank all you good friends for your kind gifts and thoughtfulness?"
"Sing us a song," suggested the Yellow Dog Tramp, who was fond of music, especially the songs of the wild birds in the weed.
"Oh, don't to-day when all my friends with thoughtful care bring gifts to me with me when I'm old and gray, a flower in my memory."
Then, seeing that dear Uncle Lucky was growing weary, everybody said goodby and left him to the tender care of Little Miss Mousie, his very watchful tiny housekeeper. And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

Household Notes

Fold the bedspread smoothly at the foot of the bed at night. This will keep it looking fresh.
Maple syrup added to confectioners' sugar until of consistency to spread is a delicious frosting.
Currant tarts covered with frosting and with chopped cocoanut over them provide a pretty dessert.
Never put cake into a very hot oven. Extreme heat forms a hard crust and the cake cannot rise.
Creamed asparagus on toast, with butter sauce, garnished with slices of hard-boiled egg, is a nice entree.
There is no good heat in a fire that is smothered with ashes. It is wasteful to keep a dirty fire.
Rubber-tipped tacks pushed one in each end of the wooden hangers prevent garments from slipping.
Pin a Turkish towel around the end of the ironing board. It is convenient when ironing embroidery.
A bath mitten made from a worn Turkish towel is a convenient form of wash rag to use when bathing baby.
Silver that is carefully washed in clean, soapy water and rinsed in boiling water will not need scouring so often.
An hour spent in the open each day will make the housekeeper very able to carry her cares with a joyous spirit.
One-half teaspoonful of baking soda dissolved in a glass of cold water will check a cold in the first stages.
Stewed chicken or meat should be started in cooking in boiling water, thus preventing the juices from being extracted.

The New Dictator of Persia

Reza Khan Pahlavi has been called the Mussolini of Persia. In an address he apparently overtook even the Italian dictator for he is said not to be content to remain as prime minister but to cherish hopes of founding a dynasty of his own to supplant that of the deposed shah.

Reza is the son of a peasant farmer and it is even now a debatable point as to whether the prime minister's academic achievements extend beyond the ability to write his own name.

His career he commenced as a private in a Russian Cossack regiment. Yet Reza Khan must have shown exceptional abilities since he rose continually in the esteem of his superiors and his comrades. That was the reason why he succeeded in keeping together a handful of men after the imperial Russia collapsed and his regiment was disbanded.

In February, 1921, Reza Khan, together with his soldiers, overthrew the government, appointed a prime minister, and selected himself as the minister of war of Persia. In October, 1922, he discarded the civilian habit and, with the aid of a second coup d'etat, assumed the premiership. Since that time he has been Persia's prime minister.

Reza Khan possesses much of that straightforward brutality which is the privilege of the incorrupt egotist. He is fighting for a centralized Persia because the expansive power of his falling ambition demands the widening of his field of action. It is only incidental that while he is satisfying his primitively savage hunger for power he accomplishes the unification of the unruly tribes in a single national entity.

Reza Khan has an army such as Persia has not had for a long time. It consists of 40,000 soldiers. Reza pays them regularly, feeds and clothes them, thereby assuring for himself their loyalty and fitness for military action.

His personal courage, which is extraordinary, has helped him in retaining his hold over the troops.

In 1921 the Khorassan tribe rebelled. Reza Khan went into the enemy's camp, killed their leader and crushed the rebellion.

After dispatching two other rebellious chiefs, Reza suppressed discontent among the Turkomans by turning loose upon them his regular army, equipped with tanks, flying machines, wireless stations and the other efficiency devices of modern military craft.

Mails by Radio Plane

A scheme has just been put before the French Government whereby letters and parcels can be delivered to certain centres throughout the country by pilotless aeroplanes, guided entirely by electricity and wireless.

These aeroplanes will take the form of cylinders to hold the mails, with blades on each side of them and automatic motors in the bow. The whole system will be controlled from a central tower.

The cylinders, driven by their engines, and guided from the wireless plant, will travel at a high speed, while their every movement is followed on a large, illuminated screen by the engineers in the tower. The mails will be stowed in separate compartments, according to their destination, and by operating a switchboard in the central tower the contents of each compartment can be released, with parachute attached, from the aeroplane in over the receiving station. No slackening of speed on the part of the cylinder will be necessary.

"Two heads are better than one" so vote for FANNIE McEIL and MAY KENNEDY. nov23.11

The Master's Finger

The base of every art expert's life is the picture-faker. Some of these ingenious gentlemen are extremely clever and have produced not only passable "Old Masters" but wonderful imitations of the work of living artists.

This is a most unsatisfactory state of affairs. But the French Ministry of the Arts, refusing to despair, appointed a Commission with instructions to evolve a system which would ensure that the buyer of a painting is what he paid for. This Commission has now made its report.

According to the Commission, only one thing is necessary to put the picture-faker out of business for good—least, so far as modern pictures are concerned. The artist must in future place his finger-prints on his pictures.

Finger-prints, of course, have been used by detectives for some time, but the idea of employing them in the world of art is a new one. It will be a little difference to the picture-faker, however. He has always the "Old Masters" to fall back on, and it will want to imitate the modern work can be painted by an artist capable of their own pictures, painted in the finger-print rule.
