TO THE

 Excellent M A J ESTY.

In $A D A M$, WOUR gracious Acceptance of my late Book, which I had the Honour to Dedicate to His Royal Highnefs, makes me prefume to lay This at Your Majefty's Feet.
The Difcoveries that have bcen fucceffively made of the Religions, Manners, Cuftoms, Politicks, and Natural Products of all Parts of the World, will bere give Your Majefty an agreeable and ufeful Entertainment: And, I'm fure, it will add to Your Satisfaction to fee, that they have been chiefly made by thofe of Your Own Nation. It hath been thought by fome a laudable Reafon for fending our Gentlemen Abroad, that they may the better learn to value their Native Country. And this I dare fay, That when either a Man hath actually travell'd the whole World over himfelf, or carefully confider'd the Accounts which thofe give us that have done fo, he will be abundantly convinced, that Our own Religion, Government and Conftitution is, in the Main, much preferable to any he flall meet with Abroad; And efpecially under the happy Influence of Your Majefty's Reign, whom Providence feems gracioufly to have defign'd to make us Great and Happy, even whether we will or no.

Your Majefty's Goodnefs to all Your Subjects, makes our Duty andLoyalty, by no means a Burthen, but a fubftantial Pleafure. Your Wifdom and penetrating Judgment difappoints all the Defigns of ${ }^{\text {the }}$ Enemies of Your Government, and nips them in the Bud. Your $\cdots$ and fleady Affection for the Eftablifh'd Church, damps all the Hopes of Faition and Fanaticifm; And Your entire Compliance in all Things with Our Laws and Conftitutions, Your Lenity, Love of, and Goodnefs to Your People, whofe Eafe and Happinefs You really ftudy much more than Your Own, fruftrates and blafts all the barbarous Contrivances of thofe, who would enflave Us to Arbitrary Power, French and Popih Tyranny: And who wou'd deprive Us of the greateft Bleffing We ever yet had, Your Majefty's'Sacred Perfon and Excellent Government! This,' Dread Sovereign, all the World fees, and jufily admires in Your Majefty: This makes Your Armies conquer Empires Abroad, and every One call You Bleffed, pray heartily to God for You, and blefs God for Iou, at Home.

And as thefe are Vertues, Madam, that can never lofe their juft Reward; fo I doubt not but Go d will give it $\Upsilon_{o u}$, in a great Meafure, bere; and make You the Glorious Inftrument of Settling the Peace and Liberty of Earope on a fafe and lafting Founidation.

The mighty Succefs Your juit Arms have obtain'd already, againit the Common Enemy, doth fairly foretell This.". And as I doubt not but This is the Univerfal Prayer of all true Engli/h Men; fo is it defired by none, with greater Zeal and Earneftnefs, than by,

- TO THE R EAD ER.

THough the Contents are very full and particular, yet I judge it may be fatisfactory to give yome Account of this Work in general.
The former of thefe $V$ olumes begins with the most early Difcoveries, and Settlements of Trade, and reaches down to the Year 1626, where Purchas ends bis Collection. But you will find bere a fuccinct Account, of the Books of very many other Authors, which are neither in Him nor Hackluit.

This Volume is divided into Five Books.
The First of which contains an Account of the feveral Circum-Navigations of the Globe, by Columbus, Ferd. Magellane, Sir Francis Drake, Mr. Tho Candifh, Oliver Noort, Sebald de Wert, George Spitbergen, William Cornelifon, Schooten of Horne, $\sigma^{\circ}$ c.

The Second Book gives you the firft Englifh Voyages to the EaftIndies, both before and after thp Settlement of the Eaft-India Company.

As alfo, the first $V$ oyages of the Dutch to thofe Parts, with their feveral Succeffes there, tilit their Pretenfons to a Property and Sovereignty at the Banda Iflands.

Tou will find here alfo; that the French, fnding the great Adzantage the Englifh and Dutch made of the Trade to the Eaft-Indies, fitted out Ships to come in for a Part with them: And here you have in particular the admirable Voyage of Monfieur Beauleu to the Eaft-Iindies, taken from the large Collections of Moufieur Thevenot: In which jou have a juft Account of the Englifh, Dutch and Portuguefe in that Part of the World, and on what Foundations and Principles each proceeded in their Pretences and Meafures. To which is added all the Difcoveries of the Spaniards, Portugals and Italians, relating to the Eaft-Indies; and the adjacent Countries.

The Third Book contains the best Defcriptions and Accounts of the feveral Parts of Africa, beginning with the Author called Leo-Africanus; and at the End of each Chapter, adding what Mormoll Bath further obferved. And to this is annex'd all that $M r$. George Sandys relates of Africk, of bis own Knowledge. You bave bere alfo the SubAtance of Ludolphus his excellent Hiftory of Athiopia, as alfo, Sir his Travels but in the Year in which Purchas ends his Collection, and was Thirty Years in compleating them. But then bis Exactnefs and Fidelity will. fufficiently atone for this, and you will find bim much more accurate, than thofe Writers in Purchas: Which yet, to illuftrate the Matter the more fully, we have put together with him.
Tho. Herbert's Travels thro' a good Part of this Country: The Marrow

The PREFACE.

In the Fourth Book you baze an Account of whatever is material in all the Voyages to Ruflia, and the Northern and North-Eaftern Parts: In the Beginning of which we bave beea much beholding to Hackluit, who bath been very exprefs and particular, with Regard to this Part of the World.

After this you bave all the Attempts to difcover a North-Eaft and North-W eft Paffage to the Eaft-Indies, in a continued Series of Time, from the firft to the laft; together with a Mapof the North Pole, Jeerwing how far, and which Way, each Perfon went; bow they return'd, or where they perinh'd: This ends with Capt. Wood's Voyage; and with it is connected all the Accounts of Greenland, and the adjacent. Northern Parts.

The Fifth Book contains the Dijcoveries of our own and all other Nations in.America: With an Account of the Settlement of our Plantations, Trade, &c. there: In which Book, as there is nothing at all omitted that is in Hackluit and Purchas, fo there is befdes above a Third part more added.

The Second Volume bath notbing out of Purchas and Hackluit; but is cntirely Now: Being taken from the beft of all the Modern Autbors extant, and is divided into Four Parts, according to the general Divifion of the World. The Account of the Appendix you bave in the Title Page, as allo of the Introduction; of wbich tberefore I Jhall fay nothing: Only I ought to advertife you, that in the Contents you mill find every Autbor's Name, and to what Part of the World be travell'd, \&c. And that the Index is So very large and compleat, that you may there readily find the $\mathcal{D}_{e}$ fcription of any Part of the World; or an Account of any Bird, Bealt, or Plant remarkable therein, that bath been defcrib'd by Travellers.

INTRODUCTION.

PART the Firft.

Of the Origination of Mankind, the Peopling of the World, and the Migration of Nations.

WHoever. will carefully and unprejudi- Eaftward of Fudea, or from the Defert of the Amocatcly confider, That chere hath in $r$ rites, where Mrfes was when he wrote this Account. all Ages, and amongft all Nations Perhaps the Name of Edcn might be derived from the been a conftant Tradition, Thar Pleafantnefs of the Place: Bur we read of the Placior Mankind had iss Original ex non Genitis, or from fome Country of Edcm in feveral Places of Scripture, as in firft Parents not begotten in the common way, bur im- 2 Kings 19. 12. Ifa.37.12. Ezek.27. 23. and this Eden mediarely creared by God himfelf. Whoever will obferve that the Increafe of Mankind daily exceeds the Decreafe, and that Nations ufually have doubled their People in about 360 Years, if not fooner: Whoever will enquire into the original Invention of Arts and Sciences, and Catisfy himfelf from Hiftory, as he may cafily do, that they all had their Kife witbin the compals of five or fix Thoufand Years: Whoever will judiciounly ornfult the Hiftory of the moft antient Times, and from thence obferve, that we have no authentick Accouns of any Tranfactions, Originals of Kingdoms, Wars, or Inftitutions of Laws, Governmentsand Commonwealths bcyond that Time; but that the Plantations of all known Rarts of the World, nay even the Original and Aforbeofes of the Heathen Deitys themfelver, fall all withinthar Pericd : Whoever, Ifay, will candidly confider there Evidences, muft conclude that we have all the moral Affurances politile, That theWorld nad a Beginning, and thar Mankind hadits firt Original about the Time we have fo particular an Accounc of in the Sacred Hittory of the Bible: : And confequently, abffracting from the Divine Authority of Mofes's Hifto ry, it cannor but be lookt upon as the moft valuable Picce of Anciquity extant in the World. For'ris plainly to him only that we are indebreid for our Knowledge of the Time and Manner of the Beginning of the World; of the firt Parcines of Matikind; of the Caure of the Fraity and Depraviry of:Human Nature, of the Inventors of Arts; the Original of. Nations, the firft Founders of Empires iand Kingdoms, and of the Inttitutions of Laws and Government. ? Which chings in al other autient Hiftories-are fo intermix'd with Fablesand ridiculous unaccicuntable. Stories, that all we can learn from them is, that they knew nothing of the marter, but what dhey flole from him defigaedly, or had conveycd :o them by immemorial-Tradition from him. The ambitious Pretences of almoft all Nations to Antiquity, and so the Vain glory of being ithorizines, hath occafioned their Hifforizas to intermingleth many Fables and Lics with the Accounts of their Origination, that there is hardly any heed to be given to whar they relate; int oughe they to merit our Belief any furcher than as chey arc collaterally confirmed by other Hiftories: But the Account which Mcfes gives us of the peopling of the Earth afterche Deluge by Noat's Children, is'to conformable to all the authenrick Records yer remaining in any 1 anguage, that is carries with it irrefibible Evidence; and irs Brevity and manmer of Relation is as admirable as its Truth and Jntelligence is valuable. For we have more Information from bim in one Chapter, than we can ger withour him from all the large Vo Inimes of ocher Authors:: Unlefs therefore Men will be fo ridienloully capricious, as to deny the Authority of an. Author, anly:becaufe he hath Divine Infpiration to fupporthim, the Hiftory which ihcfes gives us of the O riginal of Mankind and ubePeopling of theWorld, ougtir roclairn the greatef hare of our Vencration and Regred:
His Account of the Pcopling of the Earth before the Deluge, is defignedly flort, his Intention being only to re'ate the moft remarkable.Paffages, and to give an account of the Succefion of the Holy Line down no Noah, and thence to his owa Time was Eaftward of fudca: For in the Scripture the Inhabitants of Arabia, M-foporamia, and Perfin, are called the Children of the Eaft. This Eden was part of the Kingdom of $A / f y r i a$, as is plain from 2 Kings 19.12 and that Kingdom antiently contained, nor only the Country then called ABur, but alfo Mcfopotamia and Babylonia, &ec. in fome part of which laft Province the Bilhop of Ely thinks Paradice was fituated; though the generality of Auchors call the Region Mefopotamia.
Out of Eden Mofes tells us a River went, and from thence (i.e. below the Garden) was parred into two Heads. This River, according to the beft Accounts I can find, was a Conjunction of Euplorates and Tigris: For tho' thefe Rivers have different Springs, andirun a long way afunder, yet ar laft they meet in Apamis (as Ptolomy faith;) which Apnmin, Boobart \{aich, was the Place the Arabians now call Alcatfar, about 45 Miles rom Bagdat, and then run rogecher for a great way. This united Stream probably ran through the Country of Eden, and had the Garden of thar Name feated on the Eaft fide of ir; whore Southern End was at the parting again of the two Rivers; but how farir weot Eaftward, or fpread it felf along the River, 'ris hardly polfible to decermine.
This River, Mofes faith, became into four Heads: The judicious Commentator abovementioned well obferves he doth not fay, was parted, bar became into four Heads, that is, Streams:- For Sir Walter Ralcigh fhews, that fo all Divifions of a greatRiver are called. .. Which four Streams were, Tigris and Euphrates before they joined and Pifhon and Giloon afterwards. $\therefore$ Pifbon probably was the WefternRiver Paftigris, the fame with Oroatis," according to Salmafius; and fo tis drawn in the Maps of Sir Water Raleigy and the moft learncd Bochart: And this, as our Mr. Carver oblerves frem Xemplion, was called hmply Phyeus: and Bechert notes from Srrian. Pcripi harthere wasa Place called Piofrum lying near Euphraces; in all which Namesthere are fome Remains; of the Name Pidifon or Pijion. And Stecto rells us, thar from Comedeep Trenches, which were cur to carry the Water of Eufhratesinto Tigris, came the Name of Pafitiris. But be; this as it will, Mo/ess faith, that ebis.River campaffeditie iputele Lund of Havilah: In Ccn. Io. Mofes mentions two Heroilatis, one defended from Fofitan, -. 29. but this ceannot be the wirvilab here mentioned becaufe his Pofterity were planted. Eaffward: Bur the and gave rife toia more Weftern Pcople feared ronethat part-of Arcbia Felix which borders on this Stream. For we read $G \mathrm{ck} \cdot 25.18$. that the ifmaclites, which cerrainly were the Inhabitants of Arabia Dremer are bounded by Shar sowards $E_{5} y p$, and by Haciich in the way wo Affytia. And after this, i Sam. 15.7. we read that Saulfoupd Hnvitah in the fame Situation. And Bocharr, in his flbalig. 1ib. 4. c. XI col.225. Edit. AmplaLedt obferves from Stralio, that there were a People calJed Xeunorato, which were Inhabitants of drebia.
The next Stream Mofes calls:Gii:on, of which Name indeed there are hardly any Fcorfteps remaining; but by the Conntry it is faid to ersompass, oir mult be the Eaftern Divifion of the River after its parting at Eden. This Country he'calls Ebhipp.a, or Cufíj by. which we are to underitand, not that in Africe, bur in Afia (for the Antients mention two Erliopiris.) This Bocbart af ferts; and Steph. Morinuts; in his Treatife of Paradife, proves proves to be the Country of Sufiana, which the Grecks
c.lled Ki:Je, and the Peifinns at this cime call Churiffan or the Conatry of Cheres.
 which in Dan, 10. 4. is called the Grear Rivit, andi therefore mut be Tigrois: For Reuroolf: rells us in fis Travels, p.11. c.9. that in his time the River Tigris was called by the People of Caruch, on the Confines of Mcdir, Ifidf(kel. And Pliny faith, lib. 6. c. 27. that the Fi, ris is fo called from its Swiftnels; but that where it runs flower, tis called Diglirn, and ebe Arabians call it Dcglat and Dig in ; all which Words plainly are Cor tuptions of the Name Hiddchel. The Targun of Onkelos and Fonashan renders ic Dishat.
The fourth River, Emp'nitits, Mffor doth only barely mention, becaufe it was very well known to thofe to whom he wrote, and as that time. The Seat therefore of Paradife was thus placed: The Rivers Eupisctes and Tigcis (i. c. Hiddtkel) joined lomewhere in the antient Batiylonif, or, as fome call it, Mefipitamin, into one great Stream, on the Eaft fide of whole Banks the Garden of Eden was placed; at the Southward End of which the River parted again into two Streams, then called Pifin and Gihion; but in procefs of time Eiphiritras and Titris, as Ecfore their Conjunction, which Name we fint in the Greck and Reman Writers given to them. Mr.t.tiflom, in his New Theory of the Ennth, p . 104. fippofes the antient Paradife to be at the joint Courfe of the Rivers Tigra and Eupheres, cither before Ehey fall into the Pcefinn Gulph, where they now unite regether, and Eeperate again, for rather where they antiently divided themfelves, below the lland Ormus, where the Perfinn Galf, under the Tropick of Cancer, falls into the Per/finn Sea. So that the exact Place of Pa radice is now onder Water, being a Branch, or Bay, of the great Ocean: Whiat this Gentleman's Reafons are that induce him to be fo particular as to the Seat of - Paradice, the Reader will lee in his Ingenious Theory.

This fhort Account of the Situation of Paradile thought proper to give you here, becaufe 'tis a Geographical Matter, and therefore proper for this Place : and thio nodoube the. Site of thofe Rivers wasinuch changed by the Flood, yet tis likely Mofes deforibes them as they wire is his Tinte, and as fich they do nor difagree with the Accounts/ we have of thole Places from orher hands:

There is little more neceffary to be taken notice of here; of Matrefs tranfacted before the Deluge, unlefs the Mention of Cerin's going our from the Prefence of the lood into the L.and of Niod, on the Eafl of Eden; his drwelling there, and building a City, which he called after his Son's Name; Ennch. By which we may underftand, that Cim's Guile and Remorfe of Mind was to grear, that he could nurbear the View of thie Sche thimat, or Dithe Glory, the chen vifible Mark of Gou's Preferice, and which abonle probably in the Place where Idem fertled himfelf iafter his Expulfion our of Paracifes and therefore wandred away Eattward from Eden into 1 Country, that from his wandring up and down therc; lad the Name of Noid given ir, that is, the Lend of Titgabonds. This Place Funius thinks, was in that Tractof Land, where the firf Nomades afterward dweit (tuho perhaps took their Rambling way of living from this firf Vagabond Cain) and which he fuppoles was near Sufitur, or chureftan. Here, afier he:had moved up and down for a grear' while, rill his Progeny grew mumerous; he ar laft fetded, and built a City, and cat led in Erioch (as was inniently very ufual) after the Name of a Son he had thenbern After this Mctes meritiont only a few Paffages of Cain's Offspring': looking tapon them, as fonit of the Fathers fpeak': as fuch a wicked Generation of Men, as were not worthy to be numbred in the Book of the Living; whercas hegives a plasin Ac' count of the Geneaiogy of Seth (Addan's Son) down to the cime of the Dellge, and therice to his own Age,

As to all other Matters from hence to the Flood pas. how far che Earth was peopled by the Antediturvitns; in twhar Parts of the World they fettled; "whether they had any Ships or Boats, and what Travels or Vogages they made, we can advance nothing but meer Conjecture. and therefnre thall fay nothing of it; but proceed to confider the Peopling of the Earth after the Flood, by Noith'and his Family, the only Survivots ib chat Uriverfal Deiuge.
Of the Capacity, Form and Figure of the Ark, need fry noching, it having been fufficiently pro:ed omér anil över, that it was capable of holding all' thofe Creanites (and their Food) which were included in it inctim the time that the Waters of the Deluge coverd the farth, which was a whole Year: Only 'tis proper for my Purpofe to obferve, that "tis cxceeding probable the Ark did not move far from the Place where Noal buideic, but was only juf, as it. were, lifred up from ground by the advancing Waters, and then fex down again: Fofitits very grear Bulk tnd Chefolike Figare was very improper for Sailing; ante we read of no Olts Mafts or Sails chat it had to move ir, or Rudder to fteer it : And there was no Wind to drive it from Place to Place; for the Whd came not tillafter the Ark was fafe a. ground on the Mountains of Ararat, as is fairly concludable from the Tcxt. This being fo, and it being alOo probable, that tho' Cain's Progeny rambled abour the Earth, and fettled themfelves remote from the Seat of Adam, and his Pofterity of the Holy Line; yet 'tis very ikely that thefe, I fay, fixed themfelves fomewhere tica to and about Paradice, in the Province of Babylon, AIY iic, Mcfopctamia, &c. For there, as Bochart well oblerves, was the greateft Plenty of the Gopice Wood that is, Cyprefs, as our Fuller in his Mifcellanics hath, I think proved) of which God commanded. Noah to make the Ark: And here allo long after this, Arrichus tells us, 126.7. Alexander builc a Navy of Cyprefs Trees Wood.

Now we are told by Moles, that the Ark, fefted on the Mountains of Ararat, which now all Learned Writers do agree, fignifies thar long Ridg of Mountains which is now called Taurus, as it was by Pling, and runs hrough Atmenia, A/Jjria, Mefopotamia, Media, Stfiana *í. from Cilian to Parapomifus. On the highef and more Eattern part of this Trad of Hills did the Ark reft ; or, as Epiphanius calls chem, and Bochart from rim, the Gordi.cen Mcuntrins; which, as Thecdores.ot erves on Ifaiah 16. 13. were always reckoned the high eft in the World. Porcius Cato faith exprelly, thatrabout 290 Years before Ninus the Earth was drowned by a Deluge; and that Mankind was reftored again in Scythia Saga; which Country Sir Writer Raleigh faith is certainly under the Mountain Parapomifus. To the fame purpoles Dr. Heylin produces a Tradition of the Inhabi tants thereabouts, that near the Foot of Mount Cauca us there was a large Vineyard in Margiana, which was of 'Noath's planting. Mr. Whifon alfo, in his New Theo ry of the Earth, oblerves very juftly, that it being plain from Mofes's Text, and from the Nazure of the thing that the Ark refted on the higheft Hill of all Afia, nay indecd of the whole Earth (for the Water was: fifreex Cubits above the Tops of all the orher Mouritains, when the Ark was 2-ground on Mount Arcrat') Pitra pomifus (the annient Caucafus) muft be the Place where chie Ark refted, becaufe it is agreed, that that Hill was the higheft of all in Afia. Thefe Mountains ware not above 200 or 300 Miles from Eden, and probably abour half as fat from the Place where Noah built the Ark according to Bochart: And the Courfe of the Rains and the Rife of the Water coming from the Souch, might cafily and gencly drive the Ark fo far Northcrly, as to fer it down on the Top of thofe valt bigh Hills. And thar-it was the moft Eafterly part of thefe Mountains on which the Ark refted, feems plain from the Account which mofes gives us of the firft Removal after the Deluge, which he faith was from the Eiaff, into the Plains of Shinar, Gen.1.1.2. and alfo bccaufe we find by: all antient Hiftory, that tho we meet with none, or at leaft bur,very few Colonies lenr Eaftward after the Confufion of Tongues at Badis; yet, the Eafern Paros of the Earth have always been moft numerous, as well as moft polite and grear.

After the Waters were affuaged, and the Earth grew dry by degrees, no doube che Family of Nicab betean to rome down from the Mountains, and to difperfe themfelves into fuch parts of the adjacent Countries, as probably by Birthright, Lor, or - fome other ways of Divi fion each Party had appointed for them. And as thefe Families increas'd and grew-numerous, they muf of neceffity extend farther and farther; fo that ar. laft, they and their Pofterity came to terr/pread the whole Eirtel, as Mofes exprelly tells us, 'Ger.9. 19.

Diom whence it appears (as a: very grear Man ob- bt.Parick on Cerves) that Noah either had no Children after the Flood, Gen or elfe that none of them lived to have any Pofterity.
'Tis more than probable, that from Ararat they went down cowards the South firt of all, peopling Affria, Babylon, Syria, Egyt, and then Eithiopic by degrees So that the Pretence of the Egyptians of being themof antient People of the World, was as ain as that of the Ethriopians, who conrended with them for Antiquity, of whom they were bur a Colony, as weilearn from Gen 13.13.

But in order to give a more particular Acrount of the Peopling of the World, and the Origin of Matibas. 1. Engin with the Eaft, which by the gencral Voice of all Antiguity, hath been pronounced the mof ancient Part Niniveh, the Capital City of affria, is plainly the Haof the World; and it hath been by one common Confent always owned, that all Learning, Atra and Sciences, and Knowledge of anrient Times, hath been derived from thence. This, as. Dr: Faxck on obferves, is apparent from the Rifeand Increafe: of Arts and Sciences, which were in the Ealt in a good degree of Perfection; as early as wehave angiaccdunt of Time ina profane Hiftory; and were from rhencepropagated into other Parts of the World : and this alfo is confirmed. by the State and Grandeur of the Eaftern Kingdoms, long befurc Grece or Ir aly made any Noife or Figure in the World, and whith tis plain were originally CoIonies from thence.

The Arix therefore refting on tbe Gordiear Hills, or EaifernPart of the Motntain Tatrus, and the pleafant Piains of Babilon, Mefoppotamia, \&c. being below them to the Southward, nothing can be inore likely than that fome of Noab's Family would go down and fertle chemfelves thereabours firth of all, as knowing allo that thereabout was the anrient-Seac of Paradife: And accondingly the Accounts thas we have of the Babylonians and Affrians, are the moft antient of any. The Gentile Writers of Hiftory all agree that Babylon, or Bctile Writers of Hiftory all agree chat Buthorm, or Be-$6 \%$, was firft buile by the Firft Belos; which Word doubetefs comes from Ban!, which fignifies Lord or abfolure Commander: And therefore this Perfon can be no ocher bue Nimrod, whofe Kíngdom Mofos tells us, G.r. 10. 10. was Babel, and who is called at mighty Hunecr beforetbelowd: Which antientExercife of Hunting Hunter beforctoelowd : Which antientexercice of Hunting taror thews: For he notsonly enured himfelf to laboir bitation or Seat of Ninus; and cherefore cis highy probable that, according to the antient. Cuftom (fac Gen.A. 17.) Nimrod builethis City, and calledic after the Name Tigris, was Nemus. This Place food on the Weft. Gide of Tigris, was a, very grear and fourifhing Cisy for a long whilg but, at laf utrerly defroyed by the No der, and vever fince rebuill. The fame Nimod, Aefistells us, alfo built Rebobotb, from the Signfication of the Word, which in the fichew is Streets. Bocinith conjedures that this is thar City which Piolom calls birtiand Amianis, Virta, fituate on the Weft of Tiryt, ar the Mouth of the River Lycus, beçaufe Butina or B:itha in the Chatdee; hart the fancifence as irbinfori in the Hebrem. There is meation of a City called $\mu \cdot 6$ loth, $C$ on 36. 37- which was the Birch-place of sio', one of the Kings of Edom, or fdumer ; bue this was lituate a litde below Cercufium, ar the Mouth af the River cboturat, or Euphrates, as Boclure Ihews from the Nubian Gcosrapher, Ammianus, Prccopizis, \&c. lib, $4: 21$. and thero ore was too far from Niniveh to be the Place liers incntioned.
Nimrod allo, as Mofes faith, built the City Caticin or Calach, which Bochart hews was probaibly the Cafital f the Country called Calachene; which was leoted aout che Fountain of the River Lycus: The City Rom is faid alfo to have been bujlt by aimrod, which from the Situation, the Greatesf of the Place, and the Simiitude of the Name (Lariffa being eafly decivable from he Cbaldee Genitive Cafe Lerefen) Eucbert thinks to bave been the Lariffi of Xenoploan, lib. 3. Anchors. For he faith it was frunate on the Tipris, was eighr Miles and zoil by it, bur thereby alfo gathered together a great Company of Young Men, robuft and active, who by this means became qualified for Batte, and were fitecd to purfue and conquer Men as well as Beafts. Ihis Nimool or Belus, Bochare thews was che antient Pecchus, who is mentioned to be a Conqueror in the Eaft as, far as Indin, and whole Niame, he chinks, came from Ber-Chus; that is, the Son of Cufe, who was N":mrad's Father, Gem. 10.8. Some Writers indeed fay, that Ninus, his eldeft Son, built Babylon, or a Son that went by that Name; which may be confiftenr enough, for the Farher might begin it, and theSon finifh it. As for the Account which Ctefias gives, that Babylom was firf built by Semiramis, it cannor be onderftood of that Seniramis whom the Greek. Hiftories fo mach celebrate: For, as S.lmafius obferves, fhe lived near 2000 Years after Belus; (Excrit in Solinum) and befides, both B:rofus and Abydenus, who compiled the Hiftory of the Councry from the ancient Records, fay it was built by Belus.
This mighty Nimrod, Mofes faith, built alfo three other Citics in the plain Land of Shinar ; which comprehended not only that part of AIfria where Babylon ftood, but alfo that Country bordering upon Tigris to the Foot of the Mountains of Amenia. Thefe Ciries were, I. Erec, which was, as Bochere thews, the Arecka of Psolomy, and the Arechn of Amminnus. . This was fituare in the Country of Sufiana upon Tigris, and from hence came the Arccaci Campi mentioned by Tibullus, as Sclmafius obferves. This Erec probably was the Arderice or Anderica of Herodosus, and from hence came that Colony mentioned Ezra 4.9. called in the Cbaldee יארכ, by the Septuraint 'apxuzoo, and in che Vulgar Latin Erchnoci, as Bochert thinks.
2. Acchand, which the LXX render Archard; and therefore Bochart thinks was the Argad of Ctefias, the fame with Sitrace or Sittecene, a City that had a River called Argad running by ir, as $\notin /$ ian hews, lib. 16.c.42. de animalitus.
3. Chalne, called ifa. 10. 9. Chalnn, and Ezekiel 27. 23. Chrmne. From hence doubtlefs came the Country called Chatonatis, of which Strabo, Palybius, and Ptiny make mention, whofe chief.City ('ris like) antiendy was this Cbalne, afterwards by Pacorus King of Perfancalted Citefiplon, as Ammianus exprelly fith, lib. 23. and Stra $b=, l i b$. 16. faith this Cecfiphon was nearto Babylon.

Bur whether thefe three Cities were builr before or after the Confufion of Languages. is not cerrain. There is all the reafon in the world to believe chat $A$ ffyric was alfo conquered in forme meafure by Nimrod: Eorctio'in Gen. 10. II. it ftands in our Tramlation, Out of elins Land (that is, Bubylonia) woent fartl Afhur; yer as Bochart and Bp Pairick prove, it ought to be tranflared; He (i. c. Nimrod) went ous into Alfyria, and built Ninivel, Reboboth, &e. and to 'tis rendred in theiMargin of vur'Bible, and Bochart fhews that Afour here is nor the Name of a Perfon, byt of a Place. Add to this, that Afyria is call'd tbe Land of Nimod, Mich.5.6. For abour, had iss Walls roo foot high and 25 rhick: He faith alfo that the Greffes found it in Rums, and without Inhabicaios, when they cameinto this part of the World, it having been deftroyed by the Perfians, when chey got Empire from the Mctes.
But this Country of Affria, into which Nimprod made -15-i;: and in fome fenk chich was a very large Tract of Land, and in fome fenfe comprehended all Syric; for the Names are oftentimes confounded; tho A/fyric properly was only that Country of which Ninivel, was the Capiral City, and was fometimes called Aliabene and Acuria. This A/flria; I fay, had its Girf Inhabitants from A/hur, (as well. is is Name) one of the Sons of Sbicm. Syria had its fiff Name from Sor or Sor, which was Tore, the Mertopolisof phenicia; and rhe forf Inhabitants of this Part were the Sons of Canam, the younget Son of Ham : but afterwards Syia became a common Name for almoft all the Country round about. Some of the Syrians were doubtlefs derived from Arpbaxad, the Brocher of Aftar ; for we find in Prolomy, a Country of Affria called Araphacifis, which is very eafily derivable from his Name. And no queftion a good part of the zanticne Syria was peopled by Aram (and his Pofterity) another Brother of Afbur: For we find that the Syinus were aniently called Aramai. Homer mentions the Arimoi Ilitad. 2.) and Serabo faith, that by thofe Aimoi many underfood the Syriens: Nay the Inhabitants of that Councry do ro this day call themfelves Aramicenis: Bur the large Extent of the andient Syria will not permit us to think all the Iohabirants all round abour Batyon and Tyrecame from this Aram; and therefore I carnced Meni have in my opinion limited is only to thofe Places which have the Word Aram eicher piefixed or fubjoined to their proper Napue; as Padar Aram, which is Mefoposamia; Aram Sobab the antient Tadmar, or Palmpra; Aram Damafok, the Councry abour Damafcus, Sce: See Ratrick on Gom-1.0.23. And this is confirmed, by finding the Rcmains of the Names of Aram's Sons in Syria. The Yally of Drmafcus is called by the Arabicnsto this diay Gaut and Gauta, which Bp Patrick olferics differs oply on the Leurers, but not in the Pronunciation, fromzo or Tiz, she Soin of Axram. Grotiu frakes ngrice of a City io Syria, which Prolomy calls Cholle, plainly derivable from-Chutl or Hull, another Son of chis Arem; from whom Boclarerthinks the Country of Clooleborenc, a pant of Armicnic, was peopled, the Armenians, Syrians aud Archians being much alike, as Strabo obferves, in Rody, specch, and manjer of Life.
In Mrfopq:omiz there is meption made in gogad AuHors, of the Mountain Mafus, from whesice Xeprpion airh there is a River flows, called Majca. The Inhabizanes of chis Mountain, Stephnnus faith, are called yiaceni: In all which Wordsthere is aplain Allufion toithe Name of Mrht, another of Aran's Sons; and this Peron being. Cbron.1.17. called Mcfech, 'tis yery likely from thim the Mofchrai were defcended, whom Pliny places between Adidenene and Armenia Maior. And fince $\mathrm{b}_{2}$

Capinal City of the Province of Sufiana next to Sufr, 'on every fide; for Mazor is a fortified Place. That was called Seln, 'ris very likely another Son of Aram, this is the cafe of Egipt, Diodorus Siculus, lib. I. p: 88. whom. Mofes calls Salat, might give Rife and a Name takes notice very. particularly: On tbe Weff, faith he, 0 it. Minre is alfo metition in profane Authors (as are inaccefrble Deferts; on the South the Cataracis of Nile, well as in Alts 2.9.j of the Elamites, whofe Capiral and the Mountains of Echiopia; on the Eaff, Deferss, City was Llymal: : Thefe dwelt between. Media and M-fopotagnia, and very probably were derired and denominate from Elam, the eldeft Son of Shem, Gen.10.22. Pliny for and Prolomymentioning Elamites atthe Mourh of Ihe River Eulictis below Sufiana. What fofoplys faith of the Flromites, that they were nupour agserita, the Founders of the Perfinus, may be very right, when taken in a large Senfe. And now we mention Perfia, the Learned Bochart, and orhers prove, that the Sons of $C_{i j} /{ }^{2}$ (all but Nimrod) feared themfelves round abour the Perfian Sca, where he finds inany Remainders of their antient Names, in the Geopraphical Writers anong the Grecks. Tis almoft agreed by every one, that the Meder, the Inhabitants of that antient, but long extinct Kingdom of Media, were derived from Medai the third Son of Fapleeth, Gen. 10. 2. The Medes being deftroyed, Pliny, lib. 6. c. 7 . Gaith, the Sarmat.r, who are, as is faid, the Ofi:pring of the Medes, do now inbatit the Palus Mreotis. And" Pomponius Mela, lib.4. c.3. Faith, the Snimet.e arr a Nation in Habit end Arms nexs like ro the Parthians. Of which Pcople, the Parthians, faith Trogus, Ih. 41 Ticir Specth is a Mixtare of the Scythian end Mcdian Lan"umes, and tbcir Arms like Scythians, but their Habit ffeer they grew racl;, wons like the Medes. From whence tis plain the Sermat.c; Partbians and Medes, were Pco ple nearlyatike, and probably a-kin; and thereforcthe Great Boclart's Conjecture is very probable, that the Word $S$ armatic is derived from the Conaldce $7 \square ש \in$ that is, Serr Madai, the Offspring of the Medes.
$C_{y} / b$ himfelf, the Father of Nimrod, certainly gave Rifeand Name to the famous Country of Arabia: For tho' Cuff be in our Bible ufually tranflated Ethicpia yet the Paraphrafe of fonathan is here to be rather fol lowed, who tranilates it Arabie: For $C_{y} / h$ is the fame with C.efloan, which inHabbak.3.7. is madethe fame with midian ; and Mrfes his Wife, which cerrainly was Midicnite, Ex:d.2. 16, 21. is called a Cu/birs. And an Excellent Commentator on Genffis thews from $E_{i} c k i c l$ 29. 10. That Cu/h cannot be Ethiopia, but mult be Arabia. Of which alfo fee Bechart, Iib. 4. c. 2: Who makes it probable from abundance of Circumftances". that the Cu/bites were thofe who afterwards were called Stenita becaufe of their living in Tents; and thensainacens, from their Rapinesand Robberies: Which agrees mightily with the Inhabitants of Arsbia. And from Havilab or Chavilat, one of the Sons of this $C u / \mathrm{h}$, came the People called by Pliny, Charelai, by Eratoftienes, Clanulotici, who, as Strabo faith, were leated in Arabia Falix. Peolomy alfo faith, that there was in Arabir: F.clix 2 City called Saptia, nor far difant from the Sea; which plainly and cafity may be derived from Satta, anorher Son of $C_{2} / \neq$ according to Mifes. 'Twere end-' lefs to mention all the Authoritics and Arguments so prove, that all parts of drabin were peopled by the Pofterity of cufh; and thercfore having fhewed you where a grear Srock of Pcople were placed ready to fend Colonies into the adjacent Countries, I thall enquire next into the Pecipling of Egypr, that famous Place for Learning and Antiquiry.
Earpe, Plutarci) calls xapis, and 'tis certain that the Heathen fupiter was there called Hammon, in both which Words there is a plain Allufion to Ham; and indeed in the Scriprure Egypt is in many Places called the Land of Hem : And Stcphanus Brzantimus faith, that not only a part of africa, but even all that Region, was called Ammonia from Ammon; and for this he quotes the Authonry of Alexander Polybiftor. Ham was the fecond Son of Norh, whofe Son Mizraim is on good grounds fuppofed to be the Father of them who inhabited Egypt at firft. There are plain Remains of his Name in the firt Eopptian Month, which they called Mefori, and the Councry ir felf was called Mrftrs, as Grotius and Capcllus oblerve. The City of Alcairo is a this time by the Arabinus called Mefer: and Bochart ob ferveswell, that mife'sword mif, aimbeing of the Dual Number, cannot fo well be the Name of a Perfon, but will very properiy fignify Egypt, becaufe it confifts of two Parts, the T'pper and the Lower.: For all chat Part of it which lice againgt the Nile while it runs in one Striam, is called the Higher or Upper Egypt; bur the cower is, that where the River is divided into many Streams: wad this the $G$ eeks call Delta, from theLerter a. it being of a Triangular Form. Bocbart oblerves, that 'tis probable Egrnt might be called Mizraim, or in she Sing slar Mazt, from its being naturally fortified on Barathra, and tbe Palus Sertonidis; and on the Nortt, a Sca almoft. without Ports or Havens. And Strabo faith, have Egpt was 2 Country Content with their own Commodities, becaufe it was not eafily accefible to Strangers, lib. 16. p. 819.

$\therefore$ Tis not eafy to fay at what time from the FloodEgyps was peopled, but'tis probable it was very early, fince is feents to have given Denomination to Ham's fecond Son $M_{i z} \cdot a i m$, whom tis likely Mofis calls fo from the llace of his Birth. We and in I aiah 19.11 . that the latter Plaaioabs called themfeives the Sons of anticnt Kings, no doubr from a Tradition of the grear Antiquity of Egypr. And if E/macinus may be credited, the Egyprian Kang Com was Coxval with that of Nimrod in Balyion, who he faith began to rcign there in the 130 oth Year of his Life, which was fearce 200 Years after the Flood. But that wascertainly time enough to produce great numbers of People, cipecially if you fuppofe the firf Planers of Mankind after the Flood to have had two or more Children at a Birth; which is very protable, fince, as one well oblerves, they were bid rwice to encreafe and multiplys:and to replenin the Earth, Gen. 11. 1, 7. an it appears from the Texr, that Cain and Abel, the firft Children of Adam, were Twins, as Dr. Lighirfoot notes. Berween this Mizraim and his Brother l'but, Boctiarr thews that all Africa was divided. All Egypt, and feve ral Parts of Africt, as far as the Lake Titonis (which biffected Africa nearly) was the Part of Mizraim; but all the reft, beyond that Lake as far as the ritlantick O cean was the Portion or Divifion of Plout : Of which Name Pbur, there are many Remains; as the City Putca, which is mentioned by Polomy, lib. 3. c. 1. and by him called eints. There is a Riverallo called by the Name of Fur, and mentioned by Pliny, lib. s. c. 1 This River is in: Maritenia Tingitania, and runs into he Ocean ; and Bockart hews that the Africans were $5, y t$ called Phutxi, becaufe many of them were Nomades and rambled about from Place to Place, the primary Significacion of Phut or Phuss being fcatter'd or difperfed and that the old Africans were luch, both Strabo and Pomponius Mela afferr. 'Tis well known alfo that Africa, or a confiderable part of it, was called Lybia; which Name certainly comes from the Hebremo $L u b$, fignifying thirfty or dry, according to that of Lucan, lib. 1 .

-...-per calidas Lybia fitiontis arcnes.

And Lub or Lubia is alfo the Arcbick Name for Lybin Let us next confider Eethiopin, another famors Part of E.ficerix Africa. This, Boclatr very probabiy proves to have been that Part of the Earth whick in the Scripture is called Lud, and confequently may be fuppofed to receive its firft People from Ludin the eldeft Son of .htiraim, Gen. 10. 13. for the Hebrem Lutd lignifics (as well as the Arabick) winding or turning in and our like a River? And he proves from ferodotus, itantinvelitite: Strabo, Eratofibenes, sce. that againft Es/inpia the N:i had a great number of Windings and Turnings. hike the Mennder. And this feems to be coninimed very much from the Country about the iMc,nde's being called Lydia, as we learn from Plinys words, lib. S. c. 29: Lydia auten perfufa fuctuofi sinnis Meandri ,icurfibus. And Herodotus fpeaking of the Ethiopici Niic, Thews atfo that the Ethiopians werevery famous for their Thooting in long Bows; which is the Account the Scriptures give of the L_udim, I/fa. 66.19. Fcrem. 46.9. In the former of thefe Places of Scripture he obferves alfo, that Phul and Lud are joined rogether ; which confirms Lud to be Ethiopia, becaufe Phul is certainly the Game with that City which the Greeks called Phyla, which was inhabited by the Ethiopians and Egyptians, as it were in common, and ftood about 100 Stadia from the Nile, as Strabo exprelly faith, lib. 27. and Hercdorus confirms this at large, lib.8. 'Tis plain alfo from Diodorus, thar the Esyptinns and Ethiopians were Nations nearly allied in their Religious and Civil Cuftoms, and that they had the fame Letters and Hieroglyphicks, and the fameSacerdotal Veftments, Ec. And he gaith alfo, that the Ethiopians contended with the Eepprians for Antiquity (lib. 1.) alledging, that they living more Southerly than the Egpprians, bad a ftronger Sur, which cherefore muft contribute more carly and efficacioully to Generation: They faid alfo that the Land of Egrpe was all adrentitious, and gained from the Sea, by the Mud which Nilus threw up into a heap : But Mofes feems to have effectually determin'd this- Difpute. by faying, that Mitraim begat Ludim; and therefore the Echopians or Ludimmult be lefs antient than the Egyptians. And indeed tis exceeding probable. that the Ark refting on the Gordican or Armenian Mountains, the firf Deffent of the Sous of Noab was into the South, and having peopled Balylon, Afyria, Syria and Eaypt, went, or Icnt Colonies after this into Ethiopic, and the yet more Southern Parts. I omit Bochart's other Arguinents to prove the Erthopians to be the Ludim of Mofes, which, who fo pleafes, may confult in lib. 4. c. 26. of his Phalog.

The Egyptians, 'tis highly probable, fent out Colonies into many of the neighbouring Parts, as their Stock of People increafed: Bur one would wonder any of them fhould ramble fo far as the Euxins Sea. And yet come are of opinion, that the Chinefe were the Offspring of the Egyptians: Hornius faith, 'tis paif doubr that there are many things among them of Egyptian Original ; as their antient way of writing, and their Philofophy: And he thinks it not an improbablc Conjecture, that part of $\mathrm{S}_{6}$ foftris his Army might go thicher, the Way nor being fo very grear, but that fome of them (efpecially the Horfe, for which Egypt was famous) might march thither: For the Scythians, and of late Ages. the Tartars have made Incurfiens into Egypt. To chis be adds, that the Chincfe Records fay they were peopled firft from the Weft ; and that the Province of Xenfi was the firft inhabited, and after that Henan, Pecking, Xangtung, \&c. Hiftor. p. 53, 54.
Herodotus, Strabo, Dindorus, and Animianus, all agree, that the Colchi, which inhabited the Eaftern Parts of the Euxine beyond Trapiond, were derived from the Egyptians. Since, as Herodotus fhews, their Langunge, Manners and Refigious Rites did very much agree, and the Name of Colchi being eafily derivable from the Word Cafuchion (by only omitting the L, which before an $S$ hath not a good Sound) as Bochart oblerves; we may eafily believe the Colchi were derived from the Egypsians, fince Mofes tells us, Gon. 10.14. that the Cafluchim were the Offspring of Mizraim, the People of Egypr. And this receives Confirmation from Mofes faying that from thefe came the Pioziffim, and that the Caphtorim were near the Cafuchim. Thele Caphrorim all the Antients take to be the Cappadocians; but Bochars thews they were not all the Inhabitants of that Counury, but that Part which was next to Trapifand, where Colchis ended : For here Strabo mentions a City called Side, and the Country Sidene; but Bochart, flews that Side in the Greek hath the very fame Signification as Eaphor in the Hebrcw; and therefore'tis highly probable that the fame Country might be called Caphor in one Language, which was sidene in the other. And now we are in this part of the World, let us confider the People whom we find by the Grecks called Mofchi and Tbareni: For thefe are ufually joined together by Hcrodotus. Strabo faith the Mofchi inhabired the Mountains called Mofchici, North-Eaft of Cappedocia; and, as the Learned Bechert thinksalfo, all the Mountains from the River Phafis to the Pontus Cappadocicus: And the Tybra reni, Strabo places between the Trapesiuntii and the Inhabitants of Armenia Minor. Thefe People, 'tis highly probable, came from Mefeck and Bubal, two Sons of faplet mentioned by Mofes, Gen. 10. 2. For thele are as conftantly joined together in Scripture, as they are in Profane Authors : And the Derivation of $\operatorname{Mrf}$ Chi from Mefbeck is very natural to any one acquainted with the Hebrew and Greck Languages; as allo is the Tybareni from Rubal or Tubar, by only changing the $L$ into an $R$, as is ufual every one knows with the Greeks, as in Berias for Belial, \&c. And Bocbart. hews that thefe Tybareni and Mofchi had the fame kind of Commerce, Traffick and Commodities with thofe of Tubal and Mc/beck in che Scripture, as the Reader may fee as large in lib. 3 . c. 9 . of his Plaleg. But before I leave the Egyptian Colonies, I ought to take notice that Plutarch, in his Book de Ifide ©f Ofiride, faith, that the Egypsims called the Country and the Mountains which lay on the Coaft of che Mediterranean which was called Marmarica, and now Barcha, i. e. that Part againft the . Mare Lybicum, by the Name of Neppthun. Now Mofes tells us, Gen.io.13. that one of the Sons of Mivrain, the Founder of the Egyprian Nation, was called Naphtulim; which may very well fignify the People of Napbshush; and therefore from chence we have an Account of the Peopling of that Coaft of the Mediterrenean by a Colony from Eqppt. And 'tis very obrious to obferve here by the by, that from the Egrpricn Name of this Maritime Country, Neplothan, the word Neptune may be derived: And we are fure that Neptune was faid originally to be a Lybian God, and known ond to char Pcople, as ilemdorus the Father of Hiftory, rells us,-lib. 2. cap. jo.

And fince we are gotten into the Mediteriazian, let us coaft it cound. That the pieniciats, sy, inns, fli:rians, Sidonians or Tyrinus were defcended from the C., naanites, no one denies. This Lujcbias veifres Sancht:niuthon and his Editor Plitic-Bybitus exprelly afferp; and Sanchoniuchon calls Plicnicie Xra, as the fame Eifelifu: obferves. And moft cerrain it is thar the LXX ufe the Names of Cane tmice and phenicion promifuor 1 : For Sianul', who in Ger. 4.6. 10 . is cailed the Son of a Cinamitifh Woman, is in Extc.6. : 5: Said to be the Son of a PbenicinnWoman: Aud her whomSt. statetice calls àwomanof Cunan in ch. 15.22. St. Mark calls a Sy op bericiam, ch. 7-26. Lindeed we never find the Crels calling the Pbornicians by the Name of Camanites: The Reafun of which probably, is, that the Plasmicians carefull $y$ a avoided thar Name, becaufe of the Curfe pronounced on their Father Cianami
The Mctropolis of Planicin was Tyre, in H: Erem, Sor or Sur; whence came Surim and thence the Greak Zuyn. or the Syrians... But Sidon, now Said, was much a more famous and anticnt Ciry than Tyre; for Hemer mentions nothing of Tre, tho' he Speak's of Sidon and the Sidonians in many places: And in the Scripture we read nothing of Tyre till Draid's Time, whercas Siken is mentioned in the Books of Mc/cs, and no doubr the City took its Name (as the Pcople from it) from sidon the Firft-bornof Cancan, Gen. 10. 15.
From another Sonof this Cnuaan, Mrfos tollis tus the Arkites came, Gen. 10.17. And thefe Ecchart juthly places abont Libanus, where rwe only for whs, but PacComy mentions a City called Aica or Arce, in which tis crobius faith was worfhipped by the Phanicinns, Suthry.:lib. r. c.27. Pliny alfo mentions a Ciry called Aic., which he faith was in the Decapolitan Sy: in. Mefes alfo, ver.18. mentions thic Aradites, which Pcople are cortainly the fame with the Aradii, who dwelt in the Inand At a dus mention'd by Strabo and others to be on the Coalt of Ph.rnicia ; and on the Continent was a Place againtt is called Ancarndus. I necd fay norhing here of the fictucia, If raclitif, or fewi/h Nation, which werc Ncighbours tr and at laft Conquerors of moft part of the land of Canaan or Pbenicia ; becaufe of thefe (who were defecnded from Eber the Grear Grandfon of Shem, (icr. 1 1.14.) there is a full and particular Accourit in the Scripture.
If from herice we go on into Afia Minor, or Anatior, fore, now Natolic, we hall find that Pbrygia, fo called from qeizeni in the Greck, which lignifies to torrify or roaft, and thicrefore by Diodorus Siculus called xiaianowaijuirn, was peopled probably from Gomer the eldeft Son of Fapher; or the Hebrem Gumar fignitics to confume by Fire, whence comes Gumin or Gumuc, a Coal. Some very Learhed Men indeed have fancied the cimbri and Cizimeriii to bethe Offspring of this Gomor ; but the Phices they inhabited were much too remote for cither himfelf or his firft Children to travel to, tho" tis not improbable fomic of their Pofterity mighr go into thef: Parts af terwards in procefs of time: But fince $E_{z}$ ekiel, ch. 38.6 . mentions Gomer, as bcing a Neighbour to Togarmoth which Place, dr. 27.14. he faith, ufed to fend its Inhabitants to the Marts of Tyre; 'ris plain Gomer could not be fo far off, either as Sy:ijic, or Germany, Spain on Britain, and thercfore very probably was-placed in Pl mia and the Places adjacent. And this is inuch confirmed from the Situation of his Sons; for Afbecmaz his eldent Son fertled, beyond doubr, in Bitbynic: For there was Birrme antiently many plain Remainders of his Name; as in the Sinus Afcenius, the Lacus Afcarius, and the Irfula Af cania. In thdadjoining Country of Troes and the Leffer Pbrygin, there was a Country and a City called Afcania, from whence they femt Colonies to the Euxine Sea, is we may on good grounds conjecture; becaufe tis cerrain from Pindar (Pyth.4) and from Apolonius'sArgonaut. lib. 2. that this was called firft by the Grecks 'AEr(3); which Diodorus and Strabo confirm, faying it was fo called from the Cruelty and Inholpitablenefs of its firf Inhabitants; and therefore 'was afterwards changed into of the Euxine Sea: And 'tis very likely that the Greeks called it firft Axinus, becaufe the firft Inhabitants founded it Afcenaz, from AlbkenarthisSon of Gomer.
Near this allo on the Euxine was the Country of Papl:afonia; 2 Narive of which being called by Strabo, Tibius, Bocbart thinks the Name may be derived from Riphas or Dipbar, as he is called (1 Chrom. 1.6.) another Son of Gomer: But this is certain, that in Bithynia, 2 Country not far from Paphlagonia, there is the Ammis Rjebcus or Rbeber, mentioned by Apolonius in Argonaur.
lib. i. v. 791 . and Stephanus Byzantinus mentions a Ri ver, Country and City called by this Name of R Revas, which he faith is rapà tè nonm, hard by the Euxine. Now this word Rbebas is eafily detivable from Riphath; and to come yet nearer to the Word, Grorius oblerves that Pomponius Miela places 2 Pcople called Ripbaces, this Country, Annot. in Libell. de V.R.C.
Not far from Phrge in in A/ia Minor, lies Cappadocia and Galatia: And Strabo, lib. 12. faith the amtient Troym: or Troclmi lived near Pontus and Cappadocia, poffer fing the Confines thereof. Thefe, Stcpbanus Byzantinus faith, were called alfo Trecmeni, as well as Trocmi, and were Inhabitants of Gelatic. Now 'tis very likely there were derived from Togarmah, another Son of Gomer, and who was, as 'tis plain from Ezek.27.14. placed near his Father Gomer, as was before oblerved. The Hebreso Togarmah, the LXX always render Torgama or Tonrgamol, from whence the Trocmi, or, as fome write it, Trogmi, are eafily derived. Now the Prophet Ftakie! faith in the Place above-mentioned, that the Inhabitants of Togarmab brought Horles to the Fairs or Marts of Tyrc: Which agrees very well with the Account we have of the antient Cappadecia, which was very famons for excellent Horfes; as Solinus tfiodorus, and Dienifus Periegetes tells us; and Claudian very plainly in thele Words :

In Rifinum, lib. z.
And a fufficien: Account of this may aifo bchad fom Puileftrraits, an antient Crppadecian Hiftorian, as you will find him cired by Bocliart, Pbaleg. lit.3. c. ry.
Let us ncxt vifir the Grecian Archifeligus or Cherfo$n=$ fis, and enquire into theOriginal of the luhabitants of that moft famous Councry for all kinds of antient Leirning, Greece; where we hall find very good grounds to belicre that this celebrated Part of the World was firft poopled by favin the fourth Son of faphet: For the Hebrew ill may be very eafily read yon as well as 7 avan, if it have no Vowels under the Letters to determine its Pronanciation; and the LXX render it iouisy. In $H c$ mer the Ione are called Izones, whofe Nominatite Singular L.ton comes very near to favan. Now'tis certain that the lones were not antiendy the Peopleabout Athens only ; for in Hefcclius the Acb,cans and Boetians are comprehended alfo under that Name; and in Homer's. Hymn to Aftllo he niakes the Detii to be alfo Inones. Tis plain from the Name of the lonian Sce, which is fometimes given to that part of the Adrintick which is overagainft Macedonin and the Countries Weftward of it that they were antiently reckoned part of Ionia; and ascordingly the Cbildec Paraphrafe, for faven, Gen. 10. 2. puts Mccedonia. To this may be added that Herodotus faith the Afiatick Iones, which were Co lonics from Grecce, had tiarapar $2 \lambda$ àaxn: xapaxnipac, four difinct ritioms of Specil); and therefore could nor be only thofe feeaking in the Ionick Dialect, tho called Innes: and in une word, the Scholiaft on Ariftopbenes, Barberisins (or Foreigners) call the Grecks Jaones. From all which we may conclude with the mof Learned Bociart, that the Hebrews called all thofe Iones or Favan which lived from Tkrace to che Ifthmus: Which is much confirmed by Thefeus his Column fer up on the Iftbmus which on that Side looking towards Megata had thefe ponnefis, but Ionia. This Column is mentioned by Strabo, lib. 9 . and by Plurarch in Tbefeus; and is faid to be flanding in Codr:s his rime. Bochare fhews alfo from the Merchandize which Ezekiel faith, ch. 27. 13. Favan arricd to Ture that the Grecians ufd to trade in the very fame things, Pholeg. Ail.4. c. 3 .
And this Account of the firf Peopling of Greece is much confirmed by Mofcs faving, that the eldeft Son of Javan wais called Elifk, ; for every one knows that the Morea, or antient Peloponnefus, was called of old Elis, from a very large Comary there of that Name. And frnmer calls nne Part of it Alifum: And 2s_Etek. ch. 27 . 2. 7. Faith Pu ple came from the liles or Maritime Counry of Eiifba; fo 'tis abundantly certain, that Ef's or Pel, ponncfus was very famous for irs Purple, which was gottenboth in the Lacpnian and Corintbian Sinus.

Tiracia, Mysia, and the other Countries on the North of itacedenia, werc probably peopled by the Pofterity of 'Tisiris or Tiras, che yoüngeft Son' of Japhet: For fonatban and the ferufalem Targum in Gin. ic. 2. for Thiras pur Tbraces; and char by Thiras is 'meant the Thracians, Eafibiur, Epiplanius, St. Feroms \&ec. do all agreo ! nor is the Derivation of Thrace at all forced from Thiras And Bochare fhews there are many Remains of the Name Thiras in Tbracia and the neighbouring Conneries Frerodorus, Strabo, Ptolomy and Pling mention a City of My/ba called Tyras, Feated on a River of the fame Name : Herodotus mentions another River in Thrscia, which was called Tearus. Tharus was antient ly one of the Names of Mars, which was a Thr:ian Deiry, and his Son was celebrated by the Namo of Terevt, and is faid to be firft King of Thrace.: And Ludovicus Capellus thinks thai Tros and Troes, the Trians, were derived from this Thiras or Tiras; which is very probable, both on the account of theirStruation, as well as the Agreement in the Sonnd of the Name. The Came Learned Man is of opinion allo, that the fitil's, and the Country Eslia, tooke cheir Rife and Name from the above-namred ElifRe, the Firft-born of $\mathcal{F}$ npbst.
If we enquirenext into the Original of Itaf, we flall tas: ifd that Chittim, another of Faphet's Sons, hath a very good Claim for being its Founder. It's owned that the moft antient Namc of Latium or Itrly, was camofene or Cimifene, of whofe Erimology there is mighty Difpure among the old Grammarims: But the famous Bochar feems to bave givert a very juft account of it in deriving it from the Hebrew Camas, which fignifics to hide; and this very well anfwers to its Name by Interpretation Latium, which moft fay comes it latendo; and io alfo doth Cliesim in the Arabick (a Branch or Dialect of the Hebeex) fignifie bidden or litent. Befides, in Itrily there were many Footfteps of the Name cibistion or Chetim. Fraiyenmffeus, lib. 3. p. 356. menrions there a City called Erita, which was one of thofe that Coriolanus took, as Plutarch thews in his Life. And $A_{i}$ iforle in Lib. de Mirab. mentions a River called Knou in Itaíy (which Bochart takes to be Silarus or Silaris rumning about Cume into the Tyrrbenian Sea) that would tarn Plants into Stones.' Nay Eufelius, the cibronicon Alexandritum, Cedrenws in his Annals, and Suides, tell yon the Iarines came from 2 Peoplecalled citii or Cetii, and that their antient Name was fo.
And as from Chittim came the Iralions, fo 'ris very stuilikely Spain took its Original from Targifh or Tafis, another of Fapher's Sons. This, Eufeblus was the firtt that afferted; bur Bociart hath made it probable by many Arguments in lit. 3. c. 7 . of his excellent Pbaleg. As to the Name of Trifoift, he cites Polybius, 116.3 . mentioning the Leagre thade berween the Rommins and Cartbaginiaths, in which it was forbidden the former to make any Excurfionsbey ond Maftin and Tarfeium. This Maftir Steplormus calls $M_{i}$ Ifla, and faich it was the Country of the Tareeffri, and that the City Tarfeimm was fituate at Hercules Pillars, or Gades. In another place of Pelybius he finds mencion made of a People called Ther fire: In all which woinds there is a plain Alluforn to Targhing; and therefore it may well enough be concluded, that Tarphifh is either $S p a i n$ in general, or at leaft that part of it abour Tartefus or Cadir, which was a Placemuch frequented by the Phenicians, as will appcar plaine nough hercafter, when I come to rpeak of the Migra tions of the People of chat Nation: And tis very pro bable the Name Iberi, by which the Spanierds were antiently called, thas given them by the ph.cxicinns, from their word Ebrim or Ibrim, fignifying the utmoft Bounds and Limits of any thing; becaufe Spain was thought to be the utmoft Exteat of the Earth (as it is of this Continent) Weftward. And this is much confirmed by the Merchandife brought from Tar/hifh to Trre, mentioned by Ezeliel, ch.21. 12. which is faid to be Silver, Irom, Tin and Lead : For Sirabo, tib. 3. Crith, ix Aseopeg, wit Лixeinx found $n n y$ where either fotsucich of, or fo grocd Silocr, Braf and Iron, as there is in Spain. And the fame thing faith Diodorus, Pomponius Melr, and Pliny ; mentioning a a fo Tin in parricular: And Arijfotle in his Book of Wonders, faith, thar'tis reported the firft Pbenseians in their Voyage to Tarseffus found fuch Quantities of Silver, that their Shifs were not able to bring it away, and therefore at parting from thence mate all their Veffels, ray their very Anchors of Silver.
As Spain probably waspeopled by the Pofterivy of Tar-Erawe Difi, to France feems ro have been by Dadanim, the last of Fapbet's Sons. The LXX call him Rbotionim in 1 Cbron. 1. 7. and 'tis very likely that his Children gave Name to the famous River khodamus, and called the Country round abour it Rbodamifin, or fome fuch Jike Name. 'For Srephamus Byicminus -mentions a City and Country fo called, and fituave in marexins that is, in Traiku incffilienf, wherc nowitands Mryeilles. And Bclfort ithms there are Remains of the Name Rbedinus in the City Rodum:a, now Roonc; and in the Rhedones and Ruteni, antient People of France, whofe chicf $\mathrm{Ci}_{-}$ ties are now Rennes and Rtod:s; and he fuggets that the Word Erid inus may be a Corruption from Rhodamas, the Po and the Rbofre being often confounded by the Antients. See Apollonius his Argoncur. lib. 4. v. 627.
As to Germany and the other Midland Parts of Bur rope, 'tis as difficult to find when they were firft peopled, as by whom: Bochart thinks it probable that the Egyptian Hercules might fend our Colonics as far as Germany; for Tacitus teils us in his Traet de Moribus Germanorum, that they had a Tradition that Herrules, the ftrongeft of all Men, had been amongit thern ; and he faith, Pars Suevorum Ifidi facrificat; which Ifis was an EgypsianDeity: And the Germans relebrateTuito andmannus as theirfirft Founders; which Bochirt very probably thinks were Thots the Egyptian Mercury, and Menci the firtt King of Egypt. As for the Word Germania, Tceitus gives its Original in thefe Words: Germanie voarbulum recens oft io naper addicum; quoninm qui primi Ricmun tranfgrefi Gallos expaterunt, nunc Tungri, zume Germani vocazi funt. And Bocbart thinks Germanus is as much as a warlike Man; Ger corning from the He beew Gera, which fignifics to wage Wars.
R:IVIa and Mufcovy, and the Countries adjacent to the South and Weeft, were in all probability peopled firt from the Scytbiens; and they certainly came from Mago the fecond Son of Fapher. Ezck. 38. 2, 3. Magog or Gog is laid to be the chiief Prince of Mefbek and Tubal many Learned Merr think very juftly, making Rbos, not Chicf, as we have tranlated it, bue the Name of a Country. Bochart very ingeniouly conjectures that the Word Caucafus came from the Cbaldee Gog-hafan; that is the Surong-Irold or Defence of Gog, changing the Gimel into a Kappa, as for Sofrnefs of Srund is ulual in the Greck Language (thus for the Hebrew Gamal, a Camel, they write $v \dot{\alpha} \mu \mathrm{macr}$ ). and therefore' tis probable that Scytbia, about the Mountain Canchfur; is Magog; or the Land of Gog ; and there is certainly fome Remains of the Name Gog in the City Gogerene of Steph. Bytantimus; which he places hereabours berween the Colchi and the Iberi Oriencales. And following the EXX and orhers, who make Rhos the Name of a Councry or Region, which was conriguous to Mefoekand Tubal, we cannor but chinde it gave Name and Rufe to Ruffia and Minfocoia: For Rbos appears to have been the-Name of the River Arazis in Armenia (now Turcomania) runsing invo the Cofpian Sea, and joining into one Stream with the River Cjrtst, a lirtle before its Difembegué chere. Fof thus faith the Nubian Geographer, as Bochart cizes him. "In Arme". nia are two Rivers of great nore, Rbos and Cor, boch " running from the Weft Eaftward: Cor, which is grea " and navigable, rifes near the Mountain (that is, Caz"cafnt) and running to Tifis (the Zaliff of Ptolomy) "and from thence to the Confines of Hanna and Sam"cun, joins with the Rbos, and runsour inro the Seat of "Cbozar, or the Cafpian: By which'tis plain that the Rbos is the Arexes, as the Cor is Cyrus. And he cites alfo fofeph Gen Gorion for faying that the Rbofli inhabir the Banks of the River Cyrus, which rems into the Georginn (i.c. the Cafpian) Sea; and be might eafily miftake Cyrus for Arnices; the Rivers being near together. And that the Seythinns, antiently called Sacie, were Mafters of this Part of the Woild, Strabo is exprefs, lib. it where He faith, the Sace, or Scthinns, poffeft the beft Pari of Armenia, calling is Sncafenin; after themfelves, and went as far as the Cappadocians; who live on the Euxime Sea =. And Herodorus faith, the Scythian Nomades, which niow inbabit Afia; . wben thry wete beaten by the Meffageres, paft the Araxis into Cimmeria. And Diodorur, lib. 2. faith, that the Scythians firft dideit about the Araxis. Bur after they were driven from thi Situation, 'ris very likely fome of them went Northward, and inhabited the Tcuric Clocrfonc/us, and called it by their own Name Rhos; for fo Bochart obferves from Tretzes, that in his Time Rbos was a more common Word for a Bull than Taurus: He thinks allo that the Name Rbcxolani, by which Pliny, Jil.4. c.12. calls fome of the old Scyibian:, came.from Riox or Ribos and Aleni; becaule Ptoiony, lib. 3. c. 5. places the Sctibians between the Tami and the Alani, abour the Peins Meat si: After this Bocbart goes on to thew, that the Words of Eick. 38. v. $\dot{3}$, \&ec. do agree very well to the. Sctisianis, as to their being famous for. Hories, Bows and Arrow's and orher Arnour offenfive and defenfive; which the Reader may confult at large, lib.3. dh. 13. of his Pbadeg.
From whence the numerous and various Fcople of inda Indic Orientals were firft derived, tis not fo eafy to difcovet, and probably they might have their Original from very different Families of the Sons of Noath. The commonly received Opinion is, that they came from the Sons of Forlitan or feftan, the Brother of Pbalez, which were thirteen in number. But Bockart and BpPatrick confine the Situation of all thefe to the innermoft part of Arabra; or Arabia Felix. Hornius faith the Antients divided all the People of the World into the Sothinns and Ethiopians, the Indians and the Celt.s: And the Indians he fuppofes to be the Offspring of Scm, as the Echiopians are of Cham, and the Scystians and the Celtre (i.c. the Calati, or Gauls, as Bochart fhews) from 36pher. And Voffrus, ili. i. de Idolatr. thews, that by India in the largeft fenfe, was antiently meant the $\mathrm{U}_{\text {phe }}$ Alini Pharnicia and Arabia. Hornius thinks that fome of the Pofterity of Foctan paffed Eaftward out of Arabia Fislix, a-crofs the perfian Gulf, and fo peopled India, which is not improbable: And in his Differt. Iijfor. Pollit. p. 85 . he thinks this is apparent from hence, as well as from other Arguments, that Ophir, one of Foc an's Sons; lefr his Name to Opbir, the Place from whence Solomon fetch'd his Gold. Bur Bocbart, tho' he thinks the Opbir to be Ceylion, as others take it to be Sumatra, others one of the Moluccas in Eaft India; yer he judges that the Pbenicians gave it thas Name, when they found is to abound fo much withGold and otherRiches (as the orther aphir in Arabia did) from their Word Aupijar or vplere, which fignifies rich or opulent: And for the fame reafon it was called Tapro-bana, from Taplo-parian or Taph provan in the fame Language; for that fignifies the Land of Shore of Wealth, Pbaleg. c. i7. Now tho Mofes faith that the Dwelling of thefe Sons of Foktan (all except Obrl, who paffing through the Streights of the Sinus Arabicus, probably peopled Arabia Treglodyricn) was from Meflea, \&e. Gen. 10. 32. thatis, round about the Mounrain inafus or Mefi, berween Cicilie and Mcfopotamia: jex as Sir Walter Ralcigh', obferves, 'ris very probable, that either they or their Pofterity might tranfplant themfelves into fome Pares of Eift Indic, as thofe of Marges, who peopled Scythi! and Tarsary, might do inro ochers.
Mr. Whffon, in bis Twery of tice Earth, harh a pecu-ctina. liar Netion about the peopling of Cinina, a famnus Part of Enff Indin; whofe Inhabitants he fuppofes to rake their Original from Noal, and fome other Children of his befides Shem, Ham and 7 aphet, which were born to him afterwards. Bat this feems to be a litrle incor-: fiftent with what Mafes rells os; Gen. 9.19. where he faith, that from thofe three Sons of Noah, wass the whole Eart) overfpread. From whence, as the moft Learned and Judicious Bp Patrick obferves, it appears, that tho Noab lived above 300 Years after the Deluge, yer he cither had no more Children, or that none of them lived to have any Pofterity.

Of the Peopling of America.

$=-1$1 being expreny faid by Mofes, Gen. 10. 32. That the Nations were divided by the Sens of Noah after the Flood: and 9. 18. Thar of them the whole Earth woas over/frent: : And yer in his Account of the Pcopling of the World, there being mention made only of three Parts of it, vir. Europe, Afia and Africa, as inhabited and poffert by the Pofterity of Noah. This harh indu ced fome Perfons to affert, that the vaft and popalous Tract of America did not receive its firft Inhabitants from any part of our World, ar leaft not from the Defeendents of Nanh; bur that either the Americans were Aborigines after the Deluge, if they had a Beginning fince that, or clfe were not deftroyed by the Flood which confequently could nor be univerfal, as Mofes af frets, and the generality of Chriftians belicve.
The common Arguments for which Opinion are in fhor, 1 . The aborementioned Silence of che Scripture abour theirOriginal. 2.The prodigious Numbers of their Inhabitants when they were firf difooverd. 3. The raft difference that there is between them and the reft of Mankind, üs their Perfons, Manners, Cuftoms and L.anguages. - 4. There being found in thefe Parts many Spacice of living Crearures common to no orher Part of the World, and their wanting entirely others. 5 . Their being derided froin Europe, Alfin and Africa by fuch vaft Seas, or inacce:fible Tracts of Ice, that 'tis incredible in furpofe any of our Inhalitants could ever pars from is to.therin, or any of theirs to us. And 6. That no accounc can be given why Beatts of Prey, fuch as Lions, Tyres, bicars, &c. Thould everbe cranfprred thicher by Men, cren allowing, that Curiofity, or Chance, Wars, or defire of Gain thould carry them thither.
To which may be anfivered, i. That the Silence of the Scripure about the Way, Manner and Time of the peopling of Americe, is in it felf no good Proof that it did nor reccive its Inhabitants from fome of the Defcendants from Noah, unlefs ir were affered by thofe who believe Mrfes, that America was peopled immedirtely after the Confufion of Lanzuages, and by thofe very Children of Noab whofe Names are there recorded which is what (I think) is affirmed by no body : For as whfos doth not think ir neceflary to enter into a par sicular Detail of the peopling of cach individual Tract of Land throughout the whole Earch; but only to fhew in gencral after what way and manner the Noacbinoms were divided and diftribured afer the Deluge; fo we may very well fuppofe, that fome of them might in procefs of time travel into imerica, if it were pofible fo on do, as well as inro many/other remore Regions jor directly mentioned by mofes. For'tisprobable, as Judge Haic: of ferves, that fome Migracions ino ape, as jouge be within 3 or 400 Years after the Flood.
2. As for the grear Numbers of the Inhabicants of $A$ merci, 'tis certain there is time enough and ro fpare, fince che Deluge, to account for fuch an Increafe: and tis probable, as will appear below, they might receive frone of their Inhabitants not long after that cime.
3. Their Shape, Make, Colour, I.anguages, Manners and Cuftoms, tho: very different, as well from one another, as from thofe of our Contixicnt; yet are not more different from ours, than our own are from one noother: And thercfore if there be any thing in this $A_{r}$ guanenc. it will conclude as well againft the Afraticks, Aricem. and Eurofeansbeing derived from one Soock and Original ; tho' perhaps it may appear by and by; that tis no good noe againft either
The teh Obicetion will fall in weth this in fome meafire, and may be cleared up after the fame manner. or angood irguments cantedrawin from the different Syecis of the Brafts of simerice, that they had nor ther tirf! Parcres from our Continent: Are not the Inhatimnes, Doats ana! Birds of Afice valtly different fr metaig of Ew ope? ind den't the Tartars and Clisinefe differ in: $S h$ pe and Forn very much from the long hair'd black traicin, of the Eaft, as much almoft as they do from the White Pcople of our Northern Parts? If thereh,te we have fuch different Specics, as it were, of Men in Eurion, $1 / i$ in and Africa, why hould it be thought itrange that dhere hould be the fame in America, and Fone of thofe different from any of them? For that they are not all fo is cerrain.
Ber perhaps is will be faid, this only increafes the Bifficulty ftill of foiving the Mofaical Account of the Propagation of fuch differing kinds of Men from one and the fame Farher $N$ (ath; and that it rather proves they had very different Originals. Bur methinks 'tis not difficult to conceive how very different Colours apdo Shapes of Men may cafily arife from the difference of Climates, Humours and Fafhions of Mankind, and from the Power of the Morher's Imagination operating on the Fartus. Suppofe for inftance, in the Cafe of the Cafres or Negroes of Africa, New iuinca, Madagafoar, & c might not the naked Bodies of the firft Inhabitants of thofe Parts, bythe vaft Hear and Drought of the Climatc, become very fwarthy, burnt and black; efpecially of thofe who went much abroad, and expofed chemfelves to Hunting and Fifling, Toil and Labour in the Sun? And is it not natural ctrough to conceive thar thofe Perfons, who were bold and active Men at Huming, Fifhing, or Fcars of War, would come by degrees to value themfelves on the Colour their Bodics had gain'd by fuch brave and heroick Exploits? And would not they defpife the effeminate Whitenefs and Softnels of thofe that ftaid at homé? And when this aduft Hew was once grown honourable, woould nor every one affect it, and even ufe Aits and Pigmenis to procurc it? To be fure alfo theWomen, who alwaysadmire daring Aftivity and Valour in the Men, wouth be beft pleafed with Perfons of this Form and Appear ance, and confequently have their Imaginations and Fancies always (even inter, Amplexus) filled with Ideas of them. From whence tis eafy to fuppore (by what we daily fee of the Marks that pregnant Women give their Children) that the Fertus in the Womb of the Mother (which is but like a Graft on a Tree) would be tinged with the fame Colour, Form and Complexion; and this going on further by degrees, might eafly produce as grear a Change as that of an Afiatick into a Negro; efpecially if to this you add the probable Suppofition, that fome greas and eminent Hero in thefe Parts, or a famous Huncer, might happen to have a 1horter Nofe and thicker Lips than ordinary, might cut his Hair very thort, and have it naturally black and: curled; for by thismeans others of his Contemporaries or Poftcrity would endeavour to imitate him as much as they could, and the Mothers woald mould their tenter Infants into his Shape and Form, and fapply ir all (by degrees) by the Force and Power of Fancy and Inagi nation, in their latter born Children. I think it needlefs to give Inltances of this, becaufe they are fo very Eommon and obvious, that all Hiffory; and cvery ones Experience can furnifl them ini fome mealure: And theie want nor Accounts, even in the very point beforeus, tho' with none of its previous Caufes and Steps; of Women, that by the Power of Imagination only; have brought forth Children of quite concrary Colour anid different Shape and Form from either the Mother or the Father.
And this Confideration will help is to account. in fome meafure alfo for the differenc Species of Animals now foumd in Amerite, from thofe in our Continemr. Where by the by, we ought to obicrve, that there are Confult mi nor fo many different Species as fome tell us, who will Ry) needs make Wonders and Monfters of every new thing Xorke of the they fee, withour examining inio it fo nicely as they $C_{r e a t i o n, ~ a t ~}^{\text {a }}$ ought to do.
It hath been oblerved by many Authors, that Africa hath produced a inuch greater Variety of Animals chan other Parts of rie World, and efpecially of Brates; and this was a Proverb in Ariftiote's cime, that Africi, wiss fiill producing fomething new, of this kind. lit. 2.c. s. de Generatione: And the Solution that is ufually given for this is, that Waters in thofe dry parched Councries being very fearce, great Varieties of Animals ufed to meet together ar the Springs or Rivers, in order to drink and cool themfelves, and by promifuous Couplings there, did continually produce new Species of Animals. Now tho it be ufually faid, that luch Hebiiido:ss Offsprings and Births as thefe don'r copulate and produce Animals fui Generis again; yer whether it be fo univerfally or nor, I judge may be doubted, and I belicve there are $\mathrm{In}_{\mathrm{n}}$ Atances to the contrary pretry frequent, efpecially among Birds. But be this as it will, no doubr the Climate and Soil, the Gir and Degree of Hear, difference of Feeding, Ejc: will very much change the Shape and Appearance of Animals; as well as will acridental Im pulfes on the Imagirazion of the Femalis of the Brute Creation, when (as cur Grear LI:i rey (peaks):lic (peci-cifick Operative Iden in the Fancy of the Dam, may be difurved and changed by fome other inardinate one. If this were not 10, why fhould feveral Countries be more famrous than others for a better Biced of the Came. kind of Animals; and fome Places be perfectly void of Beafts, Birds and Fibces, whichothers abound in? 'Tis not at all thocking to Reafon thercfore to believe, vhat there may be grear Varicty in the Shape, Colour, Make and Figure of divers Birds, Beafts or Fifhes in Americn from thofe in our continent; and yet all Specics at firt have the fame Original
But befides all this,' 'tis certain that Tartary, Cathay, and thofe Norch-Eaftern Par:s, do abound with 2 prodigious Variery of Beafts and Birds, many of which have been difcovered to be vaftly different from chofe of our Regions. Now the Bounds of this Part of the World being unknown and undifcover'd, and the fretching out of the Tartarian Capes undetermin'd, it cannot be proved that there may not be in thofe Parts, Beafts and Birds of the fame Form and Shape with rhore we fo much wonder at in dimerica: And therefore Mien ought to forbear concluding any rhing certainly atont the smerican Animals being aborigines, till they are fure they know all thofe which inhabit thofe valt Deferts, and yet undifoverd Tracts of Land: which if they don't actually join to the Continent of America, do undoubredly come very near it.
The 5th Objection is a bare Affertion without proof, and thercfore may be as freely denied; and I thall Shew, chere is much more reafon to do fo, than to hold it in the affirmative. And the laft or fixth Argument abour Beafts of Picy, Fic. getting into America, will be found to have litrle of furce in it, when the feveral ways of peopling that part of the World are laid before yor.

But I camor omit taking notice now, that tho' the Spaniards found the Continent of Americn full of thole favag: Bealts; yet there were none of them in any of the Iflands which lay remote from the Continent, tho' very large; which both thews that thefe Creatures were not at leaft, Alooi igines there, as Trees, Fruits and Plants were; and therefore America muft be ftockt with them from fome other Part of the World; and which by a fair way of Conclufion too, lay nearer to them than thofe Illands. This Acefta afferts to be true on ftrict Examination of the Primitive State of Cuba, Hifpaniola, Margarica, Dominica, Frmaica, &c. And this hath been confirmed fince to be the Cafe of other lllands newly difcover'd by fubfequent Navigation. And F. de Late faith there were no fueh Binds found in thele Hands, as could nor fly far, fuch as Patridges, ©ic. (P. 99 de Orig. Gers. Americ.)
About the ways of the firft peopling of Anmerica rhere have been a vaft number of Opinions and Conjectures, and fome very wild and extravagant; as particularly that of Lefcarbotus mentioned by Laet, viz. That Noab (who he fancies was born there) went either thither himfelf, or fent a fecond Venter of Children into America, after he had divided our three Parts of the World amongt his three former Sons. Bur this feems directly contrary to the Hittory of Genefis, where we find that all the Eaft was peopled by Shem, Ham, and Iaphet, and their Pofterity; and is allo afferted without any manner of Proot, Ground or Argumenr. Leaving therefore this and all other Opiniens, which feem to me to bave lizte Foundation from Reafon, Hiftory, or Collation of Cuftoms; I thall infift only on fuch as appear to have thofe real Foundations to fupport them.
But here tis neceflary to premife, thar there were found in America at irs firf Difoovery by the Spaniards, People of fo very different Shapes, Colours, Habits, Cuftoms, Languages and Manner of Living ; that 'tis alinoft a Demonftration they did not all come from the fame Orixinal ; but probably were peopled from different Parts of the World, and at different times, and that fome of their Inhabitants canie to them very early too. For tho all the Inhabirants of the grearContinent of Eurape, Afin and ifica, did come from Noah's Sons, who yer differ as muchifrom one another in many Parts, as the fevcral Inhabitanss of America do; yet this will receive fome Solution from the Moraical Account of the Confufion of Languages. But chis canhor have place with thofe who firft peopled Americn, undefs you. Guppofe a fupernarual Effect witheur any Ground or Reafon.
Hornius very judicioully, in order to clear the wayy for the better difcovery of thafe: Perfons wobo did foft prople Americe, firt confiders what Nintionoughe jufly to be cxcluded from that Claim, and hews who did wof: go rhither. And firt he makes ir probable, that the Inbabitants of America came not from Spedeland, Norway;

Denmark, Germany, \&c. becaufe all the Inhabitants of that new WTorld are black hair'd, tho not cunl'd and woolly like the Etbiapian Negroes., The Northern.americans alfo were found to have no Proper Names, neither Gensile nor Perfonal: Andif any, Part of is was peo pled: from the Gelf.e, the Northern Parss muft : But the Celf, were always curious and exact about Names; and therefore the Conccit of Grosius abour America's bemy peopled chiefly from Normay, feems entirely groundiefs, as $\mathfrak{f}$. de Laet hath fully proved; tho' 'ris likely that Groeniand might have fome of its Inhabirants from thence, but thefe did nor fpread far.
'Twas about the Yeas 982 afeer Chriff, when Erivu: Ruffus peopled INand, and fome part of Groenionis, and the Chriftian Religion was plantedtherc ahour 18 leans after : Wherefore fince no Fcotteps of Chrittianity were found in Am:ric.t, thele Gromianders conld fent few or no Colonies far inro America. Alfo the Northern Americanswere all withour Reards, or ar lcaft gencraliy fo: For $L_{a}$ fiacz de cionsad faith he never faw in allmexico above one old Man hearded; whercas the Celfer, or antient Gruls, wore all Beards. There was no Fooutters found in Anerica of that common Nittion about the Tranfmigration of Souls; nor inthe Southern Partsany that burned the Dead intt:ad of burying of them, as the Afintick Indians always did : Whene he concludes alfe, that neither the Celta fene the firft linhabitants into thic Northern, nor the Indiens thole into the Southern Parts.
Tis very improbable alfo, that either the Greek or Romans could people $A$ merica, tho'from fome force: Etimologies of Words, fome have thought fo: And the Reafon is, becanfe they were kept within the Medite,rancan by the Carthaginians, and had no Settlemenas on the Coalts of the Atiantick Ocean, from whence they could get into the New World, if they had Skill in Navigation to artempt Difeorcries of that nature, as is doch not appear they had.
Tho alfo fome, as Ariu: Montanus, and from him ochers, have been very fond of deriving ieme of the firft Inhabitants of America from the fews; and tho' fome Authors, as our Brerctood, fuppofe.the Ten Tribes which Salmanazar and his Succeffors carried Captives inro Af Wrin, to have gotten. (I know not how) into thar New World: Yer there being no fuch Rite as Circumcifion nor any orher, purely Leaitich, found amongft them, this can have no folid Foundation. I know fome heve aid, that the Americans were found to be circumcifed, but'ris owned they were but very few; and thole perhaps, as others judge, apeared to be fo to Icls curious Obfervers, becaule their Preputia werc eaten away by the Pox: Bur bosh Acofta and Herrera, on an exact Enquiry, conid find no Signs of a truc Circumcifion. From which 'tis 'plain, that neither the ? Nation that conftantly ufed Circumcifion as a Religious Rite, did people this Part of the World; from whence all the Turks and Mabometans are alfo excluded. And if the Sytbians or Tartars had any flare in the fending Inhabitants to the Northern Parts of America, 'twas beore they received Mabometani/m, and with it Circumcifion: So that America was either peopled before Mahsmot's Time in all irs Parts, which is highly probable; or at leaft by fuch as were not of his Religion.
And as there were no Foorkeps of the Femif, fo there were none alfo of the Chriftian Religion found in America at iss firf Difcovery. Some indced have faid, that there werc Croffes fonnd erected in 7 ucatan and that they had 2 Tradition of their being left chere by aMan beautiful and glorious as the Sun ir felf, and who died upon one of them; bur this feems a meer Legend, for $P$. Mertyr faich there is nothing certain in this Relation. And Herrera juftly fcruples at Gomara's Relation of there being Croffes of Aurichalcum and Weod, placed upon the Graves of the Fucatanefes; becaule he faith rhere is no Aurictalcam found either inf fucatan, or any where elfe in America: And Garcilaffo faith, that ar Cuzco there was indeed a grear Marble Sronc in the Form of a Crofs, but it had no Religious Ufe. Some infint mach alfo on the Ufe of Baptiom among the $\mathcal{F} u$ catanefos, to prove it to be 2 Chriftian Colony: But as every one knows Baprifm was a Rire in ufe long before Chrift, and in many Places of the World; and that thereforenoching certain canbe concluded from thence: So 'ris cercain that the fucasanefos never had any Bapcifm as a Religious: Rite properly to called; and all the modern Spandif Writers, on a nearer Enquiry into the State of Ameriec, do deny that there was any fuch thing as Chrifian Ripes found amoing them: And their abominable Idolarry, Human Sacrifices, and orther barbarous Ufages; fofficiendy fhew, that they had not their Original from any Chriftian Nation; for wherever thar Religion hath once been eftablifh'd, all fuch Heathen Rites and: Cuftoms have fallen before it. It feems therefore plain, that America was nor peopled by Chriftians, but probably had its. Inhabitants in all or moft Parts of it, before our Saviour's Incarnation; as will furtherappearafter.

Origina

'Tis not likely alfo, that any of the firft Inhabitants of America came from Erbiopia, or ar leaft very few of them, becaufe there are no Ethiopic Negro's, or ar leaft but very few, found there, bur what the Europeans have carried thither: And for the fame reafon Num Guinen alfo muft be excluded from being fuppofed to have fent any of its numerous Inhabitants thither, if our late Relations are rrue, that the.f are all Negro's there; for the firt Difco erers mention a vaft variety of Colours and Shape among the Americans.
Indeed Hornius cites Peter Martyr and Gomera, as making mention of Come Eshiopic Negro's, which were found about Carcta in America; which probably might be driven over in a Srorm, or mightdelignedly go over from Congo in Africe; for Lope? thith the Pcople thereabouts antiently had Ships carrying 200 Oars.
And thus having endeavoured to hew from what Parts of our World America was not peopled, ler us next enquire from whence it probably did derive its numerous Inhabirants. And to begin with the Northern Part of it: 'tis not unlikely, as Hornius obferves, That that Tract of Land mighr reccive its fift Pcople threc ways: OntheNorth from the antientScritians, on theWeft from the Plicnicinns, and on the Eaft from the Cbinefes.
There feems good reafon to believe, that the Pb.cnicians went very early into America: For when the Camamites were expelled their Country by the Children of If racl in fofhua's time, 'ris very probable that nceefity drove them ro leek new Habitarions; efpecially if the Story of the two Martle Pillars, which Evagritus Sclolaflicuscitesout of Procopius, be true : For he faith thefe were fet up near Tingri or Tangier, and had in the Phenician Language and Character this Infription upon them. We fly form the Eece of thrt Rebler Jomuah the Son of Nun: And that they would have recourfe to cheir Shipping too for this purpoie, for which they were antiently very famous, fecrns paft doubt.
They went early inro Spain and Africe, 'is certain; and tome Writers lay they went all round Lybia (which anciently fignified Africa.) This they could not well do along the Shoar, but mufe venture out far into the Ocean; and therefore they might as eafily from thence fail into Ainerica, as to the Canary Inands; which is not above is days Sail from the Canaries: And ris fact that they were as far as the Canaries and Azores. Strabo faith exprelly, Tbat enering the Aclantick Ocem, they buils Cities beyond she Herculcan Strcits: And allo that thoy bad many and great Ships in ours, and in zbe moft outward Scr. Eratsflibencs allo and Straboboth fay, that the Phrenicians teing infefted with $W$ ars at heme, rook Shipping, and fought new Settlements intheAtlantick Occan: And the fame thing we learn from Diodorus Siculus, lib. s And that the Anrients had a Notion of anotherWorld, or another Parr of ours, lying beyond the Arlantick Ocean, is very plain and evident. Elian in his third Book faith, thar Silenus told Mides, that befides Europe, Afia and Lybia (or Africe) there was another infinitely large Continenr, in which were great Cities, and People of different Laws and Cuftoms from ours; and where there was 2 raft Quantity of Gold and Siver, which was lefs valued therechan Iron with us. No doubralle thefe were the great Illands mentioned by Apuleies in his Book de Mused, on the Authority of Arifotle and Theopbraftur. And we find in Senean, Avirus faying, Fertiles in Oceano jacere terras, ultraq; eum, rurfus alia Littora, alium jacere Orbem. And in the Meden of theother Sensef, you have chis remarkable Pafige.

To which maybe added what ive find in Ammianus Mar cellinus; which is, that there was an Ifiand in the At Famick Ocenn, larger than all Europe.

But to return to the Planician Plantation of this New World ; Hornius thinks there were three eminent Voyages made by the Phenicians into America: The Grit under Atles, who, Picto in his Critios 1aith, was the Son of Neptune (a Pherician Deity) and ochers call him the Son of Crelus: and the Brother of S.rturn. Unde this Athas they paffed the Strairs, of old called Hyrules Pilatr, and coming into the Occan, gave the Name of Atlansick to it, which it retains to this day : And it appears from Strabo, that all the Sea round about $A f i a$, and great part of Africa, was called che Atlansick Ocean : becaule, he faich, Arabia Fxlix excended is felf as far as the Adlantick Ocem. In this At/antick Occan, the old Pbonicians found a great Mand as large as Afia and Afiz cn, which they called Atlentrs, and I think conld be nothing but Americn. This famous Aslantis is nentioned by Plato in his Tim.cus and Critifs, and by many hath been thought to be entirely a fabulotis Relation: Bur Plaro bimiclf exprefly faith, That be doth not write a Fable, bur a truc Hiftory. And Proclus cires onc Marceilus an Ethiopiar: Hiftorian, who relates the fame Story as a Truth ; to which may be added, that Crentö, Tlato's firft Interpreter, takes the thing to be a true Hiftory, and no Fable. All this confidered, tho there are, according to the antent Cuftom, fome fabulous Srories connected with the Relation; yct there is very good reafon to take it to betruth in the main, fince there is nothing impofible or impribable in the Account of it: For the Phinicians had vcrie early, good Ships, and did not ufe to coaft along the Shore onl:, but venturd out far to Sea in the clear and fair time of the Year, guiding their Courfe by the Sun and Sars; as they might very cafly do: And in this poine they were fo skilful, that all our Aftronomy at firf cance from them. And we find Pliny, lit. 2. $=\%$. 16. complaining, that the Men of his time were lazy and enervated, the Skill of Navigation lof, and the Defire of feeking New Worlds and Regions extinguifh $\stackrel{1}{d}$
There is allo good Aurhority from Antiquity, that the Phimicians made a fecond Vo:age into Americer: For what can be plainer than wha, we tin in Diodorus S.: us, liil. 5. Pci 299.300 . Elic. Ihticaia A.D. 6004 . where he tells us, "That the "\%ronicians did very antiently fail "out beyond Gerc:les's Rillars, along the African Coaft; and there meeting with Srorms ard Compets, were carried to the remoteft Parr of the Ocean, and after many days came to a vaft Illand many days Sail from Lybia, and lying very far Weft. This Place had a - fruitful Soil, navigatic Rivers, and fumpruous Edi" fices : And from hence the Carchaginians came to the "Knowledge of thefe new Lands. And in another place he faith; "That the Carsbaginians finding that "they were offen" preft with Wars by the Trians and " Mauritanians, toak Shipping, paffed Cadiz, and fail'd to this new Region in the Atlantick Ocean, and planted 2 Colony there; but kept the Difoovery a " long while clofe, that if they fhould ever be driven ' from their native Soil again, they might have this ' Place to retire to. This is a very plain and remarkable Paffage, and can be meant of nothing buc Amsrica, to which Flace the Defcriprion given by Diodorus doth well agrec: And this alfo will help us to guefs pretty well at the Time of this Expedition; for it muft be juft after the Wars above-mentioned between the Cartbaginians, and the Trians and Mauritanians.

The third Voyage of the Pbenicians into Americe, Hornius iudges to be in Solomon's Time, when the Tyrian Flect went to Ophir for Gold. Which Ophir he thinks might be Hijpaniola or Caba in theweft Indics: And certain it is, that in the former of thefe Ilands Bartholomaus the Ncphew of Columbus found Gold Mines of a prodigious greatnels, viz. of 16 Miles in length; but the Natives then had loft the ufe of them (Novus Orbis Regionum, Šc. p. 77.) And therefore Columbus, Vetiblus, Rol. Stephanus, Genobardus, and many orhers, have believed this Hifpanicla to be Solomon's Ophir; as Arius Montanus, Goropius Becemus, Guil. Poftellus, Marcus Mrrinus, Brixianus in $1 i b$. de Arca No.r, Ant. Poffevinus, $\mathcal{E}^{\circ} c$. do believe it was fomewhere in Peru. And would the Place from whence Solomon's Ships were built and did fet out; which was $E_{\text {zion }}$ Gaber, agree with this, 1 fhould think alfo that there is great reafon to fuppofe Opbir to have teen Hifpamiola, or fome Place thercabcut. But aficr all the Endezvours of Goropius Becanus, who was the firft, and fome ochers, to prove Efion Gaber to be fituated in the Mediterrancen, 'ris plain from 2CIron. 8. 17. I Kings.19.25. that Ejim Gaber was in Idumea; or Edcm, which David had conquered, and on the Shore of the Red Sca. Goropizs Becanus alfo would have Solomon's Tbarfißh to be Tartefus in Spain; whereas'tis phin chat Tbar/bi/b is only a gencral Word for the Sea, or Ocean, as appears from 2 Kings 22.48. where fehofaphar's Ships are callcd Ships of Tarfhifb: So likewife in 2 Cbron. 20. 36. to go to Tarthilh, fignifies to gn into the Sea, or into the Great Sea. And confequendly fthe Navy of Tarbifbin : Kings: 10. 22. muft be under-ftood in the fame general Senfe, for a Flect that were to fail in the wide Sea, or Indian Ocean, in order to ferch Gold from Ophir, or Zeikn. Which being determined, as Lippenius in his Navigatio Selomonis Ophiritica, cap. 2. as Lippenius in hobart in his Canaan, lir. I. cap: 44. have Sefl. I. and Bochat put it out of doubr: 'Tis then certainly a very unrcaConable thing to fuppofe that Solomon's Ships thould go all round Africn, and thence into America for Gold. Wherefore Oplir muft be placed fomewhere elfe; and the moft Icarned Bochers makes two Ophirs, Vid. Phaleg. lib. 2 c.tp. 27. One in Arabia very rich in Gold, and from whence the If ratites had it before Solomnn's time, when the Tirimns firf madethem Navigators. This Ophir was the Country of the Coffenit.c of Ptolomy, the Gafand.s of Diodorus, and the Cafindres of Agati.archides. But the Dilur to which. Sotomon fent for Gold, he fhews to be the Taprobana of Piolemy; the Inland Sci/an, or Zeilan, in the Enft Indies. See alfo his Canaan, lith i. crep. 46. But tho' I cannot think Hormius is in the right in afferting that Solomon's Ship; went with the Trriens into Americn Sor Gold. when they went to Ophir from the Red Sen; which alo is contradictory to what he himfelf had before advanced, that no fors had ever been in America: Yet I can iec no reafon to denty that the Triens and Phornicims might gothitherfrom Tyr, or other Ports in the Mediterame:n, as carly as in Solomor's Time, and 'tis likely, before that. For they had Colonies, very anticnly in the Arlantick Occan, un the CanaryInands, and in the $A$ ares; and So mightas eafily go to America from thence, as from the Serwits thither

That the Cenary illands are the fame with thofe anioncly called Pertimate, is certain; and what /tormius luggelts is very probabic, that they derived their Name of Caminies, notid Canilms (for Gimare faith, when the Fo-twne Ifes were firf difcoverd, there were no Dogs found there) but à Cirnenere, from the Pbenicians, who as Scylex Caryandenus faich. Ifed so Sail often fram the tontinnt of Africa to Cernc, and back again. The change of the Iecter $N$ into $R$ is very ufual, as in Nebuchandrener forNituchadnean; and Cerne, fome think, is only a Contraction of Canaria. In the time of Pliny and Fiblia tis laid the Inhabitants of there Inands left them; and fince we have no account whither they went, "ris likely, as f. deLact oblerves, that they went into Amewice: and after this, they grew fo barbarous, that, as Fiornals faith, "tos certein they bad loft the Ufe and Knomicdge of Firc: Tho' it appears alfo from Pliny, and other antient Writers, that when the Fortumate or Cans${ }^{2}$ Illands were firt difcovered, there were the Ruins of grea: Buildings found there; which thews that formerly they had been well inhabited.

We lind alion from Stralo, that the Phenicians did very carily tail to the Caffiterides, but concealed theit Difcoicry: He faith, they found the Inhabitanits to be Wenrercre, lonsteat ded life Gerts, closhed in long black Gowns, $\therefore$ : they waiked with Sceves, were defirous of Pcace, and iono: rion to Meritime Affeirs. Lib. 3. Which is juit fuch a Defeription as Athan.cus gives of the ancient Spaniaids, and thercfore 'ris probable thefe Inanders came from thence. And it being now agreed, that by the $C$ cifleceides in this place, Strabo meant the llands $A$ pores; 'ris an caly Suppoftion, that the Pbocnicians might thence fail into Americt, as well as from the Continent thither. Which confirns, another way, what Pleto faith, via. Fiom Aclantis (or America) Men went to other Fhends, and from thence to sbe Continent. When the $A$ ano res ware difovered by the Flandriens and Portugals, they were uninhalised, their People having probably all gone into America.
It hath been generally thought that the Antients dated nor venture ouctar to Sea, bur always coaited along the Shores: But thefe Voyages of the certhat:niens to the Fortunate or Canay Iflants, to the Azores, \&cc. plainly diforoic that Opinion: And befides, we find Herodotus ia his Mcipom. Taying, that the Cirthazinians faild all round rifice, which they could not well do along the Shore, Sailing being there much more difficutr and danprous than it is further out at Sca . And Herodctus faith alfo, that Necho King of Eeypr fetting out from the Red Sec, faild all round Africe as far asciadiz, and fo back again to Egpt: 'Tis agrect alforhat the Illes of Cape orde were poopled firft by the Posanicians, from thence tis an eafy Paflage to Brafic in Americe; and the Manners, Language, Form of Body of the Brafiliens, agrees with that of the Autololec, or Inhabitants of thefe Illanis, who are Getuli, not Ethioper. And now we are bereabouts, it may be proper to take notice of thofe Sitimenck Negro's which Pet. Martyr and Gomera tell us were found in the Region of Carctain America, if fuch there are; whotis probable might ger over from Congo in Africe, where, as Lopez hainh, the Nasives bave har? Shipsof 200 Oars, ashath been before obferved. 7 . dc Laet. Faith chat Tercere, one of the $A_{\text {anows }}$, lies almof in: the Mid-way berwecn Spain and Aniirrien : whercfore the Phernicians might as well go from thence, inco 1 m :ric, as from Spain thither.
There are found alfo in Amerita many Words, Civil and Religious Rites and Cufton:s, which femplainly oo be of a Punick or Pis,nition Orignal; and tho perhaps thefe fingly raken may not be of wenthe crough o convince, yer in the whele they muft be allowed to be of confiderable force for the proving the Surpolition we are now upon. Henitrs think, the Names of Pemin ma Pune in Peru, and Purnatade, to be plainly Pumick: as alfo ${ }^{\prime}$ inoles, the Niames of the moft antient People of New Spain. But certain it is there were many Wiords there found that are plainly siva: $\mathrm{a}: \mathrm{cm}$; fuch as athenamagos, the Son of Mago; Betm namion, the So:n of Ommia; the one an emincre Cartioginat, Family, the latter an Arrbien onc. Ahout the ifflimus of $D$ :aicn, as Perer Marty and Gomare both fay, there werethe Werds Al-raibes, Abibeibas in ufe; and in 于ucatun, Al-dita; in Guadalaira there was found the Woal Ber-Gimare; and in Nixapa they had Baiderecs; in Cumane, Reratiochi : And the threc laft Ind:in Kings in fommica were alfo in many words a plain Derivation from the famnus Piornician Word Innk; as in itutura, a famous American Prince in Calibana: and in Proir, the Word Anaser:e, as in Aitior Ififpenile, the bad at Anckeranc.
And mechinks tis rery remariable, that the Nates of Nem England thonld call the Screntionce wast and niser $x$ Pankunnw, which in their language figrified a $B: a r:$ for there being no refemblance berween the Fignete of that Conftellation, and that Animal, 'tis hiphly yrobaile that they learnt to give it that Name from the Pbenicians, who did call it io. and from whon all o:te Aftronomy is originally derived, ard noft of the Names of the Conftellations came.
There were alfo fome Pfirnicien Ritcs and Cuttoms found in Americe; hut Procefs of time, and the Invafion of the Scythinns, who, as you will find below, overrun moft Parts of Ameriea, did make great Confufion and Intermixtures in things of that nature.
Thus there wexe found abour Mante, Tragnemecus, and the Lake Titicace in Peru, prodigioudy large, fplendid and excellently wrought Buildings of a round Form, and arched over like an Oven or Tenr, exactly refembling the old Punick Mapalic; and thefe were fo antient, that they were buile long before the Family of the Inc.s had the Government of Perin. Alfo in Hippomiola the Huts of the Natives were buitr, as P. Marter tells us, of a Spherical Figure, of Wcod, and in the Form of a Tent attherop.
Gomare tells us, that in the Ifbmus of Panam: the dying Kings ufed to kifs the Feer of their Succeffors. which was an old Pliznician Cufiom. We, find allo from fofeplous, in his firft Book againg Apien, that the Pbonicians uled to cut or fhave all Parts of their Heau but only one Lock unon the Crown, thith they wed se the fucatancte wear theirs. It hath been theivn above, that the firf Inhalirants of the Cermot Ihatis, werephas: cians; and there is a great Agreement between the Canarinns, and the Pcople of Paric and Derimin in Americe, as to the preferving the Bedies of the Dcad, and hanging them up in their Houlcs: And as 'twas the Cuftom in the Canaries to give their Princes the firf Night with cuery Bride, fo was it alfo in Nicarcequce).
Hornius obferves very well, that tis probable many Egrptians might go along with the Finaicians intu Am:ricn, as well as into Grecce, Now there are fome odd Eeyptirn Cufoms which were found in Pcru and Nicaragury; as that the Husband hould fpin, fweef and wath the Houfe, while the Wife did all the Bufinels abroad; and thar the former fhould make wates genubus inflexis) the larter Corpere crecio. Tis well known that Clam, Funter Hamner, Beai or Belir, was the antient Deity of the Pbonticians: of whofe Name here is fome Remains found in Fucctan, where they called one of their old Prophers Cinila-Chem-bact. Por phory cites Sanctioniathen to prove that the old Pl:anicians afed to facrifice great Numbers of their Children to their Gods, and to ufe for a Form of Adoration, Kifing their Hands, cutting their Flefh, and letting out their Blood: The two former of which Cuftoms were common in Peru and fucatan, and the latter was ufed in Mexico and Nicarazuay. Eufob;z, harh ficwed from Scarhoniathon, that paying Divine Honour to fuch departed Perfons as were fametis for all Actions or Inventions, was anold Phenician Cuftom; and this the Inhabitants of New England had amongit them.
And thus there fectiss to be many good Reafons for fuppofing the old Pla,ificinns to have had very early a Knowledge of Anerica; so have faild frequently thither, and to have peopled a good part of ir: But luch was either their Envy, Avarice, or defign of retiring thither under the Preffures of a War, Er. that they kepe this Difoorer; as a great Secret: And the Certliat inimis forbad all manner of Navigarion thither, under moft icvere Penalies, and by a publick Ediet (faich: fornius) excluded not only others, as the Tyrriani, bur alfo their own Pcople, from failing into the Athantick Ocean; which they could eatily do, being Mafters of the Siraies.
And this will help us to account why Amelics, tho to well known so the anticnt Phenicians, thould be loft to the Memory of their latter Succeffors, and why the Americins thould lofe almoft all Remembrance of their Origina!, and deyenerate in many Places, into fuch Barbarity and Wildnefs, as they were found to be in, on the Spenierds firt Difcovery of them.
But tho' the Phanicians were thus the firt Pcople that went ous of the Mediterrancen into the Atiantick, and So into imrtica, yct'tis probable enough that the $S p$ priavds mighr go thither afterward; for we learn from Hiftory, that they fent ont Ships on furpofe to make D froverics in the Arlantick Occan; Platcich, relling us, that Sertorius went out with that delign. And Lact and Hornius fecm to the to guefs very rafonably, that the Spraia de being harafid and preft with the Punick War, took tie Carthaginians Ships, and Henno for their Pilor aid Cipain, and fought new Scars for themfelves in the Occat. We have been cold, that plain Remains of Spanifli Sini,'s have been found in the Arabian Gulph (and no doubt they might much eafier go to Americe than thither) and ser. ib. fajth that the Spaniards were antiently Pivates in the filentich Ocean: And it appears from the fame Author in fereral Places, that the Spaniards abour Crecs had anticntly great Ships, were very skilful in Navigation, and cid more than onic go round Afriza, as Leec obfetves in his Anfucer to (i, otias, finc5. Wherefore when thefe were drivenby the Remans, they might fly firtt to the Canatics, or orher loands in the Atimutich, and thence into $A_{\text {merice. }}$
The Nul:i:n Geographer tells us afro, that fome moors were once fiuted out from Listom, with Ships victualled for many Months. to make Difonverics in the Dark Sea (as the Arabians called the Arlantick) and after many days Sail haviog found iome Ilands, they were driven by a Storm back to Afic:, and chence went home re infeeta. 'Tis frobabie allo chat fome Ethiopians might go defignedly, or be driien into Americ., not long before the Difcovery of this new Wiond by the Spaniards: For tho' fome few Nesw's were found in America; yet their Number was fo limall, and themfelvesconfined to one Place, that tis wery hkely they could nor have been there any confiderable tinuc betore the Spaniards found them in $B r, s / i / i$
There is alifo a wother Account of the Peopling of fome part of Americ.a by an Expcdition from Whales, which hath fomething more than Gueffes to authorife it, and is this. Poroll, in his Hiftory of Wcles, faith, that A.D. 1 170. Owern Guirnsti beiny dead, and his Sons quarrelling and contending for the Government, which a Baftard got from them; onc of them, whofe Name was Madoc, got proper Provifions, Éc. and fought for new Regions in the Ocean; and thar leaving Spain behind him, he bent his Courie to the Weftward, and fo difcovered a new Woold, where he found many wonderful things. This he came back and told to his People, mighrily praifing and extolling the Bezury and Fercility of the Place, which he found entirely uninhabited. After this he went with a great number of People of both Sexes thither again. and ferted Plantations there; and returning home, fe wenr a third cime alfo with Io Ships (as ITackluit faith) If this Account be true, as 1 fee no reafon to dittruft it, the Place Miedoc went to muft be Virginin, New Englend, or fomewhere thereabouts. In contirmation of which Peter Miartyr in Decad.7. cep. 3. Taith, that the Virgininns and Guatimallitis ufed to ceiebrare the Memory of one Madoc, as an anticne and grear Hero amongtt them: And in Secad.s. c. s. he makes inention of the Words Matacrutrt.t and Mut-Inga, as being in ufe among the Guatiminilian:, in which there is a plain Allufion to Madoc, and that with the $D$ foftned into $T$, according to the "retct way of Pron'nciation. Now thefe Welch-men mintiligg with the barbarous c.bichimece, there might in minting with the barbarous chichimece, there might in

I proceed next to confider another very eminent way by which America was peopled, and frem whence' 'ris probable it had far the grearelt part of its Inhahitants, and that is, from Scytiza: And by Scebia I underfand what the Greek anticnely called by that Name, vin. all that Tract of Land which lies Wefterly, Northerly and Eafterly of the Cafpian and Euxine Seas. The barbarous Inhabitants of this mighty Extent of Ground the Antients fometimes called Arimai, as we learn from Pliny, from whence afterward the Word Arimafpi was derived: And the Parfians called them all Sacs from a neighbouring Nation of the Scerbizms of that Name as indecd they were all called Scribians from a People of that Denomination fituate ar firf in a little Place about Araxcs, and who became very cminent for thcir Courage and Conquefts; for they gor into their Power and Poffefion all the Country lying berween Mount Caucafus, the Ocean, Pclus Meotis, and the River Taneis; and from thefe came the fierce People called Pali, Nap.r, Saci, Maffageta, Arimafpi, &sc. of which fee Diodorus Siculus, lib. z. Bibliotheci. Thefe Soythians after they had run over and filled all the Northern Afic, you will fec by and by, rambled in grear Numbers into Aimerica, and that, hy ways open enough (faith Hornius) both to the Weft and Eaft; but the larter was the calier: And accordingly it hath been obfcrued, that Ameica hath been much fuller of People in thofe Parts of it which border on Afia, than towards Eurcpe. Grocius excepts againft this Opinion of the Scythans Pcopliny dmerica, becavfe no Horfes were found there at the firt Difcovery of it by the Spaniaids; which yer the scythians were always famous for the ufe of. Bur to his it may be anfwered, that the Scytbians, when they came fo far North, as to the Paffage by which they went into America, would find their Horfes quate ufelofs to them; neither indeed is it probable that they would live there: For on the Icy Ocean there are valf Numbers of Sgrbians (faich Hornius) which are derived. from the Husns, and other People which were famous for the ufe of Horfes, which yer now do entirely want them, being not able to ufe or to keep any there: And therefore inftead of them they ufe their Renriferie or Rain Deer, and great Mattiff Dogs: Which Cuforn (to confirm what we are now advancing) is found in feveral Places of Amcrica. And tis remarkable that Tacitus, in his Book de Maribus Germennrum, at the end, faith that the Fenni, who certainly came from the Sarmatce, bad no Horfes; and 'tis very likely that Horfes will nor live in fuch cold Climares. Grotivs alfo fuppofing that there is no Way by Land into Amiericit, objects that the Sothians were no Navigators, and fo corifequently could not get thither. But that feems to be a Miftake in Fagt; for Diodous mentions a Sea-light be tween the Amazons (which were Scothians) and the $A_{1}$ lantii. The Scorch, whom Cambiden proves to have a Scythian Original, failed firn into Ireland, and then into Calctonia, in the Age of Orefius: The He, uuit, whom Zozimus reckons among the Scytininis, poteft themfelves early of the Tisulc, as Hurnius afferts. The Navigations of the Ruffiens, in the Euxint, are as cmincut in the Gre. Hiftory, as thofe they have made in the Northern Ocean are in ours. And Hornitus, iij. 3. p. 142. de Oitio Gent. Americ. faith, that in the Ealt, the Tav arrs had a Fleet of 15000 Ships between Cors.mgai and Caigui, where the River Comoron runs into the Sea; and this in the Time of thair Emperor Kullai, and beforctheir taking of Mangi, which is Clinc. Lusooicus Frois, in his Account of Jopen, Saith that the Fapenefes relate of the Feza or Tartars, that they fail'd from the Continent to the IMand of Mateumai, which is 15000 Paces from the Kingdom of Legeran in fapan. And to put this Matter into a clearerlight, we learn from Thuamu, lib. 67. both the manner of Navigation ufed by the Tartirs, and why they carried noHorfes with them : tinen in their Rambles they come to an Arm of the Sea, or a Serait, thicy Lill (Gaith he) their worf/ Horfes (perbaps now rendeid ufirfs) and with their Skins turned the prong Side cutwara, and their Ribs inftead of Timber, they make Borts, which they Gow together with their Hor fes Hair, large enough to hold 8 Men a-picec, and fo they prfs over. Now whythey might not $g 0$ into Americe, if there be a Pailage for chem, as it will appear below that there is, no good Reaton can eafignd.
And as the Nations very far North ufed not Horfes, which by reafon of the Cold will nont live there; fo neither had they much knowledge of the ule of lron:

For Tacitus faich of the Fermi, in his Book of the Manners, ward and Wefward, and that cithcr by Land, the Conand Cuftoms of che Germans, that they for ment of Iron tinents chere joining, or elfe over but Narraw Sernirs of uffed to head their Arrows waith Bones, as is practifed in the Sea. Thofe thar went to the Weftward, might go many Places of Amcrica, who feem to have bad but littie firt to the Banks of the River O:y, and fo to the Shore knowledge of that Metal, becaufe they were peopled in of the Frozen Sea, up towards Novia $\overline{\text { and }}$ cmin. This Part a grear meafure ly fuch Nations as had it not in ufe, as feveral of the Scythian Nations had not: For Strabo faith of the Meforgeta, that they uled Brazen Weaporss of War, becaufe there was bur very listle Iron amongt them; and the very fame Cuforn was found in America, where there was but very litule Iron ufed, bur all their Weapons were ufually made of Brafs But that they were perfectly ignorant of the ufe of Iron, is a great Miftake, tho' Pcter Mertyr too raflly faith it ; for Acofa mentions an Iron Cage, which the Mexicans ufed to put Offenders in ; and the Paraguayans ufed Pieces of Iron for Mony: And $\mathcal{F}$. de Lact Speaking of the Peru vinns, faith, that they were in a great meafure, but not entirely ignorant of the ufe of Iron.

Hornius thews that there were three Nations of the antient Scythians which went into Americu, the Humni, the Kiths, and the Sina. The Humni were a very large People, containing the dlani, Tingri, Turce, Tartari, Fenni, Lucum,res, Ting ffit, with many other barbarous Nations inhabiting the Shores of the Icy Sea, as we Iearn from the Words of Ammianus Marcellinus. And yet plainer fpeaks Rubuquir, as I find him cited by Hornius: Trau, Volgnm, ©゙c. "Beyond the Volga, towards "the North, there is a Region called Pafcatir, from " the North, there is a Region called Pafcatir, from " whence the Humi and Hungari toók their Original, " and the Language of the Hi.ngari is the fame with "that of Pafcntir.

Hornius affigns two Caufes for the Scytbians rambling into America, their numerous People, and their conflant Wars: For the Vanquilhed, or the weaker People who could not make head againft them, always fled as far as they could out of the way, left they fhould be eaten by the Conquerors; for the Scytbiens ufed to eat their Enemies: The antient Sothians were alfo mighty Hunters, and Purfuers of wild Bealts. Bemfinius faith, this brought the Hunni out of the interior Afic info Europe; and therefore the Flight of the wild Beafts, i there was Way palfable for them (of which hereafter) might ealily draw the Scothian Hunters after them into America. The Sotbinns alfo never had any fixed Place of Settlement or Abode, bur changed rheir Camps, as the Seaion of the Year, Game, Wacer or Woods invited them, never ftaying long in a Place, but concimally fecking new Habitations and new Regions to hunt in. Therefore on fome preffing occafion, they might travel either over fome fmall Scrait, after the manner above defcribed, or over the Ice into America: As to which latrer way, it may seceive fome confirmation from what Rubriquis faith of the Tartars, that they ufe to invade, in the Winter, the lllanders called Teuts and Manfe in the Frozen Ser, up above Tartary, getting over to them upon the Ice: And the fame Practice, Olaus faith, was in ufe amongtt the antient Sueci.
Hornius thinks nis not difficult to guefs ar the time in which thefe Scythiens and Huns went into Americe and to be fure it was mach later than the Voyages of the phanicians thither above-mentioned, becaule the Northern Parts of America, which thefe Sctbiens peopled, were much thinner of Inhabirants than the Southern Regions: And indeed tis likely no Pcrfons would have taken to fuch a cold Climare, unlefs driven by Wars, and forced by Neceliity : And fuch a Necefficy did fall upon many of the People of the Northern Parts of the World about the Year of Chrift 400 , in which the Affairs of the North were in the urmoft confufion, and they were fo over-ftockt with People, that they rambled almoft all manner of ways; and then "tis probable thofe that were nearef to thofe Parts were driven into America. And this receives a good Confirmation from the Account the Americans gave of the Chichimece, a barbarous Pcople, who in their Hunting and Rambling kind of Life, and many Cuftoms befides; were mighry Like to the old Scythinns; for thefe Peopic, they faid, came into Mexico about the Year 700 after Chrift, according to our way of Accounting. So that if they went from our World in the Year 400 , they might people the Northern Parts of Americe tolerably well in 300 Years, after that thin rate chat the Spaniards found them inhabited: For Purchas tells us, that all Virginia, Nem-England, and all the Councries up to the Pole, had not fo many People as there were then in London.
So that this fecond Peopling of America by the Scotbian Hunns, is tolcrably well determined to be about the Year of Chrift 400.
And this probably was effected two ways, borh Eaft of the World the Nubion Geographer, and. M. Poulus Venetus call the Regions of Darkne/s; and jua will find thefe Names given to the People that inhabit there: The Calami, Tingefia, Offacivis, Molgzomis, Serpano::s ${ }^{2}$; Lucumores, Griffini, Vogulitict, Samajedi, Papinai, Promkii, obdora, Condore, Loppi, Finni, Caroli, &ce. The hree laft of thefe People inhabited the umoft Parts of candia as far as the Promontory of Rubea, now called Noordkyn. This is the Eaftern Lapland, which the Swedes call Trenncs, others Biarmia; and the gencral Name for all the Finni and L-aplanders is skidfinni, from their wearing Wooden Shoes, which the Swedcs call skidh Thefe Finlanders and Leplanders going fill farth r North came at laft to Nova Zembla, and fo, as fome fay, into Grcenland: For Linfcotius Saith, that in the Mouths fune Fuly and Auguft, thefe Pcople ufed to frequcnt thofe Places for the fake of Hunting, and for the Fertility of the Soil, and the Pleafantuefs of the Place at that time of the Year. In Noun Zembla, Grocninnd, and the neigh bouring Inands, Pcmp. Mcha, and others of the Antients place the Humni and Fenni, or Fancfii. From Nova Zembla and Lapland there is bur a fhort Paffage to Groentand (about 4 days Sail) there being many lilands incerfper fed in the way, which are eafily paffed to by fuch Boats or Cenoes, as are now ufed in Grocntand, &cc. and probably are all, in the Winter, approachable on the Ice. Nor was this Part of the World anknown to the Anticmes, for the moft antient Geographers called that Sca which lies beyond the Promontory of Rusicas and Srandi:, by the Name of Cronium, from an adjacent hara which they called Cromia, or the Ille of Saturn, and fomerimes Ogyin, and which was very probably Grocn!and: And their Ultime Thuie was certainly If.rnd; becaufe Sercbo faith exprelly, that Thale was fix days Sail Northward from Britain; which cannot agree with Stetlend, or any other Pretender to that Name. Groenland therefore was nor fo named from its green Appearance, but from its antient Name Cronion: And that it was inhabited when the Normayans firft difcovered it, is plain from there bring found there now People of Shape, Colour and Manner of Life vaftly different from the Noimaynns; but exaaly like the old Scotbiens, Tartars, Leplanders. and Northern Americans. And we find in Puichas one Ivorus Boty, 2 Groenlender by Birth, but of Norwayan Parents, who giving a Defcription of this Place, faith, that in the Wettern Parts of Grocnland there are a very porent Pcople, who are Encmics to the Normanyms, and which are called Screlingers, and who are of a yellow or Olive Colour, and continaally are rambling, for the fake of Hunting, Fining and Fowling. Minstin Foibifber, about the Straits that bear his Name, found Mer with broad Faces, flat Nofcs, large Noftrils, lung black Hair, and of an Olive Colour; and others. defaribe them as having none or very thin Beards, and in Form juft like the Samicicds or Tartars: And fuch have been the Peopic that have been brought to our Parts of the World from thence. In the moft Northern Parss thereFore of Tartary, Niva Zcmbla, Lapland, Groenland and America, there being found Men of the, fame Suape, Form, Colour, way of Life, Manners and Cuftoms; tis very likely that they are all of the \{ame Original, and that the Northern Partsof Americn were peopled by the Humni, or Scrthians, this was:. The Animals that are found in thefe Places are alike too: in all valt Numbers of white Bears that feed on Fifm; and ris highly probable that thefe came out of Groenland into imerica becaufe in the Southern Partis of America, about the Terra Magellenica, there are none ever found. Arngrimus maintains alfo againft Blefkeniu:, as I find tim cited by Hoinius, that inifland there are no Bears but what come over from Groenlend on the Ice; and that thofe Creacures ufe to travel a grear way on the Ice, and Cailor Pieces of it, the Navigators into thefe Northern Pares do affurc us. Lefcirbotus thinks it probable that the Eiks come into Carada, the Torra de Leibrador, 8:c. from the Northern Parts of Europe, (wimming over a-crofs fome Scrait or Arm of the Northern Sea. And there is one Bibaldus Pirkhaimiru, a German. Writer mentioned by Hornius, who afferts, that "there come into Groenland "ufually from the Nurthern Terra Incognitn, and the "Frozen Sea, certain favage and barbarous Mún called Caroli, in grear Numbers, for the fake of Trade and ". Merchandizing; and that "uis there taken for granted, "chat they come from the other fide of the NorthPóle. Bur Hornius thinks, that tho' Groenland be certainly 2

Part of the American Continent; yer that there Pcople went thither rather over the Ice, from Tartary, &ce. when the Sea was frozen up, than round abour by the Pole, of which Parts we do indeed know nothing certain at all.
Grotins is of the opinion that the Northern America was peopled much after the way we have been now deferibing, but from another Original: He will have the Narroajens to go firft to Ifand, thence into Groentand and after this into Friefland and Efforilend, that is, ar laft inro Americr, becaufe he makes thofe two Places to be part of the American Continenc. Bur as Lact and Horaiius hew, this Opinion is improbable in thefe refpects: 1. Becaufe 'tis unlikely the Jhanders thould not tranfport Horfes and Kine along with them into Groenland and fo intoAmerica; and yet none were found any where in America at its firft Difcovery. ' 2 . 'Tis frange alfo and unaccountable how the Normayan Language hould come to be quite loft both in Groenlan.t and imerica, and yet retained in I/fand. But 3. Chronology will not allow of it; for the Spanierds found that the Americans. had a firm Tradition that the Cinctrimece came to the Lake of Mexico before the Year of our Lord 720 ; whercas I han. $l$ was not inhabited till about the Year 879 ; and rike Nö mayans did not get from thence to Groeniend till A.D. 9 4. Befides, there was nor found in America any Eurepern Corn, which fure the Normayins would have carried with them; as they would alfo their Vicc of hara Drinking, which we find the Mexichis abhored and punifhed Drunkennel's feverely.

However Ho mint: allows, that fome Germans, Danes, and Norwaynse might get into imerica: For Ivorus In n:y and Arnsrmis give an Account of fome Colonics swins into Grocriched from thand; but thefe were but ifew, and were fersled only juit upon the Coaft, and in all probabilit; did not go up far into the Country, nor popletencrintry, but by foma Cafualty or other were Joli or definged; and perhaps this way: Jfacius Romeanus, in his tifiory of the Denes, faith, that Heigelend, Witionntry fiond, Feroc, Findmark, and Cioenland, did antienty iocleng, to the King and Qucen of Denmark and werc only ticquented by the Deni/b Flect. But this muma Navigation thither was at latt omitted for two Vicalons: 1. Becaufe in the Year of Chrift 1348. there was a terrible Piague, which raged almoft every where, and near exhauficd Denmark; to that there wasno year?y Narigation to ciocriand as ufially. 2. And that in his Time the Ice lay in fuch valt Quantities and Heaps in the vay, that there was farcely any cnering into the Pors of Crmentin. : So thar the Pcople of Nermay, Denmati, or from whateverNorthern Parts of Germeny they cance, who went to Gromishe, were either ftarved, or Setroyed by the Natives.
Est a further Confirmation of this Scythian Peopling in ithaina by a Wcttorn Expedition, tis worth obferving what Gearge formicr faith, vity. That tis certain many P'e,ple come yearly from Noon Zembln, by the Frusen ser and the Illand of leaigat, into kufcory, that they may traffick with the Samojeds and Terters: and therefore (tiaith he) we need not doubr bur that Pcople might antiendy go that way into America; for here bitrope and Afia are feparated only from Noora Zembla in Ancrica, by a litele Strait. To which alfo may be added what Irfyuen de Coronado and Mertin Forbifber fay of their own knowicdge, that in Groenlend, and above Citula, the People ufe Dogs inftead of Horfes; as tis well know:n the Siteri of Rufia, and all the Einienter and iophedras upon the Fiozen Sca ufded to do, as t'auat 5 :netmecils us. But I rachor think thefe Dogs are in rabry ve itin Deer, becaufe the Antients call them $\because, \cdots$ and fay there were a kind of Sorthicus who ufed to weon Sias.
A: thetcytan, s and Scytions weare into and peopled ime in iy the Weft; fo a far greater Number, we will Sicy you, weat thither by the Eaft; where the Paffage is here and cafier, and the Regions fuller of People. Aod thi way the Animals found inAmerica, feem to have yone: firs all thar New World almoft, but efpecially the Ciouthera Parts, was fuli of Deer, Lions and Typers: And there being none of thefe Creatures found in Gimishon' 'nor the Teria Min?cllemica) 'tis more than probabic thicy got into it by an Eaftern Paffage. Now we jearn trom Soinus, that as Scy:hia abounded with no Aninals aroctian Decr, fo many of them ufed to fwim a-cinfs a Part or Aim of the Sca. Am. Marcillinus tells $\because n$ mrodgious Numbers of Tigers in fibreania; and Weths wa:th, that all over Tirtary tierc were Lions, Bears and Weer: And we learn from Piony, that there was, a valt Varicty, as well as Mu'titude, of wild Beafts in many Places was renderd a Defert by thofe Beafts. Tis not thercfore an unteafonable Suppolition, that in hefe mighty Wilds and Forrefts of Ruffia and Tertar, there may be many ftrange Specics of wild lieafis unknown to us; (for we fee we have new Cratures brought oo us every day, and newn abour as Atrange Sighic: and why may we not then with equal reafon furpore hat thofe ftrange Bcafts and Birds whach fome ice a bounds with, might come from hence, and by this Ei tern Paffage get thither?

And as to Birds, we Jearn from Patias tonetw, the: there is a great Variety and Qnantity, of them in lar.
 and not connected by land, Homith, chinks very probable rom what the Duch haveobferved in their Navigation.
 found a double Tide, or a meering of two Tides, onir of which fer to the Eaftward, and the other to the Weftward, as it hath been obferved to be in the Merpot anick Srraits, the Baitrick, and as it is in our Channicl and when they were palt whignta, they found anothe Sale and blue Sca. Sirctio, phin, and the Aabicis Gsographer, all fay that $s$ lhit is encompaffed round withtio Ocean in thefe North Eaftern Parts; and 分: $\cdot \boldsymbol{c}$ Prulus Vonetus, Phancenpus, and Vircentior, all anree in the fame thing, naking no mention of any firmo, only they fay there are lilands beynad it, whither the Tartarians get upon the Iec: And Rullw:que faith, the Names of the Inhabitants of thofe Iflands are Tautex and Monf.e. How far the Xirtarian Capes tirecth our to the Northward, is nor yet exaetly determined, bur Hornius compures it to be ta the 70 th Degree of lacitude, and our late Maps have made it 3 or 4 Degrecs yet more North: And the King of Smedens Mathematiciano found Narkum, or the North Cape of Leplend, to he it 72 deg to min. Panius I cenctus taith, that twas ufual to fail from the Continent of Barga so the Ifes in the Finzen Sca; Why not allo inge dmerica: wheh cam:on bo far from thence.
And that antienty there was geod rearon why the Borderers upon the Fiozen Sea thould eixicavour to gee into Americi, if they could, or truft themfelves to the Ocean to feck out new Habitations, fliny acquaints us. when he tells us, ab Anthrepagis Scytisis onniaz deferta fitifce: ufque ad Tabin, guod ejus Gentà Fcrociam fufinners nemo poffer: That is, the Scythian Man-Eaters, or Cennibels, made all the Country thereabouts defert, as far as Talori; becaufe no body could fuftain the Brutal Cruelty of thofe People. Some therefore they killed and cat; others (which no donbt were mane; they drove into the Sea, into the adjoining lilands, and moto amo ca.
And thus Ammirnus Mercellinus relates the Matter: The Man-Eaters, faith he, made all things Defers. where they came; all theirneighbouring Peceple hying before them, and fecking new Habitations as far ous of their way asthey could get. Who thofePeople were hat werc thus driven intofimerica at this time, ceshard io derermine now ; but there fecms, as Hornius thinks, to e the Remains of two old Names in Americe that may ive fome lighe into this matter: Abour Florida were a Pcople called Apcalatci and Apalcheni, which he thinks are the Remainders of the Apelci mentioned by Solimus, and whom he joins with the Mafferet,r; of which hatt Word the Maretec.e, one of the four old Nations of Nem Spain, and the Mafachafero in Nem England. fecm to be plain Derivitives. The other Name is Tamli, a very antient Pcople in Peru, and whom Hormius thinks came from the Trbicni of Prolomy, and who gave Name :o the Promontory Tithis.
Hornius thinks alfo that there was a fecond Ramble into Ancrica by the Eaff, which tho later than the formes above-mentioned, yet was very numerous and famous: For the Hunni, Alini, Merers, Turcer, Taztari, Mog-ice; Pertbi, &c. and many other Nations, of which there is frequent mention in the antient Geography, did then go into that new World.
The Hunni were a very barbarous Pcople, and were placed firft of all in the fartheft Part of Afire next the Sca, where there are the Niames of Cuned and $\tau_{n g}$, People bordcring upon the Mcro/ks ; and that the Cuncdani were the fame with the Humni, is plain, tecaufe they call themfelves Mopoles, and that in $H$ iangerie is felf. Thefe Humei, Cumi, Cunchi, Cunndt, Horniusthinks, pecipled and gave Name to Canada in America; and indeed Canedi is cafly derived from Cumed: : And fince in:antinus his Specham Hifterint:m there is ment wandede of the Hurones, a Nation adjomus to the Mones. he uppofes with great frotabitity, that tron then ane Thefe Cluni or Hunni gning into America with their $\mid E Q U I$, non Penates; Vitaui Herbr; Vcficui Pelles, CuNeighbours the Alani, might give the mix'd Name of Chonsuli to the People about Nicaragua; and in Peru there were found fome that called themfelves Tallanes. The Ing.e were an ancient and eminent Nation in America, whofe Name came very probably from the Unge, among the Tartars. The old Parthi being driven by the Scythians, rambled into almoft all Parts: There is mention made of fome of them in Macedonia by Strabo, Stephanus and Pliny; but the far greateft part travell'd into the Deferts of Hyrcania, Daba, Aria, Margia, \&cc. where ar laft they were called Parfi ; and from hence doubrlefs came the Name of Per $\int_{x}$, which in the Book of Daniel are called Paras and Pharfi: And fince we find mention in Strabo of the Parit, an antient Na tion among the Scytbians, the fame with the Parthi and Parfi; tis very probable the Region of Paria in America took irs Name from, and was peopled by the old Scythian Parii. When alfo we find in Herodorus an antient Scyt)ian Pcople called Napa, and another Pali, we may fairly conjecture that the Nepi in the Inand Trinidada came from the former, and the Otapali in Florida from the latter.

The antient Turca;; called by the Grecks Tauri and Taurifi, Spread themielves largely in many Parts of the World : Thefe being feated at firft about the Cafpian Sca, might with their Neighbours the Tartars go over into America. Hev odorus calls them Iirce; and fo Hornius thinks Strabo fhould be corrected in his Eleventh Book, wherc he faith the Iyrce (nor theCyrcii, as the Vu!gar Texthath) were Neighbours to the Tapyri. From thele antient fyrce 'tis likely the Iroquoi of America might come, and the Souriguoi ton, if what Leunclavius tells be true, that the Hyrcani, which came.from thefe anticnt Iyrce, are called in their own Language $T_{\overrightarrow{1}} u$ ruki. To which may be added, that the Mexicans called God Tcu, which Niceplorus faith was the Name for the Deity among the Turce; and in Mexico a Mountain was called Tepec, which the old Turce called Tepe.
The Tartars were a very antient Sothian People, and of thele Rubrupus faith the truc Name was Moales, and that they would be called fo, and not Tartari or Tatari, becaufe Cingis Can was of the Nation of Moal. Thefe Mo.les are the fame with the Mogoles, and of thefe there is plain Remains in America: In Cinalon there are 2 People called Tamugali; and abour the Rio de la Plata, a People called exprefly Mogoles. The adjoining Provinces to the Meroles. in Affa are Coten, Baita, and Tangur. Now in America you have almoft thofe very Words: In Sr. Martian was a Place called Coto, and in Cbili one called Coton, and Paita in Pcru feems plainly to come from Brite: In Peru alfo is a Place called by the Americans, Trngora, and another Tangaralr. Hornius alfo gives many Infances of the Names of Towns and Cities in $A$ mericn agreeing with chofe of Tartary: And he urges it as a very confiderable Argument, that the Tartars peopled Mexico and the adjoining. Part of America, thar to many Mexican Words end in $a n$, as the Names of Places there gencrally do; fuch as Teuticlan, Coatlan, Hazatian, Queそatlan, Petutlan, Tenouitlan, Ezapan, &c. For an is 2 mighty common Terminarion for the Names of Places amongft the Tartars, and the Inhabitants of thofe Eaftern Parts of the World. And as many Proper Names among the Hums, Scrtibians, &ec. ufed to begin with the Particic Al; fo they are obferved to do in Fucatan, and the adjoining Parts of North America. In the preceding Age there was an American King reigned in Quivira, whofe Name was Tatarax; in which as there is plainly the Word Tatar or Tartar; fo there is the Particle $n x$; which was frequently added to the Names of their Princes among the old Turks and Tartars: And this we find often done alfo in America, where the Names of Stalderax, Almorax; Mereb-ax and Naguatax have been given to their Princes. An antient Name in the Kingdom of Mcxico was Atzlan, faith Hornius, which is purely Turkijh, one Atzlan-beg being Prince of CaraSime in Natolia about the Year of Chrift M.CCC. The Founder of the Peruvian Empirc was one Mango, as the Americans fay; which is a very common Name among the Tartars, whofe 4th Emperor was a Mange: So that there is borh in the Names of Places and of Perfons, plain Remains of the Old Scythians, Hunni, Turce, Tarsari, Mogoles, &c. in feveril Places of America.
In the laft place let us confider the Manners and Cu ftoms of thelc Sotbianr, Huns and Tartars, and compare them with thofe of the Americans; from whence a further Light will be given to thicir Original. Tacitus at the End of his Book de Moribus Germanorum, gives Tarters When aty this Accnunt of the Manners and Cuftoms of the antient vians, Floridans, Canadans, Darienfes, &cc. Ufed to llay a Fenmi : Fennis mira ferites, fada pauperta, non Arora, norn certain number of his Slaves, Domefticks, Captives, eica that they might attend him and wait upon him in the orher World ; which every one knows was practifed by the Tartars. And the Americans alfo did nor Burn, bat bury their Dead, as the antient Tarters ufed to do. The Brafilians in particular, by 3 forts of very odd Cuftoms, hew that they came originally from the Tartars: For firft they flaved their Heads on the top like Monks, as Vincentius tells us the Old Tirtars ufed to do. 2. The Mamer of their eating their Enemics, ufed by the Brafiliens was the fame with that of the Tartars; for both did is in Terrovem, called all the Neighbourhood together; then folemnly flew the Captives, and boiling or roafting them, delivcr'd Pieces of them about to eve ry one prefent, to excire his Harred and Rage againft thofe with whom they were at War.' 3. In Brafile the Child-Wife, as foon as ever the was brought to Bed, ufed to rife and go abour her Bulinefs, and rake care of the Family Affairs, as if fhe had nor been delivered of any Child at all; when inftead of her, the Husband gets himfelf into Bed, pretends to feel Pains, to be weak and out of order, and to be got well again gradually by gentle and nourifhing Phyfick. Now this ridiculous Whim, Pant/s Vencus faith, was practifed among the Arcledani in the extrcam Parts of Ter:ar, as well as in fome other Parts of the World; as we find by Diodorus, Stiabr, and flaceus in his Argoneuricks.

The Americans have been very famous for their wearing of Feathers, the reaton of which feems to have been, the vaft Varicty of beautiful Birds which the New World affords: And this was a very antient Cuftom amongtt the Old Tucer, Tarcai i, Garementes and Lycii; as is plann from Herrderus and other antient Writers.
That particular Puninment for Thefr, whichoviedo and Gomorn tell us the Old Aitanians, or the Inbabitants of Hifpaniole ufed, which was impaling them alive, was alfo of very antient ufe among the Turce, Tirteri and Perfe. And that cruel out-of-the-way Trick, which the Grochland $r$ s, Cinaloenfer, and Nicaraguani, were found to play withtheir Children, of curting and flafting their Checks into grear Gathes, when they were very young, was practifed alfo frequently among the Hunni: And they are faid to bave done it, torender their Males beardlefs. Now all America is beardlefs, but three Nations: And Vincentins and P. Venetus obferve allo, that the Iarsars have noneat all, or but very thin Beards.
TheFood alfo of the imericans correfponds with that of the Tartars, their Bread being Maize, and their Dritk chica; which latter, faich Horniurs, is a fort of Broth made of Polfe, which they drink hot ; and this was certainly the chief Diet of the Turc.s and Tattari: Bus this Maize and chica is ufed no where in the World but in Afia and Sottic: and as Acolza obferves, the Maizic is called Frumentam Turcicum. Tho alfo America abounds with Vines, yet they never had any Wine there, any more than in Tartary or Cling formerly, whatever they may have now.
Twere endlefs to mention all the particular Cuftoms in which the Americans do plainly agree with thefe antient Scrthians; but I think thefel have enumerated may render their Origiral (in part) from Scrtbia very probable ; efpecially if to thefe we add, in the latt Place, their Religious Rites and Oblervations. The Americans worthip the Sun and the Fire, and in Mexizo there was a perpetual Fire kept in the Temple; and thofe Deities were worlhipped by the Scythians, Turca and Tartari. And this is very remarkable, which is taken notice of by Hornius de Origimibus Gent. Americana rim, lib. 3. p.2i6. That the obdore and Condore worthip an Idol called Zlotta-6aba, which was of Stone in a Womans thape, and fituate on the Banks of the River Obi; to this they ufed to facrific: Animals, and to be finearall the Parts of the Idol winh their Biood. Now of rhis Image there are two plain Remains in America At Pifeles in Guaburimalla there was a Stone Image wor Thipped in the Form of a Woman; and in the Iffhmus of Darien there was a Female Deiry, which they called Da-Baiba, to which they paid mighty Honours and Worflip; and here there is fome Agrecment in the Names of Zlosta-Babr and Da-Briba. To their Deitics the Americans afed to offer the Hearts of Human'and of other Sacrifices, as we find wasthe ufual Caftom in 'Mcxico; and this alfo was the Practice among the Tartars And thus mach for the Peopling of America from the North Eastern Parts of Europe and Afia, from the Country of the antient Hiumi, Tartari, and ocher Sotbians in which shere are fo many things dedacing the Origine of part of the Americans from thefe' barbaroas People, that when it is laid all together, and duly confidered, it amounts to a fair degree of probability; and farther than that we cannot pretend to go, there being no way to come at a Demonfration in the Account of things fo ong remote and offcure.
But becaute there were found in Amarics ar ins firt Difcovery, two very pofite, civilized and mighty Naions, Mexico and Perre, which can farcely be fuppofed to be derived from fuch barbarous People as thole Scythians above-mentioned, 'twill he worth our while to enquire, whether there be not good ground robelieve they might have their Inhabitanes from fome Parts of our World where Arss and Sciences were much more cultivated, than in thofe defert and iavage Regions of $s_{i} j^{-}$ riat, &
Now of all the Inhahitants of the Now World, the Pcravians were the beft and moft civilized, as abftaining entirely from Human Sacrifices, or cating Human Flefh; which becaufe of the. Internixture of the barbarons Chichimece, was not exaetly true of the Mcxicans. Ho:nius his Conjecture therefore feems very probable to mc that the Peruviens, Cbiliens and Mexicins received their froft People from Cathay, Eaft miciand Cline, or fome adjoining Nations as polise as thitc. Cotliai was the moft civilized part of all Scyrlic, and was not unknown to the Anticats; for Psolomy mentions the Chere thereabouts, and Strabo Speaks of a Region called Cathea Inlatter Times it camc to be called Kitba; and this was divided into two Parts, one called fimply Kithet, and the other Kara-Kithai. In this latrer part, the famus Prefter folm had his Seat and Dominion of whom becaufe there are many fabulous Srories, Horniur, fiom the judicious Rubruguis and Venctus, gives the following Account. When the Gauls took Antiochin, which was in che Ycar of Chrift 1098, onc whofe Name was Cor- - $2 n$ reigned in Kare-Kitbai, and commanded alfo the Norhern Regions, from whencethe Tarca went out. Inthis Kara-Ki:ha: there was a Neforian Shepherd, who was a powerful Prince of the Pcople of rayman; and this Man, after Con-Cban's Death, invaded the Kingdom of Kathar, and by the Neforians was called Fohn, who have fcigned 1000 Storics abour him; and from hence came all the Fable of Presboter Foln, or Prefer Fobn.
The Abyfine Emperor in Esticipia, hath by the Europcans been called this Name, as well as this Aliatick Prince but faith Hornius, for different Reafons: The latter was called Priftegan by the Perfinns and Neff rians, becaule the was an Apoftolical Perfon, as the Word in their Language Ggnifies; but the Abyfine Prince was by the l:dians and Perfints called Prefier Chan, i.c. Rex Mancipirizm, the King of Slaves; becaufe grear Numbers of Slaves wexe broughr from Ethiopia.
P. Venetus faith, there was in Cathaia a Prince called Prestyter Foin in'his Time; and the fame faith An:onius Andreda Lififanys, who in the Year 1624, went from: the Kingdom of the Great Morul ro.fcarchone that Region, and found thim to have large Dominions.
This Cathey was not a part of the antient Kingdom of Cbina, but a Northern Region adjoining to it, asappears from the Nabian Geographer: But about the Ycar 1360 Certbay and Mangi were unired into one Chinitfe Kingdom, and chen the famous Chinefc Wall wat buile, to fecure hem againft Invafions from the Tartars; and that i: carit bemuch older, is certain, becaufe there is not any mention of it in Prulus Venetus, who wrote abour the Year i 200: It was therefore no doubr: buile by Fiompa, who droveche Tertars out of Cbina, and left them nothing but the Kingdom of Cafcar.
By the anrient Sinenfes or Clinefe, we are to undertand therefore allthofe who lived to the South of Catho in the valt Region of Mangi. Thefe, tho originally erived from the Scythians and Indians, yet had all thei Letrers, Politure, Arts and Sciences, from the Egypian and Pbanicions, who made frequent Expeditions into this Country; as appears from the Voyages of Baccines and Herculks, whom the Antients fay were Phenicians The Trians had a Colony at the Euxine, as mentioned by Am. Marcellintas; which was on the Banks or at the Mouth of theRiver called Tyras. In the Perfian Galph here was an Illand called Tyrus and Aradus, whofe In babitants, Serabo faith, contended that they were derived from the Sidonians. And there was a Nation of the Phenicians called Sinsi, from whom tis very probable the Name of Sine or Sinenfes firft came: Thefe Sinct ived firat abcut Sina in Arabic and Syene in Egypt. The Kingdom of Egypt, it appears, did anticndy extend all over India; Sor Diodorus faich of Seffiris, that he conquered all $A$ ia, beyond Ganoer, as far as the Indicn O cean ; and Serabo faith, their Empire extended as far as Batria, India and'Scithia; and much to the fame purpofe Tacitus fpeaks. Tis very likely therefore, that the egrprians and Phanicians went into Clinc, and there left part of their Language, Hieroglyphicks, I.earning, Arts and Sciences; for there is a grextConformits berween the Chinefs Langunge, Arts, EOC., and thore of the Ota Egyprians: Their Cuftoms atio and ananners agree; the Women in Cbina, manage the Patick Affairs, whan the Men are Cor-Queans, drefs the Victuals and man age all Domeftick Bufinels, and this we leara from Ert of the Antien, Epponims, The Clinecfe had alfo the man of the Antient Egyptians: ibe Chriage of Ovens, which the Egrptians have been fo famous for: And their Why of Writing by a kind of Pietures and Charaters agrees very nearly; and fo did the Writing of the mexicams, with both. For that the CSinefe, Cathayans, Fapponefes, Coreans, and Nations of Enft-India did fail $i=10$ America, feems very Clear and Evident. The Epicerins a Pcople of cmada, afferred at our firft difcovery of them; that to the Weat end of them, very faroff, there lived another People, who affirmed that foreign Merchants without Beards, wfed to come inn great Shios to their Coafts: Who conld thefe be but the fadians or Chinefes? Vafquez de Coronado faith rtatin ,urivirn, there were Ships found whofe Sterns were adorned with Gold and Silver: Which Mafleius int his Hiftory of Indin, and Ladourctur Frois in his Letters.about 3apan fay, twas ufual in the fapanefe and Cbinefe Sbips. And in Acoftr, we find the Spariob Admiral Melendefiws afferting that Cbincfe Ships were found wrackr in the Mare. del Nord above Floridm, which perthaps were che fame with thofe feen at quivira: In Qunculca too, rhere was aplain Tradition of Foreign Merchants which ufed to come thither from the Weftward, and which were clatbed in Sin. Thefe 'ris like failcd under the Tropick of Cancer, and came firft to grivira or California, and thence coafing athong the Shoar, wear down into New-Spain, &c. The Wind is generally fair for fuch a Voyage, and it may be, and ufuaily is (faith Hornins) performed in about so or to days time : and chere can be no reaton to doubt of their failing to Anmerice fance they had Ships fit for this purpore; and linee as we tearn from the Niubirn G:ograpber, that they failed into Arabim, and others fay into iffrica-

Bor befides atl this, there is frequent mention of athefe Oriental Places in che Names and Traditions of the Americans. There wete: a People in America called chiapanec. ; which word is mach the fape in found with Fiapon, or Fapanefer: Theft canmefom Nicarapag; accotding to Ferrers; to which place thiey cume from Guatinoda, and to Guarimidy from Miexico and Culifornial In Guarimala chere is 2 River znd Province called Cbiaf $\hat{a}$, and in the Kingdom of Mexico a Lake of the fame mame. In the If and of St Trinidroda, were is a plact called Ker-Fapen, as Hornius writes.

In the Langange of $\mathcal{F}$ apm, Tonius Ggnifies the $\mathrm{Sun}_{\text {; }}$ Moon, or Stars; and alfo Princes: and: the Mexicans call the Sun Tanaricus, and the ${ }^{\text {Moon Tona; }}$, and in Fifpaxiola, Taino fignifies Nobles or Princes; Fapan, is by the Chinefes called Fequen, that is, Sumrifing; by the Faporefes, "ris called Giapan and Nippon" or Nippon: and by Paulus Venetus,'tis called Zipangri, after the Tartarian Language, and accordingly when Columbus came to Hilpaniole, and heard chere, that part of that place was called Zipangi by the Natives, he thought he had been come to the Afiatick Fapan. The word alfo Montezuma, or Morezume, is plainly of Faponefe Original, and as it was the ufual Tirles for the Emperors of Mexico: fo Motazaiuma in Fapan, is the common Apellation for their Princes, as Hornius obferves. 'Tis very probable thereforc, that the faponefes failing to the Eaftward, went firft to the Intermediate Iflands (for fuch there are) and thence into America.
Fr. Caron in his Defcriprion of 7 f.pan (where he lived from a Child) faith 'tis uncertain whether fapan be an Inand, or part of fome Continent, and that the greateft part of it is yet unknown to the fapinefes themicives. From the Province of Quantc, where the Principal City -... Fedo and the Seat of the King is, he faith, it reaches 27 Days Journey towards the South-Eaft; and then you come to the Promontory of the utmof Province Fowng ; from hence paffing a Straic of Eleven Miles inver, you come to the Land of feffo, or Seffo; which is 4 traftly large and Mountainous, and but thinly inhabited,

- $x^{2}$ and hath never been fully difcovered by the Faponefe, becaufe of its great extent and want of Provifions, tho it abound with precious Skins and Furts. The Inhabitants of this Land of $7 \mathrm{fe} f 0$, he faith, are long-hair'd with thin Beards like the Cbinefe, and perfeetly Brutifh and Barbarous. And to this place (be faith) the $f a=$ poriefe pals over in litule Boars (in Scaphis.)
Why then (as Horniwe obferves, from whom I have cited this) mould not this Land be either the Continent of Armerica it felf, or clfe fome Inand cotrigucus thetres unp, fince: the defoription of the Natives is to Tike thas of the Inhabitants of America thereabours.
F. De Later feemsadfo robe of Opinion that tie Jningion of America wish oux Continent is fomewhere without dre Auric Circte, abont Cathay; which falls in very well with this Account of Fr. Carox : and this place he, viz. Inet oblerve, is near enough to the Place where ite Ark sefied dererxbe Deluge, to account for 2 very early Paffage into Americn our of afa. Coren, which obe.Clinefe call Comas, the Jriponefos Corafs, the Avaives or Imhibinnescall Cacli, whercforc 'ris tikely the Inhabitants of this Cecti, difiovered and nasmed Cralifornia :i and pertaps they fpread thenfflue much forther : for whereis a Province in Floridn called Calos. This Corer is parted from Carlogy (faith Hormint) by a darge River of Three Miles broad, which I fuppofe, ruts out of the Sea of Cango into the Cbinefc Occan: of this Place che principal Province is called Cambals, from whence Hornius thinks Cempoala in News Spain takes its Name. Burcertain it is that Cathay was called Ǩ: saia, and near the Cbinatoall, there is a Lake called K:tha or Kitat: and Hornius faith, the Inhabitants were called fomerimes Katani and 'Goremi ; and that there is an Ifand lying off of the Continent of fapan, called Goso: of which Words thete are many Remains in America, Gotn, Gote, mind Gata, being a common Tenmination for the names of Places chiere, as is plain in the Eperagoti, Arcoagori, &c. in Guiana'; tie Managnti of $C_{y-}$ mann; the alognta of Fhoridn, &cc. And the Natives of New England called the Sea Kithan, and the Ships Kithaneck, probzbly from the Lake Kition.
Near Kalifco there is a City called Clsita ; in Pern yots have Quita, a very famous place; and in $N$-w Grannde; a Sea catlod quim. In Chuquiabi, Hornius faith there is 2 place called Cuxnoart, which, indeed, is very l.ke Kenra Kithai, one part of Cathay.
Then, asto China; there are many names of Places in America that feem ro be plain'y derivable from Cbinefe Words.
In Mechorcuma a Provircce of Mexico, there is a City called Zirkizonta, 'which is plainly a Cbinefi Word, Taintzon being a ufual Word in faat Language, as Hor-

Till one Manco carne to them from their Father the Sinn, and taught thein a better, more civilized way of Life's 'from this Maneo came the whole Family of the Fince's.
This Tradition of theirs, thews plainly that Marco *ws a Foreigner, and that dreirGood Government was Fet up by him all at once, and thercfore the muft have learnt and gain'd bis Wifdom and Politenels in fome other place. Tis very probable cherefore that this Manco came from China, and that with a Good Fleet of Ships, aud as Laet faith, with a Good Army too, or clfe he could nor have fubdued fo numerous a People, nor have broughs them under any Government. I fay, 'tis probable he came from China, or Cathay, &c. becaufe the Architecture of the Ince's in Peru, and all their mighty Buildings, Towers, &c. are exaetly after the Chinefe manner; their Cities alfo were vaftly grear, like thofe of Cbinn: In Cufco there were above ro0000 Houfes. thany of Stone; their Strects, Large, Noble, and Strait; adorn'd now and then with Squares, paved with Fline or Srone, and Towers fortified with Three Walls round them : Many alfo of their Cuftoms agreed with thofe of the Cbinefes.

The Mexicans were the Politeft, but the left antient of any of the People of America; for their Account of themfelves reached not above 300 Years backward: Now fince we learn from P.Venctus, and with a little Variation as to Time, from the Annals of Gonfalo Mendō̃ ${ }^{4}$ too, that about the Year of Chrift 1268 ; the Clininefe. being driven out of their Country by the Invafions of the Tartars, fled into certain remute Iflands and there remained, 'tis very likely that they went then into Amer:ca; and to make this Expedition, Facfur their prefen: King provided a 1000 Ships, and rook with him a gteat number of Pcople. Thefe Remose I/ands, as Hornius oblerves, could neither be Fapan nor fava; for boith thofe were well known to Pculus Venetus, and 'cis plain they could not be the Pbilipizes; becaufe thete ate tio remains of the Manners or Cuftoms of the Clyinefes there and the People are of another Make and Language: wherefore tis likely there Remore Inands were in Amevica; and that firice, Venetus faith they were Inexpygnabiles, it was this remorenifs or diftance from Tartery, that made them fo. And if we allow 100 Perfons to go in cach Stip. which is probable enough (they having large Slups, as hath been thewn above) : the Number of thele Fugitive chinefes sould be 100000, which are too many to be beftowed in any place lefs than fuch great Hands as thofe of Americi. And if any one flould make an Objection to this, on the Account of the Americans wanting Horfes, which thefe Cbinefes may be fuppoled to bave taken with them. P. Vexetus anfirers it plainly, by feying, There were then no Horfes in China.

Hornius takes a great deal of pains to adjurt the Chronology of the Mexicins, and he concludes that their An tiquity cannor exceed the Year 1200 , and thercfore may railly and fairly be derived from this Cbinefe Ramble under Encfur, about the Year 1270 . Bur 'tis like their other Six acighbouring Nations of the Nuvatlace, abour the Lake of Mexico, are much more ancient.; and 'ris very well worth obferving how well this agrees with Mcrezuma's account of the mexicanswhich be gave to Corsci, Tiat they were originally strangers, and came from foreign Parts, from che Eyft, in the Flect of a great Prince fo long ago thins the Memory of the Time was liff. This great Prince mult be Facfur, whom the Clincles call Tupin, but the Mexicens Tolpccin. 'Tis likely Eacfur and hisFleet landad firft on Californic, and from thence they went to the Continent inCancas, 3 Bc . for the Mexicans had 2 Traditi On, that their Ancrfors came:cocr an Aim of the Sca in Canoas inte Atzlanc: by which chey meant the Sea between Califormia and New Mexico, and which the Spanierds call Mare vermeio. For Mortezuma told Cortez that this Prince that brought them over, went home again leaving then behind: that after this, returning again, he would bave maintained his former Aathority over them, but that they had intermarried with the $\mathrm{N}_{2}$ tives of the Place, had built themfelves Houfes, Eic and chofe themiclves a Senate, and Princes of the Pcople, and fo would not receive him at all amongft them He cherefore going back again, or away with the Fleet, they made themicives casoes to pals over to the main Land, and it hath been taken notice of by: almonteall the Writers of Americe, thar abour Califormíf there wetre' found a People that Ipaike nearly the fame Language with the Mexicans, and had the fame Laws, Cuttoms, and Manncrs ; which cherefore wcre theR entains of thofe Cbinffos that. Married, Serded and ttayed in or about Ca-Lifainis, while their. main Body might go over to the Main, and fetcle chcinfelves among the Nicouslafis, upon the Lake of Mexico.
And the Cuftoms and Manners of the Mcxicans were found to be very agrecing wich thote of the cluizefe: The Mexicons had large Cities, adorncd with ftately Buildings, their Streets divided into Squarcs, they had Cantics. Towers, Palaces, and publick Places (like Inas) forche cutcriainment of Travellers, which wert built at the Publick Coft; all which agrees with the. Cuftom of Clina, and other paris of the Eaft, and tho the Pervvians had no Mortar, tewer Towers, and thofe not very high ; yet the Mexicans had both Mortar (or a Cement equivalent chereanto) Edifices built witb Marble, and Towers of a vaft height; infomuch that Corsez faith, he never faw any thing fo Grear and Magaificent, and that their Cities exceeded any in Errope, both for Magnitude and Splendor. In Tezacco, be faith, rhere werc 30000 Houfes; and that Tlafcala was larger and more populous than Granada: and as for their Skill in Mechanical Arts, he faith the Mexicans were wonderfully famous; and that they would draw the Picture of any Animal that they had but once feen, very lively and ftrong.
The Mexicens had two ways of difpoling of their Dead; one was by Sepulcure, or burying in the Ground, and the other by Burning: In the former of thefe ways the Body was aiways kept juft is Days at the Hourf the Deceafed, where there was. Feafting all the while: And for the fame number of Days did the Chi nefc keep a dead Man above Ground, at his own Houfe during which time the Priefts performed the ufual Rites. Their way of faluring their Princes, and going our backward from their Prelence, was the fame wish hazt of the Cbinefes; and the Tirles of their Kings of the ame pompous Nature. The Mexicans had a grcat or Royal Seal, by which all Grants and Publick Bufinef were figned: In Mexico as in Cbina, their Senators or Palatines were ufually Twelve, but fomerimes but Tem The Enfigns and Standards of the Cbinefes were Dragons and Serpents, and fuch had the Perrviems and Mexicans. The way of writing in Mexico was like that of the Cbiaffes in moft things; their Letters ware Pictures or Charecters of things, their Paper made of the Threads of Trees: of their Books compacted of which, in Cozamel, Thearan; Mexico, Nicaragua and Guatimalla; there were nnumerable Volumes found, treating about Agriculture Planes, and the Acions and Affairs of their Anceftors which the brutal Spaniards deftroyed and burnt. The Mexicans cultivated the fame Arts, as the Cbinefes; and in parricular, had Grographical Tables, or a kind of Maps of their Country, very large and curious. The Mexit ans alfo were fo skilful in making Fire-works, that they em to have been acquainted with a Compofition fomehing like our Gunpowder; of which the Cbinefe preend. (as well as of Printing) to bave had a very ancient Knowledge : : . Tho with whar Truth, Horrizus. juft ly makes a doubs; fince there is no mention made of any fuch thing in P,sulus Venetus; and yer-he defcribes feeral of their warlike Eng ines.
And thus have I laid before you in as fair a Light as can, the Evidence I could colleat about this abftrufe and difficult Poins,: The firf peopling of America: and which; when it comes no be confidered impartially, and riewed alsogether, feems to me, to make our the Deri vation of them fiom our World very plain and confpi cuous, and ro point out the Time of it too with fome colerable. ## INTRODUCTION.

P A R T the Second.

Of the Antient Sbipping and Navigation, and their fucceeding Improvements.

WHether there was any confiderable Navigation before the univerfal Deluge may be juftly queftioned; fince we have no authentick Account whereon to build fuch a Suppofition; nor have we, I think, Authority enough to deny, as fome do, all manner of Knowledge of the ufe of Boats to the Antediluvians. Certain it is, thar there was a Sea, and Rivers hefore the Flood; and in above a 1500 Years time, which according to the laft Account, paft between-the Creation and the Deluge, 'tis ftrange that no one fhould difcover, that it was poffibie to be born upon the Water, in proper Veffels. The daily ufe of Water, for almoft all the Neceffaries and Convenicnces of Life; required them to employ hollow Veffels to raife it up with, and to tranfport is to their Places of Abode, and they could not avoid taking notice that thofe Veffels would fwim or float upon the Warer: In the Rivers alfo, thiey could not but fomerimes fee floating Wood, and their endeavour to get it out for their ufe, might very probably fatisfy them, that a large Trec would more than bear the weighr of a Man upon it, without finking, and that it would do this much better if it were hollowed our like cheir Watcr-Veffels: They muft fee that this would be an ufefal Invention to pais Rivers, ©̋s. and cherefore it feems very probable to me, that they would take the hint and improve it, as (its granted) Men did, foon after the Flood. Mofes no where rells us that the Ark which Voril built was a new and furprifing ching to the Antidiluvians; and tis plain from Plato; Lib. 3. de Le-git:- That there was a Tradition of the Art of Navigation, being in fome meafure known before the Flood; but that it was loft with the Boars theinflelves at the Deluge. The fame we find alfo from Ovid's defriprion of the Flood, Mctam. iib. 1. fol. 7.

All this, I grant, is only conjecture, and I defign to build nothing more on ir, than to thew that thofe who boldly affert that Noab's Ark was the firft Veffel that ever was made to carry Mcn on the Water, have nor Tufficicir Anthority for it, cither from Hiftory, Tradition, or Kcafon. But fo much are we in the dark, abour Mat kers ar fo grear a diftance from us, that'tis very hard to determine who was the firt inventor of Ships or Boats afer the Flood. No doubr Noah's Sons all mide a fpeedy ufe of fo beneficial an Invention, as they had occafion. But who they were that from them, brought it in to the learned Part of the World, and taught the $E$ rypricns and Grecians the Knowledge of this Art, it is not now very eafy to fhew. Promethus, Neptume, Mimovea, Fafon, Aclas, Hercules, Danaus, Erytbraus, &cc. are all by fome Authors or ocher, faid to be feverally the Inventors of Shipping. But what is faid of molt them is fo encirely fabulous, that there is no relyance on thefe Relatinns:
It may with great protability be faid that the Egyprins and Planicians have the jufteft claim for this $l_{\text {nven- }}$ tion. Exripides in his Trons, dif. 1. calls Shipping an Egyptian Art; and 'tis certain that they were very early famous for their Shipping. Cicero faith, that the Pbenicians were the firft Navigators, and broughr Merchandizes into Grecer. And Plin, artributes the firft Inveation of Shipping and Sca Bartles to them, Lit. 5 c. 12. Herodetus faith, that the Phrnicians coming out of the Red-Sen made very long Voyages, and carried their Wares into many Phees, and particularly into Argos, a then famous City of Greece. Strabo, Lib. 7. Faith, thar nothing of the Ocean was known in Homer's time: Bur this Bocbart thews to be a miftake. Vid. Cancan. Lib. 1 c.36.and Lib.9. Shews that the Cafiterides Illands (which he makes Ten in Number) were known to the Phenicians, but their Navigation thither ftudiouny concealed. The fame Author, Lib. 16. tells, us thar the Sidonians firft learned Aftronomy and Arithmetick (I fuppofe he means fome kind of Calculation or Eftimation of the Ships way) from their Nocturnal Navigations; and 'tis certain that thefe Arts came Originally from them.

Prima Rates ventis credere doea Tyroo, Tibul. El. 7.
Pomponius Mela. Lil. r. c. 12. and Diodorus Siculu, Lib. 12. both' agree alfo in attriburing the Invention of Navigation to the Pbanicians. Strabo, Lib. 1. gives us good grounds to believe thar the Phanicians fail'd out of the [Straits, and built Cities in Africa, before the Greeks knew any rhing of Shipping, and before the fiege of Troy. Scheffer in his excellent Book, De Militian Nawali, Lib. 1.p.3. Thinks that the Indian Sea was very early known to the Pbenicians; becaufe there is mention made in the Book of 706, c. 28. 16. of the Gold of Ophir: But tho' chis (I judge) not to be conclufive enough ; fince as the moft learned Bochart hath fliewed, chere were Two Ophirs, one in India which was the Taprobana, now Ceylon; and the other in Arabie, of which latter 'tis probable fob may freak. Yet'tis likely cnough char the Phanicians might try the Indian Ocean as early as that: for having Ships in the Red-Sea (which Scheffer thinks was denominated, Mare Rubrum, Punicium or Phenicium, from the Pani or Plosnices) they might eafily venture out into the Indian Sea. Agcnor was the firttTyrian King whom Sclueffer makes contemporary with Gidcon, and his Sons Cadmus and Plocnix had tolcrable Fleets. . This was a good while before Minor, whofe Morher was Eurcpa Cadmus his Daughrer: Minos indeed, raifed a Fleet, "is faid, to clear the Scas from Pirates, but we leam from good Authority, that Phoicas alfo King of Corficn and Sardinia, and Bacclus, had Fleers ong before him, as well as the Pbanicians. Sidm was a flourihing City 300 Years before Minos his time: 'Twas fiuilt as Bockiart faith, Pbal. lib. 4. c. 35. by the Nephew of Cham; and we learn from Trogus (lib. 18.) Poft mutos deinde annos a Rege Afcaloniorum expugnati Sidonii Navibus, appulf, Tyrum Urbem, anse annum Trojana cladx condiderimt: And indeed, tho we find Sidon mentioned 2slong ago as 7 acob's Time, che Holy Scriptures fpeak not of Trre till David's. Reign; and Strabo, and Pomponius Mela, both celebrate it as rhe richeft City of all planicia, and that it was anciently very eminens for great Numbers of large Ships. Agatharchides alfo, and Pbiicftratus, do agree that Erytbras the firft Founder of the Ph.enicians (and from whom probably the Red-Se.a was called Mere Ertetracum) was very famous for his Naval Power. Diodorus Sicu.us, lib. 2. Mentions a very large Fieet (fuch as it was) of Semiramis the Wife of Ninus, whom Ewfebius and St. Aufin place about 300 Years after the Flood: This Fleer engaged upon the River Indus with ne belonging to Scaurobates or Seciobates, a King of that part of the World; and the Ind:an Fleet was worfted: But there are many Circumftances in this Story, as particularly of her Army, confifting of above Three Millions of Men, and her having 2000 Ships, that make is appear Fabulous, and indeed it hath jufty been efteemthefe Scheffer from Steurbechius gives a Figure, but I take it to be purely'conjectural. The tinoina among the Greck were not Ships, but only a kind of larger Boars; whole fides at firft were covered only with Hides of Beafts, but afterwards they came to ufe Planks or Boards, as we do now. Of thefe naoia we find a great many paricular Names in Authors: For the Cymba, which'cis faid the Pbonicians invented, the Lembus which the Cy renei; the Celox, which the Rbodians; the Myaparn which the Tyrrlseni; the Pbafelus, which the Campani and the Scapba, which the Illyrinns precend to have found out arc all called $\pi \lambda_{0 \text { ose }}$, by fome Writers. And fomerimes fuch a little Boat that had but two Men to row, was by the Latines called Briremis: As appears from thefe two pla ces of Lucan.

Wherefore 'twas not only a Ship with two Banks or Tire's of Oars that was called a Biremis, but fometimes a little Boat. And the fame mult be oblerved as to the Triremis: For Plutarch in the Lifc of Thefers Taith, that there was a reioneג $\mu$ (G), or Triremis, of but three Oars; for ir was appointed by the Grecian Council, That no Triremis fhould be fitted our any whither, that could hold above five Men. Nor need we be farred ar an odd Number of Oars, being ufed in a Boat: For both Polybius Lib. 8. mentions the oxépm minuerx (3), a Skiff with five Oars; and Diodorus Siculus Lib. 20. the oxgied $\pi \pi e r i e x \times(9)$, a Skiff with thirteen ©ars: Bur Scheffer himfelf rells us, that Boars with an odd Number of Oars, are now ufed upon the Rlyne. By this Name of $\pi \lambda$ oiz allo were the Acatie, Lintres, Caraba, Epholesa, Capula, cumber, Alvei, \&c. often called: Of which more particularly heareafter among the Alphaberical Nemes of Sbips and Boars. Bochart in the fecond Book of his Geography; Ch. 1 I. (aith, that thefe пnoia were alfo called anciently peïnot: And he cites the Scholiaft upon Arifophanes, Callimachus, and Epicharmus out of Athenaus; to prove that puĩ̀@ was the Term for a Phanician Boat. Aulus Gellius mentions the Gaulus among the fercral kinds of Boats; and Feftus defcribes is to be Genus Navigii pene rotundum. And he fhews, that the word Gaulus among the Pbanicians was oppofed to Arca or Arco: Which fignified a long Sbip, as the Gaulu was a roundifh one; and therefore Bochart thinks with great Probability, that the Argo Navis was fo called froin its being the firft long Sbip among the Greeks: For Pliny cires Pbilofteplanus for faying, That Jafon was the firft that cuer failed in a long Ship:- The Ancient Fleets confifted of rwo Parts; the Oneraria Naves or Ships of Burden; which were of 2 roundifh Form (that they might have the more Room for Stowage; and were feldom or never rowed: But were carried only by thei Sails. And the ocher fort were the rgixegi the Naves lon$g^{a}$, which the Greeks called bixinow, becaufe they were ufually rowed, and thefe were their fighring Ships. See Livy Lib. 25. c. 27. The firf Invention of thefe Longa Naves, or Gallies, Agefias in Pliny, Lib. 7. c. 56. afcribes to Paralus: Pbiloftepbanus gives the Honour of it to fa fon: Ctcfias to Samiras ; Saphanus to Semiramxi, and Ar cbimacus to Egeon, Vid. Sir Walter Radeleigh, Book 1 Ch. 8. p. 114. Others fay, Sefoftris King of Egypt firf devifed thefe Gallies; tho' others tell us, that Semiram ufed them in the Paflage of her vaft Army upon the Indies. Thucydides gives this Invention to the Corintbians; Tertullianalcribes it to Minerva, others to Neptune The Samorhacians claim it as their Difcovery; and fome will have Denaus to be the firft that broughr into Greece: And Pliny faith, that the Invention came from Egypt, Navem Danaus ex Egppto in Grcciam advexit Lib.7.c.56. which thing is alfo firly to be concluded from the beginning of the Fragment of Archelaus in Erripides. Clemens Alexandrinus Lib. 1. Strom. faich, that the firf Ship was built by the Lybien Atlas, and he lived as is fuppoled, about Mofes his Time. Act. 5. Scmi.1.
And indeed the farne thing appears from the following Chorus; and from feveral other Places of that Trapedy: The argo Navé which Bochart fhews (ice? prius citar.) evas called from the Pbxnicin, Word irco crafror,ingin, was a Pentecontoros, as appears from the number of Hands that were in her: Where the Gods and Heroes themfolvestwere Rowers: And the Poer Serenus laughs at Hocules. calling im Scmiremcx, from his awkward rowing in this ArgoNavis. This Argo-Navis fome fay, was built by one Glaucus: Mori3 orus de Orbe Maritimo, p.2. Bochart. Grear Socr Lib. 2.c. Ir. hews that the Arco-Navos was at leatt 50 Cubits, or 75 Feet in length: If the In:e.fatmin were meuaia two Cubits afunder (Vid. Lib. r.c. 2.) And is any thing can be gathered of Certainty fron Tikseritus is calling it renuenia<uz( $(9$, that is, its having 30 Sialmi on a fide, it muft be yer longer. And cercain it is, that it had more than 50 Rowers, tho' num:10 ro'nuds it be called minnonopger, for there were 54 Argonatue in it befides fafon; all the Flower of Grecre, their Defign being to fetch Gold from Colchos, Vid. Plin. Lib. 3.c. 33 : In this Ship there was but one Man to an Oar, and but one Bank or Tire of Oars; fo that this was a ueroxel (G) or Moners. And thefe kind of Ships fometimes had an undred Rowers in them, as Sclieffer tells us, and tho ${ }^{\circ}$ they were a kind of mean Rate, between an Afucria or Piratical Runner, and a Ship of more thatt one Bank of Oars, yet they fometimes were buik fo large as to exceed a Triremsi; as we learn from Disdorus Siculus, Lib. 18.
Pliny, From the Authority of Damaflienc, or as Schrfcorrcets it, Demaftbe, who lived in Herrlerus his Time, tells us, that the Erythrai were the firf that found out the Biremis, or a Sbip with two Banks of Oars, owing one above another. - And Ffrodorus, Titucy dides, and Diodorus, all agree, thar abour three hundred Yeats after the Siege of Tror, $A$ minocles the Corinthimn buile the Grft Triremis, Bur even this Invention Ciemens sicxandrinus (Lib.t. Strom.) attributes to the S.loniank. Accor ding to Pliny the Quadriremis was invented by difotecics Carthaginenfis: And the Quingatircmis, by Nefichoon of Salamss. But this Dicdrus Lib. 14. denics, faying, that Dionyfius after he had taken the Corinthinn Tricemes, conrived to enlarge the Dimenfions and Didines of thofe Ships; and that he firf of all, buile the Quingue Rems. Afrex this, as Pliny tells us, Zcuazoris the Srracu/ian, uilt a Ship of Sex Ordines, or Banks of Oars: And Nefigiton, one of ten Banks or Tires. Alexander the Grear is faid to have built a Ship of twelve Ordines; and Pbiloferephanus faich, that Polemy Soter buile one of freen, And that Demetrius, the Son of Antigonus, build ne of thitty: to which Plutarch agrees. After this. Ptoiemy Ploiladelphus is faid to have railed up the Numbet o forty Ordines; and Ptoleny Philopato, to fifty. But he Ships of thefe high Orders were ufelefs Moies of Timber, built only for Vanity, Oftenration, and Amufeaent.
The Defcriptions of thefe Ships of feveral O cinns or Banks of Oars, before Augu/tus his time, are really very oblcure; and in fome of them there is litele more than Conjecture ro build upon. But whar light I could ger into this Affair, I will here give the Reader; as alfo the ancient Names of the feveral kinds of Ships, Boars Ge. 2nd their Armarure, feveral Parrs, Eic- both in the Gre: and Larin Languages; becaufe, befides irs Curiofity, ir will be of good ufe for our underftanding of che Writings of the Antients, of both thofe Narions.
There is a great difpute among the Learned about the Form of thefe Ships: Some have thoughe that the Ordines are only to be reckoned lerigth-wife, or fore and aft, in the Ship Of this Opinion is Bayfius, Stetriechins on Vigecius, Caftilionius upon Vieruvius, and many others: Aind Scleffer thinks thefe ground their Notion upon what the Sctioliaft on drifthpl:znes faith, whofe Words are: the Scholiaft on Alriftopiznes faith, whote Words are:
 which rows in the Stern; the Zygite, he that rows in the Mid-fip; and the Tjalamete is he that rows in the Hend : Which what to maké of, I confefs I know not. Tho' to this Bayfus agrees, dividing a Ship length-wife into 3 parss, from the Head to the Maft, from the Malt to the beginning of the Acinftstion, and from thence to the End of the Stern: In the firft of which Divifions he places the Threnit., in the middle one the $\bar{z}$ yztre, and in the laft the Thelamit.e: But the Reafons he produces for this are very weak and inconclufive. For certain it is, that the Ordines of Rowers were alevared fomerhing one above another, as $76 f$. Scaigg $r$ in his Comment upor the Chonicon of Enfllius, hath plainly proved againft Bayfus: For he cites thefe Words of Lucan, ibe.3.2.536. (among a grear many other Eidences.;

Sir H. Scuille would have thefe Ordines neither to be accounted length-wife in the Ship, as Bayfurs, nor in height one above another, as Fof. Scaliger; but tranfverlly, or a-thwart Ships?. Bur this fingle Conjectare of his having no ground trom the Writings of the Anticnts, and being refuted by Rivius, I hall do no more than barely mention it, and procced.
However, tho' thele Ordines or Banks of Oars were not all on the fame. Floor, Deck, or Horizontal Plain; yet they were not ncither, as Fff. Scaliger would have them, direfly over one another : For this, as will appear below, ncither the height of the Ship, nor the length of the Oars will (in many Inftances) allow to be pofible; nor is there any Defcriprion or Figure of any fuch Stip to be found in Antiquiry.

Bur before I enter into a particular Detail of the feve. ral Opinions of Authors how thefe Ordines"are to be accounted for, in fuch great Ships, as are faid to contain $3^{\circ}$ or $4^{\circ}$ of them; it may be proper and inftructive to premile,what the Learned Sucllitus, hath obferved in the Preface to his Typlys Batazus;; which is, that the Greck's made two Dítinctions of long Ships: One with regard to the number of Oars or Rowers; and the proper Ter-Toineirnfer, scc. was a Sbip of 20,30 , or 50 Oars. The other in refpect to the number of the Verfus or Ordines Remrum; and the right Termination for this was in mer. Thus the moft antient Gally, or long Ship, was, as it is now in the Medizerrancen, 2 , $\mu$ onfor, baving only one Bank or I ise of Oars; buit a Ship cha: had 2,3 , , ${ }^{\circ}$ c.

Banks or Tires of Oars, was cafled a smighs, a ronipmes. \&c as is plain from thefe words of an old Authbr uron the the number of a Ship's Oars by a Word whofe Termination was in op $(\mathbb{G}$. yet they carricd this no lower than to exeosp $\overline{\text { G/, }}$, a Ship of 20 Oars: For if he had fewcr Oars than 20, they denominated her from the spen $\mu$ (Gr. Par:lus, or Peg on which the Oar was placed. Wherefore. when in Strabo we meer with the Words aninaqdivarraior Boat that was rowed with 15 or 12 Oars only.

There was alfo yer another diftinction of Ships ufed by the Greeks, which 'tis proper enough to take notice of on this accafion ; and thar is, whereby they diftinguilhed. One. Ship of the fame Ord or number of Oars from another, withregard to their bignels; fince they had an halfBank of Oars, eitheratone, or berween two 0 dincs.
 Sncllius, and Potter in his Grce' Antiquities, obficrec; 2 Ship between an Uniremis and a Biremis; as having one Bank or Order of Oars, and half, or about halt; another: And fo the rennmeonia was between a Biremis and a Trieems ; being denominated, as the forner of thefe Aurhors judiciounly oblerves, from the Öder it rpproactoed to, and not from that which it cxicecter.
But to return to the Solution of the Difficulics ations the Ordines Remorum in the antient Ships. Scheffer rejects the Notion of Rivius (which is fince efpouled by Voffius, as I hall how you hereafrer) that there were more than one Man to an Oar: He afferts that the Ship took its Name always from the Number of its Ordines or Banks of Oars one above another, never from the Number of Oars (in which, by what hath been faid above, you will find that Learned Man was in fome meafure miftaken) and his firt Serife of che Marter lay thus. According as a Ship wàs called Biremis, Trirems, Quinquerems, Qusdrayintaremis, Gr. To he fuppofes me had 2,3 , 5 , or 40 inaciat (as thie Greeks called them,) that is, Veryus Remerum, or Banks of Oars: That each of thele Varfus or Banks, was divided into certain Ordines or Clafies; of which 2 Quadriremis hàd 4 fuch, a 0 minquerenis 5 , छfr. more or lefs, according to the Ship's length. And he Gaith, that the Rowers were denominated from the VCrfurs, and the Ship from the Ordines Verfuum : As for inftance; a Triremis was fo called, becaufe it had threc of thefe Verfus, viz- the uppermof that of the Thranit.r, the middlembf that of the zogita, the lowermoft that of the Tbalamite: And in each of thefe Virfus there were three Ordines or Ctaffes extended length-wife in the Ship; which Divifion and Diftinetion he thinks authorifed by thefe Lines of Virgil, lib. s. En.

Where the Verfus are plainly diftinguifted fromethe $O_{1}-$ dines, and the Number of Oars in cach Veffis: And tn make this out he produces a Coin mentioned by Goleius, and ftruck by Lepidus; and alfo a PiCture our of the Naumachia of onuphrius Pavinias. Bur on a maturer confideration of this Affair, he owns this Account to te involv'd with Difficulties fcarce folvable. For both the length of the Ships of the bigher Ordines will not allow of chis; and if it would, the Ordines in the greater Shipsmult be fewer than thore, in the leffer: And therefore he concludes we ought rather to adhere to thofe who make thele Ordines to be accounted in height, and not length-wife.
But however, thefe Ordines were notin diftinct Decks, directly over one another; fo that the upper Rower fat with his Feet over the Head of him that rowed next below him : But they were difpofed into the Ordines by their $\mathcal{F}$ uga, Sents or Benches, and were diftant from one another the fpace of rwo, chree, four or more Cubirs, according to the length of the Ship: And thefe Spaces orDiftances (he (aith) Salmafius and Philander in their Nores upon Vitiuvius have fhewn to be the Interfocimia: And becaule Vitruvius calls this Space dempation, that is, of two Cubits; he rhinksthe Architect fpeaksonly of the vulgar Triremis,' in which the Scelmi were nor above rwo Cubits afunder. Bur that they were furcher diftant in the greater Ships, he julges from what Vitruvius faith in another place (Lib. r. c. 2.) wiz. that from the Interfca!mia you may determine the Ratio of the bignefs of the Ship.. The Rowers fate therefore at a due diftance from each other, both that the Oars fhould not interfere or be foul one of another; and alfo that there might be a Space for the Rower mext above them to fir berwetn them, Gic. And this Difpofirion is confirmed by the Figurcs which Bayfius gives us of the antient Biremes and Tisemes, which have the Old Marmora to authorife them ; and which both Sebeffer himfelf and Mr Porter in his Arclicolori.c Grec.s have inferted in their Books. From which Figures he judges that the Ordines were not above a Cubit one above another, and that they rofe not directly, bur floping. And he fuppofes that this heighr of the O. lines one above another, was lefs in the greater Ships than in the leffer, becaufe there was room for a greater diftance berween the Rowers: And he fuppofes that in that valtShip of Ptolomy Plisiopater, which is faid to be of 40 O.dines, the Oars of the loweft Veifius were but s Cubits long : Why then (faith he) might not the Oars of the higheft Bank of Rowers in thar Ship, and which from Athenaus we learn were 38 Cubirs long, touch the Water; fince perhaps there might not be above 30 Cubits in the whole height of the Ship,or it may be, a yct lefs diftance? This Accoumt he thinks is incumbred with no Difficulties, and will be confiftenr with what we find in all the antient Authors who have writren upon this Subject. As for the three Appellations of the Oars, 'tis probable they came firt from the Triremis, the moft ufual Ship of War, and which had 3 Banks or Ordines of Rowers: Bur thar in larger Ships the Rowers were divided into three Clafes, of which thofe that were neareft the Water were called the Thrlamits, the middle Clals the zyita,"and the uppermof the Tiranite. The Number of Rowers that were in each $V_{\text {erf }}$ fis, or Rank of Benches, was not certain: Sometimes there was 50 , fometimes 40 , Cometimes 30 Men on each ; and in the leffer Ships yer fewer: And every Pair of thefe Verlus wiz the Srirboard and larboard, or the Right and Leff Rank or Row of Benches reckoned together, made the Ordo, the Tire, Deck or entire Bank:- And the Ship was denominated frome the Number of thefe Ordines, exgr. being called a \&uinqueremis, for having five of thefe Ordines one rifing above another: If the Tecicks of Leo may be relied on, there were never lefs thari2s Men or Rowers in each Vorfus,: or not lefs than so in each Ordo; but the exaed Number can't be determined. Silius Italicus, Lib. 14 de Bello Punico, v. 38. fpeaking of a guinqueremis, faith, Pulfabat Tonfis-anSo that ufually a. Quinquiremis may be fappofed to have 400 Oars, 40 on each Verfus, and 80 in each Ordo; if all the Ordines had a like Number. But Scheffer chinks the Nurnber of Ordines themfelves (as he accounts them) abated as you went upwards: So that in the loweft Verfus of a Quinquiremis he makes five Ordines; but in the two uppermof, bur four. From whence it follows, faith Scbeffer, that there never was any Moneres, or Ship with one only Bank of Oars, but what was a Penteconsorus: And below this Number of 50 Oars, the Ship was only denominated from the Number of her Oars, and not from the Ordines: Thus a Ship or Boat of 20 Oars was called exxiopg(G). one of 30 Oars, tpraxoniop (G). There were indeed very large Boars that had but one Deck or Tire of Oars, or which were of the Hompor kind: For we read of the isaxuinopot and the inalionogot; bur beyond this laft Rate of 100 Oars, no Moncres or Ship of one only Ordo of Oars ever went. And let the Number of Oars in one of thefe be what it will, if itwas doabled, or had 2 new Ordo or Deck, or Tire of Oars of the fame Number placed above it, it then became a Biremis; if trebled afrer the fame manner in height, it was called a Trirerailed up to 40 Ordines; or a Ship with 40 Ordines Remorum of an hundred Oars on each Deck, Tire, Ordo or Bank, and of so in each Verfus. Scbeffer obferves very well, P.95. that the Hecatontorus, or 2 Ship with an hundred Oars, all in one and the Came Bank, was more Frequently doubled or trebled up into a Biremis or a Triremis, than the Pentecontorus was: For the Form of this latter Ship requiring it to have but 25 Oars in a Lerfiss, incapacitated if for being raifed up inro the higher Ordines, by clapping more Tires of the fame Number of Oars uponit; for the length of theShip increasing with irs height, there would have been both a deficiency of Hands to row it; and alfo fuch great Gaps or empty Spaces in her, as would have been ufelefs and inconvenient. They did therefore either double, or in fome other Restio encreafe the Number of Oars in a Verfur, in the higher Ships; as we find by the Quinquerems of Pliny, which had 40 in each $V$ erfur, or 80 in each Bank, 400 in alth. Wherefore, fince we find by Polybius (Lib. i.) thar the firt Reman Ships had 300 Oars, and were of the guinquiteons kind (and this was the Form of all their Ships of War, he faith, in the firf Punick War) ; 'tis plain they muft have 30 Oars in cach $V$ crfuts, or 60 in each Ordo ; for that multiplied by 5; the Nixmerus Ordinum, makes 300. In the Fragments of Memzon pur out by Pliotius, there is an Account of an Ofteres of folomy's, called the L-yon, which was admirable for ber Length end Neatnefs: Sbe bad an 100 Oars in ench Verfus; So that on each Side fbe bad 800 Men, i6uo in all. SchefFr thinks this Ship was compofed of a double Hectionorus placed lengthwife, and but of the common height : For the placing of more Qurs lengthwife in a Ship, ionribures much more to her Sailing, than placing them in height one above another.

There is alfo another Diffinction of all thefe kinds of Ships of War, which we find in Livy, viz. Naves mejicIS 8 minoris Forme. The Ships of the leffer Form or Rate were the Moneres, Bircmes, Triremes and Quadrircmes: Thote of the higher Form or Rate were the Penteres, Hexeres, and all the higher Ordines. For thus the Hiftorian exprefles himielf, Lib. 28. cap. 23. Regia Claf fis Septem छ' Triginta majoris Forma Navium fuir; in yuibus tres Hepteres छí guatuor Hexeres babebet; preeter bas decem Triremes erant. And in Chap. 31. Hoftiam Clafts unde nonag inta Navium 'fuit, \& maxime Forma Naves, tres Heperes habebut, , duas Hefteres. Which helps us to underftand his Meaning in Lib. 36. cap. 43. where are thefe Words: Ccntum navibus, quarum feptunginen refic, ceters aperta, minoris Forma omnes erent. Thefe lefferShips the Greekscalled xestipat ; but thofe of the larger, Form or Rate Baefix. The Ships of the leffer Rate or Form were called xumologat, becaufe they had not fo many Banks of Oars as the grearer ones had ; and alfo lay fnugger, and werc murch better Sailers: Wherefore they were alfo called Dromones or Curforiic, by the later Writers. And the Form of thefe began at laft to be changed into that of Onerary Ships, fo that they ferved for both Ufes, as wee learn from Cafliodorus (Lib. 5. Var. Ep. 16.) For fpeaking of their Dromones, faith he, Mille Dromones fabricandos inftrmere decrevimus, qui $\mathcal{G}^{2}$ fruments publica pofint convebers, $\xi^{3}$ adverfis Navibus, fi neceffe fucrir, obviarc.
Vegetius, Lid. 4. c. 33. tells us, that Mark Antony's Fleet tueing routed in the Batcle of A\&ium, chiefly by the Ships of the Liburni; the Romnns made their Ships afterwards after their Make and Form ; and henceforward all Ships of War began to be called Liburne, and the Names of Quinquiremes, Triremes, \&cc. to be little red : As indeed the Ships chemfelves of the higher Ordines were quite laid afide; for we find by Suidas, that rie $\mathrm{O}_{\mathrm{O}}$ sítiar ampon i. e. were Ships, not fo much in the Form of the Triremes, bur more like Piratical Ships, trong, clofe, and of incredible Celerity. And Zozimus ailh, that a good while before his time, the Trizemes were out of ufe : So that thefe great pompous Ships, of many Ordines, were by degrees found to be very unit for Service, and at laft quire laid afide by the Romans afrer the Battle of Altium ; and their Liburna or Gallies eldom or never after that had above one Deck, or Bank of Oars. and never exceeded two.
The Emperor Leo in his Toaticks exprelly calls the Dromones, Gallies; and our Gallies in the Mediterranean at this day are nearly of the Form of the Liburna or Dromones above-mentioned, which the Romans at laft pirchr upon, as the beft and moft ferviceable Ships of War.
Having thus given you the Solution of the Learned Scheffer, of the Difficulties which arifein accounting for the feveral Ordines Remorum in fuch greatShips as char of Ptolomy Pbilopater, &c. and mentioned alio all along with it fuch Diftinctions of the feveral kinds of the antient Ships, as did collaterally occur: I proceed next to acquaine you with the Senfe of the Learned Snellius on the fame Subject, from the Preface to his Typhys Batcous. He takes notice, that the Meafures of Ptolom Philopatcr's Ship were there : She was 280 Cubits, or 420 Fect, in length; 38 Cubirs, or 57 Fect, broad within board; in height, to the Acreftolion, the was 48 Cubirs, or 72 Feet; and at the Stern fhe, was buile 53 Cubirs, or $79^{2}$ : Feet above the Warè. There are swo chings here very remarkable, viz. the great length of the upper Oais, in order to their ftriking the Water; and the vall heigbr and bulk of the Ship. 'Tis faid by Athenous, from whom we have thefe Meafures, that the upper Oars were ${ }_{3} 8$ Cubis, or 57 Feer in length. Now tho' cafting Lead into their Handles, and parting more Hands than one to an Oar, would make thefe Oats eafily moveable, the former of which things Atkenais faith was done, in

INTRODVCTION.

 Mius thinks there was two Men ar leaft to an Oar, and no doubt of it 2 greater number, to the upper Oars: Yethow to account for the upper Oars ftriking the Water when they were but 97 Feer in length, is not fo eafy; or indeed, how a Sbip of 40 Ordines thould rife no higher. To folve which, Srellius firft computes, that from the $O$, Sacrum to the Crown of the Head, in a Man of a mean height, there is about 3 Foor; and confidering that with long Oars Men rife up to pull, let a Foot be allowed for that. This, faith he, will neceffarily make the diffance of 4 Feet betwaen Tranftrum and Tranftrum. Now taking this 40 times, in Ptolom's Ship, there will be 160 fect diftance in heighr, betwcen the uppermoft and loweft Oars: Whercas Athenaus faith, the was in height to the Acroffolion in all but 48 Cubits, or 72 Feer, which is nothalf that. To furmount which great Difficulty, he fuppofes that the Tialamita, or loweft Rowcrs, ufed very fhort Oars; and confequently there was bur little of the Oar within Board, they fitting very ncar the Ship's Side: Bur the higher any Ordo of Oars was, the longer were the Oars, and the greater diftance was the Hand of the Rower from the Scalmus, Hypomocthlion, or Thoul, as our People callic in a Boar. By this means he accounts for Room for the inferior Ordines to move their Head and Body, and to make their Stroke. He juitly obferves allo, that the Oars were not placed dircetly overone another, but each Rower in the fecond Ordo, late in the middle berween two Rowers of the Tijrlamits, \&cc. And as this appears plainly to be the cafe in the Biremis, whofe Figure Bayfius hath given us; fo tis very likely it was the difpofition of the Rowers in all Ships of the higher Ordines. And this being fuppofed, he thinks, if the Interval or Diftance between Oar and Oar, in the fame Ordo or Tire, werc bur fertled, the whole Matcer would be eafily accountable. He thinks allo, that the Tianftre in all Ships, were nor exactly at the fame diftance one above another, which be endeavours to make good by two Arguments. The firt is, that Gince Ptoiom 's $\mathrm{Q}^{2}$ uadrazinteremis had 4000 Oars, if you divide 4000 by $4^{\circ}$, the Quotient will be 160 ; thercforc there mult be an 100 Oars in a Bank in this Ship, viz. 50 on cach fide. Now this Ship was 280 Cubis, or 420 feer in length; and allowing 60 foot for chofe parts of her towards the Ends, which to be fure had no Oars, there remains 360 feer for the whole length of her Decks of Oars. Dividing then this Number 360 by 5o, the Quotient will be bur $7 \frac{1}{4}$ (not 9 , as 'tis in Snellius, who divides by 40 the Number of Banks, inftead of so the Number of Oars (in length) in each Ordio.) Which 7 ; feet will be fufficient for the Motion of the Rowers Body in making his Suroke, and recovering his Oar. Bur to him the ftrangeft thing of all is, and 'tis whar, he faith, is utterly incredible (omnem fidem excedit, p. 30.) the uppermoft Oars in this vaftShip were lefs than 40 feer above the loweft; which he concludes from the length of the Oars, thus: Suppofe a Rightangled Foffecles Triangle, whofe Hypothenufe is 38 Cu bits, or 57 fert, (the whole length of the uppermont Oars, according to Athenaus.) Now tho about one third of this Number ought to be allowed for che part of the Oar within board; yct let there be bur 7 feet from the Scrimus to the Manubrism, there will chen be 50 feet for the Hyporhenufe without boand. The Square of so is 2500 , whofe half is 1250 ; and the Root of this is nor full $35:$, for the height of the uppermoft Bank of Oars above che loweft of all. So that there being 40 of thefe Banks or Ordines, they could nor be fo much as 12 Inches one above-another, allowing the thicknefs of the Trenftra too into the number of 35 feet. So that, faith Snellius, unlefs you fuppofe the Men to be ftowed as they lay Herrings in a Ship, 'tis impoffible to conceive how the Ship fhould hold fo many Rowers. And this Difficulty will ftill increare upon us, when we confider that a good part of the Strip's height will be takenup by 2 Deck over all the Rowers, by Cabins, State-Rooms, ©f.c. And Sncliius chinksthcre is no way to get over this, but by fuppoing theNumber of the loweft Banks of Oars to have been very fmall, but that of the uppermoft very great: Which Accounr renders the Ship a meer ufelefs Mole of Wood, more like a lirtieTown,or a great Caftle, than a Stip: And accordingly we find the Anrients cal ling by the Names of Cyclades fuch pompous Structures as this was. Nay Virgil compares the Ships of M. Antony, in the Battel of ACium, to the Cyclades, which indeed, as appears from L.: Florus, Lib. 4. were huge unweildy things, but yer there did nor cxceed above 8 or 9 Ordines Bur.of fuck as that Ship of Ptyitopater,

Cy-Pelago credas incre reoulfas  Cycledds, aut Montes concarrerc Montibus altos: Tanta Mole viri Turritis Puppibus inftans:

And he thinks that Prolomy Pbiladelphus began to build fuch huge Ships our of a vain Humour of rivalling the Ark of Noab: For he before this of 40 , buile one of 30 Ordines, and anorher of 20 .
He obferves alfo, that the Oiferis of Prolomy Ceraunus (mentioned by Memnon in Plotitis) had a much eafier Explication; and where therc was 2 yet greater Number of Oars in an Ordo, viz. 200, or one 100 in every Verfus. He fuppoles the diftance between the uppermoft and loweft Oars to have been near 40 foot, and that the Ordines were 5 feer one above another. He concludes with telling us, that Archimeles made a ligintironis, which was bigger than this ufelefs Ship of Philopiter. This wenc loaded with Corn from Syracu/e to Alexandria, eing fentas a Prefent to King Pcolomy.
But tho'this Quadragintarcmis, and.another mentioned by Atbenaus, as buile by the fame Prince, wcre vaftly large, there being as much Timber ufed in the former, as would have built 50 Triremes: Yerwere theic, for Bulk, nothing comparable to that Ship which Arctimedes ordered to be built tor Hiero of Syracufe; of whirh Snellius gives us an account from. Abbenaus, and he from Mifchion, who wrore a whole Book of its Defription. This valt Mountain of Wood required 300 Workmen to build her, and had her Hold, or Room within Board fo divided into Partitoons, thar here were good Lodging Roomss Parlours. Places for Study and Learning, Walks, Gardens, Fithponds, Baths, Stables for Horfes, a Temple of Venus, Gic. This Ship was encompaffed round with an Iron Vallus: (fairhSnellius) by which whether he means a Hoop to ftrengthen the Ship, or a kind of Rait and Baluftre to adorn is, ir is nor eafy to determine. But thisShip had alfo eight Towers, two in the Forecaftle, and two in che Stern, and two on each fide of her. On her Deck was a Wall with Forts, and upon this Wall, in the Towers, and in the tops of her Mafts, were Engines of Battery, and for orher warlike Ufes, placed; one of which would throw or caft a Stone of 3 co Pound weight, and 1 Dart of 12 Cubits long to the diftance of 600 foor. And yet this wonderful Ship Snellius thinks was cxceeded in fome meafure by thofe which the Romans ufed to tranfport the Obelisks from Alcxandric to Ofia. See alfo Plin. Lib. 36. c. 9.

This was the Senfe of the Judicious Snellius, a Man of very good Skill in antient Learning, and in che moft ufeful Parts of the Marhematicks: But however bis Account is nor to me compleatly fatisfactory. Let us therefore fee next what If. Voffus's Judgment is abour this matter, viz. about the difpofition of the Ordines, as you may find it more at large in hisDiffertation de Triremium Eliburnicarum Congtructione, printed among his Oblervations, Lond. 1685 . in Latin. He builds whar he bath to fay upon this Subject chiefly on 2 Paffage in Vitruvius, Lib. I. C. 11. where tine Architect fpeaking of the Symmerry of all kinds of Edifices, and how to judge of it, faith, You may judge of the Proportion of Ships by the Interfcalmium, which the Grect's call ievoia. For fo Vofius correets the Word Dipheiaca, as it is in Turncbus, or Iphefiaca, as it is in the MS. in the Cotrcn Library. In the common Books the Word is onmeure; bur this Turnebus juftly explodes, for Vitruroius could not be To abfurd, as so conclude ene might judge of the Bignefs of Ships, from the Interfcnimium, in all of them, beipig of the quantity of 2 Cubits. The interfontmium therefore, faith $V$ offius, was nor, as Learned Men have thoughr, the Space or Diffance between two Oars, or between rwo Benches of Rowers; bur the Space between the Scalmus and the Rower that fate fartheft from the Scalmus : Or to Speak plainer and more fignificantly, the mm nomm, as Hefochius calls it; that is, as much as is the length of that part of the longef Oar which is within the Ship: And this Space the Grecks called eipria, becaufe it was moflly, tho' nor entirely taken up by the Rowers : And this firsoia, hefaith, once known, not ony the Length and Breadth of every Ship that rows is given, bur alfo the Proportion of all Parts of her, and the Length of the Oars; as is now well known to bethe cafe of the Gallies in the Mediserifncecn. And he judges, that the antient Triremes, and the Ships of more Ordines; were built much after the Rate and Proporticn of the modern Gallics, fince their of the modern Gallies, fince their Length to their Breadth is reprelented to be atour 7 to 1 , as it is in cur Gallies. Lucian indeed deferibes a Ship, whofe Length was atour

4 times its Breadth ; but this was nor of the kind we nable Thicknefs for them at the handles, the part of are fpeaking, vir. Ships of War, but an Oncrary one which went only with Sails, without Oars: And was much like our prefent Ships of Burden, whofe Length is abour 4 times their Breadth. And left this great Length in a Ship of War or Gally, Thould prove a weakening to her; the Ancients, as well as the Moderns, placed ftrong Tranfom Beams cvery where a-crofs her, to keep her Sides together: which both ftrengthen'd the Ship mightily. And alfo was of ufe to the Rowers, who always pull the eafice the further they are placed-from the Scalmuts.
As to the length of the Oars, he thinks juftly, that it varicd according to the Kate of the Ship, as it doth now : But chis Mroportion, he faith, is now-a-days obrerved, that if a Gally be 95 Cubits long, and $122^{\circ}$ broad; the length of her Oars muft be 24 Cubits and t, that is, fuppoling half a commori Cubic to be the Palmus Major of 9 Inches: 48 ': fuch Palms. The Iength of the Oar within Board from the end or the handle to the Scalmus is cleven Palms or 99 Inches: And to this part there are placed ufually five, and fometimes fix hands, or Men to row : for about $4 \frac{1}{3}$ Palms from the Scalmus (within Board) the Oar hath no hands applied to ir, fince both Experience and the Nature of things teachcs, that the Rowers have little or no Force; if they fit very near to that fide of the Ship or Boat their Oar is put out from. From the Scalmas withour the Ship the Oar is 37 Palms in length, at the handle it is 9 Inches in Diametcr, and grows by degrees bigger till you come juft to the Sictmus, where'tis 14 Inches in Diameter: And then 'tis 9 Inches again in Diameter at the Scalmus; but without ir, nor above 4 Inches, and this Thicknefs it keeps till you conc to the Palmula, or part that ftrikes the Warer, which is alfo 9 Inches broad. Thefe Meafures all Builders of Gallies oblerve in the Mediterrauern; and unlefs they are oblerved, the Oars will be either fo weak as to break, or fo big as to be cumberfonte and unmanageable. Having premiled this, he cakes Pcolemy Pbilap.ltor's Famous Ships of 40 Ordines into Confideration, abour which yon have feen above the Opinions of cthers. And Gince Athensus tells us, that the longeft Oars of this Ship were 38-Cubits, or 57 feet in length, the Proportions of the feveral parts of thofe Oars he judges eafily eftimable: As for infance, he Gews, that the Thicknefs of thofe Oars, juft without the Scalmus, ought to have been fomerhing above 7 ln ches in Diameter, and that 36 foor of the length of the Oar was withour the Ship. At the part, or handle where the Rowers fare and pulled, it was at leaft is Inches in Diameter: Into which thick handles, if Lead were caft, as Athencus faith there was, they would be eafily enough manageableby 4 or more Hands; efpecially having 2 third parr of their length; or 19 Foor within Board: Which is the Proportion that fhould be obferved in all Oars. He faith further, that there can be no good Rowing Ship but what will havecte length of the Oa withour Board to the heighr of the uppermoft Scalmi above the Surface of the Water, in a Sefquitertian (he thould have faid, Tipipla Sefguitertian) Rario: Or as 3;', to one. Wherefore the Oars in rhis great Ship being 36 Foor long without Board, if when being pur down to ftrike the Warer, they be lowered ifoor from the perpendicular of the higheft Scalmi, the diftance of thefe Scalmi from the Water will be 9 Foor. But then'the next Difficulty will be, how to account for 4000 . Rowers in no grearer an heighr from the Water than 9 Foor, and what is to be undertood by their rifing up to forty Ordines: And how thefe 4000 Rowers could be divide into 40 Ordines. He avoids repeacing what fome learned Men in Fiance have faid upon this Subject: And only obferves, that they have rightly affigned the Rife of there Ordines not to be directly perpendicular, but lopewife, or obliquely: As is apparent from fome ancient Monuments : But he thinks thole are in the wrons, who aflign bur one Man to an Oar, efpecially in the upper Ordines of fuch grear Ships; for fince they allow but a finall part of the Oar to have been within Board, 'tis impolitible fuch vaft Oars would be manag:d by a fingle Man, fo as to be of any ufe. For if this Ship of 40 Ordizes had, as they allow, a Cubirs rife in every Bank. or Order, it muft be atleaft 40 Cubirs high from the Water: So that by the by, fince Athensus faith her Oars were but 38 Cubirs, how could they frike the Warcer. He flews alfo that the Oars muft not only be long enough to reach the Water, but that they muft keep to the Proportion above-mentioned : And confequenty mult have been 180 Feet withour Board, and 90 within: Aifo that thefe Oars near the Scilmus mult have been is Foor in Diamerer; and allowing a proportiofuch an $\mathbf{O}$ ar which is within the Scalmus, would take up. (he faith) the room of a 1000 Rowers.
Next, as to placing the Rowers, and the diftance of their Oars and Benches one from anocher: There is nor much Light to be had from the Ancient Coins and Medals; becaufe there was not room to dxprefs above one Ordo or Bank of Oars, in the Figures of the Triremes and Liburnica. But in a Coin of Cafar Gordiarus, a Dranght of which Sir 3. Mafban had from Caiccar: and which he fhew d to Voffur, there are apparconly two Ordines, one rifing above another. And upon r,ajaris Pillar ar Rome, and fome other old Mas mare, there are plainly to be feen threc Ordincs Remermen suting obiquely. And from hence it was, char Primeinus and ome other Learned.Men, bave fancied, that in the Ships of the Superior Orders, and particularly in that of $F$ rt cmy Pbilopasor, the Ordines were all accountable affer he fame way, viz, in height one above another: But his cannor be allowed, becaufe of the great Abfurditics and Inconfiftencies above-mentioned, which will phainly be deducible from this Suppofition Voflus thinks therefore, that there were never any Ships built with above 7 Ordines or Banks of Oars And this he cites fulius. Pollux, as affirming in thefe words; where he hath corrected the Vulgar Greck Text, by his own Liber Optimus, as he calls ir. iri?

 undertake to give you the Engifll of there words; be caufe Voffius hach not put them into Latin himfelf: And queftion, whether there can be fo much.gaind from hem, as he would infer: But however, 'tis probable hat the Banks or Tires of Oars feldom or never rof higher chan this, in Ships of ufe, as I have in pari oblerved befora.
In order to make out that this huge Ship of Ph: lopwor's did not rife to above feven Ordines Remorum, he next enquires into the diftance tetween Rower and Rower. In the prefent Gailies this diftance is never lefs than 3, and ufually about 4 Foot. And Ferdinarndus Oliverius Lufitanus faith $2 \frac{2}{2}$ Feer is enough. In the Ancient Triremes thefe Intervals between the Rowers, are not always to be confidered after the fame manner If the Oars were to be placed direetly and perpendicularly over each other; the Diftance of 3 Feet or 2 : Feet was enough between Rower and Rower. Bur if he Ordines role obliquely, the Rowers werc at leaft 7 Feer diftant one from another. But this could not be in the Pontick Oderis, defcribed by Memnon in Photius In each fingle Ordo of which he faith, there were 100 Rowers; for if we allow 7 Foot diftance between Oar and Oar, the Ship mult be above 700 Feet in length, befides Head and Stern: Wherefore Vofirus thinks'tis presty clear. that this Oderis had but one Ordo of Oars, and eight Men to each Oar; bur in the Ship of Ptolem; Philopator, there could nor be fuch a Difpofition of the Oars. For if you thould fuppofe, that there was only the space of 3 Foor between the Oars of the fame Ord in this Ship; The at izverror, or Part of the Ship where the Oars were ufed, could not be above too Cubits and fo there would be che fpace of 180 Cubits, in which here were no Oars at all. Now in all Rowing Ships (faith he) more than ${ }^{3}$ ths of the Length of them oughr to be taken up by the Oars. But he concludes, that there was in Reality but one 6th part of Ptolemy's Ships, rree from Oars: Becaufe atieneus faith there were bur 50 Rowers in each Ordo: (1 fuppofe he means on each fide, for so times 40 is bur 2000, whereas here were 4000 Rowers) - whence tis caly (he faith) to gather, that the Rowers were difpofed in oblique Parallelograms: Whofe Form and Length he gives you a Diagram of. In the Mediticerraneen Gallies each Rowers Bench or Sear is 22 Incles high, and out of this. if you take 4 Inches for the height of the Foorftep or Suretchcr; there will remain the diftance of a Cubit or 18 Inches berween them. And the fpace of 9 Feer (which he had before frewed the higheft Scalmi were in this Ship above the Water) would contain 6 fuch Benches of Oars. In his Figures be thews you the manner of the Rowers being placed, and what fpaces ate taken up by the Motion of their Bodies in Rowing, whether I muft refer the Readet. After this, he juftly rejeats the Opinion of Palmerius and others, of the 40 Ordines being all one above another; fince, according to hisScheme; all the Orders of Rowers (above the chird) would rather hinder than forward the Motion of the Ship, by the Oars ftriking the Watcr. And this Difficulty ftill encreales with cheir Notion of theit being bur 2 fmall part of the Oar within the Ship: Efpecielly 800 Ance they will needs have the Oars (as Scheffer in placticulat) moved by bur one Mani a-piece. For how is is porthte for one Man, at tue a littic diftarre from the sealthus, to manage an Oat of the Eethath ath Bipnofs of thore in this celebrated Ship? Since tis forind, that the finall Oars (in Comparion of thore; of a Modern Gally will figuify norhing if moved by but ore hand, tho' at the diftance of 12 Foot from the Stalmus! And yet "tis an Erernal Rule in Staticks; that one Man at 20 foet from the Scalmus, will have as much power to move an Oar, as 20 Mcn fhall have at the diffance of but one foor from the Scrimus. So thar finding infuperable Difficulties in all other Solutions of this matter, he at laft propofes his own Opinion and Judgment abour the Dif pofition of the Rowers in this nighty Ship: And the thinks his Account will folve the whole Affaif, and make is clear aind intelligible. 1. Therefore, he fuppores that in the lowe?t Ordo, or that next the Water, there was but one Man to an Oar. 2. That as for the Oars of the higher Ordincs, the higher they were polited, and the farther diftant the handle of the Oar was from the Scelmus, fo proportionably, had they more Men to each Oxr. 3. That the Giradus and Ordines Remorum, fo often mentioned by the Ancients, are not only tobe fought in the Decks or Tircs of Oais one alsove anether, but rather in the Fuga or Benches upon which the Rowers fate, and to which they went up by fteps. And that thefe Benches were not, as is vulgarly believed, placed parallel to the Sea, or in an Horizontal Pofition, but they afeendederrofe in height obliquely towards the middle of the Strip, fo that the Seats of thofe Rowers upon the fame $\mathcal{F} u \mathrm{~g} u \mathrm{~m}$, or Bench, which were next the Forum, were an entire Cubir's height above thore next the Scut-
mus. Then be gives anocher Diagtain, in whith he thetws the mannet of the Pofition of the Oats ina Ship of fix Ordines: Where the Scaimi of the uppermoft Oarsare 9 foot above the Surface of the Wares, each Orto being a Cubit above that next below ir; and fo every where.
The Thalamitr, or lowermoft Oar, fate 4 foot from the Scrimas, and his Scat was elevated 4 Inches abouve it. The Rower in the fecond Ordu fate 7 feer from thie Scrimus, and 7 Inches above it. The Rowet in the third Orto fare 10 feet from the Suabmu, and 10 hishes above it. The fouth, 13 Inches above, and 13 feet from the Scalntas: The fifth fate 16 Inches over it, and 16 fete from it: And the fisth or uppermoft Rower rite 19 feet from, and to Inches above the Sealthus. And higher than thefe fix Ordines, he thinks, they did nor build, both becaufe the Oars would be of fach a length as to be unmanageable; and alfo becaufe there ean no great ule be made of an Oar, when its hande rifes as bigh as the head of the Rower Next, in order to difcover the Number of Figa, or Benches, that were in this Ship, and how many Rowcrs fare or each Bench, he takes the length of the longeft Oars into Confifderation: Thele Aebenars finth, were 57 feer long; and confequentrly allowing a third part of the Oar to be within Board, as the naturil and $u$ fual Profortion is, the Inrerfontmium, or diftance between the Scaimus and the innerend of the Oat will be 19 feet. Bur he allows a Cubit for the Thicknefs of the Ship's fide, reckoning from the Epifcaminm, or the goint of Decuflation. Then he enquires how much of the ineofcatmium had no Rowers in it: And faith, That in the common Gallies if the Bretefcalmivm be of 17 Spans (or 153 Inches) thert are no Rowers for the diftance of 7 Spans (or 63 Inehes) i.e: $;$ feer 3 Inches from the Scaimus. Bat then the other 10 Spans of length are all rakeñ" up with the Rowers; which are 5 in Number. And he finds from Heffebfus, that this Pro portion was oblerved in the Ancient Ships, which were bur of one 0 dido or Deck. Bur becaufe in Oars of fuch a vaft length as thofe in Ptoiomy's Ships, reptire 2 ereater diffance between the Rowers and the Epifalmium inftead of 5 foot as in the comunor Gallies, let the difance here be fuppored to bes Cubirs, or 7 Pect and an half: Then there will remain the fpace of 121 feet which he fuppofes was taken up by io Rowers;' is Inches being fpace cnough for each Rowet. Aftet this he gives another Scheme of the meniner of placing the fuga of Benches for the Rowers to fit on; which Benches rofe up in height obitiquely one above another: The lowernioft Ordo had bur one Rower, the fecond ewo, the third fous, the fourth fix, the fifth eight, the fuxth or uppermoit ten; fo that in the whole, therc Fuga corr tained 31 Ordine:. And he fuppofes a double Obliquity inthefe $\mathcal{F} u g, a$, i. e. that they rofe or afcended length wavs, as well as in Breadth; and alfo that the Tima, 0: Bearrs which fuppored thefe $\}$ uga were framed fo as toexhibit 2 kind of Grate or Letrice. Between dhefi Gratings, and the $\mathfrak{F}$ nya, he ahows a fpace for the Ma fiers or Commanders of the feveral Banks of Oars, to come to their Pofts: Fort fince berween time uppermoft Rower's thofe was the diftance of 19 feet, ahtho 2 Cubits fhould be allowed for the Thicknelis of the Beams which fupport the $\mathrm{F}^{\prime \prime}$ gin, and as much for the way for Officers and Commanders to goup to their Pofts, there will yet remain the fpace of 3 feet: Which Breadth is fufficient, becaufe this Ship, he faith, was remads 0 c. had thrce for:

After this he conliders the feventh Ordo of Oars. where the Rowers fate above the Xranfira; whercas the other fix Banks of Rowers before froken of, fate all below: And he faith, that tho this may feen to be a higher place than that of thofe which rowed below on under the Tranfora, yet that in reality it was not fo, the Grh and 7th Ordo Remorum being of an cqual Height from the Water, as were alfo their Scnlmi: which feeming Paradox he thus cndeavours to make one. Thefe Tranftra were Beams going a-crofs the Ship from fide ro Irde, and not only fo, bur rusring cleas thro' the Side, and jatring out to a confiderable diftance withour Board. Thele ferved fometimes for Benches fur the Men to fit and row on, which was their firf Signification; the Otver Benches being called fuga: The Tranftra the Grecks called $\Theta_{\text {exirt. }}$. Befides the above-named ufe of which Tranfira for the Men to fit upon and sow, as well withour the Ship as within it, they ware alfo the greateft frength Ships of fo long a Form could have, and which indéed kepe them together incirely: And without fuch 'ris impotfible to fuppofe that Veffels which were 7 or 8 times as. long as they were broad, could bear the Motion of a moderate Sca. And tho in many of the ancient Coins and Medals which have Ships fampt apon them, the ends of thefe Tianftra withous the Ship do nor appear, the Axis of the Eyc being fuppofed to be ar right Anglee with the Ships fide ofually; yet howeverin fome Coins they do appear very plainly and particularly in the firt of thofe meorioned and dcfigned by Bayfims, in which the Mutuli or Brackets fupporting the Proieciure of the Tomfora are very villbis. And the fame thing may be collected from Archimedes his Ship, mentioned by Athonaus, where the Strupp: and Scami Remorum, are faid to have been a conveniens diftance without the Ship. And thefe ProjeRures wish the coverings upon them, bad anciently differcat Appellariens acconding to the parts of the Ship they poffert. That which was next the Poop, they calied fugum Puppis, asyd that nexe the Prow, Jugum Prorie: And thefe Polnx laith, they called allo Maxille and ate. The ve ry extreme ends of thefe Beams jetring ous without Board in the Foremip, the Greek: called imatiat, as being like Ears, and thefe Beams wcre always made of very firm and ftrong Wood, left in an Engagement, she Oars thould break off there. For in a Sea Fight the Enemies directed rhe Rofitn of their Man of Wat after wo Several ways: If they engaged a Ship Head ro Head directly, then they endravouted by means of the Rofira, to break off the two Eminent Epotides which were in the Prow, fo that they being broken and the Scatmi cartied off, the Ship would be fo difabled thar the could not row; and beindes, the ftroke did alfo very much endanger the cartying away the Anchors of the AdverfeShip, which hung ar her Borv. Butif inftead of atracking her a head, they aimed at the Stern : Then the Direction of the Roffra was againft chofe Eposides to which the Rudders were alfixed: Which they hoped to bear away by the Shock, and fo difable her from trering.
Upon the Tranfira were the Carnftromats built; which were a kind of Decks, or racher half or quarter Deck's : For they were not clofe every way, but always left open in the middle, that there might come in Air to refreth the numerous Rowers. And thefe Decks did nor only reach as far as the Ship's fides, but projected our beyond them a good way, eren as far as the Scalmi of the uppermof Oars, and were fupported by Brackets or Stanchions, at the cxternal Ends of the Tranftra. And therefore Whon Thucyrides faith that the Naves Longa Were withour Decks or Coverings before the Perfic Wars, he means within Board: For we find from Hic mer, that the moft ancient Greck Shipshad thofe Cover ing upon the exteriot parts of the Tranftra: Bur they were open in the míddte within Board, for the Reafons above given. Thefe Cerciftromate wete alfo both fup ported and adotfred by fitlanites and Telemones, chat is Pillars of Wood, carved afiet the fame manner as the Caryntides: Which wese Human Figures, whofe Heads fuppoted ohe Entablature of a Column.

INTRODVCTION.

After chis ufeful and curions Digreffronabour the Cutafiromata, he returns to the Point he was before to make grod; and that was, that the uppermoft Oars of the 7 th Ordo wese not higher, or had their Scalmi further from the Water, than thofe of the fixth Ordo next belont shem, and under the Tranffra. And this he accounats Sor by Bewing, that the Thranita, or uppermoft Rowt ers, fare not above, but fidewife, of the upper Zyitat: And of thele he gives 2 Diagram, and fuppoies that the Oars of thefe Thranita werc of the fame length and magnitude with thofe of the uppermoft Zygite; and cont fequentiy there was in each Ordo an equal number of Men to anOar. And having obferved before, that the Scx Ordines Remorrm contained 31 Ordines Remigum, accounting from the Rower next the Water, to the uppermoft of the Zyrit., if you add ten more for the Thraxist, you will have 41 Ordines of Rowers upon ieven 7 mis or Benches, and rifing gradually intofevenOrdines Remorrmon. Now fince it appears from Athenaus, that in this celebrated Ship of Pbilopetor, there wert so Oars of a Side piaced lengthwife, and thar the was of the heighte of 7 Banks or 0 dines of. Oars; 50 maltiplied by 7 gives 350 . which doubled, gives 700 for the whole nmmbei of Oars the was rowed with. And fince it hath been probably thewn, that for the Management of thefeOars there was allorted 41 Men to every 9 Oars, accounted in height one obliqucly aboveanother, zteording to the Remorum Ordines: You muft fay by the Rule of Three, if 7 give 41 :: whar thall 700 give? The Anfwer will be 4 too. Wherefore chere muft be in this Ship, according to Voffur his Account, 4 roo Rowers; which agrces well with Aticn.cus, who faich, there were above 4000 : In a round Number thercfore the may be called a rupencinigns, or 2 Ship of 40 Ordiner, tho the was in reality of a little larger Kate.

And thus doth this very Learned and Judicious Man account for the diftribution of the 4000 Rowers in this eminent Ship of PtolomyPbilopater, offers it for a Solation of the Difficulties about the Ordines, which I have the more largely given you, becaule it is much the beft of any I have wet with; tho' even this is embarraffed with fome Perplexities, not to fay Inconfiftencies, which feem to arife from our want of knowing the exact Senfe of the Greck and Latin Words ufed by the Antients about Shipping ; but this is no more than what at this diftance of Time we may expect

The Learned and Inquifrive Scbeffer came near to 2 zight Solution of this Matter; but be was hinder'd from compleating is, by falling into an Error, in which fome ochers bave alfo followed him, or he therm; which is, char none of the antient Writers mention Oars thas were moved by more chan one Man at a time. Bur this Miftake $V$ offzus thews to arife from their not confidering, that both Greeks and Lasines ufe the fame word for the Oar, the Men that row with it, and the Vefiel rowed by it; as wedoat this very day on the River Thames. For when we.find Cicero, in his 5 sh Orat. in Verrem, $\mathfrak{F}$ j ing of the Srracufans, Conjeciffe multitudinem Pirataram ex ipfo Navigio, quod erat fatum fex Remorum numero. Tis phain he could not mean there wene bot 6 Oars in the Sbip; for how could thore be called a Multitude? Nor could he mean that the Ship had fex Ordines Remorum; for no Piratical Ships ever were of that form in his time, bur were baik low and flar like the modern Gallies: And therefore he muft mean, that the Oars were moved by fix Hands, or Men, z-piece. So allo wben in Livy, Lib. 33. we find menrion made of a Ship of K. Phitip, which, he fairh, tad fodecimV Vrfus Remerum. Vofius having proved it ro be inpoftible, that any Ship thould either directly or obliquely rife up fo high, thinks that by RCmos here is anderftood Remiges; and that either there were fome Oars in this Ship fo large as to be moved by 16 Men; or rather that the Sthip having 4 Orders, Banks or Tires of Oars, the loweft were moved by one Man at each; theOars of the fecond Bank were feverally, moved by 3 Men ; thate in the 3 Ordo by S , and thofe in the uppermoft Tire by 7 Men: For $7+5+3+1$ makes juft 16. Bur this is no more than 2 probable Conjccture. And after the fame manner doth he interpret that Paflage of L. Flows, where he faith, that $8 t$. $A$ Anthony bad Stipsfrom 6 to 9 Ordines Remormm: Heunderftands by it Ordines Remigum, and that fome of his Stips were fo large, as to traxe their upper Oars momed by 9 Men; becaure a Ship of 9 Banks ar Orders in height, muft needs have het upperilars perfectly ufelefs.

And fo much for chis difficule and preplexing Matcer; 1 proceed nexe to comfider che feveral Kinds, Farms, Divifions, Wes and Names of Ships, with their Parts, Rigging, Tackle, Armarurc, Orrmanerks, Commanders Officers, छ\}c.

Mr. Potter tells us rightly, thar the Greeks divided theit Ships into 3 kinds, Srips of Burden, of Whax, and of Pafn age. The firft fort, wiz. Ships of Burden, they called roginjor, oxvedis (whence our Eng(i)f, Hislk) and in the general manä.. There the Latines callicd Onereria ufually, and fometimes Annotine (Vid. Lib.3. Ceffaris de Bell.Gall.) That is, Viriturallers to their Ships of War. The Greelt calted alfo Ships of Burden armfina', from their being more bulky, and coming nearcr to a rquad Figure thai the Men of War, which were paxpas, lean ;and lang, Fhere were feveral kinds of thefe Ships, of Burden, as you will find below in thegeneral Alphatert of the Niames and Kinds of Ships; and they ufually went without Oars, ufing only Sails; but fometimes they mad ufe of Oars too, as is plain from many Paflages in An tiquity. Thefe kinds of Ships werc called ${ }^{\circ}$ ridit; be caufe they iwere frequently towed after the Ships of War which went with Oars, as being of themfelves very Ilaggiff Sailers: For axsoi wexe che Remulci or Ropes with which one Ship towed anorber. The Nivies Onereria were by the Grecks called $\pi$ noîn, to diftinguifh then from the wis, or Ships of War, to which that word wit was appropriated.
Thefe Ships of War.werc by the Greeks called usaxpai that is, Neves longe, as the Roman Term was, becaufe they were of a very great length in proportion to their breadth, vir. in abour that of 7 to I . They were alfo named *ivens, becaufe they were chiefly moved by Oars and femetimes, as in Piutcrch and Teucydides, they as called warmpo for the fame reafon- Thefe long Ships or Ships of War were again alfo diftinguifhed and named according to the Niumber of, or the manner of carrying their Oars, as I have already largely fiewn above. To this Species of the Naves lenge, the fecticis or Runers ought to be referred, which were defigned for Speed Intelligence, Piracy, Eic. For they were called Actua rie, quia ciso agi poffunt, as Scleffer thinks; but according to Iffodorus and Bayfus, becaufe they went with Sails and Oars both. There were two forts of thefe Atituaria, grearer and a leffer Size, of which the latrer were calle Aftuariole." The Actuaria were feldom ufed as Ship of War, bur chiefly in Piracy, as Rovers, Coriars Runiners: They had never lefs than 18 or 20 Oars, and fome bad 30 or 40 ; bur if they rofe up to so, they exceeded this kind, faith Scheffer. They had no Rc ftra.
The third kind of Ships were Ships for P.iff:ge, or Trenfports, and thefe the Grecks diftinguifhed according so the nature of their Paffengers, or thofe they were to cranfpork. Thofe thar fecved in general for cranfporting of Men, they called mige and momeitr; but when they carried armed Soldicrs, they were called $0.7 \lambda .1 \times x^{2}-y^{2}$ and rgathaidAc; or if Horfes or Horremen, izrajapoi. There Tranfports for Horic, the Latinss, as Feffus and Gellies, call Hippagines, from the Greek. And fo peculiar was this way of denominating the Ships from the Thing they carried in them, thar we find in Strabo fome $\times \times$ onx ponop; and in Arricnus we have the word =xereseip(o) in the fame fenfe, as the Name of a Ship, which he oppoles to 2 Man of War. Thefe therefore were defigned to tranf port, Tenrs, Carriages, and all fuch Utenfils as an Army would have need of in a Camp, or upon a March. Por Iux calls thefe Traniport Ships, Bapou and Bxprion, becaufe cheir Form'and heavy Lading made them flow or flugith Sailers. As to the Form and StruEture of Ships in general, the Antients had a regard ro three things: That their Ships might be of a due or juft bignefs, of fufficient lightnefs, and yet of fufficientitrength. If they are made too great, they are both unmanagcable, and ruin themfelves by their own bulk and weight. We find the Perfans telling Alexander the Grear (in Currius) Tinat Ships above mzafure large, were ungroverneble, Lib. 6: c.is and this was the grear faulr of the Sbips of Antony and Clcopatra, whofe Bulk Florus obferves was fuch, at non ine gemitu Maris \& labore ITentorum veherentur; 2nd xhere was hardly any thing more injurious to them than their own Weight. And this we have found by our long Experience in Naval Affairs, that che fhorter and fnugger our new Ships are builr, the becter they fail, bear hard Wearher and a cumbling Sca, and work aseafily asfome old Shipsof much leffer Rates.

Thiey were alfo careful that their Ships mould not be roobeavy: And this was a good confideration at that time, when the manner of fighting atSca was fo valtIy different from what it is now; for then Speed and Expedirion, and eafy racking about or rurning any way, going readily forward or backward, as occafion ferved, was the chief thing they aimed at; and all thingsconfidered, chey are now as good Qualificarions in a Ship, is they were chen: To hape Ships, as Lacan expreffes it,

In order to gain this point, they took care to provide proper Timber to build Ships withal; and chiefly that it was' well fcafoned and dry enough, to make ir light, buoyame and fanch: For green Plank and Timber will both be very heavy, and alfo will in time Mrink, chap, and fo leave the Seams open, and the Ship leaky. The l, arrx Syiveftris, the Pinus Domefticus, and the Abies, are commended by Vegetius, lib. 4. c. 34. for this purpofe: And of the laft of thefevirgil faith,

Nrfitur É cafus abies vifura merinos:
And wion this abies was prepared by thorough Seafoning, Éc. for this ufe, it was called Sapinus, as appears from plim, lib. 16. c. 4c, 42. and allo from Vitrurius, lib. 2. c.9. But both thefe condemn the Larix; as being too ponderous, and the former Author faith, 'tisapt to be worm-caren too faft. The Alrus is much celebrared for this purpofe by the Antients (Alnus emica Frets) and Pliny recommends the Arbor Perfica, lib. 13. c. 9. In IIamer's time the Clistre and the Populus were in ufe, and Thecplerffus praifes the Cedar: and of thefe, and of feveral other kinds of Trees, they adapted Timber for the feveral Parts of the Ship.

And in order to fecure themfelves againft the want of Tinber for Shipring on any emergene occafion, the Rrmenis a froined Woods and Foredts for this fole purpofe; in which they well deferve our Imitation, amiong whom there is very lirtic care taken about the Prefervation of Timber, tho our Shipping be foemincnt a part of our Sccurty and Advantage. This Livy faith was done by Scipio, and as others tell us, by Ancus Mertias their firft king; and when they had nor enough and fufficient at home, they were fo wife (as fome of our neighbouring Counrrics have been in xefpect of us) to get it from their.Friends and Allics.
The third thing they lookt after was theStrength of hexishipping; and this they thought depended chictly an the tune of the Year their Timber was felled, and on hecolve framing and joining the Planks and Bcams, Ơc. egether: The Remens thought the beginning of Aurumn the fited? Time ro cut down Timber for Sea UYes, and in particular to do it at the New Moon. Timber rightiy fellad they called limpelior, as you may find by this line of $V_{\text {rain }}$ it.

Aut Tomaficuan Shis cartere Pinum.
But whether ia this poine they were not morenice, exact and curious than is neceffary, I muft leave to better judges.

To render their Ships clofe. Atrong and compalt, they Jrove Prafs Nails through ali their Planks; which Mertal they preferred to Iron. for this purpole becaufe it was lefs apt to ruft in the Water. And to hinder Leakase, and to render dem ftanch and tight againft the Water, they drove in Srupta, i. e. Oakam, as we do now: into all the Chiaks or Crannys between Plank and Plank. And ceverall this they put a Coat of Wax, and fometimes of Pitch, as appars from Fiaceus, lib i.

And this Invertion $S_{\text {midan atributes to Pisaces. Vegetius }}$ mentions their ufing Rofin alfo among the Wax and Piech. This Mixture of Pitch and Wax, when taken off the Siates of Ships, pl:ny calls Topiflit, lib. 16. c. 13 . Ahera'l was finithed, and the Ship launched, they made always a iolemn trial of her, how fie would bil or row, and what was to be depended upon from ber, before cver they tricd her in Service: And from a Paifage our of Cizeris sth Oration againft Vorres, Scbaffer thinks tis Wain, that the Oticer, who bad the care of the Trial of new buile Ships, was called the Pistor.

And thus much for the gencral Conftruttion of Ships Let us next conlider the Several l'arts of a Sbip, and and their antient Names in the two famous Languages, the Greck and the Larine.
Scheffer faith, the principal Parrs of a Ship are, the Prorn or Prom, the Puppis or Poop, and the Venter or Belly. In the Belly is firt confiderable the Kecl, which is 2 long Piece of Timber placed along the Bottom of a Ship, into which all her ground Timbers and Hooks are faftened and bolred fore and aft. This the Romans cal led Carina, and the Greeks qoomr and scripa. The Keel was bent in its proper Form, by the means of certainPofts or Timbers to which it was faftened, and which the Greeks called Spoozeor ; and this word Caufabon thinks anfwered to the Latin Statumina. Antiendy they put Kecls only to their Long 9hips; their fmall Boars, and the Nrves Oneraris being ufually without them, as Scheffer 1hews from Ifiodorus.
Next to the Keel was the eanars, the Sentina, Gurter, or Sink, like our Hollow between the Kcel and Keel/on, where the Kcel-Rope runs to clear the Limber-holes, that the Water may come frecly to the Antlin or Pump. This saixus fome have confounded with the dutuga afimp, or Keelfon, which in reality lies above the ped $\lambda$ ver, and is frequently by the Grecks called $\lambda i$ ishar xanahion, x $\lambda$ engoondinr ; and by Arifophanes iswas-: At the bortom of the Keel were placed pieces of Timber, to fave the Ship from danger of fpringing a Leak, if the mould happen to Arike upon 2 Rock, Erc. and alfo, as Pollux faith, to fave the Kcel from breaking. and wearing. Thefe the Grecks called anivomare, and the Latins Cunci, as Scheffer concludes from this of Ovid, Lib. 11. Metamorph. v. jıG.

Thefe Celcy/mata muft necds very much retard the Motion of the Ship, and therefore I fuppofe were foon left off, as the Art of Ship building improved; and I know of nothing like them that we have now.
Next above the Keelfon and Floor was an Hollow, which the Grecks called xainn mil( $)$, and $\times \mathrm{sis}^{\prime \prime}$, the Romans Tcfudo, inir. the Belly, or middkmoft and loweft part of the Hold. This Place was compaffed in by the oret, Coffs, or Ribs of the Ship, called alfo fometime izwointa: On thefe the internal Planks were nailed, which, together with the urobönfla, 2ssrigis, or according to Ariftophenes the Zumiusia, which are the Wales orBends which run round the Ship length-ways, and on which Men fet theirFeci, when they clamber up the Ship's Side: and the Ribs, cxternal Plank, $\sigma c$. compored the $\pi \lambda$ ivpaí, Latera or Sides of the Ship. And.the depth of the Ship within board, or height of her from the Water withour, they divided into three Parts, according to the Number of the Zones or Wales (much as we now call the Wales, by the names of $\mathrm{s}, 2,3$, and 4 Wale from the Water). The lowermoft Wale was callid $\Theta a \lambda a \mu(\theta)$, becaufe nexs to the Sea or Warer, the middlemoft $\bar{z} \dot{x}$, and the uppermoft Opir(G), and according as the Rowers fate in any of the Planes of thefe Zones, they were called Thb $^{2}$ Lamits, Zytise, and Ttranits, as hath been before obferved. Thele Zones, or Ranks of Places of the Rowers, the Grecks called rizer and isiosa; and the Latins Foris: For the Fori were not the fame with the Catafitomata (as fome have fancied; which are the uppermoft Decks or Coverings in a Ship: For Lucan mentions the upper and lower Fori, as being Places where the Rowers fate, in rhefe V creses, beformentioned on another occafion.

At poftquam ruptis pel.gzus compagibus baufit

 Id Jimmos repleat Foros, defcendit in undas.aIn the Ships Sides were Places or Holes to thruft the Oarsour ar, which if it were all in one continued Vacuity, Mr. Potter faith; the Greeks called it trien:: But if, as it was moft ufual, cach Oar had irs fingle Hole, thicn thefe diffinct Holes were called ryinaia and ryuanugla, as appears from Ariftoptinnes and Pollux : And the Interpreteron the former faith rruly, that they were fometimes called isfanuci, from; their appearing fomething like Eyes. Thefe Holes, 'tis plain from Fefius, the Latins called Columbarin, becaufe they were like Holes in a Dove-houfe, placed orderly, one above another. They took their Appellation a!lo (as the Rowers did) from their height above the Water, the uppermolt being the Water sexina. The whole fpace which the Men took up to fit and row, in the Greeks wascalled ? 2 xomo Which Word feems alfo to fignify the fpaces between the Several Ordines Remorum.
Above the Threnus, over all the Batiks of Oars, there was a Paffage left free to walk in, and therefore called nípo ( 3 , and fometimes naeider $(9)$, as being contiguous to the uppermoit Banks of Oars. Scheffer thinks, Thax the Encrance inco the Ship's hold was near this place, and therefore 'ris called Aditus by Ovid, in Libr: 3. Mcsamorpb.

Mulea foro ponsur, agearia longa replensur.

As Schoffer rightly corrects the Text: Inftead of the Vul gar, Agiaria.
Let us now leave the middle part of the Ship, and move forwards into the Fore-Caftle, Head or Prow: This the Grecks called opeoce, and mionv, and the Latines Prora: In fome Ancient Ships, we read, that this part was double, as allo che Stern; as in that Ship of Danaus, with which he fled into Egypt. Here wascon' Giderable, firtt the six 9 , which was a long Peece of Timber fticking our of the Head, fomething in the form of a Helmet, and with a kind of Voluta or Scroul at the end winding downwards; which from its Shape they called inga^A鸟, it being fomething like an Eye; this Stolus was allo called xiocei(大), and ofermosaxaio: The uppermof Convex part of this, as appears by the draught of the Ancient Tritemix which Lazarus Bajfius pretends to give us from the Trajan Column, was the axerssabor, which the Romans called Aplufire, and anfwered to the ipherse in the Srem: Sometimes the Acroffolia were of an Orbicular Form, fometime flaped tike Wings; and to it there was often an ciawôir, dacisiaxn, a Scurulum, or listle Shield affixed, and fometimes a piece of Wood was crected, to which Ribbonds of divers Colours were hung, and ferved both for Ornament, and Difinetion of the Ship: But there was ufonlly in the Prow placed juft below the side the seocomont, the Ancient or Flag by which Ships were not then diftinguined, to what Nation they belonged, as they are now, but from one anothcr. The Latines called this Pifura, becaufe it ufually reprefented rome Animal, Flower, or fome Arcificial thing, a Crown, E$c$. Sornetimes alfo this was acred on 2 kind of Table, Shield, E'c. of Wood, and painted afterwards: From the Figure of this Parafomum the Saip took its Name, being called the Dolphin, if ir reprefented that $F i b$ : But with us now, this is ufually done from the Pidurre in the Stern. In Virgil there are two Pallages confirming this, as I find them cited by Morifotw in his Orbis Maritimus.
The firft is,
Prima sexee, roftro Pbrgios inveda leones.
Where tho the Ship of Aneas was Sub Turela Matri Deum, whole Image was therefore painced in her Stern, yer in her Prow the bore a Lion or Lions for her Parc.femum, and fo was denominated from thence.

The other is this;

Mafleus cerata Prineeps ferat equora tygri.
Where 'is plain the Parafemum (which was a Tyger) was in the Prow. In the Head of the Ship there was imenor or Roftrum ; the Ufe of which I fhall thew hareafter, this was the loweft part of the Head, and ufually under Warer. Scleffer faith the Sides of the Prow werc called niox, and fometimes maspa : Which Mr. Potter correets into raphes, that is Cheeks, in Allufion to an Humane Face. Between the Sides of the Prow or Head was contained that fpace which the Greeks called ruprom. prose, becaufe it was free from Rowers, and this reached from the foremoft Oars to the $\dot{\alpha} \times \mathrm{xes}$ shor. This Prow or Forc-part of the Ship was anciently finely adorned: Sometimes guilded with Gold, and fomerimes painted wish beauriful and lively Colours. Of which Red was moft anciently in ofe: For we find Homer giving the they thought very proper for Ships of War, becanfe ir wasthe Colour of Blood: But fometime Blew or Sky-1

Colour was allo the Fathion, as beacing fome Refemblance with the Colour of the Sea: Thas we find in Homer, Ships called xumpormei from their blew Heads and in Arijfophanes they are celled meartafioxa: Sevcral orher Colouts were alfo ufed; and thefe were not only Varnihes or Colours Ilighrly laid on, but they were done after a moch ftronger manner; and annealed in ty Wax melted in the Fire, and incorporated withthe Pigmenr, fo that neither Wind, Water, nor the hear of the Sun, wonld much damage it. From the Wax that was ufed in this kind of Painting, it was called anperaow, and from its being done by fire iz weavinxi:. 'Tis mentioned by Ovid in the 4 th Book of his Fufti : Thus,

- Pitia coloribus uffis:  Cerulem matrem concreas puppis baber.

In there Colours, and in divers parts of the Ship, thiey did ufe to reprefent the Figures of their Deities, of An:mals, Planrs, Flowers, Eic. $2 s$ Bayfus at large Ahews from the Ancient Monuments. And the mianner how they did' it is deferibed by Vienroius in Lib.7. c. 9 . There was alfo one kind of Ornamem which, witfit the Greek, was pectuliar to the Prow of a Ship; and wherewith the Extremities of it were Idorned : Thefe in general they called inporse ; and by the Scholiaft on Thuodides, wion kowiAt. The Latines called stiem Corrmb;; as I fuppore from this of Homer.

But the Latincs did make thefe Commbi common Ornaments to the Stern of the Ship, as well as the Prow; and in the genetal, they feem to be muct the famie with the ixportica.
In the Stern of the Ship, which the Greeks called -piura, and their Poers sè. The Top, or uppermoft part of it, was the ienasin, or Apluftre in Larine; which was a kind of handfome Shell framed of Boards, and placed over the Caprain's Sear in the Poop; a little lower was a Place called ancionor, whofe lower part was the inApour ; and becaule it was bent in an Arch, tike the head of a Cradle, or of a Basket Chair, they cilled it nostum: And the Phans of Wood out of which this was made, meilowo. The Poop, or upper part of the. Stern was much higher than the Head, and mineorvated in Arch-wife : For Virgil mentions the Commander of the Ship as ftanding, -Celfa in puppi; and Ovid hath ir, Seantenn in Puppe recurva: For this was the Pilot or Mater's Place, who gave Directions for ftecring the Ship: And here the Commander in chief fate, in the aborementioned arched Seat: Which Athenaur calls onen, the Latines called it Diarn and Tabernaculum. In the Stern wasallo che Tutela Navis, or the Picture or Image of the Deity under whofe Protection the Ship wast thought to ber: as having been folemnly commirted to it. The Srern was alfo then, as it is now, the moft bonotirable part of the Ship: And held fo facred, that it was a kind of Sanctuary to retire to in the greareft Danger: And this Fonsbergius, (in Scheffer) faith is the Cuftom ar chis Day in the Mediterraneen Ships. In is called by Germenicus, Veneranda Puppis: And Livy fpeaking of the Carthaginian Embarfadors pecitioning for Peace of the Remans, Gaith Lib. 30. c. 36. Ler us next confider the Rigging, Tackle, and Inftruments ufed aboard a Ship, both for common and Warlike Ules. The Infruments neceffary for common Ufe, were fuch as were fubfervient either to her Rowing, Sailing, or both. Thofe neceltary for Rowing were firtt the Tranftro, as the Larines called them, becaufe they went accrofs or a-thwart the Ship, from fide to fide; thefe were the Sears on which the Men fate chat rowed; of whom Virgil Gaith,

Sub Remis, fucida laxarunt membra quiete

He might very jufly call them dura Sedilia: For they were only the bare crols Beams of the Ship, without any Beds upon them: For to have had fuch would in thofe Days, would have been thoughr too foft lying for 2 Soldicr or a Sailer. Nay the very Caprain, or Commander himfelf, lept at Night in his Arched Hutr, or Century Box, upon the Poop; where he abode, eat and drank by day: And Plutarci, in the Life of alcibiades, takes notice, that fome fofter and eafier Merhods of lying, which that General had contrived for litmfelf, were objected againth him as 2 grear Fault.
2. Remi, кштal, or Oars:' Thele arc fometinnes called Palmula; but this word properly gignifies the ourermort broad ends of the Oar which ftrike the W.ater: Thefe the Greeks call $\approx \lambda$ alat; and they were often lined or covered with Brafs: Thefe Oars were of different Length, Strengch, and Weight, according as there was occation as hath been before oblerved: The Ibranite ufing the greareft and longeft : The Thalinxite the leatt and Ihorteft.
3. There were neceffary to rowing, the L.ora or Struppi by which, as with Leachern Strops, the Oars were faltened to the Scalmi, that they mighr nor dip too far out of the Ships fide, or out of the hands of the Rowers. Vitrarvius Lib. $10 . \mathrm{c} .8$. Gaith, Remos cirea Scalmos Strophis religari: \&. Curtius calls this, aptare Remos, the fitting the Oars for Bufinefs: The Gubernacula, or PaddleHelms, with which the Ship was fteered (of which below) were alfo bound to their Scaimus, with thefe Lora Thefe Lora, the Grecks called toion and rysatiagre: And in Heffelius you find $\overline{3} \boldsymbol{7} \times \mathrm{mmripac}$ in the fame Senfe.

4 Scalmus was the Tnoul, Pin or Peg, placed in the Hule in the Ships fide, ©ac. on which, as on an Oócx, or Hyromocblion, the Oar was fixt; and on which, as on a Centre; it moved: The Grecks ealled is alfo oegin$\mu$ ( -3 , bui $H e f y c h i u s$ kemmims; and fometimes not only the Paxpllus in one particular Hule where an Oar was thruft out and faftencd by the Lorn to is, was called Scalmus, but the whole Rank of Oar-holes, belonging to any particular Ordo. And thofe pieces of Leather, with which we now line the Scalmus, to fave the Oar from wearing out too faft at the part which plays in the Scalmus; the Grecks called iبeria, and zispores. There was alfo a piece of Learher faftened upon the Seat of each Rower, which the Greeks called innoinor; and thefe were all the Inftruments which I can find mentioned by Authors as fublervient to bare Rowing. Let us next confider fuch as were neceffary for Sailing. Of thefe the
I. Were Sriils, which the Latines called Vcle and Tunices: And the Grecks fomerimes, swarerers. They called them alfo aspura; but moft ufually isix from their requiring a Maft to carry them. The Sail, fome fay, was firft invented by Icarus; othets by Dedelus. At firft there was but one Sail in'a Sbip: But in a litele cime we find mention made of the ufe of more; whife Names are 1. ąpner: And this according to Pollux was a kiud of Top- fail, ufed above the inntenna : And ferved anther to direct the Ship, than to forward her Motion, or give her frefl way. The Artemon feems to be the fame with what the Latines called Surparum.

Summe panden:-----..--
Suppara Velorum, poituras colligit curas.
Lucan. Lib. V.
For Liffius faith the Suppare were fuch Sails as were born aloft, or on the-Tops of the Mafts. 2. arenta were the lower, or great Sails, the Courles, as ive now call them (i.c.) the Main-fail and Forc-fail. Some have confounded the iraita with the dizerre, but thele were very fmall Sails ufed fomewhere in the Head, or rather about the bow-fprit: They are fometimes called allo Lipadr. (3.) ${ }^{2 \pi \pi \delta} \delta ; \mu \mathrm{r}$ was a Sail of the 2 d Degree of Magnitude, and as If f Jowius and Ifiodorus fay was placed in the Secrn, i. c. it was the Mizzen, as 'tis now called.

The Matter of which the firt Sails feem to have been made was Leather: Which Vearo concludes from the Latine Word V'elum, à Vellere. Thefe Leathern Sails were ufed by the $V^{F}$ cnetinns in Carfa's rime: V:d, Lib. 3 . de Bell. Galico. But they were generally of Linen afterwards, as they now are, and of this linen there was a. forr peculiar for Sail-cloth, which they called Carbalus. As appears by this of $V$ irgi/s, and maxy orther Pafo tages.
-mamidagis inflatur carliafus Aufro.
Strabo tells us, Lib.4-that the People on the Nile afed Sails made of Reeds; and many kinds of Recds and Rufhes are ufed for that purpole to this Day in the Efft Indies, where nothing is more common than matred Sails, or Sail made of Matts.
2. The Yards on which the Sails were hang, or bene to; the Greck's called angaia, the Latines Antenn.e: But Silius Italicus calls them fornetimes Cornua, in Imitation of the Greck.

Cuma rapiduwn Velog; Superba capaci

3. 1sis the Maft in Latin, Malus, was the uprighr Pole that bore the Yard, and on which it moved up and down. Ar firft there was bur one Maft; and this was placed exactly in the middle of the Ship: And therefore its Stcp, or Hole in which ir was placed was cal:led by the Grechs matofan; and by the Latines Modrus, But the isedixn of Homer was a place provided a-fhore to lay up. the Mafts, Yafds, Éc. in, becaufe whenever they came 2 -ihore they did ufe to take down the Mafts, if thofe days. The Parts of the Mant were, 1. ziarce; the Foot of ir, which went into the Hole or Step. : 2.' $\lambda$ iras,

4 Erironc, Funes in Gencral: Of which the Accoure in the Ancient Writers is very obfoure. Sdieffer thinks che Latines called the Halliards and Lifts with which the Yards were hoifted up, or lowered upon occinion, Rudentes: And thefe Vegetius calls Funes Cbalctorii from the Greek zàar, dimittere. Suides feems to limit the ficrot fo, as that we are to underftand by them only thore Brcant Ropes and Parrels, which faften the Yards. to the Mafts. The Ceruchus, Anchonis and Anquini, reems to have been what we now call a Brace, which is a Rope at each end of the Yard-Arm, by means of which the Yard is Jquared, traverfed, \&8c. or fer in any: Pofition, which is bef, thar the Sail may draw the moft Wind; and whether thefe be not whar Homer calls the viarat, what Suidas calls imieat, and the Latines Opicris, fince they feem to be intended, by the dark Decriptions we have of them, for the fame ufe : I mult have the Learned Reader to judge. Thefe Ropes beonged all to the Yard; bur the nistr, or lPdes, were immediately faftned to the Sails: Thefe I take to be what we now call the Sbeets; which are Ropes bent to the Clews of the Sails, and are defigned to hale off, or halc on the Sail as there is occafion, and according as the Wind vecrs abour. The Ropes with which they ufed to Atrike or raife their Maft, Scbeffer from the Scholiaft upon Apollonius, calls mesygiac, Mcfuria: Which I take to be the Stays of the Mafts: And thofe Ropes which ftrengthen, keep, crect, and fupport the Mafts fides way, he faith ware called $\pi$ efions, Pretones; i. é a kind of Skrouds. The Karpinn: feems to have been either the Tacklc, or a Block with Shivers in it, thro which the running Ropes of the Ship wenr. The Cables, Hawfers, or Ropes by which the Ship rode at Ant chor, the Grecks called risuarm and fomecimes viumion: The Latines Ancloorarii; and Anchoralia: The Venctians long ago ufed Iron Chains inftcad of thefe, as Crefar oblerves: Ancbor.c pro funibus ferreis catenis revincter: The Rope with which any Ship or Boat was towed along after another at Sea: Or on Shore by Men or Horfes: The Grecks called inxois, pimela and s.ripar: The Latines Parolcones and Remulci: And by Feffus and Ifa: dorus the Word Spira is recained. Thofe Ropes by which any Ship was fantened a-mhore, the Greeks called Retinacula. And ufually near the Water-fide whefe Ships lay, there were great Scones fet up, with Holes bores
bored in them to let the Retinacula thra": Thefe Skomen the Grecks called sandixim : Bur fomecimes Anchors weic ufed alfo for this purpole; and fometimes Pofts fet up with Rings on them; which Fefus eells us were called Tomfille. There was a Rope alfo which they called Tormentum, which went from Head to Stern, and wasufed to keep the Ship tight together in hard Weather, $251 /$ dorus raith; and of this kind, as Rivius oblerves, muf the Hypozomata be, which are mentioned by St. Luke to be ufed alout the Ship in which Sc. Paul was thip wracki. 'Tis plain fuch ufed to be carried to Sea; for Athenaus faith, in Ptolomy Philopator's Ship there were 12 fuch provided, which were 600 Cubirs in length each of theri - being Cables long enough to compar the Ship all round about, and fo to keep her from falling or breaking to pieces. That fuch things were pra ctifed at other times alfo, is apparent from the Account we have of App. Alexandrinus his blaming Sext. Pompeius Becaufe he purfued not the Enemies Ships hard enough af tcr he bad worfted them, bur fuffered them to faverhen difabled fhatter'd Ships, by under-giring them wich Ropes : And as it is plain from this of Horace.

4. Tadians, Gubernacula, the Rudders: In chic ancient Ships were a kind of Paddles, or ftrong Oars with broad Palims; thefe were fartened on a Scalmus on each fide of the Stern of the Ship, not juft behind as our Rudders are, but where fhe begins to round away towards the Stern Port. Somerimes thele were called Plestra The feveral Parts of thefe Rudders had thefe Naines, Viat, Clavus, which wàs a Nail, or Sprig of Iron, which went a-crofs thro' the Pertica, at the end of the Anfa to keep the Rudder right in the Scalmus. oses; Pertica, the round long Pole running thro the middle of the broad part of their Paddle: mipuyer, Pinna, the broad part of the Paddle, on each fide of the Pertica. avpe, Anfa, the handle or Tiller, which the Steerf-man held in his hand. Some fmall Boats had but one of thefe Rudders, and then thatwas placed juft behind in the middle of the Stern; but the larger Ships had always two at the leat, difpoled as is above-taid: And Polomy Pbilopator' Great Ship had four. In fome of their Ships of War, there were alfo Rudders in the Fore-乌hip, that fo they might fteer away Stern formof, if there were Occafion.
5. arixueg, Anebora. This twas firft the Invention of the Tyrrbeniens, as PLiny faith, tho' others attribute it Midas, the Son of Gordion: They were very anciently made of Stone: And that noc only as being great Stones twith Holes bored thiro to faften Boats to, as in Rivers now a-days; bur formed into the Shape arid Figure, nearly, of our prefent Iron Anchors: And Ludovicus Romanu: tells us, that at Calecut, in the Eaft Indies Marble Anchors are uled to this day, the like others relate of Fapan. Atheneus faith, that in Ptolomy Pbilopa ror's Ship there were four Wooden, and eight Iron An chors. Bur thefe Anchors of Wood, Scheffer thinks were nor of the Figure of ours; but only pieces o Wood, with Lead caft into them, by the weight of which the Ship was ftaid. And this he gathers from a Parfage in Diodorus, Lib.V. where he faith, that the Pbeenicians coming into Italy to buy Silver, and finding very great Plenty of is, they rook our the Lead our of their Anchors, and pur Silver in the room of it. They ufed alfo for the fame purpofe Pyramidal Baskers, which they filled with Stones and Pebbles, efpecially in hard Ground, where the Fluke of an Anchor would not take hold, and thofe Anchors they called rioanidat, as Polynnus tells us in the Hiftory of Ipbicrates, Lib. 3. exemp. 38. In time they came to make their Anchors of Iron; bur as firt they had but one Fluke, thefe the Greeks called ineispest ; but after fome cime, Eupalemius, or fome fay Anocharfis, a Screfian Philofopher, found out, that it was bettex they thould have two Flukes the Romens, Anchors Bidens. The Antients, as well $2 s$ the Moderns, ufed feveral Anchors aboard their Ships: Of which the ftrongeft and largeft the Greeks called itei, the Latines, Sacra: The fame with what our Seamen call now the Sbeet Ancbor. Whether they made ufe of any Stock to go thro the Ring of the Anchor, in order to keep the Arms right, fo that the Fluke might ftrike into the Ground; as one would think they muft needs do, is not certain: There being not above one or two ancient Coins that exprefs any fuch thing: But this in deed, as Scheffer obferves, may arife from want of Car ith thofe that made the Dies for Meddals:
6. Bipicy which Hfodorus and Lucilius call Catapirates and Herodotus, $x^{5}$ nupmopun, was the Sounding Line and Plummer, with which they both examined the Depth of the Sca, and alfo underftood the Narure of the Botiom or Ground, over which the Ship was.
7. Aindor, aindir, which Feftus calls Tollena, was the Shíp's Pump, whereby ro free her from the Water which leaksinco the. Hold. This Lucretius calls Hauftrum:

A Boat chat had nether Sails nor Oars, and which $\begin{gathered}\text { ata }\end{gathered}$ Cet, or ftov'dalong only by thefe Conti, the Grecks called coriaiât; from their Ufe the Romans called chem alfo, Trudes, and famerimes Sudes.

Hiving thus ihewed you the Inftruments aboard the antient Ships, which were neceffary to fail and row them, we will next confider their Armature, and afres what manner their Ships of War offended cheirEnemies, and defended themfelves. And firft, the OId Ships of War were famous for their " $\mu \mathrm{Cu} \lambda^{\circ}$ or Rofira, which were Beams of Wood fticking out forward in the Head of the Ship, armed fometimes with Brafs, and fometimes with Iron Spikes, and their ufe was to run into the Sides of the Enemies Ships under Water, and fo by making Holes in them, to link them. Thefe do not appear to have been in ufe in Homer's Time, for in him there is no mention of them. But yet $\mathcal{A}$ fchylus calls Nefor's Ship sixip:on (O); and Eurypides in his Iphigenin fpeaks of Brazeri Rofra, ufed in the Grecian Ships, as long ago as the Troitn War ; but'cis probable they defcribed the anrient Ships; as built after the manner of thofe of cheir own Age. The Invention of thefe Roftra is by fome atrributed to one Arifto a Corintbian; and he communicating .this to the Srracufians, it proved of great Advantage to them in 2 Sea-fight which chey foon after had with the Athenians : For by this new Device feveral of the Grecian Ships werebroken and funk, as Diodorus Siculus mentions, Lib. i3. Thefe Reftra are fpoken of by Ca/ar, Lib. 4. c. 14. and Pliny, Lib. 7. c. 57. will have one Pifeus, whom in the fame Chapter he calls Tyrrbenus, and Gaith that he invented the Trumpes, to be the firit Auchor ot Inventor of them. Ar firft they were made very large and long ; but afterwards finding that they too much hinder'd the Mocion of the Ship, they were made lefs and fhorter: For they were placed ufually under the Surface of the Water, as appears from this Paflage in Virgil, Eneid. 5.

Convulfum Remis, Roftrifgijfridentibus Egtor.

But theme are fome old Nedals that exprefs the Roftra as partly above, and parcly under Water, in the Ships ufed in the firf Punick War. And Scbeffer from Diodorus atribures the Contrivance of placing thefe Roftra entirely under Warer, and not the firf Invenrion of them, to Arifto the Corinthian. The Number of thefe Rofta was uncertain: Sometimes 2 Ship had but one, fomecimes two or three of them : Ptolomy Phritopater's vaft Ship is faid to hiave hid feven Rofra, and $A \neq$ fotylus makes'Nisfor's Ship to bave reviof them. Their Figure was often that of the Beak of a Bird, the Head of a Serpent or of fome Beaft, and from thence came the Name Refre. They were only in Ships of War, which therefore are often called Naves Roftrate
The ExuliAr alfo, as the Grecks call them, wete another part of the Armature of the Antients Men of War; and thefe were chick, Atrong, and proportionably long Beams, coming our of each fide of the Prow or Head of the Ship, in order to fend off againft the Srroke of the Enemies Roftra. Scbeffer thiriks that the Corinthians in:- vented thefe Eposides, and that the Syracijfians werce the firt thar followed theur Example. They were always placed in the Forentrp; and confequenty the Exymologifts are miftaken; who fix them in the Srern partalfo. It doth nocs appear that the Romany had any Name of their own for thefe Epatides, nor to their Coins or Mar b/es exprefs their Figure : But in fome of the Greek Medalschey are very plain, an Inttance of which Scbeffer gives from Lazius. He allo thinks, that thofe Beams which are fomerimes defcribed on Coins, as fticking spur direetly forward, and over the Roftra (which I fup pofe were moveable, and were taken in when the Ship zetacked the Enemy with her Roftra, and thruft out when the was arracked) were called alro Epotides. The breaking off thefe Eporides, and fo difabling a Ship from rowing, was, as I have above lhewn, one of the chief Aims of every adverfe Ship.

Another part of the Armature of the Antients Ships were the ixpriz or Cataffromate, which from Tisurydides, Polysinus, Pollux, Hefichius, sec. we learn were cercain figh-, in a Ship of War, and to throw Darts, Javelins, figh'; in a Enp of Perronius calls this Deck the Conftra tum, vevis; whenc: fuch Ships as had thefe Catrffromata, the Latines called Naves Conftrate, the Grecks atepaxias, and fonctimes they called the eresequgra by the Name of $x^{2}$ apaivueita. Thefe Naves Confrata were oppofed to the Aperte or soppxiat, i. a. as we now call them, Open Boats. pli, , , Lib. 7. c. 5 . atcributes the Invention of there Cacaftromata to Thafius, and faich, that before Men fought only in the Head and Stern of the Ship, where there were fome Tabule or Frames of Boards ereated for the Men to ftand on, efpecially in the Head of the Ship. And rhis Cuftom of covering the Ships of War only in part, remained till the rime of Tbemijfocles: For it appears by Hiftory, that the Ships that fought againft the Ey:netc, Corcyrei, and allo againft Xerxes, were only covered over with Decks, Stages or Cateftromata in the Head and Stern: For, as Touchdides expreffes it, wisiad founded thefe Catafiromata with the Fori, but falify, for the Fori were a kind of Divifions of the Rowers into Claffes; but there Decks were above all the Oars, and ower all the Rowers Heads, and were the higheft part of the Ship, or the Propucnacale, as they arefometimescalled, where the Soldiers ftood to fight.

Bayfius obferves, that there were fome of the leffer Ships which were covered clofe over for theirSecurity againft Darts, Eic. And Cafar faith of the Maflisinffes, Lib.2. de Bel. Civil, that chey afed Fifhing Boars clofe covered, to fecure their Rowers from the Dapger of the Enemies Darts. But Scbeffer thinks this was rather by way of erecting Blinds, Waft Clothes, &c. or fome Covering or Defences perpendicularty on the Ship's Side, than by 2 Covering quire over at the rop. And this kind of Defence Trscrdides calls supprousfia, the Latimes Plutei, and it was made fometimes of ftrong Learher, and fometimes of Pieces of Ropts platted together.
 גikela and rupaxiáckera.

Another part of the Armature of the Antient Ships of $W$ ar, was their Towers; thefe were chiefly ured by the Romans, and were continued as long as rotite time of Conmodus. Armata Claffes imponunt fibi Turrium propugnacula, uti in Mare quogue pugnetur, velut è Muris, Laith Pliny, Lib.32. c. 1. Somerimes chere was 2 Tower both in the Head and Stern of the Ship, and fometimes one on each Side of the Ship abour the middle. Plusarch calls thefe Rowers fixnm, becwufe they were framed of Wood. Some will have Agrippa in Auguftus his Time, to be che firt Inventor of thefe Towers, as Servius upon Virgil, Zonaras, Calius Rhadigniur, &eC. But cerrain it is, they are mentioned by Cejar, lib, 3. de Bell $C: v$. and Lib.3. de Bell. Galt. They wereof different Forms and Figures, according as their Defigns and Ufes were differemt, and were painted of divers Colours both for Ornament and Diftinction. Out of them the Soldiers caft Darss and Stones, fhot Arrows; OC. at the Eucmy, and by their help thiey came near to and foaliod the Walls of Sea Port Towns in Sieges

The nexr Weapon or Inftrument of War, which the antient Ships ufed, was, what they called the stains or Dolptin, which wasa vaft Weight of Lead or 1ron caft into the Form of a Dolphin, and in cime of a Fight was drawn up by Pullys to the end of the Yard-Arm, which when they could conveniently, they let go all of a fidden, that ir mighr fall into the Enemies Ship, and fo Gink it; and perhapsalfo they had Come Device to throw it with fome violence, which added to its own great

There wete atfofecral other Inftruments of Mifchief, which the Antietips trade ufe of in a Sea-fight; $2 s \mathrm{Ha}$ pagones of Happays, which were long Poles with Iron Hooks at the Ends; to hold the Enemies Ships, that they might not geroff.' They ufed alro Falces, or large curting Hooks, which were faftened at the End of long Poles, to cur Rigging. Thefe Hooks and Poles fometimes were defigned to lay hold only of the Enemies Ship and Rigging, and then the Greeks called them digera vumaze, the Latins, Tela trabalia, Naronles Unci, and Haftslonge, the fame with the Harpagones, as I fuppofe: and an Inftrumens which they called Bipennis, to cur the Rudder Bands of the Enemies Ships. The ufual Arms of the Soldiers were nearly the ame as in the Land Service, viz. Thoraces, Brealt-plares, Clypei, Shields or Bucklers, Gales, Helmets or Headieces, rogether with Ganslets of Iron, and Greazes of the fame, to fecure their Legs. They had alio an Enginecalled Afer, which VEgerius deferibes to be a dender ong Beam, like 2 Yard, which in time of Action was lung upon the Maft, and had at each end an Iron Head like a Battering Ram. This Affer chey had 2 way of forcibly drivingagaint the Enemies Ships; and it would deftroy and ruin any Men that ir fell upon, and fometimes break 2 Hole chrough the Ship ir Self. At the Ends of their Yardschey had alfo oftentimes xogeiai placed, which were Engines to chrow Stones down into the Enemies Ships. Diodorus Siculus, Lib. 12 . Livy calls them Telleni, and by fome Writers 'ris called Ciconia. mainem, Tolleno: They ufed alfo the Corvi, which were Pieces of folid Iron with 3 Spikes to them, and a Ring on the top (according to Scbeffer) to which an Iron Chain was faftened. Thefe ware violently thrown by an Engine inro the Enemies Ships, and did ofren break Holes in her, bat moft times held her fo faft links, that they could nor get.off. The way to prevent thefe Corvi and ManusFerres from taking effet, was, as Pollux faith, to ftrecch Hides all over cheir Decks. They ured alfo Siphores, as whey called them, thar is, Tubes, or hollow Cylinders flled with combuftible Matter, which would fuddenly cake Fire, and break our upon the Enemy with Flame, Noife, and Smoke. Ignis cumn Tonitru Ef Fkmo ignito per Siphones emiffus Naves incerndens. And fomecimes they threw Pors of burning Coals, fometimes of Quick-lime, to blind them; and Hannibal ufed to throw Earthen Pots filled with Serpents, as fuftine and Cor. Nepos tell us. And to compleat all Mifchiefs in one, the Ignis Grecus, as 'ris called from Grecce, the Plare where is was invented by one Callinicus 2 Syizan Architeqt; which was a Fire char would burn under Warer, and asfome fay, be kindled by it: After it had been a convenient ume loaged deep in the Water, is would rife up and burnany thing that came inits way. Grecks exparinua ant mendom, and the Larinus Corjmbin and by fome Authors they are cilled Roftra. In the Srem they had a kind of Shell framed of Boards which rurned forward over the Commander's Seat:Ttis the Greeks called "Andera, and the Latines Apliftre. Behinid the Apluffre ftood up-2 long and ftrair Staff, about the middle of which was faftened a parricoloured Pendant which play'd to and fra in the Wind, and fhewed alfo which way it blew. Of this Ornament Bayfus gives a Figure. Another Ornament was the $x^{\text {iunisx }}$ (G), or $A n f e r-$ culus, which tho fome will have to belong to the Head, yer moft Authors place in the Poop of the Ship: Ir was the Figure of a Goofchis Head and Neck, and was ufually placed adjoining to the Aplyfre. The Goofe was lookr upon asan Arimal of good Omen to Scamen, becaufe of irs fwimming fo well in the Water, withour danger of drowning. They ufed alfo fometimes to gild the Head and Stern of their Ships with Gold; and fomecimes they filvered them o'er; and fometimes made the Acroftolia of Gold, Ivory, Ejc. Alciliades had the Sails of his Ship of Purple, as hadallo cleopatra thofe of her famous Gally; and often they ufed Cloth painted of a Flame Colour, and fometimes with Infcriptions or Morto's upon them. Suetonius mentions Ships of Caligula, whofe Sails were of various Cclours; and fomerimes they painted and gilded the very Oars, according to the Humour of the Commander, or the Dignity of the Expedition, or the Quality of the Paffengers, Ėc.
Bur tho' the 「arts of the Ship were thus beautified and adorned, the common Sailers themfelves were generally naked almoft all over. Thefe Garments, be caufe firft invented in Cicilia, were called by that Name. The Rowers were as naked as thofe that handedthe Sails, and but very feldom wore any Clothes at all. But the Gubernator or Mafter, or hethat commanded the Rowers and Sailers, and gavedirection for theguidance or fteering of the Veffel, was dignified with a Pallium or Cloak which was worn over bis Shoulders, and gathered and faftened on che Left Shoulder with 2 Button, Buckle, $\xi^{\circ} c$. but yet fo as that his Arm came ous, and was at liberty to manage the Gubernaculum. This is plain from Plautus A his Miles Glorigfus, ACt. 14

The Name of each Ship was ufually written in the Fronr of the Ship's Head, abour che Aserfoltion: This Place where the Name was writen, Pollux faith, the Grecks called tiux: ; and ir was done upon a roundifh or oval Board, which from its Figure the Greiks siequendy call ipsan $\mu(\underline{y})$. The Prxtorian Ship was alfo diftinguited from the reft by a peculiar Vexillum or Flag, which was ufually of a Purple or Red Colour, and hnifted up upon 2 long Pole or Staff placed commonly in the Forccaftle of the Ship, and fometimes in the Srern. In the Roman Pretorian Sbips, the Eagle, as a Standard, was often difplayed, as appears from antient Monuments, faith Scheffr. In the Protorian Ships there were alfo peculiar Towers, built higher, and quite diferent from the fighting Towers beforementioned. Thus Lucan,

Thefe were placed in the Stern of the Ship, and from them the Word of Command was given to the Men, and Signals erected or difplayed to direct other Ships; which in the Night was effected by Lights hung our in the Prxrorian or Admirals Ships; and fometimes theie were two, and fomerimes threc fuch, and as ofren but one. Bar Livy faith, that the Men of War always hung our one Light a-nights, and the Onerary ones two. Some fay alfo that the Men of War carried (by day) a thing like an Helmet at their Topmalt-head, and the Onerary ones always a Basker: Which latter fecms very rrue, fince Feftus calls the Naver Oneraris by the Names of Corbitr, as alfo doch Cicero, Lib. 16. Epijt. ad Atric. The Signal or a Battel was a Helmet or Shield of Gold or Brafs hung up on che Cap of the Maft, as our Admirals hang out the Bloody Flag, when they are going to engage. There was alfo a peculiar Sign, which was ufed to the Rowers, to make thena keeprime, and pull all together: This was fometimes done by the Voice, like the Noife our Seamen ufe in weighing Anchor, and fometimes by waving of a Scick, which they called Pertica: He that did this was called Hortator and Porrifculus among the Romans; and the Pertica was alfo Tometimes called by this Name Portifculus. And perhaps fometimes this Perfica was ftruck againit fome founding Body, to make the Rowers hear, as well as fee how and when to pull. Alfo, befides the Trumpet, which was ufed to excite and encourage the Soldiers to fight, for which purpofe the Lituns was allo founded; there were two peculiar che Lituns was allo lounded; there were two peculiar

And fince we are now fpeaking of the Antient Method of regulating the Motion of the Oars, fo as that they hould frike all together, and give the Ship as freh way as was poffible: I ought to take notice of the Liburne Rota: a, which a certain Anonymous Author mentions, as invented and ufed in the Time of Honorius, and were Ships wirh Water-Whells inftead of Oars, and thefe Wheels werc turned round within by Oxen. In Morifotus his Orbis Maritimus, p.712. There is a Figure of a Ship wich fix fach Wheels, and thofe moved by as many Oxen. Thefe Liburne Rotata our Rivius p. 14, 19 . of his Hijf. Navol. Medid is plealed very much ro ridicule; but it feems to arife from his underftanding litule of Contrivances of thar Nature: The Defign indeed of $M$ sorifocus his Figure appears clumicy and inadequate for the purpore ir was intended for: in appointing an Ox to cvery Wheel. But it doth not follow from hence, that no Improvements can be made of ro good and ufeful a Defign. The Advantages of fuch an Engine, could it be performed as it fhould be, would be very great. A Ship by this means would be able to continue her Courfe in a perfect Calm; the would ca. fily get out of the way of a Spout, and it may be of a Gally, that fhould give her Chafe. Ships, efpecially in the Mediterranean, might be brought into a Line of Batcle, or rowed away when difabled: And perhaps moft of the Advantages which the French Fleet hath from their Gallics, might accrue to an Englifh one by this Invettion. I cannor therefore aroid raking norice of the Rowing Engine invenred by the Ingenious Captain Thomas Savery: A Dcfcription of which was puiblifhed in the Year 1698. and fince that, a fhort Account hath been given of it in the Lexicon Technicum. The Contrivance is thus: He adapts a Wheel to the Drum Headof the Capltan of a Ship, whole I eeth turn a Trun de Head, thro which runs an Iron Bar clear a-crofs, and which reaches out thro the fides of her; on its ends withour board, ar a convenient diftance from the Ship's. fides, are faftened' $~=~ D r u m-h e a d s, ~ i n ~ w h i c h ~ a r e ~ f i r t e d, ~$ to tak out at Pleafure, $6,8,10$, or 12 Paddles, according to the Rate of the Ship. At the upper ends of thele Paddles are faftened Iron Pins with Heads to them; by which means, and by the help of a Cord, taking an half Tun abour all thofe Pins, hoth the Paddles may be fwifted, or ftrain'd and ftrengthened fo, that they Thall all work proportionably; and alifo a Padile may (with a Luff Tackle) be eafily handed in and out, in order io ke fitted into or taken our of the Drum-head of the Bar. Now here; if the Men will but work (and the Eabour is nothing near fo hard and dangerous as that of weighing Anchor, ©̛c.) if there be a fufficient Numker of them, and the Paddles made proportionably Jarge, I doubr nor but the Engine will give the Veffel frelher way than any Oars cin do, workt by the fame Number of Hands, as indecd hath been found true by Experiment: And I hope nur Grand Fleet will not vifir the Metiterratian another Summer withour this Contrivarice. But to go on,
From this brief Account of the Oruaments, Enfigns, Flags, Standards and Signals of the Antient Ships, we may make an eafy Tranfition to the feveral Diftinctions among their Soldicrs and Sailers. The Soldiers or Marines differce mofty' from thofe in'the Land Service, by the Strength and Weight of their Armour: Which exceeded theirs, beciufe rfieir fighring was moreftationary. Plutarch in the Life of Ibemiffocles, faith, that each Man of War had 18 Propugnatores, which were to fight on che-Ctraftromita: Of which four were Sagita--rit, who threw Darts, Javelins,' Spears, "Oce"'the reft swere all heaivy Armed, and trefe the Romans called clafliarii. The Grecis called them Epibatet: And tho they are plainly diftinguified, by Authors, from the Re-l miges: Yet Sebeffer thinks that fometimes upon emergent Neceffity, the Rowers fought 500 ; and fo mighr be called Epibata. And indced all the Rowcrs were Soldiers too, except the Gubernator: As we learn from Thuradides, and from the Azamemnon in Sencu; for Act. 3. 417. we find there. words,

Famq; enfe feffum Miles excnerar latus
Neglectaq; Summas per puppes feuta jacet
Admilitares Remus aptatur marus.
And thefe doubly qualify'd Hands, that could both fight and row, the Greeks called aviegita; as Pollux, Toucydides, and Suidas informs us. But in procels of time, as cheir Ships became larger, and were better fitted for War, we find the Men aboard plainly diftinguilhed into chree forts, viz. Sailers, Rowers, and Mcrines, or Soldie's. The Rowers were called in Grice Socii; tho' that Term is alfo fometimes given to the Marines, and to the Naut.s or Sailers too. I have already flewed the Divifion of the Rowers, into the Thalemits, which fate loweft and next the Water: The Zyits, which rowed in the middle, next above them; and the Tiranita, or the higheft or uppermoft which ate next to the Cataftromata. And as the Rowers had this Triple Diftinctionfrom their Scituation in the Ship; o were they denominated alfo from the Ship it felf: Thofe which belonged to a Triremis, the Grecks called rexmetiat: And thofe that rowed in the Onerary Ships (in which there were very feldom Oars) they called seq?
 Offices and Employments. Thofe that handed the Sails, the Greeks called aspuntan; thofe that gor up the Maft to look for Ships, Land, Éc. Some fay were ca:ed Schocrobata; and by the Latines, Speculatoics: Thefe Feffus calls allo Corbitores, becaufe they lay or ftood for this puspofe in the Cories on the Tops of the Mafts: Tho the Ccrbes were rather peculiar to the Tops of Onerary Ships, as 1 have before obferved: The Tops of the Mafts of Men of War being called Gales. Thofe which wate employed in Meffages and Erranrs pand down the Ship were called monraitar: And thefe did all meaner and more fervile Offices: Some plied he Pump, others weighed and dropt the Anchor: And they bad a peculiar fort of Fellows, whon they called Orinatores, whofe Bufinefs was to dive down and clear the Anchor, if it were foul of any thing, and would nor come up, as appears from this of Lucnn, Lib. 3. v. 697.

They allo ufed to get up any thing from the botrom, that by chance fell over-board, and to feck for Wracks, Eic. and the Rhodian Laws appointed them a peculiar Proportion of the Value of the things they ferched up, according to the Depth of the Water: If they dived in 8 Cubirs they bad; if in 85 Cubits they had :. They were very ferviceable alfo in Sea Engagements and Expeditions: For' Thucydides. Lib. VII. Raith, that the Syraetificn Mole was cut afunder by the Divers under Wacer: And in Airianus, Lib. II. de Exped. we read of their being employed to cut the Enemies Cables. There was alfo another fort of Nisut.c, called Carabita, Scaphite, and Lintrarii: Thefe were the Eoar's Crew, who always attended upon the Pinnace, Barge, Long-Boar, or whatever you will call her. There is mention made alfo in fome Writers of the Helcyeriti; who were akind of Tack $k-M c$, and their Pof was to . hip apd unfhip all Goods, Casks, Provifions, Arms, &cc. which came 2board at any time, or were fent a-hore, or pur on board fome orber Ship. Some Writers, and particularly St. Ambrofius, mention te Thalaffometra, which were thofe thax founded the Depth of the Sea with the Bìns, orMlummer. There were alKothe ermmpi, astheGreeks called ifem: and the Latine from them, Nuupega, i. e the Shipwrights or carpenters, who twere to mend any thing which was broken or our of Order: But tho there were flrum and Oar, either by Command, and Appointment. very necclary Fellows aboard a Ship, yet the Ancients of the Proreta, or more ufually by Lot. accounted them in the lowefl and meaneft Rauk, of any Perfons belonging to the whole Company.

Before the Ship put to Sea, every Hand aboard her was exercifed, in his feveral Capaciry, that he might be knowing and ready in his Bufinefs: We learn fromCe$f_{a}$ and Dion, that among the Remans a very confiderable time was allotted to excrife the Riowers, and to render them fit for Service: And Polybius, Diodorus, and Thucy,lides, all fay the fame thing of the Greeks; and for the better Performance of thele ufeful Excrcifes, there were peculiar Officers appointed; which by Vegesius, Lib. IV. c. 32. are called Navarchis: But we don't read any thing of thefe Neverchis, לefore the time of Antoninus. The Gubernatores allo were exercifed in their way; for they juftly thought it a dreadful thing, that the Mafter of a Ship fhould be

The very Soldiers alfo were continually exercifed, by tham Sea-Fights, to make them knowing and daring in real ones: Nay the R $n$ nans ar laft began to be fof farified of the Uicfulnefs of thefe Naval Games or Exercifes; that they made a place on purpofe for their Celebracion in the Campus Martius; where there, was naturally

Affoon as ever Orders were given, from the Prince, for purting forth of a Fleet to Sea: The Seamen firft of all launched the Triremes, &cc. the Ships of War; which as it appears by thefe Lines of Flaccus, Arg. Lib.I. lay wich their Sterns a-fhore.

This the Latines called Intibitio Remigationis, and the Greeks 8ni roi"miar xpiouanau. To effect chis the Rowers got up off thcirSeats, turn'd about, and look towards the Head of the Ship, as Silius Itclicus obcerves, Lib. 2.

This turning the Ship about the Latines called Obverfic:

Then they lowered their Yards, and ftruck their Mafts, and caft their Anchors out of the Forecaftle. The Rowing Ships had their Oars brought clofe to, and lafht faft to the Ship's Side, having their ourermoft Ends clevared : For in this pofture they were both out of the way the prefent, and alfo ready to ufe again, affoon as there was occafion for them. The Naval Camp or Place where the Fleet lay; they called Caftra Nrutice and Nsvalia. To defend themfelves in this Place, if any Enemy were near, they ufually cut or dug a Scmicircular Ditch, which they fortified with a kind of Ramparts of Earth, and a Paraper or Wall of Wood, and this was their Defence to Landward. Withour the Flcer, in the Sea, they ftuck Piles down intheWarertanding obliquely, and with very fharp Points towards the Sea. When chey bad thus cffectually fecured their Sea-Camp, if it were Winter, and they defigned to ftay there any confiderable time, they brought their Ships of War quite up upon the dry Land ; othervife they only made their Sterns faft alhore. When a Fleet lay only fill for a while at an Anchor, and did not touch theShore, they called it Statio, and the Greeks opu(G), iobpu(G); and by Appianus thefe Scations are called iroguisuras. Their $\mathrm{Ha}_{\text {- }}$ vens the Greeks called $\lambda$ xuiva, the Latines Poitus: Tho the Portus was more properly an Artificial Haven which was commonly called Corbone or Corones; where as a Natural Haven was called Oftium. The Artificial Portswerc to have, firft a good $x^{\wedge \lambda}$, or Work run doubly into theSea, in order to procure between its Sides a good Entrance into the Haven, fecureagainft Winds and Tides. This double Mole the Latines called Cornua, as we find from Lucun, Lib. 2.

The Sea Entrance into thefe Cornua was defended by Chains and Bars of Wood ; therefore ir was called Clavfrum by the Latines: It was alfo forrified with Towers, and near the Encrance were the Pbari or Warch Towers placed, where Lights were hung our a-nights to guide Ships into the Harbour. They were fo called from the famous famous Pbaros or Warch-Tower buit at Alexandriob by Polomy.

The Paffage between thele Cornua or Moles was called Sroma by the Grecks, and Oftium by che Latines, and Sometimes Fatices. This let the Ships into the $\mu x=3$ or innermoft part of the Haven, where they were made was a Work of Stone built like ourKeys, on which werc Houfes filled with Srores, Docks, Gc. for building or refirting Ships, Éc. Thefe Docks the Greeks called woinua, oxisax, resere, \&s.

Whenever the Antients had a Profpect of a Sea Engagemenr, the firft thing they did was to clear their Ehips of War of all unneceffary Weight and Lumber, leaving no more Provifions on board chan what was of indifpenfible neceffity: And then, if it were poffible to avoid it, they would not engage but in a calm Sea, and good Weather. Next, they rook great care to get the Enemy between the Shoar and them, both that themrelves might haveroom enough, and the Enemy be pent up and ftreightened; and alfo that they might bring on fill new Ships into the Engagement, and row off their difabled ones with fafety and eafe. Appianur, Lib. s. takes notice, that Calvifius neglecting this Maxim, was almoft deftrojed by Menecrates, his Ships driven athore, ftranded and wrackt. And thus was it with the Rcman Flect in the Battle againit Adberbal the Carthagimian Admiral, as Palybius tells us, Lib. r. They chofe a: io, if they could, rather to engage near their Enemies Coafts than their own: The Reafon of which, Leo gives in his Tacticks-Ne (inquir) in tuâ ipfius Terrû Pis:isi,m cmmittas in quà Spercnt milites (juxta Proverbium) fi semtrum bajftas defigunt, fervari; jed prope HoftiLen Terram potius ut Hofies Saluten fperantet, fiat in Ter--â furam dimicaticni anreponant. They took care alfo, not to engage againft Wind or Tide, (i. c.) they ftrove to get the Wearher Gage of the Enemy, as we fpeak. When they came to actual Fighting, they took in all their great Sails; and then the Imperator or Commander in chief appointed the Order of Battel: Which was various according to Circumftances; but the firf Line, when there was more tian one, they called Prima Clifffis, and the fecond Sufidiaria: And fometimes there was a third Line of light fmall Ships which lay behind the two former. Ufually there was but oneline, and then the ftrongeft and fouteft Ships were in the Wings, and the weakeft in the Centre: Alfo the Prator-s, orchief Admiral's Poot, was in the right Wing; but if they were in the Form of an Half Moon, his Poft was in the Center, as appears by the Tacticks of the Emperor Leo. This Half Moon, which the Grectes called umionofs sin (G), was, the moft ordinary Figure of any: And it gained thefe two Advantages ; that the Enemy could not eafily break through; and were alfo eafily hemmd in, or encompated round on all Gdes. Of this Form Lution, Lib. 4 thus fpraks, > Cornua Remane Claffi, oniedalj; Triremes Quafq; guater fugros extru®i remigis ordo Commereet, E' plures quir mergunt equore Pinus Multipites cinxere rates. Hee rebur aperso Oppofitum Pelago: Luncta Claffe recedunt Ordine contenta gemino crevifle Liburna.

But there were alfo in ufe other Figures, with ftrait lined Fronts; and thefe fometimes were all in one Body , femorimes divided into two Squadrons; and fometimes invo three: Which laft Form wascalled the PbaItiux, as appears by Dicdorus Siculus. . Sheffer mentions many other lefs commen Forms, as that of a Wedgc, an Oial; Êc. Vid. Lib 3. c. V. Whether I refer the curious Reader, being in haft to conclude chis long Dífertation. When they were juft going to engage in an'actual Fight, the Imperator went in his Boat and rrade an encourdging Speech to every Ship: Then' the Signal for the Battle. was hung out of the Pretorian Ship ; which by being waved to the right or left, being lifted up higher, lowered, orentirely takendown, was an Inftruction to them which way to carry the Fighr, how long to hold it, and when to deffit. This Signal was fometimes a Red Flag, and fometimes an Helmet, as I have beforc obferved. The Onfer was begun with Trumpets, who ounded the mainimer, or Claficum. Thenone of their chief Aims was detergere Remos.

And thus you fee how they behaved themfelves in an open Fight at Sea: A word or two of their Naval Sieges, and Defences. When trey beffiged any place by Sea, they ufed to block up the Harbour, and ercompafs it all round with their Ships, whom they joined one to another with Chains; and communicated by Bridges or Gallics; where the Soldiers were always ready to chirow Darts, ớc. and to opfofe the Paffage of any Ships in or our. They ftrengrhned this Naval Mole alfo by driving long Piles down inso the Ground, to which they fattened rheir Ships. This was thicir Circumvallation. The Attack upon che Town they ufually managed by two Ships joined to one another by a bridge, on which they placed their battering Engines, and wooden Towers allo, which they filled writh Men to feale the Walls, and to drive thofe that defended them from chence : Asainft thefe bold Attempts, the befieged defended themficlves by their own Ships; by driving Piles down inro the Earth under Water; whofe Tops were thod with Brals or Iron Spikes, to annoy the Encmies Ships as they approached to the Walls: Sometimes they made a Consravallation with their Ships againft the work of the Enemy; and fometimes endeavoured to burn it, by throwing in Pitch, Tar, and orher combuttible Matter actually énkindled amongft their Ships; and now and then by fending Böars loaden with fuch Materiats in among them; [as the Trians did, when Alexander befieged their City] and then fetting them on Fire to burn the Enemies Fleet. So that a kind of Fire Ships, you fee, the Antients bad a Notion of long ago; the Invencion of Matr being very early ripe for Mifchief.
Iprocced nex:, to confider, the Offcers, Magiftrates, Stipends, Salaries, Triumphs, Rewards and Punifhreents in ufe among ft the Ancients, in their Sbips and Fleets.
The Officers and Magiftrates in the Antient Fleets and Ships were thefe.

1. The seam (G) sinapx (G), vivax (O). The Prefeaus Claffis, as the Romans filld tim. Among the Greeks, this great Office was fometime in the hand of one Mar bur ofnner divided between rwo; or three, who were all equal in Power: As Alcibiades, Niceas, and Lamacbus were; with them allo, the Office was precarious, depending upon the Good Will of the People; entirely as oo its Continuance. But among the Romans, the Protors, while they bad the Care of Naval Affairs, were to continue this Command but for one Year, and then hey were to deliver up their Charge to their Succeffors. This was che Officer which we now call anAdmiral : (in chief) The Name of Admiral, or as che French write ir, Amitral, fome think came from the Admirantes, a fort of commanding Officers, both for Sea and Land Service, amongit che Scracens. Bur Morijotus, in his Orbis, Maritimus, Lib. 2. c. 7. will have is to come from the word "Anexinder, which was, he faith, the Title for the Prafetius Clafits, or Commander of the Fleet (in the Ed(fern Empire) before the time of the Empctors Lec and

Mauticius:

Mauricius, tho' fome will have it be derived from d $\lambda \mu$ wig , Salfus, à Salfugime Maris.
The next Officer to the High Admiral or Commander in chief, was the muredider, or; as he is called alio, anginapop(G). This was a kind of Vice-Admiral, and was fo called by the Greeks (faith Poilux) becaufe be was Affiftant, and immediately under the izuusp( - ; and that this was his Office, appears allo from feveral Paflages in Zenophon's Hift. The Romans called him Subprefeftus; 2nd tho' he were but 'Vice-Admiral to the Prextrial Squadron, he was Prafcitus or Commander in chief of anorher Squadron or Fleer. Scbeffer obferves, that thofe Officers above-mentioned were fuch as more peculiarly commanded the Soldiers and NavalStrength of a Fleer. but there were another fort, which the Grecks called depuuberentar, which had more immediately the Care of the Ships, who had the Management of all Maritime Affairs, were to provide commodious Harbours, to direct the Courfe of the Fleet, Eic. And perhaps he that was Maffor of the Pretorial Ship had peculiarly this Title of Archizubernus. Seheffer thinks that this was the fame Officer with him whom Trc:tus calls Pr.cfectus Remigrom, and whom Livy, lib. 24. c. 41 . Calls Prafectus Socium or Sociorum. But there being no particular Defcription of his Office, 'tis hard ro determine any thing pofirively about it.
The Captain alfo of each particular Ship the Greeks called Nuiagx ( 3$)$, and the latines from them Navarcius. Tho Livy frequently ftiles him Proffectus, and Lib. 45 . c. 42 . Magifer Navis, and Tacieus gives him the Name of Tricinclus, Ann. 14- c. 8. Hift. 2. c. 9. which laft Term among the Greeks fignified the Captain of a Trivemis: And there is mention alfo of a owrgengisx $\left(\frac{5}{}\right)$, who feems to have been a Sharer wirh fome other Perfon in the Command of Captain of a Triremis. The Captain of a minnenopor, or a Ship of s Ordines, was called ronnuerixpx (G), and fo for other Rates. Thofe who com manded the Seamen, and had the immediate care of the Guidance and Working of the Ships, the Greeks called porerenta, the Latines Gubernitores, and fometimes Aragiftri Sacionum Nidvalium. This Officer was the fame with our Mafter of a Ship, and his Poft was in the Yoop.
—Solus fatat Puppe Magifter. Statius, Theb.8. v.267.
Sometimes he is defcribed as fitting at the Helm, and the Place where he fate was by the Greeks called izxanma: His Authority over the Seamen appears to have been very great by this of Flaccus, lib. 1.

Typlogs agit, facitifedert ad fuffa Miniẹri, Qualitor ad fummi Soliam fovis omnia circum Prona parata Deo.

The Art of guiding, conducting and failing the Ship well, the Greeks catce rixem whispinarr, and it confifted, as Scbeffer oblerycs, chictly in thefe three things: The Knowledge of the Starsand of the Courfe of the Winds che Diftance and Scituation of Ports and Havens, and the Art of working of a Ship fo as to find her Trim, as we call it, and make her fail to the beft advantage. Their Knowledge of the Scars in a manner was confined to the Obfervarions of the Grent and Litrle Bear, two Conftel lations near the North Pole, fo called, as appears from Lucan, Lib. 8. v. 172

Of thefe two Conftellations the Grecks took moft notice of the Great Bear, which they called Helix, and we Chatles bis Wain.

Dat Graiis Helice carfum majoribus Aftri.

The Leffer Bear, which the Grecks called Cynofura, was moft regarded by the Phenicians; they firft difcovered and oblerved its Motion round the Pole, and that the Pole Star it felf was the laft in irs Tail. And indeed the Knowledge of the Stars in general, and the firf Foundations of all our Aftronomy, is entirely owing to the Phanicicns. And the Realon why they oblerved the Cynofura rather chan she Helix, Germanicus in Arateis thus expreffes.

The Gubernator was alfo skilful how to avoid Rocks, Shelfs, Sands, $\sigma_{c}$. cither by his own Experience in former Voyages made to the fame Places, or by the Writings of orhers; the Defcriptions and Accounts of whole Voyages they called Pcripli, and Itincre: in. He wasalio fuppofed to underftand perfectly wocll the way of working of a Ship, and how to pur her into fuch poiture, that fhe fhould make the beft of her way. For as Oppianus, Lib. Sometimes there were two of thefe Gubernatores, efpeciall in the greater Ships: And Elicn faith, is was the ufual Cuftom to have ir fo among the Carthaginians. The next Office under the Mafter, was the Prcrefa, who was to manage the Helm according to the direction of the Gubernator. The Grecks called him $\pi$ gasticic, and he forc, as Pollux fairh, was to fteer the Ship at the Command of the Mafter. Tho', as bis Name implies, he bad no doube allo his proper. Pö́t in che Prow or Head of the Ship, where fome fay he was to fit and obferve the Winds, to give notice of Rocks, छ'c. and all approaching Danger: Some will. Wive hion to have had the Care allo of the difpoftion of therkowirs, of the Rigging and Tackling of rhe Ship, andine thit wasto alfift the Mafter with his Advice and actual'Service, whenéver required.
The next Officer was the wondusws, as the Grecks called him ; the Portifculus, or Horsator Remigum, fomething like our Boatfoain; one thar either by a Noifehe made with his Mouth, by the Blow of a Maller, Hammer, Stick (which they called Pertica) \&c. gave a Sign to the Rowers to pull away all together, or to defift, $\mathcal{G}$.. This Officer wasalfo called Agector, and $\mathfrak{F} u / f 0 r$.
Next to the Porcifculus, the Temesiunne defervesto beconIdered, which was a Mufician, that either jy the Harp or Pipe, not only fruck the true Time for the Rowers to obferve with their Oars as to the Iength of the Stroke; bur by engaging them to join in the Harmony with him, exhilerared their Spirits, and made them forger thcir Labour:

The nextOfficers were the Navidiaxis, or Cuftodes Navium: Thefe Scheffer thinks, took charge of all the Sails, Cables, and all other Inftruments on board. $7 u f_{\text {a }}$ Pollux calls them stores, and be reprefents their Office to be, taking care, efpecially a-nights, that the Ship came to no damage by ronning againft Rocks, Atriking againft the Ground, Ec. which they were to prevent by the ufe of Booms or long Poles, with which they were to fend againft Danger, and to fer off upon occafion.

There were alfo Officers whom the Greeks called rixapge"; thefe had peculiarly the Charge of the Ships Sides, as appears from Turnebus, and from this of claudian:

Ac velut exertus tentandis navita tonfis
Preficitur Latcri cuftos

de Conful. Mallii, v. 47.

Scleffer thinks chefe were iwo Officers that commanded, one the Starboard, the other the Larboard Oars, all along the Ships Side in length, which feems very prolong t.
In the antient Ships there were alfo Oficers called nemax by Homer, who were appointed to deliver out the feverial Meffes or proportion of Provifions to the Ships Company: Thefe feem ro be the fame with what the Romans called Dictarii, a kind of Qurefores, or Clerks of the Provifions: Some will have them to be the fame with the Celeuftes, but I judge they were different. There was alfo the rexumaisic, nerssic, the Navalis Scribu, as Fsf fus calls him; which feems to have been an Officer analogous to our Purfer. And laftly there was the ixapus, whompollux defcribes as being anAttendnat upontheFirc: But whether he were the Cook, or the Sacrificator, 'ris hardly poffible to determine at this diftance, there being no particular Account of this Office given any where in Antiquity.

Ler us next confider what Sripends, Wages and Encouragements the Antients gave to their Marines, Rowcrs and Sailers: And thefe were of 3 kinds, as Sclecffer. oblerves: Money; Bread, Provifions, &c. and Clothes. Inmoft antient Times, when cither the Men went Vcluntiers, or a Privatecring, or when they were fummoned to take Arms for the neieffary Defence of their Country againft an Invafion, we do not find that any Stipend or Salary was given ro cither Soldiersor Rowers. Afferterwards as privare Men made a Trade of War, they paid the Soldiers and Seamen; ard it was not till the firft Panick War, that their Sripend came our of the publick Treafury, among the Romans." Bur in the iccond Punick War tis clear from Livy, Lib. 33. c. 2 :. that their. Wages and Pay was taken from thence: But if the Treafury werc out of Cafh, fometimes particular Men of great Fortune and Poffeffions paid the Fleet, and ar laft it came to be hid as a Burden upon private Perfons: For Licy, Lib. 29. Faith, that according to each Man's Circumitances or Eftarehe was obliged to find one ormore Scamen, and to give them fo many Months Pay. This was done by Decrec of the Senate, when L. Emilius and C. Flaminius were Cenfors: And then (faith he) Primum off Fatum, ut Cleflis Remane Sociis Nicurlitus priocta impenfa peratis complecetur.: And this Cuftom held rill Hempile.! was driven out of Ircly, and then the Reman Affairs began to mend a little. After this it appears again from Liiv, that they paid their Scamen out of the publick Treafury; and as for the Fleets which werc pur out by their Scaii or Allies, they made :licm Fay the Soldiers and Rowers ar a cerrain Stipend. Indeed what this Stipend or Wages was, which cither the Romens themfclves, or their Allies allowed, is nor certainly known. Scocffer thinks'twas lefs than the Land Fay, and gueffes, that as the Land Soldiers had 3 Affrs, fo thefe had bustwo: Butafterwards in the times of the Einperors, it was raifed; for Scleffer oblerves, that in the time of inafrifius the Rowers had 5 Reman Soizdi; and the Officers Pay was raifed proportionably, as the S/vedian Lemt thew us: For tis there appointed that Illi rot.: E Naupego: Nauts E Carebits portio unt, Parafchira portio dimidia tribuisur. What Stipend the Greciens allowed their Seamen iscqually obfeure; tho that they did allov fome, is plain from Plutarch's ife of Themifirites, from Xenephen and Thurgdides; and this Scipend cane out of the publick Treafnry. But tho the certain quantiry of their Pay per Day, or per Menth, be not known; yet tis apparent that there was a difference in it, accerding to the difference in the Pains and Labour of the Periens. The Scholiaft upon Ariftephenes faith, that the Thaicmis.e or lowermoft Rowers had lefs Pay than the reff, becaufc their Oars were fliorter, and nearer to the Sea: And Thucydices, I ib. 6. mentions fomething extraordinaly given to the Tiranita over and 2hove the publick Stipend; becaufe (as the Scholiaft (aith) their Oars being longer than any others in the Ship, they had the hardeft Labour; and to this we may add, that ricy fiond and rowed, whereas the others fate; and, befides, if the Stip were of 5 or 0 Orders, their Oars muft move over their Heads, which made it yet more laborious and difficult. Thefe were called ip日uenero by Hefychius on this account. But what cach particular Man had, isnor eafy to difcover. There is a laffage in Plutarch's' Lyfruder, by which it appears, that the common Allowance for every Nauta was three Oboli, and that Cyrus at Lyfander's requeft made is four. After this Tifaphernes increafed their Pay to a Diacima, crix Oinm $i$, as we learn from Tioucdides, Lib. S .
They had alfo Clothes (fuch as they were) allowed them out of the publick Money, and this was accounted as part of their Pay, as was allo the Fi unnentum or Provifions which were appointed for them at the charge of the Publick. Sometimes they had a certain quantity of Corn allowed them, as when there was a profpect of a long Voyage; and ofen bat'd and boll'd Meats. When they had crude Corn, there were Mills allowed on board to grind it; but they had ofener their Allowance in Meal or Flower. Which, with Water (to which ometimes Milk, Wine or Uil was added) they made up inno 2 kind of Cates, which the Greeks calied moka but this was a kind of Hafty-pudding; and came far lhort of the goodnefs of Bread.
Garluck wasalloa mighty Food with the Rowers, both among the Greeks' and Latines; and Cheefe and Eggs they ufually took along with them. For there is an Account in Ariflophanes of a certain odd kind of Broth, which he calls mitiont, which was much ufed at Sea, and was compofed of Checle, Eggs and Garlick. This Tarr-Potrage the Remans called Moffum and Morcium, and fomerimes Intritum, as Scalizer fhews from Donftus. Their Drink was nothing but Water, efpecially for the common Seamen; But we do now and then read of Officers having Wine on board.
Thefe Provigons were, as we have before obferved, carried in pecuiliar Veffels, and not put on board the Men of War: And how thefe Ships differd from the Naves long.e, or Shïps of War, and by what peculiar Names they were called, I have in part fhewed before, and thall fpeak of again in the Cacalogue of the icveral kinds of Ships, and therefore thall fay nothing further of them now. 1 fhall conclude with a word ur two abour their Rewards and Punifhments, and of the Sea Triunphs.
The ufual Reward that a Commander or Caprain had. for behaving himfelf honeftly and bravely, bad, was 2 Nintoal or Claffical Crown or Corones; and more peculiarly wasthis given to him, Qui primus in Hoftilem Nuvim tranfilierit, Čujufve operâ manuve Nкzis Hoffium capte fuit, as $A$. Gellius and Frftus exprets it. This Corones or Garland, was wrought into Fignres reprefenting the Riftre, Acrnfiolic &sc. of Ships, and was worn upon folemn Occafions: And fometimes he was folemnly prefented with a Purple Flag or Standard, which was hung up in his Houfe as.2 Token of and Trophy for hisConduct and Courage. The Gubernatores or Mafters, the fubaltern Officers and common Soldiers, Rowers or Seamen, had ufually a Gift of Money beftowed upon them, in value proport:onable to their Merit, teing greater or lefs according as they behaved themilives: If they were Foreigners they were fometimes made Denizens; they were exempted from Taxes, and they were endowed with feveral other Privileges and Advantages, according to the Pleafure of the Government; and they bad often alfo the Honour to be buried in fome publick Place of Repure when they died; which was a thing they were very fond of.
And as their Rewards you fee were Honorary ; fo their Punifbments were ulually Difgraces: Such as degrading them from their Station, taking away their Commiffion, incapacitating them from any publick Cffice or Employmens, and fomerimes depriving them of the Liberty of wearing the common and ordinary Habit, with thofe of their own Rank : Bur this was chiefly if not folely, a Punilhment for Cfficers that did nor behave themfelves a's they fhould have done. The common Soldiers, Rowers, or Sailers, were ufually chaftifed with Corporal Puniftment: And this was of 2 kinds; 1. Common or Ordinary, which was lafhing their Back with fmall Ropes or Cords; or with a Cat of Nine-rails, as we now call them; and this was a Funifiment for little Faulss corr mirted in the Ship: Or 2. Exticordinary; for grear Crimes and Offences: And this was to hang them up by the Heels on the Ships fide, without Board, and with their Heads downwards : And fometimes rying a Rope about their Middle to let them down under Water, and letting them go quite under the Shirs Keel, to draw them up on the other fide of the Ship: Which Punift ment we now call Kect-Hciling. If a Man
a Man deferted, or fled from his Poft, the Puniftoment was to cut off both his hands. 'Twas a common Punifhment alfo, for 2 grear Faulr, to put the Offender on Thore, in fome barbarous and favage Place, and there to leave him to fliff for himfelf: Burfor Capital Crimes the Punifment was throwing the Offender over-board, and fo drowning him in the Sea.
Naval Triumphs were defigned as peculiar Rewards, and as the Honours done to the Imperator. High Admiral, or Commander in chief, for an Eminent Vi etory in an Engagement by Sea. The firf that ever had this Honour among the Romans, was Duilius their Admiral in the firf Punick War, for his Signal Victory over the Cartheginian Flect at Lipare: Himfelf and Cn. Corn. lius being Confuls. Before any Triumph was determined, the Prator or Conful always fent to Reme a Ship crown'd with I.aurel as 2 Token and Nocification of the. Victory: And next he came home himfelf, if he could, or ar leaft fent his own Ship, or Ships, adorn'd with the Spoils of the Enemy: And if he came himfelf he was met by the Confuls, Prextors, and moft of the grear Officers of the City; when he was landed he applied himfelf to the Senate for Leave to have a Triumph, without whofe Decree it could not be done When on due Examination of the Circumftances of rhe Viftory, they thought fit to allow him a Triumphal Entry, it was ufually performed after this manner Firft, as in a Land Triumph, the Literrs began the C2valcade; thefe were followed by Muficians, who fans and play'd the Sea Song, Tune, or Harmonia, whereby the Rowers were brought to ftrike true, and to keep juit time with their Oars, as is above deferibed. Next followed Pielures and Reprefentations of the Engagement; after this came the $R \cdot f \cdot a$, and other Spoils and Ornaments of the Enemies Shtps, together with their Arms and Wcapons of War, drawn a-long in Carriages 7 hen were brought Tables, in which the Number and Names of the Enemies Ships were written, which the Victor had taken or deftroy'd, and after thefe were carried the Treafure taken from the Enemy, the Crowns which were prefented by the Allies. Behind which marched the Captive Pirates, Caprains, and Commanders of the Enemies Ships: And next came the Admiral himfllf in a Triumphant Charior, raifed confpicuouly bigh, and wearing a Gown adorned with Gold and Purple, and with his Head crown'd with Laurel, and after the Chariot followed the Marines, Rowers, and Sailers, all adorned with Laurel, in this Pomp they went to the Capitol, and there after having offered up the proper Sacrifices, Ejc. they hung the Roftra and Naval Spoils up in the Temple, > ereptag; Roftra Crrinis.

Virg. 正n. 7.
And rometimes Columns and other Trophies were ere Cted in feveral Places, in Honour of the Conquerour.

The manner of the Naval Triumph, amongft the Greeks, was in very few material Points different from this of the Romans, and therefore I need not flay to give any particular Defcription of ir.

86 Vitiles Naves, the fame with the Sutiles.
87 Vagiones, were Veffels buile of very thin Boards or Planiks, and joined together by Brals Pins, ECc. with wonderful Art. Mirifoti/s

Of the invention, Ufe, and Froperties of the MAGNET.

THE Mingnet or Loadftone, as to irs wonderful II think, be very juftly doubred ; norwithftanding Quality of arracting Iron, was knowntoalmoft Kircher, p. 18. faith, that afrer all his moft diligent Enall Parrs of the World, from all Antiquity. quiry of thofe who had been in China, and who perfe $\hat{\theta}$ Kircher quotes Abrabinel, to thew that it was known to the Hebrios; and from Plurarch it appears that the antiert Eoyptians had the Knowledge of this Property. Homer alfo, Arifforle, Ptoiomy, Pythagoras, Theopbraftus, Gallen, \&cc. and ail the Greeks knew and admired this armactive Property of the Magnet, of drawing only Iron. The Grecians ufually called it the Heraclean Stone, becauife it was firft found about Heraclen, a City of Magnefia in Lydia: But the Author of the Etimologicum will becaule of the Strength and Power of its Actraction of Iron. Pliny faith, Lib.36. c.17. that it took the Name of Magnes from a certain Shepherd of that Name, who by chance difcovered issVirrue by his nailed Shoes and Ironhod Sraff ficking or adhering tothefe kind of Srones: Bur 'tis more probable that it was fo called from Magnefia, that Part of Lydia where ir was firft difcovered by the Grecks, as Licretius tells us,

Quam Megneta vocant Patrio de Nomine Graii, Bfegnetum quiafit Patriis de finibus ortus.
 and fome others quore Euripides as the firft who gave the Loadftone the Name of Magnes. By Sophocles 'tis called Lydius Lapis, from Lydia, the Region whercit wasfound, of which Magnefia is a part. The Greeks allo fometime gave it the Name of Sideritis, from its Property of attracting Iron unto it. For which indeed it is defervedly cclebrated by a!l the Ancienss, whencver they fpeak of ir: And claudian hath a particular Poem on this Subjeet, in which he very elegantly and mafterly defcribes the Virtues of this Stone, and admires the fecret Caufe of fuch an amazing effect.

Quis caior infundit geminis alterne metallis Fxiera? 2u.e dures' iunzit difordic mentes? Flegrat anbela Silcex, Oi amicam Saucia fentis Maeeriam, placidus Chaigbsccgnifitit emores.
But notwithitanding the fo long and fo univerfala Knowthere do not feem any good yrounds to believe that thed what is pofitively afierred by Gilbert and many good

 Gracks or Larines, or to the Fogntians, from whom the where in his Travels to the Eaft. Cab.eus faith, the firft Grecks received all their curious Learning. Our N. Ful- Wricer on this Subject of the Directive Faculry of the Ir indecd labours hard to prove the contrary Opinion; Magner, was one Perrus Percgrinus Gallas, in a litule 1 ur he is fufficienty refutcd by the moot Learned Bochart Book (which he calls) Ep: fols; and this Book he faith, in his Geogr. Sair. and by many others. Whether there Garionius afferts he faw in the Bibliotijeca Cafellana at were nor lome Knowledge of this mooft ufeful and excel- Venice. This Epiftle, he faith, fohannes Taifner, in his lent Propcrty among the Chinefer, Arabians and Africens, Opufoulum perpetuâ memoriâ digniffum de Natura before we had made the Difoovery of it in E:rope, may'|aibus M.ggnetis, prined at Coiogn 1962 , bath difguifed now-difcovered or produced is herc. To which muft be ad y were acquainted with the Clinefc Annals and Hiftory, he could find nothing of it among them. For If. Voffius in his Differtation de Artibus đ̛ Scientiv Sixarum, faith cxprefly, that the Knowledge of the Magner, and its directive Faculty of pointing to the North, was known to the Chinefes for 2800 Years ago ; and that orher Nations hadirfrom them. And he cires $\ddagger$ acobus de Vitriace, as afferting, that the Saracens had made ufe of the Compals in Navigation, for near five hundred Years ago: And he faith, 'tis certain that the Knowledge of the Declination or Variation: of the Mariners Compals was known alfo to the Saracens, and from thence came to the Clrificns: And he thinks that the Saracens had this Knowledge from the Cbinefe, who ufed to trade to Tnprobina or Celon, p. 8o. 7. de Laet. p. 75. de Orig. Gent. Americ. faith, that tis not juft to conclude, tharbecaufe the Greek's and Latincs had antiently no Knowledge of the Pyxis Nautice, therefore nose of the Orientalsany where had: For faith he, Acofta confeffes, that Vafgues de (Fiamafound the Ethiopians about Mofambigue knew the Ufe of the Compals; and it did not appear from whom the; had learnt the Ufe of it. This Valques de Gama was the firft thar difcovered the c.spe of Good Hope. The faune thing Kircler takes notice of; and owns alfo, thar in the Geograpbia Arabica Vaticena, and in the Nubiana, which are fufficiently antient, chere are nor olfcure Fints of the Knowledge of the Mariners Compafs. Caberus de Mngnete, p. 21. Gaith, the firft that he could find that mentioned the Knowledge of the Directive Faculty, or as our Gilbert calls ir, the Verticity of the Magner, was Albersus Magnus and Vincentius Belluacenfis; and thefe bork quote a Book de Lapidibus, which they will have to be Arifforle's, in which there is mention made of the Nort/) and Soutb Part of the Magnet. And tho Cabeus doth norbelieve this Brok robe really his whofe Name ir carries, yerhe thinks juftly enough, that it may be written by forme old Arabick Author, and fo put out under Ariflotic's Name; which if true, will fufficiently prove our Point, viz. that there was a Knowledge of the Verticity of the Magnet in tome out and deformed, and then publiffed as his own ; tho that Epiftle is felf were printed 4 Ycars before. Arhar. Kircleer, P. 19. Saith, Some account this Petrus Peregrinus is the Trurc been our Regcr Bacn : Ahirms in his Epifoin Invilatoria, Dat. Alrorf. 1692. Raying exprefly, that itwas Roger Bacon firt found out the Verticity or Polarity of the Magnet. And for the Honour of our own Nation alfo, the late Learned and Excellent Mathemarician Dr. Watlis, Savilian Profelfor of Geometry in the 1 lu:verlity of Oxford, Phil. Tranf. $\mathrm{N}^{\circ} .273$. conjestured, that the Mariners Compals was an Englifh Invention, from the Word Compafs, which is almoft every where retainal; and is properly an Englifh Word, being ufed in many of our Provincial Parta for a Circle, or exactly round Figure, whofe Circumference is every where equally diftant from a Poinr withinit, called its Centre.
But it muft be granted in all this which is above advanced, tho'there be grear probability, yet there is litele certainty of : And therefore we muft next amtribute, with the generality of Writers, the firft Invention of the Mariners Compals to Foh. Goin, or Gira, of Ma/pbi, a Town in the Kingdom of Napies, not far from Saternum, in the Teria de Lavoro; fome call him Flavius Gioia And this was about the Year 1300 .

After this great and moft ufeful Difcovery was known to Europe, there were foon many inquifitive Heads that cmplojed their Thoughts abour making further Difooveries of this celebrated Stonc. So that in fome cime its Irriation or Deffettion from the true Meridian, was difcovered by Sebafticn Cabor. The Declination (as it was at firt called, whereas now the Variation ofren palfes by that Name) or racher the Inclination of the Needle, was firt difcovered by our Countryman Robert Norman. (See his Book called the New Ateraftive, printed at L.ond.i 61 4.) which is a (urprizing Property, whereby it always dips under the Horizon, when placed upon a Pin like a Compals, cxcept in fuch Places as are juft under the Equator ; and there it keeps always parallel to the Horizon exactly. And hefound the greateft Inclination at Lon-thinks that the Difcovery of this Dipping of the Needle is owing to Mr. Blagrave, or fome orher Girgfoamsite: And he defcribes this Property to be a Direction of Alcisude above she Horizon: So that if itbeduly poifed onan HorizontalAxis, it will point to a determinate Deqree of Al citude orElerationabove the Horizon: And he frith cruly, char of this Difcovery, tho'made fo long ago, there hath not yer been any confiderable ufe made. The Variaticn of tic Variation isanother confderable and very furprizing Property of the Loadfone; that is, That the Magnetick Nedle (in its Horizontal Pofition) doth not atways rerain the fame Variation orDeclination from the true Meridian, in the fame Place and ar all Times; but doth fucceifively vary its Declination or Variarion from Time ro Time. This was firft (as'tis now agreed onall hands, faith Dr. Wriiis) difoovered by Mr. Gellibrand, about the Year 1635 . But Sturmius faith, that this was taken notice of alro by Hevelius, Aurout, Petit, Volckamer, andothers, much about the fame time. So that our Englifh Nation have had a very corfiderable Share in the Difcoveries' Which have been made about the Magnet, and its wonderful and ufeful Propertics.
A fuccinet Accounr of which Propertics, and orher fuch Pbenomena of the Loadftone, as have been found out truly to belong to it by plain Experiments and repeared Obfervations, I thall here fubjoin, without enrring into Tbeories or Explications of the Caufes of them: And afier this, I will give youthe Thoughts and Obfervations of the Learned and Ingenious Capt. Hall now Saviliat Profelfor of Geomerry in Oxford) upon the Variation of the Compafs, and the Reaton of the Variation of that Variation: Becaule both thefe will be of great ufe to anfift the Enquiries of publick fpirited and ingenious Men, in their firuare Trials, Obicrvations and Experiments on this very great Subject, fo univer2lly uleful and advanraqeous to all trading Nations: And allo becaufe many Travellers and Navigators may erhaps carry this Bibliotbece with them abroad, tho" to I e n orher Books, in which thefe chings are to be found, ate lefs krown or agreeable.

Tie Properties or Phxnomena of the Magnet, or Loadftone, as they bave been difiovered by Gilbert, Cabxus, Kircher, Vin. Leotaudus. Cartes, Dr. Power, the Honourable Mr. Boyle, Cr.

THAT in every Magnet there are two Poles, one pointing North, the other South; and if a Stone ecut or broke into never fo many Pieces, there are hefe two Poles in each Piece.
2. That thefe Poles, in divers Parts of the Globe, are diverlly inclined towards the Earchs Centre.
3. That theic Poles, tho contrary to one another, do ejp mutually towards the Megnet's Attraction and Sufpention of Ifon.
4. If two Magnetsare Spherical, one will surnor conCorm it felf to the other, fo aseither of them wou'd do to the Earth, and that after they have fo conformed or turned themfelves, they endeavour to approach to join eaca other ; bur if placed in a contrary Pofition, they avoid each other.
5. If a Magnet be cut through the Axis, the Parts or Segment of the Stone, which before were joined, will now avoid and fly eachother.
6. If the Magnee be cut by a Seetion perpendicular to iss Axis, the two Points there which before were conjoined, will become contrary Poles, one in one, the other in the other Segments.
7. Iron receives Virtue from the Magnet by Application to it, or barely from an Approach near ir, tho it do not touch it ; and the Iron receives this Virtue variounly, according to the Parts of the Stone it's made to touch, or made approach to.
8. If an Oblong Piece of Iron be any how applied to the Srone, it receives Virtue from it only as to its Length. 9. The Magnes lofes none of its own Virtue by communicating any to Tron, and this Virtue it can communicate to Iron very fpeedily; tho' the longer the Iron rouches or joins the Srone, the longer will its communicated Virtue hold, and a better Magner will communicate more of it, and fooser than one not to good.
In. Thar Sreel receives Virtue from the Mingnet better hanIFors
11. A Needle touch by a Magret, will torn its Ends the fame way towards the Poles of the World, as the Magnet willdo.
12. That neither Loadftone nor Needles touchr by is do conform their Poles exactly to thofe of the World but have ufaally fome Variation from them: And this Variation is differentin disers Places, and ar divers Times in the fame Place.
13. Thar a Loadftone will take up much more Iron when armed or capt, than it can alone: And that tho an Iron Ring or Key be fufpended by the Loadfonc, ye the Magnerical Particles do nor hinder that Ring orKey from rurning round any way either so the Right or Left.
14. That the Force of a Loadfone may be variouly ensreated or Jeffened, by the various Application of Iron or another Loadfone to ir.
15. That a frong Magnet," at the leaft diftance from aleffer or a weaker, cannot draw to it a Piece of Iron adhering actually to fach leffer or weaker Stone; but if it comero touch it, it can draw it from the other : But a weaker Magner, or even a little Piece of Iron, can draw away or feparatea Piece of Iron concignousto a greater or tranger Loadtone.
16. That in our North Parts of the World, the South Pole of a Loadftone will raife ap more Iron than the North Pole.
17. That a Plate of Iron only, but noother Body interpofed, can impede the Operation of the Loadfone, either as to its atrrative or direfive Quality. Mr Bople found it true in Glaffes fealed Hermetically ; and Glafs is a Body as impervious as moft are ro any Effluvia. 18. That the Power or Virtue of 2 Loaditone may be impaired by lying long in a wrong Pofture, as alfo by Ruft, Wet, Ěf. and may be quite defraved by Fire:

Expcriments

Experiments of the Nature and Properties of the Magnet. By Mr. Boyle.
I. $\begin{aligned} & \text { R. Borle found, that by heating a Mangiet red } \\ & \text { hor, it could be focedily deprived of its } A t-\end{aligned}$ hor, it could be freedily deprived of its $A t$ tr.citeve 2 :ality.
2. If a loadfone be heated red-hot, and then cooled, either with iss Sourh Pole to the North, in 2 Horizontal Poficion, or with its South Pole downwards in 2 Perpendicular one, it will change its Polarity, the South Pole becoming the Northern one, and viceverfa.
3. By applyingthe Poles of a very fmall Fragment of a Loadttone to the oppofite vigorous ones of a good larger Megnet, Mr. Boll:found he could fpeedily change the Poles of the Fragmenr; but he cou'd nor effect it in a Fragment that was confiderably bigger, tho' he tried many hours.

4 Heobferved, that well tempered and hardned Iron Tools, when heared by Autrition, Turning, Filing; &c. they would, while warm, areract chin Filings or Chips of Iron and Steel, bur nor when cold. YerI remember once to have feen my felf, and tried, that a Piece of a File which was in the hands of Mr . Tarwell the Spectacle Maker, did retain fuch an attractive Quality, that it would take up a:d keep fufpended the Kcy of a Cabinet or Efcritrre, and needed no Attrition to excite this Maganctical Vertuc.
5. The Iion Bars of Windows which have long ftood in an crect Pofition, do grow permanently Magnetical, the lower Ends of fuch Bars being the North Poles, and the upper the Southern: For according to Laws of Magnetifm, we find the lower Ends of fuch Bars will drive away the North End of a poifed Needle, and will attract the Southern: Which thews, that by the cuntinual Paffage of the fubtile Magnecical Particles chrough them, they are curned into a kind of Magnet themfelves.
6. If a Bar of Iron that hath not long ftood inan erected Pofture, be only held perpendicularly, its lower Ead will be the North Pole, and artract the South Point of a touched Needle: But then this Virtae is tranfient, and will ihifr as you invert the Bar ; for the other End, when held towermoft, will ptefenly become the North Pole: Wherefore, in order to render the Quality of Verticity permanent in an Iron Bar, it muft remain a long time in 2 properPofition: Bur the Fire will prodace this Effect in a very fhort time; for as it will immediately deprivea Loadfone of Attractive Power, orchange its Poles (as in Exper.1,2.) foir will as foon give a $V$ Erticiey to a Bar of lron, if being heated red hot, it be cooled in an erea Poftion, or directly North and South. Nay, it hatis been obferved ofren, that even Tongs and Fire-Forks, by being often heated, and then fer to cool in a Pofition near to creA, have gaimed this Magnerical Property. The Reafon of which very different Effelts of the Fire on a Magnet, and on Iron, Mr. Bole, with his ufual Modefty, fuggefts to be this: That the peculiar Texture or Conftitution by which 2 Maguer differs from common Iron Oar, being accurate and fine, is fpoiled by the rude and violent Attacks of the Fire: But this migbry Agent by working upon Iron, foftens and opens the Pores of the Metral (which is harder than Iron Oar;). Io that ir becomescapable of being pervaded by the Magnetical Parricles, and by that means gains a Vertical guality.
7. Mr. Bople found, that by heating a Piece of Englifs Ofer red hot, and placing is to cool in a proper Polture, it plainly gained a Magnetick Power.
8. The fame Noble Gentleman found, that an excellent Loadfone of his own having lain almoft a Year in an inconvenient Pofture, had its Virtue fo impaired, that he at firft thoughr fomebody had fpoiled ir by Fire.
9. If a Needle be well touched on a geod Loadftone tis known it will, when duly poifed, point North and South; bur if it have one contrary Touch of the fame Srone, it vill immediarely be deprived of that Faculty and by another fuch Touch it will have its Poles quite changed ; fo thar the End which before pointed North, thall now poine Southward.
10. Dr. Power and Mr. Boyit both tried; that after 2 red-hor Iron had gained a Versicity by being well heared and cooled North and Suuth, and then alfo hampered as the Ends. this Virtue would immediarely be deftroy'd by 2 or 3 Blows of a ftrong Hammer finarty given a bour the middle of it.
ii. Mr. Boofe found, that by drawing the Back of a Knife, or long Picce of Sreel Wire, évr. over the Pole of a Loadftone leifurely, once or divers times, beginning the Motion from the Equaror or middle of the Stone, towardsthe Pole, the Knife or Wire will accordingly atrract one End of a poiled Magretica! Ncedle:: but if you take another Knife or Wire, and thruft it leifurely over the Pole, from the Pole towards the Equator, or middlë of the Equator, this Knife fhall cxpel or drive away the fame End of the Needle which the former Knife would attract. Which Experiment makes it very probable, that the Operation of the Msagnet. depends on the Flux of fome fine Parricles which go out at one Pole, chen round about, and in again at the other.
13. Becaufe it is one of the univerfal Laws of Nature, That Action and Re-action are alwajs cquai: Therefore'tis' plain, the Iron muft attract the Magnet as much as thar dorh the Iron; and fo you may cafly experiment it to be in Fact, if you place a Magnet or Piece of Iron on a Piece of Cork, fo as that ir may fivim frecly in the $W_{2}-$ ter; for then you will fee, thar which foever you hold in your Hand, will draw the orber towards ir,

A Difcourfe of the Variation of the Compafs, by Mr. Edm. Hally, Savilian Profeffor of Geometry in Oxford, and F.R.S.

1 HE Variation of the Compals (by which I mean the Deflection of the Magnetical Needle from the rrue Meridian) is of that grear concernment in the Artof Navigation, that theNeglect thereof does litrle lefs than render ufelefs oneof theNobleft InvencionsMankind ever yet artained to: And for this caufe all Ships of confequence (efpecially thofe bound beyond the Equater) carry with them Inttruments on purpofe to obferve this $V$ ariation; that fo the Courfe fteer'd by the Compars, may be reduced torhe true Courfe in refpect of the Meridian.
Now altho the grear Utility that a perfect Knowledge of the Theory of the Magnetical Direction would afford to Mankind in generad, and efpecially to thofe concern'd in Sea Affairs, feems a fufficient Incirement to all Philofophical and Mathemarical Heads, to take under ferious Confideration the feveral Pbenomen., and to endeavour to reconcile then by fome general Rule: Ycc fo it is, thar-almoft all the Auchors from whom a Difcourfe of this kind oughe to have been expected, pafs by in Gilence the Difficalties they here encounter. And thofe that mention thisVariation, by affirming it to procced from Caufes altogetber uncertain (as are the calual lying of Iron Mines and Loadfones in the Earth) put a ftop to all further Contemplation, and give difcouragement to thofe thar would otherwife undertake this Enquiry. 'Tis true, that nor long fince one Mr. Bond, an old Te2cher of Navigation, put forth 2 mall Treatife, wherein he pretends to calculate the Variation; but he limirs his Hypothefis to the City of Lordon, affirming himfalf (as he had a grear deal of reafon) that the fame Calculur is not fufficient for other Places; whereby it appears, that this Rule is far short of the fo much defired general one.
Now altho (through want of fufficient Obfervacions, and fome orher Difficulties which I mall anon lhew) I cannor pretend perfectly to eftabling the Numbers and Rules of a Calculus, which thall precifely anfwer tothe Variations of all Parts of the World; yet I fuppofe ir will nor be umacceptable ro the Curious to propofe fomething of a Lighr into chis 2bftrufe Myftery ; which, if no other, may haverhis good effect, to ftir up the PhiloTophical Genii of the Age to apply themfelves more arrentively to this ufeful Speculation. Bur bcfore I proceed, twill be neceffary to lay down the Grounds upon which I raifemy Conclufions, and at once to give a $S_{y}$ nopfis of thofe Variations which I have reafon to look upon as fure, being moftly the Oblervacions of Perfons of good Skill and Integrity.

That in all Europe the Variation at this time is $W^{\prime} e f f_{\text {? }}$, and more in the Eaftern Parts thercuf than the Weftern: As likewife that it feems throughout to be upon the Increafe that way.
Secondly, That on the Coaft of Americt, a a out $/$ ig ginia, Neio-England and N:m-fourd-land, the Variation is likewife Wefterly; and that ir increafes all the way as you go Northerly along the Coaft, fo as to be above 20 Degrees at Nem-foun:d/and, nearly 30 Degrees in IJu!! In's Straits, and not Jefs than 57 Degrces in Beffins Bay : Alfo that as you fail Ealtward fiom this Coaft, the Variariot diminimes. From thefe two it is a legivimate Corillary, That fomewhere le:socm Eurnpe, wat the No. is Perr if America, there rughy tole an Fefferty traiation, or ae leat no Weficily. And fo I conjecture it is al out the Eafiermoft of the Tercern Iflancis.

Thirdly, Thar on the Coaft of Brezi/e there is Fait Variarion, which increafes very notably as you go to the Southward, fo as to be 12 Degrees at Capetice aike over-2gainft the River of Plate $=0$ ' Degrecs: And fro:iu thence failing Soulhw cfterly to the Sraits of Niexitom, it decreafes if Degrecs, and at the Weit Entranic bu: 14 Degrees.
Fourtinly, That ar the Eaftward of Brexite properiy io called, this Eafterly Variation decreales, fo as to be very littic at St. Helenn and Afcenfin, and to be quire grne, and the Compafs Point true about 18 Degrees of Longitude Weft from the Cepe of Good Hope.
Fifthly, That to the Eaftward of the aforefaid Places Weftward Variation begins, which reigns in the whole Indien Sca, arifes to no lefs than 18 Degrees under the Equaror ir felf, about the Meridian of the Northern Part of Mrdagajcar: and near the fame Meridian, but in 39 Degrees ${ }^{\prime}$ outh Latitude, it is found full 27, Degrees : From thence Eafterly the Weft Variation decreafes, fo as to be little more than eight Degrees at Cape Comorin, and than three Degrecs upon the Coaft of $\ddagger 6$ Qr; and to bequite extinet abour the Melucca I/fands, as alfo a little to the Weftward of Van Diemens Land, fourmi our by the Dursh in 1642 .
Sixthly, That to the Eaftward of the Molucca's and Van Diemers Land in Sourh Lationde, there arifes another Eafterly Variarion, which feems not lo great as the former, nor of fo large cxicnt; for that at the Ifand Rotterdam it is fenfibly lefs than upon the Eaft Coaft of Nem Guiner. And at the rate it decreafe, it may be well fuppofed, that abour 20 Degrees farther Eaft, or 225 Degrees Eaft Longitude from London, in the Latirude of 20 Degrees South, a Wefterly Variarion begins.
Seventhly, That the Variations obferved by the Honourable Sir Jolm Norlorcugh, at Baldivie, and at the Weft Entrance of the Straights of Magellan, do plainly thew, that that Eaft Variation noted in our third Remark, is decrealing apace; and that it cannot reafonably cxtend many Degrees into the South Sea, from the Coaft of perve and Chifi, leating room for a imall Wefteriy Variation. in that Tract of the unknown World that lies in the Mid-way between Cibiai and Niem zaland, and between FFornds-Ifend and Pera.
Eightly, That in failing North-Weff from St. He/cres by Afcenfion as far as the Equarcu, the Variation continues very fmall Eaft, and as it were conflantly the fame: So thar in this part of the World the Courfe, whercin there is no Variarion, is evidendy no Meridian, but rather North-Weft.

Ninthly, That the Entrance of 'rudfons Straights, and the Mouth of the Rivcr of Plate being nearly under the fame Meridian, at the one place the Needle varies 29 ; Degrees to the Weft, at the other 20 ! Degrees to the Ealt. This plainly demonttrates the Impoffibility of reconciling thefe Variations by the Theory of Bond, robich is by two Megnetical Poles end an Axis inclined to the Axis of the Earth." From whence it would follow, That under the fame Meridian the Varintion feould be in all Places the fane way.
Thefe chingsbeing premifed, may ferve as a fure Foundation ro raiferhe Superfructure of a Theory upon. But firft it would nor beamifs to thew hereby the Miftake of Giibert and Des cartes: The firt whereof fuppoles, That the Eerth if falf being in all its Parts Mreguetical, and she Whater not; werefoczer the Land is, thisilier a'fo boutd the Needle turn, es to the greater (2uantity of Mragnetical Matte'. But this in many Inftances is not truc, bur moft remarkably upoin the Coaft of Brazit, where the Needle is fo far from being attracted by the Land, that ir curns the quite contrary way, leaving the Meridian to lic N.b.E. which is juft along the Coalt. As to the Pofition of Des Cartes, That the Iron and Loriffones bid in the Bowels of the Earthand the Bottom of the Sca may be the Caufes shat ilse Ni:edle varies, if we conficer for how great a Part of the Earch's Surface, ex gr. in the whole Indianp Sea, the Niedle declines the fame way, and that regularly, twill follow that the attracting Subflance that uccafions it, muft be very far diftant. Now by Experience we find the liftle force chat IromGuns have upon the Compafs in Ships (their Virtue, tho they be Demiculverin, or greater Cannon, being not perceptible ar four or five Yards Diftance) and the Experiments now before the Rival Socicty do plainly fhew, how little 2 Magnetifm there is in moft crude Iron Oars: What Quantity there of muft be then fuppofed to make fo powerful a Diverfon at two or three Thoufand Miles diftance? Yet 1 I cannor deny that in fome Places near the Shoar, or in Shoal-Water, the Needle may be irregularly directed from the aforefiad Caufes, and that not a little, as Gof fendus gives a notable Inflance of the Illand Elbe in the Mediterranean Sea: Bur thefe Differences from the general Direction arealways Signs of the Nearnefs of thofe Magnerical Subitances, for the Production whereof that Ifland Elba has beenfamous from all Antiquiry. Befides againt both Des Cartes and Gilbert, the Change of the Variation which has been within thefe hundred Years laft paft more than 15 Degrees at London, is an entire Demonftration; tho' Des Cartes does nor trick to fay, that the Tranfportarion of Iron from Place to Place, and the Growth of new Iron within the Earth, where there was none before, may be the Caufe thereof. The fame holds likewife againit the Hypo:hefis of MagneticalFibres, which Kircher maintains Now to propofe fomething that may anfwer the feveral Appearances, and incroduce nothing ftrange in Philolophy, after a great many clole Thoughrs, 1 can come to no other Conclufion than, That the wotole Globe of the Eartij is che great Magnet, baving four Magnetical Poles, or Points of Atrrati: on, near each Polg of the Equator troo; and adjacent to any one of thef: Megretical Poles, the Nieedle is governed tiler:Ly, che neareft Pole being always predom:nate over elje more remore. The Parts of the Earth wherein thele Magnetical Poles lic, cannot as yet be exactly determined, for want of fufficient Data to proceed Geomerrically; but as ncar as Conjecture can reach, I reckonthar the Pole, which is at prefentneareft to us, lies in or near the Meridian of the Lands End of England, and not above feven Degrees from the Pole Aretick. By this Pole the Variations in all Europe, and Tartary, and the Norrh Sea, are ptincipally gorern'd, tho' with regard to the other Northern Pole, whofe Situation is in a Mcridian paffing about the middle of California, and about 15 Degrees from the North Pole of the World. To this the Needle has chiefly refpeat in all the North Americh, and in che two Oceans on either fide chereof, from the Azores Wefward to fapan, and farther. The rwo Southern Poles are farther diftant from the South Pole of the World: The one about fixtean Degrees therefrom, is in a Meridian, fome twenty Degrees to the Weftward of Magellan Straights, or 25 Dcgrees Weft from london. This commands the Needle in all the South Americn, in the Pacifick Sen, and the greareft Part of the Erbiopick Ocean. The fourth and laft Pole feems to have the greazeft Power and largeft Dominions of all, as it is the moft remote from the Pole of the World, being litulelefs than 20 Degrees diftant therefrom in the Meridian, which paffes through Hollandla Nooa and the Illand Celeber, about 120 Degrees Eaft from London. ThisPole is predominant in the South Part of Africa, in Arabia and the Red Sea, in Perfia, Indic, and its Mands, and all over the Indian Sea, from the Cape of Good Hope Eaft wards to the middle of the great South Sea thar divides $A f$ from America. This feems to be the prefent Dif pofition of the Magnetical Vertue througtoon the whole Globe of the Earth: Ir remains to Thew how this Hypo thefis makes out all the Variationsthar have been oblerved of lare, and how it anfwers to our feveral Remarks drawn from the Table. And firt it is plain, that (our Europeen North Pole being in the Meridian of the Landsend of England) all Places more Eafterly than that will have it on the Weft-fide of their Meridian, and confequently the Needle, refpecting ir with its Northern Point, will have a Wefterly Variation, which will ftill be greater as you go to the Ealtwards, till you come to ome Meridiath of $R_{4} f\left(\frac{1 n}{}\right.$, where 'rwill' be greateft, and from thence decreafe again. Thus at Bref the Variation is but 1 ! Degrees, ar London 4 : Dcgrees; but at Dantaick feven Degrees Weft. To the Weftward of the Meridian of the 1 ands-end, the Needle ought to bave an Eafterly Variation, were it not that (by approacting the American Northern Pole, which lies on the Weft fide of the Meridian, and feems to be of greater force than this other; the Needle is drawn thereby Weitwards, fo as to counterballance the DiteGion given by the European Pole, and tomake a fmall Weft Variation in the Meridian of the Lands-end it felf; yer 1 fuppofe, that about the Meridian of the life Te cern, our nearett Pule may fo far prevail, as to give the Needle a little turn to che Eaft, tho but for a very fmall fpace: The Counter ballance of thofe two Poles permitring no confideralle Variation in all the Eaftern Parts of the Allantici Ocean; nor upon the Weft Coafts of England and Ireland, France, Spain and Barbary : Bur to the Weftward of the Aare: the Power of the American Polc overcoming that of the European, the Needle has chicliy zefpect thercto, and urns fill more and more towards it, as you approach it. Whence it comes to pals, that on the Coalt of $\mathrm{H} \cdot \mathrm{g} \mathrm{g}$ nia, Nemp-England, Nemo-fund-icrd and Hudfons Straiohts, he Variation is Weftward ; that it decreafes as yot go from thence towards Eurepe, and thatit is lefs in $V_{1,-}-$ inia and New-Englased, than in Neno-fi. und-linntand Hzions Straights. This Weflerly Variation apain decreafes, as you pals over the Nortl) Americit; and about the Mcridian of the middle of Criliformin, the Necdle again poimts due North; and from thence Weltward to $\hat{x} \cdot d \tilde{r}_{0}$ and Fapran, I make no doubr but the Variation is Eafterly, and half the Sea over no lefs than fifreen Degrecs, if there be any rruch in this Hypothefis of mine. Thererare I propofe this as a trial, that the whole may be rcannd thereby; and I conceive it will net be hard to know of the Spaniards how it is, whe fo frepuently fail through that Ocran in their Recurn from the Menili: Ints. This Ealt Variation extends over fapan, Tedir, Faft Tarsary, and part of chine, till it mect with the Wefterly, which is govern'd by the Emopith North Pole, and which I faid wasgrcateff lomewhere in krifia

Towirds the Soathern Pole the Effect is much the fame, only that here the South Point of the Needle is attrafted. Hence it will folow, that the Variation on the Coalt of Brezilt, at the River of Plate, and fo on to the Straights of Marcllen, . Hoould be Eafterly (as in our third Remark); if we fuppofe a Magnetical Pole Situate about twenty Degrecs more Wefterly than the Straights of Megellane And this Eafterly Variation dorh extend Eaftward over the greateft part of the Ethiopick Sea, till it be counterpoifed by the Virtue of the orher Southern Pole; as it is about mid-way between the Cape of GoodHope, and the Illes of Trifian d'Acunsia. From thence Ealtuards, the Afin South Pole (as I muft take the liberty to call it) becoming prevalent, and the South Point of the Needle being artracted thercby, there arifes a Weft Variation very great in Quantity and Extent, becaufe of the grear diftance of this Magnetical Pole of the World.

Hence it is, that in all the Indian Sea, as far as Het iandia Noun, and farther, there is conftantly Weft $V$ ariation; and that under the Equator it felf it arifes to no lefs than eighreen Degrees where tis moft. Abort the Meridian of the Illand Celebes, being likewife that of this Pole; this Wefterly Variation ceates, and an Eafter$y$ begins, which reaches, according to my Hyporhefis to the middle of the Scuth, Sea berween Zelandin Net, and chili, leaving room for a fmall Weft Variation govern'd by the American South Pole; which lhewed to be in the Pacifick Sea. in the fixth and-leventh Remark.
What I have now faid doesplainly fhew the Sufficienc of this Hypothefis for folving the Variations that are at this time obfervid in the cemperare and frigid zones, where the Diretion of the Needle chicfly depends upon the Counterpoife of the Forces of rwo Magnetical Poles of he fame narure; and I fuppore I have fhewn how is comes to pars, that under the lame Meridian the Varia Ean fhould bein one place 29: Weft, and another 20. Eaft, as I have nored in my ninh Remark. In the Torria Zone, and parricularly ander she Equinotial, refpett muft be had to all four Poles, and their Poles and their Pofitions well confidered; orherwife ir willnor be eafy to determine what the Variations firall be, the neareft Pole being always the ftrongeft : Yer not fo as not to be connter-ballanced by the united Forces of two more remore. A notable Inftance whercof is in our eighth Remark, where rook notice, that in failing from St. Helema by the lae of Afcenfon, to the Equator, on a N.W. Courfe, the Variation is very little Eafterly, and inchat whole' Trat unalterable ; for which I give this Reafon, that theSouth American Pole (which is confiderably the neareft in the forefaid Places) requiring a grear Eafterly Variarion, scounter-poifed by the contrary Attraction of the Nortb american and the Afinn South-Pole; cach whereof fingly ate in thefe Parts weaker than the Americam South-Pole and upon the N.W. Courfe, the diftance from this latrer is very little varied, andas you recede from the Afian South-Pole, the Ballance is ftill preferted by the Accel's cowards the North-American Pole. I mencion not in shis Cafe rhe Eurropean North-Pole, its Meridian being litale removed from thofe of thefe Places, and of it 1elf reguiring the fame Variations we here find. After the fame manner we mighr procced to conclude the Variations in other Places under and near* the Equator: But I purpofe to leave it for an Exercife to the Thoughts of the ferious Reader, whois.defired to help his Imagination, by having before him a Map or Globe of the Earth, and to mark thereon the Magnetical Poles in the Longitudes and Latitudes I affign them.

Thus I hope I havenor loft my Pains and Study in this difficule Subject, believing that I have put it palt doubt, Tiat there are in the Earel) four fuch Magnerical Poincs ar Poles, woizch occefinn the grear Vericty sud joeming Irregulnicy nbich is offeried in the Variations of the Conipafs. But to calculate what it is, in any Place affign'd, is what I dare not yct pretend to, tho' I could with ir were my Happinefs to be able to oblige the World with fulcful a Piece of Knowledge: There areDifticulties that of cur, thatrender the thing as yot not feafible; for firft there are a great many Obfervations requifite, which oughe to be made ar the fame time; not at Sca, but a-thore, with greater Care and Attendance chan the generality of Sailors apply. And beindes, it remains undetermind in what proportion the attractive Power decreafes, as you remove trom the Pole of a Magner, withour which it were a vain Attempt to go abour to calculate. There is yet a further Difficiley, which is the Change of the Variation, one of the Difcoveries of this laft Century ; which thews, that it will require fome hendreds of Iears to eftablifh a compleat Doctrine of the Magnerical Syftem. From the foregoing Table it thould feem, tharall the Magnctical Poles had a Motion Weltward. But if it be fo, tis crident, that it is not a Rotation atout the Axis of the Eath; for then the Variations would contine the fame in the fame l'arallel of Lazitude (the Logitmice oniy charged) as much as is the Motion of the Magnetical Poles: But the contrary is found by Experience; for there is no where in the Latitude of $15 \%$ North between Engiand and Ameraca, a Variation of cleven Degrecs Eaft at this time, as is was onse here at London : It feems thercfore, that our Europecn Pole is grown nearer the Pole Artickthan it was hererofore, or clie chat is has loft part of its Virtue. Bur whether thefe Magnetical Poles move alrogether with one Morion, or with feveral ; wherber equally or unequally; whether Circular or Libratory: If circular, about what Center; if Libratory, after what manner; are Secrets as vet utterly unknown to Mankind, and are refervid for the Induftry of furure Ages.
Having in the precedent Difcourfe delivered a Theory of the Variation of the Magnetical Compafs, wherein dat collect as many Obervations as as thattime licould procure, and having carcfull; conipard them together, came as length to this gencral Conclufion, Thet the Glabe of the E.trth mipht be jupfofed to be one great Magnet, banivy four Magnetiact Poles or Paints of Atration, near cect lole of ste Ejuator t:0e: Late that in thoje Parrs of tha with whitio lic near aujucent to ang of thof Magne-Polc beime alatiys predominant over the more remote. And I there have endeavourd to tate and limit the prefent Pofition of thole Polcs in the Surface of our Globe, which the Reader pleafing to confulc will fave us the pains of repeating. Bur after all, tho that Difcourfe was fatourably received both ar home and abroad, as ceming to render a tolerable dccounr of the obreried Variations; yet I found two Difficultics not cafy ro furmount: The one was, that no Magner I had ever feen or heard of, had more than two oppofire Poles, whereas the Earch had vifibly four, and perhaps morc. And accondly, it was plain that thele Poles were not, atlealt all of them, fixt in the Earth, but Thifred from Place to Place, as apeeared by the great Changes in che Nicedle's dircetion wi:hin this laft Century of Years, not only at Londare (where this great Difcovery was made) but almoft allover the Globe of the Earth; whercas it is not known or obferved that the Poles of a Loadfone ever Abifed their Place in the Store, nor (confidering the ompaft flardrefs of that Subfance) can it eafily be 1upposid tho the Mater of Fat be too notorious and unicerfal not to be accounted for.
Thefe Difficultics had wholly made me defpond, and I lad long fince given over an linquiry I had fo little hopes of, whenin accidental Difcourfe, and leaft expecting it, Iftumbled on che following Hypothefis; in delivering whercof, if I fiall fecmto adrance any thing that looks like extravagant or romanich, the Reader is defired to fufendihis Cenfure, till he has confiderd the Force and Number of many Arguments which concur to mak good fo new and fo bold a Suppofition.

Tho it be fufficiently known and allowed, that the Necdle's Variation changes, it will be neceflary howcrer to give a few Inftances, whereby in may appear that this Change is gradual and univerial, and the cffecr of a great and permauenr Morion: For which take the following Examples.

At London, in the Year 1580, the Variation was ob ferved by Mr. Burrows to be II deg. 15 min . Eaft. In inno 1622, the fame was found by Mr. Ginter to be but 6 deg . o min. Eaft. In the Year 1634, Mr. Gelli$b$ and found it 4 deg . 5 min . Eaft. In 1657, Mr. Bond obferved that there was no Variation at London Anno $1 / 72$, my felf obferved it 2 deg .30 min . to the Weft In che Year 1692, 1 again found it 6 deg. o min. Weft So that in 112 Years the Direction of the Needle was changed no lefs than feventeen Degrees.

At Paris, Orontius Finaus, abour the Year 1550 , did account it abour cight or nine Degrees Eaf Variation. Anno 1640, it was found three Degrecs Eaft Anno i 666 , there was was no Variation there, and Anno 1681 , I found it to be 2 def. 30 min. to the Weft.
At Cape d'rg:aibus, the molt Southern Promontory of Africa, about the Year 1600, the Ncedle pointed due North and Sourh withour Variation, whence the Portugucfi gave irs Name. Anno 10́22, there was two Degrees Weft Variation. Amo 1675 , it was 8 deg o min. Weft; and in the Year 1691, it was curioully obferved wot kefs thania Degrees Weft.
Ar St. Helena, abour the Year 1600 , the Needle de clined cight Degrees to the Eaft. Ama 1623, it was but 6 dcg. o min. Eaft. Amm 1677 , when 1 was there I obferved it accurately on hoarto be odeg. 40 min . Eaft; and in 1693 , was found abour i deg. Weftward of the Niorth.
At Cepe Comerin in India, in the Year 1620, there was 14 deg .20 min . Welt Variation. In the Year 1680, there was 8 deg. 48 min . but now lately in the Year :6S8, it was no more than 7 deg .30 min . Sothat here the Needle has returned to the Eaft about fiven Degrees

In all other Exampks the Nicedle has gradually mov'd towards the Weft, and the Places are too far afunder to be influenc'd by the removal of any Magnetical Matter, which may by accident be uranfplac'd within the Bowels, or on the Surface of the Earth. If more Examples are defired, the Reader may be furnin'd with them in the Porturucfe Reutier of Allicxode Motsa (written about the Yeari 1600 ) and in the Voyage of Beaulies, both publifhed in Mr. Thevenot's firft Collection of curious Voyages, printed ar Peris, Anno 1663 ; which be is to compare with the Journals of our late Efft. India Voyagers, and I am affured that it will be chereby cvident, that the Direction of the. Needle is in no Place fix'd and conftant tho in fome it changes fafter than in others: And where for a long time ir has continu'd as it were unalter'd, it i there to be undertood, that the Needle has its greateft Deflection, and is become ftationary, in order to return, ike the Sunin the Tropick. Ihis, at prefent, is in the Indian Sea, abour the IIland Mauritius, where is the higheft Weft Variation, and in a Tract rending from thence into the N. N. W. towards the Red Sen and Eopr. Aind in all Places to the Weftward of this Tract, all over $A f i c i$, and the Seas adjoining, the Weft $\mathrm{V}_{2}-$ riation will be found to have encreas'd; and to the Eaftwards thereof, as in the Example of Cape Comorin, to have decreas'd, vin. all over the Eaft Indies, and the lands near.ir.
After the like manncr, in that ppace of Eaft Varia ions, which beginning near St. Heleng, is found all over the South Americn, and which at prefent is higheft atout the Mouth of Rio de la Plata, is has been oblerv'd, that in the Eaftern Parts thercof, the Variation of the Needie gradually decreafes: But whether on the contrary it increafes in thofe Places which lie more Wefterly than that Tract wherein the highef Eaft Variation is found, or how it may be in the valt Pacifick Sea, we have not Experience enough to afcertain, only we may by Analogy infer, that both the Eaft and Weft Variations therein da gradually increafe and decreafe after the fame Rule.
Thefe Phanomena being wellunderfood and duly conIdered, fufficiently evince, that the whole Magnetical Syftem is by one, or perhaps more Motions tramiared whether Eaftwards or Weft wards, I mall anon difcufs That chis moving thing is very grear, as extending its Effects from Pole to Pole; and that the Motion thereof 5 Hor per Saltum, bur a gradual and regular Motion.

Now confidering the Structure of our Terraqueous Globe, itcannot be well fuppos'd that a very great part thereof can move within it, withour notably changing its Centre of Gravity, and the Equilibre of its Parts, which would prodice very wonderful Effeas in changing the Axis of diurnal Rotation, and occation ftrange Alcerations in the Sea's Surface, by Inundations and Receffes thereof, fuch as Hiftory never yet mention'd Befides, the folid Parts of the Earth arc not to be grantcd permeable by any other than fluid-Subftances, of which we know none that are any ways Magnetical So that the only way to render this Motion intelligible and poffible, is to fuppofe is to turn about the Center of the Earth: And there is yer requird, that this moving internal Subftance be loole, and detached from the externa! Parts of the Earh whercin we live; for otherwife were it affixd thereto, the whole mult neceffarily move together.
So then the external Pares of the Globe may well be reckon'd as the Shell, and the internal as a Nucicus or inner Globe included within ours, with a fluid itedium between, which having the fame common Concentre and Axis of diurnal Rotation, may turn about with our Earth each twenty four hours; only their outer Sphere havilit its turbinating Motion fome finall matter cither fwifere or flower than the Internal Ball; and a very Minute difference in Jength of Time, in many Repctitions becoming fenGble, the Internal Parts will by degrecs recede from the External, and not keeping pace with one another, will appear gradually to move either Eaftward or Weftward by the difference of their Mntions.

Now fippoling fuch an Insernal Sphere to have fuch a Motion we thall folve the rwo grear Difficultics we encountred in my former Hypothelis: For if this Exterior Shell of Earth be a Megnet, having its Poles at a ditance from the Poles of the Diurnal Roration; and if the Incernal Niucieusbe likewife a Magner, having its Poles in two other places diftane alfo from the $A x i s$; and thefe latecr by a gradual and flow Motion change their place in refpect of the External; we may give a reaConable Account of the four Magnetical Poles I prefume to have demontrated before; as likewife of the Changes of the Needle's Variations, which till now hath been unattempied.
The Period of this Motion being wonderful grear, and there being hardly an hundred Years fince thefe Va riacions have been duly obferved, it will be very hard to bring this Hypotbofis to a Colculus; cfpecially fince, tho' the Variations do increafe and decreafe regularly in the fame place, yet in difficring Places, and ar no great diftance, there are found fuch cafual Changes thercof as can no way be accounted for by a regular Hypotbefis; as depending on the uncqual and irregular diftribution of the Magnetical Marter within the Subftance of the External $hell or Coat of the Earth, which deffect the Needle from the Pofition it would acquire from the Effect of the gencral Magnetifm of the wholc. Of this the Variation at Lnndon and Paris give a notable Inftance : For the Needle hath been conitantly abrout 1 deg. 30 min . more Eafterly at Paris than at London; tho it jecertain that according to the gencral Effect, the difference ought to be the contrary way; notwithitanding which, the Variations in both Flaces do change alike.
Hence, and from fome other things of like nature, I conclude, That the two Poles of the External Globe are fixt in the Earth; and that if the Neeile were wholly governed by them, the Variations thereof would be always the fame, with fome little Irregularicies on the account I bur juft above menrioned: Bur the Inrernal Sphere having fuch a gradual Tranflation of its Poles, does influence the Needle, and direct ir varioully according torte refult of the Artradive or Directive Power of each Pole; and confequently there muft be a Period of the Revolution of this Internal Ba!l, after which the Variarions will return again as before. Bur if it fhould in furure Ages be oblerved otherwife, we muft then conclude that there are more of thefe internal Spheres and more Magnerick Poles than four ; which at prefent we have not a fufficient Number of Óblervations to derermine; and particularly in that vaft Mare del Zur, which occupies fo great a part of the whole Surface of the Earth.
If chen two of the Poles be fixt, and two moveable ${ }_{i}$ in remains to afcertain which they are that keep theit place; and tho I could wifh we had the Experience of another Century of Years to found our Conclufions upon, yet I think we may fafely determine, Tinct our European Pole (which in the procedent Difcourfe I fuppofed near the Mcridian of the Lands-end of Englend, and abour 7 Degrees therefrom) is That that is moveable of the rwo NorthernPoles, and That :har has chicfly influenced the Variation in thefe Parts of the World For in Hudfons Bay, which is under the Direction of the American Pole, the change is nor obfervid robe near fo faft as in thole Parts of Eurupe, tho' that Pole be much farther remov'd from the exif.
As to the South Pcles, I take the 9 ficn Pole, which place about the Meridian of the Inand cicleces, to becthe fixt, and confequently the $A$ misis: Pole. to môve from the like Obfervations of the tlow Decreafe of the Variation on the Coaft of 7 ain; and ncar the Merndian of the Afian Pole; tho' I mutt contets to have no account of the Effects of the orher bryond Maz: hine straights.
If this be allowed me, "tis phin that the fixt Poles are the Poles of this External Shell or Cartex of the Earsh and the other two, the Poles of a Magnetical Nucicus included and moveable within the other. Ir likewife follows, that this Motion is Weffard; and by confequence, that the aforefaid Nuc/cus has not precifely attained the fame degree of Velocity with the exterion Parts in thcir diurnal Revolution; but fo nearly equals ir, that in 3 os Kevolves, the diffirence is fearce icmible. This I conceive to arife from the impulfe whereby this diurnal Motion was impreft on the Earth, being given to the Extcrnal Parts, and from thence in rime communicated to the lnternal ; but not fo as perfectly to equ:a the Velocity of the firt Motionimprefs'd on them, and ftill conferv'd by the fuperficial Parts of the Globe.

As to the Quantity of this Motion, it is aimoft impoifible to define it, both from the Nazure of this kind of Obfervation, which cannot be very accurately performd, as allo from the fmall time thefe Variations have been obfervd, and their Change difoolcr'd. It appears by ali Circumftances, that its Period is of many Centuries of Years, and as far as may be collected from the Change of the Place, where chere was no Variation, by reafon of the Equilibre of the two Southern Magnctical Poles, vir. From Cape d' Agulhas to the Meridian of St. Helena (which is about 23 deg. in about 90 Ycars) and of the Place where the Wefterly Variation is in its ax $\mu$ i or greateft Dcflection, being about half fo much viz. from the Ine of Dicgo Roiz to the South Weft Parts of Madagrforr; we may with fome reafon conjecture that the American Pole has mov'd Weftwards forty fix Degrees in that time, and that the wholePcriod thercof is performed in feven hundred Years, or thereabouts So that the nice Determination of this, and of feveral orther Particulars in the Magnetick Syftem, is referv'd for remore Poftcrity: All that we can hope ro do, is'to leave behind us Oblervations that may be confided in, and to propole Hypothefos which after Ages may examine, amend or refute. Only bere I mult rake leave to recommend to all Mafters of Ships and all others, Lover of Narural Truths, that they ufc their utmoft Diligence to make, or procure to be made, Obfervations of thefe Variations in all Parts of the World, as well in the North as South Latitude (after the laudable Cuftom of our Eeft India Commanders) and that they pleafe to commpnicate them to the Roy. al Socict, in order to lcave as complear a Hiffory as may be to thofe that are hereafter to compare ail rogether, and to complear and perfect this abftrufe Theory.
And by the way, it will nor be amifs to amend a receiv'd Error in the Practice of obferving the Variation which is, to take it by the Amplitude of the Rifing and Serting Sun, when his Center appears in the viable Horizon; whereas be ought to be oblerv'd when his under Limb is fill above the Horizon abour ${ }_{3}^{2}$ of his Diameter, or twenty Minutes, upon the foore of his Refraction, and the height of the Eye of the Oblerver above the Stiver face of the Sea; or effe they are to work the Amplirudes as they do the Azimuth, reckoning the Sun's $\mathrm{Bi}_{-}$ Atance from the Zenith 90 deg. 36 min . This, tho' it be of little confequence near the Equinoctial, will makio a great Error in high Latirades, where the Sidn rifes and fets obliquely.

Of the Improvement of $\mathbf{N a v i g a t i o n}$ in Latter Times. The first Application of Magnetical and Aftronomical Inftruments thereto: And the Difcoveries made by the Portugueze.

IF wre look back upon Anciquity, and confder the Siate of Navigation in the remoter Ages of the World, we fhall eafily confess, that they did, in all Points, fall vaftly thort of the admimble Atrainments of their Succeffors, in thefe Maters: For the Proof of this, we need but confider, that the Invention of the Compats is of a very modern Date; and nis not to be difcemed, by any convincing Tokens, that our Forefarhers did ever dream of any fuch Concrivance. And being deftiture of fuch a Direction, is this Noble Inftrument affords, they were put to no fmall Shifis to find their Way ar Sea. They were forced to ferch Inftructions from the Heavens above, and the Profpect of the Globe round abour them. The Rocks and Mouncains weretheir Guides by Day, and the Scars by Night had the Conduct of the Ship. Their imperfect Arr could not protect a Veffel under the Fury of a rufficd Sea: 'Twas in the Power of each Wind to fruftrate a Voyage, and derain them clofe Prifoners in their own Port. They dared not venture out to Range the wide Ocean, and bid Adieu to the Land, for Weeks or Months togecher; bur generally took Care ro keep the Shore in fight, failing as near is as they could with Safety, and norfing bur Tempefts could ever drive them further: So that they could make no grear Progrels in the Difcovery of any Countries, that did nor juft border upon them; and the Globe they lived on, mighr be cither ten times bigger, or as many times lefs than if is, for any thing they could find by their Navigation.

Europeanz World was the firft Fountain to it felf of other very Noble lnventions, fo it was alfo of this: And that the Enft, (with all its glorious Pretences) has rather borrowed the Perfection of Arrs from us, than we the firft Elements of then, from thence.

This may fuffice as to the firt Diforery and Application of this wonderful Fotile, to the Ufes of Navigation concerning which we may further note in gencral. That the Necdle infpired with the Virtue of this Stone, prefents us with thefe two moft remarkable Phenomena. The one is its Verticity, or Polar Direction ; by which as a trec and faithful Index, it points our tho' not always, yes often) the true Poles of the grear Magnet, our Terteftrial Globe. The other is that which is vulgarly called, the Variation of the Compafs; and it is the Deflexion of the Magnetick Mcridian, from an exact N: and S. I.ine; fo thar the former makes a certain Angle with this latter, declining from it either Eafterly or Wefterly, according as the Caufe of that Declination (whatever it be), is fcaled cither towards the one or the other of thefe Quarters: This Variation obferves forthe moft part, no ftated Rule, nor Law, in proportion to the Longitude, Latitude, or Sisuation of places. It is nor equally obicrved in all Parts of the fame Meridian: As under the Meridian of the life Del Cowe, which is one of the $A_{i}{ }^{(r i s ;}$; there is no Variation at the Ifc it felf, but there is confiderable in fome other Parts of the fame Meridian. Again, Ir doth nor obferve any certain proportion in going from Eaft to Weft, and Weft to Eaft : For from the Ine De/Cowr, it increales to the Ines Triftan de Canla, and to thofe further Eafterly, where it is near 13 Degr. but from thence to the Cabo Das Agulbas, it decreales again; fo that near thar Cape, which is not far from the Cape of Good Hope, there is very little Variacion, if any : Neither is the Quantity of it alway exactly the fame, in the fame individnal place. For inftance: Ar London, A.D. 1580, the Variation was obfer ved to be is Degr. 15 Min.; but by a fucceeding Obfervation, in 1662, it was found 6 Degr. 13 Min. So at Parx, in 1640 , ir was obferved to be 3 Degr. whereas 30 Years before, (xiz.) 1610. it was found at the fame place to be 8 Degr. The Caufes of allthefe furprizing Phoeno mena, are purely of Philofophick Confideration, and there fore are not to be enquired after in this place.
Bur having now briefly difcourfed thefe Gencral Intro ductory Heads, concerning the Compals it felf, we mult look farther into the Succelfive Ules and Applications of is, to the Bufinefs of Navigation: And here juftly to purfue the Circumftanecs of the Marter of Fact; and to be gin with the firft confiderable Beginnings of the Europenn Sailing, it is neceffary for us to look into Spain and Portugal; the later of which Countrics, we fhall find firt ateempting to pull off the dark Veil from the Face of the World, and prying into thofe Parts of it, which (through Ignorance of this Art) had lain hitherto conceal'd. And fince the Country we look into, had lately been the Scene of fo many remarkable Actions, and (juft freed from the Hurries of a bloody War) cntred upon the Profe cution lof this Noble Defign; we may briefly trace thofe Circumftances of itdown ro thofehappier and calmer Days wherein is found it felf at leifure to undertake this Work.

 the World is indebted for fo many Difcoverics. He having tricd his Forrune againft the Moors, to his own, and his Nation's Honour, began to think of remoter Conquefts than thoic, and finding out new Subjects, in Countries yet unknown. For this purpofe he attended the Mathematical Sciences, became an hard Srudent himfelf, andencouraged his Subjects to purfue thefe Studies. He crect ed a School for Navigation and Aftronomy, and invited a skilful Mathematician from the Inc of Mhiorca, in order to the fpreading the Knowledge of thofe Arts through his Country.
Being thus in fome meafure prepared for the Sca, he rent fome Ships out to try their Fortune: Bur they went no farther than Cape Bajadore, about 180 Miles berond Cape (c) Non; which was the ftated Ne plus ultra of former (c) Cipe Nim, Navigations. And fecing at a diftance fomething appearlike a Cloud, they refol- - suders af ved to try whether'rwas Liand or no ; which accordingly coverd it fell out to be, and was the Illand afterwards called Mindera. This, by the King's Confent, was divided between the two Difcoverers: The one part called Fronciali, ro Gonfaloo, and his Heirs; and the other named Mechio, to Triften de oaz. This latter Divifion of the Iftand, was fo called from one (d) Macham, an Englifh-man, whom a (d) Mrism Tcmpeft had diven thither. ## Cháp. I. Difcoveries made by King Alp h onstus, Goc:

The Ille Porto Sauro, difcovered before, wis given to Pereftrello, upon Condirion of Peopling ir: And this proved a very hard Task; the' place being lofearfully over-run with Coneys, that 'twas fcarce able to admit any other Inhabitants. 'However, they were by degrees difpoffers'd; but not without prodigious Maffacres, 3000 of them being killed at one time in a fmall Ines.

Twelve Years had now paffed, fince the firf Attempt was made of getring beyond Cape Bajadore; which yct appeared an infuperable Difficulty. They fanficd Tem pefts and Hurricanes in the Air, ftrange Gulphs and Whirlpools, that. would fwallow up Ships, with all the Horrours of Scilla and Cluarpdx, about that Cape. At laft a certain Portugueze, Gilianes by Name, had the Courage to bid Defiance to all thefe Dangers, and to look the Cape in the Face: He found the Seas open and paffable; came home commending the Air and Soil of the Places where he had been. He performed his * Voyage with grear Suceefs, having neither been tof'd in the Air by Whirlwinds, nor plunged in any of the Vortices abour Cape Bajadore.
The Portugueze now rid of chefe Fcars, adventured the next Year 40 Miles farther; where they found the Country uninhabited: This was done by Antlony Gor falvo. After this, no great Progrcis was made, till A. D. 1441 ; when Numyo Triftan difcovered Cape (c) Blance, and took fome Prifoners; the only Prize of his Voyage.
Matters being gone thus far, King Herm obrain'd at the Hands of the Pope, (which was then Marrin V.) the per(f)The Popes petual Donation to $(f)$ the Crown of Portugal, of whatLiberality, in poever mould be difcovered from Cape Bajadore, to the was not his Eaft-Indies, inclufively : Together, with an Indulgence in

* The nexr time they went abroad, they Traded with the Negroes, and got good ftore of Gold and Slaves: This made them call the place, The Golden Rizer, where those Golden Sercams had poured in upon chem. Beyond this they paffed to the Ines of $A r g i n$, and Garze. And now the Porrugueze began to be plealed with thefe Expeditions; and the Gold that was brought home, effectually ftop'd their Complaints: * Yea; the People of Lagos agreed with the King, to fet forth Caravels at their own Charges; which brought them in fome ftore of Prifoners

ThefeCanaries werefirft made known to the Frencl and Spaxiards, by Macbam the Englifh-man mentioned before: And one Berancts, a French-man, who held three of them in poffeffion, compounded with King Henry for them: But the Spaniard put in his Claim to them, as being conquered by thar French-man, under the Countemance and Support of Caftile: To which Crown they ftill belong, having gone through various Fortunes, and been in many Hands.

This Prince porfelsd of the Throne of Porrugnal, found leirure to prolecute the Bufinels of Difcovery, tho' his Predeceffor could not: He having once tafted the Golden Profirs of Guincy, refolved to give himfelfa more complete Sarisfaction, and enter into a more intimate Correlpondence with thar charming Country.
Accordingly he fent* our a Flect of 10 Caravels, under ${ }^{\circ}$ AD. 148 s the (a) Command of Diego Dazambuin, to build the Caftle (a) Nore, has of St. George della Minn; which in A.D. 14S6, be digni- capazains in fied with the Privilcges of a Ciry. In the Church of this chis Expediplace, a Prictt was appointed to pray for the Soul of King zion, was an Heny; and quickly after, the King affumes the Title of named Digo. Lord of Getrory. Carme-t the Prince of thar County or $\overline{0}$ aes would have hindred the building of the Caftle, and the Negroes began to matiny upot it; but partly by fair means, and partly by foul, the Mntineers were quieted and the Defign went on. The King gave Orders for che retting up of Stone Pillats in divers places, with the Portugueze Arms upon them; exprefing the Times and Auchors of the Difcoveries that were made. Which Method was alfo ufed by Dicgo Cau (i), in the fift Difcovery of the (b) Congo dia Kingdem of Congo, who left divers fuch Memocials, as corrod in thole upon the Banks of the Rirer Zair. This Man is 1. D. 148 t. both his Vorages difcovered il2s Miles, from Cap Catherine, along the Coift 1 i25 Miles, from Cape SE. arberine, along the Coaif.
By the Embaffador of theKing of Benin, (not farfrom Mina) the King of Portugal had (c) News of the Great (c) Notise of Emperor of eEthiopin, commonly called Prefter-Fokn: Of Prefar-john. which mighty Prince's Acquaintance being very ambitious; and alfo, no lefs defirous of an Acquaineance with the Enfr-I:dies, he fent out quickly in purfuance of botín thofe Defigns. Two Pinnaces, of so Tuns apicce, were difpatched; under the Command of Bart/. Diaz, with a ittre Victualling-Bark, in Auguf, A. D. I486. Tbis Captain made his (d) Enquiries affer Prefter-Folm, by certain (d) Enquiri Negroes (whom he fet athore in divers places), who were ster bith to make ample Reports of the Porrugucze Civility, and Grandeur; the Marks of which they carried along with them, in their Apparel, and other Gifts beftowed upon them. He gave Names to feveral places that were difcoi vered, and fet up Croffes of Stone in an Illand, called from thence, Tle Crofs; where his People weary of the Voyage, and having loft their Victualling-Bark, with ome Earnefnels urged his Return. Norwithftanding which, he proceeded a lirrle further, and difovered the famous (c) Cape, which in remembrance of his Troubles he (c) cape of call'd Tormentoro; and was afterwards, by K. Fobm, calld, the Good Hope. Cape of Good Hope. Here he alfo fet up another Pillar of Srone, which he called Sc. Ploilip, as che other at the River of Zair was call'd Sc. George; and that at Cape Sr. Augutine, had its Name from the Cape. He retum'd in Decemb. A. D. 1487.16 Months, and 17 Days, afrer hisferting out. By the way he met with his Vietualler; fuppoled to be loft, and in is nine Men; three only of which were found alive: And one of that namber; died with a Surprize of Joy, upon the meering with their Ships again Thefe were the King's Endeavours by Sea, to come to the Knowledge of Prefter-Fobm.
By Land he fenr fome to fall in with the Sertiopian Com pany, and travel as Pilgrims; bur uranting Skill in the Arabich Tongue, chey were forced to return. Upon chis one Peter ( $f$ ) Couilian, verfed in that Language, was ( $f$ ) Comilia employed in chis Affair, (and with him Alphorifo Paina*) fire in E from whence Paina went to purfue the AEtiopian Difoo very, but died at Cairo. Couilian crabark'd for the EaffIndics, from whence he return'd to Africa, with a Defign of going to Portugal. Bur he received Orders from the King; not to retum till he had been in Atriopia, whicher be was deputed to go, in the Character of an Embaffador: Corrilian (having writ to the King, to encourage his Navigations and fent him a Map of his Difcoveries in India and Africa) profecuted his Journey to the Estbiopian Court: Where he was made fo Welcome, that he could never get loofe again. The Report of which Reccprion, rogether with che Circumftances of his Travels, he made abour 30 Years afterwards, zo Francis Alvarez, an Atrendant on Rcderick de Lima, the King's Embaffador to that Court.
And thus far were Matters carried on by King Fobn He open'd the way by Land into the Bowels of Africa, and began a Correfpondence with the moft porcnt Mo narch of that Quarter of the World. He mighr have done more, in all probability, had he fallen in with Columbes's Offers; whom be faw in his firt Rerurn from the Indies, in Merch, A. D. 1493. Yet is Navigation 1 very great Debror to this Prince; who palionately defired

Two of his Phyficians, Raderigo, and 70co improve ne Ses. to fupply the Deficiencies, and enlarge the Bounds of the Science.And now was Aftronomy called in to iss affitance; and yarious Inftruments (the Privilege only of Aftronomers fore) were put into the Handsof the Sailors, and surn'd over to the Ufes of the Sea. Tables alfo of Declination were made, for the finding our the Latirude, and Courfe. with many other very curious Helps: All which were the Genuine Products of this happy Conjunction of Navigation and Aftronomy.

And hitherto we have feen the Induftrious Porrugueqe, drawing the firft and more imperfect lines of the Practice of Navigation: 'Tis our Bulinefs now to enquire, what heighening Strokes have been given by fucceeding Mafters, and by what Steps and Draughrs it has arrived to the Pcrfection in which we fee it at this Day. And firt of all comes in the Performance of Columbus; who difcovers no lefs than half a World dit once, and draws us a perfectly new Face on t'cther fide the Globe.
Bur before we fer our with him, or any other of the Gencral Sailors, we think it proper to defire (once forall) the Reader's patient Indulgence, in the liberty we take, of tracing the feveral particular Steps of thefe Mens vuyages. He may oblerve, that we reckon not only the Years and Months with them, butallo the very Days too, when they arcoutatSca : thar we go with them almot into every Porr, fecthem afhore in crery Ifland they come ro, and take Notice of fereral Paffages in their Sailing, that at firt fight may appeartoo minute and trifling, to deferv (or ar leaft very excufable), in refercnce to i World not yet difcovered. We are now going to take our firft View of thofe Parss of the Globe, which as yet we are fuppofed not to know. Thefe Men are our firt Sailors, and go in an untrodden Path, and wharfocver they thew us is quite new : Upon this Score, to fail but two or three Leagues with them, and only to fee a Cape, or fome forry Illand, which lics in their way; may be of more moment, thanto follow a Modern Sailor all round the Globe, and hear, him tal $k$ of thofe Places that have been a thoufand times defcrib'd beforc. Every Step taken by 2 firt Difcoverer, pre-fents an Original in thofe Matrers; others that come after, do but Copy or Refine upon him, and continuc the Story that he begins. His Relations are Tcru, (in their Confequance and Weight) compar'd with thofe of others, and thercfore to be purfu'd cren to a Scruple, in every Circumftance, thar does not appear with a bare Face of Folly and Impertinence.' 'Tis for this Reafon, that we propofe fo punctual an Obfervation of the feveral Steps of the Voyages, made by thofe celebrated Perfons, who firt ventur'd our into the World, and laid a Foundation for Europe's Acquaintance and Converfe with the remoter Parts of it. But as the Difcovery of the World goes on before us, and the Strangenefs of thole Countries wears off by repeated Vifits made to them; tho' we will lofe nothing valuable,thatour Modern Narigators have to fhew us; yer we fhall nor give them that Ceremonious Artendance in Sailing, that we allow the more Ancient Ones.

WHERE this Fortunate Difcoverer was born, is not agreed amongt Writers : Some hay at Savona some ar Narni; others at Cicurco, in the Territories of Gensua, of an ancient Houfe, and grear Reputation, in the time of Or\%o II:- This Great Man, it feems, tho' he brought a new World to light, yet left the Place of his own Birth and Breeding in fo much obfcuricy, that there needs another Columbus to find that out:-Mowever this be, 'tis cnough to know, that he had an carly Paftion for the Sea, and began both to Trade, and make Charts for Sea Service, when he was very young. The Fame of the Portugueac, for their Skill in Marine Affairs, broughr him to thofe Parts; where he Married and Settled, and Tra ded to the Coafts of Guiney. He had the Character of a Man, fober, temperate, grave, and devour, of compctent Learning in orher refpects, and very ftudious in the Mathematicks. What Motives induced him to the Grear Undertaking, he afterwards to happily finimid, are unknown. Some fay, a certain Pilot that had been driven upon the llands of America, gave him the firft hint of a new World there: But this is thought to be the frait of Sprniß Envy ; that People perhaps being mach concem'd that Italy thould ravith this Glory from their Country 'Tis probable, that his own Marhemarical Reafonings might make him conclude, the poffibility of finding Inhabitants on the other fide of the Globt. That connfidering the valt Dimenfions of the Earth (which might cafily be determined from the Principles of (eemetry); and that the known World was circumicribed within very narrow Bounds: It was utterly improbable, that all the reft of fo grear a Ball, fhould be overfpread with Water, and be an Habitation for Fiftes, inftead of Men, who had at firt fo peculiar a Charge from the Almighest to mulaply and replenifh ir. Being alfo amongt the Portugueze he could not bot hear feveral things, from fome Hands or other, that might ferve to confirm-thofe Sufpicions of a new Face of the Globe, which Mathematicks perhaps had at firf given him. Thus'ris faid, that 2 certain (a) Mariner, which ufed the Azores and Tercera Ines, rold him, That he was once carried 450 Leagues to the Weft of Cape Vircents and there rook up a piece of Timber, wrought by a Man's Hand, and, as he chought, without Iron: and this he fanded, muft come from fome more Wettern Ifland. (i) Another alfo reported, That he had Seen a piece at Pucrro Santc, swrought after the fame Fathion, broughr thither by the Wefterly Winds; befides tris-large Canes, cipable of holding two Gallons of Warcr in each Knor: Which being reported to grow in India, he fuppofed might be conveyed imto thofe $\mathrm{P}^{\mathbf{s}} \mathrm{s}_{\text {ane }}$ hinas by the fame forces of Winds as the Timber was:- Some givenifiumo Informations from the 1 zores, likewife affured him, Thait Land certain Pines had been caft up ar Fayal, and Graciofa, by trong Wefterly and N. W. Winds; rogether with two Canoes, and the like number of dead Men, upon the Coaft of Floras; who by their much larger Faces, and different Counterances, feem'd to have been Inhabi cants of fome remore and unknown Region. There were fome alfo, that confidendy afferted, Thar Land had diverstimes been feen at 2 diftance, which lay far beyond the Bounds of the prefent Difcoveries; and confequently, was fome part of the Globe that had not yet been vifited by the EaropeanSailors. Some of thefe Perfons made their Reports to Columbus himiclf, as Diego Velafques; and par icularly a certain Mariner, who told him of an Ifland which he had feen lie far Weft of Iroland, and fuppofed to be that now called Newfoumdland. Others (c) had given (c) Antemi in their Expcriences to the fame effee, if not to Columbus Leme. Femm himfelf,yet to the World and the Nation where he refided; dovectafio. fo that he con'd not mifs of the Information. And now a roregucte being fully affured, thar a New World lay fome where or other conceald, his next Care was to come at the fight of ir : And in order chercto, to procure fuch due Encouragement and Affiftance, as might render his Artempts fucceisful. In the firft place therefore, he propounded the Matter to the Genouefc, his Country-men: To whom his Gemonefa ma Propulals nor being at all agreeable, he addreffed frimidf, Pommmxe in hope of betrer Forrune, to the Court of Partugal. But recest bis the Project trok no better at Labon, than it did ar Gentua and the Notion of a New World was much in tie fame degree of Repuration amongft thern, "as that of a Newraifed Body was formerly at Atbens. Here the 'King's Marhematicians acted the parss of thole Bantering PhiloCophers, and heard this New Doctrine broach'd with not 2 lirtle Sporr and Jeft. However,' Columbus's Reafonings made fome Impreffion upon them, fo far, that they thought it:proper to advife the King, to try whether he fooke Truth or no. And thereupon a Veffel was fecretly fent out, with Ordérs to look after Coiumburs's World $;$ which not finding, and meeting with bad Weather, they serurn'd home, having done nothing.

rofling-Ftury VII. This Merfenger falling into the flands of Pirares by the way, and not being fo lucky as to geta Speedy Hearing of the King, 'Matters: were delayed to longy that Columbus weary with fruitlels Waitings, immediately *applied himele to the Court of Spain. Bu the Morrs his Anfwer was (after five Years Suit), That the Treafure of the Nation was fo exhaufted with thofe Wars, chare they could not afford to be at any New Expences.

Columbus needed not have felt the Pain of rhis new Re pulfe, had he deferr'd his Applications to this Court, and pure, begg'd of Spain, till he had received a pofitive Denial from England: For this latter Court did cmbrace his Propofals, tho' things went fo tedioufly on, that (as it happen'd) His Requeft was granted in Spain, before he knew 'rwas confider'd in England. But'twas the Fruit of much Labour and Toil, and came after innumerable Slights and Repulfes.

The two Dukes of Medina Celi, and M. Sidon. were his Adrocares; bur could not be heard on his behalf. Twice he thought of fetting a final Period to his unprofirable Endcavours in Spain, and get over to his Brother, at the Englifb Court. But at laft the Scene changed; and che Clergy undertaking his Caufe, it pro-
Succeces in fper'd in their Hands. Cohumbus was admitted to thcir Ca tholick Majefties Prefence, and had a favourable Audience, and Grant of his Defires ; the Queen being willing to pawn her vicry Jewels, to raife Money for his Expedition. This was the beft ufe they could poffibly be put to \({ }^{2 r}\) that time; becaule they were quickly (with grear Advantage) to be redeemed, by the rich Mines of Mexico and Peru.--Befides, the Spanifh Srock was very low, at that Juncture; and they could never have nick'd the time more exactly to go to the \(W_{V} f\)-Indies, to do themfives a kindnefs.
The Terms Columbus made with their Catholick Majefties, were thefe : That if be made no Difcoueries, be would bave no Reward: And if be di.t, that be foould fuftain the Office of. Vice-Roy by Land, and Admiral by Sea; with che Adoantage of the Tenths of the Profits, through all the Coun tries difcovered by him. And thefe Privileges not to be reErain'd to bis own Perfon only, but to become Hereditary. This Agreement was made in the open Field, at cheSiege of Grarada, April 17. 1492.
And 'rwas not long beforc the Voyage thus refolved upon, did ictually commence : For the Court was now as Warm in the Profecution of the Defign, as before 'rwas cold and indifferent. Columbus had reafon'd chem all into fuch Figh Expectacions of the Succefs of his Undertaraking, that they, were as cager for his going, as he himfelf.
Accordingly having gotten a fmall Flect of threeCaravels he fer forth from Palos, on Fridiy, August 2. A. D. 1492. Himfelf commanded the Admiral called Sc. Marin. Mar tin Alonzo Pinģon, was Captain of the Pinta; and his Brother, Francijco, was Mafter. And in the Third Veffel, which they called the Nimna, Vincent Tannez Pingon, was Captain, and Mafter. Thefe Officers had under their Command, in thefe Three. Veffels, about 120, or as fome fay, but 90 Men .
On the 1 trh they had fight of the Canaries, where they ftaid till September the 6th; refrehing themfelves ar che He Gomera: but went off then for fear of the Portugucize, whohad Mann'd our three Caravels to rake them.
September the jch, they loft fighr of Land; and with that, their Couragestoo; a grear many of them taking their leaves of this, and expeeting the next rime to land in the ocher World: Columburs comforred thele Cowards as well as he could; and rodo it effectually, was tain to chear them in his Reckoniig; making them believe they were not fo far from Home, as indeed they were. On the 14 th they obferved the Variarion of the (a) Compafs; which was the firft time that Phxnomenon had fallen underObfervation. On Surnday the i6th they faw Grafs and Herbs floaring on the Warer, and fome frall Animals, (Gralhoppers) alive amongtt them ; which made fome of them (now come to a lirtle better hope) believe, they fhould fee dry Land once more, and that quickly too: The Nineteenth and Twentieth, chefe Preflages continued; befides which, they faw fome Sca-Fowl: All which put cogether, confiderably raifed their Expectations of in All this while the Wind favoured their Voyage ; but on Sebur the 2ad in mbir the 22d, it came crovs at S . Weman of their rath Apint, in venturing fo far from home, and therefore exjexing to become a Banquct to the Fifhes, in a very lithinime; they began to ftorm it their Admiral, that he had trought them thither: Nor fparing the very King and Qreen themfelves in cheir Paffion, as Perfons too pafie
[and credulous, charging them with Indiferecion, in liftening to fuch wild Propofals, and facrificing their Subjects apon fuch miviad Occalions. As for Cotumbus's pars; they told him plainly, That if he wou'd not cack abont; and make homewards again, he fhould go over-board without fail: For they were refolved to mift for themfelves, and Gave theirown Lives, if they cou'd. Thie Admiral return'd them good Words for bad; and anfwer'd thcle infolent colambur. Threatnings of the Rabble, with charming Promifes of cet to rut great Rewards, upon Condition of a little more Patience. pound And tho' he made fhift to chear them into a litcle good Humour, by crying our Land, on the 2 2th of September: Yet that Calm was quickiv fucceeded by a more outragious Storm than before; the Refult of which was, that after fome farther Trials, Columbus (having no way to defend himielf any longer), was forced to promife to return; fhey difcovered not Land in three Day's time ; this being the utmoft lpace, thar the domincering Seilors would allow him.
The firf of thofe Days, he found by the Sun-ferting, that land was near; upon which they contracted their Sails; and that fame Night they faw Light. About two Hours after Midnight, one of the Company difcorer'd land (b). This happy Sight was on Octover the irth, A. (b) They fe D. 1492. This they found to be an Ifland of is Leagues Lind. compals; and it was one of the Lucayans, called by the Inhabitants,Gavebani; , hut by them Sare (c) Saluador, being bout 950 Leagues from the Canarics. Here they went di Saluader afhoar, and having fung a Tc Deum, they took folemn Poffetion of the place, in the Name of their Catholick Majeftics, King Ferdinend, and Queen Ifabella.
The Narives of the place thought them robe very ftrange People; and much more wondred at their Ships, which they belicv'd to be Great Animals. The Spanisrds gave them Caps, Beads, and other Toys; which they payed themfelves very well for, in more valuable things. Thefe People were naked, of a middle-fize, well proporrion'd Bodies; their Natural Complexion of an Olive, but pain red with other Colours, according to their Fancies*. They knew not the Ufe of Iron, nor the Make of Weapons, The Nia but innocently laid their Hands on the Edges of the Spaniards Swords. Their Ille abounded with Parrots, be Gides which they fcarce faw any other Animals. They uruck'd for Corton-Yarn: And told the Spaniards, That the Gold they wore in Rings ai their Noftrils, came from the Sourh; where they would find a Prince very rich therein.

On the 1 sch of Oqober they went to another Illand, feven Leagues from thence, which they call'd (d) St. Ma- (d) cmopopies ria de la Conception. The 17 th they went to Fernandina (e), IAe fomand the Women of which place had only fhort Cotron Coars, (e)Eermendime from the Navel to the Mid-thigh, to cover their Nakednels. After this they came to another Ine, which they called Ifabella \((f)\) : Of which, as of all the orhers, they \((f)\) Jjabeas: ook folemn Poffeffion; and in all thefe Places carried it juftly and honefly towards the Natives. They proceed ed herce to Cuba ( \(g\) ), which the Indians told him afford- ( \(g\) ) caba, cd Gold and Pearl. Two Spaniards, and as many Indi- which they ans, were here fent to fearch the Country; and lighting aird fuanc, of an Indian Town of about Fifty Houfes, they were well the Prince of treared there, the Spaniards being honour'd with Incenfe caffite. as they went along, as if they had been Deiries; which the fimple Indians indeed did almoft believe, tho' after Experience made them wifer. Here they law Cotion grow of it felf, with feveral fores of ftrange Birds and Trees: But the Commodity the Spaniards moft minded was the Gold which they faw. the Indians wear in their Nofes; abour which they were fo curious as to ask fome Queftions:: To which the Indians as honeftly anfwer'd Cubanacan; that is, they had it out of the midft of Cubr the Spaniards thinking (becaufe of that Term Can) that they had talk'd of the Great Cham of Catbaj.
Alouzo Pinģon left Columbus here, who quickly after wenthimfelf in queft of Hi/paniola (r); which the Natives at that time call'd Hajti. They took here a Woman, a Na- (b) rifpamemis tive of the Ifand, whom treacing well, the became a ferviceable Agent on their behalf, with the reft of the Na tives: So chat ar laft there was a very good Correfpondence eftablifh'd berween the Indians and Spaniards there he King of che Place inviting Cofumbus to come altioar A Fort was built upon chis IGand, to maintain the Spronifb rectenfions and Aurhoriry; in which 38 Soldiers were lefr : And afrer thisBufinefs done, Columburs made Provifrons for a Voyage homewards, charging his spaniards to canry in obligingly to the Indinns, and their King gave Names to divers Capes and Harbouts. About fome of thefe Parts, the Indians and Spaniards had a Quarrel, which came to 2 frall Skirmifh; but this Breach was quickly made up, and the Conrroverfie finifh'd, by a To ken of Submifion from the Indian King, which was his Crown of Gold, fending them good Intelligence in to the (i) The Gulf Bargain. In Febranis a fictce Tempeft overtook them, in which cime of Danger (all orber Remedies failing) they humbly implored our Lady's Help, vowing Pilgrimages in Hothey caft In, if ever they came fare to Shoar. For this to go to Guadilupe ; the fecond on Pedro de Villa, to Leretro; and the third common to all of them, to march in folemn Proceflion in their Shirts, to the firf Church of our Lady they came at. Yet had they funk, the World mighr pofibly have had the Knowledge of Columbur's Difcoveries: For he writ the Difcourfe of it at large in Parchment, and pur it up in a Barrel, intending to commit it thus to the Care of Providence. But they fcap'd this Danger, and Fcb. 15 . had fight of Sc. Mary's Inand one of the Azores. And here going athoar upon the pious Defign of fulfilling their Vows, they fell into the Hands of the Portugueze; the Saint of their Vows, it feems, nor taking due Care to protect them from that Misfortune.

However, by fome means or other, they made an Efcape from thence; and gaing off to Sca, were met with anocher Storm, which exercis'd their Derotion a fecond time, and produced another Vow of Pilgrimage (but unhappily made) to our Lady of Cimta. Here the Admiral

But this was nor the only Injury the Portugueze did this moft deferving Perfon: For they affaulted his Fame, and endeavour'd to eclipfe the Glory of that Performance of his, which all Poftericy will celebrate him for. Nay, the Spaniards themfetves (for the Good

This envious Obj ection he very plearantly diverted by the Problem of the Egg, which was to be made ftand uptight on onc end. When the Shell was broke, the Egg would ftand; but they could nor hit of that Method to make ir ftand, and gave over the Problem as infoluble, till Columius crack'd the Shell, and Golv'd it. So when his Difcoveries of the New World swere made. 'rwas an eafie matterthen to find it out. But Envy and Malice will find Employment for themfelves, and no Merit nor Gcodnefs can be a Defence againft the Affault of them. This Calumbus found by many other unpleafant Experiences: Who fet, (notwithiftanding the farvy Ufage of fome Men) was highly valued by their Catholick Majefties, Nobly Rewarded for his good Service, and had the far betrer and more lafting Reward, of the Praifes of the moft ingenious Writers of that Age.

> A Copy of the Bull, or Grant, by Virtue of wbich; Alexander VI. Bifhop of Rome, entitled the Kings of Caltile, and their Succeffors, to the Countries and Ifands of the New World.

ALexander Bithop, the Servant of the Servants of God, This Bull is to our dearly beloved Son in Chrift, Ferdinand King; to be ferci in and to our dearly beloved Daughter in Chrift, Elizabeth \({ }_{\text {mora, }}\) Ln his Qucen of Caftile, Lem, Arrigon, Sicily, and Granndn, moft miat. Gen. illuftrious Princes, witheth all Health and Apoftolical Be- Parr 2. c. 19. nediction.
Of all the Works that are acceptable to the Divine \({ }^{\text {Ed }}\) Majefty, and agreeable to our Wintes ; that doubrlefs is he greatef, which conifits in promoting, enlarging, and conveying into all Parts the Carholick Faith, and Chiritian Religion, efpecially in the Age we live in, in procuring the Salvation of Souls, in Subduing and Converting the barbarous Nations: We thercfore being calld by the Divine Clemency, (tho withour a fuitable Merit) to St . Peter's Sacred-Chair; and having always known you to be true Catholick Kings and Princes; efpecially confidering that your Noble Exploits, celebrated almoft all the World over, are demonftrative Evidence, that you not only with for the Advancement of the Catholick Inrereft,bur actually promote ir by all your Efforts, Study, and Diligence, \{paring no Labour, Expences, or Danger, nor even the Effufion of your own Blood it In 2 word, that all your Thoughts and Endcavours have for a long time been folely bent upon it ; of which your refcuing of the Kingdom of Grencda from the Tyranny of the Sarccens, in our time, to the infinite Glery of the Divine Name, is a memorable Inftance. As thefe Accounts plead your Merit, fo we are fenfible that we ought of our own Accord, and out of pure Favour, to grant you whatever may enable you to carry on, and purfue with growing Fervency your holy and laudable Defigns, fo acceprable to the Immotral Being, in order to promote the Honour of his Name, and enlarge the Bounds of Chriftianiry. In carneft, we are inform'd, that you had form'da Defign fome time ago,to carry on the Queft and Difcovery of fome remore llaands,and Continents, that are nor jet known or difcover'd by orhers; in order to reduce the Inhabitants to the Worfhip of our Redeemer, and the Profeffion of the Catholick Faith ; bur being then diverted by the Conqueft and Regaining of the Kingdom of Granndr, you were not at that time able to compals your holy and landable Ends. We underftand likewife, thar at laft having recoverd Graned., parfuanr to the Divine Will, you purued your former tniention, by appointing our beloved Son, Ciriffopher Cclinus, a Man of Worth and Repure and qualify'd for fo great an Underraking, to Vifir the Seas thar Navigation had not reachd, in queft of the remote and undifcover'd Continents and Inands; and furnithd him with Men and Shipping proper for the purpore, nor withour grear Labour, Danger, and Charge: That the faid Cbrifopher, and his Companions, by God's Af fitance, failing with extream Diligence thro the Ocean did accordingly difcover fome very remore Iflands, and even Continents, that were formerly unknown, and are inhabited by Reveral peaceable Nations, which (as'nis fid) go naked, and abttain from Flefh; and in the Opimion of your Difcoverces, belicve that one God, the Crea tor of the Univerfe, refides in Heaven, and feem fufficiently difposid for embracing Civility, and the Catholick Faith; infomuch, that 'ris hopd that proper Inftruction would eafily incrodace the Name of our Lord and Savious Jefus Chrift, Into the above-mention'd Continents and inlands. Our Inrelligence likewife bears, That the faid Chrifopber caus'd 2 Forrefs of rome ftrength to be built in one of the moft confiderable of thofe Inands; and has therein plac'd a Garrifon of fome Chriftians that accompanied him, who are likewife to look our for other undifcover'd Ilands and Continents: That the Illands and Concinents thus difcover'd, afford Plenty of Gold, Spices, and feveral other precious Things: And that you, after a mature Confideration of all the Circumitances; efpecially the Promotion and Enlargement of the Catholick Faith, purfuant to the Dury of Catholick Kings and Princes; have refolv'd, in imiration of the Illuftriens Kings your Ancefors, by the Favour of Almighry God, to fubdue and reclaim to the Catholick Fairh, the abovemenrion'd Conrinents and Illands, their Narives and Inhabieancs. Now we approving very much of this your holy and godly Purpofe in our Lord, and defirisg that ir may be brougfir to a due Period, that the Name of our Saitour may be eftablifhed in chofe Parts, do ferioufly extority you in our Lord, conjuring you by your holy Ba - prifm,
ptifm, which obliges you to an Apoftolical Obedience, and earneftly require ycu, by the Bowels of the Mercy of our Lord Jefus Chrift, that fince you intend, our of a Zeal for the Orthodox Faith, vigoroully to purfuc,and carry on the faid Expedicion, to reduce the People of the forefaid Lands and fflands, to the Chritian Religion: You thall not be ar any time fard by Danger or Labour, relying upon a firm Hope and Confidence, that the Almighry will Crowen your Endeavours with-Surcels. And to the end that the Bounty of Apoftolical Grace may infpire you with more Freedom and Boldnefs, in purfuing fo great a De fign; we do of our own Accord, withour any Influence from your Solicitariop, or that of others in your behalf; but out of our own pure Bounty, and by Virtue of our cercain Knowledge, and the-Fulne's of A poftolical Power Give, Grant, and Aingn to you, your Heirs and Succer fors, the Kings of faftile and Leon, all the Illands and Continents, found, or to be found, difcovered, or to be difcoverd, toward the Weft and Sourh, whecher towards India, or any other part : drawing a linc from the Artick Pole, or the North, to the Antartick Pole, or the South, at the diftance of a hundred Leagues towards the Weft and South, from any of the llands that are commonly call'd, De los Azo.es, and Capo Verdc. So that all the llands and Contincents found and to be found, difcover'd and to be difcover'd, from the faid Line, towards the Weft and South, that were not actuality poffefs'd by any other Chriftian Erince before the latt Chriftmafs, (i, c.) the Commencement of the prefine Year of our Lord i493. any of thefe Councries, I fyy, when difcoverd by your Caprains, and Scrvants, together with their Dominions, Cities, Caftles Forts, Villages, Rights, Jurifdictions, and all Appurtenances, are by the Tenor of thefe Prefencs Given, Granted, and Aftign'd to you, your Heirs, and Succeffors for ever, by Virtue of the Authority of Almighry God granted to us in Sc. Peter, and the Vicarlhip of Jefus Cbrift, lodg'd in us upon Earth : And hereby Make, Conftitute, and Depure you, your Heirs and Succeflors, the Lords thereof, with Full, Frce and Univerfal Power, Anthoriry, and Jurifdiction': Provided ftill, that this our Gift, Grant and Afignarion, man'r be underftood to difpoflefs any Chriftian Prince, of whar Ilands, or Continents, he may have poffefs'd before the Chrittmafs afore-mention'd.
And further, with regard to thari Holy. Obedience, which you have promis'd, and we doubr nor, will perform, in Conforminy to yourfingularDevotion, and Royal Magnanimity, we command you to purfue the Premifes with umoft Diligence, and to fend to thofelilands and Corcinents, Men of Probiry and Learning fuch as fear God, and arequalified to inftruct the Inhabisants in the Carholick Faith, and Good Manners. Ar the fame time we ftrielly prohibir all Parfons of what Eftatc, Degree, Order, or Condition focver; or wharever Dignity, whe ther Imperial, or Regal, under the Pain of the Sensence of Excommunication, to prefume, withour the Special Leave of you, or your Heirs and Succeffors, under the Pretence of Trade, or any orher, to touch upon the faid Corrinents or Illands, fonnd or to be found, difcover'd or to be.difcovcr'd, towards the Weft and Eaft, whether rowards India, or any orher part, a Line being drawn from the Arrick to the Antartick Pole, at the diftance of a Hundred Leagues, as to the Weft and Sourth, from any of the Iflands that are commonly calld, De los Azores, and Capo Virde: Norwithftanding any Comftitution, Decrees, and Apoftolical Orders to the conteiry In him from whom Empire, Dominion, and all Good Things do proceed, urufting, that by the Direction of Almighry God, if you purfue your holy and laudable Defign, your Labours and Endeavours will in 2 . forr time be brought wa happy Conclufion, to the Glory and Felicity of all Chriftendom: But fomfmach as thefe Lemers can't without grear difficulty be convey'd to all the Places, where it may be convenient to thew em, we do with equal Knowlege and Good-willdeclare, That the Game Faich and Credit thon'd be given in all Places, whether before Courrs of any where clife, to the Trankcript of thefe. Letrers fign'd by 2 Publick Notary thercunto requir'd, and atrefted by the Seal of an Ecclefiaftical Cours, or of any Perrons inyefted with Ecclefiaftical Dignity, as would be given to the Original ir felf.
Let no Man therefore wharfoever, offer to infringe, or with 2 salh Attempt so counretatt this Letrer of our Commendarion, Exhoriation; Demand, Gify, Granr, Aflignation, Consticution, Deputation, Decree, Command, Prohibition, and Derermination. If ary one has the Prefumprion to venture upon fuch an Aucmpt, he is hereby given to know. thar he will thereupon incur the Indignatior of the Almighty God, and Peter and Paul hisholy Apofties:

What Intereft the Spanierds had in the New W. World is certain the Porrugueze mighr have had before them had they been fo wife as to have embracid columbis's \(O f\) the pum fers: But having rejected them as vain and ridicu-pornadel lous, and thereby neglected a very favourable Opporunity of advancing the Interefts of their Nation: Now feeing the Spaniards fo well feared there, where they might have been themfelves, they began to grow very angry a them. The King of Portugal, by his Embaffador fignified his Refentment : Bur the Ciaftilian (willing if poffible, to preferve'the ancient Peace between thofe two Crowns) by his Embaffadors endeavour'd to cool that Heat, and remper the Choler of the Portugueze, in fome meafure making fair and plaufible Overtures for that purpofe: Telling him, That if he thought good, the Mater in Difpute between them, fhould be put to a Refcrence, and left to the Arbitration of a felect Number of Judges on boch fides; or that the \(C\) zoverfie fhould be carried to the Courtof Rome, and fo left to be decided by the infallible Sentence of the Pope: The Portugueze on his fide, alfo offered to the Spaniard, all the Difcoveries through the World Northward from the Canaries, refervirg to himfelf the Countrics shat fhould be difcover'd Southward from thofe Ines. But thefe Propofals then took of neither hand, and fo the Controverfie remained as it was. Yet afterwards it was agreed, rhar fome Perfons thould be deputed on the behalf of both Nations, to examine the Matter, and look into the Pretenfions of bort Parties to the New Difcorcrics; as alfo, to fette the Limirs of their feveral Pretenfions. There were three of thefe Pleniporentiaries on the Spanifh, and as many on the Portugueze fide; and their Conferences at laft iffued in an Agrecment to this purpofe, viz. That the Line of Particion mention'd in the Pope's Bull, mould the Popt extended 270 Leagues further to the Weft, thar all fro infingid. thence Weftward hould fall to the thare of the sill and from thence Eaßtward to the Porrugucze: That there thould be free Sailing on borh Parts; but that neicher thould Trade beyond the appointed Bounds. This Agreement was made \(\mathfrak{F}\) une 7. A.D. 1493. Seal'd by the King of They sgre Spain; July the 2d; and by the King of Portugal F=b. 27 1494. And now each Party hac nothing to do, but to prepare for further Difcoveries; which Work while.King Fobn was intent upon, he died, leaving it to his Succeffor:.
The new King Emanvel, in purfuance of thar Defign, fem out three Ships, with one Victualler; ; in which 'A.D. 1407 were about 160 Men , under the Command of \(V_{c} f f_{c o} d i\) Gama. This Captain (having Couilien's Maps and IntruCions) fer fail \(\mathcal{F}^{u t h}\) the 9 th, and pafing by the Ine St 7 ames, he directed his Courfe Eaftwards. The firft Land he faw, was that which he called (a) the Bay of \(\mathrm{St}_{\text {( }}\) ()St. Hema Helena; whore after three Momhs ill Wearher they went afhoar. Here they took certain Negroes, whofe Friendthip they procured by little Trifles which they beftowed upon them; and by this means a free Traffick with the reft of the Narives, for fuch Victuals as they had. Bur this good Underftanding was loft, by the means of the Folly and Cowardice of one of their Company; who ha ving been civilly treated at the Negroes Houses, and honeftly conducted back, cried our in a fearful manner, as he wascoming home to his Company; at which the Porrugueze coming in, and the Negroes ruaning, a Skirmifh commenc'd between them; in which the Negroes, with their Charp-pointed Poles, which they darted ar the Portuguece, wounded many of them; Gema himfelf feeling the marpnefs of them amongt the reft. Upon this they left St Helenc, and fail'd rowards the Cape of Good Hope ; Sail cowred that they were forced to ftrike Sail, and commit themfelves to the Mercy of the Winds. In this Confufion Ga ma's Company prefs'd him to.think of recurning homewards, and not expofe them to fo cruel a Dearh asfeem'd to threaren them. But he refufing to do this, they plotred his Dearh ; which by his Brorher's Vigilance and Care he avoided; and fo laying the chief of the Muriniers in Chains, he proceeded in. his Voyage withour controul.
Novemb. 20. he doubled the Cape of Good Hopey and aild continually near the Land, which they fave fall of Double th Cairle, and People like them 25St. Helena ; naked, fpeak- cape ing odly in the Throar, and enclofing their Privy Parts in 2 Receptacle of Wood. Having refreth'd chemféteshere, they proceeded; and Decem. 8. met with a Sorm, thar loft them the fighr of Land, which with fair Weather they recover'd again. After three Days，Game conducted by the Catual，pre－ fented his Credentials to the King，which he defired uight not be interprected by any of the Moors，who plainly ap－ pearid to be fis Enemies．Thefe Letters were interperted by Monzeid，his Friend；and the King was fo kind，as to give him a plain Hint of the Tricks，and frandulent Dealings．of the Moors：For which he return＇d him Thankis and departed：
Yet norwithitanding this，did the King fuffer himelff to be perfwaded into a very bad Opinion，ard into unfair Treatment of the Po tuguleze too，by thefe very Morrs whom he had warned them of．＂\(g\) ）Ther rold him，That Greforthenalies \(m e\) was a Spy，and defigned no gocd to his Counntry；that of me cerm． trwas not confiftent with the Safery of his Nation，to en－ courage him to Trade there：And thar for their parcs，if the Porrugutzc bad thar Liberty afforded them，they would reniove，with all their Effects，to another Country；which woold redound very grearly to his Majefty＇s difadvanmage． By there，and other like Infinuations，the King was fet againtt them；and began to fall in with them int cheis reachernus Defiguc, of dons the Portigucze what MiTchicf the; could. And to cffect thls, he lent to Game to bring his Ships nearer the Town, and for Security to deliver up his Sails: But he ordered his Brother, inftead of that, to fail homewards, if he faw him long detained amoar. Yet Germa, by their Perfwafion, fent his Merchandize afhear, with Men to fell them, having Liberty then himfelf to return to his Ships; tho his Goods were not fold there, bur carried to Caiecut, by the Treachery of the Catucl, who pretended that they would go off there to betrer ruijurirt of. advantage. Gama fent away every Day, two or three to ferd rothem, look after his Aftiars in the Town; and alfo to defire of Fndeavour the King, the liberty of placing a Factor there: Bur he had no Anfwer from the Court, but only the bad Nows, that two of his Mcn, with cheir Merchardize, were committed to fafe Cuftody.
In Revenge of this Injury, Corme attack'd the next Ship that came thither. and took fix confiderable Perfons beloniging to the King Prifoners. This the King (tho he crievoufly refened) yet feem to pals by; and therefore Falfe deam to pacific Gemn, fent his two Servants the next Day, with Goods to the King of Porttg:? ; bu ke puld fond a Factor thither, todifpofe of them. But this Gama abfohurely refuled now, declaring he would have all his Effects aboard again, and would keep thofe Prifoners till he had them. Upon this the King quickly fent his Wares in Boars to him, demanding his Prioners: Bur Gamn debying the deli:ery of them, fent the King WVord, That he would carry thofe Mantebws into Portigil with him, as an Evidence of his injurious Ufage and Treachery: And fo giving then his final Anfwer our of the Months of bis Great Guns, he drove them away. The King could no teil how to help himfelf at that time, becaufe his Fleet was all unriged ; yet he fent out 60 Merchant-men after them bue a Tempelt interpofed, and put an end to that Purfurc.
Gama, at the next Port he came to, writ a mollifying Lemer to the King; whichthe fent by the Hand of one of his Servanos, which he had before Arrefted. And here he sas ler upon by a very famous * Pirate, with eighr Slips, of of which he rook, and difperfed the reft.
Putring in ar Anchedina, to mend bișflatrer'd Veffels, he receivंd there a Meflage from Zabaius, Lord of Goa, an Ifclian, who offer'd him very grear Kindncites, if he would come thither. Gama fufpecting the Inregrity both of the Meffage, aud Meffenger, put the Fellow apon the Rack; who then confefs'd himfelf 2 Spy : So he carried him into Portual with him; where he was Baprized, and proved 2 nfeful Servant to the King.
He hafted from hence, and came to Matedxe, on the African Coaft, the People of which being Spiteful Melbometens; he funk and fpoil'd their Ships, and bear down part of their Walls.

Ar Melinda he had kind Encertainment; where having ftay'd five Days, he hafted homewards, for fear of Winter Weather at the Cape, carrying along with him an Embatfador from the King of Melindn.
By the way he burnt one of his Ships, it being fhatter'd and difabled, and there being need of the Mcn aboard bee, to fupply the want of Mariners in the other two.
February the 27th, he came to \(\tilde{2}\) ennibar ( \(h\) ), which is Twenty four Miles from the Continent; the Prince of which, tho a Moor, treated him Civilly.
He refrefhed again at Sc. Blafe's (i) watering. And on April the 25th, be doubled the Cape: From whence he came to St. \(\mathcal{F}\) ags, where a Tempeft parted the rwo Veffels. Crlims, the other Commander, went directly to Lisbon but Gamo put in at the Tercera's, where his Brother died But foon after he himfelf came fafely to Lisbon, having now finin'd a long and difficult Voyage: An Account of which was given to the King by the orherCaptains, before his Arrival*.

He broughtalong with him the Tunis Merchant, Monzaid; who was his Friend at Calecut, and defired to go into Portugal with him, where he afterwards became a Chriftian - But of his own Men he brought home bur few, the Voyage having leff him but 55, (and thofe very-feeble roo) out of ncar 200, which he carried with him.

Tho the Portugucze in their firft Vifir to the East-Indies, had met wirh no yery obliging Entertainment; yet unwilling prefently to quit their Pretenfions to a Correfpon. dence with so Noble a Country, they refolved to repear their Civiliry, and make them 2 fecond.
King Emanuel, for this purpofe, fer our a Flect of chirseen Ships, in which were 1500 Men , and good ftore of all neceffary Provifions for fuch a Voyage. Amongit which it is nor:to be forgormen, that there were fome Pro

Tifions intended for the Benefit of the Souls of there Infi dels, amongt wiom they were going, viz. Five large Bodies of Divinity, Friars of Sc. Erancis's Order, who doing the Work of Chaplains a Ship boand, wereto do chat of Ap flies when they came a Shoar. This Fleer was coma manded by Peter Alvarciz Capralis; who had fperial Orders from the King, to live peaccably with the King of Calecut, if pofible: As alfo to get leave to build a Fort for a Sccurity from the Hoftilitics of the Moors Caprelis fer out from Lisben, March the 8th, of the then Sccular Ycar*; and coming to St. Fego, a Storm fcarter"d • 1.D.rsoo. the whole Flece, and forc'd one Ship to return home. The reft of the Flect having ftay'd for this Veffel two Days to no purpore, fer Sail Weftward; and Aprilt the 23d to their very grear Wonder, had fighr of I and (.z). Capra- (a) Rrerife is commanded the Mafter amoar; who bruughr News of a fertile, and well watcr'd Country; but poffefs'd by a barbarous People, naked, with very long Hair, ammid with Bows and Arrows. A Storm overtook them thar Night ; but they got into a fecure Harbour, which Capralis calld, Puerto Seguro, becaufe he had there a fafe Retreat from the Fury of the Storm. They took two Fifher-men, whom furnihing with fome fmall Trinkers, they fer alhoar again; afrer which they broughr many of =heir Countrimen, who for Beads and Bells, and fuch like Toys, gave theri Mcal and Fruits, and fuch things as thcy wanted. This Country they called, The Country of the Holy \(\mathrm{Cr} \cdot \int_{\mathrm{s}}\); from the valt quanticy of thar fort of Wood, fince calld Brazil. They fanctified it with a Sermon, and Mals raid anhoar, and erccted a Srone Pillar for a Memorial : After which having dilpatched a Ship to Pertugal Goonfoom with this News, they proceeded in their Voyage. 'Twas Braite. on May the sth, that they went from hence; and on the 23d, a fudden Storm funk four of their Ships, and drown'd all the Men of them, feattering the cther feven at fo violent a sate, that they quite loft the Sight and Company of cach other for 2 long time. One of them windred into the Arabian Gulf, and thence gor home, having loft almoft all her Men: But the other fix, on fuly the asth, gor rogether again, and went on rowards the Cape. Having doubled it, they found 2 good picafanr Country; but the People were nor free for Trade, bur utarly refufed ha-The People ing any thing to do with them: Which whether 'cwere about the te Effeq of Poverty, or Perverfenefs, is not much material. chper refise At Moiambique chey had free Warering; and hired there a focodesoce. The King (b) of Quiloa's Dominions reach 900 Miles in (b) Decaripic. length : His Subjects a mix'd fort of Pcople, bur fpeak on of 2 wina mottly Arabick. The Country abounds in Springs, Trees, Cattel, wild and tame; the Soil is alfo rich, and the Fifhing good. It is feparated from the Land by a narrow Sca, and is abour 400 Miles from Mazambique. The City is large and populous, the Houfes magnificent, and well furnifhd. They ufe here a fort of Baltard Frankincemfe about their Ships, for want of Pitch. Caprelis fent to Complement the King, who kindly enterained the Mef. engers, and promis'd the next Day to come aboard. This be did ar the time appointed, in a very filendid manner having a gallant Retinue, noble Furniture, and variery of Mufick, to grace his Vifit. The Portugueze receiv'd him in the beft manner they could; and Capralis having deliverd his Meffage from the King of Portugat to him, e promis'd to enter into a ftrict Lcague of Friendinip with thar Prince; and the next Day was appointed for the concluding it. (c) But the Moors, who were fworn to do (c)Treacieng the Chriftians all the ill Offices they could in all places of the Marth did not fail zo blaft cheir Defigns in this place alfo. Capralis upon this, went to Malindn, where the Portugueze had erer found very good Entertainment: Bur here hie. made no ftay, only taking care before he went, to find out fome way to. Portuguexe Courage and Valour, defired Capratis to go and take a certain great Ship that was coming from Cocbin to Cambaia. Capralis orderd out one of his leaft Veffels for this Entrerprize; which yet performed it fuccelsfully, bringing that mighty Ship in Triumph, the hexr Day, into Cale cut Road. This Action procured them at once the King's Admiraition, and the Moor's Envy; who now began to Practice chcir accuftom'd Arts of Treachery and Deceir, abufing them by all the Methods they cou'd devife, notwichftanding the King's Encouragement and Protection The Porturueze, by that Charter, were to have had the firft Refulals of the Market: But the Moors prevented them, and gor their own Veffels well laded firtt; making the Porrigueze ftay thrce Months, inftead of twenty Days, for their lading, tho' they were promis'd to be difpatch'd in that f pace of rime.

Capralis complain'd to the King of thefe Proceedings, who bid him take Satisfaction from the Monrs, and lade his own our of their Veffels. This he was himelf unwilling to do; but Corice, the Cape Merchant, urg'd him to it fo much, that he brought back one of the Moor's Ships (which was marching off) into the Haven ; the King not openly counrenancing one fide or the other, but feeming willing to have them try the Matter our betwixt them. The Moors upon this, with a Company of Soldiers, broke into the Portigucie Houfe, and affail'd them with great Heat and Fury. The odds were very grear too, there being but 70 Portugu=z no 4000 of thele Barbarians, fo that Corren, with 50 more of them, were there killed upon the Epot, and the reft (making a hard fhifr) were got aboard their Ships.
In Revenge of this Injury, Ceppralisthe next Day fell he return'd so libon, which he reach'd the laft of \(\mathcal{F}\)
Before he came home, the King had difpatch'd chree other Ships upon the fame Imdian Affair. And the # Year following he fent Va/co Gama a fccond time, with ten Ships
(c) The 3d, (e) One Soderius allo went out with a Fleet of is Ships, (c) The 3 ith having recciv'd Orders to make himfelf Mafter of the Sea, toce royt and no do his urmoft againft the Moors.

Five Ships more went under Stepben Game; and in Thort, to many Ships went, that in a litule time, the main Riches and Profits of the Eaft-Indies, were fhippd over into Porrugal. This Prince Emanuel, having been made in 2 few Years fpace (by the Induftry of theic Commanders! Lord of the Trade and Navigation of thofe Parss, as well as of the Kingdoms of Ormuz, Goa, and Malacca, and orher parts of the Eaft.
A fuller Account of thele Matrers, is to be drawn out of the Portuguere. Writers themielves; no more beinghere meddled with, than whar neceffarily occurs in our tracing the Original and Progrefs of Trade and Navigation.

The many Affronts that had been offer'd to the Portugucze Nation by the People of Calecu:, had incired them wo endeavour a juft Revenge. And they made a fhift in fome meafure to accomplim their Defigns, notwithftanding all the Affirtance afforded to the orher Party, both by the Nciphbouring, and by Foreign Powicr
They procecded fo far as to bid Defiance to all the Topnymure Force of the greai Giry of Calecut ir felf; and not only fo, but to ftorm it 700 ; fetining up their Victorious Banners in the midit of it, in \{pite of all oppoficion to the contrary. The two principal Managers of this Action, were Albuquergare; and Cosinius, under whore Condict the Porsugueze made this famous Attempt. Cesinizs having 2 mind to the Plunder of the King's Palace, and envying any. elfe 2 Ihare in the Glory of making it, pufh'd Maiters on with too much Heat and Ramnels for his own Securicy : For here his Soldiers thinking all their own, and minding nothing cife but enriching themfelves with the Royal Spoils, gave the Adverfarics fuch an adrannage, that in a freth Charge which they made upon them, Cotinius himfelf oft his Life. Albuquergue (while this hor Action was going on at the Palace, was bufie inferting the City on fire; which had near coft him the fame Price ithat Cisinius paid tefore him), being forcd to be carried away out of the Encounter, and thar as good as dead with his W'ounds; which yer he furvived, as the Indians aftervards found to their Coft. Neither were thefe the only Loffes of this nasure the Portugueze fuftain'd that Year; for Almcida, one Firftantempt of their Vice-Roys, was Facrificed near the Cape of Goad dor Trade Hop, by the Fury of a Troop of Savages.

While thefe ehings were doing at Calecut, one Didacus Sequeric, was fent from Pertugal, to fetulea Trade at M-lacer. He having paffed the Promontory (a) Corr; and ( \({ }^{( }\)Capecors. failed through the Bengalan (b) Bay, parin at ( \(\Rightarrow\) ) Sumati:a ; (b) Byy of which is divided by a very narrow and dangerous Strait, Sengeta. from the Continent of Malarere, and was fuppofed formerly to hare been a Peninfula: Sejueris was the firf that did chis. Having here made a Lenguc wi:h the Kings of Achen and Pedir, and erected fome Srone Monuments, he came to 'd) Melace,t the Prince of which was very (d) achiscs kind and favourable to him at firt ; but afterwards fourd to that degree by the Mors, that he plotred' to will the Portugucec, and feize their'Shipe. He in:ited Segreris to a Fexit, with a Defign to cur him off when he had him in his power: Bur being made fenfible of the interded Villany, he cxcufed himelf from being his Gueft.
This not taking, the Plot was laid to difperfe his Men abour in feveral places from him, and then to affauit his Ship, and rake both him and it rogether. To accomplifh this, the perfidious King offer'd him, as a very grear Favour, the Liberty of Lading his Ships, and thar before any other Merchants whatever; only defiring him to keep this Favour to himfelf, and not to publinh it. By this incansiz good part of his Men were employd abroad, whilft he wanted (as it appear'd afterwards)their Affitancear home. But now the Ploc was ready to have been put in a general Execurion; and fome of the Confpiracy were come aboard Sequeris's Vefrel, pretending a Complement from the King, bur indeed to fall upon him; and wanting only to fee the defired Sign given; which was a Smoke that was to be raifed in a certain place: Bur fome of thofe in the Town, not having Pacience to ftay for the Sign, began the Charge upon Sequeria's Men that were there; which being efpied by the Warch ar top of the Ship; Seqaeria prefently arm'd the Men he had with him, and Tent a fmail Party to help them that were engaged athoar, whilt himTelf, with the reft, fo warmly plied the Malaccan Ships with their Ordnance, that they were glad to fly out of his reach as faftas they cou'd. Of Sequerier's Men, there were 40 that were killd afhoar, and more taken Prifoners. Afrerthis, having inform'd his Country-men of this Piece of Treachery, and left it to them to chaftize che Maleccans for it, he himfelf went direetly to the Cape of Gaed Hope, and fo home to Lisbon
By that rime this Action was orer; Aliuguer, fue (whom we left wounded at Calceut; began to flew himielf to the World again; and being defirous to enter upon fetne confiderable Service for the Glory of his Prince and Country, he refolved upon the Recovery of the famous Ine of Ormiz (c). This Kingdom had once already fubrnitred it (c) Orman; reff to the Portuguere Yoke, and paid a Ycarly Tribateof to the Parsw by their Negligence, by Mutinics and Inteltine Divifions, regain by they to weakned themietves, and encouraged the Ormuzi-silumpurgen ans ready for a Revolt, that they took that Opportunity to recorex their ancient liberty, and expel the domineering Portugueze; which they zecordingly effected. Alinguerque now had projeqted the Reduction of this Iflamd, and was upon his way chicher, wich a Fleet of 21 Sail ; but was accidentally invited in his paffage, to the Conqueft of Goa; for which he had then a very favourable Oppoitunity : For the Prince, Zabaius wasthen larely dead, leaving his young Son, Idalkan, as full of Troubles, as he was void of Experience. The Perfon that gave him this Intelligence, was Timoic the Pyrate, who alfo promis'd his beft Affitanice.
The Portugueze upon this, prefently laid Siege to Goa; Goa rakem which lafted not long before 'twas furrendred into ticir by the Pom Hands. Yet did the young Prince Idelicen, in a very fhort \({ }^{\text {ruguca }}\) ime, drive them out again; but had nor the good luck to keep them ourt, whien they were our ; fince good quickly

And now was Aibuquergue fetring out for Ormuz again when the Winds blew him to another Side-Conqueft They wou'd ner let him fail to Ormuz. but favoured him to Maslacea. Here he demanded of the treacherous King, Mancudizs, the Prioners caken from Sequeria; who pretended at firt, they were fied; but fecing the Town frd by the Porti, gueze, he produc'd'cm. He demanded of him likewife all the Charges of the two Fleecs, and Reftitutien of all things that were loft: Which Conditions feem'd fo hard to this Prince, and his Counfellors, that they chof rather ro commit all to the Event of a War, than to fub mit to them. And the Iffuc of it was this, that Mancudius wastain and his Kingdom of Mal.acca entirely reducd to the Obedience of Porragerl.

Tis remarkable, that when Alluquergue was going to Malacia, he met with fome Ships coming from thence, which he alfaulted and rook. In one of them there was a certain Perfor, Namabegucc: by Name, who was one of thefe that bad confpired againft Sequeria before; this Man, tho' he were bitterly wounded in the Skirmilh with Albuquerque, fo that he could ftand no longer upon his Legs, yet was oblerved to lofe not a Drop of Blood, as other wounded Men did; tho' they found afterwards, that he was not a Bloodicfs Animal: For upon the pulling away of a Golden Chain, which he wore upon his Arm, he immediately poured forth his Soul, in Torrents of Blood, that iffucd out of thofe Paflages that were made beforc. The Reafon of this they attributed to the Virtue of a ccrain Bone \(f\); raken from 2 Bcaft call'd Cabi, in the Kingdom of Siem; which Bone was included in the Golden Chain. They pretend, that this Bone, by a very poxent Reftringency, which Nature has endowed it winth, did forcibly hold the Blood in the feveral Channels of the Body, notwithatanding the many Vents given it to run our 25. This was defigned to be fent as a moft precious Jewel, and a wonderful Rarity, inio Portugel;' but, they fay, rwas loft in a Shipwreck in the way.
But to return: After the Conquet of Malacer, Albuquerguc having no more Lets by the Way, did accomplifh his Voyage to Ormur, and the Conqueft of ir too. And now the Porrugucere made a very formidable Figure in the Eaftern World, and moft of the Indian Princes began to Court their Favour, being Eyc-witneffes of their EveryDays rifing Greatnels Idalcan, and the King of Calceut, defired a League with them: The King of Maldiva became their Vaffal: Nay, in Africk, the Grear Preffer-Fobm himfelf, pretended to their Friendilhip. Their Vittory at \({ }_{\text {nefi }}^{\text {The of che }}\) Mulacta, prepar'd their way to a great many other Con-Pmmanea quefts, and good Correfpondencies in thofe Parts, as 2 tin the E . Amboinc, Bands, and the Moluccris. Antenius Abreus was fent in fearch of thefe Molicea's; who came firt to \(\mathcal{F}\) eoa, then to Amboina, crecting Srone Pillars in both thofe places; and from thence to Bande, fo full of, and fo famous for the excellent Spices, Nutmegs and Mace. He found both here, and at the Mclucen's, that the Fame of the Malaccin Victory was ger inio thofe. Parts, to the grear Adrantage of the Portugucze; fo much, that the Kings of Ternatc, and Tiridore, folemanly referr'd their Conrroverfics to their Decifion, and even fprung a new Quarrel, in ftriving who mould have the Portugueze on their fide. Tho they have paid for chufing them the Arbitrators of their Diffcrences; the Portugueae having decided the Controverfic neither to the King of Ternate's, nor the King of Tiridore's, but rocheirown Advantage.

\(l^{T}\)T rery often falls our, that Croffes and Difappoint- the Nicw Micthod of Difcorerfy Forfire good Ships were ments, diverting Men from the Profecution of their arit Deligns, open and prepare their way to new Under akings, which are afterwards attended with more Benefic and Succef. 'Twas fo in the Cale of this famous Perion, whofe Difcoveries in the World we are now to look orct.
Magliantes (a Portugueze Gentleman, and 2 Soldier of no mean Character) had (erv'd his Country to very good parpofe, both in the \(A f\) ficen and Indian Wars. Particularly we find that he fought under Albuquergues Banners. in thofe fuccectful Wars of his, that brought in the ners Kingdoms of Mal How frimaglimeswasmpaged in the ence of Portugal. How far ha Affairs, is uncertain; bur this Charracter he has in the Proofs of his Valour and Conduct. And having thas perform'd what he chought might merit fome further Confideration and Reward from his Prince, he petitiond for a fmall Augmentation of his Stipend, as mach as would make it half a Ducket per Month more. But King Emamuel thinking fir to rejeqt the Suit, and deny any further Increafe of his Wages: The Petitioncr (who decply refented it) gave up himfelf swholly to be guided by hus own rerengeful diformented Thoughts. He rciolvd to quir the Service of a Mafter, whom he reckon'd hard and ungrateful; and find out fome other, that fon'd know how to treat his Merir beter. So bidding Adicu to the Court quickly prepard and furnih'd at his Charges, and put under the Command of Maglienes as Admiral. The Number of the whole Company aboard this Fleet, amounted not to 300; and of thefe Thirty were Poruygric.
They fet fail from Seroil the roth of Augut, A. D. 1519. Mfraims and OHober the 3d, got up betwixt Cape Verd, and the eto oun 1 lands of that Name. They fpent a grear deal of time abour the Coaft of Guiney, and by tedious Calms, (which lafted Scventy Days) were fo long a labouring to crois the Line. But when they had done this difficult Work, and the South Pole appearid above the Horizon, they held on their Scuth Courle, and came upon the Main of Brafile, Arani. about that part of it which lies in 22 : Degrees. They obicrid it to be all one concinued Tract of Land hither from Cape St. Augufime ( upon that fame Coaft) which is about 8 Degrees frem the Equinoctial Linc.

In this part of the Country they were well refrem'd with all Conreniences for Life; they found geod ftore of Fruits, Sugar-Canes, and divers forts of Animals, out of Sygr-Crech all which they had a liberal Entertaimment. Having made \(2:\) Degrees more of Sourb Lat. they fell in with a Country inhabited by a wild and momftrous fort of Pcople: They were of a prodigious Starure, fierce, and barbarous; made 2 horrible roaring Noife, more like fo many Bulis, than Human Crarares. and yet wirh all thar mighry Bulk Caribers were fo very nimble and light of Foor, that rone of our Spaniards, or Porrutureze, cou'd overtake them. Here was a ftately Rirer of frefh Water, that had leven Iflands in the Mourh of ir, ard was full Seventeen Leagues wide in that part: The biggeft of chefe INands yielded them fome Jewels, and they gave it che Name of Sr. Mary. They Cupe Sc conzinued Coafting along this Tract of Land, towards the sum South Pole, and met with a couple of IRands ro full of Seols and Pengwins, that in an Hour's fpace they cou'd seots and have laden all the five Ships. The Pengwins. were a black, Pengwts have laden all the five Ships. The Pengwins, were a black, Bill like a Raven's. They mainzain, ihemfelves altogether out of the Waters, eacing northing but Fidh: for which Reafon, perhaps; they mighr be very ferviccable in this Fleet upon Fiih-Days, if they were difpos'd to obferve thofe Rules ai Scea.

Their next Advaince wasto 49 ; Degt. South Lat. Here they were fhut up with hard Wearher, and forc'd to take up their Winter-Quarters. They had a miferable dul! time on't at this place, feeing no living Creature, buit themfelves, for a long time together.
At laft, to pur an end to the Solitude, \(x\) cerrain Giant of the Ncighbouring Parts, came up to gire thema Vift: A brisk, jolly, frolickfome Fellow, very merrily difpos'd, finging and dancing all the way as he came: Being got to the Haven, he ttood there, and threw Duft upon his Head ; which they obferving, fent fome afthoar to him; who making the like Signs of Peace, upon thar Affurance he came along with them to the Ship, withour any thing of fear or foruple. His Bulk and Stature was fuch, as wonld cafily allow him the Character of a Giant; the Head of one of their middle-fiz'd Men reachid ber to his Wafte, and he was proporionably big. His Body was formidably painted all over, efpccialiy his Face; here were a couple of Scaggs drawn, one upon carh Cheek, and grear red Circles about his Eycs. His Colciurs were otherwife mofly yellow, only his Hair was done with white.
For his Apparcl, be had the Skin of a rertain Beart, clumfily fowed together; but a Beaft as itrange as that was that wore it; cery way unaccountable ; neither Mule, Horf, nor Caniel ; but fomething of every one ; the Ears of the firt, the Tail of the fecond, and the Shape and Body of the laft: Twas an entire Suic, all of ope piece from Head to Foot; 25 his Breaft and Back were cover'd with it above, to his very Legs and Feet were wrapp'd up in the fame bencach. The Arms that he broughr with him, were 2 ftout Bow and Arrows; the String of the former was a Gut, or Sinew, of chat mon ftrous Beaft; and che latter, inftead of Iron-heads, were tippid with flarp Stones.
The Admiral made him Eat and Drink, and he en joy'd himfelf very comfortably a Shipboard, till he happen'd to peep in a grear Looking-Glars, thar was given him amongtt othet Trifles. This put him into 2 Fright that he could not eafily recover from ; the difmal Face he Caw chere, ftard him quire out of all Countenance and Courage; and he flarted back with fuch Violence, that he uumbled a couple of the Men rhat ftood by him, ro the Ground. This was a Sign that he was throughly and effectually frighreed; but no doubs, the thing that appeared to him, will be thoukht lafficient to do it if the fore going Defaripion be well confidered. A Pair of grear \(\xi_{\text {gaggs }}\) with branched Horns, and the flaming Circles Sragss with branched : Wharns thobgoblin courid have a worfe Look than this? A Dzmon's Face, in 2 Vizzard Mask, with a Set of long Teeth, and a Nofe of half a Yard, could not have more power over the Imagination, and give a Man a worre Shock of a fudder, than luch a fight. However, this Giant fard fo well amongft them, (notwithftanding the Fright by the Looking-Glafs) that quickly after they had the Company of more of them. Particularly one came, and made himfelf mighty familiar, carried it pleafantly, merrily, and with fo much good Humour amongt them, that our Europerns were almoft (at leaft asfar as they cou'd be) pleas'd with his Company. He gave them 2 Gight of one of chofe Beatts, whore Skins they fo frequently wear ; bur we have nothing of any particular Charater of it added, to juftific or difprove the former Surmifes about it: They raught him to peak and pronounce, pretty clearly, feveral Words of their Devorion, as fefus, Ave Maric, &c. The doing of which was (if duly confiderid) an AAt of great Charity: For thele Giants, they fay, were horribly petter'd with Apparitions, and to wanted a Sett of proper Words to bid Defianceror thofe Difturbers of their Quiet and Repole : And if fuch Charms as thefc will do the Bufinefs in Earope, there's no Reafon why they flould nor be as effeCuaal in Brafite.
Bur they feem to be very much to blame, in offering, as they did, to make Pritoners of any of thote woild Peo ple, which carried it fo fairly and civilly to chem. To circumvert them by Stratagems, and cheat them of their Liberty, when they had not (as far as appears) done any thing to deferve the Forfeiture of it. They filld their Hands with Toyss and liule Thines, thar pleas'd them, and in the mears time pur Iron Shackles upon their 1 egs; which the Wreeches thought were very fine Play-things as well as the reft, and were pleas'd wirh the Gingling Sound of them, till they found how chey were hamperd and berray'd: But then they fell a Bellowing like Bulls, and implord the Help of Sectebs, in thate Exticnity; ; they cry"d doud for his Affiftance, bur he did nor come to dc liyer them; and what Power it is they give that Name to, they rhemiclves beft know. To delire fis Help in Mifery implied fome Notions concciv'd of his Goodncts and Compäfion ; and 'tis not to be imagin'd, that they wou'd thus crave Kelief of an Evil Spifit, "that us'd to vex and affict them. It mult be own'd, that they report very itrange things, of borric Fcrms and Appcarances frequenty fecn amonght theic Pcopic : Of Hormed Dxirons, with long flag Hair, throwi:g out Firc lecth before and behind. But are net the Ciants aliroft as jad Figures :hicmrelves? And is it nor poffible for them to miftake chi-fon? Shapes of one anothir fer fomectinis cle? We fee how one of them was ficared aimott our of his Wirs with foc ing his own Face in a Giffs, and might not anothcr Fice as rgly as that do the bulincti as well? 'Tis too truc, that the Power and \(D_{\text {cininion }}\) of wil Spirits is wer far extended in this 1 ower World ; the Princess of the Air are fond of Empirc, as willas thcfe that are upon the Earch, and not Lefs willing (to be fure) to cnlarge the rTerritcries than they. But 'ric nce for the Honnur of the Supreme Being, to furpere fo very large a thate of his In heritance in their hards; to lring them in, upon every occation, Abuling and Tyrannizing over his Crcazures, and turning the bigecf part of the C-cation into a Pedham, by piaying all the mad pranks init thar Hel ini frenzy can infpire. This fecms to be a icry ccarfe Complement o Infinitc Wifdom and Goodnefs; and, in thort, an Hcnour too great to be allowed to any Bcings that are acted by Principics of Malice and Wi:kedncs.
But to return to their erhet Obfervations abour thele Pcople : They tell us that moft of them wear the fame fort theic cionfapparel that the firft they faw appeard in; that is, the thing, mid Skins of the fore-mentioned Beaft. 7 hey go with their Den, cri. to hair fhort, yet thar that is they tic up with a Corton-lace.: Thiey have no fixd Habirations, bur certain Porralle CorLages, which they remorc from onc place to another as their fancy leads rtcm; and tine rery fame Marerials which they yfe for the defence of their Bodics, they ufe alfo for the defence and covering of thefc Cortages. Whar foch chey ear cticy beftow no ceremonics of Dreffing upon, but derour it jont frefh and raw as it comes to their hands; bcfies which, they have a cerrain fweet Root amonigf them (calld C Capar) which is a confiderable part of their feeding ikewife. They add,that chey are extremeiy jcalous of their Women; they don'r tell us they faw any of them, by traat means to give the Mcn any occafion of awakening that pation in themfelves.
The Practice of Phyfick is reduc'd into a vert narrow compars amongft them, and takes in no more chan \(\mathrm{V}_{\mathrm{o}}\) mixing and Phleboromy: Thefc two Evacuations mut anfwer all raitecies of Cares and Purpofes; and where his won't do, the Difeafe is incurable in that 1 and. Their way of bleeding is to give a good cticp with fome cdge Tool or other in the Part that Laboors, be in Leg or 4 mm or Face, "tis all onc. But tho "tis odd to ufe a Chopping' Knife inftead of a Lancet for letring Blood, yct "is worle to chruft an Arrow 2 Foot and \(a\) half down the Throart to procure 2 Vomir : No doubt but this will prick the Fibres and fet 2 Man a reaching to fome purpole; and whereas they fay it makes them puke very freely, and bring up 2 vart deal of Choler and Blood, tis very likely to be rrue and if the point of an Arrow chruft down fo far did not draw Blood from them, 2 Man wou'd beready mo queftion whar fort of Meral their infides were made of. So that upon this account, their Practice may be yet more compendiounty fumm'd up, and we may fay thefe People care all diftempers ar one fingle operation, which is alfo borh Vomiting and Bleeding as the fame ume." From this way of managing themflves, and thriving fo well upont, any Man will be ready to allow them 2 good frength of Contirution ; bur it feems that of their Limbs is as confiderable woo, of which they give us this inftance: That wher they made the atrempr of taking fome of them Prifoners one of them alone very near tired the umoft forces of nine of their Men chat were employd to Mafter him ; and tho they had him down, and bound bis handstrighrly, yet be freed himrelf from his Bonds, and get loofe in fpight of all their endeavours to hold hin. And proportional to boch thefs ftrengths, is that alfo of their Appetire ; one of tem cat up a whole Pasker of Ship-bisker ar a Meal, and drank a Bowl (they don't fay how large) of warce, at a draught, bur any thing of this kind is not fo very ftrange, confidering the huge Carkaffes they have to maintain. One thing of them (which is fomething fingular) is not to se omitred before we leave them ; and that is, that by reas. on of the vehement cold, they unifs themicelves up fo very lofe and tight, that the Genitals in the Men are not to be difcover'd, IFing hid encirely within their Bodics. Admiral gave thefe People the Name of Patagons; and any Europeans hould at any time go amongit them thefe few common words may be of fome ufe in dealing with them. They call Bread Capar, Warer Oli, black Anrel, red Clecicie, red Cloth Cherecai: Serelos and Cbelcule are the Names of two Beings they pay a Religious refpect to, of which the former is the Supreme, 'the later an In feriour one ; but whether they are Proper Names, of only the Terms for a higher and fubordinate Power in gecral is not certain.
The Port they ftaid in all this while was calld Port rort 5. jow. St. Julian; of which, as of the whoic adjoyning Councry they rook folemn Poffeffion, and left a Crofs creited in token of it. 'Twas full five Months that they consinucd here in the Converfation of there barbarous Pcople, and the feeling of the much more cruel and fevere weather It was the begimning of ocicier by that time they got hip to the C.ape delicr.d Inands, and were deraind folong by the Calms, that they made it fome time in December before they crofid the line. Then was the Sun quire ar, or ve ry near the Tropick of Aries, and confequendy was ad. vancing back again rowaids the Line as they were moving Southward from it; fo that by that tune they came down to 49 : degrees of S. l.atitude, things began to look with a Wintex-like appearance, and the hard Weather came on apacc. Thisterm of Time expir'd, they fer our again and faild to si degrees 40 minutes S. Laritade ; here they found a convenicnt Port, and met with good Provifions of Fuel, Filh and freth Warcr. They linger'd away at this place a matter of two Months more, and then came to 52 degrecs Sourh 1 atitude, where they light upon the Entrance into the Serciglits. They found them abous wo Leagucs in length, and as for the breadith very uncertain; in fome places very wide, in others not more than half a League over; the Land on borh fides high and uneven; and the Mountains coverd with Snow. When they came to the end of it, and found an open paffage into the grear Occan, M.iglianes was furpriz'd with a Joy that cxiecded all the common bounds and micafures, for this was the happy thing he look'd for, and now he was able to demonftrate his Sailing round by the Weft to the Emperor. The Point of Land from whence be firft law this moft defirable fighr, he calld in memory of it Cape De fiderato; but ir feems'rwas not fo defirable to all the reft of the company, for here one of the Ships fale away and faild homewards by her felf. They give a very good Charauter of the Sereights, for affording all the conveniencies of frefh Warer, Fith, grateful Herbs, Wood, fecurc Havens, of which there are great plenty; and they Gay are almott ar crery 1 cagues end And thete Advan tages are to be met with all orer the Streigher, and not in one or two particular places only; theres none of the Ha rens (by their report) but what will entertain you with both Food and Firing.
They entred the Pacifick Sea, (as they calld it) Noor. 23 Pitrefef in the Pacfa Sca. A. D. 1520 . and in this wide rambling Ocean they fail'd 3 Months and 20 Days without fight of Land: The mife- ries they endured for want of Provifion, a good part of this time, were fuch asf are feldom heard of. The frefh Water they had aboard ftunk and was very loathfome all their Bread was gone, and norhing left ro car but Skins and pieces of hard Learher. Nature will make any fhift, sho' ever fo bard and poor, to bear her felf out in a diftrefs, when tris poffible to be done; and the poor Seamen hare, sather than ftarve, fell very greedily to work upon thofe dry tough pieces of Learher that were folded abour the Ropes of their Ships. Bur ir being impoltible to eat them rill they were fome way fofien'd and fitted for chewing, they laid them afteep in the Salr Water for fomedays, and then made the beft of them as long as they lafted. Bur then again, what tinth chis impure fort of feeding; which was thort and feanty too, and the daily impoverifment of their Spirits wanting betuer Recruics, their numbers lefen'd apace; fome died onrright, others fell inro pining Sicknefs, orhers had their Gums that grew quire over their Tecth on every fide; by which means, being rotally unable to manage chofe tough foilids they were forcid to feed upon, they were paft all help, and fo miferably ftarv'd to death. Their only comfort in all thefe direful circumftances, was a conftancy of fair and good weather: The Windsblew them fmoo:hly and gencly along, and broke our into nothing of a raging Fir, all the while they were thus exposid; the Sca as calm and quict too, and by this got the Celebrated name of Pacifick. And how happy was it to be thus at reft from the Toils of a Stormy Sea? Had Famine and Tempefts come cogether, how quickly would they have been weariet our? Whither wou'd the hatterd Fleet have been toft, and what wou'd have become of the Difeovery of the Moluccas? In all this time, they faw noching but two uninhabired Illands that gave no profpect of any Relicf. The Needle of their Compals varied fometimes, and it ochers moved fo dully and irregulariy, that they were often forcod to infoire and quicken it with a frefh totich of the Loaditone. The Soutb) Pole, they tell us, has no remarkable Star near it as the North has: There are two Clufters of fmall Stars Soumh pole (which appear more like Clouds than any thing clfe) and sam are feparated one from another at 2 fmall diftance; be tween thefe there are a couple of Stars nor very large nor brigh, which difoover themiclies, by the fimallnefs of the Circle they defcribe, to lic pretty near the Pole, ar leatt the neareft of any that are difcernible.
At the diftance of 20 degrees from the Scurth Poie, they 1 nadt 5 mob. cell us of an Mland of excecding height call'd Cipcrghu innd and \(c i\) and at is degrecs of another as high; the Name of pargm. which is Sumbdit. They.faild in one Gulph arleaft 4000 Leagucs, and having made by their Reckoning 120 degr. onginude from their firft departure, arthe fame time they found they drew towards the Equinooitia!. When they had pafs'd that Iine, and were got to 13 degrees North Lar they defign'd for the Cape calld by the old Geographers the Cape of Cattigare; but this they mids'd, going upon that old Account of the Lat. of is, which places it thereabours, and came to underftand afterwards that is lies in 12 degrees.
March 6. they came up with a parcel of Iflands, being then in 12 degr. Nortb Lar. and 146 degr. Lon. from their firft fetting out. Here they went afhore to breathe and Inand La cfrefh a little, after all the farigues of their redious drome. Voyage thro the South Sca; but the thievin Pceple of thefe lflands would not let them be quict; while they were repofing themfelyes athore, the others would be pilfering and ftealing things our of the Ships, fo that 'rwas impoffible to enjoy their cafe in any meafure, till they had aken fome courfe to deliver themfelves from thele unwearied Difturbers. So they march'd with a fmall Party, pretty well Arm'd, upinto one of the Inands, burnt fome of theirHoufcs, and killed fome few of them; but this Correction, tho it might awe them for the prefent, yet could not mend their evil Temper and Difpofition, bar they that were Thictes would be Thieves ftill, and in pight of Swords and Guns, wou'd play the Knaveas beore, for which reafon they refolv'd to make no long. ftay there, but find out fome other place where they mighr Reft with more fafery and quiet. As for the Character of this People and their Manners, they give us this Relarion:
That there is not the leaft appearance of any Crder or The Prople Form of Government amongft them, but cvery Man lives ofthe Le. as he lifts, and does what's agreeable to his own humour theircundome and inclination. Nay, confidering how univerfally that Thicring, Cheating Difpofition prevails, 'tis next zo impoffible there thould be any thing of that kind, for the governing part wou'd never fail to tranfgrefs the Iaws of Juftice and Common Honefty as much as the reft; and the lnferiours would never bear to be curb'd and punith'd by thofe that they faw do the very fame things, and fet fich an example before their Eyes. So thar the general corruption of their Manners will neceffarily keep them all upon a level, and eftablifh a perperual Anarchy amongt them. As far as appears, the Men go entirely naked, not difcovering any thing of that common modefty which obrains amongt moft barbarous Pcople to beftow fome covering upon the Privy Parcs; that diftinction indecd ceafes here, all Parss being eqtally expos'd to view. Their hair is very black, both on their Heads and Beards, the former being generally very long, and reaching down orheir Waftes. They anoint themlelves all over with the Oil of the Coco, bur their narural Complexion is Olive They colour the Teeth black and red ; and fome of them will wear a Bonnct made of the Paim-rtee upon their Heads. The Women are much. betrer favoar'd than the Men, and (as their Scx requires) more modeft too; they all wear Coverings made of the inner Bark of the Palmtree, their Hair black, thick and long; and (asthey fay) ready to trail upon the ground. They commend them for very carcful induftrious Houfcwifes, fpending their time as a much better rate than the Mcndo, for whiltt befe are pilfering abroad, the ochers are making Mars and Nets of the Palm-tree athome; but of borh fides the Work goes to the furnifhing of the Houfe. Their Houles are built of Timber, coverd over winh Boards and large Fig-leaves, and diftinguilh'd inco feveral Aparments their Beds are che Palm-Mats laid one upon another, and the leaves of the fame are inftead of Shoces and Blankets. They have no weapons but Clabs and long Poles. upon which they put heads of hom. Their feeding is upon Coco's, Benana's, Figs of a hands length, Sugar Canes, Fowl and Flying Fifh. Their Canoes are prexyy odly concriv'd and parch'd up, that theyll fail with them at a Fery grear rate;' the Sails of them are made of broad Darc-lcaves fowed rogether; inftead of a Rudder they ufe a large Board with a.Sraff ar the top, and may; when thcy will, make the Stem the Forcicaftle, or the Forecaftle the Stern; they aie always painted over cither black, or white, or red, fome one colour, and fome another, as they likc. Thefe People are mightily taken with any litule thing that's new and agrecable to theis childin humour When the Spamiards had wounded feveral of them with rheir Arrows; nay, picrecd them almoft through and through, thefe being ffrange things to them, they wou'd pull them out of their wounds, and hold them in thei hands, ftaring at them till they dropt down dead. And afrer all, tho they had been forroughty handled, yer they would follow the Ships as they ware going away to gaze at them; fo that they had at one time a matter of 2000 their Canocs pretfing abour them, as near as they could, to behold thofe wordertul Conrrivances.

Merch the soth, they handed upon the Ifland of zemel which is 30 leagues from the Ladrones; and the next day they went afhore ar Huniunt, an Inand rot inhabited, bur well deferving to be fo. Here they found Springs of delicare clear water, abundance of Eruir Trees, Gold and white Coral: The Admiral called is the I/lend of rocd sizns. The Inhabirants of rome of the ncighbouring Illands came upto them nor long after, a People of much Humaniry and good Difpoftion, very fair and fricndly in their Carriage, and appearing to be mighty well pleas'a at their coming amongit them. They came laden with Prefents of Fih, and the Wine made of the Coco-Tree and promis d other Provifions in a little rime
Since the Coco-Wine is menrion'd, ic may not be amifs to fhew the various Ufes chefe People pur that Fruit to by which ir will appear, how very ferviceable a thing it is, and how many of the Conveniencics of Life are furnilh d out by it. The Coco is the Fruit of a certain Tree like a Date, and fupplies them ar once with Bread Wine, Oil and Vincear; and (befides all this Food and Sawce) with Phyfick roo. The Wine is drank from the Trec ir felf, bur all the reft are made from the Fruit. They cut off fome part of a branch of the Tree, and faften on to rhe remaining picce a good large Reed, into which drops a Liquor like White-wine, in colour and appearance, and of a rafte gratefully rart. A: good quan city of this thus drawn forth, and put up in'a Veflel, is their Coco-Wine, without any farther prepararion. The Fruir (which is as big as a Man's Head ar leaft) has two rinds, the outermoft of which is green, two fingers thick and full of ftrings and threads; and of thefe they make all the Cords they ufe about their Eoars. Under this rind there is another, or rather indecd a thell, being confiderably thick and hard; this burne and pulveriz \({ }^{\circ}\), is us \({ }^{\circ} \mathrm{d}\) as a remedy for feveral diftempers. Next to this lies the kernel, which is white, and of the thicknefs of a finger it has a pleafing tafte, almoft like an Alriond, and when ris dried they make it into Bread. In the middle of this kernel, there is a-hollow full of a pure limpid water, and of a very cordial and refreming nature; it will fomerimes congeal, and lie like an Egg within the fhell. When they would make Oil, chey leave the Fruit a ftece in water ill it purrifics, and then fet ir over the fire, and boil it inro an Oil. And the Vinegar is only the fame warer cxpos'd for fome time to the Sun, which rums it into a Vircgarlike that of Whitc-Wine. Laftly, If they mix the kerreel together with the water that is lodged in the caviry of it, and then ftrain it chrough a Clorh, they make a good Milk of ir. The Coco-Trees refemble the common Date-Trecs in all other things but this, That they' are net fo rugged and knoty as they are. They'll hold our very well ioo Year, and two of them will main tain a Family of ten People with Wine very handfomely provided they be ufed by turns, and cach Tree having been drawn feven or eight days, be allow'd as many to recover again before any more be taken from it: This care taken, fuch a number of People may drink as much as they will, and the Trees will bear them out in it.
But to return to the Concems berween the Pcople and them: According to their Promife they came again with more Provifions, and cnterd inro a farther degree of familiarity and fricndly Correfpondence with them; they invired the Admiral into their Barks, and were reciprocally invited aboard the Admiral's Ship, where a great Gun being let off to cpretrain them, it purthem into fuch a fright, that they weje all ready to leap over-board, but good Words and Prelens brought them to themfelves again, and with much ado they were perfwaded to keep out of the watcr. The Name of their 1 land was \(Z u / v e n\), of no rery grear corrpais, but confiderable for irs Pro ducts. They had all manner of Spices in their Barks, Cinnamon, Cioves, Nutmegs, Ginger and Mace, and feveral things made in G6ted all which they carry up and down for Merchandize.' They were without Ap parel, bur yet drefs'd at a more coftly rate than thic Eiur perns that had it ; they had Earings of Gold in each Ear Arms : Befides, Arms : Befldes, they had Daggers, Knives and Iancis that 'wore' all 'very richly garnin'd with the fame Metal. But tho they had nothing of any Gamment on, yet they had fomething of a Covering before, and that a fort of Cloth very ingenioufy made out of the rind of a cerain Tree that grows amongtt them. The moft confiderable Men are diftinguif'd from the commen fort by a piece of filken Needle-work wrappd abour their Heads. They are grols-bodicd, broad, and well fcr; of an Olive CClour; and this Hue they maintain by a conftant Inunction of their Bedies with the O y of the Coco.
They departed from this Inc, Mrrcl. 2F. A. D. 192 . and directicd their Courfe between the W. and S. W. fail ing berwcen the Iles Ccnrir, Ifuinang fan, Hiluffer, and Abarian.
March) 28. They caruc to the Inc of Buthuan (1); the (1) Sthame King of which, and the Prince his Son, gave them honourable Enterainment, together with good Quantities of Gold and Spices. .The Admiral prelented the King with two Vcfis cf Cloth, one red, and the cther yellow, made after the T; \(r\) : \(/\) F Faftion ; and fome of his Conrtiers with Knives, Glaffes, and Beads of Cryfal. His M.inery was corribly frightned ar the Difcharge of a Picce of Cibi:ance and as much furpriz'd to fee one of the Put... \(\cdots \cdot \operatorname{nin} A r\) mour, lath'd with naked Swords, withour recci:irg any harm. Bur he was much more conforined at the viagick of the Compafs, and to hear thar the had found their way thro' che wide Occan, by the Direction of that. The Admiral fent two of his Company afticar alorg with him, of which intw: Pistere was one. When they were landed, the King and his Attendants, all lifted ty their Hands to Heaven, and then rowards the two Chriftiars; in which Ceremony thefe alfo followed them: And this Cuftom they obferved in Drinking too. His Majeft's Palace was like a Hay-houfe, cover'd with Palm and Figleaves, mounted fo high upon great Timber-bolls, that they were forced to ufe Ladders to get in. Tho they are Sign of the Crofs firing in Meals they always make the Legn af the Crofs fitting in the fame manner with their Legs as Taylors do. At Night, inftead of Candlcs, they burm the Gum of a certain Tree, wrappd up in Palm reaves. The King. and Prince having entertaind them each in their fereral ( \(m\) ) Palaces, and given them Noble \((m)\) The Prelents, difmiled them; but not without new admirati- Prince's P3 on, and a firm perfwafion now rooted in cheir Minds, that pare in the they were abore the Rank of common Mortals, having lagem, feen fo many ftrange things by them; and efpecially p greftia's Writing and Reading what he had written, which were Myfteries they could not comprehend.
In the Ine of Butliucn, as they fifted the Earth of a cer-Plenty of tain Mine, they found great Lumps of Gold, fome as big Gold as Nurs, orhers as large as Eggs; of which Metal were all the King's Domeftick Veffels made.
The King himiclf was a very comely Perron, his Hair The King of black and long, his Complcxion Oliver; his Body per-Butbmien furn'd with fwect Oils, of Storax and Benjamin, and paint Ears and on Colours. He had Rings of Gold in his Ears, and on crery Finger three: His Head was wrapp'd wift a Silken Veil, and a piece of Couton wroucht with Silk and Gold, coverd his Body to his Knees. He wore 2 long Dagger by his fide, with a Haft of Gold, and a Scabbard of fair carved Wood. His Country, if feems, is fo rich, that one of his Subjects offer'd a Crown of Maffy Gold, with a Collar, for fix Threds of Cryftal Beadis; but the Admiral would not permit fuch Bargains as thele, that they mighr not appear to be too fond and covetous of their Gold.
 Men quite naked, except a Covering of Paint: Bet the Women go cloched from the Wafte downwards, anf borh wear Golden Ear-Rings. They are always chewing \(A\) recca, and fay, they cant live withour it. This is a fort Fruit like a Pcar, cur in Quarters, and rolled up in the Leaves of a Tree (calld * Verele), which are almoft like ay-lcares
As for Religious Rires, they had no other inufe amonge them, bur only to lif up their Faces, and Joined-hands to Heaven, and call upon sheir God Abba. The Admina cauicd a Banner, in which was the Pourrraicture of the donione or Crofs, and a Crown of Thorns, with Nails, to be broaghts wha arora forth, and publickly Reverenc'd by all his Men, in tre King's Prefence ; relling His Majety, it hould be fer ip in fome high Mountain in his Counry; not only for a Token of good Enterainment to Chritizo in tha bui alfo for his own, and Nation's Secunity, and Defence;
fince
fince if they devourly pray'd to it, 'twou'd infallibly proteet them from the Mifchiefs of Lightning and Tempet, as well as from other Evils. This the poor Prince pro mis'd to do, knowing no better, and glad to be fodefended from Thunderboles Deparing from bence, this King's Pilots brought them to the IGes of Zcilcn, Zulur, Mcffana, and Calegnan, of which ubur is the beft, and has the beft Trade. In Mef \(^{\prime}\) Jime they found Dogs, Cars, Hogs, Hens. Goans, Rice, Ginger, Cocus, Myll, Panickc, Barley, Figs, Oranges, Wax, and Gold, in great fore. This Ine lies in \(9^{2}:\) Degr. of \(N\). Lat. and 162 Degr. of Longitude, from the firt Stage.
They fayd here eight Days, and then failing ro the N. W. pals'd by the Illes Zeilon, Bclool, Canglu, Barba', and Carighan. In which laft Inf, there are Bats as big as Eagles, and that tafte, when drefsd, like a Hen: There are alfo Stock-Doves, Turte-Doves, Popinjays, and a certain fort of Fowl like a Heo, which have little. Homs,

From Mefana to Caleghan, is abour 20 Leagues failing to the Weft, and from Caleghian to Zubur abour so Leagues; to which they now directed their conrfe, having the Company of the King of Meflima along with them:

April 7. about Noon, they entred the Port of \(\tilde{Z}^{\prime \prime}\) urut ( \(n\) ), and coming near the City let off all their grear Guns, which pur that place into a very great confternation. But all thar apprehenfion of danger from the Ships was quickly remor'd, by the coming of their Ambaffador to the Town, who affur'd the King, that 'twas cuftomary with them to difcharge their Camon whenerer they came inro any great Ports; and that 'twas a piece of Refpect they always paid to the Lords and Governours of Towns. He told him how mighry 2 Prince they were Servants to, and that their defign was to find out the Moluccas: That they only came to ifir him by the way, hearing of his Fame by the King of Meffanes, and defired him to gramt them Vienuals for the Commodiries they had brought. The King bid them welcome, but rold them, itwas a Cuftom there, for all Ships that came, to pay Tribute, and that he expected the like Acknowicdgment from them. This the Ambaftador poficivcly refufed, telling him, That his Admiral was the Servanr of fo great 2 King, that as he had never yet, fo he wou'd not now begin to make thar Acknowledgment to any Prince in the World : And withal, That if le woudd Accept of Peace offer'd to him, well and good, if not, he fhou'd quickly have his hands full of the War. A certain Moor, that flood by, told the King, That thefe were the Portugueze that had Conquerd Calecut and Mislacca, and thercfore Advifed him to hare a care how he provok'd them. Upon this confideration, trie King concluded to refor the Marter to his Council, and ' oo give them an Anfwer the next day, fending them, in the mean while, Wine and Victuals. The King of Meffana, who was a very potent Prince, went aftore, and adted very Generoully, on that behalf, with the King of zubut: The effect of which was, Thar the King inftead of Demanding, was now almoft ready to yicld to pay Tribute himfelf; which they not at all infifting upon, but only defiring liberty to Trade, he cbeerfully granted it, offering to Scal the Covenant of Peace and Friendithip with his Blood. Affer this, the King of Meffena, the King of \(Z^{\prime \prime} b u t\), and his Nephew, came aboard the Admiral, brought him Prefencs, and confirm'd the Lague. The Admiral perfwaded them to embrace the Clriftian Faitb, which they did with exceeding Joy and Pleafure, being all afterwards Bapriz'd. This example of the great Ones influenc'd the whole Illand, fo that Cbriftianiry was Univerally reecir'd there. When they came ro the Ciry, they found the King in his Palace, fitring upon 2 fort of fine Mar made of Date-lcaves, haring no manner of Apparel but 2 Bombafine Corton abour his Wafte. Abour his Head he bad a Veil of Needle-work, and abour his Neck a very coftly Chain; as alfo ftately Jewels in his Ears. He had before him feveral Porcelane Veffick, fome with Eges, and others full of Dare-Wine. The Prince Entertaind them likewife at his Palace, and for their Diverfion made his Daughters Sing and Dance naked before them. One of the Spaniards dying, they defired leave of the King to bury him in his I and: To which the King replyd, That fince he, and all his moft coftly things, were at the King their Mafters derotion, much more mou'd a few Foor of his ground be fo, in affording a Burial-Place to one of his Subjects.
Bh Thefe People excrife Juftice in their Dealings with one thether. keeping clofe to the Ure of Weights and MeaTrites. Their Houres are made of Timber raisd high up-a Crow, which they call Lughan, which the Whales comerimes fwallow down alive, and have their Hears eaten up by this Bird; by which means many of them are kill'd, and the Bird is afterwards found alive in the Carkals of the Whale. The Skin of this Fowl is black, bur the Fleth good. The Spaniards had iery advaniaycous Bartering with thefe People, they giving them 10 Pcfo's of Gold (every one of which is a Ducat and half) for 14 pound weight of Iron; befides, all forts of Provifions for very inconfiderable trifles. The baptizing of thefe Princes (who had before embrac'd Clriftianiry) was perform'd with very great Solemniry, the Ordnance being all difcharg'd; which the Admiral rold the King of before-was named cinarles, and the Prinee Ferdinando; the for- Bexpizid. mer of thofe Names being the Emperors, and the later his Brothers. The King of Meffana was named folr, and the great Nicorifh Courtier Clrifoopher. Befides the Princes and grear Men, there were soo of a more Inferiour Rank baptiz'd ar thie fame time. All their Idols were broken, and the Crofs fet up in divers places, which the Admiral engaged them to pray very devourly before, Morning and Evening. The Queen was baprizd too at The owee the fame time, with 40 of her Ladies, and her Daughter \(c\) the Prince's Wife. She was ygung and handfome, her Body covcrd with a white Clorh, and her Head adorn'd with a fort of a Triple-Crown made of Dare-leaves. After Mais was ended, the King and Court dined in the Admiral's Ship, in Honour of whom all the great Ordnance were difcharged In 8 days time, moft of, the Inand was trcome Cbriffian, except one Village of Idolaters, who wou'd not olxy the King's command in this Matter; the Spaniards therefore burnt the Village, and errected 2 Crofs upon the Ruines of ir. And to thew the good and adrantagcous effects of Cerijtianisy amongft thefe People that had cmbrac'dit, they pretend a very miraculous cure was wrought upon the King of \(\bar{T}^{\text {ubur's }}\) Brother upon bis receiving Bapuifm. The Admiral, it feems, pawn'd his Head for his immediate recovery, if he wou'd fubmir to this Sacred Rite, and break all his Idols. And thefichy, that the Admiral did fave his Pawn, the Prince perfectly recovering of his Malady. And befides this, thar this Miracle brought in a vaft number of Converts, and occafion'd a fearful deftruction of Heathenifm, Altars and Idols, all about in the IIand. The People of this IAand, inftead of Coin, pay the King their Stared Tribute in Viauals.
Nor far from Zubur lies the Ifle of Matban ( 0 ), the \(\mathbf{I n}_{n}(0)\) scthm habitants of which go quire naked, except a night Corering upon the Pudenda ; ar which Part all the Males, borh great and fmall, do hang cerrain gniden Rings, perforating the Skin for that purpofe. They rake as many Tbe Poopk Wives as they pleafe; one of which only has the Sovereignty of the Houfe. They ufe very odd Ceremonies in their Sacrifices to the Sun. They begin with ringing Bells; then they fpread a Cloth apon the ground, on which are fet cerrain Platters with Honcy, Rice and roafted Fifber. The Sacrifice they offer is a Hog, and the Ma- Their Sari. nagers of the Cercmony are two old Women; who fing gat and dance ahout the Animal, and found Trumpers made of Reeds. They mumble our certain Prayers to the Sun and after feveral antick and ridiculous Geftures, ther pour out a Cup of Wine upon the Hog. One of the Venerable Prifteffes ftrikes the faral blow with a Lance, and then purs a lighted 1 amp into the Crcarures mouth, which continues burning all the time of the Ceremons. The other dips the Reed-Trumpet in the Blood, and with her finger befmears her Husband's Forehead, and then the reft of the Men that affint at che Sacrifice. When they bave done, they difrobe themfelves of their Priefly azire, and fall to cating the Honey, Rice and Fifhes, in whick only Women partake with chem. As for the flelh of the Hog, raar is not to be'touch'd aill thefe two Wirches have cravd a Biefling ufon it. As for their Funerals, their Cermonies are almoft as forpih and extravagant as thofe Thir Fron of their Sacrifices. When a Man of Figure dies, all the chicf Women go to his Houle, and carry boughs, with picces of Cotton in them, which chey faften all 2 lyout the Corps. They fit round abour it cloath'd in white Cotton, fanning themfelies with branchics of Paim, the Room teing Incensd with Mytrh and Storax a!! the while. Then a certain Perfon comes and curs off the Hair of the Deceared by Iitrie and litue; and at the Eame rime, hischief Wife lies upon his dead Body, with her Face. Hands and Fect, to his, crying and lamenting while his Hair is cut off, but fhe changes her Funeral hotes into 2 Merry Song when the ocher ceafes curting. The Ceremony lafts five Days; after which they enclefe the Corps in 2 Dormitory built of Wcod, and miade very falt on every fide.

\section*{Chap. III. Magellan's Deatbzo Other Difocoeries, &ic.}

This Ine of Matban was govern'd by two Kings, the one of which refafing to pay Tribure to the King of Spain, Maglianes went our to reduce him. The Inulian bad between 6 and 7000 Men furnia'd with Bows and Arrows, Darrs and Javelins; :which Army Magtianes at-tack'd with 60 of his Spaniards, amn'd with Coats of Mail and Helmets. The Battel was tharp and redions; hur Magtianes his Hear and Courage carrying him in too far amongft the Barbarians, he was there firft wounded with a poyfond Arrow, and afterwands thruft into the Head wirh a Lance, which ended the Life and Action of this Noble Commander. About 8 or 9 of his Men were flain, and about is of the Enemy, befides many woundcd; but Maztianes's Body could not be redecm at any rate. They chofe two others to fucceed him in his Charge, ziz-: Oloardo Burbola a Porrurucize, and fobames Serrano; who was tiortly after, with diversonhers, betrayed by the Interpreter.
A lime before the Admiral's Death, they had ridings of the Molucicst, the grear end of their Voyage: So that now leaving Martlan, they faild to the life (f) Boot; and here they barne the Conception, furnithing the other two Ships with the Men and Ammunition of it. Directing their courfe from hente to the South Weft, they came to
(o) Proit, the ifle (g) P.rizilo they came to clippit ( \(r\), which is a lange llland; it is about so Leagues from zubur, in 3 degrecs of North lat. and abour 170 degrecs of \(10 n\). from their firt Scagc. Ir abounds in Gold, Rice, Ginger, Goars, Hogs, Heas, Єre and the King of ir gave them a friendly reception. In token of Peace, he mark'd his Body, Face, and the tip of his Tongue, with Blood, which he drew out of his 1 eft Arm; and the Spaniards followed him in that bloody Cercmony. Pigafeetn was entertain'd by him and his two Wites, but they plyd him to hard with Brimmers, that he was forc'd to Excufe himfelf from Pledging them, and take his Leave.
Sailing from hence alrout 42 leagues, berween the Weft and South Weft, they came to Caglaian (s), a very great Illand, but not well inhabited. The People are Moors, Exiles from Borneo, rich in Gold, and for their principal Wcapons ule poyiond Arrows.
Another Courfe of about 25 Leagues, between the Weft and North Weft, brought them ro Puloan ( \(t\) ), 2 very fruifful Iland, lying in \(9 \frac{1}{3}\) degrees of NorthLat. and 179: degrees of 1 on. from their firft Stage. It yields much the fame Products as Cbippit, befides very large Figs, Battato's, Coco's, and Sugar Canes. The like Ceremonies alfo were here ufed in token of Friendmip, berween the King and the Spaniards, as were at Chippir The People go naked, ufe poyfond Arrows, and are fervent lovers of the Sport of Cock-fighting. They make a fort of Wine here of Rice, which is very intoricating, but otherwife lietrer than ghat of the Palm.

Sailing about to I ceagues from hence, roward the Sourh Weft, they had a light of the famous inc of Bornco (v); the beginning of which is full \(s\) leagucs diftant from the Port. Here they met with a Tcmpett as they were entring the Port, which went off when the fires of the ethree rich iliand: It lics in 54 degrees of North \(I\) at. and 976 ; degrees of Lon from theif firt departure ; the chict City conrain'd no lets than 25000 Houfcs. The King was a Aloor, a Prince of very great Power, and large Command, kepr a magnificent Court, and was always attended by a mighry Guard. He fent the Captains fereral Prefents, and ordcr'd a couple of Elephants, Trappid with Silk, ro be led forth, to bring the Spaniß Meffengers, and Prefents, to the Pajace. He has 10 Scribes, or Secretaries, that write his Affairs in Barks of Trees. His Houthold is govern'd all by Women, who are the Daughters of his chicf Courticrs- His Subjects pay him their Reverence by lifting up their Hands, clofed three times over their Heads: Then lifting up their Fect one affer the other ; and laftly, kiffing their Hands. They chew a great deal of the Betelc in this Country, and drink a Rice Wine call'd by them Aract. The Country affords Camphire, which is the Gum of the Trec C:apar; allo Cinnamon, Ginger, Mirabolans, Oranges, Limons, Sugar, Cucumbers, Melons, plenty of Fowl and Beafts; zmongt which are Elcphancs.
Fuly 29 . they were fer apon by 100 of the Indian gunest, of which they rook 4 ; and in one of them a conniderable Priloner, Son to the King of Lozon, and Gcneral of the King of Borneo's Forces, being then upon his return from the Sack of Lar, a grear City in the ille towards 于evin: bur the Pilor being Brib'd, let him make his cfape ; fo that they lot his Ranfome.
Leaving Bornco,thcy came to the Ille Cimbubon(w), which 40 Days caulking their Ships; and furnifing them with frefh Water and Eucl; they were forc'd to W'ork barefoot, their Shooes being quite worn out,' and fhere being none of the Gentle-Cratt in Cimbulbon-to lupply them with more. In the Woods of this IAe they found a Tree, the Leaves of which, as fonn as they fall on the ground, do \(A\) senfition move from place to place as it shey were alive. They refemble Mulberry-l caves, and on the fides of them there are certain Fibres produc'd; that feem like little Eggs. If they are cut, or broken, theres nothing like Blond comes forth; but if they are couch'd, they fuddenly fpring away. This pigatittrirricd, kecping one of thele leafAnimals in a Dith for 9 days. The lile affords Oftriches, wild Hogs, and Crocodiles. They took here a Finh head- an oulana ed like a Swine, with two Horns; its Body allone entire Bone, and forme thing like a Saddle on ics Back.

They failed from hence by she Welt, towards the Sourh Eaft Quarter, for the Moluccas, and in their way found the Sea full of Weeds and Herbs: This was near certain grear Mountains. This Courfe brought them to the Illes of Zoin and Taglizm ( \(x\) ), which afford very rare ( r ) Zob, acc Pcatl. From hence 'rwas that the King of Borneo got a Lerge Peatl. couple of Pearl as round, and very ncar as big as a Hen's Esg.
Sailing towards the North Eaft, they came to Mangardano, a grear City lying above the Jfles of Butbuan and Caleglan. Here they took a Canoe, with certain Indians, who gave them dircetions for the Moluctas; fo that they chang'd their North-Eatt for a South-Eaft Courfe, on to Cape of the Inc Butinutn. Here they beard of a ftrange wild Mer: fort of Savages colcr'd, with maggy hair like Bealts, Atrong and rail, having only weapons of Word; they reported of them, that they wou'd car the Hearts of their lain Encmics raw. with the Juice of Oranges and Limons or Sawce. Thefe Illands afford the Lett Cinnamon in the World; of which they had 27 pound in Exchange for two Knives Being in 6 degrees 9 minures North I.ar. they ftill kept their South-Eaft Courfe; which brought them upon the Incs Ciboco (y), Biramboia, Saran- jamds, gani, and Camdinghin.
October 24. they had a grear Srorm; and chey fay, that after their Prayers, the three Fortunate Lights appear'd as before; which once thewing themfelves, the noily Winds and Waves were commanded inro a profound filence. They came to Harbour in the Inc Saranganis, reported to yicld both Gold and Pearl; and here they prefs'd two Pilots for their Matucta Voyage. They parid the Illes ₹) Ceann, Canida, Cabiaso, Camuca, Cabalu, Cbiai, Li-(ぇ) Eighc pin and Niz \(i\) a, and came to 2 fair Inand calld Sangbir, o:beriondia in 3: degrees of North Lat. which Ine had 4 Kings. the Marimecie. Having palsd 5 other llands, they ar laft efpied a fmall Sumblir. Clufter of 4 Inands, which their Pilors faid were the Moficecas ( \(n\) ); this was the 6th of. Nevember, and the 27th (a) the Ma Month after their departure from Spain. They tried the \({ }^{\text {ticmest }}\) in depth of the Sica with their Plumbet all abour thefe Inands, and found it no lefs than 102 Yards; which Srorie of Thews thar the Prituquere defien'd none clic Thoid come the rerin thews that but themielves, when they told the World come gears. thither but themiclves, when they told the World, That thofe Seas were fo thallow, that there was no Sailing there, lefides the orher dangers of Rocks and Shelites, and continual Darknci.

Noz. 3. * before Sun-rifing, they enterd the Port of A AD. is=r. Tiridore ( \(b)_{r}\) which is one of the chicf of the Moluccas. The King was a 1 soor, lut notwithtanding the prejudices of his Religion, fo extremely find of the Speniards, and fo much devoted to the Service of their Matter, that he bid them come athore into their oven Country and Houfes, call'd them his Brethren and Children; nay, in Complement to them, changed the Name of hisKingdom from Tiridore into Caftite.
Thefe Moducens are five in numlier; Temete, Tizidore. Murir, Macclian and Brichian. Of all thefe, Termate is the chicf, and the King of it was once L.ord of all the reft. Murir and Meccivian were then Commonwealths, bur Bacelien a Monarchy. The Clove-Trees here are ve-clow ry zall, and as big alout as a Man; the Boughs large in the middle and flarpat top, the leaves like thofe of Bay-Trees, and the Bark of an Olivecolour. The Cloves grow in large Clufters at the tops of the Boughs; at fritt they are white, red when come to marurity, and grow black by after drying. The l.eaf; Bark and Wood, being green, is as trong as the Clove it felf. They gather them rwice a Year, in 3 ume and December; and if they don't take them in time they grow very hard. Every Man has his own pcculiar Trces, but they beftow but litule Husbandry upon them. They have alfo in this Ife a fort of a Tree, the Bark of which being feecpd in Wh. ter, may be deawn out in fmall Fibres, to the finenefs of Silk; and of this the Women make a fort of Aprons; which is all the Covering they make ufe of.

\section*{The famous Voydge of Sir Francis Drake, the first General that ever Saild round the robole Globe.}

A.D. 157:. \(]\)HE Fificenth of Noucmber, Sir Francis Drake, with a Flect of fire Ships and Barks, (in which were abour 164 Pcrfons) fet fiil from Plimouth, pretending a Voyage to Alkxendizia : But the Wind proving contrary, he was fored the next Morning to pur in at Falmouth) Haven, in Cornooll. Here a moft violent Tempeft had like to harc made an univerfal Wreck, which yer producia no worle cffects, (as Providence was pleas'd to order the materer) than the lofs of the Admiral's \(\mathrm{s}^{*}\) Maft, and the driving of the repgold athoar. which fomething bruizd her. For the repairing thefe Damages, they returnd back to Plimouth; where having pur all hings to rights, and again prepared themfelves for the Langers of the Sea; they fer Sail the fecond time, on the ri3th of December.
On the asth of the fame Month, they fell in with Cape Cautin, on che Conft of Barlary. And on the 27th came (a) Mgyator to Inc M.gid \(r(z)\), lying one Mile diftance from the on the count Main, berween which and the lle, they found a very fafe and convenient Harbour. Here the Admiral erected a Pinnace, having brought the Hulks of four ready fram'd from England.

While they were upon this Work, fome of the Inhabicants came to the Water-fide, flewing their Flags of Peace: Upon which the Admiral fent out his Boar, to know their Minds. One of his Men ftay'd as a Pledge amonget them, and two of their Company were brought a Shipboard: They rold him by Signs, That the next Day they wou'd furnim his Ships with good Provifions; which Civility the requited with fome Linen Cloth, Shoes, and a Javcline, things very acceptable to the Barbarians, and fo they departed.
Trechery of The next Day they came as they had promisd; and the Barbati- one of the Men leaping our of the Boat amongt them, thinking to have leap'd into the Arms of Friends, made himfelf the Prifoncr of thefe perfidious Wretches; who threatning to ftab him, if he made any refiftance, prefenty mounted him a Horfeback, and carried him up into the Country.

The:Pinnace being finifh'd, they fet fail December the 30th, and Coafting along the Shoar, thicy met fome Spanifb Fifhermen; which giving Chace to, they rook three of them : . And a little further they met with a Boory of three Carivels.
Cupe Alama.
Fanuery the \({ }^{1} 7\) th, they arrived at Cape Blanco; where they found a Ship at Anchor within the Cape, having only two Mariners in her: The Ship chey took, and carried her into the Harbour, where they ftary d foar Days; in which time the Admirat-mufter'd his: Men athoar, to prepare them for I and, as well as Sea-Service. Here they took of the Fither-men fuch Neceffaries as they wanted,
(b) They are and allio one of their Barks. (b) of about 40 Tun; learing calldcautrs behind them a lirtle Bark of their own.

They left this Harbour fanuary the 22d, carrying along with them one of che Poitugueze Carzvels, which was bound to the INes of Cape de Verd, forSalt ; of which good fiore is made in one of thofe Tllands. The Mafter of that Caravel offur'd the Admiral, That in one of the Cape doVerd IAlands, calld (c) Micyo; thar there was good ftore of dry'd Gitrit's' ( \(d\) ) which were every Year made ready for fuch Ships of the King's as call'd there. They came upon this place;"tanuary the 97 th ; but the Inhabitints would drire no Trade with them ; the King's Orders having pofrixely forbid ii. Yee the; nexs Day they went to take: a view of the Illand; the Adimiral fending our a Company of Men for that purpore. They march'd towards the chief place of the ine, and having travelld thrö' the Mountains for shice Days, they came thither before Daẏ-break. They found the Inhabitants all run away; bur they came not to fee them, but the Country : And this, by the Manuring, appear'd to be more fruicful than the other part. They reited themfelses here a while, Gropes ripe and banquetted upon the fweet and lovely Grapes which in wirter. were in rheir prime, even at that Seafon of the Year, which is the Depth of Winter with us in Emolen.I. This won't appear ftrange. if it be confiderd, that that Country lying in the Torrid Zone, fees the Sun twice a Year in irs Zenith, which riakes a double Summer, and fo enjoys a far greater thare of that I uminary's Influence and Prefence, than thofe places that lie withour the Boundaries of his Motion, and to which he is never Vertical: So that whereas in places feated in remorer Parallels, the mighrieft Influence and Action of the Sun, in its ncareft Approaches to them, is nor of force enough to keep Nature in a blooming ftate thro' the whole Revolution of the Year; nor can the weaker Rays of the Winter-Sun, fo far renew its Vigoar, or remove the deadly Chill which then oppreffes all things, as to bring any Plant or Fruit to its due maturity. On the ocher hand, thele Climates of the Middle Zone, are fo throughly heared by the twice culminaxing Sun, and alfo have him ftill, (by the Laws of his Motion) at fo little a diftance from them, that even in his farcheft Recefs, chere is, in many places, Warmth fufficient for the fpringing of Vegetables, and the ripening of Fruits.
This Country is ftor'd with Goars, wild Hens, and Salt, which Nature makes ready to the Inhabitants Hands. Ir is brought rogether in great Quanticies upon the Land, Sule made by the flowing of the Sea, and the Hear of the Sun kerns by Nature. ir; the People have no more to do, but to gather it into Heaps, and fell it to their Neighbours; which they do, making a good Trade of it. They found here alfo CocoTrees, the Fruit of which, feems to be in all points, the coon Trees: Irees, the Fruit of which, feems to be in all points, the fame with thofe before defcribed, which the Spaniards found in the Ille ztuluan. The Trees themfelves bear no Leaves nor Branches, bur at the top the Fruit grows in Clufters, and they are, each Coco, as big as a Man's Head. Having farisfied themfelves with thefe Fruits, they march'd farther inro the Illand, and faw grear fore of Cabrito's, but they could take none of them; tho' if they had pleas'd, they might have furnig'd themfelves with fome that were old, dead, and dricd, which the People had laid our on purpofe for them; bur not caring for that Refufe of the lland, they return'd to their Ships.

Fanuary the 21 it, they went from hence, and faild by the Ine St. Fago (e); in paffing by which, the People drif charged 3 Picces at them, but withour doing any mifchief. (o) St 7 g g . After this, the Englift going alhear to bיry their dead Man, the Spaniards put out a Flag of Truce; but they thinking their Fidelity tole no grearer than their Courage, did not care to truft them, and fo wenr-off thri. where being landed, they found a Spaminrd afleep upon the Shoar, with thirtech Bars or Silver lying by hin which came to about 4000 Span:7n-Duckets; they did not think fit to difturb the Speraiaid's Ricpofe, bit taking the Silver, they left him to take out his Nap. Not far from honce, going afhear for Wacer, they nee a spenierd ned an i:diar, driuing S Porutian Sheep (which are as bigas Anfes) laden with very fine Silver; every Shecp having two Lea-ther-bass, (containix. 50 \%. weight each 'on his Back They deliverd the poor Amimals from thofe irkhome Burthens, and lodged the Bags in their own Ships: After which,the firdial: and Spanierds were permitred to driveon.
From hence they came to a Putt called Tircopara (n:)
They fall'd herec ro arica (n), which is in 18 Desr. 30 Min. Scesth Lar. And in the Porr found threc fmall Barks, which being rifed, yiclded them 57 Wedges cf Silyer, cach weighing abour 20\%. They took no Pitio wess in the Barks, burthofe valuable ores before-mention'd For the Men that belong'd to them, fearing no Strangers coming there, were all gone ahoar to make nituch of themfelves. They did nor affault the Town, having nor Atrength cnough for ir : So that puterng off to Sca again, they met with another little Bark laden with Linen Cloth part of which the Admiral took, and fo 1et her go.
They came February the 13 th to Linic, which lies in 11 Degr. 50 Min. Scustl 1 ar. and being critred theHaven, found there twelve Sail of Ships, lying fate at Anchor, with all their Sails down, without Warch or Guard, their Secure Mafters being all a Drinking and Carouzing a hoar Examining the Conrents of thefe Ships; they found a Chert full of Rials of Plare, good ftore of Silks and Linen; all which Plare they carricd to their own Ships, and good part of the Silks and Lincn.
The Admiral here bad Notice of ancther rery rich Ship named the Cacefuego, which was gone towards Paita which they purfuing thither, found her before their Arrival, gene for Pam.ans:- Rut however, tho' they mifs'd their intended Prize, another (which they took in the purGuit of her to Panamis) paid them the Charge of their Voyage: For befides the Ropes and Tackling for Ships whicin chey found in her, he vielded them \(80 /\). weight of Gold, toscther with a fine Grucifix of the fame Matal richly adorn'd with Emcraulds; all which, with. fome of the Cordage, they feiz d. Bur refolving ftill ro procced in the purfuit of the ciacifuere, the Admiral, to encourage his Company, promis'd, That whocier brtt faw her, ibou'd have his Golden Chain for a Reward: Which fell to the Tharc of Mr: Folm Drake, who firft defcricd her abour three a Clock. Abour fix a Clock they came up wish her gav her three Shors, ftruck down her Mizen, and boarded her.

They found her as rich and weighty as fhe was repotted to be , having aboard her thirecen Chefts full of \(R\) ials of Phate, 80 h. weight of Gold, 2 good quantity of: Jowels, and 26 Tun of Silver. The place where this Prize was taken, was calld Cape San francifo, about 150 leagues from Panama, and in i Degr. of North Lat. Amongttorher rich picces of Plate which they found in this Ship, they mer with a couple of very large Silver Bowls. gile, which belonsd to the Pifor of her: The Admiral fecing thefe, rold him, Thar he had two finc Bowls, but he muft needs have one of fltem, which the Pilot yielded to, not knowing how to help himfelf: And further, to make ir look lets like compulfion, he prefented the other of them to the Admiral's Steward. This Pilot's Boy (when they went away) told the Admimal, That his Ship, and not theirs, hou'd now be calld the Canaficto, fince it had gotten all the rich Lading of the Cacafucgo in it: Which Jeft of the Boys made the Company very merry:
After this, having circircly ranfack'd the Cacafuere, they caft her off; and cont:nuing their Courfe to the Wext, they tier with a Ship laden with Linen Cloth, Chima-difhes, and Silks of the fame Country, The Owner of chine Silkp, it was a Spaniard there prefent; from whom the Autmiral fean. took a Faulcon wrought in Maffy Gold, with a great Emcrauld fet in the Breaft of it. Beffides this, chuling whas he lik'd of the Wares aboard this Vefel, and feizing the Pilor for his own Service, he turn'd the Ship going. This Pilor brought them to the Haven of (o) Guatuico, the Town adjacent, which had but (as he faid) feventecn Soniands (a) Gumar in it. Having therefore pur to Shoar, they marched directly into the Town, and fo up to the Publick Hall of Juftice; where they found the Court fisting, and a Judge ceady to pals Sentence upon a parcel of poor Negroes, that were accusd of a Plor to fire the Town. But the Admiral's coming chang'd the Scene of Affairs at the Ccurt; for he being Judge himelf, pafid Senterice upon them all, both Judgcs and Criminals, to become his PriConers; which Sentence was proculiy cercuted, and the all carried away to the Ships. Here he made the chicf Judge write to the Townfinen, to kecp at a diftance, and not pretend to make any manner of refiftance; fo the Town being clear'd, they ranfack'd it all over, finding no more valuable Plunder than abouta Buncl of Rialso Piate ; only one of their Company took a rich Spaniard flying ont of the Town, who paid him for his rrouble in puifuing him, wish a Gold Chain, and fome Jowels. Here the Admiral frring alloar fome Spaniff Prifoners, and his old Port:gu ze Pilor, which he nook ar the Inands of Canc de Verd, departed hence for the Ifland d• Camme (p). While they lay here, a cortain spenifh Ship, hound for the Pti- \(-(p)\) thend liptine llands, came in their way; which they only lightned of a part of the Burthen of her Merchandize, and fo difcharged her.
And now the Adniral thinking he had in pretty good meafure, reveng'd berh ihe Publick Injuries of his Country, as well as his own Private Wrongs upon the Spaniards, began to deliberare upen his recurn bome. Bur which Way he fhculd take, was the Grand Quction to be refolved: To revurn by the Srecighis of the Soutb Sea, (teffdes the Dangers of thar Paffage which he had already expericnc'd) he thonght, would bc , to throw himfelf into the Hands of the Spaniards; who would probably there wait for him, with a fargreater Strength than he cou'd now cope with : For he had at this time but one Ship left, tho \({ }^{\circ}\) ir was a rery rich one. All-hings therefore confider'd, he refolved to go on to the Molucca's, and fo follow the Courfe of the Portugueze, to get home by the Cape of Good Fiope. But being becalmid, he found is neceflary to fail Northes\(y\), to ger a good Wind; upon which defign they faild at leäft 600 Leagues, which was all the way they made, from April the \(1 \in\) th, to the third of furc.
Func the 5 th, being got into 43 Degr. of Norsh Lac they found the Air creefively cold, and the further they went the ceverity of the Cold wasmore intolerable. Tpon which fcore hey made towards the I and till they came within 39 Degr. N.Lac.under which heighr of the Pole they found a very good A Buy Bay, and had a faroumble Wind to enter the rame. Anchoring here, they had fome Correfrondence with the People of the Country, whofe Houfes lay all along upon the Water-fide. They fent the Admiral a Prefent of Fea hers, and Cawls of Net-work; who entertain'd them with fo much Kindnefs and Liberality, that the poor Wretches thought a Company of kind Angels were come from the other World to carelsthem.

Tho' the Country be cold and in the framing of their Houfcs, as to live our of danger of \(\mathrm{m}_{\text {By }}^{2 b 0}\) farving: For they furround them with a deep Trench, upon the ourmoft Edge of which they raife up grear pieces of Timber, which clofe altogether ar the rop, like the Spire of a Steeple. Their Bed, is the bare Ground ftrew'd with Ruthes;-and their Fire-place in the middle, about which hey all lie.
The Men go naked; the Women wear a loofe Garment of Bulrumes, drefs'd after the mannce of Hemp, which faftned about their Middles, hangs down to their Hips and upon their Shoulders they have a Decr-skin. But their rery good Qualities make amends for cheir ordinary Drefs and Figure; they being extreain'y duciful and fericeable to their Husbands.
The Admiral had quickly after another Precent from hem ; which was Fcathers, and Eags of Tobacco ; a confiderable Body of them waiting upon him ar the fame cinie: They were all gather'd together upon the top. of \(\dot{2}\) Hili, from whence their Speaker harangu'd the Admiral, who lay below in his Tent, pirch'd at the botrom of the Hill. When this was ended, they left theirWeapons andeame down offering their own Prefents, and at the fame time civilly rexurming thofe which the Admiral had madethem:

All the while the Women who remain'd above pof fifs'd with a madFiny, tore their Hair, and made dreadful Howlings; which is the common Mulick at their Sacrifices; crifices, fomething of which Nature was then folcmnizing. But whilft thefe above were ferving the Devil, the Men below were better employ'd, attending very diligendy to Divine Service, then performed in the Admisal's Tent.

The News of the Engl:/h being there, fpreading abour in the Councry, there came two Ambaffadors to the Admiral, to tell him, That the King was coming to wair upon him, and defired a token of Peace to affure his fafe

Train began to march towards them, and that in very rood and graceful order.

In the Front came a comely Perfon bearing the Scepter before the King, upon which hanged two Crowns, and threc Chains of a very great lengeth: The Crowns wers made of Net-work, and arrificially wroughr with Fcathers of many colours; and the Chains were made of Boncs. N'exit to the Scepter-bearer came the King himfelf, a very comely proper Perfon, thowing 2 good Air of Majefty in his gate and deporment; he was furrounded with a Guard of tall Martial-look'd Men, who were all chad in Skins. Next to thofe came the common Pcople, having (to make the finer Show) painted their Faces, fome white, fome black, and fome other colours, and all with their Arms full of Prefents, even the yery Children themfelves nor excepted. The Admiral drew up all his Men into order of Battel, and ftood ready to receive them within his Fortifications. At fome diftance from him, the whole Train made a Halo, and kepr a profound \(\mathrm{Si}-\) lence ; at which tione, the Scepter-bearer made a Spicech of half an hour long. This being ended, che fameOfficer, of a Specch-Maker, became a Dancing-Mafter, and at the fame time ftruck up a Song; in both which he was followed by King Lords, and Common People, who came Singing and Dancing up to the Admiral's Fences. Being all fer down, there (after fome proliminary Complemenss) the King made a Solcmn Officr of his whole Kingdom, and iss Dependencies, to the Admira!, defiring him to cake the Sovereignty upon him, and profoffing that he himele would be his very Loyal Subject. He advifed the Admiral, by no means, to profecute his Vojage to Tiridore, but to fail directly for Tarnate, be- xanaderma, caufe his Mafter was a very grear Encmy to the Porthgucis, and wou'd have nothing to do with them, if they were at all concern'd with Tiridorc, or that Nation who were ferted there. The Admiral, upen this, refolved for Ternare, and carly the next Morning came to an Anchor before the Town. He fenta Mexenger to the King with a Velver Clonk, for a Prefent, and to affure him, That he camethither upon no Delign, but purcly that of Trading in his Councry. The Viceroy allo, by this rime, had been with the King, and difpos'd him to entertaina very favourable Opinion of the Englijb; which wrought fo far, that the King return'd a very civil and obliging Anfwer to the Admital's Meffage, affuring him, That a King \(T_{\text {emat }}\) friendly Correfpondence with the Englifh Narion was offers his highly pleafing to him; That his whole Country thould lie Recgiom to open to chem, and whatcyer it yielded Mould be at their command Scrvice. on the Sea-Coafts, living ar a barbaroussate upon Leaves and Roots, and Sea-herbs, or what Animala, they could as any time happily light on. They decrmip'a ro march on to the-River of Plate, and were in their milerable. Progrefs mer by the Englifh, as was before oblerved. The Admital nam'd this place (for the fearcity of all NecefiaThe rath they left this place, and ran five I Lagues The 14th they left this place, and ran five Leagues i) Cape frowara. par (i) Froward, which Cape is the Southermoft part of che Streights, and lics in the Lat. of 54 Degr. From this Cape failing W. by N. five Leagues more, they put into a Bay which they call'd Mufcle-murte-core Core, from the fore of Murcles found there.

The 2 ift they left that place, and, fail'd N. W. and by W. ten Leagues, to a fair fandy Bay, which the Admiral

The 22d they departed from Elizabeti, Bay, and about swo leagues off found a good River, in which the Admiral rowed in the Boat for the fpace of threc Miles. There was a picafant Champaign Country char lay a bour the River; all elfe bur this, near the Streighrs, be ing craggy and mountainous. Bur a very brucim fort of Crucl|arzgrs Savages inhabited thereabouts, which had cat up many a Spaniard, and would fain have made a Meal upon Englijh Fleft too, but thar they faild of bringing them into their Trap. The Admiral finding the Plor they had laid ropetray him, made his Mcn pelt them with their Harquebuffes, which did Execucion upon feveral of them: So
(l) Sc 7e- leaying thar River, they fail'd to Sc. Ferome's (l) Channel, mrichimnel which was two Leagues off.

From this Channel they faild Weftward, abour three or four Leagues, to a Cape which lies on the North-fide of is; from which Cape to the Mouth of the Sureights, the Courfe rans N. W. and N. W. by W. and the diftanoc from thence to the entrance into the Soutb Sea, is abour thity four Leagues; fo that the Length of the whole Sircighos is nincty leagues.

Tis farther obreryable, that the Entrance of the Streighis into the Soutb Sea, is in near the fame Latitude with the Paffage out of the North Sea into the Streighrs, which is 52. "Degr, South' Lat. And here between the fore-mentioned Cape, and the Mouth of the Streighrs were they forced to lie in Harbour, till Esbruary the 23 d : The Reafon of which Imprifonment, was the ftormy Winds, and exceffiye Rains, that poured down with fuch fary from the Mouncains, that they were brought into extream danger thereby, being no le's diftrefs'd for want of Food too; the badneds of the Weather hardly permitcing them to land and range the Country for a Supply As they lay here in the Sereighrs, they oblerycd (which had alfo been difcover'd by the Speriards before) that there were Harbours on both fides the Shoar, at cyery Mile, or rwo Miles end.

February the 24th, they entred the South Sea, obler ving on the South;-fide of the Encrance, 2 very high Cape, with a low Point adjoining to it; and on the North fout or five Inands ( \(m\) ), lying. fix Leagues of the Main, with mach broken and funk Ground abour them.

Marcf the xtt, rhey had a great Storm as Nighs, in which they loft the Company of the Hugh Gallaurs, being then in 49 Degr. South Lat. and 45 Leagues from the Land. The Srom continued three or four Days, and the Hugh Gallant having fprung a Leak, and beaten by the Srorm away from all help, was ready every mement to plunge to the boutom: However, he made a hift to hold up hat bead (by the great Labour and Pains of her Mcn) : And on the 15 th in the Morning, the came in bec tween the life Sr. Mary, and the Main, where gemet the Admiral; and the Content; which two Sthips had, during the Srorm, fecurd themfelies two Dajs at the IOe fa Mokn \((\pi)\), which lics in 38 Degr. As uhis plafe fome of the Company wear alhoar, where the Indians mer them, and gave them a warm Reception with their Bows and Arrows, being yer ar the fape rime very cautious of nheir Guns.
Thefe Indian's were of the Country of Aranco (o), \({ }_{\text {Iich in }}\) Gold, which being a Golden Region, and confequently very \({ }_{z o d}\) notcon, tempring to the avaricious Spaniirds, had been divers times quer'd by the invaded by them, but to no purpole; the Inhabitants having always fo briskly defended rhemfelves, that their Enemies (tho better provided than they) could never boaft of being their Conquerours:- And thefe Defperadoes iniftaking the Englif for Spaniards; gave them thar Enfertainment which they alway's ufed to give the other. After this Skirminh they weigh'd Anchor, and ran under the Weit-fide of St. Mary Inand ( \(p\) ), wherethey had good riding in fix Fathom Warer. The Igand it felf lies in \(37^{\circ}\) Degr. Sonth Lat, and abounds in Hogs, Hens, and divers forts of Fruits. The Indians thar live here, are in fuchabrolute Slavery to ithe Spaniards, that they dare nof fo much as kill a Fowl, or a Swine for themfelyes. And tho the Spaniards bave made tbem: Difciples, yer they ufe hem more like Dogs chan Men, or Chriftians.
The 16th the Admiral wens anhoar with go or \(80 . \mathrm{Mcn}_{3}\) well arm'd : Thes were mer and welcomid by two Indiants of Quality, who conducted them to a place where was a Chapel built by the Sprniards, round abour which were feveral Storc-houfes, furninh'd with good Wheat and Barlcy, as clcañ and fair as any Enghind it felf can produce. They provided themfelies out of thefe Stores, with fufficionr Quantitics of Corn ; and laid in befidss, good ftore of Hogs, Hens, Poratocs, dry'd Dog-fih, and Maiz which is a Whenar of Guincy. The Admiral invited the two principal Ifdiants aboard to a Treat; and the Wine having opened thicir Fiecs, to fee clearly, that the Admiral and his Mcn were no Spaniards, (as they hitherto fupposid them to be' they began to be very free with them, and to talk largely of the Gold Mines; selling them, That if they wou'd go crois the Country to lirance, they, fhou'd ger as much Gold as they car'd for. But the Admiral nor perfectly underfianding the Information, is being given partly by Signs which were obfcure, profecuted not that Adventure, but went on with his Voyage:
The 18th in the Morning they left this place; andorail'd all thar Day N. N. E. abour 10 Lcagucs.

The rgith they run in with the Land as E. N. E. and anchor'd under in Inand call'd the Conceptinn (q):
The 30 oh they came into the Bay of Quincero \((r)\), in \((r)\) (etion. 2 nime 33 Degr. so Min. South I at. And che laft Day, a Company of 500 or 60 Mcn, well furnifh'd, maxch'd up into thes the Country feven or cight Miles. In their March they aftoar. faw vant Herds of wild Catrel, wild Hories, Dogs, Hares, and Concys, Parcridge, and cther Fowl; many finc Rivers, well fock'd with all forts of Wild-Fowl. Bur having travell'd as far as they cou'd for the Mounmains, and that withour any Adventure, afterrefrefhing themfelves a whilc upon the Banks of a pleafant River, they rerurn'd in pood order to their Ships that Night. Yet was there a Party of 200 Horfe abroad thac Day to have raken them, and that upon the Information of the Spaniards thar had efcaped from them the Day before: But thefe valians Soldiers, tho', they faw them, durft nor make 2ay Artack but kept at a diftance, and to let them go off without any difturbance.
Butche next Day, April the firft, they were alittle bol der : For fome of the Emglifh being alhoar, and yery hard at Work, filling of Water, the Spaniards who had watch'd the opportunity, and were then very eager to fight, when hey law their Enemies were bufie) poured down 200 Horfe from the Hills upon them, making a shift ra kill lome fow of them, and rake a fnall number of Prifoners. Bur the glorious Victory of the Spaniards had a fudden Period fer to it, by the coming of 15 . Englifh more who 24 Spaniars Poon changed the Fortunc of the Day, not only cof wing heir own Company, but killing 24 of the Spanitrods upon the foos, and driting the reft up the Mountains again After this they rid in the Road, and water'd there in fpite of the Spenintds, till the fifh Initant, when they left this Bay of Quinicra: Putting in ar 2 fmall LIand, about a Eeague from the Bay, which is full of Penguins, and \(a\) tere Fowl, they provided themfelves with what ftore they wanred, and fo daild away N. & N. by W.
The sth chey came to Moro Murcmo ( \(s\) ), which lies in ( \(t\) ) Mori 23 . Degr. South Lar. under the Trapick of Capricom (s) Mar: and has an excellene.Harbour; and is made fo by: a cerrain Illand, which gives a Ship. entrance ar either end of in. Here the Admiral went afhoar with 30 Men , and was met by the Indicns, who broughr freft Watcr and. Weod on their Backs. They are a fimple fort of Peopie, and live after a wild and lavage manner, and in very grear awe and dread of the Spaniards. They broughethe Admish, and his Company, to their Houres, which lay about of a few Rafters Harboar: They were compos'd only Forks ftuck into the G-crofs, Cupporrod by two orithree Forks ftuck into the Ground. with Boughs fpread over them. Their Beds were the Skins of wild Beafts laid upon Fih.

When any of them die, they bury them with all the tackling that belongs to them, 25 Bows and Arrows, and their very Canoes. Thefe Canoes of theirs are very ar-siange \(C_{2}\) aficially made ; being:form \({ }^{2}\) d of two Skins like Bladders; rios. which are blown:full at one end with Quills. A couple of thefe being made. faft together, with the Sinews of ome wild Beaft; and then pur into the Water, do fwell and puff up at that rate that tey are as fim and ine can be: They make nothing of venturing to Sea in theft boacs, and lading them with grear Quanticies of Rifl ; Tribure pad part of which goes for Tribure to the Sponideds, aind part in Fima

May the third, they came into a Bay, where are three they made havock of their Fields and Orchards, and buent rijea Bry. lintle Towns, Peraccia, Clinclia, and Pijca; which latter place lics in 3 : Degr. Soush Lat. They landed here, and rook Come Provifions of Winc and Bread, Hens and Figs, ous of forme of the Houfes; but they could noe ger afhoar at the bett of the Towns. the Sca run fo cxrreamly high.

The \(\bar{y}\) made themfelves Mafters of two rich Ships by frizso taken this time, laden with Sugar, Moloffes, Maiz, Cordovan Skins, Montcge de Porce, Xacks of Pintadocs, Indian Coats, Marmalade, Hens, Eis. One of them, which had the teft Lading, wou'd have yielded 200001 , had there been opportunicy to have made a Sale: And of all this they took as much as they cou'd conveniently beftow in their Ships, burning the reft with the Veffels, and ferting all the People in chem afmoar.
Paitata- The 26th they came into the Road of Paita (w), which kn isburne lies in 5 Degr. 4 Min. South Lat. The Town is folf is well buils, very neas and clean in all parss of it, and conrains abour 200 Houfes. The Admiral landing here with 6o or 70 Mcn , had a Skirminh with the Inhabitants; the Ufic of which was, thar the Engli/b beat them quite out of the Toum, and forcd them up the Hills, from whence they playd with their Small-fhot upon them, but wou'd not vcnrure a fair Battel our of thofe Mountainous Refuges. Whicn the Englifh had poffers'd themfelves of the Town, they march'd afrer the Enemy up the Hills; and afrer fome Difpure obliging them to retire ftill further, till it camc to a thorough and complear Rour; they feiz'd all their Baggage which they had brought with them our of the Town, and lodged there for Security, up and down in the Mountains. Herc was plenry of all lorts of Houle-hold-Atuff: Srorc-houfes full of all forts of Wares, and (to pay them for the trouble of their March up the Hills) 25 l Weight of Silver, in Pieces of Eighr. Thry fer the Town a-fire, and burne it to the Ground, and allo to the value of 5 or 6000 I. in Goods, together with a Bark lying in the Road: And fo leaving the Spaniards the Blaze of their fiaming Houfes and Goods, to light them down from the Mountains as Nighr, they wens hence, directing their Courfe to Puma,
(m) Rnna May the 25th, they arrived ar the INe Punt (D), which lies in & Degr. South Lat. in the Harbour whercof the found a large Ship of \(25 \cdot\) Tun, riding at Anchor, with all hicr Furniture, which they funk withour any more adoe, and fo went alhoar. The Lord of this IMand is called the Cacique of Prma: He was an Indion born; bur having married a Spanifh. Woman, and being refolv'd to be of his Wife's Religion, (that:happening to be the Chriftian) he embrac'd it too, making fis Subjects follow his Example He had a fumpruous and well-contrived-Palace near the Sca-fide, with curious Gardens adjoyning to is, and fair Proficeds our of in, both to the Water, and up into the Councry.
He keeps all the Indians of the Ifland in continual Drudgery, their Work being to make Cables; fuch plenry of which is made by there labouring Indians, that the South Sea is moftly funifi'd from hence.
The Inland is near as big as the Inc of Wigbe, and has a good thare of the Bleflings of Nature: For tho it does nor yield Mines of Gold and Silver, yer it affords thofe things that are far more necefliary for Human Life; there's excellent Pafture-land here, and variery of ufeful Animals to be maintain'd by it, as Horfes, Oxen, Shecp, fat and fair, Goars that are very tame, and yield abundance of Milk; befides very good Fowl, Pigeons; Turkeys, and Duks of a large fize: The Cacique has Orchards that yield moft forts of ufeful Fraits, as Oranges, Limons, Figs, Pomegranates, Pompions, Melons, Cucumbers, Radifies, Ejc. with divers forts of odoriferous Plants, as Rofemary, Thime, \(\mathcal{E c}\). One of them is befet round with the Trees that CotronTrees bear the Bombafin Cotron; the tops of which grow full of Pods, our of which the Corton ir felf rifes. In the.Cot ton lies a Sced of the bignefs of a Pea, and in every Pod there areleven or eighr of chefe Seeds, which (if the Corron be not gather d when tis ripe) do drop of their own accord, and make a new Spring of the Planr.
Moy the 2gth, the:Admiral wentro a litele Illand clofe by Puna, into which che Cacique had convey'd all the valuable Furniture of his Palace, and other Morables, neceffary both for Houfe and Ship: Thefe Srores being all difcover d, they took what Plunder they thought ifi out of them, and convey'dit into their :Ships. They burn the Church alfo which.ftood hard by the Cacique's Palace, and brought away the five Bells thatiwere:in it:
Funce the 2d, 100 Spaniards affaulred them, killing and Two Skir- taking Prioners tweelve of the Englifh, and lofing Forty mithen with fix of their own Mer in that Encouncer. : The fame Day thespaniards going athoar again with 70 Men, they met with a Party of four grear Ships (thar were buiflding) upon the Stocks, as The Tow allo the Grear. Town it Kelf, which they left a meer burnc. heap of Rubbifi. This Town' had no lefs than 300 Houfes in ir ; befides which, there were two or Ehree in Puna, that contain'd 200 Houres cach.

Fine the sch, they went out of the Road of Puna, and fail'd to Rio Dolse, where they water'd. And the 12 th Rio Dotre pals'd the Equinoctial, concinuing a Northerly Courfe all the reft of that Month.
Fuly the ift, they had fighe of Niucua Efpanna (m); being (m) Nisiva four Leagues diftane from the Land, and in to Degre Efpanna. Norts Lat.
The gth Inftant they sook a new Ship of 120 Tun, in which was one Michael Sancius, a very skilful Coalter in the South Scas, whom the Admiral took for his Dilor; and he gave them the firt hine of the grear Ship Anna Maria, which they took afterwards coming from the Pbilippine LAands. They rook all the Mcn, the Sails, the Ropes, Eés. our of this Ship of Sancius's, and then fer her a-fire.
The roth they took a Bark thar was going to give the A Bark of Alarmall along the Coafts, of the arrival of the Englifh; Advics teken bur all the Men were got out of her.
The 26th they came ro an Anchor in the River of Copalira \((x)\); and the fame Night, with 30 Men in the Pin- \((x)\) The Riva nace, rowed to ifgrulco ( \(y\) ), two Leagucs from thar Ri-of copative, ver, and in is Degr. 40 Min. North Lat. they made 2 ( \((\mathrm{M}\) - 1 stm . Defcent upon them, and burnt both the Town and. Cu-fom-Houfe, which was a large and fair Building. Here were laid up fix hundred Bags of Anile (for the Dying of Cacaos pafs Clorh) and four hundred of Cacaos, cyery. Bag. of rhe for Moncy former being worth forty, and of the latter ten Crowns. in Nuw Thefe Cacaos ferve amongit them, both for Meat and Money : They are like Almónds, tho nor alrogether fo pleafant; they afford borh folid Food and Drink roo, and pals in 7 rade, inftead of ready Money, iso of them ocing as good as a Rial of Pharcse
The 28th they fer failkfrom Cepalita (becaufe the Sca was fo great there, thar they could nor fill Water) and reach'd agatulto the fame Night.
The next Day the Admiral went aftioar" with thinty Men, marching two Miles into the Woods, wiere they took a Meftizo*, belonging to the Cuftom of thar Town and a confiderable parcel of Stuffs with him, and carried are the san bort the Mafter and the Goods aw'y to theirShips.

The Emititity
All this Councry of Chiti, from Sr: Fago no Baldivia; is one of the:moft fertile and delightuil Spotsin the World There are all forss of Cattel and Friuts, Gold Mines in abundance, an Air fweer: and wholeforne to that degree that it is it Self Life and Medicine, and excludes the ufe of all other Phyfick.

Ahrile they entred the Bay La Guifot, and left it the up to Sc. Francis's Hill, is yery much fubject to South Winds, tho in the adjoyning Sea they are very variable and uncertain. The 2oth, the Air was all darkend with an Arenal, which cis Cloud of Duft rais'd ro thick, that 2. Man can'r fee a Stones Calt from him ; they are brought off fromi the adjacent Shores, and are very ufua in thofe Parts. The 25th, they were within yicw of the famous Ciry of Lima ; and now they came to underfand the vaftners of the Treafure which the malice of the Spaniards had Robb'd them off, and which ortherwife they had found in thofe Ships they took ar Sr. ffago. For by the Pilot's Confelion, there were no lefs than 52 Chefts Gold thrown over-board, each: Chent containing 4 Arobes and 500 Rots; and cach Por 10 or 12 Pound wcight in Gold. And nor only this publick, but every particumar Man's priyate Treafure, was as prodigally sold from lung away, they not caring which way it went, whecher rand. a the bortom of the Sca, or the bellics of the Finhes, 50 the Dutcf might be never the better for in. This Gold came from \(S t\). Marís IIland, where 3 or 4 Rich Speniards engros'd all to themfelves, kecping 2000 poor Indians contimually Raving in the Mines. The 2gth they fied wo Sail, and chafed them, but to no purpofe, the Ships built for that Sea (where they fail moftly againft the Wind from Panama to Lima) being too fwift-for the Follanders. They intended now to haye gain'd the Inand Coquos in 5 degrees North I.ar. bur being fruftrated in thar amtempr, he better to avoid the danger of the \(S p a t i f /\) Men of War, they directed their Courfe, May 2c. for the Iland Ladrones, and fo to the Pbilippincs.

Scpt: \(155^{\text {a }}\) they had fight of the Ladirncs, and the 16 th came to Guane (q), which is one of them, an Iland 20 Miles in extcne, and yiciding Finh, Coco's, Bonanos, one of the ugar-Cancs, which the fidians broughr in a grearnum-Ladrenca ber of Canoes up to their Ships. By this Accounr they doubted nor, bat this Ship was morethere Verlagern's Admiral; to difiniffing the Faponefe Veffel they went on, and pafs'd the Line a chird cimes failing in no limere fear nor danger, for want of a Pilor; and good Charts.
The i6th they took a Junk of For, and in her a skilfus Pilor, who came in good rime to fave them from Ship wreck, which otherwife, in all likelihoed, had been their Fare in thofe Seas: For now they had but one Anchor left, and the Cable of that almoft worn out; and be rides, had fo many Shoals and 10 ands about them on every fide, that 'twas a very cafie matter for a Ship, a Stranger there, to have mifcarrice. Some of thele Illands Binta. were Binta, and Crincata, which yicld Diamonds that Dimanaons: are fold ar Malacca.
The 28th they came to fortan, upon the Ine of froa, where they had News of Dutch Ships at Bantam: The City congifts of about a Thoufand Timber-Houles; the Fortan; King commands a confiderable part of that end of the lland, and had larely conquer'd Balambuan, a litrle 10and that lies juft by to the South Eaft of Fortan. They are tiid to be Mabometans, all the Country hereabouts, thio the Pagods in ufe fill, fecm to argue fome kind of mixture of the old Indizn Supertition with thar of Mabomet, or ar leaft a Toleration of it in the whole, amongit the common People. Their chief Prieft is an Old Man of i2", who has a good round Family of Wives; and whether it be upon a Religious, or any other Confideration, (if thic World does nor bely him) the mortifed Old Man lies on nothing but the Milk which he fucks from his Wives Breafts: From whence ris plain, thar fome Care is taken by there pious Women, to keep a Supply of Milk in their Breafts; and fince there are fo many of them, and the Circumftances of the Old Prieft's Age are fuch as they are, 'ris probable fome of his devout Brethren, and his Wives, do joyn together, to kecp him from tarving.
Sailing hence, they faw 2 grear Portugueze Ship of 600 Tun, fer faft in thesthoals; the was going to Amboina upon 2 defign of engroffing all that Trade to herfelf, and o was very juftly ftopp"d by the way.

February the sth, they pals'd the Screighr berween Bat lambia, and Baly, and leaving Fayd North Eaft from and Bat them, on the inth they found themselves in 13 Degr. Streight. Sourh Lat. and then directed theircourfe to the Cape of Good Hope:
On the 18 sfe, they had the Sun Verrical at Noon, being then in 11 Degr. 20 Min and here 2 Calm began, that larted \(x\) Days.

Crovexilics.
The 20th they came to the linand Grimdes (i), where they anchor'd, and went afhoar; taking belides good toore of Fin, fome young Crocodiles, of the bignefs of a Man.
The 30 oh, (being dtill at the Ine firandes, for the eafe of their fick Company) they heard the Rianfiman (one of dheir Ships) let off feveral Guns; enquiring into the ocantion of which, they found her engaged in a warm. Difpute with tive Barks of Porruructec and Indians, whom they affaulted roo; bur the Eniemy boing relievid by a freha Supply that came in, they were obliged to give \({ }^{0} \mathrm{or}\).
A. D. 1014 Perfomox the tit, a Confiracy of certain dikcontenred crous was found our; two of the chief of which the Admiral prefented with Ropes for Nicw-Xcar's-Gifis, and laid the reft fo fafe in Irons, and fo far afunder, as to prevent their Ploting for the furure.
Before they went from hence, they made a general Agreement amongtt them, That if any Ship loft his Companis they thoud fet up an Infeription in fome common Landing-place, to tell how lons they thou'd fay for cach other, and after make to: L.a Aocka, which thould be the place of their general Rendezvous.
From the Iland Grandes they fail'd noSc. Vincent Inc (b), (b)S.Vacer where they had fome Experience of the Porruguce Subtlecy andill Intentions rowards them.
- The 26th they took a Bark, and in it eighteen Portsucre'sunhom they refus'd to exchange for a lefs number of Dutch, thro feveral valuable Things taken in the Prize, were offer'd in towhe bargain. The Bark it felf they burnt, as alfo feverathuildings belonging to the Portugucze; and having frecly ardarg'd fous of their Porthweice Pri Koners, they proccededin their. Voyage from Inc St. Vincent, in the beginning of Fibiuary.

Marcl the 7 th, a terrible Storm vife upon them in's 2 Degr. South Lat. 6 Min . And the 2 if ; the more difmal Storm of Mritiny and Rebellion, broke our in the Ships; bur all was calm and quier again, when fome of the faCtious Muriniers were laid a loaking in the Sair Warer.: The 28th they entred the Sereights ( \(\%\), bur were forc'd our again by Wind and Tide.

April the 2d, they re-entred, and came to an Anchor, becaufe of the Shoals; one of which they founded, and found but five Culites Water: Here they Law a Giant climbine the Hills, to have a full view of them, he be ing a Native of the Illand clel Furar.
The 7 th they went athoar, wherc they found no Men, nor any other Animals hardly, but two Oftriches; only there was a good freth River, and a for of picafant Blackberries to encertain them. On the South-fide they found pleafant Woods, full of Parrots; but the high.Mountains cover'd with Snow ; and this was in 54 Degr. South Lat. . One place here they calld Pciper-Hewen. the Bark of a fort of Trees shat grew thercaloouts, refembling Pepper , incrinte.

The 16th thes.traffick d with the Savages, giving them Sack and Knives for a lort of. Pearl they had ; but it feems, the Saviges'did nor like either them or their way fof dealing, for they quick!y afucr furpriz'd a Company of : chemianoar; of which they kitlld two.

The 6th they palsd into the South Sea; not withour come terrible Apprehenfions, on the account both of the dangerous Shoals and Inands, and the valt dcpth all therethours, that made Anchoring impofible. A fierce Storm cha; which Illand is low and broad to the North, and ther: fore fo very Rocky at the Southem parts.

The 2itt of Muy they had fighr of chi\%, and La Mcs Sortime \(x\)

The 26rh they beganaTrade with the Pcople, whofeem'd vary glad both to find them Enemics to the Spanialds, and fo well provided wuth Warlike Stores to maintain a Quarrel againft them. They gave them Sheep for Coral, Harchess, and fuch like things, and brought every thing up to their Boats, not fuffering them to come to their Hourcs, our of a jealons fear of their Wires. The exchange was 2 Sheep for a Hatchet; and thefe Creatures were very large, with long Legs and Necks, hair-mouth'd, bunch-back'd, and fo ftout as to ferve for carrying Burthens: They had tore of Hens here too, and other forts of Fowl.

The 27th they fer Sail, and the nexrDay came near the Shoar, hard by the Ille St. Maiy, where they harbour'd the 29th. A Spaniard here that came aboard them,invited Spenith them to take a Dinner ithoar; but as they were upon Treachery. the way thither, they chanc'd to fpy a Party of Soldicers making that way, which they fupposid ware defign'd to attend them at Dinner; upon which they wene aboard again, and kepe their Spanifo Gentcman Prifoncr. Gcing athoar the next Morning, with three Enfigns, the Spaniards upon their approach, fet their Church a Fire, and march'd off; upon which the Dutch fer fire to their Houfes, to burn in Company with the Houfe of God: And in the little Skirminh that pals'd between them, two of the Dutchs were wounded, and four Spaniards kill'd. They took fome Hens, and abour soo Sheep, with ocher Spoil, out of which they plentifully fupplied their Necefficies. Underftanding here of three Spanifh Ships, furnin'd with 1000 Mcn, that had fail'd from hence in april to find them our, they concluded to make them as litule trouble as they could, by going in queft of their Purfucrs.
Accordingly \({ }^{3}\) unc the ift, they fer Sail upon this Defign, and pasid near Aureca, a Town in which the Spr.-Ammas, miards had a Garrifon of 500 Men , and which wis continually afaulted by the Chilerians.
The 3d, they approach'd the Ine हeiriquermam, near 2 nitiums the Contincnt ; and behind it came up to Conception Town, nam inhabited by Indians and Spanierds.
The 12th, they entred the fafe Road of raipirifa, where was à Spanifl Ship, delerted of ter Men; and left a fire by them.
The 13 th; as Noon, they came into 32 Degri- 15 Min. South lat. and the fame Day to the tair and feciure Hax- quineta. bour of Quinteres.
Fuly the \(2 \mathrm{~d}_{2}\), they came to Arica (d), which lies in 12 (d) Arise Degr. 40 Min. South Liar, to which place the: Silver is brought from Poroft, and from thence carriced ro' lainaina; bur finding no Spanierds there, they went on.
The 16 th; they rook a fmall Ship indifferenty rich, whofe valuable Commodities being raken our, they Sunk her.
Shortly after they wore alarm'd with the fight of the Flect Royal of Peru, confifting of about cight Sail, which had boch fought, and was fo heartily fought for by them.
This Fleer was commanded by Rodeign Mcndona, the the Fktol Vicc-Koy of Pcrris Kinfman; a noific, bouncing Sp:nn:- 「erm. ard, that pretended to reduce all Eughond with two of his braye Ships; and therefore came with very great affurance of linking, and barning all thofe Dutch. Hens, as he calld them, had theybeen twice as many more: Nay, he bound himfelf by a folemn Oath, never to xeturn till they were all deftroy'd or taken. He fer out of CgtioinRoad, \(\ddagger\) uly the ift, and the Ships that composid his Flect, were thefe that follow: The ycfica Maria, Admiral; with 460 Men, and 24 Brals Guns: A Ship that ftood the King in \(x ; 8000\) Duckets. The Fight ac waring ank S Dutch Ship; which had quickly been hunted thither her felf by the Spanifo Admiral, to have kepr the Sc. Francis Company, had nor her own Admiral, and Vicc-Admiral fent out two Boats to her afifitance. One of thele Boars was funk by a Shor from the Hunter, miftaking her for one of the Enemics.

The next Morning fire Spanifh Ships were endearouring to get off, but the Dutch prevented the Admiral, and Vice-Admiral from doing lo, attacking them fo vigorounly with cheir own Admirah, and Vicc-Admiral, chat the Spanifh Vicè-Admiral's Mcn quitted her, and leap'd off into the Admizal. BuE the Durch fill prefing hard upon them, they were forced to return back, and defend their own Ship; to be fure with very lietele Heart, having before divers times, by a white Flag, offer'd to crave a Ceffation of Arms; tho fome very fubborn Spaniards preSentiy pulld ic in again, chufing Death before a difhonourable Submiffion. Bur after all, the Spanif Admiral nor able to bear that hoe Difpure any longer, (pread our her Wings, and fled away with all the hatte that an Adverfary perfcetly fcar'd and vanquin'd, may be fuppos'd to make : However fhe kepr her Vow; for tho' she did nor bind all the Dusch, in Clains, and beat their Ships in piecespwith her grear Guns, yer fhe never came home again if rell of her ill Succels.

The Vicc-Admiral allo wasentirely reduc'd intpa pofture of Submiffion by the Durch -Eolus, who it Keems had puffed fo furioully upon her, thar her Spanifk Courage was effectually cool'd by thofe violent Blafts. She funk that Night in the very Faces of the Dutch, who wou'd have prevented ir, if poffible: Her chicf Commander died of his Wounds, and all her Men thas were not killed in the Fight, nor devoured by the Sea, were difpatch'd by the Dutch the nexr Morning, fome few Perfons of Figure only excepred. The Dutchloft in this Action abour Forty Men. and abour Fifry cighr were wounded. The fame Day they went for Callion de Lima; bur were becalm'd by the way.
The 2oth they pals'd by the Inand, and faw 14 Ships near the Shoar, but cou'd not come at them for the Shoals; to they purfucd their Courfe for Callion de Lima, thinking to overtake the Spanif Admiral; which they afterwards heard at Guarme, and Pgyta, was certainly funk. The Spaniards hete from the Land flot at them, and with a Ball of \(36 \%\). Out of one of their Great Guns, had like to have funk the Hunter. They had a grear Army of Horfe and Foot afthoar, the Vice-Roy himfelf being there in Peifon: But they kepr out of the reach of danger from their Ordnance, and caft Anchor at the Mouth of the Haven, waiting (tho' in vain) to take fome of their Ships yet on the 26 th chey took a fmall Bark that had Salt, and Eighry Veffels of Syrup aboand her.
The 2gth they came to the Road of Guarme ( \(e\) ), in ro Degr. North Lat. a pleafant place with a large Haven. They went afioar here, and found the Town clear'd of all the Pcople, who had yer lefr fome Provifions behind them, which they brought to their Ships.
Augu/t the 3 d , they pais'd berween the Continent and the INe Loubes, fo call'd from a fort of Finh found thexe and here they difmifs'd forme of their Spani/h Prifoners.
The 8th they caft Anchor ar Pora ( \(f\) ), and the nex Day landed 300 Men, to make'an Atrempt npon the City, which was to well defended, that they cou'd make no impreflion upon it. However, they batere'd it with theip Ordnance, and forc'd all the Pcople up into the Mountains, with their Goods, fo that when they landed they found nothing bur bare Walls.
This City to the Sea-wards is extreamly well fortified It had rwo Churches, a Monaltery, and feveral good Buildings in ir; and an exccllent Haven, where all Ships bound for \(p\) inama ufe to pur in, and then fend their Car go by Land to Callion de lima, the Wind and Sca there abouts being gencrally tery unquiet.

And this is the Sum of the Inaclligence the Dupch receiv'd from the aforefaid Spanifí Prifoner; bur 'ris time now to follow them to Sca again.

Having refrefl'd bere till Ausuft 21. they fer fail; but rent as gaie of Wind, and having a ftrong Cur The 23d, they Anchor'd before Rio de Tumba ( \(\xi\) ', but not being able to enter there for the Tide, they dircoted their Courle back to the Inand Coques, in s degrees Sourh Lat. bur being conrinually perfecured with bad Wearher, which hardly ever intermisted, to Scpr. 43. they loft that lland, and with it the refremment they expected there.

Scpi. 20. they had light of Land in Nerm-Spain, and 13 degrecs 30 minutes North Lat. with very rempeltuous Wearher.
oriob. 1. they faw a Country that yielded a very pleafant Profpect, but the yiolent working of the Sra hinderd their I anding there; fo they kepe beating off and oncill polgue, wishin thot of the Caltle. Here a Flag of Truce being hung our, they dcalt with the Spanintads, exchanging Prifoners for Prowifions: They were vifured too ly Don Hernardo, the Vice-Roy of New-Spain's Nephow, who must needs come abourd them, to fee a Eleet that had triumph'd over the deem'd Invincible Fleet of Peru. The Caftle here was well defended with 70 Brafs Guns, haviog had Intelligence of cheir coming 8 Months before.

The 18 ch they fee fail again, but being becalm'd, they did nothing of moment, except the taking a Bark, bound for Pearl-filhing which they Manand, and rook into the Atendants of their own Flect Nowemb. x. nhey Anchor'd. before Porr ( \(i\) ) Selagues, in 19 degrees North Lat. Here they heard of a River that yielded variety of good FiM, and Meadows well Srock'd with Cartel, together with Cirrons, and other Fruits; all which conveniences they wanted; but the Company they fent, fearing a Suprize by the Spaniards, revum'd as they went.

After 2 Smart Encounter with the Spaniardson the ith, they fet fail for Rons Nitrivity, where they furnith'd themCelres with Neceffarics; and from whence rbey departed the 20 oth.

The 26th, they had 20 degrecs 26 minures North Lat. and now they concluded upon the neareft Courfe to the Ilands Ladroxes.
Decenv. 3. to their no herle wonder, they haw. two Illands at a grear diftance in the Sca , and the next day 2 mighry Rock, in is Degrecs, and so Leagues from the Concinent.

The eth, they faw a now Ifland, with five Hills, that appear'd like to many diftinct loands. The new Year came on with Diftmpers, that prov'd fatal to many of their Company:
7am. 23. * they had Gghe of the Ledromers, and the next day they Landed there : They fer fail for the wansilles (k) the 26th, where they happily Anchor'd Eeb. 9. Here the Indians refuled to Trade. with them, becanfe they faid the Duach were Enemies to the Spaniords; for which very seafon, fome others wou'd frecty bave prostizured all the Trade and Riches of a Country to them.

But in Caprel, to which shey came on the itth, the People werc of a better temper, giving then braveHogs and Hens for very trifles: This probiable Trade they left the igth, pafing from thence through the Streights, rowards the Minnilian Port or Bay.

Thefe Indians of Capri wear long Conis like Shircs, and are noted for the extraordinary Reppects they pay wo Clergy-men; before whom chey'll proftrate themfelves on the ground and rake in for a mighty Honous to be admitred to kils cheir Hands.

The soth; they Anchor'd before the Inand Luccn (I) (1) Lund the principal of the Manillos, and in which is the Ciry \({ }^{10}\) Manilla ir felf. Here was a curious Fabrick arrificially crected upon the tops of Trees, that look'd like a Palace at 2 diftance; but what airy Creatures were the Inhabitanes there they cou'd nor examine.
The 28th, they pafs'd by the high and flaming Hill Elaming albaca.
The \(24^{t h}\), they faw the other end of the Streight, but the Calm wou'd not allow them to paisit.
The 2 Sth, they Anchor'd before the Mand Mirabelles, ctmarkable for ins two Rocks, that lift their tops to fo vat a beighth in the Air: Bchind thefe the Ciry of Mamita lics; and from hence they watch the coming of Ships from Clina, to Pilor them fafe to the City, becaufe of the grear danger of the paffage.
March s. they rook fevcral Barks that were difpatch'd. zo gather in the Tribute paid to the City of Manilla, by the adjoyning places. They had now Intelligence of a Flect of 12 Ships, and 4 Gallies, Mann'd with 2000 Spaniards, befides Indians, chinesc and faponefo; all which were Cent to the Molacces, to drive out the Ditch, and reduce thofe Iflands to the Obedience of the King of Spain. Upon this News they difibarg'd all their Prifoners, and refoly'd to go after them.
The anth, they got in amongit fo many Iflands, that they hardly knew how to deliter themifelies again, bur their Spanifh Pilor broughr them out fafe the nexr day.-

The 14th, they sid at Anchor all Night, before the IA and Pany (m), by reafon of the Shoals.
The 18th, they lail'd clofe by Mindanio ( \(n\) ', but in the ( \(n\) ) Mindane Evening put off further into the Sen, becaufe of dangerous Shelves thereabours.
The 19th, they came clofe by the fhore again, and bought Provigons of the IRanders ar wery cheap rates.
The 2oth they reach'd Cope de Cederia, the Spanirrd's Watering-place, in their way to the Moiuccus. Till the 23d, they Gail'd no farther than juft as the Tide forc'd them along, having a perfect Calm; but between Mindanao and Tagime, a contrary Tide met and ftaid them. The Pcople bere profef'd a great enmity to the Spaniards, and offer'd the Dutch the Aliftance of so of their Ships in thar Quarrel.
The \(27^{\text {th }}\) they pas'd the Illand Senguis (o), and the 29th came to Temete ( \(p\) ), in which the Ditch poffers'd the \((\rho)\) IOMnd Town Macia, where thefe wandring Country-men of \((p)\) Temat theirs were made rery welcome by them. The Sereight of Bouton they obferv'd to be full of Shoals, without which the wearer is deep: On the Eaft there's good frefh Warer, and two Leagues to the Watt lics a very rocky Shoal.
April8. Cornelius de Vianer went for Bandi, and the Soldicrs landed there, after a very long and tedious life a Shipboard.
Max 2. they fent 6 Ships to Macian ( \(a\) ), (to prevent the (g) Macian Encmics getting any Cloves) and Anchor'd there before Meurice-Fors. Here the Englif inform'd them of the fuccefs of thcir Country-men, in raking coicerary a fam'd place for Numegs; and the Indimsexprefid their joyful fenfe of in too, by entring: into 2 sew league with them upon it.
Scpf. Is. rhey came to frieatra ( \(r\) ) and repair'd their Ships; and here they were deliver'd from the fear of the Spanifo Flect, fome before ta the Arolutens, the Admiral of it being dead, and the Flece is felf mameffully retired back ta the Manilles, having done nothing after + Years Preparation. Here allo they met 4 large Ships from Holland, with good ftore of Spenifh Rials; and anotherfrom Fapan, whe the fane, and good a quantity of Silver, Brafs, Iron, and orher Commodizies, which were all taken from a Portuguçace Ship bound for Marico.
Oftob. 20. the Concord, a Ship of Horn, that came from Hollond, Fuxc, A.D. 16 is. came to facatra, and being not of the Fadion Company, the Admiral annexed it to his Flect.

Nico. 10 came the Naffau to Bantam, from Mochia in the Red Sea, well fumin'd with Sfanijh Rials, and Turkift Ducars.
Decemb. 12 the:Amferdrum and theMiddichurgh came thither from the Sereigbrs of Malacin, with which Ships the Admiral Spilberg prepardesio return. Accordingly, Fan. * 17 . they reach d the Illand Mauritius, and by March 30. canc up with St. Hztconin.
Sailing from bence, April 9 . they came home to zeatanat the fuly following, having pretty well feconded the Exglifh, both in their Profpervus Voyages, and Noble Trumphs, over the Spaxiards in the Weftern World.

\section*{The Sixth Circum-Navigation, by. Wilifa M Cornelison Schouten of Horne.}

THE States-General of the United Provinces, having, in favour sof their Eaff-India Compa ny, prohibited all others to pass by the Cape of Good Hops Ealtward, or through the Magclla nick Sereighrs Weftward, there were fome that began to think of another Paffage, by the means of which the South-Sca might be vifited, as well as by the Magellnnick Sereighers, which were now thur up from all bur the Company. Such a paffage was fufpected to lie fomewhere South of the Streigbts: The Nonion was ftarted by \(1 /\) acc Le Maire, a Merchant of Amferdam, and William Cornelifon Scbouten of Horne, amongt themfelves; and they refolved to be at the Coft of a Voyage, to prove whether there were any uruch in it or no.
The hopes of this happy Difoovery fo quicken'd their Preparaxions, that in a fhorr time they Rigg'd out two Ships, the Thicy of 360 Tun, of which Withiam Cornclifon Schouten was Mafter and chicf Pilot, and Facob Le Maire principal Factor, having in her 65 Men, 19 grear Guns, with Muskers, Slings, and orher Ammunition and befides, two Pinnaces, and a Boat to ferve her, rogether with good fore of all kinds of Tackling, both for her felf, and thefe her Attendants.

Thic orher was the Horme, of 110 Tun of which fabn Cornelifon Schouten was Mafter, and Aris Clamfon Facior; the had 24 Mcn, 8 great Guns, with Slings, and ocher needful Furniture.
All things being ready, May 25.* the Unity fer fail, and came to the Texel the 27th; whither alfo her Companion the Horne came to her \(\mathcal{F}\) une 3.

The 14th they fail d out of the Texel, and the 16 th palsd berween Doser and Cal/s; ; and the 17 Th , Anchoring, in the Downs, Schouten went aflhore at Dover, to get frefin Water
Fuly 13. they failed between the Inand ( \(x\) ) Teneriff and the grear Canary, with a fliff N.N.E. Wind, and a Cument Abour the 19 ch (the fame Wind and Current following Then stil) they pafsid the Tropick of Crncer.
(b) Cpes.iorc. fide of Cepee-Verd (b) Arning, they fell in with the North by \(S\) of Cepe-Vird (b). At Sun-rifing the Cape lay W.and by S. from them, fo that the N.N.E. Wind wou'd nor fuffer them to ger beyond it, buit kepr them there at Anchor all that Night.
The 25th, the Moorith Alcaid came aboard them, with whom they agreed at the price of 8 States of Iron for a fupply of frelh Warer. Thcy left the Cape Aug. 1 . and the 21 it of the fame Month they faw the figh Land of Sierra Lema ( \(c\) ), and alfo the Inand of Madrabomba, whick lics on the South Poirm of the high land of Simber Leona, and North from the Shallows of Sr. Ann's I/Rand. lies between Cafe Verd and the Coaft of Guing all that lies between CayeVerd and the Coalt of Guiner; fo that the Point is very eafie to be known. Here they wortd have Landed, running up to the Point over the biaixes of Shollows of St. Anns; at io, \(9,8,7\) and 5 fathom Warcr ir being fill deeper to the North, but hallower to the Ealt; 10 that in the Evcning they Anchor'd with a bigh Water at 4 Fathom and half foft ground, and ar Nigheat 3 Fathom and half.
The a2d, William Sciouten, in the Horre, led the way off the Shallows, fteering N. N. E: with a N. W. Wind; by which Courfe, they were entirely difengag d from the Buixos, and got our into 18 Fathom watcr. From hence they went to the Inlands of Madralionkit, which are very high, and lic all threc om a row, S. W. and N.E. half a League from Sierra Leona to the Scaward. Here they had fhallow water at 4 and \(s\) Fathom, and foff muddy ground : They Anchor'd a League from the Land, which appear'd ro be very full of Bogs and Marthes; and lay all over wafte like a Wildernefs, fcarce fir to entertain any other Intabitants than wild Beafts; and, indeed, not feeming to have any ocher.
Going aftore the 23d, they found a River there, the Mourh of which wasifo ftoppd up with Sands, and Cliffs, and Rocks, thar no Ship coutd ger into it, yer within the warer was fufficiently denp, and the breadth finch too as to give a Ship free fope to rum and wind her felf abour, as the fhou'd have occafion.

Here they faw Tortoifes, Crocodiles, Monkeys, wild Oxen, and a fort of Birds which made a noife, Barking BakkingBirto like Dogs. They mee with no Fruir but Limons, fome doant Irc. few Trees of which they found after a cedious fearch; To that ir feems as if Nature had intended this place for the only ufe of fome Societies of Bruce Animals, which Thou'd here cnjoy their native Freedom, and live out of the reach of the Tyranny of Mankind, for herethey live fecurely, and withour difturbance, being defended by the matural Poverty and Barrennefs of the place, which are the Guardowhich Nature has fer upon, and by which The prcereryes this Kingdom of Beafts in a Srate of Liberry : And till thar Guard be removed, and Narure, by her Bounty, gives a remptation to a Foreign Power, the Brutes will hold their own, and the Chattiry of their frec State will inever be violated.
The 29th, about Noon, they gor above the Ilands of Madrabont, Weftward, along to the North part of the high Land, till they had 12 and 15 Fiathom warer, and in the Evening gor about the Point.
The 3oth, A. M. diriven with a freami and a Southwind, they came before the Village, in the Road of Sierin Leona \(\left(n^{n}\right)\), where they Anchor'd at 8 Fathom, a litule from the more, in a very landy botrom. The Village (dena Riariad confifted of abour 8 or 9 poor Houfes cover'd with Straw : The Afoors, that dwelr there, defired to come aboard, only demanding Pledges to belefr ahore, to fecure their rafe return ; becaufe a \(E\) erich Ship, thar came thither before, had perfidiouly carricd off two of them. So Aris Clanfors, the Merchanr, wenc afhore, and ftaid there amongt them, driving a fmall Trade with them for \(L i-\) mons and Banamas, which they exchang'd for Glafs Beads; and in the meantime they came aboard, bringing an Inrerpreter wich them, who fooke allforts of Languages. Here they had a good opportunity to furnifh themfelves with freth Warer, which pouring downin grear quanities from every high Hill, they had nothing to do bur to place cheir Barrels under the fall of the Warer to receive it. There wercalfo valt Woods of Limon-Trees here, which made woods of hat Commodity to cheap to them, that for a few Beads Limon-Tree and Knivesthey might have had 10000 or more.
Sept. 1. they drove away before the ftream, and An chored that Evening at the mouth of the Sea, before a fmall River. Here chey took an Antelope in the Woods, with Limons and Palmitos; and had good fuccefsin their Fiming.
The 3d, the Mafter brought in a grear Shoal of Fin that were of the hrape of a Shooc-makers Knife, and as many Limons as came to iso for cyery Man's inare.
The 4 th, they 1 er Sail from Sïrra Leona early in the Morning.
Offob. 5. they made 4 degrees 27 minures South Lat. and the lame day, at Noon, they were ftrangely fur priz'd with a very violent ftroke given to one of theis Ships in the lower parr of it. No Adverfary appear'd, no Rock was in the way to be encounrerd with; bar while this amufed them, the Sea all about rhem began to change ins colour, and look'd as if fome grear Fountain of Blood had been open'd into it; this fudden alteration of the Water being no lefs furprizing to them than the thumping of the Ship. Bur the caufc, both of the one and the other, they ware equally ignorane of, till they came to Port-Defirc, and there fer the Ship upon the Strand to make her clean: For then they found a large Hom, both in form and magnitude refembling an Elephants Tooth, A Arange fticking faft in the bortom of the Ship; 2 very firm and sa-Momate: folid Body it was, and feem'd to be equally fo all over, there being noching of a large Cavity; or a lighr and Spungy Marter, in the midft of it, but all over as denfe and compact a Subftance as that in the exterior Parts. It had pierced through chree very four Planks of the Ship. and raced one of the Ribs of her, fo that it ftuck arteaft half a Foor decp in the Planks; and there was abour as much that appeard without the grear hole, up to the place where twas broken off. And now the Riddle was compleatly Solved, fhis Hom being the fpoil of fome Sea-Montter, that had thus sudely affaulted the Ship with that piercing weapon, and after the thruft not be: ing
ing able to draw it out again, had there broken it off which was attended with fuch a plentiful effufion o Blood, as had difcolour'd the Sea to that degree.

Having now Sail'd fo far, that.none in the Ships but the Mafters knew where they were, or whither they intended, upon the 25 th they difcoverid their Defigns to the reft of the Company, of going to find out a new Southern Paftage into the grear Pecifick Ser. This they had kepr very clofe to themelves before, but now thoughr it time to reveal the Plot, there being no danger of defeating it and the Company appear'd to be tery_well pleas'd with it, hoping to light on fome Golden Country or other to make them amends for all their travel and danger.
The 26 th, they made 6 degrees 25 minutes South Lar. Sailing the reft of thar Month moftly Southward, till they had made 10 degrees 30 minutes.

Nov. 1. they had the Sun North of them at Noon. The 3d, P. M. they had fight of Martin Vad's Illand, (i) trats aff. tefmiand. the Coapalis.

The the Compals ro vary to the N.E. 12 degrecs.
The 2 tht, they came under 38 degrees 25 minutes, and had a decp warcer, whofe bottom they could not reach with their l.cad: Here the variarion of the Compals was 17 degrees to the N. E.

Dec, 6. they had a profpect of Land not very high, but that and whire, and quickly after fell in with the far more likelyn the Southern hore. And now twas by wrack'd rogether: The Uniry lay wirh her fide upon ithe Cliff, but ftill kepr the water, and by the fall of the Sea was gradually fladen down lower and lower into it; but the Foon ftuck fo, as thar her Keel was above a Fathom our of warcr, and a Man mighr have walk'd barefoor under itaz Low-water. She was beholding awhile to the N. W. Wind, that, by blowing hard upon her fide, kcpr her from falling over; bur thar fupport being gone with the Wind that gave it, the funk down upon that fide at leaft 3 Foor lower than the Kecl; upon which Gghr they gate her ores for loft. Bur yet the fucceeding Flood which came on with ftill Weather, fet her upright again, and toth the and het Companion gor clear of the danger.
The gth, they went farther into the River, and came
G) Kims to Kings-I/fend ( \(g\) ), which they found full of black Sea-

Man, withour ftraining to reach, mighe have eaken between 50 and 60 Nefts with his hand; cach of which thou'd bave 3 or 4 Egens apicce, to that they were quickly furnifid with fome thoutands of them.
The with, the Boar wene in fearch of good Warer lower down the River, on the Sourh-fide, bur found it all of a brackifn unpleafane calte: They faw Oitriches here, and a fort of Bc: its like Harts, with wonderful long Ses the an Necks and extremely wild. Upon the high Hills they found \(G: n-\) in great haps of Stoncs und \(r\) which fome :ery monftrous Ginms in in Carkaffes had been bured: There were buncs of 10 and ix Foot long; in all probability they were (if of rational Creatures) Come bones of the Giants of thar Country. No Water was ro be found here for feveral days rogether; fo that tho they had plenty of good Finh and Fowl, they cou'd mect with no Drink to wanh ir down.
Here they loft their good Ship the Horn, by an unhappy accident; "twas her Fate, it fecms, to perifh by Fire, after to many Triumphs over the dangers of the Wind and Water. For as they were burning Reeds under her, in order to her Cleanfing, the tiame, by fome paffage or other, got into the Ship, and prefently gatherd to fucha: head, that in fiste of all they cou'd do, fie burne down to the \(y \mathrm{cry}\) water: They made 2 fhife to fecure her Guns, Anchors, and all her Iron-work, which was then befowed in the Thity, the only Veffel they had left to profecute their Difcovery in.

The 25th, they found certain holes in the ground that yiclded a whire muddy fort of Water; and this, for want of bertcr, was their Ale at thas time
Fcn. \(13 .{ }^{\text {. }}\) they fail'd our of Port-Defirt, bur having a - A.D.16: 6 . Calm, they Anchor'd beforc che Haven, cill:che rifing of the Wind invired them to purfue thicir Voyage.
The 8 8th, being in 51 degrees, they faw the SelialdincThand (b), which they oblervid to lic in that pofition and (b) Steafit:dirtance, from the Srecighr, thar De Weert had dercrmin'd. IFand The 2oth, they faw jecenco of \(s\)-drive; and being then in \($ 3\) degrecs, they obferv'd the grear Current that runs S. W. and now they counted about 20 Leagucs Southward from the Magellanick Strcighrs.
The 23d, they had an uncerrain mifting Wind, and the Watcr appcard white, as if they had been within the I. and: They held their Courfe S. and by W. and the fame day faw Land, bearing W. and W.S. W. Erom Jhom, and guickly after to the South ; then attempting by an E.S.E. Courfe to ger above the l and, the hard North-Wind that blew then conftrain'd them to take in their Toplails.
The 24th, A. M. they faw Land a Star-board abous a leagucs diftance, ftretching our E. and S. with very high Hills all corcrid with Iec; and then other Land, bearing Eaft from in, high and ragged as the former. They guefs'd the Lands, they had in thefe swo Profpects, lay abour 8 Leagues afunder, and that there mighr be a good Paffage between them, becaufe of a pretry brisk Curtent that ran Southward along by them. Abour Noon they made 54 degrees 46 minutes, and then began to make towards the forc-menrion'd opening, bur the fuccecding Calm prefented ic. Hererhey faw an inn-Grar numn: credible number of Renguins, and fuch huge troops of wers of of Whales, that they were forc'd to procced wirh a grean deal of caution, for fear they thou'd run their Ship upon hem.
The 25 th A. M. they got up clofe by the Eaft land, which upon the North-fide reaches E.S. E. as far as the Eye can follow it: This chey call'd States-L. Cn , and that State-Land which lay Weft they gave the Name of Maurice-Land to. no Manrin They obicrv'd, that on both fides there were good Roads \({ }^{\text {Land }}\) and fandy Bays, goed fore of Fifh, Penguins and Porpuffes, and fome fores of Fowl; bur the Land adiacent feem'd quite bare of Trees and Woods. They had a NorthWind at their entrance into this paffage, and directed their Courfe S.S. W. To that going pretry briskly on, ar Noon they made 55 degrees 36 minutes, and then held a S. W. Courfe, having a good ftiff gale ro blow them for wards. The Land upon the South-lide of the Raflage, ar the new the Weft-end of Maurice-Land, appear'd to run W.S. W. Streisthes, and \(S\). W. as far as they cou'd fee its and-all very craggy uneven ground.
* In the Evening; having a S. W. Wind, they ftecr'd Sourhward mocring with might Wes, the ing along beforethe wind mighty waves that came roul- ourdowridm. o the Loofward from ind ; and the depth of the Warex, vancing tovery cvident Signs) gave then (which appeard by fome wardsanem, great South-Sca was now before them, into which they are oblignd ad almoft made their way by 2 paftape of their oun be ro ca eculiar Difcovery. The Sca-Mews hereabouks weee lar-- wind blew er than Swans, and their wings, when extended ro their them along all length, fpread above the compafs of a Fachom: They every fepo wou'd come, and very tamely fir down upon the Ship their way. and fuffer themfelies to be made Prifoners, withour any came they endearours to lly away.
The 26th they made 57 degrecs, and were Enter-Strigh. taind here with a Flying Srorm our of the W. & S. W. he Warce were alfo very high and blue: They ftill held all this Day their Courfe to the Southward, bur changing it at Night for a N. W. one; in which Quarter chey difcover'd very high Land.
The 27th, they were under 56 degrees 5 r minutes, the Weather very cold, with Hail and Kain, the Wind W and W. by S. They went a Sourhern Courfe, and then crofs'd Northward with their Main-Sails.

The 28th, they hois'd up their Top-Sails, and had grear Billows out of the-Wett, with a Weft, and then a Norrb-Eaft Wind, and thercwith held their Courfe Sourh and then W. & W. by S, which brought them under 56 degrees 48 minutes.

The 2gth, they had a N.E. Wind, and held their Courfe S. W. which gavechem the Profpect of rwoIflands befer round with Cliffs, and lying W.S. W. from them; they got up to them ar Noon, but con'd not hail above them, and therefore held their Courfe to the North. They gave them the Name of Barnecicis [fands ( \(i\) ) and found their I.atitude to be 57 degrees Sourh. Taking a N. W. Courfe from hence, in the Evening they faw Land again, lying N.W. & N.N.W. from them; this was the ligh hilly land, cover'd with Snow, that lay Sourhward from the Mavellonick Streighers, ending in a tharp Point which the calld Cape-Kirnc ( \(k\) ) and lying in 97 degrees 48 mi nutes, They held their Courfe now Weftward, in which Courfe they found a ftrong Current thas ranthat way too; yet had thay the Wind in the North, and great Billows cumbling our of the Weft upon th:rn-
The 3oth, the Billows and the Current ftill ran as before; and now they gather'd a full affurance from hence, that the way was open into the South-Sca: This Day made the \(l\) aritude of 57 degrees 34 minutes.

The 3nit they fiild Wert, with the Wind in the North, and made 8 degrees; bur the Wind turning to the W land, and ftill mocting the Billows working out of the Weft; which, together with the blucnefs of the Water, made them quickly expect the Main South.Sea

Fcb. I. a ftorm blowing out of the S. W. they faild with their Main-Sailslying N. W. & W. N. W.
The \(2 d\), with a Wefterly Wind, they fail'd to the Southward, and made 57 degrees 98 minutes, the varia tion being there 12 degrees Thorthward.
The 3d, they made 59 degrees 25 minutes, with a hard Wett Wind, bur faw no figns of any land to.the Souch and the pexit day 56 degrees 43 minutes, rurning to and fro, with very uncertain \(S\). W. Winds, and finding it dcgrecs of N. E. variation.
The sth, by reaifon of a ftrong Wefterly Current and a hollow Watcr, they cou'd bear no Sail, bur were forc'd to drive with the Wind.

The 12 th, they plainly difcern'd the Magellanick Streigbrs, lying Eaft of them; and therefore, now being fecure of their happy New Difoovery, they render"d
Thanks to geod Fortune in a Cup of Wine, which wens thice times round the Company. And now this New found Paffage had a Name given is, which was that of Mrire's Screigbrs, tho' thar Henour (in Juftice) ought to have becn done to Wrlliam Sctoutcn, by whofe happy Conduct the Streights were difeoverd. And 'tis oblervable, that all the time of their Sailing through thefe Streights, and about the Southern Aemfoundland; they had 2 ferticd Courfe of bad Weather, a thick and foggy Air, and.ftrong Currenes; all which pur together, did make their Sailing to be really in the Sercighrs. But the Joy of this Difcorery; and the Hopes of a farcher Improvernent of it, rogether with the Auxiliary Comfors of the Botrle, helpid, to carry off the fence of all that tedious Voyage, and the many mortifying Dangers of it.

The 27 th, they made 40 degrees South Lat. having fair wearher, and held their Courfe Northward.

The 28th, they determin'd for the Illand of foinn Fernando, to give their fick and weary Company a due re frefturnt; and that Day they made 35 degrees 53 mi nures In the Evening they made bur fmall Sail, fearing to fall upon the Land which;effectually to avoid, they faild N.E.
Narch 8 . they, Saw the Iland :of Eeraaxido () before thempothe N. N. E. and abour Noon: got up to them under 33 degrees 48 minutes Both thele. mands are very high, the fmalleft lying moft Weftwarid; is a:very barren and rocky ; place, but greater to the Eaft; tho it be full of Ethls, + is well, haded with Trees, and fruirful. The Inand is felf affords plenry of Hogs and Goass and all the Coait abour it fuch excellent Fining, that the Spnniards think it worth their while to come hither; from.whence they Transport vaft quantizies of Fif: to Peru.. The Road lies on the Eaft Point of, this Illand, and they thapd their Cound not as they fou'd to the Eaftern; bur the Weftern fide of it it by which means, they were reduc d to the inconvenience of nor being able to get near enough the Land to Anchor. This made them Dilpatch cheir Boar cofound He Depth, which gave them an Account of 30 and 40 Fathom, Gandy:ground, clofe by the Land; which leffen'd still to 3 Fathom; very proper to Anchor'int, They: cold too of 2 very lovery \(V\) alley full of Trees and Thickets refrefh with firemos of water moning down from the Hills, and variery of Animals feeding in thofe pleafant places; all which they faw in this greater IOand. They brought good ftore of Fifh along with them, moft of thenn Corcobadoes and Srectibraffes; and rcported, that chey faw a grear many Sea-Wolyes. The rwo next days ficcef fively, they repeated their Actempt to come up and Anchor clofe by the liland, but were ftill fruftrated, wharever endeavours they ufed to accompliin it. But ftill their Men followed the Fiihing-Trade, which they managed fo fuccersfully, that they took almoft two Tun of Fith only with Hooks, in the fmall rime that fome of the Fiminpat the Company went to fetcl Water. Finding the Thand thus nando. inacculible, they dercrmin'd to purfue their Voyage.

The s relh, they pafs'd the Tropick of Capricorn the fecond time, holding their Courfe N. W. Here they had the general E. & E. S.E. Wind, and held their Courde N.N.W. to the reth day, when clicy made 18 degrees; then they chiang d that Courfe, and faild Weft.
April 3.- they made 15 degrees 12 minutcs, and had then no variation of the Compafs, bur a confiderable variation of the temper of their Bodien from a good ftate of Health, by rcafon of the Flux, which had feiz'd the beft part of the Company.
The ioth, they faw a little low Inand ar. 3 Leagucs diftance, which they got up to ar Noon: Here they calt our their lead, bur cou'd find no bottom, and therefore pur our their Shallop. The Men that went ahore found nothing for refreflument, bur fome Herbs that tafted like Durch Twinkars; bur gave an Account of a very filent Yort of Dogs they bad feen there, that wou'd ncither Bark nor Snarl, nor make any noife at all; and for this reafon they call'd is Dos-Ifhand (m). It lies in as degrees \((m)\) oos 12 minutes; and they judged is 925 L cagues diftant from the Ceaft of Peru. The ground is fo low, that at Highwatcr it fcems, for the molt part, to be o:crflown; and it has nothing round about if, but a fort of a Ditch befer with Trees, between which the Salt water breaks in in crecral places.
The 14th, they fail'd W. & W. by N. and the fame day, \(P\). At. they faw a large, but low Ifland, reaching Anothct N.E. &S. W. a confiderable way. At Sun-fet, being thad, about a League fromit, an Indian Canoe adyanced to mect them, the Men naked, with long.black Hair, and their Bodics of a reddim colour. They made figns to the Durcb to come afmore, and call'd to them in theirLanguage; and tho they anfwer'd them in their own, the Spanilh, Moluccan, and favan Tongues, yet che Indians underfood them not; to that both fides were in the dark as o.each orhers Minds. When they gor up to the IMand and Sounded, they found no bortom, neither wasithere any change of Watcr, tho' they were within a Musketthot of the fhore. Here the Indians and they had anothes unintelligible Conference, bur they wou'd nor be perfwaded to come up to the Ship by any figns the Dutch cou'd make to invite them to it, as ncither wou'd the Dutch go athore to them, tho ftill tiney kepr pointing and taking to one another, while neither fide undentood one word that was fooke by the ocher. leaving thefe People therefore to others that cou'd underftand them, they fail'd away S.S. W. to get above the 1 and : And having made that Nighr 10 Leagues, in a S.S. W. Courfe, the 1 sth, A. M, they faild clofe a'ong by the thore, on which ftood feveral of thefe naked Peo ple, calling to them (as they guefsd) to Land. Preferit y after one of their Canocs came towards the Ship, bur won'd not come near ir; yet ventur'd to the Shallop, where the Dutch, and thefe Indinns, fell to their Myfterious Canferences again. The Dutcib gave them Beads and Knives and feveral things that pleasidethem; which kindnefs embolden'd them at laft to conne àlinde nearer the Ship, bur tillthey wou"d nor go aboard her, n, but gor back into the Shallop.: Neither had they any greait realon to be fond Trevia of therr Compzany there, tor chey are a parcel of light- people like finger'd Fellows, and have much the fame degree of Con- bre Ladrmes. rcience and Honefty with them at the Ladrones. They love Iron is the Ladronians do, and they love to fteal it like them : The very Nails in the Cabbin-Windows, and the Bolts upon the Doors, cou'd not keep their places fós them but they wou'd have them off; this they: found to be true, by one of them, who had cunningly lippdinio theShip, and pull'd out all the Window-nails which for fecurines Sake he had ftruck into his Ha:r: Nay, they are To very impudent, that whatcver they lay Hands on is theis own, (tho' che Owner look on all the while) if bedoe nor reccuer his Right by:force. When the Durd gave them: fcme Wine; they drunk the Liquor and kept: the Cup; fo when they threw our a Rope to bring them to the Ship, they" would neither we the.Rope nor return it. And their Qualries are not moreodd than the Eigure they suake; for (befides: that they are all naked, except the

Pl denis, which are coverd with a picce of Mat; their Skin is all voce figured with Snakes and Dragens, and fuch like Varnine; what are very of their own fulteic and mifcherots Naturs.

The Durch having a mind to cry, if any thing were to be dene with hem, or to be gorem in die Illand, fens thair Shallcp with cight Mriskerrecrs, and fix Swords-men, leclides other Compiny of the Ship. They were no fooner landed, bue thirty of the Pe Perple rughd out of a Wood repon them, amm with grear Cluls and Slings, and long Stars: they woud have feizd the Shallop, and raken anay the Soldiers Arms; bur the Ahokers lerting fiy a arougt unm, kent thenf frem the Sin of Roblece at that time, and for ed cham to be honeit whether they wou'd Th min whe or no. This luatid. they calld the Ithe withour (iround, beraufe they esu'd nor Anclior there: Is is nor brond, but fomerhing long, and full of Tress, wh:ch they sucls'd to ne Ccos and Palmio's. In is a white faniy Ground, aiad lics in is Deyr. Sourth Lat. and about a hundred here, they lier fail, and held their Courle W, to the Seawarl. Here having bie a fight Water, and no Billows, as the liav lefore, out of the Sourl, they gucfid that Somben and there was more land.
The Sixteenthe they same to another Inand that lay Northwart, and was al our fiftecn Lengues ditant in in the othor: This appeard to be all drownd land withitio the on the fides wellive winh Trees: And hereallo they found no bortoin for Anchoring. It yiclucd them norhing for Food, buta few Herbs like thote in Der-Illand, with fome Crabs,and other Shell-filh, which were well-efted Mcar; lut it afforded them frme good freth Water, which the: found in a Pic not far frum the Shoar. The. Poirege made of the Herbs they zadherd hice, provid very ferricembe to tiole of ducir Company that were treubled Nostrana, with the Flus. They calld this Inland, if:re- Inand, lic. catic it fupplied them with Water; they left is procenty, and faild Wettward, making thar Day iq Degr. \(\ddagger 6\) Min. Soutch lat.
The Eightecnth they came to another Ifland, lying so the South Welt, abour twenty I cagues diftane from the lait, and ftretching out North Weit, and Sourh Eaft, a confiderable way. The Boar beirg difparch d to found the depth, brought word, That they had found a bottom (by a/Point of land, froin whence rhere came a gende Stream of Water, at twenty five, and forty Fathom, about a Musket-fhot from the Land. This News of Watcr made them fend rheir cmpry Caskin the Boat, in hope ro have is well filld. Buratcer they had raken a great deal of pains to land, and bad becn a good while beating up and down in a Wood to find fone Spring or other to lupwhid men. and pur an cond to their coquiry after Water for thar time And quickly ifter they: were got into their Boar, there came five or fix more of thofe Savages, and hewed rhemfelves upon the Shoar; bur fecing they were gone off, prefendy retired into the Woods.
Bur tho' they got ciear of thefe more formidable Adverfaries, yet there were others very troublefome, that ftuck clofe ro them; of which this brought many Mailions along with them our of the Wocids. 7 hele wacre I fort of black Flies, of which there were fuch prodipious Swarms thereabouts, that they came home corcrid over with them from Head to Foor; their Hands and Facerfo befet, that there was no fecing what Complexion they: were of; their Cloachs entirely hidden by the Mulcitindes of thofe Animals crawling upon thenh, which did thent Celves compofe anocher fort of Apparcl, and sive the poor Men) (threwdly againgt their Wills'). Coats, Breethes, Stockins, and Shcoes, of Flies A Befides, their Pery Boat, and Oars, were all over in the famie Drefs: with themfives. And out of this their Abindance, they did, when they came back, very liberally tommunicare to their Companions: And now the Plague of Flies began to rage in the Ship, and every Man was bufie to defend his Face and. Eyes:2s well as he coud. Tuas the beit part of the Day's-work to be flapping the Flies zway; and:twastrard for a Man to open his. Mouch, cither to fpeak, or to ent without taking in a Mourhful of ibefe Vermine as the fame uime.
This direful Perfecution lafted abour threc or four days in which time the Flaps did fuch execution, that their Sufferings were prety well at an end, and few of the Fis-Ilond TO ticlp of a good Galé of Wind, did fly away from it as fant as they conld.
The 23d, they were under is Degr. 4 Min and there again had grear: Billows our of the South, which conti-the Terra, Auftralis; ithich they foughe for, lay:yer-Two hundred and fifty Lengues further.
The 25th, the Hollow Billows oue of the South fill continued, fucir as are commonly in the Soanif) Seas, outof the N.W.
My the' 3 d , they fail'd Weftward, and made ar Noon IS. Degr. 3 Min. And that Day they: Raw Kevcral grear Coradocs, which were the firt chey bad feen in the Sourh .
The gth they made is Degr. 2o Min. and gucferd they ivere then 15 ro \(^{\circ}\) Leagues from the Conft of Peru. The ane Day they percciv'd a Bark coming rowards them which they went to mece, and gave her a Gun or two to unake her trike. Bur thofe that were in her, cither not underftanding the language of the Guns, or refufing to do what chey commanded, the Dutcli; (enr our their Shallop, with ten Musketects, to reduce her ; upon whichine adeavour'd to make her cfeape, but the Shallop inter-A franer epted her. Some of her Mcn, in a. very great fear, Berk wike threw themelies orerboard, and difpesid of their Goods the fame way that they did their Bodics. When they had koarded her, thofe thar were leff made no manner of reliftance, but quicely refigned themelves to the difporal of the Conquerors, who thed them rery kindy- dref irg thofe that were wounded; and faving the Lives of ronic that had lcapd over-boand, and cmemtaining all of themr in their Ship. There were befides the Men, cight Wemen, and fercral Children, fo that the whole Numbefmonnted to about Twenty three.
They were a cleanly neat fort of People, of a reddifl Tic pionk colour, quite nanked, except the obfece Parts, which abourd he were covcr'd: The Men had long curl'd black Hair, and the Women fliort like the Mce in Frotland

The Rark they were in, was of a very peculiar Figure and Structure: It confifted of rwo Canoes fattned toge- The Rus. , Tice in the uniddt of cach of which were laid rwobrond Planks of Red-wood to kecp our the Water, and feveral others went crofs froma one Canoc to the other, which ivere made sery fant and clofe aboye, and hung a good way oudr on both fides: Ar the end of one of the Canoes on Scarboard-fids, there thood a Mant with a Fork in the end of it, where the Yard lay; the Sail was made of Mars, and the Ropcs of fuch Stuff as the Fig-frails in Spain confint of. They had no Compals nor Charr, norany Furniruxe for thi Scas; bur only a fcw Fifing-hooks, the upperpattof which was Stone, and the otherblack Bonc, Tor toife-lhell, or Mother of Peanl. They had no neca to lade their Vcficl with freth Wazex, for they fatisfied themfelves with the liquor of a few Coco-Nuts; and when that was \(\{p e n c\), they had recourfe to the great 0 cean for a fupply, themfelves, and their fmallest Children; driaking the Salt. water tery hearily. The Dutch fentrtem all back to their Veffel again; where the Womien welcom'd their Husbands with joyful Embraces; and thus happily freed, they faild away to the South Eaft. Bur to our Difoverers
The Tench they held a W. and S. W. Courfe; and chat Day faw icry high land on Larhoard, lying's S. E. and by S. atonccight leaguesioff; but tho'they had a good Galc, they could nor reach ir thar Day
The Elcrenth A.'M. they came yp with a very high land, \(;\) and about two Leagues Southward with 2 norher much: lower: And the fime Day faird over 2 Bank of fourreen Fathom decp, and a ftony botion, lying abour two Leagues from the land, which being palt, they cou'd find no more Ground: About thiss titice, ano ther of the afonefaid Barks catne top to: them, ivfirititiad (as they generally have) 2 loole Canoe in hér, to putiouir upon occalion. She' faild arithat rate, thiat few Dutrot Ships cou'd ounftip her; her Men fteer'd behind with two Oars, in each Canoe one giand when they had a mind to wind her, they row'd before:-Bur all thefe Vef reds will. wind.themfelves, by only pulling the Oais our of the Water; and leting them go.
Sending thecir Shallop to found by one of thefe Hlamds they were inform'd, that there was Ground, tho :helvy at twelve, foursech, and fifreen Fathom, zbout a Catinonhot from the Liand's fo they refolv'd to Aneckor thete Ehe Negroes, inded, by Sighs directed thern to go to the orher IIIand, and faild a thither before them; Gut they anchor'd ar the chd of the former Itand; at Twenty five Fachom, fardy' Ground, a Catrion-morif from thé land. Fhis Inand lies in: rs Degr. ' 10 Min It is one entire Mouncain, and looks like one of the Molitcci's'tryis all over cover'd with Caco-Trees's for Twhich reafon'they coralit callid is Coco-Iftand:
The other 3 land is mucti lower than this, Bur longer, ring E and : W:' Being ar Anchör; chere came three Ships, and nine or xen Canoes (which fiad tureé or' foin Men apiece) abour:-them, fome of which frid pur our

White Flags, in Token of Peace as they did the like
The Canoes were flat before and tharp behind, hewed our of one whole piece of RedWood, and would fail exceding swiftly
When they came nearthe Dutch Ship, they leap .d, tome of them, into the Water, and foam to is, having, their Hards foll of Coco's; and Ubs Roots; which they barter d for Mans, and Beads giving four or five, Coco's for dod that Day for Ore hundred and eighty Coco's. And this Trade bringing fo many of them aboard; that they Knew not how to stir their Ship; they fens their Shallop to the other land, to fee for a more convenient place to befit by'a huge number of Canoes, fill, with a mad fort of People, armed with great Clubs. -that forthwith boarded fief;' and attacked the 'Men. They firing their Mus jets upon' them, were langh'd ar by the'Savages, in that with of much noife, they had done fo little harm; but the nextrouch, when one of them was foot through the Breaft, they had done making Sort with the Muskets, and learn'd to keep their diftance'a little better for the rime to come. They were laity, well proportion'd Men, id good Swimmers; but naked, thicrinh, and very fantaftical in the dreffings of their Hair: Some were it mort, others long, forme curled, and others plaited and folded up in fericral Fanions.
The Twelfth they came in their Canoes again, laden with: Cocos's, Bananas, Utes Roots, Hogs, and fresh Water. There was a. great Contention amongst them, who thou'd ger fief to the Ship; and thole that were behind, being hut out by them before, fine they cou'd not foam under the Canoes, hooding Bunches of Coco's in their Mouths, and climbing up the fides of the Ship like fo many Rats, and thar in fuck Swarms, that they were fired to keep them off with Staves: The Dutch barter'd wired to keep them off. with Staves: The Dutch bartered with them that Day for Twelve hundred Coco's; which made twelve to every Man's hare, they being Eighty five in all: in all.
The Negro's wondered very much ar the Strength and Greatness of the Dutch Ship; and rome of them crept down under it, and knock'd upon the bottom of it with Stones, to try how ftrong it was.
The Negro. The King of thole Barbarians fence a black Hog to the to the ship. ward; and quickly after he came himfelf to take no Reward; and quickly after he came himself, in a large Ship of their fanion, attended with Thirty five Canoes; when he was a litre way from the Ship, he began to call and he was a little way from the Ship, he began to call and cry out aloud, and all his Company did the like; this being their way of bidding Strangers Welcome. The Dutch, received them with Drums and Trumpets, which mightily pleased and furpriz'd them; and they to teltific their Sene of the Honour that was done them, used all their Ceremonies of bowing their Heads, and clapping their Hands together over them, which they are accuftom'd to upon much Occafions. The King, our of his Ship, font them a Marion for a Prefent; which Kindncfs they requited with che Gift of an old Hatcher they requited with the Gift of an old Hatchicr, rutty Nails, Glass-Beads,and a piece 6 f Linen Cloth; things which His Majesty was highly pleased with, and made many a fine Bow for. He was nor to be known from his Subjects, by any Tokens, but the Reverence they mow him; for as they were all naked, fo he had no other Apparel, but that which Nature gave him. He would nor be perfwathat which Nate gave him. He would nor be perfwated to come aboard, tho' the Prince his Son did, and was well -entertained there.

The Thirteenth, A. M: the Ship was furrounded with a whole Amado of Ships and Canoes; the King himfelf being there in Peron; and in the Twenty three Ships and Forty five Canoes, that compos'd the Fleer, no less than Seven or Eight hundred Mon.
They pretended at first to come only upon the Defign of Trade, and told then by Signs, thar they were their very good Friends; and would fain have them fail to the other Inland, where they thou'd find a much better Accommodation in all Respects.
The Indians 20husk the Ship.

But notwithstanding all there fair Pretences; they GuMeted forme Mifchicf was hatching by there Barbarians. Neither: were their Suspicions unjust ; for they quickly began to catt themflves'all round the Ship, and cnclos'd it on every ide, and then with a great Outcry, upon the Alarms of a Drin, they' gave the Affaut. The King's Ship was the fore-moft in -the Action; and ruh'd in with Such a force ar the Dutch, Ship, that the Heads of the two Canoes before it, were dinned all to pieces, with the vo lance of the Shock: The reft came on as well as they could, and Showered in great Stones upon them. But the Dutch threw in lick Quantities of Pellets amongst them our if their Muskets, and three great Guns loaded with Musker-for, and Nails, thar all thole in the Canoes, this i lay within reach, were glad wo leave them, and fees, Weir Refuge in the. Water. Being thus put to the Rout. they difpers'd themselves, and shifted for their lives, as, well as they contd.
There treacherous People were the Inhabitants of the lower of thefe two Intinds; which therefore they called \(x_{r \text { moors fiend }}\) Traitors Inland.
They fer fail

barter : They brow here with ten or twelve Canoes, to which they had Beads in exchange: And whatsoever for one gave, or the other'recciv'd, was conicy'd on booth fides, by a Rope let down from the Stern of the Ship. Bur there fame Indiaris. went from chis Trade presently to another which was wore, viz. robbing the Shallop; which they found employ'd in founding, ar forme diftance; from the Ship. They offend to board her, and drag her away, but they in the Shallop, with their Guns, Pikes; and Curtlaffes, ga c them Such an Entertainment, that having len two of their Company kild'd, they were glad to hurry away as fat as they cou'd. And while there flood and cried for them afhoar.
This II and was full of black on the top; 'twas well fock'd with Coco-Trecs and fen veral forts of Herbs:- There were fe coral Houles along the Sea-fide and a great Village clade by the Strand: There was no convenient Anchoring here, is being exIffy it, and fails away South Welt, intending to purfue the Discovery of a Souther Continent.
The Eighteenth, they were under 16 Dcgr s Min: where they had very uncertain W. Winds: And now they began to consult about ane future profecucion of their Voyage.
WIlliam Schoutcn, the Matter, told them, Thar they were now ar leal Sixteen hundred Leagues Eat ward from the Coats of Peru and as they had nor yet difcover'd any part of the South Land, To neither was there any farther Wed of their doing it. That they had laud much on in that Course which they had hitherto purfind, they mould certainly fall Southward upon New Guinea, where if they found no paffage, they mut unavoidably be loft; fine could be impolfibie to go back Eastward again, by hance would be impoolnbe to go back Eat ward ag al reafon of the Eatery Winds that blow continually.
Upon there, and ocher Accounts, he proposed it as the bet way to alter their Courfe, and fail Northward, fo as to fall in Northward upon Acer Guinea.
This Propofal back'd with fo many good Reafons, was they alice r embrac'd by all the Company, fo that racy immediately their crourfe:
The Nincrecnth, a N . N. W. Course. Courfe Northward, they had 2 lands ar Noon, about 8 Leagues diftance from them, Other then ling N. E. and by E. and that feem'd to be a Cannonhor diftant from each other. Upon this they facer N.E. intending to fail about the L and, having fair Weather, but a fall Gale no bring them along.

The Twentieth, they continued fill labouring to get to the Lind.
The Twenty firn, being about a League from the they gave no manner of provocation, yer they were rudefly insulted by forme of them, who began to hollow, and upon the to difchart their Wooden Affagayes at them. But Hectors began to camper, and that in no little hate and confufion, leaving behind them two of their Company dead, and a Shirt which they had ftolen our of the Ship, and had now no Stomach to carry away with them.
Ship, I went fecond, there came more of them to the ing Coco's. Oboes Kors, and roatted Hogs, which they bartered for Knives, Beads, and Nails. There People were all as curious in che Arts of Sivimming, and Diving, if an opportunity ware given them:
Their Houses flood all along the Strand, which were corcr'd with Leares'at the top, and had a fort of a Pent:G

The 22d，they fail＇d W．\＆W．\＆by N．under 4 degrees 45 minutes，and that Day faw ar leaft 12 or 13 Illands，screral one clofe by another，lying．W．S．W．from them，and reaching S．E．\＆N．W．About half a Leaguc，but they left then a Larboard．
The 24ch，the Wind S：they faw 3 low Iflands a Lar－ board，lying S．W．from them，the one very fmall，the other two each of them rwo Miles long，all very full of Trecs．They call＇d them the Grecn－IRands；the More Grempal about was ragged and cliffy，and allowed no Anchoring． Another high lland prefenred ir Ielf with 7 or 8 Hovels forth right，lying W．\＆by N．which they faild by the 3sth，St．Folon Batprif＇s Day，and therefore calld it．St Folm＇s－T／land．Arthis time they faw very high Land to the S．W．which they thought to be the Point of New－Guirea Sr．7otmit they reach＇d is by Noon，and failing along by ir，and finding no Anchoring，fene the Shallop to Sound，butno bottom cou＇d be difcover＇d．Here 2 or 3 Canoes of bar－ barous People alfauited the Shallop with theirStings，but the Guns carried the Day，and quickly difpers＇d them： They were very black，cnuirely naked，and fake a Lan－ guage quite differcne from the former．They keps fires upon their Coalt all thar Night，and fome of them in their Canoes came lurking abour the Ship；and tho the Dutch， when they had difcover＇d them，did all they cou＇d to ob－ lige them, yer they won'd underftand nane of the Signs / bearing S. W. and this they thought to be the Hill Geom they made for Provifions, bur anfwerd all with horrible noifes and ourcries. They.Anchor'd this Night ar 45 Fa thom, uneven ground, in a Bay abour the Point of the Land; the Country was high and green, and afforded a Land; the Country was pleafann Profpect, and lay (as they guects'd) 1840 Leagues diftant from Pera.

The 26th, Ante Mcridiem, there came 8 Canoes up to the Ship, well fill'd with thefe Barbarians; and they as well Arm'd, after their manner, with Clubs, WoodenSwords and Slings. The Dutch rreated them kindly, and gave them feveral Toys to procure their Favour, or at leaft Pcace, and freedom from any difturbance by them, bur the Villains were not to be conquer'd by Kindnefs, nor taughr by good Manners, by any thing bur the great Guns, for prefenty they affaulred the Ship with all rheir force, and conrinu'd it obftinately rill the Cannon-fhor had gone through ic or 12 of them : Then they began to fly to their old Refuge, the Water, to dive and fwim for their Lives, but the Shallop purfuing them, knock'd fome on the Head, rook 3 Priforiers, and 4 of their Canoes, which made firing for the Ship. And now they cond undertand Signs, and procure Hogs and Bananas, "for thofe of them that wete Prifoners, to Ranfom themfelves, bur before they did nor know whar the Dutch meant by their Signs. And tho the Dutch were 10 Generous as to give one wounded Man his Liberty, yet chey were fo wife too as to fer another, in a betrer condition, arten Hogs Ranfom, which undoubtedly was the full value of him.
This Inand afforded a fort of Birds that were all red, and North of it lay another Illand, of which they made no other Difcovery, than only its pofition to this. They coricluded thefe People to be Papoos, becaufe of their thort hair, and'particular Dier of Berele mix'd with Chalk
The 28th, Poft Merid, they fer Sail from hence, and the next Day held a N. W. s N.W. & by N. Courfe, with amhifing Wind till Noon, and then 2 Calm. They had the Point of the Illand in view till the Evening, tho they fail'd along by the Land, which was very full of Bays and Turnings, and reach'd N. W. & N.S. by W. and the fame Day they faw 3 high Illands more, thar lay Northward from the great one abouts or 6 Miles, being then in 3 degrees 20 minutes.
The 3uth, Anse Meridiem, feveral Canoes of the black Indians came up to them, and Boarding the Ship by per miffion, brake Staves over the-Dutch in Sign of Peace. Their Canoes were finer than the others, and themfelves appear'd more Civil and Modeft, covering the Pudenda, which the others did not. They rubb'd their Hair over with Chalk, affecting to have their black Locks Powderd: They pretended to be fo Poor, thar they came to Beg, and not to bring any thing to the Ship; yet thofe four llands, from whence thefe Indians came, afforded good ftore of Coca's.

Futy 1. Ante'Meridiem, they Anchord between an ILand of 2 Miles long, and the firm Land of Nen-Guinea, and quickly were furrounded with 25 Arm'd Canoes of the fame People, who, the Day before, in Token of Peace, had broke their Staves over their Heads, and now came intending to braie them upon them. The Indians were not tedious in their Ceremonies before they enter'd upon the work they came upoti, 2 of them fix'd themfelves upon 2 Anchors that then hang our of the Ship, and with their Girdles began to tug the Ship, thinking to draw her afhore; the reft lay abour the fides of her, and gave 2 brisk Onlet with their Slings, and other weapons, but the everlafting plague of the Barbarians, the greas Guns, flazter'd Men and Canoes ar that rate, that they were forc'd to recire, with the lofs of 12 or 13 kill'd, and a far greater number wounded. After this tight, they Gaild peaceably along the Coafts, having a good gale, and bolding a W. N. W. and a N. W. & by W. Courfe.

The 2d they were in 3 degrees 12 mioures, and faw low land a Larboard, and right before them 2 low Illand: they faild gently W. N. W. with a llight Cuscent off to the Warer E. N.E.
The 3d, they Kaw high Land bearing Weft, abour is Leagues from the other 1Aand, and in 2 degrees 40 minutes

The 4ch, as they were paffing by the 4 Illands aforemention'd, they had a fudden profpect of 23 others great and fimall, high and low, which they left the moft of them 2 Srarboard, and only 2 or 3 a Larboard. They were fome of them a League, fome a Cannon-thor diftant from each other, and lay in 2 degrees 30 min . litde more or lefs.
The 6 th , with very variable, and fome formy weacher, they had, Anse Meridiem, i very high Hill before them, menapi in Banda; bur a nearer approach difcover'd three Hills more like it, that lie to the North, abour 6 or 7 Leagues diftant, and this fighr determin'd that Hill not to be that of Banda. Behind ir lay 2 large Tract of Land E. & W. and reaching E.S. E. of a very great extenr, and very uneven; this they guess'd to be Nero-Guinea, but held off from it that Night
The 7th, A. M. they tail'd towards thefe mighry Hills they had in profpect the day before, and found rome of them to be Volcanos; for which reafon they nam'd the Iland Vulcan's-Ifand, there being fo good a reprefentation of his burning Forge. The Illand was well Inhabited, thatand and full of Coco's, bur there was no conveniency of Anehoring there: The People were naked, and excreme y fearful of the-Dusch, and their Language fo very differenr from all thereabours, that none of the Blacks they had with them' cou'd underftand them. There appear'd more Iflatidstoo the N. & N. W. but they held their Courf to a very low one that lay N. W. & by W. from them which they reach'd that Evening. The Water here the oblerv'd to be of divers colours, green, white and ych low, which probalily was the effect of the mixrure of Tome Rivers, becaufe it was far fweeter than the Sea water, and was full of Leaves and Boughe of Trces; Come of which had Birds and Crabs falter'd upon them
The 8th, they held a W.S. W. & W.N. W. Courre having a Srarboard a high Inand, and anorhcr fomerhing lower on Larboard: They reach'd the Land, Poft Acrid. the fame Day, and Anchor'd at 70 Fachom, in a good andy bottom, about a Cannon-fhor from the fhore: This iland was in 3 degrees 40 minutes, feem'd to be an unhealshy place, and yielded nothing confiderabie bia a litle Ginger. 'Twas Inhabited by Dapoos, whofe ridicu-Deforneed ous Fancies in the Matrers of Drefs fuperadded to rheir Reople own nararal Deformity, made them appear liste Num of Monfters in Humane Narure. There were hardly any of them but whar had fomeching odd and ftrange, cither as to the bignels, or pofition of their Limbs; but then che Strings of Hogs-ceeth, thar hung abcur their Necks, and their perforared Nofes, with Rings fafteñ din chem, rogether with flort frizled Hair, and very ill Faces, all pur together, wou'd have offended an Eye not extremely carious. Neither was the beaury of the Houfes much greater than that of the Inhabitants, being all mounted up uponStakes, 8 or 9 Foor from the ground.
The gth, Ante Meridiens, they Anchord in a more 000 venient Bay, \(2 t 26\) Fathom, in 2 Sandy bottom mix'd with Clay. There were two Villages of the Indians thas lay near the fhore, from whence fome of their Canoes brought Hogs and Coco's, but held up both at fo dear Rates, that there was no Bartering with them. And now, tho they had Saild folong by this New Land, yet they were fill unable to refolve themfelves whether it were Nem-Guineca or no: Their Chars did neither agree with one another, nor the Land they had in Profpect, which Unotrenin for the moft part run N. W. & by W. Comerimes more are. Wefterly, and fometimes again more Northenly; yee for all this icruple, (which they cou'd nor remove) they ftill held a W.N. W. Courfe, along by the Coalt, with a quiet, tho' dull forr of Weather; and fo by the help of the fream, that fec them abour the Weft; (as ir does all along that Coaft) they made 2 degrees 58 minures, the \(i 2\) th 20 Noon.
The 13th and 14th, they kept Sailing by the Coaft, having fomerimes very high, and arothers very low Land, befide them.

The isth, purfuing the fame Courfe, they reactid two low Inands, abour half 2. League from the MainLand, abour 2 degrees 54 minutes \(S\). I. Here chey had good Anchoring, from s and 6, to 40 Farhom; and feeing the Country well ftored with Coco's, the Boar and Shallop, well provided for an Attack, were difparch'd with Oriers to Land and get fome: Bur the Indians, it ceems, had oblerv'd them, and accordingly prepared for their Enrertainment when they Landed; and they gave them, pertaps, the warmeft Reception, with their Bows and Slings, that ever they met with, wounding ar leaft 16 of them, and-forcing them, norwirhttanding their Muskets, to retire.
The 16 th, Ante Meridiem, they Saild in berween borh the Inands, and Anchor'd at 9 Fachom; in a'very good place. The fame Day they Landed upon the leffer Inand, burme fome of the Indians Houles, and broughr as many Coco's as made three to every Man's fhare. The Barbarous People became more gentle, and good-natur'd, upon this Treatment, for the ith they came to make their Peace with Offerings of Coco's and Bananas, Ginger, and jellow Roots ufed for Saffron; they yielded to cruft the Dutch So far as to come aboard their Ship, where the Quarrel wasiperfectly made upy and the Hearts of the Indiam (wonby atew: Nails and Beads which they gave them) were incitely theirs.

The' 18 th they cominued Bartering for Coco's; Ba nanas, Calfante and Rapede; ;of the two former they'got as much as came to 50 Núts, "Znid. 2 Bunches of: Banianas a Man, of the towo later not fo much: This Papede and Caffanie are alfo Eaft-India Commodivies; and the latter particularly, is admirably good in the Wefl Indies, and far beyond that which they met with here. The People made all their Bread of it, and Bak'd it intolarge round Cakes:for that purpoie.: They call.d .the Name of their

\(1 a_{\mathrm{ands}}\) own liand Mon, which was the mofe Exiterly, the other over-againft in \(\mathrm{F}^{\prime}\) Son, and the farthermoft. a very high one and about 5 or 6 Leagucs from Nith-Guinea) Arimea. Thefe Pcople had probably been Vifited by fome Europenns be fore, for they had Spanib Jams and Porsimongt them they were nor furpriz'd ar 'grear Guns,' as the orhers ufur ally were, nor fo curious in looking into the Ship, as ab folute Strangers to fuch a thing mult be fuppos'd to be.

The 2 uft they Sail'd along by the land:N. W. and at Noon made i degree 13 minutes. The ftream drove them to a clufter of Iflands, where they Anchor'd at is Fathom, with Storms of Rain and Thunder, that Night.
The 23d, Arse Meridiem, ferting Sail from thence, fix grear Canoes overtook them a little from the Land, bringing dry'd Fifh, Coco's, Bananas, Tobacco, and a fmall fort of Fruir like Prunes. Indians from another Inand alfo brought Victuals, and Clirira-Porcelane, to Barter.
Thefe People, like moft of the Barbarians, were vaftly fond of Beads and Iron-work; but they were remarkably diftinguin'd from thofe of the laft IMand, by their larger fize, and more Orange-complexion. Their Arms were Bows and Arrows, and their principal Ornamems glafs Ear-rings, of fereral colours; and by thefe, as well as by other Signs, it appear'd that the Dutch were no the firft Europeans which thefe Pcople alfo had feen.
The 24th, being under halfa degree, they Steer'd N.W: which they beftow'd their Mafters Name; añd the Weft Point of it they call'd the Cape of Good Hope.

The 2 sth, they fawe a huge Tract of mineven Land on Larboard, lying S.S. W.

The 26th, they fied three Illands more, the Coaft reaching N. W. & by W:

The 27 th, they were tuder 29 minites, and having a fight of much Land to the Southwaid, fome very high, and fome as low,-they paft N.W. along by it. The 29th, at Night, they had an' Earthquake, which thook the Ship ar that rate, that the Men run frighened out of their Cabbins, expecting to find her run a-ground, or jolted againtt fome Rock; bur, upontrial, they found a depth of water that was unfathomable, and as plainly faw they were clear of all danger of Rocks and Sheives; fo that twas manifertly the effect of a violent concuffion of the Alveous and Submarine Regions, which caus'd and propagared a tremor all through the water, and thus difturb'd the morion of the Ship.
The 3oth, they put into a grear Bay, out of which finding no opening, they recumd to a Northen Courfe Bagrin : Here the Ship trembled again," with loud and like ro fet it a-fire, that in all probability it mult have flam'd, had not the Clouds, that furnim'd the pernicious firc, afforded water alfo, in prodigious howers of Rain, for the extinguilhing of it.
The 3 ift, with a Northern Courfe, in the Evening they pafs'd the Fquator a fecond time;-and being ent compals'd with Land all round almoft, they Anchored ar 12 Fathom, good ground; near a defolate Illand that hy clofe by the firm tand.
Atrguft 'I they made 15 minutes North. Lati and in the Evening, with a hatd ftream, went clofe to the Land; and becaule of the Calm, 'Anchor'd, tho' in a fallow *ater, and very rugged botcom:
The zd; they drove along with the fream; W. & W. & by N "with very tainy weather:
'The 3d, being ftill becalm'd, they Steer'd as before, and found a Bank to faris theSea, that they cou'd farce feethe Land, being in fome places 40 , friothers 20 , and fo to 12 Fathom, fandy ground s and the ftream there Went WS.W.
Thé Lame Day they made 35 minutes North Lat. and faw feveral Whales ind Tortoiles, with two Inands lying to rhe Weetwayd of them; and now they guefs'd they \({ }^{\prime}\) were ar che end of the Land of Nem-Gninet, having Sait Czso Teagues along by the Coalt. The Rains aind Candixiticoninued.

The sth, Anter Moridicm; Reveral Canoes came up to thent, bringing INdian=Beans;' Rice: Tobacco, and two: Birds of Patadife; they Barter'd for one of thefe, fine Birds' : which wis all white and yeillow.
:Thefe'Indians ipoke the Ternate-Language, and fome of Clamfon, the Merchant walaian; which latrer Tongtue, Clawfon, the Merchant, was well skill'd in. They were all of them finely Cloait'd abour their Waftes, fore with foofe Silks, others with Breeches, and fome Silkei Wreath' about their Heads, which were the Mabumetains of the Company; all of them in yeneral had Coal-black Hair, and good ftore of Gold and Silver Rings upon cheir Fingers. They Barter'd with the Datch for Beads, and other Toys, but had much more mind to Linen Clorf. They appear'd to be very fearful and fufpicious of them; a that degree, that they wou'd not rell them the Name of the Country; yer they judged that they were now at: one of the three Eafterly Points of Gilolo, and that there People were Natives of Tidore; which afterwards they found to be true.
The 6th, Ante Meridicm, they fet forwards, holding a Northerly Courfe, intending to Sail about the Norcherm Point of Gilolo. Point of Gilolo.
The 7th, they faw the North-Ealt Point of thatitind; called Moratay, which then lay S.S. E. from them.

The 8th, at Noon, they made 4 degrees 3 minutes North Lat. had there very formy Weather, and a Current that run Northward.
The gth and roth, they had variable Winds and Wean ther, and made 3 degrees so minutes.
The 1 th, they had a proipect of the Point MoraCurrenr drove they defign'd to have reach'd, bur the Current drove them off from the Land Norihward.
The \(3^{\text {th }}\), they made 2 degrees 58 minutes, the. Winds continuing ftill to mift abour, and the Rains falling pretry plentifully ; and to to the ifth.

This Day, with much roil and trouble, they gor under the Land, and Sail'd a'ong by the Coalt with fair Weather; in the Night they faw feveral Fires wpon the

They inform'd inem, that they came from the Villa Soppy, where, vcry lately, had been an Einglifh Ship, as alloa Pinnace of Amfterdam; that had lain there three Months, for a Lading of Rice; and thar fome of rhem wou'd Conduct them, the next Day, into the Road of Soppy:

The rgth, they Saild into the Bay, and Anctior'A at 10 Fathom, fandy ground; about a Cannon-hor from the thore : They Barter'd here for Sagow, Hens, Torooife and Rice.
ept. 17. with a good gale, they directed their Courfe to Ternate, fpying a good Sail making thither too, which, afterwards, they undertood to be the Morning-Star of Rotterdam, 2 Ship of 300 Tun, and 26 Guns. Their Shallop had lain in the Creek of Sabou, with thar Stup, three Nights, and from thencebrought then an Account, Thar there were 10 Dutch Ships; very well furnifi'd;:2r the Manillas, that waited there for an opportunity tozAttack the Spanifh Fleet coming to Ternatte: Thar Peter: Bor, in his rerum homewards, wieth 4 Ships,-was wreckid upon Maxricius-I/aind, one Ship of the 4 only efciping the fury of the Srorm.
Oatober 28. they pass'd by Facatra; and Anchor'd wirhout the. Inand :Here they found three Engli/h Ships, and three of Holland.
The next Night, Death (which had fortorn them all this long and tedious Voyage, which neither by the Miniftry of the devouring Waves, by infectious Difenfes, by the Darts of Indians; nor the far more cruel ftrokeiof Famine, had as yet made any fatal Impreffion upon them) now came and Vifited their Ship; and Summord one of the Company to begin a Voyage for the othertworld. Tis true, indeed, that two others had died out of ache other Ship, the Horne, loft long before, but the चnity till kept its Company intire to chis rime, and now had is leffen'd bur by the number of its Name; which was:vety ftrange, for Men who had Death ever before thems in o many Forms and Shapes, and coi'd not live (in theirway of Life) out of continual danger of a furprizer Bht their own Country-men, it feens, were more fevere in their treament of them, than this the moft formidable Enemy of Mankind \(\%\) Death had Arrefted but one of the whole Company, and this to0 a poor Wearher-beaten Traceller, facigu'd with a long añd coillome toyage; timight pombly be a great kindness, but for keritode

Of the frift Englifh Voyages to the Eaft-Indies, before the Eftabli/bment of the Eaft-Indian Society. Of Sighelmus, Mandevile, Stephens, Fitz, and other Englifh-mens Indian Voyages and Fourneys.

WE have feen the Ships of the moft Celcbrated Nations of Europe, piercing into the remotelt Seas, and traverfing the unknown Parts of the Globe. We have followed the Spani \(\beta\), Englijh, and Duteb CircumNavigators, through all the Parts and Sreps of their feve ral Voyages, and at laft feen them put lafely into their own Porcs
The Brave Maglianes, the Renowned Drake and Candifh, Van Noorr, Spilberger, and Schoutcr, have drawn the Lines of a Complete Navigation before us, and mark'd oux our way through the Nornhern and Sourhern HemiSpheres.
Bur leaving them with thofe feveral Characters of Glo ry, which their Difcoveries have defervedly fix'd upon them; we are now to enquire into the Performances of others: Which tho' they don'r reach the Fame of thofe firft Difcoveries, have yet been of as confiderable Advancage to their refpective Councries, as the others to the Worle in general. Thofe chat have open'd the rich Mines of Gulinen, that have brought the Spices of the Indies, and the Jewels too, with the coftly Drugs of the Happy Arabia, to their own Ccuntry; have made themfelves worthy to be taken Notice of, tho they have not found out any new Lands, nor furvey'd the mighry Globe from one Pole to the other. And what orher Nations have artempted of this kind (and how cheir Diligence has been rewarded) cheir own Hittories muft teftific to their Praife; but we have now the Performances of the Engliß Nation; peculiarly lying before us; which how profirable and fuccef ful they have been, the following Book will in fome meafure difcover.
Tis true, thar fince the Eftablifhment of the EaftIndian Company, in Queen Elizabeth's time, the Eaftern World has been more curioully fearch'd, and the Advantage of a Correfpondence with it more effectually proved by Experience: But that Society did not make the firft Englif Travellers, nor introduce our firt Converfe with Foreign Parts.

Sigbetorns (a) Bifiop of Sbiraburn in King Alfred'stime, oritames was fent by that devout Prince, into the Eaff-Eudies, to Tmvis 5 vigit the Sepulchre of Sc. Thoman, by whofe means the \({ }^{20 / 2}\) Englifb Nacion had an early View of the Riches of thofe (a)wimis Countries, in the Spices and Jewels which the Facher ciofition brought back with him.
And afier that, another (b) of our Nation, travelled (b) amm almoft over all the Eaftere World, bearing the Tarsars Mor 124 Company, in their many famons Expedirions. There's no need of mentioning Sir Fobm Mamdeoih, and his many nonomith Years Travels through the Eaff, fince they are entent writuen by himfelf, and the famous Geographer Ortalim.
And in thofe times, while the Holy War was mainotin'd againft the Saracems and Turks (in which we know the Englifo had a leading part), there's no doube but feveral of them being drawn thither, did vifit ocher pars of the Eaff befides. Bint even in Cineen Elizabetb's time, before the forming of that Sociey, there were Ceveral Ergifib men hat perform'd very confiderable Voyages.
Firft we have thar of Ibomion Seromes, from Lisbian to 0 omm. Goa, by the Cape of Good Hope : Wrimen by timfelf at Gax, and dared Nov. 10. 1579.
Then the Voyage of (c) Rclpb Fitr, through Smia and time. Babylonia, to Oname; and to to feveral ocher pars of the Eaft. This was begui A. D. 1583. and comimed wo 1591.

Alfo the Voyage of George Raymoond, and Fames Lavo a d. sse cafter, wo divers parts of the Eaff-Erdies, with Three cunjids Ships, the Penelope, the Merchane Roval, and the Efreard \({ }^{-3}\). Bonaventure : Of which we fecond was fent back from Soldanba, near the Cape of Good Hope. And the ochertwo were afterwards parted by 2 Stom, near Cape; Cori entes : So that the Boncoenture alone finin'd the Voyage.
In the next place we may reckon thofe Englifb-men that accompanied the Dusch, in feveral of their Circum-Navigacions; as Timothy Shotten, Tbomat Spring, Fcbn Cald-Entifame wel', with leveral others. And 'ris obfervable, that the vorager Exglifh by frequent Vifirs, had made themfelves fo well known, and had procur'd to much Efteem in thofe Em

\section*{The Unbappy Voyage of Mr. Benj.Woud, intothe Eaft-Indies.} Flee of three Ships equippd principally at the Charges of, Sir: Robert Duclly; was pur under the Comirand, of Mr. Benjamin Word. The Ships were the Bear, the Bea's if ifelp, and the And the Merchants emptor'd in this Voyage, Benjamin. Aicbard Allor. and Mr. Thimas Bromfield, of the were Mr. Ricbard Allof, and Mr. incmas Bromfird, ore into the cemoceft Parts of the Eeft, and fo vifir China beforc they came home, obrain'd Queen Elizadeth's gracious Letters to the Great King of that Country, on cheir bechalf. The Lecter began in this manner: Elizabction Dci, &cc
Chime, by proteft ther from Dangers and Difafters abroad, nor make Ehthbrit the Winds and Waves farourable to them ; fince noc only the whole Flect was mifcrably loft, butrde particular Relation of thofe Tragical Adventures mifcartied too. But yet fome Light into this:Bufinels was afforded, by a Let ter happily intercepted in iess paffage fiom the \(W_{\delta} f(-\)-Indies, writen by Licentiale Alcafar de Villa Scrur, Auditor of the Royal Court of Sc. Domingr, Judge of Commifion in Puerto: Rico, and Caprain-Gencral of New Andalufin.
This Letrer was ditected to the Kinge, and the Royal Council of the Indies; za Account of which, as much as relaties to the prefent Buffinets, is hete fubioynd: Tho the thing is fo tmperfect; and the miin Bafinefs of the Englifh Flect fo obifurely touch'd, that tis not eafic to pick any thing farisfactiory out of it. In. horr, the Sam of the Story this Spaniard tells his Mafter, is this.
corme of a That the tbree Englif :Ships Vefore-mention'd, met with min tere threc Rortuguezc, (then the King of Spain's Subjects) one rifies, a wrery fair from, particularly defign'd for shat Printe together with no ogft dealiof. Moner, and very valuable Godids All this Rrey fell into the Hands'of the Englifo: Esfeid niards fay, They roibfd the Ships; and calls thef whitreves for't : Bar he might have been more Civil in his Expretfions: For Englcnd and Spain were then ar War ; and the Robbery was no mote, than what all Nations in the World do allow and prictice ar fuch times as that. Afrer this, the Englifh Fleet was to pefter'd with Sicknefs, that (as he relates) they all dicd to four; which fmall number of Survivors, put themfelves, with all their valuable Plunder, into a Boas, and fo came to the Ine of \(U_{t:-}\) as, three Leagues from Porto Rico, from whence the Letter was dared.
Bur what becamie of the three Ships, or how theie Men bound for the Effl-Indies, came to wander to that Inand in the West-Indies, is letr wholly in the dark; the bet way is to make 2 Miracle ont and kay. Thar they were brought in there to be punifh'd for the Sin of Robbing. the Cartholick Ships.
When chey ware come to Utias, they broughe all their Goods aftoar; bur liv'd, ir. feems; in very ill Circumflances there, and hardly knew how, or which way to dipoof of themielves.

Going from thence to Porrso Rico; for a Supply of Wa ter, they left one of the Company belind them at that place; whether by chance, or out of Design, is uncer-rain ; but however. he took it fo ill, that his Fellows had abaindon'd him, that hic difcovcr'd the whole Bulne fs ro a cerrain Gang of Sfaniateds; and toid them wherecthey might find the chrce Enge: fo amen, and all the K.is's Treafure, upon the Tlle of \(Z\) ctias Thefe Loyal Spaniards refolv'd nor to lone this oppoxto nity of clieaing their King, wenc directly thither, and having wirh falic Pretences of Fricndhip, trepang'd thc Engtifhemer into a Parkey with thicm, they Perfwaded them to refign themfelves, with all the: \({ }^{\text {B }}\) Bocry, into their hands, which they took poffefion of ; and fo dividing the Money amongft theni, they left the Jewels, the Gold, and the Plate, ini a fare Repolioory under ground. Bar yet raking carn to leayc out fome lircle marter of Silver Barss and ocher Goods, to give a colour to their own Scory they firft of all fer upon the threc Evglifh, conrary to heir Promis. given, "murder'd two of them; bur the chird happity cap'd their hands : And to make all the furer, poyfon'd the fourth, that had given them the firft Information, when they canic back to Porro Rico.
Being come thither, whey gave the Governour an Acount of their Adventure ar Zetios; , chat is, as much of it as wias for their purpofe to diforier. They fwore they had found no more. Treafure than what they then came to tell of : And that they were forc'd to kill threc Engliffmen in fight, before they con'd come to be Maters of trat:
They laid thicir Plor as decp, and manag'd is as cuisningly as was poffible : Ic wanted no help of Lying and Perjury ; no Affitance from Subornation, Chear, and Forgery, buit what it had in abundance; ncere any plot tad a becter Tielc to the Devil's Protection, for the bignefts of it, than this; becaufe he never had more Concern ini any. Bur all wou'd nor do; and the furviving Englijfoman was the means of their Ruinc. He made 2 nift to wim a-ftride a Timber-log, from Uxias to Porto Ricc; and there difcover'd at large the Verrues of thofe good Carhoicks, who had murdcr'd his Companions, robb'd their King, put a rixick upon che Governnocint, forfworct riem(elles fo luttily as they had done ; and after all, had Brafs crough to ftare chic Evidence in the Face, and deny all. At leaft they denied the moft material Particulars of the Fact; and as they begat with Lying and Perjury, fo they went- ctrough-ftirch with thicir Buffinefs, Lying and Swearing on rot the end of the Chaprer.
The Goveriour laid them in Irons, till all the P̈roofs that cou'd be pick'd up, were brought in againft them ; and tome of them not thinking fir to lie therc in Prifon till that time came, broke Jail, and left the Governour, to look his Prifoners where he cou'd: Bur wherher the Villains fell inno the Hands of Juftic, and were hang'd afterwards or no, is not worth ones while to enquire. However, this paffage is fufficient to affurc us, that the Quecn's Letrer to the King of China did mifcarry ; and this firft Fleer fer out for the Eajt-Indies, did nor reach cheirdefired Port

\(M^{\mathrm{R}}\). MEilderbath, when he writ this Letect, was sas he feems to innimatc) upon his Return for Englicn.l; he had been ar the Court of the Grear Mogul; and was in his way homewards as far as Casb:n in Perfin; when. he gave the World this Account of his Proccedings. The Letter is the more valuable, becaufe we have here the Relation of a very carly Vifit made to the Gfrcat Mogme, and the Original, as it were, of our Conrcfloondence with that Country.
'He cells us, That becing arriv̀d at Lefor, hic fent 2 Difparch to the Court at \(A g r a\), to give Notice of his being there; as alfo, to defire leave to conce and treat with thar Prince, about the Bu:finefs thaz .broughr him inio Indiat kewch fent, 'and the good Humour he exprefs'd upon rhar occafion.

Burhe was quickly fent for, ro girc an Accouns of his Bigincfs and Defign in coming thicher, to the King and his Council: Which having done in all rhe feveral Particulars of it, relaring to Trade and Commerce; according to his Orders, he infifted upon the Grand Point between the Porruysers and us. He urged, That Her Majcty of Eig find liaving then Wars with the Spanijh and Portugu=z , delired leare for her Subjects to treat them as Encmies in his Porte, as well as other where; that they might feize thcirShips, and do all orther things. in purfransc of a jut War, without giving him any Offence.
All his was heard, and commitred to writing, and an Anfwer promis'd in a hort time. But the Great Mesibl inftcad of confulting with his Council, fell to asking the Iefuite's Advice, about an Anfwer to Mr. Miziderbati's Propofals: This was undoing the Bufincfs to all intents and purporss; and in had been as good for the Intrith to have lad the King of \(S_{i}\) rif hinfelf coor teed in the Carc.
The locitits Mabice and Calumas.

The Jefuites, without Crupic, told hin, Thar the Enstife were a People of a very bad Character, in the WC licen World ; that wifh'd no Good to any Princes, whofe Frimudiate and Correfrondence thoy courred: Bur in all Attempes of that Nat:irc, ftudied only their own Ineerelt and Ad:antage; which they woud not fick to purfue by any \(\lambda\) is. heds, howfocver prejudicial to the Couneries where they canc. Befides, thar this Eniglift-man now crept in:o his Courr, was bur a Spy upon hum, fent thither by his defigning Counrry-men, to whecdla aud inlinuate himfelf into His Majefty's Favour, by that reans to open fome Doce for shem to enter into the Couatry by; which if they once did, he wou'd be purto a grear deal of trou ble before he wou'd be able ro ger rid of them again.
Thefe Stories did the Bufinefs effectually; and the Te fuitescolling them with an Air of Serioufncts, and a feeming Concern, that they were forc'dit to make fuchi if Reexhe ports of a Chrittian Nation, is curn'd the Mogul quire out Gurdb of the Road of kind'Thoughts and Defigns towards them and produced chis flar Refolve; Tbe Englifh Demands:/ball nop be grenied. Yet all was carried very fair to Mremil denloall; and the Maters were thus poftively conclided apaint him, he-bad no Notice of it, bur by the privite Hints of his Friends at Court Sometime afterthis, the Care being calld over again (and the Jefuites, tis probable, not in the way to counter mine chofe farourable proceedings'; the King order'd lome Arvicles to be drawn up, and fent to Mr. Mizleinberlf; which whatfocver Points of Privilege they contain'd (for he does nor diftinctly tell us) yet offered nothing as to the Main Concem about the Porrugucze.
This Grand Onifion made him another Walk to Courr to demand the inferting of thofe other Articles too ; the Subjcet Matter of which was equally a part of his :Commulion with thofe relating to Trade.
In Anfwer to chis, he had good Words, and fair Pró- grangox mifes : But the Council was to be confulted again, beforebur not 1 the Matter cou'd be abfolutcly derermined. In fiort, the Conncil wás so tedious and now in coming to a Refolve; that a vaft deal of precious time was confum'd in attend ing them: The Bufinefs was continvally adjournd; and put off from one Scafon to ancther; and fo'rwas like to run on withour crer coming to an iffue. Yer in this: tnrorval did the ilogul fend once or twice for Mr. Mitidentiaf, and in a fricndly manner, chide him, for nor coming offner to Court ; telling him at the fame time, thar his BuGines thould at laft be done to his Content.
The Favours that he had received al! this rime from this Prince, werchure the common Prefenc of Apparel, and about sool. Fent him in dry Mone; ; which Sum wou'd go bur a litede way in cantying a Man through the Exconces of fuch an Employmenr. Well, he had now once more a Profpect of Success; but fill ir prov'd but a Pro ficet : He lis'd iry Months longer in the Faith of this Promife; bat then his Vcrue was Jaded, and won'd carry him nofurther. Befide; the Jefuires had io circumented him on ercry hand with their Policies, thar he was nor able to make one fep towards his Deliverance. They had The ef erie fill'd the Hands of the Conrt-Offcers with Portugal-Moncy, outbent to that degree, that there was no room for Ergiiß Coin, him when he came to try that Mcthod; but the swort of all was, they bril?d his Interpetcer, fo chatmingly too, that when the Buiness requird his Affiftance, the Rogene fell bur with him, and run away. Herc was a Man left in a weet Cafe! His Bufinefs urgene upon him, his Adverfarics caballing and prating about his Ears, and himfelf gnorant of the language he was to anfwer them in. This was almoft as bad as curring his Tonguc our, or fewing up his Mouth; nay, 'tis the fame thing in this Cafe: For 2. Man without an Interpreter, can do no more than the that's gagg'd, or has lof his Tongue.
Mr . Mildenball, Kad now bur one way lefr to recrietc himfelf, and his declining Affair; and that was, to ftudy the Perfane Tongue himrelf, under the Direction of forme good Maiter, which he did very hard; and infix Months got fo much Skill in it, as to be iable to fpeak it with a good meafure of flucncy. Now he ftood in need of no orher affiftance, and the Jefaites cou'd not prevent hîs Speaking, withour they robb'd him of this Interpreter thar he carried always about with him.
Thus furnifh'd with Peffen thercforc, and able to Speak his own Mind, away he went to Court, and in as gencle Terms as he durt, reproach'd the Grear Mogel with his unkind Credulity, in beliering the Randerous Reports of the Jefuites; defring to ftay no longer in the Country than till he had given back the Lye to the Teeth of thof Mcn, in the Prefence of His Majefty, and all the Court.
ADay of So 2 Day of Audience was appointed ; and there was a aft Aflembly of Nobles, to hear this Controverific mana ged berween the Engiffi-man and-the Jefuites. In morr, Mr. Mildenlonll made it appear, That the Jefuites had a bus'd the Englif Nation, in the Character they tiad given of in; in that they were nor fo bafe and defpicable as they had reprelented them; nor fo injurious to thole Princes and Councries where they were: fetrled : And all this, by fhewing the Corrcfpondencies the Englifh kepr abroad, and what confiderable Princes both ing Europe and Afia, were fond of their Fricndnip, and rcady to Court ir. He added farther, That he wou'd cafly prowe the Jefuites, uites knew 'rwas all Matter of Fact, and to held their Tongues, withour cver offering to nte them in their own defence - but all the Affembly was diverted with the fporr on'r, and the King had now fonc profir by them in his Mirth.
(for all their Flatteries) to be no Friends to His Majcty as indeed to no other Princes, being Men of fuch Principles, as no Govemment cou'd be cafic with, thar knew them perfectiy well." And becaufe they feern'd no be fo mighty careful of His Majefty's Rrofic, he ask'd them publickly, What they had done; or procur'd that wav? And how many Prefents had been made to the King, by chem, or their Friends, in all the twelve Year that they had followed the Court? The Fathers cou'd make no Anfwer to rhis unfappy pinching Queftion: Bur however the young Prince ftep'd our, and anfwer'd for them ar, this dead lift, rellimg all the Company; It was moft true, Obains bis they had been a trery barren Soil to His Majelty, and end al Latt ic had never yielded him in all chis eleyen or twelve year, the Ring's the leaft Fruir, upon any Accounr whafoever. The Je-Grancta
To conclude, the King after Kome farther Conference, was fo well pleasd and fatisficd, that he gave peremptory Orders for the immediate Difpatch of Mr. A:T/denh/ll's Affair, commanding the feveral Articles of privileges he infifted upon; to be drawn up with all the Particularic and Exactne's. that cou'd be, and deliver'd to him with out farther delay.

Having receiv'd thefe Writings (as he did in a few Wecks after), and now compleared his Victory over the Jefuires; he went away for Perifa, and there wric his Succeffes.

\section*{The Woyage of Captain John Davis, to the Eaft-Indies: Pilot in a Dutch Ship. Written by Himfelf.}

3Arcis the Fificenth; we fet out cf Fluffing with two Ships, the Lion, and the Liorie/s, the formet:of; 40 c Tun; and 123 Perfons aboard her, the later of: \(250^{\circ}\) Tun, and abourt 100 Pertons The Owacrs and Ad vencurers were Mu/brom, Clark, and Monef, of Midfleurgh: And our chief Commander was Contelius Houteman, who had 2 Commiffion from Grave Martrice.
The Twenry fecond we anchor'd in Terber, with very rough Winds.
April the Serenth we fet fail; and the Twentiech we had lighr of Porto Santo.
4. D. \(x\) s99. The Twerry chird we fell in with Inand Palma; and the laft weecame to the lles of Cape Verd.
May the Firft; we anchor'd-at-Sr. Nicholas, one of thofe Inands, in. 56 Degr. x6:Min. N. L. We warce'd here the Seventh; and lettingifail the Ninth, we fell in with St. \(76 g^{\circ}\)
Furce the Ninth; we fell in with the Coaft of Braft, in 7 Degr. South Lat. And not being able for the unfteidy a)the or \(C\) nds and:bad Weather, to compals the doubling of (a) ine fr- Cape St. Aurufine, we fhap'd our Courfe-for the little Iland Ecrnardo Lorianba (a) in 4 Degi South Lat
The Fifreenth:we anchord upon the North-fide of is, in 18 Eactiom.
This Inand is very fruitful, arid exceedingly well ferved with all Coneniences for Life \(:\) Here is good Water, Beefs, Goars, Hogs, Hens, Melons, Guing-Corn; plenty of Sea-Foivl and tifi. There's no fearcity of any ching but Inhabirants, who are wainting to tafte the Bleffing and Pleafires of the place,-and' to fit down ar the' wellfurnim'd. Table, which:-Nature has'here fpread. There were but twdive Negroes, eight Men, and four Women to be found hete; and tbefe the Portugucze left to Till the Ground, and tơ do neceifriry Country Bufincts.
(b) Cape Ste Arguft the Twenty: fixth, we left this Inand; and the \(\rightarrow\) mprypine. lat of the Month we doubled Cape St.Ausuftine (b) Sands

Noovinuer the Elerenth, we anchord in the Bay (c) of Soldania, in 34 Degr. Sourh.: Lat. and to Leagues from the Cape of Good Hofe; and here we found three good Riters. We traded with the Natives at very cheap and cafie-Rates, having fat Shecp and Oxen for old Nails and pieces of lion, a Penny-worth of which Mctal, would purchate the bravet \(O x\) in the Country. There Animals The fome Peculiaxitics in their. make in this Councry : The Oxen have a grear lump of Flelh, (like che Bunch upon a Camel's Back) between the Shoulders; and the Shecp have no Wool, bur long fhaggy Hair, and mighry Tails (all enrire Far) which weigh twelve or fourreen Pounds. The Natives are of a dark Olive Complexion their Hairblack and curl'd, like the Negrocs of Argola, their Faces painecd with fercral Colours, and all naked, cxcepe a thort Cloke of Skins, and Sandals upen their Feer Fect
They are a atrong active Pcople, and very fwifr Runners. Their way of fpeaking is rudc and ftrange, and hardly Human: You hear noching bur a parcel of ungrateful inarticulare Sounds; and if one can compare it sime ac:to any thing, it is like che Clocking of a Brooding Hen. Proplsof the Such as they are, they are Subjects to the Grear King of Bay. Helos of Ant for Soldices. as as much unfurnifi'd of the Helps of Art for Soldiers, as they are ill made by Nature which norw, having no Wcapons ar all but Wooden:Darts, which notwithftanding they can manage to fome mifchievoas purpores.
Tho they are fo very rude and brutifh & Reople as they are, yer they are fubrle cnough to undertand an Affionc, and to lay a Plot to Revenge it, and conceal their Rerenge too in a very deccirful manner, till they have a fir time to exccute it.
One of the Dutcli having fome way difgutted them, they abrented themfelves from us for three Days, and in the mean time gave the Alarm to the Counrry; by grear Exres made upon the Mountains. The Plor being ripe for Hills: and down they came in vaft Multitudes from the Hills; and that we might nor fufpect any ill Defign, they broughr huge Troops of Catrel along with them. Maters appearing thus with a Face of Trade, and nor of War, and we bufie in viewing our Bargains of Catrel; they made a fudden and furious Affaule upon us, and Company was Hand-darts forthick; that chirteen of our their Re Company was loit in a trice, and the reft began to run venge. away in great diforder; the. Barbarians pirfuing them at he Hecls. In this Hurry, our Captain, (who did nor think fit to venture himfelf in the Skirmin) ( Kenr us a par cel of Weapons from the Ships; Swords, Targers, Pikes and Muskets: Bur not being able to fend Courage along with them roo, thefe Armsin the Hands of Cowards did liutle good, and rbe Burden of the Action lay moft upon one Einglifhoman moxe, and my felf.' Butac latt the Rabble retired, and we went all aboard chat Night; only our Maftift-Dog would not go along winh us any the Gencrous Crature defpis'd us, and was atham'd o fuch Cowardly Company.

The Country hercabours has a good Soil, and a pleafanr Air - ir abounds with ureful Plants, as Mint, Cala mint, Plantanc, Ribwort, Trefoil, Scabious, EGc.

The Tweney feventh, we fet Sail, and the laft of this Month we doubled the Cape of Good Hope.
December the Sixch, we doubled the Cape des Iguilos (d) which is the moot Southem Promonory or Aficke. If in 35 Degr. Souch Lat. and here the Comparshas no Va riation.
Fanuary the Sixch, we foll in with the Ine Madarafcar Short of Cape Remana: We fpenr all the reft of this Month in attempts to double that Cape; but not being able to to it, we bore room with the Bay Sr Augufine (e), on ahe Min.

Filnuary the Thisd wanchord in the Bay and upon our landing all the multitude of Pcople that ftood upon the Shore, prefendy difpers'd and fled. The occafion of which avoiding of us, was, that our Captain in a forme
The Reoplc or Stumgap. Voyare, had abufed the Pcople chere, and pur one of the Way hy, we Natices to Death in a very barbarous manner. Yer afcer un the ac-

Having endured Diftrels here by Hunger, (the affronted Natiyes refuling to come to us with any Supplics) we for Sail from Huraro-Bay (as we termod it with ood Reafon), 'haping our Conrfe to the North-fude of che Illand.
The Twenty ninth of \(M a r c h\), we cameup with the Iolands Mroliotie? Sr, Chrifoptcr's and Spirito Sante, and lic beMeron welve and thiteen Degres, Sourh Lat.
The Thirricth we anchor'd at Mrgosec, clofe by a Town, where we met with a very fociable and friendly Pcople, that were glad of our coming, and brought us Provifions. Our Captain being invited afhoar by the King, went with three Drums beating before him, and was mer by the King with a fine Retinuc, all richly dreft in long Silk Embroider'd Garments, after the Turkifh Mods. After many Civilities paft, His Majcty difmifs'd him with a Letrer of Recommendations to the Qucen of Aufurme.

April the Ninctecnth, we anchor'd at Aufuame (g), before the City Demos, the Ruines about which befpeak it to have been formerly a place of Serength and Grandeur: The fmall Remains of it were as big as plimous, and all theHoures built with Lime and Frec-ftone. Her Majefty woud not hongour us with a fight of her, bur yet used us with great Friendihip.

The Pcople are a fort of Negro's, bur fmooth-hair'd like Indians: They are Mabomesans; and the beft provided for Was of all hereabours, having Swords and Targets, over and above the common Weapons of the Barbanans Thek Inands are pleafane and fruitful, yielding Rice, Oxen, Goats, Coco's, Banana's, Oranges, Limons, and Citrons. All Iron Ware wou'd be a good Commodicy here; and paperallo, which is a ching the Natives are extreamly fond of.

The Tweory cighth we fer Sail, and pals'd by the Illands

Qualiry, as appear'd by all the Ornaments of their Drefs, but much more by, thofe of thcir Noble Deporment. Thele Iflands are reported to be no lefs than Eleven rhouand in number. Their plenty of Coco's brings them 2 good Trade, fince they make Bread, Wine, and Oyl , Ropes, Sails, and Cables, of the feveral parts of that Fruic.
The Twenty feventh we fer Sail, and happily ftruck into the rrue Channel called Maldivia, which lies in 4 De grees, is Min. North Lat. and where the Compals has \({ }_{17}\) Degrees of W. Variation. There are valt numbers of Ships from all parts, that go through this Channel, which is the only fafe Sailing, it being gencrally faral for a Ship to misis.
Fune the Third, we fell in with the Coaft of india, in 8 Degr. 40 Min. North Lat. near about Cochin; and coafting this Shoar, we fhap'd our Courfe for Cape Camoin, and from thence for Sumarra.
The Thirteenth, we faw the Coaft of Sumatra: And the Twenry finf we anchor'd in the Bay of Aclen. Here we Anchor a Pcpper; and three or four Portugucze from Malacca, that came (as we found afterwards) to.fruftrate our Intentions of Trade. Our Captain (having made the King a fmall Prefent) was fent for to Court, and a Nobleman left as a Hoftage to fecurc his fafe recurn. 'His Majefty, befides a ycry Civil Entertainment, made him the Promife of a free Trade, and gave him, as a Mark of his particular The \(\mathrm{Samm}_{\mathrm{cm}}\). Fayour, the Cryle of Honour. This is a form of Weapon \({ }^{\text {trinn Crif, }}\) like a Dagger; it has no Crofs nor Hilt, but the Hafr and norme Handle are of a Metal valued more than Gold, and richly Power. Cer with Rubies: 'Tis Deach for any Man to wear in, bur as the King beftows it; and he chat has rhis Farour, has an unlimired Power to command, or do almoft what he pleares.
+ Ar his rerum he brought a Boat-load of Pcpper along with him, and told us very ftrange things of his own good Fortunc, and kind Receprion at Court; but at the fame time made ir appear, that he had done no good Officesfor us Englifh-men there, being hardly able to forbear abufing our Nation to our own Face, and therefore to be fure did not pare ir behind our backs. Our Merchants wear afhore with their Wares, having a Houfe prepar'd by the King's appoinument.
Nor long after, the Captain being ar Court again, the King difcover'd the treacherous Defign of the Portugueze to him ; but gave him 2 fure Promire to ftand his Friend, and never to fuffer any thing to be done by them, or any others, to his prcjudice. He enquired whether he was The Xind an Englifh-men or no; and when he rold him, he was of 1 chensis En Flanders; he replied, 'zwas a Councry he had never heard quiry ata and of; but the Fame of England had reach'd chofe Pares for Engijhoma fome time before. And when he heard that there were Tome Englif \(\mathrm{h}_{\mathrm{m}} \mathrm{men}\) in the Ship, (tho' ro the Difparagemenr of our Country', 'twas Kaid, that we had our Education in Flanders;) yet to the Caprain's further mortification he told him, that he muft needs fee fome Men of that Counrry. As for the Bufinefs of Trade, His Majefty made this Agrecment with us ar that time, That we fhou'd affift him in his Wars againit the King of for; and in confideration of that Service, Bhou'd have a full Lading of Pcppcr.

August the Twenrieth, the King exprefs'd fome Refent- Mr. Daii's menss, that none of the Englif/b, ć\{pecially the Pilor, mentby which was my felf) had yer been brought to wait upon k . of यoto him; and reproach'd the Caprain, as if he intended to march off, and quir the Service he had covenanted to perform. Upon chis I was prefensly fenr for athore; and the Twenty fecond waited upon the King, with whom I ftay'd four or five Hours, in all the Pleafures that a noble Banquet, and a very free Converfation, with fo great 2 Prince, cou'd give. He made the Sabandar drefs me after the Sumatran Mode, with a Roll of white Iinen round my Head, and a Sath of the fame cmbroider'd with Gold abour my Wafte, then an unde: Veft of whire, and over hat one of red. The greatelt part of his Difcourfe was abour England, and our Queen'; whom he greatly admired for her Wars with the King of Spain; which Prince he imagin'd to be abiolute Monarch of all Europe.
Seprember the Firt, we had Orders to take in Soldiers and Ordnance, and to prepare for the Battery of the City of For : And to colour the Defign that was going on the betrer, the great Galleys were brought out of the River, and the Sea all abour us was coverd with Praws and Boats, loaded with ammed Micn. Some of the chicf came aboard us, with a good Company of Soldiers, appointed with all forts of Weapons; and tho' they pretended only a Caroule with the good Liquors they had brought, yet wefufpecting anocher fort of Entertainment, prepard accordingly, filling our Tops wich Stones, and making faft

Here they continued conflicting with Hunger, Diftempers, and bad Weather, till September; fo that they ftood the Shock of:the whole Winter at this place, and endured the Extremities of all the very wort Months of the Year., Abundance of of all the very work Men dyd, bcing downright ftarv'd, and the reft werc as near it as they cou'd well be: And now the General having had cnough of the Winter Pleafures of the Mngellanick Streights, very politickly concluded 'rwas time to ge away. His Men were half dead, and the remainder were almoit famin'd, the difmal Winter fpent and gone, and the chearful Spring coming on with thereturoing. Sun, be thought ic high time to pur our to Sea arain, before the Comfor of the approaching Scafon overtook them.
So the later cnd of Seprember, they fer Sail out of the Streighrs, and being got into the Souch Sca, were wretchcdly tofsid and beaten abour in thar rurbulent Occan. In - Mors, a , lufty Storm fearterat the whole Fiect, and drove Sed, and are They had agrecd before - in care of any fuch Difafter, fiprated byl that they wou'd ftay for one another; at fome place upon to Con wou fay for one anochet, at 1 reft came, nor in a Month, then thofe that were there Mou'd go on. Hither Ar: Ad.am's Ship came; according to the Agrecincnr, and ftay'd the appointed time. The Narives were civil and fricndly to them ar firft, and bate tcria Shecp and Potarocs for liecte Toys which they gave then ; but at laft they fell off, remor'd up into the Cotntry, and came no more at them.
Their Company not coming, they went away, touching as they pals'd ac the Bay of Baldivia, and the line of Moclis, bur not coming to Anchor any where, till they did it at the Cape Santa Maria, which is alout cwenty Lciagucs from the INand of that Name to the Southward. Here they found a convenient. Bay, and good Ground for Anchoring: Theré were confiderable Numbers of Pcople that appear'd upon the Shore, bus their Temper and Diipoitions, as they were unknown, to they. were no for be tried. Bur they proved rery crols and untoward ; for at their firt Autcmpt to land, the Indians looking upon them as Invaders of their Country, fer themfelves to oppofe thicm, and pour'd in a Shower of Dairss and Arrows upon the Boars thar came up to the Shore. Bur chey bei ing under the Pinch of Hunger, and diven by an abrolute Neceffity, to endeavour fome Means for the getring a Refreflancon, broke through the Weapons of the Barbarians, and landed their Men.
Now they made Signs of Pcace on both fides, and a Ceffation of Arms being, as it were agreed on, they came to a Parley in that Language of Signs; and the Indians undertanding what chcy meart, broughr them Wine and Fruits, for the little Commodirics the othicrs fhew'd them; and then fignificd to them, thar they frould now return aboard again; and if they came amore the next Day, they fhou'd have a farther Supply of Vicuuals.
Accordingly the next Day the Caprain landed with a fcore, or anore, of Muskerecrs, and they had normarch'd far, before a Party of Indians, to the number of a choufand, that lay cunningly intrench'd, fel upon chem, and cur them all off.
This was a terrible Misfortune upon all Accouncs, particularly in thar this Execuuion had fcarce left them Men cnough, to do the neceflary Offices of the Ship. With this lofs they went away from the inhofpitable Cape; and came to the Inc of St. Mary it felf. Here they found their Admiral Ship, bur in much the fame diftrefs'd Condirion as chemfelves; the Natives of the Illand of Michn having given them the fame rude Trearment that thofe at the Cape had given the others: Only of the two, the Admical had the wort on'r; for they had loft more Men by the Darts of the Indians, and over and above that, their Gencral himpelf.

Now to get founc Refrefhment at this place, was the grear difficulty; 'twas hard to lie ftill and famifh a Shipboard, and'twas as hard to venture afhore, becaule they had not Mcn fort: In thore, thefe two Wants were fo grear, and fo unhappily complicated in their prefent Circumatance, that for all chat appears, if an Accident had nor relice'd them, they mult have concluded upon dying here withour any more adoe. Bur a couple of Sparizards, thar had a defign to betray them, came aloard, in a feeming fricindly manncr) for that purpofe; and were of wife as to do it withour Pledges, or making any Provifion for their fafe rcturn. So when chey had feen the Ship, and their fafe return. So when they had feen the Ship, and woud hase gone back again, they told them, No, they were fenfible of their ill Detign, and would kecp them Prifoncrs, (efpecially fince they came entirely of thecir own Heads too', unlefs they would promife to furnith the Ship

With fo mach Provifion. One may eafily imagine, the Spaniards wete out of Humour upon'c, to find themfelves taken in fuch 2 Trap; bur'rwas all one, 'twas to no purpofe to be in a Paffion there, and they were forc'd ro fubmit to thofe Terms of Deliverance, and glad to efcape to too. The Spaniards broughr in their Provifion according to the Agreemenr, and now they were once more repticy'd from a milerable Dcarth \(\because\) After this, the rwo Ships fer Sail in Company for Fa- Go forfana pan;-the rett of the Fleet were given up for loft, and one of them, they afterwards heard, fell into the Hands of the Spaniards ar St: fego. Befides this, the King of Spain's Flect waited for them upon the Coaft of Pery ; and had they lighe of them, 'ris yery probable they had borh follow'd their Companion in her Fate, fince dhey were in fo very weak and matrer'd a Condition
Twas Noocmber the 2gth, thar they left the tiland St. Mary, upon the Coát of Chinit, and having past the Line, tad a good Wind, and fair Wcather, for a good wlile, without any interruption by Storms and Tempects.
In the l, aritude of fiftecn or fixtecen Degr. N. they fell Antirperategi in with fome lilandes of Cannibals, or Men-catcrs, as Mr. adams calls them, without any feruple ; fince eight or nine of their Mcn, he believes, were devour'd by them. Thefe Fellows being weary, if fcems; of fo long a Voyage, and willing to take up with the nextRefting-place, put themflyes inro the Pirnace, and fo run away; bur which way foever the Cannibals difpos'd of them, tis cerrain they ncter came aboard more.
In the Latitude of 27 and 28 Degr. the Weariner began to change upon them, and the Winds that had lien itill and quicr folong, rouz'd and blew with a prodigious Frry ; they had fich a Storm of Wind and Rain, that cquall'd or excceded the moft violent any Mariner amongt them had fecn. In this horrible Confuifion of the Wea The Admital ther, they loft one another, and the Admimi never came sorr. Her up to them more; but they follow'd on thicir Courfe for proc wis sin or other of chat IAand: Certainly, hardly ever any Men cilld round perform'd a Voyage in more diftects: Our Rilot tells us, the World that they had, of all their number, but nine or ten left, that were able to taind or crecp upon their Knecs. as for the Captain, and "all the reft, they wers at the laft Gafp, as it were, and expected to die cvery Hour. And this was a very difmal Cafc; for Storms will make the poor Sea-men beftir; and work themfelves to the purpofe : But how Thall Narure befupported in the mean time, and where thall Mcn hate itrength so do thofe toillome Works, thar have notFood to kecp Life and Soul together ?
'Twas April the Nineteenth, before they had fight of \(1 . \mathrm{D}_{1} .1600\) ' the Coaft of Fapin, and by thar time there was bur five of their Company that coin'd go, Providence ordering the matter fo for them, that they had then a Profpect of Relief, when things were run up to the higheft extremity. 'Twas near to Bungo that they faw this firft Land, and were then in abour 32 ! Degr. Bur Mr. ridams, by che way, affures us, That thar Coalt of fapan is fallly plac'd Note, upon in all our Maps, Charts, and Globes; for he Gays, ic lics partoffapary in \(35:\) Degr. which makes a confiderable difference from the common Accounr giten by them of its pofition.

Ar Bungo feveral Boats of the Naides came up to them, and aboard them too, as they had a mind themelves; and it cou'd be no otherwifc, for there was no Body to make any refiftance; the Sailors were all quite fectr, and if the Faponefe wou'd have plunder'd them, or' knock'd them o'the Head, they mighe have done it withous any rrouble. Yer they did them no manner of harm, as to They come any Violence, or any fort of Affront; but they pilferd to sumgo and ftole all tbar they could lay Hands on; for which encertaind. fome of them paid rery dear afrerwards.
The Vice-King of the place prov'd rery kind and friendly to them, rook them inro his Protection, and fcor a Guard (as foon as they were come to an Anchorin che Port) to fee that none of the Merchames Goods werc itollien This wou'd have done very wcll, had ir come in good time ; bur the Thieves were there before them. How ever, here they had good ftore of Provifions fenr them in, a Houre provided on purpofe for them; and in hort, were made very much of, and began in lome meafure to enjoy themfelves, after all the Dangers and Fatigues of the Sea. Bur'twas their ill luck to meet with Portugueze. and Cfuites here: They were forcd to make ufeof them or Interpreters indeed; but they had far better bees withour any, and chofe rather to have usd the filent language of Gefturcs and Signs, than employ'd fuch Interpreters as they were. For thef Men gave that Charactes majitit of tite of them, that they commonly give of their Eu:opEan Portagweri Neighbours (in all parts of the World where they meet them), That they were Spies, or Pirates, and not Trading Mcn, as they themfelves pectended: And this fet the fa-ponefe fo againft them, that Mr. Adams rotls us he wasapr prehenfive at one cime that they thould haye had the Fatc of Pirates in that Councry, which is to be fer ,up upon Crofes. Now when a Company of poor Sca men came to throw themfelves upon their Meriy, as it werc in a frange Country, where they were not able to fpeak-for themfelves, and where theiry Libercies and lives depended entircly upon the Peoples good Opinion of them, to go and ferve them at that rate, was an unpardonable piece of - Villany, and an Action fo very inhuman and bafc, as was only fit for Portugue/e and Fefuirs to be guilty of. But twas not long before the Emperor hearing of this Ship, fent for Mr. Adams being the Pilot to come to him: The Coiff was thenat Ofala, which is about 80 . Leagues fromi Buntor Hither came our Englift Man, nor knowing whether'twas to Life or Death, to Prifon and Punihment, or father Farour and Enlargement.

The Emperor view'd him(he fays)with a wonderful deal of Attention, bur yer with his mild and favourable. Counrenance took off in a grear meafure from the dread his prefence might otherwife hare excited. . He ask'd by his Interpercers a world of queftions abour the Country Mr. Ad.ms came from; the Pcople, their Manners, their Affairs borh to War and Peace; and products of it in Brafts, Fili and Fowl, the Trade and Bufinels, and Laws and Government, andin hort the whole Narural and Ci vil Hiftory of it. More than this he purged him as to his Religion roo, and would needs examin his Faith, asking him what 'rwas he b́clieved in; a queftion which if a Man had not known the Emperors R cligion wou'd almoft have made him affraid the Jcfuirs had fer up an Inquifrion herc, and that hewas onc of the Tribuncl.
Bur Mr. Adams puzzl'd him ten times worfe, when he mow'd him the Magellanick Streights, in his Chart, thro' which he fail'd to fapan: The Emperor perhaps had a pretty good opinion of him before; but now he thought him a downright Lyer; the mytery offuch a Voyage was to incomprehenfible that he had no Faith to beftow upon it, yet fince Mr. Adams affirmedit, and he could not confute him, he entertain'd it as Men' do all Points of pure Myftery, with filenc Admiration, and humble Submífion of their Reafon, to the difficulty, tho cramp'd and tortur'd with ir ar the fame time, tho' his underftanding was affronted by ir, yer his good Nature was nor, and he was very good Friends with Mr. Adams afterward, as appeard by his holding him in ralk till mid-night. He had reveral other conferences with the Emperor after this, but was for aconfiderable rime, notwithitanding kepr in PriKon, cho' he had all ncceffaries allow'd him, and nothing likea punithment, but a large confinement. The Portuagainft him, and by their Agents were continually, buzzing feme fcandalous reportsof him, and his Country in the EmperorsEars; bur all would not do, and the Prince was To juft and Gcnerous as to tell them thar the Engliß having done him nomichief, it woud nct be fair for him to fee them receive any in his Country; and that'twould be contrary to all the Laws of Juftice and Reafon for him ro fuffer an innocent Man to be exccured, mecrly becaufe his Country and yours wete ar War.

Mr. Adam's Circumftances now begun to mend, and grow more favourable; his Enemies were quite dihearten'd, and the Emperorexprefs'd every Day more and more good liking' to him: In the firft place, he frece him fromhisImprifonmenr, and gave him leave to go and fee his Ships, and Company, who were furpriz'd with no fmall Joy at his having heard ('ris probable from the Porruguefe, who intended it thou'd be fo; that he had been execated fometime before. Bur here he found the Ship abolutely plundred, and all his Goods and Initruments gone, and all the reft had loft what they had as well as he; for being all Sick and Weak athoar, the Goods lay ready for a Prey. to thofe that cou'd be unjuft enough to feize them.
\(\qquad\) When thit came to the Emperor'sEar, a Search wasmade, to th:m up-in order to the recovery or them; bar being gone too far
their \(G\) oods. giventhem in part of Sarisfaction; and to make fure that this Moncy mould nor be either fraudulently decain'd by his Trcalurers, nor converted to any other ufe, he faw the payment of it himfelf, into the Hands of one who was appoinred to have the managmenr of rheir Affairs, and to give it out to them in Parcels as they wanted. After this, the Ccurt removing to Edde, about 122 Leagues from Ofnca, the Emperor Commanded Mr. Adams to move thitherwards with bis Ship; and here they took the Liberty to Perition him that they might be perfectly Free, and purfuc the defign of their Voyage in going to Trade ar fome otherparts; but this would not take, and the Emperor was not difpos'd to part wich them yet, fo they gor the remainder of their Money intu theit own Hands, and di then theydisperfed .themfelvestabour in the Countrif, Uhius. They fetle fing thote placesta fertecin, that beft frited their fancies, in the But the:Emperor ordercd them befides an Allowince of Rice, Jwo pound a: Day for every Man, and bver and above formuth yearly as came to phor xiducars; There was to diftinition made berween Caprains, Pitós; and Common-Sailcrs, bur they fairdall'alike.
'Thusfour or five Years went over thicir Heads, and chey follow d every Man his Bufinefs in the Country for a. livelyhood, : fince 'rwas deremind, thar there they thult Live and Die. Bur when the term'of Years was expir'd, ithe makes dem was, to make him a Ship; this was nor his Trade as he Ship. rold the Emperor, and tho he knew how to Gunde, a'Ship ar Sca, yer he was nor ufed to the making of them; bur he was to very urgent and prefing to have it done, thar Mr. Adims undertook the work, and made him a Ship of abour 80 Tun. When he came aboardit, he expected a wonderful deal of Pleafure in it, and twas a piece of fervice the valued to much, that the maker of it rife mighrily in his Favourby this very means, befides feveral good Pacents, his Penfon was encreafed too, being mide as much as came to 70 Ducatsper Dinnum, over and above che former Allowance of Rice, and this well managed was a rolerable livelyhood for a fingle Perfon in that Country.
But that which recommended him moft effectually ro the Emperors efteem, was his Skill in Marhematical Learning. Enpecrer it Mr. Adams had a good thare of Knowledge, it fecme, in themarchk: the Practical Parts, and was now honour'd with baving fo great a Prince for his Scholar. He inftructed him in feveral Points of thofe ufeful Arts, and made him capable of folving to himfelf that my ferious problcm : of fail ing to Fapan by the Magellanick Straits. He could pleafe him at any time with defcribing Gcomerrical Figutes; ;he Emperor was plung'd in the Study, Charmid and Coniur'd within the Circles Mr. Adamis drew him. This latter ufed his Geometry to furch good purpofe, that he dif: covered the mue method of managing his Royal Pupil by is, and gor the exact length of his Foor. His Wort was all in all in any point of Difpure and Concroverfy; and wharever fide Mr. Adams took, the Emperor was Howas of the fame. He had to grear a ftroke now at Courts; that even the J-fuites themelves wexe willing to make ufe of his Intereft there, and courted him to be their Patron; and he declares, that by his mieans both Spaniards. and Portuguefe rcceived feveral Favours from the Empcror'; which they were otherwife in no likely way of obtaining. Being in thefe circumftances, he thought it nor impofible to win upon the Emperor fo far as to procure learc, to rozurn into hisown Country; and for rhat purpofe'rencw'd his old requeft; promifing to do his utmot for the bringing: both an Englifh and a Durch Trade to fapan, if he mighs be fuffer'd to go home.

Forrune in that part of the World, as hehimelf has decribed them. As to the Srate of the Country, and its Affairs,' he does not rell us much. He commends the 7 fapencfe largely, Aceunn of for their Courtefy and Good Humonr, Valour in War, the coums Juftice in their Civil Concerns, and the happy Conftiturion of the Governmenc. He believes no People to be Mafters of better Politicks, than they in their Civil Government, nor have more fupertition in their Religion. They have various Sects' and Opinions amongft them, and fome of them had imbraced Chriftianity at the time', the Friars and Jefuits being very deligently at work to propagate it in fevcral parts of the Inand. So far they had gone in Mr. Adam's time as to have fome Churches, and Profpect of a confiderable increale of Convents. The Character be gives of Trade, is, thar Silks and Cloths are very vendible Commodities there, and that for ready Moncy: And according: to his Relation, the faponcfï have wherewith to be very good Pay-matters; and can afford to give the bef Rates for a Commodity, having

Gold and Silver enough in their own Country: A very happy Pcople, to be both Rich, and Wife, and Good and have both thofe advantages fo eminently, Money and Wir; which do feldom meer rogether. He rells us the Dutch were admitted to a Free Trade there, and had very goodacceprance with the Foperor; and had entred into an agreement with him, to fend a Ship or two well laden thither cvery Year. To conclude as to the Geographical confideration of the lland, he affures us, that the Northern part of it reaches to the Lar. of \(4^{8}\) Degr. and the Sourhern lies in 35. that it extends 220 Engliß

Leagues, E. & W and 260 N \(&\) S arid for irs Figurc; he fays ir is almoft a Square: Which account is the more credible, in that it is given by one, who did nor juft come and take a view of the Country; and then awiay again, bur fpent a good part of his Life uponiche Spot; and righrly pretended to have as good an acquaintance with ic, as the Natives of the Soil.

DEcember the sth, we fer Sail from Cowes in the Ifle of Wtight, with the good Ship the Tigra; of \(24^{\circ} \mathrm{Tun}\), and a Pinnace nam'd the Tigersmopelp.
The 23d, we came to Teneriff, in the Road of Aratana. Famurty 16th, we pafs'd the. Equinoctial, and Map'd our Courfe for che line Loroma, and having made fome three Degr. S. Lar. we mer with incredible numbers of Dolphins and Bonito's, of which we took fo many, that we were perfectly tired as well with the eating as the Malitudes of
Dopplins and catching of themn. We had fport enough too, with the Alcatures. mer of there are eaffly taken as Night ar they lodge themfelves in grear numbers abour a Ship, and will perch upon ones Head, if ir be held out to them: Theothers are a fort of Hawks, that live entirely upon the Spoil they ger out of the Water, and are equally the Perfcutors of the Flying-Fin, with the ravenous Dolphins. That poor Animal it feems, can live quiedy in noElement, and neither the Air, nor the Water, will afford it a fecure Harbour. The Dolphins and Bonito's are contimually hunring them in the Sea; and when they have no way to avoid a mifcrable Death, but by ufing their Wings, and taking a turn in the Air, then there unmerciful Birds are prefendy upon then, and inhofpitably devour the poor Strangers driveri by perfecution, our of theicownElement.
The 22 d , we came to an Anchor at the \({ }^{\prime}\) a) Inand Loroma We found it very difficult here to get Wood and Wate aboard, by reafon of the violent breadth of the Sea, which makes the landing extreamiy hazardous. Ous own Boat was twice overfer by the boifterovs Waves and fome of our Men drown'd in the Attempr; and not long before us a Dutch, Man was worfe ferrid, his Boar, men and all being dafh'd in pieces upon the Rocks.

Being come inro \(P^{2}\) iamman \({ }^{2}\) (b) Road, (ru our great Joy) we Found our Pinnace chete, and fo came ro an Anchor in five Fathom NVarct, and wery grod Ground. This Ciry lies in 40 Min. South Lar. I had:the Opportunity of fecing it, being ient by our Admiral, with a Prefent to the Gcvernour, and to cxamine the Rates that Pepper went at chere, But so private Conference was to be had with the Govetnour nor no Advances to be made in the Marters of, Trade and Merchandize, by reafon of the Wars then raging amonght thicm. For the old King of achem having made his youngeft Son King of Pedir, and nominated the clder to fucceed himfelf in the Kingdom of \(A-\) chen, kecping him at home with him for thar purpofe: The cxtravagant Prince (angry to fee a Crown on his younger Brother's Head, while his own was withour one makes lold to depore his Father, relling the People he was too old to govern; and then having the Power in his hands, immediately fell upon his Brother, to the great difturbance of the Peace and Trade of the tlland: So that fecing litele likelihood of doing any good hiere, and having gorten in all neceeflary Provifions, the Twenty, firf we weigh'd Anchor, and ftood for Bantam:

The Twents fifth, after a Difpure of feren or cight Hours, we took a Ship of Baneam, bound for Prieman; her Lading teing Salt, Rice, and Chini Diftes; burconfidering the Engi:h had a Factory there, and that this Violence might potfibly expore them and their Concernis to fome Inconveniences amongt to barbarous a Pcople, we difmifs'd her in a ci: il and friendly manncr, with all her Goods, which we did nor dimininh to the value of a Farthing.

But a Ship of Guztrate, (which we took September the fecond) did not fcape us to well: She was about cighty Rond and we fecurd her in the Road of Sillabar. That Road is in 4 Dcgr . Soath Lar. and is very much frequented for the Conveniences of Wood, Warer, and many forts of Provifions that are here to be had. Our Buifinels held us here till the Twenty eighth, when we fet Six and profecuted our Voyage towards Bantam.
oftover the Twenty third, we anchor'd in the Road of SharabRord. Marrah, in Sunde Streights, where are as good Accammodations for the cafe and refrefhment of Sailors; as at Sillatar. The People here don't value Mones to much as they do Callicocs, Pingadoce, and fuch-like Stuffs, They are rery fair in their Doalings, and will ure you foberly. if you do the like by them ; bur then you muft be fureto Fook well ro them, for their Conficinces perer fly in their

The Twinty cighth, we came within three Leagues of She Cify of Bratim (i), which lies in 6 Degr. is Min.(i) E alifh Flect was geve before we came.; bur fome of Councry-men, that were we came; bur fome of our and rold us of the bafe and Factors there, came alroard, Hoilariders, in blating the Rcpucation of our Nition at Bantiom. They xeported, That we were a lendPirating fort of Pcople, that wene abroad intox he wortius upon michicra, no other Defigns, than Robbing and Cheating other Na- the \(D_{\text {oth }}\) rions: And that we were fuch Cowards, that we dared nor come into the Road amongit them, bue would be fure to kecp at a diftance, for fear of being beaten.
Our Admiral was fo provok'd at thefe danderous ReficCtions, (and which the Durcl themfelves well knew to be Lies too) thar he fent them Word prefently, Thar he worid come and ride clofe by their fides; and if they dared bur o much as to pur out 2 Gun, or offer the leaft Infolence imagizable, cither in Word or Action, he wou'd infallibly fink every Ship they had, or fink himfelf in the Undertaking. But they were fo wife as to make no Reply to this Meffage; and fo cool and humble too, as to do what our Admiral commanded them in the point of DC portment towards us, and the ref of the Emg tif ; for tho Gun ; and jut under theirvery Nofes, they never ftirrid a Gun; nay, they hardly durft any of them appear antore as long as we were there as long as we were there.
Nitremin 2. (hating dif patch'd our Bufinefs acBantam) wo held our Courfe for Pertune: And in the way betwecn the bound for 1 , and falra, we mer three Praws min, and Storax. They ftudioun Dinies, Pepper, Benjamin, and Storax. They ftudioully a yoided us, and refu-take fone ed to fatisfic our juft Demands of a Pilor, to conduct us indiantur to Pulo Timan, and a Pilor we were not like to have, unicfs we fought for him, and purchas'd him by Conqueft this rherefore being the Cafe, we atrack'd them, and forc'd wo of them to yicld, and fo furnilh'd our felves wizh a Guide for our Ships, which was all the Prize we then rough after: This being done, we difchargd them again, and held our Courfe for Patanc.
Nooember the Twenty ferenth, we faw certain Illands bearing N. W. from us, which neither we, nor our Pilors knew, we imagind chem to be fome of the broken lands that lie S. E. from the Iac of Bautam, for they were Deluged checn of them, burk under Water, nothing leing to \({ }^{\text {dand }}\) hem that are nor plunid tops of Trecs: And thole of them that are not plung'd, are a perfect Wildernefs, and like for ever to be fo, having neither Fruir like for ever to be fo, having ncither Fruic, nor any fort of Animal, for the fupport of of Animal, forthe fupport of Life.
Having water'd here, Decrmber. the Second, we continued our Courfe for Patane, as well as we coud, with bad Winds. which ar this cime of the Ycar are generally \({ }^{3 r}\) N. N. W. or N. E. hereabouts.
The Twelfth we rook a Junck of Pan-Hauge, laden wirh Pepper, Rice, and Tin, bound for Bamerm: Our Admiral took only two Brafs Guns, and a quantity of their Rice (which yer he. paid them nobly for), and a pilor to bring him to Patane : The orher two which we took before, tho" very unskilful, were paid for their time they had been with us, and fo fent back in chis Junck into their own Country. Now we began to be very much rroubled with contrary Winds and Currents: For in thefe parts the Sca always. runs Southward, from the beninning of the Sca always runs Southward, from the beginning of and Cumm November, to the beginning of April, and back again Northward from April to Nocmber; and the Winds for the moit part oblerve the fame Time and Courfe too. All Ships from Chima, Patanc, For, and ocher places, which lic to the Northward, come to Banmon, or Palim:U.inn \({ }_{2}\) when the Northerly Monfon is come, and they re-Tinemonam rum with the Soucherly; which Monfons come in the parti.
Months aforelaid.

The Country ( \(k\) ) of Pam-ILunge, to which this Junck (i)rat tang belong d, lies berween Patane and For, and reaches on the Sca-Coaft as far as Cape Tingeron : This is a very lofty Cape, that makes 2 great Figure, and is the firft Landfall that the Veffels of Cbina, Crimbnis, and Miacar, do make, as they fail for Minlicica, favi, Sumarra, or any parts to the Sourhward. Pa,-Hange is a very plonriful Country, has good ftore of Shipping, and all Provitions very cheap.
December the Twenty fevench, we met with a Junck full of Fapone \(\hat{c}\), which had becn Piraring along the Coaft of Climan and Crmbiaia, and nor daring to Lard any where (for they are generally forbid coming afhore with Weapons, throughout all India, they are fo fierce and defen-

Twenty fix, came into our Ship:. Bur they hating before concerted Matrers, and ordcrd all the Particulars of the-Plot, upon a Signal given, fer upon our Men that were in their Junck, killing moft part, and driving the reft overboard. Ar the fame rime they fer upon us in our own Ship, and being ablo lutely defperare, fought witri" an incredible Ficreenefs and Courage, madly thrufting themfelves on our Pikes, and laying about them like fo many Furies. After fome time, we forcd them to retire from the Half-dick down into the Cabin, where they defended themflelves with srear obftinacy for the fpace of four or five Hours, and refolving to fpare neither their own Lives, nor ours, they fet the Cabin a-fire, and fought with all the Flames gathering abour their Ears. In fhor, feeing rheir Defign ro burn the Ship, and baving them at this advantage in a clofe Pound, where we might difparch them all as once, to put 2 .ftop to the progrels of the Milchief, which would otherwife be remedilest, we fired a couple of great Guns in upon them, loaded with Crof-bars, Bullers, and Cafeflor; wowich did fuch fatal Execuuion upon them, thar one only our of Twenty two creap'd. the rett being torn and fhatter'd all to picces. Thus with much adoc, we freed our felves from this threatning Danger; bar. to do it coft us the lives of many of our Men; and particularly that of Capr. Davis, whofe imprudent Conduct, in not fecuting their Weapons at firt, according to the Advice given, was very much dhe occafion of it.
December the Thirticth, we came to an Anchor by 2 liutle Inand, where we were obliged ro ftay three or four Oays to mend our Boar, and take in Wood and Water. Here we had Incelligence, by a Ship of Pateme, of the ended, if poffible, to mect.

After this, we directed our Courfe back again zo China Bata; bur the contrary Winds wou'd not permit ins to recover it ; fo that we pur on for the Ifes of Pulo Sumatra (l), (i) Putiosin? where we anchor A famuary the Twenty fecond.
Februnty the Sccond, we met a Fleer of five DutshShips bound homewards, which gave us an Inrelligence, that obliged us to take new Mcalures, and quir the Defign we had upon the China Ships. Our Englifh Merchants ar Bantam, (they rold us) were in very grear danger, and expected every Day to feel the utmott Effects of the King of Bantam's Anger and Refentment; becaule of our lare taking the China Ships, by which means he had loft his Cuftoms.
And therefore, that no After-Events of our Voyage They return might procure any Danger or Difafters to our Couniry for Enpand. men, (tho' perhaps to have profecured ir, would have fignally advanc'd our own private Fortunes and- Interefts) we rcio'ved to fer Sail for England; which we began to' do, folwayy the Fifth.
We had fight of the Cape of Good Hope, the Seventh of April; and we arrived at Sr . Helene the Sevenceentif, where we ftaid refrening rill May the Third.
The Fourreenth we pas'd the Equinoctial.
Fune the Twenty ferenth we axriv'd at Milford-Haven; a Wales.
Fuly the Ninth, we anchor'd in Port/mouth-Road, haing been out in this Voyage, full nineteen Months.

\section*{Tbe frrlt Voyage to the Faft－indies，for the Merchants of Lon－ don，by Mr James Lancafter，Admiral．}

THE Merchanes of London，having rais＇d amongit themfelyes a Stock of 72000 Pounds in order， to the Eftablifiment of an Eaff－India Trade， and having befides，Her Majefties Highef En－
Ca．D． 8600. couragement，and Lerters of Commendation to the mont confiderable Precepts of India；they fet our a Fleer of five able Ships，to begin the Correfpondence with that part of the World．The Ships were the Dragon Admiral of 6 co Tuns，the Hector Vice－Adminal of 300 ，the Afcen－ tion of 200 ，the Sifan of about the fame dimenfions， and the Gueft a Victualer of 130．They had aboard them in all 480 men ；and were furnifhed withammunition and Victrals for 20 Merchants．We carried along with us to the value of 27000 pounds in Money and Goods，the other part of the Stcek having been entirely Spent upon the Ships，and the neceflary Furniture of them．
They fet ous Being ready to Sail，we fet out February the thirteenth becalm＇d in the eawis，made it Eafter－D．ay before we reach＇d Darsmouth
April the cighrcenth，we came to an Anchor in Torbay， where the necelfary Orders and Inftructions were given for our better Company keeping ar Sca，as alfo what pla－ ces to have recourle to，in cale any Ship were feparated from the reft of the Fleet by Srorms or any orher acci－ denc．

Mo，the Secend，we faild out of Torbay dirceting our

Courfe to the Canarics（ \(a\) ）and the fifth，had fight of（a）cenvi： Alequanza the moft Northerly of thofe Inands，and so holding our Courfe berween Fortecentura，and the Grand Cautery，ar the Sourh part of it we fell into the Celms For the fpace of a whole Month afterward we were fo diftracted between Calms and contrary South winds，and fomerimes with fudden furious Guits and dreadfol． Lighenings，that we made but little way；and we had our Hands full of work to Guard our felves from thofe dani－ gers that we look＇d in the Face for fo long toge－ her Beating up and down at this rate with much ado，by Fune twentyfirft we got into 2 Dcgr ．of the North fide the Lin＾；and as they commonly kay，＇tis 2 bid Wind indeed that blows no body no Good，fo the Winds though they had been hitherto exurcamly Crofs and Con－a prize in crary，yet were now to Favourable as to blow a good kep． Prize into our Hands．She was a Ship of Portugel bound for the Enft－Indics，and fieafforded us 146 Buts of Butter， 176 Jarrs of Oil， 12 Barrels of Oii，and ss Hogficads of Meal．This was a very fubitantial Help to us in our Voyage；and now we found thar the．Windshad done us no grear diskindnefs in not fending us fafter along than chey did．
Fune the laft，we pafs＇d the Linc，and loft fight of the achey sofis North Star，and holding our Courfe S．S．W．we doubled thespuinoci－ the Cape of St．Alogigfine fcme \(\approx \sigma\) I cagues to the Eaft fide．al．

Fuly the 2oth, we made 19 Degr. 40 Min. South Lat. and here we difcharged our Victualing Ship, the Gueft, raking all her Mafts, Sails and Yards, and breaking down her higher building for Fire-wood, we left: her floating in the Sea; holding our Courfe to the Joluthfide.
Fuly the rwentyfourch we pal'd the Tropick of, Caprim arn, and becaufe we had been fo long abouethe line (as we were forc'd to do, the time being paft for a quick Navigarion) and many of our Men having conracted ftill nearer, our Admiral gave orders to ftand cither for Soldanis. or Sc . Heiena, that we mighe refrem our fick Company.

Aurbit the firft, We came into 30 Degrees Souch Dar. and here we met with the Sourh Winds, to the grear conifor: of us all, elpecially thofe char were difordered. This Wind held us till we came within 2 so leagucs of the Cape of Cood-H pe, and then is blew direetly to rhe Eaft for 15 or 16 Days, which made a fudden alteration in our Ship for che worle, and cncreas"d mighrily Dittempers amongtt us. Nuw all that were well and found before, took their turns to be fick, and in this general Diftrefs for want of other Hands, the Marchants themfelies weic forc'd to work at the Helm, and do the Offices of common Sailors.
Bur this calamionus Wind lefe us again, and another fuccerded, which prov'd more favourable; brought us Scprember the ninch into the Road of \((b)\) So danic. It of coming in here, we had very icntable Demonitraticns Diftempers amongit us; for the Company of cherec of our Ships were reduc'd to that pals, thar they were not able out of a whole Ship to make up ftrengrh enough ro hoitt our a Bjar or ler fall an Anchor. Our Admiral indecd feap'd pretry well, and molt of the Men alooard her maintained a geod habit of Body in all that freklytime, which Prefervation wàs impuited to the Method the Admiral rook with them; which was to give them all round thrree or four Spoonfulus of the Juicc of Limonis qeery *Morning fafting, and nor perminting tricico to eat inil rogether with it will content chemfelves with a fhort and Spare Diet, and efpecially (if the Circumftances of Provifion at Sea will allow it) abftain from eating falt Meats. Our Admiral went ahoar himfelfto-find a proper refting place, and fome Materials for the refrelhment of the fick Company; and meecing with fome of the Soldaninns, he oblig'd them with feveral Trifles broinghr for that purpofe, and as well as be cou'd fignified to them his defire to trade with them for Cartle. Bur it being hardly potitible crer to learn or fpeak that Tongue; he was forc'd to ufe the Uniyerfal Language of Btures Moa for Oxen, and Baz for Sheep, and fuch like ride Terms taken our of the moaths of the Beafts themoflives, which wasall very lntelligible to thefe People that werc ro ncar a kin to them. So fereral Tenis bcing fer up Trate win antoar, and fome lictle Forifications made for our own defence in cafe any violcnce flould be offerd ns, we ceit pected the arrival of the Soldmians with their Shecp and Oxca.
The third Day after our coming, they came down from - Son Daxist she Mountains with grcat troops of Cartle, * and we Voypgre necded no Gold or Silver to go or Market wirt, as long as we had any old Iron left. Widhin icn or twelve Days we bought 1000 Shcep, and 42 Oxen of them, which we rusn'd 2 Grazing upon the Hills abour our Tents, and we purchas'd chem at fuch eafy Rates, that I think half the fock of rufty old Iron that is commonly feen in 2 Country Sminh's Shop would make a Man here as Rich in Cartle as any of the old Pazriarchs were. Bur 1 fup-- Pofe that by the numbers of Sheep we bought they imagind we intended to Planitamonget them, and fet up for Farmers in the Country, for affer this they would . Xell us no more, and when we made figns to them for any, they Wou d poinr to che Flocks thar furrounded our Tenss, giving us to underftand they did nor know how we coùd prectnd to difpofe of what we had already; withour we refolved to dwell there and kecp them, which they did nor defign we thould. But we baving no need of any farther fapply, did nor prefs them much for more of their Catric, and as for living amongft them, we had orher defigns, and befides had no very greas Opinion of them for Neighbours. While we ftrid here, what with the good feeding and the wholefomnefs and clemency of the Air, all our fectle Company recorered their Healch and Strength ro fuch a degree, that we thoughr our felves in better cafe than at our fecting out from England, tho' we had loft 150 of ourmen.
Haring beftowed this time upon the neceffary wotk of Refrefment, otiober the 2gth we put to Sea again, go: ing out by a finall Inc (in the nouth of the Bay fo mo of Scole full of Scols and Perguins, that a Ship might find very had putiguine good Entertainment there, if the Counrry it felf, afforded soidmen. none. Over the Bay of Soldania ftands a very high Hill, flar like a Table, and thercfore bears that Name; 'tis a very good mark for finding a Harbour, there leing nothing like it in all that Coatt, and its Height making is very difcernible at if or 18 Leagucs diftance upon the Sca.

November the firft, we doubled the Cape of Gcod-Ft:pe, They dowt: and the atth fell in with the Ine Sc. Lawrence, (c) to sc) si the the Eaft of Cape St. Scbaftian: Herce the varying of the ranceisis. Compals was abour 16 Degr. and we obferved in jenctal, chat the varying is of very great ufe in an Eaft and Weit Courfe, and particularly 'ris fo in this Voyage to the Indics.
Erom this rime to December the isth we held the directeft Couric to the Eaft fide we could, intcneling to have reached the Inc Cirne or Dicgo Rederigues, as ris called in fome Coafts; but paring form St. Lant nec, we had cter aftervards the Wind at E. &. E.S.E. & E'N.E. fo that we cou'd not get up with it. Upon this feore 'rwas concluded that we flould Sail away into the Bay of Anfongi/s, cfpecially dince the Scurry noiv crecping in again atuoneft is, required es to furnifh our felves widl Oranges and liatons, which we knew that place weuld Curdy is wish.
Occember the ferectionth, we had fight of the So 12 thern part of the lland 5 . Maty, and the 18 th we Anchored berween is and the great lile of Sr. Lentrente, fending the Boats thither, to conquire afeer the Phylick we waired for our Scoributck Men. This ine of St. Martle bur Oranges, Limons, and Rice, ir has two or three good watcring places on the North. fide of it, bur they don'r lie very convenicntly for a Boar to come at them The Natives are very Black, bur tall and handfome; they fecm to be well remper'd, fociable, four and valians Pcople, but like the reft of shcir Complexion, make no Rruple of going ftark Nakcd.
Having litrle Encouragemenr here as to plenty of Provifion, and the Country in un'crrain Atormy weather, we fer Sail fromberice December the chird, and the 25 cance into the Bay of (e) Antongil'; and hare we Anctior'd in a very good (c) twongi Road, between the Small Ifland and the Main. Xer ex- Bay pericnee rold usthar there was betrer riding near the liedle Inand, than thar in the botom of the Bay where the Admiral Anchotrd; for fome of our Ships that lay under the protection of that IRand, felt \(v\) ery litele of a furious Storm that rofe there upon us, and drove along the rer thar lay more à a diftance, with three Archors a Head.
The arth we went amoar uron the Niain Ifland, and had the Pcople of the Country prefently about us, who though they had but a mall Stosk of Provifion ro difpore of, yer afford to Barter with wis, bur ar the fame time hel't up all ar the lighent Rare imaginable. The Commoditics they brought were but Oranges and I, imons, Rice and Hens; but they made fuch Prizes as if inftead of Ricc, we had had fome very coftly Grain;the Oranges had becn Cafed in Gold, and the Hens like that in the Fable, had laid Eggs of the fame Nictal. Beflides they had fo many Trade witb Tricks and Artifiees in their dealing, juggling together to Trade \(P\) wople. hold all at the fame Rarts, and fercwing up the Buycr by litele and litric to arn Advance in the Pricc, that Conse Days paffed before we could bring theni to aty thing of a rolerable Trade. So that (ecing the Hunhour of the People, and their fubtle Impofang ways, we cefolved to be at a cermin lay with them, and to fix the Laws and Meafures of the Exchange inf fuch a mianner, thar if they would come. up to them they mighr, and if nor we would have no dealing with them. Thus we decermin'd how many Oranges, lineons or Plantans, or what quantity of Rife, hould be given for fuch a number of Glass Beads or any other Tritles: and To folding righrly orthisway , of dealing, crery Man obferving thic famie Rules, we traded with a great deal of cafe and quiernet's and had no words at all made about the Matrer. And hough we Barter'd for no lefs than' 15 or 16 Tun of Rice so Buthels of Pcatc and Beans; befides Oxen, Hens, and a grear quantiry of Oranges and Limons, yct having brougherthem to this way, we did all this with lefs noile and fcolding than before perhaps we cou'd have boustic a dozen of Oranges with. We loft fevcrai Miten here of he Flux, which we amributed to thelmpurity of the Water wedrank in that Connury, in being a rime of grea: Rains and Floods, and the Watcrs generally crude and unwholforme afterthat.
We fer Sail from hence Niare't the fisth, anil he'd cn our Courfe for the Indics.
4.D. \(160 \%\). The Sixteenth, we fell in with the Ife Rogur-Pize ( \(f\) ), (f) Ragee in 10: Degr. Sourh Lat. Here we cou'd find no fafe Riding for our Ships, the Warer all abour being extreamly decp; but cerrainly had there becr this Conveniency, this Ifland woid have been 2 moft agrecable place for a Ships refrethmens. For by the delightful Seents that reach'd us, as we laid along by ir, it dilcoverd what ftore of odorifcrous Plants, Flowers, 'and Shrubs, it produced; beffdes, there was admirable good Finhing and Fowling there, and whole Woods of Coco-Trees, which do themfelyes anfwer moft of the Neceffities of Human Life.

March the Thircicth, being in 6 Degr. South Lat. we were in confiderable danger, by reafon of a Ledge of Rocks we happen'd upon of a fudden, which lay about fice Farhom under our Ships; but prefencly cafting abour, we found cighr Farhom, and fo held on our. Courfe Eaftward. But all our Dangers of this nacure were not over; for at fome thirtecn or fourtecn Leagues diftance from thence, we fell upon another Flatt of Rocks; and cafting about to the Southward, abour twelve Leagues further we fell upon more; fo that trying every way, we found our felies inclofed in a Pound of Rocks, tho we had twenty, thirty, and in fome places forty or fifty Fathom Water between the Flatts. And here we were thut up for near three Days, and knew nor how to make our way out of this miferable Confinement: Ar laft, making the artempr Northward in 6 Degen 40 Min . we found a fafe paffage, and fo following our Pinnite, which went founding the Depth before us, we reghin'd the open Sca.
(s) tifes of
M.ay the Ninth we had fight of the Ines of Nicubar ( \(g\) ), we bore orer to the South-fide of the Channel, and auchor'd under a finall Illand thar lies near the Shore. We found the People of thele Ißands, very much addicted to Cheating and Cozening in their Trade;s they impos'd pieces of Gum upon fome of our ignoranr Company, inttead of Amber; and cou'd they have councerfeited the Coco-Nurs roo, no doubr they wou'd have done it, 'ris a Principle fo roored in moft of thefe Eaftern Pcople ro deceive and impole upon others, where-ever they have opportunity, or can do it to any advantage.
April 20. We held our Courfe for Sumatra, bur the Winds and Current being againft us, we were forc'd to
(b) me Some twelve Leagues to the Northward of Nicubar. The Inhabitants are of a tawny Complexion, and paint their Facos, with feveral Colours; they cover nothing but the obscence Parts, which are bound up in a Linen Cloth, go ing abour their Waftes, and fo between che Twitt They are excefficly my and timorous, and whatever we cou'd do to periwade them, they wou'd none of them come aCloths thar are made, as it were, for a Cafe juft to co ctofe their Bodics, and no more: Their Faces are painted grecr, black, and yellow, and they have a large Pair of crooked Horns upor theic Heads, that are colour'd in like manner, and a long Tail faftned on behind, which hangs down between their Buttocks. They fay, that the Devil appears in this Drefs to them at their Sacrifices, and therefore that the Priefts, who are his Scrvants, are oblig'd to conform chemfelies to the Example and Humour of their Mafter, let him appear how he will. This Ife affords cxtraordinary Timber for Ship-Mafts, the Trees being fo large, tall, and perfectly ftraight and even, that chey are unexceprionable for thofe Ufes.
But there is a Vegetable here, which tho" not for any known ufe, yer for iss ftrangenefs deferves equal notice and regard: 'Tis a lirtic Twig, which rifes up amongt the Land by the Sea-fide, and by degrecs grows to fuch a bignefs, as may make it be rank'd amongit the fmaller fort of Trecs. If you offer to pull it up, it contracts is felf, and thrinks down into the Ground, unlets you draw fo hard as to prevent it. Bur if you force ir quire up above Ground, you find a grear Worm lying ar the lower part, and fo clofely united to it, as if it were a real parr of the Vegctable, and conftituted the Roor ir felf. Tis marter of Experience and Oblervation, that in the fame proportion this Worm grows lefs and lefs, the Plant grows bigger and bigger; and that at laft, when the former feems to be entirely confumed, the latter begins to /pread into Strings and Fibres, and roots it felf tirmly in the Ground, drawing in its Nourifhment by that 1 pparatus of Veffels, in the fame manner that other Vegetables do. But which is moft ftrange of all; if when its grown to maturity, you frip off all the Leaves, and the outward Correx, and fo lay ir a drying, the effect of it will bcian bbolute Perrification; and inftead of a Stick, you fhall have a real Stony Body, hardly to be diftinguith'd from White Coral. Of there wonderful Twigs we gather'd and brought home fercral.

May the Twenty ninth, we fer Sail from Sombtrero; and fune the Fifith came to an Anchor in the Road of Achen (i), (i) Achrt: two Miles from the City. Here we found Ships of almoft all the Nations of India, that came hicher to Trade; and we had fome Reafon to believe, thar our coming thither would not be ungrateful, fince we were the Subjects of a Princefs, whore Repuration was fo well eftabliftid abroad, and the Glory of whofe Victories hone with'fuch 2 Luftre, even into thofe remore Parcs of the World where we were. For as we were inform'd by fome Hollide that prefently came aboard us, the many Succeffes of our the Fanc Queen againft the Spaniards, and particularly thar ftupendous Dercar of the Armadn, had made fuch a Noile in thele Parts, and given fuch a Character of the Bravery of our Country, that we might be fure of a large thare of the King of Achen's Favour upon thar Accouns. The fame Day therefore ous Admiral fent five or fix Gende men of his Company to wait upon the King, to rell him of the Meffage and Letters he had broughr from her Majefty of England, and to defire the Favour of an Audience rogerher with his Majefty's Promife for the Security of himfelf and Ships, the cime they ftay"d ar Achen.
The King heard this Mcffage with a grear deal of plea fure, and order'd a fplendid Banquer to be furnin'd for the Entertainment of our Englifh Gentlemen that deliverd it. He promis'd all the Sccurity thar the Admiral defired, and bid him come to his Audience with as much Affurance of good Reception, as if he were going into the Prefence of his own Queen. Befides, at their departurc and the Cave princo and the Calico Tuck wrought with Gold; which the Kings of achen never beftow, but when they intend to expreis an uncommon Degree of Favour and Refpect \(\exists\) tme the Eighth, our Admiral went afthore with a hand Fome Retinne, and march'd towards the Court: Upon with Trumpers, Drums, and Streamers, and a conand The adsu Guard of Soldicrs to attend him. The larget a good inso ant Elcphanrs, (which was a matrer of fourtecn Foor high had a Caftle upon his back (cover'd with Crimfon Velver) in the middle of which was a Golden Bafon, and into this The Admiral himfer was convey'd with grear Refpect The Admiral himfelf rode upon another of thefe Bealts and the reft of his Rerinue were difpos'd of according their Quality. Being introduc'd with a greardeal of Ce remony into .the King's Prefence, after Reverence done, according to the Cuftoms of that Country, be began in a handrome Speech to open to him the Particulars of his Meffage. But the King having heard fome time, civilly interrupted him, relling him, That Bufinels fould be done afterwards; and that now 'twas more proper for him, after fo long a Voyage, to artend his own Refrefh ment: Yer withal affurd him, That for the fake of his Queen, whom all the World admired, whatfocver reafonable Demands he made, thou'd certainly be granted. Then was the Qucen's Letrer deliver'd to him, and the The putal Prefent that came along with it; a Silver Bafon, with a Prefant Founcain in the midft of ir, weighing Two hundred and ifty Ounces, 2 ftanding Cup of the fame Metal, a rich Looking-glafs, a Head-picec with a Plume of Feathers, a Cafe of fair Daggers, an embroider'd Belr, and a cursious Fan of Fearhers. The remaining part of the Day, after this, was devoted to Banquerting, Mufick, Dancing, and ocher Entertainments; in all which the Pomp and raft Riches of this Prince, and his grear Refpect to our Admiral, and his Company, did fignally appear. He was invefted in the King's Prefence with the Robe of Honour, 2 Girdle of fine Work was pur about him, and a Pair of Creffes hung on to his Sides. And as a more particular Favour, the King's Women, (which very few have the Happinefs of feeing) were fent for our of their Apartments, to give him a Dance. Thus envertain'd with all the freedom and kindnels that cou'd be, he took his leave of the King, and tho' invited to chufe any Apartment in Majefty's he came aboard thar Nighr again, expecting his Majeity's Thoughrs npon the Queen's Letter, The Copy of which is as follows:

\section*{Elizabeth by the Grace of GOD, Queen of England, France, and Ireland, Defendrefs of the Cbrifian Faith and Religion.}

To the Great and Mighty King of Acber, scc. in the Illand of Skmatra, Our Loving Bro. ther, Greeting.

THE Etcrual GOD, of bri Divine Knowledre and Prcwidence, hast fo difpofell bis Blefings, and Good Things of his Creation, for the Ufe and Nourifbment of Mankind, in fuch fort; that notwithftanding they grow in divers Kingdoms, and Regions of the World; yes by the Indufty of Man (ftirred up by tbe Infpiration of tbe faid Omnipotent Creator) they are difperfed into tbe moff remote places of she Univerfal World. To the end, that cuen thercin may appear unto all Nations, bis marvellows Works, be baving fo ordnined, thas she one Land may bave need of the other. And shereby, not only breed Intercourfe and Exchange of their Merchandije and Fruits, whotich do Juperabound in fome Countrics, and want in athers; but alfo ingender Love and. Friendfhip betwixt all Mem a shing naturally Divine.
Whacrcunto We broing refpert (Righer Noble King) and alfo to the Honourable, and truly Reyal Eane, wisich bati, bitber firctibed, of your LItighnefs's Human and Noble T'agage of Sfrimers, which repair into thert your King dom, in Lave and pecces in the Trade of Merchrindife, paying your due Cufoms, tpe beve been meved to give licence unto tiofe Our Subietts, who with commendable and gocd Defrcs, fail to wifir chat your Kingdom: Normitiffanding the Dangers and Mijerics of the Sce, natural to fuch on Vojage, whichl, (by the Grace of GOD) they will make, Leing the gicateft that is to be nade in the World: And to trejonf Traffick unto your Suljefts. Wi,ich cheir Offer, if it fhall be accepred by your Highnefs, woith fuch Loue end Grace as be bore for, of fo grect and magnanimous a Prince: Whe, for them, do promife, that in 1.0 time bersafter, you flatil brwe cat fe to repent ithercof, bur ussber ta rcjoice much. For their Denling fall be true, and their Convel frtion fure; and we bope, ther shey will give fo gord Proof thercof, shat this begiming Ball be a perpetual Confirmetion of Love betwixt our Suljcats on botb parts; by cerrying from us fuch Things and Merchandife as you have need of shere So that your highols fall be very well ferved, and berier cos.tented, than you bave berctoforc Veena with che Porrugals and Spaniards, our Encmits: Wia only, and none elfe, of thefe Regions, brove frequented thoge your, and she otber Kingdoms of the Eaft. Nof Suffering that the other Nations Bould do it, pretending eliemjelves to be Mcnarchs, and abfoluse Lerds of ell these Kingdums and Provinces: As their amp Conquest and Inleritance, as appeareth, by flacir lofy Titic in rbsir Writ cings. The contrary. mberenf, bats wery latcly appcared unto ur, and that your Highmes, and your Rocel Family, Fathers and Grandfathers, bave (by the Grace of G O D, and their Velour) known, not only to defend your own Kingdoms; but alooto give Wirrs unto the Porrugals, in the Lends which she fiofefs: as namely in Malaca, in the Xeat of the Human Redemption 1575, under the Conduef of your valiant Coptain, Ragamacota, with eljeir grear Lers, and sic perpeturl Honour of your Highnefs Crowin and Kingdom.

And now, if your Highess brell be pleafod, to accept into your Favour and Grace, cmd under your Reyal Proccition ond Defence, thefo cur Subjefts, sbats they may frecly do their Bi fincss now, and consinue ycaily bercafter: Thin Bearcr, mopo gocth chief of thsis Elecr of four Ships, bath order (with your Higloness Licence) ro (eave cerrain Fadiors, mith re. soled Ho:ife of EaZory in your Kingdom; until the going thither of antriner Flect, which Secll go shither upon she return of tivis. Whaich left Fifors, Jball learn the Lenguage and Cuftoms of your Subjets, whercly the batier end more levingly so comverfe mith them.

And the better to confirm this Confederacy and Fizendbio betwixt us, we are coricented, if your Highnefs be fo picifid rbat you Caufe Capitulations reafomable to be made: And chat this Bearer do the like in our Name. Which we premifo so perform rojally, and entirely, as well berein, as in other Agrecments and Arguments; which be will communiccte unto you To whom we do greatly defire your Highnefs to gioe citire Faith and Credir, sind shar your will receive bim, and the reft of his Company, under your Royal Protection, favauring them in what fall be Reafon and Fuftice: And ne promije cn our b:balf, 20 Re-antwer in like degrec, in all that your Highnefs hall bave'need, outs of shefe our Kingdoms. And we defire, that your Highowefs would le pienfed to ford us Anfwer, by this Becirer'of thas our Letter, that we may thereby zmderffand of your Rgal Acceptance of the Friendßip and League, wivich we offer, and gratly difire, may lueve an bappr beginining, with long Xeits to continuc.

The next time the Admiral went to Court, he found the King exrreamly well pleas'd with the Contents of her Majecty's Letter : He told him in gencral, as to the Leaguc which was mention'd, That he for his part, deFired nothing more heartily than fuch an Union and Correfpondency; but as to all the Parriculars of it, he wou'd leave thofe Points to be felled by histwo chief Minifters, whom he had Auchoriz'd to act in char concern. A Day therefore being appointed for this Bufinels, the Conference began, which was managed in the Arabick Tongue; and for this our Admiral was very well provided, by the means of a Jcw be broughr with him, who fpoke that Language perfectly well.

In the Difcourfe, asit came in his way, to natke fere- fine Conferal Demands concerning the Frecdoms of the Merchanso, tence \(\mathbb{K}\) ing of one of the Minifters defired him to lay before them, thofe Actien's MiReafons which he thought moft proper to perfwade the \({ }^{\text {nifern }}\) King to grant thofe Demands that were made : In comepliance with which Propofal, the Admiral infifted largely upon thefe, and fercral Topicks of the like Narure:
That Mcrchandize and Trade, when they flonrin'dein any Countr; broughe fignal Advantages along with hem and thar no Prince civer repeuted giving Encouragement to chem.
That England was capable of furnining his Majefty's Domirions with Varicries of rcry ufeful Commodicics and particularly could Kupply him with skilful Artificers of all forts, who might do him very confidcrable Service and propagate thofe Arts that were wholly unknows in that part of the Wor!d.
Thar her Majeft; was not only an Enciny to the Common Encuny the Spanicrd, but was able allo to kecp him in Awe, and cou d put a Bride upon that exorbitant Power; which had fwallow'd up to great a part of the Weftern and might porfibly antemps to Ceize anocher Goldea Prey in the Eattern World.
In fhort, that fome of the moft porene Monarch of the World, were her Confederates and Allics ; and her FriendThip was never offerd to any Prince, that did nos joyfully accept it, and cheem is at a high rate Thefe things were deliver'd to the King in Writing, and he was pleas do conduer them to fo good purpofe, thar at our Admiral's next going to Court, he rold him, He would feal the League with her Majefty, and hold ir invic lably on his part: And as for all thofe particular Arricles and Demands, which were the Subjects of Difcourfe in the Conference, be would take care for his complere Saisfaction thercin, and order his Secretaries to fend him all ratified and figned in hisName. Bur he was fo kind as to give the Writings himfelf to the Admiral, in a very fow Days; and that with abundance of foft and gracious Words, expreffing his Good-Will to her Majenty, and the privileges whole Nation in general.
In there Papers the Englifh had the following Pi Ensliza confium'd to them, vir.
1. Free Entry and Trade.
2. Cuftom-free, wharever Goods were brought in, or carried our.
3. The Liberry of making Wills, and Difpoing of heir Eftates, where; and to whom they thoughr fit.
4. Full Sccurity as to all Bargains and Payments, in both which refpeits the Acienefc thou'd be tied to a punCtual and ftrict obfervation of all the Meafures of Juftice, and fair dealing.
5. Authority to inflict Punifments on their own DCinquens, withour Appeal to the Civil Magiftrate of the Country:
6. Affurance of Jurtice to "be done in all cafe of Injuries from the Natives, upon Complaine made.
7. Frecdom from all Arretrs upion Goods or Prizes.
8. Liberty of Confcience, and the undifturbed Exercife of their own Religion.

Thefe Points being thus happily fetuled, to our own Contentment; and the great Advantage of our Nation the Merchanes began to provide for a good Lading of Pepper: But hercin we lay under a Difappointmens, by reafor of the Barrennets of the laft Year, the Quancitics being fo litule, thar we doubted fome of our Ships mult go back cmpty : And the Price too rifing fo much above what Merchants had been made to believe, that whereas they were inform'd, it mighr be had ar four Sprnifh Rials of Eight per C. it coft us atmoft twenry. Bur underfanding thar we. might pofibly mect with a Supply (at leaft enough to lade one Ship! at Priamen, which lics a bout iso leagues to the Southward of Achen; our Admat ral gave Orders for the Sufnn to make ready to go upon thar Defign. Delign
Tho is appear'd by our Entertainment, and the Favours thewn us, that we were eery welcome to the King and People of Aclien; yer there were others, to whom we were as ungrateful, and whom our gooll Forrune ftrong y provok'd to hate us. The Portugueze were fenfible, har we had with little trouble gain'd chofe imporiant Points of Favour and Privilege, which with all their Application and Courthip, they had never been able to procure. Befides, they law that our growing Intereft and Repuration in thole Parts, was in all pmabity Reputation in thole Parts, was in all probabiliry, like to be the undoing of theirs; and that if we went on as we and begun, they had e'en as good quit their Pretenfions to any Concems there, and leave the entire nnffefion of the Irade to our 'flyes: There feem'd to' "emedy

to prevent this Danger, that fo apparently threatned their Inrcreft, but by 2 diligent Craft to undermine us fome way or other: For as for open Violence, they dared not prerend to any fuch Courfe, as well upon the accouns of our own Strength, as the Affiftance the King of Achion would have given us in that Cafe.

Their Embaffador therefore ar Courr, curiounty pried inro allour Proceedings, and watch'd cuery Srep we rook he eidd all that he cou'd to infinuate things into the King to our difadvantage, and to feafon him with Prejudices againtt us; but it fecms his Majefty was too well fix'd in his good Opinion of us, to be chang'd by this Detractor, and he gor no Credir nor Reffect at all, by this invidious Undertaking.

He defired leave of the King, to fertle a Factory in his Countity, and to crect a Fors ar the entry of the Hartour, to fecure the Merchants, as he prerended : but, indect, to kecp us Englifh our. Bur neither woud this Project take; and the king, who very well underfood his meaning, told him, That his Mafter was as careful of his Country, as if his Daugheer were so be Queen of is in rime ; and that he gou'd not need to be at the Charge of building a Fort for that vi e, fince he wou'd furnifh the Merchanes with a conyenient Hould where all their Goods thould lic out of danger, both of fire and Enemics ton.

Bur befides all thefe Endeavours, they fet a Spy upon us in our own Honfe; an ingenious cratry yorng fudian who rame every Day to us with Hens to Cell; and urd s the difguize of a Market-man, had an opportunity given him to make his Oblervations upon us, and our Affairs; which the lortuguefe that fer him 2 work, by this means hop"d to come to the Knowledge of. Our Admiral fufpecting this Perfon, and taking occafion one Day to enter into a free Difcourle with him, by very kind Words, and charming Promifes of Liberty and Reward, got the whole Truch our of him: And he told him plainly, Thar the Dorrigurc had not only cmployed him as a Spy upon the Domettick Concerns, but had alio planted a very fubele onc aboard their Ships; who being there wholly unfuapected, had taken a perfect Draught of them, as to their Dimenfion and Furniture, and the Number of Men and Guns that erery one carried. Befides, obletving how much their Men wete weaken'd and difcompos'd by Sicknefs, they inrended to draw a confiderable Force frots Maleces, and fo affauls them as they lay in the Road. Our Admi tal fo prefs'd the Poine, and manag'd Matters with chis Spy, that he entirely came over to his Inrereft and Service, and inftead of being a Tool to the Porturuere, he became 2 very ufeful [nftrument to us, to difoover all their Plots and Intrigues, and give us Notice of every important Af fair that wascarrying on in the Embafrador's Houfe. Be ing fent for to Court, the next Day, he difcoverd all thefe Procecdings of the Portugucze to the King, what they had already done, and whar they further intended to do; and therefore requefted of his Majelty, That he wou'd order thofe Servantio of the Embaliador, that were going away from Malacca, to be Arrefted ar fome Port of his, where they wou'd be fure to go in order to their paffage; that fo by feizing the Intelligence they carried, there might be a more complete Evidence, and fuller Account of their Defigns.

This the King very kindly promis'd to do, in cafe No-

\section*{} tingionde Admiral, that the Portugueze Bark was gone, a Frigate was. fent after them, which gave a top to rheir Voyage, and conmanded them back to Achen in the King's Name. The Bark was fearch'd, and all thcir Trunks and Packers were open'd, but the chief Prize, the Intriguing Letters that concem'd the Englijh, were either loft in the Hurlyburly, or fecretly convey'd over-board.
Now the Year had pals'd over us as far as September, and our Admiral began to think of purting to Sca again, in order to accomplifh his main Bufinels. But hearing that the Portugucic Embaflador had his Difparch, to be gone in a very few Days, (and it being on feveral Accounts expedient, that we thou'd be our at Sea before him) he went to entreat the Favour of the King to ftay him for fome rime.

The King, who was always very cafic of Accefs, and ready to grant any Requct of the Admirals, receiv'd him with a grear deal of good Humour, and pleafane Jokes, upon what had paft with che Portugucze, and ar laft told him merrily; That he wou'd do what he defired, upon Condition, he woud bring him a fair Portugucze Ginl, for 2 Prefers, ar his Return. Sotaking leave of his Majefty, and prefenting two of the chief Merchanis to him, that were to ftay behind to Irade, and whom he was pleas'd to take ignt licis particular Protedion. All things being now in a readinefs, we fet Sail September the Eleyenth for They mo Wreights of Malncca.
We had in our Company a Dutch Ship of 200 Tuns, that offer'd to bear 2 part in the Adventure; and by A. greement was to have an \(\dot{y}\) of what wastaken.
In the mean time the King did nor fail to act his part, in detaining the Portuguene Embaffador; and tho' he every Day urged his Difparch to be gone, yet ftill he was delay d and whil'd off, upon one precence or another, which was a very great advantage to us; For had he fet ourberore us, the Alarm wou'd have been given all abour the Streights, and Care wou'd have been taken, that no Ships thoud pals that way, where 'twas likely that we fould ever mect with them; whereas now we had the opportunity of pofting our felves convenicntly for a Prize, and lay undifoover'd within Twenty five Leagues of Malacea it Kelf, in the very Strcights.

Otteber the Third, we defericd a Sail, and thercupon ipriad our felves into a wide Compafs, that the mighr be iure not to mifs one or other of us. She happen'd to fall in with the Hestor; which prefently gave us Intelligence, by two or threc Guns let off for that purpole, fo that we drew alrogether about her: We gave her icveral Shot, and the reply'd pretty briskly again; but the Admiral coming up, and with a Difcharge from his Prow, Atriking down her Main-yard, the Difpute was at an end, the not being forward to thoor any more; and we fearful, leaft fome Whappy Shot from us might fink her, lighting between Wind and Water.
The next Morning the. Captain of her came aboard the Admiral, and refignid his Ship and Goods into hishands: We rook poffefion by four of our Mcn, whom we fent aboard as well to fecure her, as to prevent the pillaging and rifling, which is very common upon thefe Occafions and unaroidable, when a Rout of common Sailers come where Plunder is to be had.
This Ship came from Sc. Themar, in the Bay of Bentala, and was bound fer Malreca: She was of 900 Tun Burthen, had 600 Perfons aboard ther, and a lading of 950 Packs of Calicoes, Pintades, and a great deal of ouher Merchandice, befides Rice, and things that we made litle account of. And now we were easd of that care and car that was upon us, of returning home with empry Ships; and our greateft concern, as the cale ftood, was more for room to beftow what we had gotten, till the securn of the Ships from England.
ORIober the Twenty firft, we fer fail out of the Sercights of Malacca, for Acben; and in our paffage were like to be orcrwhelm'd with one of the Warer-fpouts, that pourd a wre: down very near our Ship. When thele Spouts fall, 'ris fiout almoft as if a grear River pourd our of the Clouds into the Sea; it puts the Qcean into a violent Fermenc, and makes ir foam and boil again, with the excelfiye Irritarion: They are fometimes a quarter of an Hour in fal ling. and thou'd they tight of a Ship, they wou'd infal libly fink it. Bur we happily efcap'd this wafh, and proceeded in our Voyage ro \(A / / j e n\).
oftober the Twenty fourth, we came fafe into the Port of Achom, where we found all our Merehancs, and rheir Affairs, in very good Circumftances; and thar the King. according to his Engagement, had been a faithful and carcful Guardian to them in our ablence. And to make fome Acknowledgment for this his Favour to us, the Admiral chofe feveral things our of the Prize we had taken, fuch as we imagin'd wou'd be moft pleafing to him, and prefented them to his Majelty, with his humble Defirc they might be accepted, as a Teftimony of ourGratirude: This was highly obliging to him, and he exprefsd a grear deal of Satisfaction; not only in the Prefent it felf, but in the occafion of it too, our Sudcels aga:nt the Porin sueze.
We had nor been here long, but our Admiral gave Orders to bring all the Lading of Spice (we had, aboard, and to make ready for our going to Bant cm , where we were like to meet with a far greater Return of Pepper, and at more reasonable Rares than we cou'd buy it at Acherr. So going to Courr, to take Leave of the King, after a long Conterence, the following Letrer was deliver'd him for her Majefty, written in the Arabick Tongue.

The LETTER of the King of Achen, to the Thinint Queen of England.

Writen in * Terich of the Year ront, of Mahomet Peace be unto you:

Together with the Letrex, a Prefent was deliver'd too, confiting of three rich rieces of Cloficy embroidcrid with Gold, and a Ring with a very large Ruby: And the Admiral himfelf was profented with another Ring with a fair Ruby in it. Before he went"away, the King asked him, Whether. we had the Pfalms of David extant among tandy fing in told him Thar he and his Norvice. His Majerty the fing a Pfalm to God for their Profperity and good Voyage; which they did: And afterwards the Admiral and his Company, did, at the King's Requeft, do the like, to new him the Englift-way of Singing: So after the Rfalm was ended, his Majefty in great Order pronounc'd a Blefang upon us, and difmistd us with a Promife, that wo houd find the fame kind Entertainment, if ever we came aro his.Country again any Nozember the Ninth, we fet Sail with our three Ships Cr Priamen, and beitrm, the Sufan being gone rowards thofe Parts before, to ger a 1 ading of Pepper.
In two Days time the Admital difparch'd the Afenfion home for England, fo that now we were burtwo in Company; and we held our Courfe along the Coaft of Sumaara, hoping to meet with our Ship the Sufan; which was rrading thereabours. There are fome very dangerous places along this Coant, certain rery lowIlands, encoun-pastd with Flats and Rocks, where we had like to have Flats, and had a full Period fer to our Voyage; bur by a favourable Rooks. Providence we gor free from the danger. Having crofs'd the Equinoctial the third time, we arriv'd ar Pricimat, \((k)\). \((k)\) Rrimonn November the Twenticth, where we found our Ship, and char well rowards a Lading reo, heing provided with Six hundred Bahars of Pcpper, and Sixty lix of Cloves. This Commodity coft us much lets here than ar acch:m, tho it docs not grow about priamen, but is brought moflly froma Manangerbo (/), which lies eight or ren Leingues up in the (1) Kannen Country ; and is remarkable, nor only for tike Quantitics cale. of Repperit yields, but the ftore of Godd Luat and Grains ound thercabouts, which the great Rains want dowa from the Mountains.
Priaman, tho' it lics रo very ncar the Line (as being in Is Min. Sourh Lat.) yet is a tery healehy place, and has a curious refrefing Air; beliues, there's plenty of Proi ifion, and good freih Water there. The sujan was order'd hicre, to ger her Lading compleated, and fo direet her Courfe homewards.
Dccemicr the t 9 th, we entred the Strights of Sunde ( \(m\) ), (m)Sunda and anchor'd under the late l'uloperfa; three Leagucs from Smerthis.
Bantem.

The Sixtcenth we cnired Benam Road, and the ViceAdmarial went amoar, to cerrifie the King of our Arrival and Bufinets, and to celire his kafe Conduct. The King was Yery glad of our coming, and lent a Nobleman back with the Vice-Admiral, to bid the Admiral Welcome, and ro conduct him to the Courr. This Prince was nor above Their Receten or eleven. Years old, being under the Tuition of a p pionn at Protector, who managed the Atiairs of the Kingdom during his Minority : He welcon'd the Admital trey kind ly, and reccit'd the Qucen's letrer and Prefonr of Plate with much fatisfaction, referring all rhe Points of Trade and Bufincts, to be adjufted by his Council, from whom he defired the Admiral to rake his Anfwer. And the Re fule of the Confultagion was, that we thou'd come athore and trade, with-att the freedom we cou'd defirc, and be as fafe, in all refpects, asif we were in our own Country So we had convenicnr Houfing provided for us, and our Merchanes broughr Goods amore, and the Trade began Trade begai and proceeded to fuch good purpofe, that within fivc Weeks there was more fold in Goods, than would have laded our rwo Ships; and that chey broughr away from chence 276 Bags of Pepper, weighing 621.2 piece. Thiefe coft us \(5:\) Rials of Eight \(\rho\) cr Bag, beffdes our Anchorage ind the King's Cuftom; the former of which amounted in the grofs to 1 soo Kials of Eight, and the latter was a Rial upon eycry Bag.

Tis a Cuftom always obrerred here, that the King is 0 begin the Trade, and furnith himfelf with what Commodicies he pleafes, before any of his Subjects arc ferv'd. and this is no difadvantage ar all to the Merchant, fince he gives a reafonable Price, and is a very good Ray mafter.
Tho'rhe Zavens are reckon'd fome of the moft chievinh pilfering Pcople in the World, yer we thad a tolerable meafure of quier amongit them, and they did nor very much difturb us by thote Knaverics, confidering how hor ribly they are addicted to them. Burthen it mult be own'd, that rwas more our Care and Warchfulnefs that made them honeit, than any thing of their own Inclination And befides, we had a Commiffion from the King, to execute thofe upon the fpor, thar we thou'd find about our Houfe in the Night, upon any fuch Defign; and af ter we had made four or five Examples, theret were betrer adviled, and forbore troubling us.

While we were here, we lof our Vice-Admiral, Ca prain Fomn Middleter. But our Trade wenc on fo briskly that by February the Tenth *, our Ships had their full L 2- A.D. i6a: ding of Pepper, and were ready to Sail. The Admiral before he went, difpatch'd a Pinnaice for the Moleccais, to A Pinnuce begin a Trade there, and procure a Factory to be feruled, Manccas fos. againft the nexr rerurn of the Ships from Englend. He made provifion too for carrying on the Bentam-Trade in Facoiry io his abicnce, leaving a fufficient number of Men and Fa- bansan. tors, for the dirpofing of the Merchandice - that was Ctors, left.

After this he went to take Leave of the King, and to rcturn him his latt Thanks, for the Favours and Privileges vouchlafed the Erigith Nation in his Dominions. His Majefty was plealed to make him the Beater of a Letter, and a Prefenr of very fair Bezoar Stones for the Queen, and for himfelf a Stone of the fame kind, and a curious facia Dagger, which is a thing very highly eltecm'd amongit them. This Ceremony ended, we had nothing now to do, burto get a Shipboard as faft as we cou'd, and er out for our Native Country.
The Twenticth of February we fet fail for Exgland, with They fot of a very chearful-Hear, having fuccecded in our Defigns, for \({ }^{\circ} \mathrm{E}\) E-ions K 2 the Service of our Country, to fo good a Degree, and met with fo many uncxpected Advancages that had hitherto fweerned our Voyage to us.
The Twenty fecond, and Twenty third, we game into the Sereights of Sumde; and the Twenty axch gor clear of all the lirtle Ines that lic in thofe Strcights, and So holding a Sourh Wert Courfe, in two Days we made 8 Degr. 40 Min. South I at.
March the Thirtecnth we pass'd the Tropick of Copricorn, kecping ftill for the moft parr, a Sourh Went Courfe.

April the Fourteenth, we were in 34 Degr . Suppofing the Inc of Mad.terfecer to be to the North of us.
The Twenty cighth, we had a Sromm fo furious and violent, and the Sca ran fo excedirely high, that we had litthe hopes lefo of efeaping a difmal Burial, under thofe Mountains of Watces that came rußhing upon us. Xer all this was but the becinning of Sorrows, a Prologue to a more black and direful Scene of Miferies, which beran to open is felf to us on Niry the Third. Now the Sea beat fo fierecly upon the Ships Quarter, thar it thook all the Iron-work of the Rudder, and qui.kly broke off the Rudder it felf from the Srern, to thgronfounding of the beft and moft experienced of usall. The sea thar we were in, was one of the moftermettuous in the World and here our Ships drive up and down like a Wreck, being entirely at the Winds difpofal, and not able in the leaft to command, or direct her own Motions.: Somet:mes we thou'd be carried wirhin three or four Leagues of the Cape of Good Hope ; and then again driven our to almeft forty Degrees Son:chward inro Sterms of Hail and Snow, and miferable feery Weather.
Once we atecmpred to take our Mizenimatt, and put ir out at the Stern-port, hoping by the help of that Derice, to make a peor thift, till we coud reach fome Harbour or orher, where we might repair the Breaches of our thatterd Velfel: But when chis was tried, we bad no relief, bur an increafe of our Danger ; for the Sea being fomewhat grown with lifting up the Mant, did fo niake the Stern, and putall into frich a threatning a Condition, that we thought our felves happy when we had gor the Mat in again: And now all was defperate, unless we coud make a new Rudder, and bring is to pals that it thou'd hang fant in the Sea; which confidering the great Burthen of our Ships, the roughnefs of the Sca, and the lofs of moft of our Rudder-Irans; was a Work of ifurprizing dificulty. Yer having made our of our Mizen-mant as good a one as we cou'd, and faftned is as well as ousr piriful Tackling wou'd allow, having alfo the Comfort of a litrie fair Weather, we concinued our Courfe homewards: Bur twas not long before the Sea rook it off \(2-\) gain, and pur us to a grear deal of trouble to fave it; fo that now our Fears were rais'd to as high a degree as ever. Yet afrer all thefe Difcouragements, by the help of our other good Ship the Hector, we accompligh'd the fixing is on once more, tho it hung very gingerly, there being bue two Hooks ieft to hold it. And in chis Cale we went on, directing our Courfe to Sc. Holima, the Wind falling fo Mort, that we cou'd reach no part of Africk; and we knowing that we had alrcady doubled the Cape, by the lacizude we were in.
futc the Fifth, we pas'd the Tropick of Cepricarn a The mine ain; and the Sixtecnth had fight of St. Hecene: Which at st Bume, after a profrect of fo tcrrible Dangers, as thofe we had gone through, was not a little refrething to us. We bare clofe along by the Shoar, the more conveniendy to reach the beft part of the Road, which is righe againft the Por. uruč Chapel, in twelve Fathom Water. Here we fitced up our Ship, and having almoft as much need of mending and repairing our felves, as our Vcffel, we allow'd fome time for that neceffary Work, to which the Inand conrributed pretry well, in the good frefl Water, Hoss, and Goats it afforded us.
fuly the Fifth we fet Sail, holding our Courle N. W. and the Fifreenth pals'd by the barren and defolate Inand of \(A\) fertion. From hence we conrinued to hold our N. Naxtien W. Courle, till the Nineteench; and then we crofs'd the Equinoctial.
The Twency fourch we made 6 Degr. North I at. being as we judg'd chen, 150 Leagues from the Coalt of Guince.
We held a N. s. W. by N. Courfe, till the Twenty ine Fes. ninth, 25 which time we law the lac Fogs.
Auguft the Screnth, we made 16 Dcgr. and the Tweltith pafs'd the Tropick of 'Cancer, ftecring Northerly.
The Twenty ninth we pals'd the lile St. Mary.
Septomber the Seventh, we had the Landsend of Ewgand abour 40 L cagues from us.
The Eleventh we cait Anchor in the Dorns, after all the Perils of chis long and redious Voyage.

\section*{A Defcription of Java, and the fret Englifh Factory there: With divers Occurrents relating to the Indian, Englifh, and Dutch Affairs. Written by Mr. Edmund Scott, containing a Hiftory of thofe Matters, from A. D. 1602, to 1605.}

AHis tand runs near 146 Leagues in lengeth, E. and W: And is in the wideft parr abous 90 in breadth, Norrhward and Sourtiward. 'Tis comprehended between the 135 th, and the i 145 th Circks of Long. and the 7 th and gth Parallels of South Lat. The Ceneral Parts of it are gencrally very mountainous and rugged, yet not fo as to hinder Traycling and thore bordering upon the Sca, are low and marthy Together with which difadvantage of Simation, thicy have an impure and unwholfome Air, which generally afficts Strangers with many troublefome Ditempers; yct hereabouts all the principal Towns of the whole Kingdom lic, the chief places of Trade and Bufincs, as Bentam Fricatra, Forten, Cbiringin, and chereft.

This Soil yields nothing worth the Trading for, bur Pcpper; which is brought in from all parts of the Kingdom to Bentem, and has rais'd fuch a Trade there, rbat no Town in at rhat part of the \(I\) d des ( not Acher it felt) can pretend to Rival it in that refpect. And there ufed ro be a good Srock of this Commodity brought in from divers other Countries too; but of lare Years the Duth have inrercepicd thar Trade, and by buying it up abioad, prevented its corming to Bantrom.

This Town is three Ewglifh Miles in length, and as populous as moft Towns of its bignefs perhaps in affia. Thei are to coter hers upon the Affairs of Trade, that they kcep chree Markers cucry Day; and there is fuch a Throng of People at that in the Moming, that one wou'd think it racher a folemn Fair, in which Bulinets was to be done but once a Year, than a common Marker that occurs crery Day:
There are two Divifons of this Town the one eatircly, rakcn up by the Fupans, the Nacives and genuine:Poffef fors. \(\boldsymbol{F}\) the other devoted to the ufe of Forcigners; and yuch: as come thither upon the Accpunts of Trade and Nenctian:dice.
The fician Divifion is forithe moft part rexy dighory the zon builr, the Hoûles icing gcacrally fram' \(\alpha\) withno ftronger Town. Materials than Cancs; deftirute of all Brick and Timberwork, except fome very limefe in a few places; where it. adds neither Striength nor Beaury to the Building- :Tis. watcrd with leveral froall Rivers, thar run up and downahour it; and there is one Branch that pafles through tbe very middle of ir up to the Cours, which holds 2 conttans Corrcfonderice with the Sea inits ebbing and flowing. and will bring up Gallies, and Junks, of great Burthon, to the very heart of the Town. It has the Convenience of a good Road for Ships too, and'tis defended/3with a ftour Brick Wall with Eeveral Twrres and Butwarks to that is might be made a very confiderableplace, if the Reople had the Sewce to underftand their own Advanrages.
The other part, which they call the Chima Town: with The chind rc(pect to the Building) makes a far handfomer apprarance than this, the. Houles confifting moftly of Brick, bur rais d afictithe Chincfe Fantion fquare and Hat:at tap; ; with: Comir Zates of Boards,and Canes coverd operwos Brick:
and Sand, to defend them from Fites, which together with the thicvin Pcople, are the everlalting Plagues of Merchants Houfes in Bantiam.
Tis parted by a narrow River from the Gavan Town; and cis here that all the Strangers, and Merchandizing Pcople of other Countries do refide; particularly here are the Eiglifh and Dutcls Houfce, which are fone of the beft and ftatelieft buils in the whole Town.
The King. and his \({ }^{\circ}\).
The King of this place is now reckon'd (fince the depofing of the Emperour of Damask) the moft poiene Prince of the whole lland. He Gorerns all by an abfolute Defrotick Power; and the Laws upon which his Subjects. lives and Fortunes depend, are flut up entirely in his own Brcatt:

Adn'tcry is here punith'd with prefent Death, in both Partics chat are guilty of it.; but as for Murcher, the Law, is to pay a Fine to the King: So that his Majclty may have a conliderable Revenue coming in by Blood, confidering the revengeful and implacable Temper of the Fan vanefie: For if the Friends of the murcher'd Party, do kill the Murtherer, and his Friends again revenge it upon them, and fo deftroy one anorher by whole Familics, therc's no more to be done, bur to pay their Fines; and to the King. tho' he lofes Subjects, Jer gets Money by the Bargain
The People of this Country are exceffively prond and nothful, and confequentiy poor: They defpife all manner of Lalour and Employment, and think it beneach them to have a dependanse upon any thing of char kind for a Livelihood. The Gentry themfelics are as poor as cyer they can tell how to live; and 'tis certain, whar they murt be fo, fince (befides their negicet of all Bufinels they kecp fuch vaft Numbers of Slaves, that they are quite grow filt enough; to maincain the huge Trains of Tcnans they affect to draw after them. They are fo tender Of their Honour, that they are ready to meafure the very Scats upen which they fir, for fear'one hou'd be higher than another; and no Man will endure another Perfon of the fame Rank and Quality, to fir one Inch more cralted than he does. They are horribly malicious and quarrelvome, and care nor what they do to accomplifh the Revenge of an Injury, buc they generally do it in a cowardly and clandeftine way; and will fooner difpatch a hundred:Enemics, with á privatc Stab or Thruft, than meer one honourably in: Field. Srealing, Cheating, and Defrauding, fecm to bear a part in cheir Confituition, as well as Sloth and Idicnels; thicir Vertue is too weak to refift the Temptation of the fmallet Bribe, and their Con feience folitele, that they'Il not refign a Pawn, or a Pledge, or any thing they are urufted with; nor pay any Debr, if they can poffibly help it. And yer their Laws are very revere in this Cafe; for the Crediror has Power, not only over the Goods, but alfo the Wife and Children of the Debtor, whom he may fell for Slaves, if he pleafes.
As for their Religion. 'ris very bard to fay what ir is and any orber thing. relating to thein, is fooner accounr cd for than chis. They have Tcmples amongft them, bur for the Jivenoref to adery, fedem City, than any thing elfe; for the Javanefi very feldom fec the infide of them, upon any. Religious Occafion. Thicy fay, There is one God that. made Hearen and Earih ; bur he being fo very good, that he cannor poutibly har them, they don'r make fo many Prayers to him, becaufe the fear and dread of Evil, is the main Ground of their Devotion. But as for the Devil, they hay he is rery wicked and mifchievous, and ready to do them all manner. of Ill Turns, and fo they. ferve him in their own defence, and by way of prevention. They have fome Notion of Jefns Chrif, whom they acknowledge to be a Grear Prophet : Bur their grearef. Difgust aganit Chriftianity, is upon the account of its ftrict Prohibition of Polygamy, and-the-Vices that relare to Women, which-all the Eaftern. People are wonderfully addi-

The Men rake a grear deal of Pride in their Hair, which is very thick and frizled, and go bare-headed, very ofren, a purpore to biew it As for the Women, they always go bare-headed; che-Genrecler fori rying up their Hair in Eots, as we do our fine Horles

As for the Clinefe that live here, they are abrolute MaIters of all the Arts and Policics, thar can any way ferve Thic ctimes, to carry on the Decign of thriving in the World, and grow- that live iu ing rich. They make all the adrantage imaginable, of ain the Dulnefs, Pride, and Slorh, of their Javan Mafters: They are the Perfons that manage the Concerns of Plant:ing, Drefling, and Gathering the Pepper; and Rice and as they do all the Work, fo they fuck up all the Pro firs, and leave the others litele more than the bare Title to their Lands and Eftates. They'll refufe no Labour how mean and hard foever if fqueezing any adyantage ous of ir bur a proffect of ner queezing any advantage ous of ir, and they care nor who they are Slaves to, por what Drudgery they underFolly they can but make their own Marker, our of the Folly and Eafinefs of/their Mafters. And then in all Points of Trade and Bargains, lera Man thatdeals with held by ave his Wits about him, lince they are not to be hald by any Bonds of common Honctty and Juftice, and are never fincere and fair in their Dealings bur when a Plot to cheat and elay the Kmare happens ro be difcorer'd; or can't be put in practice
In the Matters of Religion, thery are very near a-kin to be Javens, and have anuch the "fape Meafures of Dero cion, tho' with more foolifh Ccremonics and Supertition than they.
The Doctrine of Tranfmigrion

They have, befides their ordinary Prictts, a fort of Mcri amonist them, whom they commonly call Southfayers;

\section*{Southay} who are in mighry citcem, as precending to rery great matcers, by a kind of Infiration; and (they fay) able to accomplini them, There Fellows are fometimes poffers'd with a fudden Fury, under the Tranfports of which, they appear and act like to many Bedlams, running up and down the Serects with drawn Swords, tearkne their Hair, beating themfelves againtt the Walls, and rowling upon the Ground. While this Fit latts, the Chimefe fay, they can unriddle the darkett Myfterics, forctel firure Events, hew the Succets of any Bulinefs or Atiair that is in hand, and performs things far above the reach of other common imorrals. And as, they very frequently confule chem upon all thefe Accounts, fo they lay, their Predictions are always jultified by the Event: And, indecd, conlidering the horrid Impictics of chat Pcople, ris not impoffible that fome of them may have Credis enough with the Grand Encouce of Verruc and Gondnets, to be of his Council, and to le made Pariakers of tome of his Secrets.

The Clisinfe are fome of the moft effeminatc. mean, and daftardly Spifited People in the World a And as the: have not the Tones, fo neither have they the Faces of Men ; being for the moft parr quite finoodi, at lealt yery litele of a Beard to be feen.
Their Habit is a long Gown with a Kirtle under is, Theirger which hangs below the Gown: Upon their Heads they wear Cauls of Silk, and the Nobility a fort of Hocds anade of divers Fanions; but all of them have cheir Hair. which is very long, ticd up in a Knote, upon the Crown of the Head.
Their way at Bentam, is, to buy Women-Sla ses, by whoms. they have what Children they have theref becauie chey bring no Women with them out of Cisina; and to when the: go into their own Country for good and all, they fell thac Mothers again, and carry the Children with chem, But if chey cut their Hair when they are abroad any where, they muft neter pretend to go back into China more, their Cultoms not allowing it: And if they die ar Banfam, all their Goods are forfeited to the King, by the Laws of the place; tho" they commonly take care to prevent the King's growing rich that way, by fending their Effects out of his reach, home, into China.

\section*{The Dangers the Foglifh went through, by means of the Falhood and Treacheries of the Javans.}

TIS related before, how Adnniral L.anc.ffter had laid the Foundation of a good Factory at Buntan, and provided for the encouragenent and carrying of the Trade, by fercral Merchants left there for that purpore.
Orders alfo were given, for the fending of a Pinnaceto the Molucca's, upon the fame Defign, , which accordingly fer Sail Marsh the Sixth, with a lading of Fifty fix Cheft and Farde.'s of Goods, but mecting with concrary Winds, afice the had fpent two Monshs beating up and down 25 Sea, the came back again to Bentein.
Bur in this fpace of sime, we that refided there, had a very difficult part to play, to defcid our felves from the Th effets of the Malice and Wiekedness of the 3 anian and them, (which was before our Ships departed) they made it their Butinces ro ftudy all Mcthods of Revenge imaginable, and were never cafic, bur when they were attempting fome mifchicf or other upon us. They wou'd thoor tiaming Darts and Arrows in the Nighr, into the Houle where our Goods were fecured, hoping to fire is that way; and even in the Day-rime, if we brought out any quantity of Goods to tir, they wou'd fer the Town a-fire to the Windward of us, nor caring whar Mifchicf ther did, fo we might be involv'd in the fame.
Quickly after the going out of our Pinnace, weid drefs'd to the Work of building a convenicnt Publick Houfe, according to the liberty given us: We defign'd it Seveniy two foor in length, and Thirty fix broad, and procceded fo far as to lay the Foundation, bur by reaton of fome Changes made at Court, and the fering up a new Protector, a ftop was pur to this Affair for a ame; and it coft us not a lietle Trouble and Moncy too; before we cou'd remove all Impediments.

Marsil the Twenty firte, the Town was accidentally fired, and Feveral Honfes filld with Goods; were emtirely confumed. We had a conliderable fhate in the Lois and Damage dene by it too; for amongft others, the Dutch, Houfe was burne to the Ground, and there we had no lefs ban Sixry five Fardels of feverat forts of Goods (which all became Fred irrecoverably), berides 190 Sacks of Pepper lott in another place. But we reckon'd that Proviaence was vore favourable to us, in permitting us to corre off ac fo cheap a rate as we did, and eftecrnd ir litule lefs than a Miracle, that both our Houfes were prefervid; e feccially one of themi, which the raging Flame advanc'd within ihrec liards of, and threatned in a very frightful nianner, ict went off at latt in's furprizing and unaccouncable wav, doing no other harm than fcorching the, Walls and Wincows, and a little difcolouring it in the outfide.
In the time of- this general Confufion, we were forcid ring Villains of the Country, almoft, were gor togedher abour us, waiting for the Fire to make a Breach, and very rcady to fhew ic the way, by throwing Firebrands themrelves. And we had so much to do to defend ourfelves from the Treacheries of thefe rafcally Pcople, that wo thoughe them almoft as bad a Plaguc as the Fire ir felf : They were evenlaftingly either ploting new Mifchief, of promoting fome already begun; we had them continually flutrering abour our Houfes, like fo many Birds of Prey about a Carkafe, ftill waiting for the good time to fall on and devorer us.
And then fo aftoninhingly bold and impudenr in the Profecution of their lcud Defigns too, that no Creature in the World, I think, can have more Brafs in the Complexion of it, than a favan has. 'Twas a fmall thing with them, to come ano ask us; What Sri, agth we had, and how many to guard the Houfe? This was Modety at Bantam, tho' 'twou'd be reckon'd a piece of Impuacnce any where elfe; but they wou'd come and examine the Doors, and look apon all the Locks and Bolts, to fee how ftrong they wcre, and fearch abour, ro rry if they cou'd find any Defects; and all this before our yery Faces. And being thus harafsd as we were, what with continual Pains and Wearinefs, and Orer-watching in our own Defence, againft this barbarous Crue, we contracted Cercral Difempers, particularly thar of the Country, which is the Flax, and which two of us never recorerd.
April the Nincteenth, there came into the Road Nine 1. D. 1 con Sail of Hollinders; under the Command of Admiral Witron Duectsinn wick, which were difpers'd abroadinoo feveral partsof the eonpe to Indies : We receiv'd fercral Civilities ar his hands, and he was very obliging to all Eng;:/h-men in general; having formerly been relievd in rery grax extreminies at Sea, by the timely affiftance of fome of our Nation

A litcle after this, we loft onc of our principal Faciors; and about the fame time, our Pininace return'd from her fruitlels and unhappy Voyage for the Molucca's.
We were now forbid going on any further with the Work of our Honie; perhaps, because the new Officen that were come into play at Court, had not yet been bribd for that purpole; however, upon Application made to the Admiral of 7 ava, , who is, as it were, the common Farher and Protector of all Surangers) he orderia matters to with the reft of the-Notility, that we had a frem Permiffion to proceed; and fo we finimd our Houle a litrle time.
Our Company was fill farther diminiaid, by the lefs of our chief fator, and Manager of the Trade there, in Bantam.
In the Eleventh of fuly, we had fome Loffes by Fire, which were kindled by the Villany of ccrtain 3 aions; who thinking to get fome Spoill out of the Chinffe Houfer, took that Meched to accomplim. their Defign; and as is happen'd, forme of the Sufferers being in Debrito us, they were by that means rocally difabled from paying.
But the fucceeding Month we had like to have fuftain'd a far greater prejudice than ithe; former; for having brought out feveral Packs of Goods to air, one of shele Favan Birds fet Fire to 2 Houfe juft by pis j, bur toe difcoverd it foon enough, to prevenr the inrended Mifchief and had the Actor of it laid clofe in Irons for his pains: The truth on't is, we cou'd hardly cucr be ar reft, or do any thing free from difturbance by thefe Pcople: "Twas our Cuftom ar Night, when we Ker the Warch, to fing a Pfalm rogether, in which Excreife we had once like. no have had our Brains knock'd .our, and the Houfe it lelf, as we rhoughr, beat down, by a Company of chofe Rakes, which were got rogether into a Yard by us, and poured grear Srones io fart in at the Windows upon us, thar happy was he that coud get out of the way.
But they were nor the only Encmic:- we had to do with, (tho" confidering whar batbarous-ones they were, they were bad cnough) for we began to difcover fome under-ininctity of mining Practices of the Hollanders againft us; who tho 'they carried it with a fair Face of Friendinip outwardly, yet by fome falle and degrading. Storics which they rais'd of us, made is manifect, that they bore us no hearty Good Will.
The new Protector too, pretended a grear deal of kind nefs towards us; but he was a grear Mafter of Diffimula tion and Flattery, and did it only to wheedle a Sum o Moncy out of us.

But neither did all thofe that were Enemies to \(\mu\); agrec very well amongt chemfelves: For as we and the \(\bar{j}\) aumus were always at Daggeis-draw, fo did the Cline/e and 7 n wans perpetually wrangle, and the Dutch often fenflic with them both; fo that between one fide and the other, there was cverlafting Scolding and Conrention. Tho' the rruth of is is, the \(D\) sci, by cheir uncivil Carxiage, and loofe diforderly way of living, did procure rhemfelves far more trouble and enmity than they needed to have done; and at the fame time make the Chriftian Name yery odious amongtt zhofe Heathens, who oughe to have had better Examples of the Purity of in fer before their

But as if we had nor Plagues enough in Fava, and E. nemies fufficient to exercife our Verme there, we had, September the Fifth, 2 new Sert that came from the Ille of Lampon, in thâ Streighrs of Suinda, to torment us. 'Tis true, they came upon the fore of the old Enmity and Grudge between them and the Favanis; but we being chere ar that time, had a mare in the trouble as well as the Thefe People are fo like the fazoins, that they are hardly to te known from them; and this is an adrantage to them in their Decigns of Mifehief and Revenge, fince they of ten pats for the Natives of the place, and to feape the Pi:niflmenr they wou'd otherwife meer with: Their way is to get into the Hoilcs, and cur off the Heads of all they can light of, as they did by feveral arethar cime'; and had 2 grear mind to have had tome of ours roo, as leaft our Goods, if not our Heads, tho' we prevented them by our diligent Waxch.

The Reaton why they are for a Spoil of Heads fomuch is, becaufe the King gives them thie Reward of 2 Woman, for erery Strangers Head they bring him; and the Rogues do very often chear their King in this fort of Commodiry, by opening the Graves, and curuing off the Heads of chem that are newly buried. Bur the fevan Women are fo kind, as to lapply them with fome of their Husbands Heads fomerimes, which chey olke the oppor tusity to whip off when they are aflecp, and they fell them ar very good rates to the Lampones.

Bur our Miferies and Dangers (like the. Waves of a ftormy Sea, rowiting in one uporinthe back of anocher) were after 2 very forr interval, revivéd again: For now we were inform'd by fome of our Friends, that there was 1 folcmn Combinarion made, for the deftroying our Pertons riffing our Houfes, and fwallowing up all we had and this not by the more fordid rakilh part of the Country but Perfons of Figure and Power, who had grear numbers of Slaves to affift themin the Defign. And accordingly they did encompats the Hoife, and march'd round about two or three times; but feeing the Illomimations we had made, and the good Guard we kept, they durft not make the attempt. Howerer, being fraftrated here they turn'd their Arms upon the Chinefe'sand'aftaulted them wich the Rage and Fury of io many Devils; and cheir ligid to bing at that ame full of our Goods', we were obliged toprotect and ftand by them; and wé did whem very good Service with our Guws: For che finging of 2 Bul let is' as terrible so 2 Yavern, as the Cry of 2 Packof Hounds ro 2 poor frightul Hare. Bue ftill, of all the \(A\) - larmsthar daily confounded ury, the moft fcaring was that of Fire: The fear of it had made fuch an impreflion up with a foft whifper, wou'd pronounced in the Night, tho whiten ws out of our Sleep and make wh min to our Aims. Twas fo common Sleep, and and make us rin to our Aims. "T was fo common a Calamity in the place where we wete, and had fo often threarned us, that the horrible Idea was always frem in our Minds, and ready to prefent ic felf upon all Occafions yet tho the Town was fired no lefs than five umes in the Trace of three Months, and the Fazans play'd all the Tricks imaginable, to drive the Flames down upon us Providence ordering it fo, thar the Wind gencrally favourd us, we feapid the Ruine they plotred to involve usin.
Bor the fly and crafty Procceding of the Hetteniors was siy Pradices nor the lealt of our Troubles, under all the otherill Cir- of the Ation cumftances that artended us: For they having at cticit bindero. firtt coming into thofe parts, made bold to ufurp the Name of Englift-men, and pretending all along behind our backs, that they were really of that Country, had by that means to poffers'd the common People, that they confounded them and us together, and believ'd us to be all one Nanion. And by this means they run us inno a grear deal of danger; fcr they being generally of fo rade. a Behaviour, fo apt to affront and abufe the Country Pcople; and doing all this under the Notion and Character of Englifh-men, they incens'd the Mobb againit us to that degrec, that we had great reaton to fear, we frou'd feel the Effects of cheir Rage and Fury; that we Mou'd chance to pay foinc of the Scores they had contracted; and that tho' the pretended Englift-men had committed the Crimes, yer the true and real-ones wou'd go near to luffer for't: For matters were come to that pals, that we cou'd not walk the Streets, nor go into the Marker, but the Pcople wou'd be all in an uproar, curfing and railing at us bitterly; tho' all the while they meant the Hollan:ders, and intended all thefe coanfe Complements fur hem.
To prevent the mifchicf therefore chat might follow They difiti,upon this Miftake, fo induftrioully propagated by the felver from Hollanders, and for ever to diftinguinh our felves from them. them, November the Seventeenth, cur Qucen's Coronation: Day, we fer up St. George's Banncr upon our Houfe, dif charg'd our Ordnance and Small-fior; and march'd up and down with our Drum, and the little Mufter of Men we con'd make, in Scarfs of Whire and Red Taffata The Reafon of this Cexemony we told to all the People that came abour us: And when they ask'd, Why the Englijb at the orher Houfe did nor do che like, (by whom they meant the \(D_{\text {urch }}\) ) we rold them, They ware not \(E n_{-}\) glif(b-men, bur of another Councry, and under another lort of Go:ernment, and had abus'd both us and them, in making thofe Pretences they had made. By this means we were ever afier distinctly known from them, and the People began to difcover publickly their different Sentiments of us: Now the very Children wou'd rum afier us in the Streets, aring, Oran Engres, Sayk, Oran Hollanda inhad: The Englifh are good, and the Hollanders ftark naught.
Our Troubles and Confufions were to many, and to very frequent, thar Trade went on but dully, and the Ycar was fpent without any Marters of grear Importance done that way.
The Dutch Ships came in and out fo often, that we were oblig'd to make whar hafte we could to buy up all be Pepper that was good and faleable, which was not to be goxuen neither in any grear Quantities: For the Chineff Duach cher (thole honeft and fair-dealing Pcople) had got a way of od by che mixing Dirt and Warer with their Pepper, to help pin atherif buying our the Commodity 2 little farcher; and this Trafh of Pepper. went oft very well with the Durch, for they were contamt Chapmen, and fo greedy of Trade, tharchey refusid norhing almoft that was fer to Sale. Ler the Wind blow out of what Quarter it wou'd, it brought fome Ship or other of theirs for Pepper; infomuch, that the Pcople of Bentom, aftonith'd with the Quantitics they fwallow'd up, eeringly ask'd them, Whecher they bear Pepper into che Mottar and Plaiftering of their Houfes, to keep them warm, in order to fave Firing. But the truth on't is; a Houfe may be heared, and thar to 2 very offenfive degree too, by the meer Sceams of the Pepper, where chere's ste Hear of 2 good Stock of it : And we found by our own Experi-Pepper. ence, thar feveral of our Men.were very much diforder'd by the bot fuffocating Fumes arifing from thence, in the Houfe where we us'd to Mill and Shute our Pepper:
Thus this Year palsd over us, which had brought 2 long with it fuch 2 Train of Mileries and Perplexities that one might reafomably hare hopd the Scene worid now change, and Forkune look with a more favournbl Conntrance upon os for théfuture- Bur the New Year
N. D. x604 * began as uncomforrably as the Old had ended; and the firt Scenes were hardly any thing bur Murcher, Fire, Wll the Aftiction of lofing more of our Company and being reduc'd to a very fmall number, fo that of the Factors that were left for theie Parts, we were now but two in that Quality, and no more chan ten in all. Our Trade had a confidcrable Bank by the dearnefs and fearciry of Rials and the cheapnets of Camies; for upon this account we coud not vent a piece of Stuff at half the value that it wons off at at our firt coming. Bur thefe were fmall chings, in comparifon of our fucceeding Calamirics; for we narrowly cicap'd lofing our felves, Houfe and all our Wares and Furniture, and that at one trooke, by the Treachery and Hellim Contrivance of fome of our Neigh bours.
Trumand
A Crue of there Villains had carried a Mine quire CdimefrunEermine the ander the foundation of our Houle; and their Defigabe B to open themiches a way into the Warehoule, the Boarding of which hinder'd and toppid them ; not being able at once no cur their way through, becaufe they minh potiibly have been difcover'd ar their Work, they refolv to accomplifi it by Firc, which won'd clear the paffage, and make no noife. But by that rime the Fire had burnt throush the Planks, and got to the Mats and Packs, of which the Warchoule was full, it roisd fo terrible Smoak, and diffus'd fuch a Scent all abour, that the Mifchief quickly berray \({ }^{\circ}\) it felf, and gave us the Alarm. And under the Conduct of a favourable Providence, we made hift to put a ftop to the progrels of it, and dilcovering where if had its Rife, with all the Depths of the Plor, we cook effectual Care to present the return of the Danger that threarned us.
We were ro lucky too, as to difcorer and appretend the principal Managers of this barbarous Contrivance, per haps fonc of the moft fullen, ftubborn, and olbdurace Wretches, that ever that Country bred. But as the Hew'd nothing of Pity, of common Humanizy to us, fo we had no Mercy at all on them, but with the free Con cons of the Government exccuted them, and that in 2 vcr Cevere and cxemplary manner.
And the truth on 5 is, as we endcavourd to carty it in the moft juft, cqual, and inoffenfive manner that we cou'd, rowards thefe People, and were ready ro do them Kindneffes, when they were any thing tolerable; fo we never fail'd to make chem feel the Effects of our Indigna cion and Refentmens, when they gave us a jult and nuff ciene Provocation therero. To be fure, they never mift good Bafting for chcir litale pilfering Tricks, if we carch' they fometines committed mpon us, we cither wounded chem eterely, or as ie happend, fometimes killd then upar the lot, or clfe had chem exccured in a more for mal way, for a Tcrior to ochers.
Buc hardly any Nation dared rake the Liberty wetook and we cou'd ftab a fronn at a much cheaper rate chan Dutci-man coud give a Box on the Ear. And rhis was a common Obfervation among all the Foreignets at Baramm, and the marter of their very great wonder roo, that that defperare, rough, unmanagcable Pcople, mou'd ftand fo much in awe of us as they did, and 10 tamely endure the Corrction we gave them for their Villames. The have offen faid (when they have icen us doing Juftice upon thofe Fellows', That 'rwas hardly cier known, that any Faven was fo much as ftruck in Bantam, before we came thither; añd that we in doing \(i r_{\text {, }}\) did that which one durft pretend to bur our iclves.
In Septriber the Town being accidentally fired, the Upper-work of our tiree Houles was entirely confumed o our very grear darger, coft, and trouble: For now we were laid open to all the Enemies that bad any Inclination to atcempt us; and twas very probable, that they who had fo otren fought to make their way anto our Houfe ow the Fire had made is to their Hands, woud not fai to enter. However, the Dutcb being in better Circumttances than we (as having feap'd the bad Effects of the Fire, ient us a ftrengch of Men to guard our Goods; chis, togerher with fome of the King's Officers, which were al order'd to attend us in that extremiry, was fufficien for our Security, till we had repair'dour Buildings, and Duta practife againft their. Rivals they were in all other Cafe ery much our Fricnds, dilcoverd 2 Generous Piry and Concem for us, in any Misfortunes, and were ready to conribute to our affiftance and relief.
Towards the latter end of the Year, we were alroge her employ'd in providing a Quantry of Pepper, againf the time our Ships came in from Euglanc, which now. we began to look very impariently for, and win'd fome happy Gale wou'd fend to us with as much fpeed as cou'd.
I was not long before our Defires were Katisfied, and Admina we had the cheartul fight of our Englifh Ships coming into midedirm the Road: 'Tis rrue, both thcy, and we too, were in ennam. uncomfortable Circumptances, by reafon of the Sicknelis and dying Condition of many of our Mcn ; but yer ha ring been fo long condemned to barbarous Faces and Manners, to mect with our Country-misn was a Refreh ment, tho it had becn bur to fee, and then dic together This was Deccml. 22
The laft Day of that Menth, cur Admiral wear aftion with all the Company, that Sicknels wou'd give leave to atrend him, to wait upon the King, and deliver the Icrter and Prefents now brought from Eupland. Thefe were renr in the Name of His Majefty King Frmes the Firt then upen the Thronc, our glorious Queen having let chis World fome time before; she News of her Death pro ducing a no lefs gencral Mourning abroad, than the Act: ons of her Life had Admiracion and Efteem.
The Prefent confifted of a large Bafon and Ewer, two k Yamis nir Standing-Cups, and fome Spoons, all of Silver, guift; Preferito fair Sranding-Cups, and fome Spoons, all of Silver, guif; Profentio ax Muskers; with their Furnicure; which the King yery the Kimg of kindly receiv'd.

All the principal Officers of the Court were prefented roo by the Adminal ; we having found by many Experi ences, that Gifts in the Hands of thefe ropping Mcn, are of very grear advantage, and have a peculiar Influence upon the Suceels of Bufines, whenever we have occafiot to makic ufe of their Intereft. Befides, the profent King being 2-Minor, and confequently entircly under the Move mencof Courtiers, by whofe Eycs he faw, and by whofe Mocions all his were form'd, nor to fer them right, had been to neglect the principal Springs, upon whofe favourable Motions, all the happy Events of our Affairs de pended.
By that time the Admiral had been with us a liste while, and we bad debated all necerfary Points, we canc to this R crolution concerning the furure difpofal of the Ships we had here, vin. that two of them mould be difparch'd to the Moluccees; and the ocher two flou'd take in the Lading of Pcpper we had gotren, and to go for linglant.
Accordingly Fenumy the Eighteenth *, the two Ships \({ }^{\circ}\) A.D. \(: 6\) co Sail for the Moluccass, and the Inles of Brande, in bad Two Siom the orhers char were bound homewards, (what by the lofs of their Captains and Mafter, and of "a confiderable number of the common Sailors) being thereby reduc'd ro great Suraits for Men, ware detain'd till Mercio the Fourth. Neither con'd they then have got out upon that rery ac coune (fuch havock had the Diftempers of Baticen mace two more of our Company), if we had nor hired a Sctr of Guzc-inden witi ratts, and Cbing: Sailors, to affit in the Voyage, to our \({ }^{\text {Pepite }}\) rcry grear coft and charge. And now we had (tho' a gainft our Wills) a pretry long. Vacation from all Matrers of Trade and Bufinefs, the whole Councy almoft being caken up, in Preparations for the Triumphs and Shews, thar ufually attend the Cercmony of the King's Circumcificn.

The firt Scene that catcrrain'd the Eyes of she Specta-The Kirg tors (and which is indced bus preparatory to the reft), is Bennemi 2 lofry Pageant, brought out into the Green before the Circumcim Court-gare, in which are plac'd three Chairs of Scate, the sha Pumid middlemoft, and moft rais'd, for the King; the other thas sime wo for the nexi Heirs to the Crown
All round the Rails that encompafs the Green, are placंd the King's Guards, both Shot: and Pikes, to the number of Six hundred, or more; and here they entertain the Pcople with Martial Exercifes, for feveral Days rogether, bfore His Majefty appears.

And ar.this time, having an oppornnity to make a nore nice Obfervation of their Dilcipline and Furmiture, is may not be amís to add a few kemarks to tifar pura pofe.

The feren Soldiers, when they ftand drawn up in a \({ }_{7 \text { fan }} D\) Body, are regularly placed in Files, according to the Me- 1 icithe thod us'd in other parts of the World; bur when they march, they don'r obferve the ufual ways of going fo many Men a-breaft, but march one by one in a fingle Line, carrying their Weapons bolt upright. Their Pikes are tolerably good; buc they are very unskilful in the Management of Fircwarmis: And therefore to Grace this Solcmaity the more, the Protefor borrow'd. Shor borh of wis and the Dutch.
Their Drums are huge grear Pans, made of a fort of Mctal they call Tembage, and yield as pleafant a Noire as one may imagine a Yorridge-por, or the Bortom of 2 good founding Tub won'd do.
Their ordinary Colours do refemble ours, but their Standards and Ancients differ much : For the Stuf. of the Ancient is very high，and bends at the Top like a Bow， from whence the Colours which are hardly a Yard in breadrh，bate to rerum to the other Circumitances of the Shows．

After all things were．made ready to render the \(A P\)－ pearance as itarcly，as they could contrive，the King was brought forth（tho＇me thoughrs in fomething an indecent manner）Guting aftride upon a Mans Neck，and in that po manner）arting aitride uplis Chair of Srare in the Pageane Being pla＇d，the leveral Companies that Compos＇d，the Show began to fet forward．
Firft a parcel of Shor，then the Piker，in the midft of which were ten or twelve Tombagas，which being rais＇d a Note each above the orher，made that form of Mufick，more like ringing of Bells than beating of Drums．
Afrer thefe came a Company of Targericrs and Darts－ ducr which were follow＇d by a how of Beafts and Fowls，partly alive，and partly the work of Art；but to corioray done，and fo much to the Life，that Art and Nature were very hardly robe diftinguin＇d in that Ap－ pcarance．
The next was a crew of Dancers，Vaulers，Tumblers and Players；an the Hecis of which advanced an Army of Women difposid and led on by feveral grave motherly old Souldicrs，whore bufinefs was to order the March， and fec that every one kept their affigried Places．Thef Women had their Hands all full of Preferts，but fuch as were of an inferiour Degree；for after them came all the Rich and Noble Offcrings made by the Courticrs，and all the Lords and confiderable Pcople of the Country；who always（fuch is the Cuftom）prefent the King ar the Ce－ remony cither of a Coronation or Circumciion．

Thi Parry that broughe up the Rear，were the Sons of thofe grear Men，that had made the Prefents drefled and antended after the manner of the Country，to the highect Degrec of Pomp anil Bravery．
Thefe young Nobles all came up to the King＇s Pageant； and made their Reverences to him，and then cafting their Prefents at is Feet，fare down themfelves upon Mars fpread upon the Groutid forthar purpofe．
After this all the Mufick begins to ftrike up，which is incemixed with feveral Volleys of Shor ；and in the mean rime the Tumblers and Dancers pexformtheir feveral parts of Activiry，and the Marrial－men do＇all their Exer－ cifes before the．King．We alfo（ to comply with the Cuftom）made our Prefents to the King，which tho not for the richnces and coftlinels，yet at leaft for the precri－ nefs and fingularity of it，was very grateful to him and the Company，and it was broughr along in this Order．
Firt march＇d a couple of Javan Pikes，which were fol－ lowed by 30 of the comlieft Boys we cou＇d ger dreft，in vc－ ry rich A pparel；immediarely after them was broughr upon a Carriage a curious Pomegranate－Trec，taken up all en－ tire by the Roors，and placed in a large handfome Frame． Abourthe Roors were laid green Intes of carth， 10 that itook＇d as if ir were fill growing，and all the Branches of is were laden with Fruir，fome fully Ripe，fome Green，and fome yet in the Bud．Amongt the Boughs fare feveral litite pretry Birds，which we had faftned there， and notwithftanding cheir confinement chirp＇d as mernily as if they had been rambling in the open Air．As the bot－ tom there were Keveral Mulk whire Coneys，that fate nibling the Grais and Plants that grew upon the－Iurfs， and fome furious Serpents，that lookd as if going ro feize 2 Prey；which though not Natural，were yet to nicely made by the clinefe，that any eye mighr bave teen de－ ceiv＇d unle＇s upon very good examination．This feene of ours in which Art and Narure were boch confider＇d，and to the beaucifying of which，they contributed their feveral Shares，provd astencertaining as any part of the thow i and I don＇t know bur we came off as well as the beft Iords in froc．In morr the King accepted it，he was pleas＇d with ix．and tho orher things of come value went along with it（as pieces of rich Clork and Stuff，and Ca－ fes of Piftols；yet this beft fured his puerileFancy and cm － per；and＇ris no matter for his being fhat a Child．for he was a King，and that wasenough to give our Performance a Repuration．
The Eng of ．The King of 7 acetre a Tributary to him of Bantam， Tcarta＇s came thortly after to do Homage to his Sovereign，and to make his Prefents too upon the fame occafion．This Ce － remony was performed with a grear deal of Sare and Magnificence on the part both of，the King that received， and the King that did Homage＂The Shows profented， were very agreeable and fine，the Guards and Atrendance numerous，the Prefencs cootly and valuable；bur fome things there were which being exrraordinary to us，de－ ferve a more particular Mention．
Befides many ftrange fors of Fowls；and as many of Beaftswhich were broughr in their Order：There was one The Ahrs． Beaft which thcy call a Marchan．ThisCrearure is fomething Aert． bigger thanalion，and cvery whir as proud and ftately；it haspe． a noble Skin，full of．Red and White fpors，intermixed with long black Strakes，which run down from the Bact quite under the Belly．In is exrecaithy．fierce and rave nous，and a very frong and Iprighty Crearure withal， and will（which i have been an Eyc－winnefs to）leap more than 88 Foor ar one fingle lcap after a Prey．They are very often hunted by the King and Court ；but confider－ ing how cafic ris for a Creanure thar Jumps ar that rate， to leap a：pon a Man＇s back in the middte of his Sport，it mould appear to be one of the moft dangerous Games in the World：and ir feems they do very often make a Breakfaft upon che Javans，when they carchrhem Atragling our in the Woods．

For works cf Art prefenred ar this time，there was a Giant of 30 Foor high，and a horxible Devil of much the famefize．
But the moft cntertaining Pageant of all，was that of An Ariticie． Garden，adorecd with all forts of Plants and Flowers Garden a Garden，adorned with all lorss of Plants and Flowers； Toris of Fifhes were to be feen playing about；and befides this，all the kinds of Finh both grear and fmall which are known in thofe Countrics were brought in，either in Life， or the proper artificial Repreicnmaions．
Aficr all thefe Shows were over，His Majefty was carti－ cd（upon a Friday，which is their Sabbach）in his own Pageant to Chutch，and there Circumcized according to their way．And now＇twas time for Sporr and Diverfion to give way to Trade and Bufinefs（which on thofe Ocea－ fions had beco long neqlected）to be reviv＇d again．
－In order to which（very happily）our Admiral came in－ to the Road fuly the 24th from his Molucea Vayage；hav－ ing gorten a good quamtiry of cloves rowards a lading， we nor much doubring in a little time to furnin bim with the reft．And we had gone on in the Conife of Trade ro much berrer purpore than we aferwards did． if fome unhappy Differences with the Durch had norgiven． us a Difturbance．Many times before，quarrels bad rifern betwecn us，buthings neycr came to that Extremity that they did now，and in which pofture rhey lafted good parr of the time of our ftay ar Brnsam．They cannor them－ relives charge us as being the Aggreffours，fince＇rwas manifeft to the whole Ciry that they themfelves were fo． ．．The fift thing that gave occafion to our after rough Froye wibl handling of them，was the abure of fone of our Men who came home bleeding to us，and by their Wounds gave fufficient Proof of the Violence the Durch had ured rowards them．Upon this our．General ordered 2 fmall Parry to Arm chemfelves，and go our into the Street to give thofe，rude Fellows a listle Correction，which was fo effectually performed by us，that the Streers were quickly clear＇d of them，and they were oblig＇d to retire to cheir own Houfe．The Dutch Merchants came to enquire into the A Reafory of this Procecding on our part，bur uri－ derftanding，that their own Mca were the Aitailants they feem＇d to be cafie，and we parted very good Friends．Bür when this News came ro Court they But made ug had fo litule Pirty chere，that when fome abour the King agip． rold thar fome of the Durch Men were killed，Anfwer was made again，Ir had been no matter if they had all gone the fame way．－Yer all this paffed off，and the Friendmip and good Correfpondence between us was as great as cou＇d be defired．The Dutch Merchants invited our whole Company to a Dimer，and no People could underftand one another berter than we did．The Quar－ rels．always begun amongit．the rafcally underling People of bork fides；the betrer forr had more Sence and Prudence than to fall our，becaufe their drunken＇Sailors went together by the Ears．

September 22d our General fent to Compliment the Durch Admiral lately arrived arthis piace from the Illes of Banda，and this very Day on which the Civilizies were at the higheft，the Squabbles and Feudds wcre unhappily fo too．．The mifchief was begun by a drunken Dutch ADew Quart Man，whom，if his Liquor had laid up fift alleep \(\bar{i} \dot{z}\) the Rack－houfe，it had been betrer bort for us and them．on boob Our Gencral was firting at the Door difcourfing with a fides． Man of fome Falhion，when this Gentleman of the Netber－lands comes by pretty well blown up wirh Nether－ands come Rack，that the World fernid to go round in his Head，and being no fmall Fool in it in his own Conceit；he very fairly comes to rake his place accordingly，and fo claps down upon the Bench between rhe General and the other Perfon．The Gencral to exprefs his dillike of this fatcy familiarity，gave him a Box on the Ear and pundid him away，which his Company re－＇ folved not to put up，prefently drew their Knives and Sables and came Hectoring about the Gatc in a moft fu－ rious manner. Being thus befieg'd; our Men were oblig'd to endeavour to raile it, and fo breaking our upon them, afer a foort and harp difpute, the Dutch gave ground and rexired for thelte to their old place the Rack-houfe; Bither our Mien purfued them, and tho rhey had fortificd themfelves, fer we burit open the Doors, and having dealt fome blows among them, brought away fome Prifoners to our General. Bur we were quickly befer \(b y\) another party of them, who came to the others refeuc, and now the point was rricd by Club-Law again, and the broken picces of Pikes, Halberds and Faggorficks flew abour the Strecrs like wild. This hot Work continucd as long as the other party thought fit to ftay by it, but they did noe run to the Rack-houfe now, bur to their own Houfe, which was in no Danger of being broke open. The truth on'r is, the Confufion and Noife was grear, and fome Blood hod of both fudes, tho that that was, came noftly from broken Pates, there being no Hearts piercd, or Bodics dangeroufly mangled in this encounter. Tho tis certatn dhep abfolurclv concluded upon the Ruin of mall, and one of their Factions Ship-manters went about from Ship to Ship, to raife Company and provoke them to land their whole force upon us. And they had at that time feren ftour Ships in the Road, and we but two, fo that the Fovans thoughe us next kin to Madi-men to precend to ftand upon thele Terms with the Dutch that had fo formidable a power ar thar ciine at Bentam.
And che Butinefs was carred fo far amongit them in the Flece, that Orders were actually given to kill all the Eyglifh they could light of cither a-Ship-board or anhoar; which notwithtanding won'd not have been fo cafly pur in Exccution, fince wehad a contiderable Force of Mcn, at leaft fuch as won'd Fighe luittily, and late Expericnces had taughe as that one Encmics ware nor Invincible. Bur weare certinin (whether they'li acknowledge it or no, that the were grathy beholding to us for lecring them come of at fo cheap a race as they did in the latt Batrle, for 'rwas manifetty in our Power to have cut off a grear number of them, and the Blood of all the Emerifh was fo throughly firred at that time, that if our Gencral had given bur the leaft word to char purpore, it had infallibly been donc.
At the latter end of the bufinefs, the Durch Admiral eame with all his Company towards our Houfe, and was merby oursin like manner atended. When the matter was fainly ftared and opened to him, he was fo far from raking the part of his own Men, that he highly commended what ourshad done: And whercas forme of his Officers objected; That we complaind, but their fide bore all the Blo'ws; as mighr appear by their broken Heads and Shoulders: He-replied, That they were rightly ferv'd, and for the future fhould be made to practife betrer brecding.
This worthy Commander and our Englifh Gencral had Dowsh mend all this while a perfect good underftanding of one anocher, Englifprith and So likewife all the Dutch and Englijh. Merchants and Eriond pry Officers thook Hands and parred in a very friendly manner. And afrerwards by matual Feaftings and Entertainments, we endeavour'd on both fides to perfwade each other as much as was pofible, thar we were heartily reconcild.
Several Fircs happen'd in the Town before we cou'd morefira get away. Onc of them almoft deftroyed the Durchenotan Houfe, the Flame coming upon it with the Adrantage of the Wind; and ours tho cur of thar Danger, yer was norpreferyed withour a prodigious deal of labour and Trou-brought us into the extremiry of Danger, and as often did we by the Bleffing of Heaven, and the unwearied. care of our Men, cleape the Mifery they defigned for us.
There people are as troublefome while they live, as chey are bold, obdurate and daring when they areto Dic They count it the greareft Glory to receive the fatal Stroke withour any marks of Fear or inward Reluctancy: And cerrainly they do in this as far as ris poifible for Filem and Blood to do, and fome? Pople can't be lefs conecernd ar the paring of their Nails, than thefe Fawims are (to the Eyc) ar the lofing of their Heads. This we had particular Opportunitics divers rimes of fecing borh in Men and Women, and amonght the reft, ar an Exccution perform'd a latde before we came off, upon a couple that had ftolen fome of our Goods.
Octcber the 4th; Tha Gencral, and all the Merchants went in a Body to the Cours to make leaye of the King and Protector.
The 7 th we fer Sail for England, which we did with no sail or litile fatisfaction, confidering whar a place of Horrour Enail for and Confufion Brasam had been to us alonott all the time of our being there.

The Winds.
Abour thefe parss we found the Wind very utcertain. ard mifting from the middle of March to the midale of April, and then they lic letwicen the E. &s S. E. full four Months, and fometimes (asthe Pcopic fay) five X Yonths; then they blow asleng between the W. & N. W. and then two Months again yariable; and in this manner dothey fill up the Revolution of the Year. And tartheras to the weather, we obicryed; Thar in the dark Mc:ons 'ris moft commonly very rainy and gutty, and a tair Day isreckon'd no other than an interruption of the utial and ferled Courfe of the. Weather ar chat time.
'Twis the rift of Auguft A. D. 1605 , that we came back into Banram Road from the Incs of Banda: Our Admiral who had been at the. Moluccas mer us here again, And the moft matcrial Circumftances of that Voyage were cothis purpore. When they came to amboina, they found Midleren's was going on berwect thic Duirch and the Portugueze.
vorperothe The Porityucze at that time vere Defendants being pof-Aopiccai. Cofed of the Cante, and the Durci) were endeavouring to drive them out and imploy a geod Force for thar purpofe. The Defendants had cerrainly the difadvantage of it in one refpect very grearly, for all the Country prople were riolemty fer against them, and hearaly winta theis Ruing; and as much encouraged the Durch in thicir underraking. Indeed thicy fent for them ro come to thcir Adiatance and promis'd if thicy wou'd expel their invererarcencmics che Portugucee, to refign all into cheir Hands. In Aort the Dutch gave theirSummens to the other party to yield up the piace, and they as obrtinately refus'd it ; they made feveral Atrempts to win is by form, but were itill repuls'd yct at latt they came to a Compofition, and the Caftle was furrendred so the Durcl, by that good Fortune become the Lords of Amboina. Gpon this Account there was no Trade to be gotren by the Englifh there, and the Govemour of the Town (by the Command of the Dutch) pofitively: refusd us. So our Admiral proceeded in his Voyage to the Moluccen's, where Affairs were in as troublefome a pofture as they had becn in as Ambeina. There Madbeen a War of a long ftanding berween the Kings of Ternate and Tydore, and itraged ar this time with as much furj and violence as ever. Each party was back'd with a potent Affiftance from abroad; the Dutch cepous'd the King of Terrates Intercit, and the Pcreugucere ftood by him of Tydore. A very fuirable March in crery refpeot the Scconds being as hearty Enemics as the Principals and befides this new Quarrel having one of theirown of a tery ancient Date to fet them on with the more cagernefs. When our Ship was gor up under the Land of Tydore, they fpicd two Ternateen Gallies coming with great fped rowards them, and making figns to them to ftay; in the foremoft of them was the King of Ternate himfelf, and feveral of his Nobles and Dutch Merchancs-all in a mortal Fear and Confternation, upon the account of a parcel of Tydorian Galfies that were making out after them. They moft eameftly implor'd the Admirals Affift ance in thiar Extremity, and defired him to undertake their Defence againtt thofe Adverfarics, into whofe Hands if they fell, they muft expect no Mercy. And tho' all was done that cou'd be done of a fudden, and our Ship playid upon the Tydore Gallies with her Ordnance, yet thole Defperare Fellows wou'd not lofe their Prey, but gor up with the hindmoft Ternate, boarded her even with in reach of our Gans, and pur them all to the Sword in 2 moment. This horrible Execution ftruck a decper Terretartic King ror into them than before; and now they promis'd that if fiunk down to the dimenfions of a Mole. Hill in performance. And'rwas a good paffage cnough of the king of Temate (who was by this means more beholding to us than we to him) that whert he came aboard our Ship in that horrid Fright the Tydoce Gallics had pur him into, he Thook and quiter'd at a moft violent rate like a Man that waspinch'd with the exeremity of weather; the Admiral hinking heflurok for cold (not imagining all the while swas hic Fcar) pur 2 rich Damask Gown oice his Shoulders ro give himn a litrle Comfort; and rruly 'twàs fo comfortable that the King cen kcpr is on (when'rwas on) for good anid all, and carricd aiway the Gown withour raking any nor:ce of making the lealt offer to reftore

The Admiral having ar protent taken leave of this Nöle Prince, went away directly to the Ife of Tydorc Comestio Here he met with a cold Encertainmeni, and little profpect there was of doing Bufincts that weas any thing confiderable. As the portugucze Town, the Governour of the Fore fent him word that the King of Temate and the Dutct both had giveryethe Enf! \(/ \mathrm{h}\) a very feandalous Cliaracter which for his own part he prefended to belicve to be fallo Reports of and unjuft. And at the King's Tourn he found the Dutch the Engluh Admiral at his Arrival, who huf'd and made a roite that we had anifted the Porreguste in their Wars againft the Ternercems and them. This the Admiral prov'd by Witneffes fufficiently credible to be a Lyc, and the orher parisy was boch convinced and ahamid of the Slander But the King of Teimatc's Civiliry and Gratituderwas yery greas indecd, if he join'd with che Dutch in giving that baic Character of the Englifi Nation, who had deterv'd To well of him. One wou'd have expected ichould have been 2 little obliging to have a good warm Gown thrown over him in a cold haking fir; or if not that, yet to be deliverd our of the Hands of the Tydorians, who wou'd have cur His Majeftics Head cff as fure as cyer it had a Crown on. Bur we can'r pofitively charge him, tho there is hardly any thing of a fincere friendhip to be cxpected from thef litrle Indian Princes as far as their In ereft will let themgo; they may pratice fome little Mat= cers of it, bucthey are cntircly govern'd. by that, and chey'll frike in with crery Wind and Tide chat ferres their nurn.
However whictier he really was or no, the Dutch thought Dwetch chrea: him ro be pretty much enclin'd ro us, and thereforechreatned of thenate, is ar a barbaroustrate, how chey wou'd defert his Incereft, he Trades and join with the King of Tydorc, if cver they found with the him, difpes'd to eranr us a Trade or Factory in his Embin. Councry. And to diftwade him by all the proper Mo. ives they could think on; they told him a parcel of wretched Storics of the Faugifin Nation and as the tame rime magnified the Greauncrs and Power of their own King as they call him above all the ieft of the Princes of Chriftendom purtogether. This was always their way o make Pcople abroad belicre they had a King in Hoiland and (to grearen the Idea of it) reprefent their Gorernmenr as a Monarchy: There's no tolerable Reafon oo be given for this, and is mutt be acknowledged to be a downrighr Trick. 'Tis a pisce of Vanity to fay that chey had no other Terms fo proper as that of King to cxpreis their meaning by to the Indiais where they came, or that they cond not fo well underfand any ocher Account of their Gorcmanens. The Indicns know the difference between a Monarchy and a Commonwealch as well asthey do, and wou'd have underfood ic if they had mold them which theirs was. Was not there the Example. (if there had been no other) of the Incs of Bandra before their Eycs. which were as abfolutely Commonwealths as the United Provinces? Why cou'd not they have rold them plainly, without any thing of Fraud thar their Government was fuch asthar of thofe Ilands ? And, then'tis manifet beond all Exceprion, that the Indians have words cnough to exprels, any difference of Governments or Gorcreours by. 1 heir Language is not to barren, and if there be but honuft Pcople to fpeak is there need be no complaints for want of moreScopeor Varicty, nor no pretences of nor being underftood. Amongt the Maboinetans beginning with the fupreme Tirle Sijr, there follows Sultan, Mirze, mmirze, Cban, and feveral others; and amonglt-the Gentilesor Pagans, there's the Rajas-; the Pangrans, the Sabandars, the Orancajuis, and other Terms, enough to give a juft Idea of the Degrees of any perfons Power and Authority in the Government one fpeaks of. And the In dians knowing allthefe. Differences pcrifetly well in the reveral Frames of their own Confticuicions, wou'd eafily and narurally have underfood the Proporions of them in orher Foreign Governments, if they had given them 2 The Nable fincere and ingenuous Information.

But the Dutch as much as they thate a King ar home ral would are very fond of haring one abrozd and ans ar home noc allow they prefume to exalc him to a valt height above all his Ncighbours, and make all ocher Princes very inconfidearable puny things, in comparion to him. Yer however, to thew that notwithtanding all their endeavours to. leffen the Reputation of the Englifh Nation abroad, the Princes of thole parts did nor think our King and Councry fo very contemprible, thefe following Letrers to His Majefty from the. Kings of Termate and TJdre, (which our Admiral brought with him) may be confider'd.

Cloth about their Waftes, and hanging down before, and the Children ftark naked.

The Men and Women do all in general tace and pink their Skins, in all parss of thcir Bodics: They do it with a grear deal of Curiofity and Fancy, and 'tis the only Or nament that belongs to them. Their Fancy is nor quite fo good in the management of their Hair. The Men indeed have no cerrain Farthion for theirs; fome wear in in Tuffs and Bunches, others cut it away in feveral long Paths and Roads, running this way and that way, quirc crofs their Heads. As for the Women, they have but one Fanion amongt thicm, and that is to cur it all clever off, and kecp it fhaved clofe to the Skin: They pull off all the Hair from their Eye-lids, and file rheir Tecth 10 tharp and picked, thar I think they could go near to conquer a Benc, and might difpute char poine with fome of their four-fcored Dometticks.
They fece much upon Roors and Fruirs, planting abous their Houfes, Gourds, Poratocs, Pumpions, Plantancs and Guinca Pepper: Herhs too are a part of their Fare, together with Cockles and Oyiters, which they get upon the Rocks by the Sea-fide - and confiucrint their Teeth pay cat Shells and all, withour the trouble of opening They have alio fome little Crops of Rice; bus of this no more than juft what's necefiary for the Service of their Families, and that juft by their Houfes roo. Their Bread they make of a little Sced, or Grain, they call Pene, nor much unlike the Sced of Winter-Savoury.
As for Fleth they have very litele of thas, all the Varictics of thiskind being only a few Hens, and a piere of wild Venifon fometimes from the atiountains, when they can gecit. Filh indecd they hare precty good forc, and they are ingenious cnorght in Conerivances for Angling, after their way.
Tolacco is as mech to them as half their Livelyhood and the Womenare as riolent Smeakers as the Mcn. They prefs the Juice out of the Leaves, when chey are green and frefh, and then lay chem a drying upon 2 Sheardover the Coals, and to cut them for ufe: For they incimasted by Signs to xis, that the Tobacco would make chem drunk, if they took it with all irs itrength remaining in the Leaves. The Bouls of cheir Pipes are made of Clay, and very large; and in the lower end of them chey fick a fmall hollow Cane, of a Foor and half long, thro which they draw the Smoak: And this they are not contented to ler come only into cheir Mouths, bur they muft have it down in their Sromachs roo, and fo drink Tobacco in the ftricteft Scnce.
Their Towns confift of abour thirty or forty Houles fet together all in a Clufter, coier'd with Reeds, and inclofed with Mud-Walls, as our Hogfties generally are They have a Mar hung up inftcad of a Dcor, a parcel of Billers laid crols one another, and corcrd with Mars for Beditead and Featherbed; and thele Mats are alfo the Hangings of cheir Rooms. The Particulars of their other Houmold-Ituff, is quickly reckond ap. Two or three Earthen Pors, so kecp Water, and boil Mcar in: Ifem One Gourd for the ferching of Palmiro Wine, and: another for a Quaffing-Cup. Item, A few Earthen Dithes for their Loblolly. fem, A Basker or two to gather Cockles And Laftly, A Knapfack made of the Rinds of Treos, to carry the Provant, with Tobacco and Pipes.
Bur their Martial Furniture ought to come into the Account too; which is a litcle fhort Sword hammer'd out of a picce of Jron by themfelves, a Bow and Quiver of Arrows, headed with Iron, and poifonce, or elfe a Cafe of Javelins pointed in like manner, and fometimes borh.

They are a ftrong, big, well-made Pcopic, have fome thare of Spirit and Courage too ; and for forede an Edu carion as they have, colcrably Civil, and Well-carriaged They are very; honeft and juft in their Dealings, punifh Theft wish prefene Deach, and are more temperate than molt Pecple in the Inve of Women, keeping for the moft patt to their own Wiscs, of whom they are cxtreamly jcalous.
Their Religion lies fomething more in the dark, and I could nor fic enough of is, to know what in is ; I quefti on whether they do themfelves. It feems to be a Hotch potch of Chrittianity, Judaifin, and Hearhenifm; for chey have Porsuguex--Jefuites amongt them, and a Chapel ct are they circumcied, and keep Inols of Wood in their Houfes: Which of thefe three is the prerailing Ingredient in the Compofition, I know not; onlv this 1 find, that the Jefuites have taught them to obferve fome Holidays, and given them ar leaft fome general Notion of a Supreme Alnighry Being, which they feem'd to exprefs, by lifting up their Hands to Heaven, and other devour ACtions of that kind.

Wood-fields, that would be eftecm'd mighty: Raricies and have a great deal of Nurfing and Artendance in other Parts of the World. Orange-Trees indeed are nor fa very plentiful ; bui Limons, and Palmito's, are like Oaks fintons eà and Elms in other Cquntries; and there's.a vait long Pdimiroch Wood of the former, jutt by the Watering-place, near thie Town.
The Palmiro-Winc is the Strang Drink, (for the Small is Water:) And this the Mcn:2re fo Good-naturd as to drink themflies, giving very litele, or none to the Women.
They are wondexfully nimble and dextrous in running their waso up the Trees; and I think, no Cat can climb better chan climbing ove they: For tho' chere are no Boughs, nor Branches, upon thof Palmito's, nor any thing for a Man to hold 'by, cxcept juft ar the top, being befides of a grear heighr and bignels, yer they mounc up with a ftrange fwifnefs. and come down again wirlh their Gourd of Winc, with as much fteddinels and good order. All the aftiftance they have for this piece of Dexterity, is a Withey, which they. raften abour the Tree, and their own middle, and then bearing their Body a little back, they raife up that part of the Withy that goes about the Tree, and fo by the help of their Feet life themfelves upwards, after 2 very cleier manner, as cafie to them as it appear'd Atrange ro us.
They have feveral forss of Pluinbs in the Councry, fome plumbe: very good and agrceable to the Tatt, of a Black and Wheaten Colour; the Black are the more eftecm'd, asbeing nor only the larger, bur the more Aromarick Flayour. Other Fruits are the Manfamilio's, refembling a Wheaten Mincmitiot Plumb, bur conraining a Fruir that proyes yery fatal to the Eyes, if any of it be accidencally Kpuried in, as is alfo that of the Boughs of the Trees. Beningenionss about Bexingenioni the bignefs of a Limon, and having a kind of a reddith Rind, 2 very wholfome Fruit. Beguils, as big as Apples, Beginie with a rough knotry Skin, which pared off, the Fruic cars like a Strawberry, and is like ir alfo in Colour and Grain. Wild Grapes, of which there is great fore in the Woods; and they have a woody bitter Taft. Befides oither frultif chefe, we obferyed a-forr of Frivit 2 dark ycllowith Colour, growing in Clufters of feyen of eighe together, as long and big as 2. Man's finger, fomewhat foft and downy, and having within the Rind, a Pulp of a fweet and pleafant taft, bur how wholefome I dare roit aver. But the moft remankable of all was the poyfonous Beans, grow- poypormi ing upon great Trees in the Woods, almoft like Beeches: Beain We rook Notice of rhrec kinds of thefe, very differint from one another. The finflarge and rall, bearing a Pod like a Bcan, which contains fove or five fquare Bcans, almoft like the Secd of a Tamarind, incloled with a hard Peel like a Shell, within which lics a yellow Kemel, which is a very dangerous Poyfon, and us'd by the Negroes for poy roning their Darts; they call this Fruit Oyou The fecond fort is lefs, the Pod crooked, of a very thick Rind, and fix or feven Inches in the bending, and half as much in breadth, it enclofes five Beans an Inch long each. The third has Leaves like the former, but the Food much bigger, flanding on a ftrong woody Stalk, thick and maffy, a little indented on the fides, nine Inches long and five broad, within which are five Beans longer than the other, and called by them Quends; and thoferthey fay are alio venomous.
Befides thefe. Beans, I have feen there Trees like Wil lows, which bear a Fruit like Peas-pods.
\(U_{\mathrm{P}}\) further in the Councry they have a Fruic, to wivich truit Gid they give the Name of Gola, 'ris of the bignefs of a Walnur, hard, reddifh, bitter, jagged, and full of Corners, iike that, and inclofed in 2 hard Shell. This is a ching mightily fer by in the Country, and ferves the two grand porpoles, both of Money and Meat 100 ; neither have they any ocher bur this, which does as well amongft them as Gold and Silver in other parts of the World. The a ther way they make ufe of it, is by Chewing, which chey do, mixing it with the Rind of a certain Trec, whicb they are mighty fond of upon that account. One Man cakes a mouthful, fucking and tuming it abour for a while; and then he purs it into the next Man's Mouth who plays his part with it in the like manner; and fo it goes as far as 'rwill go, all round the Company : They don't fuallow down any part of it, but every Man is ocilged to give it as encirely to his Neighbour, as he receives is himfelf, for Quancity ar leaft, whatever it be for \(Q\) :iairy and Virtuc.
In the inner parts of the Country, they have pretry contiti tore of Cotton, of which they make a rolerable good Cloth, abour a Quarter broad, for that listle Covering they have before them.
There is a Wood too called Cambe, which dyes a good conber Red, and they ufe it about their Purfes, and Mats, for thas purpofe.

It may nor be amifs, befides this general Scheme of the Vegetable Varicty of thefe parts, to give a more particular Defcriprion of thofe more noted common Fruits, and their refpective Tress, which are alfo of an equally confiderable Ufe and Scrice to Mankind.

The Limon-Trec much refembles the Crab in feveral of ine tim oints, is rery full of Prickles and carrics a llinder leaf chike a Willow; is yields vory plentifully, as the Crab Trees do, the Fruir begins to xipen in Augnst, and hold on upon the Tree cill Oftober.
That which they call the Plantan-Tree, feems to be an annual Platit, and in my Opinion, oughr rather to be reckon'd amongit the Recds than the Trees. It is of a moderatc heipht, and about the bignefs of a Man's Thigh; is is not of a denfe, compact, wbody Subitance, bur feems to confint of feveral Orders of leaves, or Skins, wrapped ciole upon one another, almolt in the nannce of an Artichoke, it has nothing of Branches, lure the Leaves fioo immediarcly our of the Trunk is felf, throughour the whole length of in, and are for the moft part two Ells long, and one broad, having onc long Rib going through the middle of them. The Plantans themelves hang in Clutters of ten or twelve together, each a Span long, and almoft as thick as a Man's Writt, Somewhar crooked, and bending inward; ar fart it leoks very green, and then tums jellow as ir ripens; and in you take them then and itrip off the Rinds, you'll find the Pulp within of the rame colour, and a very plealant talte. Bencath the Fruit on the fame Stalk, hangs down a leafy Tuft Marp point ed, which feems to have been the Flower; but whethe there's any rhing of a Seed or no, I am nor certain; they give this Fruit the Name of Bannanas, and have good plenty of them. They are ripe in Seprember and OZzober and will if they are gathered green, ripen of themfeltes, fo as to be fir for eating in abour fix Wecks time, as we found by Expericnce
Of ith Gni-
Guinct-1 cpper, a Fruir this Country thetws too amongt crent, tho an no great picnry, grows wild in the Woods the Plant is a fmall thing, almont like Privert, or Prickwood, adomed with lirtle flender Leaves, and bearing a Fruir refembling Barberries in form, and of the fame colour too, when ripe, only they don'r hang in Bunches as Barberries do; but here and theretwo orthree rogether about the Scalk ; their Name for ir is Banque.

Of the rene
The Pens (poken of before, of which ther make their Brad, is a frmall nender Plant like Grals, the Stalk full of Seed,-notcnelofed inany fort of Husk. This feems to be the fame with what the Turks call Cufizus, and the Portuguenc, Miunds.
The Primitc-Trec is very ftraight, high, knotry in the Rind, of 2 foft and yiclding Tcxrure within, wholly withour Boughs, excepr at the rop, and thofe rather like fo many Recds than real Boughs, being all Pith in the infide, only cover'd with a rough Rind; the leaf is long and Icnder, in manner of Sword-grals, or the Calemus Flags; and thofe Reedy Boughs on which they ftand, are befer on both fides with fharp and ftrong Prickles, ftanding like the Teeth of a Saw, bur much longer; the Fruit is abour the bignefs of a Chefnur, it being a tough, hard, infipid Kemel, inclofed in a much harder and more compacted Shell, Atreaked with Threds on the outfides; the People call the Tree it felf Tobnll, and the Fruir Bele; which is indeed good for little, tho they cat them roanted. When they draw the Wine of this Tree, they cut off one of the Branches, with a Span of the Head, and making fomething of an Incifion, they faften the Mouth of a Gourd to the Orifice, which in the prace of Twenty four Houts will be filld with a clear whitih Warer, of a grareful relifh, and ftrong cnough to make the Negroes drunk.
ogncturex
Ifen nothing in thefe parts like the celcbrated Plant that Has gorten the Name of Senficive: But here is a Tree thar ihews a Fruit, which delerves to be call'd fo, fince ir really is fo without difpute; 'tis indeed all the Fruit the Tree san pretend to, tho not to be imagind the narural and genuine product of ic. The Tree is fomething like a Willow in make and fize, but the Leaf very broad, and almoft as rhick as Lcather, bearing Enall Knops like thofe of the Cyprefs. The Boughs of chis hang down 2 good way into the Watcr ; for they ftand all about the Bays, and are quite overflown, as it were, by the Tide; and thus together with the Mud and Slime that flicks to them, the young Oyfters bred thercabouts faften on to them too, and that in fuch rait numbers, thar one can hardly fee any thing almoft bur long Ropes of Oyfters.
Animalk:
Fouduaz Podx his Country; we may now look upon the Animans of ginning with the Fith; fince the Oytter-Trees, in which Plant and Fifh are united, make char Tranfirion juft and nanural: Herc then we find Mullers, Rays, Thornbacks, Old-wives, Garfinh, Cavallio's, like Mackarel Pikes Sword-fin, with Snours a Yard long, Toothed on hoth fides like a Saw; Dog-fim, Sharks, and Sharks which are like a Shark, bur bave a that broad Snour like a Stiovel Shocmakers, having on ezch fide the Mouth Pendants like Barbel, and making a grunting Noife like Hogs.

Their Fowl, are Pelican, white and as large as Swan with a mighry long Bill ; Mcarns, Curlews, Boobies, Or cyes, with leveral other forts, whofe Niames we know nor. Only their grey Parrots are nor an be forgoten. a'fo their ciuiner-Hens, 1 tery beautitul Fowl, of the bis: nefs of a Pheafant, and party-iolour'si.
As for Beafts, zine Mountains are fuil of Lions, Tygens, and Ounces; and the Woods of Monkeys, leaping about frem Trie to Trec. And there thould be Porcupines too by the Quills of them, which the Negrocs hew tho' we law nene. Elcphants are farce here about the Bays, bue up in the Country they are plentiful cnough.
The Natises told us alfo of a ftrange Beaft, which the A frange Interpreter rendred a Carbuncle, very often feen by them, , but only in the Night-Scafon. This Creature, they fay has a Srone of an incredible Luftre in his Forchead, fo bright, that he is not only thereby rended rifible in the darkeft Nighr, bur fees allo by the help of thar Narural Torch, to find out and manage his Provender. It is a very my, jealous, and timorous forr of Crcanure, and furnilled by Nature with fo good Ears, that it takes the Aamm of the fimalleft Ncife, being always in a liftning ancncive pofture. It has a kind of a Mufcular Film, or Skin, thar plays forth and back over thar lucid Srons, to that tis managed juft of all the Word like a Candle in a Dark-Lanthorn, open or thut, as the Creature pleafes; and this is the way of it when is hears any Noife, imme, diatcly the Filmor's clapp'd over the Stone, and the lighti loft, and fo the Animal preforves its Liberty, by blundering iss Purfucr, and leaying him in the dark.
This Account the Nicgrocs give, with all imaginable affarance: And if there le fuch a Luminous itone as chis Eis certain, that fince tis impofible ir thould thine by any Reflection of an exremal Lighr, thar is muft be from the Tcruuse, Difpofirion, and Inteftine Mction of the Patrs of that Stone, or fome more actire fery Corpufeles, tranifmitted into ir from the Body of the Animal, and refiding in irs Pores, which upon the rurning-afide of the Film, dif. covers fuch 2 Phonomenon as the Phofphorus (or Bolinian Stone), expos'd to the open Ait.
The principal Commodity of the Country, that can any the Traki way ferve to invite a Trade, are Gold and Etcphants the Comer Tecth, which the Pcrsugucac bate made fometimes yery advantageous Barter for; bringing only mecr Toys, and Trifles, as Beads, Bells, Krives, Glaffer, Copper, and Iron Veffels, fic: But inthis part of the Councry, 2bout the Sca-Coafts, ther will not part with their Gold ar theferates, tho' they do up in the Heart of it, where the Peoplelive more ont of the way of Converfe and Traffick, and lefs underftand the Value of their own Comturiodiries; herethey will barrer Victuals for your Tous; but Ifee no profpect of procuring any thing clfe, that's very much to advantage.
The Poing, or Cape, of sierta Liona is felf, lies fome-ser suma ching low and depreffed; bus the Land oncr it rifes ex-Scomewis treamly high, and may be feen in a cleas Day 44 or 15 Leagues off.
To the Weftward of the Cape, ftands the great Rork, Land of which makes a Figure remarkable criongh; you have no Sims Lame lefs than fixtecn, fifteen, ten, or nine Fathom. Water, the kock Whe North and South with the Rock, at a Milc and half di-waid, flance; and within balf a Mile you have feren Fathom rery good Shoaling between your Ship and the Rock; paffing the Rock there's twenty Farhom, and Shoaling to cighreen, fixteen, twelve, and ten Farhom, all the way into the Roads bordering very near the Sourh Shore, for there's a confiderable Saidd char lies about two Miles from A smi- the Northern Shore, where the Sea breaks. We found shoz: very convenicnt Riding in ten Fathom Water, and good Ground, the Point of Sicrra Leona, bearing W: by N. the N. point of the Bay bearing N.. W. and the aforefaid Breach, or Sand, N. N. E.: *'Tis ro beobicrvid allo, That coming in we were N. & S. with the Rock, it bare with the S. Point, and with Illn Verd N. by W. and S. by E. which rlba Vird (by the way) is a rery round Spor, and a particular Mark for all that are bound thitict from the Southward.
'Tis'remarkable, that all the Obfervations of the Vari-Oblermit ation, fince our coming from 2 Degr. North Lat to Sierre oo beviat Liona, proved very crroneons; and we found, in order to fer chis matter to righes, that thirty Leagues muft be added to cach Diftance, when we have seference to any Meridian Eafterly of that Diftance, and to many futtracted from ir, when we refer to a Wetetly Meridian, Chap. XII. Cirrènts, Tides, &c.

Experince caught us the Practice of this Rule hercabours, and this a Man muft make his furct Guide, and nor lay and this a Man mult make his fureft Guide, and nor lay roo muich ftrels upon his Inftruments, which may deceiv the molt skilful Obferver.

The Watering all hercabouts is very good and convenicnt, tho the beft Watering-place, as alfo the beft Road too, is the Fourth Bay, to the Eaftward of the Point of Sicirt Lecan. There the Courfe of the Water is pretty near too the W.S. W. and in the Spring-Tide it rifcs ar Flood, ar the leaft twelve Foot.
When you have the Ithar Vird bearing from you, \(S\). E. \(A\) Sourlicrly, and the Point of Sicria Leonr, N. E. Wh E. Eaftrly, and abour three Leagucs from you, you thall in rhar Diftance and Polition, find a ftrong Tide Ferting N. E. by N. The Road of Sic, ra Leona by the beft 8 Dept. 36 Min North Lat. and the Poimbears ace in from if, and is abour a Lcaguc or four Miles diftant. The Vaxianion here alfo, as far as we cou'd find, was \({ }_{1}\) Dcgr. 50 Min. N..E. our Courfe from hence being to the Bay of Soldanif, we obferved as follows: Thar the Sugarlonf and Penguin llands bear S. by E, and Ni.by W: from one another, the Weftermoft South 1 and, atd the Point of the Sugerlonf bear S.S.W. and N. N.' E. Ectiven she' Ifland and the Shore, 'ris ar leatt ferea Mivike, and about half a League from the Illand to the E.S.E. is a conliderabic Breach, as alfo. another to the Suuth, ar a Mile diftance from ir: Nicither is that Flats to be forgotten, which lies half a Mile from the Weit Point of the Bay.

We reffented a few Days at Silicmia, and then procseded for Sr. duguftine's Bay. In which Courfe, when by obfrration we were in 34 Degr. 4 Min. South late by the Computation of our Ships Reckoning, we ceghe then to have beca in 33 Degr. 14 Min. To that we were so Min. more to the Sonth, than our Rules would allow of. And this was evidently the effect of the Currene that we fell into thereabouss; from whence 'ris phain, that thofe thar depend upen their dead Reckoning, and rhe meer Rules of Art, withour due refpect had so the Currents, and the Allowanices to be made on char foore, muft needs fall in:o intolerable Errors; and this fecms to be very good Rcafon why the Current hould be of greater force here, where we made this oblervation, becaufe the Iand gocs away with a very fudden fall, N.E. andS. W. and we happening, to open the Gur, were fo far influenced by the Atrength of it, as is before related; and theres as much Reaton to fuppofe, thar as a Ship gocs moreEafterly patt the middle of the Gut, fo the force of the Current will be proportionably diminimed.
In Souch Lar. \({ }^{23} \mathrm{Dcgr}\). 37 Min , the Variation was 15 Degr. 30 Min. But by a fuccecding Obfervarion more nicely made it came bur to is Degr. 26 Min. This laft Obfervation was made over the Land half a Degrec high, otherwife the Vaxiation would have becn more; and there efpecially the laift, or fecond, fecm to be fuch, as a Man may repore a confiderable degrec of Confidence in.
The Tide here flows directly with the Eall; you have from ten, twelve, to tweary Fatho bewcen from tcn, twelve, to twenry Fathom, betwecn this and the Bay, but coming near the Point in the height of the Bay, you have no Ground at a hundred Fachom, till you come a. great way in, and then there is from thity to cight.
Farhom, "ho" tis to be obferved, thar the decpeft Water is upon the Souch fide, the other being made much hallower in proportion, by reafon of the Mud and Sand broughrin by the Rivers which are on thar fide.
The Tide at St. Aucyftinc's Bay, flows prerry ncar E. and rifes to a great heighth. It is indeed gencrally and not a Cape, fince it bas no Point or Neck of I and and not a Cape, lince it bas no Point or Neck of I and, thar bears out more than the reft abour it. There are Breaches on both fides of ir, lying about a I cague W.S. W. from the Main, which makes it very eafic to be dif graz dral of ccrined.
Sodamiatoo: In the botrom of the Bay there are two Rivers running,
But that plece Bur the place
bcinf focome the Sream of which is fo violens, shat the Flood never monily fooken cvercomes it, tho' it tows ar lcaft two Fathom: And the of thy tmolt Land all abour thefc Rivers, is broken, low, fandy Ground. thorevyape There's vory socd Fining at this place for Smelts and Sur of whom Shrimps; of the fermer of which we carched fome that the motle re- were a Foor, and of the larter ten Inches in length: And things of is the beft place for this fort of Sport is on the Sandy. In the low Iand, within the Woods, we found vaft mir bis Ac plenty of Varcr-Mclons, which afford good Refremment: Bur the River yield us nothing ar all, the Warce of then is nor good; and thofe that go to try to filh in them, are in danger of having their Spor fpoiled by Allegators. The Pro-- fpedt of the Country for a Milc or rwo about the Bay; is homely and unplcafant; appcaring rough, tony, atid ind fome placesover-rin with tmall Woods: It does norfecmí neither to be over-ftocked with Intiabitants, we neverfeeing above twenty of rhem together.  them, as moft of thar Complexion are, by reafon of thas sfline. Musk-fenn they carry along with them. Their black Hair is decently plaitcd, and frizled upon their Heads, and it is reafonably long; they have no other Covering upen that part befides their Hair, as alfo none for any other part of the Body, excepta forr of a Girdle made of Rinds of Trees, adorncd all belind with fome of their Trinkets, and orher odd thinge, which are faftned on with Allcgators Tecth, and hang there partly for hew, and party for coceafional ule.
Befides their Darts and I.annces (which are their prin- See Devite cipal Weapons), they wear about them certain grear fref Dopura, Knives, like Butchers Knives, whether for common Sex- and Cuprain ain; however, they ane all (as awcll as the oticer loftriments) of their cwn unking, and there are fome Difiocrics of Art, and ingenious Fancy, in the Concrivance of them.
They are a fubelc forr of Pcople in the Naters of Trade, and were nor to be charmed with pieces of old tren, as orher Parkarians were. They made us pay a confiderable Rate for the Cattel we had of them, in cempazifon to what we gate at Soldenia, and other places: And then they would take no Payments in any Meral below Silver, do what we could. We gave them for three Kine, two Stecrs, and four Calves, no lefs than ras. the Value of which in old Iron, would have purchas'd Catale cnough at Soldenic, to have flocked Exro or three good Farms: But then 'tis cerrain, that the Catule bere are far betere than at Soldenic, tho' the make of them is much the fame; having Bunches on their Backs like Camels, as they have, omy thefe ftand a lirele more ferwands. Bur befides the Beans, and ordinary fort of Carde, as Shecp and Cows, which are orher Cricain this Councry verylarge and good, there are fome which surcs is boafts of, as ies own peculiar Raritics. The Woods fford grear ftore of thare Crearures, which for their Lorelinefs are called :by fome the Beautiful Beaft; 'tis abour fhe \(\overline{\text { Braxti- }}\) he bigness of a Monkey, has a fmall Head, and a rery fll Beaf. long Tail; the Furr of is is cerreamly fine, afh-colourd and ftrcaked with black and whitc. The Camclion is alfo a Native of this Country; and The Cane: the Experience we had of them affuresus, (if there were tion:nor orhcr Reafons for it), thar the Vulgar Niotion of them as Creaturcs that live upon the fivid Air it felf, withour any ochcr Suftenance, is falfe, as wcil as ridiculous: We quickly found one of them, thar we kepi; a hunting after Flies, and as foon as cerer he had the defired Prey in his Eyc, he fuddenly darted fomething out of his Mouth ; what, I know nor, unicfs 'rwere his Tonguc, but of a vor. ugly figure and appearance, and ftruck the Fly, and cat it ; and all this with fuch fpeed andinimblencej, that one can'r imagine any cunning Spider, to furprize with more riolence and fuddennefs than the Camelion do.
There arc Bars here almoft as bis as Conics, headed like FowriFox, and a thick hairy Furs: In all orher Poinas like Bars: Wc meafured the Wings of one thar we killed, and found them, upen a full ftrercli, to be an Ell in length.
We faw here allo good fore of Baftard-Hawks, Herns of fereral colours, whire, black, blew, and mix'd of divers tegecher: And a forr of Birds, whofe Names we knew nor, of as many Colours as one can well imagine, and cufred upon their Head like Peacocks:
lizards are very common here; and a fort of Infect tizirde that has a great number of Legs, almoft like our Crabb" and hangs abour upen the Trees, enclofed within a doubic Cod of white Silk. In the Trees upen the Hills aresthun-inest: dance of large Spiders. thar carry their Webs fromitone Trec to another; and fpin very frong fubtancial Silk, of a yellow Colour, and that as socd a Yellow as if made o by the finct DYC.
As for Piants, befides the Tamarinds, and the Semper- Vegerabie: vive which yicids the Alocs, heres a Plant fomething itrange and peculiar; which, according to the beft Judgmene I can make of ir, imagine to be a wild Coco-Nut: Tis of a mrubby Nature, and cornes up with feveral prickied Stalks, very near two Yards lons, and at the end of cacin ftands a Leaf, indented half round like Swordi-grals, and as big as that of a Cabbage: Out from the rops of theic Staiks, amongit the Leaves, shor forth great numbers of woody Branches, as thick fer with Fruit as cverthey Strm can fland one by anodher, of the colour and bignets of a rimer.

large Catharine Pear, and like a Sheeps-boll in form, with a Rind bearing forth near the Head; flat at rop, and fmoorh wirhun, which Rind is hard Cortex, almolt like the Coco. hell, and within that the K ernal, which tho it be hard, yce it may be caten, and contains about a Spoonful of a plealant, cool, limpid Water, pretry much refembling that of Coco. Here's a Tree too, as large and as big as a Pear Trec, very thick fer with Boughs and Lquves like thofe of the Bay Tree; bearing 2 mighty greatiruir as round as a Ball, and hancing on a ftrong Sralk divided by Seams through the whole length of it into four parts. The Rind is vaftly thick and beins cur when 'ris Green, it yiclds a fort of vifcid Matter like a Turpentinc; it contains a Kernel, of a darkifh Colour, hard, bitter and cvery way ill tafted. And thns much for the Products of this Country.

The Phoenomenons of the Water here were pretay odd and ftrange, ir being at high Water vory Frent, and atiow cxtreamly Salr again at high Water Frefh on one fide of the Ship, and Salt on the other.
Nore, that all along the Low-land from Eaft to Weft licsalcdge of Rocks half a Mile from the Shoar, you have two or three Fachom Water, proper for Landing, and as good Fiming as can be defired. Befides this ledge of Rocks therc's a Branch four Miles from the North Point of the Bay, bearing S.S.E. and then in the Road it Ielf the Warer is very decp in mot places, and the Ground foul and full of Pirs, fo rbat all thingsconfidcred, this Bay feems to be no place for Shifs to Refrefh at.

We fer Sail fromsuguftine Bay to Zectocre, and in South Lat. 15. Degr. 42 Min . by the difference of the way really made, and what in Judgmene mighe here be allowed, we found the intluence of the Currenr, which runs pretry fwiftly there, and as it fhould feem lefs to the S. W. than to the S. For the Realon of this Current tis probable that the deep Bay between Cape Corientes and Monabigue makes an Indraughi or. Eddy of fome Streams coming cithex from the N. E. or more Eafterly in ar the N. E. of Sc. Lawrence, and fo along the Land to Cape Corienses: Or clie that ftream which is reported to fer from St. f-anrence N. Soe after this sbour the for the Aloes it produces; the Fruitulnefs of the Soil in muking the ceproduction of Dares is alfo no conteroptible part of Aloes, whe Character of this lland. They have two Harveft of this Fruir in a:Year, the one of which fell in the Month of \(\mathfrak{f u l}\), at the time of our being there. When they are throughly Ripe, they are laid together npon Skins, and the Liquor which Diftills from them, is that which they call Pare-wine. The Dates being thus drain'd, to Preferve them they take our the Srones, and pack them up urely in a Skin; or ar orher times they cut them and take out the Stones before they are quite Ripe, and folay them 2 drying, which is byfar the better way, and makes them ear as if they were Candicd: Bar they muft be open'd ar'fome time or ocher, for whole they will norkeep. When the Harveft of Dares comes, there's 2 Deputy of the Kings, that's appointed to prefide over the Concerns of every Valley, fee all be clean gathered and brought into a certain place, and till this Affair beover, no Man dare rouch a Date upon pain of Deach. Then when all is carricd in, the whole produce of the Inand is divided into three: equal parts, Firft for the King, another for the Arabs, and the Third for the Caffars: But tho' they make the Divifion equal, they don't make the Diftribution, bur Arbritrarily as they pleafe. On the Strand there grows Cotzon plants in fome places; as alfo amongt the Stones a hrubby Piant calld Eftac; it bears a thick round Leaf as broad as a Shilling, and Fruic like a Caper, which is of ufe in Sallers, and prexy muci in requeft for tiar purpofc.
There are fome Oranges too, bur thofe fearee and (like Buater and other Earables) at nocatora exceeding dcar:
But the moft remarkable of all next to the Sempeivioum, or'Alocs pianr, is a large. Tree of the heighr of a Man, or fomething better: 'Tis vcry grofs and thick abour the Roor, and grows fo very caper dpwards, that ar the top ris almolt compleaty picked; the Trun is all alone very fmcorh, and has no Bark ro cơ̈c- it, zor no Branches but at the top, and thofe roid of Leaves; but they yield a reddim Flower, our of which a green Fruir dufcovers is felf in form and bignefs not unlike a Date, and containing feveral fmall white Kcrnels of a bitrer Tart; the Branches allo arc vcry bitrer, and are full of a refinous Sulntance; whether this may be the Mirtle tiree orno, thofe that have feen both may do well to determine: about the Shoar there are feveral delicate forls of Shells oo be found, particulanly your fine Pearl Oyfter-fhells, as alfo the common fort in abundance, and yet nor one Oytter to be had all over che lland, fo that it is plain they are driven thither by Sca.
The Animals that delervethe moft notice, here are the \(\mathrm{Ci}_{-}\) vit-Cats, which are raken in a Trap uponthe Mountains; Civectur they are vary numcrons, and the Country people will fell chem at any rime for twelre Pence a picce.
This land is in the Hand of the King of Tartachs or Cucluem in Arabir Felix, and has been in that ftate of Subcection about 100 Xcars. The fame Prince being alfo Mafter of the rwo Irmans and Abledelciricia.
Theinhabitanes are confequently of two forts, che Arabian the Gorm Matiometans, and the Caffers (or Infidelsas they call the o-menrand if thers). The oldPoffeffours of the Ine the/trals are well pro- babiums portionedMen. Tawny, wearing their Hairlong, and a Turbant or linenCloth wrap'd about theirHeads, and no other Apparel, bnt another aloour their Middles. Their Legs and Fect quite bare too, excepr 2 forry pair of Sandals. They have fome few Shor amongt them, bur their Weaponselfeare only a crooked Dagger and a Targec.
They are Induftrious, Diligent, Fairand Civil enough in their Behaviour, thorgh not altogether fo Honeft in their Dealing. They are mighty lovers of Tobacco, and they love as well to Spunge it. where they may be permitted. The betrer Cort of. Men or the Courtices will throw a Pinfado over their Shoulders, in the manner of an Irifs Mantle, and fome'make them Skirrs of white Calicoc, as others allo a pair of Linen Breeches like the Gyzcrats; bur this is a high pirch of Drefs, and nor the costmon Mode of the Country. The Women wear Caico Yhifs, Red, Blew, or Dark coloured, hanging down coust very Ground, covering their Faces with a fortof 2 Val, pretending a deal of Micuica behaviour and mienels to be feen, tho at the fame nime their Tempers are jolly, open and waggifh enough. They are much betrerComplex, oned than the Men in general, and take not a Fitue care to let off the gifts Narure has endowd them with, by all the Advantages of drefs and finery. All that their Husbands are worth almont is laid out on their Backs, the Money that thould be in the others Pockets is all abour the Arms and Necks of thofe extravagant Women in Chains and Rings, Carkances, and Mavillias, and na Body knows what Gambols befides. They load themCelyes fo with thefe things tharthey can's fir, but make a noife and gingling like fo many Moricc-Dancers. And I believe thatone of them take her with all ber Parriculars, would be near enough to furnith an ordinary Toy mop. I have feen one of them, and thas nonc of the beft fort neither, and confequencly nor fo well fet our with thefe the wrame Fopperies, that had in cach Ear at lcalt a dozen Silver of zurem Rings as big as Curtain Rings, and thofe larger ones had chidra as many of a (mallcr lize hanging to them two Chains of Silver and one of Gold Boffes wreathed abour her Neck; ten or twelve Mavillia's of Silver, each as big as oneslitule Finger abour her Wrifts; Plates of Silver almoft likeHorfe locks upon the fmall of her Legs, and every Finger covercd with Rings; fuppofing all this, "tis no wonder that the Men are poor, and want Money to buy Tobacco, efpecially confidering thar three, four, five or fix of thefe cbargeable Crearures fall to the lhare of one Man to maintain, or perhaps more, according to their qualiry, for their Religion lays no reftraine upon them in thar poinc. A Man had need have his Wivesfenc home to him ready fumifh'd and rigg'd, and if there be no other Portion in the cafe, her Parents thould drefs her at leaft, or if the Husband muft do it as firft for Cuftom, he thould have the liberty of undrefing her afterwards for Conveniency, and nor pinch for want of Money, when his Wife has a load of Silver upon her Back. The y do indeed want a litule lightning in thisSence, tho perhaps they may want a Grain or two of a juft weight in another.
Their Husbands are very Jealous of them, but they don't feem to be Jealous of their Husbands, nor fo fowre Tempered as they are neithar. They'll rum up their Veil and glance frecly upon a Stranger they like, and if he be a Mcrchant, and Eringsthem Cryftal. Amber, and Coral Beads, they'll Bafter with him as long as hepleafes provided irbe a good fecure Place, where their Husbands may not come wo froil cheir Trade.

Their Children ( except fome few of the beft fort) go quite Naked, till they come to fome years, for oughr I know to Years of Marriage, for they Marry them here at ren or twelve Years old. 1 hefe Peoph, like the Turks and other Faftern Narions, cat all their Victuals upon Mars or Carpers fread upon the Ground, ufine ncither K nives or Carpets ipread upon the Ground, ufng neither Knives Therir Liquor ar their Meals is only fair Warce: = Neither have they any other bur Datc-Wine, with which roothey'lf be foundly Drank in Private, as Zcalous Mabometans as they are.
For Encertainment, they have a thing they call Ccho, which is a blak bitter Drink they make of a Berry like a Rarberry, brought from Mecce, this thcy fup off very hor, and tis reckoned good for the Head and Sromach.
As for the Caffers, they are Pcople that live in all the Miferies and Calamities of a Cervile Statc. The Arals won'r fuffer them to have any Arms, nor are they allowed to kill any fort of Beaft for chcir Suftenance, for that they chictly live upon Fifh, and that hare of the Dates, whin the Confciences of the Arabians will allow them. The Men are more Swarthy than the Arabs are, they wear nochigg upon theirHeads, and theirHair is exceedinglong, and only a courfe Cloch of Goass Hair or fome other Woolien about their Middle, except fomething on their Fece in the nature of Scandals. They have a very rough harbarous Afpect; and look always ttaring as if they were Frighted.
The Women have nothing about cheir Heads, bur wear the long Calico Shifts like the Arabians, and atrain as far aseser their horrid Porerry will ler them to ke finc like them, and to ape them in all their Famions; thus they get Mavillia's of Iron, or fome fach bafe Matcrialsinftead of Imitation of the Silver Mavillia's, and the other Womens Beads inftead of Carkancts, and to make up for the wantof otherOrnamenrs they painr theirEaces up and down in Patches with Black and Ycllow, which makes them appear very frightful Figures. Their Language is dificrent trom the Aratick, which yet being the. Tongue of the Conquerour they moft of them leam.
As for their Religion they are meer Hearhens as the ple to thofe that will drive a Bargain with them for thar purpore. How true allthis is I am no judge, bur this I know, that they have a Church, and there's an Altar, and two Croffes in in, and its certain thar before the coming of the Aribs, the Religion of the Ifland was Chriftian or Popifh at leaft, and that the coming of fuch a Peopic as the Arrbs are amongft them, mould make them Heathens, is no very ftrange thing. I can't avouch any thing for their Religion, but I believe be it what it will, it can't be much lees than that of their Maloomesen Matters.
They have alfo one Town roo (whecher more or no 1 know not) to themfelyes; the Houfes were built winh Stone, covered over with Rafts and Palm-branches, iccured with Doors and : wooden Locks, pretry Arrificially made:

At our firft Landing thy ran all away at the fight of us and left their Town at our. Difpofal; the Reafon was, becaufe they took us for Portugucie, who had made fome Inroads upon then formerly, and carried away fome of them Prifoners.

In thortas Marters now ftand, they are a very unhappy People, and unlefs the Aribs would be fo juft as to quit the Poffition of the Inand to them again, they can' do them a greater Kindnels than to knock them all on the Head.

The Moors at Delifa give us thefe following Iiffiuci:ons,

Defign to erect a Fort at Banda, and knowing whar the Confequences of that wou'd be, I propos'di to the chief Men the formal Delivery of Banda to us, in the Name, and for the Ufe of His Majefty of Englanit, before the Dutch began their intended Work. This Propofal they fecm'd to like.very well, bur yer deferr'd the coming to a final Refolution upon the Point fo long, that we had Reafon to fufpect fome under-hand Practices with the Ducch and the preference, or ar leatt 2 fecrer Encouragement given them in their Defign of Trade: Yer at the fame time did the fe hollow-hearted Infidels, carry ir with all Treechene the fpecious Pretences of Eriendmip and Kindnefs to us in World. They told us, we ihoud have the whole Spicc-Trade as Pulorony, Rulorin, and Ayre Purce: That it frou'd be Dcath for any Man to fell fo much as a fingle Cirerec of Spice to the Follsuders; and char if we wou'd not buy is, is hou'd all rot upon the Trees for them; for they woud rather die than be obliged to trade with the Durcin Bur whether this was the Effect of a feigo'd or a real lingke or no, tis no matter, fince we are fure, that nor long after the Fcud was real, and the Splecn and Hatred on the fide of the Bendencfe very firong and inveterate. Tis to be granted, that they are a faithlels itreonftant cop.e: But then the Dutch carricd it at a rude and infolent rare amongit them; and to all the reft, added that of the building of a Fort he building of a Fort; an encroachmenr upon their \(\mathrm{L}=\) - Thernolate betry, that the Bandanc/s wou'd never pardon. And noo of the \(D_{\text {metic }}\) highet Degrecs of Abomination annongt thefe fuper ous Mrhancecus. And as they did hight chefe fupertitithe Dutch had taken as they did highly xefent 1t, that did by a fevere Revenge taken upon with them, fo they know', that they wou'd ncr cndure it: For having drawn dic Dutci, Admical wirh all his Coun: For having drawn Datch Ad tuc Dutci, Admiral, with all his Council, into a conveni- miral fitin cat place in che Woods, upon presence of conferring there, about Marters in difpure between them, they fell upon them wirth a confiderable Power of Men, and pus every har athe Sword; and had ner che Admiral's Soldiers that atrcance at a little diftance, been upon their Guand, they had fery'd them the fame, Sauce with their Mater Befides this, the Pcople feveral Sauce with their Mafter. Befides this, the People feveral times confired the curting off all of them that were there in Banda; nay, they did a tually rife upon them, and the Plor had been executed to the umoft rigour, had nor we Englifk-men interpos'd on their behalf. Many a time did we refcue them our of Kindnes of Perfons, bur their Goods and Effects fecure not only their to Ex Etijb Perfons, bur their Goods and Effects too; for which Civility we were afterwards very handfomely rewarded: For thefe Tumults were in the Month of May, and 'rwas bur in 7 une that they began to entangle us in our Trade, and lay I know not whar Reftraints upon us in our Deal ings wich the People of Pulowar, and Labatacca; as thar we mult carty no Provinions nor Ammunition with as thi- their in cher, and thar our Ships muft lie open to be fearched by Requiril. thicm.- And this, after a grear deal. of Conreft, we were orced to fubmir to, we being but Sixty rwo to above a Thoufand of them; and befides, their Forr commanding all ar that rate, thar if we fell out with them, they cond by the-Terror of that, debar us from lading our Ships ar Bur Bur thefe things tan a grear deal higher in the fucceeding Month of \(\mathfrak{F} u l\), for then we had an Order fent usin writing, figned by the Vice-Admiral, and all the refiave of the Council, commanding us to withdraw our Ship-out of the Road of Banda, within Give Days after the Dave Englifocoa thercof. Indeed, they had expref:'d a great uneafinefg of \(\leqslant\) Band under our Company leveral cimes before, and had Rond. offer'd to take our Debrs there upon themfelves, and fo difcharge us, provided we would be gone, tho we bad nor near our lading : Bur now it feems they were come to a Poine, and were refolv'd we fhou'd ftay no longer: For they pretended (in their Order), that being determined to carry on a bloody War againft the Bardaneff, in Revenge of the Barbarizies committed upon their Admiral. and his Company, they wou'd not: have their Enemics itrengthned by Engifis Powder and Shor; which-they had good Reafon to believe they wou'd, if we werefufferd to lic there while the War lafed: Befides this, they" abfolutely forbid us Anchoring ar Nera, Labateccin, orany other Roads belonging to places in their Power, during the Breach berween the Bandancfe and them... However, ibortly after a Peace was coacloded between thefe two perce be Parties, fo violently fer againft each other, and the B.tro tween the danefe having. no prefert Remedy, ramely endured the Death and encroachment of the Fort

The Dutch and we too came to an Agreenent about the Time of our Sray; and the Payment of our Dcbrs at Ban- trigue imaginable; notwirthltanding our Trade there fucceeded in fome meafure, and we receiv'd from thence \(225 \frac{1}{3}\) Cettees of Mace, and \(1307 \%\) of Nurs; in Aprih; \(A\).

The Porsugueze howerer（according to their Vain－glo rious boafting way）mate a huge Noife of Victory，and thinking that they had quite cool＇d the Courage，as well as fpoilid the Undertaking of the Durci，fell to Feafting and Reveling athoar，leaving the Fleet to look to it felf．

The \(D_{u t c h}\) ，in the mean－rime；having fopp＇d their Leiks，and new rigg＇d ar for，recum＇d with a Refolution to try the Fortune of a Sccond Battel with them，and came in good time ro furprize them in the midft of all their Triumphs；fo withour any more adoe，falling up－ on the Flect，they burnt and funk cvery Ship that was there，making beffdes a cruel Slaughere：And if five or fix of their Ships had nor by chance been fent away before，the whole Fleet that came upon this Defign had entirely perim＇d．Befides，quickly after this，． 2 Sicknefs in that City fwcpr away moft of the Portugueze there，and the Vice－Roy amongtt che reft；fo that their Prite and Grearnefs by all thefe Strokes，was confiderably hum－ bled，
And rwas very well for the King of Acber，and his Country，that the Dutch at that cime attempted the Siege of Malacor，and gave the Portugusze to faral a Blow as they did；＇rwas the moft feafonable thing for them thar cou＇d pofibly have happen＇d，and no lefs perhaps than the Redemption of the whole Counery our of thic hands of thofe Devourcrs：For the King of Portugal，who had be－ fore relolv＇d to drive the Dutch our of the Indies，as alfo，then given everely to chaftife all thofe Indian Princes and States thar Pommome had given Countenance and Encouragement to them（of which ris＇probable he reckon＇d the King of Acher to be one）gave Orders to his Vice－Roy to go and begin be that Prince，and then proceed to the King of For，and fo to the Moluccer＇s，and abour．And the Portugueze Fleet （wonderfully ftrong and well furnin＇d）was at that very time before the City of ision，ready ro execute the King＇s Commands，when the News came，thar the Dutch were alfauling Malacca，and all was like to be loft there．This News drew off the whole Power of the Flect and deli－ verd Aclien；the Vice－Roy had no time（as well as Com－ miffion）to attend the miaking of new Conquefts，when old ones were ready to be loft，and the Inrereft was fink－ ing in another place．
And＇ris not utterly improbable；that there were fome－ thing more than meer lucky CFance and Contingency in this matrer ；and thar the－Dutc／）（for fome Obligation or other to the King of Acben）mighr ftudioufly give his Ad－ verfaries this very fcafonable Diverion：Bur however． twas，the Portugueze had the worft on＇r，and came of with the loss borh ways．

Thefe

Thefe fame Dartch had fired two more of this Flect: little before ar Mo-amiique; (where alfo they had affaule ed and banterd the Cattle, tho' they could not cake it) and from thence they came directly for Goi, hoping to find the reft; which Defign being fruftrated, they endeavourd to provoke the Portugacze to a Battel; but they were wifer than to accept of che Challenge at thatcime, and for all the Infukes of the Ducl, wou'd not ftir one of their Port.

But they centinue ftill ro make further Preparations on: both tides; fo that in all probability, it won't be long before the Grand Concroverfic depending between thofe two Nations in thefe Paris of the World, will be decided: The Butinefs of Malacon is now in hand, which will ferre only fur an Introduction to grearer things.
Bur the Durch and Poisugu fo were not the only Scuffers in this Country; for the virent \(M\) Mow, and the King of Decan, werc carrying on a very hot and violent war. Nows camenow, thar this Princc, with a thying Army of 22000 Hortic, had befieged the City of drudiaury ir, once the Mctropolis of that Kingdom, and conquer'd by the brave Eder, this Mes, d's Father. But ic feems, the Governour of that place was 200 cuming for che King of \(0:-\) can; forpretending that he wou'd deliver up the City into his han'ls, upon Condirion of wirhdrawing his Army - Acoen is tome four or five Cofe diltan.e, thar they might march Mulc add hifont with Bas and Bagsage more fecurily ; inttead of Englub. Englyb. that, he alfanifed them to \(r\) ghis fraking the advantage of the.r Securicy and Unprovitednets, and prestid fo very clate upon them, that the whele Army was routed, and that with contideraile lest too.

Bur tis not much doubred, but the King of Decen will pay, this Debr with Interelt before ir be tong; for he's a ecry poicrit Prince, and his Subjects are fome of the left Soldices in the finlis; and ha ceas grod a Cliaracter for Iand-Scrvice, as the Milhetars have for that of the Sca.
On the other fide che Grect Mognl went on with his Preparaious, great and mighty, in proportion to his taft Defign : He was now. relolved nor to fit down contented with the Conqueft of the Kinglon of Decen only, bur to take in all the Countries in the Southern part of Indin; tic wou'd carty his Victorious Arms all through thic Continent, and fix the Bounids of his Empire at Cape Crmori.
To break the force of this mighty Sronm, the Thiree mighty Kings, of Decan, Vffapor, and Golsonde, with all their Powiers, prepare to fer themiclyes in the way of it, intending to receive the firt Shock; they refolvero ftand as Barrices between the Mogul, and that part of India; So that he mall not break in there, lefore the has broke through all their Armics. They are now on both fides in thei Tenes in the Fichd, ready for Action; and expeat only the breaking up of the Winter to bogin it.

We had alfo ourithare of Troubles ar Surct, occafion'd by the Rumour of a ccrain Allicrfary's approach, very formidabic in thefe Pares: It was one Raje Badur, a kind of an Outlaw, that rery often made great Spoil in that Connory, marching up and down with a Body of Horfe, and raking his Plunder where he found the Towns moft liabic to a Surprize.

He was a Defcendanr from the Kings of Cemb.aye, and had been King himfelf, if the Arms of the \(\boldsymbol{M}\)-gul had not wrefted that Kingdom away from his Family: So that 'ris probable he turn'd Rapparec in Revenge, and took that Courfe to make himfef Satisfaction, for the Wrong the Mogul had done him.
Abour two Years before this, he plunder'd and fack'd the Great Ciry of Cimbirg, and was now coming to do the fame to Surrar; which pur all the City into a moft wretched Confufion \(-:\) Bur having Intelligence of the Strength of Men and Arms gor together for the Defence of ir, he went off, and did nor make the Attempt.
Bur to leave thefe Affairs, I fall give an Account of my own Journcy to \(A g r a\), and throush the moft remarkaBle Parts of India, together with the principal Places -hat occur in thofe Roads, with the moft ferviceable Otfervations relaring to them.
Surrif, from whence I began my Jouracy, may allo begin the Chameter. It ftands fome rwenty Miles up in the Country; upon the Bank of a very fine River; 'tis a Ciry of the middle fort for bignefs, very popilons, and full of Nerchants. Abour three Miles from the Mouth of the River, is the fam'd Bar, where Ships ride and unlade: Over chis the Channel is very fair to the City-fide, and able to bear Veffels of so Tun Burthen.

Tlis fame Kiver runs dircetly to Bremporr, and as you come up it on the Right-hand Atands the Caftle, conifiderably lage, well walld and moaced, and as well defen? dedtand provided with Military Furniture.

Beforethe Caflds hies the Medom, which: is: a'fpucians pleafant Green, witrix calt MejidPole in the midet, aboure which they make their Paftimes on Feftival Days. The City lies all epen on the fide'of: thie Green \(Y\) burim: alliother parts 'tis ditith'd and fenc' \(\alpha\);- ara las three cianfidersble Gates; without , one of whichs is: 2 fine Grove of Mangr-Trees, where the Citizens ufe:to go out and Bath quer. There is a good Alplandicar, or Cuittom-EHoufe, and a Market-place for Horfes and, Caide; with feperal other Conreniences, berter to be eaken by Sighit than Report and Defcription.
The moft confiderable Thingswithout the Gares are (belides. the Grove of Mango's) the fair Pond noe far off is, threc Quarters of a Miic in compals, and furiousnded. on evcry fide with Srone-fteps, and, beautiful Tombs, with a large paid Courr, and great Trees, with an Aibour rais'd in it, where the Indian fick es, or Holy Men, fit and thew their Piery in Sate.
Crols rhe. Warer ftands a fweet litrle Town call'd Ra- Emen nell, the lnhabiranes of which are quize a different People, and freak another Language; they are all of them Seamicn by Einployment, and go there by the Name of Naires, which may be ecry well derifid from N.zut.e, and makes cheir Niame and Bulinesis agree perfeotly rogerher. The strects here are narrow, bur che Houfes giaceful and well built, with very high Steps before every Door: But tis the pleafant Gardens that charm the Citizens of Surar. and invice them to come oret and pass away fo many Hours as they do at this place. I know of nothing to a bate the Plealure of thete lovely Walks, but the infinite Number of great Bass thar take iup their Lodging in the Mulitude of Tres ; there they hang by the Claws in the Boughis, in Bus. ucli valt Cluftos; as wou'd furprize a Man to fee ; bus the Noile and Squecling they make is fo intolerable, that rweres sood Dced, to bring two or three Pieces of Ordnance, and lcour the Trees, that the place might be rid of fuch a Plague as they are to it. The Wincer begins ar The treate Surct about the beginning of func, and holds to the latter and Sabses end of Seprember; but not with continual Rains, as'ris at Gom, \({ }^{*}\) bur with grear uncertainty, and as much varicty of Weacher, Wind, Rain, and Thunder. It always raties irs Farewwell of them with a cracl Srorm, which rfiey call the Tuffon; which is alfo uncertain as to the degree of its Violence and Fury; bur for the moft part, obferves this Ytated Courfe to come with extremity cvery two or three Year.

The Monfons for the South ferre here in April and Scpromber, for the Red Sea, in February and March: Ships come hither from the Soutl, in December, Fanuary, and February: Froin the Red Sec,, in the beginning of September, fter the Rains: From Ormus in Noocmber.
Ler us remote the Scene now from Surat to Nec.impore, Nasenpari one of the firt Towns of grear Nore in my way to Agra. In this Road begins thar long Ridge of Mountains that runs from Amedsvar; crofs this part of the Conntry, and amongt which Bader the troublefome Rebel has feveral Strong-holds, and has fortified himfelf to well, thar all the Forces of the Great Mogul are not able to injure him ; and this Series of Mountains continnes ir felf as far as Bramporf.
The next grear Town is Dryta, encompalsd almont poriz round with a River, ftanding like an 1 Iland in the midft of a molt delicious Country thar lies abour it; and Bader Bader: its next Noighbour of Norc, a Town as unpleafanr as the formor was agrecable; a Diry Hole, a Den of Thieves and remarkable for nothing cle, bur its Dirr, and Dirry People; except the Quantities of Wine made here, of the Frut they call Meroa. This is a very fweet and lufcious Froit, the Winc of it pleafing enough, but my own Experience proved it not wholfome, unles well burnd.
Sevcral of thele Towns thar lic hercabouts, are under the Command of a cerrain Gentile Rrja, who acknowledges the Sorcreignty of the Great Mogul; but upon Courtcfie as it were, and jult as ir pleafics him. He lives An hdim indced, at prefonr, in Pcace and Amity with him, and Roik, mid rends his Annual Prefents; and befides, leaves one of his bin surgat Sons at Bramport, for a Pledge of his Friendinip: But then if he Mou'd do otherwife, the Morul can't help himFeif; for the Rejrc has fuch a Guard of inacceffible Mouncains abour him, that he may bid Defiance almoft to all the Armics in the World. Befides, tho' he may be befieg'd in thofe Mountains, yer they can never ftarve him there ; for there's abundance of good Pafture, Grain, and Founcains of Warer, upon che higheft part of Whem, fo that if he did fall our with the Mogul, and rake up Arms, he had Narure of his fide, and the Fruirfulnels of his own Territories wou'd fupport him in his Rebellion. But then did he let an Army pals undifturb'd, to the very Foor of his Mountains, they coud never ger up to him; for all |the Paffes to his two principal Ciries, ase prodigionny formifet (cfiere's eighty Forst an leaft fratieral ap and down to fecare them), End then they are Io namow, fixit no more shan two Men can march 1-briaft: The Names of thefe swo Crics are Snlere and Muliere, each of which have.two mighty Caftes to defend thein.
Eebar Sba, this Moguls Father (a Soldier as capable of managing an Enemy to good purpofe, as moft India has had), found this Mountaniecr too ftubborn for him; tie fecmi feven Years a befieging him, and ait laft was forcid to compornd, giving him feveral Towns, upon Condition of fome poor Acknowledgment of Sovercignty to him, and his Sncceffors: And this was the wilct part of his Conduct in the whole Affair: For in - horr, withour this Agivenache; his Merchants cou'd never have had any Sccurity in rasting along this Country.
My founcy from the fe Towns to Bramport, was troublefome cnough; pattly upon the Accounr of Thieves thar infected the Roads, and arr ill Dittemper (the Bloodyfux): goren by drinking the Warer of Sindken Rircr Town that lay in the Road.
The Decmis alfo (who had juft beat thic Megul's Forces, and taken a ftrong Town from them, and cxtreamly brisk upon that Succels) were abroad in Parties, making all the Spoil they cou'd in the Mortu's Dommions; fo that 'rwas imporible to trivel with any Safty; withour a Gaard ant chis:Comfurt I necidentally mer with; in a pood Bo dy of Hoite, that convor'd me fecurcly to Bramport. This is a very great City, huic has a bafe, low, unpleakint Si: taztion a very unwholfome Air, and as bad Warcr about it: It has a large and well fortificd Caftle, ftanding upon the Bink of the River which comes from Surar; which is the onitr confiderable Omamene of that kind; the Cir has to ficw. The Vice-Rovs Gardens are indeed ver) tine and curious, but they lie fome rwo Cofe out of the Citr:
Clofe by the Caple-fide, in the River, ftands an Elephant carrd in Stone, with fo mach of the Lifc, as wel as all the exact Propertions of that Beaft; that anothet Elcphant that came down one Day to drink there, mittook it for a real Animal, like himfelf; and accordingly running againft is with ail his force, broke both his own Teeth by the Affuult,' bur coud make no Impreffion upon his Adtenfary
The:City was at this time as full of Soldicrs as ever it cou'd hold, and the Vice-Roys Camp lay between this and Badurpore, extendint a matter of two Cole in length; an the other fide, abour twenty Cofe diftance. lay the the Army of the Decanees encamp'd, confifting of ar leaf 50000 Men, threatning Bremport, and demanding the Surrender of ir. And ids cerrain, that chis place muft have been yielded up to them, if Sultan Pervis'sthe Prince) had nor come in the nick of rime, with a ftrong Army, prevent it.
Their Forces abour this place, all joynd togerher, are as good as 60000 Horfe, and 1500 Elcphanrs; Co rharchey match the Decances in number; yet before I wene from honce, News came, That a part of the Anmy was encirely roured.
We had Inteligence of a fref Lols the Portuguese had ar Sea by the Mallabrers: Their Elect confifting of fifty Frigats, and two Gallies, being upon the Malliber Coaft and in fome meafure diforderd and difpers'd chere by bad Weather: The Mellabars efpying thar advantage for an Onfct our of their Lurking-holes, purfued it prefenty; and O fired, funk, and rook the whole Armedo.
Under the Protection, and in the Company of the Go remour of this place, I conrinued my Journey to Agre Our Way lead us crols the grear Ridge of Mountains tha comes frum Amadrocr; not far from which paftage ftands the raft and mighty Caftle of Haffere. It's Atrongly feared upon the tops of the Mountains, has Paftures and Ponds abour it; and is is felf (by Report) big enough to emtretain above 40000 Horfe. Were ir nor for one unhappy thing, it would be abfolutely inininible, and a Man tha had the. Defence of fuch a Strong-hold as this, need nor fear being thrown our by any Force, exccpt thar of Light ning, or an Earthquake, thou'd do it. . Ir muft infallibly tire any Adverlary in the World, if it had but the adran tage of good Water; but the want of this Neceflary will not allow ir to hold out a Siege fo ftubbornly, as its own Strength wou'd eafily do. 'Twas by' this means that it came into the Power of Ecbar Sbe, who elfe in all probability had never taken it: In had ar that time 600 Pieces of Ordrance; and the Old Megul \(\cdot\) was almoft weary of his long Sicge: But the Water bred Worms, and othe infects, in luch multicudes, thar the Defendanss had a gricrous Mortaliry amongt them; by drinking of it; and to they were forc'd to come to 2 Compoficion, and deliver up the Caltic.
Ihis Progics in the Monntains, brought us to the Ru-

Ines of the ancient City of Mendow three Cofe of the Ruine of way. up to Which, is' raftly feep, and ftony; and fo natrow/ that. tis ins much as a Conch cah do to prefs along. On: the top, at the very edge of the Mountain, ftands the Gate : or Enirance, of this old Ciry, over whichis a handome Fort, and a Houfe of Pleafure .the Walls running allalong the fide of the Mountain, for many:Cofes togethicr.
The Ruines befpeak the City to have made a Noble Appearance when it was in its Glory; amongft: which thereare feveral pieces of fately Walls, Tombs, and Morkires ftill remaining. It was four Cofe long N. and Si and ar leaft ten or twelve, E: and W. and sect to the Eattward of ilt, lies good Pafture Ground, for the leingch of Ceveral Cofes. There are a grear mazaly fair Ponds rhas: lie fatrering up and down in the Mounrain abour the Ci:y, and Forss, ton well hanated and difpos'd.
The prefent City is but fimail, in comparifon with what Tae preser? the formet was; bur the Buildings of it are admirably Atrong, leatriful, and uniform, all of Stone; and the Gates of very high, that I believe there's norhing like hem in all Chriftendom. It has a Noble Palace, and ight againt that as fine a Moskis, in which are the Tombs of feveral ludicu Kings; who lic very pompouny interrd there.
The Turret that ftands by, is t7o Steps bigh, buif ound with Galleries and Windows to every Room, beanificd with ftately Porrs, Arches, and Pillars, and the Walls all inlaid with'a green Stone.
The unain Gare is excecding ftrong, and has 2 trecp afcencto it: Withour it are fix other Gates, all very fubtantial, and Courts of Guard berwecn Gate and Gare.
The Wall runs all alons the edge of the Mountain, with Flankers in feveral places up and down, and yer is the Afcent to very fteep of in felf, that 'ris hardly pofible. for 2 Man to climb up to any part of is on all Four.
This City was zaken by the prefent Mogul's GrandFather, Hamown Shre; from Sha Selim, one of the Indian Kings of Delly, whofe Anceftors had enjoyd it for above 400 Ycars: There was, ristruc, Force in the Cafe \(t\) bur if Treaton and Policy had nor given a good froke rowards it, the Race of the Old Indien Kings mighr have had their Dwelling here ftill.
And fince the Perfons here mention'd, were fome of thofe that were then upon the Stage, when thar remarkable Revolucion happen'd, that brought this Family into the Imperial Throne of India; it may be proper to give an Account of that Affair, in which che Fortunes of fo confiderable a Country as this is, under-went a Change fo very grear and furprizing.
The prefent Great Mogul, is the Great Grand-Son of The Story Babur King of Cabul, a Tartarien; and as npon the Deach of the conof the mighty Tamertanc, that vaft Empire had a greas diac, by tho aumber of Heirs amongit his Sons, and was divided into Moguls. :s everal perty King doms and Governments; 10 'is probable, that this of Cribul was one of the Fragments of tha broken Empire; and conkequendy Babur, either directly decended from Temerlenc, or ar leat had rome of thas Blood in his Veins. However, upon this Account ir is that the Grear Mrogul boafts fo highly of his Pedigree, and calls himfelf the Off-fpring of Temerlane; pretending 100 chat he is the Ninth, in a direet Lineal Defcear from him.
The Old Indian Kings making Delly, for the moft part their Royal Seat, this Bebur, with thisty or forty of his Nobles difguis'd like Fukerrs, came to the King Secandar's Courr, 'ris probable, eicher as Spies, or in order: 10 artempe fomething rowards the Conqueft of the Country They were quickly difcover'd thereby their Councanances tho' the Indien King had them fully ar his difpofe, yer he pard them, and gave them their Liberty, upon Condi cion of Babur's Oath, not to make War during that King's Life.

Bebur kept his Oath while Secander liv'd = but when his Son was in the Throne, thinking himfelf then difcharg'd from it, he fent Hamown, (this Mogul's GrandFarher) with a mighty Force, and feiz'd upon the whole Kingdom.

But the Conquerour was hardly ferted in his Throne before Sclim, an Indien Prince of the Royal Family, took up Arms to drive him our again: And the Marrer coming oo be fairly tricd by Batel, the Irdian got the Day, and the Tarter was forc'd to fly, and take Sanetuary in the King of Perfia's Court. But having obtain'da good Army of that King, he came back again into Indic, and then by the help of his Perfinns, carried all before him, and ever afcr that far free from difturbance.
The Tarrar being now poffefid of the Imperial Scat-2gain, Sjia Selime retir'd to the ftrong City, of Mandow, juf now dcfarib'd, and there fortified himfelf, holding it ont againt all the Power of Hamown, till Treachery (againt: which there is no Gpaird). work'd his Ruine. But yet, tho beaten our chence, he mainrain'd his Liberty all the Reign of Hamown, and a good part of his Son Ecbar's coo, ftill retiring from one Mountain to another, and defeating all the Plors of his Enemies laid to take him.
This City of Mendow, is faid to be buils abore 2 Thoufand Years fince, by one of the Old Indian Princes; and tis worchy of remembrance, as having been the Scenc of fuch importanr ACtions.

From hence we palsid through the plealant and Ferile Country of Malve, where there's alfo a valt deal of Opium. They give the Heads of Poppies two or three feratches, from whence diftils a Tear, which at firft is white, but afterwards congeald by the Cold, zurns of a reddifh Colour; bue 'ris a great deal of Pains they beftow in this Bufinels, for a fmall Matter of Profir; for the Heads are fmall, and drop their Tears very fparingly.

Between this and Gualere, are thefe Places of Note and Trade:

Sarampore, adorn'd with a firc Caftle, and TownHoufe, a large place, and famcus for Turbancs, and good Linen.

Cuckre, atounding with all fors of Grain, Victuals and Meroa-Winc:
Syrange, remarkable for irs Betele-Gardens.
Norwart, a Ciry of large Dimenfions, and handfomely built; its Caftle ftands upon a ftecp ftony Mouncain, with a very narrow Cawley leading to it, of more than a Mile's Afcent, defended with four itrong Gates, and Courts of Guard to crery one of them, bejond the fourth and laft of which no Stranger is permitred to \(\mathrm{cnter}_{\text {, }}\) without fpecial Orders from Courr. The Towers and Flankers, and ortier Contrivances for Defence, render is invincible by any thing bur Treafon; indeed, the whole Ridge of the Mouncain upon which the Ciry ftands, and is five or fix Cofes in compals, is fortificd loth by Air and Nature, to a wonderful degree. This was formerly the Boundary; or Garc of the Kingdom of Mendow, and was in thofe Days much fronger, as well as more fplendid than'ris now.
Gunkere is a City as beauriful, and in many Refpects more remarkable than the former. The ruggy Cliff upon which the Caftle is feared, is ar leaft fix (fome lay eleven) Cofes in compafs, and all inclos'd with a verv ftout Wall And here is the like narrow Cawicy, wirh Gates, Barricadoes, and Courts of Guard, as ar Narwar; and the fame Caution us'd in the Admifion of Strangers. The Governour's Lodging has 2 grear deal of Pomp and Curiofity about ic; it has abundance of high Terrets gile at the rop and the Walls all inlaid with green and blew Srone, fuch as I think is hardly to be fecm any where but in Indin Ins place one the thre famid rifons. \(\begin{gathered}\text { Noblemen }\end{gathered}\) and all of high Qualiry, that fall under the Prince's Dif plealure, the other two are at Ramimore, a place not re ry far from hence; and ar Rotas, 2 Cafte inthe Kingdom of Bengrif.
Thofe that are fent to Retus, are furh as are condemned to perpetual Imprifonment, our of which there's very Celdom any Redemption: But all that go to Rantimore have the Black Mark fur Exccurion fer upon them, and never none come back from that faial place.
When the Criminal has been there abour fome two Months, the Governour of the Caftle brings him up ro the rop of the Wall, and gives him a Difh of Milk; which frer he has druak off, he is thrown down upon the Rocks.
There's abundance of fine Ground, and Ponds, abour chis Mountain of Gualere; as alfo delicare Mcadows, and Gardens of Pleafure, enclos'd with 2 ftrong Wall ar the foot of the Hill, which Meadows are for the fecure feeding of Horfes in rime of War. There are feveral Houles \(t 00\) on the Town-fide, entircly cut out of the main Rock, in which a part of the Trading Pcople live; and wha prodig:ous Labour, as well as Art and Skill, fuch a Work muft require, to hew and form the valt integular Clifs, into convenicns Habitations, a Man can't cafly imagine Heraboits were, formerly, the Frontier Lines of the Kingdom of Delly, bordering on that of Mandow, as chofe of Mer:iow it felf, abour Guilere, on that fide.
Berween this and figra, lies the Town of Doulpore, the more fagnificent, Forrs and Caftles more furprizingly ftrong, and a greater Variey of all thefe; chan India can. To sec all the Inftances of iss unbornded Riches and Greatnets, and State and Grandeur of its ancient Kings, in thofe Monumencs, and rare Pieces of Antiquity, remaining to this Day; togecher with all the Demonftrations of admirable Art and Contrivance in chofe illuftrious Buildings, which. ir prefents to a Travellers Eyc, is enough to convince him, that the Country was as much wrong'd, as it muft be litule known, to have the CharaCter of Barbarous fo long given to it.
This tedious and hazardous foumey, had now a Pc-serade. riod fer to is, by our happy Airrival at Agra: Here I found Caprain Hazkins, in no tmall Favour and Figure, as this Court, and with not a litule Work upon his hands; of countermining the Jefuites, and breaking the Mcafures taken by them, and their Parry, for the Deftruction of the Euglifh Intercft and Trade in this Country.
The Ciry of Agra (tho' now it has fcarce a Rival in all Indin) has rifen but very lately to this degree of Greatnels and Fame; it is now an Imperial City, bur 'rwas an ordinary Village in Ecbar's time, who removed his Court from Felipifs: hither. Tis vaftly large, and populous, beyond mealure; but the Sureets for the moft part narrow and dirty : There are fome that may becall'd ftarely, as the grear Batar, and afew more; but the biggeft part of the Ciry is far from coming up to that Character.It lies in the form of a Half-moon, bearing our to the Land-ward fome five Cofe in lengch, and as much by the River-fide; this is the River Gemini, which is as broad as the Thames ar London, and rans with a very fwift Current, difcharging it felf into the Gang as at laft.

Upon the Banks ftand the lofty Palaces of the Nobilits and the admirable Caltle of this place, recken'd beyond the certi moft of that kind in the whole Eaftern Worid. It is between three and four Mile in compafs, cnclos'd with a Wall of frong fquare Stone, about which is caft a large Ditch, with feveral Draw-Brudges; beffides this, tis defended wich various Bulwarks, and regalld with a Countcricarp withour, fome fifeen Yards broad: And as if this was not Guard enough, there are two more as fubftantial Walls as this wichin ic. The Gates, and Courts, and Buildings belonging ro it, are roo many for a tranfient Defriprion: the mighty Caftic of Agra is a Subject fufficient for an al moft entre Volume by it felf.
To return to the City : Alcho it has she Defence of fix very fufficient Gates, yer it has no Walls to complete the Strengrh of in, bur only a Ditch, and that nor broad neither, nor full of Warer; bur on the contrary, quire dry : Withour chis, lic all the Suburbs, which are very large, the City and they making one Way feven Mile in lengrh, and three in breadth. The Houfes of all the conGderable People are built with Brick and Srone (with flat Roofs); bur thote of the Commonalty are of Wood; and have Mud-Walls, and thatch'd a grear part of them; by which means Fircs once kindled, do make horrid Work in thofe Parts of the Ciry. And this was the Cale ar my wor bcing there; for a good while together che Fire was hard-Eire to-nth Yever out in one place or other; fo that fereral Thouands, of Houfes werc confum'd, befides 2 greas number of Inhabitants and Cartle that perifid roo.
This Court was now alarm'd with News, of the ill 3 jots. Succels of the Was managed againft the Decances: Amdn oonger, 2 Town in thofe parss, was fallen into their hands be vaft Army of the Mcgul, which was upon the March to selieve it, being forc'd by Drought and Famine, to retire back to Bramport, by which lois of time che place was tire

The fighting part of the Army was ar leaft 100000 Horfe; but thentake in all the Aticndants, and Hangerson, the Managers of Elephants and Camels (of which there was an incredible number) and 'ris reckon'd, that the whole Body of the Camp, amounted to 500000 , if nor fix. They car and drank up the Country as they pals'd along, the largett Scores were exhaufted, and the Rivers nor able to fupply them with Drink; 2 fmall quanticy of Water wasiold for a Roupic, and not enough oo be had neither
In the mean time, the cunning D.cenees march'd about fpoiling the Country before them, curting off all Inter courle between them and places of Supplies; and ever now and ther, vexing them with falle Alarms, Skirmifies, and one Straragem or other; fo thar in thort, the whole Army was in a very dangerous and declining Stare. Thus infulted by the Encmy, and befides half-ftarv'd in to the bargain, they were forcd to leave the Ciry for a Prey, and march back to Bramport; bur well leffend in their Numbers by chat time they got rogether, hating loft above 70000 Horfe, befides Elcphants, Camels, and ocher 70000 Catcel.

This is the Fruit of fuch monftrous, unconfcionable great Armies: A Prince had far better forbear thofe needlefs Demonftrations of Pomp and Power, in fuch valt Preparations as thefe are, than confult his Granderr in the giving of them, when it is likely to be atcended with fuch faral Confequences. So huge a Body muft needs be flow and heavy in irs Morions, lefs capable of Order and Go and hend whether they fight or no, and do Service to the Counrry, muft ftill be devouring it where they are.
The Morui's Affairs went crols in orher places too, be fides Decan, abour this time: For Potana, a confiderable City in the Kingdom of Porrop, was taken, and fack'd, and the Caftle, with all the Treafure of ir, furpriz'd \(b_{i}\) the Rebels: The Cirizens fled, ahd left the King's Treawire to look to ir felf. for which Exprefion of their Caxe lure to look to and loyalcy, fome of them were cnt hither the ds reccive the Rewardse, Womens Actire, and carry'd abour the Sereers upon 3fres, and the next Day- to lofe rheir Heads.

The King, this Month, made a grear Noife atour Chri fianity commending is in Publick, before his Nobics and as the fame time railing at Mabomet, and the alceran, as good as calling the one a Chear, and the other a Pack of Lyes and Fables.
Perhaps his Loffes pui him into this Pert with his Religion, the Goodnefs of which he meafured by the Succefs of his Arms, and the Sharpnefs of bis Sword, as the firft Planters of thar Impofture did. Howeren, he was fo far fallen our with Mdilomet, that he woud make threc yoting Princes (his Brother's Sons) of another Flock ; and thetefore pur them into the Hands of the Jefuites, to be inftructed in the Chritian Religion, in order to Baprifm which was afterwards adminiftred in a very folcman man ner.
Bur all this while, (to fpeak the piain trath) here was no Quarrel between him and his Prophet, nor no Love to the Chifitian Religicn: The Jeluxes perhaps might pof fibly expect ancther socd Chrittoning and think of ha sing the Megul himeleff at the Fone in a litale rime (who if it had been fo, cou'd trave had no lefs than the Pope for a Godfarher); ;urt they were very much miftaken in inim, and all their fond hopes of his Concern atour cheir Religion If they have a mind to fubmic to the Rites of his Religion and be circumaciz'd, they may; bue Ill engage (for all bis Raillery upon the Alcoran) tharthell never be baptiz'd This Action of his, was only 2 policick Contrivance for his own Security ; he made thefe young Princes Chriftians, to make them odious to the People, and cou'd nor have raken a more effectual Courfe to do it: 'Tis infallibly certain; by this means he has made ic imporfible for them ever to come into the Throne, or fo much as to rixe po fuch a degrec of Popular Fiteem and interett, 25 to be likely to do him, or his Children, any mifchief.

The porisuguefe continued to be upon the lofing Hand in thefe parts ftill; thirty of their Frigates being now catt 2way ar the Barr of Surat: This was the Eftent of their Over-eagernefs to get our, (before the Winter was over) wacatch fome of our Englifb Strips; thofe of them thar efcapd the Finry of the Sea, were afterwards forced to crave Relicf at our Dcors, whom they were going to planderaind deftroy.

The Affirs of Trade at this time, obliged micto make 2 Journcy from algra to By hin ; my chict Bufincés being to buy Indico, which Commodity that place abounds with. All along this Road from Agra, as far as Afmerc, (which is 130 Cofes) are Stonc-Pillars creeted ar erery Coreend ; and fereral finceMoholls, or Summer-Palaces richly furnift'd and firted for the Enterainment of the King and his Women, whenthey pleafe to come ro any of them.

The firt place of great Nore I came to, was the famous City of Ectiprefe, defervedly call'd fo, tho yec an unfinith'd, and partly a muinous Cicy. In was the Noble Defign and Work of Ecbrr Slsa, who remored his Cour from hence to Agra, becaufe the Warer hereabours proved brackifh and impure, and bred Diftempers amongft thofe that drunk it: So the City now almoft ready to vic with any in India, was left condemn'd to undergo the Decays of Time, and to moulder away into Ruines. The Wall and the Gates, hold out pretry well ; bat the Buildings are very much ioft in the middte, and a good part of it is um'd ino Gardens.

Fam Seges eft ubi Troja fuit.
And here one may fee whole Fields of Indicos and other Grain, where the Auguft. Buildingso feriporic once lifted tip their heads.
The King's Palace and Moholl, (now wearing our apace) were once eicry way worthy the Magnificence of thic Builder, if one may gucfs by whac Time bas fpared : And the Bazar, or Market-place, half a Mile long, paved with broad Srone, and cncircled with Buildings, made no lefs fine an Appearance.
Bur the Perfection of all, for rare Workmanhip, and Ornament, both within and withour, is the Moskir, whicia had it been finin'd, 'ris believed, 'twould have been fupetiour so moft of the glorious Buildings of the Eerf. Hardly any thing of thar kind is rais'd higlicr than the Gate of it, having a matter of thitry Sreps of Afcent up to it; which tegether with the Loftinefs of the Building is felf, makes ir cafic to fee the rop of ir ar cighe or ten Mixles d:ftance ; and there's fearce another Gate that yields fuch a Profpect in the World befides.
The Area of the paved Court within, is full fix rimes as large as that of the Exchange at London, and the Piazza's more than twice as broad, and as many rimes as bigh as rhofe of the Exchange; and which is the more remarkable, all the Pillars are of one entire Stene
The Builder of this rare Fabrick, was not King Echer, bur a Moorifh Kalender, or Vomary, that lies buried here: Befides a large Stock of Piety (which the; fay he had) he had fo much of the Blefings of chis World, as to afford to build fuch 2 Church as chis, and to lay himfolf in a Noble Sepulchre; which befides the rich Painings, and other Ornaments of it, is all inlaid with Morher of PearlThis City was ar firft calld Sykany, which fignifics Se king or Huwti; f ; bur afterwards 'twas chang'd ro Fetipors, that is as much as to fay, 1 Place of Cortens, or Hearts D: fire beamind The Reafon of which thall be given, when we come to fpeak of the Town of A/merc, from whence the Caufe of 15 is to be deriv'd.
Withour the City is a very large Pond, which rogether with a dcal of excellenc Fib, and Wild-Fowl, affords great Quantitics of chat Plant which bears the Hermo-The Eruit dactyles; and 'xis very common in all the Ronds abour Harmodact Agra, running all orer the Surface of the Warer. The defreibed. Eruit before cis ripe, is forr and render, white, and of a mealioh ratte icry much carcn in indir, bur certainly of a very cold Narure: 'Tis inclos'd in a woody hard Shell, thrce-comer'd, having at cach Aingle a oharp pricking Point, and is fomewhar indented on the fides.
Here was another fort of Fruit too, in the manner of a Gobler, flat on the top, of a foft greenif fubftance on the comberatry outfide, and wichin containing fix or cighr fmall Fruits, Fke Acorns, ench inclos'd in a peculiar Membrane ra fing like an Acorn, or Nur, and at furt of a greenifh Colour; in the midft is a fmall grecr Sprig, of a malignani Nature: The Indians call rnele Camolaibrchery, as they do he HermodaCis, Syngana Between Ferijore and Byann, are two orther Towns, Cari- Caninnisi newn, and O:then, of fome Note, for the Quantities of \({ }^{\circ}\). Indico they make ycarly, c (pecially the latter, which is exceeded by none in the Production of this Commodiry, unlefs ir be Byanain felf
This has formerty been a beautiful Ciry, and of grear bulk', bar now lies for the moft part in Kaines. 'T was \({ }_{\text {Bjona: }}\) : the Seat of one of the Potane Kings; and in its flouribhing Dectrmber State, had its Walls extending at leaft cight Core in conth along the Clifts, being defended in other places by alld Bioni a Narural Fortification of Rocks, fo high and cragged, in Selbamka that'rvas impofible for any Adverfary to foale them. The wherere th nhabitants are 2 poor fort of People, that feed Catcel, modioo is and make Butter and Cheefe; thicy. live up and down a-naghly de: mongtt the Ruines, minding only their Dairies, and orher here more Country Affairs.
particulatly,
This place, like many others, affords plenciful Inftane and at lange aes of the Magnificence of the Old Indicn Kings, in the Tombs, Monuments, rain'd Palaces, and ochar Pieces of Antiquity here ro be feen: But the Ruines are not only the Effects of Tine, bui pardy of the conquering Power of Etbar Sbar, who beat one from hence thas Indian Prince Seliom (before-mention'd) and demolifh'd moft of the For ificarions of ir, as he did at Mandow.

The valt Quanrities of Indico (for which this.place is (o famous), come off from 2 Spor of Ground nor above wenty or thirry Cofe long. And here it may nor be our indico de: of the.way, to run ovcr the Narural Hiftory of this Com-Etribid, modiry, to See ir in irs firft Rife, and by whar Sreps of Management 'as broughr into that Form' in which it appears to us.
Ir is the Product of the Herb Nill:. This Plant grows in Form not much unlike our Chich-Pcafe, having a fmall Leaf fomething refembling that of Sena, vet fhorter and broader than thar, and let upon a very frort Sralk, the litule Branches that fhoot out of which, are hatd and woody, like chole of Broom. It ufually grows not above a Yard figh; and the Sralk; which comes to its greatcit bignefsthe third Year, is-nevermuchb thickerthan a Man's Theinb. The Seed is inclofed in a fmall round Cod, a tour an Inch long, bearing fome cefemblance to that of Fenugreck, except that it is blunter:at borh ends; it's ripe abour \(N\) Noonder, aind then garherd. It carries a friall Flowe like that of Hearts-calc.

The Sced once fown, holds for threc Years, and produces three fereral foris of. Indico, differing much from one another in goodnes and perfection. That of the firft Year is calld Norec, and is a reddim weightr; Indico, finkins in Water, and not yer adranc'd to its beft and moft mature fate. Thar of the fecond Year which they call Cyres) is rich and fine, of a pure Violes Colour, and (wims apen rhe Waice. The Creteld, which is that of the third \(X\) car, is grofs, black, and weighry, by much the wort of the three; the P!ant being now impoverifh'd, and in a declining Condition.
The time for cutting the Herb, is in the Monchs of ALgusft and Scptember, after the Rains; which Work being donc, 'tis thrown into a long Ciftern, where it's prefs d down hard with Stones,' and then corcr'd orer with Water, and fo lies ftecping there for fome Days, till the Water is well tinctur'd with the. Virtue of the Plan-, and has gor the purer part of its Subitance intoit. This Water they ler run forth into ancither Ciftern where they ftir it about well with Staves, and then when 'ris fettied, they skim of the clear Warer ar top. This Operation they repeat fo often, 'rill there's nothing bur a shick Saliment remains ar the botrom of the Ciftern; this they take out, and frread upon Clochs, fetring is to dry in the Sun; and when tis a litete hardned, they make ir up inno lite!e Ralls, and lay them to dry fome time fardicer in the Sand. They chufe to rake this Courfe to dry it now, becaufe any thing, elfe but Sand wou"d drink up the beautiful Colour of it. So alfo, if the Rains fall upon it, as it lics there, it cersainly lofes its Glofs and Colour; and thus depravid they give is the Name of Aliad.

The beft Indico:oughit to be only that of the fecond lears growith, tho there are fome that mix the Crops of all the three Years; and lay them a ftecping in the Water together; which is a wrong borh to the Cuftomer, and the Commoditics. Thefe things are required in that which pretends' to be the belt Indico, and may: Cerve ro diftinpuifhir by:- A pure Grain, a Violer Colour, good Glofsin

From Byane I return'd to Agra again; the News was now frech, thar the Decrues had fucd for Peace, and offer'd to reftore all that they had taken from the Megul; who yet was refolv'd to caity, on the War againt them, and ris'd more Forces forthat purpore.

I hadnctrefted long bere, at a \(3 \pi\), before I was obili ged to undertake a Journcy to L-joif, as. well to recover Moncys there owing, as to pur off part.of our Indico gotten as Byenr; which there was fome hiope of doing to advan:age.

In this Road, the firt place of Note was Acabreperc, an illuitrious Ciry in Anciens Times, and fill famous for the Antiquities of the Indian Gobins, or Saints.
A litale thion of is are feveral large Vaults, filld with Pagods, montrous and frightful Images of Stone, much rolorted to bv the Indians, and as mach adord and honourd with Varieries of Offerings.
The Ciry of Della was the next remarkableStage: This fands in a delighrful Plain, encompalsd with curious Gaidens and Monuments; 'tis a matrer of two Cofe in length from Gate to Gate, and has the Fate of a grear many ocher Noble Cities of India, to lie pardy in Ruines. In rhis place the Imperial Crown is fer upon the Hiad of the Grent Mogul; and the Cercmony muit (by the Laws of the Country) be perform'd here, orherwife che Prince is look'd uponas no better chan an. Ufurper. Herc are the Tombs of at leaft twenty of the Old Poran Kings, very fair and.ftarely; and that alfo of Hemoron, the. prefent King's Grandfather, rogether with feveral ochers of his Wives and Children, thair lie baried abour hitra.
The Ruines of the Old Delij lica licic diftance from bence, feparated by an Arm of the Gemini, over which is a Scone-bridge of cleven or rwelve Arches. Particularly there appears amonge thefe. Ruines, the Carkale of that ancient Building, calld the Cnflie, thas had to the: nember of Fify two Gares; a thing of furprifing Clory and Sratclinefs in its time, but now worn out and disfigured to the laft degree.. There's faid to be no lefs than four Cirics of this Name, and all withen five Cole of one another; 'of which rhreewere buile by the ancient: Po:are Kings,:and the other (where the Tombs are) by Silim before \{poken of.
A lirtle tejond Dellj are the Relicks of a ftarcly Hunx-ing-houfe, built by an ancient Indian Monarch, which has vcry great Curioftics of Stonc-work about it. " Amonget 'Some fr, the reft theres a Pillar-all of one entire Stone, fome Twen thit the in ty four Foor high, and as many under Ground (as the \(I n\) - Grech and dians fay) having a:Globe, and a Half-moon at top, and that dirs divers Infcriptions upon it:; this, according to the Tradi- obelak med tion of the Country, a certain Imdian King wou'd have ly Mtram takeniup and removid; bur was. pretented in his: Defign der theGrae by a mulcitude of Scorpions that infefted the Workmen. Bur'tis ccrmin, that there are a grear many of thofe huge Pillars fixd thus decp in the Ground, upand down in lidia; and 'ris not long ago, that there was one found buried near Fripore, that was a hundred Cubits in Iength which the King order'd'ro be remov'd to \(19 \times s\); ber 'twas broke by the way. And tis remarkable, that moft of the rndian Quarrics (efpecially thofe about Eit:perc) do afford 2 Stone of thar nature, thar may be wrought almoft any way by the Workman, either cleft like loge, or fawn like Planks into raft great picces. To as to feil Rcoms, or corer Houles with it, if they had a mind.
Abour Tcmaffar begins a long Ridge of Mountains, ex- Tamefrion cnding towards \(L\) cior, the rops of which are all cover'd Sal Ammon with Snow : This Ciry is remarkabic chiefly for its Pagods, revercnc'd through all Indie; and its Sal Armoniack Piss, ar a litele diftance from it.
Surinam is celebrated for the delicate Garden the King has chere, which is more than four Cofe in ccmpals, yields all the Varicties of rare Plancs, Flowers, and Fruics, and is rinted for 50000 . Roupies per Annum. The two main Crofs-walks of it, are full forty Foct broad; and cighe high, planted on bock fides with Cyprefs's, and Warer in neat Stone-Channels, running along the middle. In the Centre of it tands an Octagonal Mohol, the Centre of which is a fair. Pond allo, abour which all the Lodginss of the Mohol are pleafantly difposid : The Bui.ding is of a fine Indian Stone, and very pompounly fer our with Painting and Carving in the infide.
Having efcap d nor a few Dangers in the way, by Fotmon. means of the Thievin Pcople thar lic abroad for Spoil in Conexio thefe parts, I arrived at Lahor, the more Northern Meropolis of this valt Empire. This ceriaindy is one of the la Defare greatelt Cities of the Ealt; and pcrhaps, when all is donc plion o it that this King defigns, it may be one of the fincft. If cakes in near Twenty four Cofe in Circuit; and the City and Suburbs is fix Cofe thorough : There is a Dirch now cafting up round the whole Circumference, and'ris defign'd thortly to be inclos'd with a Wall too. The Sercers are fair, and well-pav'd; the Buildings lofty, moftly of Brick-work, and fer our with all Curiofities of Carying bour the.Doors and Windows.
The Caftle ftands upon the River Rewoce,: which falls into the Indur, and carries Boars of fixty Tum; and upwards: It has twelve: Noble Gates, nine opening to the Land-fide, and three to the River. 'Tis inhabited chietty by Trading People, Bannimns, and Handicraft-men; but a'l the Whire Pcople of any Note, gencrally rake up their Lodgings in the Suburbs.
As for the Rarities of the Cafte, or Palace, they are by far too numerous, as well as too glorious, to be juftly reprefented by a Morr Defcriprion: The Mohols, the Courcs, the Galleries, the Roons of State, are almoft endlefs; and to give an Idca of the extravaganc. Richnefs of the Furniture of thefe, it'may be fufficient to fay, that in the King's Lodgings; the very Walls and Ceilings are all overlaid with the pureft Maffy Gold; and the ochers: are as prodigally rich and fumptuous in their proportion. There's a vaft number of ftarcly Pietures hanging i pand down in the Galleries, and Publick Rooms, all drawn ar full leng:h. Here's the whole Royal Family, down frim Belur, that made the Conqueft of Indif, to thisprefent M. gut. And befides thefe, all the principal Noblemen of the prefent Government, the Mabometan Emis's and Cems, and the Gemtile Reja's, or Narive Iidion Princes, thar are of any grear Powerr, or Figure about the King. For Curiofities without Docrs, the King's Garden :may be reckon'd amongft the chief : Here India and Europe feem to liecogether in the fame Spor, which prefens the Eye with the Vegetable Varicties of both.. And, indecd, the Councry almoft all along, on the further fide of the River, is cxtreamly pleafant in this refpect, yielding fuch a fine Propect of Gardens, and charming Walks, that hardly any thing can be more agreeable.
The more Northern Pars of India, about Caluts were very much difquicted at this time; the Petans, that fhelter themfelves in the Mountains, came down with a great \(A \cdot D\) Force, and fack'd that importans place, carring off a grear Boory. They are a fort of People that live in perperual Dofiance to the Mogul, and all his.Powercan'ttame them perfectly ; but erer now and then, they will fally our from their Strong-holds in the Mountains, and fpoil and ravage-the Country:

iNote.

The Wars bewteen the Tarks and Perfinns, pur a foop as prefent to0- to the Trade abour Candabar; cthe laver had raz'd the famous Ciry of Faurx, and.fpoilld the Country abort, ttopping. ap the Wells of Warer, and laying all watte, to hinder the progrefs of the Turkifh Army ; pipon which account the Merchanis were nonplus'd, and dared not pals on beyond Candabar.
Having giver this Account of thy Journeys to thefe two principal Cities of India, with the moft remarkable Ob lervarions of the chief places I vifired as I pals'd; it may be requifire to fubjoyn the Characters of fome other Places - of Nore and Fame in this mighry Country, which lie in the grear Roads to Agre and Labor, as they wun from feveral parts of the Kingdom.
- From Labor Northwards to Cabul, are few places of grear note or fienificancy: Surcrood, a fmall place in thas Road, has 2 Medicimal River running along by it; the Water looks nor of the ordinary Colomr, bur red ; and being drunk, has the Reputation of procuring a good Appetitc.
In your paffing berween Lalor and chis place, you may take Notice of the Ponds ar Haffinabdrel: No Drops of Morning-Dew, are, in comparion clearer and purer than this Water; bur the pleagantef Spectacie is that of the Fifh, which have Golden Rings hung in their Snours, and may be very eafly feen with thofe Oraments playing up and down, by reafon of the perfect Tranfparency of the Water: This was the Frolick of Ecbar Sha; who, ir feems, was refolv'd, that Ponds fo rare and fine, thou'd have Fif cucty way as exrraordinary.
Cabul (the firf Sear of the Maguls Family) is a large and fair Ciry ; but feems to come fhort of the Charaeter of the ftarely Cities of Indin already defcrib'd.
'Tisreckon'd between two and three Months Journey by Caravan, from hence to Cafcar in Tertart: This is a large Kingdon, and the chief Ciry of Trade in it is Tarcbaum, or Xrrmancan, from whence comes Silk, Porcelan, Musk, Rhubarb, and orher Merchandize; bur ir comes thither from Cbina. The Merchants always pirch their Tencs withour the Gate of this City, and lie there wirh their whole Cargo, fending fome ten or fifreen into the Ciry to do Bufinels; for the Tartars will not permit any great Numbers to enter at once.
But ro retarn from this litrle Walk into Tartary, to the more fafe and pleafanr Roads of Irdia.
You go almoft direetly Northward from Labor, to the fair and fruitful Country of Caffrmere: The principal City bears the Name of the Prorince; a ftrong place feared on the River Babas. The Country abour it abounds with Varicties of Fruits Grain Saffon, and (which are not to be forgotem, amongt its other excellent Products) very finc and beautiful Women: Here" are made alifo the rich Pomberries, which go up and down all India. This Councry is cold, and fubject to grear Frofts and Snows, in that part of it which borders upon Tartary = "Tis Teparated from it by a Fence of Mountains, fo fteep and rugged, that no Caravans can pafs this way. Yet fome People a foot make a flift to climb the Mountains, and deal with the Tartars for Musk and Silk, tho' they are forced to carry on their Trade by the help of Engines, lerring down, and drawing up their Goodsto one another, from the tops of the Precipices.
When I made my Joumey to Agra, I went the more direct and ftraight way from Surist, to that place: But there is another Road between thefe two Civies, that goes fomething more about to the Weftwand, and takes in thefe confiderable places not hithermo defarib'd.

Afmerc, feated on the rop of a prodigious fteep Mounrain, frengthned with mighry Walls, and a Fort almoft invincible. Ir fhews feveral remarkable Piecres of Anti quity, but the moft celebrated of all, is the Tomb of a famous Indian Saint who lies buried here. 'Tis vifited with almoft as much Derotion and Reverence by the Indims, as Mribomst's is by che Turks and Arabs: Pilgrimages are made to it, Vows and Prayers liberally pourd our overir, fo great is the Reputazion of this Holy Man amongft them.

The Great Ecler, in a Fir of warm Affection, went his Pilgrimage hither a Fcor, from dgra; the Walk was ar leatt 130 Ccfc, but his-Bufinefs was urgent, and the Favour grear that he had to ask. He was at that time wholly withour Children, and no profpect of filling the Imperial Throne of Indin with one of his own Blood, after his Deceafe; and therefore to procure an Heir, he took the probable Courfe of vifring the Sepulchire of this Saint. And it fecms it was to very grear parpofe; for now in a litule time three Princes came to Town, and the Succeffion in his own Line, was put out of doubr. The prefent King was one of the Fruits of that Devotion, and e part of the Bleftingof the Pilgrimage ; burclitic did the old Prince imagine what a Blefling wis pur into his hands when he came. Cou'd he have foreceen things, no doubs (as much as he wanted an Heir) if he cou'd have had ino orher, he won'd nor have urudged almoft 200 Mile a Foor, to pray for a Son that ihou'd afretwatd endeavour to fend him out of the World before his time. However; 'twas upon this occefion, that that Prince, to exprefs his Joy and Content, gave the Name of Fetipore to that place now call'd fo; and fer up a Row of ftarely Pillars all ar long the Way from Agra to Afmerc, the place that had. been fo fortunate to him: Ar every Cofc-end is one of thefe Columns, and at every eight Cole diftance, is a fine Mohol erected.
The Scpulchre, with the Buildings abour it, is a very Noble Thing; 'tis as rich and fine as a prodigal blindZeal and Superftition, might "be fuppos'd to make a thing, which ir declares the higheft Refpect for. You pais chree large Courts before you come to it, the firt of which is Wear an Acre of Ground, and is paved with Black and White Marble ; the ochers are proportionally large, bur the nearer to the Sepulchre, the more extravagant the Pomp and Glory of them. There is fuch an Opinion of the Sanctity of all thefe Places adjacent to the Tomb, that no Perfon dares walk here, but with a naked Foor; you muft be quite bare, or nor pretend to rread any part of chere hallow'd Courts.
Procceding in this Road, the furprizing Caftle, or Fort The cante of Gelour lies in your way. This is calld the Fronier of celown. the Kingdom of Guzzurat, upon which ir borders, and for Strength it felf almof equivalent to a Kingdom. The whole-Building is no lefs than eight Cofe in Circumference, and the Steep of che Mountain on which it ftands is abour three Cofe; the Cauley broad enough for rwo Men to pals a-breaif, is walld on borh fides. and guarded with Gates and Portcullis's, and all the Conrivances for Defence that can be.
Tis now in the hands of the Grear Mogul; but'twas Ireachery, and nor Force, that did the Bufinets; and he might, by far, fooner have builr, than raken and conquer'd fuch a Caftle as this, with all the Surength of his Empire: It has a grear Pond cut down a vaft deprh in the oind Rock, the Irdians Gay 'ris fifty Fartiom deep, veriy clear, and good tifted Water
They affirm too, char there's a:Snake that lies abivie in \({ }^{3}\) tponitrout the Bufhes, and woody part of the Mountain, urait is site Twenty five Foor long, and as big as a Man's Waaté;: which becaufe ir does no hurt to Man or Bezit, it recerives nonefrom the Country; nay, they wou'd be angiy if it hou d be kill'd, becaufe they efteem it a Token of good Fortune.
This may not be altogether improbable, fince'ris known har Indina does afford Crearneses of this kind; thar are very large : However, 'rwas my good Fortune, to avoid the Demonftration of the Truch of this particular Story, in the actual fight of the Montter is felf.
I omir the particular mention of many ftarely \(\dot{R}\) vines of ancient Citics, Walls, and Palaces, the Monuments of Indian Kings, and other agreeable Entertainments, to a curious Traveller, which occur in this way; and pafs on Eo Amadabar, or Amadendar, a remarkable Ciry of Guzu- mmeddac: frt. It's feated on a fair River, and has as good a fhare of Strength and Provifions for Defence, in its Cafte; Gates, and ftrong Walls, as is has of Beauty in its other Buildings, which are in this refpect comparable to thofe of moft Cities in Afic. Tis a place of vaft Trade and Dealing, entertains abundance of rich Merchants, and excellent Arrificers, for Carving, Painring, Inlaying, and Embroidery.
There is fome Quancity of Indico made hereabours, which they call Cick-le, of a Town ar a litrie diftance; bur 'ris not near fo goad as that of Birma: Bur tho' the Trade be light upon that Account, yer 'tis fo grear in o cher Points, that chere's Two hundred Coaches laden with all forts of rich-Merchandize, thas go every ten Days hence for Cambria. 'From Gelour to this Ciry, the Way lies all through a horrid Defarr; full of Lions and Tygers, Thicyes and Ourlaws, which may well be reckond amongft thofe Creatures of Prey, and are, by far, the worft Beafts of the number.
The nexr Neighbour of Nore to this, is Camboyn, the cambay Grand Mart of Guzurat. 'Tis a graceful, fubftartial well buile City; ftands by the Sea, and has a topping Irade for all lorts of Cloch, and rich Drugs: Cambaya Cloths are a Commodiry well known, and as much ralued all over the Eaft. Ir has a very large Bay, bur ex- Ryy dangetreamly dangerous, by reaton of the violent Tide, which rous finks abundance of Ships: \(\ln\) the Neap Tides chere's the leaft danger; bur it always requires a skilful Pilor to mai mage a Ship hereabouts.

This place is very much infefted with two: Sores of Crearmres, which are both alike rroublefome, if nor dangerous to Dople that come here. If you goibur crofs the Channel, 'tisten to one but you fall into the hands of the Pyrating People, anjefs you are very well provided indeed ; and then your Goods muft cirber be loft, or by 2 lond Difpute you may be betrayd into the Danger of the Tide, which comes fo very furiounly, that' 'xwill be an exceeding hard marrer to bring your Ship off clear Within the Town the Monkeys are as great a plague as Whe Pyrates are upon the Water Youl fee prodionous Numbers of them climbing up and down upon the Hout res, frolicking and leaping about from one Houlf to another; and if they wou'd be contented with playing thefe Tricks only, they wood make but good Sport; bui they are for uncovering the Houfes, picking the Stoties and Bricks out of the Walls, ratcling down the Tiles tipon Peoples Heads as they pars along; fo that a Man hardly knows when he is fafe, or where to go, upon the accouint of thefe Vermine, that are every-where ready to pelr him wirh Srones, Tiles, and Brick-bars.
Tis piry, the Quiet and Order of fo fine a Ciry, thou'd be difturbd by Monkeys; and if there were not more befides thele upon the Houles, the place won'd be betuer managed than 'tis. You fha'l often fee a Fleet of Two hundred Portugicze Frigats riding here at a time, 'tis a place fo mightily haunted by that People, as well as by the others laft mention'd.

Bniocbe (between this and Surar) is feated in a River ewice as broad as the Thames; ris famous for a Mine of Agars, and the rich Baffata's made here, much furpafing the Holland. Clorh in Finenefs; it goes ar fifty Roupies per Booke, which are nor Thric Qcarters broad, and conrain abour fourceen \(Y\) ards \(E n g l i f\).

To Surst you five now only the pleafant and fertile Councry of Warian to pafs through, abounding with vaft Numbers of the wild Date-Trees, from whence they draw their Liquor they call Tanie: But thefe Trees are no Rarity here, for they are plentiful in all, or moft of the Sea-Coaft parts of India.
I ball now give fome Account of the principal Places in Prom figra the grear Road from Agra, to fompore, by the way of to jouppre. Carnowe; and back from thence to Agra, by that of ALabaffe.
Camoma: To begin with Cannowa it felf, which lies to the Eaftward of Agra, 2 large City, bur not like the rett of the Indian Cines, for prodigions Surength and Defence. The Ganges anciendy took his Courfe along by the Foot of this Ciry ; bur now has broken it felf 2 pasfage chrough the Valley fome four Cofe diftant, fo char bur a frall Branch of ir now comes up to Cinnoios: This famous River is Three quarrers of a Mile breadth in its own proper Channel here at this place, but upon great Rains fwells to far grearer Dimenfions, and overflows the Valley for ten Cofe 2 2bout. Ir has eighreen Branches, and receives the Water of thirry Rivers of confiderable note. Ir produces Allegarors in fuch furprizing numbers, thar if it yields good Fifh in proportion, it mult be one of the richeßt Rivers in the World.
Lacanow is a place of mighry Trade in this part of Ixdia; but the chief Commodisies it deals for, are Linen Cloths.
Oudee, a Ciry of an ancienr Character, the Sear of fome of the Potane Kings, bur much defacd by Time and Wars.

The Ruines of Ranichand Caftle, contribure che largeft Mare of the Fame is has now-a-days. The Bramens that live in thefe Ruines, tecord the Names of all thofe Indians that come and wah in the River hard by. It' leems'ris reckond a piece of Religion amongt them fo to do, and there's a greac Refort from all pares of india for that gurpofe. The Bramens cncourage the Practice by the Argement of Anviquiry; and tell the People, that it has been maineain'd for four Lacks of Ycars, which is 394500 Years before the World was made, according to the Europecn Chronology.

There's abundance of Gold gor our of the Raines of the Caftle; bur che place yields 2 Commodiry which is fet ar a higher Rate than Gold or Jewels cither: It is the \section*{A race Blorn} Hom of, fome Beaft, bur what I know nor, nor the Indions hardly themifives; tho' fome fay they are the true Unicorn's Horn. The more ordinary forr of them are 2 Commodiry mightily traded for ar this place, the Indians apply them to the Uies borb of the Houfe and the Field, making Bucklers,and feveral kinds of Drinking-Cups our of them.

In this Road to Foumpore, fies Bonarce, the principal Mart for, all Bengala Commodiries Foumpors, it felf, has no Rarities for Building, but Monuments, and feveral Quhe Relicks of Antiquiry to Row; bur for Trade, it Gis fone, that are confiderable: From hence coine gricat Quatrivies of fweec-rcented Oyls, rich Carpers, Hang: ing embroidcr'd with Silk, and all forts of fine Iinen.

Now to recurn back ro Agra from herce, by the way of From \(i \rightarrow\) Alabiffe; chis place is the fiff that deferves mention, and prom bat tis all an enrire Foreft hither. The Caftle is reckon'd one gra, by to of the Wonders of the Ealt, and 'twas one of the mighty worla of Undertakings of Ecbar. Sba; and that after many fruftrated Attemprs of the ancient Porane Kings zo thie fame purpofe: It's pleafindy feated, and has the River Gemini athe unning on the Soum-fide of iti It may be guefs'd whar a ftupendious Building iv will be when perfected, when tis told of it, that ir did for many Years employ the contant Labours of 20000 Workmen, and has of late Years had more than 5000 engaged abour it, and yet 'cho' it has been forty Years in hand) no Body knows when 'twill be finith'd. Twas in this Caftle that the prefent Mogul helrer'd himfelf, when he rebell'd againft his Farter ; and he cou'd nor have chofen 2 more Auguft Building \(+\infty\) lei \(n \mathrm{p}\) for King in than this.
In a cerrain Court of it there ftands a Pillar of Stone Aremumbly fifty Cubits above Ground ; but how far it goes down- Rullar. ward, there's no difcoveriing, ir ftands fo deep : By the Difcoarfe of the Endians it flou'd feem to have been plac'd there by Alexander the Grear, or fome orher Conquerour, that was here ftopp'd in the Courfe of his Victories by the Ganges, which rins bur a lietle way off, and into which the River Gemini herefalls.
Here are to be feen in 2 low Vanle, the Sculptures of Pagos: Adam and Eor, Noat, and feveral others, both of the Anredilavian; and Pofdiluvian Parriarchs in Stone; which are vifited by grear Numbersof Votarics from all parts of India. Before they approach thefe Images, they wath their Bodies in the Garges, and Thave their Heads, laying a great ftrels upon this performance, for their Purification from Moral Defilements. They are of the Opinion, that this was the place where Man tias firft created; or at leaf, that he liv'd in his Paradifacal State; for feveral Years hereabours.
They flew a Tree that ftands in the King's Mohol, to A Amide which they give the Tide of the Tree of Life, and honour Tra. ir accordingly. And the urith on't is; if their Repores be true, it may well enough be calld the Tree of Life, fince tis of fo ftubborn a Nature, that 'rwill live in fpire of all Endeavours to deftroy it. It is a fort of a wild Fig-Tree; which having once roored it felf there, wou'd cominue growing there, whatever Courfes were raken to the conurary : Take away the Earch from abour is, ftock it up, manage ir how they cou'd, yer fill fome fpreading Roors or other which cou'd not be reach'd, wou'd fend up a frem Tree; and ar this rate is held ont, to that feveral of he Porane Kings, and of this Family roo; who rry'd at it, were fore'd to give ir over as an impoffible Work. The prefent Mogul has raken 2 Turn at it; bue finding be is able to do no good, he cherifies, and makes muck \(2 b l e\) on'c.

When the grear Frofts are paft in Offober and November; Boars may go from hence down the Ganges to Bengala; bur the paffage is nor fo fafe.
Between this and Agra you come to thefe other placescorporam of fome Character: Cbappergar, which hews a Saray, (or Publick Int) which has very few, if any in all Indin, to fland in compericion with ir: 'Tis fufficient to give Enterrainment to a thoufand Men, and the Lodgings are all very meatly builr and concriv'd befides.

Itry, where the Indians perform a Solemn Worthip to am the Effigies of a Man's Face, carvid in Srone, ar the entrance of the Caftle; the principal Ceremony of which is, the pouring out a grear Quancity of Oyl upon it: This is the Practice; as for che Rife and Reason of ir, I tave.no Information.
From hence to Antedipore, is a plentiful Country, and Amimi full of fine Saraies, for the Conveniency of Caravans: There's much of a grofs fort of Indico, call'd Cole, made in thefe Parts, which is either all (pent in India, or carried info Ta tary, to Cafcar, Samercand, and thole places, none of it going into Europe, cxcept ir be mix'd with that of Bianc. From hence you have bur 2 fhort ftep to Agra again.
I fhall now conclude this Difcourfe of India, with an An Acesxi Accoumt of fome of the moft confiderable of the intian of tbe wain Raja's, thar lie about in the Councry ; the moft of which Rgait. maintain their Liberty againft the Great Mogul, and all his vaft Power, and will neither be fubject \(m\), nor hold Correfpondence with him.
And we may firft look upon Raja Rena, that has, his principal Sear in the impregnable Caftle of Gurchito, ftand- Gurctin ng upon the Mouncains of Marna, char ran ap rowards cante, Amadavar. This Prince is the chief in effeem of all the Gentile Raja's, or Resbouts, as they are culled. He is ar: mong

mongft the Indians, whiat a Pope may be in Chriftendom for Authority, or a Caliph amongft the old Arabians: His Power is not fo very formidable perhaps as fome orthers may be; bur he is look'd on as the Farher, or chief Pa cron of the anciens Indian Religion and Rites; and on that core highly reverenced by all. His Country is 150 Core in length, and 200 in breadth fome ways, in which he ha Ceveral fine Ciries and Caftes: Bur his greateft Surength is che Fortifications he has about him, partly in the Work of Nature, in long Ridges of inaccetrible Mountains; and partly the Fruir of Arr and Induftry, as in all places where Nature has left a Gap for an Enemy. 'Tis upon this Account, and thar of the Character he bears, that he remains unconquerd, and is like to do fo ftill: Themigh ry and forrunate Ectar, thar had ram'd fo many unruly Adverfaries, cou'd make norhing of this Prince; his Fortune here was ar a ftay, and cou'd not carry him over the Walls of Gurchito Caftic, tho' he pufl'd is on with all the Vigour in the World. But then the moft part of the R:\(j\) jas, even thofe thar are in Friendhip with the Mogul, don'r care ro meddle with him for the"fake of his Character; and therefore if fent againft him, find fome fhift or other to avoid hurring him, or making any Spoil in his Territories.
Tis believ'd by fome, that this Prince is the true and andoubred Succeffor of the Noble Perrs, celebrated in An tiquiry; that the Indian Blood is here preferv'd untainted and pure; and in a word, thar all the genuine Remains of the old Indin, are here more than any where to be found : This is grounded upon the appearing Impoffibiliry of making a complear Conqueft of the Councry. Howevcr, tis reported now abroad, thar the Mogul has courted him into a lortof a llighr Acknowledemenr of his Sove reignry ; perhaps as much as a fmall Tribure may cometo, which alfo he can withold withoutdangerwhen he pieafes
About the Country of Guzurat, lie three more of thefe Rajn's, that ftand upon cheir own defence, againft the Mogat.
One of them is that Badur before-mention'd, that makes fuch havock up and down in the Country : This Prince has fometime appear'd with a Bädy of 100000 Men; as parricularly when he plunder'd Cambaya.
The orher two do (as he does) lic our of the reach of the Mogui's Forces, either in impregnable Forts and \(\mathrm{C}_{2}\) ftles, or inacceffible Mounmins, or elfe in impaffable Wil derneffes and Defarts.

One of them is reported, to have a Breed of Horfes thiar is not to be match'd again in all the Eaft; they are valued each at 15000 Roupies, and are faid to be far before the drabian Horfes for Swift Running; and not only fo, but they are ftrong to hold it 500 ; to that a Man may riee one of chem almoft a full fpeed, a whole Day, and never draw Bir: The Reja has (they fay) ico Mares of this Breed.
Ohers to\(\therefore\) All along the River Revec, Eafterly, lies the Country mod thote is, of another grear Raja, whofe chief Ciry is Tem-mery: He paris. is a very mighty Prince, and as it happens; a Subject to the Grects Mogul: Out of his Country come valt Quantities of the fine Indinn Drugs, Spikenard, Turbith, Miras Kebals, Gum-lack, Turpenine, Coftus, \(\mathcal{G}^{\circ}\).
But his next Ncighbour, another Rejc, as porent as bimfelf, and more fecure by his Fence of Mounrains, equally defpiles both we Power athd the Ericmalhip of the Mogul: His chief Ciry is Negercout, farm'd for an Idol in great requeft, thar Atands thete': Muititudes of Pcople come hither for the Redrefs of thicir Grievances, which they pretend to receive to their entire Satisfaction; ar this lace: But befidestheir other Offerings they do (in thi Tranfports of that wicked Zeal which acts' them) make an Effufron of their own Blood, barbarounly mangle their Bodies, and jomerimes proceed fo far as to cut theirown Throars, which is indeed a full Sclution of all Doubts, and Period of Trouble and Mifery.
To the Ealtward of thefe, lics another Ryia, whofe chief Sear is at Calfery; his Country 500 Cole in length, Northward and Southward, and 300 broad; and he is able ro bring so0000 Foor inco the Field upon occafion. His Dominions are rich and fruiful, but keep all mut np within themfelves, communicating with none of the adjaent parts of India.
Farther fill to the Eaftward, between Gemini and Ganges, Atretches out the Country of another of thefe Refboor Princes, 300 Cofc long, and 150 broad, tio priocipal Civy of ir Seremeart. This Renjeis vaftiy rich in Gold, and. is faid to have all his domeftick Furniturc of that valuable Metal. The Conncry is ferale, änd happy enough in its Soil, bur not alogether fo in the Temper of iss Climate the Winter here being extreamly foarp, and tha Snows fo violent upon the Mountains, that the People, at that Scafon, are forced to remove down into the Valleys.

On the further fide of the Ganges lies another Rafat whofe Territories are fo large, that' 'is ner agreed whet to fix the Bounds of there: Cemarp is his Capital City: but his Country runs (fome fay) Eaftward, almont as fir as Chine; however, few allow bim lefs chan 400 Cofe in length, and as many in breadth. Ir yields a great dcal of Mesk, and is as lileral in the Prodection of Grain; is bias no Force of Elephants, nor nor muech of thoric in comparifon; tho' thofe it does afiord are is a Noble Breed for Ue and Service, and the ben Mo:ntain-climbers in the Horfes asm World : So that this Priuce's main Force confifts in his Focr, and thercin perbaps mey nor be mach inferiour to the Mogul himfelf
To the Southward of this laft; a-thwart the Streams of Ganges, you come into the Country of a Rria valtly powcrful, borh in Foor, Hore, and Elepharios. He has the greateft Rarity and Treafure in his Dominions thar frdic affords, which is the OH Rock of Diamonds, of which he makes no fimall advantage.
And below him, amongt the Streans of Ganges, is feared a Potane Prince, of the Race of the anciont Dclly Kings; who puts the Mogul to the conftant Charge and Trouble of mainmining a Froncicr Army; and all this but juft for his own Defence: For he is nor able to reach this Raja, who is as well defended againft him by the IRands and Branches of the Genges, as the others are by cheir high. \section*{A Difcourfe of the Affairs of India, and of the Proceedings at the Court of the Great Mogul. Written by Capt. William Hawkins, and Directed to the Eaft-India Company.}

IKepr Company with Captain Heeling in his Voyage of Surat lay in the Hands of two grear Men ; the ore as far as Delifa, a Road in the North of Socotora in the Arcbian Sea, ar which place we parted, he purfuing his Voyage in the Dragon for Bantant, and my felf in the Heaior for Surar.
"Capt Brax: I came thither Auguft the 24th *; and having informed inrat, 1608 in of his Mar of my Arrival, and the Charzeter I came 4.0. 1608. in of his Majefty's Embaffadour, I receiv'd his Compliment and folcmn Inviration to come athoar and had ar my Landing an Entertainment, that if all the reft had

Tis ro be oblerved char the Management of the Affairs Viceroy of the King of Decian, who had cognizance of all Caules that relared to Land Bufinets and Civil Government; the orher Viceroy of Cambaya, who prefided over the marine Affairs. .This was the perfidious Mceretchar, into whofe Hands; Merchancs. and Sailors, and all that are any thing a \(K\) in to the Sea, muft of necelfiny fall; withour whom no Trade can be cftablified, nor any Factory be fected in tifofe parts, and who does in all thele Marters juft whar pleares himfelf, and is agreeable to his own Coverous and Ambirions Humour. No Man feemingly ftodies more his Princes. Honour and Iorereft than he, and none minds it lefs; no Mall to appearance Practice thefe Vertues lefs a 2 Min, hat can be Wife, Real Truc and Juft to himfelf alopc; and in mort remarkable only forho. Prefermenss and exurondiyary it Qualities. My Concernsfalling under his Cognizance, and he being ar Cambaya when 1 Landed, I was forc'd to wait till Orders came from him before I corid proceed in any Bufinefs, tho in the mean cime lhad very civil Trearmear from the other Viceroy, and she Promife of his bett Endeavours with Mocrebchan on my behalf. When fome twenty Days were expired, a Meffenger came with a Lerter from this great Man, whercin he gave me Licence to land the Goods Ihad brought, as allo to buy more for my lading this prefent Voyage; but as to the Point of 2 furure Trade and the feting of a Factory he could Gay nothing to shat till he had further Orders from Court And then ar the fame time he wrote to the chief Manager of the Cuftoms under him at Surat, to bring all my Goods into the Publick Cuftom houfe, and fecure them there till his Brotber came; to chule our fuch Parcels as were moft fir for the King as he prerended, tho' "tis nothing lefs than the King's Profit they defign by all thofe Practices with Forcigners.

Howerer having this Libervy I brought my. Goods athoar, geting in fome confiderable guanrities of Moncy, I began to lay it our upon fuch Commodities as are rendible at Bantam and Prirman, and which the Guzurars with a grear deal of Profit came thither for every Year. I accomplin'd the lading of two Barks with this fort of Merchandize in a litule time, tho' not without fome Noife and Grumbling from the Merchants of the Town, who now began to make publick Complaints of me, as a Perfon thar had undermin'd unem in their, moft profirable Trade, and craftily fratch'd!a good part of their Advantage our of cheir Hands. But for all wis having Licence from the higher Powers to Ship and Goods I had bought I mado bold to fend them away, tho as it prov'd; in the moft unlucky time in the World for my felf, and the moft proper to gracifie the Spite and Malice of the Merchants. For the nexr Day I had ncws thar both the Barks were taken

But here was an Indian Captain that ftood my Friend with his Company to fuch good Purpofe, that the Portural. Buff-Ccars were glad to make off with ome haft, and for ought I know, it had been the laft Feaft fome of them wou'd ever have been ar. Nay, they did nor bluh to befer formally, and aflaule the Houle where I lived; and as if I had been fome very odions Perfon, whom the Church had cursid and confignid over into the Hands of the Executioners of her Sentence, they came with a Prieft ar the Head of the Troops, to crave a Blefing upon the Aucmpts, to infpire the Souldiers with Courage and Refolunion, and take care of the Souls that flould be fert away in this godly Enterprize. And to give thofe Pious Fathers their due, they had their Hand and peculiar Influence in every Plor that was form'd againtt my Life and Liberty. When the reft: of my Adverfarics were dull and indifferent, they wou'd infufe ncw warmeh and vigour into them, rouze up their necping Malice and Revenge, and prompr them to Action with the unnof Diligence. And if they hapned ta be ar a dead lift for a Plor, the never failing Invention of the Jcfuits wou'd be fure to help them out with one. What between the heat of the Climate, and the inward Fire of their own Rage and Tealonfic, rheir. Wits were throughly warmed, and their Brains crowded with brisk volatile Spirits fit to work upon the.finc Arts of Intriegue. They are not dull in any part of the World, nor ever to be charged with Poverty and Barrennets of Fancy in: Matters of this kind. Bur here cheir Elevation was extraordinary, ,their Flights fine and rapturous beyond Comparifon; they did not think, but were tranfported into happy Thoughts and Contrivances, they piotred by. Infiration.
I found it a very-hard task to efcape all the Snares and Ward off the feveral Blows thefe Mon and their Inftraments madeat me. There werefo many that pretended mimy Life one way or other, that 'rwas become a very difficultmarter to keep in, and I bad defended it folong, that now I began to grow weary. Bur befides all theie things the Injories I fuftain'd by Marebcban in the Matcersof Trade and Dealing were fo foul and unprocirable, thar I thoughr it high rime to repairto Court and feek for The yilrer office and Redrels (as well as the difparch of my Buff= of Morth. aefs) ar the Kings own Hands, fince 'twas imponible to bave either from this vile Minifter, for he took what Goods he pleas'd, and at what Rates he picas'd, and wou'd pay me for them when he chought fit, and as long as any thing choice apd good lafted, I had fome of his Flameries and diffembling Smiles, bur afterwards cou'd get neither good Words nor Money. Upon this frore I. fay I refolred for Agra, and cherefore in plain Terms demanded his Licence and Letrer to the King for thar purpofe. This wasaRequeft which he cou'd nor formame dcny, and therefore was forc'd ro yield to it; yer thew his good. Will to me in the Cafe, he refusid to let me have any Guard to conduct me thither, that fo it might be the cafiex for me wo be knock'd in the Head by the way. Whofe fricndly Advice this came abourby may cafily be guefs'd, and will appear by afrer Circumftances; but howerer with or without his Guard, to Agra I refolved to go, and for Agr. I prepared.

And I doube nor bur the Father wou'd have lacen very liberal to thefe Men, had they execnted their Defign, fince he bid an exrraordinary Price for me once before; no lefs than 40000 Rials of. 8 to have me fint away Prifoner to Daman; 2 Rate far beyond that which the Chicf Priefts and Pharifees ever pretended to give for innocent Blood
But after all thefe Difficulties under the good Conduct of the Pattims, whocelear'd the way before me, and did me very fairifful and commendable Service. I arrived fafely ar Bramport. the then refidence of the Vice-roy of Decan, by whom I was nobly entercained. I had his very kind Lexter of Commendation to the King, and all need-favourable Providence and good Guide, brought me thro many Dangers and threarning Mifchiefs, after near 2 Months Trawel in the Profpect of them:
My entrance into che City was not (not could not it reems be) fo private, but notice was.prefently given to the King; and whereas I had a Defign to be incognito for a time, till I had put my. felf into a pofture for a more publick Appearance, I was urterly presented,:His Ma jefty friding feveral Troops of Horfe:and Foor ro find me out, and bring the to Court in the moft. Pompous manner that could be.
Being introduced to his. Prefence (tho' I came without any Prefent worth his acceptance his good Serivant Mocrecthan having robb'd me of whar I defignd for chis purpofe: I was receiv'd with uncommon Honours and depitees of Refpect, fuch as I cou'd no way have-coneeiied or hoped for.
My Prince's Letter he received from me with his own Hands, reaching it out to that end a confiderable wiy from the fately Throne he fate on; and tho' an old Knave of a Jefuite chat ftood there by to interpret it, pretended to find faule wi:h the ftyle of it as not relpectfoi enough, yer he himfelf. was very well pleas'd, and took no norice of what was infimared by the flanderous Prief. In thort he protefted in a moft folemn manner thar he wou'd grant all the Conrents of the King's l.etter. and more too if it were demanded. :Thar as he undentood that Mccrebchan had abuled me, fo he wou'd rake care I fhould hare Sacisfact:on, and fome courfe fhould be takento prevent the likeill Treament of me or any of my Nation for thefurure.
And in purfuance of this, he prefently difpatch'd a Couricrto that perfidious Minifter ar Surct, giving him a whate of ibc iffe charge to deal Juftly and Favourably with the Eng-

For now the Authometoms berant fwell with rage and envy that a Chriftian flould be placed fo near the King ; and the fefrites and Prongure wereno lefsthen ftark mad thar I had flown above aH their Toils and Snares into fo fofr and cafic a Neft in the very Cencre of the Court. The News that it was fo fpread all abour the Counrry, to Gon, to Sarat, and whererer thete was any of thar Cartic to be found, And this fet them all mont bufily ar work; the Jefuires negie?ted their Devction and rack'd their Brains Nighr and Day, they made Confederacies, they fent Difpatches from one place to another, they confuited Hell to remove me and work my overthrow. They bribid Mocrebchen, Tae Endes. their ofd Friend and Brother in thefe.Viliainies, to write 2 decvours of Letter to the King upen this Subject; to reprefent to him his Enemic: the dangerous Conlequences of the Libertics and Farours him fione he had vouchlafed to the Einglifh, and the Reports that Court went current abroad of the Defign we had of feizing orne of his Porss when our Shipping cainc. Bur the King (as yet kind and conftamt) giving no credir to this Letrer (tho''twas feconded with another to the faine pur pofe from the Vice-roy of Gor) they fell into the lat extremity of rage and madnefs at the Difappointment and now concluded; firce I was the main Ubfacle, and norhing elfe cov'd be perform'd to remove me out of the way by the old Catholick Method of Poifoning. Order in the full payment of the Debr owing to me. His late Difgrace and Earger had nor fwecten'd nor mollified him one jot, and he rame our of Prilon the very famedefigning Knave and Chear that he went in He woud neither pay me my Moncy nor reftore me. the Gocdis that he had raken frem me; neither couid I fee any profucct of Satisfation to be made me, unlefs 2 few Heathenim Promifes and Flarteries wou'd have ferv'd the rum. And'tis certain that this muft have been all, if I had not demanded Juftice of the King,ind gor a pofitive Crder for payment ; rorw; thftarding which the Infidel cur off a good part of my Bill, and abated me 12500 Mamedies.
But this was a very inconfiderable Damage in comparifon with that which cuickly followed after. For now Mocrebchan being at full Liberty again, the Jefuits, the Porrugueze ard he fell to the old Trade of Plocting with the utmoft Vigour and Diligerce. And that now they Niew Dering might have all defired fuccels, and at one ftroke carry their Point for ever; the Matter was fo orderd, that a Let ter fhould come from the Vice-roy of Goa to complain of his Majcftics encouraging the Empliff, and to fhew how illthe King of Portugal rook it at his Hands. And ar the fame time fome Merchancs were made to comein and give their Evidence how much they had fuffer'd in their Trade and Bufinefs upon the Accouns of the Englifh that were in his Majefties Ports, for whofe fake the Porrugueze wou'd not permit them to have free egrefs and regrefs at theirs.
Thefe malicions Infinnations back'd by a charitable The King re-Speech of Mocrebchan's to the fame purpofe fo effectually voko his wrought upon the King that he quire loft his Conftancy ; repeal'd his former Granr, and gave Orders that the Engijhb rould be forbidden his Ports for ever. Bur 'rwas nor long before 2 becter Humour and more cool and fober Thoughrs produced an Order quire contrary to this again; re-eftablift as in the enjoyment of our former Privileges, and made theKing as mucti our Friend as he was at firt. This was 2 fudden tho' a comforcable Change; and as 'twas only the Effet of the Ablence of our Enemies, and a llight PrefenrI made him, fo I doubred the Foundation and Cavfe, was too mean and poor to produce any ching of a noble and lafting Effect. And my Prefages were juf and trae; for the King being now got into this changeable Humour, did nothing elfe but alter his Mind and go from one Refolution to another.
When the Jefuits writ to him and prefented him, then be in the Commifition for our fettement of Trade: And perhaps the next time I offrid to peition him, all thould be right and well again, and the Englifh the moft welcome People tohim in the World. No lefs than three or four rimes were our hopes thus rais'd, and as many times fonk into the loweft defpair: thas often did he do and undo; rain and recover us, faffer fenriments of Kindnefs and Difpleafure towards us to rale and act him by rurns However ar laft our indefarigable Adrerfaries carried the Day from us; the Poifon of the Jefuizes fcour'd him beyond all Recovery by Prefents or any orher Means. His laft Refolutions were againft our Irade and Sectlement in his Conntry; and I my felf fo courted and ca-Hedero refs'd b: him was left to my Liferty either to go or ftay, mine \({ }^{\text {mid }}\) as I pleasid. And the Truth ont is, thar as my griar five Enifp Temptation to ftay there, was the Hepes and Prcfrea I had of doing my Country fome good Service; fo when Thad lof thofetiopes, had no fmall Reafon to be glad of Difcharge. For beffidestine continual Dangeris char thear ned my Life in a Coumry where fo. Dittle Honour, Hoaefty or any fors of Verrue was pactifed T Thad no Charm at all.ro bind me:to this placefrom the Hotoors and Prc firs which his Majefty promis'd to beap tipon me. 'Tis true, I was called the Exthifechation Loti, bat the Ti-

 Penfion romainain hian, whe vivery poor' thing.
And this was punturitise wisery poor thing- out of all that honourable Siffe me , fo muchper tant f , le of 300 l the refticen deyourd by the hangry Courticrs, or injurioniffy metain'd by the Inrrigues of me of my Enemies.
A liztle before Matters came to this pals with me as Conrr, I had the happy News of three Engligh Ships at the Bar of Surrat: Thefe were under the Command of Threstyp Sir Hexiy Middieter, and with thern I refolv'd to fet Sail to Sima for England. And indeed I fousd it not fo hard a matter by far \(t 0\) go away in qujer, as to live there in Peace, and without Difturbance. For tho I make no queflion bur the Jefuirs and the reft of my Adverfaries wou'd have been very glad to have prevented me by fome fatal Plor, cou'd they have had a fair opporiunity for the Exccution of it : yet nor having that, they were glad to be rid of me upon any Terms, and counted ic a confiderable Point gain'd to have removed out of the midft of them a PerTon likely to do them fo much Mifchief as I was.
So taking my leave, I fet our from Agra, Norember the 2d and went directly to Cambayt. From hence I purfued my Journey towards the place where the Ships lay, to which l came with all my Effegs, Fanuary the 26.
We fet Sail out of this Harbour the is of E:bruat r, and arrived at Dabul the 16 of the fame Month. Here we rook a Porturuefe Sh:p and Frigar, and in then Tome quantities of Goods, tho too litie to wiake Com- He coms penfanon for the Wrongs we had rereived in India by abord de their Means. We directed our Courle from Dabul for \(E\) ng \(f\) phsif he Red-Sea, having a juft Quarrel wirh rheT that fort of People to call us thither, and whom. we in.A Pmome cend now in fome meafure to make fenfible of the Dif- Stip nkm pleafure our Nation bad fo juftly cenceiv'd againft them. Sir Henj Middleton being oblig'd to ftay here by the Neceffries of Trade, I embark'd in another Eng/ifh Ship, Goxa for Fanuary the \(13^{\text {th }}\) for my own Native Country, from which Eniond I had been ablent five or fix Years.

Bur befides there，you have wildFowl of teveral tonts good Geefe and Ducks，Pelicans roo，and many ochers， which they don＇r give us the paricular Names of：So thar no Man can want fport，thar goes wfintier for it；un－ lefs the 200 grear plenty of Game prove fomething of a hindrance；and loles the pleafure of fearching out，and prifaing；which is indeed all the Life of the Exerife．
From hence they went on for the Coaft of India，in all which Courfe we have nothing remarkable，as far as the Iland fuganas；or Eugrno，as fome call ir．This INand they place in \(s+\) Dcgr．South Lar．and make the Varia－
rion there to be four Degr． 13 Min ．In lies Eafterly S ． and \(W\) ：and by \(N\) ．and is five Leagues in length，or thereabouts；the Eaftend is much the higher Land，and the Weftem is woody and full of Trees．
They went away firft of all for Bantam，where they difcharg＇d their Burden of Lead and Iron，and rook a－ boadd in the room of it orher Merchandife proper for the Moluccras．
Thefe rich Tlands were next to be vifited by them，in order to which they fer Sail from Bantem，Decim．the 6th． Ther had terrible Thunder and Lightming in this paffage， Rain，and all forts of－ill Weacher；rough and boitterous Winds excepted．Bur that was their advantage，they had no Trouble nor Danger upon that fore ；bur faild on hrough all shat Fury of the Weather，very merrily and well contented，thar the Wind，the moft dangerous Ene－ my of alt，did nor engage together with the reft againft trem．＇Twas to kind and favourable at that time，as to be of their fide，affording them all along a brisk fteddy Gale，by the help of which they reach＇d the Molucca＇s in the beginning of 9 fruary．
The Account twe have of their Proceedings at thoic Ilarids，is very horr and imperfect．In general，we find that near two Months was（pent in meer Ceremonies and Complements between them，the Spaniards，and the Mc－ luccan Princes．
＇Tis true，this was better than Fighring and Wrangling aill chat while；and at firft fighr ir appears ftrange，that the Spaniards thould be guilry of to much Civility and good Breeding rowards the Erglifh，whom they nfed to in thier another manner．Bur tis to be confiderd，that Trade monift chemfelver to fend them packing from thence： bar yec were unwilling to uife violence，or tam them a－ way rudely．And rherefore fome plaufible Prerencemuft be made for their Difmiffion，or fuch Conditions propos＇d in order to their ftay，that they not being able to agree to， might upon a Denial be the more handfomely tarn＇d off． Now this being the Cafe，＇rwas as good to fall a Comple－ menring in the mean time，as not ；there＇s no Charge in few flattering Words，or a litule diffembling Carriage； bur there＇s fomething of advantage in it，becaufe＇tis a complear Cover for an ill and rreacherous Defign．The speniards，with all their Gravity and Formaliry，tell our Men，They can＇r admit them to Trade，till the Camp－ Mafter has given leave．
And why does nor the Camp－Mafter then determine the Marter，and fay Yes，or No，plainly，withourfarther delay ？
Why，becaufe he is contriving to do it more nearly and senteclly ；that is，with more Spinifh Ceremony and Cir－ cumlocution：＇Tis much the berter way ro query and pro－ pofe，to offer and make Conditions（no matter how im－ poffible＇，than to come our with a peremprory Denial；，2nd ar blundy，You flall nor Trade here．
Now the Circumftances of thefe Inands at that time， furnifh＇d Matter enough for chis way of proceeding：For the Dutch and they were up to the Ears in Broils and Quar－ rels，and noching cou＇d be betrer，than to propofe to the Englijh to come nnto the Quarrel too，and take their parts againtt the Dutch．This they might eafily guels was what their Commiffion wou＇d never allow them to do，nor bear them out in ；bur upon that Account＇ris to be fuppos＇d they made the Propofal．In fhort，Caprain Middeton po－ frively refus＇d ir；and the Sponiards ar the fame time de－ fired to be excus＇d from granting him the Liberty of Trade．＂This was the Uphtor of the Bufinefs：And twas a pretry Conclufion．to be ufherd in with fuch a Train of complements and Careffes，and to lie upon hand，from the beginning of famuary to the middle of Merch．＇Tis true indeed；a free Trade was permitted at the beginning of Marcls，bur thar Liberty expired in a very few Days again；thofe favourable Orders were countermanded， and the Engli／h urged ro be gone．
Howcrer；the Natives had more kindnefs for them than uplep Trade this came to；for they made thift to drive a Trade with uth ibim them out of the Spanierds fight；a fign what they wou＇d hare done，had they had the Liberry to choofe cheir own

Cuftomers Twas impofibic to do this by Day，and therefort they did it under the Protection of the Night ： the Spustiards all＂the while fofpecting nothing of thefe dark Cabals，but froticking ir very pleafantly weith the Engliffs in the Day－cime，as Perfons thar were capable of doing thein no mikchief．Thus they went on，doing ever now and then a Jobb in privatee with the Nacives，till a－ bout the middle of March，when the laft Orders for their Removal came forth
Having left the Molucca＇s，they fought for Bufinets fome where elle，entring the Streights of Zangaja，March the Twenty third．The People hereabours．were very Peopte about fond of a Correfpondence with them，and by all the obli－the Serevienher ging Bebavionf that cou＇d be，endeavour＇d to procure it．with the They came with ar leaft a Hundred Praws up to chem，Englifa． and brought good ftore of Provifions，Hogs，Hens，Fin frefh and dry，Plantanes，Caffarho Roors，and leveral forts of Fruirs befides．They were very eafie and reafonable in their Terms of Dealing，and defired only coarfe Cloth， and Chinn－Dimes in exchange for what they brought．
The King of Bosun bimifilf feris them a Refrefiment， and eanneftly defired leave to come aboard．He had ne－ ver feen any Englifhman in his Life，and now baving a fair Opportinity，crav＇d a Permiffion to improve it for that purpofe．

This Requeft the Captain eafily granted，and the King King of Boi． quickly came up inhis Carracol，rowed with at leait a hun－smomes dred Oars，carrying with her four hundred Men，well anm＇d，and fix Brals Pieces．She had five more attending upon her，which had in all a thouland Men more aböard them．The King was created and prefented to his very great Sarisfaction and Conitent a Shipboard：In Return of which Kindneffes，he made the Captain a Prefent of fome of his Country Clorh，and very civilly invired him to Botun，promifing to lend a Pilor to guide the Ship thither．
In the mean time，one of the Enflifh，who thad been femt afhoar to ger Provifions，return＇d with the News of his Entertaimment by anorher Indian King，a Neighbour Tire King of ro him of Botun．This Prince had never leen any Englijh Cobina． neither；and fome of his Subjects having brought this．Per－ fon to him，the was wonderfully pleasd ai the fight of him．
The pofture our Englifh－man found him and his No： bles in，was formeching odd，and fufficient to ftrike a Ter－ ror into the Mind of 2 Stranger：They were Carowling and Drinking very Gard together；and the Room all abour them was befer with dead Mens＇Heids．There were the Trophies of a：Victory newly obrain＇d，and they were ar thar time（as it wire）juft come our of the Field，reeking with the warm Blood of their Adverfaries．However，the Englifhoman had no farther occation for fad Thoughts， than what the horrid Spectacle gave him；the King dif nor offer to fer his Head upamongft the reft；bur after a kind and gentle Trearment，Tent him away in Cafery．

The King of Borun＇s Pilot being come，they fer Sail for that Town，and came to an Anchor before it，Aprilt che A．D．16os？ Twenty fecond．
Here the King came our to bid them Welcome，with his Come so whole Fleer of Carracols，gallanrly＇fet out with Colours \({ }^{\text {Botwn }}\) and Pendants；and on both fides the Small－inot and Oxdnance were briskly difcharg＇d．The Caprain was in－ vired athore to Dine with the King，where every thing was done in the beft manner，according to the Famion of the Country．The Meat was ferv＇d up in grear wooden Chargers；but tho＇the Dihes were homely and coarle， yet the Provifions themfelves were fine；and which was berter than all，the Welcome very hearry and fincere． Their Liquor was only Irea Pote，a Drink of a very agree－ able pleakant tafte；nor heady and intoxicaring，but fuf－ ficient to revive the Spiriss，give them a due Elevation． and anfwer all the Ends and Purpoles of Drink：

And as the Caprain was feafted athore，fo the King （indeed the whole Royal Family）was again a Shipboard． They were feldom withour one orother of them；io greedy were they of the Company of a People they had io long defired，but con＇d never fee till then
There was another neighbouring perty King，thar hear－ ing the News of the Arrival of the Englifh ar Botan，came． with his whole Family ro be a Spectator too．He rowed round the Ship in his Carracol，and view＇d it and them mof atcentively：Bur with all their kind Entreaties；and the Example of the King of Botrim before his Eyes，the wou＇d not be perfwaded to come aboard them．
As for the Bufiness done here，the main part of isfeems rade af to be the getting a good Lading of Cloves．This was an Enomet？ accidental Bargain；they were brought into Botum by the favan Veffels，and the Englifs being there ar che time， appily fecurd them for themielves．

The King of Borkm had, before cold them of fome Quan- any Dealings with in thofe Parts), and fet fail for Haxtam. ities of Pearl he had by him, which chey : Hocn'd-have she: Refufal of. They don't sell ns; thet boaghe them of him; nox yet thar he boughr any of their Cloch, tho: by the Accomnt they give of his looking over thar Commodiry, and liking it very well, 'tis probable there.was' fome Dealing betwixt them.
Having finith'd all Bufinefs here, they:took their leave of this Prince (one of the faireft and juftef we have had the Account der to crols the Line. Being gor our into Souch 1 an. We of che New quickly flound continvally between the S. E. and S. E. and yeach blows she asch of by \(E\). And we obferve, that the farcher we fail to the urth. Southward, we find the Wind fill more Eafterly.

Fuly the Thirseenth brought us po an Anchor in the Bay of Soldania; and here we itaid till the latrer end of Se pternber, 25 which time the Wefterly Monfons have done blowing, and the Wind comes abour more between the \(S\) and S.E.
Nowitwas, that (being our at Sea again) the Union between us and the Ship of thar Name, was difrolved; and the Winds (which blew away our Companion from us)' rofs'd us up and down the Great Warers, till the latrer end of O&ober; at which time we bore up with the Thands of Comera, between Se Lawrence, and the Main. The King of the People where we put in, were Civil to us beyond the common Rens, and Coco's of the Barbarifrefh Wacer is a. Blefing they have litule or fcarce any of themfelves, and therefore con'd not impart it to us.
-We fell in next with the Ine of Pembin, in 6 Degr. South
Iat.; tho' our defign was for \(\bar{z}\) anzibar, where we knew there was good Watering. This Ifand is Hell, for the Malice, Barbaricy; and Ireachery of the Inhabitancs: They cmiced us athore with all the Familiarixy, and feeming Good Nature in the World; but did all in purluance of 2 lior to cur our Ihroars. They laid an Ambih of Warer, and when we were at work, they broke our upon us: Herc, tho the Odds of Number and Screngith were very great on their fide, yet that of Courage and Refolurion was not 10 ; thefe rreacherous Barbarians had not Hearts brave enough to fight well; and we made a flift to carry off our Warer wich fying Colours. We left 'ris true, 2 more valuable Liquor (fome of our Mens Blood) in the room of it: Bur our lofs was froall, and we felt is not.

But the Mors of Melinda were like to do us a far greater milchief: For ir being our Forrane (afrer we had parted from Pembr) to lighr upon, and cake three Barks of theirs; we brought all the principal Men aboard us, to the Number of fify. They let us take them (is feems) with the more eale, and fubmitred themeres more quictly into our hands, in hope of working their Revenge, and raking their advantage of os the berrer afterwards: For beirg amongt us, of a fudden thiey all drew their long Knites, and ftabbd two or three of the Company : tho' not all of them, mortally) and were going on as faft as chey cou'd, to ferve the reft of us in like manner; which Violence once begun on their part, was fo continued and carricd on by us, that of the fifcy Moors, we fent more than forty away, to make their Complaines to the Prophet in the other World. The reft we fent home to Melinde to carry the News; which, as we afterGencral Mourning into the The General was treated here in a very courteous and Country. gor up with the Ille of Socotora, and from hence directed our Courfe to Aden, in the Road of which we calt An-1den chor, April 8.
This City acknowledges the Sovereignty of the Grear Turk, and it is the Key that lers himinto all the Treafures and Sweetneffes of the Happy Arabia. Our General coming hither in a Publick Figure, and having His Majefty of England's Letrers to the Baffa, was receiv'd with furable Honours, both by the Captain of the Caftle, and the Gorernour.
The King's Letrers were fent to the Baffa, whofe Refidence was at Zonan, fifteen Days Journey up into the Country from Aden: And nortly after two of our Merchants, with a parcel of Cloth, were fent after them. The Baffa was extreamly kind and civil ; but becaufe enerrio they had not the Grand Seignior's Patent, he rold them, menty He cou'd nor now give them leave ro fetrle a Factory; however, they fhou'd be permitred a free undifturb'd Trade, borh for buying and felling, and fhou'd pay no Cuftom: In Confideravion of which Favour, he wou'd take thar Cloth they brought with them, for a good Handfel.
The Turk having been fo civi! to them, chey were forc'd to let him be thus civil to bimfelf; the Poinr of a Free 1 rade at Aden, which was gain'd, being a Confideration valuable enough to make amends for the Cloth. So leaving thefe Merchanes to their furure Succeftes in that place, we fer Jail from Aden for the City of Moba, whi- sobe ther we came fune the Eleventh.
This lies up higher upon the Red Sea, about forty Leagues from Aden: 'Tis the Grand Staple for all Indian Trade; whatfoever Cairo, and skexndria; and all chore Parts are fornin'd with, coming from hence.

The General was treated here in a very courteous and refpectul manner, and our Occafions obigged us to lie in

The Perfons we had flain, were Gentlemen of the beft Quality in Melinda, and many of them of the Royal Blood., Twas high time for ns now to get our of thofe Seas; and 'rwas nor confiftent with our Safety, after chis Action, to ftay any longer within the reach of Pemba and Melinda, or any other place that mighr pretend ro 2 Concerm in the Revenge of thefe Moors Death.
The Month of Decenber was going off apace, when rhis Circumftance happen'd, and the Winds (unfavourae ble to us) kept us toiling and beating ap and down at Sca, till the fucceeding Faruary was far fpem; then we fell in with a Clufter of Ilands; as fecure a Rerrëar for us as was poffible, and where we had no fear of Enemies to examine or forbid us entrance: For here indeed were no Inhabitanes at all, not a reafonable Crearure, ci-Deskan vil or barbarous to be found, in all the whole. Number. Inapa And yer che Iflands, upon many Accounts, very well deferving the pretence of fixed Inhabicants, as well as the freguent Vifits of Travellers and Sea-men :' For they arelike Io many Groves of Coco and Palmeto-Trees; the Rivers are full of delicate Fifh; fuch Numbers of Turcle-Doves, every-where fluttering about, and withal to very tame, that a Man may take twenty Dozen a Day only with his hands. They are ar leaft twelve or chirteen in number, and being wholly deftiture of Inhabitants, we call'd them the Defolate Inands.
.The uncertain Winds, which hinder'd our brisk Pro grefs at Sea, continu'd till March the Thirtieth, when the Wefterly Monfons began to blow, by which means we this Road till the latter end of the next Month. Then our Refolutions being fix'd for Cambayn, in Guzurat, we fet out in profecution of that Defign, and puting in ar Sokotorn again, (where we had very troublefome Expériences of the frong S. W. Winds, thar blow there at this Seafon of the Year) we made ir Sepeember the Sccond, by that time we reach'd the Coaft of Din. And now 'rwas that we were guilty of that faral Miftake, that proved fo grear a Detriment to the Noble Company, as well as an entire Ruinc to all the Merchants and Mariners concern'd in the Ship.
Orr Gencral was inform'd (tho' the Informer was a Moor, and therefore perhaps not credited) that thete were fome particular Dangers of Sholes and Lands atrending us, which required great Skill and Acquaintance with rhofe places, as well as Care and Diligence to avoid. Befides, he was offerd for a fmall matter, to have a skilful Pilor, that hou'd infallibly conduct his Ship into the Porr he inrended for.
Bur unluckily for us, this good Offer was rejected, and ourhead-itrong Mafter defpis'd the affiftance of a Forcign Pilor; and fo we did (as it was foretold of us) run our Ship upon thofe Sholes, to the undoing of us all. We faved all the Men indeed in the Boats, tho' they were loaded to a high degree, and we had eiphteen Lcagues to the Shoar: But all the Goods and Treafure, and the Ship is felf, were irrecoverably loft.
Providence took care of us in this Diftrels, and proy'd a far better filot to us, than (as we had laiid our Defign) we had been to our relves: For we did all we theirecrepe cou'd, ro fall in with the River of Surat; which if we had done, we had been fwallow'd up of the Portuzueze, that lixy ready with five Frigars at the Bar of Surnt, to catch us when we came. Bur now inftead of this. Courfe we flip'd infenfibly into the River of Grudeve:, fome five Leagues to the Sourhward of the Bar; the Governour of which Town, a Bamion, gave us a very comfortable Entcrtainment.
From hence we travell'd by Land to Surat, where we had a Factory, and a Friend of our own Nation (Captain Hiarkins), of a.confidarable finterett in the Mogul's Court, tho at /gre at the time of arr Arival
The Gcneral, ard the beft part of the Company, took a Journcy to pigra, incending from thence to ftrike into Pcrfic, and fo go home that way. As for my felf, and two or three more, we had the good Luck to tall in with an honeft Portugueze-Prief, who (not ar all tainted with the common Prejudice and Spice of his Nation againit ours) very generouly undertook to provide us a fafe and good paffage to England, or at lealt to Portugal; which he as faithfully perform'd.
So after the Toil and Latous of two Years and half, but to how little purpofe, is plain, by the forcgoing Circumftance) we recover'd the light of our Native Country again, Sept-17. A.D.16к2.

\section*{The Circumftances of the unjappy Voyage of the other Ship the Union, in ber way to Priamañ. Written by.Henry Morris, at Bantam, Sept. 14. A. D. 1610.}

WE have heard before, how the two Ships, the Afcenfon, iand Union, were parted by a violent Storm ; after which they each of then ran their feveral Courfes of Adventures; But on both fides plunged inso very grear Misfortunes.
The \(\tau_{\text {nion }}\) having lof all hopes of mecting her Companion again, to fecure her felf from the fatal Effects of the ter 2 Refrefhment here for fome twenty Days, they made away to Tanzibnt; where they had much the fame Entercainment by the People of that Illand, that the ocher Company had at Pambe : Firft kindly ufed, and then an Ambuif laid ro knock them oithe Head. Some of the Company were loft in this Skimifh, and the reft with much difficulty recorcr'd their Ship again.
After a confiderable time fpent at Sea, and litele or no way made, (and befides a good part of the Men quite down with the Scuriy) they ftecr'd back again to the Ifle of St. Latorence, intending to itay ticrerill their Men were recorerd; and the contrary Monfons that were then blowing, had finth'd their tared period. They fell in upon the Weft-fide of the Ifland, inro a very large and cpacious Bay, calld by the Natives Cenquomorra, the County all about which is icry fruifful and pleafant to the Eye
Here the Captain, and fome others, venturd to go athore upon a Vifir to the King of that part of the Infand and they had this encouragement to it; that many times before the Englifl Mcrchanes had done io, and had mer with very Conrteous Entertainment: Birr char litrle Stock of Civility and Good Manners, which was amongtt there Barbarians, was, it feems, quire fpent before they came ic felf inco a little pofture of defence, the was prefently They afture encompafs'd with foch Swarms of Praws and grea: Boats, the Ship, and and chofe fo boldly making up to them, that they thorght ate repuld and thofe lo boldy making up to them, that they thorght hey muft immediarely have been taken withour any more adoe. Bur the grear Guns quickly feattcrd this Flect of the Natives, and made the Ship more room pecially after forme of their Boars werefonk, and the Men thar filld them were tore in pieces with the Shor. This fruck fuch a Terror into the reft, that they accounted it as much Prudence to kecp our of the way for the furure, as gocd Fortune to have efcap'd the paft danger.

They faid fourreen Days in the Bay afror this Fight: in which time the Natives made a fecond Attemps, follow'd with the like ill Succesf; which difhearter'd them to thar degree, that now they wou'd not my their. Formane any more in that kind; bur took their Revenge with Itanding all afmore and gazing upon the Ship. And they aboard feeing them in this fit pofture toreceive a Farewel, brought the Ship a linle nearer the Shore; and fo giving them a whole Broadfide, which broke into the thickeft Ranks, and made a horrible wide Lane amongft them, they took their Leave and wenr off.
Being our at Sca, the Winds prevented their reaching Sokororc, and the Winterly Monfonsbcing come, for thar and other Reafons, they refolv'd not to fteer for Cambana: Tiner po They concluded therefore to dirett rheir Courfe to \(A=h e n\), rom St. where chey arrived the Twenty feventh of Fu'l. The King A.D. 160\%; here was made their Friend by diligenr Applicarion, and Cone so here was made their Friend by diligent Application, and Cons to good Prefents; buc the Hollcnders, who alpire to the univcral Trade of the Erfl-Indies, made a confiderable oppofition : Yet Matterswere fo compos'd berween the Ho!- Their Trade londers and them, that they drive a pretry handfome Trade there with with the Guäurets, trucking our Englifh Lead and Clorh drGumerats. for the white and black Buties; or Guàurit Clorh.
- Some time fpent here this way, they went to Priamen, Go to Prios: upon the fame Ifland of Sumntra; where they fell intomen. Trade fo fine and flourithing, that the Happinefs of thei Setulemert there, did feem to make fufficient Amends for all the paft Misfortunes of theVovage.

All Bufinels ended here, and a good Lading of Pepper got into the Ship, they fet Sail out of this Port for Exgland bur with ill Succels, and Reperition of the former, or worfe Difafters.

Laftly, Suckar, feared on an Iland in, tie midft of the Sutom. River, inkabited moftly by Dyers and Weavers, which ferve all the Counsry round abonc.
Tis twenty Days Journcy between this place and \(C_{\text {an }}\) comener dabar, and the way not a litie difficulr and dangerous, becaufe of the raft. Woods and Defarts to be paffed thro: This Ciry is govern'd by a Vice-Roy, and is mach frequented by Merchants out of Perfia, Turker, and all parts of the Indies.
'Tis five Diys foumey from hence to Grees, the firft Town upon the Frontiers of Perfia, after you are pafid the River Sabaa, which divides thefe two grear Empires one from anorber.
Between this place and Hifpaban, we pals'd through Rivosim Ven, nored for plenty of Felts and Carpers; Parra, Paban divides tr nani, and Godann, for the Quantiries of Raw Silk fhey norgen and produce. Ta which alfo ought to be reekoo'd Goras a very handfome Town; which drives 2 mighty Trade io Raw Silks, Quilts, Carpers, and the Iike.
We came next to Hifpaban, 2 City of grear Ettient \(\begin{gathered}\text { Fipadai }\end{gathered}\) Trade, and Fame, and now of late, the ufual Refidence of the Kings of Parfic. The People are wonderfully curions in making Velvets, Sautins, Dâmasks, Ormurine, and Perfian Carpers, Girdles, and Saftes. Here's 2 con rimual Trade of Drugs, Spices, Jewels, Silks wrought as well as raw. Cond our Ships lade with fafery in che Perfian Gulf, a profitable Trade might be planted bere : For no lefs than fifty in the Hundred may be gain'd from Or mus to Hifpchan, and that in eighty Days Travel. The commorio Commodities to be brought from England hirher Thould for Pofan be Tin, Copper, Brafie . Kerfies for and Broad Cloth for the Merchanes and berter fort - Caple, ound lers, Velvets, Clochs of Gold and Tiffue, with fine Linen for the King's Sultans and Nobility. Befides all kinds of Warlike Farpitare, which the Perfians will be very good Cuftomers for
We went from this famons City to Bagdar, 2 Town Beada: wo Miles in compafs, and feated on the River Tigrix. Tis very populous for the bignefs of it, and 2.Man never fails raceting raft Crowds of Strangers and Travellers here, it being a common Road into Tunkr, Perfa, Arabir, and all trofe parts.

Here we embarkid for Ba'fora, a Town plansed near Basion He Perfian Galf, ftrengthned winh a good Garrifon, and 2 confiderable Power of Shipping, and is very near as big as Bagdar. It muft needs be a profitable City to the Grear Turk, in whofe hands it is; for the Country abour it is vaftly fruifful, and the Trade thither fo greas that chere comes into thar Port from Ormus alone, every Moath, feveral great Ships, furnith'd with all forts of endicn Mcrchandize.
We proceeded in our Voyage from Balfora to Criffa; on the Coaft of Arabic Felix; and from thence to the famous Ifland Bahnrem, in che mid-way berwcen Balfora and Ormas. Here'ris that they finh fof Pearl; in the Months Beatmi of fune, Fuly, Ausuft, Sepiember; and thofe found about this Ifland, are reckon'd fome of the nobleft and beft in all the Eiftern World.

Having vifited Calari, a Townon the Coaft of Mrabic csian Falix; and fo pals'd by Land to Shimif Din; my Defign was to have gope for Aman, to Sir Hent Midileron. ber undertanding of his barbarous Ufage ar Mchco and: chat he was carried in Chains to the Baffa of Siner, a corm fiderable way up in the Country,:I tum'd off to Lima on the Perfian Gulf, where I embarked for Zocotora, but was driven by a parcel of Pyrates to land at Soar, 2 Coaft Town not far from Lima. Bur this was but our of the Frying-pan into rhe Fire; an elcape-out of the Hands of Farkals at Sea, invo the power of worle Kmaves ar Land: For here the Partugueze inform'd the Governour againft me, and having made him believe I was a Spy, gor me to be deliver'd inco their hands; and a Man's greareft Enemies con'd hardly wilh him in worfe, fappole him our of the Dcvils.
Having me in their power, they fent me to Mujcat, 2 fmall Ifland, where they have a Garrifon, and fome Shipping; and here I mutt have lain in everlafting Bomdage, had not an honet Englifh Jefuir I mer thers, procured my Releafe from thence.
From Mafcat I was fent in Chains ro Ormur, crofs the Mouth of the Perfien Galf: This Ifland is about thirty onman. Mile in circuit, and is certainly the drieft loland in the World. All their Warer, Wood, and orther Neceffaries, are brought out of the adjacent parts of Peffia, which is nor above twelve Mile from thence. It's famons for the Quantiries of Salr it produces, and the Fifhery of Pearls: There is indeed 1 very great Trade driven there for all orts of Merchandize almoft. Spices, Drags, Sillks, fine Tapiftry, Pearls, Horfes, which are from hence rranfoorced into Indis. The Portugu-ze have a Caltle, and a good Garrión here Afrer fome ftay biere; I was fent away for Gear; in our

it, which I will not omit, and thatis, that the Rortupueze have no Fortallalong this River, inor cainor accomplifh it peihaps, ifthey atrempred it, the Counnry People herem abours.keeping them in very grear awe and fubjection. The Commodities that the place does vent, are Cloths of all forts, (efpecially light Colours) 7 Tin, Lead, Iron, Spices, particularly Pepper and Cloves; then all your Calicoes, Pintadoes, Quilts, Carpets, E'c. go off here in grear Quanticies, and as very, rearonable, rates. The Councty yields and makes fo many of thefe fort of Commodicics, that they are exreamly cheap, and a little Stock will keep 2 fubftancial Trade of this kind going on here. UBetides, you may fore your felf with feveral verystood truigs here; and a Ship-load of Opium almoft (the Soplis 10 na caral and kind to thar. Drug in parciculas) which wou'd be a very good Commodity ar Bantam, and the parts thereabouts, as well as the Stuffs mentiond before.
Leaving the Coaft of Sixhte, we came to Din, in the Dit: Kingdom of Cembrga ; 'tis the ftrongeft Town the Porrugurze have in all this Province, and fends out crery Ycar 2 great mimber of Ships laden with Varieties of Merchandice, for Ormur, the Red Sea, and ocherparss.
From hence we pals'd to Gon, the ene of the prefent Voyage, and the place of my doleful Caprivity.
The Portuguste have no more important place, no fecurer Retrear, no finer Spor in all the Ealtern World rhan this. It ftands in an INand chirty Miles in compars, as pleafam, convenient, and fit for Commana, as any thing can do. 'Tis furrounded with feveral Villages, intermix'd with Gardens, Orchards, and delightful Woods; but all the while 'rwas my Prifon, which was fufficient to cait a Horror apon the moft charming Arpearances in Narure.

\section*{The Vooage of Mr David Middleton, to Java and Banda. Taken out of a Letter written by bimfelf to the Compary, this being the Fifth Voage Jet out by them.}

WE Saird our of the Downsthe esth of April, in the good Ship the Expedition of Liondon; and with 2 mixture of foul and fair Winds, which blew in their turns, we reach'd Soldanic by the toth of \(A x y y / f\). Wepafid from hence to Bentam, withour any remarkabl Occurrent by the way, and twas in the beginning of Decenber thar we gor thither. We foupd the Surre of Affairs alterd here for the worfe from what it had formety been; the prefent Gorernour being 2 very mourBlefome, coretous, exating Perfon, encroaching apon our Privileges, and not allowing us the Liberies that ufed to be granted.
Having provided in the beft manner \(I\) con'd for the Quict and Security of our Factory under that diftemperid Circumftance, I let Sail for the Moliucec;'s the 18 th of the fame Month, puting in at welle of Bengeia in the Prowe had the Wind and Srream fo powertully againft us, and we labourd with our Slip to lo little parpole, that we were oblig'd ro alter our parpofe for the Moluccas', and fo bear up the Halm for the Ines of Banda, towards which we were carried away a main.
When we came chither (which was in the beginning of managed according to the Pleafure of the Dutch No Sail cane into the Road buit they woid ake as much of the Lading asthey pleasd, and echer nor pay ar. all, or pay at their own nime and price accoraing to their own Confciences; which made it indeed next ro no payment ar
all. And then there muft be no correfpondence with the People of the Country, and if a Ship brought Cosimo- गranry of divies ever fo rendible chere, and atrempred bur to land trommo. them, thefe impudent mafterfal Hcllenders won'd immed;ately play the Oxdnance of the Caftie upon them; and by this Means they had gotten feveral Jencks of confiderable burthen into cheir Power, which came chither upon an honeft defign of Trade. The Inhabitancs of the Town of Latror were very willing to deal with me, and Lume kiod rell me their Spice, but they con'd nor do it withour the ifite \(E_{\text {m }}\) leave of the Dutch with whom they were then link'd in a friendhip, and to whom I moft go to beg 2 Trade if I meani to have any. However I underftood thar they were at War with che Illands of Püloweg and Putioria, whio thicrefore won'd not fend me to ask leave of the Dutcb ro buy their Spices
But then the grear Difficulty, was, to manage the Trade with them. withour provoking the Dutch to adt of open Violence and boftifity. I had now received an exprefs Commandment from the Governour of the Caftle, and the Vice-Admiral to come in with my Ship, and not to ride in the Road where I did; which Command Idid in aspecremptory a manner refure to obey, ha: ving the Examples of feveral Sliips unjuftly detaind therè before my Eves Andfarther I pur my félf into the beft pofture of Defence in cafe of ani atrack, which I bad reafon toexpect. Yer that all things mighe be manng'd as fairly and incffenfively co our fide as migbt be (clpecially fince Intereft and Poiicy required it to be fo) I yied ed fo far as to write a Letrer :o know whecter they woo'd deal with me chemfelves orl tet the People of inatitor do ir; and if not that, then whictice I mighr withour offending them Trade with the Iflands of Putowng and Pultrí.

Qlober the cth. \(\therefore\) Whin we came bither we found Besum two of ont pitincipal Factors dead, aind almoft all the Goods we left there; as that otur op in the Warc-honfe; very lime or none having gone off, efpecially of ous Cloch which lay all upom our Hands. However'iwas nollerable good Forcune to have fucceeded fo well at Puloway; to bave out run the Dirtch in the point of. Trade there chis Year, and brought off a good lading of Spice to handComely; tefore their very Faces; while ehey themfelves cou'd not get a pound. This was fo grear 2 Pain and Nor. tification to them to foe ins ftill paffing to and fro with our laded Ships; that chey refolved to rake any Courfe to pur an end to ic. They thought of coming to cake the whole Illand, and fo make but one bufnefs on's, to plunder us of our Spice; and revenge chemfelves upon the People forfellingit wus. And they actually brought np their Ships in order to make the Auempt, but providence fought againft them in the conurary Tide, which fet their Ships to the Weft fide of the 1lland, and won'd not ler them Land. So that for all this and their many orher Plors to cacch me by the way, I brought the Effeeds of my Trade at Puloway to Bantam in Gafety. The whiole Amount of my Lading was 139 Tun, 6 Cabhys, \(\frac{2}{4} .121\). of Numoegs; and . 622 Suckets of Mace, which makes 139 Tun, 9 Cathrges, \(\frac{2}{4} 21\). of Mace; befides which, I left with one of the Factors, 24 ? \(\mathrm{tr}, 7\) Cachages, 8L which coft with Charges 2507 i \(\frac{1}{4}\) Rials.
I left Orders with fome of our Factors to put in for a flare in the Trade of Diamonds at Succadanin in Bornieo, and having femled that Concern as well as all ochers that detain'd me there, I fer Sail from Bantam November thet itch and had a good Paffage to Soldamin, where I Anchored Fonuary the 2 Ift, and from whence I made all imaginable Difpatch for Englind.

\(1+\)Oming ro an Anchor in the Road of CapeVerd, we ftaid chere fome time, to lay in a Recruit of frein Water, and repair what was defective in our Ship-Tackling; having had fome lirule Misforanes of that nature by the way. And indeed, all things conficer'd, I know nor a more convenient Road for thexe puipoles, and all others almoft chai may invire a Ship, than this of Cape Verd is: For befides the plenty of good frem Fih, and the advantage of Warering here, 'tis very fit for the Difparch of Burinels, and it is not ar all our of the way.
As for our Courfe from hence to the Iine, we conctudied with one Confent to Sail S. S. W: for about-fixcy Leagues, ther to ftecr'S.S. E. rill we grew near the Line, and to ro hale over Eafterly.

By the latrer end of Fuly we made the Bay of Soldanios whicre we found the People as beafty and brutih as they have crer uled to be reprefented, bur not near fo free and yeady to Trade as they furmerly were. 'Twas a very hard matter to perfwade them to bring any Cattel at all to us (we were forc'dto bribe and coart them to it), and Befides, Old Iron was now no current Money amongft then, and thofe brave Trading Days were over, when 2 Mariccud purchale a far Ox, or two or three good Sheep, for an tron Ringe or 2 few Hobnails. Copper was, ar this cime alt in all amongt them and they wou'd rake nothing tone pieces of this Metal, cur tbree or four, or fix Inches Iquare;: and one of thefe was the Price of a Sheep, which conidering whar they were, was dear enough.

What the Reafon of this alteration fhou'd be, is uncerLain: Whecher thofe plentiful Markers of Cartle they us'd to bring down from the Mountains, were Spoils naken from orie another in Wars, and fo they pur them of to others, as they rook them themfelves: Which if twere fo then' 'is probable, that the Reafon why they fo highly vaWued Iron in thofe Days, was its nfefulnef to them in theis Wars for headiog their Darts and Launces, and cönfequently that it grew our of Requeft amongft them, when 2 General Peace was made, and their murdering W'capons laid afide. Or "is poffrble, that the Durcch, by their ovengrear Liberality", May have poffibly help'd to fpoil the Trade here : For as "is their Humour, to confider only their own prefent Occafions, withour confulting the Ad vantage or Intereft of any that are to come after them ; fo ris very likely, that they by giving thefe People fome-exravigant Rates for their Commodities, may have taugho them how to expect and infift upon the fame with all other Cuftomiers. They have more chan once fpoild the Trade \(\mathrm{fo}^{2}\) in other places abroad in the World, and "tis nor increctible that they flou'd do fo here.
We reckon this Bay of Soldanin to lic fome fourcen The Diaxt Leagnes N. N. E. from the Capc of Good Itope, and ten of ther Cht Leagues N: by W. from Cape Erlfo; both which Capes of ofind ith may be feen pretty plainly out of the Bay. But the two and ape Capes are parted alfo by another grear Bay befides; which seddeme. is diftant from thaz of So!danic abour three Leagues; and all the Ground berween is low, marfiy, and plaihy, the effel pertaps of the Water brought off from the Nountairs thiar ftand of cither fide. Let 2 Ship, when fic comes in for the Bay of Soldania, bring the Northern Poior of it to bear W.N. W.-N.W. and by W. thwart of the Ledge of Rocks, near she Shore; (which will then be taid in the Suratop, as it were between the Table and the Su gar-Loaf) and the may find good Anchor-hold, and ride fafely in four, five, or fix Fathom; according to ber Dranght.

'Tis worthy of Obfervacion too, that the Main-Land, tho " ir be chirreen Leagues diftant, yet rums away fo to the W. and by W. that there is litte more than Three Points open to let in the N. W. Sea, which is always here the moft formy and troublefome. There's good Filthing abour the Bay for Millers'or a Fih very like them) Sineirs, Thombacks, Dogs, and a fmall fort of Whales: And all abour the Rocks, Limpets, and Mufcles in abundance. We obferv'd a fort of Tree growing hereabour, that bears Tom Davis 2 Fruir in bignefs and form refembling a Pine-Apple Vogage, ith; the Seeds of which were all entirely caten out of theHusks Truic wike by the Birds, and the Husks left ftanding in their Natural Bix-Applen. Order upon the Tree. Thefe Husks were more foft and fpongy than thofe of a Pine-Apple, tho' ctherwife like them: The Tree it felf is low, and fpreads into a conirderable breadth at rop, and the Leaves of it are like our Englifh Houlleek, only nor quite fo thick.
I believe, with fome good Reafon, that the Country might be culcivated into a very excellemt Plansation for ail forts of Herbs and Trees; and that our Englifb GardenPlants wou'd thrive to miuch higher degrees of Perfection here than ar home, to the very grear advantage of al chat thou'd refreth here, if any wou'd be fo generous as ro begin and nfake the Experiment. In horr, Narure has done fo much to our hands, in order to the making the whole Councry a Garden, that Ars has bur a very little left to perform, to make it as perfect as need be delired.
We fer Sail from hence, directing our Courfe to the Ile of Madagaficar, and came to an Anchor in St. Aughftine's Bay. The People of the Counrry carried it to ons juft as they of Soldania did; and bur chat 'ris pretty cermin, shat there is no intercourfe between them, one woud otherwife have thought, that they had made a Bargain togerher to ftarve all the Cbriftian Ships thar come into the Roads. They are a ftour hardy People, fir for the Wars, and 'tis reported of fome Skill in Martial Difcipline; but withal exceffively treacherous and falle; fo that whoever comes amongt them, muft be fure to ftand well upontheir Guard.
* Befides the Tamarind-Trees, which the Country hm as Lgnum Vira, and very white, but carries 2 inall brown Pith in the middle of it; whecher any kind of White Saunders, or no, I cannot tell. Here's allo 2 Plant very like 2 Sompervive, and for all I know, mighr yield as good an Aloes as chat does: There's a great deal to be found of it in thofe parts, tho the Savages have hardly any knowledge of the Ufe and Virue of it Sailing from hence mowards the Line again, we met with feveral Currents, which pur us out confiderably in the Reckoning of the Ships way and motion. Sometimes a Current fecting to the Southward affected us, which as twas againft us in our Courle, from the more Southerly lanitudes of Madagafear, to parts nearer the line; to made us fall fhort in our true way by fome leagues, of what in Judgment might have been allowed. Again, fometimes a powerful Currems fetting to the Northward, reach'd us of 2 fudden; which going along with us, as much difturb'd our Reckoning, by making us run more Leagues chan the true Courfe of the Ship in fuch 2 time wou'd amount to.
The former of thefe Currents was the moft difcernible for the two next Days, after our fetting out from St . \(A x_{-}\) gufine's Bay, when we were about 21 Dcgr. South Lat but the later, which fer to the Northward, kept with us concinually eren to the Line, and after we had crofs'd the Line, till we were in more than 5 Degr. North Lat. ar which time we loft the Current, and again began to find the force of another fetting to the Sourhward. This Current followed us for fome three or four Days; and then in about 7 Dcgr . North 1 ar , 2nother fetting to the Eaftward, fucceeded in iis room, the Effects of which were more or lefs difcernible from thar Larirude, till we were almott come up winh the Duas Irmanas. Thefe are two lirde Elands, which bear W. by S. and E. by N. of each orther; and are diftant abour \(7 \frac{1}{2}\) Leagues from the Weftern Poim of Zocotor.s.

We came to an Anchor in a certain Sandy Bay in the IIte of Zocotora; abourt the latrer end of this Monch; and here, to ourt very greax Comfort and Refrethment, wemet wirh fuch plenty of Fint, as gave all our whole Fleer fome Merals, and wourd hare given more, cou'd we have pre fervid what. weraok fweet ming good.

We pur our of this Bay, into the Road of Tamerin, the \(T_{\text {mertin. }}\) principal City of the Inand, and ordinary Refidence of the King. 'Tis feared at the Foor of Ceveral hish ragged Hills 'ris adorn'd with a Caftle, and the King's Palace ftands upon the rop of one of the Hills overlooking the Town. The Laritude here is az Degr. 30 Min. the Variation of the Compafs 19 Degr. 18 Min. and the Roasi. lies all open between E. by N. and W. N. W. I fent fome Gerieralag of my Men aftore, with ä handforme Prefert to the King; diepren uends which he very kindly accepred, and to expreis his Grar:- cre King of tude fent me back a Prefert of Goars, with an hearty 2 zisoro. Welcome ro his Country, and Invitation to come athore and fee him.
When I landed, I was receivid with a Difcharge of his Goes afore grear Guns, and conduated in the beft fort to his Court. and his Enwhere I belicve every thing was contriv'd rimake as good a Shew, and ro give me as great an Idea of the Grandeur of this litele Prince as might be. The Enretminment I had there, was as good as the fuddennefs of the occalion wou'd permit. Bur as for his Deportmenr towards me, I mult ay, that it was very, free, civil, and obliging; confidering the violent Prcjudices of the Mabomerans, for the mof part, (and the Arabians efpecially) nor only againft the Principles, but the rery Perfons and Converfation of Chrifilians
I con'd procure no Aloes of him, for that was all fent away before (as he alledged) to his Father, the King of Tartack, in Arabia Felix; under whomindecd he was no more than a Vice-Roy in this little Kingdom of zecorora. He granted us free liberty to take whar Water we had occafion for here, and (which is a Favour nor gransed to other Nations) withour paying forit roo. Bur as for Wood, it feems, 'ris a very icarce Commodity in thofe parts, and there he cou'd not furnifh us, withour ready Moncy; nay, we wou'd have any, we muft'give a very grear rate.
The rruth: on't is, the whole Iftand is noching bur a Lump of Rocks and Cliffs, and there's hardly any room or Timber-Trees to grow, 'tis all fo fill'd up with Stones, and 2 hard barren Earth, almoft unfit for the Niourithment of any fort of Vcgetable. I know of none of any fignificancy growing there, but the Plant that yields che produation Aloes, and rhe Shrub, or Tree, whofe Tear is thar Drug, which wecall in Europe the Sangrux Dracons; and then the Date-Trees, which aftord them indeed theirchiefeftSufter nance. The Dare-Trees, 'tis true, are pretry numerous for they make the beft of their Bread of that Fruit: As for the others, the whole Illand affords no more chan abour'a Tun of Aloes inia Year, and a very inconfiderable quanity of Sangus Dracoms
The Animals that are here, arefcarce roorh a mention except it be for the fewnels and meannels of then'; they are as forry as the Councry thar breeds them, and fhew the Poverty of the Soil they live on, by the Dwarfimnefs of nyworths ro them Stature: And yer they are dear Pennyworths to them that will undertake to buy them, for 2 Cow goes ar twelve Rials of Eights a Goar ar one, Sheep and Henseach at half a Rial apiece. As for che Dates chere's no having them under twelve Rials per Hundred and a parcel of Wood, as much as an ordinary Man's Burden is valued at \(1 s\) and wou'd cortainly inftead of that be ar il. if zocotors with that fcarciry of Wood lay as far from the Line as England does.
The King fees the felling of all Commodiries himfelf, King of \(z_{0}\) that any Strangers Trade for upon this IIand; 'tis he that cesernicure lets the Price, and driyes the Bargain, nor leaving it to the trade poicy in Fidelity of any of his People, but paffing all through his own hands. Nay, none of his Subjects dare hold any Correfpondence wirh Forcigners, or to much as fpeak to them, fill he has had Intelligence of them, and began the Cone (pondence himfelf.' Indeed, he has littie to dowith any but the Arabs, who compofe his Guard, his Cours, this Nobility, and are all in all abour him; for as for the old Inhabitants of the Ifland, they are Slaves to the domineering Arabs, and live skulking up and down where they can find a fure Rerieat, like fo many Outlaws, or Perfons banifh'd, even in their own Country. Bur neither Arabss nor any orher, dare begin any Difcoutfe, much lefs 2 Trade wirh Surangers, till he has had Notice of cheir Arrival, and ferformed the Ceremony of bidding them Welcome.
He highly commended to us the Trade of the Red Sea, and the People of Adcn, and Moija, for their Civil Cess riage to Strangers; and Fair Dealing in all their Traffick And this was fo far a Mocive to us (that having loft our Seafon for going to Cnmbian, becaufe the Eafterly MonTon was already come, we concluded to go and viaris chele Trading Towns upon the Coaft of the Red Sin, and make Tome Experiment of the Good Humour of thée Perple:: Tho as Matrers afeevivards fell out, we had betterthave raken his Word fort, than bave gone thither to ury our

as much as his Looks. Now inftead of a cercmonious
Welcome, and a fer of high flown Turkijh Compliments, Welcome, and a fet of, high flown Turkijh Compliments
I was roughly demanded whar I had to do to come thi ther; and how a polluted Chriftian durf be fo bold a to offer to fet his Foor upon thar Country, where the Cit of their Holy Propher Atood a Bur the Burthen of Song was, that I mould write to my Men aboard the great eviclacd to Ship to periwadethem to come all athoar, and yield them felves and the Ship into his Hands, and he wou'd let us lhave the leffer Ship to carry us home again. Bur as I had proof enough of his Confience and Courrefic to be a ufficient Security for my erer trufting to either again; Co I did by a foornful rejecting of his Propofal, give him oo underfand that I thought ir as Ridiculor's, as i did him Impudent, for the making of it; and that I wou'd neyer purchafe my freedom from his Chains, with the lofs of my Honour and Honefty to thofe which had cnerufted me. 'Tis ques, he enforc'd his Perfvafions with an Argument fayengent in fome Circumftances, bur in my unhappy Srate ir was of no powcrat all: He threau'd if I did not comply he won'd rake away my Head; bue the lofs of that was not grear enough tomove me, having loft that which is more valuable than Life before. So I was carried ont of his Prefence loaden with great Fetrers and Iron Sbackles, to a filthy Dungeon where the vilet Malefactour wou'd hardly tave been beftowed, and into which'twas as bad as an Execution to go. But at the Intercefion of the Conful of the Bamians my lodging was changed; and I had the Favour to be removed into another Hole, where Ihad a dry tho' a hard Floor for my Bed, a grear Srone for my Pillow, and good Atore of Rars and Mice to keep mereompany.
In this Diftrefs I was very ofren vifitca by the Age whofe Bufinefs being to tempe me to betray my Truft, made hís Prefence more hateful to me than any of the \(V\) armin of the Dungcon.
'Twas a.great Nortification to him to hear our Ships were fo well provided with Vicuuals, and that they had ftock enough for two Years; for he expected that Ne ceffiry wou'd have brought them inro his Hands, fince they cou'd not have a Wind to go off cill the fucceeding May; but I knew that it was Matter of Faet, and 'rwas no fmall Comfortio me in my Misfortunes that they were o happily our of the treachcrous. Villains reach. My Men aboard roo had the Comforito hear I was alive, contrary to ere fint Repoit fpread abour of our being all cut off.
There was fome intercourfe betwixt us alfo to our mutnal Satisfaction, by the good Conduct and Courage of one of them, who boldly ventard his I.ife and Liber ty to come and fee me, and was permitted by the Turks fo todo, hoping to make their own Advantage our of it Now whilf I lay bere coninually expecting the laft Scene of my Tragedy to come on, fome Oficers came to the Town from the Bafha with Orders to bring me ap to him. This I knew to be but a Remove from one Dungcon to another, and only a change of Place bur nor of Condition and Circumftance to me. The Baßa was a bigger Manthan the Aga in his Quality and Figure; but of the fatne fize exactly as to Confcience and Honefty and as to the Point of good Ufage, ir was nor a Far thing matter whether I were in the. Hands of the Knave the Mafter, or the Knare the Servant. However to brearh, the fweet and pure Air, after the noifom Stench of a Dungeon was forme Advantage; and 'twas better to be upon the Road for a few Days, than to lie immurd the fame time in a recepracle of Vermin.
We fet our from Moba the latrer end of December, being 35 of us in all, who were to make our Appearanoc before the Br.ha at Zenam. This City is the Principal one of that part of Arabia Felix, diftant 180 Miles from Mobe to the N. N.W. and (according to my Obfervation made when there) in 16 Degr. 15 Min . N. Lar. feveral of our Friends amongtt the Turks and Arabiens themfelves, who had expreft a generous Compafition for me in my Confinement, and daily refreh'd mie with their Kindnels, did ar ourdeparture exprefs the like by their friendly Farewels, and hearty Withes for our good Surcefs 25 Zenan; and particularly by their Lerters to the grear Men about the-Bafton on our betalf. Nay one of them (the Conful of the Benniems) went thither a Fitthe before us, on purpoie to mollifie the rough Temper or the Brfbe, and ait the part of 2 Mediator for us. The moft remarkable Oblervationsthat occurrd in our way to \({ }^{\text {in }}\) enan, was that of the Cold we felt; which was indeed fo extream and piercing, that I think we had bien all ftaryd to Death, if we had nor been well provided with Fur-Gowns. The Air was prouy tolerable and temperare till after we had pass'd the City of Tits, which is four Days Journey from Molas; bur between that and Zenan it was fo fererc, thar being forcid to lie upon the bare Ground too, had it not been for tfic De rence of our Cloaching, I believe trie Cold woud have Extreumcold madeus tooftiff to hare thewn our Englifh breeditg, in between Zmai bowing and fcraping to the Bafbe by that time we gor to him. And in Zexan it felf we had every Morning the Ground covered with a hoary Froft, and Ice of a Finger thick in one Nights freezing; and all this while we were in the.Torrid Zrne, and tho' 'tis true that the Sun was:then on the other fode of the line in the Sourh half of the Torrid zone, yet I thould fiarce have believ'd that the Cold was fo cxitrcam in thefe parts thar lie fo direatly in his Road. if I had nor by borh thefe Sences had fuch conrincing Ucmonftrations of it.
The Tarks led us into Jenars wich a grear deal of Triumph, and the \(A g^{\prime}\) marcitid by us in a very tately manner, as if he had done fome very Heroick Action in betraying and leading us Prifuricis, that had ncither Arms nor Warning to defcnd our felves againft his Treachery. Asif we had been the Relick's of fome conquerd Army, and were broughr our of a bloody Ficld, where the Fate of a whole Kingdom had been determin'd by the Valour and Conduct of this mighty Man; fo were we brought inrothe City, and Itard at by the Mobble of Tarks and Arabians. And the Bafbn to contribure his Parr too, to the gracing of this foolifh Scene, fent our Shors, Drums, and Trumpers to meet us; lin'd all the way to the Caftle with Souldiers; and got all his grear Men together about him: No lefs than the whole Divan being fummon'd rogether upon this Occcafion.

When I came into the Room of Prefence (which was Sir tienry with 7 long Gallery, Ipread from one end to the other Mrougherer with Turkic Carpers, and as full of Grave Councellors'as roreve Bifo Kerit conld hold ) I found the haughty Turk firaing in Kingly State at the upper end of it, threaming no Icfs than Death to me and all my Company in his icrible forly Looks; and Eyes fparkling with Fury and Indignaand againtt us: His;Snile and Difcorrfe was no lefs Lofiy and imperious than his Looks; and I had little from Him but fuch fort of rade and barbarous Queftions, is I hadd from his good Servant the \(A g n\). He told mé however at laft that the Aga had done what he dia by his0rders, and that they came diractly from Conftintinople ; ánd twas the Grand Seignior's Pleafure chat all Chriftians that came into thofe panss flould be treared in this Manner, and herefore fince we were come upon that Forbidden Ground, our Lives and Fortunes were ar his Mafters dif pofal; and we muift wair till Orders came from Coart cither to Execure; Enflave or Difcharge us. This was our Scmenre, which when paft we were order d to our feveral Seat to pit places of Confinement; iny Men to the Comimon Prifon, 60 . and my felf to one a little beiter, in the Keepie's Honfe Tis true the Bafta was not. fo grear, his Air fo ftern and our, nor his Words fo fcaring ; but I had Prefence eough to Interpofe and Argae what I thoughr"conreniemt as well in our own Defence, as Refletions upon the fcandalous Treachery of Agra. But Innocence con'a be no Protection here, as well as breach of Faith and Truth no Crime; and the Bafha and his /ign were" 10 clofely link'd rogether in rbe Villainy, that one muit of necefiry defend whar tother had done. Yer Ithink'they ought both to have fpar'd the Grend Seignior's Repuration and not to have broughr him in for fracks in theScandal of their own privare Knaverics. They mult rob Ships, ur Throars, pillage, plander and imprifon Strangers and violare all the Lavis and Cuftoms of Narions, even rhofe thar are facred amongft the moft Barbarous; and chen upon the Precence of ourdeing Chriftians, thro" all upon the Grand Seignior's Orders; which is to Complitu ment him with the Title of Parrone to Thieres and Vitlains, and make him fo much worfe than theintefves as his Character and Figure is greater. And I make no Queftionat all, burthat (we being at that time join'd in a ftrict League of Friendfhip winh the Port ; the bars barous Orders to ufe us fo, wou'd have beern publickly difown'd there, if the Matter had been fairly reprefented; and thefe Actions would have coft the prond Bafhe his lace and Honourif not his Head.
Now while we continued in there Circumiftances ac enan there were divers of the grear Men about the Biffor, which continually did us very good Offices winh priendea moft confiderab mot heartily for our Releare. The bour the Lieurcrant General of the Kingdom, the Coniful of or pour his Dife Barniams, and one or two more Arabicn Merctanct, the ctarge. Brinsams, and one or two more Arabicn Merchants; to every one of whom I muift äkknowledge a particular Ob- janneg. gation. Thefe gave me to undertitod (brethat time we had been fome 8 or tro Das here) that when the reft of our Conspany now expected were come np to Ziñan' weftould all befent back again to Kisbin. And after the Arrival of this part of cur Compant, the \(B=F_{\text {ha }}\) himfelf (bcfore whom I was orde'd to appear) confirm'd this ring are no News to me, and told me we fhould all renme to Moisn be lent lack 50 matis. and 29 more fouid be derain'd till all the Ships of India were come in, and then we thould have our full Difcharge sco.

As for our Goods he alledged he cou'd nor make a Surtender of them, for they were all put up to the Gram! Seignicr's Account, and fo was our Pinnace roo, and therefere cus of his Rower to redeliver; but all other things belonging to ws mou'd be reitored, and our Liberry thonid be infallibly fure when the time he had fixed for our ftay was cxpircd.
About the middle of the ficcecding Month, the time came on for mir departure to Monn, and I went to take my leare of the Befia, but a litcle before exalted to the figh Place and Dignity of a Vizier. His Pride being encreafed tosether with his Honour, he commanded me in a very imperious manner to look to ir, that neither I nor any of my Nation came any more into thofe parts; and'ris corain that he might have fav'd himfelf the Trouble of giving that Command, fince no Man thar had once been there and fo encerain'd, could ever be fond of coming the fecond time amongt a pack of fuch inhuman Barbarians as they werc. Bur when I begged on the behalf of my Nation, that (if any of their Ships thou'd happen to come into thofe partsbefore notice cou'd be given to Englend for the Prohibition) they might not be berrayed as we had been, but plainly told that they mutt not comechere, that they might know what to truft to: He pofitively refufed that they thould have any fuch warning; which I think was a Iufficient Proof of ai bafe Defign, and that he intended more the Plunder of Ships, than to fhew his Refpect to the Grand Seignior's Orders which were to kecp them from coming to Trade there.
This Ciry of Zenan is confiderable for ir's largenels, being fomething bigger than our City of Briftol, and ftrongly built for che moft part with Stone and Lime. The Wall that furrounds it, is indeed of Earth, bue 'ris ftrengthen'd with Turrets in crery part of is, by which mieans tis made a fubstancial Defence to the City. Befidesthere are two good Caftles, one to the North fide, feated upon a Hill, which overlooks the Tdwn, and defends that part from the wild Mountain People, that ufe to annoy it from thence; and another to the Eaft fide, which is the Beffr's Palace, and inclos'd with feveral Walls with Turrers and Bardements. 'Tis feared in a barren ftony Valley, and has not 2 drop of Water, but what's ferch'd out of Wells, and that they dig extreamly decp for too: And then for Wcod, tis as fearce and dear here as 'is at Sokotorn, whereas the pinching Cold 1 am fure requires no litule Plenty all hercabouts. Adjoining to the Wall of the Baffe's Caftic, is a large and fpacious Yard, where abundance of Women and Children are kept as Pledges and Sccuritics for the good and peaccable Behaviour of their Husbands and Parents under the Tur kij Government.

now I was fohappy as po take was my Prion too, wbich with my Company for Molir. The Turks have crected Several pablick Houres or Inns for, the Reccption of Travellers upon the Road; there's fire or fix of them be tween Zenan and Mobr, and they are buils and mainrain'd alrogether ar the Grand Scignior's Charge. The moft remarkable places thar we pats'd chro"in our Tour ney (for now we had a litule more heari as well as leafure to mike Obfervations than the firf time we went this Road) werethefe that fullow, Demarcs which is alout 40 Milcs from Zenan, a Town prettily built of Lime and Stone and divided into fire feveral parts, which ftand ar fome diftarec from one another like fo many diftinet Towns. This place is frouated in a lwect and fruirful Plain, and hasthe Blefing of Water ard all forts of Grain in grear plenty, being a kind of Storc-houfc of the neceffary Provifions of Life, from whence the poorer Nicighbouring Places Jraw the beft part of their Suffenance:
inges, is a conficicrable City too, being half as big as Tent or Ter. Zorm, and walld with a Mud-Wall, as moft of the Cities of Arabin (I havefen) are: 'Tis hemm'd in on every ficie with very high Hills, one of which has a fair and ftrong Caftle upon the rop of in. 'Tis good Travelling hereabouts, allforts of provifion being very cheap; and the Country has the Reputation of yielding fome quanzities of Indico, bur how much, or of what goodnefs I cou'd notlearn.

Eufras is a littie Town nor far from Tier, remarkable only for the Honour of affording a Burying place to fome celebrared Arabian or Turkifts Saint, whore Tomb hree is vifited every sth of fanuary by a vaif multirude of devour Pilgrims and Pcople of all forts. This Superfticious Company afrer they have performed fome ccrain idle Cercmonies here, do all jog away rogether to vifit the Holy Ciry of Mecka Moufa is a Town not grear but very populous, abour a Days Journcy from Mobr, the Country about which, ikewife yields fome ftore of Indico. And indeed all the chofe Towns thar wanted good Houfes were far from wanting Inhabitants to fill them. The Arabs do from with the Turks in all the plain and open Country ; and the Turks are Mafters in moft of thofe places as well as in the Maritime Towns: But in the Hilly Country the Arsbs are abrolute I. ords; they defpife the Turkijh Power, and com the Yoke laid upon the reft of the Country, and 2 Turk dares not Travel there withour a Pals from' the Ara ian Governour, in whofe Territories be is.
Our nert Stage was from this Town of Moufa no Moba, a place \(t 00\) well known to us, in refpect of our many an 10 a Diftrefles we underwentrhere. The common fort of Peo ple did in general difcover a very grear Satisfaction at our lafe return; and the diffembling Agn himfelf, who thought ie cou'd do no lefs. rhan congrarulate us upon this Occa ron, did it with all the counterfeir Joy, and Proteftation of is innocence that could be imagin'd. He treated us, carefs'd us at all the publick Feafts, fawn'd and flatrer'd as he us'd to do; fwore upon the Alcoran before a nu merous Affembly, that his Heart was ever clear of all Malice and Prejudice, and ever Mould be filld with true Lore and Kindsels for us. This Town of Moba which is one of the Turkifh Keyes to Arabia Felix, is not above one fixith part fo big as zenem. 'Tis a very. populous Town, bur wholly withour the Defence of Walls, -and has an ugly fituation in a Salt, Sandy, Barren Soil, clofe by the Sea fide. All Boars that bring any Goods'a hoar are enjoin'd to Land at the Key clofe by the Governour's Houfe, where they are overlook'd and warch'd, fo that there's no ftealing of Cuftom. Juft by whis Key rhere's a Placform, upon which are planted about a Dozen Brafs pieces, and at che Weftern end of the Town, there's a Fort furnithed with the like number of Ordnance, and for all that, I find this is all their ftrength.
Quickly after our return to Moba, the Darling came Gemedle dition of my and brought me News of the gocd Con-amom Agrecment made with the Bafo and now according roshe pren of Agrecment made with the Baffen, I thippd all my Cunipany appointed for thar purpofe aboard the Darling. 1 my felf and 29 more were to ftay behind till the Iner!an 160 n Ships were all fate come inro the Road; which thery dout:ed would be ondanger'd by us, thould whey fend mec avay to Sea before.
The Darlirs having got her Company, Saild off to the other two Ships of our klect, which lay in a gocd fecure Road upon the ibaffican Coaft. This Road they had found out in the time of my lmpritonmerre Name of in was \(A\) ifac Road, and irafforded at \(n\), the Name of it was \(A / f a b\) Road, and irafforded them \(a=m: c h\) Wood and Warer as they could ever nerd or defire, aid thar ar no dearer rate than their labour in fetcis. E it
The Pcople of the Country thercabours are as biack the Negroes of Guinee; and they are Melimetens on :he Sea-Coaft, but up in the main Land Chriftians, and Subjects to Prefter-3olm. As for thefe Borderers con the Sea, they go all naked, except a fmall Cloth abour their Waftes They were mighry free and forward to Trade with our the shir Ships, (tho' the Tarks did whar they cou'd to prevent their Trade wit murual Corre(pondence) bringing groar Nambers of Oxen, he frofk Sheep, and Goats, which they fold ar very mar nable of inc ca Rarcs; firt for dry Money, and afterwards for coarfe \(\sqrt{2} \mathrm{wecom}\) Callicocs, by way of Truck; which Commodicy they 7 ग. were more fond of, than Money it felf. Tho the betrer Ort of them do both feak and write the Arabick Lan guage, yet their own Vulgar Speech is vafty differene rom it, and not at all underfood by the Arabians their Neighbours.
Their King has his ordinary Refidence ar a Sea-Coaft Town calld Rabaita, lying to the Scuthward, towards the Streights of Bebel mende!. He fent forme of his principal Men with Prefents to our Ships, and to make them the Officr of any thing his Counrry afforded, which cou'd any way procure their Sarisfaction. I was very glad (as I had good Realon; thar my Ships were in fo good Cir camftances, and lay fo fecurely ar that lincle diftance from ine; as alio, that the Work of our Deliverance was o far gone on, as thar a part of my Company was actualy ar liberry aboard their own Ship.
But now 1 began to think feriounly and heartily how ro accomplifh my own cicape alfo (rogether with the Remainder of iny Company) out of this Neft of barbarous Infideis. 'Tis true, by the Balfa's Order we were to ftay till the Ships of Indice were come in; bur that was, if we cou'd

Cou'd not get iway befort And had no Scriple of Confience at all in the mixtiet, of mtempting somake my Efiape before the" time-came, that he prafix'd and forc'd meto agree to. For as "wwas the Higheft degice of Violence and lointtice in him, to Reire and detiain 师ie in what manner, 10 'twas joft and narural for' me, or any Man in that 'Cirtumftance, to endeavour :o' free himfelf from the Wrong and Injury that's done him as foon as he con. Liberty is a Privilege granted by Nature, and I cnjoy it as a Man, and to affert the Rights that belong to me in that Capaciry, is to aet agrecably to Reafon and a Narural Law.
But the Difficulcies of bringing this Project to perfeCtion, were far harder to bic temoved our of the way, than any Scruples of Confience concerning the Probity of it And if I coud but orice have accomplifidd the thing, I wou'd hare prov'd it to hare been jutt and righrcous afrerwards. Befides, I was the more obliged to look ro my felf, becaufe I was inform'd by fome of the Barfa's iniimate Friends, that nothing but fear wou'd make him bo: neft and truc to his Word, and thatif he cou'd brcak it withour danger, he won'd certainly do it. So that confidering chis ; befides the Kindncts I Hou'd do my felf by cleaping, 'twou'd be (l found) a picce of Charity to the Baffa too, becaufe hereby 1 thon'd put in cut of his power to play the Knave, and falffie his Word and Prooife.
Being apon the wair for an Opportuniry to pur this Plot in Execution, I bad a very fair and promiling onc pur into my hands, by the abfence of the Aga, who went our one Day with all the Great Men of the Town, to make merry at his Gardens; that lay at fome litric diftance from it. And to render che Opponanity more compictec too, the Sub-Baffa, cur Guardian, and all thc infcsiour Officers; went to a Racky-houfe, and gor drunk that Day'; which Depauch of theirs, as they tim'd it, was thic moft kind and favourable thing to our Bulinefs that con'd le.
Cur Ship the Derlite was the Davtefore come into the Road, and lay there waitins for Intelligence from us, who were Prifoners in the Town; which was allo permitted and aliow'd of by the Tulks, not imagining any more than an ordinary Correfipondencc.Marters wete thus agreed on between me and my Ccmpany, that 1 nibuld by fome very Politick Method be converd into thic Boar, that was to carty out Letrers (as was ufual) to the Dat= ling, and in thas Boat take up fuch 2 part of the Com: pany as it would conveniently hoid; and the reft fhould go and poffets themfleles of anorhcr Boat, that lay ready firted for their Service at one end of the Towni, and foall make rowards the Ship as well as we coud. And this was nor extreamly difficule to be prt in prattice, fince my Orders obfcr'd of their nor going all together in a Body, bur difperfing themfclves by two and three in a Company, there wou'd te no manncr of fi:ficicion of any fuch Defign; becaufe they had all their free libetry ro walk up and down aborir the Town ar pleafure. As for \(m y\) felf, I con'd not ftir without a Guard to attend me, fo that' 'twas imporfible for me to go to work that way'; and there was no means for me to ger-aboard, bur by purting fome very fine Trick upon my Kecpers. And all ank contri- things confider'd, 1 cou'd lighr of no terect a one than vanc io brt this, to pur my felf into an cmpty Cask, and fo amongf other Lading te rumbled inro the:Boar. 'Tis rune, I had bere a very clofe and ftraighe Prition on't; but yet as ftithing as'twas, it was better than that ar Mobers becaufe here was fome hopes of coming our again. So into my Barrel 1 went, and being our wpon the Water, I forid out the Head on't, to have liberty of Breathing, and Providence guided me fo bappily, that I came without Impediments to the place where my Company atrended me, and rook them in.
The orier Parry alfo managed their Bufincis fuccefsfully, and gor our to Séa withourdifturbanci, and we all met aboard the Darling. A fnall Number indeed of our Company by their own negligence, delay, and ill management, gare fuch an-Alarm to the Town, that they were difcoverd and interccpted in their paffage to the Boar where they flou d have been taken in; and to being cart ried back Prifoners, wcre like to have lof their Heads by the exrazagame Fury of the Aga; who now return'd from his Diverfion, जhas like to run mad with the Confufion and Tronble which this Efcape gave him. However, io add to his Eatic and Conrentmenr in chis Juneture; I reni him a Meffage to this effect: That if be did not fpectity the Y roogs. migess recciod, I would fire all the Sloips in tbe Roord; lanid Recrivid. batter the Town clout his Ears.

And as Circumftances now happen'd, I had Oppdrunities enough to mik: my Revenge; for there were fome confiderable Stuips in the Road alrcady, and ochersfurat came freft in, whilft lay in that tiftatinin opoture beforcige Town Now all the-Merchants and Great Mcn of the Trowntrat before defin's d mes, complentented and courted time zadiresd me it che moft. humble minner imaginible, for the fake of their'Ships', mind Jabour'd carneftly with the Aga to briag him to Terms withime: \(A\) Day hardly pastd teo, vichiout forie Precert of other from him; to keep me quiet", and to :ftop the Months of my grear Gung, which were now ready to focak \(\ddagger\) Language to him he did nor carc to nndertand. Even thic Baffi himfelf. (now forc'd to be honelt whether he won'd or no) (ent me his. Commendarions, and affir'd me ke was forry I was gone away in fo obfevie a manner, be canfe he had defignd to have difcharged me in'? way more honourable and beffrinis my Qualiry and Chara Aler.
I hcard all this Turkifa Difimulation wititi Scom, bin having it now in my powcr to right my felf, I gave tficina my laft Refolutions fo to do; and as the \({ }^{1 / x}\) rones \(I\) reccived there were realand fubtantial, fo in mort, 1 lecthcm know, thät I wou'd have anorice fors of Reparaticit than by Flattery and Carefs. My Demands wecte to have all my Men returnd fafe aboard to me; to have iny Pinnace (which they had feized reftered; ; and tocon Riais of Eight, in Confiderazion of the lof. 1 had foftuind, by the means of the Treachery: and \(W_{\text {iolence }}\) thene ofer'd me.
- The two firt Particulars were eafly agrecd ion and perform ; bur the latrer fof the Poyment of foimucli Money) woud not go down with them. Howerci, at laft, after many Conferences and Debares on borh fides, y yielded to take 18000 Rials, and fo 2 Peace was con cluded betwixt is and thicm for two Years from the Porr Peas ma of Moha, to that of Cennior, upon the Coant of Indici- mode. bur this for our betcer Sccinrity I woud have confim,'d of a Wriuing under the Bafa's swn Hand and Scal, which was promivd, but never perform'd: And this wasa Proof clear enough; that tho' xeceffiry had compelld them to make a Peace with is, they intended to bicak it as foon as they hidd opportuniry.
Having thus diffarch'd all our Concerns as Mobg, we jub: faild aivay for the Road of iffrb, where our Ships bad Come imo met with lo good Enrectainment before and where when we now came, we had plenty of Procifions broume in the Country People, and Meffengers from the King, to congrarulaze our fafe and happy Eicape from Molsa:
Here we peffd the cime in a pleafant Correfponiderice, anid murcal Acts of Kindnefs and Civility berween thefe People and us, till the latere end of this Monch, when we rouzd, to go look after a Turkijb Prize ; zrich Galleon that comes yearly frem Sues to Mabar ; whichil had the thore mind to rake, becaufe the Raffa and the Aga were confidcrably concemd in ber. \(\because\) But in this.purfair, having the Wind very mech axaintt us, and runining into tome Dangers, which our want of a Pitor expoid ns to, we were oblig'd to give ores that Defign:
We.went on now to the Sereighrs of Brbelmandy; in ca oa Sos profecution of our Tuditn Voraze: And here in chis'pafo satia lage we derected at once the Falihood and the Defign of insmas. that Report, made by the Tirks and Airabs concernaing this Surcight, \(w^{2}\) \% that the Southern Paffage between the I. land and the Coaft of difrich is nor navigable For Rocks No dmang in amd Shats and other tratibe thinns ; and that a Shis the Souticrer and Shals, and ocher terrible things; and that a Ship pacqe of thar will.go inno che Red Ser, muft go the Noithern R2L- Saseximotab fage berween the Inand and the Coaft of Aratia;, or nor at all.
I doubt not bur tie Turks do winh 'rwere unnarigable, os wou'd make it fo if they con'd; but thar Niamere has a Ctually made it fó; is as falfe, as to afirm no Paifage as all that way
Ouit Darilig wenr ketween the Illand, and the Coât of dfrick, and fennd the Paffrge at leaft three Leagues wide and foity Fathcm Water for ; part of the way, and nor che leaft appramisce of danget in the whiole paffage. Bur the Turks wou'd -make the World believeashe contrary, becaule the orher Streight is roe a Mile and half over; which may be fo fortified, that no Ships fhall come into the Red Sen, wirthour either asking them leave, or ftanding the Shock ef their Ordnanec.
The beginning of the next Month brought is intothe Road of Dcliffor, in the lifc of Toicotora, where I furnin'd iny Ships with Warer, and eraded with the King for what Aloes he had; which 1 think hè made me pive deare forthan fome of our Nation before, that had dealt with thim for the fime Commodity. A few Days ended what Balinefs we had to dohere; and fo holding cur Courfes Anite at in the way) to an Anchor in Swell, Road, the later nid of thie fame Month.

The Tides in SminR Read

According to our Obfervarion here, the Water flows E N. E. one quirter N. znd W.by S. one quarter S. by the Moon, arid by wis time the Flood folds five Hones, and the Ebb fever - The Reaion of : which differetree is from the aboundaor Rains which do help to frengtheritbe Cutrent of thè River, and co far dvercofne and-mionten the Flood-fireams; whereas at orleer Scafons tho the Streams do ever go ftrong; yet she Flood ande Ebb are equally fix Hours apiece.
The Portm ymore oppof their Land

Here we had Intelligence, thiat a whole Fleet of Portu gueze Frigats to the number of twenty, and very well provided with all things; as well to offend us, as defend themfeives," lay waiting for us at the Ear of Surat. Thefe had, it fecms, Notice of our being in the Red Sen, and of our Defign for India; and cherefore came out with a Refolution to difpute the Point with us, and, if potfible, to hinder our Trade either at Surar, or any where clfe, upon that Coaft.

We now found our feives in a Circumftance of fome Difficulty and Diftrefs; go back and lole our Voyage we wou'd not, and we faw no probability of gerting into Suret, wirhout forcing our way through the whole Porrugucze Flect. They kept fo ftriat a Warch, that no Boat cou'd either go to, or come from the Shoar; with Intelligence to us, bur they muft of neceffity fall intorcheir hands; and if they had any thing worth the taking, to be fure were plunder'd. And upon this pretence they rook ocrafion to rob divers Ships, and Boats, alledging, (whecher they did or no) that they held a Corre (pondence with their Adverfaries, and were bringing Supplies to us, upon which fcore all their Lading was confifcared and feiz'd. All Communication between us and the land being thus cut off, and no Provifion poffible to be brought to us, our Men begas wo grow very weak and diftemper'd, and Marters grew to fuch a pals, that twas neceflary for us in a vary litule time to brcak this Chain, orrefolve all toftarve or be eaten out with the Scurry a Shiptoard: I did therefore defire, by letrers dirceted to their Admiral, that and thar I mighr not be compell'd to have recoure to vio and that I might not be compellid to have recourne to vioa Right to in that place as themfelves; borh by the Authority of the King from whom I came, and of the King to whofe Country I came, who had very kindly enterrain'd our Nation there, upon the Defigns of Trade. But as for chem who value no Laws, cither of Narnere or Na rions, nor no Auchority bur that of their own Prince, they infifted upon the old Topick of the King of Portugal's Prerogarive in thofe Seas, and concluded that I thou'd nct be admitted to come there, withour I thew'd an Order from him. This, with many bare Reflections upon our Country, and other Expreffions of Scorn and Contempr, was all the Anfwer I cou'd get from them.
And 'rwas not only in the Matrers of Trade that we were thus infulcod by them; buc they barbaroully denied us thofe common Liberries, which mighr have been fafely granted us, withour any prejudice to themfeives: For whereas we had feveral of our Country-men and Mcrchanss athore, whom I wou'd have raken aboard, they wou'd not allow this; buc cold us fcoffingly, they wou'd carry them to Goa along with them, where they fhou'd have as good Ufage as any Jeros, and Turks, ever had among the Portugucze: And from thence they wou'd fend them home as they faw fir.

I had mordy after 2 Civil Meffage from the Governour
nour of \(S_{1}\). Surat who offer'd all the Kindnets he cou'd do for us bur complain'd char the Portugueze were an Impediment in his way, that he con'd not do whar he defired and intended; but withal; advifed me to fail out of this Road to Guga, where I might side nearer the Shore with my Ships, and the Portugueze Armado cou'd not hinder my landing; and befides, twas nearer to Cambaya, where I hou'd find much greater advantage for Trade chan here Bur as I bad for feveral Reafons no Inclination to follow this Counfel, fo I was the more particularly determin'd againft it, by an Advertifement which came from fome of our Counrry-men athore, by which ; amongft other uhings) I underftood, that Capt. Sbarfigh, with Someothers, were coming from Cambaye po Surar, in órder to go along with me. Thus ncither to defert my Country-men, nor give my ddverfaries an occafion to reproach me, with tlying our of an apprehenficn of their Power, I continued in that Read, and anchor'd near the North Point, a-thwart the Bar, at the entrance of the River of Surat. Being now refolv'd to Command my Landing, in Spite of the Portugueze, wo put on for the Shoar with our Ships, in the bet order that might be: The Poitugazece likewife advanc in Order of Barrel, and ftood in between us and the Shore. Twas not ioug before fone of their Frigats began to make tee Onfer, which were follow'd by the whole Power of the Fect; and 'twas as lictle 2 while before out Shot Gencmiace (which we beftow'd-pretry liberally amongit them) obli- Ahtem drean ged thexs ro retire further from us, and leavo us. not ooly the Pmin the Libery of the Shore, bur the poffefion of one of their Frigats, which we rook in the Skirmith.
\(\therefore\) Now: we had a free paffage open'd berween our Ships and the Land ; and tho' the Portugucze laid feveral Ambuicades to cut off our Retrear when we swent athoar, we had the good Luck to avoid the danger of them all, and And tike convoy fafcly aboard all the Company we expected allibetion from Jw-ar and Cambayr.
Burthe greateft Concerns, which were thofe of Trade, lay all this while unminded; the Difficulty and Trauble, made us by the Pirtugucie, having hitherto rendred any progrefs in thofe Matrers impofible. Bur now the Governour of Surat ; who had given me a Meeting once or twice on the Shore) affured me, Thar Mocrebchan; the Governour of Cambaya, wou'd come no confer with me abour thote Points, in a little cime; and in the mean fpace the Country hou'd be order'd to bring in cheir Provifions for the Supply of our Ships.
So a Marker was kepr upon the Strand, by Swelly-Road, Avoms. to which the Indians brought in Beafts, Fowl, Butter, upon ibe Cheefe, a! forts of Fruics, dried Fith, and Palmito-Wine. Strand Befides, the more common Fruits which we meer with ever, Day, they had a fort of Peafcod, which they call Paupery, and a Fruit as big as a mall Crab, of a gratefal cafte, mixt of fwect and four, having one fmall round Stone in the midft of it, to which they give the Name of Gindus.
This parr of the Promife perform'd, was very quickly follow'd with the accomplifiment of the other, (fo much did the Fidelity of the liritiens, at this time, cranficend our expectation ;) for now Macrebchren, with a mighry Train came to the Conference I fo earneftly defired: Hin, Morentim patt the firt Complement paatt the firft Complement athoar, 1 invited him to go a- Goencri, , mind board my Ship, where I deliver'd His lvajefty's Letrer directed to him, and carcffed him in the bett manner the florr Warning we had of his coming woud allow. Bur as for his part, his grear Bufinefs when he was there, was to fearch and look ali abour the Ship, to find out all the liutle Toys that pleas'd him, and to beg them when he had done. There was nor a Cheft, nor a Box in the whole Ship, that cou'd frape him, bur he wou'd have ir oper'd: and if he took a liking to any thing he faw, he worid either ask for's in plain Terms, or fignifie his 'Mind by fuch broad hinuendos, char I cou'd nor avoid giving it him. And thus he wenr picking up of Toys and Gambols from one Ship to another, withour ever coming to the Main Bufinefs in hand; and if I offer'd to propofe any thing of that kind to him, he wou'd par it off with one Excuic or another; fo that I plainiy faw, he had no Mind ro do any thing. To do him Juttice howerer (tho he did us fo little) he was our Chapman for fome Commodities; as Knives and G:affes, and fome Chefts of Sword-blades: But no Money paid, nor no Time prefir'd when it thou'd be fo; and yer ar the fame time char we muft give him this Credir, be was pleas'd to repofe fo litule Confidence Miarobtan; in our Honefty, as nct to truft us with the keeping of his bufe Dating Bargain till be was got afhoar, but weu'd fee all Senr away before he went himfelf.
And to make himfelf the better Cuftomer to ns, he pick'd our of the Parcels of Sword-blades we fold him, all thar were very fine and good, and fent me back the reft without the Moncy too, or any Confideracion for that Difadvantage ; tho' I had ler him have a much cheaper Pennyworth upon that very account, thar be rook all one with anorher.
Thus having gor what they cou'd our of us, they remov'd their Goods and Tents, both he and the Governour of Surat, and went away; and nor only fo, but made Proclamation, That no Provifions thould be brought to us and that under a very fevere Penalty (the lofs of the Nofe) to be inflicted upon che Delinquent inchis Cafe. Yer an the fame time that I was thus abus'd in.my Commodities and they were endeavouring to force me away by Famine from the Country, did this cofetous, fordid-Spirited Infidel, fend a Mcffenger to beg a fine Spaniel-Dog; and my Perfumed Jerkin off frem my Back; as he had bur a few Days bcfore begg id my Bever-Har off from my Head, and wou'd then fain have had the other too. Which I mention not for the Value of the things given him, which were inconfiderable, buc to Ghew whar ill Circumftances 2 Man is in, that deals in thefe Countries, wirh Peopic af fuch infariable Avarice, of fuch griping, fqueezing Tempers, that will nevcr leave 2 Man by their Good Will, as long as he bleeds one drop of any thing that's agreeable to them.
But they had a mind, it feems, to more of our Exylifh Darnher Cemmodities, and therefori after a few Dais pafsid carne down agair with leveral Packs of Indien Cloths, and other \(\qquad\) Lead Quickfilver, Vermilion, and Velvets, which larter Mo crebcian had a very great Inclination to; bur then they woud Trade upon luch Terms, thar they woud gain Fifry in the Hundred, tho' our Commodities wete brough to their cwn Doors, and we were at the Charge and Trouble of fo redious a Voyage to come to theirs. However, at laft, we agreed upon the Prices, and fome part of the Goods were deliver'd, and the Lead, and the reft, were brought afhore as faft as wecou'd, in crder to their we:ghing.
ar here a frem Difficulry was itarred, which had well nigh put all in Confufion again: For they were for weighing with the Weights and Beam of their own Counrry, and we infifted upon the ufe of ours; and there appeard upon Trial fo much difference between them, that had we gone by cheir Beam, they had pinchd us at a very fine rate; for in every five Pigs there was ren or eleven Maunds difference, every Maund being Thirry three Pound Englifh Weight.

And upon our sefufing to comply with their Humour in this matter, the old Governour of Surat flung away in a Rage, and declared we fhou'd pay for his Goods, half in Money, and the other in our Commodicies, or elfe the Bargain flould be void, and he wou'd rum all we had landed upon our Hands again
And I'doubr not, bur had we been left entirely to his Mercy, we fhoud have come off confiderable Lofers; bu as is fell our, we were able to make our own Terms with him, and bring him to a realcnable Conclufion: For had at th:s Juncture, two Men of very great Figure a board my Ship, one of which was the new Governuur o \(S_{\text {krat }}\), whom (tho' chey came upon a Civil Vific) I made bold to dctain, (with all the Entertainments my Ship cou'd give chem) cill I had broughr the Matters of Irade into a betrer Condition. Ard 1 think we were beholding to thefe Pledges for fo fair and reafonable a Conclufion of the Buinels as we did come to; for after this we went on without any more of thole Difputes and Brangles that w had before; and we bargain'd for a matter of forty Pack more of their Indian Clochs.
'Twas about this cime, that an Order came from Court 0 turn out Mucrebchan from his Government of Cambaja, and Hoia Naffan from his of Suraf: This latter was he har held thar Poft at our firt coming hither, and that managed the Trade fo unfairly with ns, puruing us to fo much trouble, as to keep thofe two Perions before-menrion'd in fafe Cuftody, till we bad done Righr and [ n fice to our felves. And whatever the rimely removing of this Perfon wou'd have fignified, I believe, if Mccret chan had been removd fome Years before, the Intereft o our Engiifh Nation in thofe Parts wou'd have fared much the betrer. For as he was a Man that valued not the Ser vice of his Prince, or Profir of his Counrry, any farther than either was confiftent with, or made for his own private advancage; fo he was a particular Hater of our \(\mathrm{N}_{2}\) tion; he was a Friend to the Portugucze, their greatef Enemies ; did all their Bufinefs, and carried on all thei Defigns ar Coust, which were directed to the urrer over chrowing of chofe happy Beginnings of a Trade and Fa cory in chis Conntry, under the Conduct of Capr. Hawp kins.
And 'rwas at this time, that that worthy Perfon, and faithful Agent for his Country, having feen the fruftracion of all his Hopes and Defires, partly by the Inconftancy of the Mogul himfelf, the Malice and Diligence of the Je fuiss, the Bribes of che Porsugueare, and elpecially the in vidious Reprefentations made of our Nation by Mocrebchan", was preparing to return to Englond, no more Service being ro be done here. A Factory was abrolutely
All we Em and peremprorily denied, and all Englift-moni were com
jifibgoway manded to be gene ont of the Country being not allowed fo much cime as Juftice and common Honefty woud have allotted them forthegathering in of their Lebrs. This teing the Cafe, I fent to all our Councry-men to repair as faft as they cou'd, with their Goods, to our Ships, that we mighr go all rogether, ard leave a People fo fickle, bafe and inhopirable for fome orher thar mighr pive us ber er Entertainment. And they very readily taking the A larm, being now as weary of the Country, as the Conntry was of them, in as limele a time as their Affairs won'd allow, came down with all their Effects, bringing the Two Caprains, Sbarpeigh, and Hamkins, along with them.
Former: We now underftood the Reafon of this fo very fudden a change, and why our Pcople were expelid the Country in fuch a hurry, nor being permitred fo. much as to call upon their Debrors before they went away. The Jefuius, if fecms, had fent a Letrer to. Mscrebcbrn, whercin they fignified, Thar if they receiv'd the Englif́s into a Friend hip and Trade in thole Parrs, the Portuguete wop'd come and barn all the Towns upon the Seticosf and rifle all their Ships they met anty where abroad. Such a degree of Pride and Infolence, is that rude and domineering Na tion now come to, that they moft pretend to govern the Countries of other Princes, prefcribe their Interefts, and Alliances to them, and fix the Bounds of cheir Trade and Correfpondence as they think fit.
We had, to our very great difadvantage., worn oút no leis than One huodred thirty eighr Days in this Country; all which time, was filld up with nothing on the part of the Indians, bi Iricks and Delays, and Breach of Promife; and on ours with yive and fruitle's Expectations of a profirable Trade.
Being therefore, on all jecsinnos; high rime to be gone, Go to Dant we fer Saill for Dabzl abour che begining of Eebruary and came thither the middle of the Gape Morth. I had fome hopes of doing fomeching to the purpofe here; however, ar worft, 'twas bur fhooting one Arrow more, after feveal orhers loft before
I reckon the Laritude about the Bar of Dabul; to be beween 17 and 18 Degr. N. and the Variation ar the fame place to be 15 Degr. 34 Min. W. So I make by my Account and Obfervation, near 4 Degr. in Latitude, and abour 1 Degr. in Viriation, lefs, at this Bar of Dabul Ban at thar as Surat, or in Sipally Road, within the Bar.
The Governour of the place fent me a Prefent ar my Trade at arrival, and promis'd a very Friendly Correfpondence, Dabich and a Free Irade: Upon which the Merchants were ent aftore, with feveral forts of Commodities. Bur thio hey made a Noife at firft of fine Cloths, Indico, and Pepper, which they wou'd barter for our Warcs, yer we cou'd find nothing of that forth-coming; and all that they dealr with us for, were fome of our Broad Clots and Kerfies, of the bett and lightef Cour Broad Cloths Quanticics of Lead in Bars.
While we lay here, the Portugueze made us fome fima part of an Amends for the many Damages us fome mall Takea Pori us, by bringing (tho' againft their Wills) a good Ship and Frigar of theirs within our reach.
The Ship was of 300 Ton Burchen, belonging to \(C c\) bin, and bound for Cbaul, and her Lading was Coco's Tin, Sugar, Racka Nuts; Cbine-Dilbes, Spices, Wax alom, and baft Ropes
The Frigat was of 60 Tun , bound for Ormus, and lai den with Rice and Tamarinds; our of all which we rook what we thought convenient, and cou'd well beftow in our Ships. We wou'd fuin have found ding, if poffible; but they had either none ar all, os elfe had fecurd them, where we cou'd ner come ar hem.
And now we began to think of leaving India, and failing back again towards the Red See. We were indec'd othis Courle, upon Confideration of the Opporniti we might there meet with, of putcing off thofe' Goods which ftill lay upon our hands, to thofe Ships of India we flou'd find thereabouts: Parrly'to take lome further Revenge upon the Turks of Aden and Mobs; ; as alfo to prevent the Danger which threarned a Ship of our Country gone a Year before into thofe parss; of which we bad Notice when we were at Suratn
So difcharging the Portugal Ship and Frigat we fer Sail ser gill for from Dabul, directing our Courfe rowards the Coaft of the Red Sea Aralic. And the latter end of this Menth brought us to Corne to zo the Ine of Zocatora.
From the Coalt of Indit, to this IMand, we continually found our fclves carried farther to the Sourhward than by our Courfe we cou'd expect; efpecially when we were thware the entrance of the Perfian Gulf; which I impute to the Influence of fome Current ferting thence the Sourhward
As we coafted along by Cape Guadarfur, and Monte Fclix, the Country People came to, us with Sheep and Goars, and fome parcels of Olibanum, and Gum-Ara bick, which we boughr of them at reafonable Rates.
Bur this Civil 'Correfpondence and Traffick with us, was all over the fruir of a miftake; for they ftill took us for Mafometans: And bad they known us to have been orherwile, 'tis very much to be doubred, whether they woud nor bave been for giving us the fame Tre they that their Arntion Neighboers did.
Being now conte into thele parts, that we might the betrer accomplith the Defigns we came for, both of fecu- 14 D. 1612 ring our own Country Ships thar flou'd come that way, and raking Sarisfaction from all Indicn and Turkib ones, for Wrangs received; I fer one of my good Ships, the Pefpe:-Corn, to guard the Paflage rowards Adens and my Elf, with the other, went to keep the Paffage of the

This Advice I had by our own Ship the Darling, which we had difparch'd a lierle before the reft of our Fleet to Zecctora in our coming hitherwards to enquire concerning any Entl:OShirs thar had come that way; and there our Pcople faw the Lener left by Cap tain Saris, giving an Account of his paft Vyyage, and future intended Progrefs to the Red-Sea.
We had not teen long expecting in the Streights, be fore feme fcatcering Prizes felI into our Hands: Firft Ship of Brefono; and then a Ship of. Din bound for Mc h.x : I forcd them both to ccme to an Anchor by me, and took out of them whatfoever Gcods were for our purpofe

Ships. wo Fice wh the Red-e. by this conjunction of the two Fleets was precty confiderable. The Captain to'd me thatmy coming thither in that hoftile manner had fpoild his Trade ar Mohn, which he belies'd crherwife would have been very good, becaufe of the Grand-scipni or's Pas. For my part Ibelicue thar Pafs would have fignified litt'e in the lateer end, and that f:ch arrant Villains as thofe Tarks of Niclia are, would have found fome way or other to havecinded it when 'rwas for their Ad. vantage. Befideswe were now in a Condition to do our felvesand ourNation more Serrice by cther Mcthods, than falling into a Trade with the bafeand knavim Peopie of Michor, or \(A t e m\), or any other Town upon chofe Ccalts. And Opportunities of this Narure came thick and threcfold upon us, and we had almoft as much work in ficizing and ftopping Ships as we couid well manage. For before the end of this Month, we had goten no lefs than II or 12 Indian Ships morcinto our Power, which were all and orher Indian Commodities; fome of them were very large Ships too, as particularly the Rhemy of Sures (belonging to the old Mogul Emprefs) of 1500 Tuns and others of \(6 \mathrm{co}, 400,200\), Gic, but none of them all inconfiderable cither for their burthen or their lading. So that now we were in a capacity of forcing the Turks. to make us ample and compleat Satisfaetion for the many Injucies and loffes we had fuftain'd from them; and they dared notrefufe coming cuen to our own Terms, firce we had 13 good Ships in our Hands, in which the Town of Mole vasfo deeply concerrid, and whofe lofs would have beenno lefs than a breaking to the whoic place.

Bat this was not the whole of our Succeisencither, for the Repper-Corn Icfs to guard the Paffage to Aden, had her thare in this kind of Sport tso, getring three ur four good Indiam Ships within her reach, our of which the furnified her felf with rome guantitics of ufeful Commodities. This Ship haring done her work, came to us in Adrib Road, which was the common place of Rendezrouz, whither our united Flects,and all/our. Prizes repair'd, after we had done our Busincés in the Province we had undertaken.
Here we receiv'd folemn Vifir from the King of Rebita, whe came fplendidly atcended with all his Guards and Nobility to bid us weicome and congratulate us up on our Succels.
And now alfo Commificners came from \(M\) ialse to treat with us abour the Redemption of the Ships, as the Sa-
The Turk bander or Governour, the Caprain of the Gallies, and an pound with \(A g A\), who werc order'd by the Brfhe to come to. a Con-Generalisid-ference with us upon thar Subject. My Demands were (as at firf) 105000 Rials of Eight, a Sum they did not well know how co accomplith the Raifing of,and befides could not agree to till they had heard the Brfin's Refolution upon the Matter. This concern was a long cime a debacing and the Captains of the Indien Sbips being horribly difgufted that their Ships were thas arrifted upon the Turks foore and confequently backward to advance any thing towards tie parment of their Debt ; is came to no head, and a whole Month was confum'd to little parpore. And all this while our Peopie were bufic in romaging the Indian Ships, opening and packing of Indian Cloths fit for our turs, and giting thra Englith Commodities in licu of them. I his was the leatt Juftice we could do 'our felves asto them, confidering the foul dealing we had mer with in their Country, and many tricks put upon us in Trade, and the Debrs claimable there, which we had reafon to look upon as defperate, if in this Juncture we thould neglect the Opporrunity of doing our felves right. As for the Turks we plainly faw by theirDelays, and refufing to come to a pofitive Conclufion, that they intended to abufe us farther, and maffle us our of Payment, if we did not by fome method fpeedily compel them to ir.
And therefore moving with the whole Ficet our of 7 mg . AD:b Road towards Mois, I Ggnified to the Intian Com manders, that the Turks nor being minded to make me Gofron that juft and full Sacisfaction which I demanded, I had affar no other way at prefenr to te revenged of them fo effectu- ho ally as to (poil their Ind:m Trade. And therefore tho' I had done what I thoughe fir in confideration of the Injuries fuceived in India, yer I muft carry all their Ships a way with me our of the Red-Sce, to cut off all Ccmmerce between the T:urks and them for this Year, thar the lateer mighe not reccive any Bencfit by them

The Indicns who faw this Scafon would be wholly lon to them, if their Shipss.fould be thus forcd away, and being unwiling to carry back whar Cormoditics they had again ipro Intiat; they refolved to compound for heir Trade this Ycar, and pay every Spip fuch a Sumrn The trin of Moncy that they might not be difturb'd in the frec Gemerdit

This Affair thes adjufted (which was the Occafion that brought us to and derain'd us in thefe Scas will this time) we were now ready for the purfuing of Rutinefs in other pars of the Work?

Captain Sari: having firft difpatch'd ene of his Ships, Tiwy stis in a few Days fail'd away himfelf out of the Rend Se: ; The of it and we ttaid no longer lichind than the middle of this hedice Month of \(A u g^{2} / f\).

We had fent away cur Ship the Deilitig as Irng ago as Min for Trkerin Sumartri, in which Voyage llic was preently after follow'd by the Th: mas, a Ship of Captain Saris's Flect, and now my felf with the other two, the Track's l.creefe and the Pepper Corn, fetSail in profecution Gentill: of the fame Voyage. After we had pals'd the Straits of for \(T_{c k+}\) Babeimendel the Currents (which we then lay open to) beganro render our failing fomething deubrful and perplexed. While we were yer within profpect of the African Coaft, a Current fering ro the S.W. did confiderably abufe us in our reckoning; aftcrwards, when farther car ar Sca we were meft ienfible of one fetring the contrary way, viz- towards the N. E. We eafily difcoverd our ap proach rowards the Coast of Irdia, by the numbers of Snakes which we met fiviming in the Sea, this teing a never failing Token of it, as the Experience of allSaitor do juftific. Thele crearurcsina tar and calm Seafon a very commen fight in the Water about thofe farts, buting in in there are hardly any of them to be met with, if the weat Wirt, ther lee any thing foul and boifterous. As we faild along ing of in the Coaft cf Indie, we obferted the Sca for , the moft Coaft of \(A\) fart thick and maddy, but femetimes intormixt withaia pors of clear traniparent Water, fo that here ir lcoky like dirt: puddle, and there brighe and pure, as if widh out any defiling mixture; and this change from one exream to the other was fedden and all ar once, withour any thing of an orderiy Tranftion from ane Degrec to another, or finding any Tokens of fuch an alteration as appear'd.
The Month of Oacber was more than half gone by that ofote time we came to our defired Port of Tckoce in Sumatr, \(x\) Here we found our Ship the Darling and her Companion Comx io the Themas, bur little Bufinels done by either of them, Tetee. the quanrities of Pepper they had gorten being very inconfiderable, and no more to be had rill the next April or Mr.
This Difappoinment made me think of a Remove from hence ro fome other place, where fomething might be cone worth my ftay and atrendance; for I plainly baw \(\operatorname{sir} \mathrm{Hmm}\) of ourbeing here) would be an invincible Obftruction in \({ }^{\text {cam }}\) the way of our Trade.
Jo after a fewDays I fer Sail from this place for Barram n the Pepper-Corr, leaving my own Ship the Trade's nerenfs, to finin the little Bufinefs that was yet to be done here, with Orders to repair to Bantiom as foon as thofe oncents were over
This Ship having a Misfortune to receive fome prejil-. fary mism dice by a Rock in her way, was fo difordered when fhe tom rill ha came ro Bantom, char I found is moft advifable to difparch AdmirdSt the Peppir-Corn away for Englend to give fome Sarisfaction o the Adventarers, till the had. reccived a new ftrength for the Voyage her (elf, and cou'd bring me ro give a fuller Acconar of thofe Matters.

APPENDIX to the former fournal, extrated from Captain Downton's, concerning thofe Particulars of the Woyage pobich bappen'd in his Jeveral Partings from Sir Henry Middleton: Commencing from the time of their Separation at Aden, where be was left by the Admiral, who nent nith the other tivo ships from thence to Moha.

\(-W\)E had riot beer long inthe Porr of Aden before the General coriced by the falfe and flattering Accounts given here of the Trade and People of Moba, fer fail for that place leaving me to manage the Bufinefs at Aden, and thax not without the very earneft intreary of she Governour and Inhabitants for my ftay amongft them. And they foon made it appear for what Realon rwas they defired our Company there; they could not roniain themfelyes long withour beginning to exprefs the Fondnefs and Kindneis they had for us. The very next Day after the Generals departure, three of our Merchants going altoar to treat with the, Goveroour \(\mathrm{a}^{2}\) bour the points of. Trade, were very fairly derain'd there and not fufferd to come back to the Ship. This was the firte Inftance of their Humanity and vertuous Difpofrition, and they had no Preecnce nor Colour for this Proceeding, bur only ro fecure the payment of Anchorage and other Duties, which asthey were in no Danger of lofing by ns, fo they needed not have taken this Method to have been fure on't. The Spring of Knavery and Treachery thus once open'd, run on amain, and field ir's Courfe for the whole cime of our abode at this place; and after their Hands were once in, by this. initiating ftroke, they did nothing elfe bur juggle and pur Tricks upon us. Their great Defign was, to draw us to land our Goods, which no doubt they would have made as welcome, as they did our Merctants.
But if their formier deceifful dealing with the General had not bieen enough ro have prevenred myy: trufting of them. thefe latcer Abufes wou'd have done it; and I flould never have gueftion'd their Robbing me of my Goods, that had in to villainous a Manner robb'd me of my Men. BefidesI had my general poftive Orders not to venture any Concerns amongft thein, but make them went, and mem , he had feen fo much of them before he Opinion of encitertaind (not unjuftly) fo good an Opoin of their Confcience and Vertue. However they Rabourd mightily to court us into a Compliance with their Dechigns in this Point, told me they would fend to the General at Mobs for his Permiffion tolanid our Grods, which once done che Merchants would pour in from all parts of the Country to buy them up, and we thould bave our Hands as full of Bufinefs as we cou'd defire. And to make us believe that they were a Piople of very grear dealings in the World, and their Town mach frequented on that fore ; whencyer any Stranigers came, they told Engli/h Coy wete all Merchants thar waired for rheir Englifh Commodities, when for the moft part thefe Merchants were no other than Souldiers and cut Throats drawn diucher from the adjoining places to execure the Plors they had laid againft us.
And indeed as for their Precences to Trade and BuGnefs, of concern with Merchandizing People, yer as this time 'rwasina very Tow and poor Condit:on; there were no confiderable Shops.in any part of the Town, nor none hardy to be feent that deferved the Title of Merchants. But their Ignorance of Money made the matrer much plainer fiill, for when our Peopic offerd to change a Rial of. Eight amongft chem, they gave it about from one zo. another and ftar'd upon't as a frangeching chey had never. feep before; which is a very ill fign in a Town thar pretends to Trade and Dealing. Our Men under confinement were ar firft icry kindly dealt wirhal, even to compliment and. carefs it felfe: they hoping by this Means to work themfleses into our good Opinion and Efteem, and by a foft Chain of Flatterics to draw our Ship a litte ncarer to them. Bur afterwards they began The Eutitin to give them a finer Turkifh Enterainment; and when Hook with which chey fifid for us. They did not proceed to the inflicting of any corporal Punifhmenis, bur they order'd it fo, that they thou'd be pinch'd in the Mat rers of Provifion;'they were hardly allow'd a Belly-full, and forr'd to pay the Meffengor (every rime they ear) as much for bringing their Victuals, as the things themrelves coft.

The treacherous Governour endcavour'd by good Words ro keep them in Hearr, relling them that as foon as the Trade open'd they flou'd have their Liberry withour the paymentof any Moncy in confideration either of that, or any Duty or Cuttom formerty demanded. But ffill all the Civility promis'd was made an Incroduction to a farther propofal of fending to the General about landing the Goods.
I had indced lenc fome I ctters to him at Mohas ( tho' Ducumber Was well affur'd he would never alter the Method he had refolved to purfue indealing with the People of \(\Lambda\) den) bur thele letrers were eirher nor delivered, or the Anfwers to them by the juggling Turks fiope and intercepped. And now more of my Mcr unluckily fell inco their Hands; and went to bear their fcllowsCcmprany in a dolcfullmprifonment ai Alcm.
I had craved leave of the Goreinour for fome of them: The Tont convenient place under the Town Wall; which Requeft de Enytip was granted with all the eafe in the World, and Security pricocers from all. Treachery faithfully promis'd. \({ }^{\text {and }}\) Bur in the mean rume he fet his Smiths a work to make:Strackles fo them as faft as could be, and fo feiz'd them in the rfiadt of thcir Bufineff, laying them all faft in Irons, and befides grierounly abufing them feveral ocher ways. 'Twas no lefs chan 20 thar they took all together archistime, amonfor which were fome of the molt ureful and neceffary Mongt the Ship, whofe Company and Affiftance there It dearly wanted.
Bur it being impoffible for me to righr my relf and redeem them at prefers, and no hopes of cever coming to 2 fair Trade with thefe People, Ifound is to no purpo trene Incea to tay here any longer. Befides 'twas dangerous wion ida Rear many Accounts; for if we flaid till we wand we could nor go athoar to ger thar withour wer, te. our felves; and then in this Seforthe withour lofing both fo troubleme there Seaionthe Wind and Sea are low, withour annething of and the Shoar of Aden lies fo low, withour anything of a Fence from che Violence of the Billows, thaza Ship would be forced from zhe Road into fome Shelter near the Town, and folic at the Mercy of cheir Ordnance.
Upon there Confidetarions I fet fail for Mcha, hoping when I came to find my Generals Entertainmenn there better than mine had been ar Aden. I pals'd the Screight of Bubbelimandel berween che Ile and the Coaft of Arabim Goofos whereI found a ftrong Tide ferting thro the middle, and Nambe: abourt ton and on che onathom Water; there is a good broad Channel Coaft; bur the of the ile, between that and the African ing.
When Icame ro Moba, If found our Admiral Ship there and underfood too foon of the horrible Misfortune befallen us, in the lofs of our General by the Treachery of the Infidels. Prefently aftermy Artival came in the Dari ling . roo, : which by the:Generals Order had been difarchd towards Aden, to give me infurmation of all thefe Matrers, and to procent my coming to Mrti, tho' the bad weather had hindredflier Voyage, by which means I was kept in the dark as of thefe Accidenis, till I came to inform my celf inform my fclf.
Being nowt all together, we fet fail our of Mobr-Road, ntending to ply up towards Babeimaydel, or fomewhere har way, as well to find out a convenient Warering- her find place, and a Road where we might lie fecurely as in poodrad od to top, till the Turks had relcas'd the Gcneral, and made us Satisfaction for all Jnjurics. So ftanding over to the Abeffine Coant, after fome fearch, we happily found, out the convenienr Road of Alfob, where we bad all the Security and fidvantage for Warer and Provifions that we cou'd defire.

The Councry People werc very friendly to us, and fo honeft and ingenuous, as to confefs, That the Turks had pur them upon knocking us in the Head, if we came there, giving them their Example and Warrant for chat Practice. But as they found no Reafon from our Carriage amongit them, to offer us any fuch violence, fo they enserain'd us after a very different manner from whar the Turks encourag'd them to. Whether they knew us to be Enemics to the Superftitions of Mabomer, ' which they embrace all hereabours, and how 'rwould have been with us then, I cannot fay;) bur as Matters were, they carnied it fairly and civilly to us; we paid them Money, and had our Bargain punetually, and wichour deceit.
Near this Road where we lay (perhaps fome three Leagues diftance) lies an Ifland, which we call'd CrabIfand, for the multirude of grear Crabs we found there We wanted nothing where we had pofted our felves, bur the Prefence of our General, and the reft of our Company under Confinemenr with him. And this, afrer a multitude of wicked Delays on the Turks part, and as many fruftrared Expectations on ours, was happily accomplin'd by his own Contrivance and Refolution, in the Month of May, after we had lain in this Road more than four Months.

The General having now brought himfelf and his Company all off clear, went away no Surat and Dabul, whicher I accompanied him; and from thole Parts I came back with him again into the Red Sea, where we arrefted rhe Indian Ships, in order to bring the Turks to a Compofition.
This Affair ended in the Red Sef, we went away with both our Ships for Tckoc, in Sumatra; at which place we found fo fmall Encouragement for Trade, thar the General wou'd nor ftay there, bur wenr, changing Ships with me, ro Banram; whither I had Orders to follow him, as foon as I had difparched ac Tckon.
Here I was moft horribly abufed by the rafcally Natives, Chearing in in the Pepper I bought; for when I came to weigh it, we the Reppoc had feveral Bags of rotren decayed Pepper; and in fome. there was Paddy, Rice, ay and great Stones cramb'd in.too, to help make up the weight. Bur there was no Remedy for this.Mifchief, and fo we were forc'd to abide by the loss.
Sailing from hence for Bintam, we were like to have the ship been all undone by che ferring of our Ship upon a Rock, runn uppa 2 into which danger the Current helped to bring us. We Rock, made a fhifr by God's affiftance, to get her off again, and Tet her afloat; but yet that Encounrer had done her fo much prejudice, that we were obliged (as the furer Courfe) to return back again to Tekon, to ftop her Leaks, and repair the orher Defects of her.
Bur our Autempe ar the fecond fetring our, proved more Duendra: uccesfful, and we came withour any more fuch Encoun- Coman wo ters, in fafery to Brasam.
The Gencral ftaid here rill his Ship (injured in the Voyage from Tckoa) was new careen'd; whilft my felf in the Goes &n Pepper-Corn was dififarch'd from thence for England; my England Voyage commencing in February, and ending (withous any confiderable Advencure) the following oquber.

WE fer fail out of the Downs, in the good Ship the Globe, the Fifth of February, and came into Soldania Bay (a place frequently vifited by our Englijh Ships
\({ }^{2}\) D. 165 Come to Soldania the Twenty firft of May. 'Twas then Winter in this part of the World, the Sun being taking his appointed Iurn on r'orher fide the Equator. The Mountains were cover'd over with Snow, the Trees naked and bare, the Fields in all the Rudenels of a Winter-Drels; the whole Face of Nature (here at other cimes fo charming and brighr) appeared with a fullen gloomy Air; the Heavens were dark and cloudy, and the Earth feem'd to mourn at the ablence of the chearful Sun. Litcle good Entertainment was to Be had from the Country ar this Seafon of the Year, and the Rains that fell made it fo bad rravelling, thar we cou'd nor go far to get whar it wou'd have afforded us.

We took fome pains to find out the Roor Niugim at this time, and our Labour muft have been quite loft, if we had nor receiv'd fome Inftructions in that matrer; becaule the new Leaf was now bur juft pecping our of the Ground, and the Plant does not come to its perfection till the depth of our Wintcr.
Here were two or three Dutch Shipsthat came to make she fame enquiry, and one of them firft difcoverd this Roor here ;. whether by chance, or any forcgoing Information, I am nor certain, nor is ir much material. Having clear'd all Accouncs at thefe two places, and invired by the opportunity of a good Monfon, we fer fail from thcle pars: for Banten, where we happily arrivod the latecr cnd of the fucceeding Monch of April. When we came hicher, we found the Dutcol ready to march away for jacirer, nor being abic to condure rhe ncw and unwonted Exactions of the Gorernour; neither cou'd we fettle Marters with him withour a grear deal of Difpute and Jangling; however, at laft we agreed with him for 3 per Cerit. Lord of Siam (who intended to have afpired to the Crown himfelf); the Sccond Son of the White King was invefted with the Regal Dignity; and this was he then in the Throne when our Ship was there. But from hence fprung up horrible Confufions and Diffenficns; for the prefent King reienging h's Brother's Death upon that fore-mentiond afpiring Trayter; all his Slaves preiently run to Arms, brote into the Cours, gor the King into their hands; and having ferc'd him to fign a Writing with his own Biood, they par'd his life, lrut wenc off with a deal of rich Plunder, in fire of all Oppofition, and contmry Endeavours of the King's Guards.
This Tumult ar Court gave rifeto many others abread in the Kingdom; the Counries of!mimio and Cambaya immediarely broke ove into a Rebellion, and the chice Tributary Princes, began to think of following their Example. This was the State of Affairs ar Siam, when our Ship was there; and being to, 'twas our Misfortene to come in fo troublefome a time, when the whole Aaticn, himing in expectation of a fudden War, had litric D: fpofrion to mind Trade and Bufincts.
Upon this Account we deccrmin'd to fpend on: Wint here at Pitain:, to do what might be done at this phace Thegra and alfo to be ready to hold a Correfrondence with Siam, , cram Whany favorable Opfortunities thou d invite us to it, While we lay lacre, we law the Qrecn, and had Confe rence with her feveral times. Shíc was a comely, grave majeftick Perfon, fo handfome and fiately, in fipise of her Old Age. thitr we faw very few Indicins that came up to her Mcafures of Bcaury.

We had now a Continuation of the Good News from Siam, by a frefh Advice, informing us Good News from of the Gilobe there, and the profitable Sale ours Factors had Godi T of their Commoditics. And foon after as bad. Tidings From Bantasm, of the great Loffes our Englifh receiv'd by Fires there; in which Calamities the Dutch alfo had by hare with them.
The War begun by the King of For, proceeded to fuc an extremity, and drew fo many Misfortunes upon him, char he was by this time rendred incapable of difturbing the Quict of any of his Ncighbours. The Achenefe purloed him fo clofe, that they broughr their Fleet under his very Walls; and after a ftreight Siege, took the City; riHed ir, carried away a grear Boory of Slaves and Ammunition, and forc'd the milicrable Prince himfelf to fly his own Couniry, and feck a Refuge in fome Forcign Ter-
The King of Palent too was not in a much berter Condition, his Country being horribly wafted by War and Famine; and he himfelf now at latt reduc'd by the Arms of the Quecn his Sifter-in-Law, to fubmir to her Tetms, and lie at her Mercy.
This Prince came to Parane when we were thicre, and invited ts tery cirilly to a Trafick with his Country which, alas, was at this time too much cmbroild, and mpoverifhd, to give Merchants any Encouragement to come thither. The Queen indeed treated him civilly; but he was a inecr Jeft and Laughing-ltock amongft the Patanee Nobility; and the only Point of Refpect that was thew d him, was the killing all the Dogs in the Councry when he came; he having a particuiar A:crfion to that forr of Animal.
Our Affairs at Meceffar went but badly on, and our Factorsthere were ready to come away, being able to do notiting to the purpofe; bur in that Juncture an Englifb

The King of Narfinga's Grant of Trade, &cc.

Strip arriv'd with a good Lading of Cloth to Cetzle Factory there, which obliged them to ftay longer. This Ship was the Darling, one of the three that went into the Red Sea, under the Command of Sir Henry Middleacn; that worthy Perfon himelf being lately dead at Bantem, and his Admiral Ship, the Trade's-Increvfo, yet lying there in very ill Circumftances, as well as the m, and the Company left in her. The Dutch who a litule before were gering Ground in the Molucca's upon the Spaniards;' and had taken the Caftle and the linand of Solor, were: now like to lofe all as Banda, linking fafter here than they xife in the other places. The Bandanef, had as we underftood confin'd their Government to the Caftle and kept them in fuch awe thar they dared not give an ill Word; a good parr of their Men were gone off to the Natives, and becone Mab-metans; and the whole Dutch Power in that Iland fignified no more at this time than juft to tyrannize in the Caitle alittie, and command the Junks that rid there with their great Guns

The latter cnd of this Month the Globe came back from the Giobs Siam, having finifhed her fecond Voyage thither: Ou tuma from Factors there had fent a Cargafon of Goods to Frgomai but had no News of the Succefs of it when the Ship came away; the Wars between the People of Ava and Lanicnb having cut off all intercourfe between thofe places.
patane had now it's flare of Misfortune amongt the cylefs and outragious than the Sword. This came abour by the Villainy of the Favans wibo are the neverfaili thefame of all Countries where they come; and Practice thefame rricks of firing Towns and Houfes abroad with as imirch defperarenefs as they do at home. We and the Dytici) were oblig'd to join our Forces together for our conmonSecurity in the midft of this hurly burly; for the Town was all in Flames abour our Ears; and thefe cur Throars were roaming abour in a full Body, murdering all that came in their way, and rifing Houfes as faft as they could. And chey were juft coming to make us a vì fir, when we (refolv'd to be before hand with them in Civilities of that Narure) had fer out to meer them, which they having Inrelligence of, and finding our Strength, were to wife as roman away and fhift for chemfelves, and to leave us to the Labour of driving them. Thus we did our felves a Kindnefs, and fo much Service to the Town coo, that we purchas'd the name of it's Defenders chereby: We had ftaied by this time fo long ar Pazane, as to ferthe Wheels of Trade a-moving there and ar fome other places abour; which Bufinefs done we prepar'd to setumback ro Mafulipatan.
In our Courfe from hence, we came to the dangerous

We arriv'd ar:Mafulipeten the middle of Decichber, a and found here a Ship of our own Nation (the Fames) wairVoyage:
We agreed with the Governour at 4 : per Cent. Cuftom and fell ro lading of Goods; bur the fames was fenr andy for Petapoli, and from thence for Bentam News came to us here from Pcgu; that the King of Ava (a Country lying about a great River of Pegu) adaken the Fort of Sirianzb, and Lain all the Portuucie thar kept it. This Town or Fors of Siriangh, ond Ren an Inand below the Mouth of the aforemention'd River of Pegur; and "ris' to be noted that when the King of Arracan had (according to the former Relarion) made himfelf Mafter of che Kingdom of Pegu; he pur this Town and Fort inro the Hands of the Portugueze, who be hiav'd themfetves' there' (as they do in all other places) after a very infolene and domineering Manner; and particularly to requite the Kindnefs of the King of Arracen, they fhortly after cook his Son Prifoner, and extorred a valt Sum of Money and a huge Quancity of Rice for his Ranfom. This in gratitude to their Benefactors was very well punifh'd by the King of Aver, who it feemis broke in upon them with a good Force, and routed them entirely out of that Neft. This Prince, pretends to reftore the decayed Empire of Peguto fomething of a Luftre again; having calld in all the difpers'd Prganns, and given Orders for the Rebuilding che old. City, with many fair Promifes of Quict and Protéctionthere. The Moors at Mafulipaton were highly pleas'd ar thefe Actions of the King of Avr, becaule they hope they mall now get the Trade of Pegu into their Hands again, which the Portugueze lying thereabourshad in a great meafure deprived \({ }^{-1 . D-s}\) s. \(_{24}\). them of. Bur wharever Sentimears of Pleafure the King of Ava's Actions excited in the Minors, the King of Narfinyas jut? were no lefs agrecable to us: For now that mighty Prince fing of Nar renr hisEmbaffadours to us to excufe rhe formerNeglect of to che EnsCorrelpondence with us when we wereat Paleacarte, and lijh, To invite us to fertle a Factory in his Country where we plcas'd our felves, 3 and all this fweeren'd. with the Promife of whar Privileges we would defire.
Indeed the Complaints of the People went a.great way cowards the procuring this Favour for us; for they were netled to fee our Ships paffing by them every Year, and not have the Litberty of Trading there as the Dutch had And tho' thè Dutch did all they could to keep us onn, ye the Country was fenfible that they were nor fo much their Friends as cheirown, in endeavouring to exclude us and therefore they never left the King, till he had in this fiendly manncrinvired us to a Trade there. His Letre broughr ro us waswritten upon a Leaf of Gold, and to The King of brought to us was;written upon a Leaf of Gold, and to- Nrffigis is gether with ir, was deliver'd his Caveor Safe Conduct, and Lefer and his Abeftiam, or the Token of our Privilege, which was Cull a white Cloth, upon which the King'sHand was Printed in Saffron.
In theMonth of \(\operatorname{Mup}, \sqrt[3]{ }\) the Country abour Narfapur peta susw and Golcorea was laid under Water in a mont frightut manner. Many Thoufands of Men and Cante were fwept away, whole Towns were ruin'd, and all the Fruits of the Field deftroyed: Planes and Treas the carried along with the Flood, and the Water lay three Yards high above the Level of the Ground. : The City of Golconda ‘uffer'd very grearly in it's Houfes and Bridges Floods. by fhis inundacion; 4000 Houfes were walh'd awiy to rights, and two very fair Bridges rais'd ar leaft three-Fathom above the ordinary height of the Water, were now three Foor under Warer; and tho' exceeding ftrong, as being built of Stone and confifting, the one of 19 and the other of is Arches, yet there were fix Arches of the biggeft entirely carried away with the Force of the Stream.
The Superftitious Indiens might poffibly efteem this to be ominous, and not think themfelves miftaken, when prefently after (in the (pace of a few Weeks) fo grear an ociobr. erentfollow'd as the Death of the mighty King of Naringa. At the Celebration of his Funeral, three of his king of Nat Queens burnt themfelves quick with the Corps, in Tefti- fing dis. mony of their Love and Conftancy, after the manner of char Councry. Very grear Troubles were now like to follow upon this ftroke, and all Foreigners were oblig'd to look to themfelves and their Concerns in thar Councry as well asthey could. As for ont parts we endeavour'd ro get in ourDebrs with all fpeed, and for that end fent ro the Governour to come and clear all Accompts with us. Bur thar deceinful Minifter did norhing but abufe and trifle wich us, pur us off with frivolous Pretences and Excules, tillthe had delay'd the Bufinefs fo long, that it would thave been very injurious to us to have loft any more time.
And thercfore feeing norhing was like to be done by fair Novombor Means, we were forc'd to ufe orher Merhods; by which \(>\) tho' we might feem, to run avery grear Rifque, and do an Action which allthe World would call defperate in thele Countries; yer our Circumitances which was litre lefs than defperate would admit of no other Remedy.
Having fecretly convey'd fome Weapons afhoar (for chey will not let Foreigners appear with any publickly) and An adven:concerted all Marters relating to the Execution of our turous froke Plor; we went directly to the Cufom-Houfe at 2 con- of the \(\begin{gathered}\text { Enx } \\ f \in i z\end{gathered}\) venient Seafon, intending to fieze either the Governour, ing the Go. himfelf, orhis Son, and tokeep the Prey a Ship-board in vernour' fafe Cuftody till the Debr was difcharged. All hhings fell out aswell as coule be; and concurrd to renderour A tempt cafie and profperous. The Governour's Son was there with a very lighr Guard; we ficz'd the Souldiers Weapons, arrefted him and got him inoo our Brat, and fo row'd away to the Ship with as much fpecd as we conld. We were indeed quickly purfued by a vaft number of Boats, and the whole Pofle of the 'Town was rais'd us; bur with our Firc-Arms we made good our Retrear and deliver'd our Prifoner quietly in ar the Ship, and thar in the fight of Thiree or Four thonfand People

Some of our Men were left athoar to give the Realons of this Act of Hoftility on our parr, and to gather in the featrering Debes; who tho they might feem very much expos'd to the Fury of the provok'd People in this cale; yet they had a good Prorection, for the Governour himfelf rook particular Care to fecure them from all Harm, becaufe his Son was in our Hands, and confequently in Danger of 'feeling the Effects of any Wrong that hould be offer'd to them ahoar. The Governour was now under a Necefiry of doing us Juftice, and that in a very litule rime too, if he lor'd his Son's Life; not that we intended to offer him any Violence, bur his own Superftition would have given him Death without any Remedy. For it feems he was a Bramen, and all of that Character are forbidden by the Laws of their Sect to eat or drink any thing bur what they provide themfelves. All animal Food is an abominarion ro them, and they have Food is an abominarion to them, and they have to many peculiarities of Diet(and then being obligd to be their own Cooks too) that the poor Bramen was like to ftarve a Ship-board, keeping 2 longer and Kevcrer Faft than perhaps his Religion ever put him upon. He would not rouch a bir of any thing we had, and tho Nature ftruggl'd hard, and made heavy Complaints for Relief, yer Confcience reftrain'd and curb'd her, filenc'd all that Noife, and gorthe Victory; fo that the young Man mult certainly die in a very thort fpace, unlefs he could sither over-rule his Confcience, or perfwade his Facher to thew a litule in payime a juit Dobr.
Tix Gover. And this being the Cafe, the old Governour difputed nour pays the the Bufinefs no longer; the Sertce of his Sons Danger foftned and overcame him, and to ayoid being his Murderer, he difcharged the incumbent Debr, and balanc'd all Accompes with us: So we lent back the morrified
His Sonfet at Prifoncr again, having fafted now tomĕ four or five Days, enough to make a Man hate that Supertition, fafety. and forfwear being a Bramen any longer.

But yer how ridiculous and idle foever the Doctrine of the Bramens be in the Theory, 'rwas very ufeful and profitable to us in the Practice of it; for if we had nor got a Bramon into our Hands, a Fellow thar mult be prejently redecmed. or clie would farve himfelf out of Confcience, we don't know when we fhould have got our Mosicy.
We defired the Pcople to make this ufe of what had Doce, pals \({ }^{\circ} \mathrm{d}\), to learn chereby ro deal juftly and honeftly, and not pretend to Wrong our Nation, nor any other any more in that nature; And allo by Lettets directed to the new King, to defire him to order Matters fo for the time to come, that more quick Juftice may be done by his Minifters to thofe thar come to Trade in bis Couns rry.

North Latirude they came to a pretry big Inland, which deferves to be mention'd, in that tisa kind of a Guide to the finding out of a very ovely Bay.
The Inand is about two Miles from the Main, has two other fmall ones to the Sourh of it, and a high round \(A\) grantim Hummock ftanding berween it and the Main. Upon ahe Bay. N. W. fide of it there's a Frefh running down a ftecp Cliff like a River, and may be feen by the white Appearance it makes at a matter of feven or eight Leagues difance. By this Defcription the IIland it felf may be found, and then the Bay fo commended is eafily dificover'd, for 'tis bur looking upon the North fide of this lland and there you find it. Going fair along by the Inand, you have good Depths in moof places, and co alfo wirnin 15, and clole up to the very Main, all Ouzic Ground, and your Anchor over both Flooks. Ground, and your Anchor over borh Flooks.
When they had vifired this Illand and Bay, they fail'd Ninone on to the. Nicobar Iflands, where they met with very good ofort. Refrefhing, and the People as much difpos'd to Trade and Deal with them: Nay, when they went from thence the Canoes follow'd them for fome time, and kept the Trade fill going on. Their Courfe from thefe lilands was towards that of Ceylon, an INand not much vifited by our Englifh Ships. The South Point of Crlon call'd Diundra, they place in the Latirude of fix Degrecs, or thereahouts; for when they made that Latirude by the Suns Meridian Aldifude, Diundra as the fante time bore due Eaft of them. \({ }^{3}\) If varying hereabouts, or rather in 5 Degr. 32 Mindyysr 3 Dcgr. and 24 Min .
They faild directly into lrelegam Bay upon this Inand eeing a grear many Boats therc, and beping to find good colm to warering. And linee they were ftrangers to thefe fur of Pcopic,

People, and were uncertain whar kind of Treatment they thould find amongft them, they would nor prefenrly go alhoar amongt them, but feat our their Skiff with a Flag of Truce.

The Narives feem'd infenfible of their meaning, and made figns that they did not underitand the Portugucaje Tongue in which they fpoke. Upon rhis they fent the Boar to the orher fide of the Bay, wherethere were. a parcel of Houfes built by we Porsuguife, who were planred there amongt there People, for all they presended tomuch ignorance of their language. Here they could as leaft one of chem did do fo, and 'tis likely that others mighr as well as he. This Perfon who was the Spokesman for the reft (as they precended) told the Eingrifh, that they could not be fupplied with any thing there till the King had given leaye, apd that the nexr morning they flould have the King's Anfwer abour the Bufinefs at the fame place.

In thore ris.probable cnough that fome of there were to whecde and draw our Men inro their inares. Forat the fame time they efpied by chance a party of Portuguefe lying very clofe together ready for an affault, which in all probability had been made thenif they had held in talk much longer; but having difcovered thofe Preparations, they fpoild the Defign by making off from the Shoar. Howerer to \(r\) ry what the event would be, a few Days after they fent their Skiff again rowards the Shoar, bur under the Prorection of their Bort, which was provided for it's Deferice. The Pcofte ahoar kept themfelves clofe and fill, bur difparch'd one of their Company to talk with the Skiff, promifing them Watcr if they would pay for't, which the Englif did: not defire to have upon any other Terms. This fellow thaving acted the part he was fent for, by a fudden retreat away from them, gave the appoinred fign to the Ambufcade, who immediarely dicharg'd a mighry Volley of Shor uponthem; and having done that, prefently hally'd our of the Buines, running into the Warer, as far as they. could to lay hold of the briskly upon them with her Shot, thar they were quickly fored to ger our of the Water and retire into the Bulhes again.
And chusbeing fully convinc'd of the Treachery and ill Defigns of thefe People; as alfothar nothing of Refremment was to be procured here, they left them, conrinuing notwithftanding to coaft along the Ille. We don'thear of any thing of a Trade chey met with any where upon this Inand; they indeed once propos'd to go to Maticnlo (a) confiderable City) for that purpole; but fince they fay nothing of it, rislikely thar the Proofs they had of the bafe unhofpitable Temper of the People, did put a ftop to chat Delign. The Portugineze a'lo were to grear amongit them, thar no good was ever to be done by ous Men.
coumteror. They have a Fort there called Colombo, and are encroaching farther and farther upon the Peoples Liberies, cvery Day, as they have opportunity. All the Natives we law were an old fort of People; huge grear holes in their Ears, and their Hair (many of them) ried up in a Knot upon their Crowns. They have no covering, but a picce of Cloath, which hangs down before as low as their Knces. And after all, their Minds are by far more naked and unpolih'd than their Bodies:; they are void of all Principles of Verrue and Humanity; a dy fubrle incriguing Peoplc, naturally difpos'd to VillanousACticns, and ready to take all Advanrages to commit them.
Norhing to purpore being to be done upon this Coaft, Merth withey fet fail homeward again ; in which Courfe they mer with various Currents and Itrange Ripplings of the Warer from \({ }_{4}\) Degr. 30 Min. South Latirude, to 13 Degr. Sometimes thofe Ripplings were fo great, that they would make a Noife like Oper-falls; this was efpecially in the Parallel of Pedras Brancis'so the Weft of ic: They had alfo once 24 Degr. 26 Min. varying, the grcateft they ever had in all the Voyage, and this was in I3 Degr. 7 Min. South Latitude; again in Sourh Latitude 16 Degr. so

They call'd this InlandPear / Inand, according to the Name of the Ship that difcover'd it; and a very choice and valuable on'e 'ris toö, tho it has hitherto fcaped falling into the Hands of any particular Mafter or Poffeffour. 'Twas wholly deftirure of Inhabitanss; which fure mutt be, becaufe it hàd lain conceal'd, and no body had the luck to hit of it', before; for fo fine a Spor as this could never have been defpis'd, and if it had nor becrifeiz"d for a dwelling, yer "ao leaft it would have been known and vifited fometimes. Is is all over moft delighrfully thaded, and appears more like a Thicket (ftanding in the Sea) than any thing elfe Here are land Torroifes, to many,folarge and fo good, that few places can thew the like. Of Fowl there are Geefe, Ducks, Doves, Parrots, and a white Fowl as big as a Turkic, exrreamly Far, and fo morr winged, that ic cannor Flic. They are all ftrangely tame and familiar, and may be eafily raken without the help of Ginns and Snares, or any devices of Art. They have liv'd here calmly and quietly by themfelyes, never us'd to any thing of Noife and \(V\) iolence, or expos'd to the out-rages of their fellow Creatures. Here had been no Fowlers to Hunt and Perfecure chem from one place to another, no Guns to moleft and Terrifie them, and make them afraid of Mankind, There was no appearance of any ravenous fort of Fowl neither amongtt them, that by preying upon them, and difturbing their eafic peaceable Life, might help to make all the Boldnels and Freedom of tharinnocent undifturbed. Life they had always been us'd to ; they knew not what Injuries meant, and cherefore feard none, and fo fufferd themfelves very tamely to be taken. Our Engli/h Men 'ris probable were the firft that ever invaded their free and quietState; that began to exercife Dominion and Arbirra-

Lives to their Neceffiries. Bur Tyranny being a perfectly new thing to them, they were eafily brought under the Yoke; fo cafily, that they fay ten Men may with litule difficulry ger Fowl enough to ferve forty People a whole Day.
As for Fif they rell us of none bur Ecis, fome of the largeft and faireft in the World. Strike them with a Pike, and they'll move a Yard ortwo, and then lie ftill and be raken; as if the Fifh were tame as well as the Fowl; having becn always frec from Vexacion and Frighr, by the Plors of bufic Angicrs and Pcachers, the everlafting Plagues of their Elemenc. The North parc of this Illand is finer and more pleafantly befer with Trees than the South fide, tho that be charmingly maded on.
Having refreth'd here to their Hearts contenr; they fer fail homewards April the ift, A.D.i6r3. All that they met with remarkable in this Courle, was the confiderable quanticies of the Saragoffa, a Sea Weed with 2 fmall long Leaf, and white Berrics of the fize of a Pepper Corn; 'ris called the Sea of Grefs.

Having fatisfied the Governour however who we were, and the Warrant we had from the Grand Seignior for our coming hither; I received a very courteous Welcome from him; borh by Word of mouth and:Letrer. Volleys from the great Guns of the Cafte. My receprion at the Aga's Palace was agrecable to all the reft of the Scene; every thing appear'd fately and magnificent, exprefsd welcome and refpect, and afforded pleafure and delighr, only the Complements of the Turks were troubleforne, and thar ycry formal ceremonious way they iufe in their addrefs to Strangers was fome allay to the reft of the Entertainment.
The Aga receiv'd our King's Letrer. refpectfully, but the Grard Seignior's Pals he rook with a Reverence and Divotion:almoft Religious; kiffing and laying it on his Head as he would have done his Alcoran. He made a world of excufes for the Wrongs done to. Sir Henry MidAheon laying all the blame upon the drunken Soldiers, and the ill Huniour of the late Agn who had acted beyond his Commifion, and had recerived a due Punifhment for his Infolence by axdifgraceful remove from his place; by all which difcourfe it was very manifeft that they fufpected a defign of Revenge, and fear'd we would call them to a reckoning for thufepaft Injuries.

After this a noble Dinner was prepared for us \(;\) which Their Eneer. Yet (had the Liquid partbeen proportionable to the reft) tainment at would have been mpchy more entertaining, efpecially to (forvan; bur our Drmayzs caly pure ement, or elfe Herb, which miade iran abrofure Dofe, and was ren times worfe thàn the Water in it's own pure naruntls.
Their way isto ferve up all the feveral Wifhes together, and fer them down ar once, before the Guefts fall to Eating; and then they don't place them upon a Level as we do; bur pile them up one over another, fory upon ftory, a matter of a Yard high; fo that firting (according tothe manner of the Turks) crof legg'd upona Carperin the Floor, the higheft Difhes were almoft above our Heads. Thefe Dithes are allo made with Feet that they ftand hollow above one another, and the mear in any of them may become at conveniently enough (if one can bur reach) withour removing them our of their places.
After Dinner the Agas little Boys came in with their Chaffing-dithes, and feveral rich Perfumes, as Ambergrice, Lign-Alocs, EGr. to gratifie that Sence as well as the reft: This is a Ceremony they ufe in alltheir great Entertainments, and ir being the Cuftom, we fubmitred to it, and held our Nofes down over the Chafing-Diftes. And 'ris irne thofe Odours were very grateful and pleafant; yetil think at the rate chat Liquor went in the Aga's Houle, we had no need of Fumigations at that time, and could have gone back Soberly enough to our Ships, wichour the help of Ambergricce, or any of thofe fine Scents to fer our Heads to righrs.
For a Conclufion of the whole Carefs, a rich Sures of - Apparel after the Turkif Mode was brought forth, the Veft of Cloth of Gold,the Turbant furable, and a curious Damaskeen or Scimeta, all which the Mga pur on with his own Hands.

This as be told me was the Grand Scignici's Prefent, Captain Suris and I mult needs walk in this Garb with the great Officers. led trove the through the Jown, thar the People might all fee the Town in Marks of the Eriperor's Favour conferr'd upon me. I Aarely Horie was provided for that purpofe; but I chofe rather to walk, that I might have more opportunity to make a nice Oblervation of the Town.
This Ceremony over, I recurned te the Palace, and took my leave of the Agra, who ftill moft earneftly defired thar all pat Offences mighr be pur up; and thofe Thoughts of Revenge fo juftly awakned in us, 解ight give way to Sentimerso of perfect Love and Fricnaffip. for the Fucure: Thus we went back to our Ships with the Refpect and Applaule of the whole Town of Moba, and being. come, we difcharged the Turkifh. Pledges. Mention bcing made before of the Grond Seignior's Patent, and is being all our Foundation and Security in this Atrempr upon a Trade with thele parts; ir may. be worth while ro incerr herea Copy of the fame exactly raken from the Original Arabick.

Some little time after this came the long expected Mef－ fenger from the Baffe，and word was accordingly fent me from the Captain of the Town thar the Orders of the Patrent would be inviolably obferr＇d，and a free Trade eftablith＇d．And yet at the fame time I had fome private hinss given，incimating thar the Baffa had fpoke another I anguage in hisLetter to the Ag\％；thar matters if they did not run againt us，were not order＇d to our Advan－ tage，and that we ought to take care and not come afhoar without Pledges；no tho＇the Ag．and all his Offi crs mould fwear all round upon the alicoran for our Security； （for as our Informer rold us）they were Souldicrs，and had Confciences of fo ftrong a digeftion，thar no Perjury in the World would fir uncafic upon them．
Some Indian Ships came in the beginining of the next Month，Laden with Indicoes，Calicoes，Pintadecs，Am－ bergrice \({ }_{2}\) and Spices，all very good and vaft quancities of cach，and thefo we held by us in our own Defence，in cafcany Injury thould be offerd athoar．And there was a grear deal of Reafon to fufpect that fome Mifchief was hatching，becaufe the Gorcrnour all tbis while had taken liede notice of the Beffa＇s pretended Lieence for our Trade；ar leaft only in fuch obfcure and general Terms， as would rather have excited than filenc＇d a Sufpicion of fome perfidious Defign；but on the other Hand was very earnelt for me to come amoar again，and then I hould un－ dertand more of the Bufinefs．
Bur for this Point of Civility I begg＇d his Pardon and The Tnta fy Excufe，having no mind to make any more Vifits ax trof from their Mnija as matters ftood；bur I fent one of my Company， who tho he went withour Pledges in his room came back again as it happenid，and brought Word of the appearing Fruftration of our whole Defign；that the Turks gave no hopes of performing their Promife，and that the jga con－ cluded we muft fend fome of our Pcople rothe Baffa ar \(Z\) C－ \(n n n_{3}\) and get our Difpatch immediately from him－ celf．
And this Courfe（ fince there was no other left：）I had ceriainly purfued；when by the fudden Arrival of Sir Hemy Middleson，and a Summons from him to quir the frikemp：wad place as foon as was poffible，the whole Scene was chan－ Hurn concs ged，and all Defigns ofthar kind for ever laid afide．We had Trade－theGunging the falle and perfidious Turks for a Defign of Revenge and the back rom hed hirs abs uswere no longer to be excus＇d from making Satisfaction． Thefe ware his Refolutions；tho＇I could have wilh＇d firt to bave feen what the Tarks would have done with us， and what would have been the Refule of our Perfonal Application to the Beffe；whether they would have grant－ cd us a fair and quiet Traffick，according to the Intent of the Grand Seignior＇s Letrecs，or have gone on in the fame Road of Cheat and Abufe to the end of the Chap－ Nore this ter．There were feveral ftrong Sufpicions of ill Defigns soro of their a－Foor；and for all I know the Turks mighr have given oncind wian our Nation in this Affairtoo，a fecond Demonftration of Stips is in their furpaffing Skill in the Arts of Tricking，Wheedling Gencri Mrdand Diffembling ；yer the Caprain of the Gallics now and fent pofitive word that theBaffit had commanded the 1 ga to freetore no thew all the Kindnefs imaginable ro us，to let us have 2祭obere pared here． Only the rancount Condur any more ado；and befides to take care for the fafe of what cop ．Merchants in their Journey that defign＇d to coime

I had alfo ar this time the following Account of the ftate of Trade at Surat，and the Prizes of Commodities How the． there but a lime before．Broad Cloch of Twenty three Trade frood Pound，a Cloth of fercral colours at Twenty Mamoodiesthat time． the Conido；the Conido is a meafure of 35 Inches Englifh， and the Mamoodic is in value One fifth part of a Rial of Eight．Kerfies ar 84 Mamoodics the plece；which was＇ lefs than ours coft in England．Lead，the grear Maund； which conrains Thircy three pound Engith，ar Seven and One third Mamoodies．Tin，the leffer Maund，contain－ ing Twenty five Pound Engifh，ar \(s:\) Rials of Eight． At Dabul，Iron went at 21 Rials the Bahar，which is about 360 pound Engliß．Wcight．Pieces Damask＇d，And at Dia from Twelve to Eighteen Rials the Piece．Elephants Tecth at Sixty five Mamoodies the greater Maund．In－ dico of Cirkefa（whercof there＇s chree forts）the beft ar Fourteen Roupies the greater Maund，the fecond forr at Twelve，and the third ar Eight；and Fourtecn of thele Roupies make about half a Rial of Eighr．Indico of habor（ which isthe beft of all，and of which alfo there＇s three forts）the beft ar 36 Rupies，the biggeft Maund of 55 pound，the fecond forr at Thircy，and the third ai W wenry four Roupies．The Charges of bringing it to the Water fide was 10 in the hundred for Cirkefo Indico，and 20 in the 100 （Cuftom）for that of Labor．
Having feen the laft refult of our Affairs in the Red Ser， we fer failin profecution of our Indian Voyage，directing Cupainsafis our courfe firft of all to Bantrm．We pur in by the way gra for Bam ar Zocotorn for a Bargain of Aloes，ir teing abourchis rime ram． of the Year that the King of that Illand trad told us he thould be able to furning us with a quantity．He held it Spprimbio． up ar a very high．rare，demanding Forty Rials of Eight per Rintal，which is 104 pound weighr，alledging that the Portugueze courted him to ler them bave the refufal of it， and would be glad of it at that Price．We agreed with him ar laft ar Thirty Rials for one parcel，and Thircy Take in al： cight for another，and fo took of him the quantity of loer at Zosco 4067 pound，which colt us to the value of \(1418 \times\) Rials \({ }^{\text {tora }}\) of Eight；bur we found him falle both in his Word and Weight too，tho we made no breach with him upon that fcore for the fake of future Trade

After we had parced from this Iland we wexe one night furpriz＇d with a ftrange fparkling and glaring of the Wa－ cer all about us．＇Twas bur juft before fo dark thar a－A remarka－ could not fee half the length of the Ship any way round，menoi： and now there was fuch a clear Skic on every fide，as would have fervid to have read by tolerably well．＇And this was not a fudden flaft of lighr that gave a thort olare and then was gone again prefently，bur it held us．for a matrer of half an hour failing；and when all came to all， and the Philolophy of the whole Fleet was puzzl＇d to find out the caufe of is，＇twas a parcel of Curte Fift fwiming abour us that made this appearance，and were fo kind as to afford us the Affiftance of their Lighr in the dark Nighr，when the Stars denied us theirs．
When we came up with Cape Commorin，upon the The deccit of Malabar Coaft，we found by Oblervacion that it＇s errone－the Placis in oully placed in the common Plats，lying confiderably te feofrion more Northerly than they make it ；for whereas the Lati－of Cype tude is generally reckoned fix Degrees ren Minates，we find it to be 7 Degrees 42 Minures to the North of the Line．Befides we had no fight of feveral other Inands mentioned in our Plass；particularly we light of none of the Maldives，whish are fo very numerous，according．to the vulgar Accounts，neither indecd did we defcry any Land cillwe faw the Main of Malabar．

Being in fight of the lland of Sum．tra（the Eaft part of which did then bear E．N．E．\({ }^{1} 4\) Leagues diftance） and in 4 Degr． 49 Minptes Sorth Latitude，we found a very ftrong Current jerting to the South fide，which pus us forcibly off from the Land．
From hence it may be preper to give this caution to thole that are bound for the Sercights of Sundn，that they Note of the keep Sumatrin aboard after they are come into ：Degrec Sumatren 30 Minutes Sorth Latitude，becaufe there the Current begins；and fordiftance，thar they hold a mater of 30 Leagues off with gocd lecking our，becaufe there are feverad
feveral Cayos 15 or 20 Leagues off, whictir by Reaton of the Current we did not fee.
Come roSan We came to an Anchor inBantam Road the Tatter crid of this Month, finding here feveral Ships of our own Narion, and the Dutch's, and more of ours every Day expected. The Arrival of all there Ships, "and the expectarion of fo many more, made a forange atreration in the - Price of Commodities; thofe in any Requeft being hoifted up to three times the Value of what they were fold for bar two Days before. Cloves which went bur ar fixteen Rials of Eightche Peectl; were now rifen to above forty; and the Price of Pepper encreafed in a far greater proportion; thisPcecul aried by our Engrifh Wcights, bcars about 132 pound. As the time of ourbeing tere the Protector was all in all in the Country; the King tho' of Age did nothing but fill up the Thronc, and enjoy his Pleafures, commitring all Bufinefs to the fole management of the Protector.
The Main of the Bufinefs done here this Seafon wasthe laying in Twelve or Fourteen thoufand Sacks of Pepper for the lading two of \(m y\) Ships quickly, to be difpatch'd from hence to England; and this we had ar feveral Prices, from 160 to 125 Rials the 100 Sacks, and all of the Chinefe Merchants who are the grear Dcalers there. Befides rhis, we took in 700 Sacks of the fame Commodiry for a trial how 'rwould go off at fapan; for thither I was bound from thisplace, going to make the firft Artempt ar ferting an Englifh Factory upon that Ifland. One of our Nation (Mr William Adams) was at this time in very grear Repure and Favour with the Empcronr there; he had been in fapan ever fince the Year 1600, and liv'd in very good Circumftances, and from him Letters came to us ar Bantam, giving us very grear Hopes of a good Reception, and profitable Trade at that Counrry:

My two Ships the HeCtor and the Thomas being fent away laden for England, I weighed out of theRoad for Fapan with my biggeft Ship the Clove. The very nextDay 2 Mifforrune oyerrook us, that had like to have oblig'd us wo put back to Baxtam again, to the very greax Prejudice of our intended Voyage. For having Pulo Lack on our Starboard, and pafing within two litue illands that lie to the Eaft fide of it, we run aground, and ftack faft for fome Hours in a very forlorn cale. The Mifchief that reduc'd usto this Diftrefs, was i Shoal lying in that Paffage, which has nor above fix Foor on the Top of it, nor is above half a Cable's length every way; hard aboard it there's ren Farhom, and the next caft on ground, as we found by fad experience. Oblerre, that to go clear of this Shoal, you muft keep clofe to the Ilands and not to the Main, for thar'sall Shoald. In the Courfe from hence to theIfland Celebes, we had the Current changing two or threefeveral ways: Not far from the watering place call'd Ting Inn, which is abourfourreen Leagues from Bantam, you thall find it ferting to the E.S. E. which you muft allow for, as you have che Wind; we had it as we fteer d near the Eaft of thofe two Iflands, that lie over againft the Watering place, and are abour five Miles diftance from the Point of Facatra. In the Latitude fix Degrees nine Minutes (after having passd the Me Pulo Labuck ) the Currentrun directly (at lealt pretty near) to the Weft fide, and within fight of the Celebes (,the Eaft part bearing Eaft by North fix Leagues off, and Latitude five Degrees 52 Minates) is ferto the North Weft fide.

Here wetook in our Sails to keep thort of the Streights of Defalon, and keeping our Lead all Night, we had firft 20. Fathom, and then drove into 33 and fo to 47 Farthom, fearing a Shoal, which lies almoft a League from the Celeber, and ar low Water plainly difcovers the breach uponit

Onthe Celebes fide'ris very dangerous, and full of fun-

 ken Ground; and for that Realon, we haled over for De Salon fide, having for a Mark the piked Hill, which is next to the Sea fide, and rifes up like an Illand. When this Hill bears N:by W. chen you are thwart the Eaft end of end of ir, and then will the IIland which you leave on yourStar-board fide, bear E. N. E. fo that you may boldly fteer our in the middle berween the two llands. ObLerve alfo, that the Eaft end of Defalon, thews like an Illand, and will go near ro deceive you rill you come to it; burwhen once you have broughr the North end of the Point to bear E. N. E. half a Point Eafterly, then you may go fecurely on, for you are clear of all Dangers from the aforementioned Shoal.

Abourfour or five Leagues diftance from Crmbine; we found the Current carry us to the North fide, and near the Illand Tingaleffe to the N. E. which is a near Neigh. bour to the confiderable lile of Botur.
From the Eaft Point of Botum the Land falls away fuddenly, with two or three great Bays to the Nortb Weft-wards, by which the three great Ilands, that lic to the North fide of Botun; are the Streights fo calld made. Tis requifire to oblerve concerbing there Streights, that sprifent the Pattage is not above a League broad, and the cntrance is of the North fide of the Illand, and if you come from the Weft fide, when you are athwart the \(N\). W. Point, your Courfe is E. N. E. and E. by N. up to the Road, and no Danger but whar you may cafily fec; bur then you muit leave the three Inlands to the North fide of you, and yet not go between any of them; and when you fall with the Weft end of Borun, don's go berween it and the two long Inands that lie off it; bur leave chem on your Star-board fide, becaufe 'ris all broken Ground between themand Boturn. Bur if the Wind feric you, then bale to the North fide of all the Illands, eurher between Borum and Cembina, or elfero the North fide of that too, and to you may keep the Coaft of Cciebes fafely anough.
Thelatter end of this Month, we came up with the Iland of Bachig ( call'd by our Englig Sailors Hakibolin) Cornons which is one of the Mobucca's, and very eafily known by the Profpectit yields, being a high copped round In and, and very different in flape from any orter Inands to be feen thereabours. The Poinr of rhis Ifland beaxing E.N.E. four Leagues of, and Latitude one Degree 16 Minures, we found the Current ferting N. E. and the high Land of Machian bearing N. by E. and Laticude si Minutes. We had it letring to the N. N. E. Brchian has been famous for the production of Cloves, and would still have maintained ir's Repuration for the fame Commodiry, did not the unhappy Commotions there difturb the Labours and induftrious Endeavours of the Narives.
They are altogether by the Ears in a Civil War; and was in whilft they are forming Plots and Scratagems to run down ine Batio and deftroy one another, the Clove-Tree ftands neglected, and the noble Spice rots upon the Ground. The Dutch and the Spaniards (who both make their Precentions to thisplace ) ftand by and fee chofe Conrentions of the Bucbians with no fmall Pleafuse; and if they did not at firft make the quarrel between them, yet the; do all they can to fomenr and encreafe it. They fir fectioc in their ftrong Forts, diverting themfelves with the Profpect of the Spoil thefe People make of one another; and for far their Paffions thould cool, and the raging Fit go off, they 100 them on with all the eagernefs in the World, and continually infpire them with frefh Jealoufies and Sufpizions, to that the Fend holds up to its heighr, and mund beimi mortal while thefe Incendiaries areamongft them, tileit while there is a race of People lefr that will be fo foolith The it as to hearken to their Suggeftions. Thefe Forcigners are fime in too cunning to meddle at all in the Matter, but think ir. Dusth he betrer way to leavethem to work it our by them-spanima felves; that is, they have toolitcle Honefty and good Naare to do any thing towards the making of Peace, and bringing the contending Parties to a good underftanding, at leaft by affording a juft Affiftance to the weaker and injured fide, to help to bring the Aggreffours to reafonable Terms: this won'r anfwer cheir Defign, for the inverted Sence of the Proverb is-true as well as the direct, when honeft People fall together by the Eais, the Knaves that ftand by lay fold, of their Right; ler the Natives murder and difparch one another, cheir own, without any farther coft or crouble. The poor Natives groan under thefeCalamities, and would be heartily glad to be rid of the troublefome Company of the Durch, as they freely confeft to me, wining that the Englijh. were planted here in their room. The King would fain have come abourdtie Ship, butche Dutch cblig'd him to forbear; and the People would have fold us Cloves too, but the terrour of the Dutch kept them in fuch awe, that they declar'd 'twas a hazarding of their Lives to do it.
And yet the Strength of the Dutch is inconfiderable. The Tuth there roo, if they did no bufie themfelves, as I did not Fora fral think they would in matrers of this nature; for accor- in Eactim ding to the Report of their Captain himfelf, their. Fort: (tho ftrong and fubftantially built) is not furnifhed with: abore thirtcen Pieces of Ordnance, and chirry Souldiers, a crifing Power to. Itrike fuch a Terrour into 2 whole Counvry; but the great Guns are the main Bufinels, and a frall number of Men with a Train of Arrillery on their fide, may command a-vaft multitude furniff'd ar no betrer rate than thefe Indians are. But tis to be hoped that the Dutch will be Atronger in time, and have a Troop of Souldiers of their own breed to Fight the Bichinns, for they trave taken care to furnilh their Fort well with Women, fome of their own Councry; and: thofe of fo huge and large a fize, that they were-a good Garrifon themfelves; fir to defend the Fort wicheut any nore Afiftance, agd certainly cannor fail of bringing very lufty Souldiers into the World.

This Band of. Amatons follow'd the Dutch Captain to our Ship, and prefertly falling to the Victuals with the common Sailors, gave lo good: Rroof; of their Ability that way, that if is be anfwerable other ways, the Men may ing to to leep, and turn over the Fort to the Care of thefe Females; one of which is almoft big enough to ftop up any Breach an Adverfary fhou'd make in the mean ime.
The Town of Bachan ftands bard by the Fort, and any hat hou'd have a mind to come to Anchor our of the Command of the Guns, may do it cn the Eaft-fide of the Bay, in twelve, fixtecn, and twenty Fathom, hard Cora Ground, at the opening or going out near a little Illand aking care of a Shoal thar lics to the Southward of the Fort, abour three Cables lergth, in Lat. 50 Min
The Variazion of the Compafs here, is 4 Degr. 48 Min . Eaterly.

The Staze of this Inand not allowing any Trade, we fail'd away for Machian, another of the Molucea's; the rather, being invited thereto by a Moor of Quality in this place, who promis'd good ftore of Cloves there, and furnifh'd us with Pilors for the Voyage.

The Profpects of Mactian and. Tydore, are fomerhing like that of Bachian, being high coppd Illands, only Ty dore is not fo high Land as that of Mnchian; it is mutinto Strights the Point of the Weftern-fide of the outwardmoft Ifle of patiage the three that lie in the going out, two of them being without the Narrow or Streight, and the Third makes the Streights ic felf, tho' thereare more Illands on the Eafternfide.

The Ifland calld Tanally Brechar, is one of thofe chat contributes to the making of the Streights, on the Sou-thern-part of which is a Shoal reaching over to the Sou-thern-part of Bachinn, having three Fathom on the Skirts, and is dry at low Warcr
We reckon it five Leagues from the Streights of Nerrorat, and fourteen from the Road of Amafane to this Parfagc. About the little Illand thar lies in the Streight's Mouth, you have Anchoring from eighteen Fathom and upwards: And a touch boch of a Sourherly and a Not: therly Current, before you pals the Streights, the latter efpecially, towards the Streights themfelves. We found the Sound clear of all Llands berween Bachion and Giloto; S.E. and N. W. and 'tis all very broad ; bar there are Ilands lying on the Starboard-fide, as you go to the Northwards.

The Channel between Bachian, Mecbian, and Gilooo lies N. by W. and S. by E. and is fix l.cagues over in the narrowe th part.
Paffing between Gilolo and Cain, we had by Obfervation North Lar. 17 Min. fo that Machian is not truly plac'd in the Plats, fince the Equator there curs it in the middle, and we find it to lie five Leagues more Northerly.
The Variation of the Compals where this Obfervation was made, was 4 Degr. 58 Min . Eafterly, and 2 Current in the fame place letring to the Southward.

About the middle of this Month, we came to an Anchor in the Road of Pelebere, hard by the Town of Tin , In Macbian, where theres the bet Riding of the danger.
The fame Day we came, we rook in a quantity of Cloves, the Price ar 60 Rials of Eight per Bahar, the Babar containing 200 Cattees, and cach Cattce-amounting to the Value of three Pound five Ounces Englijh. and asin tore highly dingufed ar our coming hither, threas inquilitive to know who directed us to this place, cern' crad in the matter, if they cou'd find them our; and particularly, that they wou'd treat thofe with the urmoft Severity; that flou'd offer to bring any Spice to us. They prerended to have conquer'd this Gountry by juft Arms, and to have a good and lawful Title to it; and chere fore told us we were injurious to come anc precend here where they had fo fairly planted themfelves.
But as thefe feecious Pretences wou'd never prove them to have a juft and fufficicrir Title to this Country, or fuch The Xatives a Property in it as to exclude all others from Trade, and Picquently were litule segarded by us; to all their Threatnings were as little valued by the Natives: They found us to be their Fricnds, Perfons that came not to arrempt any thing to the prejudice of their righiful Liberties and Privileges, but ouly to eftablith a Commerce to the mucual advantage of both Parties; and therefore they wou'd nor be curb'd by the Dutch, but declar'd they wou'd come aboard-us, and bring Spice, notwithttanding their imperious Ordersto the contrary. And they were as good as their Word, maintaining the Trade with us, in fpite of the infolent Hollarder ; we barterd Cambaya Cloth for Cloves with them, and fome we fold for ready Money.

But the induatrious Malice of our Adverfaries quickly oppos'd it felf by more effectual Merhods to overturn this good Correfpondence; and the. Natives, who faw it, inform'd us of is and at the fame time repin'd ar their ill ufage, and thar the were notablewo relievethemfelves or us.
The Durch, ir leems, gor an Order from the Prince of The methods Ternate, commanding all the. Inlanders upon pain of Deach \({ }_{D}\) took by the to forbear bringing any Cloves to us; and ro make fare prevens their on't, they guarded all the Avenues and Paffes of the' I- Trade as land, by which 'twas poffible that any Communication hou'd be held between us and thenShoar. They drein'd all their Forts and Garrifons, and brotght out their whole Power to watch upon the Coafts, and attend the Motions of the Natives, and our Ships; nay, more than that, they fent to Tydore for a couple of their great Ships to come and bear us out of the Road : And now the Natives (who knew -no better) expected to fee us driven away with a Vengeance.
In the mean time the Prince of Ternate (whomI bad before endeavour'd to qualifie by a good Prefent) came to give me a Vifit a Shipboard, and there in the midft of the good Entertainment, very frankly promis'd to ftand our riend is the matter of Trade, to revoke thar invidions Order the Dutcly had exrorted from him to our prejudice, and give the Natives a full Liccnfe to bring their Spice ous.
Bur-chis Prince (as the Event-proved) was afraid to difpleafe the Dutch, and durft nor be honeft and urne to his Word ; tho' to do him Juftice, I believe he had a mind to be fo. The Coafts were all faft lock'd up; and the Spies upon the Sea fo diligent and curious in their Watch that all the Arts that cou'd be ufed to deccive the quickfighted Jealoufie of our Adverfaries; were to no purpofe. The Dutch Ships kept clofe to us, but made no offer to - \(f\) f firft have funk them at Sea, and then have beat all their Forces at Iand too (which if wn cou'd have effected,'rwas Pfacienkood more Violence than we intended) the mater bein das we left the Duteh to enjoy their Repofe here, and fail'd away our of the Road.
We obferv'd the Eatirude in this Road of Pc!abery, to be 26 Min . to the Northward, and the Variacion of the Compass 3 Degr. 28:Min. Bur good Luck, which was not over ready to cone to us while we ftaid there; began to follow us when we wenc away: For as we fail'd alone A Trade m. the Narives, (who warch'd for an Opportunity as hearity yey goway, as the Dutch) having their Cloves ready, whipp"d them aboard in a trice; and they held doing fo for a pretty while, as faft as ever we cou'd weigh and pay for them. The Dutcb followed, and perhaps were fenfible of this, bur were not able to prevent it; for we were gor,fo fas to the Windwards of them, that the Bargains wैere all madeand concluded, before they cou'd come to the fooiling of them? We bought thus at parting a confiderable quantity of Spice, and had done a great deal more, if the People had not been frighted at the fight of a Dutch Veffel pafing by: However, 'rwas pretry well, and fo muchrthe better, in that it was wrefted out of the Hands of thofe that would unjuftly have engroffed the whole Commodiry to themfelyes.

We directed our Courfe now to the Lle of Tydorc, the wo Dutch Ships ftill plying after us.
About the liles Matierc, Machian, and Marro, the paffage betwecn, or on any fide, is free from all danger; but between Marroand Gitolo, you have a dangerous Shoal Dangerong itretching Ni. E . and S. W. which requires. the Pilor to Shoil ook well aboar him: The Water looks whicif abour it and when'tis Flood, the Shoal is cven with the Water; bus 2r. Ebb 'ris eafic to he difcern'd ; and the beft way to ccape ir, is to keep clofe to the Ilands: It ebbs abour this place fix Foor, and the Tide 假 fix Hours to the Northward; and as many to the Southward.
The Spaniards Fort ar Tydarc, ftands on the Eaft-Gide of \(C\) ome \(w^{\circ}\) the Ifland, all whercabonts the Warer is very deep, and Tjdorn no-good Anchoring, tho' there is a particndar dike abour \(1 s\) League from the Fort where a Ship may ziac well enough. At our firft coming within figit and teach of the-Fort, we were welcom'd with a Shot or two made an as; which tho it did us no harm, yer obliged us to be upon our Guard. The Spaniards it feems miftook us for Flemings, and notwithftanding our Englifh Colours wou'd not believe the contrary, till they had fent out a Buat to parley with us, and fatisfic themielves from our own Mouths.
And the Realon of this was, becaufe the Dutch had the Policyof Ometimes cheared them, by hangired out Englig, Colourstac Dutch: inftead of their oren, and forad so \(\mathrm{b} \boldsymbol{y}\) the Fort underthe Procection of hore Colours, which ortinwife with theis own they wou'd not Gave done: For the Snarierds wou'd beat their Ships in pieces, before they'd let them pifs here.

Major to bid us Welcome, and bring the Skip into the beft Anchoring-place; they fent us' Prelencs, and came to Treats a Shipboard;- and there was futh a reciprocirion of Kindneffes berwixt us, as if our rwo Nations had never fallen out, and we had been all of 2 piece, both in our Ciyitand Religious: Intcretts.
They promis'd moreover, to difpatch Letters to the Mafter de Camp at Ternare, for his Orders to Trade with us, and earnefty defired my pay till de rerum of the Mefen: gers \(;\) and when News came that avole Orders were arrived at Tydore, tbe Captain-Genciral, and another Grear Officer, fent wond, They wou'd come aboard me the isext Day to do Bulinels. We made ready to receive them, and by the noife of the grear Guns, thooght verily they had been coming; when we found that thooting to be for the Arrival of the Warlike Prince of Trdore, who was come home in Triumph with the Heads of a hundred Terviares rimeres by and amonglt them the Head of the Prince of. Teruatc, the t in of whom we had carels'd at Mrchicn.
Tjdare.
This Prince of Ternate was call'd over to Mactian by the Dutch, on purpofe to keep the Country People from felling their Cloyes to us; and the Tydorians who attended their Motions in going back, and lay in Ambufh for them, cunningly drew them into their Snares, and making a fudden and furious Affault upon them; cut them all off to the number of 160 Men : The young Prinice himfelf underwent the Fate of War amongtt the reft, and his Head was brought in a very triumphanr manner, for a Prefent to his Sitter, Wife to the Conquerour, -Prince of Tydere.

Befides this, there were wo other Royal Victims which fell at that time, by the raging Sword of the Tydorian, the younger Brother of that Prince of Ternate, and the King of Giiclo: The Dutch have eften fels the Effegs of the Force and Courage of this Prince, and 'twas but a liutle before this, that he furpriz'd and rook one of their Men of War.

We were oblig'd now to keep double Warch and Ward, and be in all the readimets 'imaginable to withttand an Affult, baving this daring Prince fo near us: Befides the Spaniards increas'd their Forces, and feem'd to be providing for fome attempt; all which appear'd very doubrful and fufpicious, and were Symptoms of fo ill and chreatning an Alpect, that I refolv'd to prevent the Danger that might follow, by a fudden Remove away from them. 'Tis true, thePrince of Tydore promifed a good parcel of Cloves, if we ftaid a little while longer; bur thofe Cloves might poffibly have coft us soo dear; and fich a Defperado as \(\mathrm{hC}_{\text {, }}\) with the affitance of the Spaniards, might have fold ns a very bad Bargain; upon which foore we left him to fell his Cloves to other Chapmen, being refolved to take none y pon thofe Terms.

It may nor be amifs here before we rake our leave of thefe Mioifaca Ifles; to give fome Account of the Original of the Eumpcan Imerctt there, the Fortunc of the Country under its feveral Mafters, and the.Civil Circumftances of it, as to Trade and Commerce, ar the cime of our being there.

Thefe two Princes had drawn their Swords, and the whole Intereft of the Mnlucca's being divided kerween them, either as theirSubjats or Confederares, all the otherimands were up in Arms, and became Seconds in the fame Quarrel. The Porrugucze, for the becter fetting of themfelves, joyn'd themfelves to neither Party, bur pretended ro be Friends to both; and conrequently having no Work upon their Hands, whiie the othersfought, they foil to building of Fors and Caftles upon borh the IIands of Ternate, and Tydore: They left the two Kings to difpute which mou'd be Mafter of the ochers Country; and in the mean time took care, that neither of then mon'dile fo, or rather to make both their Vatials. Having ftaid now fome time at \(\cdot\) Tydere to no purpore and our longer ftay theri leing likely to be attended with more Danger than Profit, we wemt on winfour Voyage calling in at Ternate by the way \(;\) where we fourid as little good to be done as at Tydore: Berween the Duicb'and the Spianićrds", all thofellands are fo managed, that they themfelyestalone haic the cntire advaneage of them; they devour all, and then are fo, fpiteful, that they wou'd: rather chate to fee the Commodities fpoild and-confoninded; (as the Spice is now by their means party', than fuffer any others to take them at a good Price.

Sailing along from Terrinte, we had an Eafteriy Current continually, till we came up with the great Inand Doy; and all about the Northem Poine of that Illand, the Current (er very frongly the \{ame way. We found a very large Bay here, where there's Anchoring good enough, but premty deep; and off the Notrhern Point lies a great Sheal half a League into the Sca. We found no People upon this Illand, but other Crearures in fome picnry, which we had more occafion for at thar time: There were a very large forr of Swine and Deer, Pheafincs, Woodcocks, and Wood-pigeons, the laner very plump, and large bodied like Hens. It jields likewife good tore of Cokers, Penangs, Seric, and Patmica's; and the tops of thele Palmita-Trees, drels'd with Beef, are as good and fwect as any Cabbage in the World : And that nothing might be wanting to our complete Refremment at this place, we had Water and Wood enough, nor only for the Supply of a prefent Necefity, bur to make whar Provifion we pleas'd for furure Wancs.
Tho' no People appear'd, yer upon enquiry athore, we found the Ruines of Houfes, and cerrain old Pieces of Houmold-ftuff; 10 that tis cerain the Inand had been inhabired, as ir very well defery'd no be, tho' the People by fome Calamity or other; were deftroy'd or driven away from their Habications.
This \(D y\) is the North Eaftermoft loand of Gilole, or Berrachina; the Larirade here is 2 Degr. 35 Min. N. and the Variation's Degr. 20 Min. Eafterly. We refrech'd ar this place for the berrer part of a Month, and then purfued our Voyage to Japrn.
haining palsid the Tropick of Cancer, we had Gight of the INes-Dos Reyes Magos, which lie along N. E. and S.W They are fmall laxads, and ar lcaft ten or eléven in number, with broken Ground and Breaches, reaching overto each Illand, Lo that we cou'd difcern no Paflage to the Weftward
We had fighe of various orther Illands (in our palfage from theee) which were wholly unknown to us ; but the next land that came in view, that we were cerrain of was she great Inand Ximo; to the Southward of Fapan, and a part of that Empire, calld by the Inhabiranrs Mafbme Herc fome of the Natives that were abroad a Fifhing came up to us with their Boars, in the Contrivance of which we found fome Curiofry worth our Obfervation. They were about five Tun a picce Burthen, firted with one Sail which ftood like that of a Skiff, and skulld with four Oars of a fide: Their Oars refted upon a Pin faftued on the top of the Boar's fide, the Head of which Pin was fo ler into the middle-part of the Oax , that the Oax hung in an exact poize, giving thercby much lefs trouble to tbe Rower in the management of it, than otherwife it muft be. Befides; the Rowersperform their Work ftanding, as ours do firtings: and fo take up abundandy the lefs room in the Boar; : and as they rake up lefs room, fo they do Ics time too, for they row at a far fwifter rate than we can pretend to: We agreed wieh fome of thece to Pilorus to Firando; which they yery willingly agrecd to, and as honeftly performid, bringing us lafe inito the Road, before the middle of this Month.
For our firf Welcome hither, we had a Vifir a ShipThe Ring of board from Perfons of no lefs Figure than the Old and the Young King of this Inand of Firanido; which is ane of the Particulars of the large Empire of fapan. The two Kings came attended with a grear fiew of Boats and Gallics which when they were near us, fcll back, and made way in 2 very decent manner, for the two priccipal Gallies to come up to the Ship.
Their Habit: ,They were borh of themdrefs'dio Silken Gowns girt to cm with a fine Shirs, and a Pair of Flaxen Breeches next to their Bodics'; they had no Stockins on, bur a fort of Shoocs crSandals; the forepart of their Heads yery clofe fhaven, and cheir Hair behind long, and tied up in a Knor, which was all that part had either for Ornament or Defence, they wearing nothing of Hars, Caps, or Turbants, as 0 , ther People do. They had each of them twio Cattans (or Swords of that Country) gitt by their fides, the one of half a Yard, the ocher a quartcrlong; a defperate kind of Wcapon, and noching infrriour to the Indian Crifes, or Turkijh Scimitars.
Their manner of Salitation was thius: Firft they put off

Their Shooes, then clappiog their Right-hand within the The moner Leff, they put therin down rowards rheir KLees, and fo in of straterise is that ftooping poofture they waved cheir Bodies, fideling to formen and fro, inclining this way and that way alternarely, and all the while crying out, Aigh, Auth, which is a Word of Complement and Weicome amongft thiem.
They werc very highly pleas'd with the Entertainment we gave them, and our Eirglijh. Mufick made no friall part of their Diterfion and Pleafure a Shipboard; they made no Ccruple of promifing all the Encouragement and Kindnefs thar Country cou'd afford us, efpecially upon the prefenting of our King's Leters, which they receiv'd witit a wonderful Joy and Sarisfaction. This Letreer the King woud not pictend to open, till he had fent for Auge (as he calld him) to interprct it to him: This Auge fignifies in their Language a Pilor; and the Perfon intended by it was no other than Mr. ィidnms, our Country-man, and Friend, and at this rime a Man of no litcle Nore and Significancy in fapan. A Difpacch was fent away immediarely for him ; as likewife to the Grear Emperour up in the Country, to give him Notice of our Arrival and Bufinels.
Afterithefe rwo Great Petfonages had been with us, all xhe Nobility the lords and Grear Men came aboard us in a full Body; brine thd they came with fuch a Train, that ive hardly knew whete \({ }^{\text {grefefnns. }}\) to beftow them, they made a peifect Crowd, and there was carce any ttirring to and fro in the Ship, for Noblcmen and their Attendants. But they were fo far frompico ming to fpend upon, or be chargcable to us, that they brought their own Entertiinmenr along with them, (at eaft as much as it was worth) every Noble-man made his Prefenc; fome in Venifon, fome in wild-Fowl, ochers in Filh, Fruits, or fomeching or ocher very acceprable and good. They mightily admired the Structure and Concrivance of the Ship, view'd it in all its parts, and farver'd in from one end to the other, with fo much Atrention and Curiofiry, thiat we thought they sou'd never have had eriough of the fight.
Bur we had more trouble with the common People, Malitinderof who were our' nexi Vifirants, and quickly fupplied the Reople coons place of the Lords, when once they were qupp. Thereo was no poffible keeping of them away, the Sbip was fure 2. Wonider to them?: And when we were as foll as ever we cou'd ftand wedged by one another, the reft contented themfelves with gazing upon the Ship onr of tieir Boars fome admired the Head, and Kome the Stern, and others the Tackling; and ar che fame ame crowded fo thick about ber, that the cou'd no more ftir for Boars, than we con'd that were in her for Swarms of People. In thort, I beliex, if, the Ship had been big enough; the whole Nation wou'd have come aboard at once; and as it was, if the King's Orders had nor prevented them, they wou'd centainly bave raken their Turns all round the Country, and never left rill every Body bad feen in. :Tis true, the Pcople wecre very cuvil, and far from offering, any thing of Rudencfs or Violence; they pretended to no more than a litrle ftaring and peeping abont; but that Curiofiry of theirs was fo unwearied, and grew fo troublefome to us, that we were forc'd to dcfire the Prefence of an Officer of he Kings's, as wcll to prevent any Diforder that might happen in fuch a promifcuous Multitude, as to give us a litele Refpire from thefe cirefome Viarrs.
I can' 5 bur rake Notice of an odd Miftake, in a matten of Devorion, made by fome of the faporefe Genclewomen, whom I admitrdd into my Cabin. Thefe were fome whom the Portiluzuiefe 3 cfitits had been at work upon, and had receiv'd from them fome little Marters of Chriftianity, abour as much as the faying of a few Gibberilh Prayers, or the cringing before an Image or Picture might come to

The King's Quickly after the King came aboard again, and was to women, md their skill in surick. and Ladies of Pleafure along with him. An Argument of the very great difference berween the free, open, and jolly Temper of thefe \(\mathcal{F} a p o n e f c\), and that four, morofe, and jealous Difpofition, thar prevails all over the Maiometen World ; where the Women are cloifter'd up in Seraglio's, and live like fo many Prifoners of Srare, invilible to al Human Eyes, except thofe of a fcw Eunuchs, and their Paramours: Thefe Ladies had, all of them, very good Complexiotrs, comely and graceful Features, and extream. ly well Carriag'd; a nise Judge of Bearty might have laid, they were defective in Stature, and a fize too low and perhaps wanted Bluth in their Faces; yer their other Graces ercufed well enough their wanr of hcight; and as for Colour, they ferch'd in affiftance from Art, and painted themfelves, fince Nature had not done it.

Their Habit was Silken Gowns, girt clofe about them no Stockins, but a fort of Buskins bound with a Ribbond abour their Inftep; their Hair, which was very black and long, handfomely ried up upon the Crown of their Heads, but no where fhaven as the Mens was.

They fung very finely, and playd upon feveral forts of Inftruments; one of which was verymuch like ourlure in the Mape of ir,and frerred like chat, only longer in the Neck, and had bur four Strings, which were nor Wire neither, but Gut-ftrings; and then in their Play they don't found the Inftrument with their Fingers, bus touch the Strings with a litrle piece of Ivory, as we do when we play upon 2 Citrem wirh 2 Ouill. They have their Songs for Yocal Mufick, and their leffons for Inftrumental, orderly prick'd down in their Mafick-Books, as we have; and thore Books have the Divifions of Lines and Spanes for the feveral Notes, much after the rate of ours, tho' what particular and lefs material Differences there may be between the Mufick of chis Copnory, and ours, I can't pretend to tell.

The King having invited us to come afhore, and fix upon a House for the Entertainment of ourfelves and our Goods, we went to do that piece of neceffary Bufinels, as aifo to pay a relpectful Vifit to the King himelf, who had made us fo many, and that in fo familiar a manner, befides, we had the very good Errand of delivering a Prefent from ous King to him, which was of the Value of about 140 l .
(af wastaken with extream kindnes, and a Noble Feaft (after the fapan manner) was made, to exprets how Welcome the Bringers of ir were.
They fir at Mear in the fame pofture that moft of the Eaftern Nacions do, crois-lcgg'd, upon rich Carpers and Mats; and I think they are as good Drinkers as moft of the Eaftern Nations tco, at leaft theyll do it when aHealth is call'd : The Old King, notwithftanding his Agc, curn'd of his Cup (char held near a Quart) of Spirits diftill'd from Rice, crery whit as Atrong as our Aque Vitre, and this without ftopping till he came to the bottom; and all the Faponefe Lords chere prefenc did the fame; and Imy felf, for Company, was obliged to do the like, ir being a Healch to the King of England.

Having a Houle now agreed upon and provided for us, of Trade we brought part of our Effects athore; and attended the of Trade ati. Beginnings of a Trade. Ar our coming hither, we found rendos with Broad-Cloths of fifteen or fixteen Pound a Cloch, to be their Mer fold by the Dutch, in Firando, at forty eight Rials of Eight, Weights, tr. which is eighr Pound Sterling the Mart, that being rwo Yards and a quarter: Bur we defirous to kecp up the Price of our Cloth, and finding the Durch had good ftore of them, came to this Agrcement with them, thatwe wou'd of both fides fer Rares upon the Cloths we had, and be punctual in not feliing any under the Prices determin'd by us.
mpeaing of Bur they very eafily brcke the Bonds of this Agreement, s.is Dmith and prefently fhipp'd off grear Quantitics of Cloths for feveral IAands thereabouts, fering them ar baic low Prices, for the more fpeedy Venr of their own, and glurting the places before ours came.
Your Bantam Pepper ungarbled, which coft at Bantem 13 of a Rial of Eight per Sack, was worth here at our coming ten Tayes the Pecul, which is a handred Catrees, end makes about \(130 /\). Engi.js; and the Taye is 5 s . Sterling. A Rial of Eighr in ordinary Payment, goes bur for feven of their Mafles, which amounts to abnut 3 s. 6 d . in our Money. Tin went at chirry Tayes the Pecul, Elephants Teech ar eighry, Iron caft Pieces, fix, Powder ar twenty three, Aloes Succorrina at fix Tayes the Cattec, Fowling-pieces at twenty Tayes a-piece, Callicoes, and your Cormandel and Guzuras Commodities, ar uncertain Prices, as they were in goodnels.
At the life Mafma (or Ximo) there feem'd ro be a good Vent for moft of the Commodities we generally bring into thefe parts ; tho' 'rwas not fo much upon our own Ex perience, as that of the Dutch, we came to underftand this: For they did all they cou'd to conceal the Trade ar that place from us, and wou'd not be known to have fold a Pennj-worth of Goods chere: But we had Notice, that they did not only make a good Market chere, but returnid alfo good ftore of Bars of Silver; whith they endeavour'd to kecp as fecrer as they cou'd. And they were pleas'd too, to ufe that cunning Ferch in thefe parts, which they have done in feveral other parts of the World, for their own advantage, but not at all to ours; and thar is, to call themielves Englifh-men; expecting more Refpect, and better Treatment abroad under that Name, thanotherwife as Dutci:-non they cou'd erer pretend to.

Now 'tis odd, that any People fhou'd behave themfelves ro, as to be amam'd of owning their own Country, leaft it fhou'd be faid thar Country yields a Pack of Knaves; bur'tis much worfe, that another Counrry fourd be ftigmariz'd, and lic under a Difrepuration for ir, thar Dutcher men fhoud do difcommendable things, and Engliflemen bear all the blame.

But the Englifh Name has been much more fullied and The Rem blacken'd by the fcandalous Reports of the Portuguffe Je-oxthe ptid Luirs; the \(\ddagger a p o n e f \mathrm{kncw}\) us long before we came hither ; mexemip bur'rwas as a parcel of Pyrates and Rovers, thar lived on \(3 p a m\) ly upon the Spoil of other Pcople, and were the Plagues of all the Seas in that part of the World. And they had infinuated this Notion fo far into the Faponefo, that chey had made a Song of us to that purpole, the finging of which they ufed to accompany with leveral Actions and Geftures, thewing how we feize and plunder the Spanifs Ships. And thus finging and acting the Englifh, they us'd to fcare their froward brawling Children our of their noife and troublefomnefs, and make them quier; juft as the French did theirs, with the Name of the Lord Talbor; and the Turks theirs, with that of Scanderbeg.
But when we came upon the Spor, the Faponefe fignified by all the Particulars of their moft obliging Carriage to us, that we had been unfairly, and very difproportio nally reprefented to them; that the Jefuirs bad given them a falle Pourrraicture of us, and that their Picture was as much unlike the Original it felf, as the Piture of Venus to that of the Virgin Mary.
The Laws of this Country are horribly ftrict and fevere in many Particulars, and Offesders are no where treated corast with more Bitternefs and Rigour than in fapan. Duelling punisim is here an unpardonable Crime, whetherin the Narives or Foreigners that ftay here bur for a time; the Laws will ner ofte rake hold of all of them alike: And the Faponefs will not Exection allow the Stain of any Bloodmed in that manner to lie upon their Country. Nay, if a Man does bur draw a Weapon in Anger upon another, the Cattans are prefently ar work upon him, and he is cur in pieces withour any farther. Ceremony, tho he has done no harm, nor given no Wound to him he threatned: But if any Mifchief be done, not only the Aggreffor himfelf, but all his Family are involved in the Punihment, and the Law (which I confefs is barbarous) excrifes the fame Severity upon hem, as on him
To fteal a Slave from another Perfon, is Death withous Mcrcy alfo: Or if the thing wrongfully taken from another; be of ever fo trifling a nature, if the Fact be cleanly proved, there's no Reprieve, nor Mitigation of the Senence of the Law, as far as I can find.
Their folemn Executions are perform'd with thefe Ccremonies following:
In che firft placemarches a Man with a Pickaxe, who is follow'd by another with a Shovel, to dig the Grave of the Malefactor, (if ar leaft that Favour be permitted him, as in the Cafe of fome Crimes it is nor) next so thefe comes a Perfon carrying a fmall Table, upon which the Offence for which the Party dies is written, and exposd to the view of all; then follows the Criminal himfelf, having his Hands bound behind him, and unto him is fafted a forc of a little Banner, upon which his Offence is likewife written; the Executioner brings up the Rear, with his Murdering Weapon by hisfide, holding in his Hand the end of the Cord with which the condemned Man is bound, and on each fide of him walks a Soldicr, refting his Pike on the Shoulder of him that is to die, to prevent his atrempting to make an efcape from Juftice.

And in this manner I faw one led to Execution, who at the fame time carried it with fuch an Air of Courage, appeard fo abfolutely intrepid, and above all the Horror of his Circumftance, that I fou'd hardly have thought (had I not feen it) that Human Naturc cou'd exer have amiv'd

Women in \(\mathrm{J}_{\mathrm{J}}\) Primes ither fome cafes, they are loofe and llack enough in others; a Thicf moft die, bur 2 Whore or 2 Bawd may live, and have the Law of their fide: A Man muft nor fteal two or three handfuls of Rice, tho it be to keep. Life and Soul rogether; but a Man may throw away his Eftare upon Wenches; and ruine his. Family at a naughty Houfe. They have a grear number of Men amongt them, whofe Bufinefs and Profeffion is nothing but pandering and furnifhing thofe that want Whores. Every one of thefe has fuch a ftock of Women of his own, bought for the moft part with his Money, and according as Nature has made them finer or courfer, to he rates them, and purs down the feveral Prices at which they thall be der out; tis left to his own difcrecion to fette this Point ar firft, bucafrer he has once fer his Price he can't raife ir, fall it he may ; butif heoffers to exact any more, upon complaint made, he certainly dies forit. Now when any Man is difpos'd for an Entertainment of this kind, he has nothing to do to confalt the Inclination of the Female; whether the likes him or no, much lefs to make any Bargain with her; all the difficulty lies in feating the Price with the Mafter Pander, which once done the Women are obliged to futtan women fil the Conditions of the Agreement. And at this rate the loftheir perp greateft Nobie-men in Fapen make no fcruple of fending for thefe lewd Fellows to their pablick Inss when they are upon the Road, and agreeing with them for fuch a number of Wenches as they have a mind ro, and that in the moft open mannerin the World, as if-they were driving a common bargain, or treating of the moft innocent matter in the way of Trade.

A plain intimation that the Faponefe think the Employment fcandalous and odions, and yer they fupport ir by their lewd Practices, wichour which it would fall of courle.
atering of In this Month 2 certain petry King of a neighbouring Gris torith Illand came to Firando upon the fame of our being there: and our Ship came with an earneft defire to fee both which he did to his very great Satisfaction, and heartily invited us rocome and Tradeat his Inand, where he promisd us as kind a Welcome as we had ar Firando.
But it was now time for us to ge and wair upon a far greater Prince, even the mighty Emperour of Fapan himfelf; a Command was come for our Joumey to Court, in order to which we prepar'd the feveral Prefents that were to be made to the Emperour and the great Perfons abour him. The old King of Firando furnin'd us with a Gally, and all things neceftary for our Paflage; the beft part of my Company was left there to infpect the Affairs of the Houfe and Ship in our ablence, fome few only going along with me to this Grand Audience. Before we went we had the Comfort of feeing our Country Man Mr Adams, who was come to interpree nur King's Letrers to the old King of Firando: He fill gave us the fame Encouragement concerning a Trade in this Country, and the fame Cbaracter of it's good difpofition therero by word of Mouth, that he did by his Letrers fend to Banam.
Having fet fail from Firando, we pafs'd by divers Inands, the molt part of which were very well Inhabired, and had fair Towns upon them; bur the firf of note that we put in at was Fuccate, a very large and confiderable place, not mach lels than London within the Walls, very well built, and fo even and uniform, thar one might fee from one end of a Streer to another. It has a ftrong Srone Gaftle, a good Dirch and a Draw-Bridge, all kepr orOrdnaficeindeed dia nor form orons fince there was no-fuch thing ar Firando, and 'tis 2 for of AMiliary Furniture that the faponefe are wholly withour.
Allalong this Coaft and fo up to Ozaca, we found Women that liv'd with their whole Families upon the Water, genting their livelyhood by Fining, at which they were very grear Artifts. But they had two Strings to their Bow, and twas next to impoffible for the Finh to efcape them; for what they mif'd with their Lines and Nets they would dive for, and carch char way withour fail ; and this they would do with eafero the depth of 8 Farthom. ThefeWomen were very eafie to be known from all orhers, for by continualdiving their Eyes were ftrangely alter'd, and look'd as red as Blood, and by' chis-Token the diving Women are ditinguind in fapan
When we had past d the Streights of Semina-feque, the of ach a lage next Town of note we came to was ofaci, nothing infe- Town, and a riour to the former in Compals and Dimenfions, and one Sea Perr. of the Principal Sea-Ports of the Empire. There's a River comes up to it as wide as the Timmos; and feveral very fine. Timber Bridges laid over ir; ir has a Caftle very extraordinary for bignels and ftrength, with very deep. Trenches abour is, and feveral Draw-Bridges arcificially made, and Gares fo frongly plated with Iron;. as A trones may feem to bid defiance to any batrery in the World. The whole building of the Caftle is of Free-Stone, and the Walls are of the fame, but a matter of feven Yards thick, and pur together. without any thing of Mortar or Cement, the Soonss being fo nicely cur as to lie perfectly clofe together, and need no ocher binding; only if nhere happens to be a roid fpace any where; they throw a litcleEarth in to fill up ctre crevice, and that's all they do. 'Tis regularly concrived, Atrengrhned with Bulwarks and Bartlements, with good ftore of loop holes for fmall Stior and Arrows, and various. Paffages for the chrowing our of Stones upon thofe thar fhould come to attempr it. And one would eafily believe it to be a mighty ftrong and fecure building, wirhour kaving a parcicularAccount of ir when one hears what ufe che. Emperor. puts it to, and- of whatimportance the Jewel is here kept in fafe Cuftody. In thort here lives. ( lock'd up in this Caftle) the rrue and genuin Heir of the Empire of fapan; here: I fay he lives bur to happy as ro be ignorant of his real Quality, Rights and Juft Pretenfions, tho' at the fame time fo unfortunate as to be excluded from all. The wruth of the matrer is, The Sory of The prefent Emperor is an. In : oppofition. to whorn; is alfo to affert the Rights' of the Royal Pupill, Oro/bof amman took up Arms, and having encirely roused the other Prerenders, had the fupreme Power, fuddenly clap'd all.into his own Hands. And now (perhaps not thinking of any fuch thing before) the charming Opportunixy told him he had e'en as good be Empcror himfelf; all his Compecitors were remov'd our of the way, the true Heir was incapable of underftanding and redreffing his cafe, all the Power was his own, and he wanted only the mame of an Emperor, which was fo very fmall a thing that he refolved not to be withour that any longer. The young Prince he kept always about him, and in perfect Ignorance of himfelf and his relation to the Crown, fuffering him to know no other butchat he is his Son; all that are abour him being fuch as the prefent Emperor has brought up from their Cradles, and to nor able ro give him any better informa tion. And to make all fure when he was grown to Years he married him to his own Daughter, and Koconfin'd them ro the Caftle of Oface, where they live like the Children of an Emperor, as to all points of State and Grandeur, only Liberty, that fweetens all the rent, civil policy is pleas'd to deny them.

Over againft Ofica, on the ocher fide of the River, lies sacon another grear Town call'd Sacay, a place of very great rade for all the Illes thercabours.
Ar Fufbimi to which we came nexr, we found a Garriron of 3000 Souldiers appointed for the keeping fome of Fwjimid thofe parts in good order; this Garrifon is thifted every three Year, and the change happening when we came thi ther, we had the advantage of feeing fomeching of the Rules of their Millitary Difcipline. They generally march no more than five a Brealt, and to every ten Files the Difithere's an Officer deputed, whoregulates the March, and pline of the keeps all in perfe 4 Order. Their difpofition according Jqunff. to the quality of their Arms is thus. Firft of all march their Shot, thar is Calievers, for Muskers rhey have none neither will they ufe any; then follow Pikes, then Car tans and Targers, Bows and Arrows, Waggadan Cat Hooks, and laftly Calievers again clofe the March; and amongt all thefe they have no Coloars, Drums, Trumpers norany fort of Warlick Mufick.
Their Companies confift of uncerrain Numbers, from 150, to son, wd in the midt of every Company, they have fare Hores led along, very nobly trappd and furnih'd.

The Captain comes laf of all on Horleback, butriding in fuch a polture as wou'd berter befir a Mountebank, or a Marker-man; than a Commander of Soldiers: His Bed, and all his Necelfarics, are pack'd up uporehis:own Horfe, and orer them is fread a red Chinia Fele for a Covering; and fo the Caprain fits mounced up a high upon his Pack, with his Less upon the Horfes Neck, much after the rate that our Buter-Women fir upon their Paniers; and truly as handfomely.
As in the pars of the fame Troop, or Company, thofe Files that march next the Captain, are more pompous in their Furniture tharithoferhatare remoter; 50 "tis in whole Troops, thofe that conse neareit the General, who is laft of all, are much more braicly ascoutred than chofe that went before: The Giory of the Army finks and falls by egual fteps, from that parr where the Gcieral is, and where in frines with the brighrot luftre: A good hing for the Gencral by the way, and may ferve to put him in mind, that he oughe to be indeed the Glory of, the Army; and to anfwer his Character and Trut, 作ou'd outhine all the reft in Milicary Vertucs, as miuch as he does in vifible Pomp and Splendour.
The \(¥\) tpomefc Herfes are net ercar and rall, bur of the fize of our middling Nass, fraill Headed, and extrcamly mentefome, and in my Opinion far beyond your Spanifk Gennets, borh in farcly Cargiage and Stomach too.

Their Soldiers obierve very heotordars upon the Road, and are fo exactly govern'd fater they are as welcome ar the Publick Houres as any Guefts whatocyer: No Man is in the leaft difturb'd, or difcommoded by them, they take whar they find, as other Reople do, and pay for't withour any, quarrelling. The Ruads are very well ftock'd with Houles of Enterrainment; and when there are Sol diens upon the March, shey provide Vißtuals ready for them, fo tharthey have at ar inftant's warning what they want, and thar ar very cheap Rates, a Dinner of good wholefome Food, and enough, from Two Shillings downward to a Penny.
the Dies in The Diet generally ufed rhrough the Country, is Rice fapen. of divers Torts, (the white being counted the beft;) Fint Pheafant, Parridge, Quail, and'Hens: Of Bealts, they have all forts of:Deer, Wild Boars, Goars, and Kine: Cheefe alfo in grear plenty, bur Burrer they make none, neither will they eat any Milk, becaufe they efticem it as the Blood of the Animal; and for what Reafon I know not, they will nor touch a bit of any tame Beaft, tho they have them in abindance.
Their Wheat oughe not to be forgotten, which is as plump and good as any our Nation can thew, but all of the red Colour. We did, in our Travels in the Country, buy Rice ar a Half-penny per Pound; Hens and Pheafanes she belt and fancef, for Threc-pence a piece; Pigs very large, for a Shilling; a far Hog for Five Shillings; a good Beef ar Sixteen Shillings; and a Goar at Three Shillings.

The Drinks in requeft in the Country, are only the Spirits diftilled from Rice, very ftrong, and of the Colour of Canary, and common Warer, which 1 all in all amongf the poorer fort of Pcople, that can't reach to the Price of the other Liquer: They always drink their Warer warm, and fay, that us good to kill the Worms in the Maw;; which I fhould be very ready to believe, provided they pur good ftore of Sait in ir.
Our Morions being directed to Surange, where the Emperorthen kepr his Court; by thie laterend of this Month we had gone as far as our Way lay by Warer; and now being to finifh the remainder of ous Joimey by Land, we werefurnim'd with Horfes and all Conveniencies forthar purpofe at the Emperor's Charge. I had alfo a Palankin, ot one of their Sedans, provided for me; and a freth fupply of Men drawn our of every place fuccefively, for the Office of carrying me thercin, when I was cired of my Horfe, and for the greater State, a Slave appointed to run with a Pike before the Palankin: The King's Harbingets alfo went before, and took up our Lodgings upon the Road.
Spptember. This part of the Journey was very pleafant and eafie; the TheGoodners Way for the moft part was excceding even and plain, and of the High where-ever there was any rugged moumainous Ground, a pen, zod the fmooth levet paffage was cut through it: This Road (which converion- is the grcar one of all this part of the Country) is all along good Sand and Gravel ; 'ris divided into Leagues for the benefit of Iravellers, and at every Leagues end; are two fmall Hills rais'd of cither fide one, and upon each of them a fair Pine-Tree planted; the Defign of which Marks, is to make Travellers comperenr Judges of the length of their own Journeys, that to the may ror be abus'd by the Hackny-men, and thofe that let our Horles, and pay for a grearer number of Miles than they have rode.

All along the Road, you meet with a Wontd of People: valing to and fro, and ever and anon Towns and plealame Villages, Farms, and Country houles; and fomerimes Temples, ftanding at a lime diftance, in thady Groves, with the Habirations of the Priefts all, round abour them.
The mof unpleafant fight we had, was the dead Bodies Dead Botin of Malefactors, faftned upon' Croffes near.all the Grear of malon Towns where thole Execurions had beca .performed : Gorr pat Cracifying is a very common Punifhment in jifpan; and crocich as they manage it, 'ris fome forr of a Punimmenc to Travellers too, to pals by a multritude of noifome purrifying Carkares; and befrides the Horror of the Sight, to have the Difturbance of the Smell thofe Bodies yicld. And we had the worft Trial of all of this kind, when we came to Suranga ; there were Croffes, Scaffolds, and Gibbets, Heads, Carkaffes, and Limbs, hanging about in fo many places withour the City, that our Plealure in going along was wonderfully leffen'd.
Suranga feems to be full as big as Londons taking in the cone n whole Compais of the Suburbs too: The outer parts of Smane a is we found entirely raken up by Mechapicks and Arrificers of all forts, who are plac'd there for the eafe and quiet of the Gentecler People, that dont care to be difturb'd with the Noife and Buftle the others make in their Trades.
After a Repore of a Day or two, I went with all my Company in a Body, to the Caftle, to have Audience of the Emperor, and deliver the Prefents intended for that Court. I was introduc'd by two of the greareft Men then Audiran in Attendance, the Emperor's Secretary, and his Admiral Thefeled me firt into a very fine matted Room, where we far down for fome time, according to their Cuftom upon the Matts, then they broughr me into a Chamber of Prefence, where ftood an empry Chair of Scare, to which I was oblig'd to do Reverence; after fome hort time, word was bronght, that the Emperor was come into the Room of Audience, to the Door of which thefe Courciers brought me, bur durt nor prefume to look in themfelves The Cuttom is, for all the Prefents thar are broughr, to be plac'd in order upon the Mars of that Room into which the Emperor comes; and accordingly when I came in, I found them all in a very ordcrly manner laid vefore him. He'receiväHis Majelty's Letter winh the Civility of chat Country, lifting ic up towards his Forehead, -and then, by his Infepprerer,-bid me Wetcome: He defired me to go and fee the King his Son at Edco, fwith all the Neccflaries for which Journey, he wou'd take care to furnilh me) and by thar time I renurn'd, his Letrers lhou'd be ready for our King.
The Articles relating to the Matrers of Trade and Privilege, which we requctted His Majefy's Confirmarion of, were all eafily granred by him; one only excepted, refpeThat whereas che Che Tenour of it was to this purpofe, That whereas che Chinefe had refus'd all Trade and Commerce with the \(E n g i i h\), if we cou'd take any of them abroad ar Sea, ir might be lawful for us to bring them into Fapen; and make Sale of the Goods fo raken, in HisMar jefty's Dominions. This the Emperor granted ar firt, but his Mina was alterd afterwards, by -a Confereace with the Leiger of Cbina, and he refus'd to allow it: The relt all paft under his. Grear Scal; which is not of Wax, like ours, but ftamp'd like a Prinr, and colour'd redi- : The Secretary won'd take no Prefent, nor any thing like a Gratuity from us; the Emperor, it Ceems, had commanded the conrrary, and 'twas as much as his Life was worth to do it.
Having feen this Bufinefs, done, we fet our from Suranga for the Grear City of Eddo, where the Emperor's Son, the young King, keeps his. Courc. The Counury is well inhabiced betweenchefe rwo Cines, the Towns and Villages lie thick, and the Foooquis, or Temples, fcatrering up and down in good numbers too.
Theres one mighty Image (which they call Dabis) that The idol Atands in this Road, at which all rhe Faponefe fop to pay Dabi. their Devorions. when they go this way: It ismade of Copper, all hollow within, tho very thick; tis in the thape of a Mas kneeling on the Gropnd, with his Buttocks refting on his Heels, and his Armsiextended; he is reprefented wearing of a Gown, and notwichftanding thar. bending pofture, 25 twenty two Foor from the Level of the Ground, and all the Body proporionably large. Sorne of our Men went into the Body of it, and there fell a hollowing and hooping; the Noile of which, out of the wide Mouth of the Image, was much fuch agreeable fort of Mufick, as, I beliere, was made by Pholarns. Brazen Bull. If ftands conveniently to enrerpip the Devotion of Pilgrims. in their paffage to the celebrared Temple of Tincbeday ; they aways make a paule ar Prbsio : Bur chis is but a light Cerenony, tis at Tencbeda's Tcmple the Great: Work is to be done, and the Pilgrims expect ro receive the Reward of their Travel: And here one may meet all. forts of Peo ple' rich and poor' found and diftemper'd, contimually coming and going thither, and rimit by Night as well as by Day, and that all the Year round.
The Stories told by the Faponefe of this their God Tencixeday, are too unaccountable to be related with any meafure of Confidence; to that initead of their Accounts, (which I thall abrolutely wave) I thall only ofter what Mr. Adams, our Conatry-man fwho has been ar this Temple) told me as Marter of Fact, and of his own Knowledge.
He fays. That there is conftanty, every Month, one of the lovelieft Virgins that the whole Coantry will afford, broughr into this Temple, in a very neat Aparment of which; the is thut up all alone; and that at cerrain cimes Tencheday, as they call him, comes to her in a vifible Form and having known her carnally, refolves any Doubrs or Queftions the puts to him; according as the Prients inftruct her; and at his going away, leaves behind him a fort of Scales like thofe of Fithes. Mr. Adams fays,' Tis certain 2 freth Virgin is takenein every Month: Bur wharbecomes of them, and how they are dilpos'd of, he is utterly ignerant : As to the other Circumitances of the Story, there's no opportunity for any Body but the Priefts andtheVirgins themlelves, so be fure of the Truth or Fallhood of them ; and therefore the Credit of them depends folely upon their Report, as far as I fee: For Mr. Alams does not pretend cyer to have feen any of thofe Appearances, or the furprizing Effects of them mennion'd. In fhort, if Tenchediy be the Devil, his Frolicks in fapan are very unaccountable, and different from what they are in other places; but if Tencliedoy be one of the Roguin Bonzes, or Priefts, 'ris no ftrange thing that he defires a Monthly Sacrifice of Virgins, confidering whiar an Afcendant the wanton Planet has all orcr that Councry.
About the middle of this Month we came into Eddo, a City much larger than Suruma, nobler in iss Buildings, and every way more glorious in iss Appearance; the very Tiles of the Houfes are gilded, and the Pofts of the Doors fer off with a fining Vamifh: They have no Glafs-Windows, bur all of Board, which open in Leaves, and are very delicately painted.
There's a Cawfey ruis clever thiro' the chief Street of the Ciry, which Street is as broad as any in England, and 2 fine River paffes along by, or rarher tundernearh the Cawley; at every fifty Paces rhere's a Wellihead fubftanrially fitted up of Frec-ftome, and fervid with Buckets for the People to fetch Warer with, in cafe of any danger by Firc

The Caftle of this City is a much ftronger and nobler Edifice than that at Sururga; and the young King lives in much greater State, and has a more pompous Artendance chan the Emperour his Facher.
He receiv'd us in a very courteous obliging manner, raKing the King's Letrers and Prefents with a wonderful Sarisfaction and Content, and giving us all the Welcome imaginable. He gave us Leters for our King, and a Pre:fent of two entire Suits of fapan Armour, finely varnifh'd; and a long Sword and Waggedalh for my felf: 'Tis to be noted, that the Cattans are a common wear ; but the Tarches, or long Swords, are worn only by grear Soldiers, and Perfons of the beft Account.
Tis faid to be no lefs than Twenty two Days Journey by Horif, from this City of Eddo, to the Northermoft part of 7 apan; which makes it 2 Country of a vaft extent. Our Bufinets here being nomore than the paying of a Complement; that being done, we had no further occafion of ftaying here: And fo having gor this Prince's Letrers and Prefents for the King of Englend, we went back for Surunga, where we arrived again ar the end of this Monch.

We had not been here long, before the Emperor's Letters to our King were ready for us; as alfo the Gravr; or Inftrument of Privilege relacing to our Trade and Seutement in fapan; the Tranfations of both which, as near the Original as may be, are here fubjoyn'd.

Ten Beobs or large Pidtures to hang a Rootn of State with.
From hence we travell'd to Ofaca, where the Gally thar Fet us down before was attending our return, to tranfport us to Firando; and chis ar the charge of the brave and ges nerous old Forne, the King of thar place. This Prince was extreamly glad at our retum to hisiliand, as alfo of the fuccefs of our Affirs ar Court; and had carried it winh che fame fteidy and even hand of Kindnefs to our
The faponian tanguage feems to agree with the cbinefe their feveral proper Characters, nor compounding them of diftinalerter's andSyllables as 'ris in other Languages; the Character is very different from that of cheCbinefe, and they read beginning at the Righr hand and fo downwards perpendicularwile in the leveral lines. They rake a won derful deal of care to speak and write in the fhorteft and concifet manner that can be; they are not given to flourion and inlarge upon 2 Subject, bur deliver their Minds in very pertinenr, exact and comprehenfive Terms, connacting 2 grear deal of Sence into \(a\) lirtle Compals. The Letters and the Inftrument were both written in it verptairly afuer theirmanmer, and the firft rarities of that kind thar our Nation I believe ever had.

Thus was all our Bufinefs ar Surunga finithed too, upon which we rook leave of the Emperor and Court, and fet ourfor Firando. Onr way lay by land as far as Ofaca and in paffing thither we took Meaco. in our way; this is abfolurely the greateft Ciry in Fapan, and a place of migh ty Trade. All the Trades-men dwell in a part of the \(\mathrm{Ci}_{\mathrm{i}}\) ty by themfelves, and all of fuch an ensployment in fuch 2 Street by themflves; the \(\mathfrak{F}\) aponefe think it very unfeemly and irregular to have men of to many \{everal Profeffion and Butineffes mixt and huddled together in luch a con fus'd manner as they are in other places, they are for St. Pauls in London from the Quire, arch'd, adorn'd with mighry pillars, and as lofty as that. In has one peculiar Altar, at which they make their Offerings of Rice and of which mak fmall Money (cill'd Cundries, twenry of which make Shilling ) for the maintenance of the Bonzee s belonging Bur yet tre Trade amounted to livtle or nothing in our

You ( fay they) cry up your broad Cloths to us, and The 740 mof at the fame time hardly wear a rag of ir your felves, bur find diut are all for yourSilks andSruffs, and any thing in theWorld, wearnimg except juft what you would have us buy of you. And own cont the truth on't is, the faponefc are in the right, and their Objection not eafily to be anfwerd; we oughe to be more fond of ofrown Country Commodities, and tell other Nations they are valuable by the ufe of them we make. our felves. Forrcigners won't be fo ready to believe us if they fee wedon'r बrder our Famions fo as to give a Reputation to what we recommend abroad in the World ; and for all 1 know other Nations may tell us as well as the faponefe of nor wearing our own broad Clorh, may reproach us with the neglect of our own Commodities, and defpife them rill they fee us do otherwife our felves.

This Firando is a very good place for our Ships to put in at with refpect to the Poins of Victualling and all that, but it is not to proper for Trade becaufe ir lies off from the main Iland of Fapan, where are nor only the moft, bur the moft confiderable People, capable of giving an encouragement to Trade, which in thefe little by-llands is to be notexpected.

We mighr, I don'c queftion' be welcome at any of them all, and the Kings of two of thefe petry Illands gave. ps a formal invitation; bur there's few of them can afford a Bufinels that will turn to account, and defray the Charges of a Setulement. Therefore my Advice is, that our Ships that come to Trade here would fail nor'to \({ }^{\circ}\) orimpat \(^{\prime}\) Firando; bur to Oringgaw upon the main Ifland, and a-bent pant bour is Leagnes diftance from Eddo, where they will our Ship find very good Riding and 2 mach greater profpect of Advantage. This place indeed is not capable of giving logood an Entertainment as may be defired, Provifions are not aloogecher fo plennf ful here as at Firando; but that want may be fupplied by a Correfpondence, with the circumjacent Country. Chriftianity makes no confiderable Figure comparatively any where in this Empire, bus at Meaco and Langafacque, a Town fituared uporr che SeaCoaft, abour eighr Leagues from Firando. Ir thad tris triue gotten footing in Eddo; but the Emperor upon fome pique taken againtt the Chriftians banifh'd them all from chence, and confin'd them to Langafaciuc; and as a prevention of ir's creeping into the Court, and rooting it felf. any where near him; he made it deathto any that fhould offer to build a Charch or fing Mads within ten Leagues of the place where he refided. This change was bur 2 very litale time before our going to Eddo, notwithtanding which, the Religion is otherwife indulged; the Chriftian Faponefe at prefent have (as far as I ice) the fame Protection and Privilege with the others, and the Jcfuits feem to enjoy an unreftrained Liberty in the making of Profelytes.
The Foundation of a Factory being now firmly taid in the Emperor's full Grant to thar purpofe, we proceeded to build upon it, being the racher encouraged to is, in that we were now affer thar Englifh Factories were actually fetted at Siam and Patene, as alro that the Dutsh made fomething of their Bufiness here, and we had reafon to believe we had nor a lefs thare in the Good Willand Efteem of this Country than they We thercfore ap Fatomith poinced fome of our Company to refide here upon this tled. Affair, with inftructions alfo to make what: Difcoveries they could upon the Coaft of Corec, Tuffomat, and other parts adjoining againft the next return of the Ships.
By exact oblervarions made during our ftay bere, we determine the Latitude of Firasdo to be 33 Degrecs uf thites Noth, and the varying of the Compass two Gofiomt. Qe s. 50 Minutes Eafterly. When we took ouc leave \({ }^{\text {rom }}\) of olating Foyne, he gave me a Leter for our King writen in the Chinefe Language, our of which ir was by two Cbizefc. Merchants tranllated into the Malayan, and from thenceinto Englifh as follows.

Setring fail from hence we refolved to keep along the Coaft of Cbina (our Courfe directed to Bantam) in doing which we came to feel the grear Current that Rioors our berween Corea, and the Main of China, and make a very grear Sea. The Iflandsthar lie along the Coaft of China we find to lie more Southerly than-the Piats repreplacing the Land of Camboia, which lies not fo far to the Eaft as they make it ; the Land lies here S. S. W. and N:N.E. with divers Rocks like"Iflands, fome one Leaque fome one League and a half off from the Main, befides which there's no other Danger that we could difcover 'Tis worthy of note too that here we found the Winds rrade along the fhoar, for from Firando hither we did go large, finding the Winds to follow us as the Land trends.
And to give Hugen van Linfloton his due praife, it muft be faid that the Obfervations of his Book are very true and juft as far as we had opportunity of reducing any of them to a Trial ; for in plain Terms we directed our Courle folely according to his meafures ever fince our ferting forth from Firando. The like Character is to be given of the Plat made by 7 Fan/cn Mole a Hollander, for we find the pofition of thofe IIands, that make the Streights of China Bata (or Pulo Bato as 'tis call'd by fome ) to be as he has placd thern; and the Shoal that liesin the cntrance of the Streighrs to be rightly plac'd, and : a true account given of in'sdepths.
The beginning of this Month we came to an anchor in Batriam Road, where we found the beft parr of the Men left in the Factory ar our going to Fapan dead, and the Survivours had as good have been dead roo for the Service and Bufinefs they did in our ablence: There was nothing of a lading gor in readincts, no Pepper laid in, and the Commodity-rifing every day, and nothing more gertainthan thar, we that were homeward bound, and muft of neceffiry procure a lading, thould be made to pay for what we had to the purpole.
All the Fa. Befides, we found a difadvantage in having to many Zorics re- feveral diftinct Factories as we had in this one place; for ducd to one. by this means it came abouit that one party endeavouring to out-bid another on the account of their own particular Voyage, the prifes were rais'd, and fo the publick Incereft was ftill a fufferer by it To redrels this cherefore, we reduc'd all the feveral Factories ar Bantam to one Government; and fix'd them in gre Houfe together, and leffend the number of Warc-houles, taking care to regulate the placing and difpofing of our Goods with more difcrerion for the time to come. I bought here of the Chinefe Merchants Four thouland Sacks of Pepper at thirteen Rials of Eight per tenSacks, the Baffe three in the Hundred.
Before we went away we had the misfortunc of feeing

The Narives here were grown excelively ande and Conord the reacherous, and tho they never had good Manners; yer wrenf for the they ufed not to be fo forward to fhew their illmanners and Uaitedsfook barbarous Temperi;both the Conioord and we feli the cffets of their Treachery, and we for our parts had like to have loft all the Men that kepr the Skiff by a fudden and furious affault of theirs while thereft were athoar on day, they had perift'd every Man if they had nor inmediarely hurried themelves out into the Warer. Some reports tiave been, that the Beef of this Country wont take Salt well tho' all allow it to be very good meat; but by the experience we had of is in a good quantiry, which we powderd, it ceems to take Salt as well as any meat of that kind in the World.
We fimin'd this long and tedions Voyage the later septemberi end of Siptember, when we came fafe into 盾imouth Road; Acrive at here the Winds and Weather were more feverc upon us han in all thole vat and mighry seas that we had parsd we were actually in more danger than we had feen in tailing above half the Globe, and fcar'd we were come from fapan to Chinn to be wreci'd at our own very doors This tempeftous weather held for five or fix Wecks, and then went off

\section*{Intelligence concerning Yedzo, receiv'd at the Cizy of Edoo in Japan, from a Japonce that bad been twice there.}

IHis Intelligence fays, that \(\mathrm{Yed}_{2} 0\) is certainly an Illand lying on the N. W. fide of Fapan, and about fome xedzo an ten Leagues diftance from it. . Thar the feople are of a \({ }^{\text {Iland }}\) fair Complexion, good mannerd enough, far more humane intheir remper and conditions than their outward The Natives: a(pect and appearance, being allover rough and hairy almot like Monkeys, yer-their Skin (as before hinted) white-and clcar. The Weapons us'd amonglt them are Bows and poy fon'd Arrows: Tbofe in the Sonthern parts are the much more underfanding' People, and fir for Commeice; having the knowledge of-Weights and Mcafures, which in the middle parts of the Illand they are entirely ignorancoff.
Thar up in the Northern parts are a People which feem to be different from the reft of the Illand, and of quire \({ }_{D \text { warfin }}\) another race, being fo extrearnly low and miort thar they peopleto the may be call'd Dwarfsin a ftrict and proper Sence, where-Northward.
 nefc. They have none of them any fort of Apparel bur what is brought chem from fapan, and fo the mont part of their Rice (if not all they are fupplicd with) is broughrfrom thencetoo; butchen they have that amongft them, which will make ocher Pcople think it very well worth their while to come and bring them thele neceffaries; they have a grear deal of Siliver, and a fort of SandGold, in which they make all their payments to the fapo nefe for what they take of them:
The Commodities moftly trinfported hither are Rice, Commoditir Cotron, Cloth, Iron and Lead; but of all things, neceffa- corried t. rie for the Back and Belly, are the moft welcome and ac-ther ceprable to thefe People; particularly. Rice carried from jrpen to Yedzo has yielded four for onc.
The chief Mear-Town where the Frponcfe refide and trade is calld Matcima, where they have alfo a Fort, and \({ }_{\text {Tow }}\) atleaft 500 Families of that Narion conftancly dwelling therc. In Scptember the Natives come down in vaft numbers so buy and lay in their Winter ftores, and in Marcb the: bring Salmon, and fevera! forts of dried Fin (befides other Wares) which they barter with the faponefe. This Marchma is the chicf Town for Bufincts known to the fapone \(f\) upan the whole ILand, and they have no marner of concern or Jerticpnent any where bur here.
The Wine'shold the fame Ccurfe here for the moft part that they do in \(\ddagger \times p \times n\), vir. The Northerly begin in Scpanitr and end in Mcrch, and then the Southerly fucceed The Winds them, and begin their courie. And as a conclufion of the and carrenas: whole Account, there fers a very violent Currenr bcwween \(\mathrm{Yed}_{\text {Io }} 0\) and Fepan, which comes from Coras, and gocs away to the E.N.E.

\section*{Concerning divers Cuftoms of the Japonefe, and fome Remarkable Occurrences at Firando. Taken out of the Relation of Mr. Richard Cocks, Cape-Merchant, and cbief Refdent in the Englifh Factory there.}
 fort of Night-Diverfon, and that's Mafquerading, in which the Kings, and the Noble-men, act the moft confiderable parts: All the Streets are now enlighened with Candles again, and the Mufick plays the Company along with all the Jollity imaginable; they march fometimes to one great Houfe, and fometimes to another, according as the Frolick works, and fpend perhaps the beft part of the Night io the Dancings, and,orker Comical Parts of this Entertainment.

The Nights hardly pals away any where, I think, more merrily, than ar Firendo; when other People are a Bed 2nd'a Slecp, they are ar the Balls and Publick Dancings, perhaps Mafqucrading up and down the Surects, or Ca towfing in fome Grear Man's Houfe, at cne of their Mid-night-Feafts. Th:s is their common Trade, and the old King Fcy e is as good at it as any of them all, has as much Air and Youth in all Diverlions of this kind, as the young King his Grand-fon: 'Tis the Temper of this Peopic to be airy, jolly, fociable, love Entertainmente, and Publick Meetings, chufe rather to wear away the melancholy Night in the Conrpany of their Friends, than fpend it in Solicude, and upon dull Repore.

There is not les Feating and Deings of all forts, at the TIS common enough every-where in the World, for Friends to meer and make merry together, for kind and good natur'd Neighbours to make much of one another, and ftrengthen their Friendmip by mucual Entertainments: Now in this point the Fapmefe go beyond all the reft of Mankind, and make fuch Fcants as hardly any other Pcople, I belicre, dare pretend to the like. We foou'd think it very odd for a parcel of Pcople in one Country, to invite their Friends in another two or three thoufand Leagues off, to come and take part of a Collation; for a Man in England to fend to another in Fapan, or the remoteft parts of Tar tary, to come and Dine with him fuch a Day. Bur the Faponefe are far more extravagant than this comes to ; and defire their Friends to take a much longer Journey: They look out into the other World for Company; give Invita tions to the Dead, and call at the Grave's Mouth for Gucts as their Entertainments.

When the Seafon for this Solemnity is come, rery great Preparations are made all over the place; the Strects are fwept clcan, and Gravel is laid in a decene manner before every Man's Door; at Nighe too chere are Illuminations, and Candles are hung our every-where: This muft be ei ther for a Token of Joy and Welcome to ther Friends a their Arrival, or-ale to give themra litule Direction, and prevent their being Blunder'd by the Way. All things thus fet in order, in the dead of the Nighe they march with abundance of Lighrs to the Graves and Tombs, carrying all their Provifion both for Eating and Drinking along with them; and here they fer to it, and are exceeding merry, enjoying all the Pleafures of Good Fellowhip at this rate, forfercral Nighrs togcther. At the breaking up of the Feaft, they go up and down the Town in Companics, with Flags and Banners, bearing upon Grear Pans, and dancing very briskiy to that fine Mufick, before cvery Grear Man's Door, and ar all the Temples and Scpulchres This is the Conclufion of the whole Solemnity, and now the airy Guelts are difcharg'd till the next Invitation.

They are fo very ftrict in obferving the Orders of this Feaft, that 'tis made Capital for any Man to neglect his Dury here: 'Tis Death noc to fweep a Deor, and hang out a Candle, upon this occafion; and that was the Fate of one poon Fapouef, at the time of our being ar \(\mathrm{Fi}_{i}\) rando. time of theirPublick Shocring-Mazches. The Kinss, and all the Ncbles then appear on Horfeback, and are follow- ed by all the whole Pelfe of Slaves, Pikes, Bow-men, and Small-fict. 7 he Exercife is chicfly mareaged by tion Archers, who ride full speed, and difcharge cheir Arrows in the Career at a Buckler, that hangs up againft a Wall

Tis perform'd in the Streer before their great Pagod, o Temple; and the Defign of it (I fuppofe) is to encourage that fort of Dexteriry, and make them skilful Marks Wen, that they may be able to do better Servicc in the Wars.
And amongft other Recreations in \(u f e\) in this Councry, Fomeme thofe of the Stage are nor to be forgoten; for the fapc- Plap. nefe are nor ignorant of thefe things, and have both Ai and Lifc, Carriage, and Wis cnough, to make a hir ome appearance in a Drama. The wortt part of the whole Entertainment, is the bafe Mufick that artends in I know nor what Influence it may have upon the Spirit of the Fapencf, or how agrecable it may be to them, bu there's norhing of Sweennefs or Harmony in it to an, \(E^{2}\) ropenn Ear: 'Twas all Difcord to us. fo harth, flar and confus'd, that one wou'd think is fhou'd rather difcompofe the Audience, and prejudice their Temper, than excite any pleafing fuitable Paffions in them, and give a relighto ac Play
This Mufick (ar leaft whar we faw) was a fort of \(\mathrm{Ta}_{\mathrm{a}}\) bors made in the form of an Hour-glafs, great ar both ends, and fmall in the middle; they beat upon one end with one Hand, and ftrain the Strings with che orher, proportioning the Sounds as they pleafe to their Voices which accompany it; befides which, they have fomething of a Fife, or Flute; but Tabor, Voice, and Flure, are all dull and unmufical. Some of their Women indeed, fing and play fweely enough upon the Citrem of their Country : but the Mufick of the Srage, where ir ought to be finef. is there the moft ordinary and courfe.
In fome Circumftances it mast be own'd, that they go beyond us; for in all their catraordinary Plays, the Actors are no leis Perfons than the Kings themfelves, and the top of the Nobility ; fuch who by heighth of Birth and Blood, and an Elevation of Mind and Temper anfoerable ro that of their Formune, are very well qualified to 36 a Real and a Narural Part, and to gise the vomoft Degrees of Life and Serength, to thofe Reprefentations of Heroical Vertuc, that are contain'd in the Play
The Subject Matter of chofe Drama's, is always fome important Affair of their own Country; they don't concern themfelves with any Foreign Srories, bup cyer draw the Scene for fome place within the Baunds of fapian: They run over (at feveral rimes) the whole Hiftory of the Country, the rarious Fortunes of ir, the Wars and Vali ant ACtions of their moft Renown'd Apceftors; by which means they kecp up a lively Remembrance of them amongtt the Penple, and provoke them to a enerous Imi tation of thole Vertues they fee reprefented, with fome thing more of Advantage, than if the Perfons of the Play were abfolute Strangers to them. Nay, they come down from Antiquity to the prefent Times, and bring the Life and the Fiction fomerimes together; making thofé Circumfances the Subjects of the Drama, thar were real to themfelves, and thofe Perfons Actors, that bore 2 part in the Life. And in this Cafe, no doubr the Performance mult be very agrecable; becaufe Nature has here fuch a part fo play; and the very Hero's chemfelves, who can moftionendy cxcite and manage their own Paffions, are broulderypon the Stage to do it.

All thefe great Plays, in which the Courtiers are concern'd, conclude with as Noble an Entertainment; and whatcver be the Prclogッe, a good Feaft to be fure makes the Fpiloguc. The Nebbes all fend in their feveral parts of the Provinon, and do every thing to make it as porn The Fapous as can be: And then all the People that come to fee the playe are koyally Feafted, and aiade very much of, both fmall and grear, withour execpion. There is no exclufion of any, either from the Play or Entertainment, but as many as the place will contain, are admitted : And there's forne Reaion for it too, fince the moft of them that are any hing fublancial, conrribure to the Feaft as well as the Nobles. They are very motry ar thefe times, but yer in Tho the Fiaporefe can be very Civil and Friendly to Chrithe 7por- Atians, and the Religion is entertain'd by fome of them themfelves, yer the Country in general, feems to be pof fef'd with fome fort of ftrange fuperftitious Prejudices; the Effects of which are fuch, as represent Chriltians (if non Chriftianity it (elf) to be defpicable amonglt them Thus if-a Chriftian dies there, as they have a Buryingplace to themfelves, fo the Corps muft never be brought in fight of any of their Pagods \(;\) if the place of Intement ac bur ar the end of a Streer, or hatd by, if there be a Church of theirs in the way, the Funcral muft go two or threc Mile abour, unlefs there be any fhorter Cur, by whick tus pofible to avoid the Street where the Church tands.

Thus they Lerv'd us, when one of our Company was to b buried; we were forc'd to carry the Corps by Water I know nor how far round, becaufe the foppifh Prielts wou'd nor fuffer us to bring ir along, the Street, fanctified by. rhe Prefence of one of their Idol-T comples.' And if wo bad had, no Boar or Skiff of our own,to:convey.a Corps by Water, we muft e'en have buried our Compamions upon he foor where they died or have flung them into the Sea for they won'r fuffer any of their Boats to touch the dead Body of a Chriftian, Nay, more than that, they won't be hired, any of them, ro dig a Grave; fo that in this Country we are forc'd to be Sextones to one another, having none elfe to do that Office for us : For the faponefc will rather endure the ftench of a purrifying Body. than fer their Hands to the laying it under Ground.
The Bonzees of this Country are mighry Pretenders to the Knowledge of Furare and Secrer T:hings, which they fay are reveal'd to them by their Oracle : Thus they prerend to refolve all forts of knotry, dark, myfterious QueAtions; to decermine the Circimptances of contingent \(E\) vents; in thor, to give an account of all thofe Things, which cannor be accounted for, but by fuppofing them to have fome fupernarural Intelligence.. But the mifchief on't is, they very of ten thoor befides the Mark ; their Rredictions and the Events very feldom agree: Upion which account (fince it is' not to be fuppos'd that they have ticiof falle Informations from any good Spirit), 'ris pait all doubs, that either the Devil tells chem Lyes, or they tell Lyes of the Devil

They very often put the Town into a difmal Eright as bour Fires, which they fay pofrively thall happen fuch a Day;s and then all the People are in a hurry, providing Tubs and Buckers, and filling Water againtt the fatal time comes; and as laft perhaps they: have their Labour for their Pains, and may e'en throw their Warer our again, for any ufe they have for in at that Sealon. Tis truc; the Town is very often fired; and I think it may be almoft compared with Bantam, for the frequency of that Calamity : Bat then'ris very feldom fo, when the Bonzees tell ofjr; that they had better either quire hold their Tongues, or lay their Plot fo fure, thar the. Town may be fet on fire without fail: For we makē no doubr at all, but the Bonzees are either the Incendiaries themfelves, or ar leaft fome employ'd by them; and that partly our of hopes of getring Plunder,' when the People are in a Confufion, and of eftablinhing the Reputation of their Predictions, by making the \({ }^{\circ}\) Event anfwerable. So that when a Fire does happen as they foretel it, there's no neceffity of uuppofing any Magick in the Cafe, or that an Oracle reveal'd this Myftery to them = For a Villain may foretel his ownleud Actions, withour being calld 2 Conjurer if they come to pals.

The matter ftands thus: The Bonzees can't have their defired Spoils, withour ferting the Town a-fire, nor they can't be Prophets, except they rell on't before-hand; but Spoil chey will have, and Prophers they will be roo, and therefore to anfwer both thele ends, they have no other way, bur ro form the Plor themfelves, and tell the People before-hand, that the Devil will put it in execution at fuch a time. And when it is done, it is really performd with fo much lynels and fubrle management, that chere is hardly any finding the Authors of it; I don'r remember of all the Fires that happen'd at Firando ar our being there, (and there, were Teveral) that there was any difcovery or cizure'of a Villain made: They have been feen indeed fometimes at a diftance, and purfued ; but there are fo many Ify places, and cunnifg hoies, for Rogues to lic skitking about in, that "tis"almôt inapoffible to catch them. Otherwife it mitgha be fufpected, that the Bonzec laid the Saddé upon the right Horre, and that tome cril Spirit indeed was concernd in the mifchief; bur the purfuir of the Villains takes off that \(;\) and befides, there are Crowds of pilfcting Pcople lying ahout the Town, that break tery ofrim inro Houtes, "tad rob and fpoil, and offer Violence of all other forts; where there are fuch fort of Cattle, there's no need of going farther a-ficld, to ferch the probable Authors of fuch Villanites as theife.
In order to the future more effccitual preveraion of there Difturbances, we (wliofe barè of dread añd danger by the Fires was not the leaR) made a Motion to the King That an Edict mipht be puiblifh'd, conoyning a mot Atrict Good orden and particular Warch to be eerery-where kep., thar no effabind ar Man flou'd be fuiffer'd to be out late, but what con'd gute Fitanto a very good Accounr of himeif, and his Bufinefs; and befides, alwayts to have a highr before him, rhar he might beffen what he was. Ard chefe Orders wate accordingy pur in exccution with all diligence : So thar now thers hopes, that the Town, and the Merchanes in ir, will caoy a more undifturbl Refore: For the plain truch on't 5; what with the remible Appretconfons of the Fire, the Hurty of the Town thofe Nights 'twas cxpected, and the Noife and Bellowing of a parcel of Fcllows in the Strects; that go abovir to give Warning, and bid Pcople hare a Care of clicirHoules, there was no Reft to be had; and a Man liv'd continually in all the Exrremirics of Confufion and Haring at fuch times as thiofe: Beffides, the Calamity was likely cnough to come, and the Bonzees Emiffaries, we know, wou'd not fail of the utmoit Cäre to "ive a Repuitation to their Predictions.
In September, at which time Ciprain Saris was gone up A moft fafe on his Journey to the Emperor's Court, we were furpriz'd ful xemper at Firando, with the moft horrible Tempeft that perhapis ar Eirando. ever any Man faw : We that had been ar Sea, and in all the Extremities of Weather in that unquiet Element iever aw any thing comparable to it; and the oldeft faponefe then alive, declar'd it the greateft Prodigy ever feen in teir Country
The Airy Regions were all over in a Hurly-barly; and as one woud bave imagin'd (by the furious Motions they were then put into) commencing a War that fhou'd end in an Univerfal Confufion. The Noife of the Wind (raging above the degree of a Tuffon) was accompanied with a Difcharge of Thunder and Lightining fufficient to have haken the moft fix'd and fteddy Courage in the World; the Rains felliat the fame time, in a moft violenr maniner, which tho perhaps an advantage in refpect of the Lighr. ning, yet added exceedingly to the Horror of the Storm: The Winds bear fo.fiercely upon the Town, that above a hundred Houfes were prefently ovcrithrown; a great part of the reft were until'd and laid open, and all trembled, as if the Earth ir felf had fuffer'd a Convulfion. The Sca ar the fame rime feeling the Effects of the general. Commotion, and not able to kecp within its ufual Bounds, broke into the Town, undermin'd the Grear Wharf, beat dowin the Srone-Wall, and funk and fhater'd in pieces above fifty Barks that then lay in the Road." God be thanked: our Ship eicap'd in this common Calamity, and came off with the lofs of one of her Anchors only.
This Storm did more Mifçhief at Langafaque, than fiere at Firando: All the while it continued, the fuperfitious People run up and down the Streets with Firebrands, à Ceremony, I fuppofe, intended to pacifie the angry Deiry that fent that bad Weather: Bur this in all probability had fer the Town aifire, if the Rains had not done forre-: thing: by way of prevention 4ynumallus:

LIrnum Aloe', (call'd by the Malayms Garroo) the beft of it comes from Malacca, Siom, and Cambayn, and is in large Sricks, and very maffy, black, and mix'd with Veins of an Afh-colour. "Tis bitter if rafted; and laid upon the Fire, yieldsa moft delectable Smell, and fries away till it be quite confum'd, much after the rare that Pitch does.
-Benjamin, (call'd by the Malayans, Miznian; ) the beft fort comes from Siam, which is 2.very pure, clear, and whire, with litele Streaks of Amber-colour. There is another fort which comes from Sumatra, which is very good, but not to white and fiae. And 2 chird fort; parcicularly from Priaman, and Barrowfe, which is very coarfe, and not valued in England, tho at Bantam it goes off well.

Civet, the beft is that which is of a deep yellow Colour, inclining to that of Gold: If it be of any confiderable Age, and looks white, "tis a fign 'ic adulterated; but if ir be newly raken, 'tis natural for it ro look fomeching whitibs with brighr Colour, by degrees, wears away into a yellow.

Mosk there are three forts of ir; black, brown, and yellow; of which the fort is ftark nanght, the fecond good, and the third beft of all: It ought to be of the Colour of the beft Spikenard (that is of a deep Amber) and inclofed within one Skin only, and not with feveral one over another, as tis many times feen to be, and nor over mpoift theither, which increares the Weight, bur is no fign of rhe Goodnefs of the Commodiry; 'ris beft wo chufecthat alfo, that has fome few Hairs like Briftles, lintle Stoones, Pieces of Lead, or orher Tralh mix'd with it (for all this is naxural) and of fo ftrong a Scent, as to be racher offenfive than ocherwife; efpecially if tafted when the Fumes of is feem to pierce viokntly into the Brain, and fearch the. Head at a wonderful rate: If it be right a bit of it taken ineo the Mouth, will nor be prefencly difolved; as neitber on the other hand, oughr is to remain undiffolv'd any coniderable time. You muft take care not to kect shis Druy near any of your fine frented Spices, leaft it lofe its own Odoar thereby.

Bezarr is of two kinds, the Occidental, and the Oriencal Besoar; which hatter is worth full double the Price of the former. The Forms of both forts are various, fome round, others long, like Date-ftones others like PigeonEggs, others again in the fhape of a Kidney, or.bikea Chefs nur; but all, for the moft part, not fharp and picked, bur bunar ar the cnds. Tbere is as much Variety in the Co fourtco:- for there isa light Red, a Honcy-onlour, a dark An-colours but for the moft part'ris of 2 Waterint Green The Oriencal Bezoar (or that from the East-Indies) conGifts of feveraddifinct Reels, or Coins, Jying one over anocher, as thofe of an Onion. They all of chem appear brighr and mining; bur the inner one's ftill more refplendant than the outer: They are chicker or thinner, in no certain proportion, but moftly according to the largenels of the Stone, and the largeft are the mont valuable, and beft for Sale.
A certain way ro try the Gcodnefs of your Bezoars, is to pur, the Stone into the Water for chree or four Hours (having firft taken the exact Weight of it), then taking it our, oblerve if the Surface of it be whole, and even as beforc, not divided by Cracks and Chinks; as allo, ax.che fame time, take the Weight of it again precry nicely, and If it weighs ever fo fall a mater more chan it did ax the firlt Trial, you may build upon it that it is not good. In this way of proceeding, I have feen feveral Bezoars at Bansam (that have promisd very fair to the Eyc) diffolve into a perfect Chalk, and difcover northing but rrally matter in the infide. The places that afford them are Patene;

Bevermafin, Macafar, and Soocadamna; but chofe that come from this haft place, do ofneer impore upon us, and prove nanght, chan thofe that are yielded by any of the ocher places. ocher places.
Amber, if you refpect the Colour, is of various fors, as Black, White, Brown, and Grey, of which the Black is ufaally the bafeft; and the Grey, or axt leaft the Ahm colour mixid winh White, is the beft and pureft. Tis a Characteriftick of this ine and clean fort, that being purt into the Water, it does not fink bui foass uporn the Surrface; and tho' this may alfo poffly agree to 1ome Amber chat is abuied and lophifticred; yet tis cerrain, that all thar is good and pare muft fwim ; and if it does otherwife, it may be pronounc'd bafe and adulerarac.

\section*{The Charatters of the chief Towns of Trade in the Eaf-Indies, the Commodities they afford, and defre from Foreign Parts.}

Aantam, upon the Inc of \(\mathcal{F}\) fou Major, is \($\) Town of ve. anome ry great Refort, and equal Trade, for diverstorts of Commodities. The genuine Products of the place it telf are chiefly Cotron-wool, and Pepper; but the great numbers of Foreign Ships that come hither, bring other: Maerials for Trade belides.
Their Harreff for Pepper is in the Month of oaider, and the Quantinies gathered in af 1 tiutic, may be foine 32000 This ine Sacks (or Timbangs as chey call them). Now rwo Tims firs bangs is 2 Peecut, three Peeculs is is fmall Bahar, and four and 2 half 2 greac Bahax, which malkes 443 Catrees and half; fo that the Sack contains 49 Cartees and a half, and every Cattec amounts to 25 Rials and a half Emgifif. The Frouns nor being perfect in the ufe of the Beam, nioft commonly deal by rhe Coolack, whicticenrains feren Cat-Derain rees and a quarter, which is one Cartee and a quarter urore Weiphen than the Beam allows, and indeed there oughtre be no Mamink difference; but the Weighers at Bantam being atways Chinefe, they manage the matree fo as ro favour wheir Corint ury-men when they fee good, and will fir thend witita ETo ger:or 2 fmaller meafure, according as they are gratififed and pleas'd.
The King has no Coyn of his own, but what comes conos from China, which is calld Cafles, and is meked our of \(\operatorname{smm}\). the Drofs of Lead i they are round thim Pieces, marrewinth toles for a Scringtio ga chrough them, in which manmer hey are deliverd up and down in Payments: A.Sring with atchoufand of there Cathes upon is is calld a Pecoo, which is of divers Values; according as Canes rife or fall. They make their Accounts this: : Teri Pecooes is one Lixsfan, ten Laxransa Cattee, ten Catrees a Uta, tem-Eta'sa Bahar.
By the Law of the Country there ought to be a fullfiouGand Caftes upon a Sering; and if the number falls fiont the Perfon that makes Payyment is to allow aecordingly;; Decis in and the favan Strings are indeed; for the moff parripretty prymexh honeft and juft; bur the Cbinefe are horribly deticiens; and if you don's look to chem very well, they'll chear you of 150, or 200 Calhes fomerimes in a Pecoo. Always upon proff inte the going away of the Ships and Juncks the Calhes fall, moxce bra and you may get chisty four or chisty five Pecoos for a gronting Rial, which before the next Year comes about, you may pur'off again ar more than one third profit ; bur then the grear danger in this cale of engrofing is Fire, which as'ris 2 very common Calamiry at Bantam, fo 'twill make bad work where itcomes amongtt the Leaden Coyn of thisplace The Weight in ufe here for weighing Bezoars, Gold, xtelvejpar and Civer, is calld a Tail, which makes 24 Rials of Eight, or two Ounces Englijh. This is the favan Tail; but the Malajan is 4 Ounces Englifh, and the Cbincfe 1, Ounces Englifo: So dhar the cbinefe Tail is: of the

\section*{Chap. XXIV. ECapt. Saris's Obfervations on Trade, &c.}

Commoditico The Commodities which find the bett Sale and Acceprvardible ance here, are thefe following of our own and other Coun tries:

Iron; Iong and thin Bars, at fix Rials per Peecul.
Lead in frmall Pigs, at \(5 \frac{1}{2}\) Rials per Peecul.
Powder fine, round, corn'd, ar 25 Rialsper Barrel.
Pipis quare and fanguind, of hix Foot long, ten Rials Pieces \{quare and damask'd all over, of \(6 \frac{1}{3}\) Foor, fifteen Rials.

Broad Cloth of 101 . the Cloth, of a Venice Red, three Rials per Gafs, which is 4 of a Yard.
The beft Opium, eight Rials per Cattec.
Amber in grcar Beads, 6 Rials per Tail Malcyan.
Coral, in large Branches, five and fix Rials, by the fame Weight as the Amber.
Bur above all things, Rials of Eight are the bett Commodity you can bring hither.
This is moftly the Englifb Trade; bur then in the Months of February and March, there comes conftantly three or four Tunks very richly laden from Clina, with all thefe forts of valuable Commodities, viz.
YourRaw Silk of Lamking, which is the beft, and goes at 190 Rials per Peccul.
Raw Sik of Lation, which is coarler than the former, ar 80 Rials.
Taffata in Boults, holding 112 Yards in the Piece, at 46 Rials the Corge, which is 20 Pieces.
Velvets of all Colours, 13 Yards, at 12 Rials. Damasks of all Colours, 12 Yards at 6 Rials. WhiteSartins, 12 Yards, 8 Rials.
Burgogues, \(x 0\) Yards long, ar 45: Rials per_Corge. Sleeve Silk, the beft made Colours, 3 Rial's per Cattee Musk, the beft, ar 22.
Sewing Gold, the bett, is Knots; every Knor 30 Scrings, 25 : Rial.
Velvet Hangings; cmbroider'd with Gold, 18 Rials. Satrins embroider'd, 14 Rials.
Whire Curtain-Stuffs, 9 Yards the piece, ar 50 Rials per Corge.

Whire Damask flat, 9 Yards the Piece, at 4 Rials. White Sugar very dry, at \(3 \div\) Rials per Peecul.
Sugar-Candy very dry, ar 5 -
Porceline Bafors, very fine and broad, 2 Rials a piece.
Callicoe-Cloch, coarfe; white and brown, 15 Rials per Corge.

Benjamin, very white and good; ar 30. and 35 Rials per Peecul.

Lignum Aloes, at 80.
Alom, as good as our Englijh, at \(2 i_{2}\).
All your Coromandel Cloths are topping Commodities here; bur the moft rendible forrs are the Gobarces, the Pintadoes, the fine Tappies of Sc Thomas, the Ballacho's, Friva Girdles, Callicoe Lawns, Book Callicoes, and White Callicoes, made up in Rolls.

The Meafure that takes place in thefe Commodities is the Halta, which is abour half a Yard, or as much as from the Elbow to the extremity of the Middle-finger: And fome of thefe Cloths are more, and others lefs in length, tho none above 34 Hafta's; and irr general, all forts of Malayen Cloths are ordinarily 8 Hafta's long: And to conclude this Head, all kinds of Cotron Cloth which are broad, and hold out a good length, are in very good efteem \({ }^{2 t}\) Bantam.
The Cuftomis taken at Bantam are of feveral forts; the King's Cuftom calld Clukey, is cight Bags upon the Hundred, rating Pepper ar 4 Rials of Eighr per Sack, what Price foever ir bears.

Then there is that call'd Billabilian, which is thus: If any Ship come into the Road laden, the King is to be immediarely acquainted with the Sorrs, Quantities, and Prices of the Commodities in her, before any part can be landed; upon which he fends his Officers to the Ship, and rakes of all the forrs whar he likes, perhaps ar half your Price, or it may te fomething berter, according as you can agree. So if you lade Pepper according to the Law of this Vury, you pay for cvery 6000 Sacks, 666 Rials, or \(^{2}\) elfe are obliged to be the King's Chapman for as many thoufand Sacks, at one half, or three fourths of a Rial more than the Current Price of the Town.
The Dutc/j indced go a more compendious way to work; and to avoid the crouble of the Duty, agree with the King fo much in the grofs, for the Lading of a Ship, which is gencrally abour feven or eight hundred Rials. And 'tis to be noted, that tho you have ever fo prudently provided before-hand Lading to difparch your Ships, yer you fhall not be excus'd from this fort of Duty; forif you pretend to difpute, or refufe is they'll fop the Lading of your Ship.

The Roobr; at Banram, is a Duryfor Anchorage, and tis 500 Rials of Eight apon 6000 Sacks. The Sabandars Duty is 250 Rials upon 6000 Sacks. And the Weighers Duty is \(x\) Rial upon 100 ; and the fame of the Weighers itom-Houlc.
The Town of Fortay, upon the fame Inand, pretends Fornar. moftly mo Victuils, Comon-wool, and fpun Yarn. There is alfo fome liritle matter of Spice, Pepper, by the Juncks of Fambi thar come hither, and fome Mace and Nutmegs by thofe of this Town that go to the Ine of Banda.
Mecaffar, ar the Cclebes, affords grear ftore of Bezoar- Asacafor, ftones, Rice, and other Provifions, with a fmall quanticy of Spice, by means of a Correfrondenic with Band.
Sourhic, an Ifland to the Eaftward of Macka \(J_{\mathrm{Far}}\), in 8 , Degr. Balce Inc. Sotrth tat. rields plenty of Rice, Cotton Yarn, coarfe White Clort, a good Commodity at Bantem: Thofe thar this placercidres, are the frallcit forr of Blow and. White Beads, Iron, and coarfe Porcelinc.

Timarisis a very large Inand, lying to the Eaftward of Timor Bnice; 'ris famous for the Production of the White Saunders, the greateft Logs of which are efteem'd the beft, and are worth at Bantam, wwenty Rials of Eight per Pec cul, ar the coming in of the Junks: It yields alfo great The Trade plenty of Wax, which is made up inlarge Cakes, and goes there: at Bentam for cighreen, and fo to thirty Rials per Peecul, as the time ferves; there's a grear deal of deceit, very often, in this Commodity ; and to be fure that you are not cheared, the beft way is to break it, and fee wherber it looks agreeably within.

The Wares to be carried hicher, are Chopping-knives China Frying-pans, Cbina Bells, frnall Bugles, Porcelines colour'd Taffatees, bur no Blacks, Pieces of Silver bearen flat and thin, and of the breadth of one's Hand. There may be good Profir made of the Trade to this Ifland for the Chinefe have given four for one, to fome of our Englifh that vennur'd with them thither Banda Illes are celebrated for their Mace and-Nurmegs, Bande. with the Oyls of both thofe Spices. The Harveft comes three times a Year upon there Iflands, wiz: Fuly, OZZober, and February; but the greatect gathering in is, in \(\mathcal{F u l y}\), which is call'd here the Monfon Arepotec.

Some report, thele Illands were once in. Subjection to the King of Ternate; but whatever they once were, now the Trade they are a fort of a Common-wealth; yet is there one there. Supreme Officer, whom they call a Sabandar, that ap pears at the Head of the Srate, and has the Trond apManaging, bur nor the full Power of Difpofing of any Publick Affair, without the good Liking, and intervening Approbarion of the People.

Their way of Dealing is by Bahar and Catree: The fmall Bahar is ten Cartecs of Mace, and a hundred of Numegs; and the great Bahar a hundred of Mace, and a thoufand of Nummegs. And the Cattee here is 5 Pound 13 Ounces Englif;; the Prices variable.
The Commodiries requefted here, are Coromandel Clort, Cloth of Cambaya, and all fors of the Malayen (or Cloerrax Molaya, as thcy callit., Broad Cloth, Stammel, Callicoes black and red, China Boxes, Bafons without Brims, light colour Damasks, Taffarees, Velvers, Gold Chains, Plate Cups gilr, Hcad-pieces damask'd, Guns, Sword-blades, bur not fuch as' are back'd to the Point. There's a grear deal of Profir in bringing Gold Coyn hither; for you flall have that for the Valuc of 70 Rials in Gold Coyn, that will coft you 90 , if you pay in Rials: And 'ris nor to be forgotten, thar Rice good and fair, is as vendiblea Commodity as moft at this place.
* Siam, (in \(4 \frac{1}{2}\) North Lar.) the Capiral City of a mighty \({ }^{-}\)Sec the Empire, is poffets'd of no froall advantage to encourage a Trade ofand Trade. You have ar this place fome of the beft Benjamin at cus, fatred in perhaps in the World, and in great plenty; and the glo- Capt. Sarijs rious Gems of Pegu Mhine here likewife: There's a valt verge,ch, : quancity of Silvex in Bullion, that's broughe hither from of this ath Fapan; bur Rials of Eighr are more in requef, and will fo is jere bring in Bullion \({ }_{4}\) of a Rial Profit. Their Tayle is \(2 \frac{1}{4}\) Ri- omitred. als of Eight.
All your broad Stammel Cloth, Iron-works, and fair Looking-Glaftes, are things that take cxccedingly here and all forts of Cline Cemmoditics, are much cheaper han at Bantam.
The Juncks from Guzurat come to Siem in the Months of \(\mathcal{F}\) une and \(\mathcal{F} u l y\), rouching finft at the Maldive Mes, and then at Tenaffere, from whence the Mcrchants may go o ver Land to Siam in twenty Days fpacc.
Borneo, the principal City of the Ine of that name, is Barn rich in Gold and Bezoar Stones, abounds in Wax, Rcans, Cayulacca, and Sanguis Draconis ; and no lefs Trade for all rhele thiogs ar Bemermaflin, a Town upon the fame Inland.
The Commodities defired here, are much the fame with thofe for the Illes of Bande: Bezoar Srones are likewife sinns, the Trade there.
fold here by theTayle,as they are at Bantam; but the Tayle is different from that, ir being \(1 \frac{1}{3}\) Ounce Englif; and the Stones go atfive orfix Rials the Tayle.
Sorcedanna,
But the grear place of Note upon this Inand is Soocadan:-
and its Dia. ( in x Degr. Sourh Iar.) and ever will be fo, while it has the Rcpuration of yielding the beft and nobleft Diamonits in the World. Alt the Trading part of Mankind being fond of chis precious Commodicy, the place confequenty never wants a crowd of Ships, Praws and Junks, that cone to Trade for them. The Riches of the Country in this kind are inexhauftible, and Soocadenna is never unprovided of \(D\) :amonds for them that rifit her upon that Accouns: Bur yer the grearelt guantitics are mer with in \(\mathcal{F}\) enury and April, and tho' they are ar no time fearce, yee then they are more than ordinarily plentiful; and the place is in the height of ir's charming Luftre. And the Reafon why they have more in thofe Monchs is, becaufe the Rains which fall with an excefive violence in Fuly and Ocicber, and foric of the latter Months, are then wall gone off, and their Effects upon the Rivers abated too; they are fink by thistime to cheir ufual depth and the ftreams became merc now and plocid, to that the Diversmay venture upon their Work, withour fear of being carried away and loft. For all thefe Diamonds are gotien as Pcarl are by Diving; and the River mott celehrated for the fearch and difcovery of them is the River Lane; fuch a one as which, any Prince that had it in his Dominions, would not have,very much caufero complain if it yielded the Country no Fin.

Commodities in requet here are Malacca Pincadoes, Coromandel Clorhs, Callico Lawns, light colour'd china. Silks, Sewing Gold, Slane Silk, Scammelly and broad Cloch, Bugles of all forts-

Concerning which 'tis to be noted, that the blew Bugles madeat Bantamin form of a Tun, and of the bignefs of a Bean, and which you give there ar the rate of a Rial of Eight for 400 , are worth a Mals the 100 at Soocadann. \(7_{\text {, }}\) the Mals being three fourths of a Rial of Eight. The Advantage of trading with Gold is.confiderable too here for you flall have a Srone for one Rial in Gold, which you fhall not bave for one Rinl and half, or-one Rial and three fourchs in Silver.

When a Ship is bound for this place the beft way is to go firt to Bemermaffen, and there barter what .Commodities the has (proper for this Inand) for Gold, which may be had for three Cattees Calines the Malacca Tayle, which is nine Rials of Eight: and then bring it to Soocadanne it may be pur away for Diamonds. and four Cattees Cathes the Tayle, which is one Rial and leven eights in weight, fo that you thall gain three fourths of a Rial upon a Tayle. But the Principal Gain mult be in the Diamonds, which are of four feveral Warers, Whire, Green, Yellow, and a Colour betwixr both, or mixt of Green and Yellow ; of all thefe the White Water Diamonds are the beft.
Weights at .

The Weights in ufe here are the Mars, the Coupang, the Boofuck, and the Pead; four Coopangs make one Mass, two Bcoluck make one Coopang, and one Pead and half is a Boofucks, by which proportion of chefe Weights to one another, and the above mentioned value of a Mals in Rials, the value of any of thefe may be eafly exprefsd in Rials likewife. The Tayle ar chis place is fixteen MaIs, and one fourth of the Tayle they callaPahaw, by which they generally weigh not only Diamonds, but Gold too.
China Trad
The Towns upon the Coaft of China that make a great Figure in Trade are Lankin, Canton and Hoclitu. Your raw Silks of Lankin are worth there 80 Rials per Peecul, the Hocclou Taffata, \(30^{\circ}\) Rials per Corge, the Canton Damask. 50 Rials per Corge.. Sewing. Silk rou Rials per. Peecul, Embroidered Hangings the beft ren Rials of Eight a piece; Sewing Gold is fold by the Bundle, each containing ten Papers, and every Paper five Knots, and the bet has 36 Threads in a Knor; this goes ar two Rials per Paper; Sattens the beft at one Rial the piece, grear Baions, three for 2 Rial, White Sugar the beft ar half Rial per Peecul, Porceline of the fmall forts, the beft one, Rial per Cattee, Pearl-bozes, the beft five Rials a Piece, Velvets of nine Yards long five Rials of Eight a Piece, SleeveSilk the bert 1 so Rials per Peecul, Musk leventeen Rials per Catrec; Cathes fixty Pcecoes for a Rial, broad Cloth, which is three fourths inf 2 Yard, worth feven Rials, Looking-Giaffes very large ten Rials 2 piece, Tin fifteen Rials per Peecul, Wax the fame, Musket Barrels twenty Rials a piece, Japan Sables eighr Rials a piece, val Elephants Teeth the beft and greareft, 200 Rials per Peccul, the fmall half of that; White Saundsty therbef in grearLogs, worth forty, Ihe Cuftom of Pepper inwardsis a Tayle upon a Peccul, but outwards theres no Cuftom at all; and they look very narrowly that no Am munition of, any fort be carried out of the Country...

In March the Joncks bound for the Manilles fer out from China 1 nd Cloauchu, and rerurn in func Their lading outwaidds is to the raw and wrought. Silks, far bctrerthan thofe. they carry or Bantam; bur they come home laden only with Rials of Eight, perhaps forry of them in a Xear, and fo fighty guarded, that a Ship-koat may take them withour any rouble. This Voyage from c!inn to the Mrnillics, is abour ten days fail.

As for the Noble Ifland of Frpan, there is hardly any 7 antun fort of Commodiry bur what is icndible there fomewhere or other; and the Trade there being of a later date and muchelefs known than at other places before mentiond it may not be amifs to add this particular Accounc of it.

The forts of Coin current herc, are principally Maffes and Candcrins, the Canderin being one tenth of the Mafs; and 'tis by thefe that the Prices of Commodirics are moft ordinarily Meafur'd.
Your Broad Cloths of all Corts, vit. Black, Yellow Red, Ejc, which coft in Holland cight or nine Gilders the Fitmi/h Ell, is worth here, thres or four, and forofive hundred: Where note that Cloth of a hish Wool is in no requeft, but fuch as is low horn; fo alfo your fine Bays of the aforefaid Colours, bur nor according to the Portaguenc war, but thofe that are well Corton'd.
Then Indin Goods of all forts .are in eftecm; toge ther with Daniafks, Silks, Sattens, Velvers, Taffati's and your Silk Grograms, Turkcy Grograns, and Chamblers, Say es"' Rames, Bonrass fingle and double.
All Holland Clorhs from Gifieen. to rwenry Stivers, and not above, Diapers and Danalks; which the berrer branch'd and flower'd the moric acceptable.
Then Pictures, Carpets; Painted and Gilded Ieather of all forts, efpccially with fmall and fine Flowers, are ery much valued; only as to Pictures, the larger they are the better, bur- they are nor fo mich for Faces; as Landikip, reprcfentations of War, amorons, intrigues, fome remarkable Story or comical' Fancy, as-the Painner's Invention gnideshim.
Then all the ferviceable Metals; Copper in Plates, Lead in Sheets and Barrs, Tin in Loggs, Iron, Steel and Quick-filver are very good Commoditics.
ForDrags, China Roors, Collomback Wood, Saunders, Sapon or Red-Wood, Amber, Cämphire, Roach Allom, Elephants Teeth, Rhinocero's and Harts.honn; to \({ }^{2}\) tuthich add Honey, Spanijh Soap, Sugar Candy, Pepper, Nutmegs, Salr, all forts of Leather, and Wax-Candles.
Then hardly any thing that ferves for Houtiold. Ufe or Ornament comes amifs in Fapan, no. forr of Inftrument or Utenfil, but what will find fome Cuftomer or :other chat will have a mind to it: In hort'tis a place of fo general a Vent, that I believe rwill be hard to find our a Commodity of any fignificancy that: will not take hare.
Note herethat the Chinef will commonty truck for your Silver, and give you Gold of 23 Carrats from fiftecn to twenty the Ounce Silver; but fonetimes there comes too much and other times too litele.
The Commodities frpan affords, are Hemp very good, Commoditio 1o Cattees (which is 120 pound Holland) worth from fixty tobe boind five to ferenty.
Eye Colours for dying Blew near as good as Indice, made up in round Cakes and pack'd roo Cakes in a Fardel, worth from so to 60 per Fardel.
Dying for a while, enclining to Red, made in Fardels or Balls of fifty Gautins Malio's worth from..five to eight.
Rice very whice and good, worth \(83^{3}\) per Tare; and of a worle fort worth 7 3.-per Bale.
At Eddo, Succaio, Oface, and Mcaco is the beft Fumiture for all forts of Colours, and for Gilding roo.
Brimftone cofts here feven per Peccul.
Salt-Peter one and a half.
Cotron-Wool ten.
Thefe are the Commodities of moft note which this Inand yields, of all which kindstho' it produces thofe that are good; yer the greareft excellency ir pretends to, feems o lie in the Matcrialsfor Gilding and Colouring, wherein perbaps it has not many places thiar can pretend to Rival it. r

An Account of fome remarkable Occurrences, and divers things relating to the State of the Englifh Trade in Japan, taken out of the Letters of troo Englifh-men, a long time refident there, Mr. Cocks and Mr. Sayer.
}

THefe Letters being fome of them long and sedious, and befides intermixt mith abundance of very vulgar, frivolous and unprofitable Matters, we ftall nor impofe upon the Reader the ungrateful Task of going oover sbem in thcir full fatthifuland as concife an Accoune as may be, of sbe moft material Things, feparated from the orber Imperrinences.

An. Account of a Eatier of Mr. Cocks, Dated from Firando in Japan, December the rotb A. D. 1614 : Sent.to Captain Saris.

A\(S\) ro the Affairs of \(\mathcal{F a p a n}\), the Writer of this Letrer gives us an Account that they were ar thar rime in a very difmal and unquier Condirion; a Civil War being ready to comCounrery.

\section*{Country.}

We have heagrd before that the rightful Heir of this mighry Empire was nhur up in the ftrong Caftle of ofacc, where 'twas defign'd he fhould live in perperual Ignorance of himelf, and his juft Tite to the Crown; or at leaft if he thould by aty means come to the knowledge of his stre Quality, flould by char clofe Confinedment be depriv'd of alt Opportunities of giving any difturbance to the prefent Pofleffour But the ufurping Emperor's Plor ( it feems) did nor take the defired Effect; the young Prince fome way or other came to know himelfelf, and accordingly took up A.mins to affert and maintain his Right. He converted his Prifon into a ftrong Garrifon, and inftead of ocherKeepers, gor quickly abour him an Army of 100000 Men, bold, refolute; hardy Souldiers, moft of them Ourlaws, Exiles, and Male-Contents, which flock'd in to him from all parts of the Empire, and will pend their Blood to fer him in the Throne. Befides this Forcc of Men he had laid in as good a ftrength of Provifion, having furnin'd che Invincible Caftle of Ofaca with Vietuals forrthrec \(Y\) cars. This was the alarm which Ogoffa-fim. ever dreaded the hearing of: Norhing could look with a more threacning, malignant Afpeq upon his Srate and Power, than a black Cloud gathering about the Caftle of Ofaca. However to maintain his own Pretenfions, he was march'd in Perfon with an Army of 300000 Men towards the Prince, and fome litule bickerings had pastd berween partics of bort Armies at the ime of the writing of this.
But now the whole Empire expected the refult of a pitch'd Batde, in which that controverfy fhould be folemnly decided, which of there two Rretenders fhould finally wear the Crown Imperial of Fapan. The one is refolved to purfue bis Righr, and the orher as much to refolved to purfue bis Right, and the orher as much to maincain Precent Poffeffon, which being the cafe, the bifpure berween them is like ro be very violent, and as ftubbornly maintain'd on borh fides. 'Twas nor long before this that the Emperor declar'd bimelf a publick Encuyy to the Cbriftians, giving order for the banifhing all Jefuits, Friars, Nuns, and their adherents our of \(\mathcal{F} x-\) pal, pulling down their Churches and Monafteries, and to make furc work with them, nor only ordering their Bapibmeno, bui actually Shipping them away himfelf, fome for China, and octiers for the Manillin's.
And in a forrt face after this Perfecution a very great Confufico bappend ar Eddo (anc of the largett civics of the Empire "occation'd by a moft dreadful Tuffon which raged there. The City was almof demodifhed by ir, a grear part of the Buildings being broke down, and the Sea bearing in ar the fame time threain'd to fwallow up all the efeft; So that the Iphalizants wcre fored to quit the paca, atid ruin ip into the Mountains for ghelter. The Pagar: and the Cbriftian Japonefe are very concrary to one anorher in their \(C\) pinions and-Afferions concerning the caufc of this harrible Commorion. The laterer fay 'ris 2 Judgmenrof God upon the Nation for the Affionts offerd to the Chriftian Religion ; particularly for the Empcrour's Baninhing it, with all ;he piopurly Iefuits the that preach'dit, away from his Coarr at Eddo, as he lately did, fo that the Circumatance of the Calamity with re(pect to the : Place, clearly (as they fay) expounds the Caufe of it: Onthe other fide the Pnzans fay, ris Wirch craff, and that the Jefuits upon their Banifment fitchcraff, and that the Jefuits upon their Banilhmenv fell a conjuring and raisd conjuring, and rais'd that Storm ro plague the Counirry in revenge. try in revenge.
At the ctime of Captain Saris's being in Fapan, 'twas Ports, that af any other Englifh Ship came into thofe Ports, the Goods might immediately be fold off, withour the formality of making and carrying a freth Prefcorr to the Emperour; but 'rwas afterwards found to be orthcrwife, and every Shipthat came in, was under a neceffity of doing ir, paying its Cuftom thar way. More than Junk, wirhour the no Liberiy, fo much as to fer our a Junk, without the Emperours Licence werc anmually procured; for 'wwas made deart for any fatmefe Mariner to ftir our of the Country without leave; only theif ownShips might go in and our frecly, whenever they had occalion.
A good Project was fet a foor for beginning a Trade upon the Coaft of Cbina, at a Town near Lernyin to Aremp for which place a Ship might fail from Fitrnndo wiith 3 , to achinatrade Wind in three orfour Days time. This was with a good and undertaken by fome congidensl was intit propos'd Fapan, who labour'd very hard in the matrer, and made no queftion of accomplining is fo far that three \(E\) made Ships fiould have a Vent for their Commodities Englijh Year at thar place. The Endeavours of the Englijb Factory (felled at Firando) towards a Trade from Tufbma into Corea prov'd incffectual, very litrle to any Purpofe being to be done Purpofe being to be done there.
There was no vent for any Commodities bur Pepper only, and net much of that; then the Weightis much big- No xrade at gy than that of fapan, tho' fold at fomething a better rate. \({ }^{\text {cor }}\) By all Circumiftances it feems ro appear,thar the Corcenns are nor at all difpos'd to a Correfpondence wish them of Tuffore, fince they:ll allow them bur to come inro one little Town, and forbid them to go withour the Walls of that upon.pain of Dearth, ceer fo litrle a way up into the Country; and that the King of Tufbma is no Subject to che Emperour of \(\ddagger a p a n\), 1 that there was no Danger of this arter Prince's getting any footing amongtt them by the opering of a Correfpondence with the former. Yet the Corcens are poffeffed with fuch J Jaloufies and Fcars of the faponefe, that they'll no induige any of their Ncighburhood in any manner of Liberties by which it may be poffible to faften any hold upon them. And the Fiuth on'tis, they are nor fearful and miftrufful without a caufe if ar leat former Artempts upon their Liberty may be i Rcasin why an Adverfary that made them, flould be ditrufted for che farure.
Now this was the Cafe; for Tico-fm the Emperour before chis did actually make an Irruprion into Coren, in- Tinvaded tending to have carried on his Conqueft to the very Gares coine. of Pcking, and fuspriz'd the Chingle Emperor in his Palace; bur he was inthe midat of char Carecr of Fortune prevented by a Corcen Noble-man, who to ferve his Prince and Country in that extremity gave the Conquerour his Death in a Cup of Poifon, dying himeclf.with him ar the fame time. By this means the \(\overline{7} \times \dot{p}\) गrefe loft all that they had goten in Coren, and lefc CLimit to the after Congueft of the Tarters, which was. very Tike at this time to have fallen to their own flarc. Now 'tis ther probable that this is the Reafon of the horrid and inveterate Prciudices thefe two People do enteraain one againft the other; the faponff: were the Invaders of the Corcans, and the Coreans robb'd the \(\mathcal{F}^{2} \mathrm{conc} / 6\) of a glorious and fortunare Prince.

Bur yet thar Prince how dear foever he was to the Faponefe, he was an Invader of the Junt Rights and Liberties of the Coreans, and they had no Reafon tamely to give way. to a Forcign Power, that pretended to endave and trample upon them, if they could find any means either by Force or Policy to pur a ftop. to the Progrefs of it. However 'ris certain that the faponffe do mortally hate the Corems, and can never be poffefled with Sentiments of Tendernels and Friendinip for them as long as the World ftands, unlefs the humour of the Nation ftrangely alrers. They cannor with any Patience bear the fight of a Coreen, and tnofe People they take for fuch cannor walk the Streers without a whole rabble ar their Heels, houting and peliing them with Dirc and Stones. Thus'twas with Caprain Saris in feveral Towns in Fripen, where the People did nor know what the Engli/h were; there was.hardly any paffing along, the Mob was fo very rude and clamorous, nay, the very Chiidren had it in their Mouths as well as the reft, Coric, Corè, Cocorè, Warè, you Cereans with falfe Hearss! The Faponefc are the civileft and mof well bred Peopie in the World, only they cannor pofibly be civil to a Corean, or any Man they think to be to.
Tisfaid that there are very large Cities in this Province

The Contents of anotber Letter, written by the fame Perfon, from Firando, bearing Date tbe fame Tear and Moxth as is the last. To Sir Thomas Wilion.

ACcording to the reports of this Letter, the Hollerders made a very confiderable Figure, and as grear a Air with their Shipping and Sea-forces arthis time in the Eaftern World. They had quite cow'd the Spaniards in the Molucca's, broken the Heart of their Trade and Power there, encroached fo far upon them, that the next ftep was like to be a compleat ejection of them, and conqueft of thofe Inlands to thimfelves. They had made fuch Preparations to accomplifh chis Defign, that the Spaniards were forcid to fend an Embaffadour to the Emperor of Fapen, to ask leare to take up all the Spaniards and Portuguete in his Dominions, for the Service and Defence of the Molucca's and Pbilippine Ilands, which they expected the Dutch would rery fhortly attempr woo: The Emperor refus'd to grant this Requeft, urging, thar his was a free Country and none fhould be forc'd or prefs'd out of it againft their Wills, tho' all that had a mind to go might ufe their Liberty. The Portugueze allo ftood in fuch fear of them ar the fame time, thar they pals'd the Seas up and down under the moft terrible Apprehenfions imaginable of being furprizid by the Dutci. Bur cis not only Portugueze and Spanicrds that they are fuch a Plaguexo; but the Chinefe themfelves, who are not their Rivals in any Poinss of Conqueft and Dominion as the other are; nor cannor be fo much in matrers of Trade; they rifie their Slips and make a vaft poil of them, which Condrit of theirs feems to be very unaccountable, and muft certainly prejudice them in their future Pretemions to a Chine Trade (if ever thcy make any) without goodSarisfaction. And no joubr but they'll trear the \(亏\) aponef after the fame manner if there comes to be a ruprare between them, which is not improbable, fince the Empcror not long ago refias'd to accept the Prefent they ferr him, or to lpeak to the Meffengers that brought it, and thar carriage is no prognoftick of a very good underftanding berween them for the future. The Emperor carried it much after the fame rare likewife to a Portugucze Minifter, that came upon the fame Errand a fhort time afrer.

The Charactir of the Engl/f Nation was To gnod in Crinia, that the hopes of the Trade there were mach confirm'd. 'T was paricularly a very great rocommendation of them \(m\) the Favour of chat Prince and People that they had been fuch a Scourge to the Sponiards, whofe

Ambition, Craelry and ill Manners had render'd them odious in fo many parts of the World. This the Cbinefe Merchants fay has been a very entertaining fubject of Difcourfe at the Court of'China, and that the Emperour himfelf and the Mandarins have heard it with a grear deal of pleafure:
The only impediment that appears is the ill management of the Dutch, whom they look upon to be our Neighbours and Allies; they rob their Ships, and tis poffible chat we may pay for't with the lofs of our Trade. The Chinefe fecm to be very inquifitive whether the King of Ergland won't reftrain the Dutcib from doing them thole Injuries; and as defirous that we bring along with us no Padre's as they call them (that is Jefuits) the very Name of which Men they abhor, and fay thar when they came formerly amongt them, they quite wearied them out with continual craying and begging one thing or other of them.
We have an Account here allo of the ill fuccels of Diffor fome of out Merchants, who were fent to Cauchin-Clinnt themetit to deliver a Prefent to the Prince of that Country, and \(\boldsymbol{c}_{\text {cump }}\), carry on a Trade there. The Preferit was kindly accepted, and the Englifh were entertained with all the feeming Courtefy in the World; which the Dutch feeing they would needs put in for a thare roo; as they did, and to appearance were made very welcome. But in morr, quickly after the Engl! \(h\) and Ditch, chief Merchants with their Interprerers and Atrendance were furpriz'd and all kill'd; and this the Clizefe and \(\mathcal{F a p o n c} f\) e aftirm to be the King of Crichin-Chinn's Revenge, becaufe the Dutch nor long before had burnt one of his Towns, purting Man, Woman and Child to the Sword: And the Rearon why they did this, was, becaufe fome of their Factors had fallen Sacrifices to popular rage and fury there ar Quinham; but then they kindled the Flame upon themrelves that devoured them; they cheated and abus'd the Penple with falfe Moncy, and to provok'd them to that Out-rage; fo that the Caufe of all there Mifchiefs trac'd up ro it's rrue Original, does ar laft appear to betheir own lewd and difhonef Practices.

THe Kcllanders (as chis Lerter informs us) perfifting in their Defign of making all the Encroachments polfible upon the Spaniards, filld away with a gcod Flect trom the Molucci's to the Pbilippines, in order to fighe and drive them out from thence. The Spaniards fecing the waia Dutch fo ftrong, politickly kept themfelves within their 1016 Ports, chufing rather to bear the Infulcs and bold Defiances of their Adverfarics, than cxpofe themfelves to a fatal over-throw. The Durch upon this vory imprudently nowht divided their Fleer, fending away a part ro go and rob figh. the Chineft Ships; which they did too (as the Cbinefe declar'd) all underthe Name of Englifi-men: Buc in the mean time the Spanierds care our and fell upon the other part of the Fleer, finking rwo goodShips befides theirAdmiral, and the reft hardly cicaping. Bur they in their Succefs being guilty of the fame imprudenc Conduct with the Dutch before, that is, to divide their Strength in purfuit of the Durch, were alio over-march'd by fome Frencb Ships that came in upon them, which coft them the lofs of their Vice-Admiral.

The Vice-roy of Ner-Spain fent two Friars in the treme quality of Embaffadours to the Emperour, with good mijethe Prefentstoo, by this means to infinuate themfelves into firever his Favour and Protection in that Councry again, but prefeso the Emperor would neither receive their Prelents, nor vouchfafe them that brought them the Honour of his Prefence; bur fent them Word that they thould be gone our of his Dominions, for he had fome ume ago banifh'd all + Men of their Coar, and he conrinued ftill in the fame the Opinion.

Shetrèr. Howvever, our Affairs caniór fuffer, but may rather be in a better Condition by his lofing the Victory, than by his giving of it ; for 'tis reported, that he had promis'd the fefuirs to fetrle them in full Liberry in fapan, If he provd Conquerour; and then 'tis paft doubr, that we hiad been all expell'd from thence. I
HE Petfcution in this Country, which before proceeded no further than Banifhrient, and lofs of Civil and Religious Liberties, has fince (as chis leerter rells us) run up to all the Secerities of Corporal Punifinmenc. The Chrithians fuffer'd as many forts of Deaths and Tormiences, as thofe in the Primitive Perfecurions; and fuch was their Conftancy, that their Adverfárics were fooncr weary of insicting Puninhments, than they of coduring the Effeets of their Rage. Very few, if any ar all, renounc'd their Profucfion : The moft hidcous Forms in which Death appear'd (by the Contrivance of their Adverfarics) wond not fare them, nor all the Ferrors of a \{olemn. Execution, overpower that Strength of Mind with which they feem'd to go through their Sufferings.
They made thcir very Children Martyiss with them, and carried them in thcir Arms to the Saakc; chuifing rather to refign them to the Flames, efian leave them to the Bonzces to be educated in the Pagan Rcligion." All the Churches which che laft Storm leff ftanding, this had entirely blown down and demolift'd, and Heathen Pagods wiere ereeted apon thicir Ruines. the Graves torn open, and the Bodies and Bones there inclos'd', thirown out into fome bafer Receptacle. So that now if Chriftianity ever floutifies again in \(\mathfrak{F a p a n}\), ir muft be upon a Second Plantarion, the Firft Srock fecming at this time to be complearly pulld up by the Roors. There were other Troubles and Sturs, befidesthefe in fapnnar this rime ; anocher dangerous Recbellion was rifing at Frufbma; but the Prince of that place, happening to be at that time in thic Court, the Emperour conmanded him, eicher to wrice to his Subjects to lay down their Arms, or immediately to rip up his own Belly: He chore rather to do the former, and fo the Tumule was ar an end. Bur he was turn'd our of that Government, and fent into a Corner in the Norrthern part of \(\mathcal{F}\) apan, and che great Caftic of Fru/bman (bigger by Report than the City of Rxchsfer) levelld with the Ground: All the Srones being carried away to Oftat, to rebuild that Noble Picce, which the laft Empefror, Ogifi-fam, deffro edratier his rouring die Army of the Prince Fitaic: For it ing 'the nored tho' out Author does not expreily tell us of tit k that the Emperor fooken of in this Letter, was not O-g oftefam, Bur fore orther his Succeffor, of whom we have no orther Account, than theife Actions of his give as:
'Tis faid alfo, that the Prince Fidein was ectuen fafe out of the grear Battle, and lay Incernitc fomewliere about Meaco: But this one Anthor hardy credies, it having been ofen reported fo befforc.
Lafty, He gives us an Account of the horrid and bar- Uncerennm refiding in Firchde. Withour any mañcr of Provocation they openly proclaim'd War againtt them, dechar'd tlicy wou'd burn their Ships and Eficits, and dettroy their PerFons wherc-ecer they con'd tuces them ; and this they did folemnly by Sound of Tremper, both aftorer, and aboard all their Ships. And to be as good as their word, they broke into the Englijh Houfc with all their Force, and had actually facrificed crery Perfon therc, if the Trpon:fe had not come in and fought visorouly in their defence; for the odds was vaftly grear, and one Eumgift-men had as leaft a hundred Dutcib to deal with.
All this, and much mere of this kind, they did; but for what Reafon it cannot be imagin'd, unlefs becaule chey wou'd be Mafters e"ery-where, and have the whole World to thempelves.
One paffage only, which fhews thair Modefty in thofe parrs of the World, is nor to be forgorten, and the rather, becaufe 'twas in the Prefence of the Great Emperor of \(\mathfrak{F c}\) pan himfelf, and all his Court.
Our Author being these to do his Dury to the Empiperor, upon the coming in of the Erglike Ships, found in thePrerence a certain boaltiog Dutch-man, thaz: rold the Emperoi ftrange Stories of his own Councry, and cxtolld his King of Holland to the Skics, as the greatef and moft potent Prince in all that part of the World ; togecher with a vaft deal of fuch Stuff as that. But he who underftood the 7 aipari Language, tho' the Durcli-nan thought he had not, told him before the Empcror, He need nor have roid His Majefy fo loud and broad a Lye as that, fince all thie World knew, they had no King in Folland, bur only a Stadt-holder; who did not to much goverat the. People, as the People govern'd bint. And' whercas he had the Forchead ro fay, Thar his King, as he calld him, held all o Her Princes- of Chriftendom in Subjcction, 'rwas well knowntlie King of Englend had been his Counry's Procector, or they had nerer becn in a Condition to come and makea Noife abroad in the World. "The Dutch-man was, ir feems, pretry much confounded to lofe his King fo all of a fudden; bui therc was no help for it; and the Spanierids and Portivueze, that werethicre at the ramerime, well knew the Truch of what was faid. Upon the whole our Auchor adds, that the Company were cxtreamly diverted with this piffage; and' that thete was old Laughing, efpecialfy amongft the Eurrofecins; to. Fee the Dutceman fo bewilderd'to find out his King, which they very well knew he con'd nevicr do:

The Tounn. But 'tis better to go to the Town which lies a Mite Weltward of the Bay, and affords fome of the beat Conveniences for refrefhing, that are to be had in all thefe parts : The People are Good-naturd, and they can furhilh you with as good Beeves, Goars, Hens, Limons, and Coco's, as need be wifl'd for; there's very good Water to be had roo, and the Air has the Character of being excceding healthy and proper, to recover fick and weakly Conftiutions. The beft way to come to it, is to fail along upon the S. We fail'd from hence to the Coaft of India, and came to an Anchor at the Bar of Surat. The People expressd 2 grear deal of Sacisfaction ar our Arrival, and a very promifing appearance there was of good Trade and. Kind Ufage amongft them; the Governour of Surat fending his Cerrificate aboard for our affurance in that point. However, to go upon the fureft Grounds that coud be, we concluded to iend a Difpatch to \(A\) gra, to know directly from the Great Mogul himlelf, whether we fhou'd be permitted to have a Free Trade, and to ferile a Factory in his Country, which otherwife we wou'd immediately depart. And the Refult of it was this; that in a very litele time the Governour of Amadroar came to us with full Power to treat upon that Subject, and ro enterinto folemn Articles with us, which were to be ratified with the Seal of the Great Mogul, in forty Days after, or elfe to be null and roid:

By this Agreement we had the Privilege of feteling Factories, and trading in any Ciry within the Compafs of the Mogul's Dominions; an Account of which is here fubjoyn'd, as it was concluded between us and the Governours of Amadevar and Surct, in Smerly Road.

The Bufinefs brought to this Iffuc, the Prefents for the Mogul were laid out in a readinefs to be deliver'd, as foon as the Writings had paft his Seal.
Ar this rime there fail'd within fight of us, a Flcet of in mom: Portugucze Frigats, to the number of 240 Sail, all Mct- Tbe yed chants, and bound for Cembajn: And fuch a Flect as this, perimen goes every Year for that place; from whence they bring the grearef part of the Lading, which the Carracks and Galleons carry away for Portughl: And from hence 'ris plain, that the Concerns of the Portugucze in thefe parts of the World, turns to no litele Account to them.
But now we were alarn'd with the News of another Fleet of them, that was coming to give us a Welcome into the Eaft-Indies; for tho' the Great Mogul had granted us Liberty of Trade, yet the Porruguezi were relolvid it thon'd not be fo, and thercfore came wiih four great Gaileons, and twenty fix Frigats from Cor, to drive.us away our of thofe Seas. The Action tetween us was not finifh'd all the porm in one Day, or ar one fingle Trial, burmade 3 or 4 feveral conason diftinct Fights one Day after anocher. In the ifirt Bruih the Ext was concern'd no' more than 'the "Admiral Shipstof $oth fides: Our Dragon going on to meet their Admither and Vice-Admiral, wou'd not be provol'd to thoor till the was got betwixt diem both, bur then flie falnted each of them with a Broadfide, and a Vollery of Small-hot, To hearily, that they immediatehy took their Leaves of her, and the Fight, for that Day.

hor, upon three of trie Galleons; forc'd thèm a-ground upon the Sands, a-thivart the Bar of Surat; and there the Hofiander perfectly danced the Hay abour them, while they kept all out of fight, and did nor dare to fledw' a Man upon Deck.
The fame Dayeafter the Galleons were recover by the help of the Frigars, the Fight was renewed again berwixt us, bur no confiderable damage done on either fide.
Bur the fourth and laft Trial, (which was after ien Days Refrehmenr) was that twhich ended the Difpute, and gave the Porrugueze, as well as the whole Councry befides, a fufficient proof, that it was not fo very eafie (as they had tmade in by their Noife and Bragging) to force two Englifh Shipsto a difgraceful Flight.
This Fight was well managed, and ftubbornly maint rain'd on their parts as well as ours; bur (Providence favouring our Caufe) the happy Conclufion of it was, that the Portugucze nor able to hold it any longer, cut their Cables, and fled away from us with all the fpeed and confufion in the World : And 'twas the more remarkable, in that there was at that time, a whole Army drawn up upon the Shore, that were Spectators of the Action, and very joyful Witneffes of our Vietory. The Indian General that commanded that Army then upon the Sea-Coatt (employ'd in the reducing of a certain Caftle there by), gave an Account of this Action afrerwards to the Mogul himfelf, who was not a little amaz'd at it, confidering the Repuration the Portugueze had all over that Country, to be invincible at Sea.

Threfontis on
The Portugueze own themfelves to have loft 160 Men in shis Fighr, bur the Connery reporcs very near 500 : We had nor fix Men in all killed and wounded; our greareft lofs was Rowder and Shot, there being fpent fixty Barrels of Powder, Six hundred and eighty Great Shor, and Three thoufand Small Shor ; tho we hope to fome good purpofe, as well for the increafe of our Nation's Reputation, as the chaftifing the Infolence of fo proud and daring an Adverfary.
Having waited bere at Sur ut fome time, the Mogul's Raification of the Articles came; ; which was deliverd to us by the Governour in a very folemm manner, and accompanied with many Profeflions of that Prizces Good Will to our King and Country.
This Affair now brought to its defired end, we proceeded in our Voyage to Sumatra; and oblerve in that Courfe, that all the way from Daman to Goa, the Shore is very fair, good Shoaling, nor withuur fixreen or feventecn, nor within ren Fathom, and fure Anchoring all along the Coaft : Likewife from Gore to Cechin, we never had above 20 Farhom, at 4 or 5 Leagues from che Land, and ar 2 or 3 Leagucs diftance we had 10 and 12 Farhom.
From the Lacitude of in Degr. 30 Min. as far as Cochin, you have very low Land by the Sca-fide, bur very high all along up in the Country; and as a Mark it may be obferv'd, that four or five Leagues fhort of Cochin, you have 2 very high piece of Land, mounting up like a Table in the Councry before you; and to the Northward of chat a Ridge of long Hills or Mountains.
About fome rwenty fix Leagues thorr of CapeComori, is a tre Rood of little Towncall'd Beringar, ar which we anchor'd and refren'd. And it is certainly a moft agrecable place forthat purpole, there being a good plenty and varicty of Provifions, a good Road and good Water, and the People of a free, harmicfs, and courteous Difpofition, ready to entertain and trade with Strangers, and (which makes them much the berter) very grear Enemies to the Porturueze. From this place to Cape Comori, the People are Chriftians all along the Sea-Coaft, and have a Friar conttanty refident amongft them.

A Ship may fail along this Coaft of Malabar, even to thic Cape, withour fear of danger, oblerving only a Point of Care and good Conduct, about a Neck of Land fome eight Leagues diftance from the Cape. You fee there this Point of Land, from which the Coaft trenes away E.S.E. with che Cape Comori; and here 'tis that you are to be cautious, and avoid that Point as much as may be, becoufe of rwo grear Rocks thar lie under Water abour four Mile from is: Your danger is to come within 22 or 24 Fathom; but if you keep in 28, or thereabourc, you go clear of them. But chen you muft be fure not to go beyond the I imits of 35 or 4 c Fathom, becaufe of the Curremt that lees off Sourh with the Maidive Illands; and which raking, you may bring yourShip inro confiderable danger, by forcing her in amongit thofe Clufters of IAands. You thall know whereabouts this danger from the Rocks lies more cractly by this; that thwart the foremencion'd point of Land, are placd two very large Rncks, a good heighth above Water, and then a League off directly from the Eaftermoft of thefe rwo extant Rocks, are the orher two funken ones, the fatal Mifchiefs we warn yom of Cape Comori it relf is very low Land; bur the Country an abour is remarkable enough by high Crags and Rocks: Cope enmeri The Latirade of the Cape is 7 Degr. so Min. Longirade, 57 Degr. 20 Min . from the Cape of Good Hope: Variar. 14 Degr. 30 Min. W.

As we Coafted along the Ine of Ccylon, we fenr fome Marrh: of our Company aftore; bur the People there wou'd have cytm iom; nothing to do with us, nor fuffer us to have any manner of Provifions, alledging that our Nation had wrong'd them, and formerly taken one of their Boars. We were beholding to the Dutch for this kind ufage, for they took the Boat, and very probably told the Naitives they were En-glift-men; as we know they have ofren done. We determine Lat. of Colombo upon the fame Inand, to be 6 Degr. 30 Min. or near upon; and that of Tenadare f which lies E. S.E. from Pumta de Galle, fome ten or twelve Leagues) to be 5 Degr. 30 Min.
Linflhoten's Oblervations of the Sands abour this Coaft, feem true; we faw one of them that lies two Leagues from che Land, over-againft which is a grear high Rock like a Tower, by the help of which Mark it may be avoided.

From hence we fail'd away directly for Achen, where isirt the greateft of our Concerns lay, and the moft importane come to \(16 y^{\prime \prime}\) Bufinefs (we had now remaining in the Indies) was to be come them cranfacted. The Cuftom here is for every Ship to prefent the King immediarely upon the landing of her Men, in requizal of which, an Enrertainment of Mears is always renr back by the King. The fame Ceremonies paft on both fides ar our Arrival; and after this Introduction, we were fent for to make our folemn appearance at Court. The Ietrers and Prefents of Foreign Princes, (efpecially Guch as he pays the higheft Refpect to) are broughr to the King of Achen with a grear deal of Pomp; they are car- See Sir jamed ried in Golden Bafons, upon an Elcphant richly furnifh'd, Vancager. as His Majent's of Englend now was, and as it had been done before.
The Contents of the Letter we brought, were bighly. pleafing to this Prince, and he readily promis'd to do all things to procure the Satisfaction of our King and Country; and particularly to ratifie all the Articles of the Treaty agreed on formerly berween his Predeceffor, and Sir Fames Lancafter, fent to thar Courr by Queen Elizabeth. He is one of the beft accomplin'd Princes that Councry perhaps has had; the King and the Gentleman do equally difcover themfelves in his Perfon and Carriage, and while he thews you all the Greatnefs and Majefty of the one, he does no lefs charm yon with the Civility and Good Breeding of the other. And he is no lefs a Soldier in his Marrial Afpect and brave Spirir, than he is either of the former; and it appears by his Victories and Succeffes, thas the Qualifications of a good General do as well belong to him, as thofe of a fine Prince.
He was mighry free to how us all the Sports and 'Di- Sporre ar chiol' verfions of his Court, and wou'd hardly take any publick Ring of-1. Pleafurc, bur what our Gencral muft ihare with him in. cbee's Couri Thus we were very of en invited to fee hisElephants fighr, fometimes his Rams, and ar orher cimes his Bufles; which cacounter'd one another with an extraordinary fiercenels, and 'twas work enough for fixry or eighry Men fometimes to part them, when they were hody engaged, and thar not without grear Ropes faftned on to their Hinder-Legs, to pull them afunder neither.
'Twas one of hisbeloved Diverfions too, rogo aSwim= ming, for which he has a delicate Pond, ar five or fix Miles diftance from his Court, into which none bur himfelf, and the Lords, or other Grear Perfons and Favourites (which he invires) dogo. Hither he carried our General; and after fome rime fient in the Sports and Exercifes of the Water, he gave him a Noble Banquer; which was all broughr inro the. Pond, ferv'd up, and eater chere upon the Ring of the fpor; neither wou'd the King ler any of the Company Achor's ftir out of the Water, till all was cleard, tho there was Banquet in a matuer of Five hundred Difhes, and a proporpionable quantity of Rack, and ocher ftrong liquors. He always calld the General by the Name of Orancaia Puto (that is, the Winite Lord), and granred him free Accefs to his Prefence ar all times, withont the Ceremony of waiting for his Crecfe; which is ordinarily fent forth by the Hands of fome. Great Minifter, to incroduce ajl thole thar come before the King.
He earnettly deffred the General, to recommend him ro the King of Englame, and rell him, He wou'd be very glad to have a Coupie of fair Women our of his Counry; for then (lays he) if I get a Son by one of them, IH make bim King of Priamar, and allchar Country from whence you fetch your Pepper; and 6 o you Than't need racomero me, but may go to your own Englifh King for thefe Com modities.

The Letrer he fent to our King was yery finely fet off with Paiming, and curiouly wrimen in the Character of that Counrry, the Sule of it lofry and fwelling, Ituffed with high Tirles, and Splendid Characters of his own Riches and Grearniss; according to the manner of thefe Eaftern Pinces, who ever fill up half almoft of their letters, and Publick Wricings, with pompous Enumerations of this kind.
The Copy of ir is here added, as well to fhew a fignal Example of the Oftentation, and Vain-glory, which appears to be fo natural to the Ce Parts of the World, as to difcover the Acceprance and Welcome of our Nation at that time in this Country; and the profpect of a happy Commerce between both.

Having laid now this happy Foundarion for a Trade, in the procurement of the King's Grant for that purpofe; we wenr away from Achen towards the other Trading Places of this Illand; in order to the building and proceeding thereupon. We had free Liberty to go to Teco, Priaman, Paffamen, or any where; having the King of Achen's Letrer along with us, no place dar'd deny us: Irade and good Entertainment.
Our firf Courfe accordingly was to Teco, from whence the Erffander was difparch'd to Priaman, and another goo Company to Paffaman, upon the fame Defign: Bur this nima, lat place prov'd fo very unhealhhful to us, that we were quickly forc'd to come away, and quit our Pretenfions to a Factory there. \section*{Chap. XXVI. \\ The Treachery of the Baluches, ETc.}
lation is to be allow'd them at lealt; upon each of chofe two Accourts.
Some of the beter fort of them fpeak the Portugueze very well (which by the way is a good proof, that they are no Srrangers to one another); and 'twas by the affiftance of this, that we had any Converfe with them; for their own Tongue is a kind of a cormupted Morifco, difficult to fearn, elpecially not to be any thing rolerably at tain'd in fo thorr a time as we ftaid there: Yer I took notice of thefe following Words, which may be of ufe to thofe that go thither, to call for common Provifions, when a Man does not either undentand the Portusucze himfelf, or elfe is concern'd with the ordinary People, that are ignomant of it too.
A Bullock, they call Gumbey; a Goat, Buzs; a Hen, Coquo ; Oranges, Tudnh; Limons, Demon; Water, Mage; Coco-Nuts, Sejavoge; Plantans, Figo; Pines, Qucname; Paper, Cartaffa; Needles, Siuzano; Bracelets, Arcmbo; the King, Sournn: Which feems to be'only the corruprion of the Word Sultan, the common Term for a Prince all over the Mathometan World.
Othersof them alfo feem to be broken Latin, and Arabick Words; as Cartaffr, from the Latin, Charta; and Mege, from the Arabick, Moia. And "tis probable; that the whole Tongue, at prefent, is nothing bur a Medley of Arabick and Portugueze, (with a fhare of their own barbarous Morijco, or whatever ir be) fince their Religion has concern'd them with the former of thofe Lianguages, and their Trade in the World with the latter.
'Tis Cuftomary for them at this Infind, to defire the Exropenis that come to Vifit them, to leave behind them a Letter of Comenendations of their Entertainment there; this Favour they requefted of us; and we obliged them in granting it ; adding only fome neceffary Cautions to thofe that might come after us, not to expofe themflues to any fort of danger, by an over-great Confidence in the Movelinns.
We defign'd to have filid'd from herice to 'Zoccoora; but having mils'd that Inand \({ }^{\text {dp }}\) we went on for the Ines of Curia Murin, in 18 Degra. North Lat. lying orer-againft the Wafte of Aribia Fclix. Through this whole Courfe, the Air was fo horribly thick and dark with Fogs, that we had not the leaft Glimple of Suñ or Stars, and cou'd not fee half a Mile before usupon the Water. We had no way poffible to help our felves in this diftrefs; bur by the L ead, and Oblervations of the changing Colour of fhe Water, and fometimes the Weeds and Grafs that floared upon the Surface of it; by this means we made a faiftro guefs our way towards the L and, which at laft proved to be near the Ciry of Deffer, in Arrbia Felix. The Wearher clearing up tro, we difcover'd a good Road to Anchor in, which was ar Refoir, a lirtle Town not far from Doffar. The Arabs of thefe places were exceeding kind and friendly to us, giving us all the Entertainment and ufeful In frructions, about the Country, thar we cou"d defire. The Governour of Deffer came down, and carried on the Civility, bringing all the Varieties of Provifion along with him that the Country wou'd afford; he exprefs'd much Joy that he had fuch an Oppormunty to teftific his Refpects to us, and gave us full Liberty to go anore any where in the Country within the Bounds of his Jurifliction.
Cape Refoir, that takes itsName frem the place adjoyning, is in 16 Degr. 38. Min. North Lat. there's good Anchorage there, and freedom from all Winds, except from E. to theS. by E.

Here alfo we were defired to leave a Tetimeny of our courreous Entertainment, for the Reputation of the Country, and che Encouragement of ofher Ships that might come thither; which reafonable Requeft we willingly complied with.
From hence we went Coafting along the Arabian Shore towards Pcrfia, hoping to find Some Gafe and conveni place thereabouts, for the landing of the Embaffadors Marira ille.
We obferv'd in chis Courfe the IAc Menira, lying clofe to Arabic, to be in 23 Degr. 30 Min. North Lac. and the Variation 20 Degr. 10 Min. The Eaftermoft part of Arebia Felix, calld Cape Refol Variation ig Degr. 20 Min.
Being got into the Gulf, we had quickly fight of the Coaft of Perfic, having ar that vime 25 Degr. re Min. Lat. and Variation, 18 Degr. 30 Min .

Coming near the Shore, a Company was fent out to. make fome Difcoveries of the Country cciv'd Informarion that the Counry, by whom we re- verd : But immediarely aficr char, ir iras revenld in its Getche Mccqueronc and the People Bolurbit us was calld full length, and allits Particulars, to the ame Perfen, by Getbe Mecquercon, and the People Balucber, under the Go- one, who it feems, had more Honefty and Gcod Narure verment of a King that woss Triburary to the Perfian, and than the Barbarians he lived amongt. Their Defign vas had his chief Refidence at the Port of Guedor. The \(N a=\) to have facrific'd the Embiaffador, and ail the Company; circs told them alfo, That their King wou'd fee the Lord excepr the Chirurgeons, Muficians, and thofe than wou'd Embaffador fafely cobnduetcd to che King" of Perfic's Courr have been ufeful to them; and after that, wish a Fleer of ar Spabron ; bur advis'd us for that parpofe to fail ou to Teradasto hakie fallen upor'the'Ship; and having goten

Guador, which was befrdes the beft and moft convenient place for the landing of our Perfian Company. This Accounr was fo harmoniouly given by all the Pcople abour apon thar Coaft, that we refolv'd to proceed directly to Guador; tho' we cou'd procure no Pilor amonget them, and were not well acquainted with that Coaft our felves.
Sailing on thitherwards in the beft mann T we cou'd, Treden, grai we got fight of two great Tiradas, or Bathucbe Boars, which Boats. were failing along the Shore to Ormus; to thefe we fent our our Skiff, with ne cther dctign than only to get a Pilot our of one of them, by fair means, if potible; bue if nor, by force.

The Baluches wou'd not let the Skiff come near them, Rudencs, of nor return any Civil Anfwer to the common Salutations the Baterctes. of the Sea; and when our Men fired a Piece ar random, with a defign to fright them into a litcle more compliance, they returnd it with another direct. Shor ar the Skiff, and a whole Shower of Arrows in to the bargain. Upon this the Skiff was forc'd to return, and the Boat was dilparch'd to manage the Point with the Teradar; which nie did fo effectually, that one of them was divien 2 -ground, the moft parr of her Men defperately finging themedves inio the Sea : The other had had the fame liare roo, if the Boar had net fav'd her, and broughe her off. The Mafter of this Torada (his life and Fortune being in our power) we eafily perfwaded, rpon reafonable Terms, to be our Pilor to Gund-r; we obliging the Tereda ar che fanee time to go along with us thither, that fo the Nicws of cur being in thofe Parts, might nor be fpread ahour the Gulf, and alarm the Porturueze; who might pofibly (had they been rouz'd) have come with a Force, that mighr have given us a fatal difturbance.
'Tis to be noted, that the porrugucze do hold all the The PartoCountry hexcabour in ftrange Subjection, and not a Ship fure compor a Tecada dares fail withour their Licence: Nay, more \({ }^{\text {mand oftibe }}\) than that, they have it fix'd in their Paffes, what places seas. they flall go to, what Commoditics they carry, how lons the Pats nall continue in force, and all thefe rhings are regiftred in their Offices ar the Caftle of Auffert: This we difcover'd by the perufal of a Porturucze Pafs, which this Terada that we took carried along with her. All this while our Apprehenfions of the Place and People (we wete going amongft) continucd the fame that they were upon the former repeated Teftimonies of the Natives; for our Pilot, and all the Balucles aboard us, fooke exactly the Fame language with them, and had they all laid their Heads together in one Plor, they cou'd nor bave been miore nicely in one Tale than they were.
With our firt Thoughts and Hopes therefore we arriv'd Cone io at Gucdor; and bere the Govcroour told us (by a Mef Gmation fenger) the faric Srory as before, togecher with fo much Welcome and Carcfs in to the Bargain, that we were now paft all doubr of being come to the righr place that was ro icrue our purpofe.
Bur to lay the finer Varnifh over their Defigns, he feni to Complencne the Lord Embaffador in 2 very folemn manner, promisd him a Guard to Speliem; ; ordcr'd fevcral Prefents and Provifions to be broughr aboard; and all this he declar'd, the King his Matter was very ghd to do, as well our of refpect to the Embaffadar, as to exprefs his Loyal Regard to the King of Perfin his Sorereign.
All thefe things looking with fo good an Afpect, the Embaffador was to far influme'd by rhem (being inftigated too by an cameft defire to make whar hafte he cou'd torthe Perfinn. Court), that he forthwith fent the bett part of his Treafure and Carriage afhcre with the Baluchc-Boass that came for that purpofe.
The whole Cargoe was beftowed in à Tent, particu-TheTreaches latly crected for the Reccpaion of ic, and fecured there by ry of thio fome of his Lordhip's Rctinuc, till he came himfelf in Perfon, which he intended to do the fame Day:
It happend that while the Goods were carrying into the Tent, fome of the Balucles ask'd the Embaffadcr's Servants, Whether there was all or no? To which, when 'Ewas re plicd, That there was no more behind bur Jewe's, which Wou'd come with the Embaffador' himfelf - Some of tife Villains made Anfwer to their Fe!lows ftanding by, Thas twas no matrer, for there was cnough alrcady for Plunder for the Soldicrs.
This was orcr-heard, and vaderfocd by a Perfinn of that into their Power to have difpos'd of us in like manncr. 'Twas a mighry happy Providence thax our Skiff was at this very time a filling of Water by the floar, fo that our Perfian raking the Advantage of that belp, quickly came and prevented our farther Danger by purting a full fop toour Morions; and is was as luckily rim'd as it cuuld well be; for the Embaffadour was juft then a fetcing our, attended with all the beft appearance thic Ship could makc. Thus our Lives wucre favd, but his Lordcoups Goods were in the Hands of thefe vile Pcople, and our next concern was for the redecming of them.

In order to this we therefore fent Word to the perfidious Vicc-roy, that the Embaffadour by reafon of an illan, had defer'd his coming to the nexr Day, but defired that then cwo or tbree Boars might be fenr for him and his Company, together with fome of the Principal of the Balucters, and this in tefpect to his qualiry as the King of Perfic's Embalfadour. This propofal was very readily agreed to; and promifemade that the Embaffadour's juft defire hercin thould be punctualiy fatisficd. Bur befides this by the politick management of fome of our Mcn, we got fome of the moft valuable things out of the Embaffadour's Trunks afthoar thar fame Nipht, without the leaft difcovery or fufficion, which might well be performed, fince a part of his own retinue had the orerfight of them till he landed himfelf.

And more than thar, another of the richeft Chents was brought off clear by as good a Strangen; the Serrants pretending a prefent Occafion their Lord had for fomething concain'd init, and in the room of ir leaving another (for all rhar the Baluches knew fill'd wich Gold and Jewels) bur indecd with Stones, Billers and Rubbin; which all pats'd well cnough, and the Plorters fmelt no thing of a Plor upon themfelves. The next Morning the Boats came according to the appointment; and the confiderable Men of the Baluches were no looner aboard, but they defired to fee the Gun-room, which fell our vcry well too, for that was the Pound into which we had a mind to draw them. In fhort having them faft thut ap bers, we prefently fiez'd all theirWeapons, and then charg'd them with all the Parciculars of their barbarous Defign upon us, which they denied with all the forkead and obdurazenefs in the World, ftanding ftourly in it that whey defign'd us. no mifchief. However expecting another manner of Savisfaction than chat, we difpatch'd fome of the meaner fort of them with a Meffage to the Vice-roy tothiseffect; that if he did not return all that belong'd to us both Goods and Men within the fpace of two Hours, we would cut all thofe Baluches in pieces that we had aboard the Ship; and this Marp. Meffage produc'd the defired Effect out of Hand ; it fcar'd him into a Surrender of his intrended Prey, and forcd him to be juft whecher he would orno. And thus by the Influences of a kind Providence upon our own good Conduct and Mamagement, we efcap'd the Effects of as villanousa piece of Treachory as pertaps was erer coneriv'd. Bur this was no new thing it feems amongt the Baluches, neither were We the fint that they had practis'd thus upon; for as the honeft Difcoverer of this. Plot (who alfo rotally left them, and came away ro us)rold uschey had drawn three Ships ar chis rate into their frares fince he had been amongit them, and what mischief they had done before of that kind, themelves only know. And then they had impos d upon us as much in pretending a Subjection to the King of Perfir, as they had in all the rctt of the fine Srories they told us; for they were at that time in actual Rebellion, had openly denied that Tribute which the Gezerarions before them had all quicily paid, and fuch was their Spleen againft the King of Perfit that they had made it death for any Body bucto naine him amongit them. And the Trush of all this had this demenftration in Fact to clear it np that the King of Peffia bad then levied 2 mighty. Arny, which he defign'd Ipcedily to employ th the enterpnile ther former Obedience. thofe zafe Pcople, only mking notice of Gundor the Capizal Ciry of their Province Maqueronic. Is is a convenient Port enough, and affords good"Anchorage; it itands in aboar 25 Degrees North Latrude, and the varying is there Levenreen Degrees ifficen Minures.
Orr expectations of landing the Embaffadour here
Geing fruftared, we faild on towards Indic, and came to an Anchor neat the Ciry of Dial, in the Mouth of the River Sinde, River Sinde, in 24 Degrees 38 Minures North Latitade, 4 de tuduiand our varying at the Game place-16 Degrees 45 Min. Hereis Lordfip landed ar laft; che Governour encertaiio in H min with all the Refped befiting his Chariater, and promiting his beft Aftatice in furdicring his Journey thro' that truft of fetring him fafe alhoar, wie. were to attend the Affairs of Trade; which if it might be procured at that place, we had Commodries ready to vend there but if not we would only refrefh and depart. This we defired the Embaffadour to reprefent to the Governour as the Sum of our Pretentions in coming to that place; which was accordingly done ar the firt folemn incerview betwixt them. Bur twas impoffible for this place to prove kind and favourable to us fince the Portugucze had an Intereft there; the Governour in all appearance would have been friendly to us, but their Malice blaftel all the Endeavours of his Kindnels, and nippid our moft promifing Hopes in the end. The Embaffabour zealouly urging our Bufinefs was as warmly oppos'd by the PortuguezeMinifters; very high Words pals'd berween them,and they did not fpare te tell him in plain Terms that he was a Pirate. This they faid upon: an Information from Ormus that we had arrefted the Baluchion Terada in thofe conmes parts, tho' 'rwas withour any other Damage done than Retwimsta what thofe ill People defperately planged chemfelves inco. \({ }^{\circ} \mathrm{p}\) mid And to Compliment the Eni affadour a litule further than this yet, they made a chear of him roo, as well as a Pirate;, nay one of the wortt of chears; for when he produčd ihe King of Spain's Pafs under his own Hand and Seal; "they difownd is as a Counterfeir, and made no rcruple to charge him with downright forgery. Thefe Abufcs were too foul to beendur'd with Parience by fany Man that was innocent, much more by: 2 Man that had Honour as well as Innocence to protect him from liander; and therefore as he eafily juftified himfelf, fo he rold fo much of the Hiftory and Circumftances of the Portugueze Nation, as was fufficient to leffen that Opinion of their Grandeur which fo many foreign Counrries who knew no better had entertain'd.

The Governour to carry it as fteady as might be be- a ween boch conrending partics, tho he feverely re-pormin buked the Portugueze for their infolent Carriage rowards echerrat the Embaffadour; yer would retre tono final Refolution miderim abour the Point of our Trade, ushebad hada Confererice wich Lome of our Merchanes upon tharSubject. In the mean time the Portuguezo labourd by all imaginable ways to prevent our Enconragement and-Setrlement at Diul, fomerimes promifing and fometimes chreataing the Governourtoleave the place, and Trade there no:more; and then again by abufing and railing at the Engli/h in:all the dirty and, fcandalous Terms that could be; to prejudice the Yeople, and make them thinkwe were as arrant Thieves and Rafcals as they reprefented us to be. On the orher hand the Governour to reftify his Respet to the Englifß Nation, hiad us conducted to his Caftle (where the Conference was to be) with the greareft Solemniry and splendour thar could be;; and whatever the Portugutze had doneto difgrace ns, the People (as we pas'd along) exprefs'd by many Signs that they had conceived no bad Opinion of us. Buc in fhort the Refalt of the Debate was this, That we could not have any Trade at Diul rhis Voyage. He freely own'd the Incrigues of the Porrugueze againft us, and declar'd at the fame sime the would be glad to be rid of them, if he could introduce a Trade more Beneficial to the place in the room of theirs. Burthis was the Care, the Porrugueze Trade was. worth to them every Year 10000 pounds Srerling; and we had at this time brought fo few Commodities, that the Profirs coming from us would not amonnt to near the former Sum; and therefore forchis Year at leaft they muft fuffer confiderably in their Revenues, if the Portugueze fhould deferr the place as they had vowed they would. Befides no urged that he did really farm the Cuftoms of that Port of the Mogul' his Maftcr, being bound for the annual payment of fo much Money into the Treafury at Agra wherherhis place yielded it or no; fo that all the Deficiencies muft eirher be made good our of his own. Pocker or hemuft take the Confequences of it in his Prince's difpleafare, which might poritibly be his undoing. But notwithftanding he promis'd that we fhould beadmitted toa The wodit Free-Trade the next return of our Ships upon thele two Conditions, that we came fo provided that our Trade might make amends for the lois of the Portugueze and then that we gave him an Affarance chat we would commir no aA of hoftility upon the Perfons, Ships or Goods of any belonging to the Great MoguL. This Treary was confirm'd by Writings interchangeably deliver'd on both fides, in which the Governour and we folemuly bound each orher to make good the Aricles before fpecified.
The Commodities required for that place were, thefe: Broad-Cloths of all light Colours, Elephants Teerh, Iron, dicics Iin, Lead,Steel and Spices. Thofe which wee foruld deal for there, were Indicoes, Calicoes, Pincadoes, all Forts of Guyirras: and Carabay Goods: and reveral kinds of Druge:

This was all the Bufinels we could now pretend to do at Diul；which therefore being done，we fet fail from thence for Sumatra．At Priaman we bear the Price of pri．Pepper from rwenty two to feventeen Rials per Bahar； but we bought no more than two Bahars，the unjult Go vernour pretending to make it－the Condition of our Trade，that we fhould prefent and gratific almoft all the Officers and Merchanes round the Cuftom－houfc．Bur being invited to Tecoo by one of our ownShips then there， with the Promife too of as much Pcpper as we would care to lade，we went thither filld with Expectations of fome very mighty doings．But truly we found them troubled with the fame Diftemper as thore of Priaman，coverous， greedy，and gaping after Prefents，horribly exacting for Anchorage，and hoifting up the price of their Pepper from 12 and ri 3 to twenty Rials per Bahar．Befides，to intole－ rably trickifh and abufcful in their Dehays too，that a Ship muft be exposid to great Inconveniencies to wair upon shem and artend their lcafure．

We had no way to cure them of thofe Diftempers bur by weighing Anchor，and pretending to be gone and then they could comeafter usfaft enough，and bring the Pepper．aboard too in to the Bargain，whercas before we could nor ger any athoar．
The Praws came fo thick àbovt us，and pour＇d it in fo Decmber． faft upon us，that we were held dofely to it for four Days Come to o weigh whar they brought．We took to the quartivy of minta 200 Bahars at cighteen Kinls per Baliar，and rwo Rials Cuftom for the Governour upon every Bahar．
We proceeded from hence to Bnntam，whice we pro－ganuary． vided the reft of our Lading，and from thence fer fail for sial home England；having all our Company we broughe out not ooly forkngiand alive，bur in a good ftare of Healditoo，which was ncier interrupted by any Sicknefs amone us，till we crofs＇d the Line the fecond time in our Voyage from Banciam，and chen the Scurvy broke our in the Ship：Bur we had quickly the Remedy of the comformbic light of our own Nazive Councry，

as for the leffening of our Cuftom, thar could nor be done, becaule the King had farm'd it out to a certain Officer that gave fo much per Annum for it, who to be fure would never yield to the diminiming of his own profirs. As for the Market (he replicd) we might have that for fome particular forts of Provifion, bit nor for Beefs and Kinc(which was that which wc only warted it for)bcaufe the Branicns who in their Principles are againtt the Thedding the Blcod of anv Animal, had bargain'd with the King for fo much a Year, that the Lives'of all thole Crcatures might be fpar'd. Now this was, manifently to crofs and thwart us under a precenec of yiending and being kind to us; for tho the smmir is are foolith and fuperfiticus criough to do as much as chat comes to, yet why thould nor they be as tender of the Lives of Sheep and Goats, as of Oxen and Bullocks, and why did they fray the price of the Lives of juit thofe iery Animals that moft fuited our Necefficics, and nor of the reft that we did not ara for? Beffdes, Inever knew chat we were under any fucineftraine in Indin befcre; and 'twas odd that the Supertitious Hrmour of the Rarnians hoould work to violconly juft at thar times, and at that particular piace too, where the Conveniencics of our Affairs principally required a Marker. Bur the great thing that lay upon Hand, was for us to atioft thein in their War againg the Pertigucter if we would frike in with them here, any favour fiould be done is, and we finculd tind vioucicien as kind as we could defire.
In flort, this Perfon had ciuter no Pewer or no will Some of the to grant us any thing; and thercfore tiere was buti one Entiln Mere Card moreto be played, and that was to fend Tente of chanu bo to my Company (with duc Inflructions) along widh him to Mocrel-chan hinfelf, that we might hear his Sence and Detcminations concconing us inmediately from his own Nouth. Ar this Conference the fance Dentands were made onboth fides as before; on curs asfio the matter of Trade, and on theirs as to the Burine \(\mathrm{S}_{\mathrm{s}}\) of engaging in their quarrel againft the Porrugncê. This Point Mocelchan infifted upon with fo much cagcrncls and concern, that all our Succels turnd upon this hinge, and no other Confideration appear'd to be of any mument in the determination of our Affairs.
Pertugh wis Our Depuries accotding to their Inftrictions, told him ar that time that there being Peace ar that time between us and the Scain the King of Spain, for us withour any juft provocation to fall GradRevolt upen the Perruaucze (Subjects to that Crown) would not lxing till be to act unjuftly, and violare the Articles of that League which was eftablifid betwixt the two Corntries. That in calc the R.raigucze came and bid us defiance, or offer'd. any Violence or Affront that would juitific the raking up Arms againft them, he houldfind us not backward to crprels our juft Refenmencs, and treat them as they deervid. But in the mean tine we could nor with any Face of Juftice or Reafon, have the leaft concern in any act of hoftility; much lefs could we epenly draw a Sword againft them in Compliment to the Indians, who had denelo.

Fortio they never nfe to fetany value npon the Friend

Mip of the EinglifhNation, yer at this Juncture, to do tisa Mirchicf, they would pretend ro it; and thercfore they told Mocrebchan that the Vicc-roy of Gon bad fens Word, that undefs he made Peace with him he and the Englifh, his Fricnds and Allies would borh fall upon him. This was a wicked Arrifice, and the higheft Expretion of Enmity clat could be, in that Circumftance to claim fuch an Intereft in our Fricndifip and Alliance. But af- Fime er all thefe crofs and contrary Events notwithftandino wom the Scenc changed ar laft in Favour of us: For the Mo:n's Firmans came'mpowering rs to Trade, and fo all things ran in the right Channel. Now were his Majeftics Prefents orderd to be forthwith difpat h'd to Agra; " che "Merchants were entertain'd in honourable orr, and preferied by Morrebchan; all paft mifunder tandings feem'd to be forgotten, and nothing remain'd but fweenefs and carefs. He fent his Prefencs to me a-D Ship-board, and quickly after paid the other pare of the Complemenc by his Son, who came to defire an interiew afthoar. This fricndly Correfpondence between us and the Country was renew'd in a happy time for them, confidering the form that now threaten'd to beat upon hem, and from the fury of which they had no other Pre. cctours bur our felves. For now cerrain Advices came comme har the Portugucyte Vicc-roy was coming from Gcr, with wand all the Force of that Nation, to purfue the War begun; and 'twas certain that they had actually done grear dart age at Goge, having bunnthe Town and fecetal Villages atourit, befides ien grear Sbips and 120 fmall Veffels. T was exprcfly faid too, thar the Armado was fer our upon Our account as moch asthe Indiens, ard that they came to drive usaway as well as to chaftife the others; for 'cis not at all unlikely, that the Jefuits that told Mocrit--han we were Fricnds to the Poitugucie, fent the Porturuenc Word that we were Fricnds to (and would ftand by) Mocreliclian. Thar Mifchicf that was done at Gogn, was done by a Squadron of Frigats, that came our before the main Flcer; there was about theney two of them in all, and afterthar Action they came and Anchor'd in fight of us in the Rivers Mouch. Here they did all the litcle villanies they could, chafing up and down the Indian Boacs, and firing fomefew Houfes thar lay fcattering upon the River, all which time we lay till and made no Pretences togainKay them. Some litcle bickering bappen'd between one of our Stips and them, upon the occation of a Granado of the Portugutz; but we came to no ACtion, we not thinking it prudent to weaken our felves by fpending upon a part, that muft quickly be forc'd to fight the whole Fleet together.

The reft of the Frigats came in quickly after, and they were foon follow dy the Vice-roy himilf, with all the Tre Im roore formidable part of their Sca-Force. Their ftrength gworla confifted of fix Galleors, three Ships, two. Gallies, and mand fixty Frigats, a very unequal march for our four Ships. Bur befides the Adrantage of their vaft number, they had feveral orhers every whir as confiderable; for our of that grear Fleet the Vicc-roy could fupply fis fighting Ships with Men as faft as any were killd or difabled. but'twas impolfible for us to do fo, we having no more than whar the neceffary Offices of our Ships required befides in the Portugueze. Fleet, there was a diftinction berween Souldiers and Mariners; they had Slaves and Inferiour Fellows to do all the bordenfome fervile Work the Souldiers being kept frefh and in good Heart; but with us the Souldiers and the Sailors were the fame Rerfons, Men half tired and ficnt with heaving at Capftain, getring op Anchors, leang: of Sails, and various other oilfome Works, which may be well fuppos'd to unfit Men for fo hor action aschey were to be engag'd. in. The Portugueze Fleet was no fooner come to an Anchor in the Road, but Mccrebcban (terrified with the Profpect of parcuin fuch a Power) fentMeffengers to the Vice-roy to treat of a peace; and the beter to perfwade him to is, urgid him (amongft orher argumenes) with that of Gifts and Prefents. This was whar the Vice-roy wanted; but recing the fear and defpicable cowardice of Mocretchan he ftood off with all the feeming ftifnefs and averfion that could be; braving and infulting fo mach the more, as he perceiv'd the other difpos'd to cring and courr him to a Peace. And Mocrebclinn was c'en willing upon any Terms to compond and make up the matrer with the Vice-roy, foblack were his Apprehenfions of the Confequences of this War: For he and all the Councry abfolurely defpair'd of our being able to do any thing in their defence againft fo mighty an Adverfary; they teliev.d it would be burfport and play to that vaft Fleet to fink and rake ours, or do any thing ro them that they had 2 mind to do. 'On the other hand, the Prefumption of the Vice-roy was as grear as their derpair, and that was oreReafon why he rejected Mccrebinatis' Propelals; be caufe after he bad'conguer'd ùs; which be made nodoubr of, the frou'd appear to much the more formidable to the Indians, and force them to a Submiffion upon more advantagcous Terms.

As for ourfelves, having rakenall due Mèafures for our Defence and Security in this difficult and difadvantageous Conflict; with the concurrent Approbation of all our Caprains and Mafters, as the beft Courfe to be taken, I commanded one of my Ships, the Hop;, at low Water, to move towards the Adverfary, to prepare them for fome Artempr, and ftood after her with the other three Ships, upon the coming on of the Flood. The Portugueze prefently thinking that we had been all contriving to ran away, made out as the Scream wou"d permir them to ftop our Motions, and the Hope being forcmoft, they immediutely attack'd her with three of their greatShips, the rwo Gallies, and the beft part of the Frigats; , the Galleons allo making after as faft as they cou'd for che Sands. By that time we came up to her defence, the Efiemy had boarded her with a good number of Men; bur thicy quickly found chemfelves in a great Sereight, how and where to difpofe of themfelves; for they con'd neither ftay in the Hope, nor get back again to their own Ships, for our great and fmall Shot which we threw pretry plentifully in upon them. As the beft courfe they could take therefore in this extremity, they very fairly leaped overboard, trufting to their own Ships to fifh them up as they cou'd, tho' a great number of them were drownd, and 2 much greater (as leaft the more confiderable part of them for quality) 'loft their Lives in the encounter aboard the Hope.
Having thus faild of taking the Hope this way, they refolv'd, if poifible, to fet her a-fire, and to accomplifh it, they fer fome of their own into a light Flame; but thefe Haming Ships which were intended to be le lorfe upon ours, drove quite from ns, and run a-ground upon the Sands, where they continued burning till the next Flood quenchd tikit.
We had fire \(M \times n\) be \({ }^{2}\), and fome few wounded, and the. Tackling of fonne of our Ships prejudic'd, which was the Sum of all the Lofs we: fuftain'd by that Day's Action.
And tho" the Portuguci= were as ready to leave off fighring as we, yet had ir not been for the Injurics the Hop: had recciv'd in the firft Onfer, I had not difcharged them fo, nor lat the Vice-Roy have retired, before I had exchanged a Gun or two with himfelf:

The Country was not a little revived, to lee the Difpure fo fucceffully managed againft the Portugueze: Thus far Mocrdichan was by this time indifferently well recoverd of his Fright; and now began to Bounce as the Vice-Roy did before; declaring he had no mind to make Peace with them; and he never woudd agree upon any Terms with them, but what hould be equally advantageous to us, and to themfelves. He fent us in Pro rifions too for our own Necefiries; and Timber, whar we wanted; for any Reparations of our Ships; and nothing in the World coud be more obliging to him than this Fight was; in the Honour of which he hop'd to have Hare, tho be had none in the Danger and hardService of \(i\).
In the mean time the Jefuits took as much pans to provide our Deftruction at L and, as their Friends the Porriguexe had to ruine us at Sea; and fince noother way was practicabic at prefent, they attempred it by Poifon; an Art which much Praftice and Experieace has rendred them very skilful in. The Governour of Surat was defired by them to undertake the Active Part of the Work; but the Invention and Contri:ance they wou'd furnifh him with; and thar was to poifon the Well, from whense we bad all our Water. Bur he a Man of juft and honourable Principles, detefting in his Heart fo bale a Villany, rejected the Propofal with Indignation, and forthwith came and old us of the Defign. And that we might live fecure and know by an infallible Sign, whether the Jefuits had fccretly poifon'd the Water or-no ; he told us, he had put fose Tortoifes into the Well ; which by dying wou'd demonftrate the abufe of the Water.
The Portroucte all this while lay ftill as to any Attemp upon us; bur the World was very bufie ar the fame zime, in talking of them, and their I offes futtain'd in the late Encounter."For the News came from Damon, that they had fent 350 Men to be buried there; and by a modelt Compuitation, we can'r allow lefs than a hundred more kill'd and burnt ip theShips, befidesthem thar weredrown'd.
The Perfians qt chis time too were engag'd againft them
The Perfinns at this time too were engag d againit them ioffecully. other Adverfarifs: Upon '2ll which Accounts they were now pretry well inclin'd to Peace, and 'rwas high rime, when the King of Perfia, the Mogui, and the Englifh, were all in-Arms agaime them together.
The Jefuits cagerly follow'd the Bufinels of makiog them and the Mogut Friends again; and wrought fo far as to bring Marters to a Treary; but the Pride anda unjuft Demands of the Portugucze fuin'd all: For whercas they had done prödigious Dimages, they were fo far fromi yielding to make iny Satisfaction, that they demanded a valt Sum of Moncy from the Migul: The Scrice of which was, that they had been at Xome Charge to wafte afid Spoil his Country, and they wou'd be paid what they were our of Pocket upon that Account. So that now they ftood upon the fame Terms with one another is before, and the Vice-Roy accordingly fint for more Supplies for carrying on of the War.
To speak the truth, that Sum of Moncy fointoicntly demanded by the Portuguez', if 'swas due any.where, 'twas molt juftly due to us. For all the Srefis and Burthen of the War, lay upon our Shoulders; the Indians quarrell'd with them, bur we were te fight; ther had noting to do but ro guard the Shores, and look on, while we prodigally \{pent our Blood for, the. Service and Defence of the Country Perpetual Liberty of Trade, is certainly the leaft \(\dot{\mathrm{D}} \mathrm{b}\) bt the Mogul owes the Ewitif: Narion; and tis nor immodeft to fay, that we have (as far as this comes to; purchas'd a Titce to his Country, by being the undoubted Protectors of it.
It needs no procf, tha the Mogul's Force at Sea is very contemprible, eppecially if compard with that os Pcrrugal, a Nation of Iuch great Ability that way: And it is as caffe to be conceivid, what woud have been the Confequences of the Portugucine coming down upon them at Surat, without meering an adverfe Power to bid them. Defiance by the way.
Some of our Company, who had been difpaictid ro fereral parts of the Couniry, upon theConcerns of Tride, häd bought up confiderable Quantities of indico, as well as other Commoditics. They found it very dangerous tra-Great Bobia, velling, and were hardly able to pafs along fafe, even Ectrumatio with a godd Guaïd, becanfe of the Resboots, or Genitle Comandirici indians, that were robbing every-whère upon the Röd. brought Bat notwithftanding thofe Thicves at Land; and thè Portuguegir watching us upon the Water, we gor our Cotamoditiesfafe aboard; which were (befides Indico) black, white; and blew Baftus, Candikens, Crecany; and Cot-on-yarn.'
Bur the frech Supplies fenr for by the Vice-Fioy, Diere come at chis time, and the Affairs of Trade muft again be adjournd; and give place to thofe of War. Thefe Sup- Fire-minis plies (as it afterwards appear'd), were more, and rather come. Fire-hips, than Fighting ones; and the Portugucf defpairing of worting us any otficr waty, had brought up thefe Machines, filld with all forts of combutitle matrer, to bum and blow ns our of the Road. They plainly difcover'd, that they were too fenfible of the ill Confequences of the paft Engagemens, to be forward tô enter upon anocher, in a fair and opeti manimer. Fornow they woudd pur up an Affont, and ramely bear to be in- the Pornith fulred and provok'd to fight; and I very ofren difcharg'd sfraid to one of my bigzef Guns, directed to the very Prow of fight. the Vice-Roy, rotry his Temper ; bur he wou'd norftir:All cheir hopes of Stuccefs againft us, depending upon the happy management of the Firethips, they plâyed thiai part with all the Policy in the World; giving us falfe Alarms, and drawing our Expectarions of an Aifaiule from them towards one particular Quarter, thiat fo while we wifd our chief Care in guarding that way, they might drive their flaming Ships in apon us the contrary way. Bur they raughr us by thele Tricks how-oo defend ourlelves: and not making the Thruft bornc where they pretended to offer it, we were caution'd to guard a lefs fufpeited part.
And it was to very good purpofe that we follow'd their Directions; for accordingly in the darkNigh, rheMachines having crept round abour us, came driving along with che Tide directly upon us; which our Warch (beftow'dehar wayj difcovering at a reafonable diftance, we had timely Warning to prepare our felves for. They blew up astiey pafs'd by us, and difcharg'd a vait quantity of Marcher- They atemptí ing-ftuff; but (God be prais'd) did no ham to any of our Entic the Ships.
They attempred us by the fame Mechod two feveral times afterwards.; but the Succels was ftill the fane; Dif appoinoment on their Parts, and happy Deliverance from the Danger on ours. Thus we wiere hitherto triumphant, both over the Power and Policy of thatinjucious People.
The Vice-Roy now (weary as well of che Shame as the Difadrantage of fo many Baflés) beganto think with fomie Concern how to difengrge" Fimfelf; and fo great thic vice: was the abatcment of his Stomacti, by there Difappoint- Roy fues for ments, that he proy'd humble enough to imake Morions' Pemen, and it fór Peace:

This was a very furprizing Change; be that afeve Dayt before, in the fence and feeling of his own Sreength, had promis'd himfelf fo many glorious Victories, pretendedito impore Laws upon the whole Country and wobe the fole Difpofer of the Fate of is, was now the Comutry's humble Servant, and willing to be at Peace with her almott upon her own Terms.
Bur Mocrebcijan (fenfible of his Compliance) now ronk his rurn ro bounce and infult, and acted juft the fame pare that the Vice-Roy had before towards himfelf. In fhor, he fent him pofitive word, That he wou'd make no Peace with him: As alfo, that fince he was not able with all his Fleet, to drive four Engli/h Merchantmen oir of the Road, he wou'd be reckon'd a much lefs formidable Encmy by the Country for the future.

The Vice-Roy was fain to take this Anfwer, fince he cou'd get no better ; and fo leaving fome of his Frigats to attend hereabouts, he fet Sail with the reft of the Fleet for Goa, carrying along with them the Glory of their Grear Actions perform'd ar Surar.
Wchad now no orher Occafions to detain us here, but only to fit up our Ships (that wantedic', into a Condition for the profecution of our Voyage to other parts. But the Indians, who look'd upon us as the Guard and Surngch of their Councry in this Juncture, wou'd nor be brought to confent we thou'd go very fuddenly, lealt the Porturucz having gotren more Forces together, mou'd as foon come abour upon them again. W.e yielded thercfore to their Impormuiry, in agrecing to thay fome few Days longer, as well to oblige them, as to provide for our ownneceffary Occafions.
In this time I had a folemn Interview with Mocrebehan, who came to make his Prince's, and Country's Acknowledgmenr of the Benefir they had receiv'd by us. I went athore to the Tent fer up for our Enrertainment, wherechis with ail the Expreffions of his Refpect and Good Will thar cou'd be imagin'd. And to return his Civility, I made him the Complement of an Invitation a Shipboard which he as readily accepred; feeing all the Parriculars of our Fleer with a greardeal of Sarisfaction.- He beftowed Come:Money amongit the Sca-men, in Token of our Victory over the Portugueze; prefented me with his own Sword, which is the Cuftom of that Counry, with re fpect to Officers. that have Ggraliz'd themfelves in any comfiderable Action: Bur we.were no way in Debt, eirlier to the Publick or himfelf, efpecially confidering that we were not behind-band with him in Prefents; nor receiv'd any thing, bat what we did as good, if not more than buy: A.Ceremonies of thiskind being at an end, and the Vifirs of the Great Men paid, we fer Sail from Surar; but we were but juft gone out of the Road, when we defcried a confiderable Fleet of Portugucze Frigars making towards he Town. To thew our Good Will, as allo to encoutho our Friends in the Town, we thot at fome of them, chief.

They had behind feveral Galleons and Gallies, which made the greareft part of their Strength, and coming up, pur towards the Shore; but having difcoyerd us, immediately began to ftand after us; tho they made fo. little I very well knew, that they durft not atrompt to land at Surat, till they were fure we were too far off to come to prevent or difturb them in that Defign; but yer neither wou'd the Seafon, or our orher Affairs, allow us to lie there and watch their.Morions, and wair, till they began the Enterprize they intended, wharever it was. OurGare cherefore was to endeavour to draw then after us, not only for the advanrage of more Sea-room, if ir came to a Barle buic alfo to gain fo mach rime forthe refrefing our feeble and tired Men. And this Plor fucceeded according to our defres; for as we faild on, the Porrugu:ze came after us, ar their ftately rate; ; fill keeping in motion, bur coming on fo heavily, chat to attend them any longer had been an Injury to our felves.
To bring the Mater therefore to an iffue one way or other, we.concluded (if they wou'd come a litrle nearer to us), to charge them without any farther Cercmony, and for the grearer Terror of the reft, to tegin with the ViceRoy himfelf, plying him with the Ordnance of all the Ships ar once. And accordingly we making a little halr, Tixp which the Portugucze interpreted to be a ftaying for them smanion till they came, and to a kind of Defiance or Contempe of their Power, they immediatcly turn'd abour, and fail'd towards the Shore, defifting from any furcher purfuir of fuch an untoward Game as we proved to bc.
They went on towards Gee, and werc obliged to do fo, becaule of the ill Winter Weather now quickly to be expected; fo that Surat was fecire for this Ycar; and we fee their Danger palt before we our felves were,as in were gone our of Call.
Having our Hands clear of them, we profecuted onr Voyage towards Bantam; in which Courle we difpatch'd gotmm the Hope for England; and having doubled the Cape Ccmorin, came to an. Anchor with the reft of the Flect, un- The G der apleafanc. Illand to the North of the Salr Hill. Ships Inmand may ride very well there in twelve Fathom, within 2 Stone'scaft of the Shoar ; and 'twou'd be a very good place for refrefhing, if it had but the advantage of good Water, which it wants. Otherwife there are Hogs and Coco's enough to be had; bur no good Water any nearer than theifland that lies beyond the burning one.
At Bantam we weigh'd Mace, and took in Silk to lade \(c_{\text {mint }}\) the Solomon for Mefulipatan, whatio was fent thither with a Bman confiderable number of Merchanish
We had Advice here of the violent Proceedings of the Dutch, againft fome of our Factors at Maciffar ; and thar they threatned to come with a Force to turn the King of Bantam out of his Kingdom, and place another in his room.
* 'Twas as much as ever we cou'd do, ro live in any rolerable Peace with them here too, they being fo very brivecm ready to quarrel with us; and rather than fail, as prone Dmme \(^{2}\) to make and contrive Occafions for Comtenrion. .... his aman
A Nable Indion came hither fom Pur fome Propofals to us abour Trading with that and the o ping mini ther Inands of Band \(n\). He declaid in an Affembly of our ther Ifands of Banda. He declardin an Affembly of our precertixn Merchants. Thar thofe Places were fo oppref(sid with the maint horrid Infolence and Tyranny of the Dutch, that they were port of ix all very well difpos'd to an unanimous Attemps for their impotex Expulion, ar leatt, they wou'd endeavour to force them Mommid oo be more quier and civil than they were. Thar if we of of Comex wou'd ftand by them, and furnifh them with Ammunition \(E k \operatorname{limn}^{c}\) for the carrying on fuch a Defign, they wou'd rurn over Come ber all the Spice-Trade of thofe Inands into our hands. But \({ }_{1} D_{0} .1646\) we couid enter into no folemn Agreement with them of this natare, till we had farther Orders from England, tho' in the mean time we promis'd what Affitance we cou'd as allo to fend a Ship to know their Propofals ar large, and what Security they cou'd give us for the performance of what they: engaged to do, with refpect to the purting us in poffefion of that Trade.

This was the Sum of our Tranfactions at Bantam, from whence we fail'd directly for Englend, being entertain'd with no remarkable Occurrents by the way.

As Lator（which is Centre of the whole Trade of the Counsry），they tell us thar all the Indien Merchants meet together，turning 2 grear part of their Moneys into Goods，and no joyn thentelves meo Caravans，in order to pals the Mountains of Ccudalicr，and fo inro Perfia．And according to the common Accounts，there paffes no lefs than Twelve or Fourteen thoufand Camels loaden in a Scafon along this way，＇ris now fo much frequented； whercas formerly there did nor ufe to be above Three thoufand，all the reft going by the way of Ormus．
Burche Merchants are put to very grear Expences in this Journey betwist Lechor and Spatbawm in Perfia；for they reckon thar every Camei＇s Lading ftands them in near 130 Rupies，by that time chey get thither．For what by the Badnefs of the Way，and the Extremities of Weather， befides orher Dangers！they commonly Spend fix Months， if not feven berween thofe two places．By this way alio is Perfic furnin＇d with Pcpper，and orter Spices，over Land， from Mafulipatan
Bur none made more of the Trade of this famous City than the Portujucte did，（as long as they had the Wit to kecp Friends with the Grent Mogul：）Forall the Merchan－ dize they doa＇for with the Foriencrs on bior，was herc embark＇d upon the fpor，and fo（down the Rever，into the Indus）away for Perfic，Ormis，and thofe parts；and then all the Merchants that patsd that way betwixt India and Perfia，paid them Freight．Burbefides this，they drove a vaft Trade along this River for Spices， which they boughr in other parts of the Indies，and fo bringing by Warer up hither，furrifid all thele parts of Indin with that Commodiry．They had berter have aba－ ted fomething of their proud and infolent Demands upon the Megul ；or taken care fome way or other to have fa－ risfed and pleas＇d him again，and fo have kept chis profi－ table Trade in their hands：Friendmip；and all there Ad－ vantages together，wou＇d have been far more eligible，than to lofe and be turn＇d our of all，and be bearen befides in－ to the Bargain．
But other People have no Reafon to be angry with them for throwing themfelves out of this Bufinefs；and tho they may be call＇d Fools for their Pains，yet no Man can owe them any．Ill－Will upon that fcore．Into this mighry Figure and Repuration is Lellor now grown，for Trade and Corre（pondence：Which is the more furpri－ zing too，in that tis fo litule a while（in comparifon），that is has been rifing up to fuch a degree of Greatnefs．In the ame of the Potene Kings，it was bur a trifling Village， and never made any condiderable appearance，rill the pre－ fent Mogul＇s Grandfarher fe：himfelf to the enlarging and adorning of ic．．So thas＇ris．true of both the Grand Mce tropolis＇s of India at this Dav，that they owe the Rife of the Norfery of the Grandfarber fo did grew up under \(#\) the Nurfery of the Grandfatber，fo did agra under＊that

In their paffage berween this place and the Mcuntains or Streights of Candiflor，they were very often diftrefs＇d for want of Suftenance for themflves and theirBeafts； the Country about them being barren，and theWater many rimes very brackifh and unpleafant．The Captains of the Mogul＇s Forts and Garrifons，in many places impofing and exacting upon them，dermanding fo much Dury pponeve－ ry Camel＇s Head，where nothing ar all was due，either in Juftice，or by the Rules of Ceftom，bur all was clear Gain to themfelves，．and went into their own Pockets．Nay， they go farther than this roo，in their Abufes of Travellers fometincs；for whereas the Mogul mintains them there to be a Guard againnt Thieves，they ofien prove the Thieves themfelves；bur cver（whether they rob or no） are as great Villains as any of thofe they are fer there to keep in order．

Thefe are the Potares；or as fome call them the Agwans， fierce and barbarous People，fomething whiter than the 7 mi． Indians，horribly thievih and treacherous，and by their namal Arength and roughnefs，precry well qualified for all the hard Services of thar Thievifh life they live．＇Tis very probable；that they are fome of the Remainders of the old Indians，who have either by a conftanr Succeffion ever maintaind themfelves in the enjoyment of thefe Ter－ ritories，or elie by fome Inundation of a Foreign Power were driven our of the other parts of that Country，and recired for fhelter into thefe Mountains，where they lie fe： cure and quiet．
Formerly they were far more troublefome than they are now，and ufed to cut off whole Caravans at once，lying continually in Ambufcades for that purpofe；bur the ta－ Iting of the Swectnels and Profitof Trade，has made them a little morecivil；and parcly too，the Awe they ftand in of the Grear Mogul ar prefent，tho＇it feems impoffible be thou＇d ever make an abrolute Conqueft of them，whatever Reftraines his Forces may lay them under．But they are not jer acquainted with of much Honefty and Humanity， as to forbear injuring thofe that happen to fall into cheir Power，when they can do it without running themfelves into any danger thereby．If they meet any traggling Traveller，they won＇r fail to make a Prey of him，carry： ing him up invo the Mountains，where he is fold for a Slave，and condemnd to all the Miferies and Hardfips of 2 Life of perperual Drudgery． fuch sequeft fuch sequef ftream of the Trade into thefe parts, which before ufed to run chiclly by the way of Ormus. That old Channel was ftope up, and all incercourfe cur off between India and Pcrfin that way, by reafon. of the Wars between the Perfians and the Portugucize. Sothat the Merchants if they would Trade intochat Country muft take Candabar way of neceifity, tho round about as to a great part of the Mosul's Dominions, for it would be a far morter cur to crofs the River Indus about Tatta and thofe parts, and fo Atrike directly into Pcrfia; but 'tis infipracticable by rea fon of the wild and barren ftate of all that trait of Land that lies between the Irdus and the borders of Perfic. 'Tis bad enough a great way into Prifia it Yelf, berwixt Candalar and Spabarm, it being hard to fec any Green thing fumetimes in two or three Days travel; but 'ris much woric down along the Banks of the Indus; and the Deferts of Arabia are not more troublefome perhaps Budnef of than fome Parches in that Country. This Accounc our of fon: paris Travellers do give us as to feverai parts of Perfia that lay in their way; a fcorch'd fandy Soil, no delightful thade or thelrer of Trees, foft graffy Walks or Ficlds, as 'ris in fome of the happier parts of the fame Country. And belides this, the fame calamity of the want of good Water afflicted them often here as it did in India: it was cither brackifh, muddy; or downright ftinking, that both Man and Beaft were punith'd to drings it. Neither ware the King of Perfia's Officers (excepr in fone very few places; much more confcicncious than the Mogul's as to the point of impofing Duries upon Paffengers; every now and then, here as well as there, a Camels Head was to be paid for, fo that at this rate, before a Man gets to his Journeys end, he may pay over and over the Price of the Beatt he makes ufe of.

Tarta was the firft place of note chey came to in Perfit; a Town defended with a fubftancial Wall of Sundried Bricks, which are ufed abour moft of their Caftles and other Buildings thereaboncs. This place has the Bleffing of a gcod Soil, and wholfome Water; the latter is fo precious a thing with them, that where they have it, is is wonderful to fee with wiat Art and Induftry they manage in for the Advantage of their improveable Grounds; what Treaches they cut, and near Devices they have forthe deriving of Water to a good foot of Ground that wants it. All Merchants that go inro Perfia are obliged to ftay here rill the King's Treafurer has we:ghed all their Packs, and valued them as he thinks fit, taking thice per Cent. Cuftom.
When they are going from hence into Perfia, they are ufed with a grear dcal of Favour and Indulgence, for fear they thould make complaints at Court, which would be very faral to thofe Officers, the King having given a frict Charge for the good ufage of Merchants, and threatned the contrary with moft rigorous Penalties. But then when chey go intolndia, they are very fevere and exact upon them; for then they fear no relling of Tales, and have hardly any orher Reftraints to influence them, than whar Juftice, Confcience and Good Nature might be fuppos'd to lay, which a Man would be pretty hard pur to 35 to find any thing of amongft thefe out-lying Officers.
Thicy'll allow no Man to tranfport Horfes or Slaves out of the Country, and as for Gold or any Silver Coin but juft che King of Perfin's, "cis dearh for him thar attempts to carry any thing of is abroad; and therefore here the Merchants are Atripped. cyen to the yery Skin, the fcrutiny is fo nice and fevere upon this account.
Between this and Spabawn they pas'd thro' that barren and defolate fpor commonly call'd the Salt-defert, which ancer of tour Days Joumey. All the Car forn top be fore they enter upon this, and refreft fome Days on purpore to prepare them the betrer for the horrid Fatigues of that Country: But after all their Care and Prorifon, 'tis very ofren that they mifcarry in it, and fome Carcales or other are left in thofe Sands to be back'd into Mummy by the violent hear of theSun.

Spremtier. Buinefs "with Sir Rebert Sbiricy, for the Eaff-India Company, by whom they were employ'd. And they come ingood time, for thar Perfon was then ferting our for Spain; going thither in the quality of the King of Perfia's Embaffadour. The defgn of: his Miffion to that Court, was, so confer abour Merhods for the more fpeedy and effectual overruming the Incereft of thie Por tugucze in chele Paits. and bringing in the Spaniards in their room. As fortieir Bufinels with Sir Kobert Sbivleg from the Eaff. Ludic Company, tho zhere liad been fome mifinderitandings between him and them, yet he concluded (ashe was an Englifh Man ) to do the Intereft and Trade of his Country all the faithful Service he could, and therefore procured all the Firmans to be made that they defir'd, and gave them intothe Hands of thefe Meffengers, fcald with the King of Perfir's Broad Seal. That which concern'd the Privi.cge of the Englifh Nation in common for Trading in any part of the King of Perfin's Dominions, ran thus, as crannated: our of the Language of that Country.

There were three of thefe Firmans given out by the carnats King of Perfin's. Vizier; one of which was fent to themen dons Governour of fefques, a Second carried into Incin for the of im Benefir of the Merchants theres and the Third brought over into England to the Compencis.

As to the Trade of Perfia they tive us this thort Account of it. Their chief Commodities are Carpers of all forts, Gold; Silver, Silk. Corton, and thefe mix'd rogether; raw Silk, of which it yields (according to the Kirg's Books) 7700 Batmians yearly.
The Province of Corefan produces good ftore of Rhubarb and Worm-feed. The Perfian Coins are, of Silver the Abacee, the Mahcmedee, the Shathee, and the Bifree ; of which the Mahomedee is one half the Abacee; and the Shathec one half the Mahomedee; and the Biftee two fifths of the Shafluce; and in the value of a Rial of Eight, they reckon the Shaftee to be one thirteenth of a Rial of Eight: As for their Copper Coins they are much the fame with the Thngn's and Pifo's of Indif. The Weights differ confiderably in different places.

At Tauris the two Mahans make but one of Spebawn Weight, and fo 'tis likewife as to the Batman. TheMeafure of Silks is gencrally the fame with the Pike of Aleppo, which is abour 27 Inches.
Sir Rebert Sbirlcy being here, brought upon the Stage in Perfia, whereas he was left before in India ar Diul in order to his Perfian Journey, *'twill not be out of the way stak kent to thew the Dangers he pals'd in coming hirher, by the befere barbarous Pradtices of the Portugueze: Sir Roberr Shiit/g was a proper Object for their Malice and Revenge to work upon on a double account, both as he was an Enrlifh Man, and the King of Perfin's Embaffadour, with whom the \(\begin{gathered}\text { were then at variance. Thele wicked Pcople }\end{gathered}\) influencing the Governour of Diul fo far, that he kegan for their fakes to neglect him, he being weary of thar ill ufage, and alfo of a life of continual fear and hazard by the Porturucze at that place, defired leave to go for Tatta, which the Governour refufing to permit, he took Courage and went withour hispermilfion. But being pur-sit ant fued and overraken by a Troop of Souldiers fent out to shingmit bring them all back again to Diul, they were worfe: efomest handicd than before, Sir Rebert himfelf being actually imprifon'd and narrowly fcaping with his Life fereral times, the Pertugucze were to mad a ploting. to deftroy him. However, nor long after the Governour (not able to anfwer the leaft part of whar he had done to his Mafter ) better bethoughr himfelf, and gave him his Dif parch for Tarte, where he was enterrain'd according to his quality, and from whence he proceeded to Agra as well to make his Complaints as to do emergent Bufinefs at that Courr.The Mogu/promis'd himSarisfaction, and immediateyfent for the Governour toCourt to anfwer the Crimes lid o his Charge, and there's no dopbt buc his ill-Behaviour coft him his Head.
From hence Sir Rebert, having been very generoully creared by the Mogul, went away to Perfia, to his own Mafter.

bafladour HE Bufnefs of this Voyage, tho' it lay infeveral parts of the Enftimdics, yet in the firt place our Courle was to be directed for \(S_{u}\) rat, where Sir Tlomes Row his Majefties EmCompany thas to be fet down. Befides all the Erglifk Foreigners aboard us, Faponeff, Guzurnts, Indians, which effy of Eng-had been formerly brought over, and were now going ado ine back to their ree bective Countries. And to make the aut Mrgur, variety ftill the more confiderable, over and above this medley of other Nations, we had a load of the choice Daugs of our own Country; which the Law having fwept out of doors at home, were to be difpos'd of up and in foreign parts at difcretion. Thele were a pack Ecf-I-India Company interceded wirh His Majefty for their Pardons, that they mighr be fent over in thefe Ships to make Difcoveries infore places where they foruld be left. But we had nosloft fight of the Englifhthoar before thefe Newgate Birds were fome of them upon the. Wing, and had very near fown quite away from us. and norwithftanding all ourcare to prevent it, one of them did break out of his Cage, and rook his ramble with fome other of the Ship-company, which were-Birds of as good a Feather as himfelf, and rherefore all decenty join'd in the fame Flock together.
Having proceeded in our Voyage as far as the Canary-flands, we had there an opportunity, to take notice of, and rectifie a Miftake concerning the Situation of one lland belonging to that clufter. It is thar which is commonly call'd Forteventura Illand, which our Experience telis us, is plac'd no lefs than a whole Degree more Northerly thanitought to be; the fame errour we difcover'd too with refercnce to Cape Brindorc, and thefe Miftakes of our Plars sun us into no little Danger.

When we came to the Bay of Soldania, we found much better Temper and Carriage in the Nacives towards us, than ever us'd formoriy to be. They had loft in grear meafure that Shinefs and thofe frightful Apprehentions of us, that made it many times. To hard to bring them to any. thing of a Trade. They feem'd to pur a fort of a Confidence in us, and were free and forward to converfe after their barbarous way; and our of a refpect to us took care nor to affront us by thieving. and pilfering as they us'd to do. Nay, which was a very ftrange thing, fome of them had fo good an Opinion of us, as to be willing to leave their own Native Country, and go for England in our Ships when we came back. All thefe wonderful : Alterations we artributed to the Inftructions which Coree: (their Counrry-man) had given them; for he himfelf was yet alive amongit them, and came duwn with fome of the reft ro make us a vifir; and having been fo kindly. treated in England; as an Expreffion of his Gratitude he carried fome of our Men ap into the Country to fee his Houfe, and Wife, and Children, at one of their Towns, which confifts of about. 100 Houfes, about five Miles from the Bay. Here Corce kept (exceeding Charity) all his Particulars that he bronght with him out of Englend; here was his Copper Armour and the reft of his Furniture, which all pur together made him the finett fellow in the whole Councry. And 'rwas upon' this Account, that fome of the reft were fo willing to go with us into our Country; there was mere Copper fuirs to be had in E.rg/and, and Coree had fped fo well thar they wanted to try cheir Fortunes in fo good a place. Thefe Peopie al To by fecing more of the World are grown much wiler in the matrersof Trade, as to what concerns their own Ad vantage. Time was when lron-hoops and Nails would have ferv'd the turn, but the humour alterd fom that to Copper; now they are come from Copper to Brafs, and they fay they muft have pieces of a Foor &quare or more;
nay, they have infifted upon Bafons, Skillets, Scummers and fuch like Utenfils for a Houfe in exchange for their Catrel, and fome of our Nation have lately deale with them upon thefe Terms. Bur this being moftly fince Corec's return homeamongft chem, we belicve he has help'd to enlighter their underftandings in thefe matters, and hown them how little we value in Englend thofe things which they fet fo bigh a rate upon.
We left here a fee of our condemn'd Mcn,turning them loofe into the Country, and tho' to bring Thievesto Solda- Criminals fet nia, is but carrying Coals to Nerp-Cnfte, or Rars and dunia. Mice into a Houfe that fwarm'd with Vermin before, yet for that Reafon this appear'd to be the fitteft place for them. Ler a refolute Villain be thrown amongit the Frouns, al cunning Chear amonght the Chinefo; and an impadent Thief amonget the Soldanians, and the Men are difpos'd of as they mould be; and 'tis better thus many times than to place them in better Company, for a pack of Knaves of the fame faculry may help to keep one another Honeft; ar leaft (as to the prefent Cafe) oar Men and the Soldenians conid not well debauch one another. When they were athoar they form'd themfelves into a Society, and chofe2 Caprain to command them; fo giving themeach a Weapon for their defence; we left them ro their future Fortunes.
Between the Bay of Soldania and the Illand St. Laty
 Daniels Plars. FFor inftance, the Land to the Weft of of the Plats. Cape de Arecife? (which lies to the Eaft of the Cape of Good-Hope) is placed 27 Minures more Norrherly than is Thould be; and fo when actording to the meafures of thofe Plass we fhould have feen the land of S . Lavrenc-, we found an error which amounted ar leaft to as much as 70 Leagues.
We cameto an Anchor next at Moyelm, one of the ines \(7 \mu\) of Comon; a pace of late prety much vilited \(b_{i}\) our \(s=\) Englifh Ships. Thefe llands are four in number, Nogna, Popnts firt Angazelian, fumm, and Ningetter; and they all lie almett Eait Davis. in bis and Weft of one another in a parallel, except Angracitia, firt which jurs our a litule to the North. There's none ofrecknns five them all but affords very good refreming, tho Magotian of theri inands. has the bef charatter upon that Account from all the Aralians tiflar inlabit thereabouts; and next to Mago:ta, the Illand of Funnny has the Reputation for the belt. Angazetia is extreamly high Land, and moderately fruiful too as far as fome of the common Necelfaries of Life do go but beyond Kine and Goats, Cocoes, Oranges and Limons it has very litule to pretend to.
As for the Government of thofe Illands at the cime of TheGovern our being there, angazelin, had no lefs than ten petty menc ofthere Sultans in it, Moocla had three, and in Fuamy ruld an old. \({ }^{\text {tands }}\) Sultanefs thar was as it were the Soveraign of them all, and to whom all the reft repair'd for Joftice both in civil and criminal Caufes. The Sultan that govern'd in that quarter of Moyela, where we anshord, kepriall his Subjects in fuch excream awe, that no Man dared fell us fo much as a Coco-nut till folernnleave was granted br him. To open 2 Trade, therefore we were obliged to fend lome Men athoar in order to the procuring of it. Thefe being anded, were- receiv'd and enoertain'd by a certain Governour under the Sultan, whom they found Getting up on: a Marof Scraw, wrapr in a Mannle of red and blew The Linen, befides which he was all bare, only a forry chequerd \(G\) Cap apon his Head. A fmall Prefent made him,: eafly procurd hisGood. Wit and Confent to the Peoples: trading with us, which he prefendy fignified to them by Mefengers difparch'd for thar purpofe. White tic enterrain'd our Company with Cocoes, hehimfelf farchewing Beetle and burne Oyfter Shells mixt with the Kernels of the Arec-cacNucs:-Thefe Nurs are hor and biting ith the Mourh draw away a confiderable deal of Rheum; frergothen and fix the Teeth, and "usall the Phyfick they ure in thefe parts.

They'll

Theyllinake a Man that is not us'd to them light and giddy headed arthe firlt caring, and by degrees will change the Tecth from their natural white, intoa rufty black, which is one of the effeas of them that the Moyclians principaty admire them for, fince Tecth of that hew are reckon'd. 2 nart of very grear Beaury amongtt them.

The Town whither our Men went to this Governour was calld Fembone; lying abour fome four Leagues to the Eaft fide of our Road; she People made very much of them, and gave them (after the Govctnour's Treat was over, an Einterrainment as one of the principal Mens Houfes.
Cunfors in
In the firft place. Water was brought to cuery Man in a Coco-ficll ro wath his Hands in, and for a Towel a parcel of the Rinds of the Coco. Then they brought in boil'd Rice corcr'd over with roarted Piantans, pieces of Hers and Goars broild; their Bread was made of Cufeusbearen and mist with Honcy, and fo fricd; and for Drink they had Palmero-Wine and Coco Milk. They don'tit cross Legg'd down upon the Floor at their Mcals as the Mahometans and all Ealtern Pcople gencrally do, but in a more decent manner upon Benches, all round the Table, which ftands high upon Treif-ls.
Their Houles are far from being rich or ftarely, yet they are kept tery fweet and clean; and there's as much neatnefs in all their Furniture and Houhold-ntof, tho nothing ar all for ornament and finc frow. They are buile with lime and Srone, fmall and low roofd, Plaittcr'd in the infade with Mortar, and wichour fenc'd round with Cancs; ar top they have only Rafters of Wond corerd over with Leaves. They have their litrle Gardens adjoining to them ton, which are paled in with Cancs. but hardly afford any thing clfe befides Tobacco and Plantan. Trees.

The place where the Sultan commonly refides is Do maii, the chicf Town of thar part of the Inland, and diftant about threc Miles from Fambone the Governours Town. We had no opporrunity of fecing this place, tho the Lord's Embaffadour fent fome on purpole to vifit the Sulcan; but he happening at that time to be at Frmlone, the Journey to Domen was prevented. He gave thefe Perfons a courtcous Reccption, and made them Dine with him very familiarly; as for any thing elfe he appear'd nothing greater or ftatelier than the Governour, and was nor ro be known by any other mark than that of the profound Refpect which all the reft paid him. He aflumes the honourable Title of Xeriffe, and calls himfelf one of Mabomers Kins-men; 2 thing that a World of the Mobemetens do pretend ro, thar are no more a kin to Mrtomer than they are to M.fes, and are of 2 far honefter race than they would make the World belicre they are by thas Pretancion.'
- In thers thele Sulrans of a fogela are very mean forry Fellows, if one may gucis by one of then that came to the Lard Embafiadou: ; a poor bare foored Rogue, thar could not pretend to any higher Trade than for a matter uf four or five Rials of Eight, and when the could not get his Bargain, fell to begging of Shoocs and Stockings. This was one of the High Blood of the Propher, a Kinsman of Mabomet, Brocher to the Xeriff, Subuilean of Moy:lla, and no body knows what befides; a Man would rather have taken him for fome rafcally Dervife or begging Saine that was going a Piigrimage bare Foct to Mecce, and wanted a pair of Shooes to help him overthe rugged way.
The People of this Country are very fearfol of letring lelouftes of their Women be feen, and as Jealous too lcalt any Chrimidchurches, ftians thould fee their Mofquers or any of the Rights of their Mabometan Devotion. One of our Mcn did bur go into a Village fo far as ro be fpied by one of their Prietts, who immediarely fell \(a\) fercaming, and made fach a Noife as if a Troop of Ruffians had been come to knock them all on the Head; all the Women were fhut up clofe within Doors, and the People were in the greateft rumult imaginable, threaming the Man if he came near their Church that they would cerainly kill him. Now a Man might fafely fee all the Riches of their Mofquers, withour being rempred to Sacrilege, as wellas the teft Charms of their Women, withour any prorocarions to unchaft Defires; but fuch is their ridiculous Fancy of a mighry Sanctiry amongft themfeives, and as great an Impurity in the Chrifians that they will not permit any thing of this Liberty.

A certain Mro if Pilot ar this place gave us fome Informations, which 'rwould be rery well worth while to encuire into the Truth of. He affirmed that on the Sonch fide of \(S E\) L-arsrence there was good Atore of Ambergrice, and Cocoes of the Sca; that the chief part of his own Councry (which lay in two Degrees ten Mimates North Latitide upon the Coatt of Afick) would give us a good thiding with Marfi, Amber and Tinta Roxa. That in many places along the Coaft of Africk towards Mozam in que, Meg.adoxa, &c. wemighr Trade for Gold and Silver, and particularly that of the latrer, they had a great dealcf Gold mix'd with. Sand and Earth abont the Country, which the Inhahitants made very light of. He gave alfo fome account of the Counrries names berween Mégadoxn and Prefterfobn's Dominions, and by his ownChart rectificd ours in fome Refpetts, as to the diftance between. Tocotore and the Main, and rafing quite our fome Inalds which were laid to the South fide of Meycir, there being in reality none fuch ar all reality mone fuch at all.
Curre Mrgadoxirns have propagated 2 Notion "that the \({ }_{\text {Tide }}\) teen Dets at this place fifteen Days Ealtward, and fif- Currand fers no way. \(\because\) Bur this is rery idle Difrourd lies fill and rets no way. But this is tery idle Difrourfe for Sei-men;
the Current does here fer moft certainly and the Current does here fer moft certainly and conftandy to the South Weft, thar is the flated courfe of it. Now before the full of the Moon it had fuch power on the Ebb and the Flood, that we never woond ar all, bur at the full Moon and Spring Tides we rode upon the Flood againtt the Current, the Currenc running under, and the lide above, and the Ebl winding back with the Current. So thar this Atrange precended alteration of the ferting of the Current, is indeed nothing clfe but the infuence of the Tide, which at thofe times high'd to a matter of fixteen Froc Water, and was powerful cnough to overcome the Current; and there's no miracle nor myftery in this, that the Courfe of the Water fhould be differcnt when the Tide prevails over the Current from what rwas when the Current was ftrong cnough to mafter the Tide. And that this is the true account of the matere is plain, becaufe the Spring being paft, the Currene return'd and took it's reguiar courfe again, as wo found when we were ar a diftance clear of all the Eddies of the Illands. For tho' 'ris true. that when we weighed from hence, we were fer the firtDay Fantward and the next Weftward; yet the Reafon of thal was ciidently from the Eddies of Funniy one Day, and Aynanelice the other, and being our of the reach of them, it for the furure inlluenc'd us only to the Weftward.

The varying at Mogela is fixtcen Degrees forty Min. Vigiog a and we make in to lie under the very fame Mcridian with Longith. Cape St. Auguffine; and from hence conclude that the Ines of St . Latorence oughr to be laid to the Ealt 39 or 40 Leagues, and fo all the Coaft of the Main (being broader than the Land in the Chart) ought to be fet in proportion to the 'Ealt; for tho' the Longirudes be ever fo falfe in themflelves, yer they are true in theirProporrionsto one ancther.
We faild away from thefeInands for that of \(\boldsymbol{f}\) cectora Inchis Courfe we had very great troublic with buftling im- wind petuous Winds about Abbadeictries; all the while the Moon wasbelow the Horizon (being then in the fecond Degree increafing) they tore and raged after a moft horrible manner, but when fhe rife they were quict and ftill; fo foveraign a I ady is the of the Weather in thofe parts, and fomuch depends upon her Influence and Prerence. And thercfore let thole that have occafion to Anchor hercabouts in the Night time be careful to aroid tanding over the rocky Groind, where the Winds will cerrainly force them from their Anchors; bur chafe to ride where fome defence may be afforded by I and Diretion. againft the violence of the Winds 'beating from the Hills. bour cing Bur the beft way will be to touch at Cape Guardefui, and fo fail from thence to Abbadelcuric the next Morning by break of Day, and when come thither to Anchor upon the Weft fide of it in feven or cighe Fathom under the low and; or if they can gerno Anchorage to keep to the Souch fide in the Night, lealt the Winds and the Northerly Current pur ctiem too much to Leeward before Day light The Winds don't keep fteadily to a point norwithftanding the Monfon, but tometimes blow Sauth by Weft, and S.S. W. but very feldom to the Eaft of the Souch.

We came to an Anchor firft in Tamerin; and then in Delifan Road, whichvery well deferves thar name for the Dolifarioin delightuincts and peaceablenefs of it. Betwoen the Wa ter and the ragged Mountains of Tamerin, You maj bring the two littic Hommocks (thar lic on the low poing without the Land to the Eaft Gide) S. E. and the low Eand (that was Eaft by North of you in Temerin Road) North Wett by Weft, and fo ride very conveniently in ten Fathom within three fourtis of a Mile of the hoar Your Latitude here is thitreen Degrees fiveMinutes varying cighteen Degrees twenry Minures. The Ground white Sand, tut rocky, to that 'rwill be needful for the Sea-man to coarch or bocy his Cables. The King of zeoscra gave us a very civil Receprion as he does to all that are dike to prove good Cuftomers, and will lay our their Money with him.

We boughr Tome quanity of Aloes of him, which being very new, or by reafon of the Suns ticar was per Eigh , he made us give afrer the rate of aury Ruals 03 round and a half) for which reaton we bought the lefs. * Onc of our Company who wizs athoar bad the opportunisy of making foric Oblervations, which may nor unprofitably) be here annexed. The Kings Town \(b\) furs in of Tamerin thar makes a very fair fhew in the Road' smingid makes a much lefs handfome aqpearance to a Spectaror makes a much les hidnd of it. "T is builr of Lime and \({ }^{3}\) Hopreses Stone whited over, has fomething of ornament from ons were Battlements, and Pinacles that look well at a diftance, made bur within fide one finds it but a poor forry Town. The King's Pa'ace was fuch too as an ordinary Genticman in Eng/rind might poffibly make a Mift with; and whatever his upper Reoms were, his lower ones. were moft of thein Warc-houfes, and Ward-robes; in which larter befides fome change of Cloths, there were kepr the Books of their law, Religion, and Hiftory of the Lives of their Saints. And as for the others the Warc-houlcs, one mult excule the finding fuch aparmients as thefe in the Pajace; for His Majefty is a Mcrchanr, and lives by his Trade as other Honet Men of thar Profetion do Every Evening at Sun-fer the People fall to their Derotions with their Faces turned towards the Wert, and in this pofture the King comes and throws Water upon all their Heads; but ihis had ant need to be in any great quanriry, leatt the cold Water thould fatike a damp to the Zeal of thore Religious Perfons, and pur out the Fire of their Dévorion. And by one Paffage that occur'd afhoar, it appears that their Minds are not fo intenly fix'd in their Religious Exercifes, but a little matcermay be fufficient to divert them ; forthis Englif. Man of our Company having obtained the Favourto be prefent in the Mofquer as the time of Divine Scrvicicand happening to pull our his Watch there; the Prielifhaving fpict that fine thing, was fo taken with the fight that he had not parience to hold on in his Work any longer, but prefently left off ferving of God to come and tare upon the Warch.
The Kingdom of Tartach in Arabiat Falix, which is under this Prince's Father, lics all along the Coaft from fifteen to eighteen Degrees, and Northward adrances to the Mountains. The Tures have Tribute all over Arcbia: but only from this King of Tartact, who lives in peace with chem, and makes no other acknowledgmens than this, to affift the Tuiks upon any occafion with 5000 Men, who arealfo to be paid by the Turks themfelves.
Our lirile affairs at Zccotora being ended we faild away -for India, and came to an Anchor in Sorcliy Road. Here we landed and the Lord Embaffadour with all. the State and Ceremony befirring his qualiry, and be was as well receiv'd by the Grandees of Surat. Bur onetbafe Cuftom of theirs occafion'd fome difputor and differcoce as firft, and that was their examining, and fearching the Pockets of thote that came afhoar. The Embaffadour' Character indeed exempred him from any thing of that nature; but then they presended to practife it upon his retinue, which tho he openly protefted againft ftanding upon the Rrivilege, of an Embaffadour, yet could procare no farther favour than only to have fome few "of the chicf exculed too. As for the inferiour fort they were very narrowly fearch'd cyery Man of them, both Pockers and other places, according to the rude Falhion of the Country, wherc a Man murt pay for a Rial of Eight in his Purfe or a good Knife in hisPocker, and not only fo, but if he happens to have any rarity about him. ten to one but the Governour, under the pretence of buying it, takes it quite away,

The current Coin of Surrar is Rials of Eight, of which the old with the plain Crofs are beft efteem'd, and worth abour fire Mamudies a picce, the new with F.ower-deluces at the ends of the Crols go at 4 . if they be not light. The Mamadie is a courfe Silver Coin, containing thirty of their Copper Pice, each Pice-being twelve Drams. The Englijh Shilling if it be weight will yield Thirty three Pices and one half. Their larines are much abour the value of the Mamudics, bur the Rupies are of feveral fores, fome worth half a Rial of Eighr, otherslefs, which if a Man docs nor mind well he may be very cafily cheated.
The chicf Trade is managed by the Benians, who muft be as well look'd to as the Moncy, for they are very fubtle cheating Fellows, whether they act the parts of Buycrs or Sellers. The Weights of every City almoft do differ from one anorher, fo that to give an account of thefe, muft bero give a complea: Hiftory of India in this Rerpect. The Trade ar Surct takes in alt manner of Engifl., Chinze and G:- aurat Merchandize, Pictures, Toys, Drugsand ail kind of Spices.

After a condiderable ttay hefe arsurat, we falld away Go for col. for the Matabar Coat, and came to an Anchor ir the lome. Road of Callcicut. The King's Depaty was very quick Neme ly difparch'd to bid us welcome in his Matters Name; and to reprefent the earoct Defire he had to have a Conference with us upon the marters of Trade. That Prince was then at Crangalor, beficging a Cafle of the Portagueze, with whom he wasat War, which was one of the beft encouragements that could be given to our Hope of a Happy Serdement in hís Country; for as we defire no betrer profpect in a Foreign Country where we pretend to Trade, than to fee it clear of the Portugueze, fo there is nothing thar they take for a worfe omen of the decay of their Inrereft any where, than to fee us come and fit down amongit them:
The King of Callecut defiring our Company ar Crar- Xhe Greas galor, we went thither to him; and here what favoura-Calfornt; le Grants, what Immunities and Privileges could be Offers so the thoughr of that thould nor immediarcly be rouchfafed Ensific. and confirmed to us? An Englifh Factory mutt be e-is was Caps Itablifh'd in his Country; and ro invite us to it (befides Kering Comall the Common Expreffions of Good Will to our Na-mander of tion, he offer'd us a very good Houfe rent-free, and that werna a toml exemption from all Cuftom, Tax, or Dury what-marr to oever, for all Goods berth imported and exported our of his make the Deminions. And whereas at that time we were nor able wreth the o leave any quanritics of Merchandize for the Furniture Greas Samo and Support of a Factory, having been already ar Surat rin. and now going to other fars; this Objection was removed by his Declaration, thar 'twas no matter for a prefent hupply of Goods; bur only that we laid the oundation of the Factory by leaving fome of our Company there, which would be a Pledge to him of our reurn the next Year with lecter Provifions to perfect the Work that was now begun. He affur'd us likewife thar we might cerey Year have at least one Ship lading of Pepper there, and the cerrain vent of all our Commodirics.
Upon thefe Confiderations thercfore it was derermin'd palory as that a Factory fhould be crected ar Crangalor, and accor-ormasior dingly whar Men and Goods we could allow for thar purpcfe were forthwith fer amoar. The fubtance of his Agreement berween the King of Cellecue and us was drawn up in a Writing, and tranfmitted to us by him with this Promife orer and above. Thar if tre recover'd the Fort of Crangitor from the Porragueze, it fhould be put into the Hands of the Englifh. We make the Latirude at Celfciut it Degrees 10 Minures North, and the tarying fificen Degrees forty Minutes.
In our paffage from hence towards Cape Comorin, we had the luck to take two or thriee Portugucze Prizes; theis principal Iading was Grain, Sugar, Drugs and Bengala Stuffs; had we treated them according to their delerts we had burnt cheir Ships, and taken every penny-worth of their lading away, tho to fer them an example of Courtefy and Good Nature, we fhew'd them more Favour than they could have expected, or would have hewn us in the like cafe.
It is proper for a Ship bound this way toride ar Brinnion Nore for till the end of March, and nor double the Cape Comorin, becaufe of the Calms, and the Current Perting South to the Maldives; bur then at.that time the Eafterly Monfon ends. This Brimion is about fisteen Lcagues from the Cape; the Courfe fetting South Eaft by Sourh; a bold and free Coaft; it is a Town feated in a lircle round Bay, and to be known by a long white Breach to the North and to the South all high Land, and in the fame part a grear red cliff near the Sea. The Latitude here is eighr Degrees thirty Minutes, and varying fifreen Degrees.
- Having doubled the Cape Comorin our Ships parted \({ }_{16,16}\) - \(D\). Company, the Dregon and the Pcpper-Corn going directly Conie to Sa for Sumatra, and we in the Expedition firft for Bansam, matra Bur ourftay ar that place now was bucthort, and Bufinefs quickly obliged us to follow our Company to Sumatre. We had fome Trade ar I:coj and Priaman for Pepper, but the other Ships had furnin'd themfelves with the fame Commodity at Acben, tho' 'rwas all tranfported thither from thefe places. This Pepper Trade is brought to achen by the King's particular Order, and for his own particular Advantage roo; for he forces the Peopic of Tecoo, Sic. to bring theirSpice to him, and to puts off his Strer Commodities in truck for it, at what Rates he pleaes; and fomany times he fends his Merchandice to thofe laces, and fells themoff upon the fpor, and then to be ure there's no buying porfelling for any other, till all his Cargo is gone off.
Thefe placeslate mentioned on the Ifand, are celebrated only. for a plenciful production of Pepper; but thete are others which befodestrat Commodiry yields' others farmore valuable.

Femb; which lies on the Eart-fide,affords a large Grain'd Pepper, like chat of prinman, a place not acknowledging the King of Arken's Sovereignty, as do thofe which lie on the Weftern fide.
Prffimen, befides the beft Perper upon the Inand, produces the fineft Gold, and in the sreateft plenty; burcthe -Temper of the Climate is fo very bad, that allthe Riches of its Mines, can'r make amen's for it.
Bertes, (to the North of Poffim-1) yields good ftore of Berjamin ; and Corta-tinga, the fame Noble Commodity with Prffrmen; and all thore plares are under the King of Acher's Command: That is, they are really a part of his Dominion, and they'll receive his Orders with the uemont Submition, and hiew of external Rererence; buc they'll ol:cy them as they think fir, ar leaft as far as they can have their own Wills, withour'an open Contradiction of his.

And this we fo \(n!\) by Experience; for when our other Ships carme hither to Tecos and Pirman, lringing the King of Ac: : \(\quad\) n's Letrers aiong with them, they made an old ftir with kifing the Letter, and laying it upon their Heads, to thew their Refpect to it ; but bardly any thing of the Conrents of is wou'd the Heathens perform. And they are fomctimes fo wicked and tinruly too, that we hall have a hundred Crifes drawn upon us, if we refufe to let them hare their Wills, in taking our Goods upon Truft, or at their cwn Rates; not to mention their frauds and Cheats, by fa!fe Wcights, Mif-recknnings, down-right Thicving, and all the Motheds of thar kind, that can te parfued by an IIL-minded People.
But thefe Diforders may be cafly ratified by a Complaint to tioe Court of Aiben, and the Tecorns had beft have 2 care their Villaniss don't make a No.fe in the Ears of that fevere Prince; who if he knew of their Proccedings, wou'd make ncthing to cut off the Legs of a hundred of them, and this a gentle Punifiment too. And in order to keep them the better in awe, he docs obferve that point of Policy, to plane his acheref: Officers up and down amongft them; but they are cither too ofeni as bad; as the reft, or elfe are corrapicd by Bribes into a Negligence of their Duty, and Conrivance ar the Crimes of thole they thou'd reform; fo that therc's litule Redrels, many times, to be had, by an Appeal to them.
The Thrmes another Eugic nough to do with thefe rude People ar as well as we they had gotten the Kine of erfle at 1ecro: And tho yet they found it preng of Achen's Letters ro bear upon, Teconns to comply with the Contenrs of is Thar She had agreed with the King of Aiben for a Factory there, paying Cuftom as other Nazions did (which was Seven in the Hundred); which pur the Durch into a very great ferment.
And as for our orhar Ships, the Dregn and Pepper-Com, tho' ther had fix'd Ma: Mers with the King for a Trade at Trcon, yer the rime of thar Trade was limited but to two Years, after which the Mcrchan:s were to repair to Achen it fcif, which the Kirg was re'olv'd to make the main Seat of Bufiners.
As prefent we feem to have the leeter hand of the Trade upon this Inand: The Dutio had their thare heretoo, but fhort, he pack'd up, and tole away from the place (cur of the reach of the Elephants:, being ref olv'd to have no more of the King of Aclien's Fatherly Co rrection, nor be tols'd into his Duty by thofe furly Execu tioners again.

Several of thic reft follow'd his Exa mple, and march' of too (tho they were takeo and broughr back); bu however, the King roak this fo ill, th at fince they did go out themfelves; he feconded them to far, as to hur the Door upon them, and to put us in poffefion of their Houre.

All Bufnnefs difparch'd ar Sumetra, we left that Inand, and went for Banfam once morc. Here the Pcpper-Trade was very brisk, and the Prices run confiderably high, or cafinn'd partly by the number of Dutch and Englift Ships trading for that Commedity ar that time. Burthe main Reafon was the grear Noife made by the Dutrl, of vaft Sums of Money broughr over this Year by them; they pretended to have 1600000 Rials of Eighe ready Moncy lying by them, which tho' probably a meer Boaft, and made with a Defign to out-brave us) yer fo far animated the corctous Clineff, and froans, that they preifenty hoiItcd up the Price of their Commoditics, and refolved to make their own advantage by it.

The ill Condicion we fonind a great pare of our Men in xhem belonging to the Factory of this place, renders it necef-drefio fary to make fome little Reflcion upon the moft proba- Fater, ble Caufe, as well of many Illinefics here,as in feveral otherbry beb Farts of the East-Irdics. 'Tis cruc, no place is, or canle trmpt perfectly free from Diftempers; nor no Conftitution fo of ine iound and happy, as not to lie cpen to an Invafion of this nimes kind.
In many places where we Trade, the Air is malignan and infectious; our Water tainecd with fome hurful or difagrecable Quality;' the Provifions we are forced to take up with, many times, nor fo niccly futed to the Temper and Diffofition of our Bodies, which are ufed to odice Metheds in our own Native Clín:ates. Bur tho all chis be rrue, and cach/cf thefe Duorsis wide cnough to ler in a faral Diftemper, yet none does it fo certainly and effeCtually as that of Intemperance. A Man may poffibly preferve his Body in gocd Tcmper in a bad Air, an unhealthy Soil, and with difagrecable Food; provided he will lire foberly and regularly, and does nor debauch his Health.

Now this is the common Crime of our Exiropeanis abroad, in/there Eaftern Countries; they let loofe the Reins to a licentious Appetitc of Drinking, and are never well but when they are pouring down all the ftrong and fiery Liquers, which the Cafe-harden'd Indions themfelves are usd to. The Arack Houfes are concinually crowded with them, where they fit Guzzling whole Days and Nights together, making a Sca of rhat fcalding Fluid in their Rellies, which proves more faral to a grear many of them, that that of Salt Water, from which they *
* This is the great Drink ar Bantam and Sumatra; \(2^{\circ}\) Tum thing of that violent hear and ftrength, that'tis a wonder mant of how Narture docs to overcome it: And certainly, if 2 Rinidef Man's infide were made of dry combuftible Matuer, it istem would go near to fet him of a light Fire. Now for Pco-a inpa ple to come where the raging. Hear of the Climate com- ke mands all the Temperance and good Management in the Thanin Wrald ; to fir down in the middle of the Torrid Zone, Arat: and fcald their infides with burning Spirics, while the Sun is mond is roafting then withour ; this is almoft as likely a way itrin that to die, as to lcap inro a flaming Pilc, or a boiling Fur-Liguma nace, and a Man may cxpeet it one way as well as the bedif other. Men oughe not to live here, as they mighr live, the form were they ftarving in the Froits and Cold of Grecnland, or Novi Zombla ; nor drink that while they are melcing in Indic, thar wouid be fufficient to keep them from freczing onder the North Pole.
And yct affer all the Lives that are chus facrificed to Riot and Intemperance, thofe lend Courfes muft rot bear the Blame of it ; the Fault is in the Air, or the Dist, or the Vogage it felf, 'tis any thing kills them, burtheir own Exrravagance and Unrulinels, and no Man will charge his Death upon the harmle's Arack. 'Twereto be win'd, that our Sea-men and Factors alircad, wou'd more ftrictfy obrerve the Rules of Morality, and Sober Living, in this refpect; and net render themfelves incapable of filling up cheir Stations, and doing Publick Bufincss, by an Indulgence in thofe Libertics; which are at once a Reproach to Human Nasure in gereral, a Damage to ThemTelves, a Differvice to their Ccuntry, and an Affront to their Sacred Religion.
From Bamtam we were bound home for England: And nomem confidering the time of Year that we went this Courfe, We offer ir as good Adrice to all Ships coming towards the Cape at chis Seafon, rot ro take up at an Archor hiore.

\section*{Some furtber Account of the Troceedings of the Factory at Crangalor, in the King of Calecut's Country. Taken out of the Memorials of Mr. Roger Haves, Refident at that place.}

I\(N\) the forcgoing Voyage we have feen the Englifh ferting themfclves in a new Dwelling in the Eaftern Contincne, and a porenc Prince (hitherto a Stranger to them), giving them a kind Welcome ar their Arrival. Our Nation had made her Succeffful Vifirs to all the Porcntates and States almoft round the Indics, bur me had never yet made any confiderable Actempt at the Friendmip and Correfpondence of the Great Samorin of Calccur.
That Prince, how wiorthy foever he mighe be of this Norice, yet was hicher thardly capable of being a Friend to the Englijh, becaule of his intimate Correlpondence with the Portugueze, their moft irreconcilable Adverfaries. But thar Band of Únion being broke and the Porrusucre inftcad of Favourites now proclaim'd his Enemics ; the Prince is prepar'd for a new. Alliance, and the Enrlif are invired to take their places. And befides the prefent DiAtrefs of the War with the Portugucic, and the Defire of routing them entircly our of his Dominions (in which the Valour and Strength of the Englif might be of confiderable ufe to him), there might probably be a more valuable Caufe inclining the Samorin to this Friendly Carriage pucmontanards them. For the Noble Caprain Dounson, the laft \({ }^{p} \mathrm{p}\) proprid Voyage he made into the Indies, (when the Vice-Roy of \({ }^{2}\) watik- to Goc was fo fairly and throughly bearen by him) had made Tont, in the fome Applications on the behalf of his Country, by the means of a Mallebar Caprain, to the King of Calccut. He had defired him to move to his Prince, thar a favourable Entertainment might be given to our Merchants that thou'd come into his Ports: And this, together with the encreafing Fame of the Englih in thofe parts, upon that fignal Victory over the whole Power of Portugnt, mighn difpofe the Prince to yield to thofe. Motions. And fince eba brate Perfon did nor live to fee the Fruit of his commendable Endeavours for the Good of his Councry, the Praife and Honcur of it muft ferve to adorn his Name and Memory, which will be far lefs mortal than he himfelf was.

The Articles of Agrecment between the Samorin, and Capr. Keeling, were exprefs'd in thefe Terms, and compriz'd under thefe following Heads.

As for the Procecdings of the Factoty (as far as appears by thefe imperfect Memorials) they were not fo tuccefsful ias one wou'd have imagin'd they mighe have becn. Where the Fault lay is hard to derermine, efpecially amongit to dy and fubtle a People, and fo perfect Diffemblers as the Indiens generally are. The King carricd it fairly to them, and the People feemid fond of their Company, and yet fome fecret Obftacles prevented the growth and increafe of Träde. Twas fome time before they cou'd procure a Licence to carry their Goods to Ca Apsit, ior lecut; however, that was permirted afrer many Delays, and the Factors went away to make a Trial of their Forune ar that place.
At their firft coming thither, they were forc'd to take up in the Publick Cuftom-Houre for a Seafon, rill a more convenient place was made ready for the Receprion of them, and their Merchandice; and if the Welcomes of the People wou'd have done the Bufinefs they came for, they had undoubredly made a very profirable Work of it Bur tho' to have to do with good remper'd People be a great advantage, yet to be under the Command of an ill remper'd Governour, is a Difadvantage that in many repects overballances the contrary Advanrage, and makes ir of litule ufe and fignificancy.
Now this was the misfortunc of the Englifh chere, the TheirSuffe: Governour was a perfidious diffembling Fellow, Friend inirsuffer = only in appearance to them, bar a real. Well wifher to the Governcort Portugucire. He did as much as he dared, or corid (with- of Cajoart out an open Affroncto his Prince), obftruct the Defigns of their: Trade and Setclement in the Country ; and wou'd hid it been pofible, have totally difpoffels; \({ }^{\text {d }}\) and wou wn \(^{2}\) and rettord the Porturucte to their ancient Sear and Prifh, and reftord the Portugucere to ther ancient Sear and Privileges there again.

Our Factors being a fittle fetuled ar calccut, woa'd fain have given Notice to their Friends and Correlpondents at Surnie, of their new Efthblimment here; but the treaches rous Governour wou'd not permit it, till all. the Goods werefold off, that thofe at Surct (as he pretended) might be the beterer encouraged to come thither too. And when by his procurement a part of the Goods were fold off to the Merchanes of Calceur, they were fo difpos'd of, that they had as good almoft have kept them ftill in their hands; for the Cuftoriers he helpd them ro; were fuch as brought no ready Money; and tho' (pecdy Payment was promis'd, yet by cheir many Delays, and Buuffing Tricks, the Debr áppeard to be little better than defperate. However, after this beginning of the Trade, he cou'd nor defend himfelf any longer from their Importunities about fending to Surat; which was accordingly done, tho' the/Autempt was attended with a very grear misfortune: For the Meffenger difparch'd thisherwards, came back again with a Story, That he was befct by the way with Thicyes, foundly beaten, and robb'd of all his Money and Letters: The Circumitances of which were fuch, as afforded fhrew'd Sufpicions, thar che Fellow was robb'd with his own Confent, and for his own particular part loft nothing but his Honefty. The Govemour too hung down the Head upon the Report, and difoo ver'd fome plain Symptoms of a guilty Concern in this marter.

Now all this while the Merchants of Criccut and Naf Crpore, were bufic a buying, burit was all upon theStock of Crcdir ; the Trade went on, but no Moncy came in. And whether the Governour and the Debrors had agreed rogether to thare the Profirs of the Chear betwixt them, or no, yec tis cerrain, that they did by Bribes procure him to ger the Payment deferrd, and pur off from one rime ro another: So that if he was nor a Knave of as great a magnitude as that comes to, yet he came as near the Pro portions of fuch 2 one as he well could.
The Samorin himfelf, all the while, carried it with the fame fteddy Hand of Favour and Refpect to them, Fidelit convincing Circumpas any part of a Blame of the Mifmanagener upon him: And if he was falle, he was fo with a wonderful,deal of Art and Policy, and his Treachery was fo fine, that. if it could be a pardonable Crime) is wou'd deferve it upon that fcorc.
Bur the Governour and the Merchans were bare-fac'd ther took to in comparifon; thefe latter con'd find no Money to pay get weir. rheir Debrs, bur they cou'd for Bribes and Prefents to the their Dobts, bur they courd for Bribes and Prerection and Countenance in their ill Defigns. Some Courfe thexcfore muft be taken, to force their Right out of the hands of thefe People, or they muft refolve to be ftill pur upon, in like manner, by every Knave of the Country; or elfe if not that they muft quite throw up their Bulinels, and bid Adieu to all Tradear Calecur.
Now nothing cou'd give them a more happy advantage in this matrer (had the beft Fancy been fer 2 Work to contrive one), than the foolifh and fuperftitious Humour of -this was a the Mrllabars*. From what menftrous Principic of Imburs longh pertinence their Cuftom proceeded, is neither much maFouls of the rerial, nor very clear; bar a Cuftom they had, of oblerBramens, for ring a total Abftinence from all manner of Food, and they wont Wathing, and cvery thing of that kind, as long as the pous trefer fembled this Cuftom, if they had refolv'd not to pay what tureit own. they ow'd; or elle they fhou'd have fortified themfelves in and at their their Houles, and kept their Creditors ont of Doors: For and at theirics.

Famine is as fevere a Ponifhment, as any the Sword of 2 Magiftrate can inflict; and 'tis, as bad cvery whit to be ftaryd within Doors, as to be hang d withour. And tho they were in no grear danger of the latter, yet ourFactors were forc'd to threaren them with the forner, and that by getting into rheir Houfes, and declaring their Refolurion to ftay rill the Debts were difcharged.

Here the Mallabars had three things Ieft to their Choice, cach of which was attended with its difficulty; cither to pay their Debts, to deny their avowed Priacipics of cating with Strangers in their Houkes, or clie to ftarie with all their Provifions abour them: The firf was offering Violence to Tcmper; the fecond to Cuftom, and perlaps to Religion; the third to the Laws of Nature, and Sclfprefervation. In flort, they chole the firft of the three; Self-love prevail'd, and they agreed to pay their Debts; tho they were net honeft in to doing \(;\) no more than a Thicf is honeft, that reffigns the Prey thar will be forc'd from him ; or a Rebel is loyal, thar gives up a Forr, which Famine, and all the Plagues of War, will let him hold no longer.
By this Policy they pick'd up a confiderable part of D:cot their Debrs, tho' it came in feveral Driblets, a little parcel from this Man, and as much from another; fill cloy-ficond ing them with their Company, till they cou'd hold ourfexarmo no longer, and then fifty or a hundred Fanos wou'd conc out to procure cheir Releafe, and fond the Engliflo going. From whence it feems likely, that the Mallabars did norrem fufpect that the Englifh were acquainted with that Cuftem see of theirs, which gave them fuch an adrantage upon them ; theprate for elfe they wou'd have guarded their Doors, and keptimioce di them our; had they been fure the others came with a defign to make fuch ufe of it as they did.
Bur is muft be own'd, that befides their own Endeavours to recorer the Money due to them, the Samarin himfelf rcok fome care of the Affair, and employ'd fome of his Nairo's to gather up their Dibts for them; but thefe Villains, tho' they did no Bufinefs, hou'd come and demand a Reward; nay, go to the Debrowityoufes, and fquecze Money out of them to put in their own Pockets, and never be concern'd amot bringing away any for thofe thar encrufted them. Triere was indeed ar this time, hardly any Law, or Governipent, in the Country i and therefore no Juftice, nor honeft Dealing.
The Portugueze, abour this time, came into Calcenjona Harbour, with a Flect of thirty four Sail : There were mater only threc Mullabar. Frigats that lay there to extertainfroma them; but they did ir fo well, thar the Porturuene went off with a grear deal of difgrace. Some of them that were forcid afhore, were treated with the umolt Screriry, hangd up two Days by the Heels, and then tols'd jino the Dens of the wild Beafts.
The Loyal Governour of the place bad, as it feem'd, prepar'd very kindly for the Poirtugueje's more ealic Admiftion there; for he was gonc from his Charge, moft of the grear Guns were lock'd up, and they had not Powder and Shot for them that were in the way, for above two Difcharges.

The Samorin bufie in his Wars, fent Letters to ouir \(\mathrm{Fa}_{3}\) Ctors, wining, that when the Englifh Ships came, they would comero him at Pancin; and to make them at Ca lecut eafie in the mean rime, bid them not be troubled about the Moncy that was due to them, for he would fee them paid, tho his Jewels were fold to effect it.
Here sbe Account breaks off, and atr Facors are not fo kind as to proceed to tell wis, whecther the King of Calecur doss \(\alpha\) good ar his Word or no.

and having had a longer rime to Work, 'ris not trange that they have done more Bufinels.
But then they bave orher Ways and Methods nopurfue the Enlargement of their Intereft by, than the Engtifo Nationecrer chought fit to practife, or fubmir too. All is Finh thar comes to Net with them; and right or wrong dicy feize any thing that lies within their reach.

And then tis a fine compendious way to get the pofferfion of a Councry, to have a Bull from the Pope; and fo cnter to Rights upon the Privilege of Religion. 'Tis a mighty advantage to be the Sons of a Church, that has the Keys of the Narions hanging ar her Girdle, and profetics a Power to draw the Lines of Inheritance and Dominion all che World over. Such Helps as chele (rogcther, with Force to make them effectual) may very well conduce to che.propagating of an Intereft, and the good Sertement of a Pcople abroad in the World.
And if we confider Capt. Pcyton's Account, that follows, we nall find the Partugucze have thriven very confiderably upon it. To begin from the Coaft of Africk, and fo on Efant.

They have a Trade upon the River Queme, in 21 Dcgr. so Min. South Lat. for Gold, Ambergrecie, Elephanrs Teerb, and Slaves.
As Mozembigue for the fame.
Ar Mombaiz for the fame, in truck for Guiures Commodities.
Ar Magailcxe for the fame, and fevcral forts of Drugs.
From all thefe places they drive a Trade to Cambrya, the Red Sce, and disers other parts, curioully oblerving the Monfons, which blow Weftward in April, May, Jume, fuly, Aurust, and part of Scptember; and Eaftward all the reft of the Year; the fmall fpace intcrccpted between both, being either quire calm, or an uncertain mixture of many forts of Weather.
 they trade into Perfit. Avabia, and India; they draw great Quantities of pearl from Balfore hither, and with them, and other Perrian Commodirics, they fend out a Ship or two yearly for Diul, uporive Coaft of India, which they reach in the end of \(A r^{-1} 37\), or beginning of September = This is as is were their Mint or Treafary roo, from whence they pour out valt Quancities of Coyn (Rials of Eight); into other places where they trade: In thor, next to Goe, 'ris certainly the beft Poft they are pofieds'd of in all the Eaft.
At Musker they have a ftrong Fort and Caftle, tho' no grear Trade ; they are nor fo much Merchants, as proud domineering Mafters at this place: For here they keep all in the moft fervile Awe and Subjection abour them, and give out their Paffes and Licenfes for the going up and down of other Ships.
As Diul, ncar the Mouch of the River Indus, and ar Diu, in Gaiurat, where they bave a very ftrong Caftle.

Demon is entirely inhabited by them; and here they are formified in a fubttantial Caftle, and have, by Report, a Terfitory containing a hundred Villages taken in within their Lordmip.
Scrrc de Bazion, which lies a lirtle South from Damen, and borders upon the Decanecs, this they are poffcf'd of; and berween this place and chaul, they bave three Porss, Gazien, Bande, and Mcia.

Chaul is a large City, with a Caftle, where they are well fared Debul has a Factory, bur not any Fort.

Gor is their Indicn Merropolis, the Scar of the Vice-Roy, and all the Gallantry of the Nation, and the general Rendezrous of all their Forces, both for Land and Sea Service. This place has a large flare of Trade too: In fhorit, here are che ftrongen Sinews that fupport and hold rogether the parts of their Eaftern Empirc, which were they cut, the mighry Body wou'd quickly fall and drop all to pieces.
Onor has a fmall Fort; Barcelor a Caftle; and here they, trade for Pepper; Ginger, "and Ceveral 'forts" of Drugs.
Mangrlor and Cananor, both Atrentifined with Caftles, and affording the fame Trade as the former.
They are quite thruft our from Calecut; and the Semc- Upon shi rine is trying to do the like at Crangelor, where they have Madaber a Fort notwithifanding.
Cochin is a place of confiderable advantage to them; the City it felf is ftrong, and the Caftelike ir: it cnjoys a Swect Air, and has a pleafant Sirvation by the Sca-dide, with a very convenient River for Ships to ride in.

Coulan, Quilcon, Tuccatra, all of rhicm defended with good Caftes, and moftly filld up by the Portigusen, el ther Laicty or Clergy: For Sr. Lanicnce, a Village belonging to one of them; is cntircly a NeA of Friars and Jcfuits.

We follow them next off from the Continent, bur hat quickly ftep thithar back again.
Miner, betwixt Cape Comorin, and Funtode Golla, is a Town wholly theirs: So alfo is Colombo, and feveralother places upon thar Iland. They are working themfelucs Upon theie in apace here; and if they hold on as they begin, the King of Cegion will, in time, come to call him of Porrugal Sofercign. Here they have a vaim Tride för Cinamoñ and Drags.

We now turn the Corner of Cape Comorin, and go ip the other fide of tlic Continent.

At Nrgapaten they have a Factory; bur Metinfore, (or Sc. Thomes) 2 Walled City is their own
Up towards the Ganges, they have fevcral fmall- Refi- Upon the, dencies, good Factories in fome places, and crery-whicre coremart fome Advantages or other, that make ir worth their while to Jetrle there.
In the Kingdom of Bengela they asc poffefs of a good Town.

In Pegu they have a Factory; and fo likewife in Anrican, and upon the River of Marzabma,
At Junjulco they have a grear Factory, from whence they lade vaft Quantitics of Tin for the draluthir Coaft.

Ar Malacia they are Mafters of City and Caftie, which are both very ftrong; and in being fo, they are Mafters Tpon the of the beft part of the Trade of all thore adjoyning continnt of Countries: For Malacia has rery few Cities (if any) that the Gancon can pretend to Rival her all thereabours, for the Soícreignty of Trade. But here the King of actes is codeavouring to toor them our; who if he fucceeds; purs a Pcriod to all the Pertugel Greatrics on this fide the Ganges.

At Macac, an Illand on the Coaft of Ching, they hare Coaftoferind a City with a Caftle, and, as the Report gocs, a very and Jefan. grear Trade with the Chinefe there.
In Frpan they have tio Fort nor Caftre, bir only a Faj ctory, that Prince being fo wife as to keep them off at Anms length, and not fuffer them to rake any manner of hold upon him.

And this is the Draught our Captain has given its of the Portugucre Acquifitions in the Eaftcrn World:

for the Court.

BEing come alhoar ac Surrat, and having repos' there fome litule time, after my long and redious Voyage, I began my Journey towards the Court of the Great Mog \(u\) I.
The Country that lies between Surat and Bramport, as far as it fell within the reach of my Oblervarion, is for the moft part poor and barren; the Towns and Villages builr of Mud, and orher bafe. Materials, and hardly a convenient Houre upon the Road for a Traveller to lodge in There appcar'd very lirtle of the Pomp and Pleafure of Indir, or of irs Riches and Fruiffulnc\{s,rhis way thar I went tho" ocher Reads might poffibly difcover more. At a certain Village call'd Batherport, two Mile 信保 of Brampors, is their grear Store-houfe of Ordnance; I faw abundance ofi Brafs Pieces there, of the Indian-make, which feems to be very irregular, thofe Guns being for the moft part as much too thort, as the Bore of them (in proportion) istoo wide.
Betwecn this and Bramport, I was met by the Cutwall dations the (or Marthal) with a good Atrendance, and fo conducted to the Lodging prepard for me. But my Aparument was fo mean and fcandalous, that. I choferacher to lodge in my 1 cat, than rake up with it ; it confifted of four little Divifions, not fo much like Chambers as Ovens, being exactly of that form, and a very frall matrer bigger. This forry Trearmenr obliged me to fend the Curwall word, That I would depart the Town out of hand, fince I was entertain'd no better: But he defird me to fubmit to it, ar leaft for that one Nighs, and exprefled fo much an willingnces thar I thould go away in a difcontens, that I yielded to ftay there.

But there was a more powerful Realon to induce my fay, than all the Curwall's Perfwafions, and that was a kind of necefiry I lay under of making a Vifit ro Sultan Peruf: (theKing's Second Son), who refided as Bramport, ar thar time. Here he lives almoft in the fame Royal Pomp that his Father does; \(=\) vaft Crowd of Nobles, and a mighty Anmy is ever abour him; and Can Cama, the Gencraliffimo of, the Mogul's Forces, manages all Affairs under him.

1 could nor avoid waiting upon this Grear Perfon, fince o hasc paft him by, would have been incerpretcd a very heinous Contempt of his Digniry, and an Affons to the and the \(\mathrm{m}: \mathrm{n}\) - fire a Vifir ; and tho that is but a civiller way of defring Recervis a Prefent in thele Countrics, where no Prince is ever adReception drofs'd withour Complemenes of this narure; yer his Invitation added ftrengrh to the Obligation I lay under upon ocher Acsounts.So I wenero his Palace, taking with me fuch a Prefent as I thought mighr be grateful to him. I was recciv'd by the Cutwall ar the Gare of the outward Court, in which were a hundred Genclemen on Horfeback, arin'd, and making a lane, through which I was to pals. The Prince himfelf fate mounted up in a round Gallery, in the inncr Court, with a Royal Canopy erected orer him, and as rich Carpets fpread before him. As I drew near him, an Cfficer came and rold me, I muft pull off my Har, and touch the Ground with my bare Head; but that fort of Ceremuny, tho' it might become his own Courtiers and Domefticks well enough, yet I (who was none of that number) uy on the Privilege of my Character made told to refufe it. But coming within the Rails, to the Steps of his Throne, I did him there that Reverence that I judged agrecable; in return to which he bowed his Body.

All the Grandees ftood on borh fides of him, in the moft bimble pofture imaginable, with their Hands folded before them, as if they had been ried: And upon the Afcent was plac'd his Secretary, whole Bufinefs there, was to gise him, in the concileft Terms, an Account of whar was fpoken or difioursd.

The Crowd of the Nobles and Autendants was fo grear that I was willing to have gone up the Stcps, and ftood fomerhing nearer him ; but the Prince told me, Thac coruld not be granred; and cyen the Great Tark himfelf, if the werechere, Mhou'd nor be allowed to do it. Then I defired the Liberty of a Chair; but that cou'd nor be admitted neither; for his Highnels alfured me, Thar no Man, of how grear Quality or Character foever, did ever ior in, that place, but himfelf only : Yer as a more than ordinary Favour, I was permitted ro eafe my felf, by leaning upon onc of the Pillars thar fupported his Canopy. Upon the wholc, I muft fay, the Prince carried ir to me in a manner fufficiently ccurtcous and obliging.
The State and Pride of thefe Indian Princes is intolerable, and they will hardly upon any account whatfoever, abarc the leaft Punctilio of Ceremony and Refpect; but believe I had as many, or more Conceffions. made me, than any of my Character, and the Prince condefcended 0 lower Terms in treating with me, than the ftrict and nice Rules he nfually oblerves, do allow of. He did the main Bufinefs I waited on him for, at the firft Word, amp \(x\) without the leaft fruple or hefitation; the ferting of a broqut Eactory there in Bramport. Hegave order for the Fiman co be prefently drawn up; which was to Auchorize the Merchants both to come, and to refide there.

The Prefents I made him, he tonk very kindly ; and I had now gotten fo much of his Favotut, thar I was invired to a free and familiar Converfation wirh him, in a more retired place. At toar Pablick Audience, and before fo grear an Appearanct \({ }^{6}\) ree was obliged to confult his Grearnefs, and carry it with inore ftare and diftance ; bur he would wirhdraw into anocher Room, where all charitiffneis fhould be laid afide, and I fhould have the Liberty (as he told me) of coming up to him.
But an odd Accident deprived me of this Honcur: For a part of my Prefent to him, being a Cafe of Bortes filld with rich Cordial Waters, the Prince (who was going into the withdrawing Rocm) (upp'd fo liberally of his Bottics by the way, that he became wholly unfit for Company at that time. "Twas a fudden turn, and the Strong-Waters were prefently gor up into his Highnef's Head; but there they were. and thar to fuch purpofe that he was forc'd to fend an Officer to excufe his not cal ling for me now, and to defire my Company fome other cime.
Having finin'd all that required my ftay and prefence ar.Bramport, I proceeded in my Journey rowards the Court. By the way travelling through the Couniry of * Raja Remm, I had a profpect of the Ruines of the ancient and famous Ciry of Gurchito. As the Prince himfelf Fmomish is gencrally reckon'd the true Succeffor of Porus, whom ton of it Alexinder the Grear conquacrd, fo this City is eftecm'd indies mos oo have been one of Poru's Royal. Seats; tho' the Old the calkia Delly thar lies more Northward, is believ'd to have been mentionia the Capiral Ciry of the ancientindian Empire. Amongft councof the Ruines of Gurchico, are to be feen the tatter'd Carkaf- ciry tren fes of at leaft a hundred Temples, all built of fair carved Sone, a vaft number of Hourcs, Towers, Arches, and Pillars; of all which, devouring Time and Wars have only left fo much, as is fufficient to make a Spectaror gucis whar the place was formerly, and'to lead him into Come pleafant Thoughts of the Glory and State of old Porus's Kingdom.
Indeed, the Moguls themfelves do contribute as much ro the defacing and fpoiling chefe Noble Remains of Ane riquity as Age ir felf, and orher Accidents bave done. The'y take careto have all the Inhabitants encirely remov'd from them, and frictly forbid all manner of Reparation, and careful Endeavours of Builders, or any others. to preCerve the decaying Strength and Beaury of thofe Buildings. The Realon of which is very hard to be imagin'd, unless it be, that they would have nothing appear grear in the whole Empire, but what they themfelics are the Authors and Founders of; and are wiliing the World thould believe India had no degrees of Splendor and Bcauty to pretend to, but what ir has deriied from their Fz mily, fince they became the Mafters of ir. Tho if this be their Defign, they are like to come thore of ir, unlefs chey can bury vaft Rocks and Mountains (with tlic Ruines of Cities and Caftes upon them) under ground; unlefs /cefs. And twas not long after before I had occafion to ad they can fink thofe mighry Pillars (whofe Foundations are fo ftrong and deep below) quite down to the Center, or let them plunge into the great. Abyff. For as long as any of thefe things are above ground, all People that have Eyes, will fee what the old India was, and by feeing thofe remaining Monuments of ir, will be perfwaded that wharfoever this Tattar Family may have done rowards the adorning of her, they have robb'd her of betrer Ornaments than they have given her; and with all the Advanages of their: new and-more modifh Buildings, haveleff her far bencath the pitch of her own primitive Magnificence.

From hence I proceeded in my Journcy for Afmerc, where the Courr was at that time; and having refted fome time in the Lodgings provided for me, went to anive at bisemerrion fo like that of my waiting upon the Prince, the Mogul ment by the himfelf fitting in the fame manner, and his Nobles and Atrendants in the fame poftures about him, that is does not need any particular Defcription. It is fufficient to fay that there, is a lively reprefentation of a Theater when this Monarch firs in State upon all publick Occafions. Himfelf and his grear Men ftanding orderly about him upon the Afcents of his Gallery (rais'd to a confiderable height) appear like the Actors on a Srage, whilft allthe wondering croud below in the Pit are employing the urmoft fuength of Eyes and Ears, to fee and hear what paffes above. When I came into che prefence, and had made my feveral Reverences to him, he was plas'd to privent my dull Interpreter and begin himfelf, bidding me hearrily welcome; welcome to him who was the Friend and Brother of my Manter the King of England. He curiouny viewed his Majefties Letters, my own Commiffion as Embaffadour, and the Prefents I broughr him in my King's Name. And becaufe I had beenill a confiderablepart of the Journcy, very kindly offerd me the Carc find Affiftance of his own Phyficians, and gave me a very great charge to look nicely to the preferyation of my Health while I was in his Country ; for which purpofe he advis'd mestid keep my Lodgings rill I had perfectly recover'd my ficngth; and if in the mean cime I wanted any thing neceffary to iny eafe and refrefhment, to fend frecly to him, whom I thould always find ready to grant my Defires. If the Oblervations of the Europeans chereprefone were juft and impartial, I was receiv'd by him with more Expreffions of Grace and Good Will than any Embaffadour had becn before I had the Liberry granted of ufing the Cuftoms of my own Country, and was nor oblig'd to that very fervilc adoration, that knecling and knocking of the Ground with the Head, that the Turk and Perfinan Embaffadours can never be admitted into his Prefence withour. 'Twas allow'd me to pay my refpets to him in the fame mannerchat I did to my own Prince, and provided I obferred thofe Ceremonies exactly, he would not impole thofe of hisown Court and Country rpon me.
One particular of his Majefties Prelenr to this Prince bcing a fine Coach (a thing wholly new, and confequently to be prefumed pleafing to him) he was fo taken with ir, thar he got the fame Nighe into is, and made fome of my Men draw him abour the Court. And his Englif Coach-man has a rare place on't, and will in all probability quickly get a very grear Eftatc, fince, bcfides a noble Salary which is allowed him, he feldom drives the Mogul any where, but he has a Prefent to the value of fiveorten Pounds.
The King's chird Son Sulcan Curoon having the Supreme sadsur gors Command of all things at Surat, the place of our principal rofer sutan Reffderce and T nolec suican Refidence and Trade, I was for that Reafon (as well as Crwon, and his Relation his Relation to the King) oblig'd ro make him a formal vifit. He is the King's favourite Son, and a moft violent Enemy to all Chrittians; on which Account (fearing fome affront) I firft fent word of my defign. of coming to wait on him when he was pieas'd to reccive my Vifit. Bur the Prince prov'd much more courteous and complaifant than the Character of his Temper allow'd me to expect; he recurn'd me a promife of good Entertainment, and was far genteeler and civiler than he had promis'd to be. I deliverd him a Prefent (not as from his Majefty, who was not then acquainted. with his Tirle as Lord of Surct, a thing larcly confer'd upon him) but as the Refpect of our Englif. Merchants, who did by me commend themielves to his Favour and Protection. And as he receiv'd all in very good part, fo be promis'd the full and effectual Redrefs of all Grierances ar Surat, and to give anySecurity that could be defired for the Quict and Defence of our Factory there. This was as much as could be crav'd as his Hands, and having obrained this, I ieft him with no fmall Satisfaction ar my Happy Suc:
drefs the King himfelf (a fecond time) abour thefe Affairs.

Our Englijh feared ar Amindanar had been horribly in. His recoon jur'd by the Governour there both in their Perfons and Aldicnce, of Goods; having been imprifon'd, fin'd, and ftrangely thitmanserorexacted upon every way. Thefe corrupr Officers had gor ren for the 2 trick of demanding new Cuftoms at every Town as Erglifitat our Goods pals'd along to the Port. contrary to all the meafures of Juftice and the eftablin'd Rules of Trade: Bur this Burden wastaken off effectrally ar my firt Complaiar; I think the Rafcals efcaped with their Lives, bur they were itrictly commanded to do Juftice, and make reftimution to a Farthing of all that they had fo illegally extorted from the Merchants. And to make all this as fure as mighr be, there were two Firmans drawn up, in which was granted a complear Releafe from all thofe ncw Cuftoms, all Money ci Goods taken upon thar account order'd ro be reftor'd, and a Confirmacion'of all the Favours and Pr.vileges formerly vouchfafed to our Merchanrs and Factors. Bur'tis to be obferved I never wene to Courr but I carricd fome Prefent or orher, for the King always expects in, and that from every Body thar comes abour Bufinefs; be it crer fo fmall he accepts ir, cven as low as the value of a fingle Rupic, and from many Pcople it does not come to much more; fo that confidering this, it fcems to be racher a picce of ftare, than any thing of the effect of an Avaritious Temper. 'Tis hard tofuppofe a Monarch as rich as all this noble part of the World can make him, that is able to pave his way with Gold :and Precious Srones, and build him Houfes almoft with the fame coftly Materials; 'ris hard to imagine him fo fordidly Corcrous, as to demand a Rupie of an Inferiour or a Poor Subject, meerly for the lucre of the Money. And yet unlefs a Man complies with this Cuftom there's nothing to be done, and his Caufe tho' ever. Io juft muft be uhered in with fome acknowledgment of this nature, or never come before the King, for which Realon it may miore probably be a Defign of Policy than any bafe Intent to fquecze his Subjects, and rake away their Money from them, ćpecially the poor ones, who obferve the fame Law in their proportion with the reft.
What I prefented his Majefty withal upon thefe Occafions, had generally the good Fortune to be very well liked, tho often of no great value; and the King took as much careto make thoferthat were about him fenfible ric Magurs of ir, by feveral Mechods in which he exprefs'd his kind retpect osit Refenments. He commonly made me itand nearer to Tormas ioce. him, and in a more elevared place than the reft of the Courtiers; and for this I necded not to wait his own Mo tion, or the Ceremony of asking leave, bur come directly to the place appointed for me, doing all the ftared Keverences by the way. Thus grear and particular was his Refpect to my Soveraign Lord and Malter, whom he had no other way to Complimene fo immediately and directly, as by his Civilitics to my felf who bad the Ho nour to reprifen his Perfon tbere. Bur yer all this while the main defign of my Embafy was nor accomplinh'd norin any good degree of forwardnefs. The King himfelf waskind, bur his Courticrs and Minifters of Stare weie fome of them envious, ill naturd, and Men of inrxiegue. There was wanting jer a more Solemn, Formal and Auchentick Confirmation of the Agreemens, than that by common Firmans, which were granted upon cvery trifling occafion, and till this was done, my Endeavoursarthis Court came fort of their mof defired Succefs. And fome formidable Enemics ftood in my way while I atrempred the gaining of this. The Prince ('Sui ten Caromn) was not my Cordial Friend, noewithtanding all the Carels thar had pals'd becwirt us, and the Civil Offices he had lately done me. Whether 'twas his barred to the Chriftian Name in General; or any particular averfion for the Englifh Nation or my felf, I am not certain, but an Obfacle he was in my way, and a confiderable, tho' a fly and fecrer onc.
But there was another whole Power was more, to be dreaded than his, tho he was the Kings'Son and his Dae His Dificulling roo; this was Afaph Can, the Brother of Normabel, miesendourt, the Mogul's moft beloved Wife. This Woman was fo with remasmoch Miftrefs of bis Heart, that the ruld both him and kibl the great Empire cven as the pleas'd her felf: She could command what Lives or Fortunes the would places of Truft iHonour, and Preferments were ar her difpofe. To procure her Favour was the lureft way for a Man ro rife to any heighth of Dignity or Glory thar he defired; for her Good-Will once gotren, the King's was certain and infallible, be being a perfect llave ro her, and not able to deny her any thing thar the ask,'d. This Brocher of hers was rais'd'by her, from a bale and fordid Condirion; to the fublimeft Poas in the Empire, made (of an ordinary mean Fellow) a Prince, and the greatelt of Princes. alour the King, and which is more his Friend and moft intimate Counfullor. Whatever Defigns this. Man had to carry on, itwas only neculful fur him to engage his Sifter on hislide; her Charms could make his way into the Kings Hearc and Sceriss, and difpole the yielding Monarch to a Compliante, tho' Reafon and Intereft leem'd to ftand in the way. And as thefe Perfons that are thus fuddenly lified upuron the. Wings of Forrune to fo valt a heighr ai one their own natural lencl, are moft apr to forget themiflies. and take upon them to controul and go ern others, fo was this ilfapl Can; he prefum'd tronely yron his g"car Alliance, ke up for a Concrouler in the Cours, and pretended to have his Hand in the difpofmes and ordering all Affairs thar pafsd. But it does not aiways happen that thefe People have rheir Wills, and carry all incefitably before them: A managed Prince fometimes comes to bimfelf and rakes the Reins into his ownthands, in fite of all the Ares and Tricks of his craft, Governours. The \(M\) gul did fo in the Bufinefs I amnow going to rclatc; \(\int S\). \(p\), Ccir could not keep him in order, and Normalles Charnis were then our of fighr. I had all aiong trufted this Man with my Affairs, he being fo nearto, and in great abour the king, anid being whol ly gnorans of his Good Temper and Virtues, I thought I mighe co is fecurcly. But by degrees If found I was left in the dark, my Bufincfs wasdelay'd and pur of, and noshing bur sood Words and fair Promifes came. For which Reafon I refolved to so to the King, and enlighten The Embrfi. my felf by a plain and frec Difcourfe with him, which don gas to Honcur whas always pernited me without refiraine, and min king to the Faticurite himielf could not depriveme of it. When I came I was admirted my felf, bur' my Inrerpreter was cxcluded by the Incriegue of ifapis Cen, who fear'd he would interpiet more than ftood with his Intereft for the King to underftand. Bat this Plor did net take; and the King himfelf was the Confufion of it, by beginning to cnrerinto a Difcourfe with me; for I was not able to anfwer any of his Queltions, and by a Friend thereby fignified as much to his Majefty, adding alfo that my Interfecter was, for I knew not what Reafons, denied the Literry of coming in. Upon this he being calld in, I commanded him to tell the King I. defired to โpeak to him, which he willingly granted; but prefenty the oppolite Faction began to croud fo clole abour the. Throne thatall fight and hearing was taken away, and onctof them was fo civil asto pull my 'merepreter away by force. But I made him focak fo loud to the King that all their maticious Endeavours could not prevent bis hearing, and commanding way to be made forme to my accuftomed phace within ahe Rails. Thus Ifteod on one fide of my Interpreter while sifiph, cail plane:d himfeif on the other, on purpect to overawe him, or brite him into Silence, or a wrong and defentive Soory of the Matters he was to rerrefent: This was cuidene by his Motions of winking and josging, which I difcern'd well enough, tho' the buke Minifter perhafs thonghe I had nor. In a word I deli:crid my full mind to the King, and defird to be ar fome certainty atour the refule of all my Endeavours and E.rrendance at his Court. Cur Nation (I told him) could nor ferde fectrely in his Counrry upon the Foundatien lid at prefunt, and unlefs fomething furer and firmer were done, that might infallibly pecrent all Diforders for the future, our Endeavours to keep up a Trade there would be to no purpore. I added rhar I forbore filling his Majeftics Ears with Complaines ( how juftly foever I might do it) fince I hoped his Royal Orders given our for that purpofe would take away all caufe of uncafinefs and difturbance for the time to ceme.

anfwer for himfelf. Now all the Company was in a confternation; ASpab Can ftood by palc and rrembling, and the bett Courtiers in the Prefence did litulebetter. When the Prince came the King reprov'd him in fmart and bit ter Tcrms, and would hardly give him leave to fpeak in his own Defence. Bur as his Hear went off, I made him fenfible of the miftake; that the Prince was not accus'd nor his Name mentiond upon any fuch difhonourable account. And asthe Prince had offerd me a Firman be fore, fo I did him the Juftice to acknowledge is to his Father, tho' ar thefame time 'rwas fuch a one as the Conditions of it render'd wholly infignificant; which alfo I was oblig'd to tell for my own defence from blame and cenfurc. The matter carried on rhus far, brought us into 2 very hot difpute; \(A f a p /\), and Mocrebchan (now both come to again, and able to (peak after the late Fright) took the Prince's parr, run down the Eng \(/ i j\) h, argued for the Portugucic, and labour'd to prevent my Bufinefs from coming to a Head. The fojuits and all the Portugueze Faction putit, and all at onceicndeavour'd to gain the King from me. Bur as my contempt of thofe Men was too great to allow me to.undertake any particular difpure with them; fo my main care was to keep the King on my fide, and poffers him with an opinion of the Juftice and Rcafonableness of what I propos'd. And in this point Ifucceeded fo well, thar all the reft were filcnc'd, and I had free Scope and Liberty granted me to make my Propofals; the Sum of which was this, that for the more perfect fecuring of Trade, Peace and all Offices of Friendmip berwecn the Subjects of the Grent Mogul and the King of Englend, his Majcity would pleafe to order chree Firmans to be drawn up, one of which hould be fign'd by himfelf, the other by the Prince, and a third by my folf in the Name of my King.

In order to this all my Demands were to be prefented theEmbia in Writing, to be perus'd by the King and his Council; cour gho which if they were approv'd of, the Firmans were to be his poiti made according to the Tenour of thete with all difparch; if nor, there was a complear Anfwer gnen, and we knew what we had to deperdupon. Thus this Bufinefs ended favourably in pirc of \(\hat{n}\) that would have conforinded and perplexed is; the King and the Prince both engaged themfelves to Scal, if they found my Tcrms fair and reafonable, and I did the like on the behalf of my Royal Mafter; and now the Affembly broke up. I can'r omir taking notice of the King's mighty care and concern abourthe Precents that his Majefty of England would fend him upon this frict and folemn renewal of the League berwixt chem. Methoughts is look'd a little mean and odd in fo grear a Monarch to rrouble himfelf abour fuch rrifling things; but the Cuftom has obtain'd, and do it they will in (pite of all theirgreantels that commands the contraty. To fend him Gold or Jewels, or any rarities of that kind, which his own Councry afforded in fuch Plenty, and fupplicd the reft of the World withal, this I told him would be to no purpofe; bur whatever things our Conatry yielded that were rare and cxcellent, and were ftrangers to his, with all fich things he mighr be fure our King would take care to gratify his Majefties Fancy. And rodo him Juftice he was not folicitous ar all abourany of thole rich things mencioned, bur was very carnct to have a breed of Eng!!in Horles; and if I would procure him a Prefent of thofe Creatures, it would bo the grearect Picafure I could do him. Now the difficulty of tranfportation was confiderable upon the account of the length of the Voyage, and 'rwas ten to one whecher the Horfes came alive to India or no, at leaft in any tolerable cafe, and fit for the ufe of fo great a Prince; but all thofe Objections were nothing to him, whofe Fancy was ftrongly fer this way; the Horfes munt be fent for, and if they came lean and poor, he faid he would take care to far them again.
Afrer this I found by fome Intelligetree that the Prince prit. applied himfelf with great diligence to the work of The Ping ruining our Affairs at Court. He pretended to demon- argues mim trate to the King that we were a Burden and a Detriment oo the Country in comparifon with the Porturucze; that Entigh their Bufincts amounted to panty more than ours, and 1. D. \(_{16} 6\). befides broughr his Majetty Pearis and Jewels, whereas we never prefented him but with Pedlary Ware, Knives Swords and Cloth, and other Toys of little valuc. I concluded by this that the effects of the late Difpure were nighly difobliging to him, and he took himiclf to be affroned by whar had done, tho' 'twas moft evident that 'twas all a miftake on the King's parr, and there was no defign in the leaft of expofing him to his Fathers difpleafure ar that time. This Afapb Can was fenfible of, and confels'd to me afterwards thar both the Prince and himfelf had all imaginable Reafon to affert and juftify my fincere Intentions in that matter; but they both know

Wow in diffemble, and I found by their Actions that the believ'd me guilty, tho': by Words they declar'd me In nocent.
Bur now there was fome profpect of the Removal of his Adveriary of our Nation- (the Prince I mean) away from the King's Ear and Councils; tho perhaps our Circumftanecs would have been little mended by it upion orher accounts; for tho" he was out of the way of doing mifchief at Court, yer he was in the way of doing ir fomewhere clif, and would be abfolute and above controul wherecer he was; and as no Complaints would Ggnific any thing againft him while he was exerting his Power and Sovcraienty any way to our prejudice; to it would be imponfile cerer to procure any Satisfaction for Wrongs he fiould do archar diftance.
The Bufiness decign'd for him wasthe command of the Army empioy'd in the Decnn Wars, in which he was to fucced his cider Brother Sultan Pcrit/a who was now to becealld from that Port. The King had confulted the Bromens and the Religious Men in rbis Affair, more than his Council and the Military Officers thar were capabic of giving him better Adrice.
It was directiy, contrary to all their Sence and Norions, that Suitan Caront fhould have the Supreme Command derolved upon him; for all the Souldiers hated him for his batharows tyrannical Humour, and the \(\mathrm{Ge}-\) nerals themfelyes refusd to ftay, and declard they would lay downtheir Arms if he came amonght them. But the Council of the Eloly Nen prevail'd, and the Prince muft or tho' all the Army runs away at his arrival; 'tis probable chat thofe Wife Men had newn the King fome lucky Prefages of Victory and Succefs under his managemens, cither the Sacrifices had yielded happy Tokens to thefe curious Olfervers of them, or they had found in our in che Scheme of his Nativity. 'Twas thoughr by all that Sultan Peruife would refene his coming fo high an affront thathe would fer himfelf to revenge it; and that if the two Broch! s happened to meer, there would be fome Blood 2 cd on both fides before they parred gin.
But the King made bur a Jet of all this; ler them fight ic The King in our ( (ayshe) and cond the quarrel between themfelves as diffent wich of well as they can, be tha: gers the Victory, and proves himsors gers the felf the beft Man of the two, thall carry on the War againft the Decences, and the other fhall come home.
Bur this may be of worfe confequence to his Sate than he fecms now to be aware of, and thould his Sons ( \(K\) violently enrag'd againft each other as they are) involye the Councry in a Cinil War, the old Prince may have tincenough to repent his calinets and indiferecion, and may with his dffair had been more prudently conducted.
Our Bufnefs at Barod: had about this time a favourable turn given to it, by the kind and difereer management of Mithoict Cum, a Perfon of the higheet rank in the Empirc. He is a Man belored of his Prince, greatly routed cin in b: him, and lecms one of the main ftays and props of memp ofichis Government. His good Qualities deferve all the beis cun. Honcurs and Prefermenes that have been heap'd upon him, and 'tis hard to find in all this Court where the King's Farours could havebcen more worthily plac'd than here. The Prince Sultan Caroon bas no Kindnel's for him; bur as that's one Argument of his being an honeft and good natr'dMan; fo on the other fide he neither fears norcares for Prince, and that's as good a Proof of his Courage and Rcfolurion. This Perfon made (as my finft requeft ur Firman for Earcols as effectual as could be defir'd The Englifb thercin had a Houfe granted them juft by the Governour's, by which means they were fix'd more out of the way of violence and treachcrous ufage, and nearer their Remedy in cafe of any Diforder. But there were all poffible Precautions againft any thing of that natarelikcwife, and fevere Penalties to be inflicted upon thofe that hould offer any Difturbance by Sea or Land. All the Cuftoms were frecly. xcmitted; and they might buy, fell or tranfportany Commoditics at pleafure, without the lealt moleftation from any Man. Thefe Privileges the Prince would never have granted, bur now they wcre procur'd wirhout his Favour, and fo would (under the Protection of this grear Man ) be continued withour the fame. For the King who knew and lov'd his Loyalry and other Verrues, rewarded his Merit with a flarge and almoft an abfolute Power in the Country, to do and difpofe things as he faw fit; fo that he continuing our Friend (and therés no likelyhood of his lofing the Mcgul's Favour) our Trade may chriveconfiderably, and we may be far more eafie than ever.

Baroch will now be a fafe retrear to us from the Injuries and Opprefions of the Prince, and by his remifion of the Cuftomsat leaft 1500 pound per. An, will befaved, befides all the loffes confequent upon farches into our Goods and other cheating methods practis'd by the common Officers; and laftly, our Trade and Privileges will nor now ftand apon fo uncertain and precarious aFoun dation as they muft while we depend folely apon chePrince, where upon every change of Humour, or Bribe, or Story of \(a\) fawning corrupt Courtier, our Intereft was thaken, and a building erected with no little coft and pains, every moment in danger of tumbling to the Ground.

By the way this Perfon made one difcovery to me; which ferves as well to cvince the Integrity and Generofity of his own temper, as to fhew the avarice and ill management of the Officers in all the trading Towns. The Grear Mogul himfelf demands nor cakes no Cuftoms, neither is there any that way that comes into his Trealury. 'Tis the Governours do all this for their own private Advantage, they impofe what Duties they picale, and rigorouny cxact (what they think fit to demand) of all Foreigners they ha' so do with. And if the mifchief ftope here-and went no farther it were yet fomething tollerable; but are there is no bounds ot their Extortion and Coveroufnefs, to there is no cad of their racking and preying upon Strangers; they ask what they will, and take what they ask, and tis well if they don't rake more in to the Bargain: And in all thele cales 'ris hard for a Manto come by a Remedy, nay, 'ris many times more chargeable and troublefome than the Difeafe it felf; it muft be only (if it be ar all) by making ones own complaint in Peroon to the King, for there's no trufting any of the greai Men abour him to manage the Caufe or deliver the Sence of it to him, fince 'ris infallibly certain that they'll ncyer let him underftand the Truth of is. They always obferve thefe two Rules in difcourfing of any matters of this nature to the King ; either to fpeak what pleafes themfelves, and makes for the Intereft of their own Faction, or elfe whar they know will be agrecable to him and futes his Fancy and Humour, be it true or falfe. How unhappy (in this Refpect) is the Condicion of a mighty Monarch, who (while the World bows before him, and Crowns and Scepters are laid ar his Fect ) is himself the mott govern'd thing of all, and has his Mind and Sences under the managemenr of ochers. The intriguing Courtiers that furround /him keep guard upon his Underftanding; meafure our all his Knowledge to him, and thape and mould the Objects of it into what form they think beft. Truth and Falfhood both appear in the Colours they are pleas'd to drefs them upin; and the Profpect of all Objects abour him is prefented by their Glaffes, which make the Appearance fuch as ferves their turn. The cafic Prince ( given up to his Pleafures) examincs noching, bur takes all upon truft; all Cares and Troubles are cxcluded from his Happy Retirements; he glutshimfelf with the Joys of his own Palace, and lives trick'd and impos'd upou b; the flatrering Courriers all'his Days.
To finith all the Bunness I had to do in India, I wanted but fuch another Difparch for orher places, as I had now for Baroch, by the Civility of atalober Car.

Burbefides this Perfon, the King bad the bappinefs of another very Grear and Loval Subject; as well as we our Ausyn felves of a good and obliging Friend; and truly both thefe were fo fcarce in India at my being there (Imean Men of real Honour and Generoficy, uprighe and difinterefted in cheir Actions, fuch as dared to be troly zcalous for their Prince, and juft and kind to Surangers) that all we find of them may without any great trouble be mention'd.

This was the Vicc-roy of Patan; be gave me a large the civility. accounr of the Srate of the Court and Kingdom; the In- of the viceterefts, Characters, and Pretentions of the feveral Gran- to the Ema. deesthat were concern'd in the Government. He did not baffadour. fpare the Vices of the Courtiers, burmadekcenReflections upon them all; giving me all the Cautions in the World about ftanding upon my guard, and feeing and hearing with my own Eyes and Ears (as far as was poffible) while I taid in this Court. Hefpokewith grear Reverence and Piety of our Saviour Jefas Chrift, commending his Laws and Doctrine, and expreffing a high value for both. Ifound no Manin Indie capable of giving to agreeable an Entertainment as he, in pleafant and profitable Difcourfe; for he perfectly well knew the Laws and Cuftoms of the Country, the Humours and Tempers of all People; and had gonc through the Reigns of three Princes with glory, having been Favourite to every one of them. He had veryofreninvited me to his Houfe, and ar faft his morechan ordinaty importunities brought me to fee him; and there I may fay 1 had large Proofs how Noble, Hópitable and Courteous a Perfon my Hoft was. I could nor defend my felf from a liberal Prefent thar he would needs makeme and fies rather tecaufe twas the Product of his. own Government, in which a great deal of it is made. Ir him a Picture which fome Body had told him, I had by was a parcel of the purect loaf-Sugar, each of which icraves weighid abour; 501 . and the whole Cargo confifted of a hundred fuch.

A rredy covcrous Perion mighr have made forne Profit of the Converlation of this Gencrous; Open-hearted Man ; Decency wou'd nor allow my Acceprance of what elfe he wou'd have given me; but he refolv'd to be reveng'd another way, and feid a fir Perion inro Englend to Complement, and carry his Refpects to my King. The place where he receiv'd and cntextain'd me, was not his own Heufe (which he did not think pompous enough for the occalion), but one of the King's Mohols, which he had borrowed for that purpofe, as he might by his Grear Intercet with his Prince, any Palace in the Kingdom. I had not his Company ar Dinner, any farther than juft to eat Bread and Sale together, in Token of a firm Union and Friendifip. He and his Grear Men fat ar onc Carper, and I and my Company asanother; for we being Chriftians, and they Manbemerans, their Religious Cuftoms oblige them to this fort of feparation.

This Perfon, befides his Government of Patan (where he was Vice-Roy) was Lord of four Cities in Bengele: and for all regether, be gare the King eleven Leckics of Rupics, all the Profirs cife being encirely his own, in the Difpoial of which he had an Abfolure Royal Aurhority, as indecd in moft Cafes all over his Governmenc. Befides this, he had a Penfion of a thoufand Rupies a Day, and fome finaller Governments and Places upand down in the Country: All which, how grear foeper ir may fecm, ho affir'd me, that there were a great number that had donble his Revennes, and above twenny that had the fame.

The Entaf fador tho nourd with the Moguris prefently calld fort, and reachd it out to \(A\) fand, Can to defiver is me. And becaule'tis the Cuftom ar the receiving any of there Prefents, for the Parry to kneel down and knock the Ground with his Head, (from which fort of Reverences I had obtain'd Leave at firft to be excus'd) he order'd that Minifter nor to demand any thing of thar nature from me; which yct his ill Nature would hare done, and fome of the other Courtiers call'd aloud upon me to perform the accuftrm'd Ceremonies; bur the King himelf interpos'd, and faid pofitively, they foould nor be urged upon me. The Giff was nor worth above 301 . in all, and yct 'rwas gue times betrer than.whar he commonly gives to his Nobles, when he would make any of them fenfible of his greatedt Eftecm and Good Will. That beftowed on me was fer in a Gold Frame, had a Chain of the fame to come about my Neck, and was beantificd with fome fmall Rearl.
Painting is an Art in which this Prince is mightily delighred; he loves to fec a corious Piece, and will difcourfe of it with Skill and Judgmenr. And'ris cerain, that his Good Painown Country can, and docs, fusnifh him with Entertainments of this kind, and fuch as a curious Fancy may be well enough pleas'd with.

I could nothave thought, that Indin had produc'd Ar cifts fo skilful and ingenious; as I have feen by fome Pieces which His Majefty flewd me. A Picture which.I prefented him, and was very confident no Workman in that Country could have rolerably imitared, was done with fo much Art and Exactners, thar I was puzzel'd to diftinguif my own Original from thofe Copies which were taken from it. The Migul was mightily pleas'd with this, and boafted of his Mens Skill to a high degree; he reckon'd it a kind of a Victory, and in a pleafane way eriumphd over me accordingly. A grear deal of Jeft, and divering Rallery, pals'd uponthis occafion; bur the Conclufion of ir was, that I was to pay the Painter for his Work; and the King muft needs know too whar I inrended to gire him: Which matter was well enough made up betwixt us, and the Prince and the Painter both pleas'd.

So ftrongly did his Fancy work this way, that not long after he fenr for me in great hafte to Court, and that our of my Bed roo, tho the Bufinefs was nothing but to thew me, and was worth his fight: I rofe and carricd in, and found him at that cime of Nighr, firting in a very formal manner upon a little Throne, and fo drefs'd with Diamonds and Rubics, that there was no looking at him for the luftre of his Jewels. Bur the Beaury of my Picture fhock'd him worfe than all his Glory cou'd have done the moft vulgar Spectator. He ask'd, Whether ever fo Divine a Creature lived, and that Copy had any Original in Nature to anfwer to it, or was only the mecr Product of the Painter's Imagination? When I affured him, the living Original was well known to me, and vaftly fuperiour to the Picture in all Points of Perfection, his Admiration was proportionally heightned ; and he then defired that I would beftow that wonderful Pisec upon him, which he would look upon (he faid) as the moft valuable Jcwel he was Mafter of. A particular Obligation made me ar firft excufe the parcing with in, which I did in fuch a manner as no way difgufted him; but be continuing to prefs me, I freely refigned ir to him, as a Token of the profound Refpect I had for His Majcity, in parting with 2 thing to very dear and valuable to me. Bur the Prince (who feem'd rather to have done this to try me, than out of any real defign to ger the Picture) hearrily accepred of my intended kindnefs, and refus'd to take it from me only faid, His Painters fhould take Copics of ir, which his Qucens fhould wear, in Memory of fo cxcellent a Beanty as the Original was.
The fucceeding Day being his Birch-Day, himfelf, and Strame all his Nobles, were very merry upon it: I was invited to the Ceremony too; and drinking his Health in a Noble Cup of Gold, fet with Emraulds, Turquoifes, and Rubics, he intreated me, when I had drunk the Wine, to accepr of the Cup as his Preforic.
There were feveral Chargers of Rubies, and Almonds Sonermion made in Gold and Silver, which vecre breughe in, and ofthenthem chrown amongt the Nobles, and them that tood abour binh Dis. him. The King had Spore cnough d, fec them feramble for them, which they did with a gred- deal of carneft nefs; bur as there were fercral in \(t^{s}\). Company that thought fit to forbear; and nor tumbie on the Ground for thofe Toys, fo I foood amonget tinat number, and conrented my lelf with beholding the Sport. His Majelty appeard in all the height of Pomp and Richnefs of Lrels thar Day, and his Elcphanes were fer out in all their moft glorious Furniture too: They all pas'd before him in grear Order, and bowed very handfomely to him as they march d, along; which (all thirgs confider'd) I thought one of the fineft and moft agrecable Sighes that Day aforded.
At this time (haring an opportunity) I moved afaph anm for the Difparch of our Privileges, which had been fo The file long promis'd, and fo unconicionably delayed, telling Deaireor him, If be wou'd not ftir in the matter, I would imme- 1 fiphia diately apply my felf to the King. He was yery unwilling I thould do this; and affired me, I aceded nct trouble my felf fo far, for the King had given Orders abour is already; and is had becn actually done and fens to mc , but thar the fe Solcmnitics of his Birth-Day had taken them off from Bufincts.
But thefe fair Words were only incended to kecp me quict, and prevent my carrying the Matter before the King again: This Minitter never defigned my Bufincfs thould be done by the King's immediate Orders, bat recolved to make me depend wholly upon the Prince, which he knew I was very backward (and with good Reafon) to do. For after all this pretence, he had the Confidence to fend me word, That he would procure nothing ar all from the King, that any way concern'd that Prince's Government, as our Surrt Affairs did; but char I oughe to expect all from the Prince's Good Narure, whore Authoriry was great cnough to grant Firmans fufficient for our purpofe.

In this Perplexity I refolved, for once, to try the Prince, The Embs: and endeavour as much as could be to procure his Favour fador appion by a feeming entire Dependance upon him. And as an Introduction to the Conclufion of my Grand Affair, I propos'd to perfect a fubordinate one, that related to our pre rent ufe at Surat, for the Fleet thar was now expected. I lent in to his Secretary. fome certain Claufes, which I defired might be put into the Firman that was to be drawn up upon this occafion; and quickly after went to wait upon his Highnefs, and to fee the Succefs of my Bufinefs. The Prince order'd his Secretary to give me the Firman which upon perufing I found mort and defective, feveral important things being left our, at leaft very much alter'd and difguis'd in the Exprcfion: Upon which Account I rent it back again, with a Rcfolution forthwith to depart the Country, and of prohibiting chelandingany of our Engilif Goods. But the Secretary very earneftly perfwaded me to the contrary, athd defired me but ro gra tific the Prince's Humour a limtle in that one point of de pending upon him, and cravitig the amendment of all at his hands; and I thould certainly find him ar laft a far berter Friend than I expected. Befides, he expounded the Firman in fuch a manner to me, that it appear'd quite another thing; with his Conftruction it bore my Sence very well, and when handfomely tranflixed (and as he faid, according to their true meaning) (poke thie Language 1 dcfird.

I depended the more upon his Reprefentation of ir, bei caule he had univerfally the Character of an homeft and difincercfted Man, and (to my own knowledge) no Lóver of Bribes; which is a very rare and high degree of Vertue is in this Court. I rook the Firman therefore, and was at prefent well fatisfied to have gained this Point.
The Bufinels of the Decan Wars hang yer in fufpence and this mighry Monarch's Arms did nor proper in chat Counsry. Sultan l'cruife was now come from his Charge, and advancing near the Court, hoped to have had the Fayour of kifing his Father's Hands: This the Old Prince had granted, had it not been for Normabal, who wasemployed undoubredly by Sultan Caroon, and that Faction, to divert the King from thewing this Kindnefs to his El'der Brother.
The Charms of that Woman (which could work him into any fort of Compliance), . prevaild with him at this time, to deny his Prefence to a Son that defervid it; and o command him to a far diftant Poft. ed Knees beg the Liberty of fecing his Son; bur the imperious Woman woud not grant his Requeft; the proudly check'd the Motions of his yearning Bowels, and commanded him in fpirc of Nature, to fend his Son away.
Now Sultan Carin's way to the Wars of Decen was plain and open befgre him ; and he propos'd to himfelf to obtain a great dea fof Glory by it. Bur the Great General in thole parts, Chan Canna, was fo much againtt it, that he lent the King a Letter ro forbear fending that Prince to command there; and rarber (if one of his Soris muft be in play) to order his youngeft to undertake that Poft.
Now the King had as much mind to have Chan Canna away from the Decan Wars, as that General had to keep Sultan Caroon our. For in plain Terms, he was fufpected The Guffor of a treacherous Correfpondence with the Enemy; and and illsurects' 'was confidently afferted, that he had a Penfion from the ofr br Wran- King of Decan: No wonder then that the War fucceeded no better, and that the vaft Armies of the :Mogul had not yet bearen the Decanees out of the Field; bur on the contrary, were continually infulted by them: The King was partly fenfible of this, and therefore commanded him to come to Court: Bur be was fo politick and civil 10 himfelf, as to defire his Majefty's Excufe; he Rad no mind to be poyfon'd, or have his Head cut off; and going to Courr in his Circumftankes, had very probably been going to Exccution.
Upon this the King refolv'd to fend his Son Sultan Careom, and to countenance his Reception, determin'd to follow himfelf with another grear Army. But the fubrle Chan C.anna, that faw shis Storm a coming, and knew where the force of it would lighr, endeavourd by an Ar rifice to divert it, and fo prevenc. the Danger that threarned him. He perfwaded the Dec.aneas (who were entirely at his Service), to fend Embaffadors to the Mogul, to defirc a Peace, or at leaft a Ceffation of Arms for fome cime. Bur this Trick would nor take; and the Embaffadors (tho' they offcr'd very advantageous Terms) cou'd not bring their Bufinels to bear. For the Mogul turn'd them orer for an Anfwer to his haughty ambitious Son; with whom alone he had lefr the Power of Peace and War: And the Prince abfolutcly rejected their Propofals, relling them, He would enter into no Treary till he had appear'd in the Field, at the Head of his Armics.
All the Country dreaded the Effects of this Princes's violent alpiring Temper; ; the King himfelf could not but fee it too, and yet hardly dared to controul him. His two elder Sons were difcontented, as well at the Father's Eafinels and Indulgence, as ar the factions ufurping PraCtices of this Son \(;\) and all Men expected that the Feuds and Animoficies berween thefe Brorhers, would involve the Country in the greareft Confufion, whenever the Old Prince went off the Srage. The Wifer Part very well forelaw, that the beft way to prevent thefe Calamities, swould be to fecure and eftiblifh his Eldeft Sons Tirle:to det son the Crown, before he lefr it himfelf. For this Prince toas oof acepte fo much the Darling and Defire of all the People in gé ae to othe neral, tand it feems jufty fo for his admirable Vertues) that in cafe any of his Brothers thou'd endeavour to difturb him, or ftand in Comperition withi.him, his Intereft in the Hearts of the People was fo good and great everywhere, that no oppofive Faction would be able to ftand before him.
This Noble Prince (Sultat Curferoot) was ar this zime, and had been a good while, under his Farter's Difpleafure) \(2 t\) leaft under the exrernal appearances of it - for twas thought the Mogul loved him deeply in his Heart, tho he fancied the Brighmefs of his. Vertues; and Hlluftrious Aetions, did render his own Glory lefs confpicnous; and therefore condemn'd him to 2 Life of Solirade and Confinement.
But'tis certain the People did nor adore and love him more, than Sultan Ceroon, and all that Party, hated, maligned him, and contrived his Ruine: But before I menrion the Defigns and Intrigues carricd on by them againft this. Prince, I muft digrests a litule into the firt part of his Srory; and chofe Circumftances in his Grandfathers Reign, thar made way for fome of thefe Scenes that appear'd in Indice at my being there.
When Ecbar Sba, the Father of the prefent Mogul, was bufily employed in the Decan: Wars, chis Son of his took of Sultan that opporrunity to attempt the Dethroning of his Father, Cwfereon,and and fixing the Crown Imperial upor his.own Head. The his Father, Old Prince, upon the News, quickly brought his Victo- this \(\begin{aligned} & \text { Mmal. }\end{aligned}\) rious Army from conquering Foreign Adycrfaries to cha Atife this domeftick and more dangerous Enemy; thar was now ready to feize.the Caftle of Agra, and make himfelf Mafter of all his Treafures. Being come pretty near him, he fent him word, That he fhould take his choice, either immediately to lay down his Arms, and throw himfelf upon his Mercy; or elfe prepare for a Bartel, and leave Matters to be determin'd by the Chance of War:. The Prince accepred the former of thefe Propofals, thinking it fafer to truft his Father's Mercy, than to ftand a Trial with his well-known Valour, and therefore without any more adoc, humbled himfelf at his Feet; and fo (after fome Difgraces, and a fhort Imprifonment) was reftor'd again, at the Importunities of his Mother and Sifters. Bur'tis' to be nored, that while he was thus-ap in Arms againf his Father, the Old King to punifh him for his Rebellion; difinherired him, and proclaim'd Suitan Curferoon; his Eldeft Grandfon, Heir Apparent of his Enpire. Twas bur a few Months after all thefe Tumults were quieted, that Ecbar Sha paid the appointed Debr-to Narure, and.by Dying gave life to new and worfe Troubles than thofe be had to lately composid. For then his \({ }^{*}\) : Son (the prefent \({ }^{\circ}\) Soricic all hing, not ar all regarding his Facher's former Act againft him by the, him, refolved to be his Heir, and by main force thruft Nime of \({ }^{\text {Sit }}\) himfelf into the Throne; poffefing .himfelf ar the fame by, oftis time of all the Royal Trealures; and the Srrong-places of Gibmanger the Kingdom.
On the other hand, Sultan Curfcroon prefoming uponthe Title conferr'd on him by his Grandfather, rook up Arms to maintain his Righr; and flying to Labor, gather'd an Army there, and was proclaim'd King. His Father very guickly ferved him as before he had been forved himfelf; lent 2 Power after thim to reduce him to his Dury, which the Valiant Prince as foon gave Batcel to, and entirely roured. Bur frefh Armies ftill poaring in upon him, and his Father himfelf marching rowards him with another very great one, the Prince's Men wore quite rir'd cut, and were able to hold the Field no longer.
The unfortunate Prince himfelf fled away with a few Horfe rowards Cabal, and fo for Tareary; which if he had reach'd, his Father would have been purto fome trouble to have recover'd him again: Bur in his Way being to pais a River, his Over-eagernefs to get out of the reach of his Enemies that purfued him. made him foliteral in his Promifes of Rewards to the Water-man, that he was fufpected and difcover'd : His Gold berray'd him; and told that he was the Prince. The Water-man ba:ing fraelt our who he was, in the middle of the Channel leapd out of the Boar, and fwimming to the oppofre fide, went and inform'd the Governour of che adjoyning. Town what a Paffenger he had in his Boar. This was very grateful News to that bafe Officer, who hop'd to raife this own Fortunes by the Ruines of the Prince; and to do his Father the moft endearing Service poffible; by bringing back his Fugitive Son (and the Difturber of his Peace) a Prifoner to him. So he came down ro the Warer-fide with a Troop of Horfe, and there falured the Prince with all the Humility in the World; complemented him with the Titie of King' and invired bin to Repofe at his Houfe: Bnc after all, the Villain having him in his Power, lock'd him up, and put a ftorig Guard upon him, and thenifent Tydings to the King of the Noble:ACtion he: had per-formd:-

The Prince from hence was carried bound and chain'd upen'an Elephant ro his Father, who treated him with lefs of the Mildnefs belonging to that Character, than the Scorn and Revenge of an angry infulting Conquerour. All his Soldiers and Adherents, that encouraged or fupported this Rifing of his, were exccuted with an exemplary Scverity. As for the Prince himelf, the Report -went, that his Eyes were put out in the place, where the laft Batrel was foughr; bur the truch of the matrer was, that he was blindfolded with a Napkin, which his Father fer his own Seal upon, and fo fent him away Prifuncr to the Caftle of Agrn.
This was the Original of the Controverfie between the Great \(M\) Mogul and his Son; this the Caufe of his prefent Difountenance, and confequently iccnfidering hew he was loved) of the Difcontent and Soriow of the whole Country.
Bur his envious Brother, Su'tan Caronn, with his Faction, thought the King had deale too mildly with him, in condemning him only to a bare Imprifonment; and therefore (looking upon him as the Grand Obitacle in the way of their ambitious Defigns) refteny purfued and plorted his Deftruction.
He was'at prefent the King's. Prifonct; but they vigorouly endeavourd to make him theirs; and whar they wou'd have done with him, could they have got him into their hands, is eafily to be imagined. They knew they could not profper, if Sultan Curforoon (the Glory of the Nation, the Delight of the Nobility and the Soldiers) livod; his Life would be a continual Check to their wicked Practices and Defigns, and in time might prove the Punifhment of them roo), and therefore he muft die; he mutt be difpatch'd out of the way, that they may do their Work withoat fear or difturbance.
ifapl, Can, and Normabal, were both deep in this Plor, and there was fome Reafon for't too; for befides the near relation of III Nature and Vicious Qualities, in which Sultan Carcon and Afaph Con, were ftrictly united to one another ; there was a Bond of Affinity berween them, the Prince having married his Daughter. So that his Intereft and Ambition, which both prompred him, to take all poffible Mcafures for the fixing of his Son-in-Law upon the Throne of India, did confequently engage him againft the Life of the brave Sultan Curforoon: As for Normabal, the Reafon of fer Concern is evident; tis enough to fay, that the was Afaph Can's Sifter, and an Enemy to Verrue and Gooaness.
Thefe pious Plerers having perfected their whole De- fign amonsft theinfelves, began to amempt the King for the King for the Delivery of Sultan Curferoon to their keeping. And of his Eided his Condition at chat time, and their Bufinefs requir'd Drunkennes or Diftraction for the doing of it. Rur howerer having the Shadow of an Authoriry for their Proceenings, away they went with a ftrong Guard to demand the Prince of his prefint Keeper; a cerrain Raja, a Resboor, ro whem the King had commirted him. Bur he like an honeft and To couragcous Man, refus d to deliver him into cheir hands : he urged, the King had given him the Cliarge of his Son, mencatit and he would die in the Defence of his Truft, before any ocher Perron but the King hould take him away again. This Refolution and Faithfulnefs of his was highly commended by the King afterwards; and he charged him to bold it on, and take no Notice of any other Commands that thould pretend to conrradict his firt Orders.
But notwinhtanding this Baulk, the other Party profecuted their Defign wich freh Vigour, and ftrong Importunitics. They rold the King fo many fine Stories, and urged him with fo many Arguments, (which the cafie Prince never was at the pains to examine the ftrength of that at laft he gave effcctual Orders for the Refignation of him: The brave Raja, his Kceper, with his Soldiers, were difcharged, and the Guard of that Cut-throar Faction rook polfeftion of him.
This put the Court into an Univerfal Mourning and aldic. Murmuring too, at the Folly and Dotage of the King, the asit Ladies of the Seraglio wereall in Tears, and the Prince's Sifters fwore they wou'd kecp him Company in Death, for that they reckond wou'd quickly be his Fare. The King fent to pacifie thefedifcontented Ladies, and thought Normabal the firteft for that work; but they cursd and threatned her, and refufed with all the Indignation in the World, to fee a Perfon, whom they knew to have been fo deep in rhe Plot againft Sultan Curfcroon. 'Tis not eafic ro imagine the Confufions and Scirs that were confequent upon this Event; the Stories that were told, the Reports rais'd and fpread abour, cipecially amongt the common People, who as they are 1 ?Nays full of Noife and Tumult, and purineo a Ferment, by the leaft Breath of Wind that blows apon chem., fo the were now remarkably fo, and no ftormy Sea was ever ty ceunruly.
But to divert them a litule in thisforncture, there comes a prim a Perfirn Embaffador to Court, with a moft glorious and Enwwer fplendid Equipage, and as rich Preients for the King; fome faid he came to mediate a Peace for the Dccances, the Conqueft of whom would be a confiderable Enlargemens of the Mogul's Power and Dominion, and confequently render him a more formidable Neighbour to the Perfian King. But many beliere 'ris for a Supply of Money for carrying on the War againft the Turk; and'tis not the firft time the Perfinn' has borrowed here; she incxhautible Treafures of Agra, &c. have teen ofren fet open to him, and afforded him large and liberal Recruits. "This is the more probable, confidcring the humble and fubmifine Carriage of this Embalfador, and that exucmity of crint ging flatrering Refpect he pays to the Grcas Mogul; to the Difhgnour of his Character, the Offence of his Nation in this Court, and to be fure (without having private particular Inftructions) to the affionting of his Mafter. He proftrates himfelf upon the Ground, as before a Deiry, knocks the Earth with his Head, as if he would bear his way in; and is even Religiouly Devout in all his Poftures and Ceremonies that relate to the King. Yer the King carries ir with a grear deal of State and Diftance rowards him ; he only made a fmall Motion with his Body, at the Receprion of the King of Perfia's Letter, and faid no more, bur, How does my Brotber? He allows him but an inferiour place in his Prefence, a World of Nobles and Officers ftanding above him, tho' the Perfian takes it all withour difpute or murmuring; in that he carrics it like a Man that knows his Prince's Occafions and Neceffities, and the Great Mogul ufes him like a Borrower.
-Sultan Carocn, about this rime, began to fet forwards towards'the Army : Before his going he had promis'd me sultanir in the King's Prefence, and that of a grear Affembly of rempan Courriers too, Thar all my Surat Bufinels fhould be done, the tha Courtiers too, Thar all my Surat and Content given me to the full.
Bur this kindnefs was nor fo much the effect of any Good Will in himfelf, as of the Power of the new Prefents that were coming; for our Englifh Ships. were got into Swally Road, and rhe Prince was in hopes of being fhortly gratified.

There were the King's Orders too (as well as the Prince's Engagement), Thar all the Goods and Prefents that were to be brought from Surat hither, fhould nor be opened nor examined by the way, bur pal's undifturbed to my hands; as alfo, no Cuftom or Dury to be exacted for any of them : The Demonftrarion of the Prince's Honour and Trath in the performance of all which, will be added in irs place.
fo between deeping and waking he gave his Confent to what they defired; which for all he knew arthartime,might have been the curting off his own Head: Bur they knew

\section*{Chap: XXX. Sultan Curferoon fetcbed out by the King, &c}

There had been a Talk a good while, that the King and Court would remove and go a Progrefs; and now that tronblefome time came on. The Tents were pitch'd abroad for their Receprion, the Elephanss, Horfes, and all forts of Carriages ready in fuch abundance, that one would have fancied is almoft the remove of a whole Nation.

The King is Ceems loves to take his Pleafure this way nor to confine himfelf to any one certain place of abode, but to fix his Court here and chere, as he pleales, rambling up and down, and cnjoying the Delights of his Counrry.

All Forcign Minifters, and Embaffadors of Princes, are obliged to bear him Company, befides Trades-men and Artificers of all forts. The King loves to march with a vaft multitude after him; and if they are nor difpofed to - xhis mova- follow, he orders the *- Leskar, where they were laft, to be ble Court is burnt, and fo fires them our of their Tents.
calld the 'Tis indecd a noble and a delighrful Figure that the Lesker makes, when 'tis all fix'd in order; when it has the adrantage of a pleafant Situation, and the Spectator of a free and open Profpect. It thought it a greater Rarity than any City in India, I had the opportunity of fecing; for belides that, 'ris of a larger Compals than perhaps moft Cities are (except thefe of the very firt Rank and Chara Cter) 'ris alfo crected and finifh'd in fo very fmall a time by the mulcitude of Hanids thar are at work, that ir looks like a kind of Creation, and mightily encreafes the pleafare of contenplating ir. To fee a vaft empry Plain, that Thews nothing but the ordinary wild Appearances of Na ture, in a few Hours transform'd into a regular, uniform, beauntiful City ; to fee ir divided into Streets, adorn'd and cover'd over with the fplendid Pavilions of Princes and Courtiers, and allshis Glory rife up in a few Moments, and dazzle the Eres of a Spectaror of a Ludden; this excites a more detughrful wonder, than to have feen the fame thing advineing leifurcly and by degrees to that per fection.

And I took Trice, that this particular Leskar was beofrription gun, fer up, andeknifh'd, in four Hours fpace, tho' 'rwas madthcon-done with very grear order and exactnels, and was full venimas of twency Englif: Miles in Circuit, and fome ways near fix Mile long. All the Shops, and orher Aparmenes of Trades men were of diftinguin'd by Rule, that every Man, all over the Leskar, knew where to go readily for the fupply of his Wants. Evcry Artificer, and every Mian of Quality, knows his Giound, what Compals, of which fide, and how far from the King he muff pirch his Tent. The Royal Pa vilion is erected in the Centre of all, and no Man raifes his nearer to it, than the diftance of a Musket-hnor, every way round about.
The King, in there Progrefles, relaxes his Thoughes and Cares of Publick Bufinefs, in grear meafure : In the Leskar he beftows many of thofe Hours upon Sports and Diverfions, that are fpent in Scare-Affaits when he is in his Palace. Here he hunts and hawks, and fwims about in his Barges upon the fine Rivers and Ponds thar lie in his way, inftcad of paffing Judgment upon Criminals, and bearing the Difpures of his wrangling factions Noblemen In fhor, tho in Agre or Labor, he may appear with mor of the rich Pomp and Magnificence of a King; yet here te enioys more of the Pleafure of his Grearnes, and fits fa more cafie than upon his fublime Imperial Throne.
The Perfian Embaffador, and my felf, were pur to no Anodd Cu fmall Trouble and Charge, to accommodare our felve with Conveniences for keeping. Company in this March For the Lesker at Afmere (from whence the Remove was) was fired by the King's Order, and in the Hurry Carriages were fo fcarce and difficult to be gor, that we were left behind for fome Days, in all the Diftrefs that a rui nous (and almoft empried) place cou'd be fuppos'd to be the occafion of to us. The Perfizn fcolded and brawl'd moft bitterly to be left fo ; but there was no Remedy but Patience; nay, he fought and bear abour him like a Madman; but all would nor do; every Body was bufily employ'd to provide for themfelies, and we that were Embaffadors mult do fo too, or elfe refolve to ftay behind However, we made fhife to fet our ar laft, and in a few Days overtook the King, who march'd but llowIr cn.
One thing happen'd at the King's Eetaing out, thar procur'd wonder to all Men; tho' it gave as much Plcafure to all the true Lovers of the King and their Country, as it did Vexation and Difappoinnment to the wicked defigning Faction of the Court. This was the raking Sultan Curferoon our of the hands of his cruel Jailor.
Sun fectid. The King, when he came by the Houfe where he was vanofpribon Prifoner, order'd his Coach to ftop ar the Door, and fent oy of the People was rais'd to the higheft pitch, and the King procurd himfelf a great deal of Pra:fe; and many good Wiftes and Prayers by this ACtion.
'Twas indeed high time to fetch him away. if he lov'd him, and defired the concinuance of his, for the Wretches about him were endeavouring to put their, Plors aga:nitt it in exccurion.
Tis faid, that fome Ruffians belonging to Suitan Cra roon, his Brother, had attempred to ger into his i partment to murther him; but the faithful Porter refus'd them enerance, and Atcod upon his Gard. The QueenMother went and gave Information of this to the king which 'ris probabie did a:arm him, and put him upon ta king this Courfe to fave the Life of his moft valuable (and I think moft beloved) Son.

Bur there was another paffage Introductory to this Deivery, which ga:c the King a very fir occafinn to manifef at once his own Auchoricy, as well as Facherly Affection o. Sultan Cu fercor:. AICphi Can had been larety to fee this Prince his Prifoner; bur carried ic tery rudely to him prefing boifterotily into his Prefence, and doing no manner of Reverence as was decent and due to the Eldeft Son of his Sovercign. Some fay, thar he arcompred to pick a Quarrel with him, and knowing the Prince's brave and gencrous Courage, thar Kcorn'd to put up an Indignity ndeavovrd to provoke him to draw; either with a DeGgn to call in his Kuffians to revenge ir, or elfe to have a Srory to rell the King, thar his Son was wholly nogorernable, and drew his Sword to kill bi- Keeprers, and fo make his crcipe. Bur the Prince by his Patience and Pr:dence fpoild the Defign; he defpis'd that fordid infolcnt Perfon, and kept his Sword in tiis Scabbard, only he got a Friendro acquaine theKing with the Saucincis of Afoplecan

The next tine the King faw this honeft Man, (and twas The kinent before the whole Court tor) he ask'd him, When he vifi-Mogme en red his Charge laft? What he faid to him? And what quirrs thous Refpect be fhewed him, when he approach'd him? Th.fe his son. and ftarting Queftions confounded the guilty Man, and pur can louady him quite out of Conntenance: He found the King was made acquainred with his Carriage, and therefore was forc'd to confefs the main of the Story, only yarnifining is a littic with a plaufible Lye or two, to make it as earic as might be on his own fule. Bur the King told him for his Comfort, He wou'd make him know S'lean Curferonn to be (as his moft beloved Son and inrended Heir). T., alfo his Lord and Prince; and cho' whar was pait thould be forgiven, yer if ever he was ginitry of any lerevercne for the future, he would make his Son mample him coder his cer.
This was a plain Diforer: of the King's Mind, what ever his former Actions had fignified to the Word; and twas as manifeft a procf thar all his palt. Severivies to this excellent Son, were a kind of Violence to himifif, and the meer cffcct of the over-ruling Charms of his imperious No mabal.
The Court went on in their Progress, and tra"elld over Woods and Mountains, and rouph impcrious Ways, thar inade the Journey far more a Toil and a Burden chan a Pleafure, which ir appear'd ar firet to be defigned for. Abundance of Horfes and Camels perihid, Coaches, Carts and Tencs, were torn and fpoild, and the whole Lestar was pur inro confufion. The King'sWomen werefadly fatigued with the Difficulties of the way, and like to be left in the Woods a grear many of them, the Beafts that ferv'd hem being quire debilirated for want of Mear and Warer in thofe barren places.
But to qualifie this, it muft be granted that fome parts of the way we pals'd were furprizingly plcafant and charming ; and the lovely Groves, Fountains, Weils, and Ponds, that lay about us, made ir a Journey through Paradife.
We came to one very pleafant Town calld ctaleada, leared upon. the River Sefra, and anciently the Seat of the old Kings of Mandor. One of thefe Kings formerly ufed o take a deal of pleafure in fiting a Drinking by this Ri-ver-fide ; and it happen'd that when he was drunk one ime, he rumbled intothe Warer, and being nor ar all able to help himfelf in that Condition, he very fairly funk down oo the botrom. Buta certain courz?cous Siave of h:s, and a notable Diver, loch to fee his Sovercign thus become a Ranquet to the Fifhes, threw himfelf in, and dived after him, and brought him up again. When the. King was come to himeelf, and this remarkable piece of Service the Slave had done him was related to him; for a Reward, he commanded borh his Hands to be cur off, relling him, Twas his juft defert, for prefuming (a fordid. Slave as he was) to touch the Sacred Body of his Sovereign.
Norlong afterche King (who could not take a fair warming) was ar-his old Trade of drinking ar the Warer-fide lagain, and had then only his Wife with him : And having the frme Fortune as befcre, to be rery drank, and fall in; the geod Woman rruly ecen le: him dive for's, and nevet atempted to pull him out, tho the cou'd have done it withour the leaft difficulty or trouble: And when the was ask'd the Reafon, Why fie wou'd not face him? the told them, She bad no mind to lefe lecr Fingers: She remembred the laft Bour, when the S:ave had his Hands cur off, for doing the fane thing, and the did nor know but the fame reward might to fall her hare woo, and therufore was unwilling to pur it to the Vearure. 'Tis probable the Good Wife went upon this Principle, that the Lofs ought rather to be avoided, that could never be repaired again : Now thio' the might eafily get another Husband, yer the could never be lupplied with anorher pair of Hands.
'Twas difcover'd by that tine we had been abroad fome Days, that this Progrels was nor undertaken mecriy to move fome parr of the way towards Sultan Caroon's Cainp, the more to frighten the Dccances with the Noife of his coming, as alfo to keep his own unquier Army the better in order.
This was the effect of the Counfel of Normabal and Afaph Can; who periwaded him his going out would certainly be arrended with thefe good Confequences. But it happen'd all wrong; for News came that the Decances were refolved to fight, and lay ready upon the Borders with a very ftrong Army to enicrtain his whenever they fhould think fir to move that way; allo, that Sultan Ceroon was adranc'd but a lietle face with his Forces, and norwithitanding all his bouncing at Courr, was terribly afraid bech of the Decences and of Cbanchanna, which ware forty defpicable Enemies to him before. Upon this Account the lame Counfellors now advifed the King not to procecd with his firft Defign. but to direct his Courfe ro Ggra, and rum the Progrels into a Hunning Match: The Decens they thoughr would not make His Majefty good fort at this time, ar leaft not fo good and diverting as the Wild Beafts of the Foreft would.

But worfe News than this (to me) came quickly after; which was, that the Prince contrary to hisFarhers Command, and all his own folemn Engagements, had topt and intercepted all the Prefents and Goods that were ro come to Court. This was meerly to fatisfie his own Covetous Defire of chufing firf, and getting the beft things into his own Hands; which (befides the Affront offerd by it to the King of England, my Mafter, to have the Tokens of his Refpect and Good Will, thus rudely fiez'd and forc'd away; ) was alfo a grear piece of ill breeding to his own Father in pretending to lerve him-felf-firt, and not leaving his Betters the Liberty of Choice. However after he had made fure of them, he writes a L ctter to the King to tell him what he had done, that is, heminc'd the Matrer, and rold a Story of rome Goods he had ftop'd, out of a Defire to facisty his curiofity in buying fome Tows that he fancied; bur he faid not a Word of the Prefents (the principal part of the Cargo) either our of fhame, or fcar, or ill defign. I could notthink of paffing by this very uncivil Trcamment withour Complaints to the King, and thofe loud ones too In rimes pait I had by all the fair and foftMetheds, imaginable atrempred to win thePrince's Favour, and never wasable effectually to oblige him; bur now'rwas neceffary to pur an end to thiar Courchip, and neglect his Friendhip for the furure. I muft appeal to the King for Juftice againft him, and confequently (in all probability) lole him for ever: and fince 'twas certain thar I muft lofe him, I thought it better to doit for fomething, and with fome noife and ftir ico, than either to be difhonourably filent, orin a faint and fearful manner to profecute fuch an Affair.
I went to the King with a fix'd Refolution to complain of the Prince's Action; when he, who gueffed what my Bufincts was, began and prevented me, telling me(in thort) he had heard how his Son had intercepted the Goods and Prefenss, but he would order is fo that nothing thould be opened or fearched by him; and befides,forthwith would fend hisRoyal Command to him for the Difcharge andSurrender of them into the Hands of our ownPeople. This was done the fameNighr, and 'twas all the Sarisfaction for the Injury I could then procure; for the King quickly afrer fell todrinking, and (when he was pretty far gone) to ralking of Religion; tho', by the way, neither of the three Prophers he talked of would bave allowed him the Liberty he then took, and his Drunkennefs was condemn'd by the Laws, both of Mofes, Mabomet, and Fefus Cbrift. Bur this Prince when he was in thar Conwould ramble into a Difpute of Religion, and hold is our till mid-night; and then farewell to all Bufinels for that time (tho ever fo weighry and neceffary to be debated) for when once he was got into that Vein, there was no rarning of him out; nothing to be done till the Wine and theDevout. Fir had both lefthim. Sometimes his Humours would be comical and ludicrons, he wonld ag a Merry Andrews parr more than any thing elfe, and do things firter for a Player than a King: The Wine would make him exert a thoufand feveral Paffions, accord rig to the Images which his heated Fancy prefenred in thar Conmotion ; Cometimes 'twas all Blood and Rerenge, at other rimes. Mirth and Jolity, Charity and Compaffon, Gricf and Sadnefs, now langh, and then cry like a Child, and rhen drown his Care and Sorrow in another Cup, and fo on, with a naufcous Galimaufry of Paffions and Difcourfes rill the beft part of the Nighr was fpent. I was often obliged to fee and hear more of this than was grateful; if my Bufinefs made me artend him, his importunity would keep me there; for he is vaftly fond of Company in thofe Humours, and there is notdeliverance from him, till kind lleep comes and cloles up his Eyes.
After fome time the Cargo was brought up from Surnt, and the King (tho' he had reprov'd bis Son for fo doing) The ring was pleas'd to cake it immediately into his own Hands. feff oum of Such washis Curiofiry and Fond Defire to fee the Prefents the Corge my King had fenr him, yet he cou'd not tay to ler me have the opening and forting of them, and to bring them to him in a litrle order. So he took his choice of fome thingsthat pleas'd him extreamly well, and then fent for me to tell me what he had done; which he did with a World of Excufes, begging my Pardon, and offering to refund whatoever I demanded. But as I was far from any Defign of being fo exact and fcrupulous as that came to, To Ionly fignified to him that I thoi:ght is a little bard to be debarr'd of the Liberty of making my own Prince's Prefents; thar as they were intended for his Majefty, fo is was very free for him to keep them, and I had no other Demand to make, but only for the Reforation of fome of the Merchants Goods, (which being amtrght) were taken with the reft. This he readily promis'd to do, and gave immediate order abour making fatisfactionto me in that Parricular ; and over and above this *ir the General, he gave me the Word of a King, thar/zikuld haic punCual Juftice done me in all points whatoover: My whole Affair happily concluded, and my felf return'd back to the King my Mafter with Honour and Satisfaction.
Thele were charming Promifes, and I wanted bur to fee them well performed, which the King made me be- มarth, ap; lieve thould be without all doubt; he only requir"d a cer- 1617 tain Promife on my part. the Performance of which he defreo ot be to me. This was ro procure him fome of our Enal:乃 nitit, \(t\), Mcftiffs, and the tall Irifh Gry-Hounds, which be feem'd moft paffionately to defire; and farther, to ger him fome of our Emglifh Embroiderics, for feveral things the Parterns of which he would fend mein. The larter part I could undertake to promife, but the former relating to the Dogs was very uncertain, and no Man could warrans cheir Lives for fo long a Voyage; bur I rold himt they thould befent, and if they died by the way, their Skins and Bones hould be prelerved for him (fince he defir'd. ir) and this mould be my difcharge with his Majefty; which he willingly agreed to. Afrer all this favour and familiarity ir may appear fomething ftrange that the Grear Mogul thould fo cafily (as he did) cntertain any ill fufpicious Thoughts of me and my Nation. 'Tis true, a Princecan'r have his Eyes too open upon his own Affairs, nor be too niceand curious in lcoking abour him, that the many Forreigners he admits into his Country don'r make any hurful Encroachments upon him. Bur. as I am Sure the \(E n g / i / h\) had ever been very free from any Defigns of this nature, fo I was the more furpriz'd at his fealoufie, in that thisPrince himfelf had often (poke a good Word for us, and been our Nations Patron and Defender (as it were) againtt the flanderous Charges and malicious Suggeftions of our Enemies at Cours. And to do him Juftice I belicrehad been fo fill, even inchiscafe alf, had ir not been for the violent Perfwafions of the Prince Sulean Caroor,, and fome Colour for his Sufpicion, which the Folly and impradent Conduct of our own People gave him.
There had been fome kind of fquabble amongft them at Surat ( the rife and caule of which is not very clear) and to pacify this Tumult, our Ships landed Two hundred of cheir Mufqueteers, and commanded them to the impre march rowards the Town. Some of the Mariners (perhapsDrunk,or it may be only in a meerBravado, rhink- Enyifi in ing no harm, nor having no defign) cried out that the dy of xam Englib were going to take Surar; 2 very likely ftory, chat 200 . Men hould be fo mad as to atrempt a fortifed Town that was able prefently to furnifh our a thoufand Horfe, and asmany Shor and befideshad the guard of a River, River, which muft be paffed, and that a handful of Men might with cafe defend themiclves againft a numerous Army: But howcver ir gave an alarm, and a great many ware fuch Fools as to believe the Englifh had 2 real defign upon the place. Efpecially this being the Prince's Govern ment, and he fo particular a hater of our Nation as he was; 'rwas horly urged againft us by him and his pariy, and the Affront aggravated to the King, with all the cunning fipe and rancour in the Worid. Befidesthere was a flying Report atche fame time that we had taken Gon, and that a valt Flect was preparing in England'; all which concurring, did almoft effcitually perfwade the good eafie Prince that we had fome ill Defign upon him. Yet he difcovered nothing of his Mind in plain Terms to me; notwithftanding which; I found my felf underthe fame preffing Obligation to take all Opportunities to remove thofe groandlefs Jestoufies, and to bring him to the fame farourable Thoughrs that he ufed (or ar leaft pretended) to have for us.

Bur in all thefe Circumftances of Trouble, I fared Buch betrer than the Perfian Embalfadour, who after all is Pompous Entrance, his coftly Prefents, his bafe and fervile Courthip, went off in Difgrace and Difcontens. He could nor fadge in his Bufinels, nor work this Court into any humour of fatisfying his Mafters Defires. Never did any Prince and the Embaffadour of another manage it io to each orher at parting, as the Grent Mcg:al and this Perfien did. There was perfect huckftering berween them, and they were refolved on both fides, as nor to be beholding to each other, fo alfo that neither fide fhould get a Penny by the other- The Mogul had all the King of Perfin's Prefents appraifed, and paid down the Embaffadour the Money for them, and ar the fame scunty; time cent him in a \(B y\). of Farc, which he made to be thistard bared out of the Sim. He reckoned him even for ommon Liquor; filere was an Ifcm for . Pins and Plantains too, but and ilcphant and a Hawk or two rife up very high. Ar hor many of there Commodities the Perfian had farbe.tyrinhave goncto Marker and Cerv'd himfelf as he faw fir, tran have taken them ar the King's Rates, and ftood to the mercy of a Courr Reckoning For as the King gave too low for whar he had of the Perfian, fo he made the Perfian pay fauce for what he had from him ; bur thefe was a Per between them, the Perfian was grown touchy and peevith at his ill ufage, and the King was refolved to plague bim for't. So away he went in a mighty huff (as he very well might) without the formality of an Audience of leave one may be fure indeed withour taking leave of any Body, or fo much as excufing that Omiffion; only he fent to compliment me and affured me he would make farisfaction for nor coming himfelf, by double Civilitics to my Councry men in Prrfia. A grear deal of rime pasid away afte this to little purpole or profir; 1 artended the Court, but by the means of one intrieguing Perion or other could do litale or no Bufines.
Happy Days now began to hine upon Sulran Curfroon and his complear Reftoration was quickly cxpeoted \({ }^{1}\) Twill be happy for this Counrey and all Chriftians tha Tradehither if he comes to wear the imperial Crown foras hisother Vertues will make him an indulgent Fa ther to the one, fo his large Charity and very favourable Opinirn of Chriftianity will render him a kind Friend and Protectour of the other. His unmatural Brother had lately been ploting againft his Life; bur'twas feafonably difcover'd, and the barbarous Prince fent for up to Court; nor that the King intended to punifh him, for he dares not, fince he is Normatbai's Favourite; bur he'll call him away from the Army where he is hated of all Men, and doesmore harm than good. An Enemy will never be heartily bearen by a difcontentedArmy,nor an Army be otherwiferhan fo, under a General they abhor
When the King's Birch-day came on, the folemnity of his weighing in a pair of Scales was performed, according to the old and annual Cuftom. The Bafons of Nurs and Almonds and feveral forts of Fruirs made in Silver wete thrown among the Nobles too; but when his Majefty faw I did nor irramble like the reft, he reach'd out a Bafon full himfelf and pour'd into my Cloak; all pur together did not amountro five Pound, but cheNobles did nor leare me forty Shillings worth, for they prefenty fell \(a\) fnatching, and gor the better part of what I had way.
There is a prodigious thew of Riches, Liberality, and Charity to the Poor thar Day; bur (at laft) whar is flung away is very inconfiderable.
The nextime I went to Cuurt I made a motion to the King about our Debts: I prefented the Merchants humble Petirion to him, which he caus'd to be read aloud with theNames of theDebrors,Surecties and the eveveralSums that The Embal weNames of theDebrors, Sureties and the feveral Sums that The Embas were owing. Upon this fome Difficulry arofe, for fome for morai were Dead, others Sriangers, and others Infolvent; and Debes cherefore theKing told me that the Mcrchants Accompts appear'd to him to bevery arbitrary and ill ftated; and as they had fer down Debrs at their own pleafure, without giving him any demonftration of their Honefty and Juftice, by bringing a Bill of their lading before-hand, fo there was no Reafon (in cafe of Death or Infufficiency) why the Money thould be expected from him. However for this once (hefaid) he would ftand by us, and order he Money to bepaid; bur for the future if the Englifh rrufted his Servants with their Goods viithout acquainting him, they mould ftand by the lofs thicmiclves. Otherwire when their Commodities came to Couri, let them firf of all bring him of all, and then he would ferve himfelf, and difpofe of the reft to orhers thar fhould take them off; and then if any of thofe Pcrfons fail'd, he would fee we ftould nor be lofers. And this isthe Merhod that the Perfian Merchants take, as I have feen feveral inftances of it at this Court. The refult of the Bufinels was, thar the King call'd in a certain Courtier, and commanded him to fummon all the Debtors rogether, and by fair or fool means oblige them to pay.
Bur this ill defigning Perfon, partly by tedious delays otaber: and partly by his (at laft) pofitive refufing to do Juftice, provoked me again to apply my felf to the King. Before I did this, I had received ridings of the arrivalof fome freth Ships at the Bar of Surat, which gave me an encouragement to be bold at Courr, fince News of that nature is always very acceptable to the King; fo I caried an Abitract of the Lading along with me (according to the late Order) and began to follicit my Affair; and finding the King in a good parient gente Humour, all'd our my Perition that craved the Paymenr of the Debrs. The King did not mind it when I held is our Order ral and'zwas happy for thofe rardy Minifters rhar he did nor, Raymones, for thar fawcy neglect of his Orders would have produced a rerrible ftorm. That Pcrion whe was order'd to inpect the payment of the Debrs, came in an agony up to afaph Can, and begged him to hinder me from complaining; he faw his Danger, and found himfelf at the very brink of the Pir, and one iog more had punhd him in and upon their faithful Promife of doing the Bufinors, immediately I agreed to carry matters no farther at that ime; butthis pur them into fuch a Frigh, thar chey profently fet about it, and fiez'd fome of the Debrors the fame Nighr. Amongft the feveral parriculars of Goods coming up, I had fome Ropes of tery fine Pcarl, be ades a hngle one very large and rich; but of thele frid nor a Word in publick, inrending to oblige fome Friend in private with a good pennyworth in them, and o make them ferve for the more effectual promoring my Defgns. The King indeed asked for jewels, and I cold him theywere dear Commodiries in England; bur as Afapt Can preffed carneftly to know what rarities I had, I gave him a private fign, which hevery cafily underfood, and fo diverred him from that Difccurie.
Upon the King's rifing we withdrew togerher, and The Embafo ertled all the Particulars of the Bill of Lading, trandating fodours Methe Abftract into Perfinar, and making it ready to be pre- thod of rain Cented to the King. Bur (as the principal part of my can und all Defign ) I roid him how ir was in my power ro oblige him that party. with thofe choice rarities of Pcarl, which I had yer encirely conceal'd, even from the Prince and King themelves, and fhould come into no Hands bur his own, provided I fhould be fecure of his urmoft Afiftance in the difparch of my Bufinefs. "Tis a wonder to fee how any Charms of this nature work upon People of greedy \(\mathrm{c}^{2}\) vetous Minds; how they will command all their Paffions and Principles, and mansform them into the moft different Crearures in the World. By this one Propo fal of the Pearl, I had gotten as large an Incereft in Afaph Can as I could defire; all his Enmiry and ill Defigns were vanifh'd in a moment, and he was changed into the moft diligent and zealous Friend imaginable. There was no piece of that Service he would fick at performing or usphe would procure me a perfect Reconciliation with the Prince, the powerful Normebal thould be our Nations Friend too, and fuch a method be eftabliftid for the afery and fuccels of all our Affairs, as fhould leave me no farther occafion of rrouble and complaint. Such is the Power of Gain, and the ftrange force of an eager Appetite that way, when a Man indulgesand fuffers icto govern him.

This Perfon upon a fordid Hope of buying fome Toys to Advantage (and perhaps of fome other collareral Profit)" was my Humble Servant, even to flatuery, and to the betraying the Secrets of the Prince his Son-in. Law However by this means I wasfure of him, and he had ina manner made him mine for ever; he could nor berray me before he had the Pearl for fear of miffing in, nor afterwards for fear of berraying himfelf, to that I reckoned I had made a purchale of him. And together with him I bought the Friendhip of all the reft of that party; his in tor and Normabal came like Paper and Packrhread purchafc. They all folicired my Affair, and pleaded with the King on my behalf, and if the Prince laid any rubin their way, they made bold to oppofe him, and that with fome heat too

There was a mighty change now in the Face of our Affairs ar Court; Alaph Cen our Agent, and Normathal the Protectrels of our Merchants pallage to Courr. The Prince too was turned about by the influence and perfwafion of \(A f i p h C a n\); he lookd after our Debts with grear care and concern, granted a Firman very effectual in all points for our prefent eafe atSurat, and over and - above ( at my motion ) promifed one for Bengaln, a thing which he would never beforehear of. When the Prefents came the King and the Prince had their feveral thares to their fatisfaction; Normatal was gratified too for her
 The Merchants that came to Cotrr were civilly enterparing of all the Strat Deber; the Prince commanded it to be cut off from his Manfibders Wages, and at the fame time ftrictly charged all his new Officers to ufe us as Friends.

Ihad norhing now to do, but to atrend the delivery of my Firmans to me, which werc orderd to be drawn up in the moft ample and particular manner by the Secretaries, who had reccived the Kings and Princes Inftructions for shatpurpore.

Here Sir Thomas Re's Account breaks off, and his Journal does not bring us to the leaft refult of thofe matrers. We don'rknow how he parted from chence, and how clofely and finceely his'new gain'd Friends adhered to his Intereft Bur tis next to certain that all ended happily, and according to his Defires, fince the Stile of the Great Mogul's Letter to our King (which wasbrought by him ) feems to promife all that Favour, which he had been foliciting with the toil and vexation of fo many Months at that Court.

tre remper
What the Temper of the Air in this Country is, ctr coun- may be'eafily gucfled from ins fituation in fome meafure; Irt of the one may expect violent hears in a Poficion to near the pit, of the all Sun's'way, and thofe thar live in India don't find their bir nodutas. Expectations of this narure fruftrared.

Their Rains are neither fo common nor fo nncertain as they are in many parts of the World; a Man can hardly be wer with a Shower excepr at one particular feafon of the Year, and then he may every Day(norecr lefs) for three Months rogether. Thefe general Rains begin about the time that the Sun comes to the Northern Tropick, and to continue cill his return back to the line. They are ufually ufhered in with fearful torms of Thunder and Lighening, and as thefe are the beginning fo they are alfo the conclufion of the rainy Scaton. The reft of the Ycar a refrefhing Dew ( thar falls very plentifully ) Rerves inftead of Rain; this does a little cool and comfort the Earth, yer by that rime the nine Months are filled up, the Ground grows horribly dry and parch'd, and all the Greens languinh for a Shower. There is at thartime fomcthing of the dead and barren profpect of the Defer Arcbin; heaps of Duft and Sand, and torrified Plants and Animal's; but when che Rains come on there's prefently a. wonderful alteration, every thing revives and thoors up, and the Fields appear in their genuine Summer Colours.
They Till their Ground with Oxen and Foot-ploughs, their Seed time is in May and the beginning of furc, and their Harveft in N.omber and December (the moft temperate Monchs of the Ycar). And tho' the Ground has been hardning fo loing as it has by the mighty hear, yet they can work is frithour difficulty when they counc to Plough; for the Mould is fat and rich, and its own goodne's difpeit it to yield to the Plough, tho' chere has beenno Rain gioffen and prepare ic. There's very little inclos'd Lant int this Country, except fometimes juft by Towns or Viliages, otherwife is lies all open.
They cut their Grass as they have occafion for it, either green or wither'd; butthe; don'r Mow it and make Hay as we do in England. The Corn is exrreamly rank, and grows as thick and clole as ever the Land can bear ir ; and one may pafs feveral hundreds of Acres togecher withour feeing the leaft fpor that's thin and poor. Their forts are. Whear, Barley, and Rice, with fome others we don't know the names of; the Wheat is plumper and whiter chan ours, and makes a fine well relifh'd Bread; and that which the common People make of another fort of courfer Grain is borh roorhfome and wholfome, and very hearty.
With their Bread they have excellent good Butter too, tho nor of the confittence of ours, but more flaid like an Oil, for the heat of the Climate will never allow them to bring their Cream to any other Temper.
All the ufeful Garden Roors and Planes are common In chis Country, as Carrors, Poratoes, Onions,Garlick, and feveral forts óf Saller Herbs. Ginger grows almoft every where about, and Sugar Canes are no rarity ar all; they fow Tobacco in vaft plenty, and fmoak it as much. But their way of raking it is fomething odd and ftrange, tho' perhaps they don't fire their Mourhs by in to much as we do; for they take a litrie narrow necked Por ( that has an open round top, and a Spout coming our of the Belly on'r) and fill it with Warer up to the lower part of the Spout; then they lay their Tobacco loofe in the top of the Por, and upon it a Coal of Fire, and fo with a Reed or Cane of an Ell long(which is inferted into the Spout) they draw the Smoak into their Mourhs. They lay it is much more cool and wholfome \(2 n\) do it thus, than as the Eurropeans do, fince all the Smoak falls ypon the furface of the Warer before it paffes into the Cane. The Tobacca of chis Country is thoughr to be as good (in the Plant.) as any in the World, but they han't the Art of dreffing and ordering ir ( to make ir rich and frong) as chey have in the Weft-Indies. The greareft defect as to Vegerables feems to be in Flowers, which for a grear part are but like fo many painted Weeds; they pleafe the Eye with fine Colours, bur give the Smeil little or no cntertainment at all. The Rofes and fome few kinds more are fragranr; one of the principal of which isa white Flower like the Spanif Feffmin, a ching of a moft grateful and pleafing Scems, and affords them that fine Oyl , with which they are concinually perfuming themfelve, and makes very fweer Company. Befides thefe for a Perfume they have Lign-Aloes, and that neither fcarce nor of the meaneft fort.
As for Fruiss the Connury hinws a very great variery; Dates, Figs, Grapes, Prunello's, Almonds, Pomegra-I latter are nor fo good here as in orher places. Here are Coco's too, and thar excellent Plumb called the Mirabolan, the ufe and goodnefs of which we very well know in Englard. The Plantans grow in clufters ( many times) chey are long and like 2 Iender Cucumber, very Yellow when ripe, and raftelike a Normich Pear, bur much better.
The Muikmelons and Warcr-melons are fo well ripen'd and digefted a Fruitin this warm Climate, char they may be freely eaten withour fear of any of thofe hurful effects that may follow a plentiful ufe of them in a colder Connrry. The Pulp of the Fruir is fpongy and render, of 2 Colour mixt with Red andWhite, and concains in the inner part of it a very pleafant cooling Liquor. The Margo Trees are as large and fately as our Apricocks, bur muthe Fruir in inape and colour like our Apricorks, bur mate bigger; they roul them abour in theirHands for a while when chey are ripe, and then fuck out theinfide, which by that time is become like the Pap of a roafted Apple, and highly grateful to the pallet.
But the Annana's are efteem'd the choiceft of all their Enuits, and have (tbo a very delicions) yer fo compounded a rafte wirh them, that a Man while he ears them may imagine he is eating feveral fine things rogether; chey fay it refembles a mixrure of Strawberries, Clarer; Rofe-water and Sugar.
Befides thefe there'sthe * Tamarind Tree (which is ortheres known well enough ) and the Tree that yields the Li-fomeres quor caun quor calld the Toddie, which is from chence calld of the Trume the Toddie-tree. This Tree'has a very foft fpongie Mr. Trectiss is. Parenchyma; it grows ftraight and call and with- and Caprain out Boughs to the very top, but there fpreads out into Downten's tender Branches, in thape like thofe that fhoor our at the fiftioyagei. tender Branches, in thape like thole that fhoor our ar the Roor of our large rank Artichoaks, but much bigger and Roor of our large rank Artichoaks, but much bigger and longer. Tis nor fo big abour bur it may be longer. Tis not ho big abour but it may be eafily clasp'd in a. Man's Arms, and tho it has no Boughs to give any aififtance to 2 Climber, yet the Councry People will monnt is with an incredible eafe and celerity; but this they do by the Advantage that the roughnels and cruftinefs of the Bark gives them, which proves fome fmall ftay to their Feet. They make an Incifion in the top Branches, and receive the Liquor thar diftils in Gourds fer under for that purpofe: This without any farther preparation, is the Toddic fo mach talked of and ufed in this Councry, and upon which they fix fo many good Characters. In fhort, ris a fine Wine, and a good Medicine; if it be drank frelh from the Tree in the Morning ris a very pleafirig inoffenfive Liguor; but if kepr. rill the hear of the Day, the Sun alters it wonderfully; robs it of its fine mafte, does not exhale the Spirit of ir, and leaveit flat and vapid, but actuares che Spirits it has and renders them much more violenit and intoxicating. The Seamenlove it beft in rhiscondition, becaufe it makes them quickly drunk; bur all thar don'r drink for that purpore cake ir in the Morning, and then tis as footh as new Whire-Wine, but much more fine and clear:
The Vertues of it are, 50 provoke Urine, and give relief in theStone; that is, it lenifies and in fome meafure alfwages che Pain; bur thofe char have tried is don'r rell us of any farther influence of it, in removing the Caule or preventing the growth of the Mifchief for the future.
The Plant from whence the Indico is made grows very for we Ludio plentifully abour in many parts of the Country; and the or, fee Mri. Cotron Trees are nolelscominon. They fow valt quan- Fionts' Redso tities of Ground with the Seed of ir, and make very tion. Lite 3. \(3^{\circ}\) grear profic. The Planr grows up like a fmall Rofe-Bum, thing of the and bearsa yellow Bloffom ; when thele are fallen off, Coton inalr. the Cods appear, and grow to the bignefs of a Mans. Yorape Thumb, the Matter within which is at furf Yellow, Lib. L. But moift and foft. Aschey ripen and grow bigger,they berft, mis fin mare and the included Matter then appears like Wool, and is fland cans. fir for garbering. Amongt that Wool ther find the Seeds fafely wrapt up ; but there's no need of fowing prefemsly and going to raife a fer of frefh Trees, for the old ones will hold on bearing cheir Wool for three or four Years togecher.
There is one Tree more that deferves to be mencioned The Spresh tho' we connot procure the Name of it, but that it may ing Trea not wholly go without one; one may call it the Spread-ing-Trec. Ont of the grear Arms of it thoo forth various litcle Sprigs, which growing downtranls reach the Ground ar laft, and there roor themfelves firmly, proving a" very ftrong fupport to thole mighty Bounhs thar fent them out. Thus the Tree fpreads is felf round inio a vaft Compars, and forms a kind of a.Pavition, capable of enterzaining feveral handreds of Men under ctie frade and thelier of ir .

This is a very good Convenience for Travellers, and 'tische better inthar tis always ready, and in a good condit:on to afferd them a Procection from the heat at any tirec. fince the Trecs in thefe parse are bardly ever ftripd of theirgreen Furniture all the Year round. And by repoor ricre's need coough of fuch Retreats as thefe are from the Sun's violence in Indir, even at that falon of the Year, when many ocherplaces wo ld be elad to feel him a titule more. For they tell us chat the Sun's Meridian Arengeth and heat in the coldeft Day there, is as troubefome asthat of the hoteft Day in Eivgiend; except at the times when the great Rains fall, when the Air is confequentiy in a good meafure clear'd of the hot fulphurous Vapours, and loaded with others of a contrary narure. 4 Loft gentic Wind, reficets from the parch'd Earth, with a heat that raifes blifters upon the Faces of Pcople no: uled to the Cimate; 'tis like the Beath of a burning Furnace; and were not thofe feor hing Whiffs tempered with cerraincool Breezes that blow fomerimes, Forcigners that have always breathed the frefh nitr of other Countries, could never long hold cut breationg this. Our Travellers tell us, that for a Man'toso cut in the hear of the Day, is to run the hazzard of Eeing ftewed alment, and that they are fain to wear their Cloaths as thin and flighe as 'tis confiftent with eiccency to do. Yet are there very fudden precipitate alterations of the Weatherfromoncextream tis arocher, ceen in the mont calm and temperareMonths: And when at Nomn a Man is ready to melt, and a fine Shirr von his Back is a burden, the mid-nighe fullowing. the lice is abour his Tent, and he would be glad of a good Ruge no cover him. In cither of thefe. Refpects, a thick funce of Trees is a good Conveniencefor a Traieller abroad in a wide and an open Country. And Nar:ire has admirably well confulied this in the raifing fuch a Tree as this lately defcribed; its as good asbuilding fo many Inns uponthe Read; nay, in fome refpects beter, fince there will entertain more Paffingers, and a Man's ar no charge nor trouble for a Lodiging.
Toconclude this Account of the regetables, we may obferve that very few of fearce any of thofe Trees that are fo common with us in England, are fecn in this Councry; yer have they very ftrong and fufficient Tim-ber-rrees fir for any ufes we can pretend to pur ours to.
The Accounts of Drugs and Minerals is bur fhorr, tho' to doubr this rare Country is able to cntertain an inguifrive and curious Perfon, with variecies enough of this kind.

Several fine feented Gums there are, and rogether with them good ftorcof Gum Lac, of which they make thicir hard War.
There's a great dcal of C Trimkciwif srowing in Cancs. and Bezoar roncs, which they rake out of the Maws of a forn of Goass. When they obferve thole Crearures to grow very lean (which is a Diagnoftick of the growth of that Stencin their Ventricles) they prefenriy kilit them, and take out the preciors Caufe of thar Confumption. Thefe Goars are moft numcrous upon the Mountains of Lar in the Perfirn Territorics.
Bur there is a much lefs diverfiny in repect of the Animais ( tho' Indic has raritics to fhew us too) for here onc miay fee vaft numbers of thofe Creazures thas our own Country prefents us with every Day.
Their Becfs have a great bunch that grows betwixe their Shoulders, and their Flech is much whiter than that of ocrs.
The Sheep differ from ours more b: their frear bob Tailsthey bave than any ching clie; their Wool is ordinary and courfe, but their Flich farfrom being fo.
Goars and all forrs of Decr are very common amongft them; the Deer are no where inclos'd in Parks, bur enjoy their full Liberty as other Crcarures do, and are every Man's Game that can take them.
The Buffalo has fomething fingular in is, and tis a Atranger to our parts. Tisa large Ecaft, ind has a very thick, fmooth Skin, wholiy without Hair; is gives a rary good Milk, but the Flefh of i: (sno it fomething refembles Becf) yet is ocicher fo pluant nor fo wholfome.
Here are Elks and Antilcrcs too, which are very ftreng and fierce Creatures.
Monkeys, Apes and Babcons are aimiof as common as Dogsand Cars with us; they live moply abour in the Woods, where they are a terrible plagne to the little Eieds that build in the Trecs, by deitrojing all their Neftsand young Ores thar - lic within their reach. But he Birds are generally hard encugh for them; for they Boughs, which are ftrong enough to fupport chings fo very fmall and light, bur are too fine and tender for any Monkey to pretend to rread them.
Fcr carrying of Burthens and other davinh Work, they cimpet uff Affes, Mules, Camels and Dromedarics, which are \({ }_{\text {Dromed }}\) all Natives of this Country.

The Dromedary ( with his Jong Legs) rids.Ground apace, and travets a vaft way in a Day: They are hardy, ftrong, pariont of Labour, hunger and thirft, extreamly fwift and britk in their Motion; and therefore very pro. per for a quick March, or to give an unexpected aflaule to-fame remote place, which would be beyond the ftrength of any Horfe to reach in fuch a determin'd time. Ecbar Sben made a remarkable ufe of them in his Wars in Guarce, and 'rwas owing to the fwifnefs of his Dromecaries, that he made fo quick a Difparch in the conqueft of that Councry. For marching in nine Days (with them ) from Agia to Anndever, he was upon the Backs of the Guiurits before they imagin'd be had been fet our, which Surprize fo confounded them, that they loft the Batt.c and their Liberty, and the Country from that time became a Province of the Indiar-Mrgal Empire.

The Camel deferves the Title of the-moft abfolute Slavcof, any Beaft in the World, for he is fond of his Burchen, he cries and moans ar Night (when 'ris raken off; in a very doleful manner, and feems to be as much pleafed in the Morning when 'ris laid on again. (There's hardly any Crearure like him throughour all nature, unicfs it be a Man of lewd vicious habits, that fits with as much cafc under the heavicit Gpprefions, and counts an atremet to frec him an injury).

The Horfe is a Crcature liere in great cetcem, and tore therefore referved for the noblef Services. They are only for War, or Pieafure, or meer Pomp and Sate; they live as cafily as any of their hind in the World, and the Hores of lome Conntrics are no ', betrer than Peafantry to them. They are brare gererous Crcatures, high motled, curiculy made, and as weil managed by the Natives. Fortheir Colours, fome abee Raven black, many white and fincly dappicd, a greac zamber picd and fotrad all over, and others of moric lophe and gandy Colours. Bur if Narure has nor gren them a Colour to their Riders fancy, they'll make it what they have a mind to by the helps of Art; they'll tinge and colour the Lcgs, Belly and Breaft of them, To that a Horfe looks as if he came out of a Dicrs Varr. Their Hair is wery fhort and foft, and lies fmoorh and fleck apom them, and they are fo well kept that they thine again. Their main Provender is a fort of Grain they call Donna, round, and fomewhat bigger than our Englifi Tares; they boil it and mingle is with courfe Sugar and Butacr, and \(f_{0}\) make it up into Ealls, which they thraft inco their Mociths. This is downright craming of Horfes, and managing them as we do Turkies; 'ris a wonder they don't thut them up in Coxpstoo, and ler them lodge is well as feed like Poultr:: And the rruch on's is, they don'r te down their Horfes Heads with Haulerse (as we do) when they ftand in the Srable, bue give them their Liberty, or at moft faften a Rope on to their hinder Fect, and we know Poultry are often tied by the Legs. But after all it mutt be faid that Horfes are no where betect allow'd and mare cainry look'd to than here ; for every individual Herfe has his Min to drels and wair upen him; which is betcer atuendance than many an honet Man can pretend to, who has neither Horfe nor dian to be bis Serranc.
Bur the Quadrupeds of moft fame and wonder in this R Councry are the Rhinocerots and the Elephants. The former are not very common, and therefore more admucd. They are very large fquare Bealts, much bigger than any Engi: \(i\) Ox of the largett fize. Their Skin (which is thick, rough and withour Hair) lies in grear folds like Armour upon their Necks, Breafts; and Backs. They have flort bur very ftrong Horns ( planted upon firm Bones) thapr lic orer their Noftrils, and are recurve; growing upwards towards the top of their Heads. Each Rhinoceros is fortified with one of thole Horns, which renders them fo terrible, that moft of your other Creatures void them as much as they cin. They make cerrain Cupsof thele Horns, which are reported to comm:nicate a Medicinal Vertue to the Liquor that ftands fome time in them.
The Elephant requires a larger ftory, as a Crearure much better known, and in far grearer ufe; but beint become now fo familiar and well known to the World as'tis, the particular Defcription of ir may be omitted; to make the rrore room for other Obfervations concerning it. Their ftarure is reckon'd to be from nine or ten to furreen or fifteen Foot in height, and with all this mighty bulk they can't be imagin'd tomove very falt ; they do.at beft-rather walk than pace, burmake amends for their gownefs Downefs, in cheir fire and trae going, for they never fall nor ftamble.

The Females go, wowelveMonths with their Young: Tis chirty Years before they come to their full growth, and whey live she ufual Age of a Mar.
I hey are the moft governable and eafily managed Creatures in the World, \(2 s\) a mighry Stip is rum'd abour by the force of 2 fmall Helm, fo are thefe vait Frames determind in their Morions by a mean and defpicable power. The Governour ufes only 2 fmall Rod of Steel made Thatp and crooked ar the end like a Hook; upon the leatt twitch or pull, wirt which che Creature difpofes himfelf ro Obeor polle. A Boy of twelve Years old may do rhis Office, and rule the biggeft Elephant in India, provided it be nor in cheir Madding-ime; that is, when the Males grow hot writh defire of the Eemales.
This Eit lafts for. Fome Days, and then they come to good Temper again; but while'tis upon them, they play the Devil at that rate, that two or three. Troops of Horfe is litule enough to keep one of them in order. They frike any thing that comes in their way, but their Keepers; and whar they ftrike they beat to Pummice, or crufh the Bones of, be it Man, Horfe, Afs, or Camel. They drive all the Town before them, when they break loofe in their mad Fir; the Pcople run helter skelter, and rumble over one another, to avoid the Tread of the angry Monfter: And 'is better to do 10 , tho' a Man gets a broken Head or Shin by it, than to be kick'd to Death by an Elephant. The only way they have to ftop them in their Career, is, f to fire a Train of Gunpowder abour their Ears; this purs them into a Fright, and when they fee the Flath, they'Il fand fill and tremble.
All the while this Hear is uponithem, they fweat prodigioully, and ftink, ar that rate, that a Pig-fty is a Perfume roir: They fay, tis like the rank and filthy Scent of a Boar thar's a fating, bur as much worfe than thar, as the Boar is lefs thary the Elephant. To prevent all Mifchiefs char may be \(\langle\) the by them in their Fury, as foon as ever they begio tógrow diforderly, they are fetter'd with ftrong Chains to the Bodies of great Trees; but fometimes the Frenzy is too ftrong for the Iron, and the Beaft, in fpite of all, takes his Ramble.
But to goon with cheir good and commendable Qualiries: There's hardly any Creature fo much admired for his Sence, fo docible, (and if the application of char term to 2 Beaft may be allowed) to undertanding as the Elephanr is: All the Srories reported of them, are, perhaps, no more to be believ'd, than thofe that are told of Foxes and Monkeys, which fome People have made as wife as the moft accomplif'd Politicians of the Country. But there are forme Paffages remarkable, and odd enough - (ra:ken from the Oblervarion of our Authors, and the cerrain and conftart Reports of credible Perfons in the Councry) that are fufficient to juttifie that Character of ftrange Sence and Apprehenfion, which is commonly fix'd upon this Crearure. Thus they tell us, that an Elephanr will deport and manage himfelf towards another Perfon, according to the private Infructions given him by his Keeper. If he order him to fright a Man, the Elephant will march up to him with a feeming Fury, as if he meant to tread him in pieces, and when he is ar him, do him no harm at all. If he be bid abufe or affrone a Man, he'll take Water up in his Trunk, and Spour it our upon him, or Dirt perhaps, and dafh ir in his Face. . So alfo they are exrreamly fenfible of any Kindnefs done them, and nicely remember the Perfons that have ar-any cime obliged them, by making much of them, or giving them Victuals.
At Afmere (where che Great Mogol then refided), there was one of his Elephants that ufed to be frequemly lead through the Marker, and commonly as he paffed along, 2 certain Herb-woman that had a Stall there, ufed ro give him a Bunch of green Herbs: It happen'd one time, that this Elephant being in his Heass, broke loofe from his Keepers, and rook his way through the Market ; all the People endeavouring to fecure themfelves from him, by fying and fiding as weil as they could. Amongtt the reft chis Herb-woman ran away too, and being in a great Horry and Frighe, left her young Child behind her upon the Srall. The Elerhane was nor fo mad, bur he ftoppdd at the place wher: he fuled to have his Bunch of Herbs, and freing the Child lic zherc, he cakes it renderly up in his Trunk, and goes and lays ir down (withour the leaft ham in che Wodid) upon a Stall of a neightouring Houfe: When:lie:had done chis fober AEzion, and chus exprefs'd his, Gracitude to his Benefactor, away he went in his mad Couirfe as before.
Añd if at any rime they are mifus'd, and receive Injuries, they are as implacably prejudiced, againft thofe Per-ifons that have affronted them, and fure to revenge it, if ever.they have a fair:oppóruntity. Qne of them did in; this formal manner, lay, and execute a Plot to be reven: ged of his Governour that had abus'd him.
- Being upon, a Journey; in feems, the Man was laid down to fleep, but was pofted fo our of the Elephant: reach, that he could not ftrike him either with his Trunk or Tecth. However, haring fome green Canes by him; he takes one of them, and having fplit it with his Trunk 4 confiderable way, he reaches our that end of it thar was fplit, and twifting the Man's Hair pretry fecurely in ir, by thar means he dragg'd him down to him: Whar he did with him, is eafie to be imagin'd, the Elephant did nor play that. Trick for norhing. And 'tis a very common thing for thefe Creatures to be raughr and managed fo, as to take up young Children in their Trunks, tols and fwing Chem about, and then fer them down again, with as much Care and Tendernels as their Mothers could have done. The Great Mogol once made his own Son, a young Prince of feven Years old, be thus tol'd abour by one of his managed Elephants, and after the litrle Prince, the Children of Reveral of his Nobles that were there prefent, and none receiv'd the leaft Injury imaginable. From all which Inftances (tho a grear many more may be colleeted up and down), a Man will fee Reafon cnough to fall our with a Cartefian, with. whom all thefe Creatures are fo many Picces of meer Clockwork, and their ACtions the Effects purely of Wheel and Spring, as 'ris in common arrificial Machines.
Such a Srory is evidently too rain and frivolous to deCerve a ferious Refutation; however, as long as there are any Animals alive, it will nor want innumerable ones, and the Cartcfians, by converfing with Nature, and obferving the Actions of Animals, may eafily convert thenrelves to more reafonable Opinions, and rogether with Wheel and Spring, learn to acknowledge allo the Infuence and Prefence of a more noble and fteddy Principle in the Government and Determination of thefe Creatures Motions.
The Elephants having fuch mighry Carkafles, are not to be maintain'd with a litcle, efpecially if they are well kept (as all the Mogol'sare), 'is very chargeable: There's none of them that are called the Royal Elephants, of which there is Three hundred, but ear him 70 Roupies 2 piece (a Day) in Grain, Butrer; and Sugar; bur they cin't fpend upon a Mafter that's betuer able ro afford ir Take them our of cheir mad Fits, and they are not found to have Vigour and Courage proportional to their huge Bulk. An Engliß. Maftiff boldly affaulted one of them, faftined upon his Trunk, and the Elephant having fwung him up and down a great while, at laft threw him to 2 confiderable diftance from him, and was very glad to be rid of him fo: This was one of the Dogs that was prefented to the Great Mogol by the Englifh Merchants ; and when this Story was told him, he was exceedingly pleas'd at it; the Dogs were entertain'd, and lived at a mighty rate, they were carried up and down with him in Pa lankees, had each of them four Men to autend them, and to fan away the Flies; and the Mogo! had a Pair of Silver Tongs made on purpofe, that he might feed them with his own hand.
To conclude the Account of this Animal, it is confdently affirmed of them by all their. Keepers, that they will never ufe their Females in the prefence of any SpeCtaror, and that in all chofe Narural Actions they are fo referved and clofe, that they will not endure any to be nearthem; while they are aboutchem: A Atrange Inftance of Modefty in a Brurc, and as remarkable as any of their Qualities chat are known to us.
As for other Animals, our Accounes are not fo parricu- Iyons. Trlar: There are Lions and Tygers, Wolves, and Jackals, fome of which do often ramble abour in the Night-time vifiting the Tents of Travellers, and ftealing away their Sheep and Goais: Nay, in Towns that are near great Woods, they'll come into the vary Yards of the Houles, leap a Wall, and carry off their Prey cleverly along with hem.
More than this, they very commonly hunt under Ground for Prey as well as above it, the Dead can'r.rett in their Graves for them, but (unlefs they are buried very deep) they'll remove them into another Sepulchre, cheirown hinagry Bellies.
The Rars, in fome old Towns, are very troublefome, and in their proportion as ravenoas as the Lions. Our Englifkimen complain, thar fome of them were biten as they lay in cheir Beds; that the Rars would fall a nibbling their Toes, or the Tips of their Ears, or'fomectimes the Tops of their Nofes, or any part chat lay expoled to chem. thathe mean rime, to be fure, they could nor fleep very Cound, while all this Mifchief was a doing; for otherwife twould make a Man ftare prety fuficiently to wàke inthe Morning, and mils two or chree Toes, or find his Ears gone, when he was fure all was fafe and well as his going to Bed.

\(\ln f e=t, d x\). Mufquetoons, and the Chinches Repole are the Flies, the and the orhers by Night, do exercife the Parience of Men, whofelot is caft in this Country. The former are a fort of Gnats, and the latter are like Tikes, and are the worle Plague of the two by far; for they bite while they are alive, and ftink naftily when they are dead; fo that a Man had better endure the Torment of their biting, than have che Poyfon of their foul tench.

The Scorpions are the moft dangerous and remible of all, and they creep into their Houles very much, when the rainy Seafons come on. The little Inftrument they do the Mirchicf with is very Tharp, hard, and crooked, like the Talon of a Hawk, they don't thruft it in and our of their Bodies, as fome other Creazures do their Stings, but ir always appears in their Tails ready mounted, to give the faral prick. The Remedy they ufe, is an Oyl of Scorpions; or if they can catch the Scorpion it felf that gave the Wound, they bruife it, and apply it to the part: This, if prefently done, feldome faifs of giving Relief.

The Lizards run very commonly abour their Houfes roo, but thefe are very harmiefs Creatures, and may be allowed for Domefticks well enough.

Thus we have taken a hort View of Nature jn India; we fhall now pafs ro Matters of Civil and Political Confideration.

And firt as for the Trade of the Country, we thall
The Trade, thich fee Which fee. Accounc of Accouns of lee will give 2 very fufficient Account of it. We may the trade of modities, they have carried thither, and brought back the Eap. Indies from thence. In general, 'ris enough to fay, that the moft mnd others op & down Taple Commodicies of the Empire, are Indico and CottonWool. They draw all their Spices from the fame places that we ferch ours, from Fava, Sumatra, the Bande and Molucca Inles: For Indoftan, as rich as 'ris, wants good ftore of Clove, Nutmeg, and Cinamon-Trees. A litle Silk they have amongit them, which their own Councry produces, but the greareft Quancities are broughr from Perfia and Georgia, which are capable of furnifhing the whole World with that Commodity.
Their beft outward Trade is to Moina in the Red Sea, whither a Ship of an extraordinary grear Burden goes from Surct once a Year conitancly. The main Commodiries vented thete, are Cotton-Wool, and Cotron-Cloth, white and ftain'd; and cheir Rerurns are moft commonly all (or the moft part) in Moncy, Gold, and Silver, to the Value of 2000001 . at a rime.
Their common Coyn is Roupies, and Mamoodics, both pgrons se beiween Two Shillings and Two Shilling and Six being cond Voyagre and the latter abour T welpe-pence; bur borh of them are made in Halres, and fome few in Quarters; fo that Three-pence is the leaft Piece of Silver current in the Country, and very few of them to befeen. The Silver Coym is made either round or fquare, bur all to thick, that is never breaks or wears our ; 'ris befides very fine and pure too, having nothing of Allay: Upon this account, even in the Spanif Money ir felf (which is the pureft of all Europ:?, there is Come lofs.
They have fome Gold Coyn too, and that extraordinarily gcod; and Pieces of very grear value; but thefe very feldom come abroad. All Forcign Coyn and Bullion, when ir comes into thele parts, is prefently melred down and refined, and being new col n'd, has the Mogol's Stamp (which is his Name and Tirles, in Pctfinn Characters) fet upon it. All People are very weiceme, that will bring their Bullion or Money in hither, and carry away their Merchandice for it ; bur 'ris a Crime tor eafily forgiven, to tranfport any Quancity of Money from hence.
In all the grear Towns they keep two Markets every Day; the firtt in the Morning alittle before Sun-rifing; and for akout an Hour after: And the fecond, when the Sun is as low in the Evening. Twould be impoffible for fuch Crowds of People as frequent thefe Markets, to come together without fwelering, and almoft ftifing one another in the Heat of the Day: And therefore they take the Cool of the Morning and Evening to do Bufinefs in, and pals the fcorching Hours of the Day in their Houfes, or fome thady Retrears in cthcir Gardens, where they fleep and enjoy the Pleafures thar Narure has afforded them:

The Natives of this Country, are, for the generality, like Alabafter,' in comparifon to themelves: For they fay, all Leprous People are white, 'ris the Colour of that foul Diftemper, and they don't care for'r upon that fcore.

There are very few ctooked deforin'd People amonght them, hardly fuch a thing as a Hunch-back ro be feen all over Iridia, 2 Mat of undue Size, or irregular ProportiA ons.

Their Hair is very black, but ffreight, and not ar all like that of the Africans: The Mabometans wear no Hair upon their Chins, but that on their upper Lips they fuffer to grow as long as 'twill. And to prelerve che Colour of ir, they ufe very much Black Lead Combs, which do their Bufinefs effectually, 'rill Old Age begins to thraft out Grey Hairs; Hairs thar in fpite of all the Black Lead Combs, will thew their Colour; and tell them 'tis in vain to ufe thofe Arss any longer. Then they quir the nfe of the Razor;" and let all the Hair of their Faces grow to its full length : But thofe that do this, are either very Old Men, or fome of the Priefts, that fancy a Sacrednefs in 2 long Beard, and think they \{peak with more Authority to the People, when they blow their Words out through a Thicker of overgrown Hairs. The Mabometann Indians too have all the Hair off from their Heads, one Lock only excepred, which is left upon the Crown ; and that is for the Propher to take hold of at the Day of Judgment, and drag them up to Paradife by. The Heathen part (calld Hindoes) not expecting to be pulld up in that manner, leave no Lock ar all upon the Crown, nor no where clfe, bur fhave all off: So that where-ever their Paradife lies, and however they get to it, they think to be fetch'd in 2 civiller way than that the Mabometens talk of.
Shaving being fo comfant and frequenr a Practice a. monglt them, there are confequenthta grear number of Barbers, whomake their Bufinefs and Province fomething larger than our Eurcpean Barbers do. N Morr, they trim a Man from Head ro Foot, pare off allitis Superfluities; not only his Hair, but his Nails upon Mingers and Toes, and cut his Corns roo. They carry a Stee Speculum always abour with them, which is as large as a Trencher, and fomerhing gibbous, and being well polin'd, fervesalmoft as well as a common Looking-Glafs; only 'tis certain, that the Converity of it fomething deforms the Image, and may poffibly thew a Man an uglicr Face than he really has. When they meer a Man that they think needs trimming, they don'r ask.him, Whether he will pleafe to be haved or no? Bur withour any mare adoe whip their Glaffes our of their Pockets, and fhew him his Face: This they think is a better way to perfwade a Man ro come inro their Hands, than to make a Leg, and ask ro be fer a-work.
The Drefs and Habit of this Country is uniform and in-Ikitlia variable; they always keep to the fame Mode; che high- both yman eft Lord, and the pooreft Peafant, have their Cloaths \({ }^{\text {and }}\) Hioan made the fame way. The former perhaps appears in his rich Silks or Embroideries, and the latter in fome coare Stuff; but as for the Farkion, the Lord and the Countryman are both upon a l.evel, and the one is as Genteel as the other.
Their Garb is a Coat that firs clofe and tight to their Bodies, and reaches to (or below) their Knees: Under this they have another fhorter, and laftly a fort of Breeches like the Irißh Troules, thar come down to their Ankles, and ruffle apon the Small of the Leg. The Grandess make their braveft Apparel of Silks, Taffara's, or Clorhs of Gold and Silver; bur moft commonly fine white Callico Lawn is the" wear. Their Head-Covering is fome fine Cloth (perhaps as their Quality is, embroider'd or flourih'd with Silk, Gold, or Silver) wreath'd feveral times abour, the Ends of which are fometimes fringed, and difpoled fo as ro hang in fight. Abour their Waftes they wear 2 Girdle that comes rwice about, of the fame Sruff, and adorn'd with a Fringe. Our Englißh Scarlet Broad Cloth is a thing they mighrily admire, and abundance of the Great Men make it cheir upper Garment; but'the heat and thicknefs of it will nor allow ir to be worn in the hot Country bur in the cooleft Weather, and that in the cooleft part of the Day too.

As for the Womens Drefs, 'tis not fo cafie to give an exact Account of that, fince (unlefs they are either leud or poor) they are not feen abroad; and no Suranger has the Privilege of feeingthem arhome.
Since the Females of Quality then (whole Drefs is to be fuppos'd the Perfection of the Country in that kind) are thus retired and our of the way; we muft turn our Eyes to the Vulgar, and fec in what manner their Cloaths are hung on, and what they are. And here 'ris faid of them, tharthey drefs almoft likerthe Men; they wear Coars, and it feems Breeches sco, which moft Worien wonld be glad to do as well 25 they. Bur the Indian Women wear:chem in the liveral Sence itniverfally; and sbundance of themi Magiftrates have the like Refpect in proportion amongft do it in the Mexiphorical to fome purpofe; bur this it feems is a Court Fantion, and theGreat Mogul's beloved Normabal fers them àn example. Over their Heads they caf \({ }_{2}\) Callico Veil, which covers their orher Garmens, and will hardly fuffer theirBreeches to be feen. They bore their Ears not only in the flaps, bur all round abour, for tie conveniency of hanging a multitude of Pendants in them their Noftrils are picrced too to receive a Ring or two that muft be hung there; and upon their Wrifts and the fmall of their Legs they wear others fitted to thole parts: All thefe Ornaments are of Gold, Silver, Brals or Irom, according to their Ability.

But to go from thie outward to the inward Drefs, the Temper and Qualities of their Minds. They are a Pcople of a ftrorig and quick Apprehenfion, ready Wirs, and very grcat Fancy and Ingenuiry in all manner of fine Works.
This, their delicate ftain'd Cloths, theit Silks, their Cotion Carpers of fo many mingled Colours; in thors, all their flower'd Works in Silk, Gold and Silver, are plentiful Evidences of. Then they make all forts of Cabinets, Boxes, Standihes, Trunks, &c, with that exquifite Skill and Fancy, that they deferve to be recken'd amonglt the Mafter Work-men of the World in all thefe Refpects.
They'll inlay (with Elephants Tooth, Mother of Pearl, Ebony, Tortoife-hell, or Wire) any thing that is capableof being wrought upon; they work abundance of Cups out of Agate, Corncliàn and other fine Stones ; polim and cur all manner of Jewels, and underftand the value of them as well when they have done. They know how so buy and fell all thofe nice nicklith Commodities, atod he that gets the betrer of them in a Bargain muft be a very cunning Man indeed. Then in all the Arss of Lolouring, Limning, Varnifbing, \(D_{j i n g}\), they are Secorsf to no. People wharfoever. Faces they do admirabit ell, and will draw any thing immediately either from the Life or another Copy; however 'ris all donero the Life, and he thar fees their Pictures, will ear fily know the Originals.
With all this Wir and Towardliners, there goes along (at leaft as to the major part) a good flare of obliging Humour and carriage.
They are civil and courteous enough to Srrangers; and thofe that won't wrong and affront them, may fit as fecure and eafie there, as under their own. Vines and Figtrees. 'Tistrue there are fome of another kidney to be met with fometimes, troops of Thieves that go robbing and fpoiling up and down, and oblerve no Law but that of enriching themfelves by the plunder of others; but we are now difcourfing of the People, not of the Ver \(\min\) of the Country \(;\) into the Catalogue of which all fuch Creatures are to be brought as are hurtful and in jurious to Mankind. Take the People that you conterfe with almoft any where in the Empire, and you'll find them (very few excepred) fuch as won't difturb your repofe if you don't firft diftuxb theirs. Many of them are very patient, gentle, and good natur'd too, and will take Affronts tho' they won' give them.
There was' a remarkable Inftance of this in a rery great Man, (nolef' than the Governour of Surat's Brother) and one that had Power cnough to have punifh'd if he had been revengefully difpos'd. This grearPerion was niding in State thro' the Street at Surat, when up comes to himan Englifh Cook, that belongid to Sir Thomes Row, ftaggering drunk, and forcid to reft upon his own. Sword to preferve himfelf from cumbling. His firf Salutation was, Now you Heartien Dog! to which, when the No ble-man only replied, Caci-ef, Caci-fa; What fayent thou? The Cook endeavour'd to rell him by his Sword (fince he wastoo drunk to talk much himfelf) making a found blow at him. One would have thought the Retinue of this grear Perfon, thould have dreft the infolent Cook ar fuch a rate, as would have ipcild his craking Sauces and drefling Dinners for the cime to come. However he was only fiez'd and confind, till word was fent to the Embaffadour; and tho the Honourable Perfon freely refigned him to the urmoft Punilhment they thought fit to inflict uponhim, yer he was prefently fent home again without any farther harm done him. Now the Queftion is, Which was the Heathen Dog of chefe two? chereciling drunken Englifh Man, or the fober remperate Indion, that govern'd his own Paftions under fo unrea fonable an Abrfe?
'Tis 2 farther juft Commendarion of thefe People, Submifion thar they are generally poffels'd with Principles of 2 prowars, moft profound Refpect and Veneration for their Superiours. They adore theien? rince, and keep his Laws with a moft Religious Zcat and Conftancy. All inferiour thenf; and even in the fmatleft Govertiment (privare Families) thé Word of the Malter is a Law, which is obeyed by all his Servints withour difpute or grambling. ling.

Bur afier all is said, they are (for the greateft part) a timorous, cowardly and mean fpirited People. They Cowndities had racher by half ear than quarrel, and quarrel than fight; and they will fometimes give one another fuch icarvy Lenguage: ('as would nor go off without Blood amongt People of more Metrle) and yet neither frikea itroke nor offer to draw all the while. 'Tis common with them to ftand fcolding in their Armour, and wirhall their Weapons abour them; and if one has Courage to take another by the Throat and collar him, he's a mighty Souldier for this, and the Spectarors prefencly cry our Sba-Abbas; by this they mean. 'ris a Noble Action, and as well done as Sha-Abbas himfelf could have done it: that famous Perfian King, whofe Valour is the Matrer of a Proverb in chis Conntry. And the Grenì Mogal himfelf ufed rofay, that one Portugueze would bear three of his andians, and one Engliß Man three Portugueze; fo that accoraing to the Prince's computation, thic Englijh Vaour is to the I-dian as nineto one. But this is not to be taken as univerfally true, and withour all exceprion throughout the whole Empire. For within the Bounds of Tbe Valcur, itarethe:Balocijes, which are Mabemetans, the Patans in Truftiness, Bengain, and the Resboots, a Sect of the Pagen Indimns ac. which are Men of Noble Spirits and Refolution, and will look any Adverfary or Danger in the Face. Thefe are made ule of as Guards and Convoys upon all Occafons, in which Offices they are wonderfully dilizent and faithfrl, and will die upon the fpor before they'll defert their Charge. They ferve ar very low and reafonable for 2 Man ; and if no more chan five Shillings a Month por a Man; and if you pay them thefe Wages duly and punctually, if you have occation for any of their lives and can't be fecur'd by other means, they'll freely parr with them in your Service. And befides, they are generally of fuch juift Principlestoo, that if they have rheir Pay before-hand, and fhould happen to be afterwards warn'd to provide themfelves orher Mafters; they will erve our their appointed time, and you cannor get them to leave you, before they have performed their Bargain Bur then yourmuit be fure to keep touch with them, and pay them their Hire, precifely ar a Day, for otherwife they'll give you warning to provide your felvés with orher Servants.
Thus ir happen'd to fome of Sir Thomias Rop's Company; A pleafin: upona Journey to Court; their Money was gone, and \({ }_{\text {Ref boot: }}^{\text {Story }}\) of 2certain Resboot that attended them left them upon the Road, becaule he faw their Srock was juft our and it would not laft to pay him punctually upon his. Day But however before he went away, be goes to rake his leave of the Camel, that was his peculiar Charge, and made a Speech ro him to this purpofe, That he had rended and led him thus long, and been a very kind and fairhful Governour to him (as he knew very well) bur now his Mafters Money fail'd, and fre muft be gone; bar he prayed God to blefs him for the remaining part of the ourney, and fend him fome orher Governour to look after him thar might be as careful and good to himin as he had been. Had the Camel had the Gift of Underftanding and Speech, there's no doubr but he would have faid Amen to this Prayer, being fo much for his good; bur zowever the Indian, when he had concluded is, went off, and would not ftay with them, tho they were to Have a frefh Return of Money in two Days.
Ancther thing very oblervable in the Temper and Hü- their Suri: mour of this People is, their ftrange tendernefs of the pin prefervine Lives of all forts of Animals; and it maybe'tis the beft way the Eives of o excufe their cowardlinefs to account for't fronit hence, Animets. that'cisa Principle anoongt them nor to thed Blood. 'Tis rue this Humour does not fpread in the extremity of is all round the Country; burlies moftly among the Hindoes or Hearhen part, of which there are various Sects and Subdivifions; yet they are all in general tenderer of their ving Crearares here, than in moft places befides.
But the fcrupulous Sect of them is nice and firapulous indeed. They can't bear to fee a Flie.fo much as haunted and perfecured by anotherPerion; bur for their own parts, they'll let them crawl intotheir Mouths rather than kill them. They may bire and fting them, bur they'Il not be provoked to be their Murderers. So far from that, thar they'll pay Redemprion Money for them, and buy the Lires of thefe vexatious Animals, at any time when they are in danger.
The Englifh Boys have gor many a Penny in Rainforns" for Flics, and Tikes, and Mufquetoons; for the Hindoes go upon a moft merciful Principle, and know that
that if they were Flies themfelves, they thould nor be with ing to be Iquecz'd to dearh between the cruel Fingers of the Boys. (Tho' by the way, if a Man would give a loofe ro his humour he mighr quickly fpend an Eftare arit, and itarve and beggar his own Family, by faving the Lives of Infects, that will plagae him when he has done) Oh ! How would the Emperor Domitian (that celebrated Fly-catcher) have been loved by thele people? or had the Romans been as tender-hearted as the Indians are, what good Earnings might he have made on'r, by faving many Thoufands of innocent Lives, that have been barbaroully facrificed in his Clofer? But then 'ris nor only thefe litule fluttering Animals that the Hindoes are fo kind to, but all othersth' ever fo noxious and offenfive; they are mild and gentle to the very wort upon the Face of the Earth, and won'tdeftroy a Crearure thar may poffibly, either poifon ordevourthem. Bur if they are barmless and inoffenfive ones, they do all that can be for their Eale and Comfort; and therefore 'tis confidently reported, that the Benjans do build Holpirals for them, where they place all their feeble, lame, difeafed Animals, and uife means to recorer them to Health and Strength again. And 'ris piry thofe Rerfons that-reported this, had not gonea litule a farcher, and told us too, whar Salary the Banyans allow to the Governour, and Phyfician in ordinary, to one of thofe beaftiy Hofpitals. This would have been fomething parricular; bur fince it is denied us, we'll leave the matter as it is; the Founders of those Buildings and the Doctors too, to the Thanks of the mi Cerable Patients that are lodged therc.
We will now confider the Stare of Religion in the Country.

It has been obfcurely ininted before upon another Occafion, that the Inhabitants are of two forts, Mabometans and pure Pegars

Tin= former are by far the lefs number, bur they are the more confiderable Perfons; for this is the Courr Religion, and not only the Trince himfelf, bur ahmoft all the Grandees throughour the Country are of it, at leaft thole that are in places of the higheft Digniry and Truft.
As for the Doctrine of: Mabomet, it came inno the Country with this race of Emperours. In Tamerlane's time, and fo all along cill the Conquef, the Religion was entirely Pegan, and there were as many forts of Deiries in vogue, as there were petty Princes thar had their thares in this huge Empire. Nor bur thar the fame Superfticions coninue ftill in being amongft the Resboots, and the various Sects of the Hindoes; but at that rime there was nothing elfe, 'twas all pure Payanifm; there was no party amongef them that profefs'd the Knowledge and Worthip of one Supreme Being (withour the corruption of Images and Inferiour Deities) as the Mabometans do. 'Tis needlefs to go to defribing their Religion at large; tis enough to lay that they are Mabometans, and that they believe and practife as others of thar way do The main difference is, thar they are nor fuch ftiff, rigid Malometens as fomeothers in the World are: Any Perfon has the liberty nct only to profefs his own Religion, but a!fo to maintain it by Argument againtt theirs. This would coft a Man his life amongtt the Turks, Moors, or Arabs, who will fooner by half ftab a Chriftian than enterinto a Dippure with him. But the Indians are more cool and free in their Tempers and Principles; they will maintain the Doctrine of Mabomet, but ar the tame ame they'll give another Man leave to.'defend that of fefus Cbrift.
Tom Coryet had once 2 prenty warm Difpure with one of the Molla's, or Priefts ; and the Queftion that lay be twixt them was, which of the two was theMuffulman, that , the True Believer. And after 2 grear many Words Spent on both fides, our Country-man Corpat ended the Difpute with this witry diftinction; that he himfelf was the Orthodox-Muffulman, and the Prieft was the Pfeudo-dox-Muffulman; tharis, he was the True True Belieand the other was the Falle IrueBeliever; 2 finer and fubciler diftinction than ever wascoin'd in any Mabometan School in Indir: The fame Perfon did at another timeas remarkably difcoter his Zealfor Chriftianiry, as now he did his hapry Talent in deciding Concroverfies; But what Prudence he demonitrated by it all the World may judge. For as the Diolla's were one"Day (according to the Cuftom ) calling the People to their Devotion from the high Turrets of the Mofques, bawling our La Alla illa Alls stubammed Refululla; Corjat gets up upon the top of fomericry high Houfe jut over againft them, and frreams out (in a Tongue that they very well underitood.) La Alls illa Alla Häaret Eefa Refululla, There is no God but one God, and the Lord Jefus is the Prophet of God befides this, he told them Mabomet was an Impoftor, and ellmeir Religion a meerlye and a chears, and abundance more to the famepurpofe, which the Zeal of this Ortho dox-Muffulman then dictared to him. Now had this mad rrick been plaid in any orher part of Afia, he had died with all the torments, that could have been invented; but the milder Indians paffed ir by, and befides Coryat had the happinefs to be chought mad by fome of them, and upon all thefe Accounts they let him alone.
Bur men befides, the Princes of this Country (tho' The mon them, been che loofeft and moft carelels in their Principles of any of that Sect that ever were in the World. They havenor fcrupled to oppofe and contradiet Mabomet himfelf, to pretend to ftand in comperition with him for the Honour of the Propherhip, and invent rhemfelves with the fame Character. Thus Ecbar Sha finding himfelf as great a Prince as Mabomet, fer up for as good a Propher too, and made himfelf the Head of a party. And his Son Selim Sba propagared his Fathers Herefie with vigour, nay, carried it higher than ever he did: for whereas he pretended but to ftand upon a Level with Mabomet, the orher rais'd himfelf above him ; the Facher was a good, but the Son would needs be a betrer Prophet, and thereupon he made 2 new Law according to his own fancy, containing the Doctrines of Mofes, fefus, Mahomet, and the Bramins jumbled all together. And he had his Difciples too (ar leaft fome that to flatter him called themielves fo) and was very glad ar any cime when any Company about him would run a divifion againft Mabomet, tho' 'twas ever obferv'd, that he never either fooke himfelf or countenanc"d in any other, an indecent Word of our Bleffed Saviour.
'Tis more oblervable ftill (and a greater Argument of their coolnefs in the Mabomstan Religion) that the two Princes lately mention'd have given confiderable Encouragements to Chriftianity. Not fo much out of Love to chat, as to Novelty, to pleafe their own Fancies, and thew their Aurbority.
The famous Jefuir Xavierius was fition from Goajecistem to Agra, in A. D. 1596 . on purpofe to argue the Doctrines ino ma of the Chriftian Religion, before Ecbar (chen Reigning) and the Mabometan Mollas. That Jefuir Spoke the Perfinn and Indoftan Tongues perfectly well (which was a:wonderful Advantage to him) and asmuch a Papift as hewas hemanaged that point like a Chritian, and to the Ho nour of the Author of hisReligion. The Molla's were ableto make no Exceprions againft thar noble Scheme of the Chriftian Religion, which Xavierius prefented them with. He demonftrated the perfect reafonablenefs of is, from the Perfections of God, and the Na ture and lapfed Condition of Man; making ir out in the firft place by clear and undeniable Proofs, that the Human Narure could nor poffibly have come out of the Crearors finifhing Hand, withall thofe ftains and blemiThes that are now fo confpicuous in it; from whence the Farher inferr'd Man's degeneration from his primitive Inregrity, and the neceflity (confequently.) of a Re. demprion. Then he demonftrated from all the Characters both of the Perfon, Doctrine, and Miracles of Jefus, that as he was the grear Meffenger of God, and qualified to be the Redeemer of Mankind; To the World never faw any befides himfelf that could, without the higheft Blalphemy, pretend tonit to. In fhort that Prince not only heard Xevierious paciently from one end of his Argument to the other, butkept him at hisCourt (to preach the fame Doctrine to him ) for a Year and a half.
But ar last he gave him leave to return to Gor, and told him he would fend for him fome other time, to hear him realon again upon thofe matrers; but that cime never came, and chePrince here pur a ftop to his Enquiries into the Chriftian Religion. The good Facher however had his Honour, to have born 2 Teftimony to the Name of Jefus, before the greareft King upon the Earth.
One thing by the way is remarkable enough in chis Ecbar Sba, whether before or after his acquaintance wich Xavierius is not certain. And that is, that when twas told ar the Court, that the Portugueze had hanged the Alcoran about an Afles Neck, and fo whipp'd him about the Streets of Ormus in conrempt of the Mcisometions; and the old Emprefs his Morher came in a grear rage, and demanded of him chat our Bible might be treatedin ike manner ar Agra; the Princereplied, No, tho the Porugueze had done very ill in what they had done, yer Religion muft not fuffer for their Crime, and. rhe-Bible being an innocent Book, was not to be difgraced becaufe che Alcoran had been fo.

Sba Selim his Son and Succeffour, has not lefs counce-tiboris annc'd Chriftianity than he did, (bur all chings contider'd) grated to a grear deal more. For feveral Ie fuics having .etted there, bedie he gave them free loave to mak is many Converissasthey could, declaring at the fame time that no Man thould lofe his Eavour by becoming a Chriftian. The rruth on'r is, hedoes not greatly care what Religion his Subjects are, \(f^{\circ}\) they are true and loyal to him; bur then Chritianity ferting fo ftrong a guard upon theHonour and Righrs of Princes as ir does, 'tis no wonder that a Prince that knew any thing of its tendernefs in all thofe poincs, thould be willing to have his Subjects made Chriftians. And tis known of this. Prince that he has prais'd and rewarded the Conftancy of thofe in their Chritian Profefion, whom neither Threatnings nor Promifescould remove from it, when he made ufe of thofe methodsfor trials take. Bur if he found any Man play. tricks with that or any other Religion, ufe it to ferve a turn, or as a flooing Horn to any fecular Intereft, he would cerrainly punim him if he wcre within his reach. He hared Hypocrifie in his Subjects, and could nor endure to fee any of them half Fin and half Flem, tho be himfelf was reducible to no predicament; being neither Clriftian, Mabomesan, nor Lfeathen, bur a quid Compcirum of them all; if any thing was Mafter in himabove the reft, it was the Atheift. Yet would this Prince fometimes as ftrenuouly defend the Chritian Religion by Argumear in publick, as thesmoft zalous Prince in Chriftendom could have done, is he did particularly when Father Corft (a Florensine Jefuit, and a Man of better Principles than the moft of his Order then in India) was fohard par upon by Sulcan Caroon in his prefence.
The Jefuiss Chapel it feems having been accidentally fircd, and all the Furniture confomed, a certain wooden Crucifix coiy happen'd to feape the rage of the Flame. The King (who uled this Perfon very familiarly) fenr for him (or he wenunimfelf) to Court, where he told the titory of the Praicrvation of his Crucifix. Now tho' chishad keen byifid abour for a grear Miracle, yer the Jefuithad moofinenfe than to ufe fich a poor thing as an rold Sir Themas Rem br whar means the thing came to be preforved, and it icems there muft have been a Miracle almot to have deftrowed it However Sultan Carion (a violenthater of ail Chriftians) zook up the mater and fella bantering the Jcteitupon't, and told him that he and all the Company would be Baptized, if he would throw his Crucifix into a Fire there bcfore the King's Face, and yield to be burnt himfelf if the Fire did not confume it. But when the Jefuit refufed this unreafonable Trial, the Prince lafl'd at hisReligion feverely, and fpoke horrid irreverent chings of the Author of it; and then'rwas that the King rook him up, and argued from our Saviours Miracles, that he was the greateft of Prophets that cver appear'd in the World, and expos'd the Mabometen Saints (in comparifon with him) as a Company of dreaming, infipid, conpry. Pretenders.
Now after this is obferved conceming the Ind:Hair Reiginan Michometens, the general Latitude and Eafuncfs of mes Ritro, their Principles, which is their main diftinguining CbaVors of Reli- racter, theirRites and Cercmonies may be learne from jouptrios the refe of the Mabometan Werld. They perform Pilgrimages, undergo bodily Labours and Sevcritics, Pray five times a Day, wath before they begin their Devetion; and are Circumcized.

Their Sabbach is on cur Fricay; their Ramadam or Lent commences the firft New Noon in Sprember, and holds the wholc Moon ont ; the laft Day of which they fpend in Morning for their deceafid Friends, and fet up great Lighrs all abour their Howfes, upon the expiring of which, the Ceremony ends, and they fall to their Entercainments.
They have alfo their Dervifes and Reclufes, that retire from the World, and give themflves ro a life of Contemplation and Prayer; thefe chufe the top of fome high Hill, fome fnug place in a Wood, or narural Grotro for their Refidence; and here they live like Nabuchadnezart, with overgrown Hair and Nails, and feed like him tco upon the wild Products of the Earth.
Their Mendicants, or begging Saints take a litclemore care of thempres; for they live in the out skirts of the grear Towns and Ciries, where chey are with in the reach of better Entertainment; thefe fleep ali Night in the athes of thore Fires they make by Day, and rake a Pride (forit can'r be a pleafore) in having their naked Bodies appear all over befmear'd with chem. They ofren take fome frange intoxicating thing or other, which makes them taik wildly, and like diftracted Men; and then the common People croud abour them and fav, they are infired and have the Gift of Prophecy: Mad-Men it feems arc Prophets in India, as on the other hand, Prophets are no better than: Mad-Men in. Europe. The ficiaters (as they call them) laik and cur themfelves like the Priefts of Baal ; they make horrible Wouitds and Gaps in their Bodies, to provoke the Compafion and Charity, or Wonder and Adrination of the common People; but they fhould ferve them as Plato advis'd abour Diogenes, ftanding up to the Ears in cold Water, let them alone and take no notice of them, and they'll quickly learn to forbear thofe Severities thernfelves.

Their Pilgrims and Votaries torment themfelves (litrle lefs than the former) with their tedious Journeys; fcorching their naked Feet in the Sand; rhey are all soverd with blew Mantles, which is their Mourning Colour in thofe parts, and the nevcr-failing badge of a Pilgrim; they travel a valt number of Miles in thofehorrid burning ways, to vifit the Sepulchres of their famous Saints; and when they come chither they are as wife as they were before, bur they think themfelves wifer, and the vulgarare fuch fools as to think fo too. \(\qquad\) Ticiansas In the matters of Marr:age, they take all the Liberty riages and Latitude that theDifciples of Matomet in other parts of the World do. The Prophet by his Law permies them to have four Wives, and other Women as many as their Eftates and Circumftances in the World wiil allow of. And they moft of them go to the vemoft Bounds of the Law, take their four Wives, tho' they are not able to keep one.
Anirdian Scrvant of SirThomas Rows would nceds go our one Dayro be Married (forfocth) and yet he had three Wives ar the fame time (with a good fock of Children)and but five Shillings a Month to maintain them ail. This is drawing Bills upon God Almighty, without any Wairant or Encouragement to believe they fall ceer be paid.
Their Marriage Rires are perform'd with much folemnity amongtt them, and when they are over, they make as great a flew in the Streess; the Man with his Friends mount a-Horfc-back, and the Woman with hers go into Coaches, and the Procetion is !ed on with Drums and Wind-Mufick

Their Children arefaid to be bred up rery hardity in their tendereftinfancy; and the Mothers to have as cafie cimes on'r, being deliver'd ene Day, and abroad the next taking the Air.

The Fire of Jealoufe bums as furionily here, as in any part of the Melooncten World; and a Father or in Brother is hardly permitted to fee his own Flefh and : blood, except inthe Company of her Kiusband. Thofe thathave mof Wives ard Women, are commonly the moft Jcalous. (So the Mifer that has the mioft and fulieftBags by him is the mot fordid and covcious), Marricd Wo-d men rhar dishonour their Hurbands Eeds, and unmarricd oncstoo that lofe their Chaftity, are condemn'd to the fevereft Punimmenss; and ather than they hall go withe ont it, their own nearef Relations will be their Executioners, and do the bloody Woris themfeices. Nonwithftanding this, there are loferyomen encugh to be found; they are publichly to to reded, and have leave given them ro keep lewd Youfes as many as can.. Pue before they, begin to practife, thair Names are conrolld in a Lift, thatit may be known who belongs to the moder chafteSccicty, and who does nor. Some of the finer and more polin'd of thefe publick Women, are often broughs before the Great \(\lambda\) ingill, to divert him winh their, Amoreus Songs and Leffons upon fome Mufical Inframent, which is moit commonly a Timbrel.

The Hindes obferve fome Ru'os in their Namiages, very differene from thofe of the inabomeraus. They marry crery onc into his own Tribe, Trade and Proteffion, and preferve all their feveral Sects unmixr, by forbiding thofe promifcuous Alliances that the others permit. without any fruple. Thus the Son of a Primen marries a Bramens Daughrer, a Merchant looks for a Wife amongt thofe of his own bufinefs, and a Plough-man's Daughter for a Husband amongft them thar Till the Ground. They content themfelves each Man with his fingle Wife, and think the Maiometers very cxtravagant for having four; and then their Wives live much better with them too, for they have liberty to go abroad when and where they pleafe, they fee other Faces befides their Husbands, and fomething more of the Worid rhan a Chamber. Bet'ris very odd, that their Marriages commence fo very carly as they do, and that they join Children together at fix or feren Years old, which alfo confumate their Martiage at fourteen or fifteen. Tho' 'tis probable the main Reafon of this is, thcir Law of Marrying into their own Tribe, for by this means they have. lefs varicry of choice, and fo are bound to finap a good Match when tis offerd them. In their Marriage Shows they ufe no Coaches, but both Bride and Bridegroom ride on Horfe-back; and very ofren each of the Couple lis fo young, that fome are appointed ro walk by their.

lence and injuftice for any to pretend to debar them affict Hories fides to keep them from tumbling down. Their Cloaths atte ftuck a flover fovery clofe with the choict Flivers of the Councry, that there's hardily any thing elfero befeen, and it makes them both Iook like a couple of Nofegays ftuck upright upon the Horles back.
Thefe are the main Differences of their Marriages: Now as to their Funerals there is fill as much more.
The Mabometans firf walh and prififie their dead Bo dies, and then decently ianterr them in Sepulchires They bury noneat all in cheir Morques ( for that's a prophanation of them ) but in certain places devored to that ufe, near fome Tank or Poind, fornc fine Spring or Fountain, where they have Monrments erected in their life cimes; with a groat deal of Arr and Coft. The Truth on'r is, thefe are fome of their mort Noble and Pompous Buildings thar they have amongtt chem; they are fome of them fquare, fome fix fome eight corvier'd, delicately vaulred, Tometimes fupported by rows of Pillars, and encompals'd with Doors on every fide. Near them they build little Mofques for Divine Service, and all round about they plant Fruit (and other pleafant) Trees. The moft famous of this kind, is that which was begun by Ecbar Sba, and finified by his Son Sba Sclim, who afterwards was laid there himfelf. Ir is three fourths of a Mile fquare, and hasa Spire in the midtt thar has feven diftinct Taperings, each of which rons a confiderable height; and in the top of all is the immediate Recepta cle of the Body.
There's a ftately Palace thar ftands clofe by it ; the Gardens of which (walled with Marble) run ap towards the Sepulchre, and both together tike in the compals of three Miles. In mort all the Englifh Men that have feen it, fay tis a ruly Royal and Auguft Building it ftands ar Secandra a Village three Miles from Agre:

Now we are fpeaking of the Prinice's his Grave, 'tis nor out of the way to take notice of an odd Soleminity that proceeds at his Funeral. The Dead Prince being laid in Stare in his Monoment, the Prince thiar fucceeds him. wirh all the Nobility in a foll body come chicher. Then are there all manner of Provifions brought the fineft Meats and ficheft Liquois, and the Compiny enterain themfelves with both to the higheft of te. The living Prince firs at his Table, enriching his own Carkels, and preparing a Noble Banguet for the Worms; in the place where ar the fame time they are featting upoo the (once as muxch pamperd) Carcale of his Predeceffor. In the Scpulchres of their Holy Men (of wifich there are abundance in India) there are Lamps concinually burning, and cercain Devour Perfons appointed to maintain thole Lights, and areallowed good Penfions fortharpurpofe.
As for the Findoes, they commit none of cheir dead Bodies to the Groand, bur all to the Flames, and throw their Alresinto a River, if they have thar convenience near them. \({ }^{2}\) SomefmallPortion \(<\) thèm indeed are prefert'd by the neareft Relations in vicmory of the deceased; but the main part is difpos'd of to the Water, by the reft that affift ar the Ceremons.
This burning of the dead Bodies was the Ancient Cuftom of India, aswellas of other Narions; bur the burning of living ones too at the fame rime feems to be more pectiar to this Country. This is an Immurable Cuftom amongft the Hindoes; the Women accompany the dead Bodies of their Husbands nor only to the Funeral Pile, but alcend it togenher with the Corps, and confume in the fame Flames, Ir is indeed their own free choice fo to do; if they don't go of their own accotd there's no body will drag them to the Fire and compel them to burn; but then there's Shame and Difgrace thatatends them (efpecially if they have livid long with their Husbands') their Widowhood is a reproach, and their very meareft Friends contemn and neglect them. They crt their Hair, zund live recired from all Converfation, being to all the reft abour them as to many ftrange Crearures dropt down from another Planet. For the moft partuherefore they chufe rather to bum than to live in fuch Circomftances; and by this means they think they die with a Repuration of the highelt Modefty and Love, when they efteem the Torments of fo curel 2 Dearh. more eafie and tolerable, than the painn of living with our their Husbands. Aind ar grear many of them do if moft cerminly out of an excels of Love and pure wearinefsof Life; tho" "tis probable enough, that there are cthers wofowouid ive conld they have anorhcr Husband, and not die bur to void thome. Bur there's no fecond Hustand allowed here; and fone perhaps may think burning atefs Mifery and Punifhinent wan living without one, Bor however, arciently the Ihaian Women did value this Liberty at fo highä rate, andettem it fo much their Rite and Privileges thataney look'd uponir as vio-

And whether they have in thefe modern times maintain'd is with fo much Severity in their dwn Principles as of old is.uncertain; but this, is fure that Sha Selim began to make fome Innorarions upon them, and pur in for a fhare in the difpofal of their Lives as well as chemfelves. In his time none went to the Fire ar Agra (for any thing near where he wis) but what came and petitiond him for't juft as if they had craved fome very grear Favour ar his fands. Atrd thar Prince would ufe all the Arts of Perfwafion imaginable to move them to preferve cheir own Lives, and be contented to fay a little longer in the World, tho' generally 'twas all in vain; the inexcufable Creatures woufd reject all the tempting offers he made them, and fubbornly maintain'd their Refolution to dic. In this cafe when nothing will do, he gives them leave to difpofe of themfelves as they think fir; and fo away they go to the Pile with all the brisknefs and gairy of a Bride, to che joyful celebration of her Nuprials.
We have now feen fevcral of their Religious Rites and Ceremonies, with the moft obfervable of their Cuftoms that fall under thar Denomination: Ler us proceed to theind look into their Domeftick and Civil Affairs, and fee whar Rules they oblerve in thofe matters.
And firftof all for theirDier; here rheDifference ofOpinions makesa Differencein Cookery amongft them, and their Rcligion is to be known by their Eating. The Mabometans are very fparing as to any rhing of Flefh, they feldom make a Meal of it ; but they never touch any partof a Swine, for the Alcoran has pronounced it an abomination. A riall matter of Kid, or Venifon, or Hens they will venture upon; this they ftew with Onions, Spices, Herbs, and Roors, and make 2 very palatable Difh of it. But their main ftanding food is Rice, which they drefs with green Ginger, Pepper, and Burter, anid feed as hearily on it as we upon cur beft and moft nice Difhes. Befides this at their grear Entertainmens, they buy in all forts of Jellies, Sallads, Preferves, Candics, Raile of the Sun, Almonds, and Prunellis's; and for fonjectitg of mure fuhftance thian any of thefe, the Flefb of Hens mix'd with Almonds, and the Flower of Rice, all bear ven well togecher, and then fweemed and perfom'd with Sum gar-candy, Rofe-water, and Ambergrice:
Their Bread likewife are Cakes of the fireft Wheat. Gower, done up with Almonds and Sagaricandy, fome rimes fcented and fometimes not
They drink liute befides Warer at their Tables; whatever they do in their Retirements.
The Hindocs feed differently, according zo cheir varions Sects.
The Bargans will ear nothing of Animal food; and therefore confine themfclves altogether to vegerable Provifions and things made of them. Others of them again will ear Firh, bur nothing elfe that has Life.
Some of the Resboots concradict them all, and eat Swines fleth hearrily; others perhaps won't ear juft that, bur the fleth of fome other Animal they like berrer. But in general, all the Hindoes abttain from Beef; that Animal is facred with them, and they pay the Great Mogul fo mirch a Year for their Redemprion our of the hands of the Burchers and other Pcople that would kill theim.
To conclude, as they are (of all forts) moft commonly fober and temperate in the ufe of their Tables, and nblerve the due meafures of eating and drinking; fo they always bring the Scruples of their Religion along with them, and as loyal as they are, would not obey their own Princeif he commanded them to eat any forbidden Food.
Thefe Pcople in their Salutations never uncover their Txeirm Heads as the Europenns do ; they bow their Bodies, and of Satur lay their Right-hand on cheir breaft as they pals along, beftowing abundance of good Wilhes upon the Perfon they falne. Many of the Eaftern Pcople think our pulling off Hars to one another a moft abfurd and ridiculous way of Complimenring; the Turks when they would curie their Enemies effectually, with their Souls after death as litule Reft as a Chriftians Har has, becaufe thar never fizands ftill (chey fay) but is concinmally pulling off and purting on. But wharever Notion ise Turks have of their Paradife, certainly either extream is inconfiftent With the felicizy of ir; a dull rorpid Reft is' as bad as perperval Moriona and tolie as ftill as a Turks Turbanr, would not belefs tirefome than to move as mach as a Chrittians Hat
When the common inferiour People falute thofe of quatiry they lay their Right-hand upon the Ground, and then upon cheir Heads, fametimes rbey fall down on their Kinees and bow their Heads very low; bar this degree of very Humble Revercnice, is only to thofe of the uigheft Dignity.
