PRESBYTERY GETS RADICAL

Great Changes In The Arrangement Of Its Work
Made Yesterday

A PROFITABLE MEETING

The Chatham Presbytery held a very busy session in St. Andrew's church in this city yesterday. The special feature of the meeting was that considerable radical legislation was passed, and the whole working of the Presbytery was changed around in the hope that new vigor would be instilled in the business of that body.

In the matter of committees, especially, great changes were wrought, and it is hoped that the change will be a beneficial one to all concerned. There were present at the meeting, Rev. Messrs. MacIntyre, Battist, Toime, Maitre, J. A. Ross, Dr. Smith, Hamilton, McQuarrie, Gilmore, Cowan, Melvin, Lindsay, R. J. Ross and Nicol. There were also present a number of elders from the different churches in the Presbytery.

Rev. Mr. Gilmore was elected moderator of the Presbytery for the coming term, and Mr. Lindsay was elected clerk.

A committee was appointed to strike the different committees for the ensuing year, with the result that the convenors on all of the committees were changed from last year. For a number of years these committees have remained almost unchanged, and the committee thought that if new blood were introduced in the work the result might be more beneficial all round. It was their opinion that the honors of the different positions of convenors should be passed around, and in this way all of the members of the Presbytery would be kept interested in the work and have a better chance to be thoroughly in touch with it. There was some objection to the committee's report from a few quarters, but the majority of the members fell in line with the new move, and the report was adopted.

A report was entered by Dr. Smith, stating the amounts contributed by the different churches towards the Hood Memorial Fund. This fund now totals $1,400, and the amount is still $800 short of the amount required from the Chatham Presbytery. It is thought that the shortage will be made up by later subscriptions.

St. Andrew's church, Windsor, contributed handsomely towards this fund, with the sum of $250.00, and many of the smaller churches also did well. The two Chatham churches came in for some deserved criticism for their backwardness in this particular, and the two pastors were kept busy explaining their positions. They had not done as well as the others, according to the size of the congregations. The subscription from First Church was $115 and from St. Andrew's only $15. Churches like Mr. McQuarrie's and Mr. Cowan's, with much smaller congregations, contributed over $100.

The balance of the meeting was taken up with routine business, the receiving of reports, and their acceptance. Some of the reports were very encouraging, and it was shown that the Presbytery is doing a big work both in congregational and mission work. It was the first meeting of the Fall season, when the arrangements were made for the year's work, and it is safe to say that the Chatham Presbytery never commenced a year's work under more favorable circumstances.

ELECTION OCT. 4

Ottawa, Sept. 11.—At last the Government has mustered up courage to bring on the bye-elections. Not all of them, however, as the writs have gone out for but two out of over half a dozen vacant constituencies that are unrepresented at present.

The writs which have been sent out are for East Eglon and North Renfrew. In both of these districts the election will take place on Oct. 4; nomination on Sept. 27.

The trouble in North Bruce, as in St. Mary's Division of Montreal and in Quebec, is that the Government has not yet been able to decide upon a candidate.

Mr. Wilfrid Laurier's business in Quebec this week will be to straighten out the situation in the latter county.

CINDERS ARE BAD

A prominent resident from over the creek was a visitor at The Planet office this morning, and made a suggestion which he thought was a good one. He was of the opinion that the shoe dealers of the city should club together and make a grant to the City Council for placing the cinders along the walk on Thompson's Park. Since this work was done the shoe-makers must have done a big business, and their trade must have experienced a big boom. It would certainly be in the interest of the shoe dealers if the Council would decide to have these cinders placed along all of the public streets.

It takes live fish to swim up stream.

Women have a knack of saying things which mean a great deal.

WEDDED FOR FUN

However Knot Was Tied Tight And Pretty Girl Lets It
Stand

Falmouth, Ky., Sept. 10. — Pretty Anna Pendergast and "Billy" Bishop the town marshall of Falmouth, were wedded "sure 'nough" in the Catholic manse by Fr. O. C. Gruber, a special dispensation having been procured.

The marriage is a sequel to a supposed mock ceremony which was entered into. In a spirit of fun Miss Pendergast announced to her friends that she was going to marry Bishop. He was hunted up, and entered into the affair with zest, as Miss Pendergast is an exceedingly attractive young woman. The knot was tied by Dr. Lemmons, and to the bride's consternation she was told that it was hard and fast.

The situation was complicated by the fact that the bans of Miss Pendergast and George Coleman had been called out in the Catholic Church the Sunday before, and the bride was in a quandary.

Bishop, however, nothing daunted, gently urged his rights as a lawful spouse, and Miss Pendergast, after due consideration, decided to acknowledge them.

CONDITIONS UNDER WHICH CROSSING WAS GRANTED

The Grand Trunk Will Have To Erect Tower House And Will Be Obligated To Re-arrange Yards To Avoid Shunting At This Point—Interesting Decision

Barrister Edwin Bell, solicitor for the Chatham, Wallaceburg and Lake Erie Railway Company, has received the following judgment from Commissioner James Mills, of the Railway Commission, in reference to the Company's crossing at the Grand Trunk. The judgment gives the conditions under which the level crossing was granted to the Electric Railway.

At the time when the engineer was here, Mr. Bell pointed out to him the trouble which would have to be overcome with the freshets if a level crossing were not granted. He was told to get further evidence, which he did. He had plans drawn showing the high water marks during the floods, and also provided further evidence of competent men, to show what the coming floods will likely be higher. Mr. Bell also prepared petitions from the citizens of Chatham, and got several prominent men to appear personally before the commission.

It will be noticed that the excellent work of Mr. Bell has done much towards securing the judgment, as the reasons given for granting the crossing—which means so much to Chatham—were based upon the arguments advanced and carried through by Mr. Bell.

The following is the document just received:

In re the application of the C. W. & L. E. Railway Co. to cross the G. T. R. in the City of Chatham, Ont.

After a second inspection and a careful study of the locality, and due consideration of all the facts and circumstances brought out in evidence and argument at the hearing on the 7th December, 1905, the wishes of the leading people of Chatham so strongly expressed in letters and petition, the allegations of residents of the said City as to the height to which water rises in the neighborhood of the proposed crossing during spring floods and freshets, and the final report of the Engineer of the Board, my judgment is—

1. That the Chatham, Wallaceburg & Lake Erie Railway Company be authorized to carry the tracks of its railway across the tracks of the Grand Trunk Railway

2. That the Grand Trunk Railway Company be authorized to erect a tower-house at its own expense, select and control the man or men required to operate the protective appliances, or plant, and be responsible for the maintenance and operation of the said plant at all times; and the Applicant Company to pay the Grand Trunk Company monthly one-half of the expense of maintaining the said plant and of the wages of the man or men required and employed to operate it under the time that the Applicant Company uses the crossing, say, from six o'clock a. m. to eleven o'clock p. m., daily, upon presentation of monthly itemized statements of the actual outlay.

3. That trains like class on the senior road should have right of way that the man operating the safety appliances should take no risks in giving trains permission to cross, but should always be on the safe side; and he should not delay passenger trains on the senior road.

4. That the Secretary should write the Grand Trunk Railway Company that after careful inspection and the report of its Engineer, the Board does not see the necessity for switching engines or cars across William and Queen streets in the City of Chatham, Ontario; and it begs respectfully to suggest to the Grand Trunk Company that, in the public interests and the interests of the Company, it considers, as soon as practicable, the question of rearranging its yards in the said City, or the tracks and sidings therein, so as to avoid switching across the said streets, it being understood that the Board will hear the Company regarding the matter of this suggestion or approval, if the Company so desires.

5. That the Grand Trunk Railway Company be authorized to erect a tower-house at its own expense, select and control the man or men required to operate the protective appliances, or plant, and be responsible for the maintenance and operation of the said plant at all times; and the Applicant Company to pay the Grand Trunk Company monthly one-half of the expense of maintaining the said plant and of the wages of the man or men required and employed to operate it under the time that the Applicant Company uses the crossing, say, from six o'clock a. m. to eleven o'clock p. m., daily, upon presentation of monthly itemized statements of the actual outlay.

6. That trains like class on the senior road should have right of way that the man operating the safety appliances should take no risks in giving trains permission to cross, but should always be on the safe side; and he should not delay passenger trains on the senior road.

AUSTRALIAN TARIFF.

The department of trade and commerce has received a report from Mr. D. H. Ross, agent at Melbourne, giving explanations of the tariff changes made by the Commonwealth Government. The report is dated Aug. 11th. Mr. Ross says that the day previous, on account of premature and unauthorized disclosures, the Government hastily determined to immediately increase the duties from 7 1-2 to 12 1-2 per cent. above the rates, hitherto ruling upon nearly every leading line of agricultural implements and machinery. In some instances minor lines hitherto free have been made dutiable at from 20 to 25 per cent. These duties were at once enforced, but may be modified as they must be necessarily confirmed by Parliament. The report of the tariff commission is finally completed, but beyond implements the only other changes which have been made in the tariff are connected with the customs and excise duties upon wines and spirits. The duty upon spirits has been increased from $3.40 to $3.65 per gallon, but this line is of little interest to Canadian distillers.

Some of the principal tariff changes are as follows:—Stripper harvesters, stump jump ploughs, disc and winnow strippers, increased from 12 1-2 to 25 per cent. On other kinds of ploughs, ploughshares, harrows, chaff cutters and castings for all kinds of agricultural implements the increase is from 12 1-2 to 20 per cent. Combined cornshellers and huskers will now pay a duty of 25 per cent. Ordinary cornshellers and huskers hitherto free, will pay 20 per cent. Certain classes of rakes and ploughs combined, potato sorters, raisers or diggers, will remain on the free list. On the machinery upon which duty is to be paid 10 per cent will be added to the invoice value of the goods before the duty is paid. Thus a 20 per cent. duty will figure out at 22 per cent., and a 25 per cent. duty at 27 1-2. Canada has hitherto supplied the bulk of the agricultural implements and machinery imported into Australia. In anticipation of the increased duties few orders have recently gone forward except from Australian branches of overseas manufacturing houses.

A correspondent complains because the word "armory" has been spelt "armoury" on the new building in the Park. He apparently has no "us" for that mode of spelling.

To divert attention from the peculiar fix in which the present M. P. P. and would-be M. P. McGeorge has found himself through the queer deal relative to the piling, the Banner has again trotted out that musty old red herring about the Canada Company. The Banner is a great joker.

Tragedy of a Lost Shell.
The Natal Mercury (South Africa) tells the story of a Boer farmer named Moolman, who found a 4 1/2 naval shell lying on the veldt unexploded and took it home to his sister. She wanted the shell for decoration purposes and began to dig out the lyddite, and to soften it poured cold water upon it. The lyddite and water began to effervesce, and the girl went indoors and from the end of the passage watched the shell, which lay upon the doorstep. Suddenly there was a terrific explosion, and Miss Moolman fell dead, struck in the breast by a piece of shell. The whole house was wrecked, every pane of glass, every window frame and every door being cast to the ground and most of the furniture being upset and smashed.

SOME PASS HOLDERS.

The pass at old Thermopylae,
According to the story,
Was held by men of Greece, and much
It added to their glory.
In modern times the congressmen
And officeholding classes,
As resolute as any grand
Old Grecian, hold the passes.

You know the tale of ancient days,
For doubtless you have read it.
The way they stuck to that old pass
Was greatly to their credit.
But now to hang on to a pass
We think is simply awful—
A thing no gentleman would do
And very much unlawful.

The way they stuck to that old pass
Was really quite a wonder,
For where could one observe in it
The smallest bit of plunder?
The modern statesman if he had
A pass like that would chuck it
And kick for one that called for rides
Until he kicked the bucket.

But while you're talking every one
Is just about that boat is:
There's something strange about a pass.
That makes us all take notice,
And statesmen are not all the ones
Who try to cut the caper,
We all of us are reaching for
That precious bit of paper.

Profitable to Be Right.

In the great society function which is to be pulled off in New York in the form of a murder trial the insanity experts can be depended on to lead science in by the halter and prevail on it to say a few good words for the defendant with a bank account. The insanity expert can be depended on to know on which side of his bread the oleomargarine is spread. He can easily convince himself that black is white, or at least a very pale gray, if thereby his bank account will look as though it had been playing the races and won on a 40 to 1 shot.

People who have examined them closely, looked at their tongues and felt of their whiskers assure us that the insanity expert is human, which may be the reason why he can always find a man with money insane when politely requested to do so.

Vain Regrets.

Where the rushes quiver slightly,
Where the little waves run lightly
And the sun is shining brightly
In a valley far away,
Where the grass the edge is running
There's a hole with water brimming,
And it beckons me to swimming;
It is calling me today.

I would gladly hasten to it,
And with joy I'd paddle through it
As I proudly used to do it
Like a little water rat.
But I cannot have the pleasure;
It for me's a vanished treasure;
I've a waist of ample measure,
And I'm stiff and slow and fat.

HID UNDER MAN'S NAME

"JOHN OLIVER HOBBS," FAMOUS AUTHORESS, DIES IN HER SLEEP.

Mrs. Craigie Was a Writer of Many Novels and of Several Dramas Which Were Well Received—Her Success Began With Her First Book In 1891—Every Year After Sees New Work.

Mrs. Pearl Mary Teresa Craigie, "John Oliver Hobbs," authoress and dramatist, died in her sleep in London the other day of heart failure. Her death was totally unexpected. She was thirty-nine years of age. It was only in recent years that "John Oliver Hobbs" became well known to the general public as Mrs. Pearl Maria Teresa Craigie. Less than a year ago she told how she came to adopt the peculiar pen name. "In one of my earlier stories," said Mrs. Craigie, "I called my hero Hobbs. I did this because I was ultra-sentimental, and somehow Hobbs seemed to have been taken over on that feeling. Then I took Hobbs for a pen name, and for two years managed to hide behind it—I was thought to be a man—and well, they found me out at last. Really, I grieved over this, because I like impersonal work. If a woman writes she is thought to be writing about herself—when a man writes it is different."

"JOHN OLIVER HOBBS," (Mrs. Craigie)

This last remark gives the key to the characteristics of Mrs. Craigie's novels. She has been credited with being remarkably cynical in her writings. "Nursery Rhymes for Novelists" thus touched off this characteristic:

John Oliver Hobbs, with your spasms and throbs, How does your novel grow? With critical sneers at young Love and his tears.

And epigrams in a row.

She was born in Boston on November 3, 1867. She was the eldest daughter of John Morgan Richards, who was the son of the Rev. James Richards, D. D., of New York, founder of the Theological Seminary. Her mother, Laura Hortense Arnold, was the great-granddaughter of Peter Spearwater, who, before the Declaration of Independence, represented Shelburne for twenty-five years in the Colonial Parliament sitting at Halifax.

In 1887, when nineteen years old, she married an Englishman of means, Reginald Walpole Craigie, whose father was the rector of Walton, England. One son was born to them in 1890. When quite young her parents took up their residence in London in a big house, Lancaster Gate. Pearl Richards was privately educated. She studied music at the Royal Academy in London and in Paris. She developed remarkable musical talent, and as a pianist she was in the front rank. But the bent of her mind was toward literature. She studied Greek and Latin at University College, London. She was only twenty-two when her first novel, "Some Emotions and a Moral," appeared. Critics gave the author a high place among contemporary novelists. She had been a student of Hegel, and a flavor of his peculiar philosophy was apparent in this work, as indeed in some later novels.

This was followed by "The Sinner's Comedy" and "A Study in Temptations," both of which excited much criticism. "A Bundle of Life" was published in 1894. These works were distinctly philosophical. She herself has described them as "philosophical fantasies." They were written for the purpose of showing that a failure from the world's point of view is not necessarily a moral failure, on the contrary, that it may mean a great success. But Mrs. Craigie made a new departure in "The Gods, Some Mortals and Lord Wickersham." The writer becomes more practical. One of her greatest successes was "The School for Saints," brought out in 1897. This was written for the sake of the story rather than for the development of any individual character. She said it was a real novel. She introduced references to modern history touching on the diplomacy of Benjamin Disraeli and the Spanish political crisis of 1898. It is full of satire bright and keen.

Mrs. Craigie's last novel, published last year, was entitled "The Flute of Pan." It is a story from real life. Critics said there never was such a man as the hero portrayed. The authoress replied that it was very realistic, with the real documents in it. It portrays a modern army officer, typical of the times, and considered to be an adequate picture of life at the English court.

She was also a playwright, her most successful play being "The Ambassador," which she read for Mr. Gladstone. Among other stage productions are: "A Repentance," "The Wisdom of the Wise," and "The Bishop's Move." Sorrow came to her in 1891. In the Divorce Court she obtained a separation from her husband with the custody of her child. Four years later she obtained a decree absolute. In 1892 she was received into the Roman Catholic Church, on which occasion she added the names of Maria Teresa.

She was a woman of most engaging personality. She was handsome, slight in physique, and at first appearance always impressed the person who was introduced to her as a woman of great mentality.

The London newspapers contained extended obituary notices of the late Mrs. Craigie, and editorial articles lamenting her untimely and untold her brilliant work and narrating many personal reminiscences, the appreciations dwelling especially on her conscientiousness as a worker. As an instance of this latter trait The Morning Leader states that when, a year ago, Mrs. Craigie reviewed Oscar Wilde's "De Profundis" for that journal she insisted on taking her own time to write the review, declaring her inability to write faster than she thought, and protesting against the style of criticism where a reviewer criticized in half an hour what it had taken the author three years to write. Mrs. Craigie declared that such reviews were not worth the reading.

The London Tribune editorially said: "There are greater names among fiction writers, yet few whose death would strike us as a loss so painful and irreparable. She had at least given two great books to English literature, but her style and outlook on life were still unaltered, and the development of her genius seemed to show much greater possibilities."

CONSUMPTION CURE.

Inhalation of Medicated Air Said to Kill Germs, and Cure Said to Be Complete in Six Months.

Dr. O. F. Fleener of Knightstown, Ind., claims that he has discovered a chemical formula which, administered to the lungs by inhalation, will kill the tubercular bacillus without injuring the lung tissue or causing any other ill effects. It is asserted that Dr. Fleener is treating with successful results several consumptives who have failed to get relief from the old methods and their home open air treatment. Some of these have been cases considerably advanced, and it is asserted that the outward marks of the consumptive have not only given way to the appearance of health, but that even the spitting of the patients, when examined microscopically, has been found to be absolutely free of the tubercular germs.

Dr. Fleener's discovery is a yellowish liquid. He administers it by placing the patient in an air tight cabinet and pumping the fumes of the liquid into the cabinet. He, however, raises the air pressure in the cabinet to twenty pounds to the square inch. The air pressure causes extra lung action, and the medicated air is thus forced to every part of the lung. It is this medicated air that it is asserted, kills the germs without injuring the delicate lining membranes in which it finds lodgment.

Dr. Fleener closely guards the secret of his compound. He does not put his patients on any diet, but goes to the other extreme and lets them eat and drink what they desire, and even places no ban on the use of tobacco. He does demand systematic exercise and deep breathing. He says that the bacilli are killed in from ten to twelve days and the patient will begin to revive in weight and health immediately. About six months is required for the complete treatment.

He Sailed the Zoraya.

Again the emblem of yachting supremacy on the great lakes comes to Canada, this time as represented in the Fisher Cup, captured the other day by Zoraya at Rochester. The Canadian boat was manned by Mr. Ae. Jarvis, who has handled the Dominion's candidate in all the fresh water international events of recent years, excepting only last year, when he was unable to participate. Mr. Jarvis is a broker by occupation and an enthusiastic yachtsman. He won the Canada Cup at Toledo in that memorable international event some years ago, and has been a consistent winner, almost without a break in his record. He was for two years Commodore of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, and his achievements have made him a national figure.

Sea Water For Lunacy.

Two eminent French experimenters, says the Grand Magazine, assure us that sea water will cure or at least alleviate many cases of lunacy. The explanation is: "Man, like all other animals, descends from a marine ancestor. To place the human organism modified by disease in its original surroundings should, therefore, prove advantageous to it." Starting from these premises, the French doctors have given subcutaneous injections of sea water to a number of insane persons with, they declare, the most beneficial results.

A great number of other diseases—consumption, diabetes and stomach disorders—have also been treated successfully by internal doses of sea water, not only in France, but also in Sweden.

Mineral Wealth In Australia.

Fifty cents a ton is the price they pay for coal in New South Wales. Coal is so abundant and cheap in New South Wales that it can hardly be said, in places, to add to the value of the surface. It is drawn out by ponies. Beside it are an inexhaustible field of limestone and permanent water, both on a railway line. Rates of haulage on which are enormous. There are enormous deposits of iron ore of richness varying from 60 to 90 per cent.

A coverlet for the baby's carriage is made of the finest swiss embroidered in a pretty wreath design in flower colors, lined with tufted blue silk and given a frill of hemstitched mill.

The colors of your eyes should guide you in choosing the shade that suits you best. A girl with brown eyes and hair never looks prettier than when dressed up in varying tones of brown. Bright lips and a fresh complexion can be emphasized by wearing a string of coral beads.

Hats of dull tones, suggesting they have been exposed to the sun, are the latest novelty in millinery. So cleverly are they contrived that it is difficult to believe that the sun has not been at work upon them.

A shabby petticoat kills the smartest gown. Choose the underskirt to present a pleasing and harmonious contrast to the dress or to match the prevailing color in the hat. Study the art of holding up the skirt gracefully. Few women know how to accomplish this, and the general appearance of a costume is frequently spoiled by carelessness in this respect.

Very simple and childlike is the white china silk gown illustrated. The skirt is laid in plaits at the waist and trimmed at the bottom with graduated widths of white satin ribbon. The lace used is a pretty design in rather coarse German val. JUDIC CHOLLET.

ATTRACTIVE TRIFLES.

If You Would Be Modish Wear Brown Velvet to Be Worn In the Fall.

Everything is brown, and if you want to be up to date you must wear brown gowns, shoes, gloves and parasols. So great has been the demand for brown that the shopkeepers and milliners have been driven almost wild, and shoe dealers can hardly meet the demand for shoes in all shades of tan. The summer girl who goes in for white garb which delights the laundryman carries a little white scotch as spotless as the rest of her costume. It is a rival to the prevailing gold bag. A bag is a sign of the owner's taste. If she studies the perfection of detail and insists that every accessory of her cos-times be "just so," bags are far from an expensive item in the summer schedule of outfit.

Persistent rumor continues to reach this side of the water prophesying great things for the vogue of velvet next season. The fact that Paris dress-makers and milliners are using a great deal of velvet as trimming for summer dresses and hats is a very decided point in favor of the popularity of this becoming fabric later on.

The striped suit illustrated is carried out in black and white voile. There is a deep reversed hem at the bottom of the skirt, which is a two piece circular with a bias seam down the front. The little jacket is trimmed with raspberry velvet. JUDIC CHOLLET.

WILL BUILD BRITANNIA II.

His Majesty Again to Take Up Yacht Racing.

For ten years past, remarks The London Standard, it has been the practice of those directly interested in the highest developments of yacht racing in British waters to refer to the seasons in which the famous old Britannia led the racing fleet round the coasts as typhing the high-water mark of the sport in Britain. There is little doubt that the magnificent sport enjoyed during these seasons owed much to the direct interest and participation of the then Prince of Wales, and there have been those who held stubbornly to the opinion that the same keen interest and enthusiasm would never be reached again unless the King returned to his first love among the sports, and enrolled himself again among the racing yachtsmen.

Whether the revival initiated so successfully this season by Mr. R. M. Young of the Nyria and Mr. Myles B. Kennedy of the White Heather, would have developed far enough in another season to have falsified this opinion remains an open question. In the meantime, the same keen interest in yacht racing circles is one of absolute satisfaction that the matter has been put beyond doubt by the decision of His Majesty to hoist racing colors again to the truck of a first-class cutter.

This decision—or, rather, the negotiations which preceded it—gave rise to a variety of rumors, mainly conflicting, and wholly premature, and the result is that those who have followed the matter with the closest interest are most mystified as to the exact position in which the matter now stands. It may now be stated that, although the negotiations have not reached the point at which the proposal to build becomes an actual contract, they have advanced so far as to put it beyond all reasonable doubt that there will be a new royal cutter in the class which will lead the racing fleet through the waters of next year.

In the lifetime of the late Mr. Geo. L. Watson, the most eminent of British yacht designers, he was the authority to whom the King turned for expert advice on all matters pertaining to yachting, and the cutter Britannia, which he designed for the King when Prince of Wales, was easily the most consistently successful racer ever built in the first class. On the death of Mr. Watson, the business passed—under the provisions of his will—to Mr. J. T. Barnett, his chief draughtsman and assistant. It is with the same firm, therefore, Messrs. Geo. L. Watson & Co., that His Majesty has been in negotiation for the building of the new racer, and whether the new craft repeats all the success of her predecessor or not, there are circumstances which will mark her an epoch-making vessel.

The keenest desire of the framers of the new international rule of rating was that the change might do something for the encouragement of international sport among the yachting countries of Europe, and the fact that the first important racer to be built under that rule will be for the use of King Edward gives the best reason for believing that this hope will be fulfilled. In the sketch plans which have been made the definitions of the framers of the new rule find definite expression.

Britannia II., unless some great and unexpected alteration is made in the plans, will conform to the latest fashion in the building of racers by avoiding altogether the extremes which began to creep in when designers were a little hard pressed to find a means of checking the victorious career of the previous Britannia. On the measurements suggested she will rate so closely to the rating of the first-class cutters, Nyria and White Heather, that the measurement allowances due between them will be of a very trifling description.

This goes with the spirit of the new rules; but even more valuable support to their provisions is the fact that the new vessel will be of exactly the staunch and sturdy type which it is specially desired to cultivate. There will be nothing of the "freak" or of the extreme racing machine in the design.

London's Infant Slaughter.

John Burns, the English Labor member and Cabinet Minister, the sixteenth member of a family of eighteen children, nine of whom survived, said to the national conference on infant mortality in London:

"I believe I am well within the mark when I say that there are roughly 100,000 lives sacrificed in some form or another every year, not to man's inhumanity, but to neglect, carelessness, thoughtlessness and ignorance. It is pathetic to know that in some districts from 30 to 60 per cent. of the total children born die under five years. Wealth has increased, but the infant has not shared it. Physical comforts have increased, and yet the weakest and the smallest bear an undue share of the burden of death. It seems as though material progress is hitting the child too hard."

Affected the Verdict.

"You see, gentlemen," said the counsel for the defendant complacently—it was a compensation case—"I have got the plaintiff into a very nice dilemma. If he went there seeing that the place was dangerous, there was contributory negligence, and, as his lordship will tell you, he can't recover. If he did not see it was dangerous, neither could my client have seen it, and there was no negligence on his part. In either case I am entitled to your verdict." The jury retired. "Well, gentlemen," said the foreman, "I think we must give him $300. All agreed except a stout, ruddy gentleman in the corner, who cried hoarsely, 'Give him another $50, gentlemen, for getting into the dilemma.' Verdict accordingly.—London Graphic.

CROW WELL A DRY HOLE

There are no Indications of Oil, and it has been Abandoned

MORE "DUSTER" WELLS

The Crow well is a dry hole! This is the latest authentic information handed out in the city by the oil men, who ought to know, and the men who are virtually interested.

Great interest has been manifested in this well, as it was thought that if the oil were found there the Tilbury field would be proven a very wide one. It would also strengthen the belief that oil could be found in abundance in Dover. Last Saturday the Banner came out with nearly the whole of their front page devoted to spreading the wonderful information that oil had been found on the Crow farm. Considerable strength was added to the article through a couple of illustrations of men hustling for oil tanks, etc. It happened, however, that the Banner was once more taken in and stuffed. They may, however, have a chance in the future to use their scale and ancient magazine cuts when the oil is found—but not on the Crow farm.

The Crow well has been abandoned altogether. The drills went down 1,543 feet, but there was not the sign of oil—nothing but a dry hole. The Halliday well and the Kahler well are also pronounced dry holes. The former went down 1,410 and the latter 1,480.

Whatever the council would do in this direction would meet with the hearty support of everyone in town.

ON THE SPIRE.

Thrilling Incident in the Life of James Freeman Clarke.

When James Freeman Clarke was a young man he visited Salisbury, England. Here the beautiful cathedral lifts its spire 404 feet into the air. The spire is topped by a ball, and on the ball stands a cross. From the ground the ball looks like an orange, but its diameter is really greater than a man's height.

Workmen were repairing the spire. Mr. Clarke saw them crawling round the slim steeple in the golden afternoon like bugs on a bean stalk. The impulse came to him to climb the spire and stand on the horizontal beam of the cross. Accordingly at dusk, when the workmen had left, the young American slipped in and made his way up the stairs to the little window which opened to the workmen's starting. To run up the scaffolding to the ball was easy. Then came the slightly more bulging curve of the ball. A short platform gave him foothold. He reached up, put his hands on the base of the cross and pulled himself up. To gain the cross arm was merely "shinning" up a good sized tree, and soon he stood on the horizontal timber and, reaching up, touched the top of the cross.

After enjoying his moment of exaltation he slid to the foot of the cross, and, with his arms round the post, slipped down over the great abdomen of the ball. His feet touched nothing. The little platform from which he had reached up was not there.

There was a peril and one for a cool head and sure eye. Of course he could not look down. The buzzing hold that he had to keep on the bottom of the cross shortened the reach of his body and made it less than when he had stood on the plank and reached up to the cross with his hands. He must drop so that his feet should meet the plank, for he would never be able to pull himself back if he should let himself down at arms' length, and his feet hung over empty air.

Now his good head began to work. He looked up at the cross and tried to recall exactly the angle at which he had reached for it, to make his memory tell him just how the edge of that square post had appeared. A few inches to the right or to the left would mean dropping into vacancy.

Bending his head away back, he strained his eye up the cross and figured his angle of approach. He cautiously wormed himself to the right and made up his mind that here directly under his feet must be the plank. Then he dropped. The world knows that he lived to tell the tale.

PICTURESQUE ALGIERS.

All Its Streets Are Staircases, and All Are Safe.

Here is a pretty picture of Algiers by Frances E. Nesbitt: "Now it is possible to go safely into even the darkest and remotest corners, and they are dark indeed. A first visit leaves one breathless, but delighted—breathless, because all the streets are staircases on a more or less imposing scale—the longest is said to have at least 500 steps; delightful, because at every turn there is sure to be something unusual to a stranger's eye. The newer stairs are wide and straight and very uninteresting, but only turn into any old street and follow its windings in and out between white walls, under arches, through gloomy passages, here a few stairs, there a gentle incline, always up and always the cool deep shade leading to the bright blue of the sky above.

"Being so narrow and so steep, there are, of course, no camels and no carts. Donkeys do all the work and trot up and down with the strangest loads, though porters carry furniture and most of the biggest things. Up and down these streets comes an endless variety of figures—town and country Arabs, apahs in their gay uniforms, French soldiers, Italian workmen, children in vivid colors, Jews with heads and chins swathed in dark wrappings.

"Interesting beyond all these are the Arab women sitting like ghosts from one shadowy corner to another, the folds of their haicks concealing all the glories of their indoor dress, so that in the street the only sign of riches lies in the daintiness of the French shoes and the fact that the haik is pure silk and the little veil over the face of a finer material."

After Long Years.

After long years work is visible. In agriculture you cannot see the growth. Fast that country two months after, and there is a difference. We acquire firmness and experience incessantly. Every action, every word, every meal, is part of our trial and our discipline. We are assuredly ripening or else blighting. We are not conscious of those changes which go on quietly and gradually in the soul. We only count the shocks in our journey. Ambitions die; grace grows as life goes on.—Friedrich W. Robertson.

BRITISH SCIENTIST'S IDEA.

Man is Groping His Way Upwards, Says Sir Oliver Lodge—Reasons For His Conclusion.

"God is one; the universe is an aspect and revelation of God. The universe is struggling upward to a perfecting not yet attained, writes Sir Oliver Lodge, who continues: 'I see in the mighty process of evolution an eternal struggle towards more and more self-perfection and fuller and more embracing existence—not only on the part of what is customarily spoken of as 'creating,' but in so far as nature is an aspect and revelation of God, and so far as time has any ultimate meaning or significance, we must dare to extend the thought of growth and progress and development even up to the height of all that we can realize of the supernatural being. In some parts of the universe perhaps already the ideal conception has been attained. And the region of such attainment, the full blaze of self-conscious deity, is to bright for mortal eyes, utterly beyond our highest thoughts; but in part the attainment is as yet imperfect, in so far as we know as the material part, which is our present home, it is nascent, or only just beginning; and our own struggles and efforts and disappointments and aspirations, the felt groping and travelling of creation, these are evidence of the effort towards fuller and brighter and more conscious existence. On this planet man is the highest outcome of the forces so far, and is therefore the highest representative of deity that here exists. Truly imperfect as yet, because so recently evolved, he is nevertheless a being which has at length attained to consciousness and free will, a being unable to be coerced by the whole force of the universe against his will, a spark of the divine never to be quenched.

So it must have been elsewhere, amid the depths of cosmic space, myriads of times over in all the vistas of the past; and thus may have arisen legends of the evolutions of what popularly are called angels, some ascendant in the struggle, others fallen by their own rebellion. Let it not be supposed that these instinctive legends are based on nothing; they are pictorial travesty, doubtless, but they are not gratuitous inventions; it is doubtful if entirely baseless or purely gratuitous inventions would have any vitality; every living idea surely must be based upon something; these correspond to something innate in the ideas of humanity because imbedded in the structure of the universe of which that humanity is a part.

A question arises on the subject for answer therefore. Are the rebellious and sinful not also on the upgrade? Ultimately, and in the last resort, will not they, too, put themselves in time with the harmony of existence? Who is to say? Time is infinite, eternity is as well as before us and behind us, and the end is not yet. There is no ultimate in the matter, for there is no end; there is room for an eternity of rebellion and degradation and misery as well as for one of joy and hope and love. We can see that virtue and happiness must be on the winning side, while crime is a fruit of arrested development or reversion to an ancestral type; we can perceive that vice contains suicidal elements, while every step in an upward direction increases the potential energy of the moral universe; yet clearly there is no compulsion; yet clearly there is no closed, but it must of free will be entered, and good and evil will be intermingled with us for many seasons yet. The law of progress by struggle and effort is not soon to be abandoned and replaced by Nirvana. The universe is not a "being" "becoming," an ancient but light brings doctrine when realized, it is in change, in development, in movement, upward and downward, that activity consists.

Such ideas, the ideas of development and progress, extend even up to God himself, according to the Christian conception. So we return to that with which we started; the Christian idea of God is not that of a being outside the universe, above its struggles and advances, looking on and taking no part in the process, solely exalted, benevolent, self-determined, and complete; no, it is also that of a God who loves, who yearns, who suffers, who keenly laments the rebellious and misguided activity of the free agents brought into being by himself as part of himself, who enters into the storm and conflict, and is subject to conditions as the soul of it all; conditions not artificial and transitory, but inherent in the process of producing free and conscious beings and essential to the full self-development of even deity.

Infinitely patient the universe has been while man has groped his way to this truth; so simple and consoling in one of its aspects, so inconceivable and incredible in another. Dimly and partially it has been seen by all the prophets, and doubtless by many of the pagan saints. Dimly and partially we see it now; but in the life blood of Christianity we see its most vital element. It is not likely to be the attribute of any religion alone, it may be the essence of truth in all terrestrial religions, but it is conspicuously Christian.

Red Rose as Rent.

A red rose is the annual rent paid for a valuable bit of land in Southwark, the busy central quarter of southern London. The 25th payment has just been made to the governors of St. Olave's and St. Saviour's Grammar School, who are the ground landlords. The quaint custom dates from 1656, when a portion of field belonging to the school was leased by the parish authorities for the benefit of the poor at the nominal annual rent of one red rose. The lease was one of 500 years, so that in the natural course of things the annual rent will be paid until A. D. 2156. The value of the land will go on increasing, for green fields have now receded miles from Southwark.

Laymen as "Patrons."

The Bishop of Rochester, speaking at the Diocesan Conference at Tunbridge Wells, on differences between clergy and congregations, said that in future he would submit to local patronage committees of church people any gifts of living of which he was the patron, provided that the committees undertook to see that the incumbent received adequate remuneration.

DADY'S AWFUL SKIN HUMOUR

Doctors and Hospitals Called It Chronic Eczema and Said Sores Never Could Be Healed—Child Was Getting So Bad Mother Didn't Know What To Do.

CURED BY CUTICURA AT A SMALL EXPENSE

"Words cannot express my gratitude for what Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Resolvent have done for my son, who when two years old had eczema as bad as any child could have it. I had several doctors, but when they stopped treating him his head would begin to get sore again, almost the next day. It got so bad I really didn't know what to do. At last we took him to the hospital, where the doctors said he had chronic eczema. They gave me a wash for it, but said it was foolish to think of it ever being cured."

"I tried and failed, so I thought I must do something, and reading about Cuticura, I went to the nearest drug store and purchased a set of Cuticura Remedies. I used half of them and found some relief and improvement, but thought the change for the better was only temporary, as it had been with all the other medicines ordered by the doctors. But by the time I had used one and a half boxes of Ointment, one small bottle of Resolvent, and one cake of Soap, the cure was complete and permanent, with not a sign of a sore from that day to this—over two years. I shall never be without Cuticura Soap. I find it so good for the toilet and for the children—Mrs. E. Schepfer, 218 Frost St., Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 4, 1906.

Complete External and Internal Treatment for every Humour, from Pimples to Scrofula, from Itchiness to Any kind of Skin Disease, including Eczema, Psoriasis, and Resolvent, also Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Resolvent, will cure all skin diseases. A single set often cures. Nothing like Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Resolvent. Get Mailed Free, "How to Cure Itchy Humours."

Rare Stamp.
There should be a large demand on the part of stamp collectors for copies of the special stamps which were issued by the Japanese Government some time ago to commemorate the return of the troops from the seat of war. Two of such stamps of the face value of one-half sen and 3 sen respectively were issued, and they were available for postage of letters only on the day of the great review. Not more than one copy of each kind was sold to every applicant for the stamps at the general postoffice. The design consisted of a Maxim gun and other weapons of modern warfare, with the Japanese flag.

An Errand of Mercy.
Deeply impressed recently by an address given at Brighton on the evils of smoking, a young minister rose and said that that morning he had had a presentiment that one of them he had smoked, but he now determined to go home and throw the rest into the fire. Thereupon a Baptist minister arose and said that he meant to accompany his reverend brother.

"My intention," he added, "is to rescue the ninety and nine."—London Tribune.

Fly as Disease Carrier.

"The house-fly is largely responsible for the high death rate from diarrhoea," remarked Dr. Sephton at the Lancashire County Council meeting. "If mothers would only keep milk for the children in clean and covered vessels to prevent the house-fly getting at it the infant mortality would be speedily reduced."

Her Dream Fulfilled.

The landlady of a widowed named Saunders, living in Mile-end, dreamed that her lodger was drowned in the Regent's Canal, London. She went to Mrs. Saunders' room, and finding that she was not there, gave information to the police. The sleeping woman's body was found in the canal.

A Long-Postponed Voyage.

A woman in Glasgow named Robertson purchased a ticket for Canada thirty-one years ago. A few days ago she presented the ticket at the office of the Allan Line Company, where it was duly honored.

Strike Riot at Frisco.

San Francisco, Sept. 11.—As an aftermath to the recent strike on the United Railroads, a riot broke out last night when the Street Car Co. started to march about 200 strike-breakers from the car barns to the ferry building. Many shots were fired by the armed guards escorting the men, and a half-dozen persons are reported wounded.

LAI'D THE CORNER-STONE.

Hon. Frank Cochrane Officiates At the Ceremony of the First Canadian Smelter in North Country.

North Bay, Sept. 11.—Two thousand people from the town and district attended the corner-stone laying at the site of the Montreal Refining & Reduction Co.'s plant, at Trout Lake, yesterday afternoon. Special trains were run from New Liskeard, and in intervening points, one from Coppercliff, and eight crowded cars carried the North Bay people.

Mayor Purvis presented the civic address to Hon. Frank Cochrane, who laid the stone. The address recited the fact that when the smelter is completed it is hoped to handle all kinds of ore, with a capacity of 500 tons a day. The total cost of the works is placed at $2,000,000, and will employ about 1,000 men.

Mr. Cochrane, in replying, said that since assuming office he had endeavored to put the mining laws on a broader basis, but they were not yet entirely satisfactory, not even to himself. His main object in the new act had been to secure more development, as the more development there was and the better the showing the greater the advantage of the miner with a claim to dispose of. The lack of reduction works was being overcome, and he hoped as great success would follow the refining and smelting industry as had followed the building of the T. & N. O. Railway.

He also hoped that before many years had passed Ontario would not only be refining, but also marketing its own ores.

A. G. Browning, president of the local board of trade, presented the president of the company, E. E. Leonard, M.P., with a lease of the site of the plant.

Mr. Leonard, Hon. Nelson Montell, F. D. Monk, M.P.; Chas. McCool, M.P.; N. Labrosse, M.P., and the company's engineer, Mr. Brown, spoke. The proceedings terminated with a banquet.

PEACE IS ALL OFF.

President Palma Declares Martial Law in Three Cuban Provinces.

Havana, Sept. 11.—President Palma last night issued a decree suspending all constitutional guarantees in the Provinces of Pinar del Rio, Havana and Santa Clara. The law enforcing public order, which is equivalent to martial law, also is put in immediate effect in the three provinces named.

A supplemental decree has been issued ordering that all rebels be arrested and jailed.

The Government also ordered the arrest of practically every prominent Liberal. Alfredo Zayas, president of the Liberal party, and several others have disappeared.

All peace projects are declared off.

Havana, Sept. 11.—A troop train from Havana was attacked early yesterday at Artemisa, but the rebels were driven off with machine guns.

LACOMBE FIRE SWIFT.

Loss From Fire in Alberta Town May Total $100,000.

Lacombe, Alberta, Sept. 11.—A serious conflagration occurred Saturday in the downtown business portion of Lacombe, which consumed the following places of business:

The Adelphi Hotel; Charles Atkinson, paper and sign painter; H. I. Macdonald, druggist; A. McCampbell, general merchant; C. L. Darie, lawyer; John McKenty, real estate; E. Tisworth, fruit and billiard hall; Dr. Aung, dentist; J. H. Rose, druggist; C. R. Denike, jeweller; Morrison & Johnson's warehouse; Bindman Electric Light Co.'s office.

The fire brigade did heroic service, and the citizens did splendid work, forming themselves into a bucket brigade.

It is estimated that the property and stock burned will amount to between $75,000 to $100,000.

Healey Falls Power Lease.

Cobourg, Sept. 11.—The perplexities of the Northumberland-Durham Power Co. were thrashed out at a meeting of the directors here yesterday when a deputation from the Village of Healey Falls was heard. Having heard Dr. Stinson there was considerable discussion, which was terminated by J. A. Culverwell, the largest stockholder, and with proxies representing a majority of the stock, who moved a resolution that "under the act and our lease of Healey Falls from the Ontario Government, we are compelled to refer the matter to the Hydro-Electric Commission." The motion carried and the meeting was immediately adjourned.

Right of Way Mining Claims.

Toronto, Sept. 11.—The Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway Co. has granted a lease for the right of way mining claims in the Cobalt district to a syndicate composed of Messrs. J. P. Dickson, A. W. Fraser, T. A. Bement, J. G. Purritt, M. P., Edmund Seybold and George Goodwin, contractor. Mr. Cecil B. Smith, chairman of the Commission, said that the terms of the new contract are exactly the same as the former one to the Murphy syndicate. Woman's Kidney Troubles

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is Especially Successful in Curing This Fatal Disease.

Mrs. J. W. Lang and Mrs. S. Frake

Of all the diseases known, with which women are afflicted, chronic kidney disease is the most fatal. In fact, unless early and correct treatment is applied, the weary patient seldom survives.

Being fully aware of this, Lydia E. Pinkham, early in her career, gave exhaustive study to the subject, and in producing her great remedy for a woman's ills—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—was careful to see that it contained the correct combination of herbs which was sure to control that fatal disease, woman's kidney troubles.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the only one especially prepared for women, and thousands have been cured of serious kidney derangements by it. Derangements of the feminine organs quickly affect the kidneys, and when a woman has such symptoms as pain or weight in the loins, backache, bearing-down pains, scalding or burning sensations or deposits in the urine, unusual thirst, swelling of hands and feet, swelling under the eyes or sharp pains in the back running through the groin, she may infer that her kidneys are affected and should lose no time in combating the disease with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the woman's remedy for woman's ills.

The following letters show how marvelously successful it is.

Mrs. Samuel Frake, of Prospect Plains, N. J., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham—

"I cannot thank you enough for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. When I first wrote to you I had suffered for years with what the doctor called kidney trouble and congestion of the female organs. My back ached dreadfully all the time, and I suffered so with that bearing-down feeling I could hardly walk across the room. I did not get any better, so I decided to stop doctoring with my physician and take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I am thankful to say it has entirely cured me. I do all my own work, have no more backache and all my symptoms have disappeared.

"I cannot praise your medicine enough, and would advise all women suffering with kidney trouble to try it."

Mrs. J. W. Lang, of 626 Third Avenue, New York, writes:

"I have been a great sufferer with kidney trouble. My back ached all the time and I was discouraged. I heard that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would cure kidney disease, and I began to take it; and it has cured me when everything else had failed. I have recommended it to lots of people and they all praise it very highly."

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation.

Women suffering from kidney trouble, or any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. The present Mrs. Pinkham is the daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, her assistant before her decease, and for twenty-five years since her advice has been freely given to sick women. Out of the great volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than likely she has the very knowledge that will help your case. Her advice is free and always helpful.

The man that has no music in himself, Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds, Is fit for treasons, stratagems and spoils.—Shakespeare

In this last of our series of what the master writers have said about music we have quoted the familiar words of the greatest English poet. Many times Shakespeare has credited music with being the greatest of arts, and in his day music had not reached the summit of its magnificence that it has today with such instruments as

A Rhapsody on a Mutton Chop.

When a primitive man waits breakfast he takes a sheep, kneels upon it, holds it between his legs and cuts its throat. He skins it, and, taking a slice out of it, fries it on the coals for breakfast. We also demand not less imperatively cutlets for our breakfast. We procure an individual some way off to kill the beast and another out of our sight to cook it. We have a paper frill put around the bone to disguise it, and to look at while we eat it; but, to the sheep—to the sheep—it can make little difference which way it is eaten. We still do our unclean work, but we do it by proxy. And it may be questioned whether what we gain in refinement we have not lost in sincerity.—Fortnightly Review.

THE SURGEON'S TOOLS

AS FEW AS POSSIBLE USED BY THE MODERN PRACTITIONER.

To Remove an Appendix, For Instance, He Can Carry Everything Necessary in One of His Pockets. Hand Forged Instruments the Best.

"A surgeon used to carry a bag of instruments weighing often as much as twenty-five pounds when he was called to operate," said a member of the staff of the New York Postgraduate Medical School and Hospital the other day. "Today an average operation, such as the removal of an appendix, calls for no more instruments than can be carried in the pockets."

"I have just come," continued the doctor, "from removing an appendix, and here in this small package are all the instruments I used—a scissors, two artery clamps, two forceps and a needle. Many operations, of course—gastro-enteric, gynecological and those that have to do with bones—require more instruments, but with modern science demands the use of as few as possible in order that time may be saved. Skill and haste are prime factors in an operation. In the old days, before anesthesia was known, this was to shorten the patient's agony as much as possible. After ether was discovered surgeons for awhile operated more leisurely, but soon finding out that the shock to the patient remaining under ether so long was always dangerous and often fatal they again recognized the importance of swiftness. Diminishing the number of instruments was one of the methods for saving time. In the operating room in the old days there was always, no matter what the operation, a good sized table laid out with ten or fifteen scores of instruments, fifty artery clamps, scissors, forceps and lancets by the dozen. It used to take over an hour to remove an appendix; today the average is about twelve minutes.

"The variety of instruments increases every year as surgeons meet with new needs or solve old problems. In our school here, as in others, many instruments have been devised. Especially to those having to do with the eye, ear, nose and throat have we made valuable additions as well as in the field of orthopedic appliances. The Hippocratic oath precludes the patenting of any such inventions; consequently all instruments are free to be made by all and every surgical manufacturer."

The making of surgical instruments in the United States is nearly contemporaneous with the beginning of the republic, and one or two of the prominent firms today date from long before the civil war. In no country are finer instruments made than in the United States. Though the number of men employed is small, every man is a skilled laborer and an artist, with an aptitude often as fine as that of a journeyman jeweler, capable of making even the most delicate of the great variety of instruments, amounting to about 10,000, which a surgical house must keep in stock or be ready to produce upon order.

Cast and drop forged instruments have no lasting value, and once the edge is worn off they can never be satisfactorily resharpened. The process which they undergo demands that they be brought three times to a white heat. The first time the steel becomes tempered; the second and third time it becomes decarbonized and loses its temper, the result being an instrument with a shell of hard steel, capable of taking a fair edge, but beneath which the metal is soft and unfit to stand holding.

"All good instruments are hand forged. Thus prices are doubled and trebled over the prices of cast instruments because of the skilled labor and time necessary to their construction. The workman in a careful factory must make a study of his work and learn the physical qualities of the steel or metal he works with, its strength and cutting and tension qualities. General operating instruments are made of steel, silver, platinum, gold and aluminum. German steel, owing to its tenacity, is used for forceps and blunt instruments; English cast steel for edged tools, as it receives a high temper, a fine polish and retains its edge. Silver when pure is very flexible and is useful for catheters, which require frequent change of curve. When mixed with other metals, as coin silver, it makes firm catheters, caustic holders and cannulated tools. Seamless silver instruments are least liable to corrode. Platinum resists the action of acids and ordinary heat and is useful for caustic holders, actual cauteries and the electrodes of the galvanic cautery. Gold, owing to its ductility, is adapted for fine tubes, such as eye syringes and so forth, while aluminum is by its extreme lightness suitable for probes, styles and tracheotomy tubes.

"Handles are made of ebony, ivory, pearl or hard rubber. Ebony and rubber are used for large instruments, though these at times have handles of steel. Ivory makes a durable and beautiful handle, though it and ebony are not entirely aseptic, because it is impossible to boil them for the purpose of sterilization without their cracking. Ivory and pearl are used for scalpels and for small instruments like those used in operating on the eye. On the whole, the best material for handles is hard rubber, since it may be vulcanized on the instrument, thus making it practically one piece, with no possible seam for the lodging of germs and hence perfectly aseptic.

"Next to the materials the mode of making determines the instrument's quality. Steel overheated in the forge is brittle or rotten. In shaping with the file the form may be destroyed. In hardening and tempering the steel may be spoiled. In every stage the value of the instrument depends upon the skill applied."

How to Dust Furniture Properly.

The proper method of dusting furniture has to be learned. It does not come naturally. Girls rarely begin with a dusting brush. If you are absolutely necessary to success. That in the left hand is needed to prevent leaving finger marks when lifting and steadying the furniture, says the Philadelphia Press. Each piece should be wiped lightly from the top downward with a duster, and then after the duster has been shaken out of the window, not over the carpet, it should be rubbed vigorously to raise the polish. The legs and spindles should be rubbed between the two dusters with both hands. This is a saving of time and insures all sides being equally bright.

A Hypocrite.

Mr. Reid, the leader of the Commonwealth free trade party of Australia, objects to being called in Parliament his first name. At a recent meeting there was a persistent protestation against the use of the name "Reid" by the speaker, who at last called out, "Good old George!" Mr. Reid then focused him with his monocle and icily observed, "I have not the slightest objection to my friends calling me George, but a man calls me George who would be glad to see me under a steam roller. I call that man a hypocrite."

Birth-marks, which mark and mar the outside of the body are a grief to every mother whose children may bear them.

For every child who bears a birth-mark on the skin there are many who bear an indelible birth-mark on the mind. Nervous mothers have nervous children and a man and woman owes an irritable and despondent temperament to those days of the hour of their mother's waiting for the hour of her maternity. The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription strengthens the mother for her trial. With strength comes a buoyancy of spirits and a quickness of mind, which is one of the happiest gifts a mother can bestow on her offspring. By giving vigor and elasticity to the delicate womanly organs "Favorite Prescription" practically does away with the pain of maternity and makes the baby's advent as natural and as simple as the blossoming of a flower. There is no opium, cocaine or other narcotic contained in "Favorite Prescription."

When the Votes Tied

By CLAUDE PAURARES

Copyright, 1906, by W. R. Caldwell

It was an off year in politics—that is, it was a bad year for the politicians. The electors had taken the bit in their teeth and run away, and the cut and dried nominees had failed to become candidates. It was because of this that Abe Hewson had been elected to the legislature from one of the mountain districts. When his friends and neighbors had talked of nominating him he had replied:

"Shoo! Why, I hain't got no eddication."

"Don't you reckon you need any to be an honest man?"

"I can't make no speech."

"The less gab the better. Been too much talk already."

"But them eddicated critters will git me all tangled up."

"Nobody can't tangle up a square man."

Abe Hewson was nominated and elected. He didn't have to pay out a shilling for campaign expenses, and he didn't make any promises. They knew him throughout his district as an honest man. They said of him as they said of a January cousin—that was "prime."

His wife was not puffed up with pride over his nomination. She had little to say during the campaign. It was only when he came home and told her that he was elected that she mentioned him to sit down and then said:

"Abe Hewson, nobody could dun say that you wasn't an honest man when I married you."

"I was tryin' to walk straight, Tilda."

"For ten years you was buyin' and sellin' mews, Abe, did you ever lie and cheat in that business?"

"Drat me, but I was so squar' that I couldn't make a livin' at it."

"For six or seven years you have been buyin' coon and skunk and wood-chuck skins. Have you been a liar and a cheat?"

"No, Tilda. I could have lied once and made $3 on a b'arskin, but I shet my teeth bad agin it."

"You kin borrow a dollar of most any man, can you?"

"Reckon so."

"And when a man has got your word he depends on it?"

"Fears that way."

"And all this is why you've been elected. It's cause you've got a good name; it's cause you're a squar' man. Abe, we uns is pore folks. We hain't eddicated. Planers and silks and broadcloths are not for sich as us. We squatted yere twenty years ago, and we'll stay squatted till the end. I hain't makin' the least complaint over it. I don't believe I'd care to be rich and have grand things. I'm satisfied to go right along just like this, but don't fling us down, Abe—don't do that."

"What d'ye mean, Tilda?" he asked.

"I hain't none of a reader, but I can make out 'nuff in our weekly paper to know that heaps o' men are willin' to part with their honesty to get ahead in the world. Don't part with yours. You are goin' what you'll be tempted, but shet your teeth agin it. I'm holdin' my head high and feelin' just as good as any one on this here moutain, not because we've got money, Abe, but because you are a squar' man. If you should lose that name you'd lose me. I'm lovin' you as much as a wife can, but I'm speakin' mighty straight when I tell you that if so much as a whisper should come back here that you had lost your squariness I'd walk off and starve to death in the woods rather than live on you."

"And I wouldn't be blamin' you, Tilda," quietly replied Abe as he went out to walk about and think.

Abe Hewson went down to the capital of the state in fear and trembling. He was marked down by certain members and lobbyists as a good thing, but they gave him time to shake himself down into his place. There were axes to grind on every hand, but it was the coal men who had the largest. They wanted a charter for a railroad to run to certain undeveloped mines. It wasn't a line to build up the country and accommodate the people, but to bring coal out to market. They wanted a grant of state lands to reconquer themselves.

A powerful lobby, well supplied with money and arguments, was on hand. Those who saw through the scheme and knew that it was a steal also knew that they had their hands full to fight it.

Abe was moving along slowly and trying to look ahead for pitfalls when the matter of the railroad came up and he found himself in the thick of it. He found himself in the position of many another before his time. The state employs no lobbyists to protect herself. All the argument and sophistry and money are in the hands of those who would rob her. The opponents of the railroad scheme sat down with Abe Hewson and tried to make him understand. They found him dense, but realized that he wanted to be honest. They contented themselves by telling him that it was his duty to vote against the bill. It was clear enough to Abe that day, but not so clear the next. The lobby had got after him.

Your congressional or legislative lobbyist is a smart man. He is a student of character. He is a diplomat. He is sleek and slick. In this case when it became apparent that the vote would be close the Hon. Abraham Hewson was given especial attention. Cigars and champagne met him at every turn. Men were solicitous about his health. He came to know that shawls and dress patterns and jewelry were being sent to his mountain home. Tailors were ready to measure him for new suits without cost to himself, and hints were thrown out that after the adjournment he would be wanted to fill an important position down in the lowlands.

All this was very soothing and seductive to Abe. He had always been used to plain speech. A spade was either a spade or not a spade. The sophistry of the lobbyists tangled him up. He was made to see that under certain circumstances a long handled shovel became a short handled spade. He was a man without a grain of natural vanity, but when gentlemen of wealth and education asked him to sit down and drink and smoke with them and deferred to his opinions it was only natural that he should feel puffed up.

The day came when a poll of the house showed that the vote on the railroad bill would be a tie. Abe Hewson could not be counted for certain on either side. Both sides claimed him, but he had made no direct promise. The casting vote would be his. Some of his mountain constituents had come down, but between the lobbyists for the bill and the members against the bill they had soon been reduced to a state of uncertainty. For the first time in the history of the legislature an ignorant but honest "coonskin" member held the balance of power with the most important bill of two decades in the balance.

Quickly enough, the lobbyists had not resorted to direct bribery in Abe's case. They might argue and cajole and throw hints of rewards, but they felt afraid to go further. Both sides felt that he was trying to figure things out for himself and then cast his vote as conscience dictated.

The day finally came when the bill was to be put on its final passage. That it would be a tie vote every one was assured. Abe Hewson was in his seat, pale, nervous and hesitating between two opinions. He was no nearer a decision in his own mind than a week before. Some preliminary business was being transacted when a messenger called him out. Just outside the doors he found his wife. She had on her poke bonnet and heavy shoes and calico dress and had been the sport of a crowd for the last ten minutes. It was thirty-six miles over the rough mountain road to the log cabin, and she had walked all night. She had never been in the city before, never seen such crowds, never beheld such buildings, never looked so many men in the face.

"Gawd, Tilda, but you yere!" exclaimed Abe as he laid a hand on her shoulder.

"Yes, Abe."

"But what for? What dun bring yere?"

"That railroad bill, Abe. I've been readin' it right along, and I've dun been prayin'."

"And—"

"Prayin' to Gawd, Abe—prayin' that he might dun gimme light to see my way clear and make you see yours. The light come yesterday. Gawd he dun wants you to vote agin that railroad and still be an honest man. I've walked all night to get here and tell you. I was skeered by the darkness, and I'm skeered by the people. They are laughin' at me now. I'd never have come, Abe—I'd never have come in this livin' world if Gawd hadn't dun sent me."

Half an hour later the bill was put on its passage, and one of the messages going over the wires to people interested read:

"Railroad bill knocked into a cocked hat. Abe Hewson's wife did it."

The Irish Fairies.

Fairies still play a prominent part in the life and belief of the Irish people. It is lucky to spill milk, a servant assured her mistress when she once dropped a jugful. "Them little people will be pleased with th' sup ye're lavin' them," she added. It was the same servant, says a writer in the Grand Magazine, who said that the good folk were very dainty in their habits and would not touch anything that was soiled or dirty.

"Let me tell ye," she continued. "Me own little nephew in the County Tipperary, a lovely young b'y of three weeks, was pluin' away, an' th' poor mother was distracted to know what was affluin' him, till she called in a woman who had th' name o' bein' wise, an' she told me sister th' fairies was takin' th' child."

"An' what'll I do?" asked me sister.

"Smear him wid dirt," said th' woman, "for whatever's annyway dirty th' fairies'll lave after them."

"Me sister done that, an' th' young child recovered, for when they seen th' dirt th' fairies let him be."

When Auntie Was Silenced.

Auntie was showing off her little nephew, aged two, to an admirer who was calling upon her for the second time. He was a very bright youngster, and during a pause in the performance specially requested by auntie he suddenly remembered the way she had been teasing him before the caller arrived and decided to turn the tables on her, so he pointed a chubby finger at the door and said, "My rug!"

Auntie at once caught the spirit of the thing and cried emphatically, "No, my rug!"

"My dress," said her little nephew, pointing to auntie's gown.

"No, my dress," replied auntie, delighted to have an opportunity to show how cute he was.

Then the little boy sidled over to the caller and, pointing at him, cried, "My man!"

Silence on the part of auntie—Pillgrim.

J. L. CAMPBELL THE BOSTON SHOE STORE

WAS POISONED BY MISTAKE

London, Sept. 12.—The death of Mrs. John Labatt, which occurred at the family residence, Queen's avenue, Monday evening, was due to an unaccountable mistake on the part of a clerk in a local drug store.

Mrs. Labatt, who was the wife of the well-known brewer, had been under the care of her physician for a few days, and Monday evening a prescription was sent to the druggist's for her. A clerk who has had eight years' experience and was considered very careful and reliable undertook to fill it, but in the place of a non-poisonous ingredient he used nuxvomica, the result being that Mrs. Labatt died in three-quarters of an hour after taking a dose of the medicine.

Coroner McLaren and Crown Attorney McLaren were notified, and an inquest was commenced yesterday morning. No evidence was taken, an adjournment being made for a week.

The act of the clerk is considered to be purely a mistake, and it is not likely that he will be prosecuted.

Mr. Labatt is at present in Sault Ste. Marie, and he will not reach London until this morning.

About 1,000 arrests were made, and most of the prisoners are Jews. Many children were taken into custody. They are employed by the terrorists to execute attempts upon Government officials because the movements of children do not draw suspicion, and they are not liable to capital punishment.

Bombarded by Artillery.

Stavropol, Sept. 12.—It is reported here by telegraph that the Village of Shulgati has been bombed by artillery in consequence of disorders, which commenced there following the arrest of M.
