By the Waves. Crisp and curling, soft unfurling
Caps of silvery foam,
Haste the breakers, frolic makers,
Chasing playmates home.
Tripping, skipping, slipping, dripping,
Fast the children fly
Up the shingle, toes a tingle—
So the day goes by.

Wavelets creaming, sunshine gleaming, In the shining sands, Gay and merry, bold and cherry, Delve the small brown hands, Drifting, lifting, sifting,

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 3RD, 1894.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 3RD, 1894.

—The contest for the governorship of the state of New York, which is to take place some five weeks hence, promises to be a battle of giants. On the one hand the republicans have nominated Levi P. Morton, the man who filled the vice-president's chair during the administration of President Harrison. Mr. Morton is reputed to be worth from twenty to thirty million dollars, and in selecting him as a candidate the party anagers on his side were believed to be gely influenced by the size of the contriction he could afford to make to the camaign fund of his party. His millions, and he fact that he has been vice-president, without making any enemies, joined to the

he fact that he has been vice-president, without making any enemies, joined to the additional fact that the tide is this year running strongly with the republican party, have given rise to the belief that he would be elected, although it has been a good many years since the great empire state has had a republican governor.

Now the democrats have surprised every-

Now the democrats have surprised everyody, including themselves, by nominating Senator Hill as their candidate. Mr. Hill has several times been governor of his state, and he was Cleveland's leading opponent at the last democratic national convention, his failure to secure the presidential nomination upon that occasion being the only defeat he ever sustained. Until the other day he has of late been regarded as rather a back number, so to speak, as it was generally supposed that when he opposed the tariff policy of the president, and alone of all his party voted against the final compromise measure, he had entirely broken with the democratic party. But, when the democracy met the other day, to the great surprise of everybody, he was selected as the candidate for governor, amid the wildest kind of enthusiasm. He is a fighter in every sense of the word. His opponents say that he belongs to the Tammany section of his party and represents that element in politics which is there for what is to be made out of it.

The next meeting wilded against the final compromise measure, he had entirely broken with the democracy measure, he had entirely broken with the democracy met the other MacLean, Bridge town. And saturday evening at 1 p.m. each Saturday evening at 1 p is there for what is to be made out of it.
However that may be, he has a habit of winning; and although in this fight the odds seem against him, yet it will surprise no one if he defeats Morton in spite of his millions. In that case, Hill, with the great state of New York at his back, will be the biggest man in his party, and with Cleveland out of the way, it will not be difficult for him to capture the next democratic nomination for president. So the contest, as we have said, becomes a battle of the giants.

Who ever knew a case where the onlooker did not know infinitely more than the man who is doing the work, be the latter ever so well skilled and proficient? Had the circumstances been more auspicious doubtless some solid chunks of wisdom would have been given to the world upon the occasion of the close of the exhibition on Friday afternoon last. But unfortunately there was so much din and confusion of packing up the exhibits that the speakers could not be heard, even though, as one of them expressed it, he "had Gabriel's trumpet to speak through." Among these and others of the world geatings, General Booth may be placed. His organization is peculiar in its nature and in its methods of working—so unorthodox it at times appears that much censure has come to it from high circles. But the thousands of reclaimed outcasts speak volumes in its favor. The real object of the Scietty is the proagation of christian teaching among the poor and degraded, and the work of General Booth's soldiers in the lonely hovels of our large cities is a violent rebute to those who ais in high orthodox places and criticine. General Booth's name will live in history like other great religion leaders, and like many other famous men Death will probably seize him before he fully accorded his rightful due.

September days inevitably suggest the purchase of Autumn and Winter supplies both for dress purposes and household use. You buy and use Dry Goods; we buy and sell them. You buy the good kinds for as little as you can to use; we buy the best for as little as we can to sell, and we can and do buy for less, because there is scarcely a limit to quantity, and we always buy from headquarters, thus saving the customer the middle profit to a great extent. So much for argument. Now to prove it. We have just opened and placed on sale the choicest and best lot of

The cry of children, according to Dr. Hill in the Medical Record, in pneumonia and capillary bronchitis, is moderate and peevish and muffled, as if a door were shut between the child and hearer. The cry of croup is hoarse, brassy, and metallic, with a crowing inspiration. That of brain disease, particularly hydrocephalus, is short, sharp shrill, and solitary. Marasmus and tubercular peritonitis are manifested by moaning and wailing. Obstinate, passionate, and longcontinued crying tells of earache, thirst, hunger, original meanness, or the pricking of a pin. The pleuritic is louder and shriller than the pneumonic, and is evoked by moving the child or on coughing. The cry of intestinal ailments is often accompanied by wriggling and writhing before defecaion. Exhaustion is manifested with a whine. Crying only, or just after coughing, indicates pain caused by the act. The return or inspiratory part of the cry grows weaker toward the fatal end of all diseases, and the absence of crying during disease is often graver import than its presence, show-ing complete exhaustion and loss of power.
