On behalf of the House I would like to commend all of those involved in agricultural research in Canada, and the federal Government for its continued commitment to this sector.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

PENITENTIARIES

PORT-CARTIER PRISON—MANAGEMENT CONTRACT—AUDITOR GENERAL'S VIEW

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Right Hon. Prime Minister. On the news last night the Auditor General was asked about the management contract for the construction of the prison in Port-Cartier in the Prime Minister's riding. The reporter asked: "You're saying it was fixed?" The Auditor General of Canada replied: "Yes."

Is it the view of the Prime Minister that neither he nor his Government is responsible for the awarding and procedures, in an improper way, of this contract and the acceleration of it to meet electoral purposes in his riding?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I believe I made it very clear yesterday, both in my statement and during Question Period, that there were allegations of a conflict of interest raised in the House. At that point I announced an investigation into that conflict of interest. In fact, I reported that there was found to be a conflict of interest. I announced the sanctions that we had undertaken to deal with that conflict of interest. So I think the matter is very clear. There was a conflict of interest. We dealt with it in a manner which I feel is appropriate.

REQUEST FOR EXPLANATION OF MINISTER'S POSITION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, if the Minister insists on answering, how can he explain the fact that the Auditor General himself maintains that the awarding of the contract was accelerated, and how will he explain his own words to the effect that he had a tight schedule?

How can he explain all that to justify the position he has just taken?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, the position I have just taken is quite simple. Someone suggested in the House that there had been a conflict of interest. As a result of an inquiry into all facts in this case it was decided that indeed there had been a conflict of interest. So yesterday we announced measures to deal with this conflict.

I fail to see any inconsistency between my answer and the statements of the Auditor General.

PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): My question is again directed to the Prime Minister. The Prime Minister and his Government are spending an additional $41 million of the taxpayers' money to construct that prison in his riding, and to accelerate the construction for political purposes. After the improprieties in the awarding of the management contract, and the Auditor General's review of the entire procedure, will the Prime Minister admit that he and his Government were wrong from start to finish in this whole matter?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am advised that the dollar information that is being used by my right hon. friend is in serious error.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Those were the Auditor General's figures.

Mr. Mulroney: No, they were not the Auditor General's figures. That is the figure that the Leader of the Opposition has been throwing around, and it is quite wrong. We will try to deal with that in an objective manner.

In regard to the question as to whether the decision was the proper one, the Government believes that it was. We followed criteria that were set out almost word for word by the Solicitor General of the previous Liberal Government who indicated that when a ministry has a project that is required, and in this case we did require the institution, we took account of the economic conditions in the part of Canada where it was needed in deciding precisely where it would go. I do not think that there is anything to apologize for there. I think that all Departments should do that.

What the former Solicitor General was saying was that the Government in making these determinations, as his Government did in regard to the prison in Renous, should take into consideration economic regional disparity. This Government did precisely that, and the decision was a sound one.

PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister.

In a letter which the Auditor General addressed to you yesterday, along with an update on recommendation 7.95 of his report concerning the Port-Cartier prison, he pointed out that his annual report is referred to the Standing Committee on Public Accounts. He concluded by saying: "Should the committee so desire I will be pleased to appear before the committee to review all facts related to paragraph 7.95."

Here is what I want to ask the Prime Minister. Can he assure the House that he will not bring pressure to bear on the Conservative majority members of the committee in an attempt to prevent the Auditor General from giving testimony before the committee with respect to this specific issue?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, it is a totally pejorative allegation concerning all Members of this House. Of course the Auditor General is the servant of the House. He will always be received with respect and courtesy.

POSSIBILITY OF AUDITOR GENERAL APPEARING BEFORE COMMITTEE

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, I have a reason for asking this. I quote from a press release:

[English]

Prime Minister Brian Mulroney's office telephoned the Chairman of the Commons Committee on Justice today apparently for a progress report on the Committee's hearing on the Port-Cartier prison.

[Translation]

I have a supplementary, this time concerning Hon. Members and committee witnesses. Since the Auditor General has graciously offered to appear, may I ask the chairperson of the Committee on Public Accounts whether she would be prepared to invite him to appear before the committee?

[English]

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap.

Mr. Gauthier: She is the Chairman of the committee.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member has asked a question and it has not been answered. There is no rule that says that the Minister or—

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): The committee Chairman—

• (1425)

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gauthier: Koester, tell him.

Some Hon. Members: Order, order!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. If Hon. Members have a grievance to raise, they can raise it after Question Period. The Chair has made a ruling. The Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap.

CITIZENSHIP COURTS

ALLEGED BEHAVIOUR OF CITIZENSHIP COURT JUDGE

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Justice. He will be aware of some very serious allegations in media reports today about a citizenship court judge who allegedly was counselling new Canadians to vote Conservative and to support the Conservative Party. In other words, he was making some very partisan comments as part of his ongoing discussions with new Canadians. Has the Minister of Justice looked into the situation? Has he suspended the citizenship court judge pending an investigation into these allegations?

Hon. David Crombie (Secretary of State of Canada): Perhaps I could assist, Mr. Speaker. I had an opportunity to read the allegations in the newspaper this morning. I took the action of causing an investigation to be started. That investigation began this morning. I hope to make a statement by the end of the week.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is for the Minister of Justice. It concerns the very serious nature of these allegations and the pall which they throw over the entire citizenship system in Canada. Has the Minister of Justice examined the situation in adequate depth to ensure that very clear directives have gone out and are understood by all judges involved in citizenship procedures, that they are in non-partisan positions and any comments they make ought to be non-partisan in content?

Hon. David Crombie (Secretary of State of Canada): Mr. Speaker, indeed the Hon. Member is quite correct. Allegations concerning unacceptable conduct in which such judges would involve themselves are extremely serious. There is no question about that. This is why I called for an investigation this morning. I will be able to make a statement by the end of the week. I might say in respect of any further confirmation of attitudes by judges that an investigation has also been undertaken this morning.

SCRUTINY OF APPOINTEES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the Minister's response to the questions, but I should like to direct my last supplementary question to the Minister of Justice. Since these appointments are very important, in that a citizenship court is the first opportunity for new Canadians to be exposed to the Canadian judicial system, it is very important that they be non-partisan. To ensure that this type of partisan comment is never repeated, to ensure that the process is as clean as possible, and to ensure that such questions never have to be asked again in the House of Commons, would the Minister of Justice indicate that, whenever appointments are made, appropriate scrutiny by an appropriate committee will be given some priority?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, Hon. Members will know that as Minister of Justice I do not have responsibility for appointments of citizenship court judges. While they are citizenship court judges, they are not judges under Section 96 of the Constitution. I think my colleague, the Secretary of State, who has been answering in respect of the matter, has dealt with it very fulsomely and very forthcomingly. I think Hon. Members should applaud the approach being taken to ensure that we have the highest standard of citizenship court judges in the country.

STATEMENTS ATTRIBUTED TO CITIZENSHIP COURT JUDGE

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. It also concerns the unconscionable conduct of a citizenship court judge who was appointed by the Prime Minister and is active in the Conservative Party. During the course of a citizenship interview with Mr. Al Roberts of Oakville, the judge referred to the Gandhi family of India as "a bunch of communist bastards". As well he urged Mr. Roberts to vote for the Conservative Party. Will the Prime Minister immediately remove this judge from office?

Hon. David Crombie (Secretary of State of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I have already indicated to the House that the allegations are extremely serious. This is why, when I read them this morning, I caused the investigation to be started. That investigation will take only a day or two. I want to ensure, before we take any action which is commensurate with any wrongdoing, that the investigation is properly done. It will take a day or two, and this is why I indicated I will make a public statement on the matter no later than Friday.

• (1430)

ALLEGED CRITICISM OF CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, I have concluded my investigation. There are a number of—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Chair has heard the questions on this particular subject and I have been listening very carefully because Hon. Members are getting very close to breaking one of our rules, and that is an attack on a judge. There may be some argument whether this judge is of a high enough court, but I think the rule intends that personal attacks be not made on the court of the judge. The questions asked I have felt have been in order, but I would ask the Hon. Member for York South—Weston to be very careful.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, Conservative Members may consider this funny, but we in the Opposition—

Some Hon. Members: No.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Nunziata: —consider it to be very serious.

If I may continue, Mr. Speaker, there are a number of documented cases. During the course of another citizenship hearing with Mr. Stephen Wadhams, a CBC producer, the same judge in question criticized the CBC for ruining the country, and further on in his interview—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Chair does not view the matter that is being raised as anything else except very serious. I would ask the Hon. Member to put his question to which the Minister can reply.

Mr. Nunziata: During the course of an interview with Mr. Stephen Wadhams, a CBC producer, it is alleged that the same judge—

Mr. Riis: Question.

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Chair is in this position. The Hon. Member has raised a matter which is of very serious importance and apparently, by the answers of the Minister, is being treated that way. This is not the place to get into an extensive discussion of allegations about anyone, especially one who is a judge. The Minister has replied that an investigation is taking place. I would ask that the Hon. Member think over carefully just exactly how he wishes to ask a question and perhaps rise tomorrow. The Hon. Member for Nickel Belt.

Some Hon. Members: Right on.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: Bravo.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

ANNOUNCED CLOSURE OF HELSINKI EMBASSY

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. It has to do with the announcement by his Department of the closing of the Canadian Embassy in Helsinki, Finland. There are over 50,000 Canadians of Finn origin in Canada, some 6,500 alone live in the Nickel Belt area. These Canadians have made a significant contribution to Canadian life. Further, Helsinki serves as an important listening post between East and West.

Can the Minister explain to all Canadians the rationale for the decision to close this very important and vital link with Finland?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I certainly share the view of the Hon. Member, and I think it is shared by all in the House, that Canadians of Finnish origin have made and continue to make an outstanding contribution to Canada. That is not the question at issue when the Government has to come to terms with the legacy of deficit that was left us by the former Government—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): Throw that old record out.

Mr. Waddell: Take it from the prison money.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): —and has to come to some difficult decisions about how the policy of restraint will be applied. We have done that carefully and we have done it with a certainty that services that Canadians expect will be capable of being performed through other arrangements, and that the relations between Canada and Finland will remain at their present excellent state.

REQUEST FOR RECONSIDERATION OF DECISION

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Will he reconsider this short-sighted and unfortunate decision which has shocked thousands of my constituents in Thunder Bay, constituents of Finnish Canadian origin who love Canada but who expect to have the services of an embassy when they visit Finland and enjoy the country from which they and their ancestors came? Will the Minister reconsider the decision?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the short answer to that is no. May I also say while I am on my feet that I appreciated the endorsement of the difficult decisions we had to take by the spokesman for the New Democratic Party, the Hon. Member for Windsor—Walkerville, last night on CBC television.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Hon. Members will recall that a few minutes ago the Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques asked a question of a committee Chairman. The Chair must say that I did not see the committee Chairman rising. I am now informed that indeed she was. The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Deputy Prime Minister has spoken to me about this and I think it would be appropriate if I recognized the Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques to let him put his question to the Chairman of the committee.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS

AUDITOR GENERAL'S OFFER TO APPEAR BEFORE COMMITTEE—CHAIRMAN'S POSITION

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): In all fairness I must thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The supplementary question I wanted to direct to the chairperson of the Committee on Public Accounts is as follows. Since the Auditor General has graciously offered to appear before the committee to elaborate on recommendation 7.95 of his report, would the committee chairperson be prepared to invite the Auditor General now and accept his offer?

[English]

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, Members will know that the Public Accounts Committee has a standing reference of the Auditor General's Report so that the authority of the committee is there to deal with any part of the Auditor General's Report. The Auditor General's letter has been circulated to Members so that they can decide on an appearance as they look at competing agenda items. I will be bound by the recommendations of the Members.

REQUEST FOR MINISTER'S DISMISSAL

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Canadians learned from the Auditor General recently that in October, 1985, Correctional Services Canada misled Treasury Board on the contract for Port-Cartier. Yesterday we learned that the Correction Services Canada awarded a management contract in clear breach of conflict of interest guidelines. In view of the history of incompetence, of porkbarreling, of the waste of taxpayers' money, and the corruption in the awarding of contracts in this matter, will the Prime Minister not take the appropriate step and fire the Minister responsible for this sorry mess, the Solicitor General of Canada? Will he not accept responsibility for this?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I would like to emphasize the very misleading preamble to this question. I do not recall any submission to Treasury Board which was misleading. There is a mention of a draft submission that never reached Treasury Board, and to the best of my knowledge no misleading Treasury Board submission was ever dealt with by Treasury Board.

Mr. Robinson: Mr. Speaker, the Auditor General's report at paragraph 7.98 clearly states that there was a misleading submission.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question in the absence of the chairperson of the Standing Committee on Justice and the Solicitor General is for the Prime Minister. Can the Prime Minister confirm that this morning one of his officials, an official of the Prime Minister's Office, contacted the chairperson of the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs during our hearings on Port-Cartier? Will he explain just what on earth his official was doing in trying to interfere with an independent committee studying a serious issue? Why was he trying to muscle the chairperson of that committee on this question?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member's assertion is blatantly false. I placed a call to the chairman. I had not realized he was in committee at the time. Because he was I saw him afterwards, and I do not think there is anything wrong with meeting one of my colleagues, particularly a chairman.

IMMIGRATION

APPEAL TO FEDERAL COURT AGAINST DECISION OVERRULING MINISTER'S DEPORTATION ORDER

Mr. Gerry St. Germain (Mission—Port Moody): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Immigration on an issue which is still very disturbing to the people of British Columbia. As I understand it, the option of appealing the recent decision of the Immigration Appeal Board in Vancouver to the Federal Court of Canada is a feasible alternative. In light of that, what I must know from the Minister today is when—I repeat, when—will he make a commitment to pursue this necessary appeal?

Hon. Gerry Weiner (Minister of State (Immigration)): Mr. Speaker, the former Liberal Government allowed this person to enter Canada in 1981, or well before September 4, 1984. Now we will do everything we can to get him out. We will appeal now.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

PUBLIC SERVICE

DOCUMENT CONTAINING ALLEGED REQUEST TO CHASE MANHATTAN BANK

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I want to direct a question again to the Prime Minister about the Robert Shea affair which I raised yesterday. At that time the Prime Minister claimed there was no proof in writing that the Government had tried to find work for his friend Robert Shea with the Chase Manhattan Bank in a consulting contract for Cape Breton Island. I now have a copy of a document produced by the Government and tabled before the Parker Commission. Is it his position that this document is a forgery and was not produced within the Department of Regional Industrial Expansion? I am referring to the document which has the signature line of John D. McLure.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have no idea what the hon. gentleman is referring to. I have not been given a copy of that except that I—

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): It was not signed yesterday. Did you know yesterday?

Mr. Mulroney: —except that I did read yesterday that Mr. McLure denied signing that particular document.

REQUEST FOR INVESTIGATION OF DOCUMENT

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I am aware of the denial—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mulroney: Why didn't you mention it?

Mr. Kaplan: —but it was produced by the Prime Minister's Government and tabled before a Royal Commission.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): You are taking lessons from Nunziata.

Mr. Kaplan: It contains an allegation—

Some Hon. Members: Question!

Mr. Kaplan: —that the official was asked to find work for a friend of the Prime Minister. This document having been produced, is the Prime Minister prepared to inquire into it and find out why that language appears there? That is the least you should do when a document produced for a Royal Commission contains a statement like that. Get to the bottom of it.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, even for the hon. gentleman this is a new height of convoluted logic. He produces a document containing an allegation which he now admits has been denied by the alleged signatory. If you want to know anything about Mr. Shea whom I referred to yesterday, why not ask the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East because he was a friend and classmate of Mr. Shea and speaks highly of him?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Prime Minister will refrain from using the word "you".

SOCIAL AFFAIRS

CHILD TAX CREDIT—DELIVERY OF REPLACEMENT CHEQUES

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Revenue. Bureaucratic bungling will cost thousands of low-income people who moved last year their child tax credit. It was promised for Christmas and they are counting on it for Christmas. What will the Minister do to cut the red tape which could mean it will take two to three months to get replacement cheques to families who have changed their addresses and who are desperately counting on this money for Christmas?

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Minister of National Revenue): I appreciate the understandable concern expressed by my colleague and I can assure her that we have taken whatever steps are feasible to make alternative arrangements to send out cheques to people whose addresses have been advertently or inadvertently supplied incorrectly. The best thing taxpayers can do under the circumstances, if they wish to expedite the process, is to contact their District Office immediately and give their correct address. We will do our best to get the cheques out as soon as possible.

REQUEST THAT PROCESS BE EXPEDITED

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, the information I have is that it will take at least eight weeks after it has gone through his Department and then to Supply and Services. That is impossible. Why can the Minister not simplify the procedure and arrange to cancel cheques sent to the wrong addresses and issue replacement cheques if applicants sign an affidavit? Make it simple and get it out for Christmas.

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Minister of National Revenue): We will do whatever is possible to simplify the procedures. There have to be certain minimum safeguards. However, in any area where we can expedite the process it will be done.

IMMIGRATION

ACTION TAKEN BY IMMIGRATION APPEAL BOARD

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey—White Rock—North Delta): Mr. Speaker, my question is supplementary to that asked by the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody of the Minister of State for Immigration. Since the Immigration Appeal Board concerned was appointed with long tenure and has put Canadian citizens at risk, would the Minister see whether or not it is subject to prosecution for doing so?

Hon. Gerry Weiner (Minister of State (Immigration)): Mr. Speaker, clearly what I said is that we will appeal the decision of the IAB to the Federal Court under Section 28. It would certainly be inappropriate to comment any further as the matter will go before the Federal Court.

GOVERNMENT EXPENDITURES

TRAVEL EXPENSES OF PRIME MINISTER

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister and pertains to his foreign travel expenditures which cost the taxpayers an incredible 800 per cent more than similar travels by Prime Minister Trudeau. Can he explain to this House and Canadian taxpayers why he needs to travel with as many as 78 maids, butlers, and so on, costing as much as $50,000 per night, when former Prime Minister Trudeau travelled with one-third as many people, for one-tenth the cost?

Mr. McDermid: And was about one-fifteenth as effective.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: That was on a canoe trip.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I think even the Hon. Member will understand that the allegations in the preamble to his question are false. Let me come to the so-called news story on which he has based his allegations. They had to do with a comparison between the so-called peace mission undertaken by the former Prime Minister, Mr. Trudeau, and attendance at international summits, one of la Francophonie and one the International Economic Summit, by the present Prime Minister. Even the Hon. Member will know that the number of people involved for a small specific mission such as the peace mission of Mr. Trudeau is a much smaller number than that required by any Prime Minister attending any international summit.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I never thought I would see the day when the travel expenditures of the former Minister of the Environment would sound like a bargain to Canadian taxpayers.

ALLEGED WASTEFUL SPENDING—PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): I should like to direct my supplementary question to the Prime Minister. What concrete steps is he contemplating to put an end to this orgy of wasteful spending? Moreover, is he prepared to make a statement right away in this House to apologize to the Canadian people and indicate his resolve to do better from now on? Is he prepared to make such a commitment today, yes or no?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I would not want to repeat the question asked by one of my colleagues concerning the trip which the Hon. Member has made to Taiwan, but I do want to indicate that it is quite essential—and accepted as such by Canadians—that the Prime Minister of Canada should play a significant role at the Economic Summit and at the Sommet de la Francophonie. It is an accepted fact by all well-informed Canadians that the previous Liberal Government was not even able to achieve a Francophone summit. This Government has, and I think it is a major contribution to the future of this country.

AIRPORTS

REQUEST FOR EXPLANATION OF ADMINISTRATION OF NEW MONTREAL INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of State (Transport).

Can the Minister explain why, according to his announcement last week, the administration of the new Montreal International Airport will remain under federal control? Why did the Government decide to establish a local advisory committee with no administrative powers? Why will this advisory committee represent only the private sector with no participation from the municipal and labour sectors or from consumers?

Hon. André Bissonnette (Minister of State (Transport)): Mr. Speaker, as usual, many allegations have been made, but there is very little basis for these questions.

I announced last week that there would be an advisory council during the first transition stage of the airports. As concerns the second transition stage, we are considering privatizing certain Canadian airports, as we did for ports, to provide for local administration, which would be more effective than the present system.

INQUIRY WHETHER COMMUNITY WILL PARTICIPATE IN ADMINISTRATION OF AIRPORT AT MIRABEL AND AT DORVAL

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, last week when I was in Montreal, I was asked how long this transition period would last. In addition, is it true that the basic decisions will be made before the community can take part in the administration of the Mirabel and Dorval airports?

Hon. André Bissonnette (Minister of State (Transport)): Mr. Speaker, I must tell the House that I was going to meet

Mayor Doré from Montreal this morning as well as the Chambre de Commerce and the Board of Trade to discuss certain matters. Three times already, the day before the meeting at five o'clock, that is last evening at five o'clock, the Montreal Board of Trade cancelled the meeting which was going to be held to discuss certain points at the suggestion of some people.

The federal Government is open to discussion and I have already made myself very open to discussion in the Mirabel-Dorval issue because we want to involve as many people as possible to provide for a better administration.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

EMBASSY CLOSURES—PRIME MINISTER'S TRAVEL EXPENDITURES

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri—Westmount): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs who has just taken a stab at defending the indefensible. Does he not find it somewhat paradoxical that while he is shutting embassies and consulates the Prime Minister is squandering money on foreign travel, sometimes at the rate of $50,000 per night? This is money from the Minister's budget. Will the Minister make representations to the Prime Minister to at least reduce this obscene level of expenditure in order that the Minister will have money to provide the kind of professional representation abroad which Canadians expect?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I think the Member's colleagues found a question in that long statement. I did not. If the Member can pose one, I will try to answer it.

Mr. Johnston: Mr. Speaker, I do not want to repeat my first question since I have a supplementary question. However, in a line, he should get back some of the money that is being squandered by the Prime Minister's Office.

ANNOUNCED CLOSURE OF EMBASSY IN FINLAND

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri—Westmount): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is with regard to the closing of our embassy in Helsinki, which I gather will take place. Could the Secretary of State please explain what alternative arrangements could possibly be made to substitute for the presence of our embassy in Helsinki, Finland, a country with which we have great common interests, including Finnish-Canadians, consular services and, of course, a common community of interests as northern neighbours?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the interest of the Member and all Members of the House in this issue. Had the Government been left with a financial situation—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): —less serious than the one left to it by the former Liberal Government, it would be possible for us to consider having a far more extensive diplomatic presence in the world. We are faced with the reality of having to practise restraint. We have had to make some difficult decisions. I can guarantee the Hon. Member that Canada's interests and relations with Finland will be well respected and adequately served through alternate arrangements which will be made.

CANADIAN WHEAT BOARD

HIGH QUALITY WHEAT—REQUEST THAT PRODUCERS RECEIVE FINAL PAYMENT

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board. Seventy representatives of prairie wheat producers are in Ottawa for today and tomorrow to attend meetings with regard to the final payments for No. 1 and No. 2 wheat from the last crop year.

Is the Government prepared to give these producers the final payment for the last crop year in order that they will receive the money which the Wheat Board has realized from the sale of their No. 1 and No. 2 wheat?

Hon. Charles Mayer (Minister of State (Canadian Wheat Board)): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has raised this question in the House before, and he has raised it with me in committee. The Wheat Board is now in the process of doing the final calculations. It is my information that the final figures on the situation of the pool of money to be paid to wheat growers will not be available until around January 15. At that time we will know exactly the situation and will be able to deal with it. Until that time, the Hon. Member's question is basically hypothetical.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, clearly the producers want to receive the full payment due to them. If the Government made an error in setting the initial price for low grades of wheat, does the Minister believe it is fair that producers of No. 1 and No. 2 wheat should have to pay for that error? If the Minister would answer that question, the producers would know what course of action the Government will take when the final payment is due.

Hon. Charles Mayer (Minister of State (Canadian Wheat Board)): Mr. Speaker, we are quite aware that the wheat producers are here for today and tomorrow. We welcome them. Various caucus members from all sides of the House are meeting with them. My colleague, the Minister of Agriculture, and myself will be meeting with them tomorrow morning. We are very interested in hearing their position and are prepared to listen to any proposals they want to make and to have a full discussion on what those proposals will mean for future pooling periods.

CANADIAN ARMED FORCES

ROLE OF WOMEN

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, my questions are for the Minister of National Defence. His Department has recommended that women and homosexuals not be given equal opportunity in the Armed Forces as our Charter of Rights and Freedoms guarantees. Why does his Government discriminate against women while in Denmark, which conducted its own trials and tests, women are allowed to volunteer for combat units?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I was very interested in the decision taken very recently in Denmark. Two weeks ago when I was in Brussels at the NATO Defence Ministers' meeting I had an opportunity to speak with my Danish colleague. He has undertaken to send me material related to the Danish experiments. I understand that the summary document, which has been in the press in recent days, is calling for studies to be done by Canada precisely to determine what new opportunities there could be for women within the Canadian Armed Forces.

EQUALITY OF WOMEN

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is a simple one. Why should Canadians have to provide more positive evidence to the Minister to get the protection guaranteed by the Charter of Rights and Freedoms and our Constitution? Should the Minister not introduce legislation with the notwithstanding clause if he wants to treat women like second class citizens?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Indeed, Mr. Speaker, if it were the policy of the Government to treat women as second class citizens, the course advocated by the Hon. Member is the one we would have to follow. That is not our intention. We want to have full equality for women within the Canadian Armed Forces and elsewhere. That is the commitment we have made.

I am pleased to be able to say that since March of this year we have opened 7,500 new positions to women within the Canadian Armed Forces. I have opened 14 new occupations since becoming Minister.

REVENUE CANADA

DISAPPEARANCE OF MICROFICHE RECORDS—RESULT OF INVESTIGATION

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Revenue. According to press reports of last weekend, changes are under way in the district taxation office in Toronto where the microfiche records of 16 million Canadians disappeared about a month ago. Will the Minister advise the House whether he has received a report on the incident from the RCMP, what disciplinary action he has taken, and what other action he intends to take to ensure that something of this sort never happens again?

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, as my colleague perhaps now knows, an employee of Revenue Canada has been charged with several criminal offences, including breach of public trust. I can also advise the House that accountable individuals in this chain of events have been disciplined, reprimanded, or transferred, and appropriate steps have been taken to strengthen the microfiche procedure, as he has requested.

I am also in receipt of an interim report from the RCMP which makes certain recommendations as to improvements in the way that microfiche security procedures should be implemented. These are under study with a view to being implemented soon.

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

FUTURE OF RAILWAY LINES IN ONTARIO AND QUEBEC

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew—Nipissing—Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. In a recent document, Canadian National Railways included two and one-half pages of railway lines in eastern Ontario and western Quebec that it wants to close down. This would have a tremendous financial impact on employers and employees throughout the Ottawa Valley, from Montreal to North Bay, and throughout many communities in the Province of Quebec. Is the Minister prepared to guarantee to Canadians that he will not abandon the regions of this country in favour of the large urban areas and the coffers of the CNR?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, that is a guarantee that any Member of this House would be pleased to give. I certainly give it. My guarantee is that whether it is CN, CP, BCR or any other railway, they will not be allowed to abandon any rail lines, branch lines, main lines, any line or anything with iron upon which a train runs, without going through the proper procedures, without applying to the Canadian Transport Commission and without going through every last letter of the law.

Mr. Hopkins: He should be serious because we are quite used to those procedures.

REPORTED ABANDONMENT OF EFFORT TO ATTRACT NEW TRAFFIC

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew—Nipissing—Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, in the same document Canadian National told its senior people: "Any effort to attract new traffic on these sections is to be abandoned immediately". It is discouraging business.

How can the Government support this hypocritical move to try to decrease traffic on those lines so that Canadian National can return some months or years later to tell the Canadian Transport Commission that these lines are not paying and it would like to close them down? What will he do about such an internal private request within the CNR?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman should get some new lines because this matter was raised and put to Doctor LeClair in the Standing Committee on Transport. He said he would look into the matter and that he was chagrined at being faced with it. The hon. gentleman asks if I support that kind of statement. The answer is that I do not support that kind of statement and I do not know anyone in political life who would support that kind of statement. Therefore, that statement is unsupportable.

Mr. Speaker: I want to advise the Hon. Member for York South—Weston that, after some consideration, I hoped he would have time to ask a single question today. However, I believe my earlier suggestion will have to remain because we are out of time. I will recognize the Hon. Member tomorrow.

PRIVILEGE

PRIME MINISTER'S ANSWER DURING QUESTION PERIOD

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege with respect to the Prime Minister's (Mr. Mulroney) suggestion during Question Period that my colleague, the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan) should approach me regarding the question he put to the Prime Minister relating to Robert Shea. I must advise the House that I knew absolutely nothing about this matter and the matters that have been raised in the House until I read about them in the newspapers yesterday. I would ask the Prime Minister to withdraw his statement—

Mr. Speaker: I do not want to cut off the Hon. Member, but I find it difficult to see a question of privilege. Perhaps the Hon. Member could explain just how his privilege has been infringed?

Mr. Allmand: I believe the Prime Minister tried to implicate me in something with which I had nothing to do. He tried to avoid answering the question—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I think the Hon. Member would have to agree that some of the questions asked were clearly trying to implicate somebody. I do not think that is a question of privilege.

REFERENCE TO THE ABSENCE OF MEMBER

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Lethbridge—Foothills): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege. It relates to the comments by the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) who, in my absence during Question Period, asked a question of the Prime Minister and noted my absence. I drew the inference from the question that I was somehow neglecting my duty by not being here. I want to assure the Member opposite and you, Mr. Speaker, that I was in attendance with Mr. Jack Williams and Mr. Ron Hierath from the Province of Alberta at a legitimate meeting with respect to western grain producers.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member has a complaint, but it is very doubtful whether it is a question of privilege. I notice that the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) wants to make an intervention and perhaps settle this.

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, I just want to clarify that in putting my question to the Prime Minister I was merely indicating that had the chairperson of the Standing Committee been present I would, in fairness to him, put the question directly to him. Certainly, I know he has other responsibilities. There was absolutely no intention on my part to in any way comment on the absence of the Member from Question Period. I know that he had good reasons for being absent. It was for that reason that I put the question to the Prime Minister.

PRIVILEGE

ALLEGED SUPPORT OF CLOSURE OF EMBASSIES

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, in responding to a question by one of my colleagues, the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) indicated my fulsome support for the closure of the Canadian Consulate offices and embassies. By doing so, he inadvertently misled the House. The fact is that I indicated that most closures could be justified on economic and functional grounds, except the closure of the Helsinki office.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I think the Hon. Member has made his point, which is not a question of privilege but debate.

EXCISE TAX ACT AND EXCISE ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Hockin that Bill C-14, an Act to amend the Excise Tax Act and the Excise Act, be read the third time and passed.

Mr. Speaker: When the House rose at one o'clock, the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon (Mr. Epp) had the floor. Continuing debate.

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Speaker: Mr. Hockin, seconded by Mr. McKnight, moves that Bill C-14, an Act to amend the Excise Tax Act and the Excise Act, be read the third time and do pass.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the third time and passed.

INCOME TAX ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-23, an Act to amend the Income Tax Act and a related Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There are 18 report stage motions on today's Notice Paper in amendment to Bill C-23, an Act to amend the Income Tax Act and a related Act.

I would like to thank Hon. Members for their co-operation in submitting their motions so promptly and, particularly, I wish to thank the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) for his helpful suggestions in relation to the grouping of his motions.

The Chair has examined all of the motions and finds them to be procedurally acceptable.

Motions Nos. 1 and 16 will be grouped for debate and voted on separately.

Motion No. 2 will be debated and voted on separately.

Motions Nos. 3 and 6 will be grouped for debate and voted on separately.

Motions Nos. 4 and 5 will be grouped for debate and voted on separately.

Motions Nos. 7, 8, 14 and 15 will be grouped for debate and voted on as follows:

[Translation]

An affirmative vote on Motion No. 7 will obviate the question being put on Motion No. 8. A negative vote on Motion No. 7 will necessitate the question being put on Motion No. 8.

An affirmative vote on Motion No. 14 will obviate the question being put on Motion No. 15. A negative vote on Motion No. 14 will necessitate the question being put on Motion No. 15.

• (1510)

[English]

Motions Nos. 9 and 10 will be grouped for debate. An affirmative vote on Motion No. 9 will obviate the question being put on Motion No. 10. A negative vote on Motion No. 9 will necessitate the question being put on Motion No. 10.

[Translation]

Motions Nos. 11, 12 and 13 will be grouped for debate and voted on separately.

Motions Nos. 14, 15 and 16 have been dealt with above.

[Translation]

Motions Nos. 17 and 18 will be grouped for debate. An affirmative vote on Motion No. 17 will obviate the question being put on Motion No. 18. On the other hand, a negative vote on Motion No. 17 will necessitate the question being put on Motion No. 18.

[English]

The Chair will now proceed to proposed Motions Nos. 1 and 16.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I have to apologize for a certain unfamiliarity with the process of grouping. I would simply like to say that I am quite happy with the grouping proposed by the Chair. However, with respect to Motions 5 and 6, in particular, it is ruled that the questions will not be put in the case of a negative vote on the previous motion. I would ask if it is possible to have separate votes in those cases because it is clear to me, at any rate, that in certain cases a Government amendment, for example, may be desirable if the whole section is going to be adopted. Members of my Party may wish to accept the Government amendment while at the same time voting to negative, if they have the chance, the entire concept of that particular section.

I do not think it causes any problem in terms of additional time and, if it is possible, I would appreciate it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair will look into the matter immediately. In the meantime we will proceed to proposed Motions Nos. 1 and 16.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre) moved:

Motion No. 1.

That Bill C-23, be amended by deleting Clause 2.

Motion No. 16.

That Bill C-23, be amended by deleting Clause 57.

He said: Mr. Speaker, Motion No. 1, which refers to Clause 2, provides for a total removal of the current $3,500 limit on deductible contributions to pension plans, thus executives and other high income earners who now have to pay a portion of their pension contributions out of tax paid income will be able to benefit from a very rich deduction. Generally the people who benefit will be those with very high incomes and who therefore have a high marginal rate.

It is perhaps not normal to speak of these things, but the other day, at the instigation of the Government, Members of Parliament agreed to forego $1,000 of their income allegedly as a means to help to overcome the deficit. However, Clause 2 of the Bill will allow Members of Parliament who currently contribute about $5,500 per annum to their pension plan to take an additional deduction. The additional deduction will be in the order of some $2,000 a year, and I am speaking in round figures, and the consequence will be that Members of Parliament, if they are at a 50 per cent marginal rate, will have a tax saving of $1,000 because of this particular provision. That will go on in perpetuity, whereas the $1,000 cut they are taking in their salaries will come out of income before tax and, therefore, the cost to them is about $500 in terms of taxed income. I find this bizarre.

Of course, this is not just a matter for Members of Parliament, although I think there is a certain contradiction there, but is a matter which touches on all high income Canadians. The Government may say this clause and the clause relating to RRSPs is something which is desirable because it wants to encourage savings. I do not know if people want to necessarily discourage savings. The fact is that if people would spend a bit more in the country right now we might have a few more people back at work.

Motion No. 16 deals with Clause 57 of the Bill. Clause 57 raises the limit of contributions to an RRSP, a Registered Retirement Savings Plan, from the current $5,500 to $7,500 and the Government intends ultimately to raise this to $15,000. Once again this is a concession directed to middle and upper income earners because 80 per cent or more of Canadians do not contribute to RRSPs and it is estimated that only 17 per cent or 18 per cent are in a position where they can contribute. Of those Canadians who contribute to RRSPs, a very large number currently do not have the resources to put in $5,500, let alone $7,500 or $15,000. Moreover, the contributions are going to come as a deduction from taxable income and there will be a limit on the proportion of one's income one can put into RRSPs. Once we get to the ultimate of $15,000, one will need an income of around $80,000 a year, I believe, in order to be able to take advantage of the full deductibility.

Let us look at that in terms of the tax expenditures involved. If someone puts aside $15,000 a year, and that is a deduction, and if they are at the top marginal rate, that means that other taxpayers will have to come up with $7,500 to make up for that person's tax saving because of this particular exemption, once it reaches the full limit announced by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). This is not just a single kind of tax saving. If one puts $15,000 into an RRSP, one then receives the income on that RRSP, tax free, year after year after year until such time as the funds are withdrawn or begin to be used as retirement income. If one receives $1,500 a year on the income from the money one puts in and $15,000 has been put in, that means a tax saving for someone at the top marginal rate of $750 a year, again not in perpetuity but over five, 10 or maybe 25 years in which they will benefit from that particular tax saving. Frankly, I think that is too much.

I believe we are being unjust and unfair to ordinary Canadians when we ask them to pay through the nose for tax savings which in these two motions are being directed to upper income Canadians, whether they are contributing to pension plans or RRSPs. In addition, I would draw to the attention of the House the report of the select Committee on Pensions. That committee of the House of Commons strongly proposed that deductions for pension contributions, and presumably for RRSPs as well, should be in the form of a tax credit. However, that particular proposal has been ignored by the Government. That means that someone earning $20,000 a year who puts a few dollars aside into a pension plan or an RRSP will receive the equivalent of perhaps 20 per cent or 25 per cent of that money back because of the tax saving, because that is all their marginal rate is and all the deduction is worth to them, whereas someone at the top will receive far more. That seems to me to be unfair.

I would like to ask the Minister if he can respond to these points and tell us whether the Government would now be prepared to reconsider these clauses, particularly in light of our tax reform where we are trying to broaden the base and lower the rates. Here we are narrowing the base and, therefore, inevitably increasing the rates again on ordinary Canadians.

[Translation]

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, exactly what is the House supposed to be doing? We are now proceeding with clause by clause consideration of a Bill. There is no Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). There is no Minister of State (Finance) (Mr. Hockin). There is no parliamentary secretary. What kind of debate is this? About the amendments, although I do not agree with everything the NDP Member from Ottawa just said, still, if we are supposed to discuss a committee report and there is no one on the Government side to rise in the House and say they disagree, what's the use? This makes a mockery of our whole parliamentary and democratic system.

Mr. Speaker, that being said, I would like to comment on the two motions before the House today, and I would be tempted to think along the same philosophical lines as the Member who just spoke.

I have said repeatedly here in the House and in committee that as far as pensions and deductions for Registered Retirement Savings Plans are concerned, it would be far more useful to use tax credits instead of the present deductions because with tax credits, all taxpayers are given the same tax treatment, whether they are rich or poor, whether they can save a lot or just a little. The benefit would be the same and would not be more than the tax credit allowed. This would of course be in line with what the Minister of Finance indicated last July, when he referred to the Government's intention to follow the example of the United States with their tax reform. The U.S. tax reform is very limited in its application and applies only to middle- and low-income taxpayers. Under the new measure they may set aside certain sums of money, tax free, for their retirement plan, what we in Canada call Registered Retirement Savings Plans.

However, we are not considering a Bill on tax reform. We are merely considering the proposals made in the February 1986 Budget. It is rather unfortunate that the Bill comes at the end of a session. It was introduced in the House only a few weeks ago. In any case, it is not a Bill on tax reform. These are just a number of amendments which will be temporary, I imagine, until the Government finally decides to introduce more comprehensive tax reform measures.

If we were to accept the motions presented by the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy), which are now before the House, I must say that, although I tend to agree with his philosophy, this would create an imbalance in the present Income Tax Act, because it would be necessary to adopt amendments that would be consequential on a number of other Acts, and I do not see how we could do so at this time.

Are we supposed to stop and greet people as they come in, Mr. Speaker? I'm not sure I approve, but let it pass, Christmas is almost here, and perhaps now we can get on with some serious debate.

Mr. Speaker, since the amendments proposed in Motions nos. 1 and 16 would throw the Tax Act off balance since there would only be two or three retirement plan provisions that would be concerned with income tax credits while the remainder would be dealing with exemptions, I feel this would not be very consistent. This is why, even though I agree with the idea behind the proposal in Motions nos. 1 and 16, I am going to suggest to my colleagues that they oppose it for technical reasons, for reasons of consistency with the whole of the Tax Act. Under a more general tax reform, however, I think it would be appropriate to examine closely the suggestions contained in those two motions that I did introduce during discussion in committee.

[English]

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, we have proposed these amendments to introduce some fairness into the tax system. It is not that we want to discourage saving. In fact, we want to encourage those who cannot participate in company pension plans, such as professionals and small business people, to save. But this is surely a question of fairness.

The proposals made by the Government, both in Bill C-23 and in later announcements by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), will allow the more well-to-do individuals in our society to deduct up to $15,000 per year as a result of RRSP contributions. It does not take too many brains to figure out that those in the higher income levels will benefit more than those in the lower and middle income levels. In fact, those in lower income levels will be further restricted by the amount of contribution they can make to an RRSP. That is because the legislation provides that only a certain percentage of taxable income can be contributed to an RRSP. For middle and low income Canadians as opposed to those in higher income brackets this means a smaller contribution.

Let us consider someone with $20,000 in taxable income. That person is in the 20 per cent to 30 per cent income tax range. Thus, in essence, their contribution is matched through the tax system at around 20 per cent to 30 per cent. A person who is in the 50 per cent income tax bracket has one-half of the contribution paid for by the Government through the tax system because of the decreased tax that individual will have to pay.

Thus we find ourselves in a situation in which wealthy Canadians are able to have one-half of their pension plans paid for by the public because of tax savings. Low income Canadians will not have that same opportunity. They will find that only 20 per cent of their pension will be paid for by the public through the tax system. This is a basic and glaring unfairness. It tilts the system to the benefit of the wealthy at the expense of the poor.

What we are proposing is not a radical, new proposal at all. It is a proposal that has been made by a standing committee of the House of Commons which considered the matter of pensions and which recommended that a certain amount of deductions be no longer allowed as tax deductions per se but as tax credits. This would provide a fairness to the system so that a person with $20,000 in taxable income would have the same effective tax reduction because of his RRSP contributions as an individual who is in the $50,000, $75,000 or $100,000 taxable income range. What we are doing through these amendments is trying to introduce an important measure of fairness into the tax system.

The Government and the Minister of Finance, in several of his speeches, have made a strong commitment to tax reform. We welcome everything he has said in this regard so far. He seems to be giving us an indication that he is serious about tax reform. He seems to be saying that it will not just be window-dressing and that, indeed, he will make a serious attempt to rewrite the basic tax structure and operations of the country so that we will have greater fairness.

This is the opportunity for creating fairness in the system and for correcting an unfairness that now exists. I urge Hon. Members to accept our amendments.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, will the Minister help me out? I am looking through the documents that were distributed in February—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) has already spoken and needs unanimous consent to make a short statement. Is there unanimous consent?

An Hon. Member: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Motion No. 2 is to be debated and voted on separately.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre) moved:

That Bill C-23, be amended by deleting Clause 6.

He said: Perhaps the Minister could comment on this particular case. This is the rather curious business where the Government has decided that the various granting councils should go out and set up their stands and try to find funds from outside in order to raise the increased funding, rather than have it come from Government.

The problem which the committee addressed directly is the fact that there is prejudicial treatment given to one of these three granting councils. As Members know, the three councils are the Natural Sciences and Engineering Research Council, the Medical Research Council, and the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council.

As the Budget Papers indicated, beginning in 1987-88 the Government intends to match dollar for dollar increased private sector contributions received by the granting councils to a certain annual maximum increase.

The Budget Papers state, and I quote:

A consequential income tax change will be made to ensure that the private sector participant will be entitled to research and development tax treatment for his contribution—

Then it goes on, and this is the catch-22:

—for his contribution to the extent that the contribution finances research and development which is related to his business, and the results are available to him for use in his business. Other contributions to such councils will be treated as gifts to Her Majesty and as such will be deductible in computing the donor's taxable income.

That means that certain types of contributions to the Natural Sciences Council and the Medical Research Council will be treated as R and D expense and, therefore, will get favoured status, whereas in general no contributions that were gathered in this way by the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council will receive that favoured status at all. That means that if the three councils are out beating the drum in order to raise funds, as they are now being told that they should do by the Government, the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council will be at a particular disadvantage in seeking funding because industrial contributors will ask, "Why should our firm contribute to your council when all we get is a deduction from income? Whereas if we contribute to one of the other councils, we will get a bonus over and above the contribution, therefore, the after tax cost is considerably less".

The Finance Committee found itself in a difficult situation because Members from all sides felt that there was injustice and prejudicial treatment with respect to the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council.

I have met people in the social sciences and know the degree to which a great deal of academic excellence in this country hangs on the work and the funding of that particular council, and the degree to which there is a dearth of other funding alternatives for areas like the humanities, the social sciences, and many areas such as psychology and sociology which are extremely important in terms of understanding where we are going as a country. I suspect that linguistics and other things that are important to a bilingual country are not covered in other ways at all. But these are areas which inevitably will be left to starve some more because of the prejudicial treatment.

Since the Finance Committee could not respond directly and amend the Bill, we have referred this out to our researchers. We have not yet produced a report, but I think the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin) is aware of the fact that the sense of the committee was that we believe that this is wrong. We wish to see the Government accept changes in this area so that that bias against the seeking of outside funding—and it is not an ideal principle at all—but the bias against the seeking of outside funding for the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council will come to an end.

Perhaps the Minister has some comments.

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I wish to reply to the Hon. Member. A couple of weeks ago his colleague, the Member for Regina East (Mr. de Jong), has also expressed his concern about the same matter a couple of weeks ago. Having been a professional social scientist, I am concerned about the very topic that the Hon. Member raises.

The Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) is quite right, a contribution made to the SSHRC can now be deducted, but the SSHRC is finding that it is difficult for it to be eligible for this matching grant formula because the definition of R and D is not defined in such a way as to be hospitable to the types of research that the SSHRC and social scientists do.

If we broadened the definition further, we would find that we had so extended the definition of research and development that it had lost all meaning. We would be in great trouble defining what it meant at all. I wish to assure my hon. friends in the House that I want this matter to be explored carefully as we go through tax reform in the next two or three months. I believe that we should try to find a way whereby social science research could be defined in such a way as to be included. But we have to find a way of doing it in order not to broaden the definition of R and D in such a way that it becomes almost meaningless.

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I sympathize with the difficulty that the Secretary of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin) has mentioned in terms of defining research and development to include the social sciences and humanities, but not to open it up in such a way as to allow all manner of abuses to occur.

My mind then goes to the next situation where he illustrates the difficulty of conducting social and economic policies through the tax system. In part, that is what tax reform is all about. The tax system should stop being used for social, economic and scientific purposes and programs. But the Government is telling the funding councils to go out and find more money from the private sector. It helps them in the task by giving special tax considerations to those companies and individuals donating the money to NSERC, medical sciences, and the social sciences and humanities by attempting to get more private money into the sciences and finds it difficult to do because of the very thing that the Minister had mentioned in the house. That is why the social sciences and humanities councils particularly have been telling the Government not to go down this path but to stick with the funding formulae as they exist. Let it not offer tax incentives and concessions but, rather, let it give straight grants. If you give the humanities, the social sciences NSERC, and the medical sciences straight grants and stop the nonsense of the tax credits and deductions, the money saved by closing those tax deductions would allow the granting agencies to receive the money directly that they need to do their work.

I sympathize with the Government, and I sympathize with the Minister. In order to get a definition of research and development that would be tight enough to prevent abuse, the conclusion will have to exclude the humanities and the social sciences. That is why I urge the Government to change its policy and its direction, and fund more directly the granting councils and not tell them to go out and find private money through some tax scheme. The tax schemes have not worked.

Mr. Hockin: Mr. Speaker, by way of a very brief reply—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent for the Minister to make a short reply?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Hockin: The purpose of the matching grants was to do something badly needed in the country. It was to bring research closer to the private sector, that is, the private sector defined broadly. I am not only referring to private enterprise. I am referring to the private sector outside Government, the whole private sector. It was an attempt to bring research closer to the private sector; that was its purpose. It was a good purpose. Probably it is overdue. That was the intention behind it, and I stand by it.

I know the Hon. Member would like to see it done through grants from the Government. We are trying a new approach. Hopefully it will bring research not just closer to the marketplace but closer to the private sector in general.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I should like to make a few comments about Motion No. 2 and to direct them to the Minister. There is another concern if we are to use the matching approach or the private sector approach in terms of raising funds for research and development in the hard sciences or pure sciences as opposed to or as well as in the social sciences and humanities. There is a certain ring of regional discrimination.

I will simply speak as a westerner, but I could make the same case if I came from another region of Canada other than central Canada. If we are looking for research and development to take place through the private sector, presumably decisions will be made by supporting firms which tend to have their head offices in central Canada and tend to be concentrated geographically there. If we are looking at matching funds from the corporate sector for research or at research being tied through the private sector, it will have a natural bias toward being focused in central Canada as opposed to the regions.

It is not a major issue. I do not want to suggest it is. I do not want to suggest either that it will be a major effort toward discrimination or that there is any intentional discrimination. However, inadvertently and because of the reality of Canada and its industrial heartland or where the private sector tends to be headquartered, it would result in a certain bias in research being done in such a way that it would discriminate against the far West. Would the Minister agree with those comments?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent to allow the Minister to make a short reply?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Hockin: Mr. Speaker, that is an interesting question. It is true in the world today, in terms of research, that we often cannot produce world-class research without a critical mass of researchers. Very often this means, when we talk about the research side, that much research is concentrated in certain places. For example, medical research clearly has certain homes in Canada. I quite agree that it is not widely distributed across the country. However, that is sort of the nature of research.

I remind the Hon. Member of the nature of the private sector. Let us take western institutions, for example, in the interior of British Columbia or in the Canadian Prairies. Saskatoon has a very interesting and critical mass of space research. The co-operatives and other parts of the private sector are strong and important in certain parts of British Columbia and Alberta. We also have the oil and gas industry, potash, and so on. Perhaps researchers have not gone to these people and said: "We can do some research of use to you to strengthen your infrastructure". Maybe this would encourage them to do it, and that is why I support it. When it comes out in the wash, it could be that it is not totally balanced. That is the point of the Hon. Member. Perhaps it is a reason for us to examine it carefully in the future and see how it evolves.

[Translation]

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, the motion now under discussion in fact has to do with agencies in the social field, the so-called political and social sciences, which have a hard time getting funds that should come from businesses because donations for funding their research and development work could hardly be viewed as connected with the operations of the firm making such donations.

In other words, the reason for this debate is, taking the example of any type of business, let us say a bank for instance, a large Canadian bank that would like to support the Faculty of Social Sciences at the University of Toronto by making a major donation to research and development. In order for the Royal Bank to consider that as funding for research and development, it would have to prove that the research done by the University of Toronto's Faculty of Social Sciences can help the operations of the donor or of the person who wants to invest in the research and development field. This is extremely difficult.

This is why all university groups, universities and departments that are involved in research in the area of economic and social sciences, in a political and social sense, have a hard time getting their research projects funded. The goal is therefore to ask the Government to find the appropriate formula.

In his answers, the Minister stated earlier that if we open up the definition, because in my view we could solve the problem by way of regulations rather than by way of the legislation itself.

For the reasons mentioned I am prepared to accept clause 6 as it is, but we create a problem in the sense that it will be even more difficult to finance research in economic and social sciences departments.

In response to one of my colleagues the Minister said a moment ago that it might become extremely difficult to establish the criteria concerning the limits of the tax field which the Government is prepared to abandon for this kind of research and development.

Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that the Minister exaggerates to a certain extent because companies do not actually go out of their way to hand out millions of dollars just to get a tax exemption worth many hundred dollars. Indeed there are operating costs and, to my mind, these would act as a natural check likely to prevent some of the abuses the Minister mentioned.

All things considered and given the field of activities which make it more difficult to come up with an acceptable definition, I think we might have at Government level—either the Department of the Secretary of State which looks after higher post-secondary education grants, or the Department of Finance, or other Government sectors—a committee or an assessment board which would rule and authorize donations as being directly or indirectly related to the operations of a company prepared to invest in research and development.

I would think we can find a way to devise a solution without necessarily resorting to legislation. Perhaps the Minister might consider the matter and amend the regulations, or even the legislation if it comes to that. Still I think there is a way to overcome this difficulty.

I remind the Minister that we have received strong representations from university circles, and I suspect he did too. As I see it, the problem is serious enough to be worthy of his consideration.

Having said this, Mr. Speaker, I do not see how I can support Motion No. 2 because by doing so I might be making it easier still for tax evaders in the field of research and development.

This is why I will vote against the motion now before the House because it will not achieve the basic objective. Still I urge the Minister to consider very carefully every opportunity there might be to solve the problem of research in the field of social affairs without actually incurring huge tax losses, at least no higher than the tax expenditures related to clause 6 as it is now drafted.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Motion No. 2 (Mr. Cassidy) negatived.

Mr. Towers: Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to make sure that the last motion was defeated on division.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It was.

Motions Nos. 3 and 6 will be grouped for debate and voted on separately.

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East) (for Mr. Cassidy) moved:

That Bill C-23, be amended by deleting Clause 12.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre) moved:

That Bill C-23, be amended by deleting Clause 35.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry for being late. The difficulty is in trying to be in the committee and elsewhere at the same time. This motion relates to the flow-through clauses. The Government announced in the Budget that its intention was to make use of these shares easier and, among other things, to remove the possibility of third party liability from individuals. Elsewhere certain rules relating to limited partnerships are being somewhat tightened, but in this case the use of flow-through shares is being eased.

Once again we get into the situation where there is effectively an enormous tax expenditure involved, and despite the fact that tax reform is on the horizon, the Government does not appear to have questioned whether it should now begin to tighten down in areas where it is being quite generous. The rules allow a 100 per cent write-off against taxable income of Canadian exploration expense, a 30 per cent per annum write-off of Canadian development expense, and a 10 per cent per annum write-off of Canadian oil and gas property expense. That means that if the investment is made in the flow-through shares and if the corporation then renounces the deduction for its own purposes and passes it back or flows it through back to the investor, a wealthy Canadian tax filer whose marginal tax rate is in the 50 per cent bracket can then invest $10,000 in flow-through shares in a small mining or oil company and get an immediate write-off against taxable income for that whole amount if the company spends that amount on exploration within the tax year or within 12 months. The tax saved in this case would be about $5,000.

When we are talking about tax saving, we are talking about somebody else paying that amount. If that amount is not paid by the taxpayer, then we are all going to pay it, as we have been reminded on many occasions by the Government, through the means of an increased deficit and through paying interest over many years because of a concession such as in this case. Tax savings are only in the minds of the people who receive them, and those are normally wealthy Canadians. I do not think there are many people in my constituency who are in a position to sink $10,000 in an oil, gas or mining exploration with flow-through shares. There are a few. They live in certain parts of my riding. Some of them even vote for me, I guess, but most of the people in my riding do not have that kind of situation. Even if they did and were able to put $2,000 or $3,000 into one of these investments and gain certain benefits, the tax benefits they would receive are a lot less because this is a deduction from taxable income and, therefore, the higher the bracket, the more the people of Canada will be called upon to share in that particular investment.

The pages of The Globe and Mail and The Ottawa Citizen and business pages of other newspapers across the country are jammed at this time of the year with various types of tax dodges and tax shelters. The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) at every Budget says: "We are doing away with MURBS, limited partnerships and with these means by which tax is avoided". Yet I picked up a paper last night and read that for a mere $1,000 or $2,000 I or somebody else could generate tax losses in the first year of $23,000. I do not know how it is done.

I almost admire the creativity of the people who devise these kinds of schemes at the same time as I deplore the twisted distorted priorities of a society where somebody who has a big tax bracket and $1,000 or $2,000 to put aside can get $23,000 in tax losses and save $11,000 or $12,000 in taxation in one year while at the same time there are hundreds if not thousands of people in my constituency who do not have enough food to get themselves to the end of the month every month. People are having to go to food banks and the food banks are running out of food. These banks cannot serve the needs. The Government sees that its priority is to put more products, as the financial industry calls them, into place to allow more wealthy Canadians to avoid tax. The Government will then turn around and tell us that we need a business transfer tax or we need a higher rate of taxation on ordinary Canadians in order to provide these tax loopholes, these legal tax avoidance mechanisms, such as the one contained in Clause 35.

When we were devising the amendments in this area we had a choice. We could have tried to change, amend and improve the various measures being put forward by the Government. I decided, and my colleagues accepted, that where you have a measure which should fundamentally be re-thought, which is far too broad for the declared purpose, which is to get some needed exploration expense and activity going in the northern parts of my province, that is, Quebec, the oil and gas areas and so on, rather than simply saying there is a bit of good here and there is a lot of bad, we should simply tell the Government to stop it, take the measure away, start all over again, and strike out the loopholes. Then, if the Government has to have targeted measures in the form of tax credits, grants or other means to encourage certain types of desirable activity, for goodness' sake let it do it that way, but let it not do it in the broad brush kind of way which is being proposed here.

This is a related subject. It will not be debated directly here, but I mention it briefly. The Government purports to have reduced the use of limited partnership with the clauses elsewhere in the Bill. I want to say to the Minister of Finance and his deputy that already the high priced help in Bay Street, in St. James Street and probably Wall Street as well, are now looking at means by which they can avoid that, even by taking advantage of the new provisions which are put into this Bill. If you provide loopholes, inevitably the loopholes will be used. We have to have a commitment which I am afraid I do not see yet from the Government. If it is really intent on tax reform, it should not fiddle around at the edges with something like this. The Government should not increase some pension deductibility and say, "Well that is just temporary". The Government should be serious about tax reform from now until the end of the mandate in 1988 or 1989 and systematically ensure that every measure that affects the tax system is a strong step forward to tax reform rather than taking two steps forward and one a half backward, which is the record of the Government right now, or one and a half steps forward and two back.

Mr. Hockin: Mr. Speaker, let me reply to the Hon. Member because his points were wide-ranging and I think it is important that I do reply. I think the Hon. Member knows that flow-through shares and the tax arrangements for them are not designed for the riding of Ottawa Centre. They are designed, as the Member knows, for northern Ontario, northern Quebec, the Northwest Territories, the Yukon and northern Manitoba, Alberta and so on. As a matter of fact, it is the northern parts of our provinces that are the most neglected parts of our society economically and in every other sense. We must do something for those parts. That is what is behind the flow-through shares.

I want to assure the Hon. Member that we cannot stand still while looking at tax reform. We have to govern. However, quite frankly, flow-through shares have been very effective in creating very meaningful economic activity in a neglected area of Canada. How do you do it except through private investment? The Hon. Member is asking Government to do this exploration. Government is not designed to be a risk taker. It is not designed to make the tough decisions about what risks should be taken. That naturally belongs to the private sector. If you are going to ask the private sector to invest, you have to ask those who have money to invest. This policy is not aimed at helping the wealthy of Ottawa centre. It is aimed at helping the people in northern Canada and making sure that risk decisions are not taken by Government but by the private sector.

The second point deals with limited partnerships and the deductibility of losses. That is part of the question of tax reform, but let me ask the Hon. Member this question. If someone incurs a large loss which cannot be written off in one year, should they be prohibited from writing it off over a couple of other years? What if a farmer, a logger or a small businessman is caught in some terrible catastrophe? What if they do not have enough income to write it off in one year? You should be able to write it off in other years as well, but the Hon. Member would remove that right with his amendment. Therefore I am very firm in my conviction that this motion should be defeated because it goes against the very heart of what we are trying to do.

[Translation]

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, I have trouble understanding the reasoning behind the motions presented by the Members of the New Democratic Party. When the Liberal Government introduced these measures, as a stimulus to economic development in the mining areas of Quebec and Northern Ontario, the results were extremely positive.

Not long ago, I was visiting the Val d'Or area, where I met people who do research and development in the mining industry. I spent most of the afternoon talking to them to find out about the impact on the local economy of what are known as flow-through shares and what the positive impact had been of this tax remedy introduced by the Liberal Government at the beginning of the eighties or around the middle of the seventies. I asked whether they felt it had made a positive contribution.

I must say, Mr. Speaker, that the economic activity generated by this tax provision has had a considerable impact. This is true in Northern Quebec but it also applies to the mining industry in Ontario and to the mining, gas and petroleum industry across this country. The results have been particulary positive for people who are prospecting for gold, because the price of gold and the extremely high cost of research and exploration.

In Northern Quebec, this tax provision, which became more widespread over the years as taxpayers realized the kind of benefits it could bring and also as mining companies realized how they could finance certain activities related to the development of their resources—this provision has had a considerable economic impact.

When I met with the mining prospectors, I was told about certain economic impact studies. The prospectors claim that they can show, with the statistics to prove it, that the benefits of the tax concessions granted by the Government during the last few years to promote investment in the mining sector have greatly exceeded the cost of these measures for the state.

This is why I find it hard to understand how the Hon. Member of the New Democratic Party can claim that these measures are only designed to help people with high incomes.

Mr. Speaker, these tax provisions deal with situations where there is a risk. If you purchase flow-through shares and the prospecting company finds nothing and cannot find any mineral whatsoever, this will mean a total loss and the investor will lose his money. There is therefore a risk and it is because this risk is great that it is compensated by tax benefits. I do not understand why the New Democratic Party attacks remote regions such as the Abitibi and Northern Ontario, which need practical support to develop their economy. I can assure you that, in those regions, if flow-through shares were completely eliminated tomorrow, it would mean the loss of thousands of jobs created because of the tax benefits brought in by the Liberal Government a few years ago and maintained by this Bill.

I also find it hard to understand the attitude of the NDP in wanting to remove these two sections. This goes against their own arguments as the purpose of these provisions is to close the loopholes and better define how these tax benefits will apply so that there will be less danger of abuse. The members of the NPD are fully entitled to disagree about the objectives we were trying to meet a few years ago by bringing in flow-through shares to help mining prospection, but they will certainly not meet their objectives if the two motions before us are passed. On the contrary, it would make it completely impossible to apply the law because we would be removing two provisions which are at the centre of the legislation. This is why, since flow-through shares have contributed a lot to the development of Northern Quebec, Northern Ontario and other mining regions in Canada and since the two motions now under consideration would make it virtually impossible to apply our tax laws, I shall have to vote against these motions.

[English]

Mr. John A. MacDougall (Timiskaming): Mr. Speaker, I find it shocking—I guess that is the only expression to use—that the NDP would try to eliminate something that has done so much for so many Canadians. Why eliminate something that has developed so many jobs over the last number of years and has brought so much to the economy of the northern part of Canada? The members of the NDP have always said they fight for the little guy. I must say this proves they do not. They are more interested in making political points in the House of Commons than in looking after the people who send us here to do a job for them. This just shows they are more interested in Bay Street than they are in the grass roots. I find it deplorable that the Hon. Member, a former Leader of the NDP in Ontario, would not reflect on what he knows has benefited northern Ontario for many years.

I urge Members to continue with what has been beneficial to each and every one of us over the last number of years. Flow-through shares have helped develop many small businesses, whether it be the corner grocery store, a diamond driller, prospector-developer, or junior mining company. There is only one way to get the needed investment and that is through flow-through shares. I do not think that since I have been elected I have had more correspondence on any other subject than I have had from people who were concerned that we were going to remove the concept of flow-through shares. I hope each Member of the House rejects this outrageous proposal put forward by the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy).

Mr. Guy St. Julien (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, I wish to join with my colleagues the Hon. Member for Timiskaming (Mr. MacDougall) and the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) concerning this amendment as well as the flow-through shares. And as I stated in the House on November 19, I was telling representatives of the Canada mining industry that our prospectors in Abitibi-Témiscamingue, in Chapais and Chibougamau were firmly demanding both the Canada and Quebec Governments to maintain the flow-through share system in the mining exploration industry. I have been fighting for several months for the Government to maintain this program, because it is important for the Northern Quebec area and all the other areas in Canada—and when I say all the other regions of Canada, I mean Northern British Columbia as well as Nothern Ontario, both great regions, as well as Saskatchewan, the whole North and especially the great mining areas represented by Hon. Members. I must tell Members of the New Democratic Party who are trying to do away with benefits in those large regions, that in those regions we have no Star War spinoffs, no F-18 spinoffs, no spinoffs from shipbuilding for the Government of Canada. The only spinoffs we have in those regions—the Abitibi, Témiscamingue and all the other regions in Canada, especially in the North—come from mining exploration—flow-through shares have been an efficient incentive in many of those regions. We are aware of the current renewal, especially in Quebec, and recently the Quebec Association of Prospectors produced a $100,000 study that was funded both by prospectors and the Quebec Government, an economic impact study on mining exploration funding through flow-through shares and limited partnerships.

I can tell you that in that report—but let me quote a few examples, a few lines from it. The study on various flow-through provisions used in Quebec deals covers the period from 1980, starting date for the Quebec Government, through 1985. Some $315 million had been invested by 1985 by Quebec taxpayers over that period. An examination of each public issue floated produced data on the amounts that went to fund exploration in Quebec. The latter total was figured out by the study team to be $269 million. On the other hand, during 1984-85, a total amount of $61 million was gathered all across Canada and outside Quebec, and may I repeat outside Quebec, that is in Canada and in that province, for a total of $330 million. The Quebec tax cost is based on $315 million invested by Quebecers, while economic spinoffs and the federal tax cost were based on $330 million in 1985 spent in Quebec.

If I may go on, Mr. Speaker, in view of that preamble, the tax cost for both levels of Government is estimated at $239.5 million in 1985, that is $104.25 million for the federal Government and $135.2 million for the provincial Government. The program's financial and tax spinoffs are expressed under two different headings—first, spinoffs from exploration expenditures themselves, both direct, indirect and induced, and second spinoffs from mineral discoveries, their development and future mining operations. It is obvious that this last measure basically remains in the assessment of the program, because the entire program is aimed at improving on the mineral reserves in Quebec generally and in Canada as a whole.

As I said, with respect to the flow-through shares, either in Northern Ontario or in the Témiscamingue area, either in Northern Saskatchewan or throughout the provinces, the message is as follows: Even as far as our Minister of Finance is concerned, the flow-through shares should be kept at 133 1/3. And we know that as recently as last week, the Quebec Government has maintained some flow-through shares at 133 1/3. They are at the same rate as at the federal level.

Before concluding, Mr. Speaker, I should like to mention some discoveries that were developed in Quebec.

The 8 discoveries retained for financial and fiscal purposes will require during the forthcoming two years investments of about $300 million for their development and they will yield a production worth $2 billion during a 10-year period. We may be sure that some of those discoveries will yield revenues beyond that 10-year period, but the task force has found it advisable to be more conservative and to set that 10-year period.

Moreover, we have figured out in 1985 dollars the entire future economic impact so that after 10 years, the actual value of a $1 dollar investment is next to negligible.

Mr. Speaker, I agree with my colleagues the two previous speakers who dealt with flow-through shares, that is the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) and the Hon. Member for Timiskaming (Mr. MacDougall). Flow-through shares are important for large areas.

I know that many Members in this House represent urban areas but I also know that if the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides comes from an urban area he is more concerned about larger remote areas.

Mr. Speaker, I will vote against that motion.

[English]

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I would like to clarify a few things. The Hon. Member for Timiskaming (Mr. MacDougall) stood up and huffed and puffed himself into great indignation. In no way are we suggesting that the mining and exploration operations in the northern regions are essential. In no way are we suggesting that the flow-through provisions have not been of significant assistance.

Mr. St. Julien: I rise on a point of order Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member for Abitibi (Mr. St. Julien) rises on a point of order.

Mr. St. Julien: Mr. Speaker, while I was concluding my comments a while ago, perhaps it was as a result of my deep feeling for my Abitibi constituency, but I should like to say that I am against the motion.

[English]

Mr. de Jong: If I may continue, Mr. Speaker, we are not questioning how the flow-through provision has been helpful. In fact, when the NDP task force, of which I was a member, toured the country we asked a pretty standard question of witnesses across the country. We asked them to give one example of a tax expenditure that was beneficial. The only example we were given was the flow-through provision, and we heard that in various parts of the country.

We are flagging this for the attention of the House in order to begin the debate on tax reform. If memory serves me right, the Department said that it cost Canadian taxpayers $450 million for this particular item. In other words, there are $450 million in uncollected taxes because certain individuals and investors availed themselves of this opportunity. I am not saying that that is a bad investment. Perhaps it is a good investment. Perhaps we will indeed get out of it $450 million plus economic activity. I think it is worth considering.

Surely if we are going to study a tax reform proposal we will have to consider this provision as well and ask whether the public is getting $450 million worth of benefits from it. Can the benefits of this provision be delivered in another way? These are questions which the Finance Committee, the Government, the Department of Finance and this House will have to ask. That is the type of debate we are hoping to initiate here and now through our amendment. We are not questioning the benefits of the flow-through provision as they have occurred. Let me repeat that we are attempting to begin the discussion to determine whether we did receive $450 million worth of benefits. My request is no different from what the Minister of State for Finance stated in his comments earlier when debating this amendment. He admitted that if we are going to go through tax reform we will also have to ask these questions about the flow-through shares. The Government must admit that this item will also have to be scrutinized within a tax reform regime.

We must consider whether there is another way in which these benefits can occur to northern mining and exploration without necessarily costing the taxpayers $450 million. Is there another way to engender greater public accountability and scrutiny?

We must remember that this is an inducement in which the public takes half the risk. Those in the 50 per cent tax bracket who risk $100,000 or $10,000 on an investment will receive 50 per cent of it back on their taxes. In other words, the public is subsidizing those economic activities by 50 per cent, depending on the taxpayer.

There are Hon. Members, particularly those in the Conservative Party, who believe in the free enterprise system. They believe that those who take risks and are successful should not be taxed to death but allowed to accumulate wealth that way. If their investment fails, they should also face the consequences. However, it is not quite so simple because according to this provision, half of the risk is covered by the taxpayer, which undermines that philosophy of risk taking. Since half the risk is covered by taxpayers, we are interested in a little more public accountability in this area.

I am somewhat disappointed by the reaction of Conservative Members who enjoy taking political potshots at this amendment.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): At your inconsistencies.

Mr. de Jong: I remind the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) that within six months his Government will have to ask these same questions and enter into very much the same debate if tax reform is going to be a serious exercise. I invite those Hon. Members to join in some serious debate now, or look like fools in six months when they will have to address these questions at that stage. If those Members and the Minister had any understanding of tax reform, they would not be ridiculing this debate.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): It is a ridiculous discussion.

Mr. de Jong: It is a discussion that will take place if there is to be a serious exercise in tax reform. We will have to ask some difficult questions about our tax system, some of which may not be politically advantageous. We will have to consider seriously some of the "holy cows" in our tax system. In order to have a serious tax reform exercise in this country, we must be able occasionally to ask some politically difficult questions. That is what we are attempting in this amendment, and I am disappointed that government Members in particular have not seen fit to enter into this debate and seriously discuss the issues involved. Rather, they have been more concerned about making some cheap political points. I suggest that if there is a serious debate about tax reform in six months, those Members will be embarrassed because the questions we are raising today will be the ones raised by the Department of Finance and the Finance Committee.

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, my, how they slither and squirm over there in the New Democratic Party. We saw the spectacle of the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy), a gentleman who has never seen more than two blocks from the city centre, get up to say that we must get rid of flow-through shares. They do not care what effect it will have on Abitibi, Timiskaming, northern Quebec or elsewhere.

The Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. de Jong), however, does know a little—I stress "little"—so he is trying to back down from that position, saying that they did not really mean it but were just flagging the question for future debate.

The people of Canada and those who rely on the exploration and development industry for their jobs know what would happen if we had a New Democratic Government. They know what would happen to their jobs if, God forbid, that ever happened. They will take the right precautionary measures at the next election to make sure that it never happens.

I will not dwell at length on this because my colleagues have already stressed the importance of the flow-through shares to the minerals industry.

Mineral exploration is very susceptible to taxation. One only need consider what happened in the late 1960s when the Liberals began imposing capital gains tax on the prospectors' once-in-a-lifetime find. That brought about a decline in mineral exploration. Fortunately, the Liberals saw the errors of their ways and, while they cannot go back to correct the situation, they did introduce flow-through shares. That is what this Government is continuing. It helped to mobilize those funds again in mineral exploration, providing many jobs and many opportunities in parts of the country like that which I represent.

In my opinion, in the present state of affairs, taking into account the low value of many mineral commodities, it would be disastrous if the flow-through shares were to be taken off, as advocated by the NDP. Therefore, I am in complete support of the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin) and those of my colleagues who have spoken on this subject. We want to maintain the status quo with respect to flow-through shares, at least for the forseeable future.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 3 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion, the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, is it possible to start the vote? We can do it now.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I must take the vote on Motion No. 6. We have dealt with Motion No. 3, I will now deal with Motion No. 6. The question is on Motion No. 6 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion, the nays have it.

Motion No. 6 (Mr. Cassidy) negatived.

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of Bill C-23, an Act to amend the Income Tax Act and a related Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Motions Nos. 4 and 5 will be grouped for debate and voted on separately.

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic) moved:

That Bill C-23, be amended in Clause 34 by striking out lines 39 and 40 at page 62 and substituting the following therefor:

"the area in respect of".

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre) moved:

That Bill C-23, be amended by deleting Clause 34.

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, it is a shame that these two motions, which are really quite different— one deals with a technical amendment to Clause 34 and the other would get rid of Clause 34 completely—are grouped for debate because I would like the opportunity to speak for 10 minutes on both issues. Of course, Sir, I am a supporter of Clause 34. It brings into legislation something for which northern Canadians have been fighting for many, many years. It will enshrine in the Income Tax Act the non-taxability of certain benefits which are frequently provided for people who work and live in remote northern areas. It is evolutionary in a way in that most of what is incorporated in this Bill—

[Translation]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Hon. Member for Abitibi (Mr. St. Julien) on a point of order.

Mr. St. Julien: Mr. Speaker, we are not getting French interpretation, only English. May I have French interpretation?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: We will see to that immediately.

[English]

Mr. Nickerson: I was saying, Mr. Speaker, that it is evolutionary in that much of what is incorporated in this Bill was already incorporated into previous remission orders made under the Financial Administration Act.

I have been involved in this matter for many years as have many other Hon. Members on this side of the House. The former Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, the present Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), has been very active in this area. The Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Oberle) has been very instrumental over the years in having this Bill brought in.

This measure finds considerable support in the northern region because it is something they have wanted for a long time. In particular, the union movements, the NWT Federation, the Yukon Federation of Labour, the Steel Workers Union, the Teachers Association and Public Service Unions have always been very active in support. I find it very difficult to understand why the New Democratic Party has gone against the wishes of the labour movement. In fact, it was the Canadian Labour Congress which was very instrumental in putting pressure on the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) to make these necessary changes. Therefore, why on earth would the NDP go against its supposed friends in the Canadian Labour Congress?

I want to offer some congratulations to all the many people, whether they be in the labour movement, the territorial or municipal Governments or in the private sector, who have worked so hard to make this day possible. Those are my comments on Motion No. 5 moved by the New Democratic Party.

I would now like to be specific about Motion No. 4, moved by myself, which deals with Section 110.7(d) of the Income Tax Act as it will be after this Bill is passed. The motion is in respect of the travel deduction. The new Section 110.7 (d) states:

> In computing the taxable income—there may be deducted
> (d) an amount received, or the value of a benefit received or enjoyed, in the year by him in respect of his employment in the area by a person with whom he was dealing at arm's length in respect of travelling expenses incurred by him, to the extent that—

The effect of my amendment would be to remove the words "—by a person with whom he was dealing at arm's length—". If we leave that in, it creates a great difference between employees of Government—of which there are many in the North because it is the greatest industry in the North, unfortunately—those employees of major concerns, say, mining companies, and small businesses and their employees, on the other hand.

Small businesses have always been at a disadvantage, especially in the North, as they try to compete for employment services. They have had to compete with wealthy Governments and corporations to get good employees. In the case of a small company, a painting outfit, for example, one very often finds that one of the employees in a three-person outfit might be the brother-in-law of the proprietor and the third person might be someone off the street, so to speak. The way this section is worded, the employee off the street would be able to take advantage of the new amendments to the Income Tax Act but the proprietor's brother-in-law would not. That does not really make too much sense. I have received quite a bit of correspondence on this issue, especially from the Yukon. I would like to quote a few paragraphs out of a letter I received from Designers North Ltd. of Whitehorse, Yukon, which explains the necessity for the amendment I have introduced probably better than I could myself. It reads:

> The proposed provision has been drawn to preclude a deduction for such travel expenses where the individual is not dealing at "arm's length" with the person providing the benefit. Thus, sole proprietors, partners in partnerships, employees of companies they control and employees of any of the foregoing who are related—within the meaning of Section 251 of the Income Tax Act—to such sole proprietors, such partners or the controlling individual or controlling group of such companies are not allowed this deduction.
> In meeting with the Yukon Committee for Fairness in the Taxation of Northern Equity Payments (the "Committee") your Department indicated that "self employed" persons would not be entitled to this deduction. As a result, the Committee was operating under the perception that the deduction would only not be available for sole proprietors and partners in partnerships and only until such time as these persons incorporated. As the foregoing indicates, such is not the case. Incorporated or not, this deduction would not be available. "Self employed" is thus an incorrect term to be used in describing who would not be entitled to this deduction.
> And what is the justification for discriminating against small businessses and small business people in this manner? In the meeting referred to above, your Department purported to justify this exception on the basis that "self-employed" persons could expense such travel. This justification does not hold water. No business or businessperson can expense non-business related travel for himself or herself much less for his or her family. The type of travel that is involved here is, by definition, not business travel.
> In allowing such a deduction your Government is recognizing that people who live in the north or other isolated areas have higher travel expenses and require a tax subsidy in that regard. It also reflects your Government's policy to encourage development of the north. This reasoning is equally applicable to small business and small business people.
> Nor, with the limits on the cost of such travel and the number of trips allowable in any one year, can this deduction be abused by small businesses or small business people. There is little doubt that it is not your Government's intention to limit this deduction in this manner.

There are a couple of other points I wish to place on the record. In my reading of what we have before us, the travel allowance would also apply to family members of the taxpayer and not necessarily to the taxpayer himself. My interpretation of a phrase such as "travelling expenses incurred by him" is that if my wife were to travel and I were to pay for her ticket, then that would be a travel expense incurred by me as a taxpayer. If the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin) has an opportunity to speak on this matter, then I would, of course, like his confirmation that that is indeed the fact and that family members of taxpayers can take advantage of these proposed provisions.

Another comment I have to make relates to intra-territorial travel. Prior to this advantages were given only to people who travelled from the remote areas of the North to a southern location. It is now my interpretation that people who travel within the Territories can take advantage of the new provisions.

I see that my time has expired, Mr. Speaker. Thank you very much indeed.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have several points I wish to make on this subject. I have met with the Committee for Tax Fairness, which is a broadly representative group, and we talked about this issue about nine or ten months ago during the course of our tax probe tour. The rules of the House make it a bit difficult to bring a matter to the attention of the House where it is appropriate at the report stage of a Bill. Had I known that the Hon. Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson) would raise his amendment, then that would have allowed me to make the points I will now make.

What I have to say may sound somewhat curious. However, since Motion No. 5 is to be voted on separately, and I have raised a point with you about that, Mr. Speaker, then I ask Hon. Members to join with us in voting against it. The motion is for the deletion of Clause 34. Therefore I support the clause as it stands even though I have substantial reservations about it, which I will now express.

I wish to pay some credit to Members from northern Canada who have worked hard to bring about the recognition that this is a substantial improvement on what now exists. As I understand it, if an employer provides subsidized or free housing, or air trips, they do not enter into taxable income and are therefore essentially tax-exempt. However, an individual who is running a small business or who works for a small business, for example, native people, do not generally benefit from the same tax provisions. Therefore it is inequitable and biased, to some extent, toward people from southern Canada and against native northerners or people who have sunk their roots into northern Canada and who have no intention or desire to move back south. So in that sense this measure is positive.

The problem with it is that it benefits more those with higher incomes. That is the major point I wished to raise. As I have said, we will not oppose the passage of this Bill although the clause is included in it. We will ask Members not to support the motion to delete Clause 34.

I have done some calculations which show that a married employee with a $20,000 income living in Whitehorse, Yellowknife or some other northern community receives a tax savings of about $1,000. That employee's supervisor, or the general manager of a large company in the North, who has an income in the $50,000 range will receive a concession that is valued at about $2,700. I believe that this is inequitable, particularly given the living costs in northern Canada, with which the Hon. Member for Western Arctic is well familiar. The worker with the modest income who has a tough time meeting the costs of housing, food, clothing and of other goods and services receives a deduction which is worth about 40 per cent of the deduction that is given someone earning two and a half times as much. In other words, the measure works backward. If anything, I think that the concession should work in the other direction. I recognize that for people who are not organized, and for native people, this is an important step forward. I point out as well that because a tax credit is not used for the employee on a modest income who wishes to fly out of the North with his or her spouse on one occasion, perhaps at Christmas to spend time with family or to take a holiday in some warmer part of the world, the cost of the trip is only subsidized in terms of tax savings to the tune of about 15 per cent. The tax cost of the trip for the high income employee is subsidized to a greater extent. The high income employee, if he does not have air travel arrangements as part of his contract, is better able to pay for tickets and take trips than an employee who receives a modest income and who may not be able to cough up the money in the first place to get out of northern Canada even one or two times every year.

The final point I wish to raise is one which I believe is being addressed by the Department of Finance. I wish to put it on the record now because it was clearly a concern of people in Yukon. My colleague from Yukon who is not here now, although I am sure he has made this point previously, suggests that in many communities in northern Canada there is no rental market. There is no way by which one can judge what the rental value of a particular house should be. If there is, it will be saying that such and such a residence cost $150,000 to construct and therefore the rent should be based on the capital value of the property. This yields very high values on imputed rent. I wish to suggest that this measure can be extremely unfair to northern people. I believe this matter is now being addressed by the Finance Department. However, to be fair, where there is not an active and representative local rental market, as may conceivably exist in places such as Yellowknife and Whitehorse—and I am not even sure about that—then I think we have to agree that where shelter is being provided as a part of a contract, then the imputed value of that shelter should not be put at such an extraordinary price that, effectively, the employee will have to pay tax on an imputed value well above the $450 per month deductible that is in place. I point out to the Minister that the $450 is in itself not that great when one looks at the rental costs of housing, even in places such as Toronto, Edmonton or Ottawa. Nonetheless, if people are being told that the accommodation which they have, which may be quite modest, as a great deal of accommodation is in northern Canada, will have to be charged to them at $1,000, $1,200 or $1,500 a month, then they literally might not be able to afford to stay. Clearly, that would not be the intention in this case and that would definitely be unjust.

We have a situation where a number of the employees who were affected, including the trade union members referred to by the Hon. Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson), have previously benefited from tax free housing. It was not entered into their taxable income, they received it for free, and did not have to pay tax on the benefit. Of course, it was unfair that they received that free and others who had to pay their own rent did not get some equivalent concession. That is being addressed right now.

But if the housing in Pine Point, or in some other mining property in northern Canada is now to be valued at a very high level, these employees may find that they are worse off than if this present situation had prevailed. We have gone from being unfair to people who did not have a trade union contract, to being unfair to people who do have it and have traditionally had housing provided as part of their union contract. I would ask the Minister to address that particular point.

I agree with the point raised by the Hon. Member for Western Arctic in his amendment. I do not recall that was brought before us in the committee, where it may have had a good chance of being accepted before it came here. I hope that the Government in good faith would accept the points made by the Hon. Member for Western Arctic.

We will support Motion No. 4. I wish to put it to the Minister that the Department and the Department of Revenue Canada can surely accept the good faith of northerners and accept the fact that we are not talking about the business conditions and the size of business organizations that exist in southern Canada. After three or four years if it is found that there is some abuse taking place, then at that point some necessary measures can be taken. I suspect that the Hon. Member for Western Arctic would accept that. I believe that his approach is to begin on a good faith basis rather than to begin by suspecting that everybody who works for his brother-in-law is out to fiddle the tax system.

For those reasons, I would ask people to support Motion No. 4. Now that we have had an opportunity to address the general problems of Motion No. 5, I would support opposition to Motion No. 5 even though it was my colleagues and I who proposed it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 4 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Cassidy: On division.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion, the nays have it. I declare the motion lost.

Motion No. 4 (Mr. Nickerson) negatived.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 5 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

I declare the motion lost.

Motion No. 5 (Mr. Cassidy) negatived.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: We will now deal with Motions Nos. 7, 8, 14, and 15, which will be grouped for debate and voted on as follows.

An affirmative vote on Motion No. 7 will obviate the question being put on Motion No. 8. A negative vote on Motion No. 7 will necessitate the question being put on Motion No. 8.

An affirmative vote on Motion No. 14 will obviate the question being put on Motion No. 15. A negative vote on Motion No. 14 will necessitate the question being put on Motion No. 15.

[English]

This was the ruling that the Speaker made a few minutes ago. After the ruling, the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) made additional arguments concerning this particular grouping, even though at first glance the argument by the Member for Ottawa Centre did made some sense. However, unfortunately they are ruled unacceptable for procedural reasons. Therefore, the proposed grouping as originally suggested does stand.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre) moved:

Motion No. 15.

That Bill C-23, be amended by deleting Clause 51.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair recognizes the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau).

Mr. Garneau: Mr. Speaker, the motions standing in my name deal with the alternative minimum tax. We have been advised in this House by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) that the Government's purpose in introducing this Bill providing for an alternative minimum tax was to ensure that all taxpayers assume their fair share of the tax burden. In other words, each taxpayer—it is going to be extremely complicated—will have from now on to file in a regular income tax return, have a taxable income and pay so much income tax. If he has no income tax to pay, he will have, after submitting his return duly completed, to prepare another extremely complicated form to know whether he should pay an alternative minimum tax.

Mr. Speaker, for a Government which wanted to simplify our tax legislation, I can assure you that this Bill is a flop.

The fact remains that on this side of the House, we were and still are in favour of the principle of a minimum income tax as suggested by the Leader of our party during the election campaign. We thought that the Government was serious about wanting to make sure that no one, especially people on high incomes, would be able to get away with paying hardly any income tax to the federal or provincial governments.

Mr. Speaker, that was the objective, and we were all for it. However, Bill C-23 which introduces this minimum tax includes provisions with so many loopholes that no one will have to pay the minimum tax. For instance, a person who has to pay a minimum income tax of 17 per cent will be able to recover that amount over the next seven years if during that time, his regular income tax is high enough to preclude his paying a minimum tax. In other words, a person who has to pay minimum income tax has seven years in which to recover the extra amount paid. I don't see why it is necessary to make our tax system so complex, if the initial objective was to levy a minimum income tax.

Mr. Speaker, the purpose of Motion No. 7 is to reduce the recovery period from seven to three years. We think this is far more reasonable and that if the Government accepted our motion, it would have a minimum income tax with teeth. Otherwise this is going to be a pretty toothless proposition, and no one will feel the bite. In a number of articles written by tax experts, I found one author who said—I'm not sure whether I can find the exact quote—that the only good thing that could be said about the minimum tax was that in the final instance, no one would have to pay because of all the loopholes, and I think that if the Conservative Government is at all responsible, it should at least go along with Motion No. 7 and reduce the recovery period from seven to three years. Otherwise, this will just be a big joke.

The other motion, Motion No. 14 which has been regrouped with No. 7 for the purposes of debate, will remove a small sub-section, Sub-section (3) at Clause 51, by striking out line 33 at page 96 and replacing it with more or less the same thing except for the number three in brackets. This is another loophole we want to close. Mr. Speaker, the Conservative Government has introduced a minimum income tax in an attempt to catch all the tax loopholes and tax shelters and tax evasion. The only exception will be capital gains.

I think it is grossly unfair to have this double standard for taxpayers. If we want to impose a minimum income tax, it should apply to all tax loopholes and not just to a few. I therefore recommend that these two motions be adopted, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. It being five o'clock, the House will now proceed to the consideration of Private Members' Business as listed on today's Order Paper.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS--MOTIONS

[English]

THE SENATE

SUGGESTED EQUAL PROVINCIAL AND TERRITORIAL ELECTED REPRESENTATION

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, the Government should consider the advisability of introducing the appropriate measures to abolish the Senate and create a new Senate composed of Senators elected by the people of Canada on the basis of equal representation for each province and territory, and to initiate discussions to that end with provincial and territorial Governments at the earliest opportunity.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I have great pleasure in moving the motion before the House. What the motion wants is an efficient Senate elected by the people, with equal representation from each province and territory.

The report of the Special Joint Committee of the Senate and of the House of Commons on Senate Reform dated January, 1984 called for an elected Senate. The first statement in the report, Chapter 1, reads as follows:

The Senate

We have concluded that the Canadian Senate should be elected directly by the people of Canada.

An appointed Senate no longer meets the needs of the Canadian federation. An elected Senate is the only kind of Senate that can adequately fill what we think should be its principal role—the role of regional representations.

Because of the limited time allowed, I will deal only briefly with the matter of electing a Senate. However, I want to point out that the House of Commons is elected on the basis of population. Consequently, Ontario and Quebec, the two central provinces, will for a long, long time have a majority in the House of Commons. This is proper as representation in the House of Commons should be and is based on population. "Rep by pop" was fought for and won. It is an accepted rule for electing Members of Parliament.

When it comes to the Senate, however, there is no reason at all why the number of Senators should be based on population. Senators appointed now, whether for service to a political Party or on the basis of merit, may feel responsible to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) or to the Government which appointed them but they are really accountable to no one. Our contention is that Senators would be elected by the people, so they will be responsible and accountable for their actions to the people who elected them.

The second requirement of the motion is that an equal number of Senators be elected from each province. I suggest five, with two from each territory until they attain provincial status. Each province would be divided into the appropriate number of regions or the Senators could be elected at large, and nominations would proceed according to the Elections Act.

While the Special Committee on Senate Reform recommended that Senators be elected, it then suggested that the Senate should be increased from 104 Members to 144 Members, with Quebec and Ontario retaining 24 Senators each. Assuming my recommendation of five Senators being elected from each province and two from each territory, the distribution as it is now, as it would be with 144 Senators and with equal representation from each province, would be as per the table included in my notes.

Taking the table as read—and I hope it will be included in Hansard—let us analyse the recommendations of the joint committee with regard to distribution. First, the distribution is at least partly based on population. For example, Prince Edward Island is given six Senators, while the other maritime provinces and the four western provinces get 12 and Ontario and Quebec retain 24. Surely P.E.I. being a province it is entitled to the same benefits as other provinces. The report rationalizes this by saying that if P.E.I. was given 12 Senators, then five provinces with as little as 13.4 per cent of Canada's population would have a majority of seats if they had the support of the territories. It is strange.

The House of Commons generally has 60 per cent of its Members from the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, with only 28 per cent from the West and the North and about 12 per cent from the Atlantic provinces. That appears okay, but population should not be a factor at all in selecting Senators. The selection should be on the basis of having the status of a province. The distribution of Senators by the special committee would really retain the status quo and would solve nothing. It might just a well stay as it is if all we are to accomplish is more expenditure from the people. Reform would be meaningless with Quebec and Ontario retaining 24 Senators and all other provinces with fewer seats. Ontario and Quebec already have a majority of Members in the House of Commons. Why should they also control the Senate? This motion will be fair to all provinces; each and every one will have equal power, with none having more power than any other.

However, how much would people have to pay for all this? The 144 Senators would increase the cost of the Senate in wages plus the tax-free allowance from about $6 million per year to almost $9 million. On the other hand, by having five Senators elected from each province, with two from the Yukon and two from the Northwest Territories, it would cut the cost in half and bring it down, in wages and cost of living, to less than $4 million, to say nothing about the tremendous reduction in the cost of offices and office expenses for staff, travelling, et cetera. If money means anything—and it means a lot to Canadian taxpayers—the triple E Senate would save millions. In addition, the real benefit and advantage would be that Senators would be accountable to the people who elected them, not to the Prime Minister nor the Goverment which appointed them.

An elected Senate, at least to start with, should continue to have the power extended to it by the Constitution Act, 1867. It should be noted that the absolute veto over legislation presently in effect has not been used once during the last 25 years.

I will now deal briefly with some concerns arising out of changes which will have to be made to the Constitution Act, 1867. Will huge sums of money have to be paid to present Senators allegedly because of dismissal? The Constitution Act, 1867 sets out the method of selection, the retirement age, and certain circumstances under which a person who is summoned to the Senate is disqualified from membership. An amendment would be necessary when the Senate is either abolished or a new method of selection is implemented.

Some may argue, as did the report of the joint committee on Senate reform, that there is some constitutional commitment by the Government to those Senators appointed for life or until age 75. When the Constitution was amended to change the senatorial term from life to retirement at age 75, legislation then gave an option to those in the Senate who had reached the age of 75 years either to continue or to retire with a pension. This option was given, but it could have retired them all over or under the age of 75.

In terms of compensation, why would Senators not be treated the same as other Canadians who lose their jobs or retire? Pensions are earned through contributions which persons make to a fund, as in industry. Senators who have spent some years in the Senate would secure a pension based on their years of service and their contributions. It would mean that they would secure the amount which they had properly earned under the Act under which they worked, as do workers under UIC and workers under Canada Pension. It is the same for Members of Parliament who are defeated in an election or retire. Why should Senators be treated differently from other Canadians?

Section 42(1)(b) of the Constitution Act, 1982 specifically states that any change in the powers of the Senate must be accomplished by means of the general amending formula. However, this could be done without the consent of the Senate. Presumably such an amendment would simply repeal Section 26 which gives the Government the right to appoint additional Senators in order to break a deadlock in the House of Commons. The section dealing with retirement at age 75 would be dropped as well. The constitutional amendment would provide the method of election, and the mechanics would be left to be inserted in the Canada Elections Act.

If the Senate refuses to pass such an amendment, does the House of Commons have any recourse? A constitutional amendment which would either abolish the Senate or change the method of selection to popular election would have to be accomplished by the utilization of the general amending formula, which allows approval by the central Government and two-thirds of the provinces. This being the case, Senate approval is not required if within 180 days of the amendment being first passed by the House of Commons the Senate refuses to act or acts in a negative fashion. The matter is simply re-enacted by the House of Commons.

I submit that if the Senate is not reformed, it may well mean that the Canada we love may not for long be the Canada we know and have today. In other words, the salvation of Canada as we know it, with its varying climates, its varying regions, and its many people, is tied in to a large degree with providing protection for all regions, which in turn requires this fundamental reform of the Senate. A new Senate responsible to the people will take a sober second look at legislation to ensure that every part of Canada has an opportunity to grow and to retain its culture and language. It will also ensure that every region is treated fairly and that people in every part of the country have an equal chance to enjoy the benefits of our nation.

The bottom line in the discussion of the motion is fairness to all parts of Canada. By passing all stages it will tell Canadians that the Government of Canada and the House of Commons have listened and are acting on their message and that every region will be treated fairly, whether it be the far East, the far South, or in the centre.

I urge all Hon. Members to support the motion. The failure of the motion to pass could mean a shocking catastrophe.

• (1710)

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I find myself in the strange but certainly welcome position of totally agreeing with the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) and complimenting him on his resolution. Let me say to him that we are prepared to lend our support to an important and worth-while initiative.

I would like to point out to the House that at the recent national policy convention held some three weeks ago, delegates overwhelmingly supported this proposal to include an elected Senate that was equal and had additional powers granted to it so that it could become a Chamber of substantial weight and effectiveness in representing regional interests in Canada. To my knowledge, it is the only time that a major national Party in Canada has gone on record fully endorsing and supporting the concept of an elected and equal Senate. I have no problem in putting forward that notion.

I would like to talk about why it must be done and why Members of this House have an opportunity at this time to show some real leadership in responding to an egregious sense of grievance in many parts of Canada and to recognize that in effect our constitutional system is incomplete. We have the only federal system in the world that does not have a second Chamber that effectively represents regional interests on the basis of democratic accountability. It is not my job to second-guess the wisdom of the confederation of our forefathers. By making the decision as they did at that time to have a Senate that is an appointed body and having that tradition maintained has resulted in a situation that while the Senate does useful work—and there are some very fine people in the Senate—it does not carry the heft, the leverage or the balance within the system of making decisions required to ensure for people in regions not concentrated with high levels of economic or political power that they will get a fair deal. As a result, there are too many examples over too much of our history where decisions have been made not on the basis of fairness but on the basis of political weight.

I recall the famous statement of Napoleon who once said to the Pope: "Where are your battalions?" That is too often a question raised in our system of decision making. The counterbalances we have, the Cabinet system and the federal-provincial conferences, are not in themselves sufficient to give the kind of forum for debate and discussion and the sense of security and confidence on the part of individuals in places like western Canada and the Atlantic to be heard effectively.

There is no doubt this issue of an elected equal Senate has gained a great deal of importance and an incredible sense of urgency because of the recent decisions by the Conservative Government on the CF-18 matter. I can think of no matter, certainly in my living memory, which has struck so deeply into the consciousness and psyche of westerners than that decision. People saw by all the reasonable rational criteria that an important contract should have been awarded to western Canada but was not because of interference in the system. One can only judge by statements made by Ministers of the Crown opposite that it was done purely to meet some political requirements in central Canada. That is not acceptable. Westerners will not continue to accept that situation. I do not say that partisanly because these situations can happen with all Governments. I think westerners have had it with CF-18 decisions. They will no longer accept that kind of bias and discriminatory decision-making. Westerners want to be sure that they have an equal chance to have their voices heard and an equal chance to ensure that there is political balance.

A week or so after the CF-18 decision was announced I happened to be in my home riding of Winnipeg watching the congressional election returns coming in from the State of North Dakota. It was intriguing to see the President of the United States having to pay as much attention to the election of Senators from North and South Dakota as he did about an election of a Senator from California and New York. There is no question that the calculation going into the political process in the United States must be duplicated here in some way.

I think the Hon. Member for Bow River has illustrated the various ways in which the so-called technical problems can be overcome. I am not saying that I adhere totally to the position he has put forward in terms of the exact model, but this motion represents a first step in this House of Commons in coming to grips with the issue.

I decry in part the reaction that we had in this House a year or so ago when the then Minister of Justice brought in a Senate Bill that was about taking the powers of the Senate away. It was supported by the New Democrats who said they wanted to abolish the Senate, therefore totally depriving the regions of any fair degree of representation. This is a chance to redress that kind of silliness and show people in the other parts of the country that we mean business.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I think it is imperative that all Members from all regions of Canada understand and support this motion, because it is a very important initiative which attests to the interest of all Members from coast to coast in extending fair treatment to people in western Canada and the Maritimes. This is a great opportunity to show unity in this country.

I urge my colleagues and other Members to support the motion of the Hon. Member for Bow river (Mr. Taylor).

[English]

I rise because I think this is one of the most important debates and one of the most important resolutions that has ever been presented in this House. I think the Member for Bow River put it correctly that unless Members of Parliament take this kind of initiative, unless we show some leadership in this very crucial issue, there will be an increasing sense of alienation, scepticism and an increasing sense that the system does not work for large sections of the country. We see that situation increasingly where the economy of this country is becoming a split level economy. As we shift from a commodity resource base into an industry that is based upon services, information and research, the concentration of economic power becomes more consolidated in southern parts of Ontario and the St. Lawrence mainland. The only way one can provide a counterbalance to that is through the political system. The only way you can ensure a fair distribution of the economic gains in this country is to ensure it through the distribution of the federal system. If the federal system is flawed and if there is a major weakness in that system, if structurally it is not able to ensure the balance wheel constantly in operation, then there will not be that sense of confidence about being able to receive a fair deal and a fair reception of the growth and prosperity of Canada. We are in danger of having a split-level society, a country that finds itself divided.

I can only say that while this is not the total panacea, symbolically and in a very conscious way, this is an important demonstration of the willingness of the country to take a good look at itself, to realize that the evolution of our Constitution is not by any means over, and that the kind of good, honest outpouring of feeling exhibited in this House in the past to our colleagues from Quebec when they had grievances on language and culture must now be demonstrated by our colleagues from Quebec and Ontario on this issue that is so crucial and important to the West and the Maritimes.

There have been times when this House has shown an incredible generosity of spirit in recognizing that there has to be some limitation on one's rights in order to better the rights of others. That is how a civilized society operates. This House has demonstrated that in the past when we were threatened with separation over questions of language and culture. We now have the same kind of threat in the form of unfair distribution of economic and political power.

I suggest to you and all other Members of this House that this resolution provides an answer to that problem. It therefore deserves a proper review by this House. That will demonstrate that we are not blind to the difficulties we face, that in fact we are prepared to look at them collectively because we realize that the House of Commons has a responsibility to all of Canada.

Mr. Reginald Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, like the previous speaker, I want to commend the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) for his initiative in introducing this subject in the House. As it is now constituted, the Senate has no place in a democracy. My reason for saying that is that we have a legislative Chamber without a mandate from the people. That, in the 20th century, is the only basis for legislative authority. We no longer recognize divine right, aristocratic superiority or any other consideration in a democracy except one, that of a mandate from the people in a free and democratic election.

Without calling into question the personal virtues or merit of members of the other place, we have to face the reality expressed in that sorry, inexcusable vacuity of authority because of which the Senate is unable to function as a true legislature. It has become a kind of legislative refinery whose chief positive role is to improve this or that feature of a Bill sent to it by the House of Commons. It has ceased to function as a legislature in the way originally intended. It is for that reason that opinion on all sides of the House over the years has supported the intent of this motion before us. For example, in 1965 the Hon. Stanley Knowles told the House:

> We ought to ask ourselves whether there is any place in our parliamentary institution for a group of people who are not responsible to the electors.

That is the key. If you would be a legislature today, you must be accountable to the electors. You must receive from them that confidence which gives us authority to act. Another member of the other place, Senator Michael Pitfield, said:

> As an appointed Chamber it simply does not carry the credibility to perform the role in this day and age.

That is the point. We need to have an elected Senate if it is to justify its position as an upper House.

Regardless of the quality of the people who comprise it, and there is no question about that in this debate, it cannot, as an appointed Chamber, function with the full scope of an elected House. It does not usually initiate Bills of its own. It seldom dares to veto Bills from this House. It almost never goes beyond the function of refining something by rubbing off this rough edge or polishing up that dullness. However, that is surely not enough to justify it being the upper House of this Parliament. It purports to be an upper House but it lacks that essential without which it cannot function as an upper House.

The Hon. Robert L. Stanfield, with the great wisdom and perspicacity with which we associate him, has said:

> We should do whatever is in our power to increase its credibility, and that has to come basically through reform of the appointment process.

What better reform than to make it an elected Chamber? Some 25 years ago the need for some such solution was signalled in the words of the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) when he said:

> The Senate, in terms of current facts, no longer plays a part in the government of Canada.

That is the view of the Leader of the Liberal Party. The Senate no longer plays a part in the Government of Canada. The Hon. Member who introduced this motion identified the reason. It is not because individual members lack ability or dedication. It is because they lack a mandate from the people which only an election can give them.

I submit that the question is: Do we want an elected upper House? Or, do we want a single Chamber Parliament? There is no place in the 20th century for an appointed upper House. Democracy around the world demonstrates that there is a place for an elected upper House. The variations found in such democracies as West Germany, France, the U.S., Italy and Australia, to name only a few, demonstrate that. Therefore, I join with those who support this motion to bring before the people of Canada and their representatives the need for a profound transformation in the character and structure of the upper House of this Parliament. In that way it can perform its function in a way appropriate to this century and the one which lies ahead.

I would ask that the mover of the motion consider some emendation of the second part of his motion. I am thinking of the assumptions that underlie the call for equal representation of every province and territory without regard to population. The difficulties are obvious. We all know we have one province with only 125,000 people, another province with over six million people, and a third province with more than 8.5 million people. We must consider not removing the disproportionate character of this country and what that requires simply by saying we have provided for it in the House of Commons. We do not remove it by pointing to the way in which the U.S. Senate has equal representation for each state, whether it be Rhode Island or California. Doing that ignores the proportion of population among the regions and divisions of Canada. Ontario represents 35 per cent of the people of this country. There is no state in the Union that represents 35 per cent of the people of the U.S. If there was, it would have a population of 75 million and include not only California with its 25 million but most of the states west of the Mississippi River. If a state like that existed, then you would begin to see what it means to say "we only have two Senators from California". The same thing applies to the Province of Quebec in proportion, indeed every province. I am not asking for representation by population in the Senate such as we have in the House. We should have something which is uniquely Canadian and not a simplistic attempt to duplicate what they have in the U.S.

In this country, in addition to provinces and territories, we have four or five recognizable regions. We should think in terms of allotting each of those regions a more or less equal representation so there would be a strong voice from the underpopulated parts of Canada such as the Atlantic Provinces and the Prairies. We would have a strong voice from the North out of proportion to the number of its people, but we would not have the hopeless and, I submit, unacceptable situation of having equal representation from each province and each territory.

I do not suggest this simply to speak against the motion but, rather, to raise a question. When this motion proceeds, as I hope it will, and is considered by the Government and again by the House in the form of a Bill, I ask that we consider the problem which I have identified and which I believe requires careful reflection by committee and the House. The motion before us is meritorious and requires further reflection by Parliament and, ultimately, action by us all.

[Translation]

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to join today's debate on the motion introduced by my colleague from Bow River (Mr. Taylor). If I may continue along the lines of the remarks made by my colleague from Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse), I would say we have before us a motion which is full of good ideas and which points the way towards a future which will be more progressive and more democratic than our present institutions. Still, Mr. Speaker, my Party and I can see the shortcomings of this motion.

We are talking about a non-democratic institution—as others have described it—at the very core of our democratic legislative process. In other words, there is an obvious contradiction in terms with our legislative institutions and this very Parliament.

Mr. Speaker, we now find ourselves in a situation where we have a House of Commons elected by the people, where every sitting Member was given a mandate by his or her electors. But we also have the other place—like my colleagues I would not want to criticize those who sit there now—we have in the other place a House where the right to sit comes only and exclusively from this Government. To put it another way, the present Government could use the Senate to reward its friends and, in light of what is now going on, to reward those who have been the good and faithful servants of the country, but especially those who belong to the Government Party.

And I myself, Mr. Speaker, have friends in the Senate. There are senators whom, I say it frankly, I admire, but what the Senate institution stands for is the patronage system that is imbedded in the Government, and the Government is always tempted to use that system despite its past protests, to try and turn it to its own purposes. And that kind of Senate subservience, that kind of departure from the concept of a true Senate as it should be, along the lines of the Roman model, and that deterioration started under the previous Government, the Trudeau Liberal Government. It was during that time that the nefarious practice of using Senate appointments to set up an election team, an election planning team within Parliament itself, a team that is there for the one and only purpose of partisan politics.

This is a corruption of the Parliamentary system for which our friends on the Liberal benches should apologize to the nation, and even for having corrupted the senators. Unfortunately, that system of corruption kept on under this Government, which has used not all but some appointments to install its own election committees at the Senate level. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, this is an ill-prepared legislation, involving a mere improvement on matters of detail over the present Senate. There are serious gaps in a proposal that would replace the present Senate by an elected Senate. I say it quite frankly, Mr. Speaker, I am a one-Chamber man myself, and our party's policies adopted in convention are for one chamber only. We believe that a single chamber is the choice of the majority of Canadians themselves. I know I will probably be repeating what has been said by the Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse).

The main gaps in the concept of an equal, elected, efficient Senate, as it is often mentioned in the headlines, is that of course proportional representation exists in the House of Commons, but that is a proportional system that is based of course on the size of the various constituencies. Electoral boundaries have been changed according to history, tradition. There is that imbalance on which everyone will agree. There are, for instance, in Ontario constituencies, and I believe that even includes Scarborough, that have a larger population than the whole of Prince Edward Island. There were constituencies in other provinces that were larger for instance than my own, larger than the whole of Germany, 30 times larger geographically speaking than Prince Edward Island, but with only one Member to represent them, while there are now four in the example I am using. It is obvious, Mr. Speaker, that if we had agreed to the principle of an equal, effective, elected Senate, some people would have requested a reform of our system of representation in this House so that Members of Parliament could be elected strictly on the basis of the same number of people in each of our constituencies, which would naturally be against the legitimate interests of my constituents, who live in vast rural regions where there can be about 100 villages of which 30 cannot be reached by road. This means that if this Bill is passed, we shall have to consider changing our system of representation in this House.

As I have just said, Mr. Speaker, I am myself a unicameralist. I think that we should look at the examples before us. Many provinces began with two Houses, a non-elected Senate and an elected Chamber. Today, those provinces all have one Chamber, and I would even go as far as saying that those provincial Governments work better than the federal Government and are better able to meet the needs and aspirations of their voters. We also have the example of our large municipalities, some of which represent over 10 per cent of our population, and which are always unicameral. There are difficulties in implementing this Bill which must be mentioned, Mr. Speaker because, ever since the adoption of the Canadian Constitution we have had a consultation process which should come into play before this kind of measure can be passed.

Then there is the fact that our native people represent the two major immigration races or, as someone said, the founding nations.

On what basis would a triple E Senate represent the great concept we have of our founding races and our native people?

Naturally, Mr. Speaker, I may be somewhat disappointed to see that the motion of my colleague from Bow River (Mr. Taylor) has been chosen as a votable item instead of mine which was picked first.

Once again, Mr. Speaker, I must conclude that the real solution, the solution which meets the needs of all Canadians, is the unicameral solution where there is no room for a Senate.

Mr. Charles Hamelin (Charlevoix): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to speak to this motion introduced by the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) urging the House to endorse a proposal to abolish the existing Senate and create a new Senate—elected this time—where provinces and territories would have equal representation.

I take this opportunity to point out that the Hon. Member for Bow River will soon be celebrating his 40 years as an elected politician—elected, I repeat—and I should think this is the appropriate time in this debate to quote the great principle which prevailed when the United States of America were founded, the famous words of Thomas Payne:

One cannot tax people without being duly elected. And I think the House will agree that one of the few people who today would be worthy to belong to the Senate is our hon. friend from Bow River who has been re-elected for forty years.

Imagine! He has been elected so many times there would be every justification, no offence intended, to give him a seat in the Senate without the benefit of election. And I would have no trouble supporting such a proposal. He has successfully faced the electorate so many times, both in the provincial legislature and in the House, that I think he and other people like him should be the first to be given a seat in the Senate.

[English]

"No taxation without representation".

That is the basic principle behind this motion to abolish the Senate, which, it has to be said, is a bit of an anachronism. I may recall that last year, our hon. friends in the other place obstructed the passage of Bill C-11 for several weeks. This was a Bill to provide borrowing authority for the new Government, a Government that had been elected with an exceptional and indeed historic majority. And the Senate obstructed this legislation. Why? In any case, the Liberal Senators were opposed to adopting and ratifying a Bill that constituted a major borrowing authority, the result being to create uncertainty on the financial markets and even raise doubts internationally, at a time when our dollar was more or less sagging. This situation was created by people who were not elected and who were taking this opportunity to ridicule the elected Members of Parliament who had been unanimous in adopting this Bill.

So we have the whole contradiction of this second Chamber that is applying a kind of veto, theoretically at least, but in this particular case a very real veto, to the decisions of the elected representatives of the people of Canada.

I and many of my colleagues find the situation particularly unacceptable. I may recall that the issue of the legitimacy and accountability of members of the Senate has been raised before in the course of history and as recently as last year, with these important people who, being appointed, are responsible to no one, and I tend to agree with the Hon. Member for the New Democratic Party whom I wish to congratulate on addressing the House in French, thus enhancing the francophone presence in this Chamber, and I would say that the Hon. Member is making a very valuable contribution in this respect, and I was going to say that the Hon. Member stressed the patronage aspect of these appointments, and so forth.

I would not go that far. I believe there are senators who are doing exceptional work here in Ottawa. Most of them, Mr. Speaker, are hard workers and are active on various committees, and they express views that reflect their wisdom and experience. But they still have this major drawback that they are not elected and are accountable to no one.

And when they decide—as was the case of the Liberal senators—to obstruct the decisions of a Government that was elected with such a broad majority by the Canadian people, it is time to start asking some very serious questions. And perhaps we should take this proposal by the Hon. Member who has such broad parliamentary experience as an opportunity to review this issue.

I may recall that in 1907, the House of Commons of Great Britain adopted legislation in this respect. When faced with obstruction by its own Senate—

Mr. Boudria: Quote it!

Mr. Hamelin: Yes, I'm quoting verbatim, my friend—

To accomplish the will of the people as expressed by their elected representatives, the power of the other House—

—you see, they are not very respectful: "the other House"—

—to amend or vote against Bills adopted by this House—

—the House of Commons, of course—is to be limited by legislative means so that as far as the powers of Parliament are concerned, the final authority rests with the Commons.

Mr. Boudria: In other words, it is up to the House.

Mr. Hamelin: Well, a bitter struggle followed, perhaps something like the one the Hon. Member would like to have with me, and the House of Lords, whose powers with respect to financial measures were finally reduced in 1911 by statutory means, has only a very short time to consider such legislation, and its absolute veto with respect to other kinds of legislation has been reduced to a minor and temporary veto.

Well, enough said about Great Britain, I will get back to this place and repeat what my colleague said a while ago: Why should we not innovate? It seems to me this is the time, if ever we are to entertain the possibility of revamping our Senate from top to bottom. As my colleague pointed out earlier, if we choose not to abolish it we should at least consider an elected institution, perhaps a form of septenate to give senators a wider perspective. Seven years would be an interesting challenge. It might be ten years, but it does not matter much. Those people would not have to face their electors quite as often, they might be less concerned over strictly political considerations in the short term, but they would be able to look forward to a somewhat longer and guaranteed parliamentary tenure.

As to the powers that might be vested in the new reformed Senate, we would have to make sure that the two Houses would not work at cross purposes, as was the case recently. Senators could have more extensive and specialized advisory powers to be in a position—something along the line of the motion of our colleague—to represent provincial aspirations and those of certain other groups. I think this suggestion and this debate can lead to challenging and worthy considerations. Given the new climate in this House and the parliamentary reform as a whole, I have the impression that in a more serene atmosphere we might convince ourselves that senators should indeed participate actively in Canadian affairs, as a matter of right, fact and fairness, if they were elected in the first place and given specific mandates in fields of jurisdiction which would be clearly defined. The least we can say about the proposition of our colleague— as was the case of others in the past—is that it raises basic issues. We sincerely hope this new climate will make it possible for all Canadians, all Members here, and perhaps even senators to give serious consideration to a more functional and more enlightened bicameral system which would show new respect for all Canadians.

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, it gives me pleasure today to rise in the debate on the motion of our colleague for Bow River (Mr. Taylor). The same motion has been introduced on numerous occasions in the past, perhaps not in this specific form, but at least in its general principle.

First, Mr. Speaker, I must explain my own position. I am in favour of an elected Senate. Second, however, I disagree with the suggestion that there should be an identical number of representatives from each province in the other Chamber. In my opinion, there should be an equal number of representatives from each region. Naturally, we would then have to decide whether there would be four regions, five regions, or whatever. We shall come back to this later.

I really take objection to the view of some Hon. Members that Canada should have a unicameral federal Parliament. I totally disagree with that idea. I just cannot understand why we would ever threaten the other House with abolition even when we disagree with it. It has been stated often that we do not need a second legislature. I believe that to suggest that is wrong and does not recognize some of the history of our country.

At Confederation there were really two roles identified for our Senate. The first role was to review the legislation. I think most people would agree that the Senate has done that job reasonably well. The second role of the upper Chamber, as I understand it, is to represent the regions of our country. At that time there were three regions; Canada East, Canada West—later to be called Quebec and Ontario—and the Maritimes. It was the wish of the Fathers of Confederation that one third of the Senators would come from the Province of Canada East or from the Province of Quebec. The reason for that was to recognize the principle of the two founding nations. That is why it is important to keep an upper House and to keep it representative of the regions of our country. The Senators, of course, presently represent their respective provinces except the Senators who represent the Province of Quebec, who are also, of course, representatives of a given area, a Senate riding, if you wish, or a seigneurie, based on the historical antecedents prior to the active union of 1840 and, indeed, in large measure prior to the Constitutional Act of 1791.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the Conservative Government elected in 1979 did not have enough elected Members in this House to represent effectively the Quebec population. Under the circumstances, one of the founding nations could have run the risk of not being represented at all in that government. Fortunately, at the time, there was a Senate. The Prime Minister of the day, who is now Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) went to the Senate in search of people whom he deemed competent to represent the region of Quebec and the founding nation made up of francophones and managed to appoint a Cabinet which included representatives of that group.

Let us imagine an assembly made up of a single House facing the same situation! Naturally, we would have had a Cabinet with very few Quebec or francophones representatives in the Ministry, if at all, because we know that there were only two PC Members out of 75 representing Quebec, and only one a Francophone. That did not represent the group.

If I am saying that, it is because an NDP Member said a while ago that he was in favour of a single House; I feel such a proposition could not apply to our country, because it is important to have an assembly or Parliament made up of two houses.

[English]

To the extent that we must continue to have a bicameral House, I agree with the Hon. Member opposite. To the extent Senators should be elected, I agree. To the extent that each should represent a given area of our country, I also agree. I suppose the only point I disagree with is that the Hon. Member opposite is saying they should be elected in exactly the same number for each province. I say that that idea does not recognize the two founding nations principle of our country and it does not recognize certain historical antecedents.

As stated by the Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse), the formula that the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) is using resembles the American formula, with the same number of Senators per state. However, in the United States there is not one state, one province or one jurisdiction which has 35 per cent of the population. In this country there is such a province.

I am not saying that the Senate should have a number of seats which is proportional to its population, because then effectively we would have areas of our country which would be almost totally devoid of representation. I do not think we should use the representation by population principle nor the identical number per province principle, but, rather, a marriage of both, which is effectively what the regional principle is. In other words, the division of the total number of Senators should be based on various regions of our country. I know there is still debate going on as to whether our country has four regions or five. Mr. Yurko, the former Hon. Member for Edmonton East, addressed that subject extensively in the past. We have had a lot of constructive debate, but the issue has not been totally solved.

With that I will end my remarks and say that in my view the motion of the Hon. Member has a great deal of merit. I congratulate him for bringing it forward. I hope that if it goes to committee we can amend it somewhat in order to reflect the principle that I have outlined. I hope that the day will come soon when we will stop talking about reforming the Senate and actually do it.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 66 deemed to have been moved.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT—TIMING OF PARLIAMENTARY VOTE

Mr. Jim Jepson (London East): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to rise in the House today to speak on the merits of reinstating capital punishment in Canada.

For years, public opinion polls have shown consistently that approximately 70 per cent of all Canadians want capital punishment reinstated. It is not hard to see why. Murders have increased by 116 per cent in Canada since the last executions were carried out in Toronto's Don Jail in 1962. The fact of the matter is that the incidence of violent crimes being committed in Canada is rising as a result to an all-time high in 1985.

The statistics pertaining to this enigmatic problem do not lie, as illustrated by the recent figures available from the Canadian Centre for Justice Statistics. These figures reveal an alarming rise in the actual number of homicides committed in the last 20 years.

More specifically, I urge all Members of the House to seriously take note of the fact that from 1961 to 1983 the actual number of homicides in Canada increased 293 per cent, from 233 to 682. Therefore, at a time when violent crime is increasing, the main objective of our laws in Canada must be founded upon the absolute protection of our society rather than on the treatment of the criminal.

Reinstatement of the death penalty would alleviate the injustice we see in our country today. Not only do I firmly believe that the death penalty is a deterrent to the most heinous of crimes, it would be a just sentence for murder and a vital necessity to protect the value and sanctity of human life. It is my belief that capital punishment should be a legal option for our judiciary to impose in sentencing murderers who want this application of the law.

The most important reason for reinstating the use of the death penalty is the probability of its deterrent effect which, based on common sense, must be greater than that of any other punishment. If it is accepted that punishment does not deter the crime then, to be logical, the ultimate punishment of the death penalty must have the greatest deterrent value. The undeniable fact that the threat of capital punishment has not prevented some murders in Canada does not mean that it has not stopped others from happening. At the very least the death penalty prevents the offender so punished from ever committing violence again. We recently saw the case of a man in the Ottawa area who was convicted of murder for the second time. To that extent capital punishment definitely protects society.

In the case of premeditated murder it can be assumed that the possible consequences of the act are considered. The Royal Commission on Capital Punishment in Great Britain heard evidence concerning such criminal cases in four countries which indicated that in some instances the threat of the death penalty had acted as a deterrent to murder. In the case of some professional criminals, it is the only sentence which might be expected to have a serious deterrent effect. They are accustomed to imprisonment and regard it only as an occupational hazard. The known existence of the death penalty may discourage some professional criminals from entering Canada. Furthermore, it may deter those already present from carrying weapons and from committing crimes of violence.

Law enforcement authorities in Canada have long contended that the abolition of the death penalty increases the risk for police and prison staff. It would be reasonable to assume that in seeking to avoid arrest a criminal would be less likely to shoot a policeman if there is a death penalty in place. Similarly, it might be expected that the death penalty would deter a prisoner from murdering in prison or while attempting to escape from prison. If, for example, he is already serving a sentence of life imprisonment, no other sentence except the death penalty would be likely to have a deterrent effect on his behaviour.

It may be argued by critics of capital punishment that even if the potential murderer does not stop to consider the possible consequences of a violent crime, he has been previously mentally conditioned to be aware of the very serious consequences by the existence of the most extreme form of punishment and, therefore, to avoid the criminal act. Moreover, by reserving this drastic punishment for the most serious crime, the law would foster a special abhorrence of murder in the minds of the public and subsequently this in itself could be expected to have some deterrent effect.

Abolitionists arguing against capital punishment assert that the taking of human life is morally wrong for the state and for the individual citizen. Furthermore, the state should set a precedent by recognizing the sanctity of human life in all cases. This view of capital punishment is commonly held by the Canadian Coalition Against the Return of the Death Penalty, which includes representatives of some churches and organizations that defend civil liberties.

I believe that we are seeing a continuing deterioration of the sanctity of life. For this reason, I believe that it is important that if a person takes another person's life, he or she should realize that they stand to forfeit their own life.

The results of studies to determine the effectiveness of capital punishment have been inconclusive. There is no proof that the death penalty does not deter crime, particularly crimes of violence for gain, and premeditated murder. Therefore, in the absence of any such proof, common sense indicates that it must have some deterrent effect on normal human beings.

In conclusion, capital punishment is appropriate not as a means of vengeance but rather one of justice, and a clear signal of society's abhorrence of violent crime. Punishment should adequately reflect society's revulsion toward murder. Some murderers particularly demand the most emphatic denunciation that society can give. In addition, it may be considered a healthy function of society to be able to react legally in the strongest possible manner to the most heinous of crimes committed in Canada.

By allowing the people of Canada the right to voice their concerns on this important issue to their elected Members of Parliament, it is therefore a duty of a democratic Government to respond. After careful consideration and analysis, I firmly believe that Canadians are quite capable of arriving at a rational decision, and subsequently deserve to have this issue brought forth for a free vote in the House.

I am happy to commend the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) who in his last press conference addressed this issue. I realize that this Government has had serious economic problems to deal with as a result of taking over two short years ago and having to deal with the massive deficit. Having made progress, I applaud the Prime Minister for taking a stand and promising that this matter will be dealt with in the new year.

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, on September 15, 1986 in Vancouver the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) said that his position on capital punishment is well known to the caucus and to the House of Commons, and that there will be a free vote in Parliament during this Government's mandate. In response to a question in the House on December 3, 1986 from the Hon. Member for London East (Mr. Jepson) the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) stated:

—as the Hon. Member knows, the Government' position is quite clear on this issue. At the present time I am currently examining options as to how this issue might be brought forth.

At his recent press conference on December 5, 1986, the Prime Minister said that capital punishment will be debated in the House of Commons next year. He said, "I have indicated to caucus, to my Party, there will be an opportunity to debate this issue during our first mandate and it will be during the course of next year."

This Government takes the issue of capital punishment very seriously. Our intentions to deal with this issue are on the record.

NARCOTICS—GOVERNMENT ACTION TO COMBAT DRUG ABUSE

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, I am sure you know of many people, particularly young people and their families, who have had problems with illegal drugs. I certainly do.

I think especially of one family when I think of the problem. It is a very close knit family—a mother, a father, and three children, a son and two daughters. The members of the family have always been close and have always demonstrated concern for one another. The mother is concerned with other people to such an extent that she works for UNICEF, looking after the concerns of people around the world. She is involved in community issues such as pornography and abortion. She is concerned about her family in the wider world. She and her husband are church-goers. They are involved in the church and in home and school or parent-teacher activities. They are involved in that way with their children. The father is a former member of the local board of trade. They are a good, God fearing, concerned, and close knit family.

Suddenly one day their son's school work started to tail off. He started spending more and more time away from the family, closeted in his room or with his friends. Then drugs were discovered.

The parents worked with their son, with the other children in the family, with the school, and with the police to try to get a handle on the problem and to solve it. Eventually the problem appeared to be under control. However, one day very suddenly there was a grisly murder, and it was discovered that their son was involved. It was discovered at the same time that drugs were involved in the case.

As one can imagine the family was heart-broken. Of course the hearts of their neighbours and friends went out to them. However, it did not change the fact that their son is now incarcerated in Kingston Penitentiary doing time for a murder which was committed with the involvement of drugs. This is the sort of things illegal drugs can do.

When I think of my school days, I think of the fact that there were not any drugs around my school. There was no involvement with drugs in the neighbourhood, the community, or even in my city. Thinking of those times, I think of the fact that drugs were something which happened in other cities such as perhaps New York and London, England, but never in my own city. Today we find drugs in schools across Canada.

In light of these facts, it is no wonder the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) indicated in a speech in September in Vancouver that the use of illegal drugs in Canada was now an epidemic and that the people breeding this epidemic were corrupting an entire generation of Canadians. As well, it is no wonder that in a Gallup poll conducted last month, 75 per cent of all Canadians agreed with the Prime Minister's comments that drugs were an epidemic.

What will we do about it? In September the Prime Minister talked about waging a war on drugs. He also talked about a major package which would be brought forth involving education, unique ways of stopping a demand for drugs, prosecutions, and penalties. In the Speech from the Throne on October 1, the Government promised to take effective action against the grave and growing threat posed by the traffic in illegal drugs. It indicated that there would be a national drug strategy to support the prevention of drug abuse, and that there would be continued domestic and international leadership in controlling drug abuse in amateur sport.

What has happened since that time, Mr. Speaker? On October 30, the Solicitor General (Mr. Kelleher), the Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport (Mr. Jelinek), the Minister of State for Youth (Mr. Charest) together with the National Hockey League and the Canadian Football League announced that they had joined together with the RCMP to produce an anti-drug abuse video message to Canadian youth. This program, to my mind, was a modest extension of another program involving both the NHL and the CFL that was started in 1980. I may be wrong, Mr. Speaker, but I cannot really recall anything else in the way of an announcement, an action or a program since that time. There is nothing as far as I can remember from the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) on this. There is nothing as far as I can remember from the Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn) or from anyone else on the Government side on this question.

If illegal drugs are an epidemic in Canada—I certainly believe they are and 75 per cent of Canadians believe they are—then surely the Government should be taking urgent action to deal with this problem and this epidemic. The Government takes urgent action to deal with other epidemics. It is time that the Government took urgent action to deal with this one as well. Tonight I hope to hear from the Parliamentary Secretary when we will see this urgent action and what that urgent action will be.

Mrs. Jennifer Cossitt (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to respond to my colleague, the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway), who is the most active and able representative in this House on behalf of his constituents. I think the question he has raised is very typical of the deep and sincere concern that he has for social issues.

It was not surprising to hear the results of a Gallup poll which indicated that the majority of Canadians, 75 per cent, are deeply concerned about the abuse of illicit drugs. Even those Canadians who have had no direct experience with this problem are well aware of the harmful effects to drug abusers and the distress that this has caused to their respective families, co-workers, fellow students, friends and communities. This poll is indeed a strong indication that the Canadian people support fully the Government and its efforts to deal with the problem and its harmful social effects.

On October 7, 1986, the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) informed the House that the Government is determined to address the problem on all fronts. It is important to recognize the complexity of the problem and that there is no one quick and easy solution. Drug abuse has multiple causes, and efforts to reduce this activity has to encompass a broad range of initiatives, including a balanced approach to supply and demand reduction. It is for these reasons that the Government is developing a comprehensive strategy which ranges from primary prevention to legislative and enforcement measures aimed at unscrupulous traffickers.

It is imperative that we also take into account the international dimension of the drug trafficking problem. International trade in illicit substances has grown to the point where the United Nations and some countries have recognized that the problem is beyond the ability of any country to resolve in isolation.

Domestically reducing the demand for drugs will require bringing together the efforts of the community and the provinces. On November 4 and 5 initial discussions were held with the provincial Ministers of Health, and I am pleased to report that the provinces are not only very supportive but have expressed a willingness to explore new initiatives and how efforts can be co-ordinated to achieve optimum impact in reducing drug taking behaviour.

THE ECONOMY—NORTHERN ONTARIO RECOVERY PACKAGE. (B) REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT INQUIRY

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, the economy of northern Ontario at the present time is experiencing some rather serious aches and pains. As Members of the House will know, base metal prices remain very low. Competition in the pulp market is becoming keener by the month. Now we have a 15 per cent U.S. countervailing duty on softwood lumber. That has already caused some mills to close and others which were supposed to open in the near future will not open. Others are threatened with closure. It is vital to northern Ontario that we continue to fight that tariff through the prescribed judicial process in the U.S.

I spoke again with leaders in the industry this morning and they are convinced that cooler, calmer heads in the U.S.

Department of Commerce will favour Canada with a good decision. However, I am sorry to say that the Government of Canada has already seriously weakened our position by agreeing to negotiate that duty. It has tried to settle out of court and that has not helped at all. However, nothing can be more ludicrous, I submit, than the idea of a 15 per cent export tax on softwood lumber. That is more than the industry can bear. It will affect our exports not only to the U.S. but wherever we sell softwood lumber. It is a tax grab which will result in lost jobs and damage to a very important industry. We should drop that idea immediately, get behind the industry as quickly as possible and fight the case before the U.S. Department of Commerce.

I said at the beginning that the economy of northern Ontario is in some difficulty. The new Government at Queen's Park in Ontario has recognized that. The premier is deeply concerned. He has assumed responsibility himself for northern affairs and mines and has taken a number of important initiatives for which we are grateful. However, in the past the federal Government has played a very important role in regional development. Northern Ontario has benefited from that since the late 1960s. Yet since the 1984 election I must report to Hon. Members that there has been little or no evidence of any federal concern for northern Ontario.

Recently Conservative Members of Parliament from the North had a meeting in Sudbury and something very hopeful, to me, came out of that meeting. It was announced there was to be a northern Ontario recovery program. At the time no details were provided. However, the Member of Parliament for Timiskaming (Mr. MacDougall) made a statement after the meeting to the effect that this had better be more than a philosophical statement, otherwise "we are all dead in the water".

After weeks of probing here in the House of Commons, the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) finally revealed a little of what was in that recovery program. I thank him for the information. However, the details remain sketchy and provide nothing but a general direction and very few specifics. That is the reason for my appearing in the Adjournment Debate this evening. I would like more specifics.

For example, the program says that northern Ontario is to be regarded as a separate economic region, that is separate from the rest of the province. It is falsely said that this is a first but I ask the Parliamentary Secretary, what is in a name? Second, there is to be some decentralization of federal departments and offices to northern Ontario. The previous Liberal Government did that as well. The Department of National Health and Welfare, for example, went to Timmins. StatsCan opened an office in Sturgeon Falls. The Department of National Revenue went to Sudbury. Those were all good moves and I say to the Government that if there is to be more of it, it will be welcomed. We will gladly accept those offices and those jobs. What I want to ask now, though, is if the Government can tell us which offices and when?

Looking again at the initiatives outlined by the Deputy Prime Minister, I would point out that number three is simply a repeat of number one. Number four goes on to say there is to be a federal forestry and mining stabilization program. That appeals to me and I would like to know more about it. The Government has my attention, so what are the details?

Number five talks about a special tax break for those who invest in northern Ontario. When will this come into effect? Do we have to wait for the federal Budget which is expected next year, or will it come sooner? Six says that we are to be assisted in our marketing strategy. How are we going to be helped in the marketing of lumber? We have already been badly hurt there. Will we be assisted in marketing pulp, base metals or gold? I am very nervous that if we call upon the marketing experts in the Government we may end up losing much more than we gain.

Seven would be amusing if it were not so tragic. It promises that northern Ontario is to get more research and development. The private sector is to take the lead but it will be encouraged by the federal administration. We know that research and development has not been given particular emphasis by the Government. Why should northern Ontario expect something when the entire country has already been sorely disappointed in this regard?

The Deputy Prime Minister did not tell me who would be the lead Minister in these so-called northern Ontario economic development initiatives. DRIE, the Department of Regional Industrial Expansion, has dried up. Will these initiatives be DRIE driven? I doubt whether the Department of Employment and Immigration is capable of handling these programs. Surely the Solicitor General (Mr. Kelleher), the Hon. Member for Sault Ste. Marie, is not to be the man to whom we must look. He is already preoccupied with other matters such as the construction of prisons in various parts of the country.

I conclude that the Government's recovery program for northern Ontario must regrettably be described as an empty vessel. I believe it is a bust. The economy of northern Ontario will also be a bust unless we get some help, unless the Government recognizes that regional economic development is a priority and a legitimate objective for the federal Government.

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to respond to my colleague, the Member for Cochrane—Superior (Mr. Penner), who represents one of the many Liberal Party positions on free trade. Northern Ontario's early growth resulted from producing raw materials and bringing them to market. As a result, the region has a strong resource base from which many secondary industries have been built. We are all aware of the serious problems facing the resource-based industries in the country, especially those in northern Ontario. We face competition from Third World countries. Technological innovation is producing new materials which are substituted for the products of northern Ontario. There are punitive trade barriers the world over which are frustrating our ability to compete as a nation.

The five members of the Progressive Conservative Party who represent this region are committed to ensuring that its people and resources have a productive future. As indicated by my hon. colleague, under the leadership of the Solicitor General (Mr. Kelleher), Progressive Conservative Members from all ridings met in Sudbury to consider positive programs to build on the strength of northern Ontario, its resources and its people. This is the first time a national Government has treated the people of northern Ontario with attention which reflects its unique characteristics and problems. The specifics of the northern Ontario recovery program will be brought forth in due time.

We are working today to improve the lot of northern Ontario. Yet, earlier today the New Democratic Party moved a motion to eliminate the concept of flow-through shares, which is vital to the mining industry in northern Ontario and elsewhere in the country. Led by my colleague, the Member for Timiskaming (Mr. MacDougall), and assisted by the Member for Abitibi (Mr. St. Julien), government Members defeated the NDP initiative which would have been so harmful to the mining industry.

Members opposite only talk about the problems of northern Ontario. Members of the Progressive Conservative Party are sitting down with people from the region to address the problems and find the solutions. We do not intend to ignore this unfortunate region of Canada. We stand committed to improving the prospects of northern Ontario and its citizens in the years ahead.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

The House adjourned at 6.30 p.m.

FISHERIES

EAST COAST BLUEFIN TUNA FISHERY

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, bluefin tuna fishermen in Atlantic Canada are hopping mad. The Minister has sold them out. Two Japanese longliners have caught 400 bluefin tuna weighing less than 300 pounds each. That is 400 bluefin tuna which our Canadian fishermen will never catch.

Does the Minister think he can go against the advice of his own advisory committees, his own Department, and Canadian fishermen, and get away with it? No slight reprimand, or "I promise not to do it next time", will satisfy fishermen in Atlantic Canada.

The Minister calls this sell-out experimental. Fishermen call it exploitation. The Minister said he wanted to put money into the pockets of fishermen. Then why did the Minister line the pockets of Bayshore Tuna?

Tuna fishermen in Atlantic Canada deserve better answers than the Minister has given. They will not forget the Minister and his secret deal with his Tory cronies.

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL RELATIONS

STUDY OF GREATER QUEBEC CITY'S CONCERNS

Mrs. Suzanne Duplessis (Louis-Hébert): Mr. Speaker, today I would like to draw the attention of the House to a historic event that occurred last Friday in Quebec City.

For the very first time, federal and provincial Members from the greater Quebec City area met to discuss the region's major issues, including industrial development, the future of research and high technology in Quebec City, the dossier on the hi-tech industrial park, transportation, tourism, the Sommet de la francophonie, and so forth.

In a spirit of co-operation, we worked together on policies for the major projects that will enhance the area's economic development and the future of the people of the greater Quebec City area.

Mr. Speaker, this was a very successful and important meeting for the future of the area, and above all, it illustrates the sustained efforts being made by this Government to achieve national reconciliation.

HUMANITY

SCIENTIFIC GENDER SELECTION—STUDY OF ISSUES URGED

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, because male and female sperm determinant differ, it is now possible to choose whether a boy or girl will be born. For those for whom a 50-50 chance has produced the reality of several children of the same sex, this technology can provide a happier balance, and for that it is to be welcomed. But all may not be well as gender selection kits appear on the shelves of corner drug stores.

Dare we ask whether a mechanism produced by billions of years of evolution to ensure equal proportion of males and females and the perpetuation of the species should now be replaced by the same kind of preference as that for the colour of a new car?

Does not the establishment of gender selection clinics by oh, so humanitarian, multinational corporations in the Third World suggest a new and dramatically effective means of birth control, namely, the elimination of female births?

Are not the kind of ethical and political questions raised by science in the service of personal choice in a narcissistic age as momentous as those for science in the service of war? And is it not time for us to weigh these questions and implications of our creativity, and act to preserve our humanity? Remember, a coin that always turns up heads means someone is always the loser.

ANNIVERSARY OF STATUTE OF WESTMINSTER

Mr. Rob Nicholson (Niagara Falls): Mr. Speaker, this past week marked the anniversary of one of the most significant dates in Canadian constitutional history. I am referring to the passage of the Statute of Westminster passed 55 years ago in December, 1931. In the long constitutional development of this country, that date is as significant as any other.

After the Statute of Westminster, we can say that Canada truly became an independent country. The document confirmed that no legislation passed by the Parliament of the United Kingdom would apply to Canada unless expressly authorized by Canada's Parliament. By 1931 the country had come a long way since that day in 1791 when Lieutenant Governor John Graves Simcoe opened the first Legislature of Upper Canada in Niagara-on-the-Lake.

The Statute of Westminster did not, however, sever our allegiance to the Crown, and that is why it was appropriate that the Union Jack flew over government buildings again last week. As one of the local newspapers in my riding, The Niagara Advance, indicated: "The royal standard Union Jack was being flown . . . in recognition of Canada's allegiance to the Crown and membership in the Commonwealth of Nations".

THE LATE HONOURABLE SENATOR JEAN-PAUL DESCHATELETS

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, a few days ago, Senator Jean-Paul Deschatelets died in Montreal after a long illness. I wish to pay tribute to this public figure who for many years played a major role on the federal political scene, first as a Member of the House of Commons, then as Minister and later as Senator.

I had the privilege of working closely with him during those years and was able to appreciate his exceptional qualities as a humanist. He was the soul of integrity, and those who knew him well will remember him as a philosopher in politics. One is tempted to ask what on earth he was doing in politics. I think he even asked himself that question on occasion. In any case, he always remained faithful to his roots and to his deepest convictions.

We have lost a patriot, and speaking on my own behalf, on behalf of my colleagues in the Liberal Party and especially the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme), I wish to extend our sincere condolences to Mrs. Deschatelets and the family.

ABORTION

FUND RAISING CAMPAIGN TO OPEN ABORTION CLINIC IN VANCOUVER

Mr. Ross Belsher (Fraser Valley East): Mr. Speaker, the winter 1986 issue of Healthsharing, a feminist magazine published in Toronto, reports that an organization calling itself Concerned Citizens for Choice on Abortion is raising funds to open an illegal abortion clinic in Vancouver.

Last week we learned from the final comprehensive annual abortion statistics from Stats Canada that British Columbia still has the highest abortion rate in the country, 26 abortions for every 100 live births. The Vancouver General Hospital already has a separate accredited facility which alone is responsible for 400 abortions per month, and yet we hear that there is a group in Vancouver raising funds to open an illegal abortion facility.

In British Columbia, over 20 per cent of the children conceived are killed by abortion, while a group of people are raising money with the expressed intention of breaking the law in order to kill even more unborn children. Will we wait until half of the children of B.C. are killed before we address the situation? I hope not, Mr. Speaker. I think we in this House must address the abortion issue now.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

EFFECT OF CANADA-UNITED STATES TRADE NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, the Government has said that environmental issues are not part of the free trade negotiations with the United States. Unfortunately, life is not that simple. Whatever either party to the negotiations wants to have on the table is on the table, whether the other party likes it or not. We have already seen that the Americans may consider our social programs to be a government subsidy to Canadian business. There is no reason to believe they will not think the same about our environmental programs.

For example, the Americans could consider government sponsored reforestation programs or pollution abatement programs to be non-tariff trade barriers which we should bargain away. Or, where Canadian environmental laws are weak, we could be locking ourselves into a situation in which they would have to remain weak.

At the moment these environmental dimensions of the free trade initiatives are being overlooked by the federal negotiators. No environmentalists sit on Canada's free trade negotiating team, nor are they among Simon Reisman's 85 staff people or his 54 advisers. There is no commitment on the part of the Government to conduct an environmental assessment of the final free trade agreement. Canada must not bargain away the political and economic power it needs to build a truly healthy, sustainable and environmentally sound economy.

PHARMACEUTICAL PRODUCTS

EXISTENCE OF COMMON FRONT IN FAVOUR OF BILL C-22

Mr. Gilbert Chartrand (Verdun—Saint-Paul): Mr. Speaker, in yesterday's edition of La Presse we learned about the existence of a common front made up of representatives of the business, political and scientific communities, and dedicated to the promotion of Bill C-22 dealing with drug patents.

Such prestigious personalities as Mrs. Manon Vennat, President of the Montreal Board of Trade, Mr. Marcel Daoust, President of the Montreal Chamber of Commerce, and Dr. Jacques Gagné, Dean of the faculty of Pharmacology of Montreal University, have publicly indicated their support for this Bill.

These people believe that the 10 years period of exclusive right granted to manufacturers is not only essential to recognize copyrights but represents for them bare minimum.

The future legislation will make it possible for the Canadian pharmaceutical industry to reach new levels of prosperity. In the Montreal region alone, investments up to $200 million, out of an expected total of $500 million, have already been announced and will create hundreds of high-tech jobs.

Everybody warmly supports this Bill. Apparently, only Members of the Opposition are unable to see its potential benefits.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

DEPLETION OF OZONE LAYER

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, the depletion of the ozone layer, the greenhouse effect and climatic change, and the long-range transport of acidic and toxic substances are interrelated and cause man's contamination of the atmosphere. A new approach and ethic toward discharging wastes and chemical materials into the air must be adopted on an international scale.

A number of substances, including chlorofluorocarbons, have major impacts on climate and the ozone layer. Chlorofluorocarbons are used in refrigeration, solvents and foam insulation, as spray can propellants, and in fast food containers. Identified as a source of chlorine in the stratosphere, they contribute to a chemical reaction which is eroding the ozone layer. Scientists say that on average a drop of 1 per cent in the ozone layer means a 4 per cent jump in skin cancer rates.

Canada should take the initiative of urging other nations to control and reduce the use of chlorofluorocarbons, companies should be urged to limit their use, and their disposal should be carefully handled. The ozone layer must be protected to protect human health.

POLITICAL PARTIES

MEMBER'S ALLEGED UNCO-OPERATIVE ATTITUDE

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Less than 24 hours after the Liberal Party of Canada convention, Mr. Speaker, the Liberal Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East (Mr. Allmand) contradicted his leader by telling him that he had to follow the policies duly endorsed by Party delegates.

The leader certainly did not rush to ask for a public retraction from this recalcitrant Member.

In a letter published today in The Gazette the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East makes a feeble attempt at making amends, but he simply will not bow to the leader. Indeed he cannot refrain from stressing in his letter, and I quote: "Some resolutions were passed unanimously and others by a narrow margin. Some were detailed and others general, some were clear and others vague, some were complimentary while others contradictory, and finally, some issues were not dealt with at all. More significantly, many of these resolutions were carried without information on their financial implications."

The Liberal Member did take a last shot at his leader by stating that "their first responsibility is to the electorate and not to their party."

In the next few days we will hear more about the recalcitrant attitude of the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East. Who will win? The leader or the little red rooster?

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

CRITICISM OF PATENT AMENDING LEGISLATION

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, I have yet another letter I would like to share with the House about the Government's plan to amend the Patent Act. The letter reads:

A couple of questions are the bitter pill the Minister of Consumer & Corporate Affairs wants the country to swallow blind:

I have been moved to tears, almost, about his plea that the Opposition is denying 3,000 "young research scientists" a chance to work wonders, etc., etc. But if Mr. Andre is so devoted to young scientists, why the cuts at the National Research Council?

Further, if the new patent legislation is not going to cost consumers "one penny more", why are the multinationals so hot to have it passed? If there's not extra money in it for them, they are obviously wasting their time.

Or is Mr. Andre gilding as well as coating the pill? Is he equally ready to declare that the new legislation will not cost the taxpayers of Canada "one penny more"?

How come this Government hates old folks so badly that first it tried to chisel their pensions, now it's after their potions?

Yours truly,
H. W. Somerville.

MISSING CHILDREN

A CHRISTMASTIME REMINDER

Mr. William G. Lesick (Edmonton East): Mr. Speaker, Christmas is the time of year for families to gather together and reflect on our good fortunes, as we remember the birth of the Prince of Peace.

However, there are many families who are not so fortunate. There are over 2,000 missing children in Canada today. In my hometown of Edmonton, Tania Murrell has been missing since January, 1983.

What has our Government done to address this tragedy? Well, a missing children's registry has been created for access by all police forces. A missing children's research project has been established in four urban centres, including Edmonton. Customs officers at our borders will be provided with names and photos of missing children. This is a positive start, but all Canadians must work together to prevent this tragedy from continuing.

As we gather together this holiday season, let us remember the families of missing children and let them know our hearts are with them.

SITUATION OF EARLY RETIREES

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Yesterday, Mr. Speaker, I had an opportunity to go to Quebec City where I met with 450 early retirees who were denied benefits by this Government. I can tell you that the people of Quebec will not forget the former Member for Lévis who is still here and who will be turfed out at the next election because he did not dare show up. Nor will they forget the Members for Louis-Hébert, Langelier, Quebec East, Montmorency—Orléans, and Portneuf.

Mr. Speaker, the 450 early retirees have decided to lead the fight so that all Canadians who have been denied benefits will get refunds. These people also urge Canadians to enjoy their Christmas turkey, meat stew and ham while discussing the unfairness of the Progressive Conservative Government and of the Prime Minister towards older workers.

SITUATION OF INDUSTRY IN WESTERN CANADA

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. He knows that 50,000 Canadians have lost their jobs directly in the oil and gas industry because of the current weakness in the energy sector in Canada, and another 40,000 Canadians have lost their jobs in the supplier industry. He knows that energy markets are in a mess, that major projects are on hold in Canada, and that we are risking our security of supply as a nation. When will the Government recognize the current situation and deal with the immense human suffering, particularly in western Canada, arising out of the failure of the energy sector since the Government took office?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the right hon. gentleman has certainly identified a very serious problem. It is a problem that has been caused by depressed prices as a result of an action taken half-way around the world. The Government has responded in many respects. We dismantled the devastating National Energy Program which stripped billions of dollars from the energy sector and western Canada. We accelerated the demise of the PGRT. We have been and are working very closely with industry and the Government of Alberta on a number of ongoing initiatives. Clearly, the Government takes the problem and the issue of security of supply and energy self-sufficiency for Canada very seriously.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): As the Government moves into the second half of its mandate, those arguments about what previous administrations did or did not do begin to wear pretty thin.

OFFSHORE EXPLORATION PROJECTS

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the Deputy Prime Minister knows that the offshore exploration both in the Beaufort and in Atlantic Canada will virtually cease next year. This will place the future security of supply for Canada in jeopardy. What action does the Government intend to take, despite the current relaxed attitude of the Minister of Energy, in order to revive offshore exploration and ensure that Canada has security of supply in the years ahead?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, one thing we have done is remove the heavy burden of taxation on the industry and the producing provinces. As a matter of fact, in the last two years of the Liberal Government some $4.5 billion to $5 billion a year was extracted from the oil patch. Today it is less than $500 million. With the demise of the PGRT it will be a lot less.

The Government of Canada is working very closely with the producing provinces and the industry. Quite frankly, the Government has responded to every request the industry advanced and we will continue to work very closely with it because we believe that through co-operation and consultation, not confrontation as was the case with the previous Government, we can revitalize the oil patch.

SYNCRUDE PROJECT

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I doubt whether that rhetoric will impress his fellow citizens in Alberta.

I have been unable to get an answer from the Deputy Prime Minister on general policy or whether the Government intends to take action on the frontier. Perhaps I can ask him a question about a specific project. Has the federal Government agreed to give financial assistance to the Syncrude project in Alberta despite the opposition of the Minister of Energy?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, that project is under consideration. If any arrangement is worked out with Syncrude and the Province of Alberta, an announcement will be made. I repeat that it is being looked at very seriously.

CHEVRON CANADA—DIVIDEND PAYMENT TO PARENT COMPANY IN UNITED STATES

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. A recent survey by the Petroleum Monitoring Agency says that a Canadian company made a dividend payment of $500 million because of the deferral of a major capital project. That payment was made by Chevron Canada to its U.S. parent because of the Government's inaction on Hibernia. How can the Government condone this bleeding of $500 million from the Canadian energy sector? Does it not prove that major Canadian oil companies have no confidence in a Government which lacks an energy policy?

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): The voice of the NEP.

Mr. Jack Shields (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I am quite surprised that the Hon. Member failed to consider all the report. That company made a dividend payment of $500 million, but he failed to say that they had not paid a dividend to their shareholders for a number of years.

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, three years to be exact. However, that is $500 million that will not go into creating jobs in Canada.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): If the Government wants to do something it can start by appointing a full-time, not just a part-time, Minister of Energy. When is the Government going to do something to stop this bleeding of money from the Canadian energy sector and create exploration and development along with jobs in the energy sector?

Mr. Jack Shields (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member now admits that the company had not paid a return to the investors for three years. I would suggest that not very many people want to invest in an industry if they are not going to get a return. It is as simple as that.

FINANCE

EQUALIZATION PAYMENTS—GOVERNMENT'S DECISION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. The other day, the Minister of Finance of New Brunswick said that the federal Government had unilaterally withdrawn the offer it made in Edmonton to increase equalization payments to the provinces by $175 million for the next financial year. Today, I was able to confirm this with the Minister of Finance for Quebec and the Government of Manitoba.

My question is this: Why did the federal Government make this incredible decision?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, this proposal was made by officials of the provincial and federal governments. The offer did not come from the federal Government. I told the provinces yesterday and last Friday that the federal Government could not possibly accept the one-year proposal. We were agreeable to an increase over two years, and that is what our Government has decided. This is in addition to the increase from 4 to 6 per cent in the annual increment for the equalization program.

• (1425)

Mr. Broadbent: I will say to the Minister that the people in the poorer provinces will know that instead of getting $175 million in the coming year, they are going to get it in two years, which will mean they are going to have to pay a lot more out of their own revenues for increased education costs and everything else. They understand that, if the Minister does not.

POSITION OF FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, will the Minister confirm that the federal Government did indeed offer $175 million at the Edmonton meeting in additional payments starting next year, and then a few weeks later at the Toronto meeting it cancelled that offer? Why is there this increased injustice for the parts of Canada which need more assistance?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has it all wrong or he is purposely twisting the truth.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An Hon. Member: What's new?

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): Order.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I know the Hon. Minister would want to change the way he put his answer because, of course, it is inappropriate to say another Hon. Member is purposely twisting the truth.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, would you allow me to say he is twisting the facts?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order. I can say to the Hon. Minister that that is an honourable occupation in this Chamber.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Let me then, Mr. Speaker, state the facts as they should be stated.

Mr. Broadbent: That will be very different indeed.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): In Edmonton there was a proposition put on the table by a committee of bureaucrats, officials from both the provincial and federal levels of Government, to increase the size of the Equalization Program by $175 million.

Mr. Broadbent: The next fiscal year.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): We had a discussion at that meeting. There was no consensus. I did not have a consenus to take back to my colleagues in Cabinet. Since the Edmonton meeting, I had an opportunity to discuss it with my colleagues. We agreed to accept the proposition of an $175 million increase on top of one of the fastest growing federal Government programs, equalization, growing at 4 per cent to 6 per cent per annum. We said we wo;uld accept it, but only over two years because of our fiscal position. So we are increasing by a significant amount one of the fastest growing areas of government assistance.

Mr. Broadbent: I thought the very last thing this Government would do would be to raise questions about credibility in statements.

SIZE OF FEDERAL PAYMENT TO PROVINCES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): I listened to the answer by the Minister of Finance with care, and following on with what he just said, will he now acknowledge that the federal Government did offer at the Edmonton meeting $175 million in additional payments to the Equalization Program, which would start in the coming fiscal year, but that the Government changed its offer at the Toronto meeting? Will he confirm that? And if he does so, will the Government finally come to its senses and admit it has cut back on hundreds of millions of dollars to the poorest parts of Canada which need increases, not reductions?

• (1430)

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I could make another comment about the facts just laid out by the Hon. Member. We did not withdraw an offer—there was never an offer on the table. There was a report. I challenge the Hon. Member to find one person who will say that there was a federal government offer on the table.

Mr. Broadbent: I just talked to three of them.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Bring them in and we will talk about it. There was no offer on the table. We have recognized the position of the poorer provinces. We have increased the program by 4 per cent to 6 per cent per annum. On top of that the enhancement of the program will be by an increase of $87.5 million this coming year and by $175 million the following year. That clearly demonstrates the concern that this Government has for most parts of the country.

POSITION OF PROVINCES

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, the Minister just said that he needs witnesses to prove that this offer has been made. Perhaps the Treasurer of the Province of Alberta would be good enough for this Tory Government. The Treasurer suggested that the provinces had thought that the larger payment was a certainty because of statements made by the Minister of Finance at the meeting in Edmonton two months ago and reaffirmed by the Prime Minister in Vancouver at the meeting of First Ministers. Why has the Minister of Finance broken another promise to the provinces?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I challenge the Hon. Member to prove on the floor of this House that I have broken a promise that there would be an increase in this program by $175 million. Prove it on the floor of the House of Commons, or withdraw.

Some Hon. Members: Withdraw!

Mr. Garneau: Mr. Speaker, I thought that the evidence was there. The facts are—

Some Hon. Members: Withdraw!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Bring in the provincial Treasurer, he will prove it.

Mr. Garneau: I wish to ask the Minister another question. What I just read was from The Globe and Mail under the signature—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Allmand: It's a Conservative Party newspaper!

Mr. Speaker: I know that all Hon. Members will want to hear the Hon. Member's question. Will he please put his question?

Mr. Garneau: What I have just said came from the Treasurer of Alberta. He may come to the House and—

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Bring the provincial Treasurer before the Bar of the House.

Mr. Speaker: Will the Hon. Member please put his question?

Mr. Hnatyshyn: A coherent question!

[Translation]

Mr. Garneau: Mr. Speaker, I was challenged by the Minister of Finance and I felt I had to set the record straight.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Challenges abound in this Chamber. Will the Hon. Member please put his question?

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Show a little honour and withdraw.

PROMISES MADE TO PROVINCES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, could the Minister explain to the House why his Department and his Government had enough money to reimburse shareholders at the Bank of British Columbia but did not have enough to keep the promises he and his officials made to the provinces across this country?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, for the benefit of our erstwhile banker, perhaps I may explain that this proposal was not a promise made by the Government of Canada, the Prime Minister or myself. It was an offer made by the committee of provincial and federal officials. There was no consensus at the meeting in Edmonton. After this meeting, I had discussions with my colleagues and they accepted the committee's proposal, but it would be for two years and not one. This is not a change in policy by the Government of Canada. We understand the position of the provinces located in the least advantaged areas of our country. We have increased the increment from 4 to 6 per cent, and on top of that, we are adding an increase of $175 million.

POSITION OF PROVINCIAL MINISTERS

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. Why is it that the Ministers of Finance of Quebec and Manitoba believe that the federal Government made an offer of $175 million over one year? Why have these people confirmed to us today that that is what they believe the federal Government said?

Mr. Broadbent: And New Brunswick.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I cannot answer why they are saying what they are saying. I am telling the Hon. Member, and I am laying my job on the line right in this House—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Axworthy: Now we have you.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I put it right back to the Hon. Member. If he wants to lay his job on the line, then—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I remind all Members that time is slipping by. The Hon. Member for Churchill on a short supplementary question.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Put your seat on the line.

PROVINCIAL MINISTERS' BELIEF

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I will ask a short supplementary question of the Minister. It is not only the Liberal Government in Quebec and the New Democratic Government in Manitoba but the Conservative Government in New Brunswick which say the same thing. Again I ask the Minister why they believe something which is completely contradictory to what he is saying?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I do not know what the rules of the House are in this regard, but I have said to the House, and I have said to the Hon. Member, that I will lay my job on the line if he can prove that I have broken a promise. If he wants to continue this line of questioning then he should lay his job on the line as well, because I have not broken a promise.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

AID TO NICARAGUAN CONTRAS—TORONTO CONFERENCE

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, it looks as if we have a revivified leadership candidate here.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): What are you running for, Sheila?

Ms. Copps: My question is for the Secretary of State in the wake of the Irangate-Nicaraguan affair. The Minister is no doubt aware of concerns that have been expressed to him in writing about his attendance recently at a Toronto conference which included featured guest Mario Calero, chief U.S. fund-raiser for the Nicaraguan Contras. Can the Minister explain whether he was at this conference in a private capacity or whether he was there representing the Government?

Hon. David Crombie (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, unless I misunderstood the question, I was not at the conference.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Hamilton East.

Mr. Andre: Don't let that stop you, Sheila!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

• (1440)

Mr. Speaker: Hon. Members will, I am sure, want to let the Hon. Member put her question.

UNITED STATES ARMS SALES TO IRAN—RCMP INVESTIGATION

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I believe that the Minister was cited as being one of the patrons of the conference. He will know that he received a letter on December 5 from Canadian Action for Nicaragua specifically asking him if he was patronizing the conference as a Minister or as a Member.

In light of today's press reports linking a former Conservative MP with the Canadian connection in Irangate, can the Government give us the assurance that an RCMP investigation will include any role played by the former MP for York North?

Hon. James Kelleher (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I can advise the House that after the request of the Deputy Prime Minister to investigate all aspects of any Canadian involvement in the Iranian deal, that was commenced immediately. I had a meeting with the Commissioner yesterday and I can assure the Hon. Member that the investigation is indeed continuing and will involve anyone who comes to its notice.

LABOUR RELATIONS

PROCLAMATION OF PART I OF PARLIAMENTARY EMPLOYMENT AND STAFF RELATIONS ACT

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Deputy Prime Minister and Government House Leader and concerns the status of Bill C-45 which deals with employees on Parliament Hill. Now that the Board of Internal Economy has met to discuss the status of this Bill, can the Deputy Prime Minister give us any indication of when all or parts of the Bill will finally be Gazetted?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Hon. Member will know that the Government has worked very closely with the Board of Internal Economy on this matter. I am pleased to advise the House that an agreement, with the concurrence of the Board of Internal Economy, has been reached providing that Part I of Bill C-45 will be proclaimed on December 24.

PETROLEUM PRODUCTION CAPACITY IN QUEBEC

Mr. Robert Toupin (Terrebonne): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources.

Last year the Conservative Government agreed to and actively supported the shutdown of the Montreal East Gulf refinery. After yesterday's explosion at the Petro-Canada refinery in Montreal East, what does the Government plan to do to prevent a further decline in Quebec production and still higher prices for Quebec consumers?

[English]

Mr. Jack Shields (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I would like to inform the Hon. Member that Petro-Canada has assured the Government of Canada and the Minister of Energy that there will be no disruption whatsoever in the gasoline supply resulting from the explosion.

REQUEST FOR GUARANTEES

Mr. Robert Toupin (Terrebonne): Mr. Speaker, what guarantee will the Government give to avoid a worsening of the situation which Quebecers will again end up paying for? What guarantee?

[English]

Mr. Jack Shields (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I answered the

Hon. Member's second question the first time. I want to assure him that Petro-Canada has assured the Government that there will be no disruption in gasoline supplies or production from the plant.

CITIZENSHIP COURTS

JUDGE'S ALLEGED CONDUCT

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State of Canada and is a general question concerning Citizenship Court judges. Would the Minister not agree that it is highly inappropriate for a Citizenship Court judge to ask a female applicant why she was not married and whether or not she was romantically involved with any individual? Would the Minister not agree that conduct of that kind would be grounds for the dismissal of a Citizenship Court judge?

Hon. David Crombie (Secretary of State of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I am not sure to which particular case the Hon. Member is referring. If he would like to bring that information or facts about a case which occurred in the past to me, I will investigate the matter if he will let me know about it.

DENIAL OF CITIZENSHIP APPLICATIONS—REQUEST FOR INVESTIGATION

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, specifically the question is about the case of Judge Walter. Can the Minister assure the House that during the course of this investigation he will investigate all cases of citizenship being denied by Judge Walter to determine the reasons citizenships was denied?

Hon. David Crombie (Secretary of State of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I gave assurance to the House yesterday that, because of the severity and seriousness of the allegations made, the investigation would take place immediately, and it has. The under-secretary has instructions to carry out a full investigation to make sure that he was carrying out his responsibilities properly and to deal with those allegations specifically. I still give that assurance to the House and I expect to make a statement on Friday morning.

PORTS

PRINCE RUPERT COAL PROJECT—INVOLVEMENT OF FEDNAV COMPANY

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. Since the Minister has been warned by the President and the Chairman of Ports Canada that the continued presence of FedNav in the coal port of Prince Rupert will cost Canada control of the project and as much as a thousand million dollars—that should perk up the ears of a Government looking for money—because of FedNav's veto power, will the Minister explain why no action is being taken to cut FedNav loose from this deal before it extorts any more money from Canada or the Prince Rupert coal project?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member appears to be a slow learner. I went over all of this with him several months ago. There was a pre-incorporation agreement authorized by the Liberal Government of the day, as one might expect, in October of 1981, and approved by the Treasury Board of the day in December of 1981. Under that agreement there is no obligation on the Government of Canada to exercise its call option with FedNav or any other company in the universe, in the year 2001 or at any other time. There is a put option and there is a call option, a put and a call. It neither has to be put nor called by the Government of Canada.

With respect to the directors, they owe a duty to the company. The federal government directors can veto certain decisions and the FedNav directors can veto certain decisions but all directors must act in the general interest of the company. The Hon. Member would not understand that because he does not like companies.

COMPANY'S VETO POWER

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I believe I have the entire cabinet file on this matter and I would suggest that the Minister of Transport read it. It contains no shotgun clause. FedNav maintains the veto power and Canadians stand to lose a thousand million dollars. If the Government is hungry for money, why does it not boot FedNav out since it is composed of a bunch of Liberal hacks?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman has more cabinet files than I have.

Mr. Broadbent: That's probably true.

Mr. Crosbie: Why is it that I understand the situation and he does not? Let me just explain this once more. If the Government of Canada exercises its option now, it would cost us $49 million, but if we wait until—

Mr. Fulton: You're reading that out of the newspaper. Here, I'll give you the file.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: The Chair is in a very difficult position because the Chair cannot make out who is being put and who is being called. The Chair has an announcement to make which will be of interest to all Hon. Members. I know Hon. Members will give the Chair the courtesy of hearing it.

CONSTRUCTION OF PORT-CARTIER PRISON—SAFETY OF WORKERS

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, in a hurry to speed up construction of the Port-Cartier prison so as to comply with the Prime Minister's political agenda, the Government completely forgot—believe it or not—to connect the water pipes which would have made it a lot easier to put out the fire. One hundred and thirty-seven workers could have been killed.

I should like to ask the Solicitor General whether he can explain why the most elementary fire fighting facilities were not available on the construction site. Was the Government in too much of a hurry to finish the job before the next election?

[English]

Hon. Stewart McInnes (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, usually water lines of the kind contemplated by the Hon. Member are not installed until 30 per cent or 40 per cent of the construction is completed. This is normal construction practice. Only about 30 per cent of the construction had been finished when the fire occurred.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER INSTITUTE INVESTIGATION

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, it is unacceptable that the lives of workers be in danger. In my opinion, construction should cease forthwith.

I want to ask the Solicitor General whether he will launch an inquiry on the circumstances surrounding this fire, and in addition will he assure the House that work will not resume until the usual fire prevention standards are fully implemented?

[English]

Hon. Stewart McInnes (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, an investigation has already been concluded concerning the fire and the circumstances relevant to it. We are absolutely satisfied that nothing is in jeopardy and that the construction will proceed without further difficulty.

OLD PORT OF QUEBEC

POSSIBLE ESTABLISHMENT OF UNIVERSITY OF QUEBEC HEADQUARTERS

Mr. Marcel R. Tremblay (Quebec East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State responsible for Canada Lands Company (Vieux-Port de Québec).

These days, in Quebec City, there is much speculation about the possible establishment of University of Quebec headquarters in the Vieux-Port area. Could the Minister advise the House whether this location could accommodate such an establishment?

Hon. Roch La Salle (Minister of State): Mr. Speaker, the House will be delighted to know that the Company has been responsible for investments totalling some $30 million in the Vieux-Port de Québec area over the past year. There is also the possibility, of course, that the University of Quebec Headquarters could be moved to that area. I have personally met the minister responsible, Mr. Ryan, about this. He has indicated that he was not prepared to invest between $25 million and $40 million to finance the establishment of a university, but that he would be quite receptive to a proposal which is already before the Company to integrate the presence of the University of Quebec. We hope to be able to give a positive response in that regard within the context of a proposal which is before us and which would certainly delight both the residents and the authorities of the City of Quebec.

REFUGEES

REVIEW OF REFUGEE CLAIMS

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for Immigration, to whom I delivered yesterday documentation of a scandalous situation in the administrative review of refugee claims. Last Friday two brown-skinned women from Guyana were refused landing in Canada, to which they were entitled under the regulations of the administrative review of refugee claims. Will the Minister tell the House whether that wrong decision arose from orders given by senior immigration official, Ralph Girard, to increase the proportion of refusals for political purposes, or was it dictated by prejudice against brown-skinned women from the Third World?

Hon. Gerry Weiner (Minister of State (Immigration)): Mr. Speaker, the Government, unlike the previous one which kept people inhumanely waiting for a response, put an administrative review into place. Of the 2,900 cases heard in Toronto, only 450 are of European origin. There has been a 93 per cent success rate. The critera are well established, and I am not aware of any contradictory directives which might have been given.

TRADE

FOOTWEAR INDUSTRY—INQUIRY IF GOVERNMENT WILLING TO REVERSE NOVEMBER 1985 DECISION

Mr. Alain Tardif (Richmond—Wolfe): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs and is related to the footwear industry. On November 26, 1985, the Minister for International Trade stated, and I quote:

"I have the greatest faith that those industries and the people who work in them can compete with anybody in the world", referring to footwear, especially men's footwear.

Now Statistics Canada has determined and proven right the opposite. There are many more imports, in proportions reaching up to 50 per cent, in some areas of operations. Faced with that dramatic situation, will his Department agree to reconsider his decision of November 1985 and set quotas, the only way to maintain the thousands of jobs involved in the Canadian footwear industry?

[English]

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, at the time of the announcement, which was on the recommendation of the import tribunal, it was indicated in the Minister's press statement that they expected a surge of imports in the first 12 months to 18 months. We are just finished the first 12 month period, and we are experiencing a surge. However, there is still a 23 per cent tariff on imported shoes, so there is protection to the Canadian shoe industry.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER MEET INDUSTRY REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. It concerns the Government's job elimination program in the shoe industry which has resulted in the dismissal of 140 employees at a plant in Alexandria, in my riding. That on November 25 the Minister promised in the House that he would try to arrange a meeting between the Shoe Manufacturers' Association and the Minister for International Trade. The organization has been refused a meeting four times. When will the meeting take place, or is he waiting for every single job to disappear in my riding and elsewhere before doing something?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member is being a little unfair. He knows full well that the person responsible in the Minister's office has met, as late as last week, with representatives of the Association and has explained the situation very clearly. They know the Minister is occupied with the softwood lumber situation at the present time and that she will be meeting with them in the new year. The Hon. Member knows that full well and, to try to raise it in the House now is just showboating, as usual.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

REQUEST FOR RESTORATION OF MAIL DELIVERY TO REGIONAL LINE 4 OF LAUNAY IN ABITIBI

Mr. Guy St. Julien (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister responsible for Canada Post. Since October last, rural route residents in Launay's range 4 in Abitibi have no more mail distribution. My question is this: Will Canada Post immediately reinstate that route before the Christmas season for the Abitibi area pioneers like Mr. Laroche, a farmer, Mrs. Bossé, who is turning 73 this year, and the 59 other people who are deprived of a longstanding service?

Canada Post has shown no respect for senior citizens in my area, and many people do not even own cars with which to go and get their mail several kilometers away.

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, of course I am most sensitive about the comments made by the Hon. Member. He knows very well that Canada Post's corporate plan has been tabled and referred to a committee. That committee has submitted its recommendations, and Canada Post is reviewing them in order indeed to respond in a more sensitive way to the problem of rural routes, and as soon as we have Canada Post's recommendations, we will release them to the public at large.

SALE OF UNITED STATES WHEAT TO ALGERIA

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for the Canadian Wheat Board. The Minister will be aware that during past months the United States has used its massive subsidy program to sell over 300,000 tonnes of Durum wheat in Canada's traditional market in Algeria. Now that the Americans have taken direct aim at a traditional Canadian market, has the Minister taken steps to reach Washington and present a strongly worded protest to the Americans about their predatory practices in the sale of wheat?

• (1500)

Hon. Charles Mayer (Minister of State (Canadian Wheat Board)): Mr. Speaker, the straight answer to the Hon. Member's question, which is a serious matter for us, is, yes. We have let the Americans know that we do not approve of this kind of action. We do not think it is helpful to grain prices internationally and we do not think it is going to work. As the Hon. Member knows, with the good reputation of the Canadian Wheat Board and past performance we are and will continue to maintain our share of world wheat markets.

PRESERVATION OF DURUM WHEAT MARKETS

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, since the Algerian market accounts for a large portion of our Durum sales, what specific action is the Minister taking to do something about the fact that we no longer have those sales so as to preserve our markets for Durum wheat?

Hon. Charles Mayer (Minister of State (Canadian Wheat Board)): Mr. Speaker, we regularly sell to something like 60 countries around the world. Our reputation as a supplier of very high quality product is extremely well known. The action we have taken as a country is to support fully the efforts of the Canadian Wheat Board, which is in an entirely different vein from what previous Governments did in backing away and putting in LIP programs. We have a major commitment to the industry in terms of a billion dollar payment just announced by the Prime Minister. That is a firm commitment to the agricultural industry and it is a firm indication to both customers and competitors alike that Canada is in the grain business for the long haul.

PRIME MINISTER'S FORTHCOMING VISIT TO AFRICA

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri—Westmount): I note with some trepidation that the Prime Minister is embarking on a seven-day trip to Africa in January. Could the Secretary of State of State for External Affairs relieve our anxiety about the costs of this trip by requesting the Prime Minister to pay for it from his own travel budget and practise some of that restraint so that the Secretary of State for External Affairs will not be obliged to close other embassies or other posts abroad in order to keep the Prime Minister in the style to which he has become accustomed?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I am amazed that the spokesman on foreign policy for the Official Opposition should suggest that the Prime Minister of Canada should not travel to Africa, should not carry on consultations that will allow Canada to continue the role of leadership that we have taken on the question of South Africa and, indeed, allow Canada to continue to play the role of leadership commenced under this Government in the context of la Francophonie and in terms of encouraging international economic development.

An Hon. Member: You are twisted.

Mr. Garneau: You are stupid, Joe.

ANNOUNCED CLOSURE OF EMBASSY IN FINLAND

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri—Westmount): Mr. Speaker, the Secretary of State for External Affairs sounded like the wise statesman that Maclean's magazine wrote about a few weeks ago.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Johnston: Speaking then of closing embassies, yesterday the Minister refused to tell us what plans have been made if the Finnish embassy is closed. No Government would not have some plan to have those functions carried out. Would he undertake to table the detailed plan he has so that we know what will happen to the functions now being carried out by the embassy in Finland?

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): Moscow will look after them.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the responsibilities that are now being carried out by the embassy in Finland which, because of the legacy of debt that we inherited from the former Government of which the Hon. Member was a part, we had to close down—

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): We don't believe you any more.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): —those responsibilities will be carried out through our embassy in Stockholm. There is not a detailed plan that has to be presented or tabled. I suppose I should say to the Hon. Member with regard to Maclean's magazine that, if he has a little bit of patience and waits for 14 years, perhaps his turn will come once too.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

THE CONSTITUTION

RESOLUTION OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ONTARIO

Mr. Speaker: I would like to bring to the attention of Hon. Members that a resolution has been passed in the Legislative Assembly of Ontario concerning the Canadian Constitution. That particular communication has been sent to the Speaker.

In bringing that communication to the attention of all Hon. Members I shall read out the formal parts in a moment, but I want it clearly understood that this communication from the Legislative Assembly of Ontario is by way of information and does not initiate any process within this Chamber.

I have the honour to inform the House that I have received a communication from the Hon. Hugh Edighoffer, Speaker of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, transmitting to this House a resolution adopted by the Legislative Assembly.

The motion reads:

Resolved, That this House authorizes that a Proclamation be issued by the Governor General under the Great Seal of Canada amending Section 7 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms to read as follows:

> 7. Everyone has the right to life, liberty, security of the person and enjoyment of property and the right not to be deprived thereof except in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice, and urges that the Senate and the House of Commons and the Legislative Assemblies of the other provinces do likewise.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Murphy: What about the Alberta Legislature?

Mr. Speaker: I want to inform Hon. Members that for the benefit of Hon. Members copies of the resolution are available at the Table in both official languages.

DISPOSITION OF PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS

Mr. Speaker: I wish to bring another matter to the attention of Hon. Members. I have received written notice from the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan) that, due to a prior commitment, he is unable to be present in the House Friday, December 19, 1986 to move his motion during the hour for Private Members' Business. Accordingly, I am directing the Table to drop that item of business to the bottom of the order of precedence. Since notice will thereby be removed, the hour for Private Members' Business will be suspended and, pursuant to Standing Order 39(2), the House will continue with the business before it prior to that hour until the ordinary hour of daily adjournment.

Mr. Sid Fraleigh (Lambton—Middlesex): Mr. Speaker, could you clarify a point for me? I am having some trouble in identifying just which Party the Hon. Member for Terrebonne (Mr. Toupin) was representing today? Is he an Independent, a Conservative, or a Liberal?

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, you have just indicated that I have a prior commitment that will keep me from the House on Friday when my Notice of Motion would otherwise have been debated. I would be pleased to have the record show that I am appearing that day before the Federal Electoral Boundaries Commission in Toronto.

Mr. Speaker: I should say to the Hon. Member for York Centre that I welcome his comments so that the record is accurate. I hope the Hon. Member does not think that I in any way impugned his well-known habit of hard work on behalf of his constituents.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I am sure you know that I rise again to ask that serious consideration be given to protecting the rights of private Members in this House to use Private Members' Hour which is available to them to defend, present, and debate the issues that are their concerns. By allowing the procedure to continue that was just announced, we are giving the Government an extra hour or two or three a week and are depriving backbench Members of this House of the right to have their debates as ordered. I would like to ask the Chair again to give us a decision—I know you are thinking about it—on whatever solution you have to that problem, and given the fact that my motion on the Order Paper has not yet been taken up.

Mr. Speaker: I know the Hon. Member has a very intense interest in this matter, as do other Hon. Members. The Chair will make a ruling soon.

[Translation]

Mr. Ouellet: On the same matter, Mr. Speaker, I would urge you to read a report submitted by the Hon. Member for Burlington (Mr. Kempling), Chairman of the Committee on Private Members' Business, who made a series of recommendations which should be included in the Standing Orders and which suggest a procedure likely to enable us to avoid the dilemma now facing my colleague from Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier). It has been suggested that the chairman or his deputy might be given more latitude when selecting private Members' business which can be introduced and debated during private Members' hour.

I urge you not only to read this report but also to make sure that the Government and Opposition Parties House Leaders reach an agreement to implement these recommendations next year.

Mr. Speaker: The intervention of the Hon. Member is very interesting and might be useful to the Chair!

COMMITTEE ON JUSTICE AND SOLICITOR GENERAL—CORRECTION TO GLOBE AND MAIL REPORT

Mr. Blaine A. One Andrew McIntosh writes in today's Globe and Mail concerning a call I received that:

> The clerk then confirmed that the caller identified himself—

That is absolutely incorrect and a grave injustice to an outstanding clerk. I think the record should show that.

PETITIONS

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 106, I would like to table two petitions verified by the Clerk of Petitions. The first one is signed by residents of Thunder Bay and the community of Nipigon. They are concerned about the Government's plan regarding generic drugs and call upon the House to reject the legislation.

The second petition is signed by residents of the community of Atikokan and Thunder Bay, and they too voice their concern over this measure which they believe will unfairly hurt the people whose health needs require the purchase of prescription drugs on a continuing basis.

REQUEST TO WITHDRAW TARIFF ON ENGLISH LANGUAGE BOOKS

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I rise again to try and sensitize the Government to the concerns of the reading public about the tax on reading. I have petitions from your part of the country, Vancouver, and I deposit them for your information and consideration. The petitioners are concerned that the tariff on books has had little negative effect on the U.S. publishing industry, yet penalizes Canada's consumers, book publishers, book sellers, distributors and culture. It is costing a fortune and has placed a strain on the book acquisition programs and policies of our nation's public and specialized libraries. The petitioners call upon Parliament to rescind this negative tariff which threatens irreparable harm to the Canadian book industry and compromises federal policy on cultural industries with respect to free trade negotitions.

I have been begging you, sirs, to remove this ridiculous tax on reading.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member is vigorously—

Mr. Friesen: Is it a petition or speech?

Mr. Speaker: —making a point but I must move on. The Hon. Member's petitions will of course be received.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to table petition after petition from Ottawa, Regina, British Columbia, Windsor and Saskatoon, all protesting the Government's Patent Act changes which will delay drug price decreases in this country.

REQUEST TO WITHDRAW TARIFF ON ENGLISH LANGUAGE BOOKS

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, I am also pleased to present petitions concerning tariff, levied on books, and signed by Canadians from all parts of the country.

I have petitions coming from Halifax, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. This Government should respond to the wishes of the Canadian book industry and rescind this regressive tariff.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): I am also pleased to present petitions on behalf of Canadians from Ontario, British Columbia, Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

• (1520)

[English]

All these people humbly submit that the Government of Canada has imposed a retaliatory tariff on imported books in the English language which has limited the access of Canadians to literature and information. The tariff has had little negative effect on the publishing industry of the United States yet penalizes Canada's consumers, book publishers, book sellers, book distributors and Canada's culture. Rising book prices have placed a strain on the book acquisition programs and policies of our nation's public and specialized libraries. The hundreds undersigned humbly pray and call upon Parliament to rescind this tariff which threatens irreparable harm to the Canadian book industry and compromises federal policy on cultural industries in respect to free trade negotiations.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, it is my honour and privilege to present a petition from the undersigned residents of Canada who avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your honourable House will therefore provide a remedy. The petitioners are asking the Government to reconsider the decision to proceed with changing the Patent Act which they feel will allow prescription drug prices to be significantly higher than they need be. They, therefore, are asking Parliament to reject these proposals which will increase prescription drug prices for all Canadians.

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I also have a petition which I wish to present to the House. It is from residents of Winnipeg, Manitoba. The petitioners also ask the Government to back off from its move to increase the price of drugs.

REMOVAL OF MAILBOXES BY CANADA POST

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition which has been approved by the Clerk of Petitions. It is from a number of residents of the City of Toronto who complain that, in order to cut costs, the Post Office is removing letter drop boxes from the City of Toronto. About a third of them will be removed. The loss of this large number of boxes is greatly inconveniencing residents as well as causing risk to young children and older people who may have to cross arterial roads to mail letters. Therefore, your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to ensure that Canada Post replaces these mail boxes and consults with the residents of the communities affected before removing these boxes and other services in the future.

LOW-LEVEL FLIGHTS AT ARMED FORCES BASE AT GOOSE BAY

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from residents of a number of communities in the Province of Newfoundland, including the communities of Torbay, Grand Bank and St. John's. These residents complain that the low-level flight training by NATO pilots in the region around Goose Bay, Labrador, is disrupting the life of the native people there and is also a provocative and aggressive war-fighting action which tends to endanger world peace. Therefore, the undersigned have called upon Parliament to ensure that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) will end all low-level flight training at the Goose Bay Canadian Forces Base and cease negotiations with NATO for establishment of a larger base there.

REQUEST TO WITHDRAW TARIFF ON ENGLISH LANGUAGE BOOKS

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I also have the honour to submit a petition duly authorized on behalf of a group of Canadians protesting the imposition of the retaliatory tariff on books imported from the United States which is, as my colleague has observed, a tax on reading.

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present petitions signed by citizens in Ontario and Vancouver protesting the Government's tax on reading. The petitioners point out that the retaliatory tariff on imported books in the English language hurts Canadian consumers, book publishers, book sellers and distributors rather than the publishing industry of the United States at which the measure was aimed. The petitioners request that the tariff be rescinded.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt—Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I wish to present a petion sent to me by constituents from the town of Watrous, Saskatchewan, who point out that the proposals to change the Patent Act will severely restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy necessary prescription drugs and will unfairly hurt Canadians whose health needs require the purchase of prescription drugs on an ongoing basis. It will also result in higher costs to provincial government drug plans. The petitioners therefore pray and call upon Parliament to reject these proposals which will increase prescription drug prices for all Canadians.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, there have been the usual discussions with the House Leaders of the other two Parties and I think you will find unanimous consent for the adoption of the following motion with respect to the order of business for tomorrow:

That, notwithstanding any Standing or Special Order of this House, at 3.30 o'clock p.m. on Thursday, December 18, 1986, proceedings then before the House shall be interrupted and the House shall proceed to the consideration of Private Members' Business as scheduled on that day's Notice Paper;

Provided, that in relation to the proceedings to be interrupted at 3.30 o'clock p.m., the provisions of Standing Order 11 shall apply;

That at 4.30 o'clock p.m., on that day, the House shall revert to Statements by Ministers for the purpose of the presentation of a statement by the Minister of State (Finance), and the replies thereto;

Provided, that the Minister shall lay upon the table a document in relation thereto;

That provisions of Standing Order 19(6), in relation to the extension of that day's sitting, shall not apply; and

That, immediately upon the conclusion of proceedings in relation to this statement by the Minister, Mr. Speaker shall adjourn the House until the next sitting day.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Does the Hon. Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council (Mr. Mazankowski) have the unanimous consent of the House to move his motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

REGULATIONS AND OTHER STATUTORY INSTRUMENTS

CONCURRENCE IN FIRST REPORT OF STANDING JOINT COMMITTEE

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre) moved:

That the first report of the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments, presented to the House on Tuesday, December 2, 1986, be concurred in.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I am not sure whether there have been any discussions with respect to this matter. There usually is.

Mr. Kaplan: Mr. Speaker, I raised the matter with the Parliamentary Secretary to the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Lewis) weeks ago and I am prepared to defend it.

Mr. Lewis: That is true, Mr. Speaker. This matter was raised last week, at least, and is presently being studied. We have had no notice that the Hon. Member intended to move his motion today. I will definitely undertake to see what is holding up the answers to this case and get back to the Hon. Member tomorrow.

Mr. Kaplan: Mr. Speaker, I will speak to the motion, the Government can speak against it, and then we can have a vote. I am assuming that I can now speak to the motion.

It is a very simple matter. It is a unanimous report from the Joint Standing Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments in which we basically ask for concurrence to have a quorum of four Members because we have great difficulty in attracting larger numbers of Members to our committee meetings. I would ask the House to concur in the motion.

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I am rising to speak to this motion rather unexpectedly. As I indicated to the House, the Hon. Member brought this matter to my attention. We undertook to determine from our members on the committee the reasons for the change in the quorum. We understand that these meetings have been taking place and that there are difficulties in finding a quorum on certain days. I believe we have had discussions about this at the Whip Level as well as among the House Leaders.

In this last two weeks prior to the Christmas break we are trying to proceed in a manner in which matters such as this would not be brought to the floor of the House of Commons without prior discussion among House Leaders. In fact, a House Leaders meeting has been scheduled for 3.45 p.m. this afternoon and I find myself at a bit of a loss to know why there had to be a tearing rush by the Hon. Member to bring this to a vote.

Often, committees have motions that may be unanimous and make a great deal of sense from their standpoint, but may not make sense when considered in conjunction with the activities of the rest of the House or the other two Parties. I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, that that is why we will discuss this even if it may impede the business of the day somewhat. I think it is important.

When we bring changes to the Standing Orders forward to the House, they are the subject of a great deal of discussion, along with some give and take on the wording or on issues that one Party may support and another may not. However, we try in all circumstances to come to the House with an agreement so that we can present to the House what is essentially a fait accompli. The Chair and all Members will realize that when changing House orders it is important that they be agreed upon by all Parties.

I have not had an opportunity to discuss this fully with my colleagues who sit on this Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments, nor have I had an opportunity to discuss it with the House Leaders, Deputy House Leaders and Whips of the other Parties.

Without indicating how I intend to vote on this motion, I suggest that there be further debate in order to determine if it is acceptable with the Whip of our Party, the Whips of the Opposition Parties, as well as the House Leaders. We can take into account all of the problems that impinge upon whether or not we support this motion.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the New Democratic Party, let me indicate that there have been some discussions. On December 2, 1986 the Hon. Member in fact presented the first report of the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments and, following that intervention, the Hon. Member did take time to inform the other parties of his concern regarding the difficulty in getting a quorum in order to conduct the business of that joint committee. After reflection and discussions, we felt this was in order and we have no hesitation about supporting the motion.

However, perhaps I should draw to the attention of the Hon. Member that when we are introducing motions such as this and asking for support in a matter as important as enabling the committee to function effectively, we usually receive a notification that such an initiative is being made. Perhaps that is where there is some confusion this afternoon, and nothing more than that.

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan) has raised a very important point in his motion. The House Leader for the New Democratic Party pointed out that this matter came before the chamber well before today, even well before notice was first given of the intention to move this motion. In order to move along with the business of the House, may I propose to the Government that, while I understand the desire to look at this motion in the context of other suggestions with respect to changing quorums of committees, perhaps it would be willing to accept this motion without creating a precedent for any other issues with respect to quorums of committees. I believe the Hon. Member for York Centre has proven that a real effort has been made to operate the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments, which is a very central committee, with the present quorum.

Without reflecting on any Members of the House about why they can or cannot attend the meetings of the committee, I think it has been demonstrated that the committee cannot function with its present quorum. I repeat, I think it has been demonstrated that the committee cannot function with its present quorum. I am not, nor are my colleagues, reflecting in any way on the interest of any Hon. Members of the House in the work of this committee. However, I think something which adds weight to my proposal is that the report we are debating has been signed by the co-chairman of the committee, a Conservative Member of the other place. Therefore, I would urge upon Hon. Members, particularly those Hon. Members on the Government side, to agree to this motion without prejudice to the position they may take with respect to any other issue regarding quorums and membership of committees.

I understand the desire of the Government House Leader and the Deputy Government House Leader to ensure that some problem is not being created through some inadvertence if this motion goes through. I think it has been made clear in the debate so far that there is a case for this motion being adopted. In my position as Opposition House Leader, I will say that if the motion is accepted, I would certainly not attempt, nor would my colleagues, to say it is a precedent with respect to any other issues involving size of other committees or the size of their quorum.

I conclude by once again urging the Government House Leader to consider the proposal I have just made.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the remarks of the House Leader of the Official Opposition and also the remarks of my good friend, the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis). I find this rather strange in as much as we have been playing with a number of these things, looking at the structure of committees and revising quorums, on the basis of mutual discussion and co-operation. To have this inflicted at this particular time is a bit of a surprise. I think it really takes away from the spirit we have tried to develop.

What we do here on various occasions is modify the rules and regulations to adapt to the particular proceedings before us at the time. Not having been given prior notice that this was going to be brought up today, I think is really very unbecoming.

Having said that, and having regard to the caveats expressed by the House Leader of the Liberal Party—I think he would agree that it really is not a very good way of doing business—I would prefer to have an opportunity to consult with the Hon. Members representing the Government on this particular issue as to whether or not they have any objections to the report being concurred in. Hopefully, we can bring it forth on another day. That is what I would prefer. I wonder if the Hon. Member might consider that?

Mr. Kaplan: Mr. Speaker, the committee is hoping to meet again tomorrow. We have had four meetings scheduled and at each of those four meetings of that committee, which has nine Conservative Members, two Liberals and one New Democrat, we have had either zero or just one Conservative show up and the meetings could not take place.

Our workload for those meetings has piled up. I spent hours, as did the other regular members of the committee, and the former vice-chairman, sitting beside the Government House Leader, knows that, and the meetings cannot take place because Conservative Members do not come to make up the quorum.

Here is our report. The Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) says I did not give him notice. You know, Mr. Speaker, I did give notice. At the beginning, when I asked the Parliamentary Secretary to give unanimous consent so those earlier meetings could take place, even in the absence of most of the members of the Conservative Caucus, the Parliamentary Secretary refused to give his unanimous consent. Now the Conservatives are asking me for my consent to subvert the rules which now permit me, as chairman of that committee, to have the question decided now. No thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House has heard the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion (Mr. Kaplan) agreed to.

The House resumed, from Tuesday December 16, consideration of Bill C-23, an Act to amend the Income Tax Act and a related Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs; and motions Nos. 7 and 14 (Mr. Garneau) (p. 2178-2179) and motions Nos. 8 and 15 (Mr. Cassidy) (p. 2179).

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, yes, I intend to finish what I have to say about Motion No. 7 and then proceed with Motion No. 14. The purpose of Motion No. 7 was to reduce, from seven years to three, the period during which a taxpayer who paid the minimum tax will be able to recover that payment, and my point was that if a taxpayer is given seven years to recover the minimum tax he paid in a given year, we might as well not adopt this legislation, because in the final instance, no one is going to be stupid enough to have to pay this minimum tax.

I see this as a useless complication of our tax system, since everyone should be able to recover this tax.

Mr. Speaker, Motion No. 14 concerns an equally basic aspect of the minimum tax. The tax was proposed to ensure that people who make use of tax shelters are nevertheless subject to paying a minimum of income tax. People who purchase flow-through shares, people who purchase what are referred to as MURBs in the housing sector, and people who purchase shares that are tax deductible, are all using ways to avoid paying income tax.

The minimum tax was introduced to ensure that these taxpayers pay at least 17 per cent on income computed according to a different set of rules. This income, as explained in the legislation, will include tax shelters such as flow-through shares, MURBs and other types of tax shelters, all of which are to be reincluded in the alternative minimum income for the purposes of the minimum tax. The number of exemptions is very limited and includes only basic personal exemptions, charitable donations and a few other exemptions of this kind.

What is rather surprising, however, is that among the exemptions listed by the Minister of Finance in his technical notes and which we find in the legislation, we see that the taxpayer is allowed to deduct 50 per cent of his capital gains, which means that the only tax shelter that will not be included as income for the purposes of the minimum tax is the lifetime $500,000 exemption on capital gains.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is an insult to people's intelligence to propose a minimum tax and then, first of all, allow recovery of the tax over the next seven years and second, to subtract from income otherwise taxable for the purposes of the minimum tax, the lifetime capital gains exemption.

And something strange, that lifetime exemption on capital gains, for minimum income tax purposes again, comes under the same headings as personal exemptions, student exemptions and handicapped exemptions, the deduction for medical expenses, the deduction for charitable donations, the deduction available to people who took vows of perpetual poverty, the deductions in respect of certain social benefits, the deduction for due refunds of unemployment insurance benefits, the deduction for income averaging and finally in the total deductions they will include the lifetime exemption on capital gains on the same level as charitable donations, personal exemptions and exemptions for the handicapped.

Mr. Speaker, this is not good enough in my view. And this is why we are proposing in our Motion No. 14 an amendment by which, in computing the minimum income tax, the $500,000 lifetime exemption on capital gains would be treated the same way as other tax havens like flow-through shares, or MURBs, or benefits derived from investing in certain areas of economic activity.

And the reason why we are moving this at this stage is that during the previous discussion of the Bill, on the basis of the comments made by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the Minister of State (Finance) (Mr. Hockin), everybody on the Opposition side at least and many observers also realized that for the purposes of the minimum income tax, the $500,000 lifetime exemption on capital gains should receive the same treatment as the other tax havens, but we learned at the committee stage only, when we had officials before us, that what should finally be realized was that the capital gains exemption was also to be exempt from the minimum income tax. We believed that was unacceptable, and this is why we introduced the amendment in Motions Nos. 7 and 14.

Mr. Pierre H. Vincent (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am disappointed by the motion of the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau). He simply wants to abolish the $500,000 capital gains tax exemption. That is the only purpose of his motion. Yet, Mr. Speaker, to date, this tax exemption has proved useful economically. Small businesses and business people are all happy with this tax exemption, but the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides simply wants to abolish it.

I was listening to a television program not so long ago where he was publicly rebuffed and told that he was not being serious and that the $500,000 capital gains tax exemption was a good initiative.

He is at it again today since he wants to have this tax exemption abolished.

As for the minimum tax, he criticizes the fact that the amounts which may be payable in one year because of a very high income or salary can be recovered over a period of seven years. This is petty politics, Mr. Speaker. The Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides is playing political games. I would like to give an example to explain the reason for this seven-year period. For instance, an artist might sell one, two or perhaps three paintings in one year. However, in a given year, he might be lucky enough to sell 25 and to have a very high business income for that year, but not for future years. If he has to pay the minimum tax that year, which he will have to do, this provision will be perfect to ensure that he pays his fair share of taxes.

However, what garantee is there that this same artist will not have a very low income in the next two, three of four years? The minimum tax is aimed at those who have high incomes year after year and who do not pay their fair share of taxes. Its purpose is not to tax someone who has a high income one year only.

Let us look, Mr. Speaker, at a young man from your constituency who has the good luck to sign a good hockey contract. He has a good income. However, in following years, either he is not considered to be a future hockey star or he has an accident which prevents him from playing. His career was in hockey. It is true that he had a high income in 1986, but in 1987, 1988 and 1989, he will no longer have any income, but he would be taxed at a higher rate than other people.

Mr. Speaker, I think that we have to be realistic and this is why we set a period of seven years to adjust the tax rates of all taxpayers so that no one will be penalized compared with others. This is simply fair to all Canadian taxpayers and this is what we are doing with the Income Tax Act . . . I hear a Member on the other side laugh. Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, they do not always understand.

Mr. Cassidy: A justice for the rich.

Mr. Vincent: Mr. Speaker, when the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) introduced the minimum tax a year ago—I remember it clearly, I was here—his Leader rose in the House to congratulate us; now, one year later, he is laughing.

Mr. Cassidy: In principle, but not in practice.

Mr. Vincent: One year later, Mr. Speaker, it is no longer good. It changes every day. They say that in the political world, one day is quite a long life. I realize now that for NDP Members, one year is a very, very long time, that policies and ideas change.

Mr. Cassidy: This is not a true minimum tax.

Mr. Vincent: It is a minimum tax, Mr. Speaker, and his Leader supported it.

Mr. Cassidy: No. Not at all!

Mr. Vincent: All of this to say that this is the purpose of the legislation, and I respectfully submit that the two motions should be lost.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I certainly remember that my Leader, the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent) had supported the principle of a minimum tax which had been introduced by the Government in its last year Budget. But what is significant is that because of the pressure from the New Democratic Party, the Conservatives have finally accepted to have a minimum income tax. But in reality, Mr. Speaker, it is not a minimum income tax but simply an advance tax which will be excused in the future, which means that it will be simply a tax pre-payment, an advance payment of the tax and not at all a real minimum tax.

What we are really faced with is a situation where high income people earning over $100,000 or $200,000 are not paying any income tax at all. Justice for low income earners and ordinary people who have to pay income tax year after year demands that rich people who have all kinds of benefits, who have legal counsels, real estate brokers and accountants at their service should not be able to avail themselves of all the loopholes in the tax system to avoid paying taxes.

This is the problem which the Parliamentary Secretary does not appear to understand. People who earn $250,000 a year are paying no tax at all while people who work as bank clerks, truck drivers and secretaries who earn $12,000 to $20,000 per year are paying a substantial portion of their incomes in tax. This is what we sought to have fixed by insisting that there be a minimum tax.

I remember the debate on television during the course of the 1984 election campaign. It was not the Progressive Conservatives who proposed a minimum tax. Nor was it the Liberals who proposed a minimum tax. It was the NDP. We proposed it and, finally, the other two Parties decided that they had better come on board. We now see their true stripes. The finance critic for the Liberal Party says that this is such a messy tax we might as well not have it at all. His Party really does not want there to be a minimum tax. The Government wants people to think that there is a minimum tax. But, in practice, because of the seven-year carry forward and because there are extra loopholes built into this minimum tax, it is not a minimum tax at all.

That is the reason why, Mr. Speaker, we introduced motions to delete the sections dealing with the minimum tax as proposed by the Government. We do not want to do away with the minimum income tax, but to give the Government a chance to reintroduce a really effective tax, a real minimum income tax.

Mr. Speaker, the Parliamentary Secretary did not mention people earning around $100,000 a year, for example. To start with, half of their capital gains would be exempt. Second, they would be able to take advantage of personal exemptions. Third, they are going to be entitled to a $40,000 deduction. To recapitulate, someone with a family, having an income of $100,000 a year and able to use all the loopholes to escape paying any normal income tax, would not pay 17 per cent in minimum income tax, but may be about half that amount, that is to say a minimum tax of $5,000, $6,000, $7,000 depending on the proportion coming from capital gains. But even that small amount is not really a tax, it is a deposit against any normal taxes the taxpayer might have to pay during the next seven years. In effect, Mr. Speaker, the only benefit for Treasury Board, for Revenue Canada, will be to receive $7,000 or $8,000 in 1987, for example, rather than in 1988, 1989 or 1994. That is the only result of this measure.

[English]

That is not enough.

In the United States, that bastion of capitalism, tax reform proposals have been put forward by the Reagan administration, an administration which is certainly not a friend of this Party, nor are we are friend of it. These proposals provide for a carry-forward of a minimum tax only in cases where it is judged that there has been a genuine tax deferred. For example, a corporation—and there is a corporate minimum tax in the United States—which defers tax by means of accelerated write-offs will in fact be able to take a tax credit for the minimum tax it pays in order that it can then pay off the tax that comes due later when the deferred tax becomes payable. However, if a tax is forgone in this country because of the tax-free exemption on capital gains, there is no such carry-forward at all. The American legislation, therefore, does not allow for three years of carry-forward as proposed by the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau), but for no carry-forward at all where there is a total exemption from tax in the regular tax system. It seems to me that we should be looking at that kind of thing here.

According to the rules of the House, we will only vote once on each of these two motions, Nos. 8 and 15. While we propose to wipe out the seven-year carry-forward and then to review it in the context of an effective minimum tax, we will support the motion of the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides for a three-year carry-forward since it is better than the clause as it exists and it will indicate our opposition to the measures proposed by the Government.

Motion No. 15 deals with Clause 51 of the Bill. That is the clause which allows, among other things, for the deduction from the income assessed for the minimum tax of 50 per cent of capital gains on top of the regular 50 per cent exemption. In other words, while capital gains will become liable to minimum tax, they will be liable at half the rate of other income. That perpetuates the ludricous policy of the Government which allows $500,000 in capital gains to be tax-free.

The people who will benefit from the capital gains tax exemption are not ordinary taxpayers. They are people with high incomes. Perhaps 90 per cent of the benefit of that measure will go to the 5 per cent of the people who are top-income earners because they are the ones who invest and stand to make capital gains.

Capital gains on personal residences are not taxable in Canada because of the view that people will in fact roll that money forward and because one has only one principal residence at a time. Figures in today's newspaper suggested that only 17 per cent or 18 per cent of the population invests in the stock market and only a portion of that group receives any appreciable amount of capital gains. We are talking about a very small proportion of the population. Inevitably, those are the people who tend to be better educated, have better jobs and receive higher incomes. The ordinary people in my riding and the riding of Regina East, the farmers in Saskatchewan and others like that will have to pay extra taxes in order to provide a tax benefit to upper-income earners.

In addition, upper-income earners will have special privileged treatment when it comes to computing the minimum tax payable because some of their income came through the lifetime capital-gains tax exemption. These people are classed as being as worthy as people who have taken a lifetime vow of poverty and receive a special income tax exemption for that purpose. I find that ludicrous. The amendment of the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides would at least do away with that particular objectionable and offensive part of the minimum tax. We will support that proposal. If we had the chance to do so, we would vote against the entire clause on the grounds that while the Government promised a minimum tax, and while we welcome the principle of a minimum tax, we did not get it.

We in Canada will really miss what is now in place in the United States and that is a minimum corporate tax. The use of preferred-shares financing and other dodges has allowed many of the largest and most powerful financial and industrial corporations in Canada to avoid virtually all corporate income tax. If it is a good principle that individuals should not be able to avoid paying a reasonably fair share of tax through the application of an effective minimum tax on personal incomes, that should be the case with corporate incomes as well. I regret the fact that the Government has not acted on that.

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, when we are talking about the minimum tax let us not forget that the issue was raised during the 1984 election campaign by members of the New Democratic Party. The issue came up when the leaders were debating and, not to lose out on a good issue, the present Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) immediately realized that Canadians on the whole are outraged by the fact that there are individuals who earn substantial income but year after year do not pay one cent of tax. The notion of a minimum tax became quite popular and the commitment was made by the Conservative Party that if elected it would introduce a minimum tax.

Today we see what type of minimum tax the Conservatives had in mind. It is a minimum tax full of loopholes. It is a sieve. As the Chairman of the Finance Committee so aptly put it, only unsophisticated taxpayers would be caught in this net. Certainly those who know how to plan their taxes and finances will escape paying one cent under the existing proposal for minimum tax.

I have here a copy of a newsletter entitled The Tax Letter which is put out by an accounting firm. It states: "Yes, you can beat the minimum tax," and it goes on to list several ways sophisticated taxpayers with the aid of accounting firms can avoid paying any minimum tax. The suggestions are numerous. Some tax shelters are still in effect. Interest deductions, tax havens, employer RPP contributions, business or investment losses and holding companies are some of the techniques that may be used to avoid paying the minimum tax.

A wealthy individual who has succeeded over the years in not paying any tax but does not quite have his finances in order this year will be hit with the minimum tax, but the Government gives him another loophole. He can claim those deductions in future years, in fact in seven years. It amounts to a deferral of exemptions. I would point out again that it is a very ineffective minimum tax. I would be very surprised if indeed the Treasury collects any revenue under this proposal.

The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Finance pointed out that when the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) announced the minimum tax, the Leader and every Member of my Party welcomed the initiative. Certainly we understood it to be a commitment and recognition on the part of the Government that it was unfair to have Canadians earning substantial incomes year in and year out and not paying any tax at all. We welcomed that recognition, and we also took the Minister of Finance at his word when he stated the following:

> What the minimum tax does is to prevent high-income taxpayers from using the capital gains exemption, alone or in combination with other tax incentives, to avoid paying tax in any one year.

I hope the Parliamentary Secretary heard the Minister of Finance when he stated that the minimum tax would prevent individuals from using the capital gains exemption to avoid paying any tax at all.

Our amendment would put into force what the Minister of Finance promised the minimum tax would be when introduced. For the Parliamentary Secretary to defend the capital gains tax exemption in the minimum tax proposal contradicts what was promised by the Minister of Finance and what our Leader supported at that time.

When we see what the Tories mean by a minimum tax, can anyone blame us for not supporting the measure before the House? Surely everyone understands why we are not supporting that measure. Surely it is understandable to the Parliamentary Secretary and to other government Members why we are attempting to introduce some amendments to the piece of legislation, so that indeed it will become an effective minimum tax and there will be some tax justice and fairness in the country.

What about those individuals who live below the poverty line and began to pay taxes this year? I am referring to those persons who never paid taxes before. At least with a minimum tax, a sense of justice and fairness would be reintroduced into the system, and those persons earning from $50,000 to $100,000 or more per year would also pay a fair share in taxes. I urge the House to support the amendments.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question is on Motion No. 7 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

The next question is on Motion No. 14.

The Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) on a point of order.

Mr. Garneau: Mr. Speaker, I would like to have a recorded vote on Motion No. 7, and I ask you how I should proceed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Indeed there will be recorded votes after all motions have been put. This vote is simply deferred. It will probably take place this afternoon or on another day.

So the vote is now on Motion No. 8.

[English]

The next question is on Motion No. 14 standing in the name of the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 114(11), the recorded division on the proposed motion stands deferred.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I understand, according to the ruling of the Speaker, that the votes on Motions Nos. 7 and 10 have been deferred; they will be taken subsequently.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Yes. Motions Nos. 9 and 10 will be grouped for debate. An affirmative vote on Motion No. 9 will obviate the question being put on Motion No. 10, and a negative vote on Motion No. 9 will necessitate the question being put on Motion No. 10.

Hon. Stewart McInnes (for the Minister of State (Finance)) moved:

That Bill C-23 be amended in Clause 42 by striking out lines 1 to 6 at page 71 and substituting the following therefor:

(i) a person in respect of whom the individual, or his spouse referred to in paragraph (a), was the only person who claimed a deduction under section 109 for the year, or

(ii) a person (other than a person referred to in subparagraph (i)) who is a child of the individual and who was living with the individual at the end of the year.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre) moved:

Motion No. 10

That Bill C-23 be amended by deleting Clause 42.

[Translation]

Mr. Pierre H. Vincent (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, Motion No. 9 is meant to clarify the Government's intention concerning the federal sales tax child tax credit. For example, in the case of a separated or divorced couple, the way Bill C-23 was drafted when it was first introduced made it possible for both former spouses to claim the federal sales tax child tax credit.

We are moving this amendment because the intention of the Government is that the spouse who is keeping the dependent child or children should be the only one eligible for the $25 federal sales tax child credit. That is the purpose of Motion No. 9, and I urge Hon. Members to adopt it.

Mr. Speaker, I should like to comment briefly on Motion No. 10. As I said before in the House, granting a tax credit with respect to the federal sales tax is something entirely new in this field. It is an innovative approach which will make the tax system more objective. As a result of this measure a family earning less than $15,000 will be eligible for a tax credit related to items which it may have bought during the year and on which the federal sales tax may have been slightly increased.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, this is important because 75,000 Canadian families are involved, and as early as next year they will be eligible for this tax credit, $50 for adults and $25 for children.

So this is important because we now have a system where sales tax can be increased for people with higher incomes who can afford to pay, and at the same time we can protect low-income individuals and their families. My point is that we had to introduce both the increase and the sales tax credit.

Mr. Speaker, I submit, with respect, that Motion No. 9 should be approved in order to restore what the Minister of Finance intended when he brought down the Budget, which was that per spouse or per child, if you prefer, a federal sales tax credit of $25 would be available, and that the federal sales tax credit proposed in the Budget by the Minister of Finance in February 1986 be maintained. I feel this is a progressive measure that shows the Conservative Government's concern for low-income families, and at the same time opens up new possibilities for the application of the Income Tax Act and related Acts. It shows this Government is creative and is capable of thought and action. It shows that we can have a Canadian tax system that will be fair to all Canadians. That is what we have sought, and I think that up to now, Mr. Speaker, we have been successful.

I shall, if I may, quote some comments by the well known C.D. Howe Institute, Mr. Speaker, which mentioned in a recent report:

• (1620)

[English]

The Government's record in identifying priorities over the past year or so has been good. The February 1986 Budget introduced a fiscal plan to reduce the deficit and stabilize the debt ratio at below 60 per cent by the end of the decade.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the C.D. Howe Institute is known as a non-partisan group. These are people who analyze and look at what the federal Government is doing in the fiscal area, in its Budget and what it is doing for the Canadian economy and the individual provinces. I think that what it says here and what I just quoted is an accurate reflection of the mandate we received in 1984.

They go a little further, Mr. Speaker and perhaps I may quote, this is called Fiscal Responsibility and Tax Reform, and it mentions the $2.5 billion increase in the deficit announced by the Minister of Finance in September. It says here, Mr. Speaker:

[English]

In the Institute's assessment, this deviation from the target is acceptable, provided that the Government continues to demonstrate its commitment to deficit reduction in the medium term. No single deficit number is the dividing line between responsible and irresponsible fiscal management.

And it goes on like this, in that they understand the problems the Canadian Government has had to cope with in the West and the additional needs and expenditures with which it was confronted. However, Mr. Speaker, the important thing is that for the second consecutive year, we managed not to increase our spending. The increase in this year's deficit will be due, not to an increase in spending but to a drop in Government revenues. That is something, Mr. Speaker, that had not been seen in Canada in the last ten years. It is important to stress that, since we are discussing Bill C-23 that provides for most of the tax schemes which we introduced in February 1986 and which necessarily worked their way through the Canadian economy and the economies of all the provinces, of your constituency and of the beautiful constituency of Trois-Rivières which you know of course. By the way, things are going well in Trois-Rivières, we have a low 10 per cent unemployment rate. But this again is due to the concrete steps taken in the May 1985 and the February 1986 budgets.

I will conclude on this Mr. Speaker, by urging the House to pass Motion No. 9 as rapidly as possible, and to reject Motion No. 10.

[English]

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, our amendment asks for the rejection of the Government motion. In essence what the Government has done is, it has taken one thousandfold from the poor and by this measure will return a fraction. The Government is proposing a rebate to "your average family" of two parents and two children. It will return to those people $150 if they earn $15,000 or less. By the time the family earns $18,000 it will get nothing back.

You have to consider, Mr. Speaker, that since the Government came to power it has taken some $845 per year out of the pockets of your average family in increased sales and excise taxes. The Government is willing to pay back $150 to low-income groups. That is cynical to say the least. What happens to the people in the income brackets of $18,000, $19,000 and $20,000 a year, again a family of four trying to make ends meet? These people very often in this day and age are living in tremendous insecurity and desperation. Their lifestyles are not like those of us in the House of Commons. Their lifestyles are not like those people in the Finance Department. These people live in genuine economic insecurity and fear. They are the working poor. Very often they have great difficulty maintaining permanent jobs. They are often the first to lose their jobs. They are perhaps living in the the most difficult period in our history. Very often they are trying to raise families under extremely difficult situations. They have had extra tax burdens placed on them by the Government since it came to power, not only through hefty increases in sales and excise taxes but on vitamins, non-prescription drugs, chocolate bars, soft drinks and a host of other items. As well there have been changes to the Income Tax Act. The other week I heard testimony from the National Council on Welfare. It presented a graph. The line on the graph keeps going up. Starting in 1985 for the first time earnings equal to half the poverty line in Canada will be taxed. In other words, people earning half of what is considered to be the poverty line will start paying income tax. That line continues upward from 1985 to 1986 to 1987 to 1988 to 1989 to 1990 and so forth. It is true though that the Government has introduced some measures that will soften the blow to the very poor. When you deduct the sales tax credit and the marginal increase in benefits for children from those increased taxes you will find that the very poor are worse off than they were before.

The other part of the equation is the benefits that the well-to-do have received from this Government. The Financial Post of March 8, 1986, analysed the effect of the Conservative Government budgets on the $40,000, $60,000, and $150,000 income groups. The $40,000 group will end up paying marginally more, around $800, in taxes from 1984 to 1987. The $60,000 group will end up paying roughly $1,200 less in taxes in 1987 than they did in 1984. The $150,000 group will end up paying some $6,000 less. I call that obscene. There is no other word for it.

The Government tries to dress up this inequity by pointing to the $150 it will pay to a family of four. This is not only unfair, it is unjust. That is why we are asking now, as we intended in committee, that the minimum tax credit be $200 for an adult rather than $50, and $100 for a dependant, rather than $25. That is less than what the anti-poverty groups have called for. They asked that the tax credit for an adult be $400, and $200 for a child. They feel that at that level the poor will be protected from the increase in the cost of living due to these sales and excise tax increases put forward by the Government. That is also why we have no alternative but to oppose this part of the legislation. By doing so we hope to raise the awareness of the Government which has been socking it to the poor. For heaven's sake, redress the injustice in the next Budget and allow a decent tax credit for poor families.

[Translation]

Mr. Garneau: Mr. Speaker, on Motion No. 9 introduced by the Minister of State (Finance) (Mr. Hockin), which adds details to the definitions of people entitled to the income tax credit, I have no objection and I do not think it is worth the trouble discussing it at length. Indeed, the new version might be more specific and prevent interpretations that could prove costly or unfair. So, as far as Motion No. 9 is concerned, I have no objection and we will support it immediately.

As far as Motion No. 10 is concerned, I do not understand it, Mr. Speaker. I do not understand it in the sense that it proposes to remove clause 42 entirely .

I understand the objective of the mover and of the New Democratic Party, but if this motion were adopted, there would be no tax credit whatsoever to reimburse the sales tax which have been dramatically increased by the Conservative Government in the last two years. This tax has gone from 9 to 12 per cent, which is an increase of 33 per cent. It is not surprising that the Government should feel somewhat embarrassed by its harassment of low-income families and that it would want to provide a tax credit.

I agree with the mover of motion No. 10 that the tax credit as proposed is completely insufficient. As the previous speaker has just pointed out, at the meeting of the Committee on Finance when representatives of the Canadian Welfare Council came to express their views, it was clearly established that to compensate, not future increases, but those which have already been proposed and implemented by the Conservative Government, we would need a tax credit of $400 per adult, while Clause 42 of this bill only provides for tax credits of $50 per adult and $25 per child. This is totally insufficient.

This tax credit is not only insufficient, it is also embarrassing. If I were sitting to the right on the Government benches and had to vote on this measure, I would be embarrassed to propose such a thing when all organizations, including Government agencies such as Statistics Canada, have set the poverty line for a family of four in a major urban centre at $21,000 and the tax credit being proposed is only $50 per adult and $25 per child based on a maximum income of $15,000. This represents a $6,000 difference for a family of four. It is senseless. The amount is totally insufficient and I am surprised that the Hon. Member for Trois-Rivières did not say so in his comments earlier.

Mr. Speaker, we are put in a difficult position because, on the one hand, if we support motion No. 10 now before us, there will be no tax credit whatsoever. And on the other hand, if we vote against the motion, we feel we may be supporting a Government proposal that is totally inadequate. Basically, we are caught between two evils, but I believe it is still better to have a totally inadequate provision than no provision at all. And this is why we are goin to support Motion No. 9 but reject Motion No. 10, not because we agree in any way with the amounts indicated but, quite the opposite, because if we were to support Motion No. 10, we would in effect preclude all form of support, all form of help to compensate families at least in part for the dramatic tax increases that have been imposed by the Tory Government over the last two years. So we will support Motion No. 9 and reject Motion No. 10.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I would like to comment very briefly before the vote, just to say that the Government's proposal is so inadequate there is no way we could support it. The Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides said he and his party felt squeezed, and for that reason they were going to support the motion even though they saw it as totally inadequate. On this side of the House, this utter inadequacy leads us to say simply that we should scratch that clause from the legislation, in order that the Government may put in place a more adequate provision. Now, it is not the Opposition's right or privilege to propose measures that entail expenditures, and we therefore have no way of introducing a motion to put in place an adequate provision for the sales tax credit.

It is therefore one of two things: Either we support our proposal, our motion, to defeat that clause and allow the Governement to bring in another proposal, or else we tolerate an intolerable situation, as proposed by the Liberals.

Mr. Speaker, I would suggest to Hon. Members that I hope they will vote with us and reject that inadequate measure, for the main reason that if the Government intends to bring in a business transaction tax with a small compensation for low income families, it is very clear that, under that Government proposal, their idea of what is adequate and acceptable is so unacceptable that the new business transaction tax will be totally regressive.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Motion No. 9 (Mr. Hockin) agreed to.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In accordance with the ruling, an affirmative vote on Motion No. 9 obviates the question being put on Motion No. 10

Motions Nos. 11, 12, and 13 will be grouped for debate but voted on separately.

[English]

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre) moved:

Motion No. 11.

That Bill C-23, be amended by deleting Clause 43.

Motion No. 12.

That Bill C-23, be amended by deleting Clause 47.

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides) moved:

That Bill C-23, be amended in Clause 49 by striking out lines 6 to 45 at page 87 and lines 1 to 11 at page 88.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, Clauses 42 and 43 cut the corporate tax break from 46 to 43 per cent. In addition, the Government is widening, by another 1 per cent, the tax reduction for manufacturing businesses. In essence, the Government is taking a head start on its proposals for tax reform. It took significant steps to broaden the corporate tax base in the Budget of February, 1986. It did so by eliminating the 3 per cent inventory allowance deduction, by eliminating investment tax credits, and by tightening the rules on limited partnership tax shelters.

The problem is that although the Government earned a certain amount of revenue by broadening the tax base, it promptly used that revenue to cut corporate tax rates. The consequence is that when we get to tax reform in the new year, as we have been promised we will, there will be nothing in the kitty to finance other changes in taxation.

I believe most Canadians hold the view that the corporate sector has been undertaxed and that we need to consider very seriously whether corporations should not pay a greater proportion of the total federal Government tax revenues. The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary knows that that is the public perception. Polling by the Department of Finance itself has indicated that.

The share of taxes paid by corporations has fallen during the last 10 or 15 years. However, rather than trying to redress that problem, the Government and the Department of Finance have taken the view that corporate tax changes should be "revenue neutral". That means that anything gained by broadening the base should promptly be given back to the corporate sector through rate reduction. We think that is wrong. We think the Government should hold its bets with regard to the ultimate levels of corporation tax until the entire picture of tax reform is before Canadians.

Second, a number of the tax expenditures which are being eliminated were established initially to achieve certain objectives and worthy goals. Groups from all across the spectrum have concluded that the use of the tax system for that purpose is ineffective. I was on television a few months ago with the head of the Canadian Federation for Independent Business. I was most surprised to learn that he was saying much the same as I was. We had grave doubts as to whether the tax loopholes which were designed to further worthy goals were working and we felt they should be removed.

You can be darn sure, Mr. Speaker, that if the corporate sector is denied tax loopholes, it will be looking for grants, subventions, and other forms of assistance. An example is that which is happening at the GM plant in Quebec. There is talk of a substantial interest-free loan which amounts to a grant. That will not be seen through the tax system, but it will have to be paid for in one way or another. We are going to have increased amounts to pay in terms of industrial incentives.

In certain circumstances an NDP government would be prepared to look at such a policy in the context of an over-all industrial strategy. The money must come from somewhere. A revenue-neutral tax reform for corporations means that you have given away the money you may have redeployed into grants and other forms of incentives. The Government has taken the view that in broadening the base corporations should be assessed lower tax rates. Money given to the corporate sector to assist with worthy objectives through grants or other above-the-table payments will have to come from elsewhere. It will obviously have to come from either the transaction tax or income tax which is paid for by ordinary Canadian taxpayers. Once again, the Government's priorities are distorted. The effect of its giving an immediate tax cut to corporations will be to impose a larger tax burden on ordinary Canadians.

The marginal rate on corporations is now 46 per cent. The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary knows perfectly well that the effective rate on corporations is well below that, perhaps 20 or 25 per cent. My belief that if you demonstrably increase the effective rate on corporations it will be possible to cut the marginal rate was confirmed by the visit of the Finance Committee to Washington to study tax reform. However, the Government has this reversed. It is cutting the marginal rate on corporations without demonstrating that there is a substantial and effective increase in the effective rate in corporation tax.

I believe, therefore, that the Government is acting in error. A sceptic or cynic would say that while the Government cloaks itself in the mantle of tax reform, it is in fact finding a way of delivering, under the guise of a modernized tax system, a further benefit to its friends on Bay Street and St. James Street.

Briefly, Mr. Speaker, I simply want to say that the Government is acting prematurely when it reduces the corporate income tax from 46 to 43 per cent, and when it widens by another 1 per cent the tax reduction for manufacturing businesses. First of all, there is precious little indication that such tax incentives really create jobs. In addition, broadening the tax base does not in my opinion, justify a tax reduction until the Government unveils the entire picture of its tax reform.

The Government seems to think it is a good idea to have a revenue-neutral tax system for corporations, which means that if revenues are increased as a result of a broader tax base, corporate tax rates should be promptly reduced instead of considering the possibility of transfering part of the personal tax load to the corporate sector.

Mr. Speaker, we the NDP members agree with most Canadians who believe that corporations do not pay their fair share of the total tax revenues in Canada, and we think that corporations should indeed contribute more.

We also believe that instead of simply letting the Government reduce corporate tax rates we should wait to see whether or not the effective corporate tax rate will increase.

The United States reduce the marginal rate at the same time as they raise the effective rate. If we had evidence that the same thing is being done in Canada, then we might be more inclined to accept the Government proposition. But since no such evidence has been forthcoming either in committee or in the House, we will oppose these measures until such time as the Government discloses its entire tax reform and gives Parliament an opportunity to scrutinize it.

Mr. Vincent: Mr. Speaker, I was not quite sure that you were pleased to recognize me, but I should be quite prepared to yield to the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides if he is ready—

In this case, Mr. Speaker, I am grateful to the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides.

Mr. Speaker, I have just heard the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) say that he is against helping the GM plant in Quebec; on the other hand, I read recently that a great friend of his, Mr. Bob White, was fully in favour of it. I suggest, therefore, that the Hon. Member should consult his friend about this and report to us. But to return to motion no. 11 standing in his name, Mr. Speaker, when we talk about reducing the corporate tax rate, there would be at the same time a broadening of the tax base. In this connection, the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre has been fair and emphasized what we have done about this in our last Budget. However, when he talked about reducing the corporate tax rate, Mr. Speaker, we must take the entrepreneurship into account. The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre has taken the view that corporate tax changes should be "revenue neutral". I am all for that, but we should not overlook the fact that corporations in Canada should have enough of after-tax revenues to reinvest them.

The Hon. Member for Ottawa-Centre referred to our Bay Street friends. I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, that I have no friends on Bay Street, but I do have some on Desforges Street in Trois-Rivières—

Mr. Cassidy: You act as though you had friends on Bay Street.

Mr. Vincent: —and it is those people from Desforges Street, from the constituency of Trois-Rivières, from your own constituency and from the Laval-des-Rapides riding who reinvest. They are the ones responsible for the current excellent economic situation in Canada. If we want those people to reinvest, we cannot tax away all of their profits. We have to help them and this is what we are doing. The response has been excellent. It is too bad that the New Democratic Party cannot understand it. This is how it is. Our businesses must have enough money left to reinvest.

In Trois-Rivières, car dealerships are doing very well. They are expanding. Trois-Rivières dairies invested large amounts last year. I hope that they will soon be reinvesting to change their fleet of trucks. They can do that, Mr. Speaker, because they have enough money left after taxes to go on, to expand, to create new jobs, to make the economic wheels turn. Whether we are speaking about our own region, the province or the whole country, it is something that has to happen.

Some say that we should be increasing the corporate tax rates, but I think that this is a bad idea. If the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre told me that we should see to it that all companies pay their fair share of taxes, I would perhaps be more willing to discuss the matter with him. However, let him not say that we should tax businesses more. I therefore respectfully submit that motion No. 11 should be defeated.

As for motion No. 12, which would simply eliminate the manufacturing processing tax credit, I believe that the same principle applies.

In the case of motion No. 13, unfortunately, I did not have the opportunity to hear the arguments of the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides. I shall wait to hear his views, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Garneau: Mr. Speaker, I will comment more substantially on Motion No. 13 which has been regrouped for debate.

I would just like to comment briefly on the two preceding motions which would delete two clauses in the Bill.

Mr. Speaker, I agree generally with the principle of broadening the tax base to lower the effective tax rate, and I think the Government's objective in this respect should be twofold. First, it must ensure that companies pay their fair share of taxes. Easy to say, but very difficult to define.

The second point the Government will have to bear in mind when setting these tax rates is the competitive position of Canadian companies in the production of goods or services, as compared with Canada's competitors on the international markets. It is easy to say: this person or group of persons or group of companies has to pay more. However, I believe our objective must be to maintain a high level of employment, which will be difficult to achieve if Canadian companies are taxed more heavily than their American counterparts who, in many cases, are only thirty or forty kilometers away, and who, because of the free movement of goods between the United States and Canada, can easily enter the Canadian market and vice versa. So our competitive position must be maintained.

In Bill C-23, the Government has abolished exemptions and broadened the base, and this has a direct impact on business. However, reducing the tax rate over a given period is done in such a way that despite what the Hon. Member for Trois-Rivières (Mr. Vincent) said earlier, this year, Canadian businesses will pay slightly more taxes because on the one hand the base has been extended and immediately implemented and, on the other hand, rates have been reduced on a two, three or four-year period so that in the meantime, businesses will pay slightly more income tax.

Mr. Speaker, my proposal contained in Motion No.13 is aimed at striking out some lines in Clause 49 the purpose of which was to rescind several investment credits in some areas of the country. Those investment credits have been useful because they have enabled some remote areas to take advantage of investments which they would not have obtained without that help extended through the tax system for businessmen who had decided to invest in some prescribed areas, that is as set under the regulations.

At present, Section 49 will rescind for all practical purposes investment tax credits which will be solely limited to some areas such as Cape Breton and other parts of the country but in a very limited fashion. This means we will no longer have a regional development policy in Canada, since the only instrument the Government had left in place was the tax credit that is now going to be abolished by Clause 49. I am not saying that the tax credits we had in the past were the answer to all our problems. Certainly not. But at least our tax legislation provided some encouragement for businessmen and women who wanted to invest in remote areas. In its February Budget and in Bill C-23, the federal Government has submitted that these policies no longer meet the desired objectives. They are being abolished but not replaced. Not a single regional development policy has been developed by the Government for this country, not a single one, as far as our businessmen and women are aware. And now, the Government is going to destroy one more instrument without providing for a replacement.

From the very outset, when I first arrived in the House, my concern was the attitude of a Government that wanted to apply one rule and one rule only: the principle of market forces. I agree that our economic system should continue to be based on a market economy, especially since we live on the North American continent and belong to international organizations for the liberalisation of trade, and so forth, but in a country like Canada, I don't think we can envisage the harmonious economic development of this country without a regional development policy for industrial investment and for air, railway and marine transportation.

This country was built around regional development policies, and since it came to power, the Conservative Government has been steadily demolishing the regional development instruments that were in place, however imperfect they may have been and however great their shortcomings. I would agree if they had said they were going to replace them with better policies. I am willing to sit down anywhere, on any committee or here in the House, to discuss the parameters of such policies. However, I cannot agree with abolishing instruments, however imperfect they may be, if they are not replaced. If Motion No. 13 is not approved, this means that investment tax credits applicable to remote areas will be abolished, at a time when the Government's budget for regional and economic development assistance has already been cut by several hundred million dollars. The Government is on the point of abolishing various transport services because of the sacred law of the market and we shall end up with a country eroded by a lack of consistency and the absence of an economic policy to facilitate the East-West movement of goods. What we shall have instead will be a North-South movement and with free trade, there will be a multiplication factor of ten. This country of ours was built on regional development policies which were based first on railway transport and then on other tools of regional development. This might seem very simple, Mr. Speaker, but if yet another tool of regional economic development is abolished and is not replaced by anything, an economic situation will develop in Canada where there will be two or three prosperous major centres, perhaps Toronto, and up to a point, Montreal, and even then, we have to wonder about Montreal with what happened in Eastern Montreal and what is now happening in Sainte-Thérèse, and so on. Finally, there might be two or three centres of activity and all the rest will be disadvantaged peripheral regions which the Conservative Government will have abandoned by abolishing one after another all our economic development tools which, while not being perfect, have been built up over the years.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I declare the motion lost on division.

Motion No. 13 (Mr. Garneau) negatived on division.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Motions Nos. 17 and 18 will be grouped for debate. An affirmative vote on Motion No. 17 will obviate the question being put on Motion No. 18. On the other hand, a negative vote on Motion No. 17 will necessitate the question being put on Motion No. 18.

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides) moved:

Motion No. 17.

That Bill C-23, be amended in Clause 67 by striking out line 6 at page 122 and substituting the following therefor:

"180.1 (1) Every individual whose income is above the poverty line, as defined by regulation, liable to".

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre) moved:

Motion No. 18.

That Bill C-23, be amended by deleting Clause 67.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Debate on Motions Nos. 17 and 18. The Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau).

Mr. Garneau: Mr. Speaker, if we refer to debates which took place during the 1984 election campaign and to statements made by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) or the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) in the House or outside the House during debates or in answer to questions asked by newsmen before TV cameras, we remember that the two leading stars now on the national scene—the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance—had made very firm commitments concerning taxation.

Speaking of the Prime Minister, for instance, I have here a quotation from the Toronto Sun of 1984, and I will read what is reported as being the comments of the Prime Minister, which were never denied, I might add. I quote:

[English]

"Prime Minister, Brian Mulroney, says he does not favour higher personal income taxes to reduce the swelling federal deficit because Canadians are already over-taxed".

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I should think that at the time all Canadians agreed with this statement made by the present Prime Minister of Canada.

Later on, the same Prime Minister of Canada said, and this time I am quoting from the Toronto Star:

• (1710)

[English]

In The Toronto Star of June 1, 1985, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) is quoted as saying that Canadians are already over-taxed. He stated that Canadians are already paying a pretty hefty bundle for their government services and that they feel they are paying enough. He concluded by saying that that view is not without its support in government, private industry and labour circles.

I think most taxpayers and voters would have agreed, and would agree today, with the words of the Prime Minister. I could also quote the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) who said that taxes were already too high.

What this Bill does is to impose another huge increase in taxes not just directly or indirectly but through a surtax. The amazing thing is that if this Bill is adopted, for part of 1986—and I suppose it will be because of the Tory majority—and when we fill out our tax returns in 1987, we will have three surtaxes to pay. It takes a special clause in Bill C-23 to fix that. There was the 5 per cent surtax mentioned in the Budget of 1985, as well as the 10 per cent surtax. We will now have a 3 per cent surtax over and above the other two.

I say that enough is enough, particularly for those who are in financial difficulty. I refer to those who live below the poverty line as established by Statistics Canada, or any other group which has studied this matter. In committee, representatives of the National Council on Welfare explained the difficulties low income earners face. For example, they told us that the poverty line for a family of four in cities such as Montreal, Toronto, Vancouver and Winnipeg is $21,000. Everyone knows that it is not easy for a family of four to live in a large city with an income of $16,000 or $17,000 per year. Now the Government will impose an additional 3 per cent surtax on these people. In this way a family of four will have to pay $24 in 1986, because it deals with only six months of the year, and $47 more in 1987. When people fill out their income tax returns for 1986 they will realize that they have to pay $200 to $500 more in tax because of these surtaxes.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, this Bill will add a third surtax and what we would like to do, what I would ask the Government— besides, this came very close to being introduced directly in the House, because the Chair's deciding vote in Committee would have been required to defeat the motion I had proposed at that point. So I call upon Conservative Members to think this over well, as some of their colleagues did in committee. If the Government feels a 3 per cent surtax is absolutely needed, at least it should not apply to people living below the poverty line. They already find it hard enough to pay their regular taxes, without the Government slapping on them a 5 per cent tax plus another 3 per cent tax for the last six months of 1986.

I call upon Hon. Members to show compassion before the holiday season, and the Minister of State (Finance) probably is in this House. I would ask him to show some compassion for those who must live below the poverty line and to see that at least the surtax imposed by his colleague the Minister of Finance does not apply to them.

This is why the motion before the House, although we could have specified the amounts, proposes that, in order to leave some more elbow room to the Government, Clause 67 be amended so that the 3 per cent surtax cannot be charged to those who live below the poverty line, which could be established by the Government by regulation. What I have in mind is that the Government should follow the recommendations and data provided by Statistics Canada, a Government body, so that the poverty line for income tax purposes agree with Statistics Canada. But if, for different reasons, a somewhat lower level were prefered, let at least the principle prevail that people below the poverty line should not be charged that 3 per cent additional surtax that is levied by Bill C-23 under Clause 67.

[English]

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I wish to say a few words against the motion of the Hon. Member. This time of Christmas charity when we think of those less fortunate than ourselves can be no better time to raise the point raised by the Hon. Member. I wish to speak very seriously to the point he makes.

First, I would like to remind the House that over the course of the last two or three weeks people have been receiving the prepayment of the child tax credit, a meaningful amount of money. Depending on the size of the family the prepayment can be anywhere from $200 to $500. This money will help these families at this time of year.

There is also the refundable federal sales tax credit which is geared to low income Canadians. Both the prepayment of the child tax credit and the refund of the federal sales tax credit mean that we are compensating those who live below the poverty line. These are important matters. As well, there is the disability allowance which has been increased. We have also added to the qualifications for it. People who are in need in this country have been looked after through these measures.

With respect to the motion of the Hon. Member, I know that when he makes his point he seeks to find a place at which we can stop the surtax. It would be logical for him to suggest, as he has, that that place is the poverty line. The problem with his proposal is that it would create an administrative nightmare. More important, it would not be fair to those with incomes just above the poverty line to have to pay the tax and the surtax while those below the poverty line pay nothing. The poverty line is itself an arbitrary barrier.

Mr. Cassidy: So you tax the poor instead.

Mr. Hockin: If we put this motion in context with all the other budget measures for lower income Canadians that the Government has taken, we have to say that the motion cannot stand.

It is important for other reasons as well, reasons which affect all Canadians, including low income Canadians. Once again, this is a measure to decrease the deficit. It will produce revenues of $1.2 billion. That is in the interest of all Canadians. If control of the deficit helps us to come to terms with and build confidence in our economy, then that will lead to investment. Then small business and large business will be able to create jobs for Canadians. That is really what we have been producing. It is the most important way to attack the problem of poverty.

In the spirit of the Christmas season, I remind the House of these things that we are doing for low income Canadians and I must ask that the motion be defeated.

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin) has invoked the Christmas spirit. Let me lay clearly before the House the record of the Government's treatment of low income families. I will quote from the report of the National Council on Welfare which says:

Giving and Taking: the May 1985 Budget and the Poor argued that, despite the increase in the child tax credit, many poor and all middle-income families with children will receive lower net child benefits as a result of the partial indexation of family allowances and the reduction in the children's tax exemption.

The report goes on to say:

The analysis takes into account the following changes: the partial indexation of family allowances, the gradual increase in the child tax credit and the lowering and partial indexation of its turnover point, the gradual decrease in the children's tax exemption, the partial indexation of personal tax exemptions and tax brackets, the elimination of the federal income tax reduction, the raise in tax deduction limits for private pension plan and RRSP contributions, the imposition of federal surtaxes and the introduction of the refundable sales tax credit.

We do not include the $500,000 lifetime capital gains exemption or the impact of increases in federal sales and excise taxes (which affect the cost of a number of goods and services but not the disposable income of families and individuals).

Taking all that into consideration, the council has found the following:

A two-earner couple supporting two children on earnings equal to three-quarters the estimated poverty line ($16,280) will lose over $1,200—

That is over five years.

—while a family with combined spouses' earnings at the low-income line ($21,700) is behind by more than $2,100. A couple earning $25,000 loses $2,500 in disposable income.

Note that the high-income couple with $100,000 loses only $2,182—significantly less than middle-income families. In fact the family earning just $21,700 loses about the same amount of disposable income (close to $2,200) as the $100,000 family which earns five times as much.

The Minister tells us that the Conservative Government has been good to the poor. We have found that for the first time, people with incomes at half the poverty line will be paying income tax because of the tax measures of the Government. For the Minister of State for Finance to place on the record the claim that the Government's tax policies have been good and beneficial to the poor and then not to hear rebuttals to that is shameful.

The record shows that the Government has benefited well-to-do income-earners while it has put extra tax burdens on the poor. Keeping in mind the spirit of Christmas, I find it shameful that people who live on incomes of half the poverty line are being taxed for the first time by the Conservative Government. People who try to scrape out an existence with incomes of three-quarters of the poverty line will see their taxes dramatically increased as will people whose incomes are on the poverty line.

For the Government to claim that it has been fair to the poor and has given them extra tax measures is obscene. Not only has the Government cut back on the programs that helped the poor but it is extracting more money from the poor. As far as the poor people of Canada are concerned, this Government will go down in the history books as being one of the meanest Governments.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Hon. Tom Hockin (for the Minister of Finance) moved that Bill C-23, an Act to amend the Income Tax Act and a related Act, as reported (with amendments) from the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs, be concurred in.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, there have been discussions among the Parties and I believe that you would find unanimous consent to not seeing the clock for a period not to exceed 10 minutes until third reading debate has been completed, allowing three minutes for debate per Party. It is also my understanding that a recorded division will not be demanded upon third reading.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is there unanimous consent for the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Hon. Tom Hockin (for the Minister of Finance) moved that the Bill be read the third time and passed.

[Translation]

Mr. Pierre H. Vincent (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to take part in the debate on third reading of Bill C-23. As you know, Mr. Speaker, I have already had the opportunity to insist on the significance of Bill C-23 and the need to adopt it before the end of 1986 for all Canadian men and women.

In short, Mr. Speaker, the purpose of Bill C-23 is to streamline the Income Tax Act while rendering the tax system more fair and equitable for all Canadians. This legislation must be seen in the context of the economic recovery which started when the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and his Conservative team came to power on September 4, 1984. It will help Canada's economic activity, first by decreasing corporate taxe rates, and second by extending the corporate tax base. It also is aimed at establishing a minimum income tax for all Canadians with a certain level of income each year and who pay little or no income tax.

As I pointed out again this afternoon, Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the New Democratic Party had expressed his agreement when we tabled our notice to establish a minimum income tax for individuals—

Mr. Cassidy: On the principle.

Mr. Vincent: —on the principle. On the other hand, the legislation must be enacted before the end of 1986 because it also is aimed at increasing the allowable RRSP deduction from $5,500 to $7,500 a year as early as 1986. This, Mr. Speaker, is something important for all working people who want to invest more money in view of their forthcoming retirement.

There is also a social fairness aspect to Bill C-23, as you certainly have noticed it Mr. Speaker, with the sales tax credit.

In brief, Mr. Speaker, this is an excellent piece of legislation following in the wake of an excellent Budget, and I would urge the House to enact it as rapidly as possible.

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, I find it hard to understand that a Bill under which nearly $1.2 billion will be drawn from the pockets of Canadian taxpayers can be labeled a good piece of legislation. This is why we are going to oppose the Bill on third reading, without calling for a recorded vote in view of the Government majority. But we certainly are going to ask that it be carried on division.

• (1810)

[English]

This Bill will increase taxes for thousands and thousands of Canadians by more than $1 billion.

This Bill is contrary to the statements that have been made by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) during and after the 1984 election.

As a result of this Bill and Bill C-14, which was adopted on division by the House earlier this week, the Canadian taxpayers will pay an extra $1.2 billion. The total amount of new taxes for the fiscal year 1986, as a result of the 1985 Budget and the 1986 Budget, will be $6 billion.

Since the Minister is in the House, let me quote what he said on August 28, 1984. He said:

> We have no intention of raising income taxes to Canadians. What we have to do is get down government.

Mr. Gauthier: Up the taxes.

Mr. Garneau: Up the taxes and get the Canadian taxpayers down is the reality. The Minister introduced $6 billion in new taxes after he made those remarks in 1984, before the election. Of course, he was making promises in order to obtain votes.

On March 1, 1985, after the election, the Minister of Finance said on CTV Question Period:

> I don't want to increase taxes—I think we have a good deal of scope on the expenditure side to deal with the deficit problem. A tax increase, certainly a general tax increase, puts a dampening effect on the economy and I don't want to see us do that.

Since then we have seen the Budgets of May, 1985 and February, 1986, with $6 billion in new taxes. If anyone should put his seat on the line it is the Minister of Finance who made those statements before and after the election and then increased taxes by $6 billion.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I will speak to this Bill briefly because it is close to Christmas and Members want to leave the House. First, I want to talk about the process.

This Bill was initiated in the Budget of February 26, 1986. There was a Ways and Means motion in June, but the Bill did not come before the House for debate until December 8, just over one week ago. The Government cut short debate on second reading and jammed the Bill through in the committee without allowing the opportunity to hear from outside groups or organizations who may have wished to testify on the Bill.

The Bill has come back to the House and now, on third reading, we are allowed three or four minutes to speak because it is very close to Christmas. That is not a good way to deal with tax legislation. While it may be necessary to pass such legislation before the end of the year, I suggest that the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) should introduce such legislation into the House at least one or two months before the deadline, if such a deadline is necessary.

In just over two years of office the Government has raised taxes on ordinary Canadians by $1,350 per family per annum. The Government has never challenged those figures. The Minister of Finance is here but he is not challenging them.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): I challenge them.

Mr. Cassidy: Although the Government is moving toward tax reform that broadens the base and lowers the rates, Bill C-23 narrows the base with unsupportable concessions on pension contributions and increases on RRSP deductions.

Not only is there an ineffective minimum tax, the Minister, despite his promises in 1985, has slipped in a loophole with respect to capital gains so that if there is any minimum tax on capital gains it will be borne at half the rate of other forms of income.

The sales tax credit is inadequate, particularly when one considers that the Government intends to use a sales tax credit to promote its business transfer tax. Corporation taxes are being cut in advance of tax reform and, rather than placing a surtax on the rich, it has been replaced with a surtax on every taxpayer, including taxpayers who are below the poverty line.

Canadians did not vote for that kind of tax system in 1984 and that is why the Member for Terrebonne (Mr. Toupin) has joined our caucus. The people of Quebec and all Canadians voted for real change in June, 1984. They did not get it from the Conservatives but they will get it from the New Democrats, whether it is on taxation, jobs or the creation of social justice for all Canadians.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour of the motion please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion, the yeas have it.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the third time and passed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being six o'clock, the House stands adjourned until tomorrow morning at eleven o'clock, pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

The House adjourned at 6.18 p.m.

ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION

TABLING OF DRAFT BILL

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to table for consultation purposes, in both official languages, a draft Bill entitled "An Act respecting the protection of human life and health and the environment", more commonly known as the "Environmental Protection Act".

A copy of the draft Bill will be sent today to all Members of the House and of the other place.

ABORIGINAL RIGHTS

NATIVE LAND CLAIMS POLICY—STATEMENT BY MINISTER

Hon. Bill McKnight (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, today I have the pleasure to announce the culmination of one of the critical initiatives undertaken by my Ministry—a comprehensive native land claims policy. I believe it represents yet another milestone in the evolving relationship between the Government and Canada's native people.

From the beginning of our mandate we recognized the vital role which Canada's native people play. Our commitment to the establishment of a relationship built upon mutual trust and confidence remains strong. Our achievements over the past 2.5 years have been many.

We live in a period of great hope for the future of the country, and I feel that our original inhabitants must play a key role in shaping it. After all, it is in the interest of all Canadians to search for and to find an amicable arrangement whereby both native and non-native communities can agree on how we will live together in Canada.

Upon assuming office the Government was faced with a comprehensive land claims policy which was out of touch. If anything, it raised obstacles to settlements rather than contributing to them. Native people were calling for change in much the same way as Canadians had voted for change. We listened, we consulted, and today we are delivering. Now, more than ever before, we have an opportunity to complete the modern claims process in Canada through a more flexible, realistic, and responsive comprehensive land claims policy.

It has not been an easy task, and it has taken us longer to put it in place than anyone ever imagined. Still, it has been a valuable learning experience for all. It has certainly been a learning experience for me in the short six months I have spent in this office.

I am sure my predecessor, the Hon. Member for Rosedale (Mr. Crombie), would agree with that statement. After all, he started the ball rolling with the appointment of a federal task force to review the whole area of comprehensive claims. At that time the Minister was convinced that the report of the task force, headed by the very capable Murray Coolican, would provide the informed, thoughtful, and independent appraisal and recommendations we have needed for some time. The Hon. Member has certainly lived up to that billing.

Over the past several months while the report was being given a public airing, we have continued to receive innumerable representations from native groups. Frankly, I have been impressed with the importance which native leaders, the provinces, the territories, and other interested Canadians have placed on the matter. In particular I should like to pay tribute to the worth-while contribution made by the Comprehensive Claims Coalition, chaired by Joanne Barnaby. This group participated in the formulation of the policy in a reasoned and reasonable way.

In the few minutes I have, I should like to outline some of the major elements of the comprehensive native land claims policy. Today I issued a policy paper and other supporting documents which explain it in more detail. First, I affirm the Government's commitment to settling comprehensive claims through negotiations on a basis which is equitable to native people and other Canadians. Also I want to announce that the federal Government stands ready to consider two alternatives to the extinguishment of aboriginal rights through claims settlements while still obtaining certainty of rights and title to the use of lands. As we all know, the language of extinguishment has long been a concern to many native people. Any other aboriginal rights which may exist will remain unaffected by comprehensive claims agreements.

A new feature of the claims policy is the provision for the enhancement of economic development and self-government—two of the Government's cornerstones in its relationship with native people. I am pleased to announce that the policy will allow for the negotiation of a broader range of self-government matters. The negotiations will be consistent with the Government's policy on community based Indian and Inuit self-government, will respect existing constitutional principles and government practice, and will take into account any directions north of 60 toward public Government and devolution.

As we all know, the test for any self-government arrangement is its appropriateness in meeting the needs of native communities and its capacity to enhance the quality of life of individual members of the communities. I believe the policy provides for that.

The policy also contains important provisions aimed at enhancing native decision making in the area of natural resources. In this regard it is expected that settlements will recognize a particular aboriginal managerial interest in relation to environmental matters including land use, water, and wildlife.

It is particularly important to note that the federal Government stands ready to negotiate matters related to the harvesting and management of renewable resources with aboriginal groups which have made traditional use of coastal and other marine areas.

In addition, under the new policy, the federal Government is prepared to assign to aboriginal groups a percentage of the Crown's royalties derived from the extraction of resources in the entire settlement area. I should add that this option will include not only the royalties from subsurface resources, but also from non-renewable resources extracted from offshore areas that form part of the claims settlement area. In addition, we will be instituting a number of important principles and processes aimed at ensuring the more expeditious negotiation and settlement of claims. We stand on the threshold of what I hope to be many comprehensive claims settlements in the coming years, more living treaties and lasting agreements. We have the tools; all that is required is the good will and co-operation of all parties.

Many months ago, the Hon. Member for Rosedale laid the cornerstones for the Government's aboriginal policies and cemented a new and growing relationship with native people. It is upon this foundation—Indian self-government, economic development, quality of community life, and the protection of the special relationship between the federal Government and Indian people—that my colleagues and I have continued to build. My sincere hope is that we can continue travelling down this road together. I hope all Members of this House will support this policy initiative as it affects native people and all Canadians.

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, I want to begin by commending both the Minister and his predecessor for recognizing the urgent need for a new comprehensive claims policy. It was called for by the Special Committee on Indian Self-government in Canada, as the Minister mentioned. It has long been demanded by the claimant groups. It is self-evident that we need a new claims policy because so few claims have been settled. That is the case and it is to our shame.

There is a growing insistence by the territorial Governments, by those who advocate aboriginal rights, and by those who wish to proceed with developmental plans on aboriginal lands, that settlements be made and that they be made as soon as possible. I say that the guiding light for a new comprehensive claims policy certainly lies with that excellent report by Mr. Murray Coolican, known as the Coolican Report. What the Minister has announced today as a new comprehensive claims policy is not precisely, fully and exactly as contained in the Coolican Report. It is, I submit, a careful, cautious and modest step from what we had before. In other words, I acknowledge to the Minister and the House that the new comprehensive claims policy is an improvement on the past. It is progressive and a step forward.

However, the difficulty with the new claims policy, as with the old, is that it stems from a premise narrow in scope and fragile in structure, that is, that aboriginal title involves traditional use and occupancy which continues in certain respects up to the present. This so-called title as the Government sees it is an annoyance. It is a thorn in its side which must somehow be removed so that the Government of Canada can get on with its dealings and arrangements with third parties in order to advance and enhance what it describes as the public interest. I wish to assert to the House and the Minister that the premise which underlies aboriginal title is neither narrow in scope nor fragile in construction. It is broadly based and very firm and strong.

What is really in question in Canada today, what is in doubt, is the Crown's right. Where aboriginal title is being asserted and where there is no treaty or agreement in existence, there, Sir, the Crown right is in doubt. I therefore argue that the impetus to settle rests much more with the Government than with any claimant group. For us to define aboriginal title in its narrowest terms, I say to this Government as I said to the previous Government, is both arrogant and presumptuous. Some argue that aboriginal title is limited or confined only to traditional pursuits, hunting, fishing and trapping. Even in those areas Governments always seek ways to limit and control. Now, with this new policy, I suspect the attitude remains very much the same as in the past. The difference is that the Government is saying to the aboriginal claimant groups that it is prepared to be a little more generous, a little more open-handed than Governments in the past. For example, the new claims policy says that the federal Government is prepared to assign a percentage of Crown royalties from extraction of resources in the entire settlement area. I say to the Government that aboriginal title is all inclusive, not exclusive. It is not limited to traditional pursuits based solely on use and occupancy in the past. A sharing of revenues from resource development is not largesse or generosity by the Government or people of Canada. It must be part and parcel of an agreement reached through negotiation.

I therefore turn my attention to third parties and the public interest. They both fall squarely under the umbrella of Crown right and they have yet to be defined and determined. They are not at this moment, as the new policy states, legitimate. They are still indeterminate and must be clearly defined. To sum up, it is not the Government's right to determine just how benevolent it is prepared to be in the settlement of aboriginal claims. The Crown's right is in question and in doubt. It is up to the claimant groups, as much as it is up to the Government, to determine just how generous they will be with us.

I submit that all the high cards are not in our hands. The Government says it prefers negotiations to litigation. No wonder. I believe there is an underlying fear, suspicion and concern that the case for aboriginal title is exceedingly strong and if we proceed to litigation we may learn that fact in ways unacceptable to the Government of Canada. I say to the Minister that I, too, prefer negotiation, but I say to the Government: Stop pretending that you are the big guy on the block because you are not.

I turn very briefly to the question of self-government which is referred to on page nine of the policy. At first glance it seems there is a willingness on the part of the Government to negotiate aboriginal self-government within the agreement. However, I see a lure on this fish-hook. It is this. The Minister says to the aboriginal claimant groups, "Do not let yourselves become beguiled into thinking that self-government provisions are going to become constitutionally entrenched." That will not happen, he says. He is thus declaring that there will be no bottom up approach to aboriginal self-government being entrenched in the Constitution of Canada. The Constitution now allows for that to happen. The Minister says it will not happen. He is saying to the provinces that they will continue to have a very big voice and that we will only proceed by way of the top down approach. I think that has to be looked at and challenged another time.

There are other matters I wish to raise with the Minister, Sir, but you are signalling that my time is up. I just want to say that the Minister must do more to protect implementation, and on another occasion, in another forum, I will elaborate on that. In conclusion, there is goodwill and co-operation on this side of the House. We, too, want these negotiations to be settled in an equitable, fair and just way for the aboriginal claimant groups of the country.

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to rise and declare the broad agreement of my Party with the principle of the comprehensive land claims policy tabled by the Minister in Parliament this morning. At the same time, I must also state a profound dissatisfaction with what I see as the vagueness and inadequacy of the Minister's statement.

It is one year since the Coolican Report was presented to the Minister's predecessor. One year is surely too long for the production of such a document as we have seen today. It is surely too long for the sort of vague, over-all endorsement of the Coolican Report which the Minister's statement has provided. After one year the Government has at least acknowledged favourably the four main principles of the Coolican Report, those being that self-government is a major concern of the Indian and Inuit people in the claims areas, that the rights of aboriginal people should not be extinguished, that there should be aboriginal participation in resource management, and that there must be a benefit from the royalties derived from the exploitation of non-renewable resources.

Unfortunately, many aboriginal people will be somewhat disappointed and disturbed by the apparent overcoming of the concerns of the Coolican Report by the legal reservations of the Department of Justice through the framing of terminology. Nevertheless, I believe that the two alternatives given provide adequate recognition of the desire of aboriginal people not to see the formal and final extinguishment of their aboriginal rights. The Minister has clearly recognized the right of aboriginal people to stewardship over the resources of which they are and will continue to be until the time of a settlement the true owners and inheritors.

A commitment has been made in this presentation. However, it will be judged by the keeping rather than the pledging. I believe that we have seen today the removal of obstacles to the Dene, CYI and TFN claims. I am glad that by recognizing that a royalty right exists for the whole area rather than simply the retained lands, we will at last have a refutation of the maxim of John Paul Getty that the meek shall inherit the earth, but not the mineral rights thereof.

The language of the assignment of these rights is unfortunate. The language in which self-government is discussed is also unfortunate. I believe that self-government is entrenched in the Cree Naskapi Act. If that is in place for those communities, why not for the communities which will be affected by this policy?

I know that the Minister does not believe that all problems will be solved by this policy. I am glad that he has frankly acknowledged the problems of convincing the Government of British Columbia to deal fairly and realistically with the native people of that province, recognizing history and jurisprudence. The time strictures given in the policy remain to be proven. The lack of a detailed policy manual and an individual mandate for federal negotiators indicates that we have today seen only the first third of this process. The negotiation process will not be judged by what is said here today, but rather by what is done, by history. I, therefore, charge the Government to examine the record with regard to the James Bay Treaty, the Cree Naskapi Act, and to ensure that some of the problems encountered there are not encountered with settlements to be made under this new policy.

Unfortunately, there was no statement on the expansion of the short list of six claims to be negotiated at one time. There is no new commitment by the Government on the funding and resourcing of negotiations. This calls into question the negotiating process because, above all, the people of Canada and the world must see that these are genuine negotiations between nations, albeit one large and one small, which both parties are able to treat as such.

Our Party is broadly satisfied to have this policy tabled, although the criticism I have made must stand. I do not agree with the Member for Cochrane—Superior (Mr. Penner) that the Government has taken a step forward, but I do acknowledge that it has at least freed its shoes. We look to the Government to take steps forward in the future. I assure the Minister and his colleagues that we will be behind them, pushing.

COMMITTEES OF THE HOUSE

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS—SECOND REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present the second report of the Public Accounts Committee. In the April, 1985, report to the House, the committee was concerned about the failure of Treasury Board to enforce its rules and the failure of the Department of Public Works to follow them. We are still concerned with this problem. It seems to us that reasonable rules from the Treasury Board should be followed. If the rules are too rigid or out of date, then that problem should be addressed. However, we cannot see that the interests of the taxpayers are well served by having rules on paper which are ignored. This applies to, among other things, cost overruns and contract-splitting. There is a continuing problem with respect to those which needs to be addressed.

We also see a need to improve communications because client Departments do not seem to be fully aware of the cost implications of making changes after a building program has begun. We think it is important for the Department of Public Works to ensure that requirements are clearly defined before contracts or projects are approved. The committee strongly disapproves of situations such as contract-splitting where the Department of Public Works knew in advance that Treasury Board approval would be required but did not seek it.

STRIKING COMMITTEE—EIGHTH REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Scott Fennell (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present the Eighth Report of the Striking Committee.

STRIKING COMMITTEE—NINTH REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Scott Fennell (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present the Ninth Report of the Striking Committee.

If the House gives its consent, I intend to move concurrence in this report later this day.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, it is my honour and duty to present a petition on behalf of several hundred people from communities surrounding Prince Albert, including Birch Hills, North Cote, St. Louis, Canwood, and Paddockwood. The petitioners call upon the Government to look at the proposals to change the Patent Act relating to prescription drugs because those changes will increase the price of drugs to consumers and will severely restrict the ability of the average Canadian to buy prescription drugs. They call upon Parliament to reject these proposals to change the Patent Act that will increase the price of prescription drugs for Canadians.

PROTECTION OF PROPERTY RIGHTS

Mr. Rob Nicholson (Niagara Falls): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition signed by hundreds of people in the Niagara Peninsula who believe that property rights are part of our heritage and should be protected. Therefore, they call upon Parliament to bring forward amendments that would enshrine property rights in the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. With that I agree 100 per cent.

OBSERVANCE OF LORD'S DAY ACT

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present several petitions signed by 180 constituents in my riding who belong to Saint-Claude Parish and who humbly pray that the Lord's Day Act be maintained, that a weekly day of rest be observed by all citizens on the same day and that this day of rest shall continue to be on a Sunday.

PROTECTION OF PROPERTY RIGHTS

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Mr. Speaker, I have the privilege and honour to present a petition that was spearheaded by the St. Catharines and District Real Estate Board and signed by some 200 residents of St. Catharines and Niagara. They are petitioning the honourable Government to entrench in the Constitution of this country the right of its people to use and enjoy real property. I may say that it is purely coincidental that this petition follows the announcement made by the Speaker yesterday with respect to a transmission delivered to the House from the Province of Ontario.

Mr. Girve Fretz (Erie): Mr. Speaker, I have the duty and privilege to present a petition on behalf of hundreds of constituents from the Niagara Peninsula, including some from the constituency of Erie, regarding property rights. These petitioners call on the Government of Canada to address this very important issue and to entrench property rights in the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. I fully support their petition.

Mrs. Shirley Martin (Lincoln): Mr. Speaker, I also have the honour and privilege to present a petition on behalf of residents of the Niagara Peninsula as well as residents of Sudbury, Campbellton, New Brunswick, and Edmonton, Alberta. They call upon our Government to take the necessary action to entrench property rights in the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. I also support them 100 per cent.

Mr. Gerry Weiner (Minister of State (Immigration)) moved for leave to table Bill C-34, an Act to amend the Immigration Act, 1976.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Shall the Minister have leave to table the said Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: When shall the Bill be read the second time? At the next sitting of the House?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

STRIKING COMMITTEE

CONCURRENCE IN NINTH REPORT

Mr. Scott Fennell (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, if the House gives its consent, I move, seconded by Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council):

That the Ninth Report of the Striking Committee, tabled in the House today, be concurred in.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Does the Hon. Member have the unanimous consent of the House to move this motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House has read the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, there have been the usual consultations with the opposition Parties. I think you will find that there is unanimous consent to deem the Supplementary Estimates referred yesterday to the Standing Committee on Agriculture to be reported back to the House and that there is consent to call now the motion for concurrence in the Supplementary Estimates, followed by proceedings on the supply Bill through all stages this day.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BUSINESS OF SUPPLY

SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES (B), 1986-87

Hon. John Wise (for the President of the Treasury Board) moved:

That Supplementary Estimates (B) for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1987, laid upon the Table Wednesday, December 17, 1986, be concurred in.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I am appearing before the House today to seek approval of the Supplementary Estimates for the first payment under the Special Canadian Grains Program. The need for this program is clear. Canadian grain and oil seed farmers are suffering the effects of extremely low world grain prices. Low prices stem from an international subsidy war. Massive subsidies and surpluses of grain have built up in most food producing countries.

The United States and the European Economic Community are attempting to sell off their surpluses by using huge export subsidies. These unfair practices have pushed grain prices to their lowest level in real terms in about 50 years. Canada is taking advantage of every possible opportunity to restore fairness and sanity to international agricultural trade. We have made some progress, but it will be a long and difficult task.

In the meantime our grain and oil seed farmers need extra help. The stakes of the subsidy war are very high. They are too high for most other countries, including Canada, to compete. However, within our fiscal means we are coming to the aid of Canadian farmers.

Although we have introduced many special measures, including the fuel tax rebate, interest rate rebate, and the freezing of freight rates, just to name a few, we also announced on December 9 the details of the Special Canadian Grains Program which is a $1 billion program aimed at helping Canadian grain and oil seeds farmers. This assistance will cushion the impact on our farmers of the global subsidy trade war.

I ask Hon. Members to remember that it is the crop year, not the fiscal year or calendar year that is important to farmers. I have given my commitment that the full benefits of the program will be in the hands and pockets of Canadian farmers by next spring.

Today I am seeking the approval of the Supplementary Estimates covering the first payment to farmers under this program. These estimates are split into two votes; the first amount of $296.015 million is a vote under grants and contributions. Another $3.985 million will cover the administrative costs. I am sure Hon. Members will appreciate that this is a program of considerable, in fact, historic magnitude and we want the program administered properly, accurately and well.

The administrative costs include staff salaries, supplies, computer services, equipment rentals, printing and mailing costs and public information measures to ensure that farmers are aware of their entitlement and eligibility and are aware of the March 31 deadline for applications. I am seeking approval before Christmas rather than after because I want the benefits to reach farmers just as soon as possible. The speedy approval of these Estimates by the House will allow the federal Government to disburse the money to farmers beginning next month. If we were to wait until after Christmas, disbursement of the funds could not begin until well into February.

I am sure that all Hon. Members of the House would agree that farmers need cash flow help now. I, therefore, ask for their co-operation in approving these Estimates as quickly as possible in the interests and benefit of Canadian farmers across this country.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, we are pleased that the Minister has brought forward the Supplementary Estimates for at least part of the payments to be made under the Special Canadian Grains Program. The initial payment is some $300 million. We wish the Minister had brought forward the full $1 billion at this time because the money is urgently needed by Canada's grain producers in all parts of the country.

We will have a number of questions to ask when the Bill comes before the House and we are in Committee of the Whole. I was surprised that the Minister mentioned things such as the freezing of freight rates and the fuel tax rebate because he knows, of course, that the freezing of the freight rates was not really a freezing but an order by his Government to recalculate the volumes of grain to be shipped. Therefore, there is really no freezing, but just a recalculation.

Interestingly enough, the decision by the Government to order the grain transportation agencies to reduce the volumes will come back to haunt the Government because it is going to have to raise freight rates in the upcoming crop year partly because the Government ordered the Department of Transport to recalculate those volumes.

When the Minister spoke about the fuel tax rebate being cut back, he did not mention that a year ago the Government imposed a two cents per litre fuel tax on farmers, and that after being hammered by the Opposition and by farmers all last winter, the Government last May took that fuel tax off. I was surprised, therefore, that the Minister mentioned those items.

Although we are very pleased to see the Estimates come before the House, we are surprised there is no schedule showing where the funds are coming from to assist Canadian farmers. We assume the funds do not come from essential services to all Canadians. We would propose, if the Minister would only listen to us, that perhaps he table in the House today or tomorrow something to show exactly where the funds are coming from, so that in giving our unanimous support to pass these Estimates and the legislation today, we will know that the funds are not coming from essential services for all Canadians. We are certainly very insistent they do not.

The Minister talked about the trade war going on between the EEC and the United States. In fact, farmers are facing the worst financial crisis since the 1930s. Grain prices are the lowest in real terms since that time. In the last two years since this Government has come to power, the asset value of Canadian farm operations, according to a calculation by the Farm Credit Corporation, has dropped by some 19 per cent. That represents some $20 billion. If the situation continues to be as bad over the next two years as it has been over the first two years of this administration, it will mean a drop in farm asset value of some $40 billion, which will reduce it from about $115 billion, as it was in 1984, to about $75 billion. That would certainly be the most serious decline in farm asset value in the history of our country, certainly since the Great Depression of the 1930s. We will be interested when we are in Committee of the Whole to know exactly how the Government plans to cope with this monumental decrease in value. For a farmer who has 100 per cent equity in his farm, the loss of equity is not as serious as it is for those young farmers who have high debts because, of course, the loss of that asset value comes out of their equity. Literally thousands of farmers have lost their farms during the last two years because of that dramatic drop in asset and equity value.

I hope the Minister will be able to explain why he is not delaying the lifting of the Farm Credit Corporation moratorium on farm foreclosures until the final payment is made under the Special Canadian Grains Program. If the Government can delay the final payment under this Special Canadian Grains Program for two, three, four or five months, surely it can postpone the lifting of the moratorium on farm foreclosures.

It is clear to all Canadians that the Government has done extremely little for the farm debt crisis. In fact, only one program, the commodity based mortgage program, which is providing some $20 million of interest assistance this year, is provided for the farm debt crisis, and that is a paltry amount when compared to the thousands of farmers who are losing their farms.

Groups like the United Grain Growers have estimated that it would take $4 billion in deficiency payments to put the Canadian farmer on an equal footing with the United States farmer. Groups like the pool elevator groups in the Prairies have called for the Government to pay at least $2 billion or $3 billion. Therefore, the amount being offered by the Government for this program is extremely small compared to the amount in those Estimates.

I would hope that when we are in Committee of the Whole, the Minister will be able to clarify a number of other items. I do not see any provision in the Estimates to ensure that the money received by prairie farmers, which I understand is about 85 per cent, will not be counted in the calculations of the Western Grain Stabilization Fund. I hope the Minister will be able to explain that. Perhaps it is in the Bill which will be introduced, but it is not clear in the Estimates.

The average payment under this program is some $5,000. The average initial payment, therefore, at 30 per cent, is $1,500. I hope that the Minister will be able to explain how such a small payment in January or February will prevent literally thousands of farmers who are facing serious financial difficulty from entering into foreclosure situations.

The association which represents Ontario soybean producers has pointed out that the assistance it is receiving under this program gives it something in the order of 92 per cent of the average assistance from this program and under the Agricultural Stabilization Act, whereas all other producers in Ontario are receiving approximately 100 per cent of the last five years' average. I hope that issue will be something the government committee which is to be established will be able to rectify since there will be an eastern and a western committee to review such problems.

I wish to indicate our support for the concurrence motion in the Estimates with the caveats I have outlined.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt—Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a few brief comments about the proposal which is now before us which, essentially, will provide some $300 million of the $1 billion aid package to western farmers. In the Supplemenary Estimates which have been put before us, the program is called "Special Canadian Grains Program, 1986 Crop". Since this debate began, part of the Bill that goes with the Supplementary Estimates has been circulated. I would like to point out that it is not clear whether the $1 billion, when it does receive final approval by the House and is in the hands of farmers, will be treated as something separate from grains income. The fact that the Government has chosen to call it a grains program will require the Minister to provide an explanation when we come to consideration of this matter in Committee of the Whole in the event that future Governments may decide that this aid was in fact grain income which, therefore, will result in a reduction. It would be a fairly major reduction in the pay-outs to be made under the Western Grain Stabilization Act or under the Agricultural Stabilization Act in eastern Canada. So we will be asking the Minister some questions in this respect when the time comes.

Even after the $1 billion has been paid out I think we should realize that 1986 has not been a banner year for farmers. The Outlook Conference which took place in Ottawa a short while ago showed that the expected net income for farmers in 1986 will be $3.8 billion, which is an increase of 18 per cent. The fact that it is said that this is an increase of 18 per cent sounds as if farmers were doing fairly well. However, when we take this figure of $3.8 billion and put it in a historical context we realize that in 1974, just 12 years ago, farmers had a net income of just over $3.5 billion. This was at a time when the dollar bought much more than twice of what it buys in 1986. Only then can we begin to comprehend what has actually happened to net farm income.

While I am on my feet I would like to make the following explanation. I realize that members of the business press never listen to speeches on agriculture which, perhaps, explains why they report agricultural issues so poorly. However, for the benefit of those few Members who are in the House today I will make a brief explanation in the hope that they will realize when they read the press reports what the error implies. I read reports in The Globe and Mail with respect to the recent Outlook Conference at which farmers' incomes for the coming year were plotted out. One such article appeared in the business section of The Globe and Mail where one would think one would find reasonably accurate reportage. The article covers three types of farmers and shows what the coming year holds in store for them. An Alberta cow-calf operator, an Ontario mixed farmer and a typical Saskatchewan grain farmer are the three examples considered in the article. It is pointed out, for instance, that the Alberta cow-calf rancher will have a fairly good year. This fairly large ranch in Alberta will have a realized net income of $26,000. I take issue with the reporter who states that "realized net income" is code for profit. No way, Mr. Speaker. It is not code for profit.

Realized net income is net income, the amount of income that is left over to pay a managerial income to the farmer or rancher and some return on his or her investment. A net income of $26,000 on the cow-calf operation being considered here would not even cover a decent return on investment. It is not profit. It barely brings this rancher up to the average industrial wage. If we were to give him an average industrial wage, that would leave him with less than $6,000 as a return on his investment, which was probably in excess of $500,000. I wish that some of the business reporters in the country would realize what the term "realized net income" means. It means only the money that is left over after all of the expenses have been paid. It is the pool of money which pays the operator and his family their wages. It pays them for whatever fee they might have coming to them for management and it also pays them for their investment. It is a conglomeration of what private corporations would have under three headings. If this particular cow-calf operator in Alberta used corporate accounting methods, he would probably show a net loss much in excess of the $26,000 that The Globe and Mail reporter calls net profit.

I wanted to make this point because when people are reporting about this $1 billion they ought to have the right figures before they start talking about it. I think it is understood by most agricultural economists and farm managers that the $1 billion pay-out will not come out as $1 billion of net profit. A big chunk of it will go to pay off existing debts and costs that have been left unpaid and will therefore not reflect straight through the system as an additional $1 billion of net income. I think it is fairly clear that this $1 billion is an attempt to make adjustments for the hurt that has affected Canada's grain farmers as a result of the U.S. Farm Bill. This hurt has been estimated accurately by a number of groups, ranging from the United Grain Growers Limited to the Ontario Institute of Agrologists to the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool and other groups, including the National Farmers Union and the federations of agriculture, to be somewhere in the area of just over $4 billion. The U.S. Farm Bill and the war that has broken out between the Europeans and the Americans has caused Canada's agricultural community and its grain producers more than $4 billion in hurt. The Government is now attempting to ease that burden by a quarter. While it is appreciated, it does not take away the hurt.

Canadians should realize that net incomes for Saskatchewan farmers will be down considerably this year as will net incomes for farmers from other prairie provinces where grains are produced. Net incomes in Saskatchewan are predicted to be down by 27 per cent. For Manitoba, the figure is 51 per cent and for Alberta 64 per cent. These figures speak of a year that uses as its base a year that was almost a disaster. The fact that income is dropping by half is not telling all of the story. Incomes are dropping from levels that were not up to 1974-75 levels. The industry has been in difficulty for three to five years and net incomes have not been up to par for that time. We in the farming community will have to learn to accept further cut-backs even with this injection of an additional $1 billion.

We want to make certain that Canadian taxpayers who are being asked to pick up the tab for this assistance will realize just how bad the situation is. Because the Government wishes to press other business through the House in the next couple of days, I will not take too much more of the time of the House explaining the great contribution agriculture makes to the Canadian economy. I would hope that this is understood, but I realize that it is not something that is well understood by Canadians. It is not understood that agriculture is still the backbone of Canada's economy in most parts of the country and that keeping farmers on the land is important in maintaining communities and smaller cities that depend almost entirely on agricultural output.

With this $300 million which will come in this fiscal year because we are deeming the Bill to have been passed by Parliament on April 1, 1986, some nine months ago, we will attempt to pick up some of this shortfall in the marketing system. It will be an attempt to help with the inability of Canada and other exporters to bring the American and European trade war to heel.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I would like to put one point on the record. I would like to express my displeasure at the information that was contained in the package which was put out when this announcement was made a week or two ago. In particular, I would like to zero in on one particular page of charts which indicated that Canadian producers were doing better in 1985 than they were earlier. That is very misleading information for the public to receive.

There is no relationship between the amount of money farmers receive and how well they are doing. The implication that in 1987 producers will receive more money than they have ever received before is very misleading. Part of the information process used by the Government when it spends the considerable amount of money that will be spent on information about these Estimates should be used to correct the idea that even with the $1 billion, producers are doing better than they have ever done before. That idea is basically wrong. Farmers are doing much worse now than they were in the years indicated by that chart.

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, I would like to take only a couple of minutes of the time of the House because I recognize that there are several pieces of legislation to be dealt with over the next couple of days. Nevertheless, I would like to take this opportunity to bring to the attention of the House, in the hope that later the Minister will be able to respond as I know he will, the issue involving soybean producers who have released a document which has been received by some Hon. Members.

The Minister will know that in this document, the soybean producers, some of whom are located in the southern end of my riding, are trying to tell us something. The money given to producers under the deficiency payment and the aid package put together related to percentages of income for the last five years provide that corn producers will receive 101 per cent of the average of the last five years, 102 per cent for winter wheat producers, 99 per cent for oat producers, 100 per cent for barley producers but only 92 per cent for soybean producers. This group has approached a number of us about this. I know my colleague, the Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster), has raised the matter briefly. I wish to bring it to the attention of the Minister myself.

I would like to take this opportunity as well to indicate to the Minister that it would be important for us to get more specific information as to which categories of corn producers will be the recipients of some of this aid. It was not made entirely clear in the original documentation provided as to all the categories of corn producers that would benefit. In the event that there are some who are not covered, we want to know what specific commodity will be excluded. I do not wish to take any more of the time of the House but I just wish to draw this matter to your attention, Mr. Speaker, and to the attention of the Minister as well so that he may be prepared at Committee of the Whole stage to respond to some of these issues.

Motion agreed to.

POINT OF ORDER

PETITIONS—ALLEGED EXAGGERATION BY MEMBERS

Hon. Allan B. McKinnon (Victoria): Mr. Speaker, I am beginning to have some kind of a phobia about petitions, I believe. When the Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo) tabled his petition today, I noted that he said it had several hundred signatures. I have looked over the petition and it has 74 signatures, short of several hundred by a considerable number.

A few days ago, I raised the matter of the exaggerations and distortions in the presentation of petitions. You may recall, Mr. Speaker, that Mr. Speaker replied on December 11 to my point of order. He thanked me for it and said that he intended to remind Hon. Members that they are to describe only the substance of petitions when presenting them to the House and that he would continue to be diligent in reminding Hon. Members of that.

The number of signatures on a petition is easy to count. The petitions are prepared at NDP headquarters and sent out to constituencies. In those six provinces in which no NDP Member has been elected, they are sent to riding associations. The petitions are all identical. They contain 25 lines for signatures, the minimum required, and one simply need add 25 and 25 and, in this case, 24, to arrive at 74 signatures.

I would ask, Mr. Speaker, that you take this under consideration again and ask Hon. Members if they could not stop these gross exaggerations and distortions of petitions when they are presenting them. It is obviously an effort on their part to try to create a big issue out of a small one.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I will take the matter under consideration.

APPROPRIATION ACT NO. 4, 1986-87

MEASURE TO AMEND

Hon. John Wise (for Mr. de Cotret) moved that Bill C-35, an Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the Government of Canada for the financial year ending the 31st of March, 1987, be read the first time and printed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House that the Minister shall have leave to introduce the Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

• (1210)

[English]

Hon. John Wise (for the President of the Treasury Board) moved that Bill C-35, an Act for granting to her Majesty certain sums of money for the Government of Canada for the financial year ending March 31, 1987, be read the second time.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and the House went into committee thereon, Mr. Danis in the chair.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, could copies of the Bill be distributed to Hon. Members?

In addition, while distribution takes place, may I ask the Minister, whether this Bill is similar to the Bill and in the usual form in which the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret) tables his estimates?

[English]

Mr. Wise: I appreciate the inquiry from my hon. colleague. Before entering the House this morning I checked with the appropriate officials and they assured me that everything was in order for us to proceed.

On Clause 2—$300,000,000.00 granted for 1986-87

Mr. Foster: I wish to raise a few points on this Bill. I have not had a chance to read it in detail. Would the Minister clarify which clause provides that the benefits received under the Special Canadian Grains Program will be counted as income for the purpose of the calculation of payment under the Western Grain Stabilization Act?

I have two or three other points that I wish the Minister to clarify. Could he advise the committee whether there will be government expenditures not made in order to retain the fiscal framework of the Government, and that these will not be essential services to Canadians? Could the Minister clarify that?

Could the Minister also clarify when the cheques for the initial payment will be sent out, and when the cheque for the final payment will be sent out?

Could the Minister clarify whether the $3.8 million for administration covers the entire administration costs for the program, including the supplementary payment which apparently will not be made until April or May?

We also raised the question of the benefits that flow to soybean producers, which works out to be an extremely low benefit when the agricultural stabilization payment is taken into account. The estimated amounts are $7.80 per acre in deficiency payment in eastern Canada, whereas wheat producers get $32 per acre, and corn producers get $43 per acre. It seems that there is a glitch in the system and the soybean producers end up with a much lower total payment amounting to 92 per cent of the five-year average as compared to the other commodities which are roughly 100 per cent of the five-year average.

I hope that I am not burdening the Minister, but perhaps this is the most expeditious manner. I raised this matter in the House a few weeks ago with the Minister about the possibility of lifting the FCC moratorium until the final payment of some $700 million early in the new fiscal year. Is the Minister considering extending the moratorium until that time?

Mr. Wise: I will start with the Hon. Member's first question. The moneys received under this program will not be counted as income for the purpose of the calculation of the western grain stabilization payments.

I have answered the question regarding fiscal framework on a number of occasions. As the Hon. Member will know, because of the priority that we place on agriculture and because that industry is having the toughest time for 50 years, we have had to respond with millions and millions of dollars. On each and every occasion we have responded to the need, and each and every occasion has been within the fiscal framework.

The Hon. Member asks when the cheques will be in the hands of Canadian farmers. With his co-operation today, it will allow us to place cheques in the pockets of the Canadian farmers who are permit book holders in western Canada because we have that accurate up-to-date information. I was assured by officials that we have booked a slot with DSS and these cheques should be sent from Ottawa about the middle of next month.

On those farmers in eastern Canada who received ASA payments for corn, soybeans, and so on, we do have that information. At least, we have their names, addresses, and postal codes. Therefore, that will allow us to forward application forms immediately. They will be in a position to receive cheques at the next earliest date.

The only way that those farmers in eastern Canada and western Canada who do not fall into those categories can be reached is through the depositing of application forms in FCC offices, in grain offices, and in grain elevator offices across the country.

The March 31 deadline is a very important deadline. By at that time we will want to have received all of the information for the final payment. It is important that farmers be aware of that March 31 deadline in order that the information in all of the categories, commodities and grains that qualify across the country are in our hands so that we can do the final calculation with respect to an update on the hurt factor.

The delivery time of the final payment will largely depend on the farmers' ability to respond promptly and accurately. As the Hon. Member will know, oftentimes the issuing of a cheque is delayed because of inaccurate information contained in the application form. The perfect situation would be if we could have all the application forms in and they were all accurate. If that were the case, I suspect that cheques could be issued within a four week period. I am suggesting here that that would be the perfect situation, but not likely to occur.

The Hon. Member or Algoma (Mr. Foster) asked about the special entry in respect of administration, public information, and so on. He was correct; it would represent the total amount required to deliver the $1 billion package.

His other question was also raised by one of his colleagues. It concerned the questions raised and the information supplied to us within the last few days from soybean producers. It should be noted that those producers were part of the farm delegation which drafted and designed the formula. They have no criticism to make of the formula. However, we must bear in mind that the formula was a compromise of East and West and a compromise of all the self-interests of commodity groups. Indeed they should be commended or congratulated on coming together. It was very historic. They certainly came together with more accuracy, understanding, and compassion than perhaps could politicians and bureaucrats. We should recognize it and compliment them on it. In any event, they came together, and the formula included seeded acreage, productivity, value of the grain, and regional yields. When we talk about regional yields, we cannot go beyond the accurate information in our possession in respect of crop insurance. We cannot go to the individual farmer because we do not have that information. In any event, they knew it and agreed with it.

Another component was the hurt factor. We must bear in mind that the criteria must be very clear. Farmers were very strong on the point that to qualify a commodity had to be directly and detrimentally affected by the U.S. Farm Bill and the trade war between the U.S. and the EEC. If one can meet that criterion, then one is in; if not, one is out. Whatever one does, one should not try to bootleg in any other commodity which does not meet the criterion.

Another overriding fact was that it was a massive program. We were breaking new ground, and we had nothing upon which to rely. However, we will work together with a fair and equitable formula of distribution. As far as I was concerned and as far as they were concerned, we would see no particular commodity group so that we could make calculations based upon returning the greatest benefit to it. Also we would see no provincial or regional boundary so that we could make the calculation based upon, for example, an extra $1 million being received by a province or region. However, we would work together to develop a formula which included these various components. We would build them in and factor them in, not to reflect the exact bushel or exact dollar, but to reflect regional yields, prices of commodities, and so on.

They wanted us to pick the base period. In picking the base period, we picked the best yield, the best three years out of five years. I thought that was fair; they thought that was fair.

As far as price is concerned and getting back to the hurt factor, we did not have the latitude to use a five-year average because it had to be directly tied to the U.S. Farm Bill. With all the highs and lows in commodities over the last five years, four years were prior to the introduction of the U.S. Farm Bill. The ups and downs were a result of everything else other than the U.S. Farm Bill. We were pretty well restricted, not so much by choice but by necessity, in picking the price decline in the 1986 crop. We could not use a five-year average at all.

While dealing with the five year average, let me talk about the position of the soybean people in their briefing material supplied to us. Incidentally, I met with them for an hour. I would have spent a little more time with them, but the bell was ringing and I had to leave. I think they were satisfied. However, when we announced the program we said that no agricultural program would be cut and that no agricultural funding would be reduced. There was some scepticism across the country that we would take into account the $800 and some odd million paid under western grain stabilization, and that we would take into account the $50 million to $55 million—and I stand to be corrected on that amount—paid under agricultural stabilization to corn and soybean producers in the East. It was very clear from the beginning that we had to exclude those. They have nothing to do with the formula.

We must take into account the difficulty in dealing with a formula and throwing in different grains. Let us look for a moment at the Agricultural Stabilization Act, which all rural Members will know is 90 per cent of a five-year average adjusted for the cost of production. That is the ASA formula. If we take that formula and throw in corn, it triggers out at an ASA payment of $8.92 per tonne. If we take the same formula and throw in soybeans, it triggers out almost twice as high—$15.53 per tonne. Indeed that is the way it should work. Although feed grains are tied together in some respects, if we use the same formula and throw in two different grains, it will trigger two different amounts. Western grain stabilization had nothing to do with the formula whatsoever, and producers accepted that.

There are two ways in which to deal with the hurt factor. First, we could take the exact decline in the U.S. loan rate, which is known. It impacts in a certain way, with a certain pattern, on various grains under the program. We must also consider the drop in Canadian commodity prices. If we look at that line, it moves differently in certain commodities. We thought we should take a lesson from farmers. When they were faced with bigger challenges to try to incorporate, offset, balance, and equalize, they built in these factors along the way. We thought we should take a lesson from them, and we simply averaged the U.S. loan rate and the decline in Canadian commodity prices; that is what we did. In doing that, like the ASA formula, it triggered almost double. For example, we can take the Special Canadian Grains Program and throw in all these commodities. If we throw in corn, it triggers out at 34 cents per bushel. If we throw in soybeans, they trigger out at 19 cents.

I undertook to recalculate for purposes of, shall I say, reverifying that the factors used to determine the accuracy of the drop in Canadian commodity prices—not the loan rate because that is, shall I say, carved in stone although I hope it is ice and melts rapidly—or the hurt factor in other grains was the same as that applied to soybeans. You will have noticed that when we announced this program we set out final calculations. If we can utilize the time from now until the deadline of March 31 to improve the accuracy of the hurt factor, then we will attempt to do that. It may or may not change things but I think we have to satisfy ourselves on it because the farmers themselves are very strong on urgency and very high on accuracy as it relates to actual hurt. We will utilize the time we have to ensure that greater equity and fairness are built into the formula.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Chairman, I thank the Minister for his answer. Is he saying that groups like the soybean producers are free to take their case to the committee even though it appears the Minister is pretty adamant that their case does not fit the criteria? I would also like to know by what mechanism the Government is excluding this $850 million from the calculation of the western grain stabilization formula. Is there a clause in this Bill which covers that or is the Government doing it by Order in Council? I have been told that if it counted as income it could possibly cut $600 million from the western grain stabilization payment for this crop year.

As well, the Minister did not indicate whether he was prepared to extend the FCC foreclosure moratorium until the final payment is made. Can he do so now? As well, people with a permit book automatically get cheques. However, for those who have to apply, as do many in eastern Canada and some in western Canada, is there a deadline which can be well publicized to avoid late applications?

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, the Hon. Member talks about an appeal. Yes, if there is a commodity group that is not satisfied—and I doubt very much that there will be—and wants to challenge the over-all formula, the only route of appeal would be before the people who designed it, that is,the farm leaders. It is really their formula, not ours. However, I should caution that if such a request is made I am obligated to put the whole program on hold. Because the soybean people are sort of questioning how the calculation was done, I am getting a strong message from most other groups to the effect, wait a minute, hands off. If you allow an appeal for those people, you have to allow an opportunity for those who designed the formula to state their case as well. I would have to put it on hold, but I do not want to do that. I hope that is not the case.

As to the deadline, it is again March 31. I am not an expert on parliamentary procedure but I gather this legislation simply extends authority to spend the money. I see knowledgeable heads waving positively. I recall the Hon. Member mentioning this to me within the last few days. As I always do when I receive inquiries from Hon. Members opposite, I inquired in turn and was told by officials that it would not be taken into consideration as income in calculation of the western grain stabilization payment.

My friend also referred to the FCC moratorium. I told him, when we put the Farm Improvement Loans Act through the other day, that we are searching for ways and means to deal with that. With farm debt review boards still gearing up and a large backlog of applications it serves no useful purpose to dump another 300 applications on those already heavily-laden boards. We will do everything we possibly can to deal with these people on an individual basis and see if we cannot go the extra mile to work out some settlement to keep them on the land and in the business of farming.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the Minister could go into some detail on how the pay-out will be made. He referred to the pay-out in western Canada being handled through the Wheat Board accounting system. Will both pay-outs be handled in that way without the individuals being required to file an application form or will they simply get the first pay-out and be required to file an application form prior to March 31, before they get the second and much larger pay-out?

Mr. Wise: If all the information is available in that way, then at the moment I see no reason why we would have to send out an application form. I can tell the Hon. Member that we are anxious to do as much as possible with the information we have because it means two things. One, we can deliver the money faster. Two, it will reduce our administration costs. Thanks to the support offered by producer organizations and commodity groups, we will be able to meet both those requests.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Chairman, can the Minister tell us whether the elevator agents, who tend to be the people whom farmers work through, will be fully informed of the program and have application forms available if needed so they can advise their clients whether a further application form will have to be filled in in their situation?

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, the short answer to that question would be yes.

Mr. Althouse: Could the Minister tell us whether part of the administrative charges which are before us in this series of Supplementary Estimates amounting to some $3,965,000 include some financial assistance for those elevator agents whom the Minister proposes to use for administration of the program, or does he have an agreement with the various elevator companies to provide these services gratis?

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, I did not think that money from this program would be required for such purposes. Farm leaders and commodity groups have offered their services in the helpful spirit which is often found in rural Canada. I think the elevator operators will be no exception.

Mr. Althouse: Could the Minister explain to the House why the full $1 billion was not applied for under this allocation of funds? What problem does the Government have with allocating the full $1 billion rather than only $300 million?

Mr. Wise: This is as a result of a number of factors, Mr. Chairman. We have said from day one that this is a $1 billion program to be delivered within the fiscal framework. It is important that we maintain our expenditures within the fiscal framework. If we do not, we will send bad signals to the financial community throughout the world. The last thing we would want to do is to trigger off a new round of interest rate increases, because they impact on farmers perhaps more significantly than on any other sector of our economy. A rise in interest rates of 1 per cent imposes an added cost of $140 million on the farm community.

Another reason is that we have already paid out millions and millions of dollars. We have made large interim payments and record final payments. My colleague, the Minister responsible for the Canadian Wheat Board (Mr. Mayer), will be making another large interim payment.

As I have indicated before, we have calendar years and fiscal years, but from our point of view the most important is the crop year. This crop year will not end until the end of July. We will be putting $1 billion in cash, as opposed to loan guarantees or interest-free loans, in the pockets of Canadian farmers. If things go well, the entire $1 billion will be in their pockets before the end of this crop year to provide additional help in seeding the 1987 crop.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Chairman, I understand the argument for doubling the administrative charges which reduces the amount of money going into farmers' hands. It becomes a charge against the administration of the program. Making two pay-outs gives the Government the opportunity for several weeks of announcments surrounding each one. We understand that kind of rationale.

However, I asked why the Government decided it must come before the House twice for authorization. We have a special Supplementary Estimate before us now and there will be more Estimates in the new fiscal year in order to pay out the other $700 million to farmers. Most people do not understand that this is necessary to keep the international financial community at ease. I do not know whether that was the reason for the pay-outs of over $1 billion to bank investors which occurred in the last fiscal year. An additional $200 million was paid to a bank in the last few weeks. Perhaps the reason for those pay-outs was to keep the international banking community comfortable. However, I believe that the entire $1 billion could have been allocated at one time.

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, I think our rationale makes a great deal of sense. We are not interested in playing politics. If that were the case, we could have made 10 payments and 10 announcements. The amount of money being paid out and the time frame within which it is being paid out makes a lot of sense to me. The hundreds of farmers and farm groups with which I have spoken are very receptive and understanding of our rationale.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Chairman, the Minister made it quite clear that the administration costs could be carried over into the next fiscal year. I believe Clause 4 of the Bill deals with that. If the Minister is going to be so squeaky-clean about which fiscal year things come out of and can blink his eyes at the administrative costs being carried over into the next fiscal year, as our rules and practice permit, why could the full $1 billion not be approved now? The Minister could still make two pay-outs.

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, I have already answered that. The program must be delivered within the fiscal framework. We are seeking approval for only $300 million in order to ensure that the farmers know the full details of how to apply. The March 31 deadline is very important to us and should be very important to them. The public information section of this program is vital to ensure that all farmers know the full details of their eligibility in order that they can fill out application forms accurately and remit them. Only if they do that will we be able to issue the final payment of $700 million before they head to the fields with their tractors and seed drills.

Mr. Althouse: Perhaps I can turn back for a moment to the official sheet of Supplementary Estimates, Mr. Chairman. It shows that of the $3.9 million that will be spent for administrative purposes, something called "information" will cost $450,000. I presume that is the kind of advertising and information program to which the Minister alluded, to alert people to the fact that they would probably have to fill out further application forms.

Since salaries and wages have been estimated at $1.35 million, I am curious what professional and special services of more than $1.5 million might be. Could this perhaps be a cover for some money to be spent to describe in some way the benefits of the program and perhaps advertise some unofficial self-congratulatory messages on behalf of the Government of Canada? It seems to be a lot of money to be allocated for this particular fairly simple, straightforward administrative program. Will the Minister describe exactly what professional and special services are required that will cost $1.5 million for what really amounts to a two or three-month program?

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, as you know, the Estimates set maximums and quite often those maximum limits are not fully utilized. Certainly we will be looking to reduce the amount of money that is spent in delivering a program to ensure that the maximum amount of money in that program goes into the hands and pockets of Canadian farmers. That is what we do with all programs and initiatives we take.

I think we are dealing with something similar to a Budget where we project certain expenditures. This list was drawn up by my officials and I had no direct part to play in the terminologies used.

It is a new program that is international in scope. While we call it a Canadian grains and oil seeds program, because of the formula moving from marketing and involving production, there are a number of people who will qualify but probably believe they would not qualify since moving from marketing to production includes home feed grains. That is the decision of the farmers. Therefore, beef people, hog farmers and poultry people to a larger degree—if they grow their own home grain and feed it—and the country's dairy farmers will qualify.

The program has far greater scope than what the average person, whether they are on the back concession or at the street corner of a large urban centre, would probably expect. We call it the Special Canadian Grains Program, but I think many people in the livestock industry in this country probably do not realize even now that they will be eligible for some payment.

Mr. Hovdebo: Mr. Chairman, I have a question regarding the accuracy of the information. First, the chart implies that farmers are doing better than they are and I hope that when the information on this program is sent out it will deal with that. The chart reflects the kind of reaction we are getting from the non-farming community.

It is suggested that an average of $5,000 per producer will be the payment. Yet if one divides $5,000 into $1 billion, it amounts to only 200,000 producers, which I believe is out of line. I understand that there are approximately 150,000 quota books in the West. Does this mean that there are only 50,000 grain producers in the rest of Canada? I already know that this is wrong because the Ontario Wheat Board suggests there are 48,000 in Ontario.

Mr. Wise: In Ontario?

Mr. Hovdebo: Not that many?

Mr. Wise: No.

Mr. Hovdebo: In any event, I think it should be more than 200,000.

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, I believe I heard the Hon. Member for Prince Albert say that there were only 20,000 or 30,000 wheat farmers—

Mr. Hovdebo: I had a figure of 48,000.

Mr. Wise: It would not be that many because the largest grain producing group in Ontario is the Ontario corn producers, who I believe number approximately 22,000. I doubt whether there would be many more than 4,000 or 5,000 wheat farmers.

These things are not carved in stone, but we must have something upon which to calculate. The best information is sought to do the calculations, the averages and so on, and these are estimates.

Furthermore, it is rather irrelevant because the important consideration will be after the deadline when we get the applications and the figures. Only then will we know exactly how many applied and how much grain was marketed. Then we will be in a position to issue the final financial assistance.

Mr. Hovdebo: Mr. Chairman, I recognize the difficulty but I was just questioning the accuracy of the $5,000 figure because I suspect that it is not what it will be.

Will the Minister try to do something about the image that is being presented in some of the information presently being given?

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, the average is just about as irrelevant. How does one determine who is an average farmer? That can only be done with a calculator which gives figures but does not describe an average farmer. That is why we are saying that the typical farmer is the Rosetown, Saskatchewan example of a farmer receiving slightly over $9,000 and a Kent County typical farmer who, including his cropping pattern, receives almost the same as his counterpart in Rosetown, Saskatchewan.

I do not believe there is anything misleading about the chart. It shows revenue and income. People will know that cash receipts and gross income provide certain figures but that the bottom line is the net income. There is no reference to the net on the chart, as I recall it. I do not believe there is any confusion.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Chairman, perhaps in order to accommodate a faster schedule the Minister could respond to a number of my questions together. He stated earlier that he would distribute the application forms and other material but he will recognize that particularly for some farmers in eastern Canada, it will not be as easily accomplished as elsewhere. That I believe to be quite true. In the spirit of trying to make this plan work for as many people as possible, and given the time the Minister himself has indicated for a deadline for applications, I wonder if it would be possible for the Minister to identify those Hon. Members who would be interested in receiving the applications at their offices so we could take them to our constituency offices. And would the Minister consider drafting or having prepared a camera-ready sheet for our constituency mail-outs? I realize that not many Hon. Members will be interested in a camera-ready sheet, but it will be used by those Members of Parliament who represent the agriculture areas. In my view, given the importance of this issue and given the fact of what could happen if a farmer missed the deadline, and given the general willingness on the part of everyone to make this work, I think the Minister should consider having his staff prepare such a camera-ready sheet, as some Ministers do on occasion, provided it is not too partisan and something which everyone could use.

I know the Minister will give that suggestion the appropriate consideration. I would not ask to draft it for him because he may consider that partisan in another way. I hope the Minister would consider as well the circulation of the application forms to constituency offices or parliamentary offices so Members of Parliament can take them back to their ridings. These are co-operative things we can do together which will go a long way to assisting our farmers. Could the Minister respond to that suggestion and then I will raise the other issues about which I am concerned?

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, that very matter was brought to my attention just a few moments ago by my colleagues, the Hon. Member for Bruce—Grey and the Hon. Member for Lambton—Middlesex. I appreciate the request made by my colleague and I see no reason why that cannot be done.

Mr. Boudria: I am happy to hear that, Mr. Chairman. I only hope we can get that organized very shortly. The difficulty we have sometimes with camera-ready kits is that we receive them much too late and by then we have already sent out the constituency mail-out. As the Minister knows, there are only four mail-outs per year so the sooner we could get the camera-ready sheet, the better. We could time the next constituency mail-out around the end of January, which is what I am looking forward to right now, and if I could include that sheet in bilingual format, I would be grateful.

I have a few other questions for the Minister and I wonder if I could have his undivided attention for a few moments, if he does not mind so I could get some response to my questions. I wonder if the Minister could tell us how the program is going to work for the corn producers. I would like to know specifically which groups will be included and which will be excluded. The Minister and I have had some private conversations about that subject earlier and I understand his officials have looked into the matter.

Will the high moisture corn producers be included and, if so, how is it going to work? It is a kind of difficult area, or at least it is perceived that way. There are a number of cob corn producers in my constituency and practically everywhere throughout Ontario. I am sure there are some in the Minister's own riding. I would like to know whether they are included. Could he give us more detail as to who is included and who is excluded and how we are going to run the program for high moisture corn producers? Are the cob corn producers going to be covered? Would the Minister respond to those questions, please?

Mr. Wise: Yes, Mr. Chairman, all corn producers will be eligible. High moisture corn will be eligible because high moisture corn is harvested as a grain. The only thing which will be excluded is, in farmers' terms, "ensilage". To upgrade that term, perhaps we could call it silage. Using a more modern term, I suppose we could say all plant silage would be excluded. However, high moisture corn and high moisture barley are harvested as a grain and would be included.

Mr. Boudria: I did not hear specifically about cob corn, but I gather that when the Minister said "all corn producers", that would automatically be included. I see a nod which tells me that that would be the case.

I wonder if I could turn to one more issue? Since this is an appropriation Bill, I suppose we can deviate somewhat from the central issue. With respect to the corn producers, the Minister will know that a number of corn producers in Ontario are worried about the countervail on U.S. corn. There are two aspects they feel are potentially deficient. First, the Minister will know that the countervail was placed rather late. I thought it was interesting when the Minister said he was far more interested in cropping years than calendar years or any other kinds of years. I could not help but ask myself why his colleague, the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. MacKay), could not have that same concern when we in fact had that delay in putting in place the countervail on U.S. corn. While I appreciate the fact that the Minister himself is well aware that agriculture is seasonal and that he has to bear that in mind when he makes any decision, it seems to me that some of his colleagues, particularly the Minister of National Revenue, forgot abut that part of the equation not all that long ago.

The delay in placing the countervail on U.S. corn was from September 30 to, I believe, November 14. One of the difficulties we had at that time was that during the last 10 days prior to the countervail, as much corn came into the country as the previous year. I wonder if the Minister could tell us, first, if he has asked his colleague to consider the possibility, recognizing it would be difficult, of retroactively imposing a tariff on that corn. I know it is sometimes hard to trace and it would not be possible in all cases. Nevertheless, was that considered and, if so, what was the result? Second, the tariff on corn, I understand, initially only applied to grain corn but did not apply to ground products. Has there been a modification since to ensure that ground corn and other forms of corn products are also covered by the countervail so that in fact we are not giving the opportunity to an American exporter to use some other method to send it in and bypass the tariff altogether? Perhaps the Minister could respond to those questions?

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, I think the Hon. Member is unduly critical and considerably unfair to my colleague, the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. MacKay), in his comments. As he knows, the Import Tribunal is a quasi-judicial body and quite properly separate and apart from any political interference or intervention. It was a very complicated study and there was a positive determination rendered by the Import Tribunal as a preliminary determination. We will not know the final determination until February.

The Hon. Member mentioned the fact that imports rolled across the border in a very short period of time. I have had that question raised before and have inquired about it. To this point in time the information I have is that it is difficult to substantiate that claim. If the Hon. Member has some additional information which would be helpful, I would appreciate if he would supply it to me. There are observations and sometimes the observations are accurate, sometimes they are not. I would not say that it is not true. The information I have is that it cannot be substantiated, and therein lies our problem.

The question which the Hon. Member raises about the corn countervail is a matter which has been dealt with. It was dealt with retroactively to November 7, 1986, in terms of the kernel as a whole, cracked corn, crushed corn, ground corn, rolled corn, sliced corn and corn screenings. It appears that the concern in the mind of the Hon. Member has been dealt with, as usual, with great completeness and satisfaction by the Government.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Chairman, I have but one last question. The Minister answered every question except the one I asked him just a moment ago which is the following one. Why was the countervail tariff not imposed retroactively until September 30 which was the date when the original decision was supposed to have been made? As far as I am concerned that is the date of the original decision. It was considered fair game for anyone who had shipped up until that time. However, there were those who shipped in the interval between September 30 and November 14. I ask the Minister why the tariff was not imposed retroactively to September 30. That seems like the proper thing to do. It would have assisted a great many farmers since it is at a time of year when the product is sold.

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, I want to be brief because I think we have only a few moments at our disposal. The Hon. Member knows that the Import Tribunal does not report to the Minister of Agriculture but to my colleague the Minister of National Revenue. I ask the Hon. Member to make representations to him. I am sure he will receive an answer.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Chairman, I believe we can allow the other clauses to pass if we can obtain an answer from the Minister to the question I put previously. The cost of professional and special services for getting this payment out is stated in the Blue Book which we do not have before us at this time. The Minister did not tell us what particular professional and special services there are which will cost $1.54 million, which figure is almost one-half of the total administration costs. The Minister has a Department with people on staff at all times who handle pay-outs under stabilization programs. There is an administration in place which should be able to handle a great deal of the informational process which goes on. In the West there are two separate administrations, the western grain stabilization administration and the Canadian Wheat Board. We want to know why farmers will not be receiving this $1.5 million. We want to know why so much money is required for professional and special services. The Minister did not really outline what it was for in his previous attempt at an answer.

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, it is true that we have a communications branch in place, which has obviously done a good job. The message I have received from our communications people is that because of the size of this program they will need additional help and it may be of a professional nature. That is the only way I can answer the Hon. Member's question.

Mr. Althouse: Mr. Chairman, will the Minister assure us that this money will not be some type of political grant to groups which do public relations for the Conservative Party? Will the Minister assure us that this money will not be used to print a bunch of slick brochures extolling the Conservative Party but that it will be for the dissemination of straight information? Why does it cost so much to put out straight information when there are these various administrations in place in both the East and the West which are designed to carry out this function and which can do it at no extra cost?

Mr. Wise: Mr. Chairman, I made an inquiry with respect to this matter some three or four days ago. I was told that the biggest information program which is put out other than with respect to the cranking out of press releases is worth about $15,000 and more money is needed. I am sure that anything that goes out will be stamped "Government of Canada" or "Agriculture Canada". I am sure that there will be no reference to the Progressive Conservative Party or a Progressive Conservative Government.

Clause 1 agreed to.

Schedule agreed to.

Preamble agreed to.

Title agreed to.

Bill reported.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: When shall the Bill be read the third time? By leave, now?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Hon. John Wise (for the President of the Treasury Board) moved that Bill C-35, an Act for granting to her Majesty certain sums of money for the Government of Canada for the financial year ending March 31, 1987, be read the third time and passed.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the third time and passed.

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I had to delay rising until Your Honour was back in the Chair. There have been discussions among the Parties and it has been agreed that in order to conduct the very important business before the House the sitting be extended until 2 p.m.

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. As the Hon. Member has indicated, there have been such consultations. In the spirit of our usual co-operation, particularly during the festive season, our Party is pleased to concur in what the Hon. Member has just proposed.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt—Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I wish to confirm that that is our understanding of the agreement.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

CANADAIR LIMITED DIVESTITURE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Privatization)) moved that Bill C-25, an Act to authorize the divestiture of Canadair Limited and to provide for other matters in connection therewith, as reported (without amendment) from a legislative committee, be concurred in.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Privatization)) moved that the Bill be read the third time and passed.

She said: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be able to conclude our deliberations on Bill C-25. I wish to thank Hon. Members opposite for their co-operation in this respect. By passing this legislation, the sale of Canadair to Bombardier can now be concluded, which brings to eight the number of divestitures carried out by our Government.

There are a number of key elements in the sale of Canadair which I would like to re-emphasize. First, the Government believes it is sound public policy to manage Crown corporations efficiently. In the case of Canadair, state ownership had seriously handicapped the firm from keeping up with a fast-moving and technologically changing competitive aerospace industry. Therefore, the purpose of this privatization was not to solve the many problems of the past but rather to create for the company and its employees the best possible future. This legislation provides the authority to carry out the final step in returning Canadair to the private sector where it has the potential to grow as a dynamic and competitive business operation.

[Translation]

Second, when it negotiated this sale, the Government was not interested in the selling price alone. Our vision of a more brilliant future for Canadair had to consider other factors that would create maximum social and economic benefits. The sale of Canadair to Bombardier will be instrumental in doing so, in a number of ways. Certain aspects of the transaction, such as Bombardier's commitment to maintain Canadair's manufacturing facilities and its headquarters in Quebec will ensure that Canadair plays a major role in the aerospace sector in Quebec and across the country.

Furthermore, a special share issue will help increase research and development activity at Canadair, thus encouraging expansion of export markets and increasing the use of Canadian products.

Finally, the Government was impressed by Bombardier's financial discipline, management and competence on the international market, all of which have made Bombardier a leader in transportation technology, both in Canada and abroad. This alliance between Bombardier and Canadair guarantees a far better future for Canadair and its employees.

If there are any doubts about employment potential with Bombardier, let me remind Hon. Members that The Financial Post has ranked Bombardier as one of Canada's best employers in terms of productivity and job satisfaction. In sum, the purchase of Canadair by Bombardier creates a fertile environment for growth through the merging of Canadair's technology and skilled workforce with Bombardier's management expertise and international marketing experience.

We firmly believe that it is private enterprise that should be engaged in the business of designing, producing and marketing aircraft. That is why we decided to privatize Canadair. The sale of Canadair is just one example of the action the Government has taken to better manage our public assets and fully realize their economic potential.

The international market-place is becoming increasingly competitive and fast moving. This is particularly true in the aerospace sector. Canadair, in concert with Bombardier, will now be in a position to make the most of those new challenges and opportunities that are natural to an industry which thrives on change.

The sale of de Havilland to Boeing is an example of another successful privatization. De Havilland has just landed its biggest order of Dash 8 aircraft yet. In June, orders were placed by a group of Canadian carriers for 42 Dash 8 aircraft. Since then, de Havilland obtained orders and options for another 132.

Mr. Speaker, we believe that Bombardier will bring to Canadair the kind of creative management that has made it a leader in transportation development, both in this country and abroad. This should give Canadair the new direction it needs to compete effectively.

Bombardier has the necessary financial resources and experience to meet the challenge of selling a complex product on foreign markets. The merger of Canadair with Bombardier will give the Canadian aerospace industry a unique opportunity to increase research and development in this sector, to increase Canadian content and supplier competence, to increase Canadian exports and to assist Canadair's customers on all markets related to the aerospace industry.

We firmly believe that returning Canadair to the private sector is in the best interests of the Company and this country.

[English]

It has been a pleasure for me to work on this Bill, to present it, to debate it and to conclude deliberations which will ensure speedy passage of the Canadair Limited Divestiture Authorization Act. On behalf of the Government and the employees of Canadair, I thank Hon. Members for recognizing the urgency and importance of this legislation and for assisting the Government in giving Canadair the opportunity to achieve the excellence that will build its future.

[Translation]

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to take much of the time of the House this afternoon because we all want the debate on this Bill to end very quickly.

First of all, Mr. Speaker, as you know we are not necessarily against the sale of Canadair to Bombardier. We are pleased to note that the Government did not repeat the same mistakes it made in the past, particularly with respect to the sale of de Havilland and the divestiture of Canadian Arsenals. We are aware of the mistakes made in the case of de Havilland.

As to Canadian Arsenals, a number of mistakes had been made when tenders were first called, so they had to start all over again a few times. And then the other major mistake, in my opinion, is that the employees of Canadian Arsenals had practically been forgotten.

Indeed, after lengthy negotiations which led to a rather acrimonious debate in the House of Commons, the unions, the new employer and the Government finally reached an agreement at the last minute.

I do hope there will be no such problems in this case.

It seems that Canadair employees are definitely more satisfied than was the case in the sale of the other two Crown corporations—where I was involved to a certain extent—certainly more so than the employees of Canadian Arsenals who showed their discontent.

Mr. Speaker, one interesting fact should be noted.

[English]

It is nice to remember Conservative Party promises on many occasions. Perhaps I could take a moment to reflect upon a promise that was made on August 15, 1984, by the present Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). During the election campaign, while he was a member of the Opposition, he said that a Conservative Government would turn Canadair Limited and de Havilland Aircraft of Canada Limited into a separate Crown corporation. I am sure it would surprise you a great deal, Mr. Speaker, if I said that the Government has broken another promise. However, that is something for which Conservatives have been rather well known.

In the case of this promise, perhaps the moral is that it should not have been made to begin with. However, it is for the Tories to think about those kinds of things in the future and to stop promising things that they either do not intend to deliver, should not be delivering, or have no intention of delivering.

Mr. Jelinek: What hogwash.

Mr. Boudria: The amateur Minister of fitness and sport is saying hogwash, or is it the Minister of Fitness and Amateur Sport?

Mr. Jelinek: You don't know what you're talking about at any time.

Mr. Boudria: Whichever. I will not debate extensively with the amateur Minister across the way because he knows as well what promises were made.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I end my remarks by saying that, unlike other Crown corporations, Canadair is definitely not a deficit-ridden concern. Indeed I think it has been operating on a fairly sound financial basis, and we know that its projected net profits for this year are about $23.8 million, so it has to be in good financial shape.

I certainly hope that Bombardier officials—well known for their sound management, as the Minister pointed out earlier—will be able to keep Canadair operating in the black, in their own interest and in the interest of the employees who should not be forgotten in all these dealings. Too often in such cases—I gave examples a few minutes ago—Canadians who have been working for these Crown corporations for many years have been left in the dark. They were not even involved in negotiations in the past and I hope . . . I am told that the employees are much more satisfied in this case. Perhaps they are not fully satisfied, but still I hope everything will turn out all right for them, that their pension fund and working conditions will be adequately protected. There is one thing about which I am still not convinced, and I would like to know whether Bombardier company officials intend to relocate their facilities elsewhere in Quebec. We know the Minister said earlier that the Corporation was going to keep its facilities in Quebec. But even with that, there could still be some disadvantages for employees if there were to be any moves to other parts of the province.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take just a few moments, but not any longer than necessary, to talk about this issue and some of our concerns. Some of my colleagues have other concerns and they would like to express them, but they are not in a position to do so right now, since we have agreed to adopt this Bill fairly quickly. Nevertheless, I would like to take a few moments to bring these concerns to the attention of the House.

[English]

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I rise to say a few words as the debate on privatization of Canadair is wound down. I regret the haste with which we have been required to move on this Bill for obvious reasons in terms of legalities to facilitate the transfer. But there is a much greater dicussion that ought to take place, and perhaps with the Minister of State for Privatization (Mrs. McDougall) here, I would urge that she consider that, if we do move again in this direction at the eleventh hour, we do not rush debate and rush things through committee.

We are dealing with the profoundly important matter of privatization, which in my mind stems from an ideological commitment by members of the government Party to have to privatize something because it makes them feel good to privatize. There may be good reasons why certain Crown corporations should be privatized. I do not speak against the principle. But I must remind the Minister that, in spite of her best efforts, while I might not agree with what she is doing she is soldiering on with privatization.

It is interesting to note, on looking at the amount of private and public ownership in Canada today, and comparing with the situation on September 4, 1984, that there is more public ownership today than ever before. Federal public ownership is greater today than when the Conservatives took office. This is interesting in itself because of the myth which you, Mr. Speaker, know as well as I do that we are privatizing the various Crown corporations and that we are moving to less and less public ownership. In fact, by the Government's own action in taking over Petro-Canada's Gulf stations we have expanded public ownership. So that we are all perfectly clear as to exactly what has happened, as opposed to the mythology of what is happening, public ownership is actually on the increase thanks to the actions of this Government.

In a country as vast as ours with a small population we have always appreciated that there is a role for the public sector to play, whether it is in a national airline, railroad, or going back to 1821 with the construction of the Lachine Canal.

As a student of history yourself, Mr. Speaker, you will know that the Lachine Canal being built by the private sector could not be completed. The company went bankrupt and did not succeed in this venture. As it was defined at that time, for the best interests of Canada, the Government of the day stepped in and said that the canal had to be built because it is important to the country. If the private sector cannot or will not do it, the Government must. So it stepped into one of the first public enterprises in Canada, which was the completion of the Lachine Canal after the failure of the private sector.

I use that historic example as one that shows that there is indeed a role. In looking at the action of Conservative Governments over the years, both federally and provincially, public ownership has become a natural tool to develop certain utilities for the public good, whether it is Alberta Telephone, B.C. Hydro, Ontario Hydro, or whether it is to launch an airline like Pacific Western Airlines which has now taken over Canadian Pacific Airlines. People in the Government perceive that these are good steps and that they are in the interest of western Canada.

Ms. Mitchell: The other example is a better one, that of Air Canada.

An Hon. Member: Get is straight among yourselves.

Mr. Riis: Pacific Western is a public airline primarily owned by the people of western Canada. It has now taken over CP Air which was a privately owned airline. In Canada there are two publicly owned airlines, one is Pacific Western and the other one is called Air Canada. Wardair is out there soldiering on.

Mrs. McDougall: I did the financing for that—in the private sector.

Mr. Riis: I will close off this discussion of the privatization of Canadair by saying—and I guess it is serving notice—that we are going against what every other country in the aerospace industry has done. Public participation in the aerospace industries of France, West Germany, United Kingdom, and all countries involved in an aerospace business perceive government participation in one way or another as being absolutely natural and essential.

The one exception to the rule is the United States. But that country's vast involvement in the armed forces must be considered. After all, the development of its aerospace industry is done through its military budgets, which is another way of saying that the Government of the United States is obviously a critical key and major player in the development of its aerospace industry.

The Minister of State for Privatization states that this is something that must be done. Every other country in the world that is involved in the aerospace business does not particularly have that view. They do not have this ideological need to privatize something, which in this case is Canadair. However, the deed is done. The majority Government has decided that this is one thing that it must do before it leaves office in two years. So be it.

I wish to complete my comments by saying that by the Government's own figures we are only guaranteed to receive payments totalling $149 million for Canadair with a further $8 million to $12 million in contingency payments, compared to the book value of Canadair which is pegged at $224 million for 1985. This figure was provided by CDIC itself. As taxpayers of the country, we are not really getting a very good deal. In fact, this is a nice Christmas present to be passed along to the private sector.

The sale at this price also comes at a time of increasing profitability forecast for the company. Profits for 1983 were $6 million. That was a very difficult year. In 1985, the profits were $27.5 million and the 1986 forecast is for $23.8 million. After much investment, time, technology, energy and talent, we see the fruits of those investments; and just when things are turning around and looking good for Canadair it is being sold off to Bombardier. It is getting a real bargain in this deal.

Prior to the sale, Canadair had been promised major federal government support totalling $50 million, $30.9 million in defence industry production program assistance for the production of the CL-227 systems, and another $20 million for a joint venture with West Germany on the CL-289. It was virtually promised another $30 million in DIPP money by the letter of intent in the sale of the company, and $14 million for the CL-215 water bomber, $10 million in modifications to the Challenger, and $5 million for new equipment.

Time does not permit me to go on describing this unbelievably good deal. The Government is sugar-coating this whole deal to facilitate the transfer to Bombardier. A lot of champagne will be drunk in the boardrooms of Bombardier tonight. A good company is getting a fantastic deal from the Government. Of course, the people who will not be celebrating will be Canadian taxpayers. Once again tonight they will remember the Avro Arrow. Tonight people will be sitting in their livingrooms, kitchens, and dens; they will be thinking about the Avro Arrow. They will remember that just as Canada was beginning to make a breakthrough in the aerospace industry, the Government pulled the rug out from under that industry. Was it a Conservative or a Liberal Government at that time?

Mr. Young: It was a Conservative Government.

Mr. Riis: It was a Conservative Government at that time, and a Conservative Government is doing it again. The Avro Arrow will be haunting Canadians again tonight, as there are celebrations in the boardrooms of Bombardier because of this incredible Christmas present. I have no further comments to make.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Riis: On division.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the third time and passed.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT, 1971

Hon. Gerald S. Merrithew (for the Minister of Employment and Immigration) moved that Bill C-16, an Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, there have been discussions among the Parties and, in order to complete consideration of all stages of Bill C-16 today, it is my understanding that the matter would be sent to Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, there have been such discussions. In an effort to try to facilitate the business of Canada and to co-operate in any way possible, we are looking forward to discussing the Bill at third reading immediately.

Mr. Allmand: Mr. Speaker, I was not advised of the discussions, but I will agree to the proposal nevertheless.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is that agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, first I would like to recognize the excellent co-operation and understanding forthcoming from Hon. Members opposite. We look forward to putting this important piece of legislation through all stages as quickly as possible on behalf of workers and employers of Canada.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order just to seek clarification, and I apologize to the Parliamentary Secretary for interrupting his presentation.

It is my understanding that there was a motion for third reading of the Canadair Limited Divestiture Bill. There was an agreement to deal with third reading. Was it passed on division? It was my understanding that we would go immediately to third reading and pass it on division.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, just a few minutes ago the House entertained third reading debate of the Canadair Limited Divestiture Bill, and that motion was passed, as the Chair indicated.

Mr. Riis: So it is done.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is done.

Mr. Gurbin: That is another great relief.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, Hon. Members of this House, I would like to submit for your consideration today a Bill that contains two important amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act.

[English]

These amendments, if passed into law, will freeze the UI premium rate for 1987 and will extend the variable entrance rate for another year.

The Bill recognizes the sensitivity of the Government to regional differences in Canada, to the financial pressures on Canadians workers across the country, and to the consequences of increased costs to small business, recognizing that small business is responsible for maintaining and creating economic recovery in Canada.

The UI program plays a vital role in our society. Its benefits replace lost income. They help maintain the stability of local economies, and they also help protect the jobs of people employed in those communities. The ability of individuals to meet the basic expenses of food and shelter while they look for another job is maintained by UI benefits.

For some time, especially over the last several months, there has been much discussion about UI. Many different aspects of the program have been both criticized and praised. Business, labour, women's organizations, and many other groups are asking whether the program is fair and efficient. Is it impeding the development of new jobs? Is it doing enough to provide unemployed Canadians with new opportunities?

As a Government, we clearly recognize that unemployment insurance is a critical element in the Canadian employment system. Supported primarily by the premiums of individual businesses and their employees, the program belongs to Canadians in a more direct sense than any other government program. The Government is simply a trustee whose role is to manage public funds on behalf of Canadians.

Recently the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Bouchard) received the Forget Commission Report of inquiry into the Unemployment Insurance Commission and its workings. It will be the Government's job to take a look at the report and to consider other reports such as the Macdonald Commission Report and the House report from Newfoundland. It is also its job to strike an equitable balance between the recommendations of various groups and interests across Canada.

Returning to the Bill itself, Bill C-16 proposes to amend the Act to freeze the premium rate at its present level until December 31, 1987, that is, $2.35 for workers and $3.29 for employers for each $100 of insurable benefits. The formula now in place, if left unchanged, would require the Government to raise the premium rate again for next year. Employees would have to pay as much as $2.50 for every $100 of insurable earnings. Employers would have to pay more, approximately 1.4 per cent more for each employee. For the coming year alone, these equate to approximately $625 million worth of contributions which will not be taken away from employees and employers. It is an important factor which should not be taken lightly.

The Government believes that if it had allowed the premium to jump, as the formula required, it would throw a monkey-wrench into the economic recovery we in Canada are now enjoying. In addition, our calculations indicate that the decision to maintain premiums at the present level will not unduly impede the longer term reduction in the cumulative unemployment insurance account deficit. The decision to hold the line on UI premiums shows how we are willing to listen to and respond to the concerns of the business community, and at the same time respect financial pressures on individual Canadian workers through reduced premiums and increased benefits.

The Government cares about Canadians who are disadvantaged, discriminated against, and caught in the web of economic misery. We have a social conscience.

The freezing of the UI premium rate helps to give stability to employer-employee costs. It will also remove the financial burden on both employers and workers, the major shareholders of the UI account.

In addition to the question of premium rates, there is a more urgent need to extend the variable entrance requirements, or the VER, until January 4, 1988. On January 4, 1987 the VER is due to expire. The VER first came into effect in December, 1977. It allows UI claimants to qualify for benefits based upon the difficulty of finding and keeping work. It is based upon the unemployment rate in each of the 48 economic regions of Canada.

The VER recognizes that it is more difficult to find and to keep a job in areas suffering from high unemployment. Hon. Members from British Columbia, Newfoundland, and even Alberta know how important this will be to their constituents and other Canadian workers. In an economic region with a high level of unemployment, a claimant needs as few as 10 weeks of insurable work to qualify for UI benefits, as long as the VER is in place. If the VER is allowed to expire, all claimants will need a minimum of 14 weeks to qualify for UI benefits. That would create a hardship for as many as 208,000 Canadians. In areas of high unemployment they would find themselves without work, pay or UI. Bill C-16 contains an extension to the VER to allow the UI program to continue to respond to regional differences for the next 12 months, from January 4, 1987, until January 4, 1988. The extension will symbolize the Prime Minister's, the Government's, and ultimately Parliament's recognition of the difficulties many Canadians face in finding work.

Our decision to freeze the premium rate will help Canadians find new jobs by removing a potential barrier to growth. We do not want to create hardship so we are asking this House to approve these amendments quickly. For 1987 employers and workers will know what the UI program will cost them. And they will be able to plan accordingly. UI claimants will know if they qualify.

Those are the amendments that I am tabling before the House, Mr. Speaker. I ask Hon. Members to approve an extension of the variable entrance rate and a freeze on the premium rate for 1987. I would appreciate the co-operation of all Hon. Members in adopting these amendments without delay. Thank you very much.

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, as the Parliamentary Secretary said, C-16 is a simple Bill to extend the variable entrance requirements of the Unemployment Insurance Act and freeze the level of contributions for one more year. As Hon. Members know, the VER provides that an employee can qualify for unemployment insurance if he or she works for 10 to 14 weeks and makes contributions. They can qualify with 10 weeks of work if they live in a region where unemployment is over 9 per cent. The requirement increases from 10 to 14 weeks as the rate of unemployment declines below 9 per cent. This provision is in recognition of the fact that in some parts of Canada it is very difficult to find work and that is why we provide more unemployment insurance benefits in those regions.

While we support the Bill, I regret that the Government waited until the second to the last day before the Christmas recess to put it before us for debate. It raises many important issues with respect to unemployment insurance which members of my caucus wanted to discuss. If it is as important as the Parliamentary Secretary says it is, we should have had it before us for debate at least a week or so ago. That is particularly true since we have had the Forget Commission Report tabled.

In debating this Bill I must point out the confusion that reigns with respect to the Government's policy on unemployment insurance. After the election, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) said that changes in the unemployment insurance program are necessary and there must be a review. They set up the Forget Commission on Unemployment Insurance. However, while that commission was sitting the Government brought in very serious changes to the program. It cut unemployment insurance for workers who took a pre-retirement pension. That affected almost 76,000 Canadians who paid into the program for years and years but then could not collect the amounts owing to them.

Finally we got the commission report on December 3. I must say that it was a very confusing report because there were six members of the commission and a minority report was produced. What does the Government do? After a year and a half of study by the commission it will not have a response to the report until May 15, five months later. However, it did respond to one of the recommendations, number 26, which we support, that the Government should rescind the cuts relating to pre-retirement pensions as of January 5 of this year and reimburse those workers who should have received full unemployment insurance. So the one recommendation the Government responded to was rejected. Yet the Government had been telling this House for months on end that it would deal with that issue when the commission reported. The Prime Minister said that. The Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Bouchard) said that. The Minister of Finance said that, and so did the Associate Minister of National Defence (Mr. Dick). Over and over again we were told to wait for the Forget Commission Report and then the Government would deal with those cuts. No wonder there is confusion with respect to the Government's unemployment insurance policy.

As to the VER which this Bill deals with, recommendation number 23 of the Forget Commission Report rejected it. I was pleased today to hear the Parliamentary Secretary give very good reasons for maintaining the VER. How the Government will respond to that recommendation I do not know.

In the last two weeks a certain consensus has been developing with respect to unemployment insurance and the Forget Commission Report. The direction seems to be that we should postpone for a considerable period of time the recommendation for annualization and cutting of the regional extended benefits. Even the commissioners themselves, when they appeared before the Standing Committee on Labour, Employment and Immigration, agreed we should not go ahead with those until we have in place a very specific plan for income support and regional development. There is in fact consensus on a lot of the recommendations in the report.

In conclusion I would like to repeat that we support this Bill but strongly suggest that the Government clean up its act on unemployment insurance and rescind the cuts for pre-retirement pensioners. It should put off consideration of the recommendation relating to annualization and regional extended benefits until a very specific alternative plan for income support and regional development is put in place. The Government should bring in a Bill on those areas where there is consensus. We do not need five more months to do that.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: May I call it two o'clock and the Hon. Member will speak at three?

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): That is exactly what I was going to suggest.

GOVERNMENT FUNDING OF UNIVERSITIES

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Eglinton—Lawrence): Mr. Speaker, as Chairman of the Liberal Party task force on post-secondary education, I have heard from educators across Canada that our universities are in danger of becoming second class. Those words are ringing through today. McMaster University has announced that it is being forced to cancel its Canadian studies program because of the lack of government funding. The real irony of this situation is that the cancellation will be effective Canada Day, 1987. Does the Government wish to celebrate Canada Day by cancelling Canadian studies programs throughout the land?

Situations such as what is happening at McMaster University are eroding the quality of education in Canada. If this is allowed to continue, knowledge of our country will be further eroded, and Canadians will be handicapped in competing internationally. The Government should and must take affirmative action now to eliminate the erosion of our educational system. Otherwise, the Government will be singlehandedly responsible for making Canada a second class nation. Is this the type of legacy the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) wants to leave the Canadian people?

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL AGREEMENT DESIGNATING BRITISH COLUMBIA PACIFIC CENTRE FOR TRADE, COMMERCE AND TRAVEL

Mrs. Mary Collins (Capilano): Mr. Speaker, I would like to draw to the attention of the House an agreement signed on Tuesday between the federal Government and the Government of the Province of British Columbia promoting the development of British Columbia as Canada's Pacific centre for trade, commerce, and travel. The agreement will allow the two Governments to co-ordinate initiatives to enhance British Columbia's future economic development.

These include encouraging the growth of international banking and other financial services in Vancouver, co-ordinating transportation improvements, enhancing trade-related services and greater trade opportunities in those professional and technical services where British Columbians have developed significant expertise, and improving co-ordination of marketing and promotion of British Columbia as a tourist destination.

A joint management committee will advise the two Governments on these and other initiatives compatible with British Columbia's special designation as Canada's Pacific gateway. This agreement reaffirms the Government's commitment, as outlined in the Throne Speech, to assist in the renewal and diversification of the economy of British Columbia.

FUTURE OF CENTRAL POST OFFICE IN PRINCE ALBERT

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, less than two months ago Canada Post Corporation brought down a business plan which recommends the closing of many rural post offices and the privatization of many postal services. Just last Thursday DPW informed the architects that Canada Post would no longer require space in the new federal building being planned for Prince Albert. There is no doubt that the two incidents are related, that Canada Post has decided that the downtown Prince Albert Post Office will either be privatized or will provide reduced service.

The people of Prince Albert and region require a central post office which can provide good service. That service is being threatened. What would my predecessor, the Right Hon. John Diefenbaker, say if he knew that the Government was tampering with Her Majesty's mail in the city of Prince Albert?

PLIGHT OF IRANIAN STUDENT FACING DEPORTATION FROM UNITED STATES

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, as the House approaches the Christmas break it is most regrettable that the Minister of State (Immigration) (Mr. Weiner) has ignored the pleas of and for Akbar Moatamedi. The 25-year old Iranian student faces deportation from the United States on January 7. It is guaranteed to be a one-way journey to his persecution and probable death at the hands of Iranian authorities.

Such a frightening conclusion does not augur well for the spirit of the festive season. It does not augur well for the Government's self-proclaimed humanitarian immigration policy. It does not augur well for the Canadians in Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, who have desperately tried to sponsor this young man as a refugee. It certainly does not augur well for Akbar, who said in a telephone conversation from Washington: "I am living with a knife at my throat, waiting for someone to push it in".

Parliament and the Government can save this man from his sad and terrifying state. It is my hope that the Minister and the Government will be moved by the Christmas spirit which surrounds us all to extend a compassionate hand to an individual whose time is quickly and, regrettably, running out.

REGIONAL ECONOMIC EXPANSION

DEVELOPMENT OF TÉMISCAMINGUE REGION

Mr. Gabriel Desjardins (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, the year 1986 which will wind up in a few days from now has been a banner year, both economically and socially in Témiscamingue's development and growth.

We had in 1986 a Social and Economic Summit in our area, the impressive celebrations of Ville-Marie's Centenary and the Fifth International Movie Festival. All of which points to our pride and commitment to realize and control our destinies.

Moreover, Mr. Speaker, let me take this opportunity to thank all the agencies and volunteers who continiously work for the promotion of Témiscamingue's development.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, may I wish all my fellow citizens, you and all Hon. Members a very merry Christmas season.

TREATMENT OF WORKERS FACING LAY-OFFS AT CANADA PACKERS PLANT IN WINNIPEG

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, as many Members will know, in the new year some 447 people at Canada Packers in Winnipeg will lose their jobs as a result of a decision taken by the Government to give $1 million to a competing plant in Neepawa.

I have two requests of the Government. First, will it consider making a special case of the lay-offs at Canada Packers and not count, for unemployment insurance purposes, the severance pay packages that workers will be receiving? It is a clear example of the injustices of that policy. The longer one works at a particular place and the more difficult it will be to make a transition, the less entitlement one has to unemployment insurance benefits.

Furthermore, using this as an example, will the Government reconsider its whole policy of counting severance pay packages for unemployment insurance benefits? It is very unfair, particularly to older workers who have worked at a particular place for a long time. They are the very people I and many others believe should be entitled to a greater cushion between the time they have lost their job and are able to find a new job.

I ask the Government to reconsider that policy. I know it has not, but it should.

ENERGY

SUPPORT URGED FOR HEAVY OIL PROJECTS

Mrs. Barbara Sparrow (Calgary South): Mr. Speaker, Canada stands in danger of losing its lead in heavy oil technology if heavy oil projects and upgrader construction are postponed or cancelled.

One of the more serious issues is the loss to the energy industry of its talent to other businesses or countries. We may end up importing rather than exporting our technology. A recent Alberta Research Council study revealed that enhanced oil recovery and development of new in situ bitumen plants will be delayed, which brings about other important issues of energy self-sufficiency and security of supply. Oil imports could reach the dangerously high level of 1.45 million barrels a day within 15 years if new supplies are not found.

To quote a Calgary businessman: "Alberta runs on oil—when that stops, Alberta stops".

REPORTED PLAN TO ABANDON MONTREAL-NORTH BAY MAIN LINE

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, according to internal documents Canadian National Railways is planning to shut down many lines. An internal memo from R. P. Langlois, Regional Manager of Marketing in the St. Lawrence region, says in part:

> In the context of the rationalization of our rail infrastructure, some lines have been identified as being potential candidates for abandonment in the coming years. A preliminary plan has been prepared and attached you will find the sections affected.
> Any effort to attract new traffic on these sections is to be abandoned immediately.

One of the lines proposed to be abandoned is the main CN rail line between Montreal and North Bay. This would effectively eliminate VIA Rail between Ottawa and Montreal, plus any freight traffic. It would end many businesses in my riding.

Worst of all, CN proposes to do this in the year 1990. If that is not bad enough, the President of CN Rail wrote a letter to me in which he indicated that CN had no intention of shutting down the rail line. That is obviously contrary to the truth.

MAIL DELIVERY—NEED FOR PROPER PERSPECTIVE

Mr. J. R. Ellis (Prince Edward—Hastings): Mr. Speaker, some time ago the Toronto Star had an editorial entitled "Make Canada Post Visit Every Doorstep". More recently an Ottawa area municipality went to court to attempt to force Canada Post to deliver to every house.

What kind of a fool's world do these people live in? I can understand the Toronto Star, which rarely has a sensible stand on any issue, but I am disappointed by municipal politicians who would make such inane comments.

In my constituency of Prince Edward—Hastings there are 24 post offices. Only one community, Belleville, has door-to-door delivery. In every other instance citizens must walk to pick up their mail, and if they want to pick it up other than between nine and five they must pay extra for the privilege.

In the small village where I live, senior citizens must walk up to two kilometres winter and summer to pick up their mail. Other communities involve similar distances. I am no apologist for Canada Post. I have had as many delays and foul-ups reported to me as any Member and I am as frustrated as any with the services, but let us keep mail delivery in perspective.

ETHNIC AFFAIRS

CALL FOR ESTABLISHMENT OF CHAIR IN SIKH STUDIES

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, the establishment of chairs in ethnic studies at Canadian universities has been a far-sighted Canadian policy. Ethno-cultural communities have raised funds and the federal Government has matched the endowment for some 10 different chairs. Members of these communities take pride in one more contribution that they are able to make to Canadian life from their history and society.

Establishment of a chair in Sikh studies at the University of British Columbia would add to the cultural resources of that great university. It would also provide Sikhs in Canada generally, and particularly in British Columbia, with a Canadian focus for exploration of their religion and traditions. Such an establishment would, I am convinced, advance social harmony in Canada, which achievement should take precedence over external pressures. I call upon the Minister for Multiculturalism to authorize federal funding for a chair in Sikh studies.

EXTERNAL AID

REPORT ON SUCCESS OF CANADIAN EFFORTS

Mr. Don Ravis (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, recently I had the privilege to travel with the Standing Committee on External Affairs and International Trade to three developing countries as part of a review of Canada's foreign aid policy. It is the first major review in 15 years. I witnessed firsthand the goodwill generated by Canada's foreign aid and I am proud to know that our assistance has created a spirit of initiative and hope.

Canada is well recognized amongst industrialized nations for its official development assistance to less fortunate countries. The ODA Program has brought substantial economic returns to all regions of Canada. My province alone has helped to open new markets around the world in agriculture and potash.

We realize there are certain risks involved in development. However, with the guidance of NGO volunteers, these countries have a better opportunity to succeed in becoming self-sufficient and potential trading partners. I commend these individuals for their dedication in delivering aid to those who are critically in need. During this holiday season we should be proud to share our good fortune with those who are less fortunate.

CHARTER OF RIGHTS

ONTARIO RESOLUTION RECOMMENDING INCLUSION OF PROPERTY RIGHTS

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, it was certainly good news yesterday when this House received from the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario a copy of its resolution which would enshrine property rights in the Canadian Constitution. Until the Charter of Rights and Freedoms is amended to include the provision:

> Everyone has the right to own and occupy property and the right not to be deprived thereof except in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice", the Charter will remain defective and unfulfilled. The Parliament of Canada must quickly follow the lead taken by Ontario and British Columbia so that property rights are no longer to be excluded from our Constitution.

THE ADMINISTRATION

GOVERNMENT'S PERFORMANCE IN 1986

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, historians will label 1986 as the year of "Mulrogates". People will remember 1986 as the year of the famous $2 million loan of the former Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and the case of the Member for Gamelin.

But the spotlight was on the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), with the many scandals which occured throughout the year. In February the Prime Minister attended a summit and made an official visit to France with a retinue of 60 people at $66,000 a night. With 70 other people trailing him, the Prime Minister then went on a tour of Asia which cost in excess of $50,000 a night.

In October, in New York with 24 followers, expenses were $15,000 a night, not to mention $11,000 for limousines. On a trip through western Canada the Prime Minister was accompanied by a planeload of technical gadgets used to record his image for posterity.

The Prime Minister made sure the Americans would be duly impressed by having our Washington embassy publish a 16-page brochure which has no fewer than 17 pictures of the Prime Minister.

A few days ago we learned that the Prime Minister insisted that his nicest cutlery be used during President Reagan's visit to Quebec City in March 1985, for a total tab of $2.6 million.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, the auditor of the Prime Minister, the best Canadian consumer, told us that, for $41 million, the PM had transferred a prison to his own riding.

Oral Questions

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, I would like to draw the attention of the House today to the fact that The Financial Post, in "Outlook 87", winter edition 1986-87, gives 111 pages of very positive information about Canada. Under the present Government, Canada is now ranked sixth among major industrialized countries for its economic performance, while it ranked eleventh when the Liberals were in power.

Some very specific statistics included in this magazine indicate an increase of more than $500 billion in GNP for 1986. Salaries paid in 1986 will exceed $270 billion. We have gradually been able to control this country's deficit, since 1984. We have brought interest rates down by 4 per cent, while the unemployment rate has gone down from 11.3 to 9.7 per cent, which means 600 000 jobs more.

These are objective figures, offered to Canadians by Maclean-Hunter Publications, and I must say their editor, Mr. Nankivell, has done a very good job.

I think that during the holiday season, every Member of this House who believes in private enterprise has a duty to bring this message of success to all Canadians.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

EMBASSY CLOSURES—PLEA FOR RECONSIDERATION

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I am glad to see that the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) is in the House. In my statement, and on behalf of a great many other MPs in the House, I would like to urge the Minister to keep open the embassies which he recently announced would be closed.

The Minister will recall that when the Liberals were in power and they closed the embassy in Quito the Conservatives as well as ourselves protested vigorously. If one speaks to any of the people in External Affairs one will hear them say that that was a great mistake, which is what the Conservatives said at the time. The embassy was re-opened several years later, and the Government now intends to close it again.

It is important for us to have representation in Quito. It is also obvious that we should have a mission in Helsinki which provides a bridge between the East and West in that part of Europe, and particularly in view of the fact that Canada is planning to join with other Nordic nations in greater co-operation for the demilitarization of the Arctic. I urge the Minister to rethink these decisions.

HIGH RATE OF ABSENTEEISM

Mr. Geoff Wilson (Swift Current—Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, the rate of absenteeism within Canada Post is a national disgrace. The Marchment Report stated that comparisons with the U.S. Postal Service indicate that Canada Post employees consume roughly twice as much sickness and injury leave as do their U.S. counterparts. This information only reinforces the popular stereotype of postal employees.

The stated goal of Canada Post is to reduce annual absenteeism from its present level of over 16 days per employee to 12 days. Why should absenteeism of 12 days per year be acceptable for postal employees when the average for all sectors of the Canadian economy is only six days? It is obvious that most if not all of Canada Post's deficit comes from this incredible absenteeism and its attendant costs. It is time Canada Post stopped two-bitting Canadians to death and instead faced up to this very real problem.

LORD'S DAY OBSERVANCE

CALL FOR AMENDMENT OF ONTARIO LAW

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, this morning, the Supreme Court of Canada decided that it is valid for a Province to have legislation providing for a day of rest. In the Province of Ontario this has to be regarded as a victory for small family-owned businesses—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Kaplan: —because, in many cases, they are not in the position to provide help to remain open for seven days a week. I wish to call upon the Government of Ontario to change its law and introduce meaningful penalties. The present penalties are a deterrent to small businesses, but to big businesses they represent only a cost of doing business.

The law is unfair in its present form. I call upon the Government to change it.

FINANCE

EQUALIZATION PAYMENTS TO PROVINCES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. In answer to a question I asked the Minister yesterday about equalization payments to the provinces, the Minister informed the House that he did not promise to provide an extra $175 million annually for equalization.

Mr. Speaker, I checked all the reports published after the press conference given by the Minister in Edmonton in early November, and all the press reports mention the promise made by the Minister of Finance.

In the circumstances, and also considering that the Minister has now had twenty-four hours to reflect on the matter, will he admit that he and his Department promised to pay an extra $175 million annually to the provinces for equalization, and will he now keep this promise and send this money to the provinces?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): No, Mr. Speaker.

POSSIBLE RESIGNATION OF MINISTER

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, yesterday, the Minister challenged us, saying that if we could prove that he had made this promise, he would resign.

Mr. Speaker, the press reports contain a number of articles under the following headlines, and I quote the Minister of Finance:

[English]

The Minister of Finance said to Matthew Fisher of The Globe and Mail: "We offered $175 million a year in enhancement, or almost $1 billion over the next five years". Does the Minister of Finance recognize that in fact he made that promise to give the money to the provinces?

• (1420)

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I have gone further than the Hon. Member. I checked the transcript, not what The Globe and Mail said I said. I checked what I said in the transcript and the answer is still no, I did not promise.

MINISTER'S TELEVISION INTERVIEW

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, the Minister said that he did not make the promise, yet I have a transcript myself of an interview with the Minister of Finance which was televised from coast to coast last night. In the interview the Minister said:

> And I believe that an augmentation of $175 million a year—close to a billion dollars over a five-year period—is a very major increase in that—in that program.

I myself heard the Minister saying that on television. Will he continue to believe that he never made that promise? We have the proof right here. I think the Minister should recognize the fact that he should give the money to the provinces or, as he said in the House, do the honourable thing and resign.

Some Hon. Members: Bye-bye, Mike.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate very much the good wishes of the Hon. Members opposite who are wishing me a nice holiday over the next few weeks.

Mr. Riis: An extended holiday.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): In answer to what the Hon. Member said, I do not care if what he read to me was on coast-to-coast television. What the Hon. Member just read is not a promise. Surely he can understand what is a promise and what is not a promise. What was discussed was an offer that had been the subject of—

Mr. Axworthy: It's a final offer.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Mr. Speaker, I am trying to clarify this matter. What was discussed was a proposal by provincial officials and federal government officials. That matter was discussed but there was no consensus. I have checked the records of the meeting. I clearly advised the provincial Ministers that I would have difficulty getting this offer accepted by my cabinet colleagues and I warned them of that. Surely that does not in any way constitute a promise. The intent was clear.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. Yesterday in Question Period the Minister said:

> I challenge the Hon. Member to find one person who will say that there was a federal government offer on the table.

The Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides quoted what the Minister said on television and I will read it again:

> And I believe an augmentation of $175 million a year—close to one billion dollars over a five-year period—is a very major increase in that—in that program. We weren't able to get a consensus, so we'll go back to the drawing board and have another look at some of the proposals. But the parameters are still there.

Have we not found that one person? Is it not the Minister himself? Why is he trying to deny the obvious? Why does he not provide that money to the poor provinces of Canada?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, it does surprise me that that Hon. Member should ever talk about resigning. He and I sat side by side in an interview that took place before the 1980 election and he was asked specifically—and he will not deny this in the House—whether he would resign if interest rates continued to go up. Interest rates continued to go up, and where did he sit? He sat right there. For four years he sat there. He did not have the guts to resign after he said he would resign.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (1425)

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I made no such statement as a Minister of the Crown.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh,

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): I read it in The Globe and Mail.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): I said that I made no such statement as a Minister of the Crown. Also, I called on the Minister to provide the money for the poorer provinces of this country, and he has tried to duck that.

OFFICIALS' MEETING IN EDMONTON

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): My question to the Minister is this. Did he not say yesterday in Question Period "in Edmonton there was a proposition put on the table by a committee of bureaucrats, officials from both the provincial and federal levels of government, to increase the size of the equalization program by $175 million"?

How can the public accept what the Minister is suggesting, that federal officials from the Minister's own Department took part in that committee and made that proposition without the knowlege, support, and approval of the Minister of Finance himself? How can they have said that without the approval of the Minister? Why does the Minister not stick with what his officials have said?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has just said that because he wasn't a Minister of the Crown his integrity was somewhat less. I view my integrity as a private individual, as a member of the Opposition, and as a Minister of the Crown in the same way. I would expect that he would view it in the same way as well.

Mr. Orlikow: And you better resign right now.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): In response to the specific question, surely there were people who were in the room—the Hon. Member was not in the room—but there were people who were in the room at those meetings. Mr. Clements of Prince Edward Island and Mr. Collins of Newfoundland have both said there was no promise. But what they have said is that there has been an acknowledgement by this Government that we are providing $175 million on top of one of the largest programs of government which is $5.25 billion. That recognizes clearly that not only are we going to allow this program to rise by 4 to 6 per cent a year, what we are also doing is augmenting that program with one of the largest increases in spending of $175 million. That is a clear recognition on the part of this Government in the interests of the less well-off provinces, and that is a fact.

FUNDING PARAMETERS

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the same Minister. It involves the quote that was read by one of the Liberal Members:

—I believe that an augmentation of $175 million in a year, close to $5 billion over a five-year period, is a very major increase in that program. We weren't able to get a consensus, so we'll go back to the drawing boards and look at some proposals, but the parameters are still there.

Will the Minister not stand and admit that the parameters were not there? He removed the parameters and he cut back the funding by half.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, yesterday I used the word "twist" of the facts. The facts are still being twisted. The parameters are still there. We are increasing the amount of this program by $175 million. That is a very substantial increase. So the parameters are still there.

Mr. Broadbent: Over two years instead of one.

Mr. Axworthy: A small detail.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The Hon. Member says "over two years instead of one". The parameters are still there. That was the question that I was asked. We have accepted the proposal that was put before us by the officials. I said clearly that we are prepared to look at some technical changes to improve the effectiveness of the program. It is very clear what we have done. We have made a generous increase in the amount of this program. That is a clear recognition of the support that this Government has been providing, not only in equalization but in a broad range of programs in support of the provinces that are not as well off.

DEFINITION OF PARAMETER

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): My question to the same Minister is this. He has his own definition of promise, he has own definition of an offer, and now he has his own definition of parameter. How can the Minister define a parameter as a 50 per cent cut? Will he explain that to us, and explain that to Canadians?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, there is an old saying: Is the glass half full, or is the glass half empty?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An Hon. Member: This glass is half full, hell, no doubt about that.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Murphy: It was a full glass at the beginning.

Ms. Copps: In response to the Minister's comment, is that like being half pregnant?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

TORONTO CONFERENCE—ATTENDANCE OF ALLEGED FUND RAISERS FOR NICARAGUAN CONTRAS

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State. I have a transcript of a taped speech given by the Minister at a meeting, which the Minister told the House yesterday he did not attend. At that meeting the Minister said:

> I indicated to Yuri some weeks ago that I would be pleased to support my colleagues at the gathering at the weekend . . . when Andrew Witer and others who are Members of Parliament from my Party are with you tomorrow night and the greetings of the Prime Minister are, I gather, being read by Andrew Witer, I'm pleased to hear that.

Could the Minister tell the House why he and at least four of his colleagues lent credibility to the conference? Did they know, for example, that among the invitees would be fund raisers for the Nicaraguan Contras?

Hon. David Crombie (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Hon. Member indicated that I was at the conference, and I quite properly indicated that I was not at the conference. Indeed, she suggested that I was a patron, and I suggested to her—and I checked the record—that I was not a patron. I did attend the reception on the Friday night—

Mr. Axworthy: At the conference.

Mr. Crombie: —not in some dark room, but in the Legislature at Queen's Park.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

CONFERENCE ATTENDANTS

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Minister said: "I was not at the conference". In fact, among the meetings and social events listed in the official program was the reception at Queen's Park to which I specifically referred. Would the Minister tell the House, once and for all, why he and at least four of his colleagues lent credibility to the conference, by not only being there themselves, but also by bringing greetings from the Prime Minister? Does he mean that he and his colleagues have no problem with a conference which invites, as one of its special guests, a fund raiser for the Nicaraguan Contras?

Hon. David Crombie (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, I repeat that I was not at the conference and I was not a patron to the conference. In fact the September 11 letter from me to the organization points that out; it is a matter of public record. In respect of the organziation of the conference itself, in which I had no part, I might suggest to the Hon. Member that among the people who showed up through letters of commendation and letters of greeting were Mr. Peterson, Mr. Eggleton, and a host of other people who simply wanted to say to people interested in the matter of individual freedom that they supported the idea of individual freedom, and that is what I was doing.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

TRADE

UNITED STATES DUTY ON CANADIAN SOFTWOOD LUMBER

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister for International Trade. As she well knows, last night the United States proposed that Canada implement a 15 per cent export tax indefinitely or until the provinces raised stumpage by $860 million per year. This would practically triple stumpage fees in Canada and exceed the entire profit of the Canadian lumber industry by $360 million. Would the Minister tell the House whether Canada now plans to make another offer, since Canada has rejected the American offer and we have been unable to get either Mr. Shultz or Mr. Baldrige to get the co-operation of the U.S. lumber coalition?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is misinformed on this matter. He is correct that we have rejected another American proposal which is so unreasonable that it calls into question the U.S. approach to these negotiations. However, Mr. Shultz and Mr. Baldrige are, and have been, involved. I can only tell the Hon. Member that discussions are continuing and that I will inform the House of developments at the earliest opportunity.

PROGRESS OF DISCUSSIONS—CANADIAN POSITION BEFORE GATT

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, could the Hon. Minister advise the House whether Canada is making a new offer? If the U.S. coalition does not accept it, does Canada now intend to fight the illegal 15 per cent countervail duty before the U.S. courts and before GATT?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, there has never been a new Canadian offer on the table. The offer or approach on the table is the one which was agreed to at the First Ministers' Conference in Vancouver in November. That is the Canadian proposal. There has been no deviation from that proposal. In answer to the last part of the Hon. Member's question, we will have to wait to see what happens with the ongoing discussions. However, I can assure him that we are appealing this preliminary determination in the GATT. The panel has met twice and we expect a ruling in the next few weeks.

UNITED STATES PROPOSAL

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the same Minister on this very important issue. She just stated in her answer that the proposal put forward by the Americans calls the whole process into question. If the Minister has concluded that the whole process is questionable, why are we continuing this particular charade? Why does the Government of Canada not simply state, once and for all, that the 15 per cent tariff is unacceptable and that we are prepared to fight for our rights in proper tribunals, and not accept any kind of American proposition which will put our industry in jeopardy, both in world competition and in the U.S. market?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, clearly the Hon. Member did not hear my response. I said that the American response was unreasonable and called into question the seriousness of the approach, not the process. The process has narrowed the disagreement between the two parties to only a few issues. I can only add that the Hon. Member does not seem to understand that a duty has been imposed. We are attempting, under the remedies open to us, to negotiate a settlement on a duty which has already been imposed. At the same time we are proceeding with our argument before a GATT panel.

CANADIAN POSITION

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the same Minister. When it comes to the question of understanding, do the Minister and the Government understand the fact that the ruling was a temporary ruling and that, by pursuing the kind of position taken by her and the Government, the case before international and American tribunals has been undermined? The Government of Canada has accepted the position of Canada as one which agrees with the precedent and principle set forth by the Americans. When will the Government of Canada clearly say to the United States that its imposition of the duty is unacceptable? We are waiting for the Government to say that.

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is wrong and, worse, he is uninformed.

Mr. Axworthy: Hardly, hardly.

Miss Carney: If he understood the process, he would know that all international tribunals, such as GATT and other processes, permit and encourage negotiation of disputes between both parties. That is what we have been involved in. We have said that the P.D. is unacceptable. We are attempting—

Mr. Axworthy: Oh, oh!

Miss Carney: I wish the Hon. Member would allow me to answer his question.

Mr. Axworthy: Then give us a decent answer.

Miss Carney: We have explained repeatedly in the House that if we can negotiate a settlement we will not be faced with the precedent set in this unacceptable ruling. It will not appear on the books. There will be no final determination. If there is a final determination, we would consider it to be harmful to the country. We are seeking, without the support of the Opposition, to resolve this bitter dispute and get it behind us, so that we can proceed with the trade talks whose aim is to ensure that this kind of border dispute can be settled in a reasonable way.

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL FISCAL ARRANGEMENTS

SIZE OF FEDERAL PAYMENT

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. Following public comments made by the Government of Manitoba and by the Government of New Brunswick about the $175 million they believe was put on the table by the federal Government in Edmonton, yesterday I telephoned the Minister of Finance in Quebec and he confirmed it. Today my office contacted the Prince Edward Island Minister of Finance. He claimed two things. First, he said there was nothing in writing from the federal Government. However, he said there was not a Minister of Finance at the meeting who did not believe that $175 million was put on the table by the federal Government over one year starting this year.

• (1440)

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Put your seat on the line, Ed.

Mr. Broadbent: Is the Minister saying that because it was not put in writing—

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Have a little courage.

Mr. Broadbent: —that a commitment was not made by the federal Government?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): No, I am not saying that at all, Mr. Speaker. I am saying that I reviewed the records of the meeting and there is no question from the way the discussions went that there was not an offer on the table. I am repeating myself but there was a proposal put on the table—

Mr. Garneau: You said it yourself.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The Hon. Member says I said it myself. I ask him to go check with the other Ministers of Finance.

Mr. Garneau: I heard you on TV last night.

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): A proposal was put on the table by a committee of federal and provincial government officials. That proposal was a subject for discussion. There was no agreement. I said at the end of the meeting that I would take it back and discuss it with my colleagues, which I did. At no time did I promise to do this or that. I think the Ministers of Finance would fully agree with that.

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, there seems to be an awful lot of upset Ministers of Finance who see this a little differently from the Minister here in Ottawa. We have representatives of all the provinces we have been able to contact, representing all political parties, saying an offer was made. Will the Minister now acknowledge that such an offer was made, acknowledge the need of the provinces for that money, and live up to that offer?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): First, Mr. Speaker, I said from the start of this debate that there was not an offer on the table. The Hon. Member says that the Ministers of Finance are upset. Sure, they are upset because they wanted a lot of money. However, they also know there is not a lot of money available. These discussions have been going on for 18 months. I told them right from the start that the Government of Canada did not have the fiscal capability to give them the amount of money they wanted.

We have increased this program by $175 million in the second year. That is on top of $5.25 billion. This is one of the single largest government programs and it is growing at 4 per cent to 6 per cent per annum. If the Hon. Member wants to check the fiscal plan I tabled last February he will see it is one of the fastest growing government programs.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT MAKE JUST DECISION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, the provincial ministers of Finance are angry because the federal Government has changed its offer. My question to the Minister is simply this: Will he make a fair decision which will be consistent with the original offer of the Government? He said today that the federal Government intended to maintain its offer and to provide $175 million to the provinces this year.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Government has made a very fair decision. We have increased the amounts under a major Government program, namely equalization. This is a $5.2 million program. We have enriched this program by $175 million in two years. This is one of the most important programs of the Government and it has been enriched by 4 to 6 per cent a year, and will be each year in the future. This is a good decision because this Government understands the position of the poorer provinces.

WORLD ANTI-COMMUNIST LEAGUE—FUND RAISING ACTIVITIES

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri—Westmount): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. A spokesman for the World Anti-Communist League says that $25 million has been raised by his organization to help the Contras. Could the Minister tell us whether he knows if, or how much of this money if you like, has been raised in Canada, and whether his Government approves of fund raising in Canada for purposes which are in direct conflict with its own foreign policy?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, as to whether I can confirm the allegations made by the Hon. Member, no, I cannot. I will see if there is some means by which I can confirm them or otherwise, and advise him.

The other question was whether in a democracy the Government of Canada is prepared to allow private citizens to raise money for purposes with which the Government of Canada might not agree. Of course we allow that freedom. That is part of being a free country.

PERSONAL CONTRIBUTIONS MADE BY MEMBERS

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri—Westmount): Mr. Speaker, the Chairman of the Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs, the Hon. Member for Mississauga South, has said that he has himself contributed to this organization. I would like to know whether such an action on his part is acceptable to the Government since he is a Member of the Conservative caucus and this is in direct contradiction with Government policy. Have other Conservative Members made similar contributions?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, just as it is not the policy of the Liberal Party to tell the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell that he cannot travel to Taiwan, and he has done so, it is our own policy—

An Hon. Member: Oh! Oh!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): The leader of the Quebec wing of the Liberal Party has just spoken up. It is not our policy or our right to tell Liberal, Conservative or Socialist Members whether or not they can make personal contributions.

Oral Questions

REQUEST FOR IMPROVEMENTS TO LEBEL-SUR-QUÉVILLON AIRPORT, QUE.

Mr. Guy St. Julien (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. The Lebel-sur-Quévillon airport is the only place where an ambulance may land to carry out injured people in that area of the Abitibi, the only one where a tanker aircraft CL-215 may remain throughout the summer and that airport needs improvements. My question is as follows: Transport Canada is considering the matter. Is your Department ready to provide funds to improve that airport in 1987?

Hon. André Bissonnette (Minister of State (Transport)): Mr. Speaker, I think the question raised by my colleague from Abitibi is a very important one for northern areas. The Quebec Government is now reassessing ambulance aircrafts that could land in those areas and we have made recommendations about the length of the runways and the kind of planes which should be used in those areas. After we get an answer from the Quebec Government, we will be in a position to make a realistic decision based on our recommendations and we would be ready to undertake drainage, land clearing and paving operations to enhance facilities at that airport.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CANADIAN AID TO NICARAGUA—POSITION OF INDIVIDUAL MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. He is of course responsible for the conduct of Canada's foreign policy and our relations with other states. As he well knows, Canada not only maintains full diplomatic relations with Nicaragua but also provides it with development assistance, bank credits, and assists in its trade activities. Is he prepared at least to point out these facts to the four members of his Party who have been supporting activities which would result in the violent overthrow of the Government of Nicaragua?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I am certainly prepared to point out those facts. I appreciate the Hon. Member reciting for the House of Commons and the Canadian public the balanced approach this Government has taken towards questions in central America. What she is talking about here, and what the Liberal Party is talking about here, is a very basic question of individual freedom. Are Canadian citizens free or not free to contribute to causes in which they believe? If ordinary citizens are free, do they lose that freedom because they become Members of Parliament? It appears that the Liberal and New Democratic Parties believe that freedóm should not exist. We do not share that view.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Ms. Jewett: Mr. Speaker, the Minister gravely distorted what I said. I worded my question very carefully.

NICARAGUAN CONTRAS—GOVERNMENT POLICY

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, does the Minister not believe that confusion is being sown in the minds of the Canadian public—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Ms. Jewett: —and in the minds of citizens of other Latin American countries? Is it or is it not the foreign policy of the Government of Canada to oppose any support, be it military or financial, to the Contras who are trying to overthrow the Government of Nicaragua? If it is our policy to oppose the Contras, will the Minister at least make that clear to the members of his own Party?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the policy of the Government is not only clear to the countries of Central America, but is applauded by them. I knew that the Hon. Member and I had different views of the extent of state control which would be appropriate, but I did not know that her view of state control meant that it should reach to the lengths of prohibiting individual private persons from contributing to private undertakings in which they might believe, even though that was not the policy of the Government of the day.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

LANGUAGE POLICY

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the President of the Treasury Board. I asked him on several occasions for information concerning the regressive attitude of the RCMP concerning official languages. The Government has adopted a passive attitude in this matter, prefering to do nothing. Delighted with this lack of action and leadership, the RCMP is still bent on its decision to reduce the proportion of Francophones among its regular officers from 20 to 14 per cent. These policies are insulting to Francophones and show that this Government pays only lip service to equitable representation. The Minister claimed in the House that the RCMP continues to maintain the 20 per cent quota. The RCMP told us that it does not. My question is this: Who is telling the truth, the RCMP or the Goverment? Who sets up the linguistic policy in this country, the Government or the RCMP?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): First of all, Mr. Speaker, I do not accept at all my hon. friend's preambule. I cannot accept either the fact he should quote me as saying that the RCMP is maintaining the quota. I said that it must do so. It's a quota which has been established by and comes under the Treasury Board, a quota which has never been changed and which is the RCMP's responsibility to maintain. If the RCMP wants to change it, it can always submit an application to Treasury Board, something it has failed to do. Under the circumstances, the RCMP must maintain the quota which has been set and we strongly support our linguistic policy as established.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT ASSERT ITS POSITION

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): According to a time honoured proverb, Mr. Speaker, where there is a will there is a way. The Government's position is clearly in conflict with that of the RCMP. My question is quite simply: What could the Minister tell the House to assure us that the Government is assuming and will continue to assume its responsability concerning official languages? Will he tell the RCMP that the government is the boss, not the RCMP?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to reply to my Hon friend that following representations made last October in the House, I wrote my colleague the Solicitor General on October 22 to ask him to submit to Treasury Board at his earliest convenience the plan which the RCMP meant to follow to implement the Treasury Board guidelines. I was told that it would take a few weeks, and I can accept that. Once this plan is submitted, the Treasury Board will take the necessary action to ensure that its guidelines are respected.

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES

STATUS OF BILINGUALISM IN RCMP

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, the RCMP persists in its contempt of the basic principles of the Official Languages Act. At headquarters, for instance, what we have is indeed an English-speaking ghetto.

When will the Minister insist that the Commissioner and other RCMP members must absolutely abide by every principle of bilingualism within the RCMP and stop trying to sabotage it?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I just answered that same question on October 22, 1986. If the RCMP or the Solicitor General, on behalf of the RCMP, want to apply for any exemption to Treasury Board's policies on language matters, all they have to do is make the application within the shortest time frame.

In the meantime, the policy remains unchanged and those people must comply.

REQUEST THAT CERTAIN SUGGESTIONS BE ACCEPTED

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary for the Solicitor General.

Is the Minister ready to accept two very concrete suggestions on bilingualism in the RCMP—first, that the next commissioner be bilingual, and second, that members of the RCMP receive a premium for bilingualism, as is already the case for all employees in the Public Service?

[English]

Hon. James Kelleher (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member and other Members of the House are aware, the present Commissioner is retiring on March 31, 1987. We will be commencing interviews of possible candidates in the near future. I thank the Hon. Member for his suggestions. I think they are very sensible suggestions and we will certainly take them into account during our interviews.

EMPLOYMENT

CRITICISM OF INSUFFICIENT JOB-CREATION FUNDING FOR YOUTH

Mr. Gilles Grondin (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, I have a question related to the press conference given yesterday in Montreal by the Minister of State (Youth). Since he is not here I would ask the Minister of Employment and Immigration to respond, and I will speak French to the Minister even though his colleague held most of his Montreal press conference in English.

How can he explain the fact that his Government will invest only $10 million over three years to create 849 jobs, when we know there are more than 377,000 unemployed in this age group, particularly if we note that this program, a poor substitute for Katimavik, is neither new nor innovative since it existed in 1984 under the Liberal Government with a $35 million annual budget to create 3,500 jobs a year?

Why does the Minister allocate such measly sums to youth programs?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Quite obviously, Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Saint-Maurice simply did not understand that the program announced yesterday by my colleague is only one of many job creation programs for young people. There is more to come and, if the Hon. Member would be patient, the Minister of State (Youth) will announce other programs at the appropriate time.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT EXPRESS INTENTIONS MORE PRECISELY

Mr. Gilles Grondin (Saint-Maurice): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker.

The Minister's answer is not good enough because we have been waiting for two years now to find out what the Government will do to replace the programs it shelved.

This one totally ignores Saskatchewan and Prince Edward Island, and offers just a few crumbs to Nova Scotia.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Would the Hon. Member ask his question?

Mr. Grondin: Mr. Speaker, when will the Government stop treating young people as if they were third-class citizens? What does the Government plan to do to meet the needs of young people who do not live in cities or in the provinces covered under the program?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I can hardly believe that the Hon. Member for Saint-Maurice would be so oblivious as to forget and refuse to acknowledge that last year this Government did invest more than $200 million to create jobs. Young people have not been treated so well for many years, well enough to make any Liberal Party dream about it!

FISHERIES

SEAL HUNT—MALOUF COMMISSION RECOMMENDATION ON COMPENSATION OF SEALERS

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans. Speaking of the deep sense of frustration felt by individuals and communities who lost an important part of their livelihood because of the international campaign against sealing, the Malouf Commission said: "They feel aggrieved economically, socially and culturally. There is a need for financial compensation for these losses". Why has the Government added to this sense of frustration and betrayal by rejecting recommendations for major funding that would compensate these individuals and communities and help them to get back on their feet?

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, I am sure that when all Hon. Members have had a chance to read the entire Malouf Commission report they will appreciate the helpful and thorough advice that Judge Malouf and his colleagues have offered to all Canadians on this very difficult issue. We have concerns for those communities and individuals, both in northern Canada and on the Atlantic coast, whose livelihood has been displaced by international pressures and other factors. That is why we have announced a $5 million adjustment package to reorient and refocus these communities and to assist in a rejuvenation of legitimate sealing for adult seals, where that is feasible.

AMOUNT OF COMPENSATION

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, how can the Minister and his Government pretend that $5 million over four years is adequate compensation for the kind of devastation that these individuals and communities have suffered as a result of an economic disaster that was not of their own making?

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member knows that we have set in place a number of consultations involving the Canadian Sealers Association and the Inuit Tapirasat of Canada. We are funding a proposal on their part with respect to a long-term strategy to assist these sealing communities.

I might remind the Hon. Member that the Chairman of the Canadian Sealers Association said yesterday that even fishermen recognize that $120 million is excessive and that in this day of restraint money has to be spent wisely.

Mr. Manly: There is a big difference between $5 million and $120 million.

Mr. Siddon: According to Mr. Mark Small: "I don't think they—", fishermen, "—are expecting compensation".

BABY SEAL HUNT—GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans and concerns the Malouf Commission Report. The Minister is well aware that many Canadians are most concerned about the hunting of baby seals. Will he explain why the Government has rejected the recommendation of the Malouf Commission to ban the commercial hunting of baby seals, particularly in light of the Minister's admission that there is no market for the skins? Is he prepared to reconsider that decision?

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, let me point out to the Hon. Member that the Government's response yesterday did not indicate a rejection of any particular recommendation. In fact, as I indicated to the media yesterday, we will not support a renewal of the white coat hunt. Neither market conditions nor public opinion would allow the renewal of the white coat hunt and that is why, in our package of adjustment measures to benefit legitimate sealing communities, there will be absolutely no support for any rejuvenation of that hunt. We feel that that hunt is dead for once and for all.

Mr. Speaker: Is the Hon. Member for Grand Falls—White Bay—Labrador rising on a supplementary question on this issue?

Mr. Rompkey: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

REQUEST FOR INCREASED COMPENSATION

Hon. William Rompkey (Grand Falls—White Bay—Labrador): Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans how he can speak with such hyprocrisy and how he can stand in his place as the Minister of Fisheries and Oceans—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order. All Hon. Members know that Question Period has nearly ended. I tried to accommodate Members on this particular issue. The Hon. Member, on a short supplementary.

Mr. Rompkey: Will the Minister, as spokesman for the fishermen, go back to Cabinet and ask it to reconsider this measly $5 million which is an insult to the sealers on the Atlantic coast and in the Arctic, and receive a decent and generous compensation package for sealers who are the most marginal and vulnerable workers in the country?

Hon. Thomas Siddon (Minister of Fisheries and Oceans): Mr. Speaker, I must repeat to the Hon. Member that the adjustment measures that were announced yesterday in the area of employment adjustment and marketing support for the sealing industry meet with the support of the Canadian Sealers Association—

Mr. Rompkey: They do not. They said it was not enough.

Mr. Siddon: They claim that $120 million is excessive and in fact suggest that sealers are not expecting compensation.

Mr. Rompkey: That is hyprocrisy.

Mr. Siddon: Go back and talk to your own constituents.

Mr. Rompkey: You are absolutely wrong.

Mr. Crombie: Mr. Speaker, may I beg the indulgence of the House to make a very short statement with respect to a judge of the Citizenship Court in Toronto.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Minister has asked for consent to revert to Statements by Ministers. Is it the disposition of the House to give consent?

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, the agreement of the House will be such that opposition spokepersons will have the usual right to reply.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Windsor West has raised a point which I just assumed. In any event, the Chair will recognize other Members.

CITIZENSHIP COURT

RESIGNATION OF JUDGE STEVEN WALTER

Hon. David Crombie (Secretary of State and Minister Responsible for Multiculturalism): Mr. Speaker, I have talked to my opposition critics and they are aware of the statement. I wish to inform the House that I have just received a letter of resignation from Citizenship Judge Steven Walter of Toronto, a copy of which I respectfully submit. I want to advise the House that copies of the letter of resignation are available from my office.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the Minister's statement. I just want to make a few comments.

The case of Judge Steven Walter is unfortunate. In our view, Judge Walter should not have been appointed to the Citizenship Court bench. That particular appointment is a classic example of political patronage at its worst. Judge Walter was appointed to the Citizenship Court bench, not because of his qualifications as a Citizenship Court judge, but because he was a friend of the Government and because he was a supporter of the Conservative Party.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member for York South—Weston (Mr. Nunziata), who has evidenced considerable interest in this matter and has made representations in the Chamber on the question, knows that when a Minister makes a statement, other Members who are replying are bound by the custom of keeping their statements within the same time frame. The Hon. Member for York South-Weston has already exceeded that. Perhaps the Hon. Member would find another time and another circumstance to comment further and enlarge upon the points that he makes. I know that the Hon. Member thinks it is an important matter.

I point out to all Hon. Members that quite clearly the Minister felt this was a very important matter and I believe has acted with great expedition.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the significance that the Minister gave this issue when it was brought to his attention, both in the media and in the House. I believe he took prompt and appropriate action. I believe he has sent a very clear signal to Citizenship Court judges across Canada that we expect them, in their position of trust, to exercise total non-partisanship in their deliberations. If anything, this highlights the need to have a sophisticated process for the screening of Citizenship Court judges when they are appointed. This is a quasi-judicial position and it is important that people of the highest quality are put in those positions of trust and that they conduct their operations in a most appropriate and sophisticated non-partisan way.

PRIVILEGE

MR. BOUCHARD—CORRECTIONS TO ANSWERS.

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I would like to correct what I said earlier in reply to the Hon. Member for Saint-Maurice (Mr. Grondin) in relation with the amounts invested by the Department of Employment and Immigration and the Ministry of Youth to create jobs for young people.

I am sure that the Opposition Party will blame me if I do not make this correction. We did not invest $200 million, but $700 million in job creation.

ALLEGED USE OF UNPARLIAMENTARY LANGUAGE

Mr. Jack Shields (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, during Question Period today the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) distinctly said "Lies, lies, lies" after the Secretary of State replied to her question. I would ask the Chair to check the "blues".

• (1510)

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member, I believe, is raising either a point of order or a point of privilege. I must advise the House that I did not hear what is alleged and I will look at the "blues".

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, there have been discussions with representatives of the Opposition and I think you will find unanimous agreement to revert to Motions. I have two or three motions I would like to put forth in respect to the conduct of business for the next day or so and also with respect to legislative committees and the extension of rules. If there is that unanimous consent, I will put the motions.

Mr. Speaker: Does the Hon. Deputy Prime Minister and the President of the Privy Council (Mr. Mazankowski) have the unanimous consent of the House to move his motions?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

HOUSE OF COMMONS

STANDING ORDERS

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, my first motion is:

That, for the remainder of this session or until the last sitting day of December 1987, whichever comes first, the provisions of Standing Order 94(2) and Standing Order 89(1) in relation thereto, shall be suspended, unless otherwise ordered by this House.

What this proposal does is extend the committee membership of all the Standing Committees into 1987. If this is not done, the membership of the Standing Committees would expire at the end of this year.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt this motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

[English]

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, my second motion has to do with the work of the legislative committees. This proposal would suspend Standing Order 93(1) which requires the Striking Committee to report a list after first reading which causes unnecessary legislative committees to be appointed when reference of a Bill is sometimes made to a Standing Committee or Committees of the Whole.

The motion is as follows:

That, notwithstanding any Standing or Special Order for the remainder of the present Session, when a Bill has received second reading and has been referred to a legislative committee, the Striking Committee shall prepare and report, not later than the following Thursday, a list of members to compose the legislative committee which shall consist of not more than thirty (30) members.

Upon presentation of such a report of the Striking Committee, the same shall be deemed adopted and the Speaker shall appoint a Chairman to the said legislative committee, pursuant to Standing Order 93(2).

That, notwithstanding Standing Order 93(6), the Government House Leader shall, after consultation with the House Leaders of the other parties, establish the order in which the several legislative committees shall consider Bills, on the basis that no legislative committee shall sit at the same time that another legislative committee is sitting on a Bill emanating from or principally affecting the same department or agency.

What this would do is suspend the provision which requires legislative committees to meet within two sitting days of a second reading and allow for priorities to be set while avoiding conflicts of membership.

The third proposal is:

That, notwithstanding Standing Orders 92(2) and 96(1), Standing and Standing Joint Committees shall not sit at the same time as a legislative committee on a Bill emanating from or principally affecting the same department or agency.

This also would avoid conflicts of membership and allow Members to be at legislative committees and not have to split their attendance between two committee appearances.

The fourth proposal is:

That legislative committees sitting during periods coinciding with the hours of sitting of the House, shall have priority over Standing, Standing Joint and Special committees.

The fifth proposal is:

That priority shall be given to Standing, Standing Joint and Special Committees in periods when the House stands adjourned, according to the schedule of meetings as established, from time to time, by the Chief Government Whip, after consultation with the other parties.

On many occasions in this House, Mr. Speaker, we have alluded to the fact that we are operating under new rules. There are growing pains and adjustments which have to be made. I merely want to express my appreciation to the Opposition House Leaders for their excellent co-operation so that we are able to work through these difficulties and have been able to work out solutions which we hope will facilitate and expedite the business of the House.

Mr. Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS—ORDER OF PRECEDENCE

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, there have been discussions among the Parties in an effort to deal with the problem where Private Members who are involved in Private Members' Business Hour are unable to proceed with their motions. I therefore have two motions to present to the House. The first is an interim solution with respect to February 20, 1987, and the second motion refers only to the matter of substitution of Private Members' Business to the committee directly.

The first motion is as follows:

That, notwithstanding any Standing or Special Order, for the remainder of the present session,

(1) If a Member has given at least twenty-four hours' written notice that he or she is unable to be present to move his or her motion on the date required by the order of precedence, and if that item of business is not one which has been designated "votable" by the Standing Committee on Private Members' Business, the Speaker, with permission of the Members involved, may arrange for an exchange of positions in the order of precedence with a Member whose motion or bill in the order of precedence has not been designated "votable".

(2) In the event that the Speaker has been unable to arrange an exchange, the House shall continue with the business before it prior to "Private Members' Hour" pursuant to Standing Order 39(2), provided that there shall be no extension of the sitting pursuant to Standing Order 9(4)(a), and any division on a debatable motion shall be deferred until 6 o'clock p.m. on the next sitting day. For the purposes of this section, Standing Order 19(5) relating to deferred divisions on a Thursday shall apply.

(3) This order to expire on or about February 20, 1987, pending a report on this matter by the Committee on Privileges, Elections and Procedures.

Mr. Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt this motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS—SUBSTITUTION—REFERENCE TO COMMITTEE

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): I would like to give the Motion of Reference to the committee if I may:

That the matter of substitution of Private Members' Business when a Member is unable to move his or her motion on the date required by the order of precedence be referred to the Committee on Privileges, Elections and Procedures for a recommendation as to how this matter might be resolved and report to this House by February 20, 1987.

Motion agreed to.

PROVISIONAL STANDING ORDERS—CONTINUATION

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, as I am sure you and other Hon. Members are aware, the provisional Standing Orders under which this House functions will expire on the last sitting day in December. There have been the usual discussions with the Opposition House Leaders. I think you will find unanimous consent to adopt the following motion:

That, notwithstanding any previous Orders of the House, all the current permanent and provisional Standing Orders shall continue in force until April 15, 1987.

Mr. Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT, 1971

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed from Wednesday, October 19, consideration of the motion of Mr. Bouchard that Bill C-16, an Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a few remarks about Bill C-16, an Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act to provide for the extension of the variable entrance requirements and to freeze the premiums payed by employers and employees into the Unemployment Insurance fund.

It is unfortunate that the Government has brought this Bill in at this late moment. Here we are in the dying hours of a sitting which will be finished by the end of December. If this Bill is not passed we would revert to a variable entrance requirement and the unemployed would need 14 weeks to qualify for unemployment insurance benefits.

We on this side of the House have no difficulty with supporting the Bill. There is no question that we support it and want it passed as quickly as possible. However, I think we ought to take this opportunity to reflect on the unemployment insurance program because the variable entrance requirement in itself is attached to the regional extended benefits.

The Government recently received the Forget Report in which we find some disturbing recommendations indeed. May I remind the House that when the Forget Commission was set up to look at the unemployment insurance program it was in an atmosphere of deficit cutting. In November of 1984 the Government was all set to cut deficits here, there and everywhere. It tried it through deindexing old age pensions and came up a cropper on that one. The Government made some announcements with respect to unemployment insurance. One was the consideration of pension income as earned income. Another was looking at severence pay and holiday pay as earned income and to appropriately cut back unemployment insurance benefits for those who received either, or for those who took an early retirement and received a pension. Because of the public outcry against that type of mindless cutting the Government set up the Forget Commission.

The Forget Commission was not set up to make the unemployment insurance program more humane, more sensitive or more responsive to the needs of the unemployed. It was set up in direct response to the Government's need and wish to cut $3 billion from the unemployment insurance fund. Magically, as if by osmosis, the Forget Report came back with a report which suggests exactly that. It recommends the removal of $3 billion from the unemployment insurance fund.

It is interesting to speculate on the Forget Commission report. First, it cost $5.2 million, which money came out of the unemployment insurance fund. It did not come out of the general revenues of the Government. Thus employers and employees have paid for this study. The money did not come from the government unemployment insurance accounts. It did not come from the government side of the account; it came from the premium account. It came out of the contributions of employers and employees. The Chairman of the commission was paid $725 per day plus $125 per day expenses. I am always amazed at how the rich and well-heeled can sit back and make recommendations regarding the levels of income that poor people receive. If we had some time I would like to do some speculation on that subject. However, I wish to take a look at what was said in the Forget Commission report.

Mr. Forget said that he went across the country and listened to Canadians. In fact, he received 475 briefs, most of which came from trade unions, individuals and advocacy groups. About 19 per cent of the briefs came from the business sector. In addition, the Forget Commission received 1,500 written briefs along with which there were no appearances. Mr. Forget said that he listened and that there were a great many complaints and much criticism that the unemployment insurance fund was unfair, unjust and that it was abused.

I have examined the briefs. I have found that a very small number of them, primarily the ones from the Canadian Chamber of Commerce and the federation of small business—just two or three briefs—recommended the type of Draconian measures that Mr. Forget and the majority of his commission recommended. For example, none of the briefs from fishermen recommended the elimination of fishermen's benefits. Only two or three briefs out of the 1,500 recommended the elimination of the regional extended benefits. None of them proposed any annualization. So to whom was Mr. Forget and the majority of his commission tuned in?

In an article which appears in today's The Toronto Star Mr. Roy Bennett points out that the commission report states the following:

> To address the question of fairness, it is important to identify those income groups that are the chief beneficiaries of unemployment insurance and the $3 billion of regional extended benefits.

He goes on to state that the unemployment insurance program was not redistributing wealth adequately. That is not what the unemployment insurance program is designed to do. No reputable individual who I know has suggested that the function of the unemployment insurance program is to redistribute wealth. The program was established to insure against the loss of income as a result of becoming unemployed. That is what the unemployment insurance program was designed to do.

It seems to me that Governments of the past have recognized that in some parts of the country the chances of becoming unemployed are much greater than in other parts of the country. For example, in the Golden Horseshoe at this point in time a person can leave one job and walk into another tomorrow. That is not uncommon. We must also recognize that in other parts of the country the same thing is not so easy. In fact, there are parts of the country where it is important to Canada's economic health that the resources be mined, fished and cut. We must recognize that those are seasonal operations. Thus we insure workers against the loss of income should they lose their jobs. That is the underpinning of the unemployment insurance program.

Mr. Forget has come along and said in his very wealthy, blithe and autocratic way that we can eliminate the regional extended benefits and we can annualize the income of those collecting UI. In this way a person in Toronto, for example, who has worked 20 weeks will receive $240 a week under the present unemployment insurance system. On the proposal of Mr. Forget another person in St. John's, Newfoundland under the same circumstances with the same insured income will receive $102 a week. He throws in that an earnings supplementation program can be provided. However, when we open the Forget Commission report and try to find details with respect to that program we are forced to ask the following questions. Will it be income-attached? Will it be total family income or individual income? Does one have to be working to collect it? How long will it last? How much will one receive? There are no details with respect to these questions. However, there are all sorts of details with respect to what will be cut off and how it will be cut off, but nothing with respect to what will replace it. Canadians right across the country are not prepared to accept that pig-in-a-poke approach—no way!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. It being 3.30 p.m., pursuant to the special order adopted yesterday, I must now interrupt the proceedings and the House will now proceed to the consideration of Private Members' Business.

CONSTITUTION ACTS, 1867-1982

SUGGESTED AMENDMENT TO ABOLISH SENATE

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, the Constitution Acts, 1867 to 1982, should be amended in order to abolish the Senate, and that this House urges that the Senate and the Legislative Assemblies of all provinces pass similar resolutions, and that the Governor General issue a Proclamation under the Great Seal of Canada to that effect.

He said: Mr. Speaker, it is with pleasure, perhaps tinged with regret that this motion is no longer a votable item, that I rise today to present this motion and to say that I am proud and happy that it is very much in the mainstream tradition of my Party. When I first came to this House, given some of the statements made during the 1984 election campaign and repeated in the House since that time, with the notable exception of the decimated remnants of the former Liberal Government, I was hopeful that, while this motion might not lead to the abolition of the Senate and the arrival of the moving vans tomorrow or even next week, it would indeed assist in setting in motion the processes required to rid this country of an institution which was once an embellishment but is now an embarrassment.

Today I would like to acknowledge the record of members of my Party, some of whom are no longer in this House, who have proposed and argued for the abolition of the Senate. I would like to acknowledge the contribution of former Leaders of this Party and its precursors and predecessors. I would also like to acknowledge the contribution of the Leader of my Party, the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent). It was he who introduced a motion in the House on March 11, 1985. Rather than quote the complete motion, I would instance a couple of its clauses:

> Whereas the Senate of Canada enjoys legislative powers, but exercises these powers without popular mandate;
> Whereas the Senate of Canada is a product of an earlier period when democracy had not yet matured in Canada;
> Whereas adoption of this resolution would continue to allow for the creation of new and democratic legislative institutions by the Government of Canada and the provinces of Canada;
> This House urges the Government of Canada and the Governments of the provinces to act as expeditiously as possible to abolish the Senate of Canada.

At that time, surprisingly enough, members of the Official Opposition gave their consent to the debate of such a motion. Unfortunately, the Government, through a speech from the now Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn) along the lines of the need for consultation and consensus, essentially turned down that initiative. Thus, I believe, the Government missed a great opportunity to rid Canadian society and the Parliament of Canada of an anachronism.

I shall quote again from the motion of my Hon. Leader:

> Whereas the Senate of Canada enjoys legislative powers, but exercises these powers without popular mandate;

If I were to make a one-sentence summary of my case for the abolition of the Senate, those are the words I would use. The Senate of Canada operates within the Canadian parliamentary framework without a popular mandate.

I would like to refresh the memory of the House of the exchange which took place in March 1985 between the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Leader of the Official Opposition The Prime Minister, tongue in cheek and ever quick, offered the Leader of the Official Opposition the chance to bring in a motion to abolish the Senate if it was supported by the Liberal Party. Unfortunately, the Leader of the Opposition chose not to call the Prime Minister's bluff. Had he done so, he might have either embarrassed the Government or, indeed, forced it to act on the offer that was made rather than merely relying on rhetoric, wit and evasion to accomplish their objectives within the parliamentary process.

I do not wish to provide an historical survey today; indeed, time does not allow. Nor do I want to deal with personalties. There must be rules of mutual respect. While the Senate continues to exist, I will do my best to observe it. Although it is difficult to deal with either assembly without referring to individuals and practices, I am sure you will correct me if I err on this rule, Mr. Speaker.

In the context of the resolution, it matters little what the personal work or merits, opinions, strengths or weaknesses, habits, shortcomings, real, imagined or alleged are of the Members of the other House. Indeed, it matters not very much what the level of their income from their official duties, if I could use the term ever so loosely, might be. It matters little what income they draw from other sources, whether it be simply Old Age Security pensions or directors' fees and residual incomes such as in some cases is said to amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars. In trying to avoid the ad hominem or ad feminem arguments, I would have to ask for the forebearance of the House because it very difficult indeed to ignore some of the grosser examples that have been presented to us from time to time.

I would like to discuss briefly the background of second chambers in general. In western constitutional history, bicameralism was originally justified by the need to represent the aristocratic element of society in a distinctive and powerful way within Parliament. The classical theory was expressed by Montesquieu in his The Spirit of Laws. Second chambers, however, have indeed been passionately decried. The objection of Sieyès in the French Revolution is well known: if it contradicts the popular chamber, then it is not democratic; if it merely agrees, then of course it is unnecessary.

To quote a Canadian context, a Father of Confederation, Georges-Etienne Cartier, claimed that the Senate provided the power of resistance to oppose the democratic element. Indeed, today there is still on the walls of that chamber the quote from Cicero: "It is the duty of the nobles to oppose the fickleness of the multitudes".

Harold Laskey, the British political scientist, said that anyone who examines the nature and history of second chambers in general will discover that their main purpose is at least to delay and, if possible, to prevent the disturbance of the status quo. They are, in fact, conservative structures, using that term in its small "c" sense. I am glad to know that many of my colleagues within the Progressive Conservative Party believe that the Senate has outlived its usefulness.

Since World War II, there has been a trend away from bicameralism throughout the world. Second chambers have been abolished in Denmark and Sweden, and in 1968 the Province of Quebec finally rid itself of the last provincial second chamber in Canada. According to a survey carried out in the last decade, a single elected chamber prevails in 84 countries and bicameralism in only 55.

The faults of the institution derive from the fact that the Senate was established during an immature phase of Canadian democracy. I do not claim that the present phase is perfect but it has at least matured in its institutions. The Senate was modelled, as are so many of our institutions, on the British constitutional model; in this case, the House of Lords. It was to replicate the function the House of Lords served at a time when Canada functioned very much as an appendage of the United Kingdom.

Canada's system was modelled on the British House of Lords where the principle was, though not explicitly stated, to provide a brake for the powerful, the privileged and the landed interests on the initiatives of the democratic society. Second chambers were considered necessary to protect business and commercial interests from the irresponsible operations of popular Government.

The Senate is neither regionally representative today, nor is it democratic. It is, to quote Bob Rae, an undemocratic institution working at the heart of a democratic Government. I would like to quote from an editorial which appeared in the local newspaper. I found it to be very persuasive on the subject. It said:

> As a body of provincial representation, it is obsolete—overtaken by the elaborate institutionalization of federal-provincial relations... The first ministers' conference has become a permanent feature of the political system. Premiers can press their provincial interests more powerfully, and more legitimately, than any senator.

The Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) referred to the Senate as a home of hacks, flacks, and bagmen. Such it is, and as such it can cost an average in projected terms of $1.5 million to keep a Senator there until retirement. Younger Senators, of course, are more expensive. But I think the worst demonstration of misuse of the appointment power to the Senate has to be that started under the Trudeau regime of using it as a holding tank for campaign teams.

Around 90 per cent or more of the legislation that determines the way in which we live our lives in Canada comes from unicameral institutions, Indian bands, municipal governments, provinces, and school boards. Why do we need a Senate today? We do not.

Mr. Jim Edwards (Edmonton South): Mr. Speaker, I would support the Hon. Member's motion if only he had provided for the immediate replacement of an appointed Senate by an elected body following its abolition.

[Translation]

The last time I rose in this House to speak about the reform of the Senate was during the debate on my own motion which asked for a reform of the second Chamber. This was on May 17, 1985. Since then, an increasing number of Canadians have expressed their support for a reform of this unfortunately outdated institution. Some say that we are wasting time speaking about it. I disagree.

[English]

I would agree that we have not yet developed the critical mass required to provoke reform. By discussing today the need to reform the other place, we are adding our voices to the momentum for reform.

I firmly believe that the concept of Senate reform has momentum. More people are talking about it, and more seriously. I hear Senators talking about it. I read Senate reform policies adopted by distinguished political parties. University students are writing papers and theses on the need and alternatives for reform.

One of the most forceful and persuasive statements on the need for Senate reform was made on the Hill 10 days ago by the distinguished former Premier of the Province of Alberta, who was not always known for his endorsement of such an institution. Indeed, Mr. Lougheed confessed to his conversion to the course of an elected, effective, and equal Senate having examined the distinguished report on that subject which was done by a select committee of his own legislature. He went on to indicate that many in western Canada and Atlantic Canada, and some in central Canada, are coming to the view that one of the institutions which would need to be reformed in order to hold together this rather desparate nation would be the institution of a triple-E Senate.

I would contend that the discussions about reform have crystalized around two central notions. First, the need to give the Senate legitimacy by electing its members; second, the importance of making representation in the Senate equal for each province.

Some people unfairly and inaccurately portray the Senate as a do-nothing institution. Senators are portrayed as lay-about political hacks, as my hon. friend has suggested. Neither assertion remotely resembles the truth. The truth is that the Senate is populated by some of Canada's brightest and hardest working people. Much of the work the Senate accomplishes is unsung, unseen, and yet invaluable. I am thinking particularly of the pre-study of legislation. The pre-study work of the Senate's committees is not recorded anywhere, and it is not well known. Nonetheless, it has done much to make our laws clear and workable.

No, Mr. Speaker, I do not urge a reform of the Senate because of any lack of respect for the work done by our senators. Far from it!

[English]

I favour reform in order to give legitimacy to the good work done in the other place. The only way that the Senate can gain legitimacy is if its members are elected. Many, perhaps even most Senators, agree with me on this point.

It is essential that we define our expectations and intentions for a reformed Senate. I favour the triple-E Senate with equal representation from each province. I conceive of a reformed Senate as achieving the purpose originally ascribed to it by the Fathers of Confederation: that of a regional counterweight within the national legislature, to balance the more populace regions in matters of federal jurisdiction.

This is a federation with jurisdiction divided between two orders of government. The objective of Senate reform is to restore regional and sectional balance to the debates in matters of federal jurisdiction, not to give the provincial governments a foot in the door of the federal legislature. That would betray the very concept of a federation.

Numerous reports, position papers, and government Bills were tabled, discussed, and introduced during the Liberals' long reign under Mr. Trudeau. However, as documented by Mr. Bill Yurko, a former Member of Parliament, not one of these government initiatives or Liberal dominated committees from 1972 to 1983 supported an elected Senate. Indeed, the only Liberal dominated report to support election to the other place was the report of the Special Committee on Senate Reform of 1984. It is interesting and important to note that in his discussion paper presented to the committee the then Justice Minister, the Hon. Mark MacGuigan, stated:

> The Government of Canada has no set position on how the Senators should be chosen.

His discussion paper neither recommended nor rejected an elected Senate. That was the Liberal Party's position in 1984. I am afraid that the Liberals are Johnny-come-latelies to the idea of a democratic second chamber. In fact, it has been pointed out that at their recent policy conference which was so successful in one of its objectives, but so great a failure in its attempt to formulate any policy, another resolution was adopted which would, if it became law, render such a Senate virtually impossible. The Liberal Party endorsed a constitutional amendment that would in effect give both Quebec and Ontario a veto over future constitutional amendments. That, I submit, would forestall such a development.

With all respect, I do hope that this particular motion will fire some genuine and sincere debate. I applaud the Hon. Member for reintroducing the subject into the Chamber. The time has come for a serious debate and serious action on this matter.

Before commenting on the Hon. Member's Party and its position, I would like to say one final thing about the Official Opposition's position on the issue. In my opinion, there is some doubt about the sincerity of the position adopted by the Liberal Party on Grey Cup weekend. It is a well named weekend, by the way, since most of the material coming out of the Congress Centre was grey in colour. I would suggest that when the Bill by the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) was talked out the other day in the Chamber, it was talked out by representatives of the Liberal Party. I submit that that shows their lack of seriousness about the issue.

In contrast, we can at least say this for the New Democrats. Their stance on the Senate has been consistent, albeit consistently wrong. Still today we have an hon. gentleman, a member of the New Democratic Party, proposing the abolition of the Senate. That would deny a fundamental and still relevant aspect of the Confederation agreement. I suggest it will fall on barren ground, at least in western Canada.

Two aspects of the Confederation agreement as forged at Charlottetown and Quebec City are regularly underemphasized. First, that Confederation was and is in great part an economic arrangement. How the economic costs and benefits of nationhood were to be distributed was a primary focus of the discussion which led to Confederation, and an essential aspect of the agreement.

[Translation]

Second, the Fathers of Confederation, and there were unfortunately no mothers of Confederation, were very concerned about the role and status of the second House of the Federal Parliament. They spent more time discussing the Senate than the division of powers. That is an historical fact, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

I mention these two facts because they are linked. I am convinced that if Canada's regions are to share equally in the nation's prosperity, as is their due under the Confederation agreement, our national institutions must be strengthened. The most important of these is the Senate, for an objective consideration of the proceedings of the Chalottetown and Quebec conferences and of the proceedings of the various legislatures leads to the definitive conclusion that the Senate was intended as the principal voice of regional and sectional interests in matters of federal jurisdiction. History proves that neither Cabinet nor the provinces can guarantee economic justice within Confederation. That job is properly assigned to the Senate. The Fathers of Confederation knew that. We just have to live up to their intent.

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, I had not meant to make a partisan speech today, at least not unduly. However, it will be very difficult to restrain myself as much as I would like after hearing the ridiculous comments about the Liberal Party by the Hon. Member who represents the ridiculous Conservative Party.

In his not so eloquent remarks, the Hon. Member made some reference to the fact that it was the fault of the Liberals the other day that a motion in the House did not proceed. He said that the Liberals talked it out. That is fascinating. As I recall the situation, there were exactly the same number of speakers from each Party, all of whom spoke for the maximum 10 minutes. This leads me to believe that each Member who spoke deliberately used his or her time. Therefore, Conservative Members are just as responsible as anyone else for the motion not proceeding. I ask the Hon. Member across the way what kind of moral honesty is that? If I were he, I would fire that speech writer immediately. Any speech writer who cannot give an Hon. Member better information than that does not deserve his or her paycheque.

The Tories can never speak for themselves. They are the silent majority in the House. They are the book-ends. They are the people who came in with the tide and will go out with the ebb-tide. Those surfers who were elected in the last election should perhaps think about that before making such ridiculous remarks in the House of Commons.

The subject at hand is very important and should not be a partisan issue. Of course that is the last thing I would want to do. The Hon. Member for Kenora—Rainy River (Mr. Parry) proposed a motion today that we should amend the Constitution of the country to abolish the Senate. Of course that really means that we should abolish one of the two Chambers of Parliament. Let us not forget that the two Houses of Parliament are sovereign. Therefore, any remark to the effect that we should abolish or dissolve half of our parliamentary institution is extremely inappropriate.

I say to Hon. Members of the Democratic Party that there are reasons for the existence of that institution. The Hon. Member for Kenora—Rainy River may have referred to some of them, but unfortunately he forget to mention that which works well in the Senate. As well, he completely forgot that there were reasons for the establishment of the Senate other than the unique one to which he referred. In part he referred to the fact that the Senate was appointed in an era in which the democratically elected House of Commons was viewed as somewhat immature. That may have been one of the reasons at that time, but there was also another one.

The Hon. Member is a student of history. He must know the history of Canada. When Canada East and Canada West, formerly Upper and Lower Canada, and the two Atlantic provinces joined together in 1867, there was an agreement that proportional representation would be given to one House and that there would be a guarantee in the other House ensuring that the regions of the country were represented. Perhaps he forgot that part of the equation. However, he should remember it, especially since the Members of the New Democratic Party purportedly speak to matters important to everyone, in a sanctimonious way. They should remember that, especially having consulted with their Quebec caucus chairman as they must have done earlier this week.

The original arrangement was to have in Canada a Senate with a third of its representation from the Province of Quebec, a third from the Province of Ontario, and a third from the maritime provinces. In that formula there was a constitutional guarantee to provide a minimum number of seats for the Province of Quebec.

And the Hon. Member is of course aware that at the time, people felt it was important for the Fathers of Confederation to have a mechanism that would ensure that the linguistic duality of our country would always be reflected in the Parliament of Canada. Earlier this week, when we were having a similar debate in the House, I mentioned that after the 1979 election campaign, when the Clark Government headed by the present Secretary of State for External Affairs was elected, its leader had to go to the Senate to get someone to represent this province in his Government. And I am not being partisan, since he doesn't even belong to my party.

My point is that it was important for this particular Prime Minister, and perhaps for others in the future, to be able to seek out representatives from certain regions in our country to ensure that those regions, and especially when we're talking about Quebec . . . There is a particular concern here because when we are talking about Quebec, we are talking about one of the two founding peoples. In the Clark Government, one of the two was not even represented in the Government, not because of the Prime Minister but because only one Member had been elected in that province. Only two Members, but only one Francophone. And so he did not have enough Members to appoint as Ministers in his Cabinet. And that is when he opted for going to the Senate, and I think that was an inspired gesture. What would the Hon. Member who is proposing to abolish the Senate have done in that kind of situation?

Does he mean that if one of the two founding peoples had not managed to elect Members on the Government side, they would not deserve to be represented in that Government? Is that what the New Democrats are trying to say today? I wonder whether that is what they really want. If that is the NDP position, then the House and the entire country ought to know, because for a long time we have been hearing about this so-called NDP formula for parliamentary modernization, which includes abolishing one of the two Houses of our Parliament, and thus potentially preventing one of the two founding peoples from getting the kind of recognition it has received in the past. And that is not mere speculation, Mr. Speaker, since it actually happened in the last ten or twenty years.

Mr. Gérin: Put your money where your mouth is!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Parliamentary Secretary to the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Hudon), on a point of order.

Mr. Hudon: Mr. Speaker, if there are two founding peoples, why didn't the second Chamber ask for the second founding people to sign the Constitution Act in 1982?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I don't think that is a point of order. The Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell (Mr. Boudria).

Mr. Boudria: Although this is very interesting, Mr. Speaker, it is hardly a point of order. I would like to ask the Hon. Member what he and his Government are doing just now. He has done his homework; I am looking forward to his speech in a little while and he will be able to deal with this issue, in view of the trick which the Progressive Conservative Party is trying to play on Quebec at this time.

Mrs. Mailly: We are asking for details. Is that the official position of the Liberal Party?

Mr. Boudria: It will be interesting to hear what the Hon. Member has to say.

I am anxiously waiting for his speech, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I conclude my remarks by saying today that, yes, I feel that the Senate should indeed be reformed and made up of elected representatives. By the way, I disagree with the PC Member of Edmonton-South (Mr. Edwards), who was saying a while ago that every province should have the same number of senators. I suggest this does not make sense. I say that it would be unfair for the province of Ontario, with over one third of this country's population, to have exactly the same number of senators as Prince Edward Island. People often use the American model. I tell you that there can be no American model, because there is no single state which has 35 per cent of the whole population of the United States. Another Member mentioned earlier this week that it would be necessary to take all the states West of the Mississipi to make up 35 per cent of the population of that country.

This formula which was never used elsewhere should not be used here either. Let us reform the Senate and make it elective. Let us stop talking about it and let us do it!

[English]

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I should like to make just a few remarks. Perhaps I could clear up something which was the object of controversy between the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell (Mr. Boudria) and the Hon. Member for Edmonton South (Mr. Edwards) in respect of the Private Member's Bill of the Hon. Member for Bow River (Mr. Taylor) regarding the creation of an elected Senate. He was quite mistaken to imagine that anyone talked that Bill out. It was selected as a votable item and there are at least four hours of debate left. You could not talk that Bill out if you wanted to because it has to come to a vote. That was one of the more meaningless debates we have had around here in a long time, with the Liberals and Conservatives trying to figure out who talked out a Bill which procedurally cannot be talked out. I suppose that is par for the course in some respects.

As to abolition of the Senate, the Hon. Member for Kenora—Rainy River (Mr. Parry) said that is the traditional NDP position. I regard that as the preferable option. The best thing we could do would be to abolish the Senate. However, I have no illusions about the possibility of that coming to be the political consensus. In western Canada a consensus is building for another kind of change to the Senate, that is for an elected Senate. We will have plenty of opportunity to consider this issue as a result of the Hon. Member for Bow River's motion and it will be interesting to see what people say and how they vote on the motion. I think it is one of the more interesting issues to be put to a vote as a result of the new procedure on Private Members' Business. I am kind of excited by the possibilities and how it will turn out. However, when we are thinking about reform, let us not just think about the Senate, let us also think about the House of Commons.

One of the primary concerns about the Senate has been whether or not it lives up to its original function of representing the regions. Does it address the problem, as seen by many Canadians, of the political process being dominated by the interests of Quebec and Ontario? But let us ask ourselves not only what Senate reform might do in that respect but also what House of Commons reform might do.

I ask Members to think about proposals for some combination of proportional representation in the House of Commons alongside the kind of representation we have now. I personally would not be in favour of going to full proportional representation along the lines of the Israeli system, for example, where party lists are the only way people get into the Chamber, and where there is none of what we regard as a traditional parliamentary system in which people represent identifiable areas and constituents. However, West Germany has a system where a certain number, I believe it is two-thirds, of their members are elected in the traditional parliamentary way and the other third elected according to proportional representation. If we were to adopt some Canadian combination of that system here, it might also address the feeling of people in western Canada, for example, that they are not well represented at the centre of the political process. I believe that is behind, to a great degree, the call for Senate reform in western Canada.

The traditional NDP call for abolition is based on the fact that it is not a democratic institution. That objection remains. However, there is a second question as to what we will do to address the feeling that smaller provinces and less powerful regions do not have enough political clout at the centre. I think that can be rectified in a number of ways and that is why I am personally open to the idea of an elected Senate.

I have to say in all honesty that a lot of expectations are being raised about what an elected Senate could do. I cannot imagine it living up to those expectations. There would have to be a great transfer of power from what we normally consider the domain of the House of Commons to an elected Senate, and that would inevitably be much more controversial than those who advocate an elected Senate think it would be. I am not saying that as a criticism, I just think this idea is in its political infancy. It has not been thought through.

For example, a lot of people in western Canada have said recently, in response to the CF-18 decision, that that is all the more evidence of the need for an elected Senate. I have asked myself a number of times how an elected Senate would have prevented that decision. In the end it was a government decision, not a decision of a particular Chamber. In order for those kinds of decisions to be made more fairly through an elected Senate, much more would have to be said about what the relationship between an elected Senate and government decisions would be. That has not been articulated by many of the people who have spoken in favour of an elected Senate. It has not been thought through.

But I did not rise today to criticize that idea. I am certainly open to suggestions for Senate reform which would make it democratic and make it address that sense of regional alienation which exists in certain parts of Canada. I simply caution Members not to create false expectations about how simple it might be to achieve an elected Senate. I imagine it would be very difficult indeed.

As I said at the beginning, we are going to have at least four more hours to debate the issue. As I understand it, the motion put forward by the Hon. Member for Bow River has only been debated for an hour. We will hear from at least 24 or 25 more Members of the House of Commons and then have a vote. It could be a historic vote. If Members of the House of Commons decide by a majority vote to send a message to the Government that they want Senate reform to be taken so seriously that they actually voted for an elected Senate, then that will have been an incredible day for Private Members' Business. It will have been the result of an initiative of one Private Member along with others. The Hon. Member for Kenora—Rainy River would have had a votable motion on the same issue had the last session not been prorogued and new votable items selected by the committee. I commend both he and the Hon. Member for Bow River and everyone else who is trying to contribute constructively to a debate about the kind of reform we need to address some serious questions of regional alienation, how to make our institutions more democratic, and how to finally get rid of this undemocratic cell within the larger democratic organism.

[Translation]

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, on October 1, 1986, when the Hon. Member for Kenora—Rainy River (Mr. Parry) presented his motion to abolish the Senate, I am sure he did so without any partisan motives, just as his comments a few minutes ago before the House were equally devoid of such considerations. My Conservative colleague, the Hon. Member for Edmonton South (Mr. Edwards) also made some non-partisan remarks on this very important subject. It is unfortunate, Mr. Speaker, that the Liberal Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell (Mr. Boudria) found it necessary to make comments that smacked of electioneering and petty politics.

I think that when we are discussing subjects of historical or national importance, Members should be a little less flamboyant in their speeches and should, if only for a short while, relax their ideological and political stance. I shall try to follow the example of my colleagues who just spoke and add my own equally non-partisan considerations. First of all, I would like to look at how the issue has evolved during the last fifteen years.

This is not the first time we are talking about changing the Senate. In 1972, a Special Joint Committee on the Constitution spoke out on the role of the Senate. It said that the Senate's principal role was to protect the provinces, minorities and regional interests. The Committee would let the Senate amend certain types of legislation and considered the Senate as the Chamber for sober second thought, away from the political ambience of the legislative process.

The next step was 1978 when the British Columbia Government appointed a committee on the reform of the Canadian Senate. Although the committee did not advocate outright abolition of the institution, they did recommend basic changes. In a nutshell, our friends in British Columbia wanted a reform under which provincial and regional participation would be institutionalized and they suggested that, up to a point, the Senate should be empowered to review legislation. The same year, 1978, an Ontario legislative committee, the Canada West Foundation and a Conservative Party committee seemed to favour the establishment of some kind of a House of the provinces to which provincial MLAs would automatically belong. In other words, MLAs would make up a strong provincial delegation.

In 1979 the Pepin-Robarts Commission came out in favour of a Council of the Federation made up of elected members of various provincial cabinets. These elected members would have the right to vote in the Council of the Federation, which would also include elected federal government representatives who would be entitled to act as such and take part in debates, but without voting rights.

In 1980 the Quebec Liberal Party constitutional committee supported the abolition of the Senate, to be replaced by a federal council which would accept representations from official delegates of the various provincial administrations in this country.

In 1981, once again, we hear from the Canada West Foundation, this time about an elected Senate. In 1982, the Alberta Government, of which my colleague for Edmonton South (Mr. Edwards), who has already spoken on this subject today, used to be a member, proposed that the members of the Senate be appointed by the provincial Governments. This would have given a lot of power to each province over its own representatives.

If I may open a parenthesis, Mr. Speaker, it was also in 1982 that the Quebec Liberals, as I see that my colleague for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell (Mr. Boudria) is back in the House, forced 6 million Quebecers to go down on their knees and sign a Constitution to which they were not a party. I wanted to mention this fact because it is important. This antagonism toward Quebec has created very difficult climates in that province. This week again, the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâces (Mr. Allmand), a Liberal, showed his animosity toward Quebec by calling the members of the Société Saint-Jean-Baptiste du Québec extremists.

The climate was the same in 1982. It is useful to recall the climate in which the Liberals had us live for many years.

In 1984, Mr. Speaker, we had a Joint Committee of the Senate and the House of Commons on Senate Reform. This Committee proposed that members of the Senate be elected by the Canadian people. There would have been compulsory elections for senators. This was much more democratic than the method used by the Liberals to force us, Quebecers, to accept the Constitution in 1982.

Then, more recently, in August 1986, we had the Premiers' Conference in Edmonton which resulted in the Edmonton Statement. At that point, the First Ministers had agreed on a proposal put forward by Quebec's Premier, Mr. Robert Bourassa, which stated Quebec's willingness to sign the Constitution, joining in as a partner. But Quebec's Premier suggested to his colleagues from other provinces that before negotiations could open and the Constitution approved, Quebec's special status should be recognized. I am referring to the provincial Liberals. At the federal level, there is no understanding as yet as to what should be agreed to first among federal Liberals.

Premier Bourassa added that the Province of Quebec should have some authority in immigration matters, in order to increase Quebec's immigration quotas. Finally, Quebec's Premier referred to the vetoing formula, formula 7/75 under which seven provinces or 75 per cent of the population were needed to amend the Constitution. Premier Bourassa stated that three Supreme Court judges should be appointed by Quebec. And, finally, he said there should be a limitation on the Federal Government's spending authority in matters of provincial jurisdiction.

Those are things that may be questionable, Mr. Speaker, but at least they make up the policy of a Government whose Leader is a real Leader. There are no differences of opinion among provincial Liberals on the Constitution. However, there are major differences among federal Liberals on that issue.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, we had the November 1986 First Ministers Conference in Vancouver where the participants agreed to deal with the first stage of a possible amendment process with respect to the Constitution and the Senate, but the points raised by Quebec Premier Bourassa would have to be settled first. They agreed there would be a second stage when the agenda might include the very important issue of potential changes to our Senate, along with statements on property right, fisheries, and a variety of major topics of national interest.

For these reasons, Mr. Speaker, we would be well advised not to proceed any further with the project advocated by my socialist colleague on the other side of the House and to wait until the major recommendations of Mr. Bourassa have been implemented.

Mr. Jean-Guy Hudon (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to speak to the motion before the House today. I realize the brilliant speech by the Hon. Member for Lévis (Mr. Fontaine) will be a difficult act to follow, but I would like to make a few comments just the same.

First of all, Mr. Speaker, I would like to comment on what was said earlier by the Liberal Member, when he said that when in 1979, the then Prime Minister, Mr. Clark, did not have enough Members from Quebec, he went to the Senate to get the representation he needed in his Cabinet for one of the two founding peoples of this country. I think that was an excellent idea, and I'm glad the Hon. Member brought it up. What I did not appreciate, however, is when in 1982, the Senate was a good deal less eager to ensure that the second or rather the first of the two founding peoples had its place within the Canadian Constitution and the repatriation process.

Mr. Speaker, recent events among our neighbours to the south, and I am referring to certain relations with certain countries and the arms sale, I find very perplexing. And I am especially embarrassed when I think of the young people who are watching us. I have been involved in education, and I have always tried to judge what we do as adults in terms of the upcoming generation, the generation that will take our place tomorrow.

And I thought that this was certainly one of the worst examples one could have given to young people today, and I wondered: What do we really have to offer American or Canadian youth? What are we actually going to offer them as Canadians, when we tell them: Listen, just trust the present generation. Watch what we are doing. We have the solutions, we have the means, and we are going to build a country commensurate with your aspirations.

And just look at the disappointed young people to the south and even in our own country, who are asking: Is that the administration that was supposed to build a better world for tomorrow?

Mr. Speaker, it is a little bit like what is going on in the House. It's nothing to write home about. What is the point in saying that we are the pick of the crop, the highest authority in the land, when we spend endless days arguing about a single figure. This idea about a Senate reform is not new and obviously, it won't be implemented overnight. Mr. Speaker, you are well aware that the young Canadians who are watching us as we deal with the unemployment rate which is going down, but not quickly enough— they are watching us on TV and say: what are they talking about today in the House? We talked about the reform of the Senate, we dealt with such and such point. That is no relevancy between these points and the future we should be building for young people.

The House will remember the unfortunate event in 1985 when the Senate refused to adopt a budgetary legislation to provide the Government with a borrowing authority. The whole financial and business community was wondering what was going to happen. For seven or eight weeks, the Senate refused systematically to adopt this legislation, and some senators of a different party were taunting us saying: Do your homework all over again, for we are the House of sober second thought.

Really, Mr. Speaker, we will have to deal with this problem, not necessarily by abolishing the Senate. We should use all our resources. Considered individually, all these people are a source of hope for young Canadians. On the other hand, the energy and vast resources of these people should be channeled, not after the fact, but during the legislative process, into discussions to which the elected representatives could contribute.

Mr. Speaker, basically, as long as the Senate remains a second Chamber able to block the Bills adopted by the duly elected Members of this House, there will remain a division of political parties and the second Chamber will continue to be a means to postpone the passage of Bills and legislation which a freely elected government is entitled to have implemented, and to my knowledge, there was no take over of power with machine guns in Canada in 1984. This is a question of partisanship, and we can see how clearly the Senate is divided along political lines at this time. It seems to me that we should now go beyond this type of upper Chamber.

For these reasons, Mr. Speaker, I believe that the Senate should be replaced, but we have to decide with what.

Mr. François Gérin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I wish to congratulate the Hon. Member on his remarkable speech. What is really remarkable is that he made certain distinctions while the Socialist Member who proposed the motion was unable to do so. Indeed, it is usual for that Party to be unable to make distinctions when analyzing a problem or suggesting solutions.

All that the Hon. Member did was to propose the complete abolition of the Senate. There is no indication of what would replace that institution. Complete abolition is being suggested even though there have been no previous discussions with the provinces. We also have to know the views of Quebec. However, the party—

Mr. Parry: Deal with the motion!

Mr. Gérin: No, do not make jokes about it. If ever there was any thought of appointing an NDP Member to the Senate, I think that, after your proposal, such an idea will never be mentioned again.

• (1620)

I do not know whether or not your Leader heard your motion. He was not here today. He was certainly elsewhere, but if he heard your motion or your speech, he must be disappointed because, apparently, he was most interested in being appointed to the Senate. All I want to say is that it now seems obvious that there should be no question of appointing Socialists to the Senate because, if this motion is sincere, they would not accept such an appointment and it is useless to appoint someone who would not accept it. It would be sad to offer such an enviable position to someone who would just refuse it.

Mr. Della Noce: Strange, but Ian Deans did accept.

Mr. Gérin: True enough, former MP Ian Deans did accept, but not a Senate seat, something else. Even in the case of other positions the Government has offered.

Mr. Speaker, perhaps we ought to be more serious than the Hon. Member who introduced the motion and really consider ways to improve the venerable Senate institution, if it is not to be abolished.

I am sure my colleagues know that interest in Senate reform has been increasing in recent years. A number of reform projects have even been made public, but there is still no consensus as to how we should proceed. There is no need to remind Hon. Members that Senate reform has been the object of many studies.

The best thing I can do today is review some of the major recommendations made in the past few years. I will begin with the report of the Special Joint Committee of the Senate and of the House of Commons on the Constitution of Canada. In its report the committee points out that, at the beginning, the role of the Senate was to protect the interests of provinces, minorities and regions, and to proceed to a review of legislation, the sober second thought. The committee feels that the Senate must be reorganized—not abolished—because the reasons which justified its creation in 1867 are still valid. The committee recommends that the federal Government continue to appoint senators but, as seats become vacant, half the senators be appointed by the federal Government, according to a list of nominees submitted by the provincial or territorial Government involved, the other half being selected the same way as it is today.

Mr. Speaker, in 1978, in a document called Reform of the Canadian Senate, the Government of British Columbia recommended that the Senate should not be abolished but modified. According to this paper, the Senate's principal role should be to institutionalize provincial or regional participation in the federal decision-making process, its secondary role being to examine the Bills adopted by the House of Commons. The paper also recommended that senators should be appointed and released from their duties by the provincial Governments and that the senior senator for each province should be a provincial Minister.

Mr. Speaker, still in 1978, the Ontario Select Committee on Constitutional Reform of the Ontario Legislative Assembly, the Canada West Foundation and the Progressive Conservative Party recommended abolishing the Senate and replacing it with a House of the Provinces. The Ontario Committee proposed that members should be appointed by the provincial governments and represent those governments. Provincial Members, Ministers and the Premier of each province would be eligible.

Mr. Speaker, I see that our speaking time is running out. All the recommendations I have just mentioned—and I have a list of a dozen other recommendations from all parts of Canada—had the same focus, and that is, not abolishing the Senate but replacing it or changing it in some way or other, and doing so within the Canadian Constitution, and after consultation with, and the approval of, all the provinces. Therefore we cannot proceed in the manner suggested by the Hon. Member.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being 4.30 p.m., pursuant to Order made on Wednesday, December 17, 1986, the House shall now revert to Statements by Ministers.

FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS

POLICY STATEMENT

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, today I am announcing the policies which will provide new direction for our financial services industry.

Pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 67(2) I have the honour to lay upon the Table copies, in both official languages, of documents pertaining to regulatory reform in the financial sector.

This is an industry which touches all Canadians. Our savings accounts, mortgages, car loans, insurance policies, all of these and more, are financial products essential to our daily lives, and it is critical that we be well served by this industry. There are few Canadians whose lives are not touched in one way or another every day by a financial institution.

All Hon. Members know that Canada is fortunate to possess one of the finest financial systems in the world. It is composed of sound world class institutions. It employs hundreds of thousands of Canadians and serves millions. It is one of Canada's leading export industries, which is something we ought not to forget. The financial industry is in the midst of rapid change. Communications technology has created 24 hour global markets. The importance of international capital flows has dramatically increased, and the traditional roles of financial institutions are changing. They are now doing far more than they used to.

These global forces, quite frankly, have challenged existing legislation designed for an earlier and less dynamic era. That is why, early in its mandate, the Government announced its intention to work with the provinces, the public and the financial community to reform financial regulations in order to seize the opportunities offered by change.

In April of last year, the Government set out its objectives for financial reform. We made specific proposals to focus the debate. In the 18 months since that time, extensive discussion, study and analysis have taken place and a variety of views have been expressed. First, I find there is a widespread appreciation of the key role of the financial sector in our economic renewal, not just in facilitating investment in Canada, but as an exporter and employer. Second, there is agreement that our financial system is fundamentally sound and that the basic division of supervisory responsibility for our institutions should remain in place.

There is universal acknowledgement of the trend toward integrated financial services, both here and abroad, and broad agreement on the benefits this brings to consumers.

[English]

There is continuing concern regarding self dealing and abuses of conflict of interest in both closely and widely held institutions. This also has been evident in the last 18 months. We have received detail and practical advice on how to improve our regulatory and supervisory structures. While there have been diverse views expressed on the best means to regulate our financial system, all of us seek the same goal. What we want is a sound financial system which provides Canadians with innovative and competitive services, which broadens the range of choice for Canadian savers and investors and which fosters safe and well supervised financial institutions which can compete effectively around the world.

I am announcing policies today which will achieve these important objectives, policies which we believe are realistic, balanced and, above all, workable. The document I am tabling today is entitled New Directions for the Financial Sector, which will allow the Canadian financial community to plan and act with confidence. It outlines the policies which will be tabled as legislation in 1987. It also provides the framework in which the Government will exercise the specific powers regarding the transfer of ownership as proposed in Bill C-8 and Bill C-9, both of which received first reading on October 6, 1986.

The policies we are proposing are policies for the next generation of financial institutions. They are far ranging and will have a profound and positive impact. They deal with interrelated issues which call for an integrated approach. I believe careful study of the document I am tabling today is necessary to gain a full appreciation of the scope of our proposals.

What is the essence of our approach? It is to act in four interrelated areas. First, we will allow the integration of financial services through the common ownership of institutions and the extension of powers. Second, we will introduce a pragmatic ownership policy which checks the growth of commercial financial links in the economy while maintaining balanced competition within the financial services sector. Third, we will provide a strong framework for prudential regulation. Fourth, we will modernize and strengthen our supervisory system.

[Translation]

In short, we will introduce a pragmatic ownership policy, provide a strong framework for prudential regulation. And, modernize and strengthen our supervisory system.

[English]

Let me discuss each area in turn. First, with respect to the integration of financial services, the Government believes our laws should reflect today's market reality. The banks and non-bank financial institutions today are not only capable of providing, but are actually providing, an evermore common range of services which meet the needs of all Canadians as savers, borrowers or as investors. In order to foster such common benefits, the Government will end unnecessary institutional barriers within the financial services industry and will allow the integration of financial services. Restrictions on common ownership of regulated financial institutions will be removed, allowing common ownership through affiliates or subsidiaries. Separate institutions will be maintained for supervisory purposes, but full networking of services will be allowed between institutions, except for the retailing of property and casualty insurance and life insurance.

In-house powers will be broadened for institutions in the various "pillars" of the financial industry. All trust, loan and life insurance companies will be granted full consumer lending powers. The larger of them will be eligible for full commercial lending powers. All federally regulated institutions will be able to offer investment advice and portfolio management services. Banks and insurance companies will be granted ancilliary fiduciary powers. From the point of view of Canadian consumers, these policies will allow your neighbourhood branches to offer a wide array of innovative and convenient services with greater potential for one-stop shopping.

The philosophy underpinning financial services integration would be to build, not to buy. To protect against harmful concentration, acquisition of financial services companies will reaquire the approval of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). As a general rule, large financial institutions will not be allowed to acquire other large institutions. An exception to this general policy will be made for the securities industry. Given the desire for a viable Canadian presence in this strategic industry, the federal Government will permit domestically owned, federally regulated financial institutions to build or buy securities dealer subsidiaries. Necessary legislative amendments to permit such participation in the securities industry will be introduced in the near future.

The second area of action is a pragmatic and responsible ownership policy. Current Canadian law requires all large domestic banks to be widely held, and new domestic banks to attain widely-held status within 10 years. Trust, loan and stock insurance companies, on the other hand, do not have similar ownership rules. Many of these institutions also have significant commercial links.

While this variety of ownership forms is not unique to Canada, the development of significant links between these non-bank financial institutions and companies with commercial interests has been a source of intense debate. Some have emphasized the issue of concentration of power.

[Translation]

Some have emphasized the issue of concentration of power and the potential for self-dealing and conflict of interest. However, there is also widespread recognition that entrepreneurial owners have been a source of dynamism in the industry. They have provided firms with the leadership and financial strength to compete with our large banks.

[English]

One argument is that financial institutions should be widely held. The other argument is that it is also useful to have closely held entrepreneur-oriented financial institutions. Both arguments are valid. As with many issues in this complex age, a balance must be struck.

To lessen the potential dangers of commercial-financial links while promoting competition, the Government intends to implement the following policy. Smaller banks will be permitted to be closely held by domestic investors with no commercial interests. They will be allowed to remain closely held until they attain a capital base of $750 million, a base which will support about $15 billion in assets. Banks that exceed this capital threshold of $750 million will be subject to the following ownership rules.

Shareholders with less than 10 per cent of the shares in any class, or any series of any class, will be permitted to acquire additional shares to a ceiling of 10 per cent. Shareholders with more than 10 per cent of such shares will not be permitted to acquire additional shares in the same class or series. Within five years of reaching the capital threshold at least 35 per cent of the voting shares must be publicly traded and widely held. The penalty for non-compliance will be a constraint on the bank's ability to grow. These measures will ensure that major existing banks remain widely held, and that closely held banks of substantial size move toward wide ownership as new equity is issued.

Ownership policies regarding trust, loan and insurance companies will be complementary, but they will not be identical, reflecting the different histories and circumstances of these institutions. Like many Canadians the Government is concerned with the potential dangers of growing commercial-financial links. Yet we are equally concerned that an over-zealous reaction could limit future competition in the financial sector. Therefore we are proposing a policy which arrests the growth of commercial-financial links while maintaining strong sources of innovation and competition in the market-place.

To achieve these twin objectives the following regime will be implemented effective today. Approval for the incorporation of new trust, loan and insurance companies will be restricted to applicants with no significant commercial interests. Commercial interests will not be permitted to acquire or increase significant ownership positions in non-bank institutions having capital in excess of $50 million. Such larger non-bank institutions with commercial links will be required to have at least 35 per cent of their voting shares publicly traded and widely held by December 31, 1991, or within five years of reaching the $50 million capital threshold. Trust, loan and insurance companies with no commercial links and with capital in excess of $750 million will also be required to have at least 35 per cent of their voting shares publicly traded and widely held by December 31, 1991, or within five years of reaching the $750 million capital threshold. Once this threshold is exceeded no shareholder will be able to acquire an ownership position in the institution in excess of 10 per cent and significant shareholders will not be permitted to increase their ownership positions.

These policies will foster wider ownership of large financial institutions in the future while recognizing the existing positions of current investors. This means that more Canadians can now buy more shares in their financial institutions. Most important, by causing current laws protecting minority shareholders to come into play they will ensure market disclosure, public scrutiny and the presence of strong outside directors.

Protecting the solvency and integrity of institutions requires more than changes in ownership rules, which is most important. We cannot do this simply through changes in ownership rules. No single ownership policy can protect against imprudent management or questionable business practices. What is needed is an effective and vigilant system of self-governance supported by independent and objective directors and an effective supervisory system.

This is why we will do the following. We will limit commercial-financial links. We will provide sufficiently broad minority shareholding to ensure market disclosure and public scrutiny. We will introduce cumulative voting rules for the election of directors to increase their influence and create a stronger framework for prudential regulation. In this strong framework the Government will strictly control self-dealing in all financial institutions. The list of non-arm's length parties will be expanded and made uniform for banks and non-banks. Most asset transactions between such persons will be banned and service transactions will be strictly controlled. Rules will also be introduced to monitor and control transactions between related financial institutions.

Safeguards against abuses of conflict of interest will be introduced as well. Procedures and controls to prevent the flow of insider information between fiduciary and other financial activities will be implemented. Disclosure rules will be strengthened.

In accord with the over-all approach recommended by Mr. Justice Estey, the basic division of responsibilities for ensuring and monitoring the health of institutions this division among the supervisory authority, the directors of the institution and the external auditors will remain in place. A number of proposals, however, will improve directors' supervision of their institutions' operations and strengthen the role of auditors.

[Translation]

All financial institutions will be required to have a minimum of one-third of their directors independent of the institution. These independent directors will be asked to perform additional duties on corporate review committees made up solely of such independent directors.

[English]

During the Estey Inquiry, considerable time and effort was taken to study current accounting principles. As Mr. Justice Estey stated, in some cases difficulties were easy to define but solutions were not easy to develop. In line with his recommendations, a number of steps will be taken, in consultation with the accounting profession, to review accounting standards as they apply to financial institutions. As well, measures will be introduced to ensure appropriate communication among auditors, the financial institutions they audit and federal regulators. These measures to improve the framework for effective regulation will ensure Canadians that they can maintain confidence in the integrity of the financial system while enjoying the benefits of dynamic competition.

The fourth major area in which we are acting is to improve and strengthen the supervision of financial institutions. How are we doing that? Consistent with the integration of financial services to which I spoke a few moments ago, the Office of the Inspector General of Banks and the Department of Insurance will be consolidated into a new body to be called the Office of the Superintendent of Financial Institutions. This new office will have full supervisory responsibilities for banks and for non-bank financial institutions.

The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) will have over-all responsibility for the new office. The Superintendent will be clearly responsible for the administration of statutes, the assessment of solvency and the execution of supervisory actions. Measures will also be introduced to clarify and expand the Superintendent's power to deal effectively with unsound business practices and to deal with financially troubled institutions.

The Government recognizes that the Superintendent requires a full awareness of market trends and developments. The Government will therefore act on Mr. Justice Estey's recommendation to form an advisory committee of technical experts with a broad mandate including a role in the improvement of early-warning systems.

The Government believes that the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation should remain a separate body. This will allow the retention of private-sector expertise on the CDIC Board of Directors and it will preserve CDIC's established relationship with provincial authorities supervising CDIC-insured provincial institutions. In maintaining the CDIC as a separate agency, the Government will equip it with additional powers. Premium levels will also be revised to eliminate the existing deficit in a timely way.

These are the four key areas where we are acting to provide new direction for the financial sector: the integration of financial services, a pragmatic ownership policy, a modern framework for prudential regulation and an effective federal supervisory structure. These are four interrelated areas which will provide a framework for a sound and competitive financial system today and for the future.

In putting this policy forward, we have been very much helped by the fine work done by the House Standing Committee and to a large measure we have followed it both philosophically and in detail.

[Translation]

Our policies in these areas are pragmatic—rooted in today's market realities. They are practical. They are balanced. They are needed. And they will work.

[English]

As the financial services industry enters this new regime, all Canadians will benefit. The ability to provide innovative and competitive financial products including mortgages, investments and loans to all Canadians in all parts of the country will no longer be artificially limited by outmoded laws. However, where necessary, regulation and supervision are being tightened to protect the savings of Canadians.

We have long had reason to be proud of our financial system. Our institutions have served us well. In my opinion, they have served us well because Canadians have had the wisdom to deal with the world as they found it, to fuse the real with the ideal. We believe these policies follow in that pragmatic and responsible tradition.

These proposals will lay a solid foundation for the future. They will help our institutions grow and prosper. They will ensure that Canadians can continue to have confidence in one of the finest financial systems in the world.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have this opportunity to respond on behalf of the Official Opposition to the statement made by the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin). My remarks must necessarily be preliminary as the documents which the Minister tabled and the notes of his speech were made available only two hours ago and will need further study.

Despite the disappointing evidence of the last two years, we expected better of the Government than that with which it has come forward today. After more than two years of stalling, indecision, governing on a case-by-case basis, squandering the taxpayers' money and squandering its huge mandate, surely Canadians had a right to expect more today than another set of proposals or yet another discussion paper.

If today is a step forward, as the Minister has said, it is a very timid step. There has been a Green Paper. The Government is awash in studies. There have been umpteen promises of the Government's intention to proceed to legislation. After all the fanfare, today we have not a Bill, not actual proposed legislation but a statement of intent.

This is more than just disappointing. It is verging on negligence or on the dereliction of duty. Canadians elected this Government to govern, to show leadership and to tackle the tough issues facing Canada. There are plenty of difficult questions, complex issues and competing interests in the regulation of financial institutions. One recognizes that, but the reform process started with the previous Government. Departmental officials were at work on it. There were a whole series of internal discussion papers. The former Minister of State for Finance had set up an eminent group of industry and consumer representatives to form an advisory committee.

This Government inherited all that and spoke of bringing in comprehensive legislation almost from day one of its mandate. Despite all the events of the past two years, the only thing the Government has done today is to exchange Green Paper proposals for another set of proposals.

In the past two years, there has been on the one hand great change and upheaval in the financial services industry, but on the other hand the Government has given us halfway measures, ad hoc responses, mismanagement, misinformation, astronomical financial costs and devastating human costs. This Government will be remembered for many years to come as the Government that rushed blindly to bail out an ailing bank, that then swore up and down to all and sundry that the bank was viable, that six months later presided over the spectacular failure of the bailed out bank and a second bank and that then used taxpayers' money and special legislation to give 100 per cent reimbursement to all the banks' depositors whose holdings exceeded the $60,000 ceiling for deposit insurance.

The numbers are not in yet, but it is no exaggeration to estimate the costs of the bank failures at $2 billion. Two years and $2 billion later, how much further ahead are we in terms of having legislation in place? There are two pieces of legislation on the Order Paper. Today's discussion paper indicates that legislation will be introduced in this Session of Parliament. We do not know how long this Session will last. Perhaps it will last for another two years.

The human costs of the Government's bungling have also been considerable. Canadian Commercial Bank employees, for example, had their lives disrupted and their careers damaged by the bank's failure. I am talking about the bank's junior and middle-management staff, not the high-flyers and senior managers who made the decisions that got the bank into trouble in the first place. I am referring to moderately-paid staff members, people with families who lost their jobs and did not even get the severance benefits to which they were entitled under the Canada Labour Code. Either deliberately or by sloppy procedures this Government arranged matters so as to deprive employees of the severance benefits to which they were entitled by law. There has been a clear violation of the Canada Labour Code. I understand that officials of Labour Canada are now preparing to a lay a claim on behalf of those Canadian Commercial Bank employees.

I might also mention the Canadian Commercial Bank shareholders who relied as much as depositors did on the Government's worthless assurances of the bank's viability, assurances that were made in letters to shareholders less than a month before the bank went into liquidation. Many of those shareholders were not market speculators but people of modest means who had done their best to make safe and prudent investments to prepare for retirement. They lost everything.

The damage done to confidence in the financial system in the wake of the bank failures resulted in other human tragedies. The British Columbia Teachers Investment and Housing Co-operative, once the largest co-operative in British Columbia, suffered a run on deposits at the time of the CCB bail-out as well as when the CCB closed. As a result, the co-op went into voluntary receivership. Forty-five thousand co-op members, many of them retired teachers, saw their retirement planning thrown completely off course. They had no access to their savings for many months. When a restructuring agreement for the co-op was finally reached they received only 51 per cent of their savings back in cash.

This is a genuinely tragic series of events for thousands of Canadians who had worked and saved for a prudent retirement, and who quite justifiably traced the source of their misfortune to the weakening of confidence that was a by-product of the Government's bungling of the Canadian Commercial Bank crisis. Still we do not have the comprehensive systematic reform legislation in place to prevent such things from happening again. What we have had is a series of occasions in the House over the past two years when Parliament was forced to consider and approve in great haste legislation to tidy up some of the situations that arose because of the lack of legislation to prevent them.

There was Bill C-50 in respect of the Pioneer Trust Company; there was Bill C-37 to bail out the Canadian Commercial Bank; there was Bill C-79 to bail out the uninsured depositors of the Canadian Commercial and Northland banks, and earlier this month there was Bill C-27 to enable the HongKong Bank to take over the Bank of British Columbia.

In April of this year the Government approved the takeover of a financial institution by a non-financial organization against the recommendation of the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs. Other financial institutions have closed their doors. Still others were taken over by other institutions both foreign owned and Canadian owned. Still the Government operated in a policy vacuum.

Concern about corporate concentration has grown as financial holding companies and large corporations increase in size and their links with the financial services sector proliferate. Concern about corporate concentration has been raised in the House on more than one occasion by the Leader of the Official Opposition.

Mr. Cassidy: At least twice.

Miss Nicholson (Trinity): It was also raised by the Official Opposition members of the House of Commons Finance Committee in our minority report on the Government's Green Paper. In the last few months prominent industry people have spoken out on the risks and the need for government action.

One really must continue to be amazed at why the Government has not acted sooner or more decisively to ensure that the accelerating pace of change in the financial services industry works for Canada and for Canadians.

Recently there was a major Canadian bank that established a securities dealership in the freer market of the Province of Quebec, doing so legally by making ingenious and creative use of an obscure section of the Bank Act. It was obliged to proceed in such a way because federal legislation is so drastically out of step with the realities of today's financial services industry.

Today we have what the Minister calls new directions. He talks about a pragmatic approach to ownership. That pragmatic approach might perhaps be more accurately described as a status quo approach. The question of ownership of financial institutions, particularly of ownership of financial institutions by commercial enterprises, is one that many people have been concerned about. But this Government's response is what it calls a pragmatic approach, which translates as complete grandfathering of every situation that now exists where commercial enterprises own financial institutions.

There are vague statements in the proposal before us, such as future acquisitions will have to be approved by the Minister of Finance. There are no criteria. Let us hope that the criteria will be produced and will be in the legislation. Otherwise, if it is left to ministerial discretion, the Government has merely opened the doors wide to a continuation of the type of lobbying that has taken place in recent months where those who have the most access to the Minister's ear get the legislation they want.

It is interesting that in this particular proposal the trust companies are the big winners. Trust companies are about to acquire all the powers of banks without any of the restraints, up until about 1990 or 1991 when there will be some restraints, but none as demanding as those of the banks.

There are some interesting statements here that are not developed. For instance, there are two references in the document to what is going on with our financial services subject to industry, and the possible changes as being "trade negotiations now underway". This Government has never officially said that the financial services industry is part of the bilateral negotiations with the United States, although we have had good reason to think that is the case. Certainly, with the proposals that the Minister has before us, some very important bargaining chips are being given away. There is no indication of what, if anything, has been gained in return.

There is a nod or two in this document to competition. We learn that large financial institutions cannot acquire subsidiaries, that they must create them. "Build not buy" is the slogan used, which is an attractive slogan. Side-by-side with this comes the lack of clarity. We are told that a large institution cannot buy a large institution. What is "large"? Where are the definitions? Side-by-side with this type of statement is the rather loose statement that implies that a Minister can in fact approve any takeover or acquisition. It may very well be that the legislation will have firmer criteria, but what is before us now is not very reassuring.

There are some positive promises in the document, but again we must wait to see how they will be carried out. There is an indication that co-operative financial institutions may benefit from new legislation. For those of us who are familiar with the co-op movement and think it is a very important citizen and consumer movement, obviously we would be pleased to see some broadening of powers and some additional protection for consumers. However, again we have to wait for the details.

It is interesting that networking is being allowed except for retail insurance. Independent insurance brokers must be complimented on the very effective way in which they flooded Members of Parliament with letters. They certainly got results.

There is a particular statement in the main document that develops a little on the build-not-buy theme which I mentioned earlier. If it had been previously implemented, we would not have had the Bank of British Columbia necessarily going into foreign hands or another bank going into the hands of Lloyd's Bank. If the proposals mentioned in the document had been in place, Canadian institutions would have been able to buy both banks. We have seen two foreign banks obtain a tremendous advantage in terms of being able to buy banks which already had branches and considerable retail banking business. The barn-door has been closed after the Hongkong Bank and Lloyd's Bank have bought here. Though perhaps better late than never, one must point out that it is very late.

There is mention in one of the documents of an attempt to get better harmonization of federal and provincial regulatory policies. Obviously it is a very desirable aim. However, how will it be achieved and when will it be achieved? For those answers we have to wait for the next instalment in the Minister's ongoing saga.

In summary, there is very little to which one could object in the document because it is mostly puffery and mostly statements of good, general principles. There is very little indication of when, if ever, these principles will be adopted. If indeed the legislation comes forward, we will want to see more specifics in it. However, it would be very nice if the Minister could indicate today a firm date for the legislation, rather than sometime next year or sometime before the end of the session.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of comments on the statement which I have spent some time absorbing in the lock-up? There are some sighs of relief in the corporate boardrooms of the interests which own a large stake of Canada. I suspect as well that there are whoops of joy in certain boardrooms of banks and trust companies as a consequence of the policy announced by the Minister, which in fact represents some substantial changes. I do not necessarily say that I agree with them, but at least there is a policy in place. Had the policy been in place previously, some of the failures, which have seen control of Canadian banks go into foreign hands and more than $1 billion flow out of the pockets of taxpayers and of the Canada Deposit Insurance Company accounts and into the pockets of depositors, would have been prevented. At the same time there is a sense of impending doom or, at the very least, uncertainty in the offices of brokers and investment dealers on Bay Street and on St. James Street, because their comfortable, cosy, walnut panelled world will change very quickly.

This is Canada's answer to the big bang. We could say that the big bang will mean big bucks for certain people. It protects the interests of certain of the big buck artists in Canada, notably the wealthy families who control certain financial holding companies and whose ability to continue their privileged position is affected only minimally. If anything, they are protected from being overtaken from the rear by the proposals in the Minister's statement and, therefore, their ability to make big bucks may in fact improve.

There are new opportunities for financial institutions in the proposals put forward by the Minister and the Government. However, there are not commensurate guarantees of benefits for ordinary Canadians. This is very serious. It is one thing about which we will be talking a fair amount in the new year when the policy statement begins to be translated into actual legislation.

There are questions in terms of where financial services are provided and in terms of the maltreatment and harassment suffered by farmers, small business people, and ordinary income earners perhaps affected unemployment, at the hands of financial institutions. There is not a breath or whisper of a word of any concern in that regard. The Government speaks of a balance in this statement, but it is balance between the differrent interests in the financial industry. It does not speak of a balance to redress the power of small income earners, small business people, farmers, fishermen and such people, against the billion dollar institutions regulated in the particular policy.

The policy speaks of competition which may or may not result. However, it is quite clear that there will be increased concentration, which troubles us a great deal.

When I looked at the statement, I wondered what my Party would be looking for in terms of financial services policy. Clearly there is a need to increase capacity to handle certain levels of financing, for example, and to increase flexibility. However, I would contend that it is not automatic with an accompanying increase in concentration, yet concentration is what is being delivered in the statement.

Finally there is a virtual elimination of the indepedence of investment dealers and brokers. Within a year and a half they will find themselves taken over or forced into alliances with banks, insurance companies, trust companies, or foreign financial institutions. That will happen rapidly. I am concerned about what will be the consequence of taking one of the four pillars and effectively eliminating it completely, at the same time as the other three are being collapsed together. Far be it from me, a New Democratic or democratic socialist, to leap to the defence of Rosedale, Westmount, and Shaughnessy Heights. Nonetheless, an ironic result of the reform announced by the Government is that the Canadian investment industry, which has served as a somewhat independent source of advice, will now be rolled into banks and other financial institutions.

For example, I refer to an entrepreneur doing business with a bank and being extended a line of credit. The bank may turn around and say I am sorry, your company is getting to the limit of your line of credit. We think you should do an equity issue, and we think you should do it with this company with whom we happen to be related in the investment industry. If the entrepreneur is not so sure about that and thinks about going down the street to another bank, he runs a risk that the line of credit will be threatened by the bank seeking to move business over to its investment subsidiary. That is a very real threat, according to the proposals of the Government.

I feel the Government is adopting the gospel of deregulation from the United States. It is ironic that it is doing so in a week where the prophets of deregulation around Ronald Reagan are pleading the Fifth Amendment, being forced to resign, discredited, or seeking refuge back in Wall Street because they cannot hack it in a political environment. Nonetheless, the true believers still exist here in Canada so that gospel continues to be preached. However, it is done in a way which leads me to question the benefits for ordinary Canadians, be they businessmen, fishermen, farmers or consumers.

At the time of the release of the report of the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs dealing with financial institutions, the committee took issue in a very major way with the recommendations of the Green Paper of a year or so ago. In our minority report we focused on the issue of the concentration of financial power in the Canadian financial services industry, and in industry generally. We urged tough restrictions on ownership and that ownership rules be extended to trust companies and other financial institutions. We suggested the 10 per cent rule should be extended to trust companies and financial institutions.

What is significant is that in the wake of the Imasco takeover of Canada Trust in April of 1986, the committee as a whole moved a very long way in the same direction as suggested by our minority report in January or February of this year. The committee recommended that a non-financial corporation should only be able to own 30 per cent. It also suggested retroactivity. That is, there should not be a grandfathering of the current situation where major trust companies are controlled by non-financial companies. This has created a concentration of economic and financial power which both I and my party believe poses grave risks to Canada's economic development and the proper working of the market system.

When the Government came to consider that issue this fall we found it was not a serious issue with the Government at all. It casually allowed a couple of banks, the Continental and the Bank of British Columbia, to sell out to foreign banks because it was more profitable for shareholders than keeping them in Canadian hands. The Government looked at the recommendations, and then I guess what happened was that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret), the former Minister of State for Finance, and two or three others started to press the Government to prevent that recommendation of the committee being adopted. The Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin) is shaking his head. This has been widely reported and if he wants to deny it, that is fine. I think a lot of people are convinced that is the case.

One thing which I think is significant in the proposals is that, in future, acquisitions of one financial corporation by another will be subjected to ministerial approval. When we were in the lock-up, officials from the Department of Finance did not blink an eye when it was suggested that that might mean it is okay for one $10 billion financial institution to take over another $10 billion financial institution and create an institution with $20 billion in assets, but that if perhaps a big bank were to take over an institution with $5 billion in assets that might not be acceptable. In other words, it is not a matter of tiny trust companies with $500 million in assets—which does not sound that tiny but in general it is small—being taken over, but that major mergers are contemplated as being acceptable to the Minister under this policy.

We all know that Ministers of Finance are politicians. They come from the party in power and are subject to influence, among other things, by corporations which are close to the party in power. It is very interesting that instead of getting a 30 per cent rule we got a 65 per cent rule. The Government says that if a commercial corporation has control of a financial institution it will have to reduce its ownership from the current level to no more than 65 per cent. That is still control in any language. If I had 65 per cent of the vote in my riding I would be extremely happy. In addition, the 65 per cent is held to. As the company requires more equity, it will be allowed to continue at the 65 per cent level.

I grant you that having a widely held 35 per cent will require a certain window on those particular companies which does not exist right now. There is some improvement and not everything is to be criticized in the proposal. Nonetheless, why a 65 per cent rule instead of 30 per cent? Is it because, for example, the Brascan group, controlled by Peter and Edward Bronfman, which in turn controls Trilon Financial, which in turn controls both Royal Trust and London Life, contributed $15,000 to the Progressive Conservative Party?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Cassidy: I think that must have been in 1984. Royal Trust put $13,000 into the hands of the Conservative Party. London Life contributed $6,353.

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Mr. Cassidy: It is therefore open, with this ministerial discretion on acquisitions and takeovers, to companies to decide it is good business to put tens of thousands of dollars into the hands of the party in power in order to get a favourable reception and get the Minister's ear. Imasco is very much involved because they seek grandfathering of their takeover of Canada Trust. That trust company gave $8,000 to the Conservative Party in 1984 or 1985. The Minister winces but that is what they gave.

Mr. Hockin: I am not wincing.

Mr. Cassidy: Imasco gave $36,594. Again, is that why they are being allowed to continue with 65 per cent ownership of a multibillion dollar trust company at a time when no new commercial interests will be allowed to do the same thing? What about Power Corp? That is another good friend of Governments in power on both sides, that is Liberals and Conservatives. Great West Life gave $10,000. That is a subsidiary of Power Corp. Montreal Trust gave $36,657.

Mr. Nickerson: Point of order, Mr. Speaker. As far as I recall there are rules of this Chamber which deal with imputing motives to Ministers when they make policy. The insinuations we are hearing now, that policy changes were made and legislation proposed on the basis of amounts of money which might have been made as donations to a political party, are not acceptable.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I do not find that to be a point of order.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I am honoured to be in agreement with your very sound and sage opinion. I think government Members are perhaps a bit sensitive. I am simply recording facts and asking a question which I think many ordinary Canadians ask. They wonder whether their interests are being respected when large corporations are being allowed to concentrate financial power, despite the fact that there are some desirable reforms put forward by the Government in today's statement.

Mr. Belsher: Tell us who else they gave money to.

Mr. Cassidy: The Hon. Member makes a comment. Perhaps he can make it again because I did not quite catch it.

Mrs. Mailly: You know very well he cannot because he cannot speak.

Mr. Cassidy: In that case perhaps he should allow me to make my comments on the statement by the Minister.

The standing committee unanimously recommended a 30 per cent limit on ownership and we did not get it. The committee was looking for a real curb on concentration of financial power and we did not get it. The committee delivered a carefully considered report and it was ignored by the Government. Instead, the Government has only limited future intrusion by commercial groups into the financial sector, which means that the privileged position of Brascan, Power Corporation, Imasco and such corporations is, if anything, more valuable than if the Government had applied the same rules to everyone. They need only divest by 35 per cent in 1991. They can do that by simply inviting the public to share for a while in the ownership without, at the same time, reducing their stake in these corporations.

New opportunities are being given to financial institutions, including the trust companies. The powers which trust companies will enjoy will make them like banks in almost everything but name. Yet, the Government ignored the very sensible proposals of the Economic Council of Canada that companies engaged in banking, whether provincially or federally regulated, should be regulated as banks because of the federal power in the BNA Act with regard to banking. If anything, the trust companies are on more than an equal footing. Once their assets exceed $500 million, they will now enjoy unrestricted commercial lending instead of labouring under a 7 or 10 per cent restriction as they do now. They will have unrestricted access to consumer loans. They will be able to enter the securities business and do everything except call themselves banks.

Deregulation is no guarantee that there will be safeguards for ordinary consumers. The Government speaks of a reorganization of the Office of the Inspector General of Banks with the Department of Insurance. It has been decided not to roll the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation into that because they want to have separation, for reasons I am not entirely clear on. The intention is then to create a committee which will be composed of the Superintendent of Financial Insitutions, the Deputy Minister of Finance, the Governor of the Bank of Canada and the President of the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation. Their job will be to avoid trouble.

There is a real problem with regard to the adequacy of regulation whether or not these two offices are rolled into one. I would like to remind my friend, the Minister, that the Governor of the Bank, the Deputy Minister of Finance, the Inspector General of Banks and the President of the CDIC sat together on the board of the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation during the time that the people of Canada saw $1.25 billion go down the drain due to mistakes in the regulation and operation of some banks. If they could not get it together when they were meeting on the board of the CDIC, one wonders whether they will be able to get it together in this forum unless there is a very strong commitment to more adequate regulation.

We will be raising this during the course of discussion on the forthcoming Bill. I hope the Minister will take that stand. I hope he realizes, among other things, that we will have to have the resources which the former Inspector General, Mr. Kennet, argued for, but did not have the gumption to resign over when he became aware several years ago that the IGB's office was inadequately equipped to do its job.

I spoke earlier about ordinary Canadians.

[Translation]

For instance, I might mention the owner of a business in Chicoutimi, a farmer in Alberta's Peace River region, a man who has a store in Happy Valley in Labrador, or a young family in Le Pas, Manitoba. Do these people have a guarantee that services will improve, that competition will better serve their interests, or perhaps are they going to pay higher prices while at the same time the institutions they deal with will be doing much better business in places like Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver?

That is a real problem, Mr. Speaker. We might find ourselves in a situation where this financial supermarket will be created for wealthier middle and upper income Canadians, people who earn really good money, but then ordinary people will not be able to benefit from it.

[English]

They may even have to pay $10 for a bounced cheque because the bank is trying to increase its revenues because it made some bad loans in Latin America, or because it bought a securities company and, as in London, paid fancy salaries to some of the people it brought on board and then found out it was not making a profit.

There are real problems with regard to the failure of the Government to address the need to protect services and ensure adequate, affordable services for ordinary Canadians. We must ensure that young entrepreneurs are not forced out of business because they cannot get an extra loan to help build up the business. We must ensure that farmers are not forced out of business because the loans which were forced upon them three years ago are now being called, as has happened in too many instances. We must ensure that farmers do not have to fight back with a penny auction because of the regressive attitude of the banks and the way in which they are trying to victimize their former customers.

With regard to foreign ownership, we are concerned that since foreign owners will be treated as domestic, they will be given unlimited power to acquire securities companies after a brief delay of a year and a half, and, after that, any other financial corporation. We are concerned that the restrictions on nonresidents only apply to the very large institutions. I mentioned the concern about Bay Street and St. James Street. I do not suggest that our voters are there, but to alienate that entire sector raises questions in my mind.

I would like to speak positively to the Minister about the fact that the Government listened to the concerns of people in the life insurance business. A lot of small agents raised their concerns through Members on all sides of the House. The Government has responded by excluding from networking the power to sell life and casualty insurance over the counter in these financial supermarkets. That is welcome.

We are concerned about the rather curious situation wherein a commercial interest cannot enter into the trust or loan company business but can buy into such a business if the Minister permits. There seems to be some contradiction there which we will have to explore when this matter comes before committee.

Finally, I would like to say a word—

Mr. Nickerson: That's the fourth "finally".

Mr. Cassidy: I have the right to speak for as long as the Minister did. I will speak for only that long. If the Hon. Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson) does not like what a real socialist has to say in the House of Commons, we will take his seat in the next election and his constituents will have a New Democrat to represent them. If he does not want to listen to me now, he can take his absence and go off to a Christmas party. I wish his constituents a merry Christmas and a happy new year.

With regard to the way in which these institutions work, we should not think only of the market and of modeling ourselves after what is happening in London, Germany, or the United States. We must also consider our needs here. For example, I would like a requirement that in every region where a financial institution oeprates there be an advisory committee made up of consumers, small business people, and perhaps people from municipal government, who provide input to that institution and seek to ensure that that institution really serves the needs of that area. I would like to ensure that a searchlight could be shone upon situations which we discover, such as that which existed in the Bank of British Columbia.

In the last three or four years chartered bank deposits in British Columbia have increased by approximately $10 billion, but the money has not been invested in British Columbia. Unemployment has been soaring in that province and the money saved by British Columbians was invested in central Canada. There is something fundamentally wrong with that.

I would like the consumers and clients of the banks and financial institutions to be guaranteed a voice on the board of directors of those financial institutions. Rather than requiring that a limited number of directors, who would be largely of like mind with the internal directors, sit on the boards of these corporations, we should ensure that ordinary Canadians have a voice in and a window on what happens in those institutions.

From time to time my Party speaks about the need to democratize these centres of power and put them in the hands of ordinary Canadians. I suggest that those are some constructive and positive means by which we could seek to do that.

Over the Christmas break, a time of peace and goodwill to people here in Canada and around the world, I hope the Minister of State for Finance and his colleagues could incorporate some of those suggestions in their proposals as they turn them into legislation to be considered by the House in the new year.

In closing, I want to wish the Minister of State for Finance and his colleagues a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year. I know that we will be very intensively involved with these proposals for many months in the new year.

This may have been said earlier, but I think all Hon. Members would want to join me in expressing our good wishes to one of my colleagues from the National Capital Region, the Hon. Member for Gatineau (Mrs. Mailly), who is going to be wed on December 23. I know every Member of Parliament will wish her and her spouse the best.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that a message has been received from the Senate informing this House that the Senate has passed Bill C-29, an Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the Government of Canada for the financial year ending the 31st of March, 1987, without amendment.

REMOVAL OF MAILBOXES FROM TORONTO STREETS

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, many Toronto residents, particularly the elderly and those in poor health, are experiencing hardship and inconvenience as a result of Canada Post's decision to remove some of the 1,800 red mailboxes located throughout Metropolitan Toronto.

In the worst cases, mailboxes located just outside or just across the street from senior citizens' highrise apartments have been removed, forcing people to walk blocks further in hazardous winter conditions to mail their letters. If we add to this the distinct possibility of higher postal rates in the near future it is clear that the Canada Post strategy of reduced service at higher cost leaves no room for fair and balanced treatment of the taxpayers who have to use the postal system. I urge the Government to rethink its strategy and replace the mail deposit boxes which have been removed from their locations in Toronto.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CLOSURE OF HELSINKI EMBASSY—REQUEST FOR RECONSIDERATION

Mr. Bill Vankoughnet (Hastings—Frontenac—Lennox and Addington): Mr. Speaker, it is with deep regret that I have to rise in this House to raise the issue of the recently leaked closure of the Canadian Embassy in Helsinki, Finland. I appreciate and applaud the Government's objective in applying restraint to come to terms with the legacy of past government deficits. However, on behalf of the Canadian Nordic Parliamentary Friendship Association I implore the Government to reconsider its decision regarding the presence of a Canadian Embassy in Helsinki, Finland. There are several well-known historical facts in support of this request, not to mention recent significant Finnish investment in our country, along with advanced technology in ice-breaking, which strengthen the need for this important post.

The saving of $2 million per year is very small consolation when, at the same time, the National Capital Commission announces a plan to spend $15 million to replace the conventional asphalt pavement in front of our Parliament Buildings with some sort of red ceremonial pavement.

HUMAN RIGHTS

U.S.S.R.—ANDREI SAKHAROV—RETURN TO MOSCOW FROM INTERNAL EXILE

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of my New Democratic Party colleagues I want to say how pleased we were this morning to learn that Soviet authorities have allowed Andrei Sakharov, the Nobel Peace Prize winner and outspoken defender of human rights, to return home to Moscow from internal exile in Gorky. Andrei Sakharov has been a beacon to those around the world who believe that no matter how difficult and dangerous it may be, the freedom to speak out freely without threat of punishment is a basic human right that no state authorities can take away.

This was a welcome gesture by Mr. Gorbachev and his colleagues in the Kremlin. Let us hope that it signals a growing acceptance in the Soviet Union of the dignity of the individual. Among the civilized community of nations there is no place for those who imprison their people solely for the crime of speaking out for what they truly believe.

At this time of year, when we celebrate the birth of one whose life was dedicated to peace and harmony among all men and women, it is time to reflect on how we see each other as citizens of planet earth. We must learn to live together and cooperate for the betterment of all peoples and future generations. Mr. Speaker, the Soviet Union took one small humanitarian step forward today. Let us hope that it is just the beginning.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

FOSTERING OF CANADA—U.S.S.R. DIALOGUE ADVOCATED

Mr. William G. Lesick (Edmonton East): Mr. Speaker, this week a delegation of prominent members of the U.S.S.R.

Supreme Soviet visited Ottawa. At a meeting with Canadian Senators and parliamentarians a spirited two-hour discussion ensued. In answer to my queries, Mr. Afanasiev, Chief Editor of the Soviet newspaper Pravda, denied the existence of the Soviet-conducted Ukrainian famine of 1933 which caused the death of some six million Ukrainians. He also replied that the Baltic States of Latvia, Estonia, and Lithuania invited the Soviets to incorporate them with the Soviet Union, but said nothing of the hundreds of thousands shipped to Siberia.

Despite the differing Canadian opinion on these matters, dialogue between our countries must be promoted. A member of the Soviet delegation declared that an exchange of our parliamentarians would be most valuable. Mr. Speaker, Canadians agree. I look forward to my visit as well to foster dialogue, greater understanding and peace between the Soviets and Canadians.

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES

ALMOST TOTALLY ENGLISH PRESS CONFERENCE HELD IN MONTREAL

Mr. Gilles Grondin (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, I think it is altogether unacceptable that a Government which poses as the defender of the French language in Quebec would send one of its Ministers, a francophone no less, to hold a press conference in Montreal almost exclusively in English. Mr. Speaker, this occurred only a few days after his leader and his colleague, the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Masse), stood up in that same city to reaffirm their conviction with respect to the supremacy of French in Quebec.

Mr. Speaker, according to the information I got from the journalist who wrote about this, the Minister of State (Youth) (Mr. Charest) spoke half the time in French and half the time in English the day before yesterday in Montreal when he unveiled what was practically a carbon copy of a Liberal program for young people which was launched in August 1984. The people with him could not speak French. This kind of procedure made the newspaperman wonder whether Montreal had suddenly been proclaimed an English city.

The Minister was probably so ill at ease that he did not want to announce in French the money involved because it is very little compared with what young people need. This is probably why no Member of the Official Opposition had been invited to the press conference, neither in French, nor in English.

EARLY RETIREES—GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Last Tuesday, Mr. Speaker, I was in Quebec City to meet with more than 400 early retirees who had been denied unemployment insurance benefits by this Government. I was there with my friend, the Liberal Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart), but I was quite surprised to realize there was no Conservative representative, not even a Member from the Quebec City area nor from Lévis.

The executive of the association, ARSAC, wrote an open letter to the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Bouchard). In this letter they say that the Conservative policy in the field of unemployment insurance is unacceptable, arbitrary, unfair and discriminatory against the unemployed in Canada. Mr. Speaker, I agree with these 400 people, I agree with ARSAC, and I ask that the Government reconsider its policy before Christmas. Mr. Speaker, why not offer a Christmas gift?

YOUTH

GOVERNMENT JOB-CREATION MEASURES—DECLINE IN UNEMPLOYMENT

Mr. Lawrence I. O'Neil (Cape Breton Highlands—Canso): Mr. Speaker, the Government's commitment to youth is beyond question. Last year alone the Government spent $732 million on employment programs for youth. The unemployment rate for young Canadians has fallen to 14.3 per cent from 18.4 per cent. In addition, on Wednesday the Minister of State (Youth) (Mr. Charest) announced that the federal Govrnment will provide $10 million to support an innovative and creative project co-ordinated by the YMCA and supported by corporations like IBM Canada.

Eight youth enterprise centres will be created. At the end of a 12 to 16-week training period, participants will have a fully developed business plan. New businesses developed with the support of the youth enterprise centres will have access to all necessary expertise during their first year of operation. This project will give training, technical assistance, and help in acquiring financial assistance to young people who wish to become self-employed and create jobs for others. This program is a new and creative solution to labour market problems.

JOBS IN JEOPARDY AT GENERAL MOTORS PLANT IN SAINTE-THÉRÈSE—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, this morning, the U.S. free trade negotiator, Mr. Peter Murphy, took the liberty of sticking his nose into Canada's affairs by warning the Canadian Government against awarding an interest—free loan to General Motors in Sainte-Thérèse, which would help save 4,000 jobs.

"If Quebec and Ottawa decide to take action", he warned, as quoted in La Presse, "—we'll have to take a very close look at this".

Mr. Speaker, since when did the Americans start minding our business? Ever since the Canadian Government started showing signs of weakening and the Americans received a clear message that they could do what they felt like doing. For instance, that they could go through the Canadian North with their submarine Polar Sea and impose tariffs on softwood lumber. The image projected by the Canadian Government has led the Americans to try and dictate the kind of policies they feel the Canadian Government should adopt.

This morning at a press conference, the Prime Minister merely said: "The Canadian Government will make the decisions on Canadian affairs." That is merely saying the obvious. We urge the Prime Minister to be more forthright and say quite frankly that he is going to help save jobs at General Motors by subsidizing the enterprise, together with Quebec.

FINANCE

NEW ORIENTATION FOR FINANCIAL SECTOR

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Minister of State (Finance) (Mr. Hockin) tabled in the House his document on new directions for the financial sector. The message it contains will help the Canadian economy adjust to new communications technology and management techniques. The Government will allow the integration of financial services.

More good news: insurance agents or brokers will continue to occupy the field of retail insurance.

Mr. Speaker, the Conservative Government has managed to adjust to technological change while maintaining every consideration for the very personal relationship that exists, in our neighbourhoods, municipalities and cities, between the insurance agent and his client.

Today, Mr. Speaker, the Government has recognized the dedication and competence of our local insurance agents.

Canadians will continue to have their own insurance agents, thanks to the Conservative Party.

INSURANCE

FUTURE OF INDEPENDENT AGENTS

Mr. John Gormley (The Battlefords—Meadow Lake): Mr. Speaker, for many years Canadians have looked for a clear policy on the regulation of financial institutions. With the announcement of new directions for the financial sector by the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin), we have now received a decisive and clear message.

Our nation's independent insurance agents were very concerned that the integrating of financial services might have resulted in banks and trust companies selling property and casualty insurance, something that would have sounded the death knell for small independent insurance brokers.

Many of us, as Members of Parliament, have been working closely with our insurance agents to let the Minister know of our concerns. In the Minister's announcement we heard a sensible ownership policy, a strong framework for smarter regulation, improved supervision, and, most important, a clear unequivocal statement that banks, trust companies and other financial institutions will not be allowed to sell insurance at the retail level.

This is a victory for insurance agents and a sign that the Minister of State for Finance and the Government have listened and acted wisely.

INCOME TAX

NORTHERN BENEFITS—REQUEST FOR EXTENSION OF TAX MORATORIUM

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, last February the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) declared his intention to tax northern benefits. One problem faced by many northern residents is that the Government, after nine months, has been unable to determine the value of subsidized housing.

The general guideline of fair market value is unworkable in many communities where there is little or no private sector housing. The Department of Public Works has now indicated that some Canadians will be asked to pay income tax on up to an extra $1,700 a month, money they never saw and never had. Where actual salaries are low or moderate, this will obviously create instant poverty.

In this period approaching Christmas, I ask the Government to explain the fair market value of Santa's residence. Will his northern residence and workshop be seized for tax payment? Will his annual flight south be cancelled now that it is taxed?

Clearly the Government has not considered the consequences of its actions on ordinary Canadians. Save Santa and his neighbours; extend the moratorium until the Government gets its act together.

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

BRITISH COLUMBIA—PAST SUCCESSES AND FUTURE WISHES

Mrs. Mary Collins (Capilano): Mr. Speaker, as we leave this place for the Christmas break, it is a good time to review the highlights of the past year and the prospects for the year ahead. There were some great days for British Columbia in 1986, among them, of course, the outstanding success of Expo 86, which gave British Columbia a chance to show its stuff to the rest of the world. We hope that many of the millions who visited Vancouver and Expo will return to British Columbia and explore the fascination and beauty of the province.

We are also very proud of British Columbian Rick Hansen whose courageous voyage around the world has stirred our hearts and raised our understanding of the needs and potential of Canadians who suffer from physical handicaps.

As I sat last night, Mr. Speaker, mulling over my Christmas list, checking it twice, trying to find out who has been naughty, who nice, three wishes came to the top of the list, three items I would ask my frontbench colleagues to put under British Columbia's Christmas tree: from the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) for the financial and business community, an international financial centre for Vancouver; from the Minister of Communications (Miss MacDonald) for the tourism, publishing and film industries, funding for a joint federal/B.C. cultural economic development agreement which, among others, would assist proposals such as B.C.s new Science World; at the top of the list, from the Minister of Transport (Mr. Crosbie) to the men and women whose lives and futures depend on the shipbuilding industry, a contract to proceed with the construction of the Polar 8 ice-breaker on the West Coast.

Merry Christmas! Joyeux Noel!

SOCIAL AFFAIRS

DECLARATION OF WAR ON POVERTY SOUGHT

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, Christmas is a time to be with family, a time to give and share, and a time to be grateful. It is also a time to contemplate the plight of the poor and disadvantaged in Canada.

This Christmas over a million Canadian children are being raised in families with incomes below the poverty line. There are 3.6 million of our fellow Canadians living below the poverty line. Poverty is a human tragedy and a national disgrace. All Canadians, regardless of where they live and what they do, are entitled by right to a decent standard of living. Our major priorty in 1987, as parliamentarians, must be to declare war on poverty.

Our goal as parliamentarians must be to ensure that all Canadians live above the poverty line. As we leave Parliament for Christmas, let us not forget the loneliness and despair of the poor and disadvantaged. Let us come back in January and work together with the new resolve to end poverty. Let us come back in 1987 and work toward providing decent housing, educational opportunities, and meaningful employment for those who have not shared in the economic benefit our country is capable of providing for each and every Canadian.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS

UNIVERSAL GUARANTEED ANNUAL INCOME—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): I wish you, Mr. Speaker, a Merry Christmas, and the Prime Minister, the Hon. Member for Oshawa, and all Hon. Members of the House.

Especially at this season we have to recognize that for millions of Canadians Christmas will not be the happy time it is for most of us. There are lonely people in our big cities, there are the homeless and the hungry. There are still over 100 foodbanks in this country, which I consider a national disgrace.

Would the Prime Minister tell us whether, in his view, 1987 would be a good year for us to reorder our national priorities and move the country toward a minimum standard of living? I ask him whether he would not think it a good idea to move toward a universal guaranteed annual income?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I thank my right hon. friend for his comment about the Christmas season. To you, Mr. Speaker, and to all Hon. Members of the House, I extend warm and good wishes for a happy holiday and a very happy 1987.

The Right Hon. Leader raises—I include the New Democratic Party in that, very sincerely.

Mr. Broadbent: That was an afterthought.

Mr. Mulroney: And his Quebec lieutenant.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mulroney: Robert Cliche should turn over in his grave.

With regard to the very important point raised by my right hon. friend with its very important implications for the future, I point out—with an undertaking on behalf of the Government to do better in 1987—that the number of Candians living below the poverty line fell by 300,000 last year. That was the first decline since 1981. I think my right hon. friend will agree that while this is not perfect it represents substantial progress. I give him and the House a further undertaking to build and work to improve on that record in the future because poverty should not exist in a society as potentially prosperous as ours.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

OPPORTUNITY FOR GOVERNMENT TO AIM TOWARD GUARANTEED ANNUAL INCOME SCHEME

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I may remind the Prime Minister that one child out of five is living in poverty, that over one million Canadian children are living in poverty and that one third of the people standing in line at the food banks are children.

I therefore wish to repeat my question to the Prime Minister. Does he think the time has come to introduce a guaranteed annual income, in order to save Canadian children from the despair of poverty?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, one of the problems we have had is that from 1981 to 1984, the number of people living below the poverty line in Canada increased by 700,000. This was a real tragedy.

Now, for the first time in six years, we are seeing an increase in the real incomes of Canadian families and a reduction of 300,000 in the number of people living below the poverty line. I think that is a vast improvement.

We are of course prepared to consider specific suggestions on improving our social programs for the needy in this country. I respect the Right Hon. Member's position and we shall certainly look into this as a Government and here in the House.

• (1120)

INCOME SURTAX

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I can give the Prime Minister a specific suggestion. This week the Government proposed a 3 per cent surtax on individuals, including the working poor. One-half of the people living in poverty in Canada are members of families of the working poor. Despite the efforts of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides, to make an amendment in the House the Government insisted that that surtax apply across the board. Would the Prime Minister review the situation and see whether the working poor can be given relief from this surtax?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, as I have said, the number of Canadians living below the poverty line fell by 300,000 last year. That is the first such decline since 1981. This is important and good news for Canada.

From 1981 to 1984, some 700,000 Canadians fell below the poverty line. Last year some 300,000 Canadians were rescued from below the poverty line and lifted to a position of dignity in Canada. I thought that that was the objective of all Members. I think we should celebrate the fact that this is tremendous progress.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: There have been many other initiatives such as the refundable sales tax credit and so on, all of which have a positive impact on people who need help in Canada. I acknowledge that more must be done to be of assistance to people who genuinely need help in Canada. There ought not to be this segregation between the wealthy and those who are living below the poverty line. We must work as a Parliament and as a people to take positions that will resolve these differences in favour of the people who need help.

SOCIAL SECURITY

SPOUSE'S ALLOWANCE—THE UNMARRIED, SEPARATED, AND DIVORCED—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. He must be feeling generous today, to entertain suggestions on eliminating poverty in this country. The Prime Minister will have to admit that among the elderly, and I am referring to single women, there has been an increase of 5,000 between 1984 and 1985. Today, 80,000 people in Canada are living below the poverty line just because this Government refuses to pay the spouse's allowance to those who are single, separated or divorced.

Since the Prime Minister wants some concrete suggestions for improving the situation and reducing the number of people below the poverty line, is he prepared to promise that in 1987, he will let those who are single, separated or divorced be eligible for the spouse's allowance, so that they will no longer live below the poverty line?

• (1125)

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the spirit expressed by the Prime Minister in his answers today is not unique to this season. The Prime Minister has made those points throughout his time in this House.

It is also to be noted that when the Government came into office we extended the spouse's allowance to include groups of people who for many of us as Members of Parliament had been our most difficult cases namely, widows and widowers who were not able to receive spouse's allowance because of the death of a spouse. The Hon. Member says that this should now be extended to other single persons. The Prime Minister and others have stated quite clearly over the months that as economic conditions in Canada improve—and they have improved—these are some considerations at which we will look in the second half of our mandate.

REQUEST FOR GENERAL REIMBURSEMENT

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister, and I am sure that people between 60 and 64 who are single, separated or divorced will be very disappointed to hear that the Government will not promise to help them.

Here is my supplementary for the Prime Minister, if he would care to listen: Is the Prime Minister prepared to make a commitment to reimburse the 35,000 elderly workers whose unemployment insurance benefits were cut off on January 5, 1986? Second, will he promise that the Government will not create two classes of elderly workers as regards unemployment insurance benefits?

[English]

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I would hope that the Hon. Member would at least try to be fair. When this Government came into office we extended the spouse's allowance. Under a Government of which the Hon. Member was a part, widows and widowers did not receive any of that money. Now he is saying it is unfair.

This Government has not created two classes of citizens. In fact, as the Prime Minister has indicated, there are to date roughly 300,000 fewer Canadians living below the low income cut-off line used by Statistics Canada. We want to work further on that. I think the Hon. Member must admit that, as the economy improves, some of the very best news for all of us will be that people will be able to get meaningful work and get out of the poverty cycle. That is what this Government is working toward.

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I too would like to begin by wishing everyone, including the Leader of the Opposition and of course the Prime Minister, a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. I would add a special Christmas wish for the Prime Minister's Quebec caucus, particularly for all those who will still be there after the Christmas break.

My question is directed to the Minister for International Trade. During his press conference this morning we heard the Prime Minister boast about the remarkable progress Parliament has made this fall. One area in which there has been no progress whatsoever is the softwood lumber dispute with the United States. Since the Minister began this session on October 3 with a commitment that there would soon be an agreement, and since a commitment was made every other day since then, is she now prepared to announce to the House of Commons on the last day before the Christmas break that this important trade dispute with the United States has finally been resolved?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I too extend Merry Christmas wishes to the Leader of the NDP but I would point out that his remarks are certainly in the nature of a Scrooge rather than a Santa Claus.

At no time would I make commitments to have delivered an agreement on an issue that is within the U.S. trade law system. That would be irresponsible of me.

Mr. Broadbent: That's right.

Mr. Nystrom: Right on.

Miss Carney: May I finish? I have said that I have been trying to negotiate a solution to this very, very difficult dispute and I can tell the House that negotiations are continuing. It would be inadvisable to make any further comment on this issue while the negotiators are at the table.

EXPORT TAX INQUIRY

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, since the Minister knows that we are all supposed to leave for our home constituencies later today, will she confirm that the Government intends to announce today its decision about imposing an export tax? Surely the Government has an obligation to inform Parliament now of its decision rather than waiting until Parliament is shut down and then announcing it, and expecting it to be totally free of criticism.

• (1130)

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I can assure this House that I am not intending to deprive the House in any way of an opportunity to comment or criticize on any agreement that we have. I am simply telling the House that negotiations are continuing. I will inform the House at the appropriate time should we be able to conclude this difficult dispute successfully. I think that the Hon. Member should be complimenting us on managing to keep everyone at the table so we can try to resolve this issue.

Mr. Broadbent: The greatest disaster in international trade in 20 years, and she wants a compliment.

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): I wish to ask the Minister if she will confirm that the Government plans to announce today—not next week—that it has already made its mind up that it will announce in the House later today the imposition of an export tax. While she deals with that, will she assure us if we impose that 15 per cent export tax here it will not simply be added to an additional 15 per cent in the United States? At least has that part been negotiated with the United States?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): I can only say humbug to that allegation.

I may point out to the Hon. Member that the U.S. system provides for a final decision on the countervail on December 30, so the U.S. can go to December 30 on this issue. It can also go to around February 27 on an injury issue. I do not set the deadlines on this matter; it is a matter of U.S. law. I can only report again that I will inform the House at the appropriate time when I know how the negotiations have gone.

SOCIAL AFFAIRS

NEWFOUNDLAND POVERTY RATE—FEDERAL TRANSFER PAYMENTS

Hon. William Rompkey (Grand Falls—White Bay—Labrador): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. The Evening Telegram in St. John's in November revealed that Newfoundland has the highest poverty rate in Canada, that 32,000 Newfoundland families have low income. That is 23 per cent of all families in the province. In light of these staggering figures, how can the Prime Minister's Government justify the cut-backs in fisheries and other programs, the cut-backs in equalization grants, and moreover the lack of any meaningful gesture to create the jobs that would alleviate this staggering burden of poverty in my province?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have said publicly that one of the problems in the kind of Canada and economy that we inherited was the serious structural imbalances that were created over many years, particularly in regard to Newfoundland. When we came in we inherited a situation where Newfoundland had unemployment in the neighbourhood of 24 per cent. I indicated at the First Ministers' Conference in Vancouver how unacceptable that situation was in Canada, where, for example, in southern Ontario or Manitoba unemployment at that time was 6.9 per cent, which is among the lowest of any jurisdiction in North America, and unemployment was still at 20.8 per cent in Newfoundland and Labrador, this is, notwithstanding the fact that it has come down since the time this Government was in, but not enough.

We have taken special initiatives of $200 million in ERDAs. The Atlantic Accord resolved for the first time, after 15 years of wrangling and difficulty, the offshore dispute with Newfoundland and Labrador where we pumped in $225 million, $77 million extra. EPF went up.

Mr. Rompkey: It was supposed to.

Mr. Mulroney: Equalization that the Minister of Finance is mentioning is going up not down, as opposed to other actions that were taken by previous Governments. We are saying that Newfoundland and Labrador unfortunately bears an unfair burden in this country. We are working closely and intimately with the Government of Newfoundland and Labrador to try to make things right after 25 years of unfairness from a Government here in Ottawa of which the Hon. Member was a member.

HIBERNIA AND LOWER CHURCHILL PROJECTS

Hon. William Rompkey (Grand Falls—White Bay—Labrador): Mr. Speaker, on the two projects that could help most in Newfoundland, the Hibernia project and the Lower Churchill, the Premier of Newfoundland has said that the ball is squarely in the Prime Minister's court.

Mr. Crosbie: It used to be your court.

Mr. Rompkey: Will the Prime Minister move on those two projects which will create the jobs to alleviate that crushing load of poverty and unemployment that we have in my province?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, in regard to Hibernia, I understand there is a meeting tomorrow between the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, who has just come in, and the Government of Newfoundland.

In regard to the development of the Lower Churchill, last week when I was down in Havre-St-Pierre in my riding I repeated—

Some Hon. Members: Ah! Ah!

Mr. Mulroney: Mr. Speaker, the Liberals still seem to want to make fun of the riding of Manicouagan. Again I see that the Member from Toronto speaks against the interests of eastern Quebec and the riding of Manicouagan.

[English]

When I was in my constituency last week, I offered again as Prime Minister of Canada—

Mr. Broadbent: Another prison!

Mr. Mulroney: —to intervene with the Government of Newfoundland and Labrador and the Government of Quebec to try to bring about the joint development of the Lower Churchill to benefit the provinces of Newfoundland and Labrador and eastern Quebec generally. It would be a worthwhile national project, and I hope my hon. friend will support me in that view in trying to bring about that development.

EFFECT OF SOFTWOOD LUMBER TAX ON EQUALIZATION PAYMENTS

Mr. Robert Toupin (Terrebonne): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. We happen to know that the federal Government might soon impose a levy on lumber. Can the Minister confirm that if these additional revenues were to be redistributed among the producing provinces they would be taken into account in the equalization formula so that the poorest provinces would not be doubly penalized through equalization and as a result of the direct and indirect impact of the levy itself?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that the Hon. Member's question is hypothetical.

CONSEQUENCES FOR QUEBEC

Mr. Robert Toupin (Terrebonne): Of course the question is hypothetical, Mr. Speaker, but only for a short while. This is the last sitting day before the Christmas recess. Does the Minister realize that Quebec alone would stand to lose up to $50 million in additional revenues? This figure has been confirmed by the Quebec Government.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I listened closely, but I fail to see where the question is.

Mr. Broadbent: There is a question. Answer. Yes or no?

SOCIAL AFFAIRS

REQUEST FOR INTRODUCTION OF GUARANTEED ANNUAL INCOME

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Last night two Hamiltonians, Andrew and Caroline Copley, swallowed their pride and told Canada how difficult it was for a family of four who are living in poverty and who are working to live when they are paying 70 per cent of their income for housing. When I spoke with Mr. Copley this morning he said about his visits to a food bank in Hamilton, "I cower in the house for a day in case somebody saw me on the food line". I would like to ask the Prime Minister whether he can tell this family that he will help them and the thousands of other Canadians who are living in poverty by guaranteeing to bring in a guaranteed annual income in 1987.

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I also saw that television program last night. I want to say to the Hon. Member, as has been said earlier by the Prime Minister and other members of the Government, that we will continue our efforts to help people move out of the low-income cut-off area to which these people were referring.

I have to say in fairness and honesty to the Hon. Member that social assistance rates are set by the Province of Ontario. It is a province that has the ability to have higher rates than some other provinces. Social housing is also within the purview of the provincial Government with help through the federal Government. I hope that the Hon. Member is fair. There were people in poverty when her Government was in office. There are people in poverty under this Government, but at least signs and trends have been positive. When the Hon. Member puts her questions I hope that she will put them in the light not only of historical reality but also political reality.

REQUEST THAT SURTAX BE REVOKED

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I asked the Prime Minister to make a commitment to this family. How can the Prime Minister justify the kind of ridiculous answer we have just heard from the Minister of National Health and Welfare when this week in the House of Commons the Conservative Government of Canada imposed a 3 per cent surtax on the working poor? At the very least, will the P.M. not promise today in this House to revoke the 3 per cent surtax on the working poor?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member can say what she wants. What I gave, I believe, for fair-minded Canadians was a realistic assessment of the situation. When the Member puts forward the proposition, I am saying to her that the Minister of Finance, keeping in mind exactly that difficulty, put in the refundable sales tax credit.

Ms. Copps: What about the working poor families?

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Will the Hon. Member at least give the rest of us the same courtesy that she demands for herself.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Minister.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): The crybaby talks.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): As the Prime Minister has said, Mr. Speaker, and as others have said, we will continue working. We will work with those who are realistic. Obviously I cannot say that about the Hon. Member.

PATENT AMENDING LEGISLATION—POSITION OF ALBERTA SENIOR CITIZENS

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. He has claimed that opponents of his patent Bill are guilty of agitation through misrepresentation. Is it not the Minister who is guilty when he has claimed, for example, the support of Fonyo and Hansen, and why was it necessary for the president of the Alberta Council on Aging to write him to tell him to desist from claiming the support of the seniors in Alberta?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, in a list of telegrams and letters of support from various organizations was a newsletter from the Alberta Council on Aging with an editorial strongly in support of the policy we are introducing. I interpreted that inaccurately and I apologized to that organization.

Sometimes it is hard to tell where people stand. For example, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North was quoted in May, 1985, as saying:

> If the higher prices went into a fund which could really be used for research and development, I think the consumers could live with that.

Mr. McCurdy: Mr. Speaker, I do not understand that response.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Ask Orlikow.

PROFITS OF DRUG MANUFACTURING COMPANIES

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, instead of the Minister diverting the discussion to issues about who supports whom, would it not be better to answer the question why it is necessary to have a Bill that is supposed to improve profits when the average profit in the drug industry is 19 per cent? Wyeth Ltd. reported a profit of 51 per cent, Ayerst 21 per cent, and Burroughs Wellcome Ltd., 19 per cent. Why do they need more profits?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, they do not need more profits. What Canada needs is for those profits to be invested here in research and development so our young scientists can work for the health of Canadians.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Andre: This Bill is going to make that possible, and I would think the Hon. Member and his Party would realize that it is important to Canada and to Canadians to undertake more research and medical science because cures for diseases that afflict citizens come from research and development and Canadians have the ability to do that. We have the universities, and the teaching hospitals. We will now have the law to make it possible. The Hon. Member should be supporting this Bill.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

IRAN—CONSULAR ACCESS TO ARRESTED CANADIAN

Mr. Chris Speyer (Cambridge): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Will the Minister advise the House what progress or lack thereof he has had with respect to securing minimal and fundamental rights of consular access for Philip Engs who is in custody in Iran.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the continuing interest the Hon. Member and others have in this difficult question. I have no further progress to report in terms of a response from the Iranian authorities. I can advise the Hon. Member that at my request the Ambassador to Iran from Denmark will be visiting the most senior officers of the Iranian foreign service on Sunday to press our case again. I hope to have responses to the request that I have put and I will communicate them by the most expeditious way to the Hon. Member when they are received.

FAMILY VIOLENCE

INCIDENCE OF FAMILY VIOLENCE IN MANITOBA

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. Thus far in 1986 there have been over 3,900 reported cases of family violence in the Province of Manitoba. In fact over 650 cases of child abuse have been reported to the courts. This is directly related to the fact that there are well over 40,000 families in that province living below the poverty line. The Government of Canada has, in fact, reduced funding totally for the clearing house on family violence and has brought forward no co-ordinated approach to family policy. Specifically, can the Prime Minister tell us whether in 1987 we can expect a clear definition of family policy for Canada, particularly as it relates to the serious problem of family violence?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the statistics have already been given. I find it rather strange that where this Government advances the child tax credit the two cases where that money has been withheld in part against social assistance payments have occurred in the Province of Manitoba. There is one right now. The Province of Manitoba should put in the same conditions and full transfers of child tax credit that other provinces do. We have two cases in Manitoba where that is not happening.

Mr. Murphy: That is the Tory legacy.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): It is not a Tory legacy. It is an NDP Government in Manitoba. It is doing it.

DAY CARE—FEDERAL FUNDING

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my question demanded an answer—not pawning off responsibility to some other level of government. I want a specific answer on what this Government will do about the serious problem of family violence. I ask the Prime Minister again. In a recent survey done in my own riding of over 9,000 households, 60 per cent supported a fully funded federal day care program. Can we expect the Government to announce in 1987 a fully funded day care program for all Canadians?

Ms. Mitchell: Don't hold your breath.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we had the opportunity at the First Ministers' Conference to discuss this proposal actively. The Government of Canada is fully committed to alleviating that genuine concern in regard to day care. We will be making substantial progress in co-operation with the provinces—

Ms. Mitchell: What about the Budget? Have you got anything in there?

Mr. Mulroney: —to deal with what is not a women's issue, but society's problem that we must deal with together. I acknowledge that it as a priority and must be dealt with together.

It is unfortunate that over the years these matters were not more adequately considered. I was looking the other day, because of the tie-in to poverty and violence which my hon. friend quite properly pointed out, at an analysis done by the C. D. Howe Institute of previous Budgets including those when the Leader of the Opposition was Minister of Finance. This is a quote from that analysis:

> It was not the poor and needy who were protected from the ravages of inflation during his tenure as Minister of Finance. In dollar benefits it was the richest 8 per cent of the families.

• (1150)

That was the problem in the past, and with the help of the Minister of National Health and Welfare we are trying to correct that very dramatically.

SOVEREIGNTY

ALLEGED PASSAGE OF UNITED STATES SUBMARINES THROUGH CANADIAN WATERS

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. In a New York Times article this week by Richard Halloran, U.S. Navy officers said that attack submarines have travelled to the North Pole and back through the Canadian archipelago. Since the U.S. Navy now admits that its submarines have gone through Canadian waters as well as the other three routes, can the Minister tell us whether or not Canada's permission for these voyages was requested?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr Speaker, I saw that article in The New York Times and was frankly surprised to see that statement attributed to an officer of the U.S. Navy. The only answer I can give, as the Hon. Member knows, is that it is not our practice to provide information as to the potential presence of U.S. submarines in Canadian waters or the potential routes used.

UNITED STATES PLANS FOR FUTURE ARCTIC VOYAGES

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, it seems odd that one has to get information like this from The New York Times or naval officers in Washington. Has Canada simply become a total patsy on these issues? Has Canada been informed that the U.S. Navy plans similar and "even more extensive" expeditions to the Arctic next year? Have they asked for our permission and has it been granted?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I would agree that it is most unusual for U.S. naval officials to be making those kinds of comments if indeed they were correctly quoted in The New York Times. Assuming for the moment that they were for the sake of argument, let me take this occasion to indicate publicly that the Government of Canada expects the U.S. Government to respect and enforce the understanding among all NATO allies about not revealing the presence of or routes used by ships of the U.S. or NATO fleets.

With regard to the second part of the question concerning a remark made by a spokesman for the U.S. Navy, I gather a serving officer of the Navy, and what that person expects the U.S. Government's intention to be, the Member will know discussions are under way now with respect to elaboration of Canada's claims to sovereignty in the North which were made by this Government a year ago September after a long reluctance to do so by former Governments.

Mr. Speaker: Since this is the last Question Period before Christmas, time is going along and questions and answers have been long. I ask Hon. Members to co-operate by keeping the questions short, and Ministers to respond by keeping the answers short.

CONTRACT TO PREPARE COMMUNICATIONS PLAN ON AMENDING LEGISLATION

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Crosbie: Why not wish us a Merry Christmas?

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, at the request of government Members I will wish them a Merry Christmas before I direct my question to the Prime Minister.

My question concerns poverty. Why did the Government of Canada give a contract to a rich Tory friend of the Prime Minister, Roger Nantel, to prepare a communications plan to convince poor and sick Canadians that they should be happy to give at least $200 million a year more to rich multinationals through higher drug prices? When will he cancel this contract and stop spending money foolishly the way he has been over the last year?

Mr. Crosbie: There is a poverty of intelligence over there.

Mr. Boudria: Put the money where it should be, helping poor Canadians.

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, that contract is a perfectly natural and normal contract of the same type the previous Government gave out with great frequency. It was for a period of three months, a maximum of $25,000—

Mr. Broadbent: I thought you were supposed to change that.

Mr. Nystrom: Harvey is a Liberal.

Mr. Andre: —and $12,500 was paid. Like the previous Government, this Government hires experts to give advice from time to time on a variety of things. It is a normal practice, and any suggestion of something illicit or improper here is entirely in the mind of the questioner.

REQUEST THAT BILL C-22 BE WITHDRAWN

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary for the Prime Minister.

Since the Program did not work and Canadians don't want this Bill, will the Prime Minister ask his friend, Mr. Nantel, to give the money back to the Government and cancel Bill C-22 which will increase poverty in Canada?

[English]

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, it is not true that Canadians do not want it. For example, the Hon. Member for Sudbury is quoted in The Canadian Pharmaceutical Journal in May of this year as saying: "I may be branded as a heretic among Liberals in this country but I happen to believe in intellectual property rights and I think the patent laws of 1969 went too far in one direction."

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Andre: So there is at least one Canadian over there who agrees with us.

AIR TRANSPORT

CANCELLATION OF AIRLINE LICENCE—COMPENSATION FOR LOSSES INCURRED

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I want to direct a couple of questions to the Minister of Transport. They concern the tragic case of Fred Turner of Yellowknife who, as a result of harsh and, I think, vindictive action of a government agency, lost his aircraft and equipment and was forced into bankruptcy. In discussions with myself and the Hon. Member for Skeena the previous Minister of Transport agreed to compensate Mr. Turner. The Government offered $15,000. The previous Minister told me the cheque has been processed, and I do not think that is true.

Would the Minister do what he promised last Monday night in committee and have his officials contact Mr. Turner and make sure he gets the money immediately?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I know the Hon. Member's interest in this case which indeed sounds harsh. I want to remind him, however, that this arises from a decision of the Air Transport Committee of the Canadian Transport Commission which, on April 4, 1984, before this Government assumed office, cancelled this man's licence.

We have recommended, and there is an Order in Council, that an ex gratia payment of $15,000 be offered to Mr. Turner. I will have to check to see whether he has been contacted since the committee meeting the other day where the Hon. Member brought up this matter. If he has not been contacted as he should have been, I will see that he is today.

REQUEST FOR NEGOTIATION OF ADDITIONAL COMPENSATION

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): As of half an hour ago he has not been contacted by anyone from the Minister's Department. Now that Mr. Turner has also lost his home will the Minister not only immediately send the $15,000 to him but enter into negotiations for further compensation? You owe him at least ten times that much.

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Transport): Our legal counsel will continue his attempts to meet with Mr. Turner and reach an agreement which will permit him to receive this ex gratia payment. As to further payments, that would be in the hands of our lawyers. We do not think there is any legal responsibility on the Government in this matter but we are attempting to assist Mr. Turner because we feel he was treated unfairly. I will definitely see if anything further can be done.

Mr. Benjamin: You ruined him.

Mr. Crosbie: Not the Government.

DAY CARE SERVICES

GOVERNMENT'S PROGRAM FOR 1987

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): My question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare.

As the Prime Minister said earlier, the Minister of National Health and Welfare will have to give special attention to day care in the coming year. Could the Minister inform the House if talks have already started with his provincial counterparts on the subject of day care and could he reveal the Government's concrete plans in this respect?

• (1200)

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Member for her question. Following the discussions between the Prime Minister and the First Ministers in Vancouver, I will meet with the Social Affairs Ministers. This issue is on our agenda for January 22 and 23, 1987.

QUERY CONCERNING PROVISION OF FUNDS FOR DAY CARE IN FEBRUARY, 1987, BUDGET

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister.

At the First Ministers' Conference in Vancouver, the Prime Minister stated publicly that he would earmark funds for day care in the February 1987 Budget.

I wish the Prime Minister would tell the House how much he is prepared to spend on day care, and whether he is willing to set aside $150 million as requested in the Cook report, to show that the Conservative Government sees day care as a priority and not as an exercise in public relations.

[English]

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I do not think the record would show that the Prime Minister was specific relative to the Budget of 1987.

Mrs. Pépin: Oh, yes.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Hon. Members should also know that Budgets are not discussed on the floor of the House of Commons. The Prime Minister said that the Government of Canada is committed to a day-care program. He also said that we will have to negotiate this with the provinces in view of the jurisdictional issue. The Member is on a recommendations committee. I hope she will make her recommendations early.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CLOSURE OF EMBASSY IN EQUADOR

Mr. Alex Kindy (Calgary East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs and is with regard to the closing of our embassy in Equador. Equador has a population of nine million and has a good economy. It could have good relations with Canada. We could sell our produce and technology there. What is the reason for this closure?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, there is no doubt that no Member of the House and no Government would voluntarily choose to close embassies in Equador or elsewhere. We face some very serious financial problems with which we must deal.

Ms. Copps: Shamrock Summit.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): You cannot simply wish away a deficit. You must work it down. With all respect, I suggest that the Hon. Member will have to live with that economic reality just as the rest of the people of Canada must.

DATE OF BY-ELECTIONS

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. It is a tradition that at about 4.30 on the day we recess for the Christmas break, appointments are made of hacks, flacks, and bagmen to the other place. In the spirit of parliamentary reform, would the Prime Minister not use this occasion—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Crosbie: This is your big chance, Nelson.

An Hon. Member: Remember Ian Deans.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Perhaps the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap could be specific in his question.

Mr. Beatty: Ian Deans asked the same question at the same time last year.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, in the spirit of good will, and breaking from tradition, would the Right Hon. Prime Minister not take this opportunity to announce the dates for the by-elections in St. John's East and Hamilton Mountain?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, with regard to the question about the hacks, flack, dupes, and poops, I would like to tell the Hon. Member that Ian Deans asked the same question at exactly the same time last year.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Look what happened to him.

Mr. Mulroney: I want you to know that for your comment I have taken you off the list. Boy, will I get a call from your wife!

With regard to the two by-elections, they are indeed due and will be called. There could be a third one if the Hon. Member for Terrebonne did the honourable thing and resigned his seat as an NDPer in Quebec.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: I regret that the Question Period has ended.

CHRISTMAS RECESS

MR. SPEAKER EXTENDS COMPLIMENTS OF THE SEASON

Mr. Speaker: I would like to extend the usual invitation to all Hon. Members to join with the Speaker and others in an exchange of good wishes and compliments of the season in Room 16 starting at five o'clock. I hope to see some of you there.

This is the last day we will be in the House before Christmas. People have been benevolent in exchanging their good wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. I know that has all been said sincerely. I would like to say very sincerely that I appreciate, more than I can adequately say, the co-operation and good will which I have received, as your new Speaker, from all Members of the House. I am very proud of all of you. Merry Christmas.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

ELABORATION OF ANSWER

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order with regard to the question asked of me by the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). Mr. Bickert of the Department of Justice contacted Mr. Turner this week after the Monday meeting of the Standing Committee on Transport. He has advised us that he wants $2 million rather than the $15,000 ex gratia payment offered. It appears that there is a large gap between the two positions.

EXTENSION OF SITTING—LUNCH HOUR

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, in the spirit of benevolence which exists in the House today, I think you will find unanimous agreement to extend the hours of the proceedings during the lunch hour from one o'clock to two o'clock in order that we can continue with the business before the House and perhaps finish it a little earlier this afternoon.

Mr. Speaker: Is there agreement?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

PRIVILEGE

ALLEGED ASPERSION ON MEMBER'S INTEGRITY

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale—High Park): Mr. Speaker, yesterday two Members of this House saw fit to cast aspersion on my integrity based on a libelous newspaper article which was an outright fabrication. The Hon. Members should check their facts before they accept such an outrageous story which insinuates that I was somehow tied to a fundraising organization for the Contras because I attended a banquet which apparently some representative of this organization was originally scheduled to attend. This ridiculous piece of logic was used to assail my reputation and integrity, calling my credibility into question, and inhibiting my ability to function as a Member of Parliament.

Erskine May states that the privileges of Parliament are rights which are absolutely necessary to the due execution of its powers. I believe credibility is absolutely essential to any Member of Parliament and, by mounting this scurrilous attack on my reputation, the Members of Parliament for Hamilton East (Miss Copps) and New Westminster—Coquitlam (Ms. Jewett) have seriously breached my privilege.

Should you find that I have a question of privilege, I am prepared to move that the matter be referred to the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections for examination.

Mr. Speaker: Are there any other Members rising on this question of privilege?

• (1210)

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I am sure you will find ample precedent to determine that the matter being raised by the Hon. Member who just spoke is really a matter of debate, or difference of opinion, and not a matter that affects the privilege of the Member. On behalf of the Opposition I want to put that position before the Chair.

Mr. Speaker: Are other Hon. Members rising on this question of privilege? I advise the Hon. Member for Parkdale—High Park (Mr. Witer) that I will consider the matter. I must indicate that it would seem to me that, while the Hon. Member has a grievance, it may not be a question of privilege.

Under the circumstances, I think it would be appropriate for the Hon. Member to convey his concern to other Hon. Members who may have unwittingly put the Hon. Member in a difficult position. The Hon. Member's right of free speech has not been affected, although I will look carefully at the matter.

I urge all Members that if they are going to attack each other, as sometimes is done, they should be very careful not to make accusations that are not well founded in fact. That seems to be the complaint of the Hon. Member and perhaps he might speak with other Hon. Members involved and advise me afterward of the result of that discussion.

GOVERNMENT ADMINISTRATION

FIVE YEAR PLAN—CANADA POST

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion and Minister responsible for Canada Post Corporation): Mr. Speaker, on Monday, the Hon. Member for Selkirk—Interlake tabled in the House the report of the Government Operations Committee concerning Canada Post's five year corporate plan. On behalf of all members of the House, I would like to thank the committee members for their diligent work.

As requested under provisional Standing Order 99(2), Mr. Speaker, the Government will be tabling in a few moments a formal response to the report presented by the Standing Committee. I would like to take this opportunity to address the most important issues raised by the committee.

Mr. Speaker, as Members will recall, my colleague, the Minister of Finance announced last spring that Canada Post would be required to eliminate its operating deficit by fiscal year 1988-89. Our objective was for Canada Post to improve service and reliability while managing both its finances and its operations more efficiently and effectively. Our resolve in this remains undiminished.

[English]

In response to the orientation set by the Government, the senior management and Board of Directors of Canada Post prepared a five-year corporate plan in which the corporation detailed the measures it proposed to take in order to improve both service and over-all efficiency.

When the details of the plans were scrutinized by the parliamentary Committee on Government Operations, it became apparent that some of the measures that the Corporation proposed were of concern. In particular, the committee devoted much of its time and attention to the impact of proposed changes in postal service on rural Canadians.

The committee has indeed done tremendous work. The Government has had an opportunity to examine the report of the committee and is in general agreement with its observations and recommendations.

In recognition of the changing demographics of rural Canada, Canada Post has been eliminating rural lot line delivery routes for years. The corporate plan proposed measures that would have further removed lot line service for some 100,000 rural Canadians. In response to concerns raised by the committee, the corporation has advised me that it will not proceed at this time on the replacement of rural lot line services.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Côté (Langelier): This change will be reflected in Canada Post's next corporate plan.

On the subject of the possible amalgamation of some rural Post Offices, I am in agreement, as is the corporation, with the point made by the committee that a simple amalgamation formula cannot be imposed arbitrarily and uniformly on a country as broad and diverse as Canada.

Canada Post recognizes the need to be sensitive to local concerns that vary from community to community. During the hearings, the President of Canada Post made the commitment that there will be no amalgamation without local consultations and that in the future a 90-day notice will be given of proposed service changes to permit this process to take place.

While amalgamations of rural Post Offices must take place, it will be done on an opportunity basis, wherever possible, due to retirement of a postmaster or some such other vacancies. Where this is not possible, a human resource management plan will be developed.

I was pleased to note that the commitee is in general agreement with the proposal of Canada Post Management to involve the private sector on a broader scale through franchising in the provision of counter services in rural and other areas. The small businesses and entrepreneurs of Canada can do an excellent job in meeting many essential consumer needs in this country through franchising. As Members already know, 25 per cent of Canada Post's retail outlets are already managed by the private sector.

The subject of second class mail privileges for newspapers, periodicals and books is part of the larger issue of cultural subsidies for which my colleague the Minister of Communications (Miss MacDonald) is responsible.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to remind Hon. Members that the Government is presently paying more than 70 per cent of the cost of sending publications through the mail. This particular approach has not been revisited since 1969 and, accordingly, the Department of Communications with the assistance of Treasury Board and Canada Post will be consulting with the publishing industry on this issue over the next several months. In the interim Canada Post will be proceedings with modest increases to the rates of published materials effective July 1st, 1987.

Of most concern to the committee were proposed postal rate increases for weekly newspapers. The Government shares the concern expressed by the committee on the impact these increases could have had on weekly newspapers. I have received assurances from Canada Post that there will be no increase in the rates for weekly newspapers.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Côté (Langelier): With respect to services in urban areas, the committee also heard testimony regarding the faulty installation and a particular design problem associated with supermailboxes.

• (1220)

[English]

In response to these problems, members of the committee expressed concern with the security of mail delivered by this means. Canada Post has given its assurance, both to the committee and to the Government, that these problems will be eliminated prior to the installation of any new supermailboxes. With regard to disciplinary and legal action resulting therefrom, I understand Canada Post is giving these matters full consideration.

Canada Post is also taking steps to meet another concern voiced by the committee, the need to ensure that the services available to the public through supermailboxes are accessible to physically handicapped customers.

In many areas of the country, particularly in small towns, Canadians have never had door to door postal delivery services. In fact, Mr. Speaker, only 54 per cent of canadians currently receive door to door service.

As members of this House know, the cluster box concept, as an alternative to door to door delivery was developed by Canada Post under the previous Government. Then as now, it was apparent that the cost of extending door to door delivery to new areas of the country was prohibitive. Supermailbox services, properly installed, are a vast improvement over the old green community mailbox delivery mode introduced by the previous administration or for that matter, general delivery, and represent an efficient means of servicing new growth areas at a cost considerably less than the $500 millions associated with the extension of door to door service in all new subdivisions.

[English]

Finally, the committee carefully considered the planned two cent increase in the basic letter rate and concluded that the increase is not excessive. The Government concurs with this conclusion. Therefore, gazetting of the rate increases will take place at the earliest opportunity. Further increases to the basic letter rate which will henceforth become effective on January 1 of each year, as necessary, will be held to not more than the rate of inflation.

I want to be very clear today that the Government is maintaining the approval it gave last October of the CPC corporate plan for the period 1986-87 to 1990-91. We are holding the CPC to its projected loss of $30 million in 1987-88 and profits of $53 million, $44 million and $58 million in the following three years, and its full commitment to an improved postal service for Canadians.

Considerable progress has already been achieved by Canada Post Corporation. For example, over the last two years, the volume of mail processed has increased while at the same time using 2,000 less employees. Absenteeism has been reduced by 26 per cent. Expenses other than salaries in 1985-86 were close to 2 per cent lower than the previous year.

The committee expressed the view that while improvement has taken place since the corporation was established, further progress was called for.

For example, first class mail's reliability has improved by an unprecedented 4 per cent since the summer.

Both the CPC Board of directors and management recognize that the financial discipline imposed by our fiscal framework is an essential element in their efforts to move the mail with service reliability, economy and efficiency.

They know that financial viability is the best guarantee of security that any corporation can give to its employees, and to its customers. They are heartened to receive this confirmation of their operating plan because it is a clear manifestation of the confidence and support which the Government has placed and continues to place in them over the difficult months and years ahead.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the members of the committee, and the others who praticipated in the hearings, for their work. I believe that their report, and the results stemming from it, are a clear indication of the success of this Government's intentions to incorporate the views and talents of all private Members into achieving workable solutions to the important issues of the day.

[English]

As I said earlier, now is the time to let the corporation get on with the job.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret that I did not say that the Minister was in charge of Canada Post. I apologize.

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, perhaps it is because the Minister is not in charge of Canada Post that you forgot.

I am pleased to participate and respond to the Minister today. I wish, however, that the Minister had given us better news.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, at the beginning of his remarks the Minister commended the parliamentary committee for what he felt was an outstanding job and contribution.

First I might remind him that the parliamentary committee heard only two witnesses: the Canada Post Corporation President and Mr. Sylvain Cloutier, President of the Management Office.

Many other people would have liked to appear as witnesses, including the Canadian Small Business Federation, postal workers' associations and a number of other Canadians, but they were not given an opportunity. The committee sat only eight times and began drafting its report very early. How can anyone conclude that the committee did a good job, how can anyone even conclude that it was objective? Everything had obviously been decided even before the committee began its proceedings.

The Minister had nothing but praise because Canada Post should wipe out its deficit by financial year 1988-1989. This is unrealistic, Mr. Speaker. As a matter of fact, Mr. Marchment himself said in his report that it would take five years before operations might become profitable.

We hear about cut-backs today because the Government has taken an unrealistic approach. I am saying this as a Member of Parliament, and Mr. Marchment who was commissioned by the Government to produce the report came to the same conclusion.

[English]

The Minister said in his remarks that Canada Post "detailed the measures it proposed to take in order to improve both service and over-all efficiency". How can we improve service by shutting down post offices? How can we improve service by telling Canadians they cannot have home delivery? How can having something less than what we had before be considered an improvement? It is obviously not an improvement. It may cost less, as the Minister said, but please do not call it an improvement. Anything which is less than what we had is not an improvement unless it is an improvement in the effort to make things worse.

Given the fact that the committee had to issue a dissenting report—no Hon. Member of the Opposition was in accord with the Government—the report on which the Minister has made his statements today is a complete whitewash. I represent an electoral riding in which there are 42 post offices in the west end of the region. It is an urban area. People have had supermailboxes inflicted upon them. The rest of my constituency, by and large, is very rural with small post offices everywhere. We are told that the corporation will not proceed at this time with the replacement of rural lot line service. We still have not heard from the Minister as to what "at this time" means. We would like to get a commitment that the lot line service will remain, not only in the short term but in the long term. It is important for our rural constituents.

The Minister has proposed that consultation take place when post offices are closed. Of course, we do not want them to close at all. However, if the Minister is planning to close them, I wish he would give us an explanation as to what "local consultation means". Does it mean that the local municipal officials will be consulted? Does it mean that the Member of Parliament will be notified or will he or she only receive notice in his constituency mail after a decision has already been taken? It is important for us to know just exactly how that consultation process will take place.

In terms of closing down post offices on the so-called opportunity basis, that is wrong. That criteria should never be used, and I will tell the Minister why. I have a postmistress in my riding who is in her sixties. She has been saying for some time that she wishes to quit her job and retire. However, the citizenry have been telling her not to quit because if she does they will lose their post office. What kind of pressure is that to be placing on people? It is unfair to make a postmaster or postmistress personally responsible for whether or not a post office will be retained. It is unfair to place that type of a burden on people.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, with all the talk about privatizing post offices, I still wonder how the Minister intends to do this, if we consider union contracts, and especially the successor clauses in those contracts, because we may well be in a situation where the same bargaining agreement will subsequently be binding on the person or the agency that takes over a post office, because some of these post offices have people who are unionized. So perhaps the Minister could explain this particular detail later on.

I would also like to point out to the Minister the problem of our weekly newspapers. Although we are glad there will be no rate increase in the immediate future, at least not for newspapers, I would like to know a bit more about this particular area, because the whole issue of mail delivery may affect our rural papers. I have seven in my riding.

[English]

The seven weekly newspapers that I have in my riding are very worried, not only about a potential increase or potential abandonment of subsidy, but if the system is made the way Canada Post proposes to make it with less efficient delivery, then we would centralize rural post offices. What this will leave us with is weekly newspapers that will no longer be delivered on the same day, which is now the custom. In rural areas the owner of a rural paper goes to the local post office, hands copies of the paper to the postmaster who places it in the boxes right away. If this measure is implemented then weekly newspapers will be delivered when they are one, two or three days old. For that reason alone we may lose very many of our local weekly newspapers. I ask the Minister to think about that situation because it is a concern that has been raised with me by some of the local weekly newspaper publishers in the riding I represent.

[Translation]

The Minister did not mention the subject of religions publications, and I would urge him to clarify the situation on these publications because I imagine that recently, quite a few Members, including the Member now speaking, probably received comments from editors of these publications in their ridings.

[English]

I now wish to talk about the so-called superbox, and I recognize I have only one minute left. The superbox does not work. It is as plain as that. It does not work. The Minister says it is better than the old-fashioned green mailbox. At least the green mailboxes worked. They are temporary. They can be removed and replaced by better delivery later on. Most important, if the old green boxes had locks that did not work they could be sawed off and replaced with another lock. That cannot be done with the new set-up. It is clear that the only thing we can say about superboxes is that they should never have been invented. They should never have been sold. They should never have been bought by the Government of Canada and by Canada Post.

There is considerably more to say on the postal issue. I just wish I had more time in which to say it. I am sorry that my time has expired. I wish I had another 10 minutes in which to speak so that I could finish my remarks on behalf of my Party. This is an important issue. It is important to all Canadians. Perhaps if I were given unanimous consent I could have another five minutes and continue my reply.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Does the Hon. Member have unanimous consent to continue his remarks?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper).

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I wish to come right to the point. From the report of the committee and from the Minister's response it has been clearly demonstrated that the majority of the committee members were nothing more than yes-men. They were yes-men to the Minister and yes-men to the President of Canada Post. I say yes-men deliberately. Perhaps if there had been some female Members of Parliament on the committee there would have been some more humanity expressed by the majority, as opposed to the callous attitude that was taken with regard to postal service.

The Minister's statement today only deals in a token way with postal service. In effect what the Minister has done is dealt with the tip of the iceberg. When a sailor is out on the ocean he has to know not only what is taking place above the water-line but what is taking place below. He has to know not only where is the tip of the iceberg but where the bulk of it is beneath the water-line. That is what led to the sinking of the Titanic. Sitting across from me is the captain of the Titanic. His ship is going down. Postal service is going down and all the Minister deals with is the tip of the iceberg, that little part above the water-line.

I wish to give some credit where credit is due. What is being done that is positive has to do with lot line service in rural areas and with weekly newspapers. The Minister deserves some credit. He has put a halt to the reduction in lot line services in rural areas, according to the words in his statement. I hope he lives up to those words. He has also put a halt to the increase in rates for weekly newspapers. So the Minister and the committee deserve some credit in this regard.

However, the people who deserve the most credit are members of the Canadian public. I say that because it is they who spoke out. It is they who let the Government know in no uncertain terms that they are fed up with further reductions in postal service. It is because of the strong public outcry that the Government has backed down and buckled under with respect to these two issues.

To place the matter in perspective, this is just the tip of the iceberg. These are but two token elements of the over-all postal plan. What we have to examine is what lies below the water-line, what is left undone. We must examine where the real problems that will sink the postal service lie, the problems which will cause untold damage to Canadians in terms of their postal service.

What is below the water-line is rural service and rural post offices. The way the Minister deals with these matters is by saying that there is a need for a sensitivity to local concerns. That is no assurance that rural post offices will not be closed. In fact, the Minister has said that amalgamations will go ahead. Thus in the future we will see closures of rural post offices. What will be required is for people to continue to speak out, and to speak out loudly in order that their post offices not be closed.

The Minister said in his statement that there would be no amalgamations without local consultation and that in the future a 90-day notice will be required. It is already a requirement under existing legislation and existing post office policy that notice be given. That requirement has not been respected. It has not been effective. What faith can we have in the Minister with respect to him changing his ways regarding to rural post offices?

Having regard to rural post offices, I wish to deal directly with the Minister's claim about franchising, about turning over all of the rural post offices to the private sector. Let me point out that the Minister intends to do the same thing with urban post offices. What we are talking about is turning over all of the post offices in the country to the private sector in the name of efficiency and convenience. If we need more convenience and efficiency in the post office, that could be done equally as well in the public sector as in the private sector.

The danger in what is being done is not only that there will be a reduction in service but, when these contracts are let, there will be a real temptation for abuse. There will be temptation for the Government to use these contracts as another patronage tool.

Over the last few days we heard about the way Citizenship Court judge positions are used as patronage tools. Here the Government is opening up a whole new line of patronage gifts to pass out. The difficulty with that is that the Government can abuse that process at the cost of service.

Another item that is below the surface of this postal plan is the issue of the superboxes. In his statement, the Minister talked about dealing with technical problems and he assured us that there will be no new superboxes put in place until all technical problems are dealt with. Why were the technical problems not dealt with in the first place? Why should we have any more confidence in his assurances today than we have had in his assurances in the past? On a number of occasions the Minister assured us that superboxes were an improvement in service, that they had been fixed and that they would work. Each time that was not the case. Experience proved otherwise.

What people need and want is equity in service. I give the Minister credit for putting a stop to the introduction of superboxes in place of lot-line service in rural areas. If the Minister can do this for rural citizens, why can he not do the same thing for those who live in urban areas? Why does he not say that there will be no second-class citizens, just as the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) has said, not only in rural areas but in the cities as well? I challenge the Minister to live up to that principle and to apply the policy on an equitable basis.

I would like to deal briefly with the rates charged for mailing books, periodicals and religious magazines. I will sum up as quickly as I can, Mr. Speaker. There are a few important points that I must make.

While the Minister deserves credit for saying no to an increase in weekly rates, he has failed to mention in his statement, either inadvertently or through poor writing, the issue of religious publications. He mentioned weekly newspapers but he failed to give us the same assurance regarding religious publications. He said that rate increases for these publishers will go ahead. The survival of publications of religious and voluntary organizations continues to be threatened by this policy. As well, national magazines such as Maclean's and Saturday Night, instruments of communication that help keep this country together, are also threatened by the policy with which the Government is going ahead.

The Government is promising consultation and I hope that consultation will be significant rather than token, as it has been up until now. Unfortunately, the statement made by the Minister is not surprising. It contains some specific token elements on which the Government has capitulated in the face of public opinion. However, the over-all impact of this statement is that the Government is going full steam ahead with cutting back on postal service and with raising postal rates. Not only will rates be increased by two cents this year but they will be increased annually.

The Minister has dealt only with the tip of the iceberg. Like the captain of the Titanic, this captain will take his ship down at a time when Canadians need good, reliable, efficient postal service.

ALLEGED MISINFORMATION

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I must inform the House that at the end of Question Period, on a point of order, the Minister of Transport (Mr. Crosbie) inadvertently, I believe, misinformed the House when he stated that the solicitor for the Department of Justice had contacted Mr. Fred Turner in Yellowknife this week. The Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton) and I immediately proceeded to the telephone in the lobby and called Mr. Turner. He said that no one had contacted him this week. The officials who informed the Minister of Transport misled the Minister and the Minister had better set the record straight.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order. I regret that that is not a point of order. It is debate.

OPPOSITION TO EXODUS LINK CONTRACT

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale—High Park): Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege today to present to the House a petition on behalf of residents of Parkdale—High Park expressing their opposition to the Exodus Link parole privatization contract which would locate up to 80 ex-convicts in their neighbourhood, and I would like to add my strong support to their call for the Solicitor General (Mr. Kelleher) to immediately terminate funding to Exodus Link until a location outside the boundaries of Parkdale—High Park has been found.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, again I would like to present 10 petitions from Canadians, mostly from Ontario and British Columbia, who make the point that the retaliatory tariff on imported books in the English language has had limited effect on American export of books into Canada yet it has imposed a very difficult and onerous charge on Canadian publishers. It penalizes Canada's consumers, book publishers, book sellers, distributors and Canada's culture. Rising book prices have placed a strain on the book acquisition programs and policies of our nation's public and specialized libraries. The undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to rescind this tariff which threatens irreparable harm to the Canadian book industry and compromises federal policy on cultural industries with respect to free trade negotiations.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I am sure you are not surprised to find me rising once again pursuant to Standing Order 106 to present a petition on behalf of many, western Canadians who are very concerned about the proposals to change the Patent Act relating to prescription drugs. They believe this will increase drug prices for Canadian consumers and will severely restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy necessary prescription drugs. They are asking the Government to reconsider its intention to proceed with this legislation.

CN PENSIONS

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland—Kent): Mr. Speaker, I have the duty to present to the House a number of petitions from residents of Scarborough, Hamilton, Toronto, Niagara Falls, Keswick, Rexdale, Brampton, Richmond Hill and several other Ontario cities; these petitions relate to the sub-committee report on CN pensions.

[English]

One of those recommendations is that inflation protection be a priority item during the current round of contract negotiations. The subcommittee presented a report to this House in May and CN and the Minister have so far failed to respond. The petitioners also offer their support to the recommendation that, if an agreement is not achieved between CN and the railway unions, legislation be introduced in this House to provide a reasonable degree of inflation protection for railway workers and their survivors.

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition from a number of residents in the constituency of Spadina, and in other parts of Toronto. They are complaining against the action of Canada Post in removing 700 letter drop boxes, which is about a third of the letter drop boxes in the City of Toronto. The petitioners complain that this makes it a great deal more difficult to post letters. It is also unsafe for the elderly and the disabled. The petitioners ask Parliament to ensure that Canada Post will replace these mailboxes, and in the future will consult with the residents of the communities affected before removing these boxes and other services.

LOW-LEVEL FLIGHTS AT ARMED FORCES BASE AT GOOSE BAY

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): I also have a petition from a number of residents of Vancouver, Mississauga, Toronto, and other municipalities who object to the Government's policy of having low-level flight training carried out from the Canadian Forces Base in Goose Bay, Labrador. The petitioners object on the grounds that the Government should rather be promoting peaceful employment there that does not disrupt the environment or the life of the people, and does not constitute a provocative and aggressive war-fighting action that tends to endanger world peace.

Therefore, the undersigned humbly pray and call upon Parliament to ensure that the Prime Minister ends all low-level flight training at the Goose Bay Canadian Forces Base, and cease negotiations with NATO for the establishment of a larger base there.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I rise once again to plead with this Government to pay attention to the 200 names that I am depositing for your consideration. My colleague, the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), has just tabled an additional 250 names. This past week alone we have tabled over 2,500 names of Canadian citizens who strongly oppose the Government's action—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I would hope that the Hon. Member would concentrate on her own petition.

Mrs. Finestone: The petitioners oppose the retaliatory tariff on imported books in the English language which has limited the access of Canadians to literature and information. The petitioners are opposed to this tax on reading.

They humbly bring to your attention that the tariff has had little negative effect on the publishing industry of the United States, yet it has severely penalized Canada's consumers, book publishers, book sellers, book distributors, and Canada's culture. The rise in book prices has placed an enormous strain on the book acquisition programs and policies of our nation's public and specialized libraries, which brings about a new buying procedure which is detrimental to these industries.

The undersigned petitioners humbly pray and call upon you, Sir, and the Parliament of Canada to rescind this negative unintelligent tariff which threatens irreparable harm to the Canadian book industry, and compromises federal policy on cultural industries in respect of free trade negotiations. It puts culture right smack in the middle of the free trade table.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, it is my duty and privilege to present another petition from citizens of the City of Regina who believe that the Government's proposal to change the Patent Act will result in higher prescription drug prices for average Canadians, and higher cost to provincial government drug plans. The proposed changes are another example of Canadian Government concessions to the United States in the free trade negotiations at the expense of average Canadians.

Your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to reject these proposals which will increase prescription drug prices for Canadians.

CN PENSIONS

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I wish to present a series of petitions representing some 300 residents of Sarnia and surrounding communities, many of whom are employees of CN. The petitioners are petitioning the Government and the House that the recommendations of the subcommittee of the Transport Committee on CN pensions be implemented as quickly as possible. These CN employees, many of their colleagues, friends and family in their respective communities are concerned that CN and the employees' union will fail to reach an agreement on the recommendations of the subcommittee on CN pensions with respect to protection of indexing and inflation., If necessary, the House of Commons and the Government should enact legislation to ensure that justice is done on behalf of the CN employees in these respective communities.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

[Text]

FOOD IRRADIATION

Question No. 24—Mrs. Cossitt:

1. Are the Departments of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and National Health and Welfare working on amendments to the food and drug regulations to classify irradiation as a process rather than an additive and, if so, what are all the details?

2. Is it the intention of the government to classify irradiation as a process and would irradiated food still be tested and labelled as such and (a) if not, for what reason (b) if so, what will be the procedures and the proposed labels?

3. Has the Government informed the Canadian people about the proposed use of irradiation of food and (a) if so (i) to what degree (ii) in what manner (b) if not, in what manner does the government plan to undertake a public awareness program on irradiated foods?

4. Has the government requested input from the public and experts on irradiation of food and (a) if so (i) who responded (ii) how many responses favoured irradiation (iii) how many responses opposed irradiation (b) if not, for what reason?

5. Are recommendations currently being considered with respect to the labelling of irradiated foods and (a) if so, what are they (b) if not, for what reasons?

6. Did the Government conduct tests on irradiated foods to determine their effects on humans and, if so (a) what were they (b) on what date were they completed (c) what were the results (d) will further testing be undertaken and, if not, for what reason?

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): I am informed by the Departments of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and National Health and Welfare as follows:

1. The Health Protection Branch of the Department of National Health and Welfare issued an Information Letter to all interested parties, such as consumer groups, industry, associations, other governmental departments, etc., in July, 1983, proposing new regulations pertaining to the control of food irradiation. In effect, these regulations would remove food irradiation from the food additive provisions in Division 16 of the Food and Drug Regulations and establish a new division in the regulations specific to this physical process. The proposed new regulations contain definitions, detailed pre-clearance requirements and inspection procedures appropriate to food irradiation. In addition, under the new regulations, irradiated foods meeting the pre-clearance requirements and deemed acceptable from a human health standpoint would be listed individually in a table to this new division together with any restrictions on irradiation sources and dose limitations. Only those foods listed in this table would be permitted to be irradiated (within the limitations described) and sold in Canada. It should be noted that no relinquishing of control of food irradiation from a public health point of view will occur if these proposed regulations are adopted. In fact, these regulations will allow more effective regulatory control of this process than currently exists.

2. (a) The pre-clearance requirements proposed would require testing to determine the minimum dose needed to be efficacious in individual applications. In addition, data which would indicate the effects, if any, on the nutritional quality of the food and data establishing that the irradiated food has not been significantly altered in chemical or physical characteristics to render it unacceptable for human consumption would also be required. Furthermore, tests to establish the safety of irradiated foods would be required in those instances where toxicological testing on a world-wide basis to date has been deemed to be inadequate.

(b) In so far as labelling is concerned, this issue falls under the purview of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. It should be noted however, that consideration of food irradiation as a process does not preclude labelling. See also part 5 on this matter.

3. (a) (i) (ii) As a means of informing the public and other interested parties, the Health Protection Branch of the Department of National Health and Welfare issued and Information Letter on these new regulatory proposals in July, 1983. In addition, officials have given numerous speeches and media interviews on this subject and the Department of National Health and Welfare will continue to disseminate information on health and safety related issues as well as regulatory aspects of food irradiation. The Health Protection Branch expects to issue by February, 1987, a second Information Letter addressing the issues and concerns raised in response to the proposed regulatory changes and delineating the Branch's final position.

4. The Health Protection Branch distributed to various groups, organizations, individuals, et cetera approximately 7,000 copies of the Information Letter delineating the new regulatory proposals. To date, only 17 detailled responses have been received. Of these responses, 7 were from food companies, 2 from trade associations, 2 from provincial governments and 1 each from a scientific association, consumer association, contract irradiator, food irradiation equipment supplier, foreign embassy and public advocacy organization. The majority of the responses favoured food irradiation and the regulatory position proposed by the Department. In addition, however, the Health Protection Branch has received hundreds of letters from private individuals who, for the most part, oppose food irradiation for a variety of reasons including philosophical opposition to irradiation and nuclear related processes in general, health and safety concerns as well as relating to possible lack of adequate labelling.

5. Yes. In July, 1983, the Bureau of Consumers Affairs of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs issued Trade Communiqué No. 39 requesting comments from food manufacturers and trade and consumer associations on a number of possible options to be considered for the labelling of irradiated foods. A second Trade Communiqué, No. 50, was issued in November, 1985, which summarized to responses to the options provided in Trade Communiqué No. 39 and offered for comment a proposed labelling scheme for irradiated foods. A draft regulation was recently discussed informally with a selected segment of the food industry and the Consumers' Association of Canada.

(a) No final decision has yet been taken. The design and content of the final CCAC labelling regulation will be to ensure that consumers will be able to make informed choices and purchasing decisions between irradiated and non-irradiated food products.

6. The Department of National Health and Welfare has not conducted any specific toxicity tests on irradiated food. Nevertheless, over the years several hundred toxicity studies including lifetime feeding studies in laboratory animals have been carried out world-wide on a large number of irradiated foods. Staff scientists as well as international experts have reviewed and evaluated in detail the results of these studies. Based on these data it has been concluded that the consumption of foods irradiated at practical dose levels (up to 10 kiloGray) would not pose a health hazard to consumers. Departmental scientists will continue to maintain close scrunity over the safety of this process as well as any proposed new applications and the need for further safety testing will be reassessed should any relevant new studies become available.

JOB CREATION PROGRAMS IN CONSTITUENCY OF CALGARY SOUTH

Question No. 48—Mrs. Sparrow:

Since September, 1984, have any sponsors in the constituency of Calgary South been approved to create jobs under Section 38 of the Unemployment Insurance Act and, if so (a) how many (b) how many jobs were created (c) what was the total funding involved in the constituency?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Yes. (a) 6, (b) 44, (c) $281,070.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The questions as enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary have been answered.

QUESTION PASSED AS ORDER FOR RETURN

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): If question 42 can be made an Order for Return, the return would be tabled immediately.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is it the pleasure of the House that Question No. 42 be deemed to have been made an Order for Return?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

SALE OF CANADAIR LTD.

Question No. 42—Mr. Ouellet:

1. At the time of the sale of Canadair Ltd. to Bombardier Inc. (a) what were the assets of Canadair Ltd. (b) what was their total appraised value and who made the appraisal?

2. (a) How many bids were received (b) what were the names of the bidders (c) what were the amounts and conditions of the bids (d) in what way was the bid by Bombardier Inc. considered superior?

Return tabled.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Shall the remaining questions stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Kindy: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. Question No. 37 concerning Mr. Herbert Norman has not as yet been answered. I addressed it to the Solicitor General. The question is as follows:

1. Did the Solicitor General acquire information that showed Ambasador Egerton Herbert Norman, had been identified and discussed by Anthony Blunt as someone who, like himself, was associated with the Russian intelligence service?

I would like to ask the Solicitor General to answer the question as soon as possible.

Mr. Lewis: Subsequent to my colleague raising the question earlier, I have checked and I understand that the answer is being prepared and should be available immediately upon our return in 1987.

Mr. Riis: I rise on a point of order. Is the Parliamentary Secretary aware of whether Question No. 49 will soon be processed? It relates to concern about the export control list of the destination of goods going to a variety of countries that are noted for their abuse of human rights.

Mr. Lewis: I note that the question was first put on the Order Paper on December 1, 1986. I have not checked, but it has probably been looked into. When I have an opportunity, I will make sure that it is being looked into.

MEASURE TO AMEND

Hon. Michael Wilson (for the Minister of State (Finance)) moved that Bill C-17, An Act to amend the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act and the Income Tax Act and to repeal the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act, as reported (without amendment) from a legislative committee, be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Wilson (for the Minister of State (Finance)) moved that the Bill be read the third time and passed.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased today to be able to introduce Bill C-17 for third reading. This Bill will eliminate the petroleum and gas revenue tax, effective October 1, 1986. You will know, Sir, that this was a very speedy and quite a substantive response to the deteriorating position in the oil and gas sector in western Canada in particular. It is a demonstration of the concern that the Government has shown to the plight of that industry and the effects it is having and has had on the economies of western Canada, particularly in the smaller communities so greatly affected by the slow-down in the oil and gas service industry.

Members will recall that the PGRT was originally announced in October, 1980 as part of the National Energy Program, and first came into effect in 1981. It was a very controversial Bill at the time and much despised in western Canada. The Progressive Conservative Party in opposition took a very strong position against the impact of this tax, the impact of the tax on drilling activity and therefore on the jobs of those people reliant on the oil and gas service industry. We fought the Bill strongly at that time and we made a commitment in the 1984 election campaign to remove the tax. This is the culmination and the fulfilment of that commitment.

Major changes were made to the PGRT and the Western Accord signed with the producing provinces in March, 1985. The most important change was the introduction of a rate phase-out schedule which terminated the PGRT at the end of 1988, and the elimination of the PGRT effective March 31, 1985 for all new wells and new enhanced oil recovery projects.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, the economic environment facing the oil and gas industry today is much different than it was in early 1985. The oil industry should no longer be subject, in our judgment, to a discriminatory tax on its drastically reduced revenues that have occurred since the Western Accord was signed. The Government's original intention was to phase out the PGRT over a three-year period. We felt that was a fair approach, taking into account the very tough fiscal conditions under which the federal Government was required to operate. We felt that that was an appropriate schedule after having reviewed the matter with the industry and with the provincial Governments concerned.

The Bill before us today proposes to eliminate the tax completely, effective October 1, 1986. It also proposes to increase the annual small producer credit from $500,000 to $2 million, effective May 1, 1986; to exempt from PGRT all revenues attributable to synthetic oil production, effective May 1, 1986, and to provide retroactive relief to January 1, 1986 for individuals and corporations. For corporations this relief will allow up to $1.5 million to be included in the income eligible for the small producer credit. For individuals, this deduction replaces the existing $10,000 deduction. This is a very helpful initiative on the part of the Government to take account of the difference in the impact of the phase-out that had been previously announced as it affected small producers and producers supported by royalty holders.

The Bill will also introduce other changes to terminate the PGRT Act, including a sunset provision for the use of the accumulative offset account against income taxes. Most of these changes were announced to taxpayers on September 17, 1986. I believe this is a very worth-while initiative, an initiative that recognizes the changed situation in western Canada as it relates to the oil and gas industry. I urge the House to give expeditious consideration to this legislation and hopefully deal with it completely today. I want to thank members of the legislative committee for their expeditious review of the Bill and to thank both opposition Parties for the support they have given in moving this legislation along.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity on third reading to comment briefly on the matter before us and how it relates to the central issue which the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) has just raised and the changed conditions of the energy industry in western Canada, to say nothing of the rest of Canada.

Somehow the Minister is under the illusion that this initiative is the panacea, that somehow by Parliament passing this Bill today and having it adopted by the Senate that those 25,000, 30,000, 40,000 people who are presently unemployed in the oil and gas industry in Alberta will magically come back to work. Somehow the Minister imagines that the capital investment, which is down 50 per cent this year over last, will all of a sudden magically be restored. He is trying to purport that the lowest rate of drilling ever in the history of the oil and gas industry taking place this year will somehow be revivified and no longer will there be the total and complete decline of the industry.

I ask through you, Mr. Speaker, what kind of a cocoon does the Minister of Finance live in these days? What kind of immunity has he acquired to the incredible depth of depression that exists in the oil and gas industry throughout Canada by assuming that this measure, which benefits primarily the large producers because they are the only ones that had any revenue, would somehow be the turning point. It will not be. The lack of response, initiative or interest of the Government of Canada to the present calamity facing the oil and gas industry really is hard to comprehend.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): You are in your own cocoon.

Mr. Axworthy: The Minister says I am in my own cocoon. Let me put to him that he is supposed to be the steward of our economic health. Let us talk about the caterpillar approach of this Government.

The Government of Alberta has estimated that this year alone there will be 25,000 jobs lost in the oil and gas sector in the Province of Alberta. I suppose the Minister of Finance takes satisfaction in that particular statistic. I assume by his comments that he is totally happy about that state of affairs in the oil and gas industry. I presume as well that the Minister is overjoyed that capital investment has dropped well over 50 per cent. I presume that by his remarks today the Minister is taking great delight in the fact that the National Energy Board released a study this past week that said within a matter of a couple years Canada will be having to import 60 per cent of its petroleum requirements because there is absolutely no work going ahead in any of the major frontier oil developments, and that our light crude reserves are being depleted. Where is the Government's response to the National Energy Board? Where is the kind of leadership that the Minister of Finance says the Government has taken? Once again the whole question of energy self-sufficiency in Canada will be put in jeopardy. I assume that the Minister of Finance, living as he does in a sort of rarified atmosphere, is taking great satisfaction in these positions.

Then we have the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Masse) saying the industry would be monitored to ensure that these funds were reinvested in Canada. He said that soon after taking office. I refer again to the National Energy Board report which indicated Chevron Canada sent $500 million of this PGRT windfall to its U.S. headquarters. It will not be reinvested in Hibernia, the Beaufort or heavy oil projects. It will sit in the vault of corporate headquarters in the U.S. It will not be used in any way, shape or form to the benefit of Canadians. At the same time the NEB reports there is no investment in any of the oil and gas projects which are essential if this country is to maintain some modicum of self-sufficiency. Does the Minister of Finance really expect Canadians to jump wildly in the air and thank him for this initiative when the reality is as I have described it?

The Government loves to talk about problems caused by the National Energy Program. However, there were far more rigs drilling under the NEP than are drilling today.

Mr. Crosbie: What is the price of oil today?

Mr. Axworthy: There were far more Canadians working under the NEP than there are today. There was far more investment in oil and gas projects under the NEP than there is today. By some curious form of Tory logic, of which the Minister of Transport (Mr. Crosbie) is the most noted advocate, that is to stand on your head and talk, the Government has somehow figured out that this is a successful policy.

Mr. Crosbie: Which end are you on now?

Mr. Axworthy: The Minister is engaging in a form of debate from his seat, which is usually the place from which most of his wisdom emanates. I would ask him about his own province. How many rigs are drilling off the coast of Newfoundland today? Where are the three or four thousand jobs promised under the Atlantic Accord?

Mr. Crosbie: What is the price of oil?

Mr. Axworthy: The Premier of Newfoundland, the great friend of the Minister of Transport, says the Government of Canada is ignoring Newfoundland's interest in offshore exploration.

Mr. Crosbie: Why is he flying up tomorrow for a meeting?

Mr. Axworthy: The initiative required by the Government goes way beyond simple elimination of the PGRT. What we require is an energy policy. We require the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources to take his job seriously rather than mucking around on language issues in Quebec and providing further support for the separatist cause in that province. Instead of doing what he seems to be doing, he would be better advised to spend his time in his Department worrying about energy policy because the industry is going to hell in a handbasket very quickly.

This legislation is irrelevant to the problems faced not just by the workers in that industry but by all Canadians. Canada will suffer from the neglect of a Government which refuses to see reality. It is not providing an effective response to a critical downturn in a critical sector of our economy. Perhaps it is time the Minister of Finance and his colleagues woke up and came to grips with what is really happening in the energy sector. They should try to devise the required response to support the smaller producers who receive nothing out of this Bill. They need some kind of incentive for the development of the frontier and heavy oil projects. The Government should provide some demonstration that it is not simply living on the outworn methodology and conventional wisdom of the past. It has to show that it is prepared to face the serious issues of today rather than living off the myths and dreams of yesterday.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have a chance to say a few words on this legislation. As I listened to the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) make his statement I recalled the former Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources announce that as a result of the Western Accord we could expect to see the creation of 300,000 new jobs. I was wondering what millennium she was referring to. Obviously it had nothing to do with reality. The conditions in the oil patch, particularly in Alberta, are now bordering on the catastrophic. People are waiting to see what bold initiative the Government will take to bring some life back to the oil patch, particularly given the importance of self-sufficiency in this critical resource. We are not talking about potatoes or codfish or coal, we are talking about a resource which is critical to the western way of life.

The resource sector is on its knees and requires extraordinary initiatives by the Government. Yet the best it can do is to have the Minister of Finance make some comments at third reading stage of the PGRT Bill. As the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) indicated, the Government has done virtually nothing. He referred to the NEB report tabled this past week. That report points out that hundreds of millions of dollars have been returned to the multinational oil companies. It indicates that rather than investing those funds back in Canada they are going to the corporate headquarters in the U.S. That does not come as a particular surprise to many of us. We predicted that that would happen if there was no requirement to invest these massive funds in the oil patch here. No, the Government said it was going on the basis of the good faith of the oil companies. It knew they would behave as good corporate citizens and reinvest all this money in the western economy. They are not doing that.

If you were to look carefully at the press release from the Independent Petroleum Association on September 8, you will see that the chairman, John Howard, said:

> My discussions with our member companies indicate that the bulk of the money saved by the elimination of the PGRT will be reinvested in the industry.

Even he said: "the bulk of", not all of it. He went on to say that "most" of the PGRT money saved will be reinvested. I do not think it is unrealistic to expect all of the PGRT money to be reinvested. After all, that money was derived from Canadian resources and ought to be reinvested in Canada. The multinational oil companies decided to syphon off hundreds of millions of dollars and return them to their parent corporations in the U.S.

Mr. McDermid: That association is not made up of multinationals.

Mr. Riis: This is a very serious situation.

The NEB report also pointed out a very serious problem facing Canada. It indicated that we ought to become extremely concerned because self-sufficiency in the very critical cultural resources of oil and natural gas is now in jeopardy. That self-sufficiency is a long way off because they predicted that in the next few years, because of the lack of exploration, the lack of activity in the oil fields and potential oil fields of Canada, we will again become a major importer of foreign oil. That is a very sad comment considering the tremendous reserves which exist within our borders.

I would like to indicate very clearly the position which New Democrats have taken on the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax. When the PGRT was first introduced by the then Minister of Finance, Mr. Allan MacEachen, of the previous Liberal administration, in November, 1980, we opposed the Bill. The legislation was introduced for first reading in the House of Commons on January 26, 1981 as part of a much larger Bill, C-57, to amend the Excise Tax Act and the Excise Act. The Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act proposed an 8 per cent tax on gross revenue from the production of oil and gas.

During debate on Bill C-57 in 1981 the New Democratic Party opposed the PGRT for four broad reasons. The first reason was that the PGRT was in fact a royalty on a natural resource rather than a tax on corporate income and, therefore, was constitutionally dubious. We also opposed it because it was a regressive tax which would affect producers differently, depending on their size, with smaller producers being hit harder by this drain on their revenues than the larger multinational integrated producers.

In our speeches on second reading of Bill C-57 we predicted that the PGRT would hurt federalism and aggravate already acrimonious relations with the western provinces. As we all know only too well in this House, the divisions between western Canada and the rest of Canada were deep as a result of the PGRT. We predicted that when the Bill was first introduced in 1980.

Finally, we said at that time that we believed that more taxes on petroleum and gas would mean more lost jobs and less activity in that industry. It has become very clear since the PGRT was introduced that it was a major factor in the resultant decrease of economic activity in the oil patch.

I have just finished reading the speech made by our then finance critic on second reading debate on Bill C-57. He pointed out that because the tax is imposed on wellhead production, or gross revenue, it is in fact a royalty on natural resources rather than a tax on corporate profit or income. Under the BNA Act, natural resources belong to the provinces and, therefore, only the provinces may impose a royalty on them. In the words of the Member for Yorkton—Melville (Mr. Nystrom), the PGRT was, therefore, "an illegitimate revenue grab by the federal Government in a field of provincial concern".

Various members of my Party who spoke against the PGRT in 1981 said that it would have a disproportionate effect on various producers. One Member said:

It affects all producers equally, even though all producers are not equal, either in size, in origin or in terms of whether they are genuinely independent Canadian companies.

The finance critic of the day for the New Democratic Party went on to point out that the smaller producing and exploring companies tend to be Canadian while the larger, more diversified companies are usually multinationals which could more easily absorb the tax than smaller competitors who would likely be forced out of business by it. He said the PGRT will:

—have the effect of not increasing Canadianization of the industry but decreasing it. That tax and its effect will fall more heavily on smaller companies simply engaged in the production of oil and gas. These companies do not do anything else . . . . This will have a lesser net impact on the cash flow of the larger multinationals.

Our present energy critic, the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) elaborated on this point months later. He argued that, since the goal of the National Energy Policy was to increase Canadian ownership of the oil and gas industry, the PGRT would have the opposite effect to what is intended by the National Energy Policy because, before the imposition of the PGRT, small Canadian companies reinvested the money they made when they found oil and gas and sold it. Some of the multinational oil companies liked to take a profit and send it to their American shareholders or put it into solar energy or coal or other investments in other jurisdictions. The case was made earlier today that that has taken place, presently takes place, and will likely take place in the future.

The effect of the PGRT would be to seriously jeopardize the existence of the smaller Canadian producers while only making a marginal dent in the profits of the larger, multinational companies. That point was made by our present energy critic. He said that the New Democratic Party would have preferred an income tax measure which would allow the Government to discriminate between Canadian and non-Canadian companies, as it said it intended to do in order to increase Canadianization of the national energy policy.

A number of western Canadian members of the New Democratic Party spoke out at the time against the PGRT because we felt it discriminated against western provinces. It was a tax on oil and gas, primarily resources of Alberta and Saskatchewan, but also, to a lesser degree, of British Columbia. We felt this was a discriminatory piece of legislation aimed specifically at western producers. While a special tax was being imposed on the primary products of western Canada, no similar tax was being imposed on the primary nonrenewable resources of central and eastern Canada such as nickel, lead, zinc, copper and other commodities. It is fair to say that this tax hurt co-operative federalism and discriminated very much against the western part of the country.

I suspect that my hon. friend, the Member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone), will be rushing out to read all the speeches made by members of the New Democratic Party in 1980 and 1981 when this Bill was originally introduced. I know of his interest in the history of this issue. At that time a number of New Democrats made the point that this tax would dampen activity in the oil and gas industry and throw people out of work. Goodness knows that in the provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and British Columbia thousands of men and women have been thrown out of work because of the decline in the oil and gas industry. Various speakers made the point that people are losing their jobs because the national energy policy is imposing a tax which is driving rigs out of the country. In one speech which I gave I said:

Marginal wells will be closed because they are expensive to operate and this new tax being levied makes the difference. We will see wells that could successfully be providing us with energy resources for years to come being closed off because they will no longer be economically viable.

I could go on and on, Mr. Speaker, but I do not think it would be appropriate to do so as I have made my case. In conclusion, we are pleased to support this Bill, and to have assisted all along to expedite its passage. We are pleased that it will be concluded before Christmas of 1986. However, I want to make it very clear that this does very little to help the small oil and gas exploration companies in western Canada. These are the companies which we depend upon to find new resources. The legislation does a great deal for the large integrated multinationals, Shell, Texaco, Imperial Oil and so on. They are very pleased with this legislation.

I would like to conclude by reading from an editorial which sums up today's discussion very well.

It states:

No wonder Calgary oil executives clapped approvingly on Monday when federal Energy Minister Marcel Masse told them that the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax (PGRT) would be lifted effective October 1. Masse was answering the prayers of Canada's oil giants—including multinationals such as Imperial Oil, Shell and Texaco—just when depressed international prices are pinching industry pocketbooks hard.

There can be no doubt which companies will benefit most from the government's decision to accelerate by 28 months its plan to phase out the tax—at an estimated cost of $1.5 billion to the federal treasury.

They are the biggest oil companies, the firms that make up the Canadian Petroleum Association, which lobbied heavily for the tax break and whose members account for 90 per cent of Canada's oil production, 76 per cent of the industry's workers and 80 per cent of PGRT revenues.

Yet these recipients of Ottawa's largesse aren't necessarily the neediest oil companies.

Indeed, when one looks at the various quarterly reports one can see that Imperial Oil's refining and marketing arm reported a profit for the third quarter of this year of $19 million, compared with $16 million for the same period last year. As a matter of fact, Imperial Oil's refining and marketing profits totalled $95 million. In the last number of months these companies have done extremely well, particularly in the refining and marketing sector. The fact is that this primarily helps the giant companies and does little for the small Canadian companies.

For many months we have been pressing consistently, especially since the depressed situation in western Canada became such a reality, for some kind of negotiated floor price because allowing the price to collapse to where it has simply makes economic life for the small Canadian companies very difficult at best. In order to work toward self-sufficiency in oil and gas and maintain a viable, healthy Canadian oil industry, it is in our interest to reconsider a negotiated floor price for our western oil producers.

Mr. Paul Gagnon (Calgary North): Mr. Speaker, this is certainly a happy occasion for me as a Member of Parliament from Calgary and one who has worked in the oil business both with multinationals and private organizations.

I am amazed by the selective memories of the two previous speakers, the Member for Kamloops-Shuwap (Mr. Riis) and the Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy). The Member for Kamloops-Shuswap correctly pointed out the discriminatory nature of the PGRT and the high-handed manner in which it was enforced on western Canada. However, the discrimination did not begin there, but with the aritificial made-in-Canada price which prevented us from selling in the market. This was introduced by a Liberal Government in 1973 in coalition with the New Democratic Party. Between 1973 and 1985, western Canadian producers, and western Canadian taxpayers went without $60 billion in income. This artificial made-in-Canada price began as a temporary measure in 1973 but lasted for 12 years until it was terminated by the Western Accord which this Government negotiated.

In October, 1980 the National Energy Program was imposed by a Government of which the Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry was a prominent member. The Hon. Member stands up today to say that we should not be taking this action, but he did not stand up for the West in October, 1980 when it needed his voice. He should understand why so few members of his Party are elected in western Canada.

There is no doubt that the energy sector needs help. Let me refer to the petroleum monitoring agency's six-month report that was released this week. Upstream revenues fell 34 per cent in the first half of this year, compared with the first half of last year. Upstream revenue refers strictly to the producing segment. Furthermore, the cash flow decreased 38 per cent. The fact that one cannot spend what one does not have is obvious, except to those like the Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry who belonged to a Government that believed it was the only way to stay in office. This legislation is a major step toward reversing the haemorrhage of funds from the energy sector.

The Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap said this legislation provides nothing for the small companies. Obviously he does not understand the Bill because the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) indicated that there is $1.5 million available to individual companies to offset that credit. In this regard let me quote from letters written by two people from this segment of the industry. The first letter states:

> What a pleasure it is to know "Big Government" is not synonymous with "Non-caring Government". We realize that the captioned issue is but a "drop in the bucket" with respect to Canada's financial problems as a whole—

It goes on:

> We greatly appreciate the outcome with respect to this matter, but, more important, it provides a message to all citizens of Canada that the Federal Conservative Government is making a sincere effort to establish a system of fairness and justice in Canada.

He goes on to say:

> In terms of the matter of security of future supply, all Canadians are indebted to you for your part in the effort to keep a vital industry from collapse.

The letter is signed by Mr. Gary W. Litschke, President of Geeodata Exploration Services. It is a very small private Canadian company.

The second letter states:

> I would like to express my appreciation of this action and especially regarding the retroactive aspect of the small royalty owners. Removal of the tax from January 1, 1986 had a substantial effect on my company during a difficult cash-flow period.

That letter is signed by Mr. J. D. McArthur, President of Anna Resources Ltd.

This Bill corrects a terrible wrong and eliminates a measure that should never have been implemented. Yet the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry only speaks against it now when he should have opposed it in 1980.

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey—White Rock—North Delta): Mr. Speaker, I want to elaborate on some of the points made by the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis). He said that this legislation will help the major oil companies the most. While that may be true, I hope he will remember what we said when the Bill to establish the National Energy Program was being debated in the House. This Party continually, in speech after speech, pointed out that it would be the small western producer who would be hurt the most and that the multinational corporations would be able to suffer through the National Energy Program, as indeed they have. In the meantime, the small producers have been axed. They have suffered capital punishment in the severest way. In addition to that, we said the service industry and the suppliers in Ontario would be hurt. I think the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap will remember that and I hope he would agree that that was our point at the time.

The House resumed from Thursday, December 18, consideration of the motion of Mr. Bouchard that Bill C-16, an Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, be read the second time and referred to Committee of the Whole.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and the House went into committee thereon, Mr. Paproski in the chair.

The Deputy Chairman: Shall Clause 1 carry?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Clause 1 agreed to.

The Deputy Chairman: Shall Clause 2 carry?

On Clause 2—

Ms. Copps: Given that this Bill is an extension of the variable entrance requirement which recognizes that regional disparity should be an element in the calculation of unemployment insurance, could the Minister tell the House whether the Government has an intention of extending this timetable indefinitely, or is it just going to dump the variable entrance requirement when the Forget Commission Report is responded to by the Government?

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Chairman, the Government appreciates the concern expressed by the Hon. Member for Hamilton East with respect to the Government's approach to unemployment insurance. She will know we have received the Forget Commission Report on Unemployment Insurance. We have also had access to the Macdonald Commission Report, with which the Hon. Member will be familiar, to the House report and, in fact, to a variety of information which is available to the Government, to the Hon. Member and to other Canadians.

With respect to changes which might be made to the unemployment insurance approach, the Minister has said very clearly a number of times, and I will repeat it for the Hon. Member, that we have in fact made a commitment to consider these reports by May 15, 1987 and we will make our response in terms of the changes we intend at that time.

I would hasten to add, just on the off chance there might be some mistaken impression from the comments made by the Hon. Member that there is something unusual or some limit to this, she will know that the original provision has been extended a number of times and we are doing the same thing this time by extending for a full year, from January 4, 1986 to January 4, 1987, those variable requirements, in order that employees and employers, and others affected by other parts of the Bill, will know what they face. At this juncture the Government has made it clear that it is sensitive to the regional problems faced by unemployed Canadians. Some 208,000 of them will be protected by the measures presented in this Bill.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Chairman, I have still not heard what the Government's position is with respect to variable entrance requirements.

Mr. Crosbie: It's in the Bill.

Ms. Copps: The Hon. Member for St. John's West says that it is in the Bill. I want to know what the Government feels about variable entrance requirements. I have just heard the Parliamentary Secretary say that this particular measure will affect over 200,000 people. I would like to hear the Government on the variable entrance requirement issue so that five months from now we do not see the rug being pulled out from under those 200,000-plus people whom the Member is suggesting we should now move to protect. What is the Government's view? Will it defend this Bill? Is it in favour of it for only the next five months until the Government prepares its response to the Forget Report? Just what is the Government's position with respect to variable entrance requirements? Does it support them?

Mr. Crosbie: Mr. Chairman, in a statement made by the Minister of Employment and Immigration on the tabling of the Forget Report in this House he made the Government's position on the unemployment insurance legislation now in effect and the Forget Commission report very plain indeed. The fact that this Bill is now before the House shows the Government's concern about regional disparity and about those who are unemployed in areas which suffer from regional disparity.

The Minister also made clear in his statement that any proposed changes to be made to unemployment insurance legislation will be introduced in the House by the middle of May. At the present time there are no proposed changes. If there are any changes to be proposed they will be proposed by May 15. It was also made clear at the time that any changes made would be to improve the unemployment insurance system and its functioning and that they would not be for the purpose of reducing the costs of the program.

I think that should be clear to anyone with any good will or to anyone who wants to understand what the language means. The Hon. Member does not need to continue to spread alarm in the country with respect to there being a change. This Bill follows on a number of Bills introduced by the Government and by the previous Government which extended regional benefits for another year. Thus it is following a well-worn precedent followed by past Liberal administrations as well.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Chairman, I know the position of the Hon. Member for St. John's West. I think he has been clear on his position. I do not think that the position expressed by him is the same position we heard expressed by the Minister of Employment and Immigration who was waffling in the House at the same time as the Hon. Member for St. John's West was in Newfoundland telling the people of Newfoundland not to worry because he had things under control. At that time the Minister was saying that he would be looking at annualization and variable entrance requirements. I would like to hear from the Parliamentary Secretary with respect to what specific type of commitment the Government is prepared to make in a substantive way to variable entrance requirements since, as the Parliamentary Secretary said a few moments ago, we are talking about the lives of over 200,000 people whose livelihoods and very means of existence are being left on tenterhooks.

I say that because on the one hand the Hon. Member for St. John's West is making certain declarations in the news media in St. John's and on the other hand the Minister and other members of the Government, including the Minister of Finance, are saying that they will change the system. There are a great many frightened people out there. Since the Government is asking us now to support an extension of variable entrance requirements we should have a commitment from the Parliamentary Secretary that it will not be just a short-term extension.

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Chairman, if the Hon. Member for Hamilton East cannot hear then perhaps she can read. If she can read, then what she will be able to read is the previous legislation. The previous legislation passed by the Liberal Government stated that variable entrance requirements would stop on Janaury 4, 1987. In spite of what the Hon. Member and her Party would have done, this Bill extends for one year the variable entrance requirements, quite independent of any other consideration of any change in the unemployment insurance legislation.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Chairman, the Parliamentary Secretary has just engaged in a piece of parliamentary chicanery.

Mr. Crosbie: You should know all about that.

Mr. Axworthy: Normally, the Parliamentary Secretary is one of the few Members on the opposite side of the House from whom we can get a straight answer. I remind him that under the provisions of the Unemployment Insurance Act passed in the early 1970s there was a provision that variable entrance requirements be reintroduced on a periodic basis. The Parliamentary Secretary clearly stated that the Liberal Government had legislation to end those requirements. That is not the case. We extended the requirements on several different occasions, as statutory time limits ran out. I ask the Parliamentary Secretary to clarify his position. I was the Minister then and I know what was the case. He was around at that point in time and he knew exactly what the requirements of the legislation were.

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Chairman, the legislation as it now exists, which was amended in 1977, would have at that time extended for 109 months, commencing December, 1977, to January of this coming year—

Mr. Axworthy: It was extended twice when we were in office.

Mr. Gurbin: I am not disputing the fact that it was extended before. I am simply saying that the legislation as it now exists would have come to a halt if we had not brought forward this particular amendment to the Unemployment Insurance Act which will extend the provision for an additional 12-month period.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Chairman, the Parliamentary Secretary still does not have it right. It is important to point out that under the legislation there was a requirement that the variable entrance requirement be extended, which is what we did when we were in office in 1982. I introduced the legislation myself. It was not extended until this period of time. The Parliamentary Secretary who says that other people should know the facts should know that fact in particular. I introduced the legislation myself to extend the provision after the 1977 period to expire at this point in time. That was done simply to facilitate looking at the labour surplus rates as they exist at a certain point in time in various regions of the country. The Parliamentary Secretary should stop trying to insist that there was a sunset clause. It was always clearly the case that the variable entrance requirements would be assessed periodically in the calendar year to determine how they might be adjusted to fit the labour surplus rates in various regions of the country.

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Chairman, I am not trying to suggest that there was a sunset clause. I am simply stating clearly and plainly, as the legislation sets out, that the variable entrance requirements would no longer be enforced and that the existing legislation would run out if we did not pass this legislation today. It will allow some 208,000 Canadians to take advantage of the variable entrance requirements change that is in place in this legislation. In fact, what the Government is doing is committing itself to understanding and accepting the fact that there are regional differences and that there are people in those regions who are unemployed and who need special considerations. This legislation is required at this time and the Government is bringing it forward in recognition of that fact.

Mr. Nickerson: Mr. Chairman, I have no difficulty in supporting this Bill since the extension is to be for a period of one year. I know that the whole question of unemployment insurance is under careful consideration by the Government which has taken into account the Forget Report and other information available to it. I am certain that eventually we will be able to resolve the great problems with which we are faced in terms of unemployment insurance.

I notice Members from all sides of the House almost falling over backward to support the variable entrance requirements, especially those Members who represent areas where there is high unemployment. It is quite understandable why they should be doing that. However, there is another side to the question. By keeping these special deals for people in areas of high unemployment what we are doing in the long run—

Ms. Copps: Is this the Government's position?

Mr. Nickerson: —is encouraging people to stay in areas of high unemployment rather than moving to other parts of Canada where their services might well be required. In fact, what we are doing is prolonging the agony in the long run. We are encouraging regional areas of high unemployment, whereas if we had a standard system across the country it would be much more neutral in its effect. I hope that the Government will also consider that point of view as well.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Chairman, I am glad that we finally found out the government position as put forward by the Hon. Member for Western Arctic. The Hon. Member seems to have given us the true intention and the true story of what the Tories intend to do.

However, I am interested in a previous response which was given to us by either the Parliamentary Secretary or by the Hon. Member for St. John's West. One of them said that they were sensitive to regional concerns. I believe it was the Parliamentary Secretary who said that. The Minister said that the Government was concerned with issues of regional disparity, or something along those lines.

Given the concern about regional disparities to which the Government referred a while ago can the Minister or the Parliamentary Secretary tell us whether or not the Government will reconsider its position enunciated through the Minister about one week ago? Perhaps the Parliamentary Secretary will be able to answer this question. He is better informed than is the Hon. Member for St. John's West who is not usually well informed. The Minister stated that someone who was retiring or leaving a job would be unable to receive unemployment insurance benefits upon retirement unless he or she found a new job and retired again. Given the new-found concern about regional disparity the Parliamentary Secretary must be aware that in some parts of the country, for example Hawkesbury in my riding, if one loses one's job the chance of finding another to requalify for unemployment insurance is almost impossible. If it is not impossible then it is at least very difficult. With the new concern which the Government has seemingly found today can Members of the House anticipate that there will be more change, or will we still have to wait until the month of May next year before finding out?

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Chairman, it is clear that Members opposite will have to wait until the middle of May of next year to find out what the Government's full intentions will be as far as the unemployment insurance program is concerned.

I ask the Hon. Member for Hamilton East and all Hon. Members to read the Forget Report over the holidays when they have some time. What Hon. Members often tend to do when they are talking about a recommendation with respect to someone on a pension is neglect to read the whole recommendation made by Mr. Forget.

The short answer, as the Minister has said, is that the unemployment insurance program is treating people fairly. Any changes that we have made on behalf of pensioners are completely fair. There are other parts of the program with which we are trying to deal and pass today so that different regions of the country will not be disadvantaged. Other parts of the program take into account regional disparities. That is where the variable entrance requirement comes in and that is why we would like to pass this Bill.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Chairman, all of us want to pass this Bill. Obviously we do not want to delay it unduly, but we have only been speaking on it for the last 10 minutes. I think the Opposition is demonstrating a reasonable amount of the usual kind of co-operation that we try to provide as frequently as possible to the Government across the way.

Perhaps I could put my final question to the Parliamentary Secretary. A few moments ago he suggested that the previous Government had perhaps been derelict in its duty because this Bill had to be renewed periodically, as it must this year by December 31. He attributed some of the blame for that to the previous Government.

The present legislation has existed for some time. The last adjustment that was made was made for more than one year. Can the Parliamentary Secretary tell us why the provision is being renewed for only one year this time? Is it merely an interim measure designed to let the Government use Forget's annualization scheme or is it merely that the Government is so hesitant to provide legislation that it dare not move any faster than one year at a time?

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Chairman, to be perfectly clear, my point simply was that the legislation does run out unless we renew it. Obviously the Government has made a commitment for a further one-year period which may be extended further when and if required. That is all we are trying to do.

The message we are sending is clear. We are sensitive to the needs of Canadians across Canada. Canadians should have access to the important measure contained in this amendment to the Bill.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Chairman, I have one short question to ask since we are so close to Christmas and this is the last day I will have a chance to discuss Bills in the House for some time. Given that the Hon. Member for St. John's West said that the Government is committed to the principle of variable entrance requirements in a long-term way, I wonder why the Parliamentary Secretary cannot give us that commitment today. For this provision to be applicable for only one year is clearly a strategy of the Government to clear the decks so it can bring on Forget and wipe out the benefits that go to areas like Newfoundland, and obviously that scares the Hon. Member for St. John's West. I do not blame him.

Can the Parliamentary Secretary come to the House with an amendment which would extend this particular provision, not for one year as suggested in the Bill but for three years? If not, why not?

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Chairman, I will certainly take the Hon. Member's comments as representation. She knows that I cannot give her that commitment any more than I can tell her why the variable entrance requirement would have run out this January under the previous extension. I regret that I cannot do that, but I can say that the commitment for the consideration of regional disparities across Canada stands. The Hon. Member for St. John's West and other Members on this side will ensure that we take that into full consideration in the future.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Chairman, of course my desire to rise and put a question to the Parliamentary Secretary has nothing to do with my clear curiosity about the thinness of the air down on the front-benches. Further to questions put by my colleague, I would ask the Parliamentary Secretary why the Government has brought forward a continuation of the variable entrance requirement for a period of only one year. Is there any particular legislative requirement that would dictate that the extension should be for only one year?

We do know that the Government has promised to respond to the Forget Commission report by May and that matters will stay as they now are for six more months. It seems to me in my devious mind that six months from May would give a six-month legislative timetable which would allow the Government to do something at about the time this particular Bill would expire. Can the Parliamentary Secretary tell us now—

Mr. Crosbie: Don't worry about it.

Mr. Tobin: I am concerned. The Minister of Transport told me not to worry. I know the Minister means what he says, but he told us not to worry about the Nielsen task force report. The Nielsen task force report recommended increased ferry rates and there are now increased ferry rates. The Nielsen task force report recommended consolidating Transport Canada's Coast Guard office in the Minister's own riding and it has now been consolidated. Some positions have been moved out of the Minister's riding and right out of the province to the Province of New Brunswick. The Nielsen task force report recommended implementing cost recovery in a whole series of transportation areas. The Minister of Transport told us not to worry about it but all those recommendations have now been implemented.

As much as the Minister of Transport tells us not to worry about it, sincere as he is when he says it, unfortunately we have learned that, while we agree with his views on the Nielsen task force report, his views are not carrying the day in Cabinet. With the greatest of respect, it is in that context that I make the complaint that the Cabinet is not listening to the Minister of Transport. I would advise the Cabinet that it would do well to listen to him and I regret that so far, at least about the Nielsen task force report, it has not. Rather than take at face value his assurance that we should not worry about the Forget Commission report, I worry all the more.

I would like to put a sincere question to the Parliamentary Secretary. What prevented the Government from bringing a Bill forward today that would extend the variable entrance requirement by a period of two, three or four years?

Mr. Crosbie: Why didn't you when you were in?

Mr. Tobin: Because when we were in there was not a Forget Royal Commission commissioned by the Government of the day talking about doing away with the variable entrance requirement, talking about bringing in a program called annualization, talking about cutting $3 billion out of the UIC pay-out and talking about correcting the so-called unemployment insurance program and making it less available to those people who need it most, including those who live in the riding of the Minister of Transport. We did not do it because a gun was not being put to the heads of the people who are most dependent upon that program. That gun has not only been put to our heads, but the hammer has been pulled back, the barrel is aimed right between our eyes and we are afraid that the Government is about to pull the trigger. An extension on the variable entrance requirement of two or three years would, in effect, be a safety mechanism on the trigger.

In this Bill with which we agree, why is the extension on the variable entrance requirement not for more than one year? It seems to me that an extension of one year would allow the Government to be ready a year from now to start implementing portions of the Forget Commission report.

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Chairman, I can assure the Hon. Member that the apprehension he has in his own mind about a timetable of one year, six months, 18 months or 24 months is a figment of his imagination. At this time of year, we should all have something in our minds, but I would hope that what would be in his mind would be generosity toward the people who will be caught in the terrible trap of not being able to take advantage of the variable entrance requirement if we do not pass this legislation. We can withdraw it if the Hon. Member so wishes. We can go on forever if that is what he wishes.

I cannot give the Hon. Member a firmer answer than the one I gave the Hon. Member for Hamilton East to the question of why it stops now. Why is it to stop in January of this year? The Bill has been extended a number of times and I take in good faith what the Hon. Member's colleague said about the time he extended it. Indeed it has been extended month by month from 1977 on.

We have no magic figure in mind. We must deal with the Macdonald Royal Commission, we must deal with the House commission and we must deal with the Forget Commission.

Ms. Copps: Cut, Garry, enough.

Mr. Gurbin: All those things will be properly responded to by the Government in the middle of May under the important parameters established by the Prime Minister and the Minister of Finance when they said they would not look at changes to the unemployment insurance legislation as a deficit-cutting exercise.

• (1410)

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I was concerned that the Parliamentary Secretary was trying to filibuster this Bill. We wish to see it voted on as quickly as possible.

Clauses 2 and 3 agreed to.

Title agreed to.

Bill reported.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): When shall the Bill be read the third time? By leave, now?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Mazankowski (for the Minister of Employment and Immigration) moved that Bill C-16, an Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971, be read the third time and passed.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the third time and passed.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Prior to moving the motion on Bill C-18, I wish to advise you that there have been discussions among the Parties. There is an understanding that the Hon. Minister of Transport will introduce the Bill and make the introductory speech in speaking to the Bill. Then we will move that the debate be adjourned on the understanding that when the debate recommences that the first speaker recognized would be the spokesperson for the Official Opposition, and following that, the official spokesman for the New Democratic Party.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I wish to confirm that there have been negotiations. We will agree to that procedure. We would like the Bill to be called as soon as we return in January, if possible.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, just to clarify the point of the Government House Leader, is it the understanding that this Bill will be the first Bill called when we return after the Christmas Recess?

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, that would be my intention, barring any emergencies that may arise. But, that would be subject to discussion with the House Leaders of the Liberal and New Democratic Parties.

Mr. Tobin: I have à point of clarification on the agreement that has been reached. We understand that this Bill is going to be referred to the Standing Committee on Transport as soon as discussions have taken place with the Minister and the House Leaders on that matter.

Mr. Mazankowski: Indeed, there have been discussions on that point, but as yet there has been no agreement reached. If and when we do reach an agreement, we can certainly make that change by all-Party agreement. We are still prepared to consider that.

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Transport) moved that Bill C-18, an Act respecting national transportation, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I rise to move the second reading of Bill C-18, and to introduce the legislation to the House. It is a distinct pleasure for me to give my maiden speech today as the Minister of Transport.

As a Minister from one of our two island provinces I have a special appreciation of the role that rural transportation plays in tying this country together economically and socially. One of those provinces may be connected to the mainland if the studies that were announced today turn out to be positive over the next few months, but that is still for the future. I have a lot of enthusiasm with respect to this job. I hope that during my term we will be able to do some important things since transportation affects the everyday lives of more Canadians in all regions of the country than I can otherwise think of. Every day in Canada about 1.4 million tonnes of freight moves by rail, truck, or water. This does not include the freight that is moved by the private trucker. Passenger traffic on Canadian airlines has more than tripled since 1967, to a total of 24 million people in 1984.

The legislation that we are now presenting to the House has as its purpose the increase of competition in air, rail, marine, and trucking. It will set out the framework for our transportation industry to provide the best possible service at the best price to shippers and air passengers throughout the country. The benefits hopefully will go beyond a more competitive transportation system. Cost efficient transportation will create opportunities for expansion and development in industries across Canada. That should mean more jobs for Canadians in primary production, resource processing, and manufacturing in all regions of the country.

These Bills, C-18, and C-19 which accompanies it, are about economic efficiency. However, as the Minister of Transport my responsibility in addition to providing an efficient transportation system is to provide a safe one. Our first priority will always be safety.

In Canada we have an excellent safety record in all modes of transportation, a record that has to be maintained and improved on wherever possible. Action on that priority has been taken or will be taken in all transportation modes during the year. Members of the House will remember that last year major amendments were passed to the Aeronautics Act. Those amendments were introduced by the learned Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) in his former role as Minister of Transport which he performed so brilliantly and capably. Those amendments gave us a thoroughly modern and effective air safety system of regulation. In addition, they provided the framework for the Civil Aviation Tribunal. Last year comprehensive regulations were introduced for the transportation of dangerous goods.

In the marine sphere, I plan to reintroduce into the House the safety amendments that were contained in the Canada Shipping Act, before the House last spring. They had reached third reading, and I am expecting to introduce the legislation again in January. I trust that with the co-operation of the members of the Opposition these important changes will be passed in the House during 1987.

In October, the provincial and territorial ministers of transport joined with me in endorsing the uniform national safety code for trucks and buses. I would like Hon. Members, including the Hon. Member for Regina North—

An Hon. Member: For Regina West.

Mr. Crosbie: I was thinking of Dorval and Mirabel.

An Hon. Member: That is a terminal case.

Mr. Crosbie: He is a terminal case, I believe, the Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin), and I want him to note this.

In October the provincial and territorial ministers of transport endorsed a national uniform safety code for trucks and buses, so that has been endorsed. It will be in place and operative before the three-year period has expired in connection with the trucking parts of the legislation. Work is now nearing completion on the changes that are required on the outdated safety provisions of the Railway Act. As a matter of fact, there has been passed by Cabinet the principles of the new rail safety act which is now being worked on by the lawyers and should be introduced in the House by June of this year. That will be a new rail safety act to set the stage for maintaining and improving our safety record in rail.

As Hon. Members know, we are shortly expecting to receive the report of Mr. Justice Foisey of the Supreme Court of Alberta. He has completed his investigation into the tragic accident that occurred in February, 1986. We will have that report early in the new year. From that we will see what his views are. We have already agreed in the Government on a new safety act.

In addition, between the Department of Transport, the Canadian Transport Commission and the Canadian Aviation Safety Board—Members may not appreciate this and I found it to be an astounding fact myself—approximately 13,000 people work to ensure the safe operation of the transportation system. I am pleased to see the chairman of the Standing Committee on Transport, the Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley—Hants (Mr. Nowlan) here today listening intently to me.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: Over 100 additional safety personnel are being put in place, including inspectors for air safety and dangerous goods. These actions demonstrate our commitment to safety, and for the first time this commitment to safety will be enshrined in the legislation. The new national Transportation Act states clearly in Section 3, among the policy objectives, that safety is essential. This is the first time safety has received such recognition in the legislation. That policy statement also reiterates that our transportation system has to be efficient, effective and adequate—EEA. It goes on to add two very important principles that are missing in the current legislation, principles critical to our future economic growth.

What are those two principles, Mr. Speaker? I hope that the Hon. Member for Regina West is listening. Transportation exists to serve the needs of shippers and travellers. It is often forgotten. The railway companies sometimes think that the whole system exists to serve them. The whole system happens to be there to serve the shipper and the traveller, to serve the consumer. That principle was ignored by our predecessors in Government.

Mr. Heap: And ignored by VIA right now.

Mr. Crosbie: There is a "heap" of point to what the Hon. Member is saying. He is a "heap" of a "heap", although he often gets on with a lot of heat.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Crosbie: The fifth principle not previously in the legislation has to do with—and I am sure that Members on our side will agree with it but of course the reactionaries, the fuddy-duddies and those who would throw Canada back 100 years into the murky past will never agree with it—competition and market forces. Wherever possible they should be the prime agents of providing a viable and effective transportation service. You can see them on the other side turn green, Mr. Speaker, when they hear anyone mention competition or market forces. They do not like those words in the NDP. If looks could kill, I would be falling on the floor right now.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Crosbie: These principles are hardly revolutionary. They represent a major shift in the philosophy of regulation of transportation in Canada. I have to admit that I am not the author of this major shift. This was introduced by somebody who was entirely—I was going to say shiftless—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Crosbie: I am only kidding, Mr. Deputy Prime Minister.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Crosbie: I have to admit that the author of this major shift is the Deputy Prime Minister who has had such a long career in the area of transportation during his public life.

The current regulatory regime was put in place in 1967, I believe by a gentleman elected from Newfoundland in the person of Mr. J.W. Pickersgill, that well known Newfoundland representative. Since then, of course, the world economy, our economy and the transportation industry have changed significantly, but the regulatory regime in transportation in Canada has not kept pace.

What is the result of that, Mr. Speaker? Our regulatory regime today impedes—that is the tendency—rather than supports economic development. It stifles competition in all modes of transportation. It reduces the competitiveness of our producers and the free movement of goods and people. If we do not have an efficient and effective transportation system, everyone who manufactures goods or provides services here in Canada is at a disadvantage compared with their competitors in the rest of the world. That is why these bills are known as the freedom to move legislation. They are to send a message to Canadian business and the traveller. We are freeing the transportation sector from the shackles of heavy handed economic regulation.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: The greatest supporters, shacklers in this House, of course, are Members of the New Democratic Party who apparently are dedicated to opposing this Bill, although I am hoping they will have a conversion before they stand up to speak. That is why I am speaking now and we are giving them a couple of weeks of sobriety over the holiday period to think about their approach to this legislation. I hope they will not blindly follow the Canadian Labour Congress and those who are opposed to this Bill without ever giving it a chance.

Mr. Benjamin: They are following me.

Mr. Crosbie: The Member for Regina West says they are following him. I hope he is right. I hope they realize that he is in existence—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Benjamin: Two million of them.

Mr. Crosbie: —and that they do follow him.

The decisions we make on Bills C-18 and C-19 will affect consumers, businesses and air travellers throughout Canada. This is one of the principal features of this Bill and that is why there will be enthusiastic support from such as the Hon. Member for Crowfoot (Mr. Malone), I was going to say cow-wump but it is Crowfoot—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Crosbie: —and other Members from the West. Why? Because we are going to give primary resource producers some alternatives for getting their output to market. Such a system is needed, not only for economic growth in Canada but for development in our less favoured regional economies. Real jobs will be created or maintained in all regions wherever better transportation service at a better price will make a resource producer, a manufacturer or other business more competitive in the market-place. That is why we cannot jump automatically, including those of whom we are the owners, to stop the transport companies every time, regrettably, they have to take some step to become more productive or efficient that involves the employment of some of the persons who work for them.

It is a regrettable fact of life that in the transportation system today, in just about every country, as the nature of that system changes it becomes more capital intensive and less labour intensive. One of the consequences is that some people lose their jobs, become laid off or whatever. In that circumstance, Mr. Speaker, I believe all we can do is insist that the companies we the Government own in this system treat the employees affected in as generous and as fulsome a way as is possible, otherwise they become unproductive, ineffective or inefficient and then cannot stand up with their competition. This would have the ultimate result, if that continued in any extreme way, of everybody losing his or her job because the enterprise is no longer useful for the purpose for which it exists.

We remain committed to the principles of economic development that were endorsed by the federal and provincial first Ministers in February, 1985. We are continuing to be dedicated to those principles. I only hope the leaders of those provinces remain dedicated to those principles and they do not now backslide whenever some aspect of the legislation or policy comes along that affects them in some unexpected way. These principles are a guide for the policy.

Mr. Riis: Just watch them backslide.

Mr. Crosbie: Yes, I am afraid that I am not sanguine about the prospects of solidarity forever with the 10 Premiers of Canada and ourselves, but one can always hope.

Transportation is a key to regional economic development, which is recognized in this Bill for the first time. Our predecessors never recognized it.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: We will hear the Official Opposition act as though this was some principle which the Opposition had put in to the legislation or enunciated when in power for the 18 years before us, 18 barren unproductive wasteful, extravagant years. Never once did the Opposition put in a transportation legislation the fact that transportation is key to regional economic development. We put that into law for the first time.

• (1430)

Mr. Malone: Do you hear that, Lloyd?

Mr. Axworthy: Words are cheap; it is action that counts.

Mr. Crosbie: As Minister of Transport and a Member from the least advantaged province in the economic sense and the most advantaged province in the sense of beauty, culture, tradition, in the virility of its people—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Crosbie: —maturity—

Mr. Riis: British Columbia, John?

Mr. Crosbie: British Columbia is next. If I ever left Newfoundland and Labrador, my virility would impel me not to stop until I got to British Columbia.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: As a Minister and Member from that province I intend to ensure that transportation plays its proper role in particular initiatives for regional development. We have to recognize that this depends on a host of factors, not simply on one. There is nothing simple about it. Those factors are influenced by the federal and provincial Governments. That is why co-operation and a sense of fair play are needed. In other words, it is not just good enough to say that transportation must give way to regional development and overcoming regional disparity must be the one and only principle. It is one factor. We have achieved a much more co-operative relationship with the provinces and we will continue to consult with them on how transportation can contribute to the success of economic development plans. However, co-operation is a two-way street and I for one do not intend always to keep turning the other cheek. I am the type that runs out of cheeks fairly quickly.

Transportation assistance programs which benefit particular regions will continue. We have the Maritime Freight Rates Act and the Atlantic Region Freight Assistance Act. They benefit Atlantic Canada to the tune of more than $75 million a year. The Western Grain Transportation Act provides something like $600 million a year to help the grain-growing region. The new Bill recognizes the unique transportation needs of northern Canada as well. It introduces beneficial aspects of competition but maintains safeguards to protect essential air services and marine resupply to northern communities.

I want to pay tribute to the work done by the Standing Committee on Transport. Its members looked at the principle of freedom to move one year ago. They travelled about the country and suggested changes, including recommendations regarding the North. I am sure they are going to have a very important influence on this legislation and will leave their mark on it. I also know it will be done in a co-operative and consultative manner and the Chairman of the standing committee will not just run off on a frolic of his own every now and then and announce major changes to the legislation without at least telling the Minister what he is going to do.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, Oh!

Mr. Crosbie: We have before us now a made in Canada transportation policy.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: It reflects this country's special needs and concerns. It is not patterned on the U.S. It is our own. We have heard from an immense number of people and we listened to them in putting the legislation together. We know that some who work in the system feel trepidation at the prospect of change. That is natural. They are worried about what might come about as a result of changes in the status quo. We are hoping to persuade them that if they look at this with an open mind the changes are well worth any risk they feel there might be.

All of us in the transportation field are going to have to make some adjustments and display imagination and flexibility. We intend to monitor the effects of change on employees. We are not going to forget them. The offer to consult with representatives of employees and employers to identify adjustment measures which might be required above and beyond those which already exist still stands.

I met the other day with Nancy Rich, Bob White and other representatives of the Canadian Labour Congress to listen to their views. We will continue to meet with them whenever they wish to. I do not anticipate that additional adjustment measures will be necessary but it may turn out they will be. The new legislation is not just to create or preserve jobs in other sectors of the economy; it is to help create and maintain jobs in transportation itself. That can only be done if the demands of travellers and shippers increase in a growing economy.

I mentioned our Crown corporations and how they have to adapt to this system as well. I want CN, Air Canada and VIA Rail to have the greatest possible freedom to manage their business affairs in a business-like manner. They are expected to be effective, efficient, and to operate as good corporate citizens. It was the previous Liberal Government which made that principle clear with reference to CN in 1978. The company was to stand on its own feet and not receive financial assistance from the Government. Therefore, they had to be permitted to operate in the most effective and efficient manner possible.

What about the specifics? In the air mode we have a special regulatory regime in the North which includes parts of five provinces and both territories. In the rest of the country economic regulation of air services will be reduced significantly. No longer will virtually every aspect of airline operation be regulated. At the moment the setting of fares, establishing of routes, schedules and types of aircraft to be used is all regulated. The CTC has eased application of many of those regulations, but further progress is impossible without legislative reform. As a matter of fact, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy), as Minister of Transport, started the process of deregulation in the air.

The test of public convenience and necessity has been used to limit entry and restrict competition in the airline industry, and that will be replaced. This has frustrated entrepreneurs for years. They saw a demand for service and wanted to fill it but were not allowed to. We think the air transport market should be open to competitive-minded, enterprising companies. All they will need in the future is to demonstrate that they are fit willing and able to provide air services. The new company will have to be Canadian-controlled, carry adequate liability insurance and, most important, will have to prove it can meet the safety standards of the Aeronautics Act. If they demonstrate those things, they will be granted a licence.

We think new companies will be encouraged to enter the market and existing companies will offer new services. We believe competition will benefit air cargo shippers as well as air travellers. Airlines will be able to adapt quickly to changes in the market-place. If they see an emerging demand and feel they can fill it, they will be able to do so without the delay and expense of licensing hearings and bureaucratic red tape and appeals. They will be free to change fares in response to marketing conditions without reference to regulatory agencies. We believe that for many small communities this new freedom to move will mean better service and competitive fares. Large carriers with large aircraft and inconvenient or infrequent service will increasingly be replaced by smaller entrepreneurs who know local conditions and requirements and can provide convenient and more frequent service. Jet aircraft, inefficient on short hops or half full, will be replaced by more suitable aircraft operating efficiently at affordable prices and at more convenient times. This is occurring in many parts of the country now and greater choices are available. Many of the new regional air carriers are using Canadian-made aircraft, in particular the Dash-7 and Dash-8 made by de Havilland. That is a tremendous spin-off benefit of this policy. The activity at de Havilland is quite remarkable. In Atlantic Canada we have Air Nova and Air Atlantic, both using Dash-7s and Dash-8s.

There are two important safeguards for the public in the new air provisions. The carriers will not be permitted to charge fares and rates in excess of those published or displayed. They are forbidden to do that. On routes served by only one airline, increases in regular air passenger fares will be appealable to the new national transportation agency which can order a reduction and refund if the increase is found to be unreasonable.

Exit from the market is also simplified under Bill C-18. A carrier will be able to discontinue or reduce a service if it provides 60 days notice to the public. That period will give other carriers the opportunity to add the route or time of service. It will also enable an airline to try out a new service without becoming rigidly locked into a money-losing proposition. With reduced risk, more innovation should follow.

To ensure that existing essential air services are not lost in any part of the country, please note that the Act empowers the Minister of Transport to authorize direct or indirect financial assistance. If it is necessary to keep existing essential air services going, the Act will permit the Minister to do this. We do not expect that to occur often.

I mentioned the additional safeguards which have been provided for the northern part of the country. Fit, willing and able will be the basic test for entry into the northern air market, but there will be an additional test for new services in the North. Any interested party which feels that a new service will jeopardize existing essential services may file an objection with the new National Transportation Agency. The objector will have to show that the proposed new service would lead to a significant negative impact on existing service. If that is demonstrated, the licence will not be issued.

The type of service to be provided in the North, the routes to be followed, and the communities and settlements to be served will continue to be regulated as well. To ensure that fares remain at reasonable levels, the National Transportation Agency will be empowered, on a complaint, to reduce any fare it finds to be unreasonable. Northern shippers, carriers and residents have all indicated they would welcome increased competition, but they want a gradual and controlled rate which this legislation is designed to provide.

Marine transport is also important to many northern communities for resupply services. The shipping season is short up there and it is very important that marine operations be reliable. Therefore, the provisions which apply to northern marine services are tailor-made with that in mind.

The ground rules for Canada's railway shippers and carriers will be significantly altered. At present, competition between the railways is limited and often nonexistent. They are now free jointly to discuss and set freight rates. All freight must be made public through the CTC. In other words, a shipper and a carrier cannot privately negotiate a contract which addresses their particular needs. They cannot make contracts in the way in which businesses ordinarily do. As a result, the railways operate below maximum efficiency and lose business to railway carriers in the U.S., where private contracts are permitted, and to trucking. Both shippers and carriers have called for the right to contract privately for rail services. This legislation provides for such contracts as part of our plan to encourage efficiency and competition in the rail sector.

With regard to branch line abandonment, the new agency and the Minister are given many more options to deal with applications. Grain dependent branch lines designated under the WGTA will remain exempt from abandonment proceedings. The options now are to order abandonment of branch lines which are losing money, or to order them retained and for Government to subsidize the losses of the railway. The most significant new option is to allow the Minister to use moneys, which otherwise would have had to be spent to subsidize the line, to help shippers and communities adjust to alternative services such as trucking.

The Bill also has three competitive access provisions: extended interswitching limits, terminal running rights, and competitive line rates. All those provisions will assist captive shippers, that is, shippers which have access to only one railway. Those shippers will now have far greater bargaining power on rates and services, and railways will, in the future, have to compete with one another for traffic from the captive shippers.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: Incidentally, that is the reason so many shippers are supporting this legislation. As far as I know, practically every shipper in the country has indicated support for the Bill.

Mr. Benjamin: The big shippers and the bull shippers.

Mr. Crosbie: Well I have never seen a bull shipper except in this hon. House where I have seen quite a few, many from the hon. gentleman's Party. I certainly take note of the bull shippers when they come into my office and when they leave to see what they left behind.

We believe that the financial viability of railways can be compatible with competition. We want a viable railway industry. The railways, of course, feel endangered by this legislation. The committee will have to listen to the arguments put forward by them. Provided they offer an efficient service which meets the shippers' needs, we believe the railways can compete effectively and their financial viability will not be jeopardized under this legislation. We do not believe that the railways need a monopoly to be viable or to compete with the U.S. railways.

We are also very conscious of the fact that no other effective means have yet been identified to resolve the problem of the captive shipper. It was a captive shipper, Champion Paper in Hinton, which was assisted by the CTC in the last day or so.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: The captive shipper and Canada need better service at better prices to meet the ever-increasing rigours of domestic and international competition. Captive shippers want, and should have, the right to bargain. That is what this legislation will give them. That is why I believe the Official Opposition will support this Bill. These rail reforms represent a balanced package, a redressing of the balance between shippers and carriers. We think that everyone can be a winner under these new rules. We know that everyone does not agree. The Bill is naturally a compromise and we hope that everyone will see that that is the case.

Canadian railways will be better able to compete with each other and with American railways for transborder traffic. Greater efficiency will help them secure existing jobs and create new ones in all the industries which depend on rail transportation. There are important regulatory reforms with regard to trucking contained in Bill C-19.

In 1954, the Government of Canada delegated its regulatory responsibilities for extra-provincial trucking to the provinces which all developed their own regulatory regimes. In different provinces there were different requirements for entry, for routes, for rates, for commodities, for safety precautions and so on.

That situation has made the job of meeting the needs of shippers more difficult than it needed to be. However, as the trucking industry grew and matured, regulation was reduced in all provinces, particularly in recent years. Truckers now have greater freedom to compete within the industry and with the railways. However, truckers remain saddled with a regime which limits growth and innovation. It is also inconsistent from province to province. It restricts services and imposes unnecessary costs on the industry, its customers, and on our economy. This is no way to meet future needs. In trucking, the task has involved federal and provincial Governments, the industry, producers and shippers in consultation over a number of years. A broad consensus developed that we need less regulation and more uniformity in regulation of trucking across Canada.

A historic agreement on regulatory reform of the trucking industry was reached in February, 1985, under the aegis of my colleague, the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski), by all the provinces, the territories and the federal Government. The new Motor Vehicle Transport Act puts that agreement into law. However, some of the provinces are starting to backslide and say "but, if" and "but, what", indicating that the agreement does not contain that to which they agreed. As the pressure mounts more may attempt to take what they consider to be the safer way out. It is important to remember that everyone agreed in February, 1985, that there had to be regulatory reform of the trucking industry. The federal Government has the courage, the initiative and the guts to carry on with it no matter what the obstacles.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: Effective January 1, 1988, there will be a uniform, nation-wide licence standard for trucking based on a new fitness test. That will consist primarily of safety and insurance requirements. The shippers would like that to be the end of the story. They would like to have the full benefits of competition as soon as possible. The industry, however, and Governments involved are convinced that an abrupt end to strict regulation might cause too many problems of adjustment. Therefore, we are including a transition phase to ease the adjustment. It will be a three-year period during which licence applications will continue to be subject to a public interest test. Those who object to the licensing of new trucking operations can still object, but the onus will be on them to prove that public harm will result if a new licence is granted.

• (1450)

The Bill also abolishes the extra provincial tariff approvals and route restrictions. We believe this will lead to increased competition and efficiency in the trucking industry.

Shippers will have a wider choice of carriers, enabling them to get their goods to market more quickly and efficiently. This will mean greater market opportunities, expanded sales and more jobs across Canada.

I mentioned earlier that in October we reached an agreement with the provinces and the industry on a uniform national safety code for trucking. We have agreed to a joint plan of implementing the code at the same time that the new economic regulations come into force in 1988.

Let me return to Bill C-18. What about the role of the new National Transportation Agency? The Canadian Transport Commission is the current regulatory body in transportation and carries a lot of clout. Under existing legislation, it can regulate air fares and examine any rail freight rate. It stipulates where carriers can and cannot go, what kind of services they can offer and with whom they can compete. It intervenes in disputes, holds extensive hearings and controls access to new transportation markets. It is a huge albatross about the necks of those involved in the transportation industry, and has enormous authority.

With the changes I am outlining today, which put the emphasis on competition, we need an agency that better reflects the new approach of our freedom to move legislation. It will be the new National Transportation Agency.

Its functions and powers will be tailored to this more flexible approach. It will reflect its mandate to fit regulation to the needs of people, rather than fitting people to the regulation. That is something that strikes terror into the hearts of the socialists and those who believe in state authority, and that they should regulate our every breath. We heard them asking questions of the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark). They want us to be governed by whom we can or cannot contribute to. We should only contribute to those to whom the Member for Spadina (Mr. Heap) or the Member for New Westminster—Coquitlam (Ms. Jewett) want us to contribute to. They are leading us toward the society of Big Brother. That is not the society for which we are headed. We want the more flexible approach of the National Transportation Agency and we will fit the regulations to the needs of the people.

Mr. Tobin: What are you going to do with the Newfoundland railway in this competitive environment?

Mr. Crosbie: You have asked a good question. It deserves an answer sometime.

Unlike its predecessor, the new agency will not exercise strict economic regulatory control. As the Government that represents the people, we will set transportation policy and be responsible for it. We will not slough off responsibility to someone else because we are not involved in a Liberal slough-off regime. This is a regime of responsibility.

Mr. Tobin: What are you going to do about the Newfoundland railway?

Mr. Crosbie: From time to time we may provide policy direction to the Newfoundland railway, and to the NTA. We may ask it to conduct general inquiries, but for the most part it will administer the remaining regulations and help resolve individual shipper-carrier disputes.

There will be a process for appealing agency decisions. The new dispute resolution provisions in the legislation are especially important. They put the onus squarely on the parties involved to attempt to settle conflicts before going to the National Transportation Agency. Surely it is sensible to have the parties resolve their disputes before going to the agency. This is an absolute work of genius, I say to the Deputy Prime Minister.

Let me give an example of how it will work. Suppose a large coal producer and the railway serving it cannot agree on a price to move the coal from the company's mine to market. At the request of both parties, the National Transportation Agency will be empowered to appoint a mediator to seek to resolve the dispute.

Another alternative is final offer arbitration. It is a new concept in our transportation law. The shipper may ask the agency to appoint an arbitrator to choose between its final offer and the final offer submitted by the carrier. The decision of the arbitrator will be binding for at least one year, unless the two parties can come to an alernative agreement in the meantime. In other words, it is "put up or shut up". The Member from Prince Rupert has difficulty understanding the "put option" and the "call option". Of course, I do not blame him because he is the average NDP transportation expert. This means that "put options" and "call options" are somewhat difficult for them to understand. They have been putting it to the people for years but have not yet been called upon to answer for it.

This Bill also simplifies investigations into matters of public interest. Upon receiving a complaint from a shipper, carrier or other interested party, the National Transportation Agency will have the authority to inquire into any carrier's rates, acts or omissions where the public interest may be prejudiced.

We are trying to provide maximum flexibility in the legislation. We know that it may have to be fine tuned and that there may be unforeseen developments to which we will have to respond.

The National Transportation Agency will review the operation of the legislation on an annual basis. In addition, a comprehensive review of the legislation will be undertaken by the Government in four years. It provides for annual reports, and the four-year review will be tabled in Parliament.

This is a made-in-Canada policy which balances the interests of all and the benefits to all Canadians. We believe that it will lead to more jobs and stronger regional economies. They will be stronger because there is a more reliable, efficient transportation system serving businesses there.

We think the legislation will bring about and provide for road, rail, air and marine services that can deliver goods and people more quickly, in a way that they can afford without excessive regulation, and that it will bring about competitive fares. It will result in flexible transportation networks that can adapt to new demands for services and new market opportunities. It will protect those who need protection. Public interest will be safeguarded, including the highest public interest, which is safety. It is all part of this made-in-Canada package.

We recognize the need for change and the result is this legislation. We want to thank all those who helped us, including the shippers, carriers, provincial and territorial Governments, Members of the House and the Standing Committee on Transportation which has produced two reports. I was especially pleased to note that the members of the committee who are of the Liberal persuasion agreed with the freedom to move proposals in many respects. I presume that means they will support this Bill in principle but, of course, damn every detail in the Bill. Nevertheless, I would sooner have them inside the tent, doing this in an outward direction, rather than outside the tent doing it in an inward direction. Of course, we do not think the NDP will see the light, but they have the Christmas period in which to consider the Bill.

It is time to get on with the job of making these changes a reality. The Deputy Prime Minister and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) place a high priority, as do I, on this legislation. I invite all Members of the House to join with us in completing the job as quickly as possible.

This does not mean that we are no longer listening. We anticipate that during committee stage, Members will examine the Bills carefully and will hear from all interested groups. There will be good, workable suggestions for improvement and we will consider them seriously.

Mr. Tobin: You know that you are the Deputy Prime Minister's surrogate mother on this?

Mr. Crosbie: Absolutely. The Deputy Prime Minister, having developed these lofty concepts, has gone on to greater things, leaving me to do the dirty work and to bear the brunt of all those who come to argue about what is wrong with the Bill.

• (1500)

I believe this is an exciting era in Newfoundland, and not only in Newfoundland but in Canada as a whole. I do not believe we are following the United States route in regulatory reform. We are learning our lessons from what has happened there. Safety will continue to be our main concern, on which we will not stint. I believe the legislative committee will have a most interesting time in considering this Bill which deals with the very sinews and guts of this country. There is not one area, no matter how small, which is not affected by this Bill. I am happy to be bringing in the legislation, which is in reality the brainchild of the Deputy Prime Minister. If the House passes this Bill, it will be a monument to his experience and pertinacity in the field of transportation. I am very happy to have the job of following behind him—

Mr. Tobin: With your broom.

Mr. Crosbie: —with my broom, sweeping up behind him, and trying to see that this legislation is carried through. We hope it will be in effect by the end of this year. We intend to listen to all members of the Opposition, all interested groups and to our own back-benchers.

Mr. Tobin: By the end of this year?

Mr. Crosbie: Sorry, by the end of 1987. We hope it will be in effect by January 1, 1988. Thank you for being so patient.

Mr. Benjamin: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker. Before the Parliamentary Secretary makes the move I think he is going to make, I wanted to ask you, Sir, if I may ask the Minister of Transport (Mr. Crosbie) a question in order for him to correct the record from earlier today.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): No, I am sorry.

Mr. Benjamin: The Minister has unlimited time and I wonder if he would permit a question.

Mr. Gauthier: No, he has 40 minutes.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary.

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, as agreed, I move:

That the debate be now adjourned.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Before the debate is adjourned, does the Hon. Member for Surrey—White Rock—North Delta (Mr. Friesen) have a point of order?

Mr. Friesen: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion that the debate be now adjourned as agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

IMMIGRATION ACT, 1976

Hon. Don Mazankowski (for the Minister of Employment and Immigration), moved that Bill C-34, an Act to amend the Immigration Act, 1976, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I believe you will find a disposition in the House to have Bill C-34 referred not to the legislative committee but to Committee of the Whole and dealt with at all stages this afternoon.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, in the spirit of Christmas we are prepared to co-operate with the Government in that regard.

Mr. Boudria: Our usual co-operation.

Mr. Heap: The same for us, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is it agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

[Translation]

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I want to thank Hon. Members for agreeing to proceed expeditiously with this measure. On one hand its purpose and objective are simple, on the other hand its results and consequences are a matter of great urgency.

[English]

I would like to begin by quoting part of a letter from a Canadian spokesman for a parish in Hull which had sponsored a young Kampuchean. It reads:

> As a student, he is not in positon to repay this by himself, but it is only fair that this money goes back to the Government, especially in the view of helping more refugees to start a new life. In particular, our parish has undertaken to sponsor his parents, and this is another instance where funds will be required for a transportation loan.
> As a Canadian citizen, I am very proud and supportive of what my Government does to help refugees, and I am very satisfied—

If this Bill is not passed before the end of this calendar year, we will have to curtail the refugee movement until it is passed. This will make it most difficult for Canada to meet its international commitment to accept 12,000 refugees during 1987, and the entire refugee program would be severely disrupted. At the very least, refugees will be faced with an additional one, two or three months' wait in refugee camps. Family reunification would also be delayed as spouses and children will have to wait until new funds are available before they can be given loans to assist them to come to Canada.

The transportation loan fund was first established in 1951 to aid immigrants who could not afford the passage to Canada, to aid immigrants joining their families in Canada, refugees seeking a new life and people whose occupational skills were in demand in Canada. The fund is a revolving one and is replenished as the loans are paid back. Although the original ceiling on the loans fund was $3 million, it has been necessary over the years to increase this amount to keep pace with rising costs resulting from inflation and the number of loan applicants. The last increase to $60 million was on May 7, 1980. This means that no more than $60 million may be lent at any one time.

A $60 million fund is not adequate to provide for our ongoing immigration transportation program because a shortfall has resulted from the large amount lent to the 60,000 Vietnamese refugees admitted in the early 1980s. Put simply, a large percentage of this money remains due because a huge sum is being repaid at a very slow rate mainly due to the employment difficulties encountered by this group of refugees.

I am pleased to say that since its inception the Canadian Government has lent $177.5 million to immigrants and refugees. Of this amount, the Government has had to write off only $4.4 million or 2.48 per cent. This is over a period of 35 years. The majority of the loans are made to refugees interest free and these loan recipients are very conscious of their responsibilty to repay the loan. They fully realize that the dollars they return to the fund would be used to bring other refugees to Canada.

Since 1970, over $94 million worth of loans has been provided to refugees. To this day, only $77,000 of this amount has been written off. That is a very low percentage. Since its beginning, the fund has served Canada well. Canada has been able to respond quickly to requests from the international community to help victims of world disasters such as the British flood victims in the 1950s, the Italian earthquake victims in 1980. The request from the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to assist the Hungarians in 1956-57, the Czechoslovakians, the Vietnamese and, more recently, in the Polish difficulties have been responded to with assistance from the transportation loans fund.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, family reunification has always been a cornerstone of our immigration policy. There is a favourable side effect to this policy. It has been proven that a refugee or immigrant adapts at a quicker pace if the spouse and children are in Canada. The whole family adjusts to Canadian ways together and there is no cultural gap within the family unit. The loan fund has been the instrument which has enabled the refugee to have the spouse and children join him or her that much sooner.

I have already noted that we have had some response from a number of sources. I would like to end my comments today in encouraging members of the Opposition, all Hon. Members in fact, to support the quick passage of this Bill. I would like to read from two letters received by the Government with respect to the transportation loan fund. The first correspondence is from a young Vietnamese family of three living in Niagara Falls, Ontario, who sent a card which states on the cover: "Thanks so much". What really warms our hearts is the handwritten note inside which says:

To,

The Immigration of Canada,

Dear,

We are deeply thank to our immigration and the Canadian Government, was helping my family immigrate in Canada. Thank to this great favourite.

While the words may not be exact, the meaning is clear.

Finally, the following are extracts from a note from a young man from Poland who writes:

I would like to take this opportunity, send my last payment, to thank you for entering me the door to Canada and giving me the opportunity to live in this well established and peaceful country.

This year, in April, I became a Canadian citizen. A few months ago I got an interesting job. Very shortly, I will be continuing my education through part time courses in university. I got married in June 1986. It seems that I have adopted well in Canada.

Once more, thank you, Canada, for your help!

That concludes the Government's representation to Hon. Members with respect to extending this loan fund from $60 million to $90 million so that we may fulfil our obligations in the manner in which Canada has always done on behalf of refugees and immigrants who wish to enter our country.

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate this opportunity to make some very brief comments on Bill C-34. As I indicated, in keeping with the spirit of Christmas, the Official Opposition is prepared to co-operate fully with the Government to ensure the speedy passage of Bill C-34 in all stages this afternoon. I say that notwithstanding the fact that it is literally Christmas Eve and within a few hours we will adjourn for the Christmas break. Yet the Government is asking us to deal with a piece of legislation which, it says, if it is not passed by the end of the calendar year the refugee movement will be curtailed until it is passed. We must take some exception to being lectured by the Government at the eleventh hour telling us that, if we do not pass this Bill, somehow the magnanimous doors that have been flung open in the past by the Liberal Party to refugees will be shut.

We have been here for two years since the new Government took office. Why did it not bring this piece of legislation forward sooner? It is not as if there has been a material change in circumstance overnight or over the last week. The problem which this Bill addresses could have been recognized some time ago.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, this is not a lengthy Bill. Bill C-34 amends the Immigration Act. It states:

Subsection 121(3) of the Immigration Act, 1976 is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"(3) The total amount of outstanding advances to the Minister under this section shall not at any time exceed ninety million dollars."

As the Parliamentary Secretary has indicated, the $90 million figure replaces the $60 million figure which is in the present Act. I am pleased to note that since the inception of this fund some 35 years ago only $4.4 million has had to be written off. From this fund the Government has lent $177.5 million to immigrants and refugees to facilitate their passage to Canada. These are not grants which the Government gives but loans. The Government of 1951 which was responsible for setting up this fund ought to be congratulated for what it did back then in terms of implementing a transportation fund to assist refugees to come to Canada. It is interesting that only $4.4 million, or 2.48 per cent, of this $177 million has had to be written off.

What does that tell us? It tells us that the people who received these loans have paid them back. I challenge Hon. Members to find any other government programs in which loans are granted to students, business people or farmers who have write-off rates of 2.48 per cent. I do not imagine we could find many such programs. The point is that over this period of 35 years we have learned that the recipients of these loans are God-fearing, tax-paying citizens. And they are good ones. They recognize the obligations they have as a result of borrowing money from the Government of Canada, and they have paid that money back.

As the Parliamentary Secretary pointed out, the last increase to this transportation fund was in 1980 when it was increased to $60 million. I do not wish to repeat what the Parliamentary Secretary has said. However, it is clear that the fund must be replenished. It is clear that the Minister must have the authority to increase the fund to $90 million. We in Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition are prepared to offer our full co-operation in this regard.

In closing, as a member of the parliamentary wing of the Liberal Party of Canada I take great pride in what the Liberal Party has accomplished over the last three or four decades in terms of our immigration policy. I believe very strongly, as I am sure Members on all sides of the House do, that we have one of the finest immigration policies in the world. Canada has a record and a reputation in the world for assisting and welcoming people of all races, creeds and religions to our shores. Of course, we have been critical in the last two years with respect to some of the policies of the Government. However, today is not the day to be overly critical in view of the fact that Christmas is but six days away.

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I wish to take this opportunity to speak to Bill C-34 which will raise the total loan limit for transportation for selected refugees from $60 million to $90 million. That is to say that at no time can more than $90 million be out on loan.

The fact that there has been no increase in this amount in the last six years, a time in which transportation costs have increased by 50 per cent and the number of refugees has increased, makes it quite obvious that if we are to carry on the program this increase is necessary. As has already been pointed out, there is little danger of loss of money from this revolving loan account since less than 2.5 per cent of it has not been repaid.

I think there are very few Canadians who know about this loan fund or even why it exists. It is those who have benefited from it who know about it. I agree with the previous speakers who have said that there is great gratitude for what has been done. However, I wish to say something about the basis of this program. It has been said by a very great Canadian teacher, Rabbi Plaut, who himself came here as a refugee, that there is a price we Canadians must pay for living in a country that is wealthier and more secure than most countries in the world. Part of that price is our obligation to help people who are in serious political or similar troubles arising out of conflict and oppression. These are refugees and there are 10 million or 15 million of them in the world, mostly in Africa, Asia and Latin America. Most of them do not come to Canada. They do not want to and it would not be practical for them to do so. However, some of them do need to come here. Some have been selected from the many by our officers overseas. The problem lies in getting them and their families here. This program is designed to lend them the money to pay for their travel to Canada in the certain knowledge that the very great majority of them will, when they arrive, work to repay these loans.

A few months ago, I had the privilege of visiting Guatemala in Central America. I learned that our embassy there made it possible for 750 people to escape from Guatemala in 1985. They escaped because they had to escape and they convinced our embassy, case by case, that their lives were in danger. Technically they were not refugees according to the Geneva definition because they were still in their own country, but that did not make them any safer. There were death squads threatening not only political opponents of the Government but trade union officers, school teachers, priests, teachers of catechism and anyone who was independent of the military dictatorship that ruled that country so harshly.

People were not simply being killed. Sometimes the situation was worse. I spoke to a woman who, along with her husband, was engaged in asking questions about the Government. One day her husband did not come home. He has not come home since then, but no one has told her if her husband and her daughter's father is alive or dead. A body has never been identified. To this day, she does not know if she is a widow or if she is still married. It is a terrible strain.

Families like the one to which I just referred who have been threatened often find that they cannot stand it any longer and have to get out. They get out by going to our embassy and, on the basis of the facts shown and acknowledged by embassy staff, they come to Canada. One step in that process is the provision of air fare for which most of them could never come near to paying, particularly since the value of Guatemalan currency has dropped to about one-third of what it was a couple of years ago.

In 1985, 750 people were brought out of Guatemala. This loan fund provided part of the means to make that possible. I am very proud of Canada for doing this. This is the kind of thing that justifies the decision made a few weeks ago to give Canada the Nansen Medal for the work not just of the Government, not just of certain people but of the Canadian taxpayers through a fund like this.

I am very happy to support this Bill. I do not mind at all the fact that it comes before the House at the end of the year. It had to come before the House sometime, and why should it not come before the House during the Christmas season?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and, by unanimous consent, the House went into committee thereon, Mr. Paproski in the chair.

The Deputy Chairman: Order. House in Committee of the Whole on Bill C-34, an Act to amend the Immigration Act, 1976.

Shall Clause 1 carry?

On Clause 1—Limitation

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Chairman, I would like to take this oportunity to ask some questions from the front row. You know how lonely it is in the back row, Mr. Chairman. You have been there.

The Deputy Chairman: I would like the Hon. Member to know that I was on the back benches but not for too long.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Chairman, I hope that I am not there for a lengthy period of time. Of course, after the next election, we will have the whole front row on the other side of the House to occupy.

On a more serious note, I would like to ask the Parliamentary Secretary some general questions with regard to these loans. Could he indicate, for example, how much is lent per individual family and what the interest rates and repayment periods are?

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Chairman, I cannot give the Hon. Member the average size of the loans. I will undertake to provide that information. The majority of these loans are interest-free. Interest rates on the ones that are not interest-free are paid according to the interest rates required by the Consolidated Revenue Fund. It is a floating rate and it changes year by year. I will undertake to provide the Hon. Member with a specific figure for the average size of the loans if he wishes.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Chairman, is an application for this loan made overseas or is the original cost of passage paid and then reimbursed by the Government? How exactly does that work?

Would a refugee apply for loan assistance from an embassy? That might be difficult at times when a refugee would claim refugee status after arriving in Canada. Could the Parliamentary Secretary shed some light on that question?

Mr. Gurbin: Mr. Chairman, it is a little difficult for me to be specific on this. I suspect that there are a number of ways of accessing this fund. Clearly, people who already live in Canada can make direct application for the loan to bring their spouses or relatives to Canada. People in other countries may contact our embassies and the officials there would be the primary contact in applying for the loans. Again, I would have to check with our officials on that detail to be more specific.

The Deputy Chairman: Shall Clause 1 carry?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Clause 1 agreed to.

Title agreed to.

Bill reported.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): When shall the Bill be read the third time? By leave, now?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Hon. Paul Dick (for the Minister of Employment and Immigration) moved that the Bill be read the third time and passed.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the third time and passed.

• (1530)

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I should have indicated this earlier. There have been discussions between the Parties with respect to the Bill which we are now asking leave to introduce. I think you will find that there was consent for leave to introduce the Bill, give it first reading and move it through all stages this afternoon.

Mr. Gauthier: I would like to give our consent to that procedure. Of course, we would like to see the Bill first. We agree that we should proceed with it now.

SALARIES ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

Hon. Flora MacDonald (for the Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-36, an Act to amend the Salaries Act.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Shall the Minister have leave to introduce the said Bill.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the first time.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): When shall the Bill be read a second time? By unanimous consent now?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Hon. Flora MacDonald (for the Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council) moved that Bill C-36, an Act to amend the Salaries Act, be read the second time and referred to Committee of the Whole.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and the House went into committee thereon, Mr. Paproski in the chair.

The Deputy Chairman: Order. House in Committee of the Whole on Bill C-36, an Act to amend the Salaries Act.

Shall Clause 1 carry?

On Clause 1

Mr. Nunziata: As you know, Clause 1 amends paragraph 3.1(1)(a) of the Salaries Act and substitutes the following:

> "(a) the percentage that the Industrial Aggregate for the first adjustment year is of the Industrial Aggregate for the second adjustment year;—

I would like to know from the Parliamentary Secretary exactly what salaries we are talking about here, and to whom we are paying these salaries.

Mr. Lewis: I have some information on that point. This is an Act which takes into account the fact that in 1984 Statistics Canada ceased to publish the Industrial Composite Index and instead substituted an Industrial Aggregate Index. The salaries of Lieutenant Governors across Canada are based on the lesser of the index used, or 7 per cent. Since we no longer have the Industrial Aggregate Index, we had to substitute the Industrial Composite Index by this simple one paragraph Bill.

Mr. Nunziata: What is the Government of Canada paying to the Lieutenant Governors of the provincial parliaments in Canada? Are they all paid the same? Is there a salary range? Is it according to years of experience?

Mr. Lewis: I do not have that information at my fingertips. If necessary, that information can be obtained. It is paid by the provinces, and we are simply assisting by making this change in our Act.

Clause 1 agreed to.

Title agreed to.

Bill reported.

Hon. Flora MacDonald (for the Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council) moved that the Bill be read the third time and passed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I understand that I have unlimited time as I stand in my place on third reading debate. I wish to assure the Members of this House that, as is my right, I intend to exercise the option of not using unlimited time today. I intend to be limited in my remarks. I hear an audible sigh of relief from the benches across the way, and an audible sigh of disappointment from both the NDP and Liberal camps.

I wish to take this opportunity as this Bill flies through the House. This Bill affects the way in which the salary scales are determined for the Lieutenant Governors of the 10 provinces of Canada. This Bill affects those ordinary citizens who have been elevated to a position of ceremonial responsibility; in fact, constitutional authority when necessary—ceremonial largely and constitutional occasionally. We saw that in Ontario very recently where the Lieutenant Governor made a very wise and proper decision.

I wish to take this opportunity to indicate that at some point it would be wise for the House and the Government to produce a paper advising the people of Canada, and inviting Members of Parliament to participate in the discussion on the criteria used in choosing Lieutenant Governors. In that manner, Lieutenant Governors may arise from the relative obscurity that sometimes enshrouds the office and take their proper place within the Canadian establishment and system. That can best be utilized when Canadians have a better understanding of how it is that Governments, the Government of Canada and provincial Governments, come to a decision as to who the Lieutenant Governor of a province should be.

I believe that the Lieutenant-Governor who was recently named for the Province of Newfoundland, the former Member for St. John's East, was a long-time servant of this Parliament and an extraordinary parliamentarian. Joey Smallwood in Newfoundland holds the title of the last living Father of Confederation. It can truly be said that Jim McGrath, who is no longer a Member and I can use his name—outside this Chamber, of course, it is His Excellency—is the father of reform in this Parliament. He would endorse my suggestion today that the process by which we select Lieutenant Governors ought to be opened up and examined more closely, so that these positions are more relevant to the public at large.

Let me take this opportunity to wish all Lieutenant Governors, but in particular the Lieutenant-Governor of Newfoundland, a very Merry Christmas, all the best in the New Year, and to tell them that after only such a short period of time, a few weeks or months since he has been Lieutenant Governor, we in Newfoundland see in him a gentleman who has brought a fresh surge of energy, life, and relevance to the post. We are proud. Mr. Speaker, you know that I am a man who always speaks in a non-partisan way, so this comment will not be unusual coming from me. We are indeed proud to this date of the manner in which he has upheld his office.

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, as a Member from the Province of Ontario, I would like to take this opportunity to say a few words about our Lieutenant Governor. As you know, the Hon. Lincoln Alexander is a former Member of the House of Commons. He was not from this side of the House but a Conservative Member of Parliament from the opposite side. I am very proud and honoured to have the Hon. Lincoln Alexander as our Lieutenant Governor. I had the opportunity to meet with him for the first time at a dinner in my riding some months ago. I greatly admire the work he is doing as the Liuetenant Governor of the province. He is a true gentleman and a great Canadian.

Mr. Dick: And a super Tory.

Mr. Nunziata: My colleague, the Hon. Member for Humber—Port-au-Port—St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin) rhetorically asked how Lieutenant Governors are chosen and what process is taken. The Hon. Lincoln Alexander shared his experience with us. He read in a newspaper that he was being considered for the position of Lieutenant Governor. He was deeply honoured to know that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) was considering appointing him. He waited for the phone call. He told us that his legs were shaking when the voice at the other end of the line asked whether he would like to be the next Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Ontario.

In closing, allow me as a Member from Ontario to express my personal season's greetings, on behalf of the Liberal Party of Canada and I am sure on behalf of all Members of the House of Commons and to express our sincerest best wishes to Lieutentant Governor, the Hon. Lincoln Alexander, and his family.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Motion agreed to and Bill read the third time and passed.

ARCHIVES OF CANADA ACT

The House proceeded to the consideration of Bill C-7, an Act respecting the Archives of Canada and records of government institutions of Canada and to amend the Copyright Act, as reported (with amendments) from a legislative committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): There are two report stage motions on today's Notice Paper in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone), in amendment to Bill C-7. I regret, but I must rule that Motion No. 1 is out of order in that it seeks to amend the interpretation clause of the Bill. I refer the Hon. Member to Beauchesne's Fifth Edition, Citation 773 (10) which reads:

A substantive amendment may not be introduced by way of a modification to the interpretation clause of a bill.

Motion No. 2 is in order and shall be put to the House.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal) moved:

Motion No. 2

That Clause 2 be amended by striking out lines 20 to 26 at page 1 and substituting the following therefor:

"ministerial record" means a record created or received by a member of the Queen's Privy Council for Canada who holds the office of a Minister, in the course of conducting actitities which relate to the carrying out of the statutory duties of the Minister;

She said: Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak to my amendment which would change the clause on the definition of ministerial record which presently reads:

"Ministerial record" means a record of a member of the Queen's Privy Council for Canada who holds the office of a Minister and that pertains to that office, other than a record that is of a personal or political nature or that is under the control of a Government institution.

My argument is based on the fact that the present definition defines a ministerial record by what it is not, not by what it is. It is not political, it is not personal, according to this definition, nor under the care and control of a government institution. I would suggest that that is not a very constructive way to determine what is a ministerial record. I would like to recommend my proposed amendment because I believe my definition brings into much clearer focus the kind of information and documentation we would like to hold in the Archives of Canada which would be an ongoing record for all time as to the role, accomplishment and function of the particular Minister in question.

The proposed amendment came out of a fair amount of research on our part. This was directed by the prior Minister of Communications who had suggested we look most carefully to definitions and descriptions throughout the democratic world as we know it and to those public archival institutions that exist elsewhere. As a result, the proposed amendment flows most particularly from the American definition of presidential record. The other models we looked at were the British, the American and the Australian, but this one seemed the most constructive one that I could find, and I submit that the definition of ministerial record will be much clearer. We heard considerable testimony about the lack of clarity and the breadth of documents that could escape the archival control from the Association of Manitoba Archivists, from the Manitoba Council of Archives, from L'Institut D'Histoire de l'Amérique Française who argued that a clearer definition of what constitutes a ministerial record be found. In their view, it should be made clear that all ministerial records stemming from Government activity or involving a Minister in the conduct of official business, including documents relating to the formulation of policy or to be deemed public records and transferred to the archives when the use for which they were orginally created ceased. The present definition is more in the nature of what it is not rather than what it is.

In light of the fact that my other amendment has been ruled out of order as beyond the interpretation of the Bill, I respectfully suggest that this amendment would allow things like royal commission studies that would fall under the Inquiries Act to be commissioned by a Minister. It would then be part and parcel of the record in our archives. It is quite surprising that the records of CN, Air Canada and CBC will not be held, as they would fall under ministerial responsibility. Therefore, they would fall under the collective memory that we would find in our archives.

I know there was much discussion in committee with the Minister present as to the definition that I have proposed. There was concern that it might be limited. I am suggesting that the original presentation of that clause is a limited one and this would be a much broader interpretation. Therefore, I strongly suggest that the Minister accept this new definition which is brought with the best of intent to make the archives Bill function in the way in which the standing committee wished to see it function. I know it was in the interests of everyone. We were pleased to see this new revision of the Public Archives Act.

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a few observations in response to the proposal put forward by the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) concerning the definition of ministerial record. The definition agreed to by the legislative committee on December 10 reads as follows:

"Ministerial record" means a record of a member of the Queen's Privy Council for Canada who holds the office of the Minister and that pertains to that office, other than a record that is of a personal or political nature or that is under the control of a government institution.

That definition sets out the three categories of records which can be found in the office of a Minister. The first is those records directly controlled by a Minister which pertain to his or her position as a Minister and member of the Queen's Privy Council of Canada. The second is those records under the control of a government institution which deal with the business of the institution. The third is the personal or political records of the Minister relating to his or her functions as a member of a political Party, representative of a federal constituency, or as a parliamentarian, or to his or her private life and interests. I believe that this is a very comprehensive definition and will serve Canadians well. The amendment proposed by the Hon. Member for Mount Royal is as follows:

"Ministerial record" means a record created or received by a member of the Queen's Privy Council for Canada who holds the office of a Minister, in the course of conducting activities which relate to the carrying out of the statutory duties of the Minister;"

I believe there is a serious flaw in that proposal. In referring as it does to the statutory duties of the Minister it does not cover the large class of records which relate to ministerial responsibilities and duties not based on statute. For example, the Queen's Privy Council is not a statutory body. The duties of the Minister as a member of the Cabinet are not statutory. Accordingly, the definition proposed by the Hon. Member for Mount Royal would not apply to records relating to a Minister's duties as a member of Cabinet. I believe that would be a most unfortunate consequence of passing this amendment.

In short, I am fully satisfied with the current definition of ministerial record and it is my hope that this amendment will not be sustained.

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the amendment put forward by the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). In doing so I want to indicate to the Minister that the argument she has made in, I believe improperly but not deliberately, interpreting this amendment sounds rather strange when the wording the Minister proposes says:

"ministerial record" means a record of a member of the Queen's Privy Council for Canada who holds the office of a Minister and that pertains to that office—

The argument she makes, wrongly, I believe, that this amendment would be limited in its effect is in fact the problem with her own interpretation of ministerial record. It is too limited. Her definition goes on, and this is the escape clause:

—other than a record that is of a personal or political nature or that is under the control of a government institution;

That is a huge escape clause with respect to what should be counted as ministerial record.

I think the Hon. Member for Mount Royal has done a great service to Parliament in taking the time to examine this matter closely. She has put forward an amendment based on the American model of ministerial records of responsibility. I would go so far as to say that if the definition she now has in the Bill were in place in the U.S. during the days of the Nixon presidency then the tapes of the conversation between the President of the U.S. and his aides concerning the cover-up of a break-in would never have been part of the official record.

Members opposite can chuckle, but the President would have said, according to the Minister's definition, that the break-in at the Democratic Party headquarters was a political matter. Therefore, the record of his conversations with Mr. Haldeman, Mr. Erlichman and Mr. Dean would never have been made available as they were ordered to be by the U.S. Supreme Court. They would not have been considered part of the record of the President's day-to-day activities. They would have been considered to be of a political or personal nature. Therefore, given the kind of interpretation contained in Bill C-7, Watergate could never have happened, not because the system is incapable of that kind of political activity but because the truth would never have been known. Neither the people of Canada, the nation's press or an independent judicial commission of inquiry, the Canadian equivalent of a U.S. special prosecutor, would have been able to get to the bottom of the matter because they would never have been able to obtain the records in the first place.

What we are saying to the Minister, who obviously has no fear about that kind of exposure, and her colleagues, who also obviously have no fear of that hypothetical situation in this country, is that the definition provided by the Minister allows for an escape hatch big enough for an 18-wheel Mack truck to drive through. That is the difficulty with this definition.

The Minister should know that this amendment is proposed with the knowledge of the kind of activities which went on during Watergate and which are going on today in what is called Irangate in the U.S. A special congressional committee and a special Senate committee in the U.S. are examining all matters relating to an activity which breaches American law. In the course of their investigation they are asking for records and transcripts of phone calls and other conversations. Let me ask the Minister this: If the President of the U.S. and his chief aides and cabinet secretaries were to say "Yes, but those conversations were of a political nature, we were trying to figure out how to avoid a political fall-out", then what is the definition of a cover-up? Is it an official responsibility? It is not part of his official responsibility to cover things up. That is political. It might be illegal. Based on such criteria, we would never have a Watergate in this country because we would never get to the bottom of the barrel and find out the truth. That is why the amendment moved by the Member for Mount Royal, who has done excellent work on behalf of Canada, ought to be accepted today.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The question is on Motion No. 2 in the name of the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): In my opinion the nays have it.

Motion No. 2 (Mrs. Finestone) negatived.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): When shall the Bill be read the third time? By leave, now?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Miss MacDonald moved that Bill C-7, an Act respecting the Archives of Canada and records of government institutions of Canada and to amend the Copyright Act, be read the third time and passed.

She said: Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to address the House as Bill C-7, an Act respecting the National Archives of Canada and to amend other Acts in relation thereto, receives third reading. On this occasion I am reminded of a similar event in our nation's history. Almost 75 years ago, in January, 1912, the Conservative Government of Robert Laird Borden introduced the first archives legislation. At that time, the archives branch had already been operating for 40 years. It had been operating for those 40 years, acquiring and conserving both public and private historical records, without benefit of a legislative mandate. That legislation came before the House in 1912.

At that time Prime Minister Borden acknowledged the essential role of the Archives when he expressed the intention of his Government to take concerted and deliberate action to ensure the preservation and safeguarding of our nation's archival heritage.

The object of the Public Archives Act was that records "no longer required for the every-day purposes of public administration—should be removed to a place of security—and classified so as to be easily accessible to those who may desire to consult them".

[Translation]

Prime Minister Borden's proposal was supported by the Leader of the Opposition, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and the Bill was quickly adopted. In 1912, the general consensus was that the legislation met a need and was an adequate response to the general desire to preserve the historic documents of the nation.

It therefore seems appropriate for this Government to introduce a new National Archives of Canada Act to replace the outdated Act of 1912, and it is with great pride that I take this opportunity to speak to Bill C-7 today.

[English]

I would like to review, for a moment, the progress of this Bill. It first came before the House during the first session of this Parliament as Bill C-95 on February 12, 1986. It received second reading on June 11 and was referred to committee for study. The committee's examination of the legislation was well under way when the first session of this Parliament was prorogued. On October 3, 1986, all Parties agreed to reinstate the Bill at committee stage. Bill C-7 was referred to the legislative committee chaired by my colleague, the Member for Argenteuil—Papineau (Mrs. Bourgault), who guided the committee adeptly through a number of hearings.

The co-operation which characterized the enactment of the 1912 Act has also been evident through the proceedings of this committee. The committee undertook its study with a view to making the Bill a better piece of legislation. It has succeeded. It listened to many Canadians representing archival associations, provincial organizations, learned societies, universities, historians and writers. Some submitted briefs and several appeared as witnesses. The views of these individuals and groups have been invaluable. So, too, have been the contributions of the committee members. It was apparent to me when I appeared before the committee that its members share a sincere interest in our nation's archival heritage and the legislation designed to preserve it.

I am particularly pleased to advise the House that at clause by clause study of this Bill on December 10 agreement was reached on seven substantive amendments. In brief, Mr. Speaker, with regard to Clause 3(1), it was unanimously agreed to change the name of the institution to the National Archives of Canada/Archives Nationales du Canada. Similarly, it was agreed that the title of the deputy head should be National Archivist of Canada/Archiviste National du Canada. Witnesses had requested these changes to ensure that the name and title reflect Canada's federal structure, and to follow international practice.

A second substantive change, also unanimously agreed to, was the deletion of the opening words of Clause 5(1) "Except as otherwise provided under an Act of Parliament". Witnesses had unanimously requested this change. The intent of Clause 5 is, as a result, much clearer. It establishes, for the first time in law, the requirement for government institutions to obtain the consent of the archivist before destroying or disposing of their records.

As a result of a consensus reached with Departments and agencies responsible for security and intelligence matters, I was able to respond to the serious concerns of witnesses about Clauses 5(6) and 6(4). I am very pleased to report that the legislative committee unanimously approved the deletion of these sections, together with Clause 6(1)(b). I am confident that existing records management practices are fully adequate to ensure that the legitimate interests of our allies in the areas of security and intelligence are respected.

Another substantive issue on which there was agreement to amend this Bill relates to the legal deposit provisions of Clause 8(3). This passage provides for the Archives to pay the actual costs of making a copy requested under this provision of the Act. The amendment excludes government institutions and their agents from the effect of this reimbursement provision. Recordings are regularly acquired from government institutions, and it was never the intention of Clause 8 that this reimbursement provision should apply within the Govenrment.

The final major issue on which agreement was reached in committee was the establishment and the composition of an advisory board.

Clause 9(1) had provided that the Minister might establish a board with certain ex officio members, and not more than seven members appointed by the Minister from among persons who had expertise in archival matters or who are residents of Canada.

The committee agreed that the Minister shall establish such a board. It also agreed that the seven other members shall be appointed by the Minister from among persons experienced in archival matters. I am convinced that this change will result in a stronger board, which will provide useful advice to the archivist.

In conclusion, I believe that we have responded to the concerns of witnesses. Their testimony was most helpful in the formulation of amendments. I also wish to cite the extremely co-operative role of the Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) and the Member for Broadview-Greenwood (Ms. McDonald). Their assistance made possible significant improvements to this Bill.

It is a pleasure for me, as a Minister of the Crown, to sponsor a Bill that has received such broad support from the Members of the House. I believe this is because we all recognize that the new national Archives of Canada Act is vital to the Canadian archival community. It is now my privilege to recommend this Bill to the House for third reading.

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, I can assure the Hon. Minister of Communications (Miss MacDonald) that she will have her Bill for Christmas.

I rise today to speak at third reading of Bill C-7, an Act respecting the National Archives of Canada and records of government institutions of Canada, and to amend the Copyright Act.

[Translation]

The National Archives of Canada Act will replace the present Public Archives Act which goes back to 1912. Since 1912, the Public Archives of Canada have freely interpreted the unique definition, never changed since that time, of its mandate or mission to collect and preserve historical documents of every kind, nature and description—, to justify its present day activities. These activities will now be more acurately defined in a completely revised version of the Public Archives Act, reflecting not only the scope of the Archives' present collections and the methods used to preserve them, but also the other duties and activities of the Public Archives today.

The Public Archives is an institution that is essential to the preservation of our heritage and shares this purpose with the National Museums of Canada. The importance of the institution was admirably expressed in the presentation by the Public Archives to the Applebaum-Hébert Committee, and I quote:

> If the archives of a nation, a government or an organization are not preserved, then the history of that nation, government or organization will be forgotten, and the price which a people pay for the loss of their history is a misunderstanding of their roots, confusion in their identity and the misinterpretation or misrepresentation of the nature of their country.

[English]

"Of all our national treasures, the archives are the most precious. They are the legacy of one generation to another, and the quality of care we give them testifies to the quality of our civilization". This was said more than 50 years ago by a former Dominion Archivist, Arthur G. Daughty.

During second reading of this Bill, the previous Minister of Communications gave an eloquent explanation of the importance of the Archives. I want to quote him.

[Translation]

> If a people is not aware of its past, it has no identity. It suffers from amnesia. It does not know its strengths, it does not know its weaknesses and cannot build on its experience. It cannot leap forward because it lacks the starting block of history. It cannot legitimize its institutions or identify their responsibilities, anymore than it can determine the rights of individuals and groups.
> The original identity of our country, which we defend and strengthen, each in our own way, is partly reflected in our institutions and our present day way of life, but also in the roots of the present which we can find through the archives.
> These, according to Doughty, are the soul of a people, its collective memory. They are essential to a people's understanding of itself, its past, its present activity and its aspirations for the future.

[English]

I would like to add another dimension. Within the mission of the National Archives I want to underline how important it is to reflect the multicultural, multilingual background which is the tapestry and design that forms the background of Canada's beautiful landscape and guards and preserves for our children and our children's children the historical records of our society. It is from these very societies that we must seek to collect and preserve this historical documentation so that people see themselves reflected through their roots in our own archives. They are the archives of all the peoples of Canada, regardless of when they arrived on these shores.

That is one reason why I regret most sincerely that my first amendment was not accepted by the Government. It enlarged the interpretation of the Bill, because when we lose the history of the CNR or Air Canada, we lose a precious part of our heritage. There is a potential for loss when such preservation is not mandated.

Consultations with informed, interested and public minded citizens and other groups was absolutely key to this Bill's ability to truly fulfil its mandate. The considered opinions enabled the legislators in the House to perform our duties much more effectively. A key example of the vigilance that can be found in community based groups and by professional associations can be seen with respect to Clause 5(6) and Clause 6(4) of the original Bill.

In the original text of Bill C-7, before it was amended, documents relating to international relations or defence were to be exempted from the requirement that no documents be destroyed without the consent of the archivist. There were strong representations from such groups as the Social Science Federation, the Canadian Historical Association, and the Canadian Association of University Teachers, who felt that the reference to any record containing privileged information from a foreign state was far too broad. By exempting all such records from the National Archivist's control, irrespective of how much privileged information might be contained in them, it was argued that too many valuable Canadian records could be destroyed on this ground and, therefore, lost forever. As a result of the strong arguments brought forth by these witnesses, this exemption was deleted.

In Clause 6(1)(b) and Clause 6(4) there were similar significant exemptions. Under its terms, records containing confidential information from a foreign Government or an international organization of states, dealing with either the conduct of international affairs, the defence of Canada or any of its allies, or the prevention or suppresion of subversive or hostile activities, were exempted from the provisions under Clauses 6(1)(b) and 6(4) unless the foreign entity in question consented to the transfer of the confidential records to the Archives. Witnesses as well were concerned about the National Archivist's ability to exercise full control over records containing valuable information. Once more, witnesses played a significant role in deletion of this clause and helped immeasurably in the improvement of this Bill.

Another significant change to the legislation was in the nomenclature. This change was proposed by the Government and myself. The former Dominion Archivist, Doctor Wilfrid Smith, the Social Science Federation of Canada, and the Association of Canadian Archivists recommended that the name given to the Archives should correspond to the existing patterns of other national cultural institutions such as the National Library, the National Arts Centre, the National Museums Corporation, and the National Film Board. We were also told during the hearings on Bill C-7 that of approximately 140 countries that are members of the International Council on Archives, approximately 130 have "National Archives" as their title. We are pleased that the Minister gave this new title to the Bill. It is now formally known as the National Archives and gives it a distinct definition from provincial archives and other municipal archives.

While I generally support Bill C-7 and am pleased with the changes passed by our legislative committee, there were two changes I would have liked to see incorporated into the new legislation. They involve the definitions given to "government institutions" and "ministerial records". The term "government institutions" is defined at Clause 2 to mean:

> A government institution listed in Schedule 1 to the Access to Information Act or the schedule to the Privacy Act or any institution designated by the regulations of the Governor in Council as a government institution for the purposes of this Act.

I did not find that large enough. I regret most sincerely it was ruled out of order because I really believe that boards, commissions or Crown corporations established by or under an Act of Parliament should be included along with, as I said, Air Canada, CN and CBC.

The term "ministerial record" in turn refers to:

> A record of a member of the Queen's Privy Council for Canada who holds the office of a Minister and that pertains to that office, other than a record that is of a personal or political nature or that is under the control of a government institution.

That particular definition is of great ongoing concern to me and I shall come back to that as I point out what my hon. colleague just recently underscored for us.

Of those who made written submissions or appeared before the committee, the majority felt that these definitions were too narrow and vague. They argued, and I argued, strongly that the Act should also apply to the records of Parliament, royal commissions of inquiry and Crown corporations as well as other institutions not listed in the relevant schedules of the Access to Information Act and the Privacy Act, that is, Air Canada, the Canadian National Railway and the CBC. It was suggested as well by the Association of Canadian Archivists that judicial records also be included.

It was widely held that unless the National Archives had jurisdiction over these records, an important part of Canada's heritage might be lost. Without effective control, historically valuable records might be dispersed or destroyed and research would accordingly be extremely difficult or impossible to carry out.

The Social Science Federation of Canada expressed its understanding of the desire of vital institutions such as the CBC or Parliament to preserve their independence. However, it felt that such freedom could and should be limited slightly to ensure that historical records were fully preserved. In its view, alternative arrangements could be made. For example, records scheduled for retention to the physical custody of the originating agency, should the latter not want them to be placed in the National Archives indefinitely, would be fine. It was for these reasons that I and my colleague, the Hon. Member for Broadview—Greenwood (Ms. McDonald), proposed amendments which would have addressed these very concerns and ensured access to records which now could potentially be lost forever.

Apart from the question of the too narrow definition of "government institution", some concern was also expressed in relation to the definition of "ministerial record". The Institut d'Histoire de l'Amérique Française pointed out the difficulty of establishing a clear distinction between records of a personal or political nature on the one hand and those which strictly relate to the office of a Minister, on the other hand. It was felt that the archivists should have the right to view all ministerial records and decide, in co-operation with the Minister, what records should be preserved. Again, this clause is not truly inclusive of all the areas which should be part of our collective memory over time.

I could not have said more eloquently than my colleague, the Hon. Member for Humber—Port-au-Port—St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin), who expressed his concern that Watergate could not be found out now as we pass this Bill into law. He points out that this is called the "cover-up" clause. The Minister may laugh all she wishes. I hope she is correct and that I am proven incorrect. As the clause now stands, it becomes a serious cover-up clause and even the findings of the Parker Inquiry would have been damaged had this present ministerial record held and the information we required from the Archives not been recovered. I hope the Minister will pay attention to that particular reservation because it is most serious.

The Association of Manitoba Archivists and the Manitoba Council of Archives argued that a clearer definition of what constitutes a "ministerial record" should be found. I believe, and the amendment I proposed tries to make clear, that all ministerial records stemming from government activities ought to be deemed "public records" and transferred to the National Archives when the use for which they were originally created ceased. Documents relating to a Minister's private life and interests, of course, and perhaps political Party and constituency files, should be considered his or her private or personal papers and could be given to the Archives as, if and when the Minister might so desire. I really quite regret the decision taken in this area.

An enormous amount of space is required to store more than the billions of items, including 11 million photographs, maps and plans and 365 million pages of federal government documents which the Archives own. At present the Public Archives' holdings are scattered among seven different buildings throughout the National Capital region in addition to the main building which it shares with the National Library on Wellington Street. Not only are the spaces insufficient but the conditions within them, which I am sure the Minister knows, pose serious threats for the long-term preservation of the collections of the historical record, information and knowledge about our cultural heritage.

They are the background documents which define us as a distinct and proud nation. They are the record upon which we can build through film and videos our own heroes. They are key to much that is our future. Those stacks are overflowing in buidings which are not protected against humidity, theft, vandalism or water damage. As each day goes by, a lot of data, part of which is significant to our history, is being erased and is disappearing. It is not because the archivists do not care, it is because they do not have the resources to do their jobs properly.

Added to this is the fact that storage space is being shared with other organizations which all supposes control and security problems. Because holdings are spread among several locations, the records frequently have to be moved about. This repeated handling is another cause of damage, as are the changes in atmospheric conditions and contamination by insects. I sincerely hope that we can do something about this because the consequences of such a situation are disastrous.

During the last four years there have been no less than 45 emergencies. In some cases there were major floods causing irreparable damage and loss. In other cases, it was simply a leak or recurring leaks which damaged the collections. Over the long term, the documents in the Archives are attacked by mildew, oxidation, dust and unnecessary wear and tear. Now that the Government will have this new legislation, I sincerely hope a new facility will soon be announced to address these problems as I believe that successive Governments have, in the past many years, allowed this situation to arrive at such a critical state.

I would like at this moment to congratulate the Minister for bringing in this Bill. It is a fine New Year's present for Canadians as we become more sensitive to our place in world history and more appreciative of our profound cultural beauty and heritage. I hope we will have a new building to go along with the Minister's new Bill in the very new future.

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I have to concede, first, that my acquaintanceship with Archives policy has not been nearly as close as those who have sat through the excellent committee hearings that took place on this Bill. On the contrary, my role has been to use the Archives at different points in time. That is where I gleaned my knowledge of the Liberal Party in terms of its disastrous past and, hopefully, its limited future.

When the Bill was first introduced in the House it was a Bill which had in it a number of points that were quite seriously mistaken. This shows us how the parliamentary system by permitting input from sources outside the bureaucracy and outside the profession of archivists themselves is able to improve significantly on legislation.

When the Bill was first brought forward I recall making a speech in which I outlined some of the very considerable reservations which existed on the part of the Social Sciences Federation, for instance, with respect to the original Bill. It is a source of great pleasure to have seen this Bill referred to committee where the suggestions for change put forward by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Broadview—Greenwood (Ms. McDonald) and the Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) were heard. It has been wonderful to see those changes and to see that the Bill before us is in a much improved form.

In view of this tremendous progress we recognize that this is an important piece of legislation. If my colleague from Broadview—Greenwood were here she would point out that there are areas in which problems remain, as with any piece of legislation. Therefore, I am pleased to be able to support this Bill on behalf of our Party for third reading.

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey—White Rock—North Delta): Mr. Speaker, I have but a short comment to make. The Hon. Member for Mount Royal (Mrs. Finestone) said that we needed her amendment. She said that the most glaring example which showed when we needed it was Watergate. I wish to point out to her that Watergate did not use the archives to expose the crime. It would have been a little late at that time to expose that particular incident.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I wish to reply to the comment made by the Hon. Member for Surrey—White Rock—North Delta (Mr. Friesen). It may not have been exactly correct to use Watergate as an example. It would be more exact if we had used the Stevens Inquiry as an example. A great deal of material used in that inquiry came from the Archives. If those documents had been judged confidential, private or political they would not have been available to that inquiry and therefore the people of Canada would not have known how this gentleman abused the system.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the third time and passed.

SITTING SUSPENDED

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, there have been discussions among the Parties. As the House is aware, we have passed several pieces of legislation this afternoon which are proceeding through the other place. Therefore, I believe Your Honour would find unanimous consent with respect to the passage of the following motion:

That this House suspend sitting to the call of the chair.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it agreed?

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, we are being asked to agree to adjourn the House to an unknown time. It may be an hour from now. It may be a day from now or perhaps even a week from now. We are all anxiously waiting because we have been informed that the Government plans to table a Ways and Means motion with respect to the softwood issue.

If we are being asked to co-operate and provide an open-ended invitation to recall the House whenever, perhaps in the middle of the night or early tomorrow morning, I think it is not unrealistic to expect the Government to explain just what its agenda is, if in fact the Parliamentary Secretary knows, rather than for him to ask us to buy a pig in a poke and agree to return sometime in the future. That seems a little vague.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Before I recognize the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy), I would point out that the House cannot control what goes on in the Senate. I regret that there is nothing we can do about that. I will listen to other points of order. The Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. This is a matter which is not in the normal, ordinary routine simply waiting for the Senate to dispatch its business. We have been given some advance notice that there could be a Ways and Means motion tabled. We do not know for sure if it will be. Obviously, it will have major implications for us in terms of managing the business of the House and where we go from here.

It would seem to me that, since the Deputy House Leader asks for the co-operation of members of the Opposition, we can invite some co-operation in return. In this way we would be able to receive at short order what it is that the Government plans to do and whether in fact it is its intention when the House resumes to table a Ways and Means motion. I think that is the least that we can request from the Government.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I just want to add a few comments. First, we have had a rather good day today, a very profitable day as far as the Government is concerned in terms of Bills. We have operated on gentlemen's agreements all day. I would hate like heck to see the Government try to bootleg something while we are waiting somewhere for the House to be recalled. I wonder if we can have a commitment from the Parliamentary Secretary that once the Government has its act together as to whether or not it will table a Ways and Means motion we can be advised with an appropriate amount of time. Will the Chair tell us if the bells will ring to give us fairly good notice with respect to when the House will be recalled?

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate that we have moved a great deal of legislation through the House with the co-operation of both opposition Parties. This is important legislation which requires Royal Assent, especially the Bill with respect to the Unemployment Insurance Act to ensure that the benefits are paid appropriately in the various regions. I am sure no one wants to jeopardize that particular Bill.

Mr. Riis: Or be threatened.

Mr. Lewis: I will not respond to that comment.

My colleagues have asked me on the floor of the House about something about which I have no knowledge. However, if there is concern among my colleagues with respect to any action which may take place other than that action which we have discussed, that is, a motion with respect to the sitting of the House—if that wording is precise enough for some of my colleagues—and the return of the Chair for Royal Assent, I undertake on behalf of the Government to have the necessary consultations with my colleagues in the other two Parties prior to any such action taking place.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): With appropriate notice?

Mr. Lewis: Yes.

• (1640)

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I accept the commitment as I believe the hon. gentleman to be truthful. I will simply repeat my last question. Will the bells ring to give us notice of when the House is to be called back? How long will the bells ring?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): All hon. gentlemen are truthful.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, as we have heard on a number of occasions, this has been a most productive day. There has been co-operation on all sides of the House. It is now 20 minutes before the time at which we would normally adjourn and we are being asked to agree to adjourn the House until some time in the future.

Today is an important day. This is an extraordinary moment. We understand the government plans to introduce a Ways and Means motion which will have extremely important implications on all parts of Canada. This is not a usual Friday and it is not a usual last day before the Christmas recess.

Does the Parliamentary Secretary know approximately when we might expect to be recalled? Will it be within the hour? Will it be some time before midnight? Will it be some time tomorrow, or will we simply have to accept an open-ended invitation?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. I think that will be decided by the Chair. I will give the Hon. Member a half-hour bell, if that will be sufficient. We cannot determine what will happen in the other place. Does the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) agree that a half-hour bell would be sufficient?

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I would agree that a 15-minute bell would be sufficient. Again, I would like to think that we could have some understanding that the Government will expedite its own business, other than that with which we are dealing today, and if it wants to introduce legislation, it ought to do so at an appropriate time.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The sitting is suspended to the call of the Chair.

At 4.43 p.m. the sitting of the House was suspended.

SITTING RESUMED

The House resumed at 5.37 p.m.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, there has been discussion with the House Leaders of the other two Parties and I think you will find acceptance to the following motion being put:

That when the House adjourns this day, it shall stand adjourned until 11 o'clock a.m. on Monday, January 19, 1987;

That, for the purposes of Standing Order 4, the first sitting day in 1987, shall be deemed to have been January 12, 1987;

That on Monday, January 19, 1987, the House shall continue to sit between the hours of 6 o'clock p.m. and 9 o'clock p.m. for the purpose of considering Government Orders;

That on Tuesday, January 20 and Thursday, January 22, 1987, the House shall continue to sit between the hours of 1 o'clock p.m. and 2 o'clock p.m., and 6 o'clock p.m. and 9 o'clock p.m. for the purpose of considering Government Orders; and

That the proceedings in relation to Standing Order 66, on those days, shall be taken up at 9.00 o'clock p.m.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I have the honour to inform the House that a message has been received from the Senate informing this House that the Senate has passed Bill C-35, an Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the Government of Canada for the financial year ending March 31, 1987.

I also have the honour to inform the House that a message has been received from the Senate informing this House that the Senate has passed the following Bills, without amendment:

Bill C-14, an Act to amend the Excise Tax Act and the Excise Act;

Bill C-16, an Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971;

Bill C-17, an Act to amend the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act and the Income Tax Act and to repeal the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Gas Tax Act;

• (1740)

Bill C-23, an Act to amend the Income Tax Act and a related Act;

Bill C-25, an Act to authorize the divestiture of Canadair Limited and to provide for other matters in connection therewith;

Bill C-34, an Act to amend the Immigration Act, 1976; and Bill C-36, an Act to amend the Salaries Act.

THE ROYAL ASSENT

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I have the honour to inform the House that a communication has been received which is as follows:

Government House,
Ottawa

December 19, 1986

Sir,

I have the honour to inform you that the Honourable Gerald Eric LeDain, Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy Governor General, will proceed to the Senate Chamber today, the 19th day of December, at 4.55 p.m., for the purpose of giving Royal Assent to certain Bills.

Yours sincerely,
Léopold H. Amyot
Secretary to the Governor General

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity, while we still have a few minutes left, to offer the entire staff of the House of Commons and all those people who work so hard for us, our best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. I admit there is a new ambience in the House, and I must say it does make it more pleasant to work with the Government, although that is not necessarily always the case. However, I would also like to wish my hon. friends opposite a Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year, and I hope that 1987 will be a good year for us and perhaps for them as well, if they behave.

[English]

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I was going to make some comments before I move the motion to adjourn. However, since the opportunity has now presented itself, may I also, on behalf of our Party, express to you, Mr. Speaker, and to your colleagues, who occupy the chair at various times, our best wishes for a Merry Christmas, Happy New Year and happy holiday season. I want to thank you very much, from our standpoint, for your tremendous co-operation and support over the course of the last number of months. I also want to thank the Clerk of the House and the Table Officers for their support, as well as the Pages for the very good work they do, but most of all I appreciate the tremendous support and co-operation we received from the Table.

I wish all my hon. friends and colleagues a very happy holiday season. I know we are all extending the holiday break but I think it is well deserved. I wish you all a very happy holiday season.

A message was delivered by the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod as follows:

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Deputy to the Governor General desires the immediate attendance of this Honourable House in the Chamber of the Honourable the Senate.

Accordingly, Mr. Speaker, with the House went up to the Senate Chamber.

And being returned:

• (1750)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. I have the honour to inform the House that when the House went up to the Senate Chamber the Deputy Governor General was pleased to give, in Her Majesty's name, the Royal Assent to the following Bills:

Royal Assent

Bill C-4, an Act to amend the Railway Act—Chapter 49.

Bill C-20, an Act to amend the Senate and House of Commons Act—Chapter 50.

Bill C-26, an Act to amend the Coastal Fisheries Protection Act—Chapter 51.

Bill C-31, an Act to amend the Farm Improvement Loans Act—Chapter 52.

Bill C-32, an Act to amend the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act—Chapter 53.

Bill C-14, an Act to amend the Excise Tax Act and the Excise Act—Chapter 54.

Bill C-23, an Act to amend the Income Tax Act and a related Act—Chapter 55.

Bill C-16, an Act to amend the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1971—Chapter 56.

Bill C-25, an Act to authorize the divestiture of Canadair Limited and to provide for other matters in connection therewith—Chapter 57.

Bill C-17, an Act to amend the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act and the Income Tax Act and to repeal the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act—Chapter 58.

Bill C-34, an Act to amend the Immigration Act, 1976—Chapter 59.

Bill C-36, an Act to amend the Salaries Act—Chapter 60.

Bill S-3, an Act to amend and repeal The Alliance Nationale Consolidated Act, 1945.

Bill C-29, an Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the Government of Canada for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1987—Chapter 61.

Bill C-35, an Act for granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the Government of Canada for the financial year ending the 31st March, 1987—Chapter 62.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I move:

That the House do now adjourn.

Mr. Nickerson: Mr. Speaker, point of order—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret that I cannot hear the Hon. Member's point of order.

The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

• (1800)

Mr. Gauthier: Debate!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): On a point of order then.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret but that is not a debatable motion. Accordingly, pursuant to order made earlier this day, the House stands adjourned until Monday, January 19, 1987, at 11 o'clock a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

At 6.02 the House adjourned until January 19, 1987, pursuant to Special Order.

Monday, January 19, 1987

The House met at 11 a.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Mr. Speaker: I would like to welcome all Hon. Members back with a few words.

[Translation]

Before going on to Routine Proceedings, I would like to express my sincere thanks to all Hon. Members for the support they have given the Chair during the previous three months.

On this occasion I also wish to offer Hon. Members my best wishes and reiterate the commitment I made upon my election last fall.

This session's business promises to be very interesting, and I know that in the course of my duties I shall be able to count on the support of all Hon. Members.

[English]

I welcome all Hon. Members back. The Chair is convinced that things will be interesting. I welcome you all back in the best of fraternal amity which I hope will be extended across both sides of the House.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

WAYS AND MEANS

TABLING OF NOTICE OF MOTION

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 84(1), I have the honour to lay upon the table a notice of a Ways and Means motion to impose a charge on the export of certain softwood lumber products.

Pursuant to Standing Order 84(2), I ask that an Order of the Day be designated for the consideration of the said motion.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. On behalf of the Government I would like to welcome all Hon. Members back and to extend our best wishes to you, Sir. I observe from your opening comments that you are in your usual good humour. I think that will have a major bearing upon the proceedings of the House during the next while.

There have been short preliminary discussions pertaining to the notice of Ways and Means motion which the Hon. Minister of International Trade (Miss Carney) has just laid upon the table. The Bill is printed and ready for introduction. I am advised that the Bill is identical to the Ways and Means motion. We would be prepared to deal with this issue later this day. However, as you and Hon. Members know, Sir, this would require unanimous consent. I would not expect to receive an immediate response from the Opposition House Leaders, but I invite them to consider the matter. Perhaps they may want to advise us of their decision later this day.

A debate on this issue could take place at 3 o'clock this afternoon, or even at 6 o'clock inasmuch as we are on extended hours today, tomorrow and Thursday. I make that proposition to Hon. Members opposite. We are certainly prepared to try to work out arrangements which would be satisfactory to all.

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, we, of course, have not seen the Ways and Means motion on which the Bill is based. It will be understood that we will have to reserve our position until we have had an opportunity to study the motion. This is a very serious and complex matter. We will be willing to consider the proposal of the Government House Leader, but in view of our opposition to the course of action undertaken by the Government on softwood lumber as represented by the Ways and Means motion, we will have to give careful thought to the best way to deal with this.

While I reciprocate in one way the Government House Leader's wishes for the new year, I can only repeat the saying of an oriental culture, that it is either a blessing or a curse to extend the wish to people that they live in interesting times. I am sure we have begun another stage in that regard. To answer the question about how interesting they will be, we will have to consider the Government House Leader's proposal in light of our own assessment of the Ways and Means motion. I will get back to him on this as soon as possible later this day.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, there were both formal and informal discussions earlier today. Based on the content of the Bill, it would be our intention to provide total co-operation in an effort to begin debate later today. I note that the next item on the agenda is Statements by Ministers. Since the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) was not in the country and Parliament was not in session when the actual signing of the agreement took place, one presumes that on this the first sitting day of the new year, the Minister will stand in her place in a few moments and make a statement to the House of Commons to clarify a variety of issues. Her comments in that statement may help us to determine whether we plan to co-operate with the Government's initiative.

• (1110)

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to ensure that the discussion on that matter was finished.

POINTS OF ORDER

REQUEST FOR STATEMENT BY MINISTER—SOFTWOOD LUMBER

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, is it the intention of the Government not to use this first opportunity back to have the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) make a statement on the decision of the Government to proceed with the tax proposal?

Mr. Benjamin: Somebody. Anybody.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I think that is really not in order. Secondly, we have offered to debate this issue in its fullest, its content as well as the actions taken by the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) and by this Government. We would like to get on with the debate on the Bill in question, which seems to be occupying a great deal of the interest of Hon. Members opposite.

An Hon. Member: And the country.

Mr. Mazankowski: That is right, indeed, the country, and the Government are only too anxious to get into the meat of the Bill. We will be very glad to do so. Of course, I have today provided the opportunity to expedite that process and I do not think we should be sidetracked by any phony points of order.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An Hon. Member: That is no way to start off.

Mr. Gauthier: Happy new year.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, on a new point of order?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I think it is necessary that all Hon. Members consider carefully that at the moment, certainly as the Chair sees it, there does not seem to be any Minister rising on Statements by Ministers in this regard.

The Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) has asked specifically if at this time any statement is to be made by the Government. The Government has indicated not at this time. However, it is my understanding that what the Government is proposing is that the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) and the Parliamentary Leaders of the Official Opposition and the New Democratic Party consider whether it would be appropriate in their consideration to commence proceedings on the Ways and Means Motion and the legislation which goes with it which has been tabled by the announcement of the Minister this morning.

That is the situation as the Chair sees it. Unless someone has something of great pertinence to add, I think that is where the matter ought to be left until the appropriate Hon. Members and Ministers in the Chamber decide whether they have something to bring back to my attention later on today.

I am very grateful for the comments of all Hon. Members. However, I think that probably closes off this exchange. As I understand it, and I do not want any doubt about this, the Chair will be expecting some response back from the Government or the Opposition to indicate just how any discussions have gone which may well flow from the exchange of remarks this morning.

I would ask all Hon. Members, since we are back after Christmas and this is the new year, as of course I know all Hon. Members will want, to treat the interventions of all Hon. Members and Ministers with the greatest respect and dignity, gentleness and kindness.

Mr. Gauthier: May I just ask for your co-operation, Sir? I have asked for a copy of the Ways and Means Motion from the Table and I have been told just a few moments ago that a copy is not available to Members of Parliament before the next half hour or so. I wonder if the Table could accelerate the process so we can all receive copies of the so-called Ways and Means Motion.

Mr. Speaker: I thank the Hon. Member for the intervention and I will see what I can do to assist.

TRANSPORTATION—REQUEST FOR STATEMENT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, on a new point of order, I ask for some guidance. During the recess, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) saw fit to ask for the resignation of a very critical Cabinet Minister at a time when we are debating the most important piece of transportation legislation which this House has seen in many decades. Again I was assuming that under Statements by Ministers the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) or the Deputy House Leader would use the opportunity to give an explanation as to why the Government decided to act on this matter during the recess.

Mr. Speaker: I thank the Hon. Member for the point he raised. However, I think clearly the Minister should not rise on that point or any other at this time. I point out to all Hon. Members, and to Canadians in general, that there will, of course, be the usual Question Period this afternoon and Hon. Members, of course, will use their own discretion as to what matters will be raised. The Minister, I am sure, will be here to respond.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition under the provisions of Standing Order 106 which comes from people residing in Chatham and London and several other Ontario cities. They say the federal Government's proposal to change the Patent Act relating to prescription drugs will increase drug prices for Canadian consumers and severely restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy necessary prescription drugs. Therefore, they humbly pray and call upon Parliament to reject these proposals which will increase prescription drug prices for Canadians.

[Translation]

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Center): Mr. Speaker, I have here a petition signed by a number of Canadians who wish to express their concerns about to the Patent Act, especially in connection with the patents on pharmaceutical products, which will increase the price of drugs for Canadian consumers and make it increasingly difficult for many people to purchase the drugs they need. These Canadians are asking Parliament to reject the proposed changes that will increase the price of drugs.

[English]

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I have three different petitions to present. The first petition relates to changes to the patent law which would result in higher drug prices. The petitioners point out that this will unfairly hurt those who depend on the purchase of prescription drugs and will also create a problem for provincial drug plans.

The petitioners call upon Parliament to reject the proposals which will increase prescription drug prices for Canadians.

LOW-LEVEL FLIGHTS AT ARMED FORCES BASE AT GOOSE BAY

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): My second petition, Mr. Speaker, relates to the low level flight training of pilots of NATO countries at the Canadian Forces Base in Goose Bay, Labrador. The petitioners point out that this interferes with the life of the native people there and that there are other economic options which should be pursued. The petitioners call upon Parliament to ensure that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) ends all low-level flight training at the Goose Bay Canadian Forces Base and cease negotitions with NATO for a NATO base there.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE—POSSIBLE LOSS OF BENEFITS

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, my third petition relates to the question of fishermen and unemployment insurance. The petitioners fear there is a possibility that the Unemployment Insurance Program will be amended in such a way that they will lose the rights they have at present under the Unemployment Insurance Program. They point out the importance of that program to fishermen and call upon the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Bouchard) to reject any recommendations which would deprive them of their right to collect unemployment insurance.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, I too have a petition from several people who reside in Kitchener, Waterloo, New Hamburg, St. Thomas and other cities in Ontario with respect to Bill C-22. The petitioners are extremely concerned that tampering with the Drug Patent Act will result in much higher prices for prescription medication, and they call upon the Government to withdraw the Bill.

[Translation]

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present two petitions to the House of Commons. The first one bears the signatures of 50-odd Canadians from Alma, Harvey and Baie-Comeau, which happens to be the home town of the Prime Minister. They object to the statements of the Government concerning patents, especially as they relate to pharmaceutical products. They are convinced that the federal Government proposals will lead to higher provincial health insurance costs. They humbly call upon Parliament to reject these proposals which will boost drug prices paid by Canadian men and women.

• (1120)

[English]

Mr. Speaker, the second petition I have is signed by a number of Canadians who live in the region of Stoney Creek and the great riding of Hamilton Mountain. These citizens also object to the proposals of the federal Government with respect to changes to the Patent Act which they believe will severely restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy necessary prescription drugs. Because they believe these changes are another example of Canadian government concessions to the United States in the free trade negotiations, at the expense of average Canadians, they call upon the Government to reject the proposals and the increases in prescription drug prices for Canadians which would result.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I know that the residents of the entire Hamilton area should be well represented. However, the City of Stoney Creek is in the riding of Lincoln.

Mr. Speaker: I thank the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) for pointing out that geographic fact. Perhaps the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) and the other Hon. Member would like to discuss from exactly where these petitions come. However, under the rules of the House the petition will be received and dealt with in the appropriate manner.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and duty to present two petitions to the House today. The first is from an organization known as Senior Power. It is signed by a number of citizens who live in the City of Regina, the Queen City. In their petition they state that the Government's proposals to change the Patent Act relating to prescription drugs will increase drug prices for Canadian consumers and severely restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy necessary prescription drugs. Therefore they petition the Parliament of Canada to reject these proposals because they will increase drug prices for all Canadians.

TRANSPORTATION—ECONOMIC REGULATORY REFORM

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, the other petition I have is signed by a number of Canadians who live in Ontario, particularly in Sault Ste Marie, Bruce Mines and a number of locations in northern Ontario. In their petition they indicate that in their opinion transportation is a natural monopoly without economic regulation and that economic regulatory reform of the dimensions proposed by the Government in Bill C-18 will create unnecessary chaos in the transportation industry. They call upon this House to have the Government withdraw Bill C-18 and to retain public convenience and necessity as a fundamental factor in the development of public transportation policy in Canada.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I also have the honour to present a petition on behalf of Canadian residents who express their opposition to the Government's intention to change the Patent Act as it relates to prescription drugs. In their petition they state their belief that this measure will increase drug prices for Canadian consumers and severely restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy necessary prescription drugs. They also believe that this measure is another example of Canadian government concessions to the United States in the free trade negotiations at the expense of average Canadians.

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt—Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from residents of the Town of Humboldt who point out that the proposed changes to the Patent Act relating to prescription drugs will increases drug prices for Canadian consumers, severely restrict the ability of the average Canadian to buy necessary prescription drugs, unfairly hurt those Canadians whose health needs require the purchase of prescription drugs on an ongoing basis, and that this measure will result in higher costs to provincial government drug plans. Therefore, they call upon Parliament to reject these proposals which will increase prescription drug costs for all Canadians.

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition which, as with those we presented last year, carries forward the objections many Canadians have to the suggested changes which are now before the House with respect to drug legislation. In this case the petition is from citizens living in the Province of Ontario. In particular they object to the considerable concessions which they see being made in this case, as in so many others, with respect to and in response to the free trade discussions with the United States.

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join with my colleagues in presenting one of a number of petitions received in protest to the changes in the Patent Act which will ultimately result in higher drug prices. They also protest the fact that this legislation represents another example of obsequious concessions to the Americans to obtain a free trade agreement.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 106 I have the honour to present a petition on behalf of a number of Canadians who are concerned about the Government's proposal to change the Patent Act, which they claim will increase drug prices to Canadian consumers and severely restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy necessary prescription drugs. They call upon the Government to reject these proposals which they feel will increase prescription drug prices for Canadians.

RESEARCH—OPPOSITION TO CUT-BACKS

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I would also like to present a petition on behalf of a number of Canadians who are concerned about government cut-backs to the National Research Council which they claim is causing disruption of scientific acitivity and threatening the economic future as well as the health and safety of Canadians. The petitioners ask the Government to rescind the funding cut-backs to the National Research Council, including all the consequent terminations and cut-backs in research activities and to provide funding for the space program from sources other than the NRC budget or any existing scientific program. They ask the Government to develop a national policy for research, science and technology based upon a target of 2.5 per cent of the GNP to be devoted to research and development in Canada.

COMMISSION OF INQUIRY INTO UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

Question No. 50—Mr. Rodriguez:

1. (a) Since its inception, what was the total cost incurred by the commission of inquiry into unemployment insurance (b) what was the total renumeration in salary and expenses received by the Commissioners?

2. To date, what was the number of employees employed by the Commission and how much have they been paid?

3. Did the Commission award contracts to study the unemployment insurance system and, if so (a) how many (b) at what cost (c) to whom?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): 1. (a) The total cost was $4,671,000 (from inception to November 30, 1986). There are approximately $530,000 in outstanding commitments.

	Honorarium	Expenses
Claude Forget	$174,937	$ 34,862
Roy Bennett	$ 36,600	$ 20,642
Mo Morgan	$ 75,800	$ 37,064

DSS—MOVE OF MONT-JOLI OFFICE TO RIMOUSKI, QUE.

Question No. 52—Mr. Boudria:

1. Did the Department of Supply and Services recently move its Mont-Joli office to Rimouski, Quebec and, if so, for what reason?

2. What was the (a) total cost (b) cost for (i) moving (ii) leasing new offices (iii) purchase or lease of new furniture (iv) relocation of employees (v) rental on the vacated location (vi) legal fees?

3. Where there other costs involved with this move and, if so, what were they?

Hon. Monique Vézina (Minister of Supply and Services): 1. The Mont-Joli office was moved on November 28, 1986. The recommendation to transfer the operations of our office from Mont-Joli to Rimouski was proposed in a study which was done by the Quebec Region Supply Centre on May 26, 1986.

This recommendation noted the following: (i) Rimouski is the largest commercial and industrial centre of the region; consequently, it allows us to get closer to our most important suppliers.

(ii) It is preferable to operate in the same area as our principal suppliers, since this facilitates our contacts with them, and permits us to accomplish more efficiently our objectives related to: (a) Suppliers awareness program (b) Identification of new sources of supply (c) Activities aimed at the development of businesses

(iii) The suppliers of the Mont-Joli region will not be affected, since they still will have access, as in the past, to the federal government contracts.

2. (a) See answer to 2(b).

(b) (i) Cost related to the moving: $1,985.20. This amount will be the responsibility of Public Works Canada.

(ii) Leasing cost of the new offices: $6,650 from December 1, 1986 to March 31, 1987.

(iii) Purchasing of leasing cost of new furniture: None. (No purchasing or leasing of furniture).

(iv) Relocation of two employees: Real cost estimated at $3,200.

(v) In the event that Public Works Canada cannot find new tenants for the space at the Mont-Joli office (120.8 square meters), Public Works Canada estimates that it would cost Supply and Services Canada, $975. a month for the remainder of the 18 month lease.

(vi) No legal fees were incurred.

3. Reinstallation of telephone lines. This cost if $457.80.

COMMISSION OF INQUIRY INTO UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

Question No. 53—Mr. Rodriguez:

Since the inception of the commission of inquiry into unemployment insurance what was the total renumeration in salary and expenses received by each Commissioner?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): See reply to Question No. 50 answered this day.

[Translation]

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: The questions enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary have been answered. Shall the remaining questions stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

MOTION TO ADJOURN UNDER S.O. 29

TRADE—PROPOSED EXPORT TAX ON CANADIAN SOFTWOOD LUMBER

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 29 I ask leave to move a motion to adjourn the House for the purpose of discussing a specific and important matter requiring urgent consideration, namely, the signing and implementing of an agreement with the United States to impose a 15 per cent export tax on certain Canadian softwood lumber products being shipped to the United States.

This agreement deprives the Canadian industry of up to $600 million annually, throws thousands of forestry workers out of work, imperils Canadian sovereignty, allows the U.S. Government the power to veto actions of the federal and provincial levels of Government to assist Canadians in the industry, thereby invading our sovereignty, imposes a retroactive tax on Canadians without parliamentary approval, or even parliamentary debate, and sets an unwelcome and dangerous precedent on Canada's ability to establish its own natural resource policy and its own export potential.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

• (1130)

Mr. Speaker: I advise Hon. Members that I have received notice of the application that has just been made to the Chamber by the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner). I have also received an application for an emergency debate on the same subject matter.

I think that the Hon. Member for Fundy—Royal (Mr. Corbett) wishes to make some comments, and I welcome those comments at this time.

Mr. Bob Corbett (Fundy—Royal): I was delighted this morning to hear the Government make the offer of introducing the legislation at the earliest possible convenience. I was also pleased to hear the response from the NDP that they were in agreement with that. I also hope that the Liberals will give their consideration to that offer by the Government. If debate is entered into today on the Bill, this would make my application redundant. I will await your decision, and the decision of the Official Opposition.

My request under Standing Order 29 is based on the recent decision to impose a 15 per cent export tax on softwood lumber which has caused grave concern among Maritime lumber producers. Many producers fear for the economic viability of their operations, and the jobs dependent upon their competitiveness.

The agreement imposes the tax upon all but five Maritime softwood producers that previously enjoyed exemptions from such action. The consequence of such a decision creates a situation whereby the livelihood of Maritime softwood producers is threatened by an action designed to resolve a problem created by extremely low stumpage fees in British Columbia, Alberta, Ontario, and Quebec.

Many lumber producers fear that they will not survive if they are required to pay not only the highest stumpage fees in Canada, but also an additional 15 per cent tax on their exported products. There is also a very real concern that the lumber market within the Maritime provinces may be swamped by western lumber seeking refuge from the tax.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member is referring to the letter that he has sent to the Speaker, which I have read. In view of the fact that the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) was very succinct on the basis of the application, I am sure that the Hon. Member would perhaps feel that the point has been made. All Hon. Members, and the voters that he represents, will know that that matter is receiving the attention of the Chair. I thank the Hon. Member for his intervention.

MOTION TO ADJOURN UNDER S.O. 29

FREE TRADE NEGOTIATIONS—CANADA-U.S. AUTO PACT

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 29, I ask leave to propose a motion to adjourn the House for the purpose of discussing a specific and important matter requiring urgent consideration, namely, the new American demands, as expressed by Chief Negotiator Murphy, that the Canada-U.S. Auto Pact be made an integral part of the free trade negotiations with the United States. This serious development demands immediate parliamentary discussion because of the importance of the continuation of the Pact and its safeguards for the preservation of thousands of Canadian jobs, and the well-being of the entire Canadian economy.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker: I am very grateful to the Right Hon. the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra)), the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray), and the Hon. Member for Fundy—Royal (Mr. Corbett) for their interventions. Both issues are very important to all Canadians but, especially in view of statements made earlier in this House by the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) and other Hon. Members, I think that the best thing I can do now is defer my ruling until 3 o'clock this afternoon.

POINT OF ORDER

ROYAL ASSENT—DIGNITY OF PROCESSION

Mr. Dave Nickerson (Western Arctic): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order which relates to an occurrence that took place immediately prior to adjournment on December 19, 1986. This is the first opportunity I have had to bring it to your attention.

At that time Members of this House were proceeding, in accordance with the desire of His Honour, the Deputy Excellency the Governor General, from the Commons to the Senate Chamber to witness the Royal Assent to Bills. The traditional and solemn procession was invaded by TV cameras and boom microphones. I believe at the time they were after the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski). The operators literally became part of the procession. Because many of them were walking backwards, they physically impeded the Members who were participating in this procession. There is no objection to the taking of pictures from the sidelines. But to become part of the procession is surely contrary to the rules that we have in effect.

Is it possible, Your Honour, that action be taken so that this is not repeated, and so that in future this procession can take place with all due decorum?

Mr. Ouellet: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order.

I would like to indicate to you, Mr. Speaker, that if the House implemented the specific recommendation that the McGrath Report made in this regard, that is, to abolish this practice, the incident the Hon. Member talks about would not have occurred. I hope that the new Government House Leader (Mr. Mazankowski) in his wisdom will make sure that this one small recommendation of the report is implemented as quickly as possible.

Mr. Speaker: I wish to advise the Hon. Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson), and the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet), that the Chair will take with some concern the representations that have been made. We will consider what can be done to maintain the dignity of these proceedings, if indeed it is appropriate to continue these proceedings in the manner in which they are presently done. It is a matter which is before the board of internal inquiry. I know that the Hon. Member for Papineau will ensure that the matter will be on the agenda this week. I thank the Hon. Member for the intervention.

Orders of the Day.

NATIONAL TRANSPORTATION ACT, 1986

MEASURE TO ESTABLISH

The House resumed from December 19, 1986, consideration of the motion of Mr. Crosbie (St. John's West) that Bill C-18, an Act respecting national transportation, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, today the House is about to continue debate on Bill C-18, also known as the National Transportation Act, 1986. The purpose of this Bill is to revise the existing National Transportation Act introduced by the Hon. Jack Pickersgill in 1967, legislation that has served the Canadian economy very well during the past twenty years.

Now, it is perfectly normal to want to make certain changes to improve a piece of legislation, but this attempt by the government to turn the whole legislation upside down and question every single aspect in the transportation sector is quite frankly nothing short of absurd. The previous Government admitted there was a case for amending the National Transportation Act and that there was room for improvement. In May 1984, my colleague, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy), then Minister of Transport, was the first to suggest gradual deregulation of the transportation industry. At the time, our Government was thinking of a more flexible regulatory framework that would be better adapted to new economic configurations and the changing realities of the transportation sector.

We wanted a framework with less regulation that would enhance the development of Canada's transportation industry. At the same time, we wanted to ensure that guarantees would be provided for greater economic competitiveness.

Our policy not only had vision, it was firmly anchored in the realities of the day. Unlike the extremely bulky Bill we are considering today, my colleague, the former Minister of Transport, proposed a strategy for regulatory flexibility that could be defined as a step-by-step policy. At first, the strategy would basically deal with the air transportation sector and, in this respect, the Government at the time had provided a series of guarantees and specific conditions for deregulation in this sector.

However, by deciding to change everything at the same time, the present Government has raised a veritable wave of panic in many areas of the transportation industry, including air, trucking and railway transportation.

In fact, if we look at the alarming number of takeovers by large carriers of small airlines during the past two years, it is clear that the latter are very uneasy about this Bill.

In the trucking industry, for instance, people say there is a very real danger that the Canadian industry will be completely taken over by American interests. In the railway sector, CP Rail is afraid it will have to close down by 1992 if this Bill becomes law.

Although we endorse the principle of orderly deregulation, Mr. Speaker, our Party cannot accept the way this Bill has been brought forward nor the expediency of the legislative procedure chosen by the Government. We are strongly opposed to a series of measures contained in this Bill which, we believe, will be very harmful to the Canadian economy for years to come.

We also deplore the fact that this Bill does not contain the regulations required to establish, among other things, definite and credible safety standards for air passengers, as well as measures to guarantee adequate services for handicapped travelers and other provisions to protect jobs in the transport industry. There is nothing to assure us that deregulation will not entail widespread lay-offs, particularly in the air trasnsport sector. We oppose this Bill for its failure to offer guarantees to those who work in this major Canadian industry. Absolutely nothing tells us that our national transportation system will continue to be—as it has been in the past and must indeed remain in future—the cornerstone of regional expansion in Canada.

What I am saying is more than my own personal conviction, more than the opinion of my colleagues of the Liberal Party of Canada who have examined this matter, for it reflects as well the views of a great many organizations, associations, and interest groups which have made it quite clear to the Government that this Bill has to be amended.

Regretfully I must say to the Minister of Transport (Mr. Crosbie) that between June 26 last when the Bill—then C-126—was first tabled and November 4, 1986, when this Bill C-18 was introduced for first reading in this new session, the Government has turned a deaf ear to the quite legitimate representations made by a good many organizations representing thousands of Canadians—proof positive that this Government cares precious little about consultation as a democratic process. Worse still, the transport industry and Canadian consumers will bear the dire consequences of the Conservative Government's indifference or stubborness.

Mr. Speaker, the review of a blueprint act of such basic importance for the social and economic equilibrium of the country would have deserved a more balanced approach by the Government. It should have called for a great deal of caution in measuring the impact of such a de-regulation exercise, first, on passenger safety; second, on consumers, especially as concerns air fares; third, on jobs in the industry, as I mentioned earlier; fourth, on what is an acceptable level of foreign control; and finally, on regional development.

Unfortunately, the position of the Government seems to be set in concrete. Nothing has changed since publication of the paper "Freedom to Move".

You will recall that the Standing House of Commons Committee on Transport held public hearings throughout the country to collect the views of the public on the paper "Freedom to Move".

My colleague for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin) is quite right to remind me that this Parliamentary Committee should normally have held hearings in all provinces and not only in major centers, but also in rural areas and the remote regions of our country since tranport in such a vast land as Canada has to meet the needs not only of urban dwellers, but perhaps even more so of people in remote areas.

However, the Committee held hearings only in four cities. In addition what I found was that the great majority if not all of those who made submissions to the committee or expressed their views about this initiative of the Conservative Government were opposed to it and to the Government's wish to deregulate transport in Canada so quickly and completely. The only witnesses we heard who supported the Government initiative were the shippers, the large shipping companies who see in this initiative a possibility of lowering the cost of moving their goods and products.

Of course, we recognize the need to develop a more effective and less costly transport service in Canada, but we maintain that this should not be done at the cost of other considerations and factors which are just as important. There must remain a fair balance in transport otherwise there will be very serious dangers and even the risk of a disaster in Canadian transport. I fear that some of the effects of implementing such a piece of legislation will not bring about lower transport prices as hoped by Canadian shippers but will probably mean higher rates for them in the middle- or long-term. What they want in the short-term could in the long-term provide more disadvantages than advantages. Yet, this Government has refused to listen not only to the comments made before the Committee, but also to what was said when Bill C-126 was introduced. Indeed, at the Standing Transport Committee, the Conservative Members themselves expressed certain reservations about the Government initiative. Since they did not go far enough, the Liberal Party and the New Democratic Party had to present minority reports to object to the majority report supported exclusively by Conservative Members of the Committee, even though many of these Members recognized several of the dangers inherent in the Government initiative. We would have expected at the very least that the Government would have taken into account the recommendations of its own Members, which it did not do in introducing Bill C-126.

I must say that Bill C-18 now under consideration is essentially a carbon copy of Bill C-126.

At a press conference, when the Minister of Transport was asked by a reporter what difference there was between the two Bills, the Minister did not know himself. He simply replied that there had been only a few technical changes. It is obvious that the Government has been deaf to the many representations made by the public and organizations opposed to its first Bill, for instance the Canadian Trucking Association.

• (1150)

[English]

The Canadian Trucking Association, following the presentation of Bills C-126 and C-127, wrote to the Minister indicating its opposition. In writing to me, the Executive Director had this to say concerning the Government:

> Hopefully they will start over, but in their present form, these Bills are a disaster for the private sector common carrier transportation industry and truckers especially. In addition they have done nothing to even the playing field. U.S. truckers enjoy huge tax advantages and so forth. One would almost think that the future viability of the common carrier concept is no longer considered important in some respects.

That is the view of the Canadian Trucking Association about Bill C-126. As this legislation has been tabled again without amendment, the view of the Association will be the same.

Second, I have received a confidential representation from a federal public servant. He is very much concerned about the doing away of the air transport committee which has a responsibility to monitor the entrance and the exit of airlines. He talks about the potential pitfalls of totally eliminating economic entry control in abolishing the test of public convenience and necessity, or the ignoring of certain elements of the test which has been carried out by the air transport committee, since May, 1984. This federal public servant has told me that he has been speaking not only on his own behalf but on behalf of a number of people who have spent their lives and careers working in this area.

Mr. Crosbie: Malarky, junk.

Mr. Ouellet: The Government not only does not want to listen to them but it is totally ignoring their advice and point of view.

Mr. Crosbie: Give us his name.

Mr. Ouellet: Also, the opposition to the rail deregulation as it is contemplated by the Government has been very much opposed by the two railways, the CPR and the CNR. The following is CP Rail's position on Bill C-126:

> If Bill C-126 were adopted in its present form, its plausible consequence as they relate to CP Rail are predictable.
> Strong downward pressure will be exerted on rates. Given the unlikelihood of increased traffic volume and that there is little, if anything, in the Bill that will produce significant cost reductions, net income will fall. The resultant deteriorating financial condition of the railway enterprise and the increased risk of railway investments will limit the availability and raise the cost of external financing.
> These factors, in combination with the decline in internally generated funds, will impair the ability of the private enterprise railway to finance the capital and maintenance expenditures essential for a safe, efficient and reliable railway system.

The Minister has totally ignored these representations. He also ignores the view of a senior official of the CNR who spoke on regulatory reform and railway viability at a conference in Vancouver last October. He was speaking about Bill C-126 which had not passed in previous sessions but was to be re-introduced in the new session. He said:

> I am hopeful that when the Bill is reintroduced into the House, our legislators will carefully assess the long-term impact it could have on Canadian shippers.
> Quite frankly, I believe that unless significant changes are made to the content of that Bill, we can expect results that will be unsettling to the transportation industry and, in the end, will not give shippers what they need.

That is the view of a senior vice-president of CN Rail and the Minister and the Government have totally ignored that point of view.

[Translation]

People are ignored not only in the transportation industry: even provincial Premiers are. Indeed, the Premier of New Brunswick, on behalf of the Council of Maritime Premiers, wrote to the Minister of Transport asking him to amend his legislation. He also wrote my colleague, the Hon. Member for Westmorland—Kent (Mr. Robichaud), in December 1986, saying how much he was concerned and disappointed with the attitude of the Canadian Minister of Transport, who had failed to amend Bill C-18 as suggested by the Atlantic Premiers in the representations they made when Bill C-126 was originally introduced.

Once again, the Minister remained stone deaf to the representations asking for amendments to the Bill.

Union lobbying against transport deregulation is well known.

The Canadian Labour Congress held a press conference to indicate how much it opposed the kind of deregulation proposed by this Conservative Government, and to ask for amendments to the legislation if the Governement intended to proceed with the Bill, on the subject especially of job security for transportation workers.

Once more, the Minister remained totally unyielding on the representations that were made.

I am therefore forced to conclude, Mr. Speaker, that the Government has already cast its position in concrete, and that Mr. Keith Thompson, the official who has been acting on behalf of the Government since the beginning, who has met with all the parties concerned, who has had discussions with all those in the area of transportation who have a position to defend or interests to represent, has politely given the brush off to all those who met him and were told that the Bill is already drafted, and is not subject to change.

I would therefore like to tell the Minister it would be wiser to listen to the various parties involved in transportation who have amendments to suggest, rather than listen to Mr. Keith Thompson who apparently has decided the Bill was his baby and has to remain unchanged is spite of everything. Indeed Conservatives Members should remember that not so long ago they opposed the previous Government when we insisted on putting through the Bill amending the National Energy Program, and I would remind him of what a representative of a major Canadian association opposing the legislation was telling me recently. I would like to quote him, just to give the Minister food for thought:

• (1200)

[English]

"Keith Thompson will be to the transportation legislation what Ed Clark was to the national energy policy". I hope the Minister will reflect on this statement made by a representative of a national organization who is very much afraid that this official will play such a role that the Minister will have no chance at all to put his own imprimatur on the legislation.

Mr. Crosbie: Should we send him to Paris?

Mr. Ouellet: He is afraid that this official has already decided what will be in the legislation which was first drafted in the document entitled Freedom to Move and then introduced in Bill C-126. Obviously the current Minister did not have very much to say because he tabled Bill C-18, a Bill which is almost identical to the previous legislation.

According to the people to whom I have talked, Mr. Thompson is running the show. He has already decided what the legislation will contain. No matter what the Minister, Conservative back-benchers, the public at large, the various associations or the Opposition think, this is the way Mr. Thompson thinks it should be. I do not know if it is true—

Mr. Crosbie: It's not. Let me reassure you.

Mr. Ouellet: So far there is no evidence to the contrary. When we begin studying this legislation in committee, we will know who is running the show. If the Minister is present, accepting or moving amendments, then we will know that he is the one who is carrying the ball on behalf of the Government. Until then, the impression will be that he is not running his own Department and that he does not know what the legislation he has submitted to the House is all about. I do hope that he will come forward with great interest and a sense of understanding for the various representations for amendments to this legislation.

[Translation]

It is with this in mind that we in the Liberal Party are preparing to discuss the Bill. As I said earlier, the principle of deregulation by itself, to promote stronger, more useful competition in transportation, is something that we certainly look forward to. We have no objection whatsoever to an orderly deregulation that would lead to greater competition in Canada's transportation industry. But our view is that, currently, the Government is totally insensitive to the representations that were made and we believe there are nefarious ramifications to that kind of roughshod deregulation as proposed by the Minister.

We thus want to be to a certain extent the spokespeople of all those Canadians whose views were not considered by the Minister when this Bill was drafted and we want to join them to denounce a legislation which we now feel to be inadequate.

We are specifically thinking of the safety area. We regret that the Bill does not contain any provision to prevent conditions which could effectively reduce air safety. The American experience teaches us that this is a real danger and that it is absolutely necessary to make sure that safety will not be jeopardized. The facts are as follows: In his report to the House of Commons for the fiscal year ended March 31 1985, the Auditor General, Kenneth Dye, stated that Transport Canada had been unable to check all carriers under its jurisdiction at least once a year. We cannot maintain that such safety standards are high and deregulation should in no way be introduced before strict and non-equivocal safety measures are implemented. The Liberal Party of Canada for sure will strongly object to any policy threatening the safety of airplane passengers in Canada.

In the United States, air travel is not as safe as before deregulation came into effect. The rate of fatal accidents and casualties has increased. Ronald Cape, President of the American company CETUS, states and I quote: "Commercial flights are not as safe as before deregulation". And the President of Bache-Prudential, Mr. Harry Jacobs Jr. says: "To travel by plane is now much more dangerous." We merely want to make sure that what happened in the United States will not happen in Canada.

The tendency of this Tory Government to copy the Americans is really annoying. Why is it that every time something happens in the United States, a Conservative minister or Prime Minister always tries immediately to copy the Americans? I have nothing against the Government copying them when they do something good, but I certainly do not want us to copy what they have done in the United States in the area of air transport deregulation.

I have just mentioned that there is a major deficiency in the United States in the area of safety, an area that the Minister's bill has not provided for and that should be clearly stated with solid guarantees for air transport users in Canada. We know also that since deregulation was implemented, the number of employees in the air transport industry in the United States has greatly decreased.

And we are now witnessing a major concentration of American airlines. Due to deregulation, the concentration in the United States has been such recently that six airline companies now control as much as 80 per cent of the market in that country.

We have been quite concerned ever since the Government announced its desire to move forward with an urgent, quick and complete deregulation. A similar situation now exists in Canada: Since CP Air was bought by Pacific Western Airlines, two companies, Pacific Western Airlines and Air Canada, now control over 90 per cent of the Canadian market.

In my opinion, this is quite the opposite of what the Minister of Transport (Mr. Crosbie) himself said in the House when he introduced his Bill. On December 19, the Minister stated, and I quote:

> The legislation that we are now presenting to the House has as its purpose the increase of competition in air—

It is the Minister of Transport himself, as reported in Hansard on page 2318, who said so. But the fact is that the Government has done nothing since the Minister announced its deregulation project to stop take-overs in the air transportation industry; not only has it done nothing to oppose these take-overs and prevent a greater concentration in Canada, but it has even encouraged it through remarks made recently in Parliament in reply to the question of an Opposition member.

Under the previous administration, before the Conservatives came to power, we had not only the two major national companies, Air Canada and CP Air, but also several important and profitable regional companies, like Pacific Western Airlines and Nordair which were doing very well, and others like Eastern Provincial, Quebecair, Air Ontario which were hanging on quite well to their shares of the market.

It is becoming obvious that deregulation is bringing a greater concentration in the air transportation industry, whereas the Government was saying, when it introduced the Bill, that one the three basic principles of deregulation was increased competition among air carriers. What is happening is just the opposite. The Government will have to show us how all these take-overs will translate into increased competition.

Principles and rules of economics tell us that the greater the concentration, the less competition there is. It seems that the Government does not understand that since, as I said earlier, it did not chose to reject any of the nine take-overs which took place since it came to power.

In our opinion, this cannot continue. At the present time, Mr. Speaker, the transportation sector is in a state of chaos. I was talking a moment ago about uncertainty in the trucking industry, about the deep and understandable concerns of owners of trucking companies who feel they have been abandoned in an untenable situation.

Secondly, the two main railway companies in the country, CP Rail and CN Rail, are opposed to the Bill as proposed by the Minister while air transportation companies are changing ownership at a frantic rate.

It is clear that this Government has lost control of the situation in the transportation industry. Because of the Government's desire to deregulate too fast and too soon, this particular sector of our economy which has always been prosperous and provided steady and well-paid employment for thousands of workers across Canada, may be in for a very difficult time and fall prey to foreign interests.

What we cannot accept in this Bill is that it fails to put any restrictions on foreign control. Is this Government going to leave the sector wide open to anyone who wants to buy? In the United States, foreign control in the transportation industry is limited to 25 per cent. A foreign company cannot own more than 25 per cent of a transportation enterprise in the United States. Members of the Standing Committee on Transport and many intervenors who gave their comments on the Bill suggested this kind of restriction, but the Government, through its Minister, has never been willing to state, in no uncertain terms, that the transportation sector was one industry that had to remain Canadian. At no time did the Minister formally state that he would take steps to ensure that our major airlines and major trucking companies would remain in Canadian hands and that the transportation sector in general would remain in the hands of Canadian companies.

We are afraid that sudden deregulation will enable foreign interests, and especially U.S. interests, to take over the many trucking companies and airlines that would be unable to compete as a result of concentration of the industry among a few large companies, companies that will become far too powerful and thus be in a position to compete unfairly with the few small entrepreneurs that survive or try to survive in the transportation sector.

In concluding, I may say this Bill will need some thorough changes if it is to be at all useful to Canada's transportation sector. I hope that, in future, the Government will be more receptive than it has been up to now to proposals for change with respect to this important legislation.

[English]

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, if and when passed, Bill C-18 is to be called a National Transportation Act. It is in the main a copy of the practices in the U.S. and results from their practices. I think the Bill should be known as a Bill to jeopardize safety in transportation. It should be known as an anti-service Bill. It should be known as an anti-competitive Bill. It should be known as an anti-sovereignty Bill.

Mr. Hees: Make up your mind.

Mr. Benjamin: It should be known as an anti-regional economic development Bill, which is mentioned in the preamble to the legislation. This Bill enhances discrimination in transportation. We need a Bill which embodies good regulation, which is the real choice.

At the outset I would like to say that if, as, and when this Bill receives second reading, it must go to the Standing Committee on Transportat and hearings must be held all across Canada. The exercise carried out by the Government in its White Paper, Freedom to Move, was totally inadequate. It took a great deal of arguing, persuading and fighting by myself and my colleagues, the Member for Thunder Bay—Atikokan (Mr. Angus) and the Member for Winnipeg—Birds Hill (Mr. Blaikie) among others, to finally persuade the Government to allow the committee to travel. However, we were limited to three locations outside of Ottawa; we went to Vancouver, Winnipeg and Halifax. We missed seven provinces and both territories. As well, we left out the villages of Montreal and Toronto. That was a most inadequate opportunity for the people of Canada to present their views on a major government policy. That is why Canadians from all parts of the country must have the opportunity to express their views on this legislation.

The New Democratic Party is not arguing against up-dating the National Transportation Act. We believe that legislation of this magnitude must be up-dated from time to time. Twenty years have passed since the present Act was put in place. We believe that all regulations should be reviewed almost annually. Obsolete regulations should be gotten rid of, valid ones should be up-dated, and new ones to deal with new developments, practices and technology in transportation should be devised.

We also believe that the Canadian Transport Commission, or under any other name, should be streamlined to allow it to act more quickly and be more responsive. It must be more conscious of the needs of transportation consumers from the various regions of Canada as well as the needs of the transporters.

We believe that the Bill should not be dealt with until all the safety provisions and inspection facilities are in place and functioning. We know that the Government has proposed a railway safety board and that it is in the process of putting into place a national air safety board. We agree with that. However, it will take quite a while to get these boards established and functioning. We know that the Government has increased, to a certain degree, the number of inspectors. However, that is not nearly enough. Even without new legislation it would take many months, if not years, to obtain, train, and put in place the number of inspectors required. Once all of these items are in place and functioning we could consider an up-dated regime for national transportation legislation.

This legislation flies in the face of the very declaration of national transportation policy outlined in the Bill. The ramifications of this legislation and the eventual effects of it, if passed in its present form, will not provide a "safe, economic, efficient and adequate network of viable and effective transportation services" for most of the people and regions of Canada. The Bill ignores the economic imperative for the provision of equitable transportation services, rates, and fares for all of Canada. In fact, it will return this country to the situation of many decades ago; travellers, shippers and receivers will again be discriminated against because of where they happen to live, or where they happen to manufacture, grow, produce or process their products.

That inevitable discrimination will increase alienation felt by many Canadians in many parts of Canada. It will weaken our confederation and destroy our decades of effort for nationhood and co-operative federalism. It will further jeopardize our sovereignty and independence. I will have more to say about that later.

This legislation will provide access and advantage for United States railway and trucking companies in Canada which will not be available to Canadian railroads and trucking companies in the United States. That is a blatant betrayal of our independence. It is another example of the supine sell-out of our nationhood which is so evident in the free trade negotiations and the softwood lumber episode.

Earlier I mentioned discrimination in transportation against certain producers because of where they happen to be located. This Bill would have us make a 180 degree turn in what Canada has been trying to achieve for over 100 years. The Bill ignores Canadian history and, even worse, ignores the present Canadian reality. Historically transportation legislation and regulation have attempted, albeit not always successfully, to give each part of the country a reasonably equal opportunity to compete in far away domestic and foreign markets. It has attempted to require all Canadians to share in the cost of the various means of transporting goods right across our nation and to the rest of the world. Thus, it was no accident and no quirk of some contemporary political ideology that over the decades many transportation measures evolved within the framework of national transportation policy which were efforts to achieve as large a degree of equity of treatment in the costs of transportation as was possible in our vast land.

I would like to remind the House of some efforts which have been made by this nation since the late 1800s. Recall the Crows Nest Pass Agreement of 1897, the statutory grain rates of the 1920s, and, presently, the Western Grain Transportation Act. As bad as it is, it is at least an effort to share in the costs of moving grain to export positions. There were the "at and east" rates, the Bridge rates, the Maritime Freight Assistance Act and the Atlantic Provinces Freight Assistance Act. There were special rates on settlers effects and on the products which settlers produced which were, in effect, in place and being used right up to the late 1950s. In addition, there was a system of agreed charges, which is still in place, which are negotiated among shippers, receivers and transporters. There have been many other arrangements which show the lengths that were gone to by this country to achieve a goal of reasonable equity of treatment in transportation.

This Bill ignores the Canadian reality. It fails miserably to take into account our geography, our sparse, widely-scattered population, our harsh climate and our sovereignty and independence. It returns us to the jungle of the so-called market forces, the myth that competition alone will provide for all of our country. The legislation would have us go back to the 18th and 19th centuries. It would leave us to the "invisible hand" of the market forces.

I would like to remind my Conservative friends that even the Conservatives in the early 1900s finally realized that that does not work. It particularly does not work in a nation as large as this, with our small population and our climate and geography. That has been shown through our experience historically and through the experience of many other countries over the last hundred years.

The legislation makes less effective and endangers the many programs now in place. We should be doing the opposite and strengthening those kinds of measures and devising new programs which take into account our nation and our economy as they are now. The legislation attempts to be an imitation, pale or otherwise, of American practices and incorporates much of its regime in the law and practices of transportation in Canada. The Government fails to realize that Canada is not the same as the United States of America, thank God. The Government fails to recognize that what we have in place now, as imperfect as it is with mistakes made in the past, is Canadian and meant for Canada. It suits Canada. It incorporates the fundamental principle of providing service as an equal if not greater priority to the obtaining of profit in transportation.

When I said the legislation is anti-competitive and anti-regional and economic development, I did so partly because of who is the Minister of Transport (Mr. Crosbie) and where he comes from.

An Hon. Member: And where is he?

Mr. Benjamin: And where is he? If there is any Member of Parliament who should know about economic and regional disparity, about the requirements of different regions of Canada for extra provisions in the law and in the regulations which gives them at least some kind of equal treatment and opportunity to get into the markets of central Canada and the world, and in many cases the United States, it is the present Minister of Transport. But he is sponsoring legislation which flies in the face of real regional and economic expansion.

If we throw this wide open to the jungle of the so-called free market, free enterprise and competitive systems, the transporters will automatically—and one cannot blame them—gravitate to the largest and most lucrative markets. That means that the outlying regions, the isolated areas in the northern parts of Canada, will receive less service and less opportunity for economic development. If one had $100 million to invest in a new plant and was faced with discriminatory treatment in transportation costs if he located in Atlantic Canada, the Prairies, northern Ontario or northern Quebec, he would be crazy to build a plant in any of those places, no matter what temporary one-shot incentives might be offered by provincial and national Governments. One would be smart to build that plant next to or between Toronto and Montreal, somewhere in the so-called golden triangle.

The provision for confidential rates is not only anti-competitive, it flies in the face of what limited anti-competition law we have. It enhances the anti-competition in transportation. Let me illustrate how it does so. A railroad or consortium of trucking companies, or one major trucking company, can go to a large manufacturer or processor who moves 5,000 or 10,000 carloads a year and negotiate a confidential rate. Because it is confidential, the smaller manufacturer or processor not only cannot find out what the rate is but will not be able to get as good a rate because of the varying economies of scale, the size and volume of goods to be moved.

If I were a small farm implement manufacturer or food processor in the Prairie Provinces, I would be terrified of this legislation. Can you, Mr. Speaker, see either of the railroads or the larger trucking companies giving the same kind of rate to a small farm implement manufacturer in the Prairies who might ship 50 or 100 carloads a year as they would give to Massey-Ferguson, John Deere, J. I. Case or International Harvester Company who ship thousands of carloads a year? Anyone who believes they would is dreaming in technicolour. That is the kind of thing this legislation allows. It will discriminate against the development of manufacturing and processing capability in regions of Canada other than central Canada.

I mentioned earlier that this legislation is an attack on our sovereignty and independence. I would like to talk for a moment about the transborder implications of this legislation on transportation in Canada. The legislation will allow American railroads and trucking companies to do in Canada what Canadian railroads and trucking companies cannot do in the United States. The Bill is a fundamental reformulation of the economic regulations of federal transportation undertakings. Of course the legislation would re-regulate the railroads intensively. It would place Canadian carriers at an unnecessary competitive disadvantage to American carriers in the competition for both transborder traffic and traffic which could be routed through the United States, although it originates or terminates in Canada.

I will illustrate the magnitude of the problem. Canadian Pacific alone earns $700 million annually from this type of traffic. If one adds to that figure the revenues earned by Canadian National and those earned by Canadian truckers one is looking at billions of dollar of traffic revenue.

The Canadian regulatory regime in respect of railways cannot be out of step with the American regime if Canadian railways are to compete effectively with their American counter-parts. This Bill contains a series of measures which would deny Canadian carriers the ability to compete on equal regulatory terms. Specifically, this Bill would enable American carriers to access traffic originating or terminating in Canada on terms and conditions which they are not required to grant to competitors in respect of their own traffic base. This Bill is an invitation for American incursions into the Canadian traffic base without fear that Canadian railways and truckers can retaliate in kind.

I am not known as one who has a great deal of love and affection for Canadian Pacific. I like to tell anti-CPR stories from the Prairies, and they are legion. However, it is still a Canadian company in which the Canadian taxpayers have invested billions of dollars since 1881. If we add to those billions of dollars private investment we will see that a Canadian railway company is jeopardized because of this blind following of Reaganomics, this myopic vision which Americans have that Canada is nothing more than the fifty-first state, an extension of the great U.S.A. Canada is much more than that. We in this Party will not hold still for the supine acquiescence which is contained in this legislation.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Benjamin: As if we are not having enough troubles with our friends south of the 49th parallel, not to mention our friends across the way, I could construct a list as long as my arm of the troubles we are having, including such matters as shakes and shingles, cattle, hogs, dressed beef and pork, softwood lumber, steel products, saltfish, groundfish, fresh fish, natural gas, and raspberries. It is about time to give not only the Government and this legislation the raspberry, it is time to give our friends to the south the raspberry as well. We must stand up for the right of Canada and Canadian transporters to have the same access in the United States as we provide the Americans in Canada, or else not provide that access.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Benjamin: Unless and until that equity of access is made available to Canadian railroads and the Canadian trucking industry, then this legislation must not pass. That part of the legislation must be deleted.

I would now like to illustrate my point with respect to that access. Let us consider pulp products which originate in northern Ontario, northern Manitoba, Saskatchewan or even in British Columbia. At the present time these products travel via Canadian railways to Montreal. They then connect with Conrail to the northeastern United States and the American eastern seaboard. Under the provisions of this legislation American railroads can access that wood pulp for paper inside the Canadian border, take it back across the American border and haul it to the eastern seaboard, and all Conrail has to do is cancel the connecting rates it presently has between Montreal and the eastern seaboard of the United States. That is all Conrail has to do. The transportation of thousands of carloads a year of pulp would then be moved mainly on American transportation lines. An American railroad or trucking company can come into southern Ontario and obtain the products of manufacturing and processing plants destined for western Canada and the Pacific and take them down across the borders between Ontario and New York, Ohio, Windsor or the Sault and haul it by Conrail to Minneapolis and then on Burlington Northern to Seattle and Tacoma. That immediately places at risk traffic which would otherwise have gone through the Ports of Vancouver and Prince Rupert. My colleagues will have much more to say about that point as this debate continues.

On their way to Seattle and Tacoma cars carrying product manufactured and processed in Quebec or Ontario and destined for Manitoba can be taken off and brought up through Emerson and then to Manitoba. Cars destined for Saskatchewan can be taken off a train on the Burlington Northern and taken up to Portal. In the case of Alberta cars can be taken off Burlington Northern lines, run through Coutts and then into Alberta. The same situation applies to trucking.

Surely no self-respecting Canadian would hold still for that type of action. Surely no self-respecting Government would even contemplate such legislation which would jeopardize our sovereignty. Under this legislation, when, we feel that we are agrieved and require redress in our dealings with the United States in terms of transportation, we cannot go to a Canadian Government or a Canadian regulatory agency. What we will have to do is go on our hands and knees to the administration and regulatory bodies of the United States. It is demeaning and embarrassing. We will not stand quietly by and watch this Government, or any other Government, bring those types of provisions into transportation law in Canada.

In its blind efforts to copy and imitate the United States, no matter how inappropriate it is for Canada, the Government could take a good look at the U.S. experience. Probably there is some validity to a massive deregulated regime in a country with a large, dense population and a lesser geography; then competition would work better, and there would not be discriminatory practices to isolated locations.

The United States has a smaller geography, 10 times the population, more than 10 times the volume of traffic, and a climate that is not nearly as harsh. The scale and volume of transportation movement provides it with the ability to move its goods at lower cost. The Government fails to recognize in this legislation that because of the nature of this country our costs in transportation will always be higher than those of the United States, Western Europe, or Australia. I suppose you could class the Scandinavian countries, the Soviet Union, and Northern Japan in a similar category as Canada. But the practices of the United States cannot be applied in Canada because of those differences.

The largest trucking company in Canada would rank about number 35 or 40 in the United States. We have a good trucking industry. There are some excellent Canadian companies operating and competing with rail, air, and marine, both here and in the United States. Under this legislation the incursions of large American trucking companies into Canada will do irreparable harm to the Canadian trucking industry.

In looking at the American experience and the hundreds of bankruptcies, mergers, acquisitions, and takeovers under its transportation regime, it has now reached the point where a handful of the major truckers directly and indirectly control some 75 or 80 per cent of truck traffic in the United States. So much for great competition.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): That's Reaganomics.

Mr. Benjamin: In the airline industry the six major U.S. carriers that have evolved out of their regime since 1978 handle and control some 80 per cent of the traffic in the United States.

We have all seen the deregulation that has already taken place in the airline industry in Canada. There have been mergers, takeovers, and friendly agreements between a major carrier and small commuters and regional carriers, and the bankruptcies or near bankruptcies.

The matter of freedom of entry and exit in the trucking or airline industry means that a small or large reputable airline or trucking company that over the years has built up its routes, services, and customers, can be raided by a fly-by-nighter—if you will pardon the expression—in the airline or the trucking business that can move in at the peak of the market, cream the gravy off the top, and in the bad season pull out. That is not free enterprise. That is piracy.

What would happen to Bradley Air Services which operates an excellent air service into northern Canada when fly-by-nighters and two-bit charters move in on its efforts that serves communities as small as 300 people in the high Arctic? What would happen to its business? It would have no choice but to move its airline infrastructure and facilities out of the Arctic and down into the Ottawa valley. That is the choice with which it would be faced.

Yet anybody who can con some banker into giving them a loan, lease two or three second-hand aircraft, hire some crews at less than half the pay because they have been laid off from some other airline, can get into business. If there was ever an appeal for a return to mediocrity it is this legislation.

The experience in the United States has not been all that great, but that is its business and its problem. Mark my words, because of the difference between that country and this one, the experience here will be magnified 10 times in terms of the impact, not only on our railways and trucking industry and airlines but on our ports and our shippers and receivers. The Government says that the intention of this Bill is to give them a better deal. The mythology that this will mean cheaper freight rates for everybody, cheaper airline service for everybody is just that, a myth.

Prices go down for a while in the big markets. Seat sales that apply to Toronto, Vancouver, Calgary, Edmonton, Halifax, and maybe Winnipeg, but leave out Moncton, Thunder Bay, and the Windsors of this world, mean that those people in those cities are discriminated against. The fares will be lowered and discounted, and we do not want to regulate that. If an airline, trucking company, or railway is dumb enough to charge less than what it costs, that is its problem. But all Canadians in every region should have the same opportunity for those types of benefits. They do not get them. That is another area where this Bill is discriminatory.

I wish to close by saying to the Government that the New Democratic Party wishes good regulation, because that is the real choice. The New Democratic Party wishes a viable, economic transportation industry in Canada that meets and serves the needs of the people in the regions of all of this nation, not just where the good, lucrative markets are.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I wish to move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Atikokan (Mr. Angus):

That the motion be amended by deleting all the words after the word "That" and substituting the following therefor:

"Bill C-18, An Act Respecting National Transportation, be not now read a second time but that the Order for Second Reading be discharged, the Bill withdrawn and the subject-matter thereof be referred to the Standing Committee on Transport."

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I will look at the motion and rule on it after two o'clock.

Before I call it one o'clock, I wish to recognize the Hon. Member for Bonaventure—Îles-de-la-Madeleine (Mr. Gray) as the next speaker for the government Party.

It being one o'clock, I do now leave the Chair until 2 o'clock this day.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

FISHERIES

OVERFISHING BY FRENCH TRAWLERS

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, recent polls show that Canadians have a very low opinion of the Government. Apparently foreign countries share the same feeling.

Witness these results: the United States has a headlock on our softwood lumber sector, and its veto could spread to the management policies of other resource sectors. In a case of selective amnesia, the President forgets his commitments to combating the acid rain problem.

Meanwhile, eight French factory freezer trawlers are raping the fisheries stocks off Newfoundland's south coast. While Newfoundland's inshore fishermen suffer because of poor catches, the French vessels are catching over four times their proper quota. This blatant overfishing threatens the stocks and livelihood of many fishermen.

It is now high time for the Government to take action and bring this nonsense to a stop. Constructive internationalism has become a cruel joke to these fishermen.

HUMAN RIGHTS

RAOUL WALLENBERG—ANNIVERSARY OF DISAPPEARANCE

Mr. John Oostrom (Willowdale): Mr. Speaker, during World War II, Raoul Wallenberg, a Swedish diplomat, worked relentlessly to save the Jewish community of Budapest from extermination by the Nazis, by setting up houses to protect refugees under the Swedish flag, and negotiated tirelessly with Hungarian and Nazi authorities to save hundreds of Jewish lives.

Forty-two years ago, on January 17, 1945, Wallenberg, was last seen in the presence of Soviet armed forces. Although the Soviets claim that Wallenberg died of natural causes in 1947, a number of people have reported seeing him since. It has been suggested that he may still be alive. The Canadian Government has asked for an explanation from Soviet authorities, but the response given is unsatisfactory.

On December 9, 1985, Raoul Wallenberg became the first person to be named an honorary Canadian citizen. He has also been made an honorary citizen of Israel and, together with Winston Churchill, became the only other person to be awarded in his lifetime the title of honorary citizen of the United States.

It is only fitting that we remember this most distinguished citizen of Canada who risked his own life to save others. I call upon the Government to continue pressing Soviet authorities for a satisfactory answer to the whereabouts of Raoul Wallenberg and to secure his freedom.

THE LATE MARGARET LAURENCE

TRIBUTE TO WRITER'S WORK

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, Margaret Laurence's death on January 5 should remind all Canadians how much we owe to our artists.

Through her characters, Margaret Laurence helped us to understand what it means to be Canadian, whether as an expatriate working in Africa, a single schoolteacher in a small prairie town, or an old woman coming to terms with death. Characters such as Hagar in The Stone Angel or Morag in The Diviners show Laurence's awareness both of the strength of women and of their vulnerability as humans.

They struggled to find purpose, integrity, and love, in a landscape and a society which were often harsh and unyielding. In her own struggle against the threat of nuclear war, Margaret Laurence took seriously her responsibility as a citizen of Canada and of the world.

Canada will survive as a nation to the extent that we keep our cultural sovereignty and adopt policies which allow writers like Margaret Laurence to flourish and to be widely read.

TRAGEDIES

FATAL ACCIDENT INVOLVING SWIFT CURRENT JUNIOR HOCKEY TEAM

Mr. Geoff Wilson (Swift Current—Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, on the afternoon of December 30, 1986, the Swift Current Bronco Junior Hockey Club left on a routine trip to Regina. Minutes later, the team bus slid on ice and overturned.

Killed were four outstanding young players: Trent Kresse, 20 of Kindersley, Saskatchewan; Chris Mantyka, 19 of Saskatoon, Saskatchewan; Brent Ruff, 16 of Warburg, Alberta; and home town favourite, Scott Kruger, 19.

As word of the tragic accident spread quickly across Canada and the world, the hockey fraternity everywhere reached out to Swift Current, a community left in shock and disbelief.

In the words of local writer, Brian Costello:

> The four brave men who died should be remembered for the way there were, pleasant and special; just like their surviving team mates who struggle with courage to overcome the tragedy.

I am sure all Hon. Members will join with me in extending the sympathies of the House to the families and friends of these four young men.

TOURISM

POTENTIAL FOR JOB CREATION—NEED FOR INVESTMENT

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, as one of the top three industries in every region of Canada, the $22 billion tourism industry could become a real force for economic growth and job creation. An increase of just 1 per cent in tourism can generate about 8,000 jobs.

For tourism to reach its full potential, co-operation from the federal Government is needed to attract the investment dollars that will help to create world-class tourism facilities in Canada.

Since the growth of tourism in Canada depends on how Canada is promoted in foreign markets, the Government should discontinue its practice of hiring local people overseas, and put the delivery of its tourism program back into the hands of experienced and knowledgeable Canadian tourism experts. Measures such as these, as well as an increase in the federal tourism marketing budget, will go a long way toward helping the tourism industry to meet its goal of creating 600,000 new jobs by the year 2000.

TRADE

SOFTWOOD LUMBER EXPORT DUTY—EFFECT ON MARITIMES

Mr. Bob Corbett (Fundy—Royal): Mr. Speaker, the decision of the Government to impose a 15 per cent export duty on Canadian softwood lumber has caused concern among wood producers in the Maritime provinces. Many producers feel their viability and the jobs they provide are in jeopardy.

Although five mills in New Brunswick were exempted from the duty, 125 mills are now hit with a provision that was installed to correct difficulties caused by extremely low stumpage rates in British Columbia, Alberta, Ontario and Quebec. This action could affect many mills, the jobs those mills provide, and the economic livelihood of many communities in a distressed region.

I urge the Government to undertake two initiatives. First, negotiate the entire Maritime region to an exempted status. Second, cause the effect of an increase to the stumpage rates in the four offending provinces, therefore removing the need for the 15 per cent export duty.

Some 22,000 jobs in the Maritimes are dependent upon a healthy and competitive lumber industry. We must ensure the policies we put in place affecting this sector will not result in job loss, greater unemployment, and continued regional disparity.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

AID SOUGHT FOR COMPLETION OF NEWFOUNDLAND ENCYCLOPEDIA

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I am rising to urge the Government to act quickly to help out Canada's only living Father of Confederation, Joey Smallwood. Mr. Smallwood, now in his eighties, is being financially hounded owing to his failure to complete his beloved project, a Newfoundland and Labrador encyclopaedia, because he is not well.

I would suggest that the Government pick up the cost of the completion of the valuable project started by Mr. Smallwood. This encyclopaedia is an invaluable resource not only for the people of Newfoundland and Labrador but for all Canadians and, as such, would be well worth the federal Government's investment.

It is a great travesty to see one of Canada's living legends being forced to deal with sheriffs at his advanced age and in his poor state of health. Surely the Government can find it in its heart to act now.

CALL FOR WITHDRAWAL OF PATENT AMENDING LEGISLATION

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, the amendments proposed in Bill C-22 by the Government amount to nothing more than a complete capitulation by the Government to the pressures of the American multinational drug manufacturers. The Canadian generic drug industry has been sacrificed on the altar of free trade negotiations, a victim of the Prime Minister's (Mr. Mulroney) insatiable need to surrender Canada's sovereignty to the United States.

I call upon the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre) to withdraw this legislation immediately, which is an unjustified and unethical attack on the people of this country who have the misfortune to be ill. The sick or elderly should not be expected to pay the price for the Government's mistakes.

In 1983 Canadians saved approximately $200 million as a result of the Bill's amendment in 1969. What the Progressive Conservative Party wants to do is to change its name to the Regressive Conservative Party because it wishes to go back to the pre-1969 days to give the multinationals a clear windfall profit.

FORESTRY

QUEBEC'S NEW FORESTRY POLICY—INITIATIVE TAKEN BY CERTAIN COMPANIES

Mr. Guy St. Julien (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, considering that Quebec's new forestry policy will be implemented as of next April 1, several pulp and paper companies in Quebec, particularly Domtar and CIP, have been carrying out excessive wood cutting operations for a number of weeks in the Abitibi-Témiscamingue region and in Quebec generally so as to produce more chips to show the Government of Quebec they are maintaining their five-year average wood cutting operations.

As a result of such excessive cutting these Quebec pulp and paper companies are endangering saw mills in Abitibi-Témiscamingue. Some 105,000 tons of wood chips worth $7 million are now piled up on the ground and more will be added in the coming weeks, enough to represent a value of $15 million.

Mr. Speaker, the Government of Quebec will have to look into this problem. There is room in Abitibi for two additional pulp and paper mills.

THE ECONOMY

GOVERNMENT'S PERFORMANCE

Mr. Albert Girard (Restigouche): Mr. Speaker, after two years of Conservative administration I rise today in this House to highlight the positive aftermath of decisions made by our Government.

As a former businessman I vividly remember that, under a Liberal Government, I paid as much as 19 per cent on small business loans. The current rate is 10.75 per cent. I bought a house in 1983 and had to pay as much as 15 per cent in mortgage interests. Today I would be paying only 10 per cent. This is a major improvement, is it not?

Several economic indicators point to positive results throughout Canada. Consider the number of unemployed workers who have rejoined the labour market thanks to the dynamic and progressive policy of this Government. More than 600,000 jobs have been created in the past two years. One must be aware of and appreciate these facts which have made it possible for many of our fellow citizens to earn an honest living.

All these constructive measures taken by the Government will certainly not be headlined in the Star or the Enquirer, but such indeed is the new climate since our Government was elected. A number of improvements have been made and we can now see the beneficial results. You may rest assured that, in spite of all the obstacles it has to get over, our Government will continue to work towards better living conditions for all Canadians.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

ACID RAIN—CALL FOR GOVERNMENT ACTION

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, U.S. Senator George Mitchell is reported as saying:

> We have, in all candor, been somewhat disappointed by the willingness of the Canadian Government to accept what I think are less than significant steps by the administration—I would hope that Canada's Prime Minister in the meeting this year will take a strong stand requesting meaningful action by the administration.

We have also learned that Senator Mitchell's frustration is widely shared by U.S. environmental groups that feel Canada let the administration off the hook by endorsing the envoys' report which contained no specific targets for acid rain reductions.

When will the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) wake up to the reality that acid rain cannot be tackled by way of a special relationship with President Reagan? When will the Prime Minister realize that the envoys' report has not reduced acid in Canada by one ounce? The Government has wasted two years. The cost of this inaction is staggering. It is high time the Prime Minister dealt with the substance of the issue and not just with smoke and mirrors.

TRADE

TAX ON SOFTWOOD LUMBER MANUFACTURED PRODUCTS

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, the Conservative Government is protecting Americans from their own softwood lumber. Not only has it levied a 15 per cent tax on softwood exports to the U.S. but the Government has also put this tax on Canadian products made from American softwood.

A manufacturer in my riding imports American lumber and sells his finished products back in the United States. However, the Conservative Government charges him 15 per cent when the American softwood goes back over the border. That is not all. The Government is not charging 15 per cent of the sawmill price but is putting the tax on the full price of the finished product. Even if the manufacturer buys lumber that is exempt from the export tax from a Canadian mill, he has to pay 15 per cent on any finished goods produced by Canadian workers. This ensures that our manufacturers cannot compete and that Canadian jobs will be lost. Conservatives are exporting jobs to the United States and are ensuring that Canadians remain simple hewers of wood.

EFFECT OF SOFTWOOD LUMBER EXPORT DUTY

Mr. Ted Schellenberg (Nanaimo—Alberni): Mr. Speaker, in 1983 our nation was faced with the threat of a countervailing duty against softwood lumber. We then had 19 per cent of the market and we won that decision.

In 1986 we were confronted with another CVD petition. The Canadian dollar value was lower and American protectionist sentiment stronger. Our share of the U.S. market had grown to well over 30 per cent. Last October we lost that decision and a 15 per cent CVD was imposed.

Now it is January, 1987. Through negotiations, the duty has been removed. Canadian lumber producers no longer have to post bonds at the border. Over $600 million in reforestation funds will pour into provincial coffers. We British Columbians know that we have not been replanting all that we cut. Now we will.

What a fascinating debate we will have on this issue in the House. The NDP will be fighting for the corporate forest interests and the Ontario Premier, while the Tories will be defending the position of the forest unions, the IWA, and the B.C. NDP. We do live in interesting times.

UKRAINIAN INDEPENDENCE DAY

Mr. Joe Reid (St. Catharines): Mr. Speaker, on January 22 Ukrainian-Canadian communities will be raising the Ukrainian flag across the country commemorating Ukrainian Independence Day. The emergence of Ukraine as a free state, though for a brief time only, symbolizes the spirit of freedom which continues to live in the hearts of the 35 million Ukrainians now living under Soviet oppression. Although it is the largest non-Russian, eastern European state, Ukraine is denied the freedom of determining its own fate.

• (1415)

In 1975 a 35-nation conference signed an accord in Helsinki which linked human rights, culture, and education with security and co-operation, which includes the right of self-determination. Over one-half of Soviet Russia is made up of non-Russian nations. Those nations will ultimately have the right to define their destiny and shape their own identity. World pressure should make it so.

COINAGE

ALGOMA ARTISTS' DESIGN SELECTED FOR DOLLAR COIN

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, the Government's incompetence usually draws strong criticism and such was the case when it lost the master dies for the new Canadian dollar coin a few weeks ago. However, it is an ill wind that does not blow good for someone. The loss of the original dies has resulted in the selection of the loon design, the work of Robert Carmichael, an artist from Sylvan Valley near Echo Bay in Algoma district, which is in my constituency.

Mr. Carmichael, who was born in Sault Ste. Marie, is a graduate of Carleton University and of the Ontario College of Art. He is an outstanding artist who often paints landscapes of northern scenes. The loon design reminds us of our rich Canadian heritage of northern lakes and waterways, which are the loon's natural habitat. This design will be used on some $450 million worth of Canadian coins and will bring historic renown to one of Algoma's most talented artists.

THE ADMINISTRATION

RESIGNATION OF MINISTER OF STATE (TRANSPORT)—AWARDING OF LOW LEVEL AIR DEFENCE CONTRACT

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, just preceding the reassembly of Parliament the Government spent a desperate weekend on damage control. The United States Vice-President and Secretary of the Treasury are coming up here to see what they can do to help the Government in the trade negotiations which have gone off the rails. Then the Prime Minister—

Some Hon. Members: Question!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): —accepted the resignation of a cabinet Minister.

Like every other Member of the House I have had a chance to look at the press release concerning the resignation of the Hon. Member for Saint-Jean as Minister of State for Transport, but it is pathetically incomplete. When did the Prime Minister personally, or any member of his staff, or any current minister of his Government, learn of the alleged irregularities in the awarding of the Low Level Air Defence contract to Oerlikon, or the unusual land transactions involved?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the answer to that question is contained in the statement issued yesterday. As I indicated, the information was brought to my attention. I did what a Prime Minister ought to do, acted quickly and in the public interest.

SCOPE OF INVESTIGATION BY ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): The Prime Minister thereby sticks by the date found in the press release. Because the release also relates to an investigation by the RCMP, may I ask him the scope of that investigation? Will it include all the circumstances surrounding the letting of the Low Level Air Defence contract to Oerlikon, and will the RCMP have access to cabinet minutes and cabinet documents and all information in the possession of the Government at the time the contract was awarded?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition asks about the scope of the RCMP inquiry. That, too, was referred to in my press release where I said I have asked the RCMP:

—to conduct a complete investigation into the matter.

It means exactly that, total and complete.

[Translation]

REQUEST FOR INQUIRY INTO CONTRACT AWARDING PROCEDURES

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister did not answer the questions and his broadcast did not answer them either. I am therefore going to ask the Prime Minister when he is going to set up a real inquiry, either a royal commission or a judicial commission, so that we can be in a position to restore public confidence in the Government's adjudication of contracts and in its ministers in this respect.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, unlike what was said, I did answer both questions my honourable friend asked initially, notwithstanding his final comments.

The Leader of the Opposition is now saying: When are we going to have a real inquiry? I say quite frankly and without hesitation that a real inquiry is one conducted by the RCMP with instructions to conduct a total and complete inquiry.

ACQUISITION OF LAND BY OERLIKON COMPANY—REPORTED REQUEST FOR RETURN OF MONEYS

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister as well. Is he aware that lawyers representing Oerlikon have sent a demand letter to the President of the Progressive Conservative riding association of Saint-Jean, one Normand Ouellette, requesting the return of $970,000 which Oerlikon alleges Mr. Ouellette improperly received from the land transaction? Is that the reason for the request of the resignation of the Minister of State for Transport?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): No, Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of any specific letter sent in that regard. However, no doubt the RCMP will make that very much a part of their investigation. If my hon. friend or any other members of his Party have any information of any kind, I invite them to give it to the RCMP immediately.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Frith: Mr. Speaker, for the record, that information has been given to the Commissioner of the RCMP. I have indicated to the Commissioner that I am quite prepared to relay to him information I have received.

USE OF MONEYS PAID FOR LAND

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, I gather from the Prime Minister's response that he is not aware of this letter. Would he at least indicate to the House that he is prepared to give assurances that none of the $970,000 which was paid to the President of the Progressive Conservative riding association of Saint-Jean has found its way, directly or indirectly, into other people's hands, in order to ensure that the integrity of the political system is kept intact?

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): That's out of order.

Mr. Speaker: This is an important matter. Ordinarily the Chair might have interrupted the question of the Hon. Member for Sudbury. However, I think all Hon. Members understand the importance of this matter. Because it is important, and because an examination has apparently been commenced by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, it is important that questions be carefully phrased. Since no charges have been laid in this very serious matter, I ask all Members to be very careful in phrasing their questions in order that allegations are not made which may not be appropriate on the facts known at the present time.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think the question was as to whether I had knowledge of that. If that was the question, the answer is no. However, I ask my hon. friend to impart that information and any other information he might have to the RCMP. They will conduct the fullest of inquiries and, in a non-partisan way, bring down whatever judgments and recommendations are appropriate.

I just mention en passant that the Leader of the Opposition asked for an independent inquiry. I cannot imagine a more independent and distinguished force than the RCMP to conduct an inquiry into these matters. I think we should let them do their work.

REQUEST FOR EXPLANATION OF MINISTER'S RESIGNATION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister.

In his press release yesterday, the Prime Minister did not indicate the reasons for the Minister's resignation. My question is simply this: Since the Prime Minister said on television last night that the Minister was a good Canadian, why did he ask for the resignation of this good Canadian?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, a parliamentarian, a Canadian, may be an excellent person, but if he is a member of Cabinet, he is subject to various regulations and requirements which, depending on the circumstances, may demand his withdrawal for a period of time while an inquiry is being held.

I said yesterday that a number of facts were brought to my attention which led me to decide the way I did. I also said, however, that the decision in itself did not mean that Mr. Bissonnette was not to benefit from a presumption of innocence like any other Canadian.

• (1425)

[English]

MINISTER'S CONDUCT

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Prime Minister on the same subject matter.

Considering there is an important distinction to be made, which all Hon. Members recognize, between the possibility of legal wrongdoing—the Prime Minister has clearly taken the correct action, it would seem, in having the RCMP conduct an inquiry if he thought there was some possibility of criminal wrongdoing somewhere—and, on the other hand, wrongdoing of a ministerial nature, and considering we have had five or six other Ministers resign, not for criminal wrongdoing but for ministerial wrongdoing, did the Prime Minister have any reasons to believe that the Minister in question was improperly conducting himself as a Minister of the Crown?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the information which was brought to my attention indicated, in my judgment, that the public interest could be best served by my asking for the Minister to step aside. That is what I did. The public interest would be best served as well by an independent agency such as the RCM Police investigating this matter completely and thoroughly and making its report to the proper authorities. The matter was resolved. Any doubt which existed, I believe, was very much resolved in favour of the public interest, and that is the way it should be.

INFORMATION PROVIDED TO PRIME MINISTER

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I say with respect that the Prime Minister has not helped the situation by leaving the possible implication that there was criminal wrongdoing. Considering that Mr. Masse when he resigned made it very—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Order.

Mr. Broadbent: Considering that the former Minister of Communications when he resigned made it very clear that he was doing it for proper reasons and claimed his own innocence, but we have had no such claim in this instance—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Order.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Good Lord, such gutter scraping.

Mr. Broadbent: Calm down, Secretary of State.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: The NDP thinks you are guilty until proven innocent.

An Hon. Member: They are getting testy over there.

An Hon. Member: Take a Valium.

Mr. Broadbent: Did the Prime Minister—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I think all Hon. Members know that under all the cirumstances there is a certain concern that both questions and answers be very, very fair. I would hope that all Hon. Members would try to adhere to the common sense of that general approach.

I also want to say to all Hon. Members, please, it is an important and proper matter upon which appropriate questions are asked, and I would ask all Hon. Members to co-operate.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, I am not asking about any legal matter. My question to the Prime Minister is this. Did he have any information brought to his attention which caused him to believe that the Minister in question had improperly acted as a Minister, that he was not carrying out his ministerial responsibilities in a correct manner? If so, will the Prime Minister tell us what question of that kind did he put to the Minister?

• (1430)

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I ordered a full and complete inquiry by the RCM Police because of information that was brought to my attention in regard to this matter. I believed, and still believe, that that is of course the proper way to go. When I was asked by the press about it yesterday I indicated that the presumption of innocence is the most fundamental precept in our democracy. I am surprised at the questions of the Leader of the New Democratic Party which suggest anything to the contrary. Surely this is the type of concept that must be protected and respected by all parliamentarians irrespective of Party.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

OERLIKON CONTRACT TRANSACTIONS—EXTENT OF PRIME MINISTER'S INFORMATION

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Prime Minister and concerns the Oerlikon contract transactions.

Given the fact that the media as well as certain Members and many Canadians have been at least partly aware of these transactions for two months already, I would ask the Prime Minister whether he still maintains that he did not know anything about this matter before last Wednesday. I remind him that his press release of yesterday does not make it clear and avoids stating whether or not he was aware of this matter. Is he still prepared to say that today?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, this is an astonishing statement on the part of the Hon. Member. He solemnly affirms that several people have been aware of this case for a number of months, for two months.

I should like to know who was aware of it and, if the Hon. Member knew about it, why did he not bring it to my attention or to the attention of the RCMP? Indeed, it was his responsibility to do so.

[English]

SENATOR'S APPOINTMENT—REQUEST FOR POSTPONEMENT OF SWEARING IN CEREMONY

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, I am glad to ask a supplementary question of the Prime Minister in which I remind him that it is our role to ask questions and his to answer them. Given the fact that the Prime Minister saw fit to remove temporarily one of his colleagues in regard to the Oerlikon affair will he now ask his friend, Jean Bazin, to delay voluntarily his own swearing in as a Senator of Canada? Will the Prime Minister commit himself here and now to asking Mr. Bazin to do this?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I just mentioned that quite an astonishing statement has been made on the floor of the House of Commons. The Liberal Member of Parliament says that many Canadians, and by implication himself, have been aware of important facts for some months in regard to an alleged serious matter that involves morals, perhaps public ethics, criminal law and so on. I ask him today to rise in his place in the House of Commons and tell the House who had that information and what it was. If he has had that information for some months why did he not bring it to the attention of the RCMP since his failure to do so could result in the obstruction of justice?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

INQUIRY WHETHER PRIME MINISTER WAS INFORMED OF MUNICIPALITY'S RESOLUTION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister.

Was the Prime Minister informed of a decision by the Municipal Council of Saint-Jean-sur-Richelieu, made on October 7, 1985, in the riding of the Minister of State for Transport, by which the Council repealed a resolution to declare the municipality a non-nuclear zone, so as not to compromise the town's chances of attracting major investment in one of the defence industries?

Will the circumstances of this decision by a municipal council in the Minister's riding be part of the inquiry by the RCMP?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member asked me whether I was informed of a decision by a municipal council in Saint-Jean-sur-Richelieu in October 1985. The answer is no.

If pertinent facts or allegations are concerned, I imagine the Hon. Member will want to bring all this to the attention of the RCMP which is conducting a complete inquiry into the matter.

[English]

CABINET CONFIDENTIALITY

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question—

Mr. Speaker: I hesitate to interrupt more than is absolutely necessary. However, I want to point out to all Hon. Members that questions ought to be confined to areas of ministerial responsibility or areas of the Prime Minister's responsibility. I certainly do not want in any way to make a ruling or suggest something which would do anything to close off the fullest appropriate questions and answers, and debate, if necessary. I ask Hon. Members in this delicate matter to try mightily to be very careful. The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy).

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I would certainly say to you that the Minister has resigned and that there were some rather curious circumstances in his riding in which a municipality reversed a resolution on its being a non-nuclear zone. Will the Prime Minister assure the House that in fact there was no breach of cabinet confidentiality? Will that question in fact form part of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police investigation since it appears possible that people in the municipality knew as early as October, 1985, that something major was afoot relative to a major defence investment?

[Translation]

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I said that I was not aware of the terms of a decision made at the municipal level in October 1985 in one of the ridings of this country. I repeat what I said. One of the reasons for having the RCMP conduct a complete inquiry into the matter is so that it can find out about such claims and judge whether they have a bearing on the ultimate outcome of the inquiry. It will be up to the RCMP to establish the parameters of its inquiry. We want it to be full and complete.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

AWARDING OF CONTRACT TO OERLIKON

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister is the only Prime Minister in history who would attempt to turn another Tory scandal into something to be blamed on the Opposition.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: While trying as much as I can to offer the fullest opportunity to express themselves, I would ask all Hon. Members to be careful not to make accusations which are not relevant to the questions being asked here. I know the Hon. Member would not want to do that.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I take your words of advice. At the risk of being charged with obstructing justice I ask the Minister of National Defence to explain to the House why Oerlikon received an important Canadian defence contract when in fact its weapons guidance system fails to meet DND specifications for an all-weather system, exceeds DND's original budget estimates by $400 million, and contrary to DND requirements, is not a technologically mature system?

Hon. Paul Dick (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I would like to inform the Hon. Member that in fact the system does comply with DND requirements as to being an all-weather system. It was within budget. Quite frankly, the Hon. Member's questions are without foundation.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I remind the Minister that we are in the land of Canada and not in Disneyland. He ought to come to the point in answering the question.

Is the Minister prepared to provide the House of Commons with a complete and detailed analysis of DND's assessment of Oerlikon's bid for the Canadian weapons guidance system? Would he also provide the House with documents outlining DND's rationale for accepting Oerlikon's bid over that of all other defence contractors?

• (1440)

Hon. Paul Dick (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member, like other Hon. Members, had shown up at the Defence Committee, he would have found out a number of these things, and would have been entitled to a private briefing.

TRADE

SOFTWOOD LUMBER EXPORT TAX—ASSISTANCE FOR WORKERS AND COMMUNITIES

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. Everyone recognizes that the 15 per cent export tax on softwood exports to the United States will cost thousands of jobs, and our sovereign control over forest policy. Will the Prime Minister give us his assurance that there will be full and complete assistance to those workers, mills, and communities that will be hurt by the tax?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, it is because of the agreement that we negotiated with the U.S. that we will, in fact, have the money and the revenues available to Canada which the provinces can use for that type of activity, should they so choose.

May I also take this opportunity to remind the Hon. Member and his Party that the people who have been most supportive of the jobs involved, and the protection of the jobs involved, have been the International Woodworkers of America, the union responsible for the workers?

I would like to read for the record of the House the statement made by the IWA:

> We therefore strongly believe that it was absolutely essential to conclude a negotiated settlement with the United States which will guarantee that the increased taxes on softwood lumber shipments to the United States be kept in Canada.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

REQUEST FOR FEDERAL COMPENSATION PROGRAM

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): My supplementary question is directed to the Prime Minister. It is the federal Government that negotiated this agreement. Article 6 is a very difficult one for the provincial Governments to get around. There are fears in many communities of a Scheffervile solution. I would like to ask the Prime Minister to end the confusion surrounding this issue and clearly state that there will be a federal program which will fully compensate and assist those workers, mills, and communities that will be hurt by the 15 per cent export tax.

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I believe I have already covered that in my answer to the previous Member's question by pointing out that in our settlement we keep about half a billion dollars in Canada which will be returned to the provinces for use in reforestation, in retraining of workers, or as they wish. Without the agreement we have the problem and no money. With the agreement we still have the problem but we have the funds to meet it.

UNITED STATES OFFICIALS' LETTER

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. His colleague, the Minister of International Trade, has stated that the moneys that will be obtained by the export tax will be used for reforestation and other means to assist the industry. That point was confirmed yesterday in an interview given by the Deputy Prime Minister.

At the same time we have a letter which was put forward by Mr. Yeutter and Mr. Baldrige which clearly stated that those actions on behalf of any Canadian Government are not permissible under the agreement.

When the Prime Minister meets with the Vice-President of the United States on Wednesday will he gain from the Vice-President a clear repudiation of the Yeutter-Baldrige interpretation that infringes our sovereign right to decide for ourselves what to do with our industry? If we do not get that repudiation, will the Prime Minister revoke the agreement that we have signed that limits our sovereign right to decide what to do for the workers in the lumber industry?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am happy to answer the question from my hon. friend. The deal concluded by the Minister of International Trade was a properly constituted one and very much, in difficult circumstances, in the national interest. Any suggestion by anyone that there is a word, a paragraph, or an adjective in that agreement that is at variance with the strong promotion of our national interests and sovereignty is false.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mulroney: I have heard no suggestion at all. I make allowances for those people who like throwing verbal hand-grenades at the United States every day. I believe that it is a challenging—

An Hon. Member: Why are you calling Bush up here?

Mr. Mulroney: I am calling Bush up because he wanted to meet with you.

Mr. Axworthy: We wish he would.

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps the Chair should call upon the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister is trying to throw verbal hand-grenades.

GOVERNMENT'S POSITION

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Has the Prime Minister not just accused the Secretary of Commerce and the U.S. trade representative of falsifying the agreement by the letter that they have written to their own industry which clearly states that the actions by the governmental bodies in Canada are not allowable? These include rebates and remissions, reforestation, and direct assistance to the industry.

I am asking if the Prime Minister of this country, and the Minister for International Trade, are prepared to disregard totally this type of written statement by senior officials of the U.S. Government and not attempt to get a clarification on Wednesday, or repudiate the agreement that will limit our rights according to the American interpretation of that agreement? Why does the Prime Minister refuse to do that?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): I do not refuse to do anything. The agreement speaks for itself. It is the agreement that speaks for itself. I cannot be held responsible for an interpretation that someone in the United States would place on it, any more than any reasonable Canadian would want to be held responsible for the interpretation placed on it by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry.

The fact of the matter is that when the sovereignty of the nation is involved every Government of Canada, irrespective of political Party, has at all times defended the interests of Canada, no less so than this Government which is formed by a political Party that founded Canada. It was our Party, the Conservative Party, that built this country, and we will continue to defend and enhance Canadian sovereignty at all times.

Mr. Axworthy: Why give up on it now? You are selling out and you know it.

An Hon. Member: You are down to fourth place now.

AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

REQUEST FOR CLARIFICATION OF AUTO PACT STATEMENT MADE BY PETER MURPHY

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Prime Minister. Considering the confusion created by Peter Murphy's statement on the Auto Pact safeguards, could the Prime Minister make it clear that these safeguards will not be abandoned in the course of the free trade talks?

[English]

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I can only repeat what we have said in this House and what our negotiator, Mr. Reisman, has said. We are not proposing to put the Auto Pact into these talks. Should the Americans wish to do that, we will consider any suggestions that they have to improve it.

But may I say, Mr. Speaker, that this is a very odd question coming from the Hon. Member of the NDP considering the remarks made by his own Leader in the House as reported by Hansard on July 8, 1977:

First of all, in order to protect the parts industry, which has been losing billions of dollars annually in terms of trade deficit, major modification of the pact is required.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Miss Carney: Further in the same speech, Mr. Speaker, he also stated:

There have been some positive benefits from the pact, and anyone who denies it would be crazy; but there are also a number of severe liabilities in it for Canada—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor.

Mr. Langdon: I can see that the Minister has been reading speeches over the holidays on the beaches of Hawaii.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Minister may well have been reading speeches on the beaches of Hawaii, but I am quite sure that the Hon. Member would not want to repeat them all here. Would the Hon. Member ask his question?

SAFEGUARDS IN AUTO PACT

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): My question deals directly with the question of safeguards which my Leader sought to increase, not decrease. I wish to ask the Minister if she will guarantee Canadians that the safeguards will not be reduced in any way in the free trade talks that are taking place?

• (1450)

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, again I would like to look at the words of the Hon. Leader of the NDP who, on April 17, 1980, asked the then Liberal Government:

—will the Minister not now seize the opportunity of this genuine crisis in the industry to arrange a meeting at the top level, including the Canadian Secretary of State for External Affairs and himself, to get a renegotiated pact in place by the end of this year?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Miss Carney: Those were the words of the Leader of the NDP.

Mr. La Salle: Give him the quotation.

Mr. Mazankowski: You are blushing, Ed.

Mr. Crosbie: You have a short memory, Ed.

Some Hon. Members: Order, order!

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Don Valley East.

HUMAN RIGHTS

U.S.S.R.—PLIGHT OF IOFFE FAMILY

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. On January 8 I telephoned Dr. Alexander Ioffe in Moscow who, a few hours earlier, had started a hunger strike, not for himself—and he has been refused an exit visa for 10 years—but for his son and his family who were refused an exit visa in November. Over last weekend we understand that the Soviet authorities have not made any contact with Dr. Ioffe. Would the Secretary of State have someone in our Embassy in Moscow visit Dr. Ioffe to see the state of his health and to see whether we could be of some help? More particularly, would he exert the pressure of his office to see that an exit visa is granted for Dr. Ioffe's son, Dimitri, so that Dr. Ioffe's health does not deteriorate further?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, on January 14 a representative of the Canadian Embassy in Moscow visited Mr. Ioffe. We have made representations to the Government of the Soviet—

An Hon. Member: How is he?

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): I am asked how he is. I hope that is a serious question; certainly it is to us, if not to the Liberal Member who raised it. He appears to be in reasonably good health. We are continuing to make representations to the Soviet Union to seek the possibility for Mr. Ioffe to come to Canada. I should simply make the point that it is precisely on individual cases like that that we will find the real test of the intention of the Soviet Union with regard to people in that country who might want to move to freedom.

THE ADMINISTRATION

OERLIKON CONTRACT—ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE INVESTIGATION

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I should like to return to the Prime Minister with a question on the Oerlikon contract. When the Prime Minister says that the RCMP investigation will be complete, he knows of course that the RCMP only investigates law-breaking. It does not investigate standards of behaviour required of Ministers, conflict of interest, maintenance of cabinet confidentiality, or integrity on the job. Is the law-breaking question the end of it, or will there be an investigation or a royal commission, such as my Leader suggested, to look into the larger questions of how the Government conducts business and what is expected of Ministers?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think that the word "complete" is a precise one which indicates the openness of the Government. As my hon. friend knows, as a former Solicitor General, once the matter is placed in the hands of the Police, it is not up to the Government or the Solicitor General to try to impose any parameters of any kind on the inquiry. This inquiry by the RCM Police will be conducted fully and completely in a manner that it determines, and its inquiry shall lead it wherever. My responsibility, when confronted with some facts, was to deal with a member of my Government, and I did so and, I think, properly.

PROPRIETY OF CONTRACT NEGOTIATION

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, there are larger questions. I want to ask the Prime Minister whether he considers it proper for the Government to enter a contract with a bidder where his friend, Jean Bazin, is a director and legal counsel; where his friend, Roger Nantel, is a paid lobbyist; where his ex-staffer, Peter Ohrt from the Prime Minister's Office, is hired as project manager; and where two officials involved in examining those bids are involved now and working for the bidder. Is this the kind of deal which Canadians can expect the Government to enter into, or will there be an investigation of the propriety of it?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member makes allegations of impropriety which no doubt will be immediately and urgently considered by the RCM Police. That is the objective of giving it to the independent police force in Canada for its analysis, consideration, and determination. I point out, because I know as a lawyer—and I was just about to say something, that I was the classmate of an Hon. Member here who would confirm it, the Hon. Member for Papineau—that it was Mr. Bazin and Mr. Nantel who brought to the attention of the Government, pursuant to a meeting with their client, the facts that permitted this inquiry to get under way—that these are not the acts of guilty people. These are innocent people, and my friend should give them the presumption of innocence.

TRADE

COST OF ESTABLISHING DEPARTMENTAL COMMUNICATIONS UNIT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister for International Trade who, during the recess, announced that she plans to spend $12 million telling Canadians what a great job she is doing in shoring up her failing reputation. Should the Minister not be blushing a little, considering that in her first speech given in the House of Commons on October 23, 1980, she condemned the then Liberal Government for doing exactly the same thing—using taxpayers' money to tell the people of Canada what a wonderful job they were doing?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): I will assume, Mr. Speaker, that there is a question in that. I can assure the Hon. Member that the establishment of a communications unit is wholly consistent with normal government operations and responsible to the Deputy Minister. It will provide our Department with the capability to handle communications programs both at home and abroad on all trade issues. Specifically, it will answer the question the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap asked me in the House on October 27, which was: "How would she suggest I respond to my constituents when they ask me what are the implications of these talks on the Okanagan fruit industry and our fledgling breweries and wineries in British Columbia?" I have put in place a unit which will answer the questions which he and his Party raise.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, it is the Minister's job to explain that, not that of the taxpayers of Canada. Where was she at 11 o'clock when she should have stood in her place as a Minister and made those explanations under a Minister's Statement?

Some Hon. Members: On the beach.

GOVERNMENT ADVERTISING EXPENDITURES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my suplementary question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister who indicated that he would give the Minister the free trade ball; he did not realize that it was going to cost Canadian taxpayers $12 million for that ball. When his present Minister of National Defence was in opposition, he put forward the following motion:

> That this House condemns the Government for its increasing use of Canadian taxpayers' dollars for self-serving advertising—at a time when it demands financial sacrifices from ordinary Canadians.

How does the situation today differ from that condemnation which his Party put forth back in 1982?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I want to apologize to the House for any confusion. I stumbled momentarily into the NDP policy meeting on the weekend, and anything which comes out will obviously reflect on that. They, too, are serious matters, very serious matters, with which we are going to be dealing. With regard to the advertising or the public information campaigns, they are not in any way, nor will they be, the kinds of partisan advocacy campaigns that would have applied in the past. These will be—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mulroney: To the extent—

An Hon. Member: Quit smiling.

Mr. Mulroney: These will meet with the objective—

Mr. Broadbent: Can I write the ad?

• (1500)

Mr. Mulroney: I could even go back and get the speeches of the NDP from 1980 and put them in that—

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques.

CONFLICTS OF INTEREST

INQUIRY ABOUT WHO DECIDED TO INSTITUTE INVESTIGATION TO DISCOVER WHETHER GUIDELINES WERE FOLLOWED OR TRANSGRESSED IN OERLIKON CASE

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister and has to do with the Oerlikon case. The statement made yesterday by the Prime Minister is quite short, only 18 lines. It is rather brief to explain the dismissal of a Minister. I should like to ask the Prime Minister if it was his decision to institute an investigation to discover whether the conflicts of interest guidelines were followed or whether they were transgressed because, under the terms of these guidelines, it is up to him as Prime Minister to make sure that the guidelines were followed. Is the Prime Minister now making an investigation into this matter?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Yes, Mr. Speaker, it is indeed my responsibility as Prime Minister to make value judgments, and I made the judgment required under the circumstances. In addition, we have launched a full investigation into this matter and I know that my colleague will want to wait for the findings before making further comments on this.

REQUEST THAT PRIME MINISTER MAKE COMPLETE STATEMENT CONCERNING EVENTS WHICH LED TO HIS DISMISSAL OF MINISTER

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): As I just said, Mr. Speaker, 18 lines make a rather brief statement. I want to ask the Prime Minister whether he is prepared to make a complete statement before the House, at the earliest opportunity, concerning the events as he uncovered them and which led to his decision to dismiss a Minister of the Crown.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, my friend will see in the same statement that all the information I had was passed on to the RCMP. It is up to our national and independent police force to complete their investigation. And of course we will live not only with the results but also with the conclusions and recommendations of this investigation, as we should.

REFUGEES

INFLUX OF PERSONS FROM CENTRAL AMERICA VIA THE UNITED STATES

Mr. Ross Belsher (Fraser Valley East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. Canadians from all parts of our country are very angry with the apparent abuses of our refugee policy. In light of the media news last week indicating that there is a possible influx of people of central American extraction by way of the United States, what steps are being taken to help prevent this possible influx and abuse of our policy?

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Over the past three weeks, Mr. Speaker, I have had many opportunities to say that indeed the Government is concerned about the problem of refugees now seeking to enter this country. As to the Latin Americans, certainly we are monitoring the situation very closely on a daily basis and, depending on the number of refugees who want to be admitted here, should the situation force us to take other measures besides those we have already taken we will do so. For the time being, however, we are satisfied with closely monitoring the situation.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: I think Hon. Members will realize that there have been some interruptions during Question Period. I will take one question from the Hon. Member for York South—Weston.

FRANK MAJEAU—LACK OF SECURITY CHECK

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. It concerns the conduct of two other Ministers, the Solicitor General and the Minister without portfolio, the Hon. Member for Joliette, in the Frank Majeau affair. Why was a routine security check not done on Mr. Majeau in view of the fact that the RCMP were notified in May of the matter and in view of the fact that the Solicitor General was notified in October? In view of these facts, will the Prime Minister also initiate an RCMP investigation into the conduct of those two particular Ministers to determine whether they, in effect, stopped a security check into Mr. Majeau's background?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, it is true that the strict security procedures were not followed in this particular case. We regret that very much. There has been a full examination by PCO officials into all other matters affecting security clearances on the staffs of all Ministers. I am informed that that review is pretty well completed. I want to assure the House that any members of cabinet Ministers' staff who have not been security cleared who are handling sensitive information will be subject to that procedure. For those who have not cleared security, appropriate action will be taken.

Mr. Speaker: I must advise Hon. Members that Question Period is running a little late. There have been interruptions. I will recognize the Hon. Member for Vancouver East on one question and then we will have to close out Question Period. I thank Hon. Members.

DAY CARE

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister and it concerns the credibility of his child care statements. He said to the First Ministers "the federal Government wants to ensure that affordable quality child care is available to Canadian women", and, "we are prepared to allocate substantial resources". The Minister of National Health and Welfare recently expressed an opposite view and revealed his bias against day care which is urgently needed by the majority of families with young children.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): That is a falsehood.

Ms. Mitchell: Which person can Canadians believe, the Minister of National Health and Welfare or the Prime Minister, regarding the Government's child care policy?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I do not have any bias against child care and day-care centres. I said in an interview that the Government had committed itself to an expansion of the day-care system, that I fully endorsed it, and that I have the responsibility to bring forward a system at the end of this week to other Ministers as was confirmed by the Prime Minister in Vancouver.

The area of controversy, if, in fact, there is any—I was asked the question as well—concerns the only exclusive model that all Canadian children should be exposed to, but it varies from one family to another. One family is a single-parent family while another has both parents working outside the home.

Ms. Mitchell: Biased.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): It is a not a bias. In fact it is a much better view of the family than the Hon. Member's narrow view.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, as you are aware, discussions have been going on between the Government and the House Leaders of the other two Parties. That was alluded to this morning. I think you will find unanimous consent, Sir, to allow the order for the concurrence of the Ways and Means Motion to be tabled this afternoon as the first order of business so that we could get on with the debate on the softwood lumber issue which would implement the export tax.

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, the Official Opposition is willing to expedite the procedure of debate on second reading of the Government's measure to impose an export tax on softwood lumber—

Mr. Speaker: It seems to the Chair that after there has been a brisk Question Period, while there are clear signs of co-operation among all Parties to get on with other business in the House, it is appropriate that all Hon. Members let the House Leaders and others comment on the arrangement that is being made. The Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray).

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I want to say that in order to allow the debate on second reading of the Government's measure to impose an export tax on softwood lumber to begin today, we are willing to agree to expediting the various steps leading up to that point. However, I want to make it clear that this does not in any way change our opposition to this measure. Therefore, no one should be surprised that when the motion for concurrence is put, we will be voting against it. I am talking about a motion to concur in the Ways and Means motion which was tabled earlier today.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Chair understands perfectly the position faced by the Hon. Opposition House Leader. I now recognize the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis).

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, it is our intention, as we indicated earlier this morning, to co-operate with the Government to facilitate the immediate debate of the 15 per cent tax. Again, just to make the point very clear, our intention is to support the motion so that the process can get under way, but it is to be interpreted in no way as supporting the Government's initiative in terms of its agreement signed at the end of 1986.

• (1510)

Mr. Speaker: I want to thank Hon. Members for making that clear and I also want to thank them for their co-operation with the Chair. It has been a brisk Question Period and questions and answers were put vividly, but I think it is to the credit of the House that co-operation can be obtained and given freely to move on with the business. I want to advise all

Hon. Members that I understand the basis upon which the co-operation has been given.

WAYS AND MEANS

SOFTWOOD LUMBER PRODUCTS EXPORT CHARGE

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade) moved that a Ways and Means motion to impose a charge on the export of certain softwood lumber products laid upon the Table earlier this day be concurred in.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Miss Carney) which was agreed to on the following division:

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I declare the motion carried.

Motion agreed to.

SOFTWOOD LUMBER PRODUCTS EXPORT CHARGE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade) moved that Bill C-37, an Act respecting the imposition of a charge on the export of certain softwood lumber products, be now read the first time and be printed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): When shall the Bill be read the second time? By unanimous consent, now?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Miss Carney moved that the Bill be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. Before I entertain points of order Mr. Speaker will take the chair to make a ruling. The Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray).

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, with your amazing skill at these matters you actually anticipated and answered my point of order.

MOTION TO ADJOURN UNDER S.O. 29

FREE TRADE NEGOTIATIONS—CANADA-U.S. AUTO PACT

Mr. Speaker: As Hon. Members know, there was an application for an emergency debate by the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) with respect to which the Chair received notice some days ago and upon which the Chair heard discussion this morning. In view of the arrangements which have been made in the Chamber, there is no need for me to make any comment upon that particular application. However, there is another request for an emergency debate in the name of the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray). The Chair would like to deal with that request now.

The Hon. Member for Windsor West has given due notice of his intention to propose under Standing Order 29 a motion to adjourn the House for the purpose of considering an important matter relating to the Canada-United States free trade negotiations and, more particularly, issues relating to the Canada-United States Auto Pact.

[Translation]

The Chair is well aware that the Auto Pact and the free trade talks are a very important subjects of public debate. It also recognizes how important these matters are to the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray).

It is clear that the matter comes within the scope of ministerial action and is part of the Government's administrative responsibilities.

[English]

However, the terms of Standing Order 29 require that the matter proposed to be discussed be specific and that a genuine emergency be at least anticipated if not be fact. The Chair has some difficulty in establishing, on the basis of public statements made to date, whether the Auto Pact will or will not be part of the free trade negotiations and is therefore not convinced that a specific and genuine emergency exists at this time.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): That is our problem too.

Some Hon. Members: Right on!

Mr. Speaker: The Chair is conscious of the fact that, as some Hon. Members have just volunteered, the Chair's problem is also a problem for the House.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Furthermore, there must be urgency of debate for the Chair to acquiesce to such an application. The Hon. Member for Windsor West may wish to seek other opportunities to debate this matter and there are other avenues which he may want to explore in order to get his views on the record. However, and I emphasize this, for the time being the Chair must rule that his application does not satisfy the exigencies of Standing Order 29. I wish to thank the Hon. Member for Windsor West for his intervention and other Hon. Members for their attention to the ruling of the Chair.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

RESIGNATION OF HON. MEMBER FOR YUKON

Mr. Speaker: It is my obligation as Speaker to bring to the attention of Hon. Members the fact that I have received today a facsimile of a letter dated January 16 from the Hon. Eric Nielsen, Member of Parliament for Yukon. The facsimile reads as follows:

Whitehorse, Yukon
V1A 2A7

January 16, 1987

The Honourable John Fraser,
The Speaker of the House,
Room 222, North, Centre Block,
House of Commons,
Ottawa, Ontario
K1A 0A6

Dear Mr. Speaker:

This is to officially notify the House of Commons through you, that I hereby resign as Member of Parliament for Yukon effective January 16, 1987 and ask that you convey this to the House on Monday.

Sincerely,
Erik Nielsen,
Member of Parliament for Yukon

There are witnesses duly noted on the letter.

I wish to bring to the attention of all Hon. Members the fact that the Chair has sought the advice of parliamentary counsel on this matter. While this is a facsimile and it is in my view clearly a matter of importance, it should be brought to the House at the first opportunity. I have discussed with the Hon. Member for Yukon the fact that the obligation on the Speaker to refer the matter to the Chief Electoral Officer cannot take place until the original of this document is actually received.

I am advised by the Hon. Member, and have no reason to doubt him, that that particular document has been sent by the usual means to this place.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: That may well be the reason that the Hon. Member for Yukon wished me to make this announcement to Hon. Members this afternoon. In any event, when the original document is received—and I think the Chair is bound by the statute to wait until it is received—the appropriate steps will be taken.

I know that all Hon. Members, especially those of us who have known the Hon. Member for Yukon for many years in different capacities and on different sides of the House, would want me to express to him in the Chamber the accord, the affection and the admiration in which he has been held for many years by all Hon. Members, and perhaps to remember how vividly and vigorously he fought for that which he thought was right and proper in the service of our country.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

SOFTWOOD LUMBER PRODUCTS EXPORT CHARGE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Miss Carney that Bill C-37, an Act respecting the imposition of a charge on the export of certain softwood lumber products, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. In order to facilitate debate it is the desire of the two opposition Parties to ask for the consent of the House to defer Private Members' Hour until the lead-off speakers of all three Parties have had an opportunity to complete their remarks. I do not wish to put that forward in a formal motion, but if there could be an understanding that we complete the first three speeches, and then go on to Private Member's Hour?

• (1600)

Mr. Speaker: The House has heard the request of the Hon. Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski). Is there agreement?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: Members have indicated agreement.

On debate, the Hon. Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney).

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, you are aware that we have finally reached an agreement with the United States on the issue of softwood lumber, after months of intense effort on behalf of the Government, and after a study of the many complex issues that this matter brought before us.

I wish to remind you that one of the reasons why this is so important, and the measures we are taking are so vital, is that Canada is very much a forest nation. Including our northern territories, all of Canada in some way is involved with forestry, as is all of Canada involved in some way with trade.

I wish to assure the House that in bringing forward this measure we have acted in the national interest, we have acted consistent with our GATT obligations, and we have acted in a way that is infinitely better than the alternative before us, which was to accept a countervailing duty.

In terms of the national interest, I would like to review with you that we in our agreement moved to protect our sovereignty. The Opposition would allow the U.S. to overrun our forests. We acted to protect our revenues. The Opposition would pay these revenues to the U.S. We acted to protect our industries. The Opposition would expose those industries to other countervails. We acted to protect jobs. The Opposition's preferred option, countervail, would cost jobs.

In terms of dealing with our GATT obligations, I would like to remind the House that Canada is an international trader. We are in the big leagues in trade. Canada, along with the European Community, the U.S., and Japan, are the four big trading interests which account for 40 per cent of the world trade. The Opposition would take us out of the big leagues. The Liberals would send us down to the minors. The NDP would leave us on the bench.

In terms of the countervail, I can only quote the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). As the Prime Minister has stated, in terms of the countervail if we had a choice between this agreement and perfection, we would have taken perfection. But we had a choice between this negotiated agreement on our terms, and a countervail. In this agreement we have the best settlement possible, given the alternatives which we faced.

I would like to briefly outline the options, the process, the demands, and the results achieved in this agreement. First, I wish to remind the House that this is not a new issue. Our research shows that the earliest attempts to block softwood lumber exports to the U.S. were in 1892.

In 1983, faced with a similar countervail threat, we won the preliminary determination. However, in 1986 we lost the preliminary determination, and a 15 per cent duty was declared. Therefore, under international law, and under U.S. trade law, we faced three options. We could fight and risk losing the case and paying countervail duties to the U.S. Treasury. We could plead guilty that our stumpage programs were subsidies. This is a position that Canada has always maintained is not the case. Our second option was to plead guilty that our stumpage programs were subsidies and enter into a suspension agreement to keep the additional moneys in Canada. The third option open to us was to negotiate a settlement in order to protect the thousands of Canadians who work in the industry, while protecting the right of the provinces to manage their resources, and to keep forest revenues in Canada.

The Canadian Government engaged in full consultations with the provinces, labour, and industry. We explored all the options consistent with our duty to protect Canada's interest.

A split developed between the provinces as to what approach we should take. This is important, because this Government has always maintained the constitutional right of the provinces to their natural resources, a right that the Liberal Government has ignored in the past.

Ontario wished to proceed to the final decision in the hopes of reversing it, or if that failed, challenging it in the U.S. courts. British Columbia and Quebec are the major owners with 80 per cent of the forests. They favoured negotiating a suspension agreement to keep the money in Canada.

In discussion with the U.S. Commerce officials we became increasingly convinced that notwithstanding our strong case, we would lose the final determination. Such a final determination would have been an open invitation for any special interest group in the U.S. to file a petition against our other resource exports, because that would have put on the books, through the final determination, a precedent which could be used against our other export industries. Thus, in November, I concluded that fighting the case through to the finish would almost certainly entrench a dangerous legal precedent, and see the resulting countervail duties flow to the U.S. Treasury. I may remind the opposition Parties that the duties could well have been higher than 15 per cent. The U.S. industry was asking for 36 per cent. We had no reason to believe that it would be safe to assume that we would only have a 15 per cent duty.

It is our position that we do not fight to lose cases. We fight to win cases. On the other hand, the suspension agreement approach which was favoured by B.C. and Quebec was equally unpalatable. That would have surrendered our forest management policies to the U.S. Government. That was totally unacceptable to the Government of Canada.

The proposal that I developed with Secretary Baldrige came the closest to meeting the objectives of all parties. It was presented to the First Ministers' Conference in November. The Premiers agreed to see if we could explore it. The benefits of seeking a negotiated settlement were very clear. It would meet both national and provincial objectives, increased revenues would be kept in Canada, and these could be used to replenish the forests. These revenues will be returned to the provinces and the provinces have the right to use them for silvaculture, reforestation, worker retraining, or other things within their constitutional jurisdiction.

The provinces would retain their flexibility in determining stumpage pricing, which is very important to the two provinces that had stumpage increases in their systems planned and were caught in the vice of the threatened countervail.

It would avoid the dangerous development in U.S. countervail policy by having the petition withdrawn, because it was central to this negotiation that in return for a negotiated settlement the actual petition that was brought by the U.S. intra groups, the U.S. coalition of lumber, would be withdrawn, and further conflict between the provinces on how they determine their natural resource management policies would remain unimpaired. Unlike a suspension agreement, the U.S. authorities could not infringe Canadian sovereignty by policing provincial management practices.

The agreement we reached with the United States meets all of these objectives. It is important to stress that it is supported by the nine provinces that own the resource, the union that represents the forestry workers, and important elements of the industry. For our B.C. Members of Parliament, it may be useful to note that the B.C. NDP critic, Bob Williams, was reported in the media as saying that the softwood accord was "a pretty good deal". It was the best that could be obtained in difficult circumstances. Moreover, it was reached on our terms, because the key clauses that were on the table at the start of the negotiations were on the table at the end of the negotiations.

Much has been made by the critics about the alleged infringement of Canadian sovereignty. This is really a phoney issue. All countries regularly conclude international agreements in which they agree to restrict their freedom of action, even in the Auto Pact that the NDP is so worried about.

• (1610)

All agreements between countries is an exercise of sovereignty, by the very willingness and ability of countries to enter into them. Our sovereignty is undiminished and, if at some future date we were to decide to terminate the agreement, that too would be an exercise of sovereignty.

What has Canada agreed to do in this agreement? During the course of the negotiations the U.S. coalition made many demands upon Canada. It is fundamental to understand that under existing U.S. trade law any interest group in the United States can bring this kind of action against any Canadian export. This is why we are seeking to negotiate a new trade treaty with the U.S.—to change these rules so that we avoid these kinds of border disputes.

One of the demands which the U.S. coalition sought was to establish a floor price regardless of market conditions. It sought to dictate how Canadian stumpage policies would operate. It demanded specific changes in provincial systems within a defined time frame, with a joint supervisory committee to oversee the changes.

The opposition Parties forget that what the U.S. coalition was asking for was a $1.1 billion increase in stumpage in one year. That is what they were seeking, and that is what they did not get. That is almost three times the existing levels of stumpage collected in the country.

If the idea of the joint board had been accepted, the U.S. Government would be able to dictate how our policies should be made and implemented. That was totally unacceptable to Canada, and we rejected it out of hand.

The U.S. administration has expressly recognized Canadian sovereignty in its statement of January 2, wherein it said that "The United States Government will not be concerned with how Canadian authorities make changes in their forest management practices. When they do so or what form these changes take. These are matters for Canadians to decide."

I also assure the Opposition that I personally telephoned Mr. Yeutter, the U.S. trade representative, to make it clear, in terms of the letter which was quoted, that the U.S. had a choice—either we had an agreement on the terms that the U.S. accepted with the statement I have just read from Ambassador Niles, or the U.S. would be in contradiction of the agreement it had just signed. These are all the essential qualities—

Mr. Axworthy: What did he say?

Miss Carney: The Opposition asks: "What did he say?" They issued the statement; that is what they did. They issued the statement which said: "These are matters for Canadians to decide".

The Hon. Member has been spreading misleading information about this matter in a way which is detrimental to the national interest.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss Carney: The only item which is the subject of consultation and agreement is the calculation of the value of any changes in the export tax, because the export tax is a 15 per cent tax at the border. At some point in time it is planned to phase it, in whole or in part, into increased stumpage, if that is what the provinces wish to do, and the U.S. has the reasonable right to ensure that the conversion from an export tax to stumpage meets the criterion of 15 per cent.

It must not be forgotten that if the countervail had been imposed, Commerce officials would have been coming into Canada, as they did on the preliminary determination, and would have verified provincial and industry books. They would be in the forest services records, they would be in the forests, and they would decide unilaterally how we were going about this method. That unacceptable practice has been avoided.

Under the agreement the information we will provide to the U.S. is essentially in the public domain and does not involve U.S. officials entering Canada to audit and verify it. Reaching this agreement is a major accomplishment. When compared with a suspension agreement, the settlement is infinitely preferable. Like a suspension agreement the money stays in Canada but, more important, the intrusive policing of provincial management practices which a suspension agreement entails has been avoided.

What the Opposition also fails to realize is that if the countervail had gone into effect as expected—and I hope every B.C. Member is conscious of this—the Canadian forest industry would have been faced with a double whammy of both a duty and an increase in stumpage, because the only way one can get rid of a countervail is to increase stumpage to the point where the Commerce Department in the U.S. unilaterally decides that the alleged subsidy was offset.

Here we have an industry which now has a 15 per cent tax that with a countervail would have had both the tax and increases in stumpage to offset it—a 30 per cent plus double whammy. We knew that the Canadian forestry industry could not sustain it. We negotiated the settlement because we knew the double hit of 30 per cent plus would break the industry.

In this we were supported by the IWA which said that the negotiated settlement was absolutely essential. I would like to read the particular paragraph where the IWA said: "We would suggest that many negative comments have been both ill-informed and ill-founded". The IWA also told us: "We . . . strongly believe that it was absolutely essential to conclude a negotiated settlement with the United States which will guarantee that the increased taxes on softwood lumber shipments to the United States be kept in Canada".

I am really looking forward to British Columbia NDP Members of Parliament returning to their ridings, because the IWA has stood by this even when the NDP asked them to back off. The NDP asked them to back off, and the IWA would not. The IWA has been barnstorming around, saying: "This is the letter which we sent the Minister and this is the letter we stand by".

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss Carney: Some critics have predicted massive job losses resulting from our agreement.

As a federal Minister of course I am always concerned about the employment effects of government actions, but we must recognize a few points. First, the forest industry has always been a cyclical one with ups and downs. Second, as the shakes and shingles tariff has shown, the effects of a tariff or charge are difficult to predict. The NDP were maintaining that thousands of people would be laid off and that terror would reign in the woods. As a matter of record, that industry, although it has suffered, has in no way experienced nearly the catastrophe which the NDP suggested.

I can also say that the IWA has made the following clear, in terms of job loss in its letter to me:

> The second assumption is that the Canadian sawmilling industry will be unable to compete under the burden of a 15 per cent export levy. We regret the fact that not all Canadian sawmills will survive, and that some jobs will be lost.

As of course does the Government. It continues:

> It should not be assumed, however, that a substantial portion of the Canadian sawmilling industry will disappear.

In its letter it gives some well reasoned arguments why.

Where do we go from here? Last week I, along with my colleague, the very able Minister of State for Forestry and Mines (Mr. Merrithew), met with the provincial Ministers. We reviewed the agreement. A federal-provincial task force has been established to review all aspects relating to the implementation of the agreement. We will have a subgroup of forest Ministers, headed by the Hon. Len Simms of Newfoundland, which will study the matter of replacement measures. We will work together to ensure that we iron out the problems which the industry faces.

Before closing, I want to deal with some side issues which have been raised today in debate or in the newspapers. First, one of our colleagues from New Brunswick is worried about the impact on his province. I want to point out that the Government of Canada maintained for his province the 92 per cent exemption on lumber exports contained in the preliminary. In the preliminary decision, 20 firms won an exemption, and 92 per cent of New Brunswick's exports were thus protected. In the negotiations and in the final determination mechanism, the U.S. was moving to take away those exemptions and to expose the New Brunswick industry. We fought for New Brunswick and we maintained the exemption.

In the so-called Dennison letter, which is a self-serving letter, the U.S. told lumber producers, in effect, all the things they could not win at the bargaining table. It is a side letter which has no standing in Canada. It is a side letter which the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) is trotting around as some sort of legal document. He knows that the negotiator for the U.S. side told him that it was a letter for Americans, that it had no standing. He was told that personally by the U.S. negotiator in Washington last week. Knowing that, and having been told that it has no standing for Canadians, he still purports that this is some kind of legal document, and that is misleading the public.

Some Hon. Members: Shame, shame!

• (1620)

Miss Carney: The NDP today in, I hope, an innocent error suggested that the export tax would apply to the added value of manufactured products. That is not true. We negotiated very hard.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): I checked half an hour ago.

Miss Carney: The Hon. Member said he checked. He did not check with us.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): A half an hour ago.

Miss Carney: He did not check with the Government of Canada because we negotiated an arrangement where the tax applies only to the lumber inputs, not to the added value.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): Phone your people in London, Ontario.

Miss Carney: I refer the Hon. Member to the agreement. That was the second last clause that we dealt with. This too is better than a countervail because a countervail would have been applied to the whole product, as the New Democratic Party was suggesting.

In terms of jobs, I want to point out that the Members of the NDP travelled around this country with a task force and, as the media reported, they could not find any lay-offs directly attributable to the export tax, which is quite proper. This is a period of cyclical downturn for some mills and employment is related to the market.

Just one final point, Mr. Speaker. There were suggestions during these discussions that this agreement would be so bad for the industry that it would be paralysed. After seeing some of the statements, I thought people would be leaping out of windows and that terrible things would be happening to the forestry industry. It is worth noting that the market says differently. Stocks of those companies have gone up dramatically since this agreement.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss Carney: The Chairman of MacMillan Bloedel said that this agreement would paralyse us and that thousands of people would be laid off, but his stock market price at December 29 was $41-7/8 while on January 18 it was $49.50, a 21 per cent increase. That is not bad. I know the stock. It is probably the best increase it has ever achieved in anything like that time frame.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss Carney: Canfor stocks are up. That company has had problems, but its stock is up 21.8 per cent. Abitibi's stock is up 7.2 per cent. West Fraser, a smaller operation, is up 5.73 per cent. The forestry index went up a total of 8.6 per cent since December 29, before the agreement was signed, and last Friday when the market closed. The Hon. Member opposite says the Tories measure things by the stock market. That is not the point. This is the way the market operates. This is what investors think. Investors think that this industry is better off after the agreement than before. That is important because it is investors who will put up money for jobs.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McDermid: The NDP don't understand it.

Miss Carney: In closing, Mr. Speaker, let me refer to one more paragraph from the letter from the IWA. It is an important paragraph:

> The International Woodworkers of America recognize that the negotiated settlement of the softwood lumber dispute does impose an additional burden on the Canadian sawmilling industry. However, given the fact that the U.S. government would have imposed such a burden in any case, the current solution represents the lesser of two evils. We believe that in time adjustments can be made which will permit the Canadian industry to survive and to prosper in the future.
> Those adjustments will require a high degree of co-operation between industry, government and labour. It is important to proceed as soon as possible with the search for these solutions.

I concur with the IWA. It is time for us to put this matter behind us, time for us to work out the agreement, implement it, and time to get on with the job of negotiating a new trade treaty.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

RESIGNATION OF HON. MEMBER FOR YUKON

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Perhaps I could take a minute before the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) makes his speech. We heard earlier from you, Sir, that the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) has given notice, although by means of a fascimile of a letter that you have received, of his intention to resign. A date is on that letter. I simply want to know if it is possible for the usual kinds of statements to be made in the House.

I found it very surprising that, for a Member who had been here some 25 years, an announcement of this kind could be made in the House of Commons without any response at all about a man, need I say, with whom I disagreed on most political matters, but who nonetheless made a great contribution as he saw it to the people of Canada in Parliament and before that as a member of our armed services. I found it, frankly, a little surprising that we did not get some initiative from the Government to make comments about a man who was Deputy Prime Minister of Canada. Maybe we could do that.

Mr. Speaker: The point the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent) makes is an act of benevolence and friendship which is properly suited to this place. Perhaps the fault lay with me and, if so, I regret that. Perhaps in making the announcement I should have called on Hon. Members to make comments. The reason that was not done this afternoon is that we have not yet received, according to the statute, the official document.

Perhaps some consultation could take place among the Parties and the Chair would be very, very pleased tomorrow if proper tribute could be given. I see the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) nodding. If there were some agreement to that, I am sure the Chair could make those arrangements tomorrow at the appropriate time. Would the Hon. Member for Oshawa accept that as the appropriate way to conduct ourselves?

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, first, my comments did not indicate any criticism of you. What you have now suggested is a procedure which seems to be sensible for Members on all sides of the House.

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I think the comments of my hon. friend have been helpful as have yours. We will initiate discussions to find an appropriate time when this procedure can take place.

Mr. Speaker: I thank the Hon. Member for Oshawa for bringing this matter to the attention of the House. It was concerning the Chair. I felt that in view of the statute perhaps some discussion should take place before the proper things were said by all Hon. Members.

Mr. Prud'homme: As Winston Churchill once said: "Are you sure he really resigned?"

An Hon. Member: Are you talking about Pierre?

Mr. Speaker: The Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition.

SOFTWOOD LUMBER PRODUCTS EXPORT CHARGE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Miss Carney that Bill C-37, an Act respecting the imposition of a charge on the export of certain softwood lumber products, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the Bill before the House incorporates an agreement, which presumably in due course will be tabled, between the United States and Canada affecting our exports of softwood lumber into the U.S. market. I am glad that the Minister, although she has claimed on several occasions that this was a great victory for Canada, did not go one step farther and claim it was historic. I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, that it will go down in history as the greatest sell-out in the history of our negotiations with the United States and the greatest betrayal of a major industry of Canada by a Minister who should be responsible for export potential.

Our industry, with very few exceptions, will pay a 15 per cent export tax on every bit of softwood lumber going into the United States. It will cost the lumber industry on the basis of this tax about $600 million, maybe more. As I will attempt to portray to the House, as this tax is converted into a timber-cutting fee or a stumpage fee at the provincial level, it may well amount to a tax of $950 million to $1 billion against the industry, not just for one year but year after year. Mills will close. Thousands of Canadian workers will lose their jobs and all the Minister has to say to this House, and said earlier, is that "by limiting the Americans only to the arithmetic we kept them out of our forests, out of our books and out of our hair." She made that argument in an interview with a reporter from The Globe and Mail on January 6. She repeated it here today. I want to tell the Minister and the Government,—the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) has just left—that this country surrendered more sovereignty than I can remember in any individual transaction.

The United States now has the right to set the price of our exports of lumber, to set the tax against it, to review how that tax is converted into a fee and to reach into all the documentation necessary to buttress that position. It was a complete sell-out.

What is even more astounding about the Minister's characterization of the agreement is that, to use her words, "it was reached on our terms". She said that in a statement made on January 5. She also said that Canadian sovereignty has been and will be maintained. She added that had the Government accepted the American arguments, "the U.S. Government would be able to dictate how our policies should be made and implemented; and . . . that it was totally unacceptable to Canada and we rejected it out of hand." Then she added that the only item that is the subject of consultation and agreement is the calculation of the value of changes in the export charge. That is not a minor side issue. That is the central point of the entire agreement.

The charges that will be imposed under the agreement which the Minister will eventually table cannot be altered or converted in any way into a provincial levy by us without the complete consent and supervision of the United States.

Miss Carney: That's not true.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): That is what the documents reveal. Not only does the agreement bear that out but the interpretation placed upon the agreement by the Secretary of Commerce and the chief American trade representative in a joint letter to the U.S. Coalition of Lumber is that "the U.S. Government would have to approve any changes in the export charge or any calculation of the value of any replacement measures. Any changes made without U.S. Government approval would be considered a violation of the understanding". That is how the Americans interpret the agreement. If Canada or the provinces operate counter to that understanding, then the Americans will exercise the 30-day clause that will bring the agreement to a termination. If that happens, our Government will have waived its rights before the Inter-State Trade Commission of the United States and before the international tribunals under GATT. Because of this agreement, under Section 301 of the U.S. Trade Act, the President can unilaterally impose a 15 per cent duty right off the bat. As a result of the brilliant negotiations of this Government—

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): An absolute falsehood.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I see that the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) is here. We are in a no-win situation for Canada.

Mr. McDermid: John, you're absolutely wrong.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I can understand the apoplexy on the other side of the House. The Government threw away Canada's bargaining position. If this agreement is terminated by the Americans, they have a unilateral right to proceed by presidential decree under Section 301 of the U.S. Trade Act.

Mr. McDermid: They have anyway.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Not while those petitions were before the International Trade Commission. I say to government Members that they had better start getting proper advice.

The final paragraph of the letter written by the Secretary of Commerce and the U.S. trade representative to the U.S. industry, goes on to state exactly what actions on the part of either level of Government will be considered by them to be violations. Let us recite some of those actions: "one, rebate, remission, deferral or non-collection of the export charge except as provided in the understanding; two, the provision of grants, low-cost loans and other benefits; three, exemption from obligations otherwise imposed by the Government of Canada and other governmental bodies in Canada; four, assumption of obligations currently borne by the producers or exporters of certain softwood lumber products; five, reduction in the price of stumpage or other charges on softwood timber harvested from provincial Crown lands; six, changes in log scaling or lumber measurement rules or procedures which affect volume determination; seven, awarding contracts for silvaculture, road building, recreational and other forestry activities on a non-competitive basis."

In other words, the Americans interpret this agreement as saying that if any provincial or federal Government gives an incentive to anyone in the forest industry by way of a road, reforestation, stumpage relief or regional development grants, it can be considered a breach or violation of the understanding subjecting us to the 30-day cancellation clause and leaving us at presidential discretion under the U.S. Trade Act. That is what the Government has done to the industry, the workers and the provinces.

I gather the agreement will ultimately be tabled because the Bill indicates that it will be tabled and it is part of the legislation. The agreement indicates that there will be an exchange of information and monitoring between the two Governments. However, it is not an exchange, it is a one-way flow from us to them. Not one log will move without the Americans knowing every detail.

I would like to quote from Section 7(a) of the agreement which is part of this Bill:

> The Government of Canada will provide the Government of the United States of America with data concerning the level of Provincial and Federal softwood and total stumpage harvest, the total revenue collected from the sale of Provincial and Federal softwood and total timber, total export charge collected, total shipments of certain softwood products to the United States of America, total lumber production by province and total softwood lumber production by province, for each fiscal year within three months of the close of the fiscal year—

The United States Government will be receiving more information than our Government currently receives. If the Americans become concerned in any way with any perceived problem of evasion of the tax, all they have to do is demand all the data they need and we are obliged to provide it.

The agreement states as well that that information will be held "in the strictest confidence" and will be made "available only to those government employees directly involved in the review of the identified problem". The American Government gets all the information it needs and promises to hold it in confidence in accordance with the agreement but here again, I would like to turn to the letter from the Secretary of Commerce and the chief trade representative of the United States to the American lumber industry. Mr. Baldrige and Mr. Yeutter state that "the U.S. Government will consult closely with the petitioner, the Coalition for Fair Lumber Imports, concerning the implementation and operation of this agreement and will provide information to assist the Coalition to evaluate the operation and enforcement of this agreement." That does not sound like much of a guarantee of confidentiality to me. Every aspect of the industry will be opened up to inspection, comment and evaluation by its American competitors. Yet the Minister calls this a victory.

Using the currently fashionable vocabulary of the United States to describe the super-power arms negotiations, the Minister has said that the other side blinked. The Yankee trader did not blink at all. He looked the Minister straight in the eye, took a swing and scored a TKO. It is our lumber industry which is being carried out of the ring on a stretcher. Our industry will be hobbled by the necessity to report to the Americans every tree that is cut down, every log that is brought to a mill, every board that is sawed up. Whether it is rough, dressed or worked, whether it is sideboard or clapboard, whether it is flooring in strips, planks, blocks or assembled units, the United States will now have a complete inventory of our forest products.

The Minister claimed victory. Napoleon could have used her at Waterloo. At least Napoleon got to the battle. Our Minister was slicing up pineapples on a beach in Hawaii when this agreement was finally negotiated and the industry was being sliced up piece by piece and given chunk by chunk to Washington.

If the Minister had been advising Napoleon, she could have reached him before he got to Elba and said: "Look, I have a little $12-million fund. You were not defeated at Waterloo. I have $12 million to convert that into a victory. We will go across Europe telling people that we scored a great victory". This would have eliminated the need for Napoleon to go into exile and would have given him a second career. Who knows.

Mind you, I believe that that is a corruption of history. However, the Canadian people will remember the truth and they will make the proper judgment about this particular agreement. They will remember that the Minister and the Government met their own Waterloo by signing this deplorable agreement. No flock of geese, no matter how majestic or beautifully photographed, is going to change that fact.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Whose geese are those?

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): This agreement determines the price, the tax, and the profits of our industry, and monitors its every aspect. It sets a dangerous precedent for every other resource export. What is going to happen to our pulp and paper now? Or, our potash? Or, our oil and gas? Now that the American Government knows the Minister has no guts in negotiations, every industry in the U.S. will be tempted to get a similar deal. They will look the Minister and the Government in the eye and we will see more of this style of negotiation.

Mr. McDermid: Your old law firm will probably represent them.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): When the Prime Minister appointed that Minister he said: "Now, you watch Pat Carney go. She has the ball, just watch her run. Hang on to your hats." We watched her run with the ball. She ran the wrong way. She scored on our team. I know your preferences on Saturday, Mr. Speaker, but I doubt whether either Denver or New York are going to want that Minister's particular talent in the Super Bowl.

Mr. McDermid: You have that wrong, too. It is on Sunday.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): It is on Sunday, that is right. The Prime Minister said "Watch Pat Carney go". Canadians are asking one question: When?

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, once again the Government has bowed down to the U.S. administration and the big U.S. companies.

The Government has offered to put restrictions on our lumber industry. Why? Because the Americans complained. Those bad Canadians had an undue advantage, according to them. Our workers in the softwood lumber industry are the villains of the story. They need a lesson. They have to be punished. For what? What terrible crime did they commit? They worked so efficiently and their products were so competitive, so good in fact too good, that the Americans had to set themselves up as defenders of the private sector and restrict exports of our products to their country.

And did the Government defend those workers? Did it point out to the Americans that they were wrong and that the problem was not us but them? Did it tell them they were the ones who should put their house in order and become more competitive?

Mr. Speaker, we have analyzed the costs that determine the price of our forest products. With adjustments, a given piece of lumber costs practically the same in Canada as in the United States. The problem is not provincial tariffs or stumpage fees. The problem is the value of the Canadian dollar.

That is why our forestry industry was so confident it would be able to repeat its success before the U.S. courts in 1983, since neither the facts nor the legislation have changed. The only thing that has changed is the determination, courage, persistance and negotiating skills of our Minister and the Government of Canada.

[English]

When the U.S. Vice-President and Secretary of the Treasury come here on Wednesday, I would think the first question the Prime Minister would want to put to those two eminent gentlemen is: Are you really looking toward a free trade agreement with Canada, or are you really looking toward managed trade? Is it not a fact that these negotiations are being used by the U.S. to set up an umbrella of so-called free trade negotiations while they use it as a lever to pick us apart commodity by commodity and impose unilateral countervailing duties on us? They know our Government is so anxious politically to get an over-all agreement that it will surrender control over any particular commodity until the agreement is concluded and sell those groups right down the river as has happened here.

Are we dealing with free trade or managed trade? As far as the U.S. is concerned, this is an ideal example of how to manage their trading problem. What the U.S. appears to be doing in London, in addition to looking for other items to attack because of the negotiating ineptness of this Government, is to reduce its trade deficit item by item, country by country, product by product. It has used these trade negotiations with Canada to achieve just that.

The negotiations were pathetically weak. The Minister's position was one of continual vacillation. On behalf of our lumber industry, and without its consent, she gave in. She gave in without a fight even though we won the case in 1983 and nothing changed since then. She pleaded guilty on behalf of our industry before the dispute had been settled. This was despite the fact that in a statement by the Minister of State for Forestry (Mr. Merrithew) and the President of the Treasury Board (Mr. de Cotret) it was the Canadian Government's view that the preliminary countervailing duty decision in October, which she says worried her so much, was "flawed in law, inconsistent with established U.S. practice, and in some important respects based on erroneous assumptions."

If the Government of Canada believed that, why did it not press the case instead of entering negotiations? We have yet to hear a satisfactory explanation as to why the Minister, in her own words on January 5, "became increasingly convinced that notwithstanding our strong case we would lose the final determination." We have yet to hear any convincing explanation from her as to why that was so. How does she know what the U.S. tribunal would have decided? How does she know what the U.S. International Trade Commission would have decided?

There is another important question. Why did the U.S. industry agree to only 15 per cent if everyone was so sure it would get that much and more from its own Government through a decision to impose countervailing duties? As the Minister said again today, the U.S. industry was asking for nearly double the 15 per cent. Surely it would have been in their interest to go for the highest countervailing duty possible. The fact that the American coalition, in a very short space of time, went for a lower rate is a clear indication that they were not at all certain their case would succeed.

Miss Carney: Not true.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): What is clear is that they became more and more confident. Every time our Minister came in with final offer after final offer after final offer, they said "This is just too good to be true. Let's press them and get this deal because it is probably better than anything we can get before our own tribunal and we got nothing in 1983, so why not take the deal?" What the Americans saw was a Minister and a Government desperate for any deal that would salvage the free trade talks.

As our Minister presented the humiliating spectacle of making final offer after final offer, they had an admirable opportunity to get what they wanted without going through a prolonged legal process. Thanks to the Government we will never know what the outcome of that process might have been because all those other avenues, as I have explained, are now closed to us. We have waived our rights before the U.S.

International Trade Commission. We have waived our rights under GATT. We are now in an agreement with the United States within the meaning of their trade law. If that agreement is cancelled or violated in the opinion of the U.S., then the President of the U.S. has the unilateral right under Section 301 to move against us.

Miss Carney: Always has had the right.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): We have surrendered our rights and now we are completely at the mercy of the President of the U.S. In fact, only now do we learn that a report prepared by the ITC, apparently released on September 23, which would have formed the basis for its final decision, showed clearly that the U.S. lumber industry was not being severely hurt by Canadian lumber imports and the decision could very well have gone in Canada's favour. I asked the Minister if she was aware of that report.

[Translation]

If the Minister was not aware of the report published on December 23 by the International Trade Commission, was she not at least aware of some of the facts it contained? Didn't Canada make any studies of the situation in the U.S. lumber industry? In any case, the Minister and the Government have shown incredible incompetence by negotiating without having all the facts.

It was not one of Canada's shining moments. Personally, I'm convinced that given that kind of choice, most Canadians would have told the Americans to go to hell.

Our representatives should have fought to the very end and negotiated only if the decision handed down was not in our favour.

We could also have defended our case at GATT, instead of giving up on that solution as well.

• (1650)

[English]

The Minister now claims that we prevented the Americans from considering our stumpage practices to be a subsidy, and that she prevented the Americans from establishing that as a precedent to be used against other natural resource exports into the American market. However, how did the United States Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Baldrige, and the U.S. trade representative, Mr. Yeutter, explain the deal to the U.S. industry in that same letter? In the second paragraph of the letter of December 30 they say that our 15 per cent tax "is being imposed for the purposes of offsetting Canadian stumpage subsidies". Therefore, the Minister has not convinced the Americans that stumpage is not a subsidy. The best she has managed is that the U.S. Government agrees, for purposes of the agreement before the House only, that the positions of either Government will not be prejudiced by the agreement. However, the American industry reserves the right to file another petition against our lumber at any time it decides the deal is not working in its favour.

I have said that there is a 30-day cancellation clause. I have said that the President of the United States is in a very solid position. Our Government has placed us in a no-win situation and the United States in an absolutely no-lose position.

The impact upon Canadian consumers will quite simply be that we will all pay more for everything for which lumber is used, beginning with housing. We will pay considerably more, particularly if the tax is converted to an increase in provincial stumpage fees as envisaged in the agreement. Increases in stumpage will affect all lumber products in Canada, not only exports to the United States. The real price for Canadians could go as high as $950 million to $1 billion per year. In fact, in order to meet the 15 per cent level, stumpage in some parts of British Columbia will have to be quadrupled which, according to Peter Pearse, an expert in these matters from the University of British Columbia—

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Where did he run?

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): He ran in Vancouver Quadra at one time.

Miss Carney: He supports our position.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I have been in recent communication with him. I want to assure the Minister that she should not count on that type of support too firmly. Professor Pearse said the increased stumpage fees "would make an awful lot of our timber in Canada uneconomic to harvest. That difference makes a lot of lumber uneconomic and that means we would have a lot less timber available to use than before."

He said that in an interview with The Toronto Star. He recently prepared a paper entitled: "Forest Policy and Timber Supply in Coastal British Columbia: Progress and Prospects". He delivered this paper on January 14 of this year. He takes us through the problem of higher stumpage. He said the following:

> A final worry about the economic timber supply arises out of the U.S. countervailing tariff debacle.

He calls it a debacle as it surely is. He continued:

> As we all know, the American lumber lobby has withdrawn its petition for a tariff against Canadian lumber on the condition that the Government of Canada imposes a 15 percent export duty on our lumber entering the United States.
> And the arrangement between the federal government and the provinces is that the export duty may be replaced by increases in provincial stumpage rates or other levies that are equivalent to the 15 percent duty.

Here is the rub:

> We do not yet know how our provincial government will collect the replacement levies, but if the stumpage system is to be the main vehicle this could mean very hefty increases in stumpage rates.
> Very roughly, 15 percent on a lumber price of $240 is about $35 per (thousand board feet). To have an equivalent impact on lumber price, stumpage rates would have to increase by (35 over 5) seven or eight dollars per cubic metre, nearly tripling the current average stumpage rate on the coast.

On the copy which the professor sent to me he annotated: "and close to quadrupling it in the interior of the Province of British Columbia". He goes on to say:

> Leaving aside the endless debate about reasonable stumpage rates, I want to make two observations about this prospect. One is simply that higher stumpage charges have the same effect on the margin of profitability of timber stands as higher logging costs or lower log values. Because our economic timber supply is so sensitive to these factors any increase in stumpage charges, especially if it is applied across the board, will further diminish our recoverable resource stock.
> My second observation is that a substantial part of coastal timber is manufactured into products other than lumber, and much of the lumber is sold in markets other than the United States.
> The 15 percent federal export tax will reduce the competitiveness of our lumber in U.S. markets only, whereas a stumpage increase with equivalent impact will hamper the competitiveness of all products in all markets.

Of course, that is what is contemplated under the agreement and that is what is contemplated under the terms of the Bill. We will want an amendment to that. We want to see what the actual transfers of money to the provinces will be and what the stumpage rates will be.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the Government misread the situation. There was already free trade in the lumber industry. Until now, all our lumber exporters in Quebec, Ontario, British Columbia and other provinces have had free access to the American market. We paid for that privilege when we negotiated many years ago in Tokyo and provided free access for other American products to the Canadian market. That is when we paid for the privilege of having free access to the United States for our lumber exports.

Costs were about the same in Canada and in the United States. The real problem comes from the value of our dollar. It has nothing to do with stumpage fees. Yet, the agreement contained in this Bill includes no provision which would allow a review of this issue if the value of the Canadian dollar were to change. Our industry would be in an even more vulnerable position. If our dollar goes up, the agreement remains and it would be even worse. As for the provincial governments, do they still have some control over their own products and resources? Can they really control their taxation rates for lumber or, in spite of the fact this is their field of jurisdiction, because of the federal agreement with the United States, are they subject to American supervision before they can set their own tax rates? A number of provinces are concerned, not only Ontario, but also Manitoba and Alberta, because they have before them a Government which ignored an area of provincial jurisdiction when negotiating its agreement with the United States.

Indeed, the Canadian Government gave the American administration a veto over an area of provincial jurisdiction and over provincial initiatives regarding lumber. The federal Government gave up a sector under provincial jurisdiction to the Americans. The question we must now ask is this: How will the provinces be able to manage their own area of jurisdiction?

[English]

The agreement, of course, has implications for our tax policies, the way we treat other resource industries and, of course, the way we equalize opportunity by way of regional agreement across the country. By imposing the tax retroactively to January 8, before presenting any legislation, the Government is violating the principle which has always been held in high regard by this Parliament that new taxes cannot be imposed on Canadians without being debated or approved by Parliament.

[Translation]

The negotiation was carried out very weakly. It is easy to come to an agreement when you are ready to give up on everything. This is not negotiation, but capitulation.

In the case of this agreement, there was no mutual concession. We gave up everything and the United States took everything from us. This is what has been happening since the coming to power of this Government. This agreement simply confirms that we have ample reasons for seriously doubting the ability of the Canadian Government to negotiate a trade agreement with another country. Even before the negotiations, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) had abolished the Foreign Investment Review Agency. The Canadian Government had abandoned the National Energy Program and the publishing industry. The Government had made concessions to the American pharmaceutical industry, as evidenced by the Bill now before the House.

• (1700)

[English]

On his first trip to the United States after he became Leader of our country, the Prime Minister put on his black tie and went to a great dinner for the American industrial complex and the bankers and said: "Hey, guys, my name is Brian Mulroney and I want to tell you that Canada is open for business again". I said to the Prime Minister when he returned: "It is terrific that Canada is open for business again, but I want you to know, Prime Minister, that Canada is not up for sale". But, Mr. Speaker, I was wrong. Ever since the Prime Minister assumed leadership of our country, this country has been on the block month after month and we have been sold off piece by piece to the United States.

Time and again the Government has demonstrated a shameful and dangerous willingness to please the U.S. administration at any cost all, apparently, in the hope that the United States would sign a free trade deal and thus rescue the sagging political fortunes of the Government. We sold out on acid rain.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Charlie Caccia sold out on acid rain.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): We kept quiet in return for a promise from the President of the United States that he was going to spend billions of dollars in order to live up to his understanding with our Prime Minister. That is a promise now being reneged by the United States as evidenced by its recent budgetary tabulations. In fact, the United States signed a better deal with Mexico.

Mr. Broadbent: With our money.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mexico has our money. It has the Canadian Export Development Corporation financing the offending plants in the northern part of Mexico and, Mr. Speaker, the President of Mexico did not even have to sing for the deal. He did not have to participate in a little Mexican blarney.

An Hon. Member: Qué pasa?

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Qué pasa?, that is right. Our shakes and shingles industry was slammed with a 35 per cent tariff and the Prime Minister did not do anything to try to stop or reverse that situation. He complained to the President only that it hurt him personally and his Government politically. Again, the strategy was: "Keep quiet. Don't rock the boat. We need these overall negotiations".

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): You are absurd.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): In the meantime our Government has not stood up for Canada. How many other sectors of the Canadian economy will be sacrificed? What about the Auto Pact? We hear all sorts of conflicting statements. Our chief negotiator has to go to the United States and talk tough. We have had no clear statement from the Government. I think the time has arrived, because of the confusion on the Auto Pact and because of the shameful surrender of sovereignty in this lumber agreement now before the House, for the Prime Minister to stand up and give a statement to the House as to where we are going in these particular negotiations.

Mr. McDermid: Tell us about the Michelin deal, John.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I think the Prime Minister should use the visit on Wednesday of the Vice-President of the United States and the Secretary of the Treasury to put a very simple question: "Is the United States really serious about these negotiations or is it using these negotiations as a cover for a series of managed trade arrangements at our expense and at the expense of other trading partners?" If that is so, then we should reassess where we are going in these particular negotiations.

Miss Carney: He wants to open up the Auto Pact.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Because Canadians have been absolutely confused as to where the Government is going and as to what is on the table.

Miss Carney: Look who is talking.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): The Government of Canada now has a duty in the current context to make its objectives clear to Canadians. We have reached a damage control situation. We do not have any confidence in the way the Government is negotiating for us. This lumber agreement is exhibit A to the incompetence and the lack of persistence, guts, determination and courage on the part of the Government. If this is so, what kind of agreement over-all does the Government expect for Canada? If you want my prediction, Mr. Speaker, I will tell you that I do not believe a comprehensive free trade agreement is possible on the basis of these negotiations, even if it were desirable, and I do not believe the mood of the Congress is going to give it to us. I think the Government will soon run for cover. It will desperately try to get some dispute mechanism between Canada and the United States and claim victory just as the Minister has tried to claim victory on this particular issue.

Mr. McDermid: You say the Congress is going to turn it down?

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I am saying to the Minister that unless the Government is successful in getting some limitation on the application of U.S. trade law to Canadian products, particularly the trade remedies as it relates to countervail—and this agreement has been an appalling failure—that the over-all agreement between Canada and the United States will not be worth the paper it is written on.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): You are now for the negotiatons? You have changed again, John.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): As we travel across the country, we see the reaction of our fellow citizens not in relation to the details of the agreement. Canadians feel we have been had. They are humiliated that we have surrendered our sovereignty in this particular situation.

Miss Carney: Check your own riding.

Mr. McDermid: I was in your riding last week, John.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): They feel that we have been treated like the fifty-first state. Some have told me we would be better off if we had a couple of Senators down there rather than this Government. They would do a better job of negotiating for us. I do not mean Canadian Senators, I mean Senators in the U.S. Congress.

We are rapidly losing our freedom to set our own economic agenda. We want our political independence, the ability to pursue an independent foreign policy, the preservation of our ability to have regional equality and to maintain our cultural identity. The Government has shown in the piece of legislation reflecting the agreement before the House that it is willing to sacrifice our sovereignty and our ability to determine how we sell our exports and raw materials—

Miss Carney: That is wrong.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): —how we determine the relationship between federal and provincial taxation affecting resources and how we determine what taxation will be applied to it. It is willing to put all of that at risk in order to preserve the tenuous over-all negotiations with the United States on trade. I think it is a sad day for Canada that we are dealing with a piece of legislation such as this. It is a sad day for Canada when the people of our country cannot trust our Government to stand up with firmness and courage in the interests of Canada.

Before I conclude I would like to move this motion:

That the motion be amended by deleting all of the words after the word "That" and substituting the following:

Bill C-37, An Act respecting the imposition of a charge on the export of certain softwood lumber products, be not now read a second time but that it be read a second time this day six months hence.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. Before I recognize the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent).

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[Translation]

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 66, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway)—Canadian Human Rights Commission—Resignation of Antonio Arcangel from Human Rights Tribunal; the Hon. Member for Lambton—Middlesex (Mr. Fraleigh)—Status of women—Funding of women's organizations; the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart)—Unemployment insurance—(a) Request for reimbursement of contributions to early retirees. (b) Request that Minister meet representatives of interested parties.

SOFTWOOD LUMBER PRODUCTS EXPORT CHARGE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Miss Carney that Bill C-37, an Act respecting the imposition of a charge on the export of certain softwood lumber products, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee, and the amendment of Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra), (page 2382).

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I rise with pleasure to take part in this important debate. I would like to say at the outset that with a matter as important as this awful softwood deal coming before the House at the opening of the parliamentary process after the Christmas break, being the first piece of legislation to have emerged from the Prime Minister's launching of the trade talks, that he as Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), the man who got us into this terrible mess, ought to have been in the House of Commons and ought to have initiated the debate on behalf of the Government of Canada. Perhaps the Prime Minister—

• (1710)

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): You are a total fraud.

Mr. Broadbent: I got him going again. I just have to say a word. The poor man who lost his Government in 1980 has never been able to get over it.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): You are just a total fraud.

Mr. Broadbent: In any case, if the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) would calm down just a little, I would just like to say that it would be a welcome event in the House of Commons to have the Prime Minister participate in a debate.

Mr. Thacker: You should be ashamed of yourself.

Mr. McDermid: You will never be in that seat, I can guarantee you that.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I find that there are a number of conversations going on in the House. I would like to hear the Hon. Member for Oshawa (Mr. Broadbent) yet a number of Hon. Members are standing up discussing other problems. If they do have problems I wish they would discuss them behind the curtain. I would like to hear the Hon. Member for Oshawa.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, I wish the Secretary of State for External Affairs would take his problems behind the curtain. In any case, I would welcome his contribution later on in the debate. If the Prime Minister is not going to participate in the debate, perhaps we can hear the lofty thoughts of Secretary of State for External Affairs on the matter.

Since the trade talks were launched by the Prime Minister, we have seen in sector after sector a betrayal, a backing-down of one kind or another by the Government of Canada which has ended up in virtually every sector that one can think of, with the United States coming out on top and Canada and the Canadian people coming out on the bottom as a result of what the Government is doing. It began with the abolition of FIRA. It made a concession in publishing and then it did the same thing in the steel industry. It gave the American pharmaceutical industry what it wanted in a Bill which is now before the House. It has talked at three summit meetings on acid rain, if I recall correctly, and received commitments from the President of the United States. But when the budget of the United States was introduced just a few weeks ago, we saw that there was not a penny of new money allocated to live up to its commitments on acid rain. In sector after sector nothing but trouble has been inflicted upon the people of Canada by the Conservative Party since it assumed office. Thank God it will not be in that position for very long.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: We now have a Minister defending her Government's decision on softwood, a decision which will wreak havoc on our major export industry. It is a decision which, according to industrial spokespersons, could cost us thousands of jobs. Perhaps most significantly of all, it is a decision which goes to the very root in terms of abandoning key aspects of sovereignty.

I see that the Minister is on her way back to Hawaii. Perhaps she too will come back into the House for the rest of this debate.

Mr. Thacker: Some leader!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Is there nothing too low for you?

Mr. Broadbent: We hear another lofty witticism from the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): They are a little raw over there.

Mr. Broadbent: They are in tough shape, and the whole country knows it.

Whatever the sector, this Government and its Prime Minister have demonstrated that he behaves more like a man who was elected Senator in Maine than the Hon. Member for Manicouagan. That is the problem with this Government.

Mr. Thacker: Did you reduce your salary by one cent?

Mr. Broadbent: Does the Hon. Member have a question?

Mr. Thacker: The Prime Minister reduced his salary by 15 per cent. Did you? No way, you are greedy.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. The Hon. Member for Oshawa.

Mr. Broadbent: The Tories are a little more rabid than usual. I am sure that you recognize this condition, Mr. Speaker. However, we will do our best to cope with a House that is supposed to have become more civil. Maybe the Tories will need to have another caucus meeting in order to learn something about listening to other people when they speak.

Mr. McDermid: What is civil about your cheap shots?

Mr. Broadbent: I say to the Hon. Member that he will have his chance to speak.

At this point I wish to deal with the central matter as I see it of this Government's failure to defend a crucial principle in negotiations which have been going on, as the Minister herself pointed out, for a number of years, not simply for a number of months. When it comes to stumpage the reality is that the Government of Canada, with the support of all Parties of the House and with the support of the industry, won its case before the U.S. tribunals at that time. The central part of the 1983 decision was that stumpage fees—that is to say a provincial royalty on our forest products—would not in principle be deemed to be a subsidy. That was a fundamental part of our argument at the time, and a fundamental part of the reason for the acceptance of our argument in 1983. It ought to have remained a fundamental concern of the Government in accepting the notion of sovereignty that neither the United States nor any other country ought to have the right to tell Canadian provinces what they are to sell their resources for. That ought to have remained at the centre of contention, but it did not.

An article in the most recent issue of The Financial Post, and I am sure the Secretary of State for External Affairs reads that paper regularly, points out that if the Government had hung tough with its case it could well have won the decision just as we on this side of the House and many others, have been saying. But it did not do so.

Among other points that are emphasized in the article to which I refer is the information that the International Trade Commission had presented to it in December a report by its own staff which showed that the claims by the U.S. industry with respect to having been so badly injured by Canadian exports in softwood had been greatly exaggerated. In terms of the International Trade Commission's final decision, which would have been rendered in February had the Government not negotiated this particular settlement, that was very important. I say that because in terms of the International Trade Commission's final decision it not only had to make a decision about what was or was not a subsidy but it also had to deal with the question of injury. Clearly, the importance of this information is that the International Trade Commission itself had documentary evidence that the case for injury had been greatly exaggerated by U.S. industry.

On behalf of my colleagues, and much more important than that given the importance of this decision, on behalf of the Canadian softwood industry, the workers and companies in it, as well as all our other resource industries which can now be affected by this decision, the Government of Canada ought to have hung tough with its original case. That is what it should have done instead of negotiating it away.

To make the point that has been made by a number of people in recent weeks, had we proceeded to the limit in terms of our quasi-judicial argument before American bodies and finally lost out, instead of capitulating in advance, we could have gone to the GATT as a second and related step. We had a very good chance of winning that case had we failed in the U.S., according to international experts.

Mr. McDermid: And then what?

Mr. Broadbent: The Hon. Member asks: "And then what?" We will never know.

Mr. McDermid: Follow it through.

Mr. Broadbent: If the Government does not do the correct thing we will never know. We are saying that once there is a correct procedure established, one should have enough courage and determination to make the argument again. That is what should have been done.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McDermid: And then what?

Mr. Broadbent: The Hon. Member opposite asks again: "And then what?" This Government has shown more flexibility, more indecision on this matter, than it has shown on any other item that has come before us.

• (1720)

I wish to take a minute to go through the series of flip-flops made by the Minister on this case. Up until September, 1986 both the present Minister and her predecessor made a series of statements about the great confidence that they had in our traditional Canadian argument that stumpage fees were not in any sense a subsidy. They repeated that argument. They had the support of all Parties in the House. They had the support of the industry, and of the provinces. The Minister says that is true. Then something happened. Mr. Vander Zalm was elected in the Province of British Columbia.

Shortly after charmingly appearing together with the Minister in her householder to her constituents, the same Premier started to talk publicly about renegotiating stumpage levels on the one hand and about the importance of the Government of Canada beginning a negotiating process instead of waiting for the quasi-judicial tribunals to make a decision. It was at that time that the Minister made her first statement, the first of many final offers, I say to the Minister. We heard that immortal phrase in September when she offered the 10 per cent settlement. The 15 per cent final settlement came later. The 10 per cent came, then we have what the Minister correctly alludes to as the next phase, the preliminary ruling on October 16. That was a little shocking to the Minister. I do not like doing this at great length, but I wish to put this on the record because it is amusing. If it were not so sad, it would be really funny. The Minister stated after this ruling that we "will fight this all the way... Today it's lumber. Tomorrow it could be any number of issues".

The Minister further stated:

> We all agreed that this ruling is deplorable, artificial and contrived, and does not stand up to extensive analysis.

The Minister also stated that it "strikes directly at the sovereign right of a government to manage its own natural resources".

The Minister then stated that, "we will fight to reverse this verdict". That great historical battle that the Minister waged lasted a few days. What the Minister said was absolutely true. That was not enough because on October 27, 1986 the Minister stated the following. This is rather important, and I hope that she remembers it:

> This decision has concerned us and should concern all of the United States' trading partners, because we view it as an unacceptable attempt to impose U.S. views on how other governments should manage their natural resources. Furthermore, we feel that this preliminary ruling by the U.S. Commerce Department has no basis in U.S. law, is badly flawed, and is inconsistent with the U.S. obligations under the GATT.

The Minister was right then. We are right now in reaffirming the same point. The Minister ought to have stood by her argument and she might have won.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: If the Minister had stood firm she might have pointed out, as was said at the time, that the U.S. people working on the way of assessing the level of duty that should be imposed had two options. The Minister knows this very well. One option gave them one percentage, and the other option gave them another percentage. Instead of choosing one or the other, they added the two together and got 15 per cent. That was brilliant, and one would have thought they were in the Conservative Cabinet to do this type of thing.

The Minister knows very well that even the 15 per cent level determined in the United States was an absurd figure that they seized upon. What the Minister stated on October 21 and October 27 was right, and she should have stayed with her judgment.

Then we reach November 21, the First Ministers' Meeting. Now I regret to say that what seems to have happened is Mr. Vander Zalm began the historically totally reprehensible process of interfering in a way with the negotiations that were going on undermining a totally credible legal case that we were waging at that time. He was bad enough, but it was worse that the federal Minister joined him. Then we come to the First Ministers' Meeting and Mr. Vander Zalm is joined by the Government of Quebec. According to the inside reports that one hears, and the published reports, both the Government of Quebec and the Government of British Columbia started to get cold feet about our argument. Add their cold feet to the cold feet of the Minister and we have a veritable stampede in the wrong direction at that First Ministers' Meeting. The Minister does another reversal and states that they are going to negotiate again. Then we got the deal which was announced on December 30 that the whole country knows about.

There has been evidence from many sources about the jobs that will be affected, which ought to concern Members on all sides of the House. The impact on our exports is obviously negative, or the Americans would not be doing what they are doing. The one point that I wish to emphasize, without prolonging the obvious about the impact on the different provinces in terms of jobs and our export markets, is the notion of sovereignty itself. What I am personally very concerned about is not simply whether we got a disastrously bad deal for this sector, but that the implications for other sectors are simply horrendous, if the type of reasoning that has been accepted by the Government now leads to the type of conclusions by the United States with this precedent that I think it will. The Minister, and other cabinet Ministers of the Crown, think that the issue of sovereignty has not been infringed upon simply because they say so.

I wish to say something quite specifically about the notion of sovereignty, and why I think that what the Government has done has impinged upon that in a totally unacceptable way. In paragraph 6 of the agreement negotiated by the Government with the United States it states:

> The Government of Canada will take no action, and will take all reasonable steps to ensure that no other governmental body in Canada takes any action, directly or indirectly, which has the effect of offsetting or reducing the export charge or replacement measures, except as provided in this Understanding.

It would appear that this undertaking clearly limits anyone looking at this seriously, and clearly limits the federal Government's freedom to act to assist the lumber industry. This is spelled out in the related letter sent out by the U.S. officials. For example, this wording clearly prohibits action by the Government related to the Employment Support Act to support employment in the lumber industry. In 1971, for example, this specific Act was used to make no fewer than 769 grants totalling over $10 million in support of almost 22,000 jobs that were then put at risk because of a U.S. surtax.

The point I wish to make is that we had the right to use that legislation in Canada at that time to protect workers who were injured. Because of the agreement that this Government has entered into, our sovereign power as a nation is restricted, and we can no longer take that type of action to protect our workers.

Mr. McDermid: What action was taken? Countervail action.

Mr. Broadbent: I welcome the comments of the Hon. Member who is heckling from the other side, and I hope that he joins in. But I also ask him to check with a number of international lawyers, and not simply the opposition side, and see what they say on this question of sovereignty. I think he will find that most of them are in agreement with the Opposition, not with the Government of Canada.

• (1730)

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: Also I want to say, with reference to the issue of sovereignty, that the same agreement contains the following words: "Calculation of the value of any replacement measures in relation to the export charge will be subject to further consultations and agreement between the two Governments".

The word "agreement" is not an ambiguous word. If a provincial Government replaces the export tax with increased stumpage or other charges, it will have to obtain the agreement of the U.S. Government. That is what this is all about. We are now involved, in any change in implementing the replacement of the 15 per cent at the provincial level, with the provinces having to go to the federal Government and the federal Government having to trot down to Washington to say: "Will you please agree with us because if you don't, we can't do it". I say that is a betrayal of Canadian sovereignty, and the Minister should be ashamed of herself.

Not only the negotiation by the Government but the acceptance of this deal will have the result about which the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) and other members on the opposition side have talked for days—a negative impact upon jobs in this sector and upon our own exports as a nation. It has very serious implications for other parts of Canadian industry, for other resource sectors.

Beyond resources, I ask the Hon. Member who is shaking his head whether he can answer the following. If we accept the reasoning that the level of a provincial royalty can be deemed by another sovereign nation as some kind of subsidy to which the Government has now tacitly agreed by its negotiations, what does it mean, not simply for resources but for the manufacturing industry? For example, we in Canada have been beating the Americans in steel because our private steel industry has become one of the most efficient in the world.

As a result of this agreement, I can see the following: a group of producers in the U.S. saying that Canadian steel is beating them, not because we have become more efficient and have renovated our capital equipment at a higher rate and with greater sophistication than they have, but because, they will say, Canadian steel is based in good measure upon Canadian produced iron ore. They will say that the provinces producing the iron ore are charging Canadian steel manufacturers too low a price for iron ore and, therefore, that it constitutes an indirect subsidy to our steel manufacturers. According to the reasoning of this brilliant Tory Government, it would warrant the U.S. taking countervail action!

They have not only put into jeopardy our resource sectors across Canada, they have put into jeopardy all those parts of our manufacturing industry which are beating the Americans in many sectors, and that is not acceptable.

I want to conclude my remarks by saying that when the people of Canada voted just over two years ago for a new deal, for a Government which would be a little more frank and a little more fair about the concerns of the average person, they did so in great numbers. However, there is no doubt in anyone's mind now that if there were an election, the Government would be thrown completely out of office, rejected in almost every province of Canada.

The Government should understand and come to grips with the reality that Canadians expect some frankness. They do not expect miracles but they do expect some fairness. In addition, whatever the ideological make-up of the Government in power, whether it is Conservative, Liberal, or NDP, Canadians want a Government which will stand up for their sovereign interest and will not be foolish, irrational or chauvinistic in terms of national concerns. They want a Government which will speak with a strong voice for the legitimate Canadian national interest. They will reject out of hand a Government of the kind we have which changes its law every time the Americans, in terms of negotiations, say that we have to change our law in order for them to have access to our markets. If that keeps up—and Canadians have now indicated that perhaps only one out of four will vote for the Conservative Party—they could go right down, almost out of sight.

The person, if he is sitting up there in the Conservative Heaven looking down on all of this, who could be most disturbed by all of this going on is the man who was referred to in Question Period earlier today—Sir John A. Macdonald. He had a greater sense of nation building than this modern Tory Party will ever have.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): It being 5.36 o'clock, the House will now proceed to the consideration of Private Members' Business as listed on today's Order Paper.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS--MOTIONS

[Translation]

RIGHT HONOURABLE LESTER B. PEARSON

STATUE TO HONOUR HIS MEMORY

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell) moved: That, in the opinion of this House, the Government should consider the advisability of honouring the memory of the Right Honourable Lester B. Pearson by commissioning a statue of him to be placed on Parliament Hill.

He said: As you know, Mr. Speaker, on October 2, 1986 I issued a press release to suggest to the Canadian people that right here on Parliament Hill we should have a statue to honour the late Right Hon. Lester B. Pearson.

First I should like to congratulate the Hon. Member for Scarborough Centre (Mrs. Browes) who introduced a similar resolution last year, word for word except that the name was different. At the time the Hon. Member for Scarborough Centre proposed that a statue be displayed to honour the Right Hon. John Diefenbaker. As Hon. Members will recall the House unanimously adopted the motion on the very day it was introduced and debated. Mr. Speaker, I dare hope, therefore, that for the same reason, Hon. Members from all sides of the House will support this motion today and adopt this initiative for the purpose of setting up a statue in honour of a really great Canadian, a tremendous statesman, a former leader of my Party, a man who is no longer with us and who has served his country so well, the Right Hon. Lester B. Pearson.

Mr. Speaker, one of the most distinguished prime ministers in the history of this country was born 90 years ago. Lester B. Pearson was a prominent diplomat, a prestigious figure who greatly contributed in placing our country at the forefront at the international scene. It was therefore quite fitting that the building which the Department of External Affairs uses as its headquaters should bear its name.

Lester Pearson has indeed left tangible marks in the direction of Canadian foreign policy. As a tough politician, he had undertaken the reconstruction of the Liberal Party of Canada and had fought to maintain Canadian unity.

Following studies in history which led to a teaching career, Lester B. Pearson decided to join the Department of External Affairs which was made up at the time of a handful of officers. Having attracted attention very early because of his insight and his talents as an observer on the international scene, Mr. Pearson was sent to London in 1935 as First Secretary of the Canadian High Commission. This assignment made it possible for him to follow very closely the escalation which led to the outbreak of hostilities in Europe. Deeply influenced by these events, Mr. Pearson became convinced of the need to develop a collective defence.

Shortly after his return to Canada in 1941, Mr. Pearson was posted in Washington where, through his charm and courtesy, he became one of the most admired foreign personalities. In 1945, he was appointed Canadian Ambassador to the United States and, the same year, he took part in the San Francisco Conference which led to the creation of the United Nations.

In September, 1946, Mr. Pearson was summoned to Ottawa by then-Prime Minister Mackenzie King who offered him the position of Deputy Minister of External Affairs. In spite of the assignments related to his position, he continued to follow closely the activities of the United Nations.

Moreover, the development of closer relationships between Canada and its main allies, the United States and Great Britain, was also one of his main concerns. He showed his great talents as an ingenious intermediary when Canada joined NATO.

• (1740)

[English]

Our Prime Minister of the time, Mr. Pearson, was a great Canadian for his diplomatic initiatives. He proposed a United Nations peace force to evacuate French forces from Egypt. This realization earned him the Nobel Peace Prize the following year. He is the only Canadian Prime Minister ever to be a recipient of the Nobel Peace Prize.

This stand he took was, however, to create much antagonism domestically. Many criticized the Government's position as failing to support Canada's ally, Britain. When the Liberals were defeated in 1956 and Mr. St. Laurent stepped down as leader, Mr. Pearson won the leadership convention and began the rebuilding of our great Party. It was no easy task. With such brilliant people as Walter Gordon, Mitchell Sharp, Maurice Lamontagne and Paul Martin, we re-established the presence of the Liberal Party on the national scene which made possible the 1963 electoral victory.

In a period characterized by intense turmoil and redefinition of the country's aspirations, the Pearson Government accomplished many important reforms. It left behind an impressive body of legislation, most notably the Canada Pension Plan, the universal medicare system, the unification of the Armed Forces and a revised Transportation Act. As well, it initiated a new approach to the problem of Canada's disadvantaged regions through the Department of Regional Economic Expansion.

The motion I am requesting today asks for the erection of a statue to Lester B. Pearson. I believe this motion is very timely and appropriate. Mike Pearson was one of the greatest Prime Ministers this country has had. Moreover, his renown abroad was perhaps greater than that of any other Prime Minister. In this regard, a tribute to his memory on this the 90th anniversary of his birth will certainly be appreciated by his family and friends as well as being an honour for all our fellow Canadians who, partisanship aside, undoubtedly recognize that Lester B. Pearson did place a very distinct imprint upon Canadian society.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I have already contacted the representatives of the National Capital Commission to seek their advice on this issue and I am happy to report that through its president, Mrs. Jean Piggott, the National Capital Commission has indicated its support for this initiative and has offered to co-operate in the search for a proper location to set up this statue.

[English]

It is interesting to note that presently there are statues for every Prime Minister who has been elected except one, that of Lester Pearson. There are no statues of Prime Ministers in the late 1800s who came in a succession, but none of them were elected. There is another Prime Minister for whom a statue was built, but it was later decided not to erect it on Parliament Hill because members of the family perhaps did not feel it appropriate, or they did not like the statue.

I ask for the consent and the support of this House for this non-partisan and most appropriate measure to honour one of Canada's greater citizens, Lester B. Pearson.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Stewart McInnes (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, it is with pleasure that I join in the debate on the motion proposed by the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell (Mr. Boudria). I gather the motion has been precipitated by recent events, namely, the erection of the statue of the Right Hon. John G. Diefenbaker, which was a very successful venture. As a result of the unanimous disposition of this House at the unveiling and ceremony commemorative to Mr. Diefenbaker the event was a total success. We had a magnificent day. There was general acclaim, not only in Ottawa but across the country. For that very reason I gather that my hon. friend has discovered that these kinds of initiatives can be applauded by all Members of the House. Indeed, we are prepared to give favourable consideration to a motion of this nature.

I might observe, Sir, that a statue of this nature has not been erected within the precincts of Parliament for some 11 years. Since there was a commemorative statue erected to honour Sir Wilfred Laurier some 59 years ago only four statues have been constructed within the boundaries of Parliament, those of Prime Ministers Borden, King, St. Laurent and Diefenbaker.

I think I indicated in my remarks at the ceremonies acknowledging Mr. Diefenbaker that this was the kind of tribute and collective action that should be taken by Members here and now who, while they enter into dispute from time to time, do recognize contributions made. It is appropriate and fitting that we recognize the contribution of Members, no matter from which Party they come or which opinion they express from time to time. It is appropriate that we specifically recognize and honour those who have served as Prime Minister no matter from which Party they come.

I have suggested to the Department of Public Works that it carry out a study to determine, from an historic point of view and with a view to giving us guidance for the future, how we might determine what statues should be erected, and in what places, to commemorate the various people it might be appropriate to acknowledge.

I think all of us have a sense of history. It is important in giving direction to future Parliaments that we have the aspirations of all Members and that we derive some guidance and direction from what has taken place in the past. Let me refer to some unhappy historical anecdotes concerning commemorative statues. You may know, Sir, that Sir John A. Macdonald went through a great deal of trial and tribulation and it took many months and years before he was able to satisfy the appropriate acknowledgement that should have been made to Sir George Etienne Cartier. That example should give us cause to reflect on what we are doing to ensure that the procedures we follow are those that can be agreed upon and would be in place not only with respect to the motion today but forever and a day.

I think you will recall the late Judy LaMarsh when she was Secretary of State, Mr. Speaker. She placed before this House, and appropriate committees, suggestions that there be statues erected to four personalities. After many months and many years she was only successful in acquiring an agreement and acknowledgement of the kind of statue and siteing with respect to two Prime Ministers. Her other two proposals foundered and there were unhappy consequences as a result of those debates.

You will know, Mr. Speaker, that in the past the Minister of Public Works has been responsible for making suggestions concerning the identity of persons who should be acknowledged in the manner that Mr. Diefenbaker was acknowledged. I have no hesitation in suggesting to Hon. Members that my predecessors and the Departmental staff have done a superior job in that regard. Having said that, I think as a Member of Parliament and as the responsible Minister that it is appropriate that in future, all Members have more say in what should be done in matters of this kind.

I recognize that the McGrath Report contained a recommendation that Members of Parliament have a greater say over the physical precincts of Parliament. The Government's reply to that report agreed that the grounds of Parliament should be the subject of debate by the appropriate committees of both Houses. In that regard, I would recommend that the Board of Internal Economy be an adjudicator or abitrator of decisions of the kind we are now discussing. I recommend as well that consultation be had with the Boards of Internal Economy of both Houses with a view to securing an appropriate agreement about the way to proceed.

We are discussing the merit of the proposal with respect to Mr. Pearson who has indeed been acknowledged by having his name appended to an airport, a university and a building in Ottawa. Indeed, his name has been appended to an annual charity baseball game between the Expos and the Blue Jays. It is obviously a common sentiment among Canadians, no matter of which Party, that he is deserving of appropriate recognition. However, there are other people and there are other Prime Ministers.

Sir John Thompson and Prime Minister Borden were both Nova Scotians of note. Sir Charles Tupper was a Father of Confederation. They have not been acknowledged in the way suggested.

Mr. Althouse: Borden is right over on the corner.

Mr. Boudria: Borden's right out in front.

Mr. McInnes: I apologize. Hon. Members are correct. I meant to refer only to Sir John Thompson and Sir Charles Tupper. Some of my friends who have been here longer than I are more observant than I.

Mr. Gauthier: Were they Prime Ministers?

Mr. McInnes: Indeed they were Prime Ministers of Canada and Sir Charles Tupper was a Father of Confederation. Consideration should be given to his status, and there are other Fathers of Confederation to be considered as well.

Perhaps we should give some thought to honouring women, natives and others who have made a particular mark on society. We must find a means of providing for commemorative statues or medallions recognizing Governors General, Supreme Court Justices and Speakers of the House. These are all questions which should be the subject of a common study.

While I do not wish to dampen the enthusiasm or, indeed, to immerse in cold water the motion of the Hon. Member, and while I am generally supportive of it, it is my view that this matter should be the subject of discussion by the Board of Internal Economy. With a view to giving it some guidance on principle and procedure, we are prepared to file a complete report with full references to historical influences. In that way, decisions of this nature will not be subject to the influences of those who wish a particular person to be acknowledged today and another person tomorrow. We are trying to free up the debate from partisanship, and I believe my proposal would accomplish that particular goal.

Mr. Boudria: Internal Economy will have jurisdiction outside now?

Mr. McInnes: A motion of this kind is one that should be applauded by all Members of the House. I know the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell has taken a fervent interest in this issue. He has been in touch with our Department about it. We want to be supportive and we applaud the Hon. Member's general initiative. However, I suggest that today's motion be the subject of further review so that we are not hindered by particular considerations when we have an opportunity to explore these issues on a more global basis.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I had a little trouble following the Minister's logic. As far as I know, the Board of Internal Economy has no responsibility over the grounds of Parliament.

I would like to say a few words about this matter because I support the idea that a man of the stature of Mike Pearson be recognized for his contribution, not only to Canada but to the world. Twenty-two years ago I was living in New Zealand at the time the maple leaf flag was first flown. Incidentally, it was flown in New Zealand about 15 hours before it was flown in Canada. The High Commission in Wellington had the first flag that went up at dawn on that day that flags were raised around the world. It was with a great burst of pride that I saw that symbol, which had already become a symbol of Canada even before it was the flag of Canada. I felt then and I feel now that, to a great extent, it was a symbol of Mike Pearson. I know it was called Pearson's flag, along with other names at that time. It was a flag which symbolized Prime Minister Pearson's commitment to Canada.

Prime Minister Pearson was a world statesman. As has been mentioned, he was mainly responsible for the easing of the Suez crisis in 1956. As well, he was mainly responsible for the introduction of the peace-keeping force into the Middle East during that period of crisis. For these international activities he received the Nobel Prize. The Nobel Prize citation described Mike Pearson, the diplomat, the statesman and the man, as being a man who had strong faith in the final victory of the goodness of life.

His concern for peace and his international understanding remained with him throughout his life as Prime Minister. He stood up to President Johnson during the Vietnam war. He suggested to President Johnson that it would be a good idea to cease bombing North Vietnam. As you can imagine, President Johnson was not particularly appreciative of Canada's position in that case.

I must also say that as the Leader of a minority Government in 1963 and 1965 his Government produced, with the help of the current number two Party in Canada, some very powerful social legislation. The Canada Pension Plan was established. Medicare was not completed during that period of time but the start was made. The Canada Assistance Plan was completed. His commitment to Canadian unity was expressed in the formation of the commission on bilingualism and the first real move to make the Civil Service bilingual. He believed in Canada. He believed in the world. In his life as a politican and statesman he made sure that Canada's position in the world was a major position, as did Mr. Diefenbaker whom we have recognized with a statue. Mr. Pearson did not in any way tarnish the image of Canada. Because of his contribution, and on behalf of my Party, I support the raising of a statue to honour Mike Pearson, a former Prime Minister of Canada.

[Translation]

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I would like to add a few comments relating to the motion put forward by my colleague for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell (Mr. Boudria). But I would like first to extend to you and to all Members of this House my best wishes for a Happy and Healthy New Year.

[English]

This motion is commendable. I agree with what the Minister said in a general context about wanting to set up a committee to look at this kind of suggestion in the future. I recall last September when we unveiled the statue of John George Diefenbaker. It was rather exciting when the Chief revisited Parliament Hill. People from across the country gathered in front of the Centre Block. It was a very important occasion, not just in his memory, but for the people of this country. I recall as we stood there that the sun suddenly broke through the clouds and there he was in his bronze splendour back on Parliament Hill. I want to congratulate the Member's concern for the tremendous amount of work they put into that project, particularly the Hon. Member for Scarborough Centre (Mrs. Browes).

The special committee on reform of this House drew a lot of attention to the interest of parliamentarians from all Parties in having a greater role in directing some of the physical aspects of Parliament Hill, our workplace. I might add that the report also underlined that we should have more imput in the decision-making process involved in governing this country. We have made some strides in that area, but we have to keep going forward, continually indicating to this House and the Government the importance of that spirit of reform.

However, the precincts of Parliament are something very special, not only to those of us who work and admire our great surroundings but for all Canadians. The National Capital Region, as you know, Sir, is where I was born and brought up. It is a piece of real estate that I am very proud to represent. I must say Ottawa is probably the most beautiful city in all of Canada. Tourism is a major industry here. It has tremendous potential to become even greater. Erecting statues to great Canadians is a way to recognize our history and make Canadians even more proud. The Mayor of Ottawa, Jim Durrell, the Chairman of the regional Government, Andy Hayden, and the Chairman of the NCC are continually meeting to focus on the priorities and objectives involved in enhancing the tourism potential of the nation's capital.

The precincts of Parliament, as I am sure you will agree, need a little bit of maintenance. We have seen a lot of deterioration in the doors, some of the gates and some of the steps. We as Members want to have more input into what this place looks like. That includes statues and commemoratives of all kinds. I am thinking of paintings and busts of great Canadians. I think of medallions honouring Governor Generals or Chief Justices and other eminent Canadians who, as the Minister mentioned, contributed significantly to Canada over the years. This includes Mr. Pearson, and we all recognize that quite clearly.

The Minister suggested that we look at these in the broad sense and that perhaps the Board of Internal Economy is one of the committees on the Hill which could look at this. As you know, it is an all-Party committee with input on a regular basis from all Members on all sides of the House.

We learned a lot from the work that was done in the last year and a half to put up the statue to Mr. Diefenbaker. We want to capitalize on that knowledge. However, I sense that cannot be done on an ad hoc basis. So I think it is time to sit down and determine a proper framework, within the parliamentary precincts, which will allow us to work together to create the commemorative objects we wish to have on Parliament Hill.

The Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell (Mr. Boudria) referred to a statue commissioned to honour Prime Minister Arthur Meighen. He mentioned that the family was not too pleased with the outcome. That is a fact. The statue has been in hiding for decades; that is regrettable. That is why I think the Minister focused on the importance of creating standards to be use for all future statues or other objects commissioned by Parliament to commemorate great Canadians. We must have some kind of quality control, shall we say, over the designs so that we do not have a statue sitting somewhere collecting dust. Indeed, the statue of Arthur Meighen is around somewhere. No one seems to know where, so it is obviously very well hidden.

As you know, Sir, we are running out of space within the parliamentary precincts. Land is now at a premium. I would ask you, Sir, and other Members of the House, indeed people who live within the National Capital Region and people from all over the country, to suggest locations within the National Capital Region, whether it be on this side of the river——or on the other side—in the Gatineau, Hull or Aylmer area—in the National Capital area, we are anxious to have input from both sides of the river on that initiative.

[Translation]

• (1810)

[English]

The Minister mentioned that there are a number of buildings including a college and the External Affairs building named after Lester B. Pearson. This is indeed a tribute to a man who enhanced Canada's international reputation. He loved baseball and the annual game between the Blue Jays and the Montreal Expos is named after him. I understand that this year they have been unable to find a date suitable to both teams and the game may not be played.

The Minister is suggesting that a more comprehensive approach be taken, one totally free of any partisan considerations. We must consider the requirements of parliamentarians, the Board of Internal Economy, the National Capital Region, Ministers and Prime Ministers. We would like to see certain parts of our past properly reconstructed and located. We speak these days of the ceremonial route, a very important project which will make our capital city unique in the world. Our scenic route will have beautiful views of Parliament Hill and the museums which are presently being built. As well, it will have statues of some of our great Canadians. We hope to have a statue built to honour Lester B. Pearson which will eventually be placed somewhere within the parliamentary precincts or along the ceremonial route where proud Canadians can see it and remember that Lester B. Pearson contributed significantly to make our country one of the best in the world in which to live.

I support the Minister's general proposal to enhance the role of the Board of Internal Economy. I also support the initiative of the Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell. I hope he will continue to persist to ensure that this becomes a priority within the new over-all comemorative framework which the Minister hopes to see parliamentarians and parliamentary assistants focus upon to make a lasting tribute to a man who was, without question, an effective Prime Minister and a great Canadian.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I am happy to have the opportunity to say a few words on this motion in Private Member's Hour today regarding the possibility of the placement of a statue on Parliament Hill to commemorate Lester B. Pearson. I support the erection of such a statue because there are few Canadians who have made as outstanding a contibution to the country as did Mr. Pearson. For 20 years he served in the House of Commons as Secretary of State for External Affairs, as Leader of the Official Opposition, and as Prime Minister from 1963 to 1968. During that period of time he also served as a Member of Parliament for Algoma East which, since that time, has been called Algoma, the riding I have the honour and privilege of representing.

During his early days as a Member of Parliament, from the late 1940s to the early 1950s, and as Secretary of State for External Affairs, Lester B. Pearson fired the imaginations of young Canadians in high school and universities. He played an international role far above that played by any Canadian before him. For his efforts in resolving the Suez crisis in 1956 and the establishment of a peacekeeping force he was awarded the Nobel peace prize. I think it is significant that the citation on that peace prize described Mr. Mike Pearson as the statesman, the diplomat, the man, as one who had a strong faith in the final victories of the good forces of life.

As Leader of the Opposition from 1957 to 1963 he did an amazing job of rebuilding the Liberal Party. He brought it through a successful election campaign in 1963 to form the Government. As Prime Minister from 1963 to 1968 he initiated many actions. That was one of the most activist periods in the history of the Canadian Parliament in terms of new initiatives. As an example, he established the new Canadian flag. That was a very controversial issue at the time, but our flag now flies proudly over our capital and over our embassies and consulates around the world.

Mr. Pearson initiated work on the Canada Pension Plan, the medicare scheme and the Canada assistance plan. He initiated the establishment of the bilingualism and biculturalism commission which ultimately resulted in the recommendations which brought in the Official Languages Act, and many other policies relating to the bilingual character of our country. In 1968 he initiated the first constitutional conference. That ultimately led to many more conferences which led to a new constitution in the 1980s. Even in retirement he was extremely active, preparing one of the most comprehensive reports on international development for the consideration of all countries and the United Nations.

Throughout all those years he also had the responsibility of representing the constituency of Algoma East. He represented it very well, not because of the great and powerful positions he held here in Ottawa, at the United Nations or internationally, but because of the common touch, because of his appreciation and understanding of the ordinary people whom he representd so well. I would like to quote a section from "Mike, The Memoirs of the Right Honourable Lester B. Pearson, Volume 2, 1948-57". At page 16 he said:

> I never ceased to be grateful for my good fortune in having Algoma East as my political home. I was glad that I was a member for a rural constituency and not one in a big city. Apart from my special feeling for this particular district, it was more satisfying for me to serve as the member of a rural riding, one of farm and bush, of mine and lake and lumber camp, of new lively industrial towns and of old sleepy villages. All of this is found in Algoma East.

Those words of Lester Pearson describe the great relationship which existed between him and his constituents in Algoma East.

After hearing the speech of the Minister of Public Works (Mr. McInnes) I am not exactly sure what the policy of the Government is with regard to the placement of statues in commemoration of the memory of great Prime Ministers of our country. However, statues of all Prime Ministers since 1920 have been erected. I felt it was fitting that last fall we erected a statue of Mr. Diefenbaker, a great Prime Minister. It would be fitting to do the same now in respect of Mr. Pearson. It is absolutely essential that that be done with a non-partisan and positive approach, as it was done with regard to Mr. Diefenbaker.

The Minister's policy seems rather fuzzy to me. He suggested that perhaps there should be more input, as recommended by the McGrath committee, into the activities and decisions relating to Parliament Hill. Surely there can be no more active way for Members of Parliament to participate in decisions relating to Parliament Hill than to move a motion during Private Member's Hour and give every Member an opportunity to participate fully in the debate. If the Minister is proposing an over-all policy which will allow Mr. Pearson's statue to be established on Parliament Hill on the same basis as Mr. Diefenbaker's statue, I think that is a workable arrangement. However, if it is strictly an approach to frustrate the establishment of a statue to honour Mr. Pearson, I think it is a less than acceptable way for the Minister to proceed.

I am sure that Lester B. Pearson qualifies to meet whatever the requirements would be to have a statue raised in his honour on Parliament Hill. Few if any Canadians have made such an outstanding contribution in international affairs for our country and for the world, in domestic and social legislation or in human terms which we in Algoma and Algoma East appreciate so much.

I want to indicate in the strongest possible way my support for the establishment of this statue commemorating the tremendous contribution of the Right Hon. Lester B. Pearson to Parliament and to our country.

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate being recognized during this Private Members' Hour. I had no intention of speaking in this debate because I expected that things would go much as they did a year ago when the motion came forward for a statue to be erected in honour of John G. Diefenbaker. As the Public Works critic I was alerted by my House Leader to be ready to speak. However, a colleague had indicated he would like to speak on this matter and I bowed to him because I thought this motion would receive smooth passage through the House. However, once the Minister of Public Works (Mr. McInnes) made his remarks, I must say, quite frankly, I was aroused to speak.

The Minister of Public Works said that before a statute could be erected to Mr. Pearson, a former Prime Minister of this country, the matter would have to be referred to a committee to set up guidelines and to go through a long and studied procedure. This strikes me as rather strange. If this is to be the approach, then it should have been taken before the decision was made to erect the statue to John Diefenbaker. A year ago a Private Members' Motion passed through this House to honour the Right Hon. John Diefenbaker, a former Prime Minister of Canada, and rightly so, and the statue has been erected. If the Government wanted to take the approach of setting up guidelines, it should have done so before that statue was erected.

What arouses me, Mr. Speaker, is that what we seem to have here is a petty partisan approach to the question of honouring a former Prime Minister. Is the Government just putting road blocks in the way because it is a former Liberal Prime Minister the private Member is asking to have honoured? If we chose to honour John Diefenbaker then why not honour Mr. Pearson? Certainly, their contribution to history and to our country is of equal merit. Surely most Canadians associate John George Diefenbaker and Lester B. Pearson together in Government.

I was surprised that the Minister of Public Works would speak in this Chamber during Private Members' Hour in order to throw cold water on a motion by a private Member to honour a former Prime Minister. I would have thought he would have waited to hear full debate, allowing private Members to make this decision. I want to make it clear that I think there is a need for a vote on this particular motion. It is sad and regrettable that there is a need for a vote. This motion should have been supported without question. However, because of the comments made by the Minister of Public Works, I feel there is a need for a vote and for private Members to be able to express their opinion and not be whipped into line by the Minister of Public Works.

I want to keep my comments brief, so I will just say that not only was Mr. Pearson Prime Minister in the same historical period as Mr. Diefenbaker, whom we have already honoured, but Mr. Pearson did make significant contributions to this country. He won the Nobel Peace Prize, so obviously he was honoured internationally. He had a part to play in the establishment of medicare and the establishment of the Canada Pension Plan, both of which were significant policy initiatives for a Canadian Prime Minister to have been involved in.

So as not to limit the opportunity of other Hon. Members to express their opinion on this question, and so as not to lose the opportunity to have a vote, I will bring my comments quickly to a close by saying that it strikes me as being partisan that a Minister of the Crown would suggest a different procedure regarding a statue honouring Mr. Pearson than that which was followed for the erection of a statue to honour Mr. Diefenbaker.

Parliament Hill

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Edmonton East (Mr. Lesick).

Mr. Lesick: Thank you, Mr. Speaker—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Prime Minister—the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): That appears to be a useful premonition.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I just want to say to the right hon. gentleman that I regret I did not see him rise. I know the Hon. Member for Edmonton East (Mr. Lesick) will defer to the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner).

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I will not impede the Hon. Member. I recognize the instinctive intuitive premonition in your earlier remark, Mr. Speaker, and we will hang in together.

I had a feeling of great pleasure some months ago to sit on the platform when we dedicated a statue to the Right Hon. John George Diefenbaker. I had the honour of serving in this House both in opposition and on the Government side when Mr. Diefenbaker was Prime Minister and then Leader of the Opposition.

Our quarter of the House thought it entirely appropriate that Mr. Diefenbaker's historical position in Canada in his role as leader of our country should be recognized in a permanent way on Parliament Hill. We looked at it in a non-partisan fashion. Therefore, I rise very briefly to say that I hope the Minister and Hon. Members on all sides of the House will afford the same distinction to Mr. Pearson who, as my friend from the New Democratic Party has remarked, occupied the stage in this House at the same time as Mr. Diefenbaker. They sat opposite each other, on both sides of the House, during a very remarkable period of Canadian history.

I think the arguments put forward in honour of Mr. Diefenbaker some time ago—and I congratulated the mover of that particular motion—apply equally to this motion. I would hope we would have unanimous approval of this motion so that the two men who faced each other so actively across the House representing, as they saw it, our country, would be able to face each other, perhaps at some distance, across Parliament Hill.

Mr. William G. Lesick (Edmonton East): Mr. Speaker, I certainly respect the thoughts of the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) and his concurrence that our former Prime Ministers, John George Diefenbaker and Lester B. Pearson, deserve to be honoured within a short time of each other. It is the same situation as it existed 11 years ago when the late Prime Ministers Mackenzie King and Louis St. Laurent were also honoured with statues.

The late Mr. Pearson was a man of outstanding abilities. During his time he was greatly honoured. However, he also created a certain amount of divisiveness. It has taken the last 20 years to accept his good works, something for which he is highly respected. We know that he will go down in history as an outstanding statesman. There is a place for a statue of Mr. Pearson to be erected here on Parliament Hill. But where is that place?

It is true that we erected a statue of John G. Diefenbaker, something which was long overdue. That former Prime Minister captured the imagination of every Canadian. He was one of the great Canadians in the history of our country. He led a strong Government and a strong Opposition. He was highly respected right up until his last days in power.

Mr. Keeper: Was not Mr. Pearson?

Mr. Lesick: Mr. Pearson was as well. I thank the Hon. Member for his prompting. I realize that we are talking about Mr. Pearson.

Until the unveiling of the commemorative statue of the Right Hon. John Diefenbaker this fall some 11 years had passed since the erection of the previous two statues. There is a sculptor in Edmonton, Mr. Negritto, who is a near-genious. He has extraordinary ability. He has made representations to the Government in this view. There is also a sculptor of outstanding ability in Winnipeg, Mr. Mall. Undoubtedly, there are other sculptors with outstanding abilities who are willing to offer sculptures of the type we would like to see on the grounds of Parliament Hill. However, the question remains, where should they be placed?

At the moment there are four statues on the grounds. They are statues of the former Prime Ministers Borden, King, St. Laurent and Diefenbaker. They are in places which were thought to be relevant at the time. Is this the way in which statues honouring the leaders of our country should be located? What about busts? There has been talk of paintings and pictures. Now we hear talk of standing memorabilia. What will we do with such memorabilia? Is there some overall plan? We have just erected a statue to an outstanding Canadian. Should we rush in and erect another statue on the hallowed grounds of Parliament Hill? The Government feels that we should stop and consider. After all, only a few months have passed since the last statue was erected. We must consider what the best method is for locating sculptures of this type.

One of the problems we have had in the past is that we have forgotten the history of our country. We were not even taught the history of our country. When I went to school I learned British, French and European history but very little about Canadian history. The tables have been turned. We now think about our Canadian history. We think about the impact the French had when they came here over 300 years ago. We think about the English who travelled all over the country and who finally ruled it. What about Canadians since 1867 and the years since? Have we really learned the history of our country? The history of our country should be reflected on Parliament Hill in a more orderly fashion to reflect what is important in terms of what has occurred.

As we consider the possibility of erecting another sculpture we must consider where it should be placed. The Minister of Public Works (Mr. McInnes) has said that we should create an orderly plan and have a study made of this matter. In this way the erection of sculptures could be presented for the best interests and delight of all Canadians, as well as for the enjoyment of visitors who come from other countries. In this way they will see that we have some rhyme and reason in terms of the placement of our statues. We must consider how they can be enjoyed and whether they meet the needs of families and parliamentarians. These questions should be considered before we rush into erecting another statue on Parliament Hill.

There are eminent Canadians long since deceased who, in the eyes of Parliamentarians—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but the hour provided for the consideration of Private Members' Business has now expired. Pursuant to Standing Order 36(2) this order shall be dropped to the bottom of the order of precedence. However, I should advise Hon. Members that there is some possibility that the motion will be scheduled for debate again on Tuesday, February 10. In view of representations which have been made I wish to bring this matter to the attention of Hon. Members.

The House will now move to Government Orders.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

SOFTWOOD LUMBER PRODUCTS EXPORT CHARGE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Miss Carney that Bill C-37, an Act respecting the imposition of a charge on the export of certain softwood lumber products, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee, and the amendment of Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra), (p. 2382).

Mr. Ted Schellenberg (Nanaimo—Alberni): Mr. Speaker, I am very proud this evening to be the second hitter at bat for the Government on the proposed legislation dealing with the export tax and the American countervailing duty. I am particularly pleased to follow another British Columbian, the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney), who has carried the ball very well with respect to this issue. British Columbians are proud of the fact that she listened to Premier Vander Zalm of B.C. and the people of B.C., including the IWA, and not Adam Zimmerman of Noranda in Toronto or Premier Peterson of Ontario.

I am particularly pleased to stand here this evening because my region is so dependent upon the forest industry. Some 7,000 to 8,000 workers are directly involved in the forest industry in Nanaimo and Alberni, British Columbia. Some 20,000 to 25,000 people are involved in the secondary industries which rely on forestry. Port Alberni in my riding was the forestry capital of Canada in 1986. Thus I would like to say a few words about this proposed legislation.

I was in British Columbia when this deal, as it has been called, was signed. I talked to the forest workers in the province. The message they asked me to bring back to Ottawa was to tell the Chicken Littles that the sky is not falling. This is not the end of the forest industry in British Columbia, or in Canada. British Columbians realize that we have not been replanting what we have been cutting down. They look forward to the fact that we will actually have some money for reforestation in our province and across the country. The province supports what we are doing, as do the forestry unions.

I think it is important to read into the record a couple of paragraphs of the position taken by the International Woodworkers of America in British Columbia. In a letter to the Minister for International Trade they state:

> The International Woodworkers of America wishes to extend its general support for the recent negotiated settlement of the softwood lumber dispute with the United States.
> Under ideal conditions, many of us would have preferred to have our "day in court" in order to try to reduce the 15 per cent preliminary duty imposed by the U.S. Commerce Department last October. However, given the realities of the strong protectionist mood in the United States, it is extremely unlikely that the 15 per cent could have been reduced substantially in the final Commerce Department decision.
> And even if the correct duty were eventually determined to be lower than 15 per cent, that decision could only be arrived at through three or four years of protracted court proceedings. In the meantime, all of the revenues from the countervailing duty would continue to flow into U.S. government coffers at the rate of 12 per cent to 15 per cent on the selling price of lumber.
> Those revenues properly belong to the owners of the trees—the people of British Columbia and Canada. We therefore strongly believe that it was absolutely essential to conclude a negotiated settlement with the United States which will guarantee that the increased taxes on softwood lumber shipments to the United States be kept in Canada.

This is the IWA talking. This is a union that represents the men and women who work in the forests of B.C. and across the country. This is a responsible position taken by a responsible union that has entered the 1980s. What does the Opposition and some of the media have to say? The sky is falling. Hundreds of mills are going to shut down. Thousands of jobs will disappear.

Well, we went through all of that with the shake and shingle affair last year and we know the reality of that. The NDP and the Liberals said then that it was the end of the industry; thousands of British Columbians would be on the dole. Now eight months later, thanks to market forces and good management, the shake and shingle industry in this country is doing very well. That was a 35 per cent tariff. Here we are talking about a 15 per cent export tax. When it comes to opposition criticism, that is basically old wine in a new bottle. Come to think of it, all that the Opposition is good at is whining. Nobody whines better than the NDP and the Liberals.

I have a comment from Frank Beban of Beban Logging in Nanaimo. He told me that he does not think the export tax will have that much of an effect; it should not be detrimental to the industry. He feels that the value of the Canadian dollar will have more effect on the B.C. forest industry. This is the same Frank Beban who, with Western Forest Products, was fighting to save logging jobs on the Queen Charlotte Islands. That is where the NDP believe that trees grow to the sky and then suddenly fall down on their own, and that they should not be chopped down by these horrible loggers. That is where they tried to block the logging on Lyell Island. One of the federal NDP Members even dressed up as a Haida native to try and stop the logging. Today they are coming across as the great defenders of the loggers of British Columbia. They are very concerned about the jobs of British Columbians. Horse nonsense, or better still, horse sense.

I see that the Liberal Member for Vancouver Quadra (Mr. Turner) is here. To his credit he travelled up to the Queen Charlottes and saw the Lyell Island situation. He made quite an effort on the Jack Webster Show, and in the House, about the indiscriminate logging of those horrible forest companies. Those are the same forest companies that create the docks, the roads, provide emergency medical service to the people in the Queen Charlottes and throughout British Columbia, and have built up the infrastructure that we are so dependent upon. Now I see this afternoon the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition trying to hoist this Bill for six months. How can you go back to British Columbia, sir, and tell them that $400 million of reforestation money is going to be delayed for six months? That is about $200 million that they will not get. They will get it down the road.

American protectionism is real and ugly, there is no doubt about that. Let us look at some of the facts of this legislation and what has happened as far as the background is concerned. In 1982-83 a countervailing petition similar to this one was launched by the American forest industry. At that time 29 per cent of the U.S. market was ours. That caused a great deal of fear in British Columbia. Fortunately, at that time the decision was in our favour. But times have changed since then. The forest industry was saying that we won it in 1983, and we will win it in 1986. We are talking about 1986-87 in North America and times have changed. We have gone from some 19 per cent of the American market 10 years ago to some 35, 36 per cent now, some say it is perhaps even higher. The Canadian dollar is devalued even more. In the same 10-year span that the Canadian dollar went from $1.04 down to about 73 cents our share of the American market went from some 19 per cent to 35 or 36 per cent.

Anybody who has talked to American politicians can understand why they have been upset. They stand in their own ridings and watch carload after carload of Canadian lumber going across the border while their own lumber workers are lined up at the unemployment insurance offices. Any politician in this Chamber will understand the sentiments of the American politicians. It has become more real and ugly over the passing years.

In the summer of 1985 I travelled to Washington, D.C. with an all-parliamentary delegation. The Members for Skeena (Mr. Fulton), Capilano (Mrs. Collins), and Prince George—Peace River (Mr. Oberle) who is now the Minister of Science and Technology, were in attendance. We learned there how real that protectionism sentiment is. Even if the countervailing duty failed, we were told that they were prepared to introduce an omnibus Bill that would take action against our forest products. The only light on the horizon in the U.S., even back in 1985, was that we had a good product that American home builders and home buyers wanted. As a matter of fact, one of the southern Senators said to us that at church on Sunday he was doing the lay sermon. As he walked in the front door a representative of the southern forest industry was saying, "For goodness sake, nail those Canadians. You have got to stop those Canadians". After the sermon he walked out the back door and there was a contractor who builds houses in Georgia saying, "Lay off the Canadians. We need their product. We like their product". That is the type of turmoil we have been going through over the years.

Anyone who has talked to the forest workers, the legislators, or the industry knows that there has been very real concern. Even early in 1986 the forest industry told us as the Government of Canada, "Hands off. Let us deal with it. We won it before, we will win it again". But then by August of 1986 the political pressures in the U.S. were realized, not only by us but by the forest industry in Canada. The provinces, labour, and the forest industry urged that we negotiate our way out of this particular mess. That is why our Minister of International Trade offered a 10 per cent presentation to the Americans to try to forgo the preliminary determination on the countervailing duty. As we all know, that offer was refused.

In October we lost the battle but not the war, in our opinion. When that 15 per cent preliminary determination came down there was a great deal of consternation in the industry and the Government. We thought we could find a way out of it. That is why in November, at the First Ministers' Conference in Vancouver, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), the Minister of International Trade, the Minister of State for Forestry and Mines (Mr. Merrithew), and the Premiers of this country, with one exception, managed to find a consensus and make another offer to the Americans that would hopefully keep the money north of the 49th Parallel. On December 30 our negotiations were successful.

What did the negotiations entail? The Americans wanted a $1.1 billion increase in stumpage. They wanted an outright veto in changes to our stumpage system. They wanted the export tax to apply to the added value of our lumber. They wanted prohibition against our forestry companies using the cost of the export tax as a business deduction, as they do with stumpage now. They got none of those demands, not one.

Instead, on December 30 our Government was successful in ensuring that the $600 million in reforestation money stayed north of the 49th Parallel. Now we will replant what we harvest.

That has been the position of the B.C. NDP for years. They have demanded that we farm and not mine the resource. That is a position that many B.C. Members of Parliament can agree with. It is ironic that now, thanks to a Progressive Conservative national Government, we will be able to do that in my home Province of British Columbia and across the country.

I have some concerns about how these windfall dollars will be spent. Much of it relies on trust with the provinces. We have no real assurances that every penny, with the exception of the cost of administration of the export tax, will go into planting trees, weeding, spacing, and thinning, and doing the job we have not done up until now. But it is essentially a provincial resource. So there will be a great deal of trust involved here.

If I may turn to a few media reports on the imposition of the export tax, let me start with the media in Nanaimo—Alberni, the forestry capital of Canada. The Alberni Valley Times states: "Export duty reasonable-under the circumstances".

• (1850)

Ottawa's export duty saved a lot of money for Canada that would have been spent in the U.S. had not the federal and provincial Governments negotiated the compromise with the tariff-hungry Americans.

Turning to the Nanaimo Daily Free Press of January 3, it reads:

While forest industry unions appear to welcome that lumber export tax agreement with the U.S., it's the big timber bosses' turn to be moaning the odds.

That 15 per cent added cost has produced long faces and fairly scathing criticism of the deal, which was worked out just hours before the deadline—

It continues:

Had there been no agreement, Canada could have faced a tariff even higher than the 15 per cent now agreed.

The difference is that the 15 per cent stays on this side of the 49th parallel. On BCTV, on December 31, an announcer said:

NDP Trade Critic Bob Williams says the softwood accord is "a pretty good deal".

In his interview, Mr. Williams said:

That's right. I'm afraid I disagree (with Broadbent). He is rightly concerned about the sovereignty issue. But at the same time the provinces have not been collecting the value of the trees. I think Mr. Broadbent is ignoring that side of the equation.

I think these articles should be brought to light, in that the Opposition seems to put so much credence upon what the media has to say on these issues. In the January 8 edition of The Toronto Sun, the following article appeared:

In the case of softwood lumber, the American buyers are clearly calling the shots. But not all of them. One irony is that the new 15 per cent export tax imposed here will probably be reflected in higher home prices in the U.S. as importers pass on higher costs to the American consumer.

Which is, if you think about it, a delicious irony.

Then the writer continued:

Meantime, there is no cause for panic. Martin Brian Mulroney hasn't "sold out" the country, nor is he likely to. Peace, order and good government will prevail. The sun will rise in the east and set in the opposite direction.

Life will go on.

Then the following appeared in The Sault Star of Sault Ste. Marie:

It is interesting to note that one Canadian group with a major stake in the issue, the International Woodworkers of America, supports the agreement as "the lesser of the two evils".

In The Toronto Sun Peter Worthington wrote the following:

I wonder if our "nationalists" would prefer the money going to the U.S. in the form of a tariff rather than staying here as tax revenue? Would that be a sell-out too?

Also Worthington wrote:

—one wonders how Canada is supposed to "stand up to" or "resist" American pressure in free-trade talks? Surely with a spirit of isolationism and protectionism rampant in the U.S., it is imperative that we get a free-trade deal as quickly as we can,—

Also he went on to write:

It serves little purpose to reduce the dispute into a "who won, who lost" contest. Free trade is not a hockey game—it's our future. And it seems that on this one, Canada is ahead of the rest of the country.—

They go on and on, including the article written by Marjorie Nichols in The Vancouver Sun which read:

There is nothing novel about this agreement. In terms of the monitoring and enforcement procedures, it is less intrusive into Canadian affairs than other bilateral and multilateral agreements.

The 15 per cent countervail duty is gone, hundreds of millions of dollars in reforestation have been made available, and Canadian sovereignty has been maintained. When one enters into any agreement, there is some give and take on both sides. We have plenty of examples of that. The Auto Pact is one. The Pacific Salmon Treaty is another. The Columbia River Treaty is another example of give and take on both sides. We are giving the U.S.A. a 15 per cent export tax, and they are taking away the countervailing duty which it had imposed.

Let us be realistic and grown up about this. Sovereignty is not the issue. The give and take of any negotiating procedure is a fact of life. When we talk about sovereignty, let us remember what Ambassador Niles had to say in his statement of January 2:

The United States Government will not be concerned with how Canadian authorities make changes in their forest management practices. When they do so or what form these changes make. These are matters for Canadians to decide.

The point the Opposition seems to be missing is that if we had allowed the countervailing duty, Canadian jobs may well have been affected anyway. With the export tax, we will be creating hundreds of jobs in reforestation in the country. Much of the cost of the export tax will be borne by the Americans as well.

The price of Canadian lumber in the U.S. has gone up since December 30. At the end of 1986 it was $190 per thousand for two by four lumber; today it is up to $202, a rise of some $12 in the cost of Canadian lumber in the U.S. It is already being borne by the American consumer. It shows how tariffs and countervailing duties cannot benefit anybody, except perhaps Governments or politicians; they do not benefit the average consumer. That is what free trade is all about. We are trying to get rid of these irritants and ensure that we have the kind of co-operation we need.

As the Minister already mentioned earlier today, the value of stock in Canadian forest companies has gone up, not down. It has gone up since the export tax was introduced, so we can be Chicken Littles or optimistic Canadians.

It is my opinion that this legislation will stand the test of time. The provinces retain their flexibility in determining stumpage pricing, a dangerous development in U.S. countervail policy has been avoided by the withdrawal of the petition, and the ability of the provinces to determine their own natural resource management policies remains unimpaired. They are all worthy goals and accomplishments of which the Government and the House can be proud.

The Canadian forest industry will survive this latest attack by the Americans. We have had them before; hopefully we will not have them again. Our forest industry may even be better managed for what has happened, better managed because of the export tax and the American countervailing duty petition.

We will always have a quality Canadian product which Americans want to buy, so the sky is not falling. It has in fact brightened. I ask that we pass this piece of legislation at the earliest possible opportunity.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a question of my hon. friend who just made a very eloquent plea for support of the Government's initiative.

I should like to refer him to a quotation of Mr. J. Martignago, one of the chief officers of Balco Industries, a major forest producer in central British Columbia. I want to take just a moment to quote what he said:

> The 15 per cent export tax is devastating. It could cost Balco approximately $8 million per annum.
> We will be down sooner and for longer. The Forest Industry Council estimates the additional cost to the Canadian industry will be $600 million per year. That is well in excess of the total profit of all lumber companies in Canada.
> The Government ended up giving us Hobson's choice—either the tax goes into our pockets or theirs. What would really hurt is if the language prevents the use of the tax to enhance the forest resource base.
> The countervailing duty must remain as a tax on the product exported to the U.S. Were the tax applied on the basis of log scale as stumpage the entire production of every company would be adversely affected. This in effect would not only impact the U.S. market but also eliminate the possibility for Canadian firms to diversify and service international markets other than the U.S.

The Hon. Member's presentation was an interesting one. Although I disagree with it, it contained some interesting arguments. Does he disagree with the comments of this very respected, well-known authority on the British Columbia interior forestry industry when he said that the 15 per cent export tax was devasting?

Mr. Schellenberg: Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to receive a question from the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis). It was not that long ago, about 10 years, that I was a young radio station cub reporter and the Hon. Member was an alderman in Kamloops and was beginning his political career. If I only knew then what I know now, Mr. Speaker. However, I am pleased to receive a question from him.

Once again we obviously have a divergent point of view. For every letter or comment that he pulls out, I can pull out one with the opposite point of view. Again we have some statistics of doom and gloom; they seem to get used to that in the Opposition. It is full of could, should, maybe and if.

The same is true if we look through Hansard in May 1986 when we dealt with the shake and shingle industry—it could cost, it might cost, or it might have to shut down, not very much of which came true.

I prefer to believe that the country has received sort of a gift from the U.S.A. in reforestation dollars which we can use to the benefit of our forest industry. I prefer to believe that we are going to create more jobs in reforestation, in weeding, spacing and thinning than may be lost in the mills and the forests of British Columbia.

The cost of $600 million has been pulled out of the air. I have heard other costs as well. I know one cost for sure. We will receive those hundreds of millions of export tax dollars into our reforestation funding.

Do I disagree with what the Hon. Member has to say? Time will tell whether the Hon. Member is right or I am right. Perhaps with our mutual experience in the B.C. forest industry and its implications, I prefer to believe that the government Member is right and the opposition Member is wrong.

• (1900)

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, can the Hon. Member direct any Member of this House to a document or a public statement or anything when he says that hundreds of millions of windfall dollars will come to B.C. and that they will be spent on reforestation? In fact, the Premier of British Columbia has said quite the opposite, that the money will be used for things other than forestry. Can the Hon. Member direct anyone in this House to any document or any statement saying that that money will be spent on reforestation, or is that just pie in the sky?

Mr. Schellenberg: It is an accepted fact, Mr. Speaker, that the Province of British Columbia, along with the Province of Quebec, were anticipating raising their stumpage fees well in advance of what has been going on over the past few months. It is the Premier of British Columbia, let us not forget, who initiated the negotiations, along with our Minister for International Trade and the other provincial premiers, to try to bring in that export tax and to keep it in place. As I said earlier, a lot of this is based on trust, accommodation and belief.

We have met with Premier Vander Zalm twice since he attained office in the fall of 1986. I would put forward to this House that the Premier of British Columbia will do everything he can to ensure that the $400 million in British Columbia is put into reforestation. The Premier is not sure that he can spend all of that in one year, which shows the kind of windfall dollars that are involved. The Premier of B.C. has said, I believe, as reported in the Vancouver Sun, that when it comes to a choice between growing a tree, if he uses the funds, and saving a patient who has heart trouble, then that is a decision he will have to make at that time. I am trusting, as we should trust, that he will make the right decision when the time comes.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, since this is a bad tax, badly applied, does the Member believe that the bad application of the tax should be sustained or not? I gather from the Member's speech that he endorses the Government's decision to impose the tax.

Is the Hon. Member aware that stumpage in the Province of Quebec, for example, is very substantially higher per thousand cubic feet or per cubic metre than it is in the Province of British Columbia? Is it fair that the tax should apply at the same rate in Quebec as it does in British Columbia?

Is the Hon. Member aware that the tax to be applied is on the f.o.b. price at the mill and as a consequence it will be applied on the f.o.b. price of something like $230 per thousand cubic feet in Quebec as compared to $160 per thousand cubic feet in the interior of British Columbia? In other words, the tax will wind up being about $10 per thousand cubic feet higher in Quebec than it is in British Columbia. Is that fair? Is that just, and if not, what does the Hon. Member intend to do with it as a member of the governing Party?

Mr. Schellenberg: Mr. Speaker, that is not a certainty. The Hon. Member speaks with great certainty that it is going to be an unfair tax applied in different regions of the country. We do not know that for sure. Those negotiations are still going on right now between our Minister for International Trade and the Premiers and forestry Ministers across Canada.

Mr. Cassidy: Oh, oh!

Mr. Schellenberg: What a delightful laugh the Hon. Member has. There is no certainty at all of how it will be applied, whether or not it will be higher in Quebec or lower in British Columbia. That is what the negotiations are all about. That is what the NDP does not seem to understand.

Mr. Cassidy: It is in the Bill.

Mr. Schellenberg: Negotiations, thank goodness, are being done by a Progressive Conservative Government and not an NDP Government.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I have another question for the Hon. Member. He will be well aware that on the question regarding sovereignty, to which he referred in his presentation, when you look at the actual agreement it states:

—that Canada may reduce or eliminate the export charge if other fees are placed on lumber production. But Canada can do this only "subject to further consultations and agreement between the two Governments".

The two Governments being the Government of the United States and the Government of Canada. The agreement is saying that unless the United States Government agrees to this change of obtaining these funds, Canada cannot proceed, the industry cannot proceed or the provincial Government cannot proceed. When it says that in the actual agreement signed by the Governments of Canada and the United States, would the Hon. Member not have to agree that it is really saying that the U.S. Government does, in fact, have a certain amount of decision making in how we manage our forest resource?

Mr. Schellenberg: Once again, Mr. Speaker, I must repeat how happy I am that our Government is doing the negotiating around here and not the NDP.

Does the Hon. Member not realize that in other agreements we have, from the Auto Pact to the Pacific Salmon Treaty alone, there is give and take on both sides? Decisions cannot be made unilaterally by one side without affecting the other. There are agreements that involve mutual negotiation. The Americans are concerned about the arithmetic of that 15 per cent export tax, and rightfully so. They will be monitoring the situation in Canada, but under no circumstances have we given up our sovereignty, under no circumstances at all.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions and comments are now terminated. Debate. The Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau).

[Translation]

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, Bill C-37 now before the House can be viewed from a fiscal point of view. It can have some other implications we could refer to from the legal, technical point of view, but the heart of this whole debate centers on the ability of the Government of Canada and the provincial governments to make decisions concerning the forest industry, which is a major resource. Mr. Speaker, I would say that this Bill raises two important questions—first, the integrity of our Canadian sovereignty, and second the financial situation that could be faced by a significant part of the forest industry and its workers.

Mr. Speaker, a moment ago I heard the Government Member say there had been no impairment of sovereignty because of those negotiations, and that there had to be some sort of trade-off in those negotiations. The reason why on this side of the House we feel the integrity of Canadian sovereignty has been set at stake by this Government is that we did not have a free hand. The negotiations were entered upon under duress. There was a decision by the U.S. Government, and I wish I had all the time needed to put the case of that 15 per cent levy against the fact that a country's resources may be taxed according to the country's will, and the establishment of new stumpage fees is not a subsidy to our forest industry.

Mr. Speaker, we on this side of the House defend that view on the authority, not of books or expert opinions but of a ruling by the U.S. International Trade Commission which made a decision on that matter in 1983. As our leader asked earlier today, what is it that has changed in that whole debate since 1982-83? Stumpage fees have remained on the whole identical, and so did their implementation. Mr. Speaker, there has been no change in the international agreements binding the various governments that are members of the GATT. What is it that has changed since 1982-83, if not a Government that cannot stand up to the U.S. Government, a Government that is ready to cave in to each and every demand being addressed to it.

I would not want to come back on the issues which have already been raised such as the national energy policy, the drug legislation, etc.: the Mulroney Government has merely caved in to each American demand and this is again the case today.

We did not negotiate freely, contrary to what the previous speaker, a Government Member, has stated, but we have been forced to enter discussion under the threat of a 15 per cent tax. And given these circumstances, the sovereignty of this country has been challenged.

The second point with which I would like to deal is that not only the integrity of Canadian sovereignty is challenged, but a major Canadian industry could be disabled to the extent that several plants would have to close and their employees laid off. I should like to explain to those who are listening in this House and elsewhere why we have reached that point, and why we are now discussing a bill the contents of which have been dictated by the American government. Why are we forced to discuss it in a Parliament where the various regions of the country are represented? Why do we have to deal with such legislation?

The behaviour of the Prime Minister of this country was extremely naive and lacking in sophistication when, at the Quebec Summit, without preparation of any kind, without prior debate in the House, without prior discussion with the provincial governments, without checking on the situation in the U.S. Senate, without any preparation and without any really thorough research, the Prime Minister of this country agreed to embark on free trade talks with the U.S. President.

In the fall of that year, at the beginning of the session, we were treated to a Government statement about seven or eight minutes long, and that is all we had from this Government in the House, a statement announcing that an agreement had been reached between the U.S. President and the Prime Minister of Canada on starting free trade talks. Unfortunately, the Prime Minister had forgotten that for the talks to get under way, the U.S. President had to refer back to the Senate and that a Senate committee had to approve a decision to start negotiations on the basis of the proposed fast track concept. Unfortunately, the Senate committee's decision came as a surprise to the Conservative Government. The committee refused to give its majority approval to a decision that had been announced by our Prime Minister and the President of the United States. That is when the trouble started. To avoid losing face, the U.S. President had to do some arm twisting, and in this respect, a number of letters are often referred to.

I have one here before me, signed on May 8, 1986, in which the U.S. President thanked his friend, Dear Bob, in other words, Senator Packwood, for finally deciding to pass the resolution. But he told him he intended to put the pressure on in order to accelerate the process of settling the softwood lumber problem. That was the price that the American Government had to pay to obtain the Senate committee's agreement. If we look at the original text of what the U.S. President said to Senator Packwood—

• (1910)

[English]

"I intend to press for an expedited resolution to this problem independent of the comprehensive negotiations".

[Translation]

In addition to the U.S. President's commitment there was also a senior official with the administration's trade sector in the United States, Clayton Yeutter, who in a letter to Senator David Pryor on April 17, 1986, said, and these are his own words:

[English]

"We will get timber fixed".

[Translation]

And that was in the context of discussing whether to go along with the plan for free trade talks between Canada and the United States. So the U.S. Senate had its arm twisted and the U.S. administration promised to foot the bill. However, in the final instance, it is Canada's softwood lumber workers who are going to pay, because as a result of the Prime Minister's incompetence and lack of foresight, we and our workers in the softwood lumber industry are going to suffer the effects of this Government's poor administration.

What happened, Mr. Speaker, was that the tax was imposed. When we were hit by the 15 per cent tax imposed by the United States, the first reaction of this Government was to panic. Why did Mr. Reagan, the friend of the Canadian Prime Minister, impose a 15 per cent tax after we had supposedly undertaken friendly discussions to solve all trade problems between our two countries? There was therefore some panic.

The first reaction of the Minister was to say: We are going to fight. We shall appeal to GATT, we shall fight to have this 15 per cent tax withdrawn which we find unjust because it goes against the rules of international trade.

The House will recall the rhetoric which was used at the press conference. The first reaction was panic. The second was agressiveness. The third reaction was to give up on everything and to make, supposedly as a final offer, a counter-proposal of 10 per cent instead of 15 per cent.

The Minister for International Trade said that this was a final offer. Not only was it not a final offer, but we had to go even further and obtain a settlement which is exactly what the Americans wanted. The Government tried to rattle its sword in this battle, but when it saw that its position was not strong enough to negotiate, it showed the white flag late in December and agreed with the American requirements and signed this agreement with which everyone is now familiar and which is reproduced nearly word for word in the Bill under consideration.

The second point I would like to raise concerns the effects of all this. Many have said how important the forest industry is for all of Canada, and as the representative of a Quebec constituency, I would like to underline this importance.

Our lumber industry includes nearly 400 businesses and 21,500 workers and its exports amount to several hundred millions and even billions of dollars. This measure will have an impact on our lumber exports since 51 per cent of Quebec production is exported to the United States.

This industry is therefore important for all of Canada and extremely important for Quebec. This is why this Bill will have a considerable impact. I have had the opportunity to discuss this issue with representatives of the industry and the reactions we have had have been extremely unfavourable. We have been told that the industry is in great difficulty.

Earlier in this debate I heard the Conservative Member and others, including the Minister, say that the price would be paid by the Americans. We have evidence from company owners who told us in no uncertain terms that the day after the tax was imposed they tried to raise their prices so as to be able to pay this tax, but they did not even sell 1,000 feet of lumber. They had to lower their prices and absorb the full tax just to maintain sales in the United States.

So until now the price or tax has been paid by Canadian companies. We would be able to make the Americans pay this tax only if the demand for timber in the United States were to soar overnight. In that case, of course, we could boost prices and make them pay part of the increase. But this surtax is levied at a time when the United States construction industry is hard hit by the tax reform. All those who followed the tax reform debate and saw the reaction of American house builders, all those people are telling us—and I heard the testimony of Americans—that as a result of tax reform amendments affecting those who buy houses or apartments for rental purposes there will be no new housing construction until an adjustment is made. In other words, for the next six to twelve months the tax will have to be paid by Canadian companies and borne by Canadian lumber industry workers.

Mr. Speaker, the consequences will be far-reaching. We could quote a number of statements by experts who commented on this question. I think you know them, including some Quebec company presidents. Then we heard the testimony of the President of the Chamber of Commerce who was also the owner of a major industry. Their remarks have been reported in all newspapers, so I would rather not repeat them here.

Rather, I should like to use the time which I still have at my disposal to deal with the very substance of Bill C-37, examine once more the whole issue and emphasize the sovereignty aspect.

Mr. Speaker, Clause 5 provides that a charge will be imposed on a great variety of forest products. In short, all softwood lumber products—the bill requires a full page to list them all—will be affected, and a charge imposed shall be an amount equal to such percentage of the export price of the softwood lumber products, not exceeding 15 per cent thereof, as may be prescribed, up to a maximum of 15 per cent.

Mr. Speaker, I wonder exactly who will decide whether it's going to be less than 15 per cent, say 11, 12 or 8 per cent. I have tried to find out whether it was only the Government of Canada who was going to decide that, but when I examined the agreement—on this basis, I return to the issue of Canadian sovereignty, because the Minister herself has indicated that the clause concerning sovereignty in this bill was item No. 5 of the agreement. Well, dealing with the changes which could be made and included in Clause 5 of the bill, item 5b states, and I quote in English:

• (1920)

[English]

"Any such modifications in the export charge will be made by the Government of Canada. Calculation of the value of any replacement measures in relation to the export charge will be subject to further consultations and agreement between the two Governments." In fact, we will not be able to change the tax without the agreement of the U.S. Government. That is why I say that this Bill has really damaged the sovereignty of Canada.

[Translation]

When we consider the other aspects of this bill which deal with these changes, we realize that we still have to refer to the agreement—I do not know whether this is quite often the case with bills, my Parliamentary experience on this level being quite recent—but when we read in Paragraph 3 that in interpreting the schedule, recourse may be had to the Memorandum of Understanding between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States, we understand that we must read both the bill and the Memorandum of Understanding and that no change in the tax could be made without the consent of the American Government.

Also, Mr. Speaker, the amounts collected by the Government of Canada would normally be shared between the provincial governments. Unfortunately, the time allotted to me will not permit me to deal with this issue, but it appears to me to be extremely important. I hope that before we complete the study of this bill, we will have at least a draft of the regulations, in order to know how they will be shared. But no matter the way they are shared, item 6 of the Memorandum states that the amounts thus collected by the Government of Canada could not be used to provide the lumber industry in Canada with an advantage it did not enjoy before the signing of the agreement. In that context, I find its hard to understand how the Government can claim a victory by saying that the monies will be used to do reforestation work, because if reforestation work is done, that cannot be used to the benefit of the company and the company must establish a yearly balance sheet. And in that sense, this means that they will not be able to reach their stated goal, because this would be contrary to the agreement and if the agreement is not honoured, the American Government may terminate it within 30 days. And once it has been terminated because of Canada's failure to comply, as our leader pointed out in his speech earlier today, the U.S. President has the right to unilaterally impose a 10, 15 or 20 per cent tax he can determine himself. If this is not losing face as a country, Mr. Speaker, if we have not relinquished a major part of our sovereignty, I wonder what agreement, what situation could allow us to say otherwise.

Mr. Hamelin: Mr. Speaker, I rise in this debate as a Member from Québec, after the Opposition Member who did not hesitate to call this Government and this Prime Minister naive and incompetent. It is very easy to pose as a swashbuckler and see the Canadian Government as a naive, incompetent and bad negotiator, to suggest it has been had, to consider this as a bad deal, a swindle, et cetera.

It is my view, Mr. Speaker, that there is a reason for the Bible to tell us about David and Goliath. It very seldom happens in real life unless God gets involved, and as God is both on Canada's and the United States' sides, God does not get involved in that matter, it very seldom happens that David overcomes Goliath. It is very seldom indeed that the smaller opponent will give a licking to the stronger one, the bigger one, the one with 25 times our population whose budgets and industrial base are world leaders, and the Opposition is asking that we act as swashbucklers, as winning Davids, as champions of Canadian nationalism, the stalwart supporters of interests that are now part of a global market.

In my view, it is sheer foolhardiness to go and get crucified in an arena where one is already sure of losing. There is but one intelligent possibility, that is to negotiate, and this is what we have been attempting to do, in line with the best interests of Canadians and the lumber industry.

If under previous Liberal Governments the Canadian dollar had been stronger than it was as a result of an economy that the Liberals had been literally massacring in Canada for many years, U.S. protectionism would have been less acute and we would not have been faced with the kind of difficult situations we are facing now.

Mr. Speaker, I am therefore going to put my question to the Hon. Member, and I would like to point out that the solution agreed upon with our American friends who are now experiencing internal problems as a result of which protectionism is king, that this solution is the one that is least damaging to our economy and the one most in line with Canadian interests. Finally, and this is the question I would like to ask the previous speaker: Can our sovereignty of which he is so proud, and we share that pride with him, can this Canadian sovereignty extend beyond our borders?

I think we had a duty to negotiate the best possible arrangement in the circumstances. Would the Hon. Member agree with that?

Mr. Garneau: Mr. Speaker, I've just spent all my time, twenty minutes of it, explaining why I did not agree, what I fail to understand, or rather, I do understand now what I did not understand before, and that is the entire state of mind that prevailed during these talks, and I don't know whether the Hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Hamelin) is reflecting here what he heard in caucus from his Prime Minister, but if that is the state of mind prevailing within the Government, which consists in saying: the Americans are bigger than we are so we jump when they say jump, it is not surprising that we are where we are now. I always thought, and I still do, that we live in a country and on a continent where relations between citizens and between countries are governed by laws. It isn't the number of canons or the number of people that determine international relations. The Hon. Member for Charlevoix says the Americans are bigger and stronger. Americans live in a democratic country that tends to have respect for international agreements. In fact, in 1982-83, in an identical situation, a Government stood its ground and fought its case before the American courts, and Canada won a battle, the same battle this Government has refused to fight.

The Conservative Government simply went down on its knees as it did on the Foreign Investment Review Agency, with respect to books and other areas of our cultural industries, and is now doing with respect to pharmaceutical products. I am flabbergasted at the line of reasoning followed by the Hon. Member for Charlevoix, which appears to come straight from the Government benches and the confidential meetings they had, a line of reasoning that consists in saying that laws and international agreements don't count anymore, nowadays, every time someone who is bigger than we are says: move over, raise your taxes, lower them, remove that legislation, which means the Canadian Government will have to obey. In that case, Mr. Speaker, we are not living in a civilized world where the law forms the basis for relations, not just between individual citizens and between the citizen and his government, but also for all international activity. This would mean there would be an end to all that, and, Mr. Speaker, I think this truly reflects a defeatist attitude which certainly does not augur well for the rest of the talks, since it was this Government's decision as part of a comprehensive free trade agreement between our two countries.

Mr. McDermid: I would like to put a question to my honourable friend.

• (1930)

Is the Hon. Member familiar with the Michelin case of 1972 wherein countervail was placed on Canadian tires by the United States because the Canadian Government saw fit to give Michelin a grant to establish in Nova Scotia which then became countervailable? To this day that decision causes problems with regard to regional disparity in this country. The Canadian Government of the day, which happened to be Liberal, did not fight that one. I cannot remember that Government talking about sovereignty then. I have other examples as well.

Does the Hon. Member remember that? Will he not admit that that was an intrusion in Canada by the United States and was, in fact, a far more severe intrusion on our sovereignty than is a negotiated settlement between two sovereign governments?

Mr. Garneau: Mr. Speaker, I am completely flabbergasted by the question of the Hon. Member. It is unbelievable that he would compare a grant given to a foreign company which wanted to invest in Canada to the power of a province to establish the price of its natural resources. Is it possible to compare those two things and ask the question which he has asked? He is comparing the power of a province to sell its natural resources to a grant given by a government for an investment in a particular region of Canada.

I hope the Government will not settle the natural resources dispute based on that example. What happened in 1972 was a completely different case. If the Member is suggesting that a grant given by a government to a company must be considered as a possible countervailing duty by another country on the same footing as stumpage fees, a royalty on natural gas, or royalties on a mine, we should stop negotiating with the United States right now because we will lose our shirts.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The period for questions and comments is now over.

[English]

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to participate in this debate. This Bill and its implications will have a great effect on Canada's largest industry, something which I believe the House tends to forget from time to time. About one million Canadians are directly and indirectly employed in the forest sector. I want to deal with a little bit of the history of this matter because I think it involves an historic error of Government judgment which extends back to the time between 1983, when we were found innocent of the charge, and December 30, 1986, when this agreement was reached in Washington.

Before I do that, I will deal quickly with the final remarks made by the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney). She believes that one of the most important signs that this agreement is successful is the fact that stocks have gone up. I believe the Minister is aware, as is everyone else in the House, that the reason they did that is that the incredible level of uncertainty surrounding this issue was gone. It certainly had nothing to do with the Ways and Means motion now before the House implementing a 15 per cent export tax.

The other Conservative Member who spoke demonstrated a level of naiveté that I have not seen for some time in this House. He said that $400 million a year would now be spent on reforestation in B.C. He could not produce a single public statement or document indicating that that has been promised by anyone in British Columbia. With regard to the history of reforestation, the Social Credit Government of British Columbia has the worst track record of any government in the history of Canada. We have "not satisfactorily restocked" lands larger than Prince Edward Island. These lands have never been replanted by the Government or the companies which logged them.

To indicate to British Columbians and other Canadians that the $600 million collected under the export tax is in any way, shape, or form going to be going into reforestation, retraining, or market or plant diversification, is to give false hope which I do not think government or opposition Members should give to people who work in the woods, whether they are buckers, fallers, skidder operators or work in planer mills or sawmills or anything else. I think this debate should be far more frank. It is for that reason that I will discuss for a few moments the history of this issue.

As a Parliament and a country we should have fought much more vigorously. I think we could have won. I believe that if the academics, historians, and legal scholars took a close look at this issue they would realize how we should have fought this battle. There are Hon. Members here during the debate this evening who were at the meeting with me in Washington, in other areas of the United States and in Vancouver where it became clear that the protectionist fervour, coming particularly from members of the Congress and Senate from producing states, was starting to move the administration. What we should have done almost two years ago was to have fanned out trade consulates throughout the United States in selected states and cities and got accurate information out to American consumers about the effects of the proposals of the U.S. coalition on U.S. consumers. We managed through our U.S. Embassy to get to a few people and a few newspapers. There were a few editorials written. However, the U.S. consumers are still in the dark. What has happened is one of the most complex situations of price fixing of which I am aware, although I have only been here seven-odd years.

Let us get a few things clear on the record. Canadian SPF, spruce pine fir, is preferentially purchased in the United States by contractors and homebuilders. They pay a higher price. They have always paid a higher price. They know it is a better quality wood for studs, joists, rafters and for general basic construction. One should look at the tracking of the exchange rate. The argument should have been about the exchange rate. As we took more market share in the United States, it tracked perfectly day by day, week by week, month by month, the exchange differential between Canada and the United States. We picked up that market, certainly a big chunk of it from B.C. producers, some of it from other areas of the country, but we tracked into that market because the wood is preferentially purchased.

As the housing markets went up, we picked up more of that market because of the exchange rate. So a group of producers in the United States got together and asked: "How are we going to get our prices up? We can't price fix in the United States. We can't even talk about it because of anti-trust legislation in the United States". I have talked to a lot of Canadian producers about what Canada could have and should have done in dealing with this issue. However, the Americans got to Washington and from 1983 onward a lot of money was spent and they were very careful about who they were moving, people such as Senator Mattingly, Senator Baucus, and Senator Packwood. They knew how to get to Sam Gibbons. They knew all the key players they had to get moving in terms of the U.S. administration.

Finally, we had the most preposterous letter I have ever seen, the May 8, 1986 famed "Dear Bob" letter from President Reagan which I will read later into the record. They were very well organized. They wanted a larger market share. We retooled our mills on time in British Columbia, in Alberta, in Saskatchewan, to a small extent in Manitoba, and in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes. We spent the money as a country, as corporations. We have much more highly productive workers. We had a much better industry and we have better wood. The Americans asked: "How do we get more southern yellow pine on to the market? How do we get these antiquated mills running again? How do we get people in the United States to buy this crappy wood again?" They asked how they could get American consumers to pay $1,000 to $4,000 more per unit. American consumers should be kicking those Senators and members of the Congress around the block for this form of price fixing. Instead, we are having a debate which makes me as a Canadian feel ill. We know if one takes $600 million out of an industry which only made $600 million last year, that industry will be in trouble.

I will refer to page 5 of the most recent Hay-Roe's and read what he feels is likely to happen in the cyclical downturn in terms of interest rates and the slowdown in the U.S. housing market. This is from the November-December issue of Hay-Roe's:

> The problem Canada faces, then, is that a rise in interest rates will not only generate a downturn in the lumber market, but will also increase the sawmillers' interest costs. Such a squeeze might have been bearable without a tariff to hurdle, but that 15 per cent off the top could be the undoing of the weaker or higher-cost Canadian companies.
> For next year, a trend-line (3 per cent) increase in costs, coupled with the cost of the tariff, would shrink gross profits from $50 to $20 (Canadian dollars) per thousand board feet; and that is the result before allowing for any cyclical weakness in the market.
> If we then knock off a "normal" cyclical price decline—which should be expected in 1988 or 1989—the full horror of the situation is evident. A typical cyclical decline since World War II has been about a 20 per cent drop, using annual average prices. Applying that percentage to our hoped-for 1987 average price implies a drop of more than $50 Canadian (almost $40 U.S.).
> This would run our aggregate gross margin for the Canadian industry about $30 into the hole—much worse than the losses seen even in 1982—and that assumes no further increase in unit costs.
> —the next downturn will force some very unpleasant changes on the Canadian industry.

Let us go back, Mr. Speaker, to that window of opportunity. We heard when we were in Washington that we should be doing this. We brought that message back to the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark). We brought it to the then Minister for International Trade. Not a thin dime was put forward. However, today we find out that the Minister for International Trade wants to spend $12 million, after the fact, on a salvage operation at least in relation to the softwood issue. It had the window of opportunity to get to U.S. consumers, who would in turn get to U.S. legislators to have them back off, and I do not know why Cabinet did not do it. I know it received the message because it came from us, the all-member committee which went to the United States a number of times. I discussed it directly with some of the Ministers who were involved but they did not carry it any further. That real opportunity was gone and now we are into all of what I consider to be somewhat false arguments which are going on in the House today. We know in 1983 we won the case before the same tribunal, before the International Trade Commission. Everyone then started saying it was double jeopardy to be tried again and we will win it again. So the industry put $10 million in its basket and went down and fought it in Washington. It lobbied. It had lawyers. It did this and that and held out the hope to Canadian workers and companies that we would simply win.

I believe many Hon. Members of the House honestly thought we were going to win. Then things started to come unwound partly in relation to a statement made this fall by the Minister of Forests in British Columbia. That was followed by the Premier of British Columbia, Mr. Vander Zalm, when he said the stumpage policies were going to have to be reviewed and so on. That was the first political admission that the forest industry in British Columbia was being subsidized. The Americans immediately picked up that statement and ran with it in the United States. There were three blinks by Mr. Vander Zalm and every worker in the Canadian forest industry—and it was certainly well known in the corporate boardrooms—knew that the loose lips of Vander Zalm were the first thing which really started getting us into trouble.

The famed three blinks were the political admission of the subsidy, then it was said they were going to go it alone to Washington and then it was said that the deal had been struck which, of course, was totally erroneous. The Premier had heard someone said something on television and called a press conference, which was ridiculous. Adding to that was the problem created by the Minister for International Trade in going to Washington, and being pushed around by the Premier of British Columbia and perhaps by some other forces, she said: "We are making this once only final offer of 10 per cent. That is it. Take it or leave it". This is after we had made arguments. I was there along with the Hon. Member for Cariboo-Chilcotin (Mr. Greenaway) and other Members of the House and we told the Americans they were wrong. We told them about double jeopardy, about double counting. We told them all of the things which were wrong with their arguments. They knew we were right.

I know the reason Mr. Vander Zalm wants this export tax. He will never convert this to stumpage increases. He will never do that because there is no incentive for him to do so. He can take this cash and pave roads with it or whatever he bloody well pleases. It will never go into reforestation. I think it unfair and erroneous for Hon. Members to stand in this House and say this is a windfall, that stocks are going up, that it means reforestation programs and no one will lose their jobs. They should read Mike MacEachern. He says 4,700 jobs will be lost. Charlie Widman, not the most accurate guy in the world, says somewhere in the neighbourhood of 40 sawmills will close and 17,000 jobs will be lost.

What we do know is this tax will take away $600 million which could be going back into the industry. It is going to take that money and put it into provincial hands and it will be damn difficult to make any kind of new agreement or arrangement which the Americans will accept because there is no incentive for the Canadians to come forward with a legitimate proposal the Americans would buy, nor is there any serious likelihood, with the variation there is in stumpage in Canada at $10 a thousand in British Columbia, $36 a thousand in Ontario, $40 in Quebec and far higher than that in New Brunswick. With those kinds of ratios what incentive is there for British Columbia, the largest producer to do that? British Columbia will get a larger market share within Canada and in relation to the gross size of the market in the United States as well. Mr. Speaker, I need at least an hour to finish my remarks. I have not even dealt with my notes yet.

I would now like to deal with some of the arguments I heard made in this place by members of the Government and by others. One argument was that we could have won at the ITC or in the courts. The reason given for not going through with that process is that there would have been years of battle. That is quite true. To have carried on the fight at great length in terms of the U.S. court system, having waited beyond December 30 when the petition could not be withdrawn, would have involved a very lengthy process. There is no doubt about that.

Let me now deal with the real issue which is that if we are all standing together on the concept that Canada is a sovereign nation, then we should have fought this matter all the way through. There have been a great many erroneous statements made about what the positions of different people are. We should have fought the conservatives in the United States. The Government decided not to do that, and we will let that be. Then there was the Department of Commerce process to be considered. It goes through a process of double addition. All of us who are members of the Forestry Committee have been through that process. The highest figure which it could have come up with, using its own figures, would have been a 7 per cent countervail. We know that. We know that 15 per cent is illegal. The Secretary of State for External Affairs has said that, and so have I. A great many people have said that. It was an illegal countervail duty. It was an administrative decision made for political reasons.

How can that type of politics be dealt with? I do not think our Government ever sat down to try to address the issue. This matter involves the biggest industry in Canada. Softwood lumber accounts for the largest source of balance of trade. Yet what did the Government do? It let the first window close and when the second one came along, an illegal countervail presented itself. The Minister stood up twice in the House and said: "We will fight this all the way". She said: "We will do everything we can". I think at that point in time we should have really mobilized.

What was going on in the United States? More disinformation and more misinformation. Reporters on U.S. television networks were saying that the reason wood prices were going to increase in the United States was because of Canada. I raised this issue here in the House. A television station in Florida, and other news broadcasters, have said that the whole issue regarding softwood lumber was created by Canada.

The Americans got away with misinformation, illegal processes and administrative decisions. It is all very well for the Minister to get up and say that we had to get the precedent off the books. The fact of the matter is that a far worse precedent is now on the books. The Americans blackmailed us to begin with. They had a powerful lobby which set representatives to their politicians. The politicians went to the Department of Commerce and to the ITC. They came up with an illegal administrative decision and then said: "Okay, Mr. Prime Minister, you take the gun. We are going to nail you for 15 per cent. Hold it to your head and shoot yourself. We will not put the 15 per cent. You go ahead and shoot yourself". So we sent some guys down to Washington. The Minister for International Trade was off on the other side of the planet. These guys went down and negotiated what they could. But they did not have much to deal with. What were they to do? They wrote a few things down. There was a ways and means motion and we heard them say: "People will not be hurt too much".

The fact of the matter is that when I asked the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) here in the House, he would not offer any kind of guarantee that there will be federal assistance for those workers or those companies which will be hurt by this export tax. We know who they will be. Through the Forestry Committee we have been asking for months to obtain a list of those companies which are most likely to be knocked out first. We know who they are. They are small companies working in high-cost timber. They are fairly far from the market or they are already paying a higher royalty than that paid in other areas of the country. We already know who they are. Those people are frightened. Those workers are frightened because they go to work and the company says: "We cannot have a union here anymore because we have this 15 per cent tax so let us get rid of that collective agreement. You are now being paid $8 an hour. We will have to shave it down to $5 in order to deal with this export tax. We have to do this to stay in the market". That type of dialogue has already started. The people are frightened. We know that some of these mills are only marginally competitive now. A great many of them have been swimming in red ink for years.

Mr. Oostrom: Scare tactics!

Mr. Fulton: Scare tactics? Members of the Government have stood in their places and made totally erroneous statements with respect to $400 million per year in B.C. going for reforestation. That is absolutely and totally false. The Hon. Member who made that statement could not direct Members of the House to a single public statement or document that has ever come out in that regard. Talk about erroneous bafflegab! I would use much stronger language to describe it if I were not in the House; but you know I will not, Mr. Speaker.

The Minister has travelled around the country and said: "Members of the NDP and the Liberals say that the money should all go to the United States". Who does the Government think it will con with that type of statement? A six-year-old child could tell us that it is better for the $600 million to stay in Canada than to go to the United States. That is not the argument. There has been blatant government incompetence and backing-down to the bully tactics of the United States. That is what is at issue here. We should have fought as a country. We fought in 1812 when a great many families came to this country.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Fulton: The Prime Minister stood up and mentioned Sir John A. Macdonald and the Tory Party and all other kinds of malarkey. This country will only stand together and hang together while we deal with countries such as the United States without blinking. Vander Zalm blinked. The Minister for International Trade blinked. We ended up with a bum deal for Canada, a bum deal for Canadian workers. It is a deal that will hurt far more than just the softwood sector. There will be a spill-over effect into other parts of the industry.

Have I run out of time, Mr. Speaker?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): You have one minute remaining.

Mr. Fulton: I would now like to illustrate the type of argument we should have taken to our American friends. Some 30 million Americans come to Canada every year. We all know a great many Americans. We all have a great many American friends. Ten years ago 80 per cent of small home appliances purchased in Canada were made in Canada. Now some 90 per cent come from the United States. When the Americans were using this false argument about us having increased our market-share to almost one-third of the U.S. wood market we should have been getting that kind of factual, honest and accurate information to U.S. consumers and legislators. We should have been saying: "We are fair. We are competing fairly. For 50 years we have had absolutely unrestricted free trade, a half a century of free trade in softwood". We should have taken that type of information to the American consumers who could have gone to their legislators and said: "Stop bullying Canada. Stop using blackmail. Stop using these illegal tactics. Treat Canada as the northern friend it really is".

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Are there questions or comments? The Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody (Mr. St. Germain).

Mr. St. Germain: Mr. Speaker, I am glad to see the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton) back from Hawaii or wherever he has been with his million-dollar suntan.

An Hon. Member: He was probably in Cuba.

Mr. St. Germain: I thought socialists would have taken the time and devoted it to social work. However, the Hon. Member saw fit to spend time with the capitalists.

What we are dealing with is the fact that members of the New Democratic Party and the Liberals are trying to turn a business issue into an emotional one. We are dealing with business. They have talked about sovereignty. The Japanese did not relinquish any of their sovereignty when they made a trade agreement concerning automobiles. We have a situation in which we have gone from less than 20 per cent of the American domestic market to well in excess of 30 per cent. We are dealing with trade. When one makes trade agreements, arrangements, administrative deals or whatever they may be, I do not feel that any sovereignty is lost.

The Hon. Member also spoke of the fact that a precedent has been set. No precedent has been set. When a deal is struck, whether it be as a result of court action or whatever, there is no precedent set. I think the Hon. Member is trying to create fear among the general population which is really not genuine. I think that should be brought to light.

• (2000)

The question that I have for the Hon. Member is this. The IWA is headed by a man named Jack Munro, a man I greatly respect, a man who has led the IWA quite successfully in the Province of British Columbia. He is now throwing his hat in the ring to become the Leader of the NDP. He supports this deal because he says that it is a good deal for the workers, for the industry, and for British Columbia. The province supports it. As far as I can tell, the entire NDP Party in the Province of British Columbia supports it. The industry supports it, because the industry is in my riding and I have spoken to it.

Will the Hon. Member tell me what he is basing his arguments on as a British Columbian that this is no good for British Columbia?

Mr. Fulton: I am sorry that the Hon. Member did not listen to my speech. I tried to point out that the only argument that the government Members are using is that it is better to have the $600 million a year in Canada than in the United States. That is the only strong ground that you are on. Jack Munro and everyone else is absolutely correct in saying that keeping the money in Canada is better than having it go to the United States. That is not the argument here today.

What I am saying is that we have a number of windows of opportunity where we could and should have won this case in the United States. Many Americans fully expected us to win it. Sam Gibbons and the President of the United States expected us to win it. The President expected that he would have to find other ways of dealing with this issue. I am saying that bungling has gone on, and quite often bungling from inaction. I am not saying that some of the actions that led to this were what caused it, I am saying that in many cases it was inaction. The Cabinet seemed to always be dealing with other things. Finally the hens have come home to roost. The Minister for International Trade has ended up having to cut a deal. She had no other option. The Government would have looked ridiculous. Let us be serious, Gerry—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Please address your questions through the Chair.

Mr. Fulton: The Government would have looked ridiculous, and the Member for Mission—Port Moody (Mr. St. Germain) would have looked ridiculous if the money had been going into the coffers of the United States. We all know that. I do not think that the Government is being fair in what it is putting forward in this debate and saying that is what the whole issue is about. It is over-simplifying it to a repulsive extent. We could have won it. There would not have been a countervailing duty or an export tax, if we had played our cards properly. We could at least have fought in terms of the double mathematics. We have said for months that double mathematics was used, and that the highest they could have properly come to using their own figures was a 7 per cent countervail. What are we doing imposing a 15 per cent tax on ourselves? Do we not even believe our own bilge-water, the Government's own bilge-water, when we are involved in debates in the House?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): On a supplementary question, the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody (Mr. St. Germain).

Mr. St. Germain: The Hon. Member put forward the argument that the increase in the price of stocks certainly was not an indication. I would like the Hon. Member to qualify this. Does the Hon. Member actually believe that Canadian investors would invest in a company or companies and increase the value of stocks if this was not a good deal and a bona fide situation?

Mr. Fulton: I do not know who has been buying those stocks. What I said in my speech was that the reason that people were buying those stocks was that the uncertainty was gone; that the cloud of uncertainty that surrounded the forest sector was removed.

Mr. Greenaway: I was wondering if I heard the Hon. Member correctly when he said that the money was going to go to the provinces rather than to the companies, and that he did not trust what the provinces were going to do with this money. Does that mean that he trusts the companies, these multinational integrated companies to spend this money better than the provinces?

Mr. Fulton: I certainly did not say that. What I said, and it is in the Ways and Means Motion, is that the money that is collected will be going back to those provinces where the wood was produced. I am saying that I frankly think that that money would be better spent by almost any Canadian forest corporation than by Bill Vander Zalm and his Government, based on their track record.

Mr. Riis: I wish to compliment my colleague on what must be one of the best speeches that I have heard in the House of Commons for many a month. During his speech, the Hon. Member referred to the role that Mr. Vander Zalm played, in a sense tripping this whole process that led to this disastrous decision. Would the Hon. Member take a moment or two to elaborate on the role that Premier Vander Zalm played in selling out the forest resource.

Mr. Fulton: I wish to take a moment of the House's time. Last month an article appeared which was written by John Ferguson entitled "Vander Zalm's babbling hurts lumber talks". Let me read it for you, Mr. Speaker, because it is very informative:

> The joke ended this week.
> Until now, Canadians have smirked in mild amusement at British Columbia Premier Bill Vander Zalm's unique views on the role of women or his attempt to stake out his own provincial foreign policy with South Africa.
> But this week Vander Zalm's open-mouth, think-later approach threw a big wrench into the sensitive Canada-U.S. lumber talks, sending precisely the wrong signals to the other side of the bargaining table, a move that could end up costing Canada many millions of dollars.
> Trade Minister Pat Carney, whose tolerance level may be higher than most because she comes from B.C., has been rising to a slow boil since last summer because of Vander Zalm's ill-timed and thoughtless interventions in the case. This week, she is said to have been outraged.
> And in federal offices and among negotiators in Washington there is the wistful hope the wacko from B.C. might take a slow boat to a remote destination until the lumber talks get wrapped up.
> Vander Zalm's latest blunder was to announce from his office in Victoria on Tuesday that a tentative agreement had been reached in Washington in the dispute over U.S. claims that Canadian softwood lumber is being subsidized by the provincial governments.

Vander Zalm claimed to have received the information from a special adviser in his office. In fact, the tip came from an erroneous local newscast and he had no first hand information at all.

But his premature support of the alleged "deal" couldn't have come at a worse time for Canadian negotiators in Washington who had just received a new proposal from the U.S. lumber coalition fighting the case.

Canada has proposed a 15-per-cent increase in the price of lumber exported to the U.S. to be imposed by a combination export charge and phased-in stumpage increase. That's equal to the level of countervailing tariff recommended in October in a preliminary finding by the U.S. Commerce Department.

Mr. McDermid: The Hon. Member said that in his opinion we could have won the fight somewhere down the road. We won in 1983. Did we really win in 1983? The problem was still with us in 1986. Had we won on the countervail, it would have gone to Congress for legislation. The Hon. Member and I have discussed this at some length. I think that he will admit that this was the best of a bad deal that we could have achieved.

The Japanese have a 12 per cent countervail on their steel. Tomorrow there will be a 200 per cent increase on tariffs against the EEC by the United States. There is a trade war going on. The Americans are playing it very tough with everybody, not just Canada. They are playing hardball with the rest of the world and whoever they trade with. The Hon. Member and I have discussed this before. If he was honest with the people of Canada, he would admit that this was the best of a bad deal that we could get.

Mr. Fulton: I do not agree with that, and I will tell the Hon. Member why. I have followed this issue very carefully for many years now, and I know a considerable amount about it. Members of the House should reflect on the fact that the majority of U.S. buyers have been picking up for quite some time now, in excess of two-thirds, and in some cases in excess of three-quarters of the 15 per cent countervail that they have been posting as bonds. It is all done over the phone. I have been present while these transactions have been taking place with forest companies in my own province. They actually discuss the countervail. We have to keep in focus that this is a very complex matter of price fixing in the United States. It is a very complex way of going about it. There were other ways that we could have gone about it. I have discussed it with lumbermen in most of the provinces in the country, and one of the ways we could have and should have put more effort into it was by dealing with our own volume and our own price on the Canadian side of the border. I am not saying that we should have set up a fancy cartel—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret that the Hon. Member's time has expired. It has been a great exchange, and I know that we will be hearing from the Hon. Member again.

On debate, the Hon. Member for Lévis (Mr. Fontaine).

• (2010)

[Translation]

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, before speaking about the substance of this measure, I would like to make a few comments about the statements made by the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) who has just spoken, a Quebecer like myself, and the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton), a Canadian like myself. I was very surprised to hear the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides speak about the integrity of Canadian sovereignty since he is a member of the Liberal team which completely ignored the role of Quebec within the Canadian nation. It is very strange to hear these people speak about integrity, respect for Canada as a whole, sovereignty, and so on. The Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides also said that the industry was badly disadvantaged by our agreements with the United States. He misinformed the House by saying that the climate in the United States was bad for the lumber market. The American climate will be very good for the lumber market in the next few years and so will the Canadian climate. A few Canadian companies may have problems, but generally speaking, most Canadian companies will benefit a lot from the success of our negotiations.

The Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides spoke about the workers and the fact that they disagreed with the results of our negotiations, but I would like to remind him that the IWA has 31,000 members, which is over half of the 60,000 people who now work for the lumber industry. All these workers have said that they are very satisfied with our negotiations. I shall have more to say about this later on.

Finally, the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides asked why we made a different decision in 1983. The fact is that, in 1983, the preliminary conclusions of the International Trade Commission were favourable to Canada, but, in 1986, as the Hon. Member would have known if he had been better informed, the preliminary conclusions were not favourable to the Canadian industry. Finally, he asks why we should now have to negotiate such an agreement with the United States. We have to do so because of the mismanagement of the Liberals who were in power before us and who endangered between 300 to 500 types of products which we export to the United States and on which additional duties could be imposed by the Americans.

I would like to ask the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides what he would have done to preserve the 60,000 jobs which we would have lost if we had not succeeded in our negotiations and to protect our $4-billion lumber exports. He would probably have replaced these jobs, as he did when his party was in power, by Canada Works programs financed by the debts of our children and grandchildren. That is how the Liberals used to create jobs. Their solution was not to export to an attractive market.

I would like the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides to send a copy of his speech to his friend the Quebec Premier who, for his part, said that he was very satisfied with our negotiations. If he sent him a copy of this speech, it could reduce his chances of being appointed president of Quebec Hydro.

As for the Hon. Member for Skeena, I would like him to explain to me how he can agree with his colleague from the British Columbia socialist party, the official economic critic of the socialist opposition party in British Columbia, Bob Williams, who has said that he is very satisfied with our agreement. He is a Member of the socialist party, just as the Hon. Member for Skeena. I also wish he would try to explain this to Mr. Munro, the Chairman of this Union with 31,000 members, I would like him to ask Mr. Munro, a Canadian formerly nominated for the leadership of the Socialist Party in British Columbia, and who now agrees with our proposals. Let them therefore begin by putting some order in their own Socialist Party before they come in with theoritical recommendations.

Let me finally deal with the matter of lumber itself. Mr. Speaker, I think it is important to explain what lumber means for the benefit of those members of the Socialist Party who have never set foot in a sawmill. Lumber means 2 x 4, 2 x 8, 1 x 3 timber. That is what lumber means. And that is what Canada has been defending through our Government. Let me try to focus on the present context. We now have exports of $95 billion with our best customer, one which buys 80 per cent of our exports, the United States. On the other hand, our imports from the United States amount to $80 billion. We therefore have a profit margin, a trade surplus of $15 billion with the United States. Canadian exports account for about one job out of three in Canada. In other words, one job out of three in Canada depends on exports. Let us try to see where Canadian softwood exports fit in in those $95 billion. They come in third place. First comes the Auto Pact, nothwithstanding the position taken by the Socialists at the time, the Auto Pact which ranks first in our exports to the United States with $24 billion. Then come newsprint exports with $4.8 billion, and third our softwood exports with $4 billion, those $4 billion representing 60,000 jobs, 11,000 of which in Quebec, my own province.

What has been our position and what were the highlights in the development of this matter? First of all, during the Summer of 1986, the Americans wanted to impose a duty on the goods that we Canadians were going to ship out to them. They wanted to impose a 36 per cent barrier. Since we export $4 billion worth of softwood, that means that the Americans were going to collect $1.44 billion from the Canadians, to be paid to the US Treasury.

Mr. Speaker, we started looking into this issue and have managed, as a first step, to reduce these 36 per cent to an amount of 15 per cent which the Americans could have charged on our lumber exports to their country. They could have collected 15 per cent on $4 billion, the equivalent of $600 million. But we did not stop there, Mr. Speaker.

We thought that there were other possible avenues. We could have waited for the American Tribunal to hand down its decision, with a chance of losing or winning. We could have appealed this decision, as suggested by the Liberal Government of Ontario. We could have adopted a wait-and-see attitude, but because we are dealing here with a country which represents some 240 million potential customers, we have decided to negotiate with our main economic partner. We have done so in consultation with the trade unions, the provinces and the industry.

Having explored several possibilities, we have finally decided that, instead of the Americans collecting some 15 per cent on $4 billion of our export, we would collect this 15 per cent on the Canadian border and keep it in this country.

Mr. Speaker, one should realize that an amount of $1.44 billion which we would have paid to the United States is an enormous difference compared with $600 million in taxes that, admittedly, will be charged, but that we will keep in Canada.

This is therefore the result of negotiation by our team and Minister of this conservative government.

Mr. Speaker, you are aware that Premier Vander Zalm of British Columbia and Premier Bourassa of Quebec have indicated they are extremely pleased with this agreement and I believe they have every reason to be, because this represents an increase in revenues of $400 million for British Columbia and some $110 million for my own province of Quebec.

If we had listened to the Ontario Government and Liberal Members of this House, let alone the socialists who are difficult to listen to because we can nearly never understand what they say, if we had decided to wait for the decision of the American Tribunal, our companies would have received the visit of auditors from the United States Department of Commerce anxious to look through their books as well as those of the goverments of Canada. That we did not want.

Contrary to what Members opposite have said, Mr. Speaker, we have had the support of nine provinces, including Quebec. Only the Province of Ontario would have opted for a different solution, but it is not a major exporter of softwood lumber.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, what is important—and this is why again today I fail to understand the position of the socialists, as usual—is that we had the support of the International Woodworkers of America, the IWA, with its 31,000 membership. I have here the letter dated January 5, 1987 addressed to the Hon. Pat Carney, Minister for International Trade, Parliament Buildings, etc. I will read the first paragraph, Mr. Speaker. "Madam Minister:

The International Woodworkers of America want to express general support for the recently negotiated softwood lumber settlement with the United States."

Mr. Munro belongs to this union and, as I said earlier, he once ran for the leadership of the socialist party in British Columbia. The secretary of this union is Mr. Gerry Stoney who happens to be the former president of the provincial wing of the socialist party in British Columbia. So you socialists should listen because I am talking about you and you should not miss that opportunity, seeing you seldom get talked about.

So, Mr. Speaker, we have here the endorsement of 31,000 Canadian softwood lumber industry workers. Meanwhile the New Democratic Party is against the softwood lumber deal, not to mention the fact that, in a wider context, the New Democratic Party is speaking against bilateral trade negotiations as strongly as it voiced opposition to the Auto Pact in 1965. I suggest it is quite ironic that the socialists should be so concerned about the Auto Pact. During the negotiations of 20 years ago, they had the same negative attitude as they now have. At that time the Auto Pact was reached and today, because of the Auto Pact, we are selling to the Americans for $24 billion worth of automotive parts and components, $24 billion out of $95 billion, and if you can count, this represents 25 per cent of our sales, Mr. Speaker.

Finally, when I hear the Socialists Members oppose freer trade, I would like to remind them of the New Zealand Government. Because New Zealand is governed by Socialists like you, and because they had a neighbour with five times its population, they negotiated free trade and everybody is happy about it now. So try and get your act together from one province to another and from one country to another. Socialists from around the world, why don't you talk to each other from time to time?

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I am surprised to hear—to return to Mr. Bob Williams, who officially took a stand against the positions taken by Mr. Broadbent, the Leader of the Socialist Party of Canada, on the matter of free trade agreement. You will always be hearing the position taken by the British Columbia Labour Union, a union on which you depend from time to time. Maybe that union will now ask itself a few questions before extending further financial support.

Now, we also have the position of the Liberal Party of Canada. I suggest that instead of trying to utter such futile objections to our deal with the Americans, they should perhaps pay a wee bit more attention—and this is a marginal remark, Mr. Speaker—to their party's financial situation, because their creditors are getting tired of waiting for the refund of those $5 million that have now been outstanding for the past two years. Why don't you look after that, you Liberals?

I am also amazed at the position taken by Liberals, because I see the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) who is totally opposed to negotiations with the Americans; he says he would introduce that through the GATT. Perhaps he is not aware that we have a $250 million client. I would like to compare his position with that of his colleague for Saint-Henri—Westmount (Mr. Johnston). The latter is committed to being open to free trade. As far as their leader is concerned, he would fit nicely on a skating rink, because at times he is for and at other times he is against. Earlier today, I heard the Leader of the Liberal Party of Canada state things in this House that are utterly false. He said it was easy to negotiate when one always backs out. Now he suggests that we have always backed out. This is not true, Mr. Speaker. The Leader of the Official Opposition should be ashamed when he suggests that we are always backing out when, in fact, we have held our own in the face of a population ten times greater than ours. Now those people wanted to levy a 36 per cent tax on our exports. Firstly, we reduced it to 15 per cent and, secondly, we turned it around, since we will be collecting that 15 per cent tax on our exports. And the leader of the Liberal Party gave incorrect information to the House this afternoon, Mr. Speaker. We did not set any precedent.

Mr. Speaker, for all those reasons, for the soundness of our management and of our negotiations on every issue, some people such as the Auditor General of Canada are saying that our administration is excellent. This is why Mr. Justice Estey said in his review on our involvement with banks that our intervention was appropriate. Because of our sound management, we have 666,000 new jobs today, our unemployment rate has decreased from 11.7 per cent in September 1984 to 9.4 per cent today, while unemployment among young people has decreased by 4 per cent and prime interest rates have been reduced from 12.38 to 8.30 per cent. You remember, Mr. Speaker, that under the Liberal Government interest rates on residential mortgages went up to 22 per cent. Now under our Government, the rate is 9.5 per cent. We have now reached another phase, since the Minister of International Trade (Miss Carney) has opened up a market of 250 million buyers who will create hundreds of thousands of jobs for Canadians. Those new jobs will enable us to collect tax to pay the bill and our debts, the $240 billion which were left to us, to our children and grand-children by the former Liberal Government in September 1984.

Mrs. Duplessis: Mr. Speaker, for the information of the House I would ask the Hon. Member for Lévis (Mr. Fontaine) to tell us how many jobs would have been lost in Quebec had we not negotiated that deal.

Mr. Fontaine: Mr. Speaker, the question asked by the Hon. Member for Louis-Hébert (Mrs. Duplessis) who is a Member from Quebec, as I am, has nothing in common with the false and misleading allegations we heard earlier from the Hon. Member from Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau). I am pleased to inform the House that had it not been for the favourable results of our negotiations with the Americans, Quebec had 11,000 jobs at stake. Those jobs are linked to the lumber business in the Province of Quebec. Those are the results of our agreement, Mr. Speaker.

• (2020)

[English]

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. With the greatest of respect, the Hon. Member for Lévis (Mr. Fontaine) has exercised himself and got himself all excited to the point where he is talking about the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) having made false and misleading statements. That is unparliamentary, and I would ask the Hon. Member to withdraw—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): That is not what I understood, but I would have to look at Hansard. The Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis).

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I have two questions for the Hon. Member, one in response to the question just asked by his colleague nearby about the number of jobs in Quebec that would have been lost if this agreement had not been made. Could he quote the number of jobs that would have been lost and the source?

Second, would he explain the comment made recently by the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) in this House when she said that this decision has concerned us and should concern all of the United States trading partners because we view it as an unacceptable attempt to impose U.S. views on how other governments should manage their natural resources. Furthermore, we feel that this preliminary ruling by the U.S. Commerce Department has no basis in U.S. law, is badly flawed, and is inconsistent with the U.S. obligations under the GATT. That was at a time when she said that we were going to fight this all the way; referring to the original decision.

Today it is lumber. Tomorrow it could be any number of issues. Could the Hon. Member explain what the Minister meant when she said that the Government would fight this all the way? Would he not agree that the Minister for International Trade actually admitted in that statement that the United States was imposing on our sovereignty, particularly as it reflects on softwoods?

[Translation]

Mr. Fontaine: Mr. Speaker, in answer to the first question asked by the Socialist Member, I will suggest that if he could give more attention to financial newspapers and magazines such as the Financial Post and the Quebec publication Les Affaires, instead of reading Lenin's memoirs, he might have learned there are 11,000 jobs involved in the Province of Quebec.

Concerning his second question, I would like to suggest that contrary to the Socialists, instead of fighting for decades for impossible things and then getting stuck on them, when we negotiate, we try to strike the best deal with our partners, the negotiators, the Americans, and we look at the changing situation in order to keep our markets and develop them. So that was our position, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I have a short supplementary question. I am afraid I missed the response. I asked the Hon. Member for his source, not for some vague reference to a Canadian journal. What was the Hon. Member's source for the number of jobs that would be lost in the Province of Quebec if this deal with the United States had not been cut?

[Translation]

Mr. Fontaine: Day after day, Mr. Speaker, I have the opportunity, as others have here in this House, to take part in or listen to the oral question period, because usually the questions are asked by Hon. Members opposite. Day after day, Mr. Speaker, I notice that we give appropriate answers to the questions asked by the Socialists, and every time there are some of them who ask the same question three times, and again others, ask the same question three more times, and often the same question is asked nine times and the same answer always applies. Stop reading Lenin, read specialized magazines dealing with economic matters.

• (2030)

Mr. Rossi: Mr. Speaker, in his speech, the Hon. Member for Lévis (Mr. Fontaine) took a sheet of paper and said—I have 30,000 names supporting that decision. I will therefore ask the Hon. Member for Lévis to table that list of 30,000 people.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret to inform the Hon. Member that a private Member cannot table names.

[Translation]

I am sorry, but the period for questions and comments is over. Debate. The Hon. Member for Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe (Mr. Tobin).

[English]

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, I must say that it is a rare experience to feel a sense of déjà vu while participating in today's debate. When driving a car down a small village road in Newfoundland, these little dogs run along behind the car and yap and bark and make a pile of noise. In Newfoundland, we call those little dogs crackies. Little crackies make a pile of noise and bark and yap and go after tires. As soon as you stop the car, put on the brakes and open the door, they scatter to the four winds. They are little, cowardly crackies.

I had a sense of déjà vu about those crackies that I normally see on the road in Newfoundland when I heard the House Leader of the NDP ask the Hon. Member for Lévis (Mr. Fontaine) not once, as Mr. Smallwood would say, not twice, but three times to provide the source of the information he put forward indicating how many jobs would be lost in Quebec. When challenged on a number of occasions to provide that source, the Hon. Member turned out to be like those little dogs in Newfoundland, nothing but a loud-mouthed cracky. He could not provide the source of the information, obviously because no such source exists. If the Hon. Member would like to provide the source now, I will gladly take my seat.

In the course of speaking on Bill C-37 today, I did not expect to flash back in my memory to those little, mouthy, noisy crackies that chase cars in the rural communities of Newfoundland. However, I did.

Bill C-37 is a Bill that should be entitled: "An Act respecting the imposition of the American administration's will on a weak and vacillating Canadian Tory administration". That is what the Bill should be entitled because that is what it is. It is all about the will of an American administration when met by the lack of resolve of a soft and mushy Canadian Tory administration.

The will of the American administration came flowing like a Sherman tank across the border. This Government laid down in front of it and provided material for the imprint of the tank's tracks. This Bill is an insult to every single person in Canada who considers himself to be a member of a sovereign nation.

Canadians are not excited neo-nationalists in the American sense of the word. We do not run around stitching the Canadian flag on every jacket, hat, knapsack, baseball mitt and pair of boots we own. We do not run around advertising every single product in the country by saying it is the Canadian way.

Mr. McDermid: Yes, buy Canadian, think Canadian.

Mr. Tobin: No, we do not. We are quiet in our nationalism. We are secure in our pride of nation. However, when Canadians are roused, when they genuinely feel that the ability of their politicians to make laws for Canada and for Canadians is lost, then Canadians get damned angry.

Canadians do not understand a lot of the verbiage in this debate. They do not understand precisely what an excise tax or a 15 per cent export tax is. They do not understand countervailing duties or GATT and international trade remedies. They do not understand any of those things, but they understand that this is merely the latest in a series of capitulations by a Government that claims to speak for Canada. That they understand very well.

Is it not amusing that on Wednesday of this week, in 48-hours' time, the Vice-President of the United States with a cabinet secretary in tow will arrive in Canada? The Vice-President did not come to Canada in a panic when Canadians were screaming about the impact of the cedar shakes and shingles issue. There was no sign of a U.S. presidential aircraft touching down in Ottawa. The Vice-President did not arrive in Canada when we screamed like hell about the imposition of American ice-breakers in Canadian Arctic waters. There was no sign of an American presidential aircraft then. He did not arrive when duties were imposed on pork and fish. He did not even come when we screamed like hell when the softwood lumber deal was signed. But, by God, just one week after the branch plant, the subsidiary of the Republican Party in Canada which is the Tory Party goes to third in the polls and the cursed, frightening socialists go to second, the Vice President with a cabinet secretary in tow will arrive.

Why will he arrive? Is it because he wants to discuss trade issues? Is it because he is concerned that Canadians have been speaking with one angry voice about the treatment we have received at the hands of an insensitive American administration? No, he is arriving because it is the American mentality that when the branch plant is in trouble, the head office goes to visit. When the Canadian subsidiary is not producing up to scratch, the head office goes to see it. Now that the branch plant, the Canadian subsidiary of the American Republican Party, the Progressive Conservative Party of Canada, is in trouble, the Vice-President and a cabinet secretary are riding in on the big silver wings of the American presidential emblem in an attempt to bail out a Prime Minister who has panicked, pushed the direct line to Washington and said: "Come bail me out". I do not know how successful that is going to be.

I was in Washington a week ago. I want to tell Hon. Members that as much as we are totally absorbed and obsessed, and rightly so, with events which have occurred over the last year, events which have crystallized in this ridiculous Bill through the imposition of an American Government's will on a sovereign Canadian state, in Washington, well, they are not really interested. They hardly know there is an issue here. It is an incredibly frightening realization to see on the front page of every single newspaper in Washington and on every American television network reports about a potential trade war between the U.S. and the EEC. What is at stake? The Americans might impose $250 million in duties on gin and pasta imported from the EEC. That was a front page story. Meanwhile the $500 million in duties imposed on softwood lumber was nowhere to be found. Why would a $250 million tariff threatened against the EEC dominate the imagination of Americans and a $500 million tariff imposed on a Canadian product be studiously ignored? Let me tell you why. Without getting into who is right and who is wrong in that dispute, the EEC has responded to the American threat by telling the Americans that they run the risk of a full-scale trade war if that $250 million tariff is imposed.

Mr. McDermid: Are you suggesting we get into a trade war?

Mr. Tobin: I am suggesting no one should get into a trade war but I am suggesting that we do not get down on bended knee—

Mr. McDermid: Oh, come on.

Mr. Tobin: —like some supplicating protectorate—

Mr. McDermid: You have no suggestions.

Mr. Tobin: The Member should listen quietly. He is an angry and frustrated man who has difficulty listening to the truth.

Mr. McDermid: Why not tell us what you would do?

Mr. Tobin: If the truth bothers him all that much let him go out and yell into the wind. That would certainly do more good than interrupting my speech.

Some Hon. Members: That is true!

Mr. Epp (Provencher): You know all about wind.

Mr. Tobin: The difference is that the EEC has said to the Americans that kind of imposition will not be accepted by them. In Canada we have quietly knuckled under and agreed to negotiate, to compromise, to try and find some face-saving gesture which allows the Canadian Government to claim a measure of victory and at the same time meeting precisely the terms and conditions of its masters in Washington.

Mr. McDermid: So you want us to get into a trade war with the U.S?

Mr. Tobin: You must be embarrassed as a Government to be put in such a—

Mr. Blenkarn: Oh, come on.

Mr. Tobin: I am sorry. It must be embarrassing to behave in such a manner.

An Hon. Member: Listening to you is an embarrassment.

Mr. Tobin: A former Member of the House, Mr. Jean Chrétien—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Tobin: —used to tell a story—

Mr. McDermid: We know, you were his campaign manager.

Mr. Tobin: —used to tell a story that Members opposite would do well to consider. He used to tell the story about the time in an election in Quebec when Premier Duplessis came to Shawinigan and told the voters, who needed a brand new bridge to cross the river from one side to the other—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Della Noce: No, from the top to the bottom.

Mr. McDermid: That is normally the way bridges go.

Mr. Tobin: —that if they voted for the Union Nationale in the election—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Hon. Members have done a great job today. We only have another 15 minutes before the Adjournment Debate. Please.

Mr. Tobin: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think Mr. Chrétien's story is worth repeating. Premier Duplessis told the voters that if they voted for the Union Nationale he would build their new bridge. If they did not, he would not build the bridge. A young Jean Chrétien went to a microphone and told the Premier of Quebec that as an independent citizen of the Province of Quebec he would rather swim the river on his back than cross the bridge on his knees. The people of Shawinigan did not vote for Premier Duplessis.

Mr. Stewart: What did he tell Turner?

Mr. Tobin: Perhaps that is a lesson for the Government.

Mr. Epp (Provencher): He got hit by an iceberg.

Mr. Tobin: At some point the Government had better be prepared to swim the international sea on its back if necessary rather than cross the bridge on its knees. The Government has set a precedent in this natural resource pricing which will allow the American Government to demand similar treatment in other areas, whether it be pulp and paper, newsprint, agricultural products, or any other specialized field. The Government has entered into an agreement that establishes a precedent which is extremely dangerous for Canada.

We heard the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) talk about the sovereignty clause in the agreement. We heard her contend that the letter written by Mr. Baldrige and Mr. Yeutter to Mr. Dennison of the American lumber industry is nothing but a political side-show. It means nothing to the Government of Canada. I want to tell Members that when I was in Washington last week with my colleague from Winnipeg we met with Mr. Alan Woods, the senior American administration—

Mr. McDermid: You would rather believe the Americans than Canadians?

Mr. Tobin: I would rather believe the Americans than believe the Progressive Conservative Party of Canada which daily demonstrates its inability to separate reality from fantasy.

Mr. McDermid: You believe Americans before you believe Canadians.

Mr. Tobin: We have already talked about little crackys. If that noisy big cracky will hold his tongue for a moment, I will continue with my speech.

We talked to Mr. Alan Woods, the American administration official who negotiated this deal. He is quite proud of it. He drafted this letter so we asked him whether or not it represented the American legal interpretation of the agreement which had been signed. His words were that the American administration stood 100 per cent behind the letter.

Mr. McDermid: And the Canadian Government stands behind the agreement.

Mr. Tobin: When the Minister talks about the sovereignty clause in the agreement, she ought to read the sovereignty clauses in this letter.

Mr. McDermid: No, read the agreement.

Mr. Tobin: On at least three or four different occasions the Americans clearly cite their right to put their noses into matters which should be under the jurisdiction of the Government of Canada or the provincial Governments. It talks about the U.S. Government having the right to closely monitor, and the Government of Canada needing the approval of the U.S. Government to carry on with the transfer of the export charge into an increase in stumpage rates. The Government of Canada continues to deny that fact but it is in the letter. I had an opportunity to obtain a legal opinion on this letter and what it means in law.

Mr. McDermid: Bugger all.

Mr. Tobin: The Member opposite, a Parliamentary Secretary, says it means bugger all. I think that is hardly the way for an official speaking on behalf of the Government of Canada to describe what is clearly the American interpretation of this agreement. Is the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) about to tell the Vice-President of the U.S. on Wednesday that the American administration interpretation means bugger all?

Mr. McDermid: Yes.

Mr. Tobin: If that is what you think, you do not have an agreement.

Mr. McDermid: We certainly do.

Mr. Tobin: No, we do not have an agreement.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. The Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway) on a point of order.

Mr. Redway: Mr. Speaker, I do not know about the term the Hon. Member has used but he has used it three times and I would like you to rule on whether it is or is not parliamentary. In my view it is certainly not.

Mr. Althouse: He is quoting the Parliamentary Secretary.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I will check it out and I will be able to rule on it tomorrow. The time for the Hon. Member's speech has expired. I will give him an extra three minutes and we will then move on to questions and comments.

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I will obviously respect the ruling of the Chair. With respect to the terminology I used, I am just a fellow from Newfoundland. We do not use that kind of terminology down there. The Progressive Conservative Member for Brampton—Georgetown (Mr. McDermid) used the term and I was merely repeating it for the benefit of his colleague who objects to it. I suggest he have a private tête-à-tête with the Hon. Member about his language if he does not like it. I am nothing but an echo, and from time to time a foolish echo, of the insensitive and foolish comments I hear across the way while I am speaking.

It is my belief that the agreement which has been signed between the United States and Canada on the lumber accord is such a bad agreement in terms of its impact on Canadian sovereignty and such a bad agreement in terms of the legal precedent which it sets with respect to the American ability to set prices for our natural resources, that Canada would be better off if it moved to invoke Article 9 of the agreement. That is the article which allows us to terminate the agreement within 30 days. If that means that at that point we have to run the risk of American retaliation, that we have to find enough backbone and resolve to stand up and be a sovereign, independent, mature nation rather than a loose protectorate of the United States, then so be it. Let us stand up and be counted.

If this nation, in the interest of ensuring that the Prime Minister is able to keep alive the free trade talks which he has committed so much political capital to, has to continue to concede to the Americans and appease them on every single irritant they raise, be it generic drugs, cedar shakes and shingles, lumber, fish, pork, or Arctic sovereignty, the only difference between us and Puerto Rico would be that Puerto Rico is formally a U.S. protectorate and Canada would be a protectorate posturing as a nation. We in this Party will not see that day arrive without a hell of a lot of noise and debate.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I have a short question for the Hon. Member after his excellent presentation. On January 3, 1987, the Canadian Press made the following statement:

> Historians, economists and legal scholars give the Mulroney government a failing grade on its handling of the softwood lumber talks with the United States.
> They say the government has jeopardized Canada's sovereignty by caving in to American demands to impose a 15-per-cent tax on lumber exports south of the border.
> And they say there is no precedent in Canadian history for a deal that gives Washington a voice in how Canada manages its lumber industry.
> Maxwell Cohen, one of Canada's foremost experts on international law, said Friday that the lumber deal is a dangerous precedent that threatens Canadian sovereignty.
> "It is a strange procedure to allow someone to monitor our own stuff," said Cohen, who was a judge on the International Court of Justice in the Gulf of Maine dispute with the U.S. and a former Canadian chairman of the International Joint Commission.

Does the Hon. Member support the suggestion in this Canadian Press report that this is in fact a very serious erosion of Canadian sovereignty, particularly in the softwood industry?

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the Hon. Member for his very tough and penetrating question. I will attempt to answer it. There is no doubt that the agreement which has been signed by the Government of Canada, taken on its own merit, is an erosion of sovereignty. This agreement follows a series of other matters which were so-called negotiated between our two nations. We retaliated against the tariff on cedar shakes by putting a tariff on teabags and American books. The Americans applied a tariff to salt fish products in Atlantic Canada. Since only Atlantic Canada was affected, the Government of Canada went to sleep on it. It did not matter.

The American administration sailed an ice-breaker through Arctic waters and, rather than spending its time protesting strongly, making a claim of Canadian sovereignty, or demanding that such an exercise never occur again, the Canadian Government tried to explain that it did not know until after the fact that Americans had moved into our sovereign waters. The Americans have prodded a few times. They sent a ship racing through our sovereign waters and we did nothing. They imposed a 35 per cent tariff on shakes and shingles and we retaliated on teabags. The Americans are not stupid. After a while they begin to learn something. If you poke an animal that is cornered and it only whimpers, it is time to get rough. The Americans got rough. The most humiliating thing about this agreement is not that we whimpered, but that we actually pretended we had won something great.

I grew up on American Air Force bases. My father was employed with the American Air Force for 30 years. Americans are as good a people as you will find anywhere in the world. However, I know that you have a good relationship with anyone when there is mutual respect across the fence. The Americans have no respect for the vacillating Tory administration which they see across the fence.

Mr. Kilgour: Mr. Speaker, the Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) quoted former Judge Cohen. I hope the Member realizes that Professor Cohen is strongly supportive of the bilateral initiative.

I have a two-part question for the Member. What would his Party have done with respect to softwood lumber? Would it have allowed the $600 million to go out of the country? Does it not feel that stumpage fees should be raised in British Columbia and other provinces? Second, bearing in mind that about 2.5 million Canadian citizens depend upon the U.S. market for their livelihood, what is the policy of the Member's Party with respect to the bilateral negotiations with the United States?

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, I would like to believe that any administration, theoretically even Conservative, although that is doubtful, that demonstrated some resolve, that demonstrated that it took the notion of nationhood seriously, that demonstrated that it took the notion of sovereignty seriously, would not have been confronted with an American administration prepared to make a 360 degree turn from the ruling it made in 1983 to the completely opposite ruling it made in 1986.

What we saw was not an exercise in trade law, as the Hon. Member knows. We saw an exercise in the United States of the lowest form of politics. No commerce department can justify doing a complete flip-flop on the basis of trade law. That could only occur in the face of political heat at home and a consideration by the administration that this kind of action could be taken against Canada because Canada had neither the backbone nor the resolve to respond in a proper way. We would quite likely not have been faced with this problem. If we were, we would not have given up our remedies under countervail law or under international law.

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Speaker, why does the Hon. Member continue to believe in and support the side letter written by the Americans which has nothing to do with the agreement? Those who have negotiated and those who are giving legal advice to the Canadian Government say that that letter is not the agreement. The agreement is the one which was signed. Their interpretation is entirely different. Why does the Member believe the Americans rather than the Canadians? Why does he continue to insist on that?

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, this is almost amusing. It is not a matter of whether or not I believe the Americans. The fact is that under the agreement which Canada has signed with the United States, Canada has no method of appeal. We have no remedies. We signed them away.

Mr. McDermid: You do have remedies.

Mr. Tobin: No, we do not. The Americans have Section 301 of the American Trade Law which is a huge hammer with which they intend, when necessary, to hit us. It does not matter whether I choose to believe the Americans or the Canadians because the Americans in this agreement are the only ones with the clout under the agreement to hammer our side into submission. The Americans have said publicly to the press and to the media through their ambassador that this is their interpretation of the agreement. If we can find no common ground on what the agreement means, then the Parliamentary Secretary is really admitting we do not have an agreement.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 66 deemed to have been moved.

CANADIAN HUMAN RIGHTS COMMISSION—RESIGNATION OF ANTONIO ARCANGEL FROM HUMAN RIGHTS TRIBUNAL

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, I apologize for my croaky voice this evening. I seem to have caught the flu bug or whatever it is that is going around. The appointment of Antonio Arcangel to the Canadian Human Rights Tribunal and his subsequent resignation was the subject matter of my question in the House to the Hon. Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn) back in November. It is a question which raises once again a much wider issue. It raises a question which will not go away. That is, the question of the whole appointments process, regardless of the facts in the Antonio Arcangel case and regardless of whether one thinks it is a good appointment or a bad appointment, and there are just as many people who think it was a good appointment as think it was a bad one. As you, Mr. Speaker, and other Members of Parliament may know, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) has received many letters in support of that appointment. However, regardless of whether it was a good or bad appointment, there is a larger issue which transcends that appointment, or any others, and that is the question of the actual appointment process itself.

You will remember, Mr. Speaker, when this issue was first raised. It was raised originally in the election campaign of 1984 during the famous debate which many people think turned the whole election around. The now Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner), the then Prime Minister, was asked by a questioner whether or not he was required to make certain appointments which were recommended to him by the former Prime Minister, the Right Hon. Pierre Elliott Trudeau. He said: "But I had no choice". The now Prime Minister responded saying: "But you did have a choice", and that was a very turning point in the election campaign. As a result of that statement and that exchange, the Canadian people came to feel, as I firmly believe, that there was a promise made. It was not an express promise but an implied promise that there would be changes in the whole process of appointments.

After the massive election of our majority Government there were apparently some changes. There were appointments made of New Democratic adherents and Liberal adherents to various positions both in the beginning and subsequently. However, as time went on the only thing which appeared in the press time after time was the appointment of people who were adherents of the Progressive Conservative Party. As a result of that the public began to feel that nothing had changed, that all was the same as it was before.

As you and I know, Mr. Speaker, the public came to believe that the people appointed were all affiliated with the Progressive Conservative Party, many friends of the Prime Minister. They came to believe that the process of appointments was not as open as they thought it was going to be. They came to believe that the people being appointed were not the best qualified regardless of whether or not they were well qualified. They began to feel let down and that feeling reinforced the feeling of non-confidence in the Government they had elected.

You and I may very well feel, Mr. Speaker, that there is no reason for Canadians to feel let down because the former Government did the same thing and provincial Governments, whether Liberal or New Democratic, are doing exactly the same thing. However, the public felt there was going to be a change and that change did not occur. They saw the same thing happening. In fact, in September of 1985 the Prime Minister announced a change. He announced that there would be a process of parliamentary review of appointments.

What happened as a result of that parliamentary review process? We had cases such as the Antonio Arcangel case. So while the review process by committee may be a good one, and one which I support whole-heartedly, it is not the entire answer. We need a new type of appointment process, one which I wish to suggest to Hon. Members of the House and to the public tonight.

First, what we need is a public appointments office, one that is not hidden away in the Prime Minister's office or in the office of the Privy Council. It must be one that is open to the public so that the public can see what is going on.

Second, at the beginning of each year we need to place an ad in all daily newspapers and all ethnic newspapers across the country stating that we will be making some appointments this year to boards and agencies and if anyone is interested then let us know. Then, when Members of the public respond, what we should do is write back to them providing a list of the appointments we will be making and ask them to let us know in which ones they are interested. When they write back to us, we should send them another letter with application forms and job descriptions for particular positions. That is the sort of process which should be taking place.

When the applications are returned, we should review them and make a short list of the best possible candidates regardless of all other circumstances. The choice should then be reviewed by the committee process which is in place and then the appointments should be made.

I do not expect the Parliamentary Secretary to announce that form of appointment process tonight. However, I would like him to take my suggestion to the Prime Minister and to the Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn) and return with an answer for me later on.

Mr. François Gérin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I am interested in the position that the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway) has put forward.

The House is no doubt aware that on November 3, 1986, and again on November 5, the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) raised allegations on the floor of the House of Commons with respect to Antonio Arcangel.

[Translation]

I think that two issues have been raised here, one more specific concerning Mr. Antonio Arcangel, and the other pertaining to a broad principle, namely, the appointment process for people who could hold various positions similar to that which had been entrusted to Mr. Antonio Arcangel. But since reference has been made to the specific case of Mr. Arcangel, I should like to provide the House with a little background information by mentioning that on November 6, the Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn) received from Mr. Arcangel the following telegram which read, and I quote:

[English]

Dear Minister,

I am hereby withdrawing my name from the list of human rights tribunal panel because Ms. Sheila Copps unfair remarks and unjust allegations have seriously impaired my ability to serve effectively as a member of such a tribunal. I have always been a law-abiding citizen and a firm believer in a democratic process. My efforts as a member of Canada's multicultural society have always been to promote the cause of human rights and equal opportunity. I consider Ms. Copps' allegations and attack as a serious violation of my rights as a citizen of this country. I am most gratified by the tremendous support that I am receiving from across this country from community groups and organizations as a result of her slanderous attack.

I would like to thank you for giving me the opportunity to serve my country.

Yours sincerely,
Antonio Arcangel

STATUS OF WOMEN—FUNDING OF WOMEN'S ORGANIZATIONS

Mr. Sid Fraleigh (Lambton—Middlesex): Mr. Speaker, on December 12 of last year I posed a question to the Secretary of State (Mr. Crombie) to which I received what I consider to be an unsatisfactory answer. The question concerned what I perceived to be a bias in his Department in terms of the funding of women's programs. I might add that same perception is shared by a number of my colleagues in the House, as well as a large number of people in my riding and across Canada.

• (2110)

The question is not whether Government should be funding the many specific worth-while women's projects, but rather whether Government should be supplying sustaining funds to lobby groups. It is my belief that Government should not be funding any lobby group with taxpayers' dollars. Certainly some of the groups applying for and receiving funds specifically under the women's program are just that. However, if Government is going to fund such groups, then it should be done fairly and with balance.

Unfortunately, since I raised the issue the Minister has seen fit to deny funding to one group which has strong views on many women's issues. At the same time, he is maintaining funding to another group that also has strong views, but views that are quite different from the group that was denied funding.

The objective of the women's program of the Secretary of State is to support the full participation of women in all aspects—Mr. Speaker, I wish to repeat that—in all aspects of Canadian society, and to increase the capability of women's organizations and groups working to improve the status of women. In addition, it is also intended to promote increased understanding and action on women's issues among women and the general public in the form of advocacy and information exchange. I fully support that objective. But I do not agree with the interpretation being put on it by the Department or by the Minister.

As I look around the House, I regret that it appears there is no one here to respond on behalf of the Minister. It is a slight to which I as an individual Member have to take exception. Be that as it may, I wish to carry on with my presentation.

In response to my question in the House, the Minister responded: "The process we use at the Department of Secretary of State for assessment of all applications is a just and fair one, and I expect to continue that process". How can a process be just and fair when one group is not allowed the opportunity to participate in that process? The refusal by the Department to send application forms to any group under any program is inexcusable.

I believe that we have a very unjust and unfair process when bureaucrats, who do not share the same philosophy on issues as a significant group of the public, have the power to deny that group access to the process. I was pleased to see in the Minister's announcement last Thursday that he has acknowledged the shoddy treatment that was accorded to some women's groups in their application for funds. That does not excuse the Department for what has gone on prior to him being appointed Minister. I believe that there are a significant number of women in this country, who, while wanting equality in all areas, have some strong convictions on such issues as child rearing, family role models, sexual orientation and pornography, to name but a few. The promotion of those ideals does not qualify for funding at the present time under the present criteria.

• (2115)

On the other hand, another group receiving approval for funding has policies supporting positions such as withdrawing Canada from NATO and NORAD, declaring Canada a nuclear-free zone, involving all women in the struggle for lesbian rights, and state-run and financed universal day care, again to name but a few.

I believe that I could identify the group which reflects the opinion of a large segment of the population in my riding, and of a great number of other ridings across this country, not only women, but men as well, and it would not be the latter group which would receive that approval.

I apologize for nobody being here to respond on behalf of the Secretary of State (Mr. Crombie).

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I do not think an apology is necessary; there is a Parliamentary Secretary to reply to your question.

Mr. Fraleigh: I am sorry, I missed him during most of my comments.

Mr. Vincent Della Noce (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, I was on the other side of the House, but I was listening to my hon. friend.

The Hon. Member for Brampton—Middlesex (Mr. Fraleigh) asked a question of the Secretary of State (Mr. Crombie) last December 12 about funding to women's groups by his Department's women's programs. I should now like to tell the House what are the Government's objectives.

The three main objectives the federal Government is pursuing on behalf of women are: economic equality, social justice, and access and participation.

Through economic equality we are trying to ensure that women are economically secure and benefit equally from their contribution to Canadian society. This is a primary objective when one thinks that today 64 per cent of women aged 20 years to 64 years are in the labour force and that they continue to be clustered in low-income occupations. Also, women make up 43 per cent of the total labour force.

The second objective, that of social justice, took on new importance on April 17, 1985 when Article 15 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms came into force. This important article deals with equality. In addition to the rulings which courts will apply over the next few years, the objective takes in, among other things, the formulation of new laws, violence directed toward women, pornography, and the stereotyping of women by the media.

The third main objective covers access and participation. It refers to equitable social and economic access, the participation of women in decision-making processes, and the battle against attitudinal discrimination when they occupy non-traditional posts.

There are two types of assistance provided by the women's program of the Department of the Secretary of State—operational funding and project funding. The first is used to promote the ongoing existence of national and regional women's organizations capable of taking co-ordinated action on issues of concern to women. Project funding is given in support of short-term projects linked to current objectives of the Government.

In 1985-86 the program funded more than 500 projects and the administration of 129 organizations. In all these cases, their objective was to remove obstacles to the equality of women in society. You can well understand, Mr. Speaker, that the women's program of the Department of the Secretary of State cannot aid all women's groups. It has to follow the priorities the Government has set for itself.

All requests received by the women's program are examined by criteria, including how a particular project will help women reach equality and the capacity of the requesting group to handle its respective project. As the Secretary of State said himself in the House on December 12, all requests are handled in the same manner—justly and equally.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE—(A) REQUEST FOR REIMBURSEMENT OF CONTRIBUTIONS TO EARLY RETIREES (B) REQUEST THAT MINISTER MEET REPRESENTATIVES OF INTERESTED PARTIES

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, what we have just seen is not "The decline of the American Empire", but "The decline of the Conservative Government". I can understand why the Conservative Member is disappointed with such a reply. I do not blame the Parliamentary Secretary, but this shows the mess and disorganization within this Conservative Government. In fact, the Secretary's reply was entirely beside the point, and nobody was prepared to reply. This is an insult made to a Member which I will defend, even if he is from the Progressive Conservative Party. I dare hope that I will obtain from the Parliamentary Secretary a better reply to the question I had directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration concerning the cuts in unemployment insurance benefits to 35,000 early retirees in Canada, including 11,000 in the Province of Quebec. Everybody will recall that, in 1985, any worker who had contributed to a pension scheme through employee-employer deductions and who lost his job could continue to collect full unemployment insurance benefits while looking for another job. Any person who had accepted to take early retirement to surrender his permanent job to a younger person and seek a second career could continue to collect full unemployment insurance benefits while seeking another job, even while collecting pension benefits for which he or she had contributed through employee-employer deductions for 25, 30 or 35 years of his or her life.

Everybody knows that, unfortunately, the Mulroney Cabinet decided on December 20, 1985, that beginning on January 5, 1986, the Unemployment Insurance Commission would take into account, while computing benefits, all incomes from a private employer-employee pension plan.

All groups throughout Canada got organized, even the Conservative Members, the Liberal Opposition, the New Democratic Party, all people were opposed to this decision. The then Minister and her colleague the Minister of Employment and Immigration said they would heed the Forget Commission recommendation as to whether this regulation ought to be changed.

Mr. Forget released his report on December 3 and his recommendation 26 concerning early retirees was quite clear. With respect to the inclusion of private pension plan benefits in calculating unemployment insurance, recommendation 26 stated clearly that the Government must retroactively rescind this measure, and if in future there should be another such measure concerning pension benefits and unemployment insurance he recommended that it be announced by the Government three years in advance because it is very important that someone who has worked all his life and planned for retirement not be forced to cope with a Government which changes the rules of the game.

On December 5 the Minister of Employment and Immigration said in this House that as a result of the Forget Commission recommendations he would make changes and forthwith direct the Unemployment Insurance Commission to launch a review process designed to reimburse the 35,000 early retirees whose unemployment insurance benefits had been cut off.

Mr. Speaker, nothing has been done to this day. The only action taken was the one I witnessed last week in the Montreal region where 1,000 early retirees who were denied these benefits attended a meeting convened by Quebec City ARSAC representatives. On Thursday this week these people will be in the Saguenay region, in the riding of the Minister of Employment and Immigration, and they have met with residents of Baie-Comeau and the Quebec City region. The only action came from the people themselves who prepared their own reimbursement request form to ensure that the Government would reimburse retroactively all the retirees who have been unfairly penalized.

I trust that the Parliamentary Secretary—and I know that, not only Friday, but also today, at the community centre of my constituency, 300 people from Greater Montreal came, as well as people from the Laval area because they wanted justice.

Unfortunately, in this matter as in many others, the Government is dragging its feet. Yet, we can recall how quickly the Conservative Government passed legislation to reimburse $1 billion to people who had $60,000 deposits in Western banks. In this case, the people involved are workers throughout the country who, for 35 or 25 years, accepted lower wage increases to put away some money in a pension plan each month, but now, all their efforts are being penalized.

Mr. Speaker, I trust that the Parliamentary Secretary will give us a more satisfactory answer than the one he must have had from the Department of the Secretary of State and that he will give us a clear and specific answer about when the Government intends to reimburse these people and find a method to determine the amount of their reimbursement, and second, when the Minister will table a bill to extend eligibility not only to 1985 retirees, but also to 1986 and all future retirees so that, from now on, unemployment insurance premiums will be fully and completely reimbursed to all individuals, whatever their private pension income, since the Government does not make any deduction in the case of an RRSP.

• (2125)

Mr. Vincent Della Noce (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State and Minister responsible for Multiculturalism): Mr. Speaker, in turn, I would like to answer on behalf of the Minister of Employment and Immigration and expand on the question the Hon. Member put in the House on October 31, 1986. I am aware of the abiding interest of the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) in the matter, but unfortunately, I do not have as much time as he did and I will therefore try to be very brief and expeditious. This is our only chance to respond, and I hope the Hon. Member doesn't think I am going to indicate any changes in regulations previously announced by the Minister.

On December 5, 1986, the Minister announced changes in the unemploymenty insurance regulations concerning pension income. These changes will allow workers who take another job after retirement and keep that job long enough to become eligible for unemployment insurance benefits to receive such benefits without having the amount of their previous pension income subtracted from their benefits.

On November 8, 1984, as my hon. friend said, the Minister of Finance, announced in his agenda for economic renewal the Government's intention to consider pension income as remuneration for the purposes of establishing unemployment insurance benefits. The principle that continues to guide us today is that retired persons should not consider unemployment insurance as an additional source of income. The objective of the Unemployment Insurance Fund is to provide a replacement income to people temporarily out of work. The major policy change announced in November 1984 did not make a clear distinction between those retiring for good and those retiring to start a new career. The best example is provided by military personnel and RCMP officers who must take early retirement. The changes announced December 5 of last year will mean a fair and equitable treatment for this group of people who continue to be part of the labour force. Workers who have started a new career, where they must contribute to unemployment insurance, and subsequently lose their job will be entitled to full unemployment insurance benefits based on their previous pension income.

Besides, as mentioned by my colleague, some retirees who were in receipt of benefits as of January 5, 1986, when the former policy came into effect, lost their rights to benefits and will not regain them if they have left the job market. Some of these people argue that they based their decision to retire on erroneous information provided to them from federal government sources. In order to clear this matter, the Employment and Immigration Commission will review all such cases and reinstitute the right to benefits if the allegations are proven. The review will be done according to the normal procedures for claim settlement and we should note that the Government has always acted that way in similar cases in other social programs. Mr. Speaker, a Bill will be presented to the House in order to implement these measures.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

At 9:29 the House adjourned.

PETITIONS

GOVERNMENT RESPONSE

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 106(8), I have the honour of tabling, in both official languages, the Government's response to Petitions Nos. 332-265 to 332-276 inclusive, 332-285 to 332-287 inclusive, 332-291, 332-293, 332-310 to 332-315 inclusive, 332-317, 332-332, 332-333, 332-341, 332-343, 332-344, 332-348, 332-350 to 332-352 inclusive, 332-359 to 332-369 inclusive, 332-374 to 332-384 inclusive, 332-396, 332-397, 332-403 to 332-406 inclusive, 332-408 to 332-418 inclusive, 332-431 and 332-448.

POINT OF ORDER

FARM DEBT REVIEW—ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMITTEE

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I was reviewing the Farm Debt Review Bill that was passed last year. The legislation indicates that at the end of the calendar year in which this Act comes into force, which of course was 1986, the Government would undertake a review of the overall effectiveness of this Act and shall, within such time as the House may authorize, submit a report to Parliament, including a statement on any changes the committee would recommend.

In a sense, the Government indicated through the Bill its intention to set up a committee, whether through the Standing Committee on Agriculture or another committee. Would the Government House Leader indicate if, in fact, a committee is in place of which I am unaware and, if not, what intention the Government might have in this matter?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, as I am sure the Hon. Member knows, this has only been operational for a short period. I am not sure whether there has been sufficient experience garnered from its operations. If such a provision is called for within the legislation, as the Hon. Member points out, presumably that would have to be considered. I will certainly undertake to consult with the Hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) and get back to the Hon. House Leader of the New Democratic Party as soon as I can.

ENERGY, MINES AND RESOURCES

PRESENTATION OF THIRD REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mrs. Barbara Sparrow (Calgary South): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present the third report of the Standing Committee on Energy, Mines and Resources in both official languages.

PETITIONS

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I have the pleasure and honour to present a petition, pursuant to Standing Order 106, regarding the changes the Government is planning to the Patent Act. The petitioners feel this will increase drug prices for Canadian consumers and will severely restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy the necessary prescription drugs. They are calling upon the Government to reject these new proposals which they believe will increase prescription drug prices.

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition from a number of residents in my riding who note that the federal Government's proposal to change the Patent Act relating to prescription drugs will increase drug prices for Canadian consumers and will severely restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy necessary prescription drugs. They also note that these proposals will result in higher costs for provincial drug plans and they call upon the House to reject these proposals which will increase prescription drug prices for Canadians.

CRIMINAL CODE—ABORTION

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey—White Rock—North Delta): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition on behalf of my constituents. The operative part of the petition says that all human beings are deserving of legal protection from unjust attacks upon their lives and that the present law regarding abortion does not provide such protection. Wherefore, the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to amend the Criminal Code so that unborn human beings are protected by law from abortion. I want to add that I totally endorse that. The petition meets the requirements of the House.

STARRED QUESTIONS

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, would you be so kind as to call Starred Questions Nos. 37, 40 and 41?

*EGERTON HERBERT NORMAN

Question No. 37—Mr. Kindy:

1. Did the Solicitor General acquire information that showed Ambassador Egerton Herbert Norman, had been identified and discussed by Anthony Blunt as someone who, like himself, was associated with the Russian intelligence service?

2. Did the Solicitor General, following Mr. Norman's suicide, acquire information that showed that he (a) had connections with (b) had contributed funds to the Canadian Communist Party before or during his employment by the Department of External Affairs?

NO SENSE OF EVIL*

Question No. 40—Mr. Kindy:

Is the Solicitor General aware of the identity of the employee of the National Council for Canadian-Soviet Friendship described by the RCMP as a rabid and dangerous Communist, as cited in Professor James Barros' book "No Sense of Evil", on pages 51, 65, 67, 84, 88 and 130 and, if so, what is the name of that employee?

*ALLEGED RECRUITMENT OF MR. ROBERT BRYCE BY MR. HERBERT NORMAN

Question No. 41—Mr. Kindy:

Is the Solicitor General aware that Mr. Herbert Norman had attempted to recruit Mr. Robert Bryce, former Secretary of the Cabinet, into the Communist Party when they were students at Cambridge University and that Mr. Bryce knew in the autumn of 1950 that Mr. Norman was being interviewed at External Affairs as a possible Russian penetration agent and that Mr. Bryce has never divulged this information to the RCMP and, if so, does the Minister intend to inquire into the reasons that such information was not divulged to the RCMP?

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I wish to advise the House that the Government's response to all three questions is the same, and it is as follows: The Government wishes neither to confirm nor deny the facts or allegations mentioned in these questions based on the established tradition adhered to by all Governments, not to comment publicly on the details of specific security matters and consistent with the provisions of Sections 13, 15.1, 16.1(b), 16.1(c) and 19 of the Access to Information Act.

I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

SOFTWOOD LUMBER PRODUCTS EXPORT CHARGE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed from Monday, January 19, consideration of the motion of Miss Carney that Bill C-37, an Act respecting the imposition of a charge on the export of certain softwood lumber products, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee, and the amendment of Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra), (p. 2393).

Hon. Gerald S. Merrithew (Minister of State (Forestry and Mines)): Mr. Speaker, I am delighted today to be able to put some facts on the record in this particular debate which has been sometimes clouded by some misperceptions and half-truths. It is an important debate for Canada, I agree. We have been working at it for a long time. Of course, the whole issue of our softwood trade has been one which has been most prolonged. It is not new at all. It has gone on for decades and decades. I have been part of it for four or five years. It is perhaps one of the most bitter disputes in the history of Canada-U.S. trade relations.

Since the Memorandum of Understanding reached with the United States on December 30, we have put behind us a lot of difficult negotiations with the U.S. It seems to me we are now in a position to strengthen our industry without the constant threat of other trade irritants. We can now try to be competitive in a a very competitive market. I do not have to emphasize how divisive this issue has been to our national fabric. It would be extremely unfortunate if the degree of rancour and mistrust which so characterized our negotiations with the United States carried forward within Canada as we proceed to implement the agreement and to examine alternative provincial measures in the export charge.

It is necessary for Canada to unite and find a realistic and effective solution to the challenges with which we are faced. Indeed, the federal Government has been very conscious of the need to remain united in dealing with this very bitter dispute with the United States. A high level of goodwill and a spirit of co-operation characterized our discussion with the provinces last week in Vancouver and some of the comments I have heard recently from the industry have been more positive and helpful than the initial reaction to the agreement by some industry spokesmen.

The workers in British Columbia and elsewhere in Canada who have such an important stake in the outcome of this dispute have been very supportive of our efforts to secure an understanding with the United States. Sadly, I have also heard comments from the Opposition who, in many instances, have taken this opportunity as a means to achieve their own personal political objectives. It is unfortunate to see the great divergence of opinion between certain members of the Opposition and those to whom they perceive to be their own constituency. It must be extremely frustrating for the New Democratic Party to find so few people in the labour movement who oppose the initiative of the Government to secure an understanding with the United States. Many of the provincial wings of that same Party have come out in support of a negotiated settlement. For example, the British Columbia forestry critic has called the softwood lumber deal agreement a pretty good deal.

As for the Official Opposition, I find it ironic to hear those Hon. Members even talking about forestry. For almost two decades that Party presided over the dissemination of the federal Government's forestry service and the downgrading of the leadership role of the federal Government in this key sector of our economy. Its lack of commitment to forestry is a matter of public record. The forest community already knows and recognizes this. It is regrettable it has taken this situation to raise the interest of that Party. However, I laud Members of the Liberal Party for now taking a keener interest in forestry and call upon them and other members of the Opposition to put their rancour aside in order to make this agreement work on behalf of all Canadians. The development of the forest industry is too important to the economy of this country to be subject to shabby theatrics and partisan politics.

I would like now to turn my attention to some of the specifics of the understanding with the United States. The critics have been less than objective in their statements in the softwood lumber dispute. They have consistently ignored the realities of that dispute and the real options which were available to the Government, in fact, all Governments of Canada. The critics imply that the choice was between an agreement with the United States or continuing free trade in lumber. The real choice was not that. It was between a countervailing duty or other restrictive measures imposed unilaterally by the United States against Canadian softwood lumber exports or a negotiated settlement. In other words, a punitive countervail or an agreement by choice. The Government could have chosen to fight to the bitter end. This would not have served Canadian interests. To ignore the political realities of the issue would have deprived us of any control over the situation. The choice was between having the Americans tax our lumber or our agreeing to tax it ourselves. This has been entirely overlooked by the critics.

For the benefit of the House, I would like to review the three objectives which were set out by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the nine Premiers at the First Ministers' Conference in Vancouver in November. Basically, they wanted us to protect Canadian sovereignty, second, to avoid a precedent in U.S. trade law which would be damaging to Canadian interests and, third, they wanted us to keep the money in Canada. In our negotations we stood fast. Our negotiators held on to Canada's position right to the very end. We have met all three of those objectives.

Let us examine those objectives in turn. First, the softwood lumber agreement respects and maintains our sovereignty and avoids the intrusion by the United States into Canadian affairs which would have occurred with a countervailing duty action. As a former Minister responsible for forestry in New Brunswick, I understand the importance of being fully in control with respect to how we manage our forestry resource for the betterment of our citizens. Under the agreement, the export charges were set at an agreed level, 15 per cent. A countervailing duty could be unilaterally raised by the United States following an annual review. That would be unacceptable. Under the agreement, Canada administers the export charge and monitors its effect and is required only to provide the information to the United States. A countervailing duty, on the other hand, would be subject to actual policing by the United States. Under the agreement, Canada is free to replace the export charge with stumpage increases or other measures at a time and level of our own chosing. Only the value of these changes is subject to consultation and agreement with the United States. A countervailing duty, on the other hand, would have severely limited Canada's freedom of action. The timing, the nature and the value of any replacement measures would have been unilaterally determined by the Americans.

Suggestions by the Opposition that our sovereignty has been threatened by this agreement are completely without foundation. Any student of international politics knows that bilateral agreements between nations involve, in some way, an intrusion into the other's business, be it a quota, a normal commercial transaction or a verification clause. There is far less intrusion into Canada's forest management policies under this agreement than there would have been with a countervailing duty.

The second objective was to avoid a highly damaging precedent that could have affected other exports to the United States. I remind Hon. Members that the basic issue involved here is whether or not the policies of Canadian Governments, in managing and pricing their own natural resources, could be subject to the trade remedy legislation of other nations. Under this agreement which we negotiated and signed on December 30 the dangerous legal precedent set by the unfavourable preliminary determination made by the U.S. Government in the softwood lumber case last October has been nullified. A countervailing duty would have confirmed that precedent and left Canada more vulnerable to similar actions against other resource exports.

The third objective was to ensure that the money remained in Canada, for Canadians, and did not become a contribution to the United States Treasury. Under the agreement the provinces are free to use the revenues from the export charge to replenish our forests, to provide adjustment assistance for affected workers, to assist our forest industry in developing alternative markets abroad, or to advance the development of new technologies. Under a countervailing duty action these Canadian funds would have gone directly into the Treasury of the United States, and would not have been available to create jobs and to lessen the negative impact on affected workers and communities.

While it is still much too early to predict the full impact of the export charge on the Canadian lumber industry, it is clear that some export sales to the U.S., and jobs, will be lost. The degree to which these adverse effects occur across the country largely depends on how much of the duty can be passed on to the U.S. consumer—and it appears a good deal of it has been to date—and the supply response of the American producers. Early indications show that a substantial portion of the export charge is now being borne by the U.S. consumer. We will continue to monitor this situation.

Nevertheless, the point I am making is that as a result of our negotiations the provinces have the financial resources to respond to this situation. In the area of forest management it is our estimation that over 100,000 jobs, both direct and indirect, will be created during the life of the forestry development agreements negotiated with the provinces. At the same time this ensures a long term timber supply. These forest development agreements have a price-tag of $1.1 billion of federal and provincial contributions. I wish to mention that is a 400 per cent increase since the time the Liberals governed our country.

I again want to reiterate my call for pulling together on this issue. This will be extremely important as we examine possible replacement measures in whole or in part, such as stumpage increases, to the export charge. As a result of our meeting in Vancouver last week, Canada's provincial and federal Ministers responsible for forestry have agreed to address this issue in more detail. I can assure the House that both myself and my provincial counter-parts place considerable importance on involving businessmen and labour in this process. The issues involved are very complex. We will not be stampeded into any quick-fix solutions that are not in the over-all interests of Canada.

My colleagues and I will be having our initial meeting on the issue of replacement measures during the next Canadian Council of Forest Ministers meeting to take place in Montreal on January 26. I have been encouraged by the collective and the unanimous desire of the provincial Forestry Ministers to work co-operatively since the Council was established in 1985. We have co-operated on a great many issues, and I am sure we can co-operate on this very difficult issue which we have now undertaken. Each and every provincial Minister is committed, as am I, to co-operating with all parties in the forest sector to move ahead to meet the challenges which still lie before us.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Are there questions or comments? The Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis).

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, the Minister of State for Forestry and Mines (Mr. Merrithew) indicated that from the very beginning the process included the co-operation of all the players involved. I remember, as I am sure he will, time and time again when Members raised questions in the House with respect to how things were progressing in the United States in terms of the countervail case before the Department of Commerce and the ITC, the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) asking members of the Opposition not to raise the issue in the House of Commons. We were told that everything was progressing well, that in co-operation with all of the players the Canadian Government was absolutely certain that the case Canada had put forward was iron-clad and that we had nothing to fear. Then October 21, after the Commerce Department brought in its preliminary ruling which found Canadian exports to be subsidized by 15 per cent, the Minister for International Trade, the Hon. Member for Vancouver Centre (Miss Carney), said that we would fight it all the way. She said: "Today it's lumber. Tomorrow it could be any number of issues. We all agree that this ruling is deplorable, artificial and contrived and does not stand up to extensive analysis". She then went on to say that the United States' action "strikes directly at the sovereign right of a government to manage its own resources" and that negotiations would only condone the precedent. She said: "First we must fight to reverse this verdict".

The Minister for International Trade said that this move was a direct infringement on Canadian sovereignty. The Minister of State for Forestry says that is not the case. Will the Minister explain what the Minister for International Trade was saying on October 21?

Mr. Merrithew: Mr. Speaker, I was very much part of those discussions when we talked of fighting the issue. I was part of the talks which we had in 1982 and in 1983 when we fought the previous countervailing duty issue which, incidentally, did not work. There has been some indication that it was won by either industry or by the Liberal Government. Unfortunately, within just a matter of months there was another case. So there was no winner in this particular case. At one point in time there was no question but that it was profitable for us to stick together. However, the political reality of what was happening in the United States and the rampant protectionist sentiments which were being expressed in the American Congress and in the industry dictated to us that the political situation had changed. As a result of intelligence we obtained from lawyers in the American industry, our government lawyers, our embassy staff and our friends in industry and government in the United States we were told that the handwriting was on the wall, that we could not win. The preliminary decision was already down against us and on October 16 it was negative to Canada.

What other choice did we have? There were but two. First, we could either continue to fight the issue through the courts and pay the money to the United States over the intervening period of time, or fight it in GATT. Or, second, we could try to negotiate a settlement. If one considers the facts of the matter, the result of negotiating a settlement Canada is by far ahead of the situation.

Mr. Caldwell: I wish to address my question to the Minister. A few months ago when we were debating the shakes and shingles issue and replacing the 35 per cent duty, we heard calls from the opposition Parties that we would see a shut down of that industry, and hundreds of thousands of people would be laid off and would be out of work. Is it possible for the Minister to bring us up to date on whether those hundreds of thousands of people have been laid off, and has the shingle industry been shut down in British Columbia? Will the same thing happen with the 15 per cent duty on the softwood lumber?

Mr. Merrithew: We were very much part of the debate which took place following the shakes and shingles issue in the House. We heard the doom and the gloom that the whole world was going to come to an end, shakes and shingles would be destroyed forever. The Opposition House Leader said that 10,000 jobs would be lost. There are only 4,000 such jobs in all of Canada. I do not know where he got his figures. The NDP indicated that the whole world would come to an end. In fact, very little has happened. The industry is now working near to capacity. We are being competitive. We know that the supply of red cedar in the United States will run out, and then we will be even more competitive. There was absolutely no truth to the fact that the world was going to come to an end because of the countervail on shakes and shingles.

Regarding the lumber issue, nobody in the country, certainly not in the Chamber, has any magic answers as to how many jobs will be lost. A lot will depend on how many of those jobs and what per cent of the cost will be absorbed by the American consumer. Quite frankly, it is my view, and it has been our indication to date, that the American consumer is the one who will be penalized. In the future we will know what effect there will be on our marginal mills, or the impacts on our domestic interprovincial markets. At this time I will not comment on that, because we do not know. It is proof positive by the type of irresponsible statements that were made following the shakes and shingles debate that at this time it is better not to hazard a guess. We will monitor that particular situation.

Mr. Langdon: I wish to ask the Minister of State for Forestry (Mr. Merrithew) some specific questions about New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. On a visit there last week I talked with the Maritime Lumber Bureau which has established an emergency committee to fight this tax.

An Hon. Member: I don't believe it.

Mr. Langdon: You do not believe it? You should ask yourself what is actually happening in New Brunswick.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. I would advise Hon. Members that there are only four minutes left. I have tried to allow three or four Members to ask questions and make comments, and I would hope that Members would give these Hon. Members the opportunity to do so.

Mr. Langdon: My question to the Minister is this. In the final stages of negotiation of this agreement, the New Brunswick producers involved received an indication from both the American officials and from the officials whom they had talked with in Ottawa that there was going to be some over-all exemption for Atlantic Canada, which has a very small element within this lumber industry, and which has stumpage fees that are very much higher than anywhere else in the country. Why was nothing done for the 97 companies that are not exempted from this export tax, when there are five New Brunswick companies that are exempted? Why is there this incredible sense of unfairness? Why was it not corrected in the final stages of negotiation?

Mr. Merrithew: I am delighted to have an opportunity to address this particular question. I will be meeting with the Maritime Lumber Bureau this afternoon. I have already met and talked with them on dozens of occasions. I have been in general contact with the industry in New Brunswick during the final hours of the negotiation.

Anyone who leads the Canadian people or the Maritime producers to suggest that they might somehow have received a magical exclusion for the region, I can tell you from having talked with the people who were at the table that it was simply not on. Therefore, what choices do we have? We could negotiate to maintain the exemptions, which were given in the October 16 preliminary decision. We had that choice or nothing. We opted to protect the exclusions of the 20 companies in Canada that were given exclusions, five of which are in New Brunswick. The Hon. Member has forgotten to indicate to the public and the Chamber that those five companies, and I know them personally since I have worked with them for years, make up 92 per cent of all of the exports from New Brunswick to the United States.

It seems to me that with those exclusions and exemptions New Brunswick will come out of it better than anyone could possibly have dreamed, and we negotiated that. With the final determination, if it had gone against Canada, there is no indication now that we would have been able to keep those exclusions and exemptions. If it is possible to have a winner at all, New Brunswick was clearly a winner.

Mr. Foster: I have a short question for the Minister. A number of companies have been excluded from the agreement. Why did the Minister not negotiate an agreement for an exclusion for Indian bands? Would he be prepared to do it in the Bill that is before the House? There is an Indian band in my constituency which has a private operator, a Status Indian who produces lumber for export to the United States. He pays stumpage to the band. Status Indians normally do not pay federal tax on income earned on the reserve. Will there be a special provision for the Indian bands and band members who produce softwood lumber and sell it to the U.S.?

Mr. Merrithew: The Hon. Member has made an interesting observation. However, it is important to realize what the Americans wanted from this. Number one, they wanted us to take a smaller portion of their market. That would include any lumber shipped from our native lands. Second, they wanted a punitive measure. It did not matter whether it was a federal tax, or increased stumpage, but they wanted something to be done because they perceived that we were conferring some benefit. That would include native bands in operation. The bottom line is that the American people were not having any part of expanding the number of exemptions at that time. That does not mean that we will not continue in the ensuing months to discuss with them those types of exemptions. There is provision in the agreement for us to reopen it. I will take it under consideration.

Mr. Manly: Will the Minister tell the House whether any special studies were done as to the impact that this export tax will have upon different regions of the country? If so, could the Minister tell the House which regions will be most adversely impacted?

Mr. Merrithew: Naturally, governments and private consulting economists made estimates of what the effect of the tax may be, if it were based at 10 per cent, 5 per cent, 15 per cent, or the requested 36 per cent. Obviously, we have had some estimates done, and we will monitor that situation. The trouble is that these estimates are always based on certain assumptions, for example, new housing starts in the United States, the United States' economy, what will happen here in Canada, what the distribution east and west will be, and what the domestic market fluctuations will be. No one can easily determine what the effect will be. However, we will be monitoring that. In every province we have in place a system so we can watch what the trends are. To date, they have not been terribly negative. In fact, they have been surprising.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions and comments are now terminated.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have an opportunity to put on record some comments regarding Bill C-37, an Act respecting the imposition of a charge on the export of certain softwood lumber products to the United States, or we assume to the United States. We are still questioning whether under GATT we have the right to levy a special tax on one country and how other trading partners in the softwood industry will feel about it, whether or not they will take it to GATT and ask it to be applied to all countries which receive softwood exports from Canada.

However, it is appropriate to spend a moment or two to put the whole matter into some context today. We recognize that there is a $4 billion lumber export to the United States from Canada, representing nearly 15 billion board feet and 88 per cent of our total lumber exports. Obviously we are talking about the Canadian softwood export industry virtually in total.

It is useful for us as parliamentarians to recall that we are discussing the woods industry of Canada which employs, directly and indirectly, 780,000 Canadians. It is a major aspect of the Canadian economy and of course the overwhelming leader in our trade.

Over the last number of years the Canadian lumber sector modernized and retooled its sawmills. It spent a great deal of money modernizing its operations. Of course, the high quality of SPF—spruce, pine, and fir—from Canada are recognized the world over to be extremely high quality lumber and sell in world markets at premium prices; people are prepared to pay more than the going rate to obtain first rate Canadian lumber. Our workers in the woods are extremely productive. They are among the most productive in the world. Consequently, it enabled the Canadian industry was able to expand significantly its exports to the United States over the last number of years. By and large the quality of wood there is significantly less. The mills are antiquated and outdated. They are still using big rip-saws which end up with excessive amounts of sawdust from sawn logs.

Quite frankly, we did such an excellent job in terms of our high productivity levels and our ability to compete internationally that we were able to send lumber from the northern parts of Canada down to the United States, to sell it in Tennessee, to take the Americans head on in the market-place, and to be successful.

When we add on transportation costs to our wood product delivery, it gives an idea of just how competitive and productive is the Canadian operation. It is first class, and we can be very proud of the sector.

The Americans recognized that they had to do something about their old-fashioned, antiquated operations, low productivity sector and poor quality lumber. A few years ago they set out to attempt to keep the Canadians out of their market and to increase their prices by keeping out Canadian competition. They lobbied their Congressmen and key Senators, such as Senator Baucus, Senator Gibbons, Senator Packwood, and others, and they did it successfully. They got Congress to take a number of initiatives which would in fact work against the Canadian interest in the United States.

Why they feel that Canadians having 35 per cent of their softwood market is inappropriate is beyond me, considering the percentages of various markets which they have in Canada—40 per cent, 50 per cent, 80 per cent and even 95 per cent in some sectors. However, they felt it was inappropriate for Canada to have 35 per cent of their softwood market and took the retaliatory actions of which we know so well over the last number of months.

Also Canadians must be reminded of the very famous "Dear Bob" letter which the President of the United States sent to Senator Packwood who at that time was Chairman of the Finance Committee. In that letter the President pointed out very clearly that they had to deal with the Canadian softwood issue and, if necessary, he would go to whatever length to ensure that the American softwood industry would become more competitive in the United States, and if that meant keeping Canadians out of their market, so be it.

That was the involvement of the President of the United States alongside some of these critical Senators who sort of ganged up on the Canadian industry. I think they recognized that it would be an easy task. After all, they considered the Government of Canada to be a push-over. When I look at how they have treated us over the last few months, I think they see the creation of a new branch plant in Canada called the Conservative Government of Canada, which is here to take directions from the United States Congress. One would find it easy to find all sorts of evidence to substantiate this new United States branch plant in Canada.

In 1983 when the Americans decided to move against Canada, we were successful before the International Trade Commission. We made a good and strong case. I should say that by and large the Government of Canada and provincial Governments, particularly the Government of British Columbia, kept out of it. The industry and the unions involved worked co-operatively and did an excellent job. They presented a good case and won. However, in the last little while that certainly has not been the case.

We have seen clear evidence that once the Canadian Government became involved, particularly with the Premier of British Columbia, the whole process began to unravel significantly. I should like to remind the House of a quotation of the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) when she spoke a few months ago after the Commerce Department of the United States made its preliminary ruling which found that indeed Canadians subsidized their industry. They wanted to impose an export charge of 15 per cent, and the Minister for International Trade said that we must fight this all the way. She said:

> Today it's lumber. Tomorrow it could be any number of issues.

She went on to say:

> We all agree that this ruling is deplorable, artificial and contrived, and does not stand up to extensive analysis.

Also she said:

> The U.S. action strikes directly at the sovereign right of a Government to manage its own natural resources, and negotiations would only condone the precedent. First, we will fight to reverse this verdict.

A few days later in the House of Commons, she said:

> This decision has concerned us and should concern all of the United States trading partners, because we view it as an unacceptable attempt to impose U.S. views on how other Governments should manage their natural resources. Furthermore, we feel that this preliminary ruling by the U.S. Commerce Department has no basis in U.S. law, is badly flawed, and is inconsistent with the U.S. obligations under the GATT.

What we have is the unravelling of our strong case. I remember the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) rising in the House on many occasions and saying that the Canadian case was strong, ironclad, thoughtful, and well developed. He said that it could withstand pressures from the United States and that, therefore, it should go through the quasi-judicial process in the U.S. and, if necessary, on to GATT for a final ruling.

The whole process then fell apart. It is very clear that it began to fall apart just after Labour Day last year when the British Columbia Minister of Forestry, Mr. Jack Kempf, stated publicly that he felt the Government of British Columbia was not charging enough for its trees and that the stumpage rates were too low.

Then Premier Vander Zalm started to shoot from his mouth that indeed the whole matter should be reviewed, that there seemed to be a possible subsidy in the forest industry, that stumpage rates were too low, and so on.

At that time the Minister for International Trade was put into a situation where she had to admit that Canada had virtually lost the case, that in a sense the Premier of British Columbia and the B.C. Minister of Forestry said to the United States: "You are right. We subsidize our industry. We undercharge for our trees which we sell our forest companies", exactly what the American forest coalition was accusing us of doing. With the Premier of British Columbia one of the political leaders of Canada representing the province with the most trade in softwood with the United States having said that, the federal Government then caved in as well. The Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) said: "Yes, now we are going to change our minds. We do not have confidence in our case. We are going to negotiate." Industry considered this unbelievable. It was not aware of the change of heart. In my discussions with many industry leaders they told me they were absolutely shocked that the Minister had changed her mind without any consultation or discussions with them. They just read about it in the newspapers the following day.

• (1150)

A very serious situation then began to unfold, as we know only too well. An agreement was eventually signed and the Government of Canada in a sense caved in, telling the United States that it would negotiate. The Canadian Government agreed that what the U.S. accused us of doing was accurate and agreed to a 15 per cent tax on exports to the U.S. Some people have had some very strong words about this. For example, historians, economists and legal scholars have given the Mulroney Government a failing grade in the handling of the softwood lumber talks with the United States. As reported by Canadian Press on January 3, 1987:

> —the Government has jeopardized Canada's sovereignty by caving in to American demands to impose a 15 per cent tax on lumber exports south of the border.
> And they say there is no precedent in Canadian history for a deal that gives Washington a voice in how Canada manages its lumber industry.

Mr. Gormley: Who said that?

Mr. Riis: Maxwell Cohen, one of Canada's foremost experts on international law, said that the lumber deal is a dangerous precedent that threatens Canadian sovereignty. He went on to say:

It is a strange procedure to allow someone to monitor our own stuff.

Cohen was a judge on the International Court of Justice in the Gulf of Maine dispute with the United States. He was a former Canadian chairman of the International Joint Commission. Here was an expert saying that in a sense the Canadian Government had sold out its sovereignty in this issue.

Let us look at some letters. I want to refer to one written by Malcolm Baldrige, Secretary of Commerce in the United States Department of Commerce—

Mr. McDermid: Why don't you read the IWA letter?

Mr. Riis: —and Mr. Clayton Yeutter, the United States trade representative. In their letter to the U.S. coalition, which initiated this process, we find:

Fourth, it is the understanding of the U.S. Government that the U.S. Government would have to approve any changes in the export charge or calculation of the value of any replacement measures. Any changes made without U.S. Government approval would be a violation of the Understanding.

Just as clear as day it says here that the United States Government must approve any changes to our stumpage programs in Canada and other substitutions for the export tax that the Canadian Government or the provincial Governments decide to make. If the United States Government feels it can intervene and play a role in our forest policy, why should it not feel the same way about our fisheries policy, our tourism policy, our agricultural policy and our resource policies?

Mr. Gormley: That is nonsense.

Mr. Riis: It is not nonsense, Mr. Speaker. It is not nonsense when international experts in trade indicate—

Mr. McDermid: What an alarmist.

Mr. Riis: —that Canadian sovereignty has been sold out. I suspect that these international experts know about what they are speaking. I put a great deal more faith in them than I do the Minister of International Trade who, by the way, was so concerned about the signing of this arrangement with the United States, that will, put by a variety of estimates, somewhere between 5,000 and 25,000 jobs at risk, and there is a great variance in what this is actually going to do, that she was sitting on a beach in Maui. She was holidaying in Hawaii.

Mr. Gormley: And where was Jim Fulton?

Mr. Riis: The Minister responsible for this deal who in a sense has put thousands of Canadian jobs at risk was so concerned that she was sunbathing in Hawaii. That betrays very clearly by her actions how concerned she and the Government obviously were.

Mr. Foster: She will fight them on the beaches.

Mr. Riis: She adds new meaning to that old saying, she will fight them on the beaches, obviously.

I want to outline some of the concerns that have been brought to my attention by a variety of forest experts, people in the industry for whom I have a great deal of respect, people who are respected in their communities for their knowledge and understanding of the softwood industry. I refer to people like Mr. Joe Martignago of Balco Industries Ltd. in the community of Heffley Creek, British Columbia. Mr. Martignago said:

The 15 per cent export tax is devastating. It could cost Balco approximately $8 million per annum. We will go down sooner and for longer. The Forest Industry Council estimates the additional cost to the Canadian industry will be $600 million per year. That is well in excess of the total profit of all lumber companies in Canada.

Mr. Peter Berry, President of Evans Products Co. Ltd. in the community of Savona, British Columbia said:

The Government handling of softwood lumber export tax was a disaster. It is too early to say what specific impacts will be felt by Evans Products, however, we can expect that the 15 per cent will cost us $4 to $5 million per year. Don't expect that cost to be offset by price increases. Some companies will literally have to go to the wall.

Mr. Brian Swanson, President, Clearwater Timber Products Ltd. of Clearwater, British Columbia said:

I'm not very happy. We shouldn't have another country dictating what it would cost to sell to others, i.e. Sweden, Chile, New Zealand. I resent the fact that the industry, to the best of my knowledge, had no real input into the decision.

Let me go on to a comment made by Mr. Herb Henri of Holding Lumber Co. Ltd. in Adams Lake, British Columbia who said:

The export tax will mean a $30 to $40 charge against all American shipments. We would rather have seen an offset of a 90 day cooling off period for further discussion instead of the December 31 deadline.

He was concerned the industry had been left out of the discussions at the critical eleventh hour.

Mr. Van Scoffield, Manager, Cariboo Lumber Manufacturers Association in central British Columbia said:

The best position would have been to fight rather than negotiate.

That is what we have been saying all along. He went on:

Now that option doesn't exist, the outspokenness of some politicians during August and September of 1986 left little chance to backtrack.

Of course those politicians were Mr. Jack Kempf, Minister of Forests, British Columbia, the Premier of British Columbia and the Minister for International Trade.

Mr. McKnight: Jack Munro.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Van Scoffield, spokesman for the central interior British Columbia lumber industry went on to say:

The long-term effect, even for survivors, will mean their profits will be drastically reduced or eliminated. There will be no money for improved equipment and technological changes necessary to stay competitive. Even the survivors will be on a downhill slide. Everyone will lose.

Mr. Barney Lukas, Director of Public Affairs for Weyerhaeuser Canada Ltd. in Kamloops, B.C. said:

Even now, when the demand for lumber and the prices are reasonable, much of the industry is at a break even point. Everyone is a potential loser. The disappointment for the forest industry is that we would have preferred the Government had taken the judicial route rather than the negotiated route. The impact on today's prices would be $16.5 million per year for us.

I could could go on and on. There are all kinds of leading spokespersons for the forest industry who have condemned the way the Government has handled this whole matter.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I might refer to your own province of Alberta. For example, Mr. Rytz with the Alberta Forest Products Association said:

Every stud mill in the province is in a loss position as of right now.

Mr. McDermid: When did he say that?

Mr. Riis: A week ago. Mr. Chris Anderson of the Canadian Forest Products of Grande Prairie said:

There are definitely going to be jobs lost and plants closed.

I think we have to recognize that the Americans have accepted negotiated settlement because they are absolutely convinced it will keep Canadians out of their market. The whole purpose was to keep Canadians out. If Canadians are kept out of the market which makes up 88 per cent of lumber exports, obviously there will be cut-backs in Canadian operations. If there are cut-backs in Canadian operations, some plants will close and there will be lay-offs. Lay-offs will occur earlier in the year than normal and recalls will occur later in the year than normal. The effect of this will be very negative.

• (1200)

I would ask government Members what will happen to single-industry communities that depend upon this industry when a mill will actually close and thousands and thousands of people will lose their jobs? I say that because we have heard so many reports from experts indicating that from 5,000 to 25,000 jobs may be lost. I do not want to say that 25,000 jobs will be lost but what compensation will there be for the thousands of people who will lose their jobs?

Mr. McDermid: How many?

Mr. Riis: I would like to remind Hon. Members that a 1971 employment—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. I regret that the Hon. Member's time has expired. Questions or comments.

Mr. Gormley: Mr. Speaker, I listened with interest to the comments of the NDP House Leader and I wish to ask him a question about the impact of this issue on Saskatchewan. I spend considerably more time in my riding than I do here in Ottawa. I was fortunate enough to take a tour of my constituency in the days after the announcement of the tax. People in the forest areas consistently told me that the NDP criticism of this tax was uninformed, fear-inspiring and out of touch with people who actually live and work in logging areas.

There were four particular points made by many of these people who live in Big River, Meadow Lake and other areas. First, they acknowledge the reality of growing American protectionism. Second, they accept the alternative Canada has had to take. Third, in the case of Saskatchewan, they see the money coming back into forest development, silviculture and reforestation. Fourth, and this was the interesting criticism, they found the question of sovereignty as argued by the NDP to be the lamest excuse. They saw this in particular as being nothing but fear-mongering.

I would like the question that I will put to the Hon. Member to be answered in one word, either yes or no. Anything more than a yes or no answer will indicate that the NDP is waffling on this issue. Did the NDP House Leader or members of the NDP travel to Saskatchewan's forestry areas to find out how the people there would respond to this issue, yes or no? Did they go to Meadow Lake, Big River, Hudson Bay or Prince Albert to ask these questions, yes or no?

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, this is interesting.

Mr. Gormley: No?

Mr. Riis: For Conservative Members, the world is yes or no, black or white.

Mr. Gormley: Yes or no?

Mr. Riis: I would like to tell my hon. friend across the way that for many, many days, members of the New Democratic Party toured the West, the North, northern Ontario, the Province of Quebec and Atlantic Canada. We phoned mills and mill operators across Canada.

Mr. Gormley: You didn't go to Saskatchewan.

Mr. Riis: No matter where we went, no matter with whom we spoke, we found that the people thought that the disastrous decision of the Government would set this industry back significantly.

If perhaps as many as 27,000 jobs are lost, the highest estimate that I have read—

Mr. McDermid: I can't believe this.

Mr. Gormley: Are you going to put your seat on the line?

Mr. Riis: I'm not going to put my seat on the line. I just said that the highest estimate made by experts is 27,000.

Mr. Keeper: Put Tory seats on it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please.

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Speaker, I have one or two comments to make. I am glad we have now heard an estimate from the member of the New Democratic Party as to how many jobs will be lost. The record shows that NDP Members say that there will be up to 27,000 jobs lost because of this. That is very interesting.

Mr. Waddell: He said it was the highest quote. Get it right.

Mr. McDermid: I want that to be understood. The Hon. Member was asked how many jobs would be lost and he did not give an answer. Then he said that up to 27,000 jobs would be lost. I would like to find out from whom he quoted, if it is a quote. I wish he had given someone credit for it, but he did not. I do not think we will find anyone who said that. It is typical of the exaggeration and fear-mongering of the New Democratic Party that brings us those kind of statistics. He has no foundation for that statement whatsoever.

Since this deal was made, lumber prices in the United States have risen by 13 per cent.

Mr. Riis: That's the point, to keep us out of their marketplace.

Mr. McDermid: This indicates that the Americans are paying the tax. Shipments have not dropped. Americans are still buying Canadian lumber and are paying 13 per cent more since the agreement was signed.

Mr. Riis: You've got to be kidding, John. If you believe that, you think there are fairies floating around in here.

Mr. McDermid: Those are the facts. Read them.

Mr. Nystrom: No wonder you're in third place.

Mr. McDermid: I have here a letter from the International Woodworkers of America, friends of the NDP. I think the President of the Woodworkers of America will run for the leadership of the New Democratic Party. Here is what this group has to say:

> During the past few days, the softwood lumber settlement has been severely criticized on both political and economic grounds. We would suggest that many negative comments have been both ill-informed and ill-founded. All seem to be based on the assumption that somehow the 15 per cent duty could have been substantially reduced if a negotiated settlement had not been entered into. That is simply untrue. The only question which remained to be answered was whether the United States or Canadian governments would be permitted to collect the revenues.

Even the friends of members of the NDP are saying that their fear-mongering is not working and is unfounded.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, it is interesting that the Parliamentary Secretary has suggested, incorrectly as usual, that I mentioned the exact number of lay-offs that will occur. He is normally an intelligent man. I simply said that one of the quotes—

Mr. McDermid: From whom?

Mr. Riis: —from one of the experts predicting the impact of this was as high as 27,000 jobs to be lost in the forest industry.

Mr. McDermid: Nobody said that.

Mr. Riis: He represents the Government that has negotiated this deal that is placing thousands of Canadian jobs at risk. Surely the Government has done some analyses. Surely the Government has looked at the impact of this. However, I would like to ask a specific question of the Hon. Member.

Mr. McDermid: No, no, you're the guy who's supposed to be answering.

Mr. Riis: Perhaps the next government Member who speaks will answer this question. Back in 1971, the House passed the Employment Support Act which was designed to help industries harmed by retaliatory trade practices. In other words, there is legislation in place to help a single-industry town. If there are massive lay-offs in a community, there is a mechanism in place now that would allow the Government to take immediate action. I would suggest to Hon. Members opposite that as soon as we start providing a list of those mills that are closed and those single-industry towns that are placed in a position of jeopardy, the Government take immediate action to provide whatever remedy is required to help the people harmed as a result of the Government's disastrous decision on the softwood lumber issue.

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Speaker, I would point out to the Hon. Member that employment in the lumber industry has gone down by 30 per cent in the last 10 years while the industry is 30 per cent more productive. The marginal mills have been closing down or modernizing all along. They have had to. That is why our producers are far superior to the American producers. That is why we are selling lumber and still selling lumber in the States. To say that there will be thousands of jobs jeopardized, that towns will close down because of this, is absolutely and totally unfounded.

Members of the NDP are putting fear into this industry like they put fear into the shakes and shingles industry. Just because of the fear-mongering that went on, the shakes and shingles industry closed down for a couple of months. Lo and behold, people still wanted to buy shakes and shingles. The only difference was that the Americans were paying more for them. The industry is going full tilt again and the same thing will happen to this industry. The big losers are the American consumers.

We will still sell lumber to the American consumers and we will still be competitive. The Americans like our lumber because it is of a better quality than theirs. All this fear-mongering about mills and towns closing down and 27,000 people being put out of work is absolute balderdash.

• (1210)

Mr. Riis: Perhaps it is time for a challenge, Mr. Speaker. The Parliamentary Secretary says that there will be no mills closed and virtually no lay-offs.

Some Hon. Members: "Baldrige-dash".

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. I ask the Member to give a short response. His colleague, the Member for Yorkton—Melville (Mr. Nystrom), would like to ask a question, but I will have to cut him off. Therefore, I will allow the Hon. Member to respond.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, the Parliamentary Secretary, who obviously feels very knowledgeable on this issue, says there will be virtually no lay-offs and no plant closures as a result of the 15 per cent. Is he prepared to put up his seat, as I am, and say that if there are any lay-offs or any plant closures as a result of this he will step down from his seat? Will he accept my challenge? Does he have the courage of his convictions, or will he hide behind the veil of empty promises to the people of Canada? If he believes what he is saying, he will put his seat on the line.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The period for questions and comments is now terminated. I will recognize the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) on debate.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I have been struck by the comments of journalists who say that it is time for Canadians to have sympathy for the poor Tories. Brian Mulroney is now the Joe Blpftsk of Canadian politics. Everywhere he goes he carries a cloud around with him. It is now time for Canadians to go to the wailing wall and light candles for the poor, benighted leadership of Brian Mulroney who, day after day—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order.

Some Hon. Members: Order, order. Relevance.

Mr. Gormley: You are totally irrelevant.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order. Question Period begins at 2 o'clock. I would hope to have a little more decorum here. I would like to hear the speech of the Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry. However, he has been here long enough to know that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) is the right hon. gentleman and is not referred to by his name.

Mr. Axworthy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was quoting. I should have put quotation marks around the words of those who are now soliciting this wave of sympathy for the stumbling and fumbling that we have watched with interest. One would be hard pressed to be sympathetic after listening to the speech of the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) yesterday. While the negotiations were being conducted she was nowhere to be seen. Now, with bravado and bluster, she is attempting to defend the indefensible by going on the offensive and blaming everything on the Opposition or someone else. There is always someone else to blame.

This typifies the deep sense of panic and fear which has gripped this administration as it realizes the mistakes it has made in governing. I suppose there are those within the administration who are not smart enough to realize the trouble they are in, but the Canadian people know what trouble they are in. Any Government that was elected with a massive majority and is running third in the polls two years later has some cause for worry. However, we see only increasing arrogance.

The Minister returned from Hawaii declaring a grand victory, which compares with the eloquent statements of Neville Chamberlain who upon returning from Nuremberg and Munich said he had won the peace. The fact is that ignorance is being masqueraded as bravado. Canadians must be concerned about the lack of understanding of this issue.

I will comment on statements made by the Minister and we will see how they hold up. Yesterday she tried to make the case that this agreement was somehow good for the lumber industry of Canada. It is totally absurd to assert that the results of these negotiations will have no negative impact on the lumber industry and that Canadians should be thankful for these negotiations. She was trying to say that anyone who raises the problems which will be faced by the lumber industry is misguided. The Parliamentary Secretary has said that this is a great campaign of misinformation.

The profit margin of the lumber industry was only 3 or 4 per cent last year. How is it possible to extract $500 million or $600 million from such an industry and say it is good for them? How do you bleed an industry to death and say that it will lead to vitality? It does not make sense.

This morning representatives of the secondary lumber manufacturers are on the Hill pleading with various caucuses. There are 80 mills in British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba engaged in the secondary manufacturing of wood products that will be closed down because they are paying 200 or 300 per cent more as a result of the negotiations of the Government. They would have been happier with the countervail. Under the countervail at least they were only paying on the primary products. They are now paying on a whole range of manufactured products. We were led to believe that the Government was interested in encouraging value-added, labour intensive development. Instead, the Minister's wonderful agreement will result in major shut-downs and lay-offs in the secondary lumber products industry.

The Minister went on to say that the Government has saved the industry, that it will put $600 million back into provincial coffers. The Government has not taken into account the amount of money which will be lost to the industry. The report on the economic impact on the Canada and U.S. softwood lumber industry prepared by Widman Management points out that the loss of corporate taxes will be $282 million, that the increased unemployment insurance payments will be $163 million, and that the loss of personal income tax will be $59 million. The net loss as a result of this agreement will be $500 million. What great advantage has been gained by this agreement which will result in a major withdrawal of funds from the corporate sector?

Is it not strange, Mr. Speaker, that the Conservatives, who were elected in 1984 on the platform of national reconciliation and working with private industry, have now engaged in the dirtiest, bloodiest insult match with private industry that we have ever seen? I am amazed by the language which the Minister for International Trade has used to describe members of the lumber industry. Only weeks ago those people were paragons of virtue. They are now being called the worst kind of traitors. The Minister said that you cannot trust them, that they do not know what they are talking about. This is the Government of free enterprise. This is the Government which was going to support the private market. It is now telling the industry that it does not know what it is doing, that the Government knows better. The Minister for International Trade, the well-known expert on lumber matters, knows much better than the industry.

There is one major difference between 1983 and 1986 with regard to the softwood lumber industry. In 1983 the lumber industry was allowed to fight its battle with the support of the Government. In 1986 the Government intervened and replaced the lumber industry. All the brave speeches about allowing the private industry to decide its own best interests ring hollow. I recall very well that the strategy in 1983 was to allow those who knew best to act. We did not have a Minister for International Trade wallowing in, with all her new-found knowledge, to displace the industry in its process. The industry negotiated for itself and won the battle. However, we now have a Minister who knows so much better, and we have lost. That says something about the hypocrisy we have heard.

The Government talks about this agreement being so good for the industry. We want to know why the industry is saying this agreement will require it to translate the export duty into stumpage fees and substantially raise the cost of the domestic product. That can translate into an extra $1,000 per house for Canadians and into substantially higher costs for exports to other countries. Not only are we in a catch-22 situation with the U.S., we are also going to penalize our own consumers and our other export markets. That is the great economic advantage that the Minister for International Trade has won for Canada. She has repudiated the industry. She has an agreement that does not work. We have a formula which will lead to higher prices in our domestic and other export markets. That is the economic advantage.

The Minister says we had no choice. That was the only thing we could do. Balderdash. What stupidity to say there was no other choice. We had another choice, that of following the trade rules which were worked out over the years with both the U.S. and the internaticnal community. If we had followed those trade rules there could easily have been no duties imposed at all. We would not be talking about 15 per cent or 10 per cent or 20 per cent. We had the option of continuing to fight on the issue and end up with no duty being imposed. That wonderful, all-knowing, omniscient Minister of International Trade ignored the report the U.S. Department of Commerce put out on December 23 which said that lumber prices were increasing. That, in the admission of the Department of Commerce, substantially weakened the lumber coalition's case. We forgot that and pushed on for negotiations, and you have to ask why. We know why. My Leader said why yesterday. The Minister of International Trade had orders; clear off the irritants, get rid of this problem between us because we have to have a quick-fix deal within three or four months.

What was the other option? We were told directly that the international tribunal under the GATT was prepared to give its first report in February. They were prepared to give a ruling at that time which would have put the U.S. on the defensive. They fully understood what this Government does not understand, that the U.S. is attempting to tamper with our right to set natural resource prices. That is totally contrary to GATT and international trade rules. With that ruling the U.S. would have had to either roll back its decision—

Mr. McDermid: Or?

Mr. Axworthy: Or repudiate a GATT ruling—

Mr. McDermid: Or?

Mr. Axworthy: At a time when they are trying to negotiate a new multilateral agreement.

Mr. McDermid: Or?

Mr. Axworthy: Then Canada could have had the right to take retaliation against U.S. products under GATT.

Mr. McDermid: That is right.

Mr. Axworthy: That is right. What about computer products and other business equipment? What the Tories have totally forgotten is that we negotiated under the Tokyo round free access to the U.S. lumber market and gave the Americans access to the Canadian market for computers and business equipment. We already paid the price for that access. Under GATT we could have had the right to repudiate that agreement. That is what the Government does not understand.

The only way a country like Canada can properly protect itself in the world of international trade is if we play by the rules and strengthen them, not try and get around them. The Government has simply no comprehension of that fact. It may give lip service to a multilateral system, it does nothing to use it or reinforce it. The Government thinks instead that it can get by with the Dale Carnegie approach to negotiations, a song and a dance, a smile and a wink, and somehow President Reagan is going to give in to us. That seems to be the specific approach to Canada-U.S. relations.

That brings me to the other assertion made by that great and all-knowing Minister of International Trade that sovereignty is a phoney issue.

Mr. McDermid: It is.

Mr. Axworthy: The Parliamentary Secretary agrees with her. That shows how far he has retrogressed in the past few years. The fact of the matter is that sovereignty is an issue. I do not think the Tories understand what it means. That is their problem. They do not understand what sovereignty or independence means. They have no conception of how you go about defending sovereignty. They have no concept of what it means to this country. For their edification I will refer to some international law books. Reading from the standard text by Charles Fenwick, sovereignty means the repudiation of the right of a stronger state to intervene in the affairs of a weaker state. It has come to represent the will of smaller states to exist as separate and independent members of the international community.

That has always been Canada's assertion. We have a particular problem because we share a continent with the largest and most powerful country in the world. That is something Canadians have always been sensitive to. We recognize the need to maintain a balancing act between dealing properly with our friends and allies who share the continent and at the same time defending our independence and sovereignty. That is a balancing act and no one says it is easy. It has to be a central preoccupation of any Canadian Government and it has been over the years. We all know how important it is to make sure you do not shift the balance too far one way or the other.

We have recognized that one important way of ensuring that the balance is maintained is to establish, through the international community, rules which restrain the exercise of the power of the stronger state, whether it is on matters of the environment, defence or trade. Canadian regimes of all political stripes, Conservatives and Liberals, up until now have recognized that the best way to preserve and maintain that balancing act is to strengthen the international community, to put procedures in place where other countries of similar size and nature can help determine the rules. We recognize that that is the best way of maintaining our sovereignty and protecting ourselves.

The fact of the matter is that the Government across the way is the first Government since the end of World War II which has totally abandoned that theory. I think it is the peculiar preoccupation of the present Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) that he can somehow establish with the Reagan administration this palsy-walsy informal approach and somehow get around them. Yet he has been proven wrong time after time. The Americans, because they are tough and smart negotiators, when they see weakness, are going to take advantage of it. That is what they have been doing. Whether it concerns pharmaceuticals, publishing or softwood lumber, they see weakness and take advantage of it.

That is the problem with this agreement. It negotiates on the political side and does away with our right to use the rules of the game. Can you imagine signing an agreement where we totally give away our right to go to GATT? We will now rely upon the American President, who has the necessary retaliatory powers, to determine whether there is a breach or not. The people who signed this letter are senior cabinet officers of our partners in the agreement. They are not inconsequential individuals. They are saying, here is our interpretation of the agreement. Are they saying that the fact that Canadians cannot reforest or even build roads in the forest areas does not mean anything? That shows how little they know about international law. The Americans are partner to the agreement and if the Parliamentary Secretary read the agreement as he should, he would see that they have a right to pull the trigger if they see a breach.

• (1230)

Mr. McDermid: Why do you not believe the Canadians?

Mr. Axworthy: When you read agreements, you take both partners into account and do not just look at one side. You should understand their interpretation of the agreement.

If the Government wants to establish Canada's position, where is its letter in return that refutes that statement? Why has it not told Canadian lumber producers and the Canadian provincial Governments, in a clear written document that will have the same standing as the Yeutter-Baldrige letter, what Canadians can do and clearly put on the record that the Government is prepared to refute that statement?

Yesterday in the House I asked the Prime Minister whether he is prepared to ask Vice-President Bush tomorrow if he will repudiate the Yeutter letter and make it clear that their views are the same. He refused to do so. He has refused to put anything in writing.

The Government cannot tell me its interpretation when it does not have the guts to put it down in writing or negotiate it with the Vice-President of the United States. How does the Government expect Canadians to believe its stand when it will not say what it is prepared to do?

We know that the agreement has given the rights to the Americans to monitor our industry, become involved in evaluating the price of our industry and, furthermore, to say whether and how we can determine programs and policies to help our industries. If the Americans are not satisfied they will pull the trigger on the agreement and bring a Section 301 action. We are told this is not an imposition on our sovereignty. That is what frightens Canadians. If the Government believes this is how to sign an agreement, then God help this country.

[Translation]

Mr. Fontaine: Mr. Speaker, my first remark . . . I heard the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) talking about nationalism and the Constitution. After being on the team that included his colleague from Quebec—I see him and I can hear him shouting—the team that totally ignored 27 per cent of the population when the last constitutional agreements were signed, I think the Hon. Member is hardly in a position to rise in the House today and talk about nationalism and protecting the rights of Canadians.

I wish he would be more forthcoming with his facts and remember to tell Canadians—I want to ask him about this—what he would do about the 60,000 jobs affected by our lumber exports, including 11,000 jobs in Quebec. And perhaps he could say what should be done to maintain our $4 million worth of exports to the United States.

I also wish he would tell the people in his riding, in his province and the people of Canada that we managed to reduce the initial demand for a 36 per cent tax that would otherwise have been applied by the Americans last summer and would have cost us $1.44 billion. First we brought it down to $600 million in taxes that would have been collected by the Americans, while today, we are going to collect that tax ourselves and redistribute the money among the provinces. Perhaps he would care to comment on that and say what he would have done.

Furthermore, I wish he would comment on the position taken by the International Woodworkers of America. Thirty-one thousand people wrote to the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) to show their support and express the hope the our negotiations would be successful.

Finally, would he care to comment on the fact that our lumber exports rank third and that he would have those exports eliminated altogether?

Mr. Speaker, I wish the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry would explain his position and the position taken by his colleague, the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount (Mr. Johnston), on the same matter, so that we can understand what is going on in the Liberal Party, and if they can agree, perhaps they could explain to their Leader, the Leader of the Opposition, what he should be saying on the same subject.

I would appreciate some clarification, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I shall be glad to answer the questions of the Hon. Member for Lévis (Mr. Fontaine). First of all, he said that 60,000 workers would be affected by this decision. Where does he get his figures? What is his source? For all we know they come out of the blue, since we do not have the source of the documents provided to Hon. Members.

Mr. Speaker, there is no way I can answer the Hon. Member's question unless I know where he gets his facts. So now for the other questions, we had a meeting with Mrs. Saucier, President of the Quebec Chamber of Commerce and spokesperson for the lumber industry in the province of Quebec. At this meeting she said that the Government's decision to levy this tax would create a very serious and very dangerous problem for the industry in Quebec. I may add that her views are highly respected in the province.

I am surprised the Hon. Member for Lévis has not contacted Mrs. Saucier. She is an excellent person to consult.

[English]

At the same time he wants to know our position on this issue. It has been clear from the beginning that we felt the Americans had an unfair, unjustified initiative and that ours was the correct position before the international and U.S. tribunals. We believed that to be the position of the Government until October 26. The Minister for International Trade declared with great eloquence in the House that we would fight to the end in those tribunals, but she shifted ground and changed her mind. She sold out, but our position has been consistent throughout this matter.

I suggest to the Hon. Member that there is bound to be major problems when this matter is negotiated. That problem now exists. We have had the same position all along and if the Hon. Member had followed the advice of the Official Opposition he would not be in the mess that his Government has created for him at the present time.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member will be aware that according to the agreement only 20 companies out of hundreds involved in the Canadian softwood industry were granted exclusion from this tax. This includes seven companies in B. C. and others throughout the rest of Canada. Has the Government taken any major steps to ensure that other companies that ought to be exempt from this tax will be included in an agreement? Are renegotiations taking place and, if not, should they?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member quite rightly points to one of the most serious and immediate problems facing us. There are some 80 to 100 secondary manufacturers of lumber products in this country. The majority of them, some 40 to 50 enterprises, are in British Columbia, and approximately 20 more in Alberta. On Friday, I met with some eight to 12 companies who are so affected in my home province of Manitoba. They are producing secondary products that are not part of the list of those that will be excluded. There are many companies themselves that are not excluded, yet the Government has not undertaken any renegotiation. It has made no effort to reopen the agreement to provide for amendments in order to come to the rescue of those companies. This simply illustrates our point, that the Government has become blind in its fixed notion that what it is doing is right.

This is a part of the problem facing the Minister for International Trade. Perhaps as a result of embarrassment, fear, or ignorance, she has exhibited the worst examples of inflexibility. This matter has become a crusade rather than one of ministerial responsibility or intelligent and reasoned public policy when one tries to obtain the best arrangement out of a difficult situation. The issue has become a great crusade.

If there is any item that must be altered in that agreement, it is with regard to those manufacturers. They must be given some opportunity, otherwise they will continue to pay 200 per cent to 300 per cent more under the Canadian imposed export tax than under the previous countervail duty that the Americans introduced. I suppose increasing the cost by 200 per cent or 300 per cent is what the Tories call great public policy.

Mr. Waddell: Mr. Speaker, I am not an expert in this area like the Hon. Member and some of my colleagues. He might be aware that yesterday John Ferguson stated in his column entitled "Opposition's Crying Wolf Over Lumber Deal with U.S.", that the Opposition criticized very severely the previous tariff on shakes and shingles. In fact, the impact has been minimal and the 35 per cent tariff was really passed on in higher prices to U.S. consumers and the mills are still working with the loss of few jobs. He goes on to say that the American consumers seem to be absorbing a big chunk of this tax as well. I wonder if the Hon. Member could answer that point? In other words, I suppose Mr. Ferguson is saying that this will be passed on to American consumers and in the end will not hurt Canadian industry. I ask the Hon. Member that because I would like to look at this more objectively myself.

I would like to put a second question with respect to that point. Is it not a fact that our industry was being subsidized? How does one lose $200 million running the forest industry in British Columbia unless proper economic rents for the resource owned by the Government is not charged? It seems to me pretty difficult to have a forest like that in British Columbia and lose $200 million.

Let me put those two tough questions to the Hon. Member and ask him, if he been Minister for International Trade, how he would have approached the issue? What would he have done differently? Would he have insisted that the Province of British Columbia, for example, charge proper economic rents and therefore perhaps stop the Americans from complaining? Or would the Hon. Member have taken any other measures differently from the Government?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, first let me recount a discussion we had last week when I visited Washington and met with the coalition against unfair import taxes. It is an American coalition of lumber dealers and consumer groups who have been fighting up until October 26 on the same side as Canada. They recognize that the imposition of the countervail was a wrong move and are now desperately against the Canadian imposition of the export tax. That is certainly because they recognize that it will mean very major hardship for American consumers. There is no doubt about that. They are estimating an additional cost of $700 or $800 to $1,000 for some of the products used by Canada. At the same time they point out that the housing market in the United States, which is the major user of Canadian softwood, has been going through a boom period for three or four years. Coming out of the recession there was a major pick-up in housing demand, but that has now slackened. The projected number of units will be down 200,000 or 300,000 next year, which they obviously assume will have a deflationary impact on prices and there would be far less ability to pass those prices along through the import tax. That means that a large part of that tax will have to be swallowed by the manufacturers or they will simply go out of business. Certainly those in the marginal sawmills will be put out of business.

The second major question which must be asked is what is the impact upon our own consumers and our other export markets? The Government has said its intention is to move from the export tax to increased stumpage fees. The stumpage fee itself applies to trees, and to be able to carve out an end use product from one piece of cedar and say that is destined for the U.S. market is virtually impossible. Therefore, the stumpage fee increase will impact on our own domestic market as well as on our other export markets. That would make Americans even happier because they will be able to compete more equally with us in other export markets.

In answer to the final point, I simply reiterate that if we were the Government we would have done as we did in 1983, use the rules we have and, by using those rules, strengthen them. We have recourses in the international system and in the American tribunal system. The best defense of our interest is to use those rules, to fight for them, and to make our best case. Particularly, and this is the issue at stake, what precedent has been established? We have now conceded that we subsidize our industries. We had never conceded that before. That was simply a matter of public policy in Canada. We have now made a historic mistake in saying we agree that we provide subsidies on our natural resources through Government action. That will open up a whole host of reactions and we already have new coalitions in the United States emerging to fight them.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The time for questions and comments has now terminated. Debate.

Mr. Jack Shields (Athabasca): Mr. Speaker, it is indeed a pleasure to take part in this debate. However, before I get into the meat of my remarks, I would like to make a comment for the benfit of the two previous speakers, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) of the Liberal Party and the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) of the New Democratic Party. I believe there was a common thread running through their remarks, and that was to first attack the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and then to attack in a very vicious way the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney). Of course, their attack on the Minister for International Trade, their biggest argument, is that she was on holidays in Hawaii while the final negotiations were taking place. Both of those Hon. Members know full well that there are telephones, telefax and telecopiers. The Minister was not involved in the negiations on a one-to-one basis. There was a negotiating team sitting in the room during the negotiations and she was in contact with them at every moment or at any time those people wanted to get in touch with her for direction, and those Hon. Members know that. The Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry has been in that position himself when he was Minister for Manpower and Immigration. When things were happening in Ottawa and he was not here—he might have been out of the country—he was in contact with his Department and his negotiators. Let us be fair.

Mr. Axworthy: I never did that, Jack. I was never away when those important negotiations were going on.

Mr. Shields: The Minister was carrying out her responsibility and the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry and the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap know that. I am surprised the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry would take that tact. I had associations with him when he was a minister. I worked with him on a number of pieces of legislation. I remember approaching him with a very serious problem faced by my community. The fresh-water fishermen were having problems. The Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry, as a minister, obliged me in my representations. Therefore, I am surprised, because he knows the difficulties in carrying a ministerial load.

The Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry also indicated that the Minister said that with the deal we worked out to solve the softwood lumber dispute with the United States there would be no impact on the industry and no injury. That is just not true. No one from this Government, the Minister, the Parliamentary Secretary or anyone else, ever indicated there would be no impact and no injury. Of course, there could be injury and there could be impact. We all know that. However, the Government and the Minister were faced with a very difficult choice in counteracting the 15 per cent countervail duty which was placed by the United States on the import of softwood lumber.

The Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry said we could continue to fight the issue and win the removal. He said we should have fought it out. However, he failed to say that that was going to take perhaps three or four years and that all the time it was being fought through GATT and through the courts, the tribunals and so on, the import tax duty which was there would still be collected and would still be going into the coffers of the United States. He also failed to say that even if we were lucky enough to win, the mood in the United States right now in Congress and the Senate is such that action would have been taken at that level to impose the same kind of restrictions through GATT which are there now, and GATT be damned. The Hon. Member knows that the whole mood of the United States is one of protectionism and of putting up barriers to international trade. He knows that is going on. He knows of the number of individual Bills which are being sponsored through Congress right now.

Thus the Government was faced with a difficult choice. We could either pay a countervail duty to the United States Treasury to the tune of $800 million per year, or even larger, and hope that we would win the case by following the rules. Over the next four years that would bring the total sum up to approximately $2.5 billion. We could have conceded the issue and suspended any action until Canada brought about offsetting measures, such as the imposition of a countervail duty. By doing that we would have started a trade war with our biggest trading partner. That is what we are talking about. We are not talking about a dispute with a country on which we do not depend for a great deal of our trade. We are talking about a country which accounts for 75 per cent to 80 per cent of all our foreign trade.

The third option we had was that of negotiation. We could sit down and negotiate our way out of a mess which was created by a countervail duty without affecting other negotiations which were ongoing to secure access to markets. We could get out of the mess without setting a precedent that would affect other sectors of the economy. In other words we had to sit down like reasonable people and try to negotiate a solution to a very serious problem which affects a significant Canadian industry.

I have the impression as a result of listening to the Members of the NDP and the Liberal Party that we should not negotiate with the Americans. I am left with the impression that they think if we negotiate with them we will lose. They seem to say that we should fight, put up barriers and throw hand-grenades. And then when they do come out with a policy which may affect Canada we have to run to them and say: "You have to exempt us because we are one of your best friends". We cannot do that sort of thing.

So what did the Minister do? She instructed her officials and we moved in to negotiate an agreement. The federal Government did not move in to negotiate an agreement unilaterally. It did not go in as a centralist government and say: "We will negotiate". What the Government did is it went to the provinces, sat down with them and then brought them in on the negotiations. The approach they would dictate is defined by their going to the United States and sitting down with their counterparts to negotiate this agreement. There was co-operation all the way. As a result, nine provinces out of ten agreed with the final position taken. The one province which did not agree was the Province of Ontario. However, it will come onside when the issue is finally resolved.

What the softwood lumber dispute illustrates to all of us is just some of the trade problems faced by Canada and the U.S. It also demonstrates how essential it is for our two sovereign countries to get together and hammer out new rules to settle such disagreements. We cannot allow our trade position with the United States to deteriorate to a point that we will find these types of problems popping up every week or every second week. We have to put a system in place by which disputes of this nature can be solved in a reasonable manner, as was done with the lumber dispute.

I would also like to speak for a moment about the sovereignty issue which I think is very important. I believe that sovereignty is extremely important to all Canadians, just as it is extremely important to all Americans. We have heard members of the NDP and members of the Liberal Party talk about sovereignty and how it has been eroded as a result of our entering into a bilateral agreement with another country on a trade issue. What they fail to say, and most assuredly why they failed to say it is clear, is that when this country entered into the GATT agreements we gave up, in a sense, some sovereignty or some decision making simply because we have agreed to abide by certain conditions. If we break those conditions then certain things will happen. We will lose our sovereignty in terms of being able to change the rules as we want because we have entered into an agreement.

Each time we enter into a bilateral agreement with any country on any trade issue, whether it be in the area of fisheries, hydro projects in British Columbia or in Quebec, or others, they are monitored by both countries. What members of the Opposition fail to say is that we also monitor bilateral agreements with the United States. We monitor what is going on in the United States. So in the truest sense I suppose that the United States also gives up some of its sovereignty. Through GATT we monitor events which are taking place in the United States, and the United States gives up some of its sovereignty. But that is not the issue. It is a red herring and Members opposite know that.

Let us look at some of the results of the agreement which has been entered into. The Coalition for Fair Lumber Imports is now withdrawing its petition which led to the countervail decision. As a consequence we are introducing legislation to impose a 15 per cent export tax on softwood lumber, excluding all those small plants and companies which impose a value-added levy to the products they ship to the United States. The 15 per cent will not be imposed on those groups. The 15 per cent on the primary production of softwood lumber will be imposed as an export tax. The money from the export tax will go directly into the federal Government coffers. Rather than going into the United States coffers, it is now coming into the Canadian coffers.

The next part of the agreement with the provinces is that the money will be redirected to the provinces that are producing the softwood lumber and shipping it to the United States. They will be able to use it for reforestation, silviculture, or any displacement that may take place in the labour force. The key is that the provinces still control the resource, the federal Government does not.

The Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry stated that we should have maintained what they did in 1982 or 1983. Yes, they acted. They were the ones who brought in the national energy policy and attacked the resources of the provinces. I suggest that if they were in Government today that they would be collecting the export duty and keeping it here in Ottawa. This Government is saying that the resources belong to the provinces and they are responsible. Therefore, the export tax that will be collected on exports to the United States will be redirected to the provinces, as it should be.

The agreement essentially maintains exemptions for exports of certain Canadian companies operating in British Columbia, Ontario, and Quebec, most of the producing provinces that do have value added to the lumber before it is shipped to the United States. It will not apply to the value added in the remanufacturing process. That is a commitment that we have.

Most important is the argument we hear, "Gee, you entered into this agreement with the United States on the softwood lumber. My goodness, that will affect all other areas and every other agreement that we might want to develop or reach with the United States". The indications are very clear that this is not so. The proposal to the U.S. Government that was made between Canada and the United States on the softwood lumber was made without prejudice. Without prejudice means that this can never be used as an example of what was done before which can be used in another area. Without prejudice is a common term that lawyers use. They write a letter and put on it "without prejudice", which means that this agreement was drawn up without prejudice.

It is a good agreement. Certainly there will be cost. As the Members over there have clearly indicated, this cost will be passed on to the consumer in the United States. Indications are that the price of lumber has already gone up about 13 per cent in the United States and our sales from Canada to the United States should not be affected.

I rest my case, Mr. Speaker, and thank you for the opportunity.

Mr. Waddell: I have one comment and a question. First of all, my colleagues and I were listening to the Member's struggle with the NDP Party. We were trying to figure out if the Hon. Member does it on purpose, or does he not understand, as is the case with many Conservative back-benchers. Maybe the Hon. Member could privately tell me. It is like saying, the New Democratic Party Party. You cannot have an NDP Party. It is the NDP. Maybe the Member could get his mind around that.

The Hon. Member in debate says that the deal is done without prejudice, therefore, we are safe. It is without prejudice to other matters. That seems to me to be an impossibly naive position to take. The Hon. Member is Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Masse). Did the Member notice that recently the American regulatory body for natural gas tried to intervene and hold up the Canadian practices of pricing gas? In fact, they are intervening with our own ways of dealing with the pricing of our resource. Is that not very similar to what went on in the countervail tariff on lumber? Is that not another example of the Americans intervening in Canadian sovereignty, trying to tell us how we should tax and deal with our resources? Is it not another step in the path of the eventual absorption of Canada by the United States, down which this Government is rapidly leading Canada? Does the Member not understand why Canadians and the Opposition are so upset about the loss of sovereignty in this deal? Would the Member answer that question?

The Hon. Member will recall that a few minutes ago I put a question to the Liberal critic, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—North Garry (Mr. Axworthy), and asked him what he would have done had he been the Minister. He answered me that above all he was very concerned that Canada had set a precedent, had conceded that we subsidized our resources. That is what the Member said, and he was concerned with that precedent.

I wish to reiterate the question. Is the Member not being impossibly naive when he says that this is all done without prejudice? Are the Americans not starting to do the same thing with our natural gas industry?

Mr. Shields: First of all, I will try to answer all the convoluted statements made by the Member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell). One, the NDP Party—I know it sounds as if there is a stutter there. They always take two positions, so I feel that they cannot be referred to as the New Democratic Party, because there is the NDs in Alberta, and there is the NDP in British Columbia that take opposite positions to what that Hon. Member states. It is a repeat—NDP Party—and I will continue to use it. They dropped the "Party" in Alberta for NDs—that does not sound quite right, but it is NDs. There are some problems. We do not have them here, but they have them over there.

Mr. McDermid: It stands for "no dimension".

Mr. Shields: The Hon. Member talked without prejudice.

Mr. Waddell: You did.

Mr. Shields: The Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway is a lawyer and knows what "without prejudice" means. This understanding is without prejudice and this is written in the understanding which I wish to read to him:

> This Understanding is without prejudice to the position of either Government as to whether the stumpage programs and practices of Canadian governments constitute subsidies under United States law or any international agreement.

That is pretty plain. As the Member often does, he asked a question without going to the facts and finding out for himself. I hope that explains it. If the Hon. Member does not have that in his possession, I would be happy to let him have a copy.

The Hon. Member then tries in some convoluted way to link up natural gas. The Member says that the regulatory bodies on natural gas have made a request similar to that of the lumber people. That is not true. The Hon. Member knows full well that the regulatory body in the United States is talking about the transportation costs of natural gas. They are not talking about the pricing of natural gas. They are asking whether the cost of transportation should be included in the price. The Hon. Member knows that full well.

The Hon. Member says that I am being naive when I talk about bilateral agreements. I wish to point out to him that all the bilateral agreements are agreements. There are bilateral agreements for fishing off the West Coast, and for fishing off the East Coast. There are bilateral agreements for the production of energy, electrical power, and the shipping of power across the border. The automotive agreement is another bilateral agreement.

• (1310)

In all of these somehow the United States gives up something; it cannot do certain things if it signs a bilateral agreement. In Canada we give up certain things if we sign a bilateral agereement. It is not sovereignty; it is reasonable people sitting down and working out a problem facing both countries and trying to come up with the best solution. It is much better doing it that way than using the NDP way of doing it, that is, throwing hand-grenades at our largest trading partner and one of our most secure partners in the trading world.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I will take two more questions—one from the Hon. Member for Saskatoon East (Mr. Ravis) and one from the Hon. Member for Egmont (Mr. Henderson).

Mr. Ravis: Mr. Speaker, I want to pick up on a point concerning the Minister's absence from the country during the Christmas vacation. I was very annoyed at that point being raised because the Minister is probably one of the hardest working Ministers in the Government. I think it is reasonable that a person can expect to spend some time with his or her family during the Christmas vacation, particularly when we realize that the Minister was prepared to spend time on the telephone every couple of hours, as I understand it, keeping in touch with the officials while the negotiations were going on. If Ministers are derelict in their duties, they deserve every bit of criticism they receive from the media or from the public. However, that is not the case in this situation. Even though the damage has been done by our friends in the media and in the Opposition, I think the point should be corrected. This Minister does not deserve that reputation.

Let me return to some of the realities facing the American Government today. They have been mentioned before in the debate, but I want to refer to an article that appeared in Business Week which goes back not only to last month but almost a year in terms of the trade deficit situation suffered by the American economy. The Americans thought they could stop their trade deficit at $125 billion, at $150 billion, and at $175 billion, but they found that they could not turn it around. If that situation faced Canada, in all probability we would want to retaliate against some of our trading partners as well.

I would like to put my question to the Hon. Member for Athabasca (Mr. Shields). It is my understanding that the United States has been dealing with some of its other major trading partners, namely, Japan and the European Common Market. Is it not true that we in fact ended up with a much better deal in our softwood lumber situation, in terms of at least keeping the money in the country, than Japan and the European Common Market where it is costing their economies literally hundreds of millions of dollars?

Mr. Shields: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is absolutely correct. The protectionist sentiment now rampant in the U.S. Congress and Senate has generated something like 300 independent protectionist Bills in those two Houses. This has created a very dangerous situation from which Canada is not exempt.

If we are not able to sit down in some way and negotiate with our largest trading partner problems such as as the softwood lumber one, we will be facing real problems. We cannot allow this to happen, and that is why the total initiative is taking place.

I want to return to the comment about the Minister being in Hawaii on holidays over the Christmas period. First, Christmas is pretty sacred to most families; she is a single parent and she was with her family. Second, the Minister was constantly in touch with the negotiating team. I think it is sleazy politics when members of the Liberal Party and of the NDP, and some former cabinet Ministers, hammer away at this, knowing full well that with telephones and the telecommunications system it is not true that a Minister has to be sitting on the doorstep or in the next room. They know the Minister was in touch with the negotiating team. It is just not true and it is very sleazy. The journalism which has resulted from these accusations is sleazy journalism, and I feel that very strongly.

Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, I should like to make a brief comment. I will not become involved in the debate on whether the Minister should or should not have holidays, be they in Hawaii or wherever she was. However, some Maritimes lumber producers told me that they could not care less whether she is in Hawaii for 365 days of the year.

I think the Hon. Member for Athabaska (Mr. Shields) would agree that this agreement has some serious implications for Maritimes lumber producers. It imposes a 15 per cent tax on all but five Maritimes lumber producers.

As Hon. Members will know, stumpage fees in the Maritimes are higher than they are in any other Canadian province. Basically this deal was struck for British Columbia, Ontario, Quebec, and Alberta. However, Maritimes lumber producers are very scared about what is happening; they have told this to me and to other Hon. Members. In fact, the Hon. Member can ask some government Members from Atlantic Canada about that. It will have a severe effect upon their industry, and some of them will have to close their doors. Time will tell if that is the case or not. Their concern is not only because of their sales to the United States, but also the competitiveness of Quebec and Ontario lumber coming into Atlantic Canada if there is an impediment affecting the sales of Quebec and Ontario lumber into the United States. There is no way the martime provices can compete with that. In many cases we do not have the quantities of good quality lumber to compete in those areas.

I do not want to be always whining about Atlantic Canada, but almost every program implemented by the Government seems to be tuned to some of the larger and richer provinces and has a detrimental effect upon industry and jobs in Atlantic Canada. All we have to do is look at the unemployment rate in Atlantic Canada where there has not been a turnaround in the economy since 1983. The unemployment rate in Ontario is quite low, but it is very high in Atlantic Canada.

Would the Parliamentary Secretary tell us whether there is provision in the agreement to exempt the Maritimes lumber industry which will be affected more drastically than any other part of the country by the agreement?

Mr. Shields: Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for asking a very valid question and expressing a concern on behalf of the maritime provinces. Whenever any agreement is signed or worked through, it seems that one part of the country is hurt more than another part of the country because of population and a number of other factors. I agree that there are some specific problems facing the industry in the maritime provinces. However, I also know that these problems will be addressed very clearly. They have been expressed to the Government by other Members from those areas.

The basic underlying philosopy of the present Prime Minister is that all of us must become sensitive to the various regions of the country. When a policy is signed specifically for one province or one area, sometimes it has a counter-effect upon another area. We must all work toward becoming much more sensitive to this. I agree with the Hon. Member. I will certainly help him as much as I can to rectify any problems faced by the maritime provinces because of the agreement.

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I should like to make some brief comments on the Minister's speech yesterday. My friend in the Liberal Party, a former Minister of Transport, accused the Minister of inflexibility. I must say that of all the possible accusations that could be levelled against the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney), inflexibility is the very least about which I would be concerned. We have seen the most flexible Minister for International Trade in the country's history. At one time she was dead set to fight this matter to the bitter end. A short month or so later she flip-flopped completely and sought to undermine our negotiations just as the preliminary decision was coming down. But, as soon as that preliminary decision came down, she immediately flip-flopped again and said: "We will fight it to the end". With complete flexibility, she flip-flopped yet once more and gave us a strong, tough argument for following a course of action exactly opposite to that which she had recommended previously. I must not, I am afraid, accuse the Minister of anything that smacks of inflexibility. I wish she had been a little bit more inflexible. I wish for the sake of the country she had stood up and stuck to her position and fought through this issue, as the lumber industry wanted to see it fought through, and as two out of the three trade unions involved in the industry wanted to see it fought through. A great many industry analysts who had looked at just how strong the U.S. case was wanted to see the issue fought through. A little less flexibility would not have been a subject of criticism from me.

I must say that the Minister in her tone in the debate yesterday presented to the House the spectacle of someone whose back is very much against the wall. She must, I have to say, bless the events of the past weekend. Were it not for the events this past weekend the focus would be entirely on her. The thrust would be on seeking her resignation and trying to replace this present weak ineffectual Minister with somebody who would fight for the interests of Canada.

This whole debate that has taken place over the lumber question is a debate which is, in itself, extremely interesting, a debate which is very important to the future of the country. But it is not in itself nearly as important as what this incredibly damaging set of concessions to the United States demonstrates about the wider issue of free trade with the Americans. We have been shown in this case a very clear picture of just precisely how we will be leveraged, how we will be hit and how we will be squeezed in the free trade negotiations taking place. If there is any Member of this House who does not recognize the power that the United States exerted to achieve this agreement, which achieves every single objective the Americans sought back two years ago—

Mr. Darling: Wrong.

Mr. Langdon: —a year and a half ago—

Some Hon. Members: Wrong.

Mr. Langdon: —if they do not recognize that, then I think they are the people who, to use the Minister's ridiculous phrase, are blinking, the people who are blind and the people who are not able to face reality and see it clearly.

This perspective which we present on what has happened to the lumber industry and what is likely to happen as a consequence of the agreement is not the result of sitting back in Ottawa or elsewhere in the world on vacation, or not and looking at what we hope will happen, it is the result of direct and detailed discussions with industry and trade union representatives right across this country which took place in the period after Christmas. It is the result of a survey of lumber companies; it is a result of an attempt to meet face to face with lumber people right across Canada.

I must say that the Minister has distorted, I hope without any deliberate intent, the results of that attempt to reach out and talk to lumber people. She indicated in her speech yesterday that Members of the New Democratic Party travelled across Canada with a task force and as the media reported, could not find any lay-offs directly attributable to the export tax. The letter which was written to the Minister herself as a consequence of that cross-country tour, which I have in front of me, states: "Hundreds of workers have already been laid off—

Mr. McDermid: Not because of that.

Mr. Langdon: —and we found those specific examples, and Maritime producers alone talk of 9,000 to 11,000 jobs at risk".

I do not mind a debate with the Minister which is direct, upfront and vigorous, but I do mind a debate which attempts to distort information which she herself has in her possession from our attempt to provide her with more information.

It has been suggested by the last Conservative speaker that the question of sovereignty, the future independence of our country—because that is what it is about—is somehow a red herring. I have here in front of me a text, not of a U.S. letter to its lumber producers, but a text of the Federal Registry of the United States of America, the register of a decision taken by the President of the United States and signed by Ronald Reagan himself. It indicates quite clearly within that text:

—I intend to take or to authorize all appropriate action in response to any future failure by the Government of Canada to meet the objectives and commitments of the Understanding.

What precisely does that mean, Mr. Speaker? It means that we have to look to what the Americans understand by that agreement. Clearly what they have taken under their federal authority is the responsibility to see to it that Canada puts it into effect.

• (1330)

Of course, what the Americans have indicated is quite clear. The letter written by the American trade negotiators to the lumber producers in the United States indicates that the United States will monitor what will be taking place in Canada. One expects monitoring to be part of an agreement, but they will monitor closely the operation of this agreement "to ensure the amounts collected through the export charge or replacement measures are not returned to or otherwise used to benefit producers or exporters of Canadian softwood lumber". In other words, our hands have been tied when it comes to the assistance we can give to those hard-pressed lumber producers who will be hurt by this 15 per cent export tax.

The American trade negotiators have also said that any changes whatsoever made with respect to the agreement without U.S. government approval would be considered a violation of the understanding. If the understanding is violated, the axe will be over our heads. This is something which has not been recognized by those who have been attempting to analyse this agreement.

The letter written to the U.S. lumber producers says that should the Canadian Government breach its obligations under the understanding or terminate this agreement, the U.S. Government will take all appropriate action such as acting under Section 301 of the Trade Act of 1974 to impose import duties equal to the charges which the agreement contemplated would have been collected by the Government of Canada and/or the provincial Governments. In other words, the Americans, without any recourse to yet another countervail debate, would have the right at once to impose its import taxes on our products without allowing for an appeal through U.S. courts.

Our sovereignty has been damaged in a way that should surely leave every Hon. Member of the House of Commons shamed by what is taking place. According to this agreement, we cannot even provide grants, low-cost loans or other benefits to the lumber companies that will be hurt. We cannot even award contracts for silviculture, road building or recreation and other foresting activities on a non-competitive basis. In short, we have to follow precisely what the United States wants us to follow with respect to how we deal with reforestation, recreational activities in the forests or anything related thereto. That is shameful. I wish the Government would have the courage to say honestly that it recognizes the shameful position it has put us in.

I must speak to some degree as well of the details of the legislation and the agreement. I would like to deal particularly with Atlantic Canada. In Atlantic Canada the situation is so unfair and so grossly unjust that I cannot believe that a Canadian Government, particularly one with a forestry Minister from that part of the country, would have permitted such a thing to take place. As reported to me by the Maritimes Lumber Bureau, 97 firms in the Maritimes are not exempt from this export tax.

One might ask if these are the big firms that can afford not to be exempt, the firms that are the most powerful and influential and therefore the most able to penetrate the U.S. market. No, these 97 firms are small and 40 of them are the single source of support for employment and economic prosperity in one-industry towns. Those firms are required to pay the 15 per cent export tax despite the fact that many of them depend entirely on exports.

The Atlantic producers worked very hard to promote their position after the preliminary determination was made. On December 4 they all visited Washington to make the point that they should be exempt. On December 15 they visited Washington to stress again the need for fairness represented by an exemption for them. On December 18 they came to Ottawa to make precisely the same point. Everyone was quite clearly aware that these firms with much higher stumpage fees would be hit very, very hard. Yet nothing happened that would assist these 97 lumber producers or their thousands of workers located in one of the worst hit parts of Canada. What injustice, unfairness and unthinking uncaringness about a part of the country which is crucial to the future of Canada.

Not only was there that injustice, there was originally a list of firms and products in British Columbia which were exempt from the U.S. countervail. That list was significantly shortened by the negotiations toward the agreement. As a consequence, thousands of workers who had not felt threatened by what was taking place will be hit immediately and hard by this oversight. Was it an oversight? Was it yet one more concession? Was it one more bargaining chip that had to be given away? All one can say is that it was an incompetently organized and worked out agreement, and that had to bear some relationship to the fact that the Minister for International Trade was not trying, either in Ottawa or Washington, to be on top of the negotiations. I cannot believe that a Minister charged with that responsibility would not be right there seeing to it that these crucial points were established in the final agreement.

This is the start, not the finish, of serious disasters for natural resource producers throughout Canada. Already natural gas producers are experiencing what has taken place in this case. Already pulp and paper producers are feeling the same pressure. Already European and Asian producers are starting to explore similar moves against Canada because we have admitted that we subsidize our lumber industry. That is the shame of this agreement and that is why I felt a sense of great natural grievance when I heard the agreement had been signed and when I saw the details as they came out at the start of this year.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Questions and comments.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to my colleague. He has talked about the effect of the way in which the Conservative Government handled the lumber question. We have been told that the Government had to make the deal because if it did not it would be subject to the same kind of pressure in many other fields. I want the Hon. Member to comment on a report which appeared in the January 5, 1987 issue of The Financial Post, that great radical journal. It talks about something which the Hon. Member for Athabasca (Mr. Shields), who spoke a few moments ago, should be interested in, natural gas. It says that just last month Washington's Federal Energy Regulatory Commission ruled Canada's long-standing method of charging U.S. pipeline customers for natural gas must be changed to conform to internal U.S. practices. The requirement now being appealed by Ottawa could force Canadian gas exporters to absorb much of the cost of shipping to the border instead of passing it on to U.S. customers.

I have seen figures which indicate this could cost Canadian producers of natural gas something in the neighbourhood of $200 million. Will the Hon. Member comment on that possibility?

Mr. Langdon: Mr. Speaker, that is one example of the kind of thing taking place as a consequence of our demonstrating that when it came to negotiations over lumber we were patsies. We proved ourselves to be the kind of people who buy the Brooklyn Bridge. I am surprised that the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) did not come back from her overseas travel with that in her suitcases.

There is a recognition in that article of what is taking place in many sectors of the U.S. Canada is a serious competitor in very many natural resource areas. Contrary to the past, when Canada was seen as an important source of supply and therefore a country to be encouraged to supply these kinds of natural resources, we are feeling increased pressure in area after area. In this particular case, quite complicated changes in rulings ordered by the U.S. agency involved runs absolutely and directly counter to the April 15, 1985 Shamrock Summit conclusion by President Reagan and the Prime Minister which indicated that we were to move toward free market arrangements in natural gas and a whole host of other related products. What has taken place in this case is that detailed contracts have been overthrown by the agency concerned. It is just one more sign of what will hit us in the future as a consequence of the weakness we have shown in this case.

Mr. Wilson (Swift Current—Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, I come from an area of the southern prairies which is almost devoid of timber. In fact, we have but one tree in our riding about five miles north of Swift Current. It is actually fairly well-known. We have come to revere it and some people tie ribbons and other things to it. Notwithstanding the lack of timber, I do feel constrained to make a couple of comments and ask a question of the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon).

I felt reasonably good this morning upon awakening. It was a new day and the sun was shining. However, after hearing the usual gloom and doom from that harbinger of horror and purveyor of pessimism I feel obliged to suggest that there is a bit of hope out there.

In my area we are concerned about grain and beef. Our producers are very much threatened by the subsidization put in place by other Governments. We had the spectacle under the previous Government of many, many thousand of pounds of beef coming into this country from the European Common Market. Our producers were very much concerned about that. They quite properly made application to the import tribunal in this country and secured the application of a countervailing duty.

Mr. Foster: That was after the capitulation of your Government.

Mr. Wilson (Swift Current—Maple Creek): The Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster), whose Government allowed that flood of beef to come into the country in the first place, thinks otherwise and leaves the Chamber.

The grain producers also have great cause for concern. The intervention by Governments everywhere in subsidizing the uneconomic production of grain has greatly distorted the market-place and caused our farm people difficulty. Those of us in the Prairies feel that the beginning of enhanced trade talks with the Americans bilaterally and all countries multilaterally through GATT is absolutely essential. We have to retain and enhance our market access if we are going to survive.

I am very confused over the lumber issue because I am hearing a number of lumber-producing provinces saying this is the best deal possible. It is in fact a good deal. I think I hear the NDP in British Columbia saying this is a good deal. I think of several situations in the past where my friend from Essex—Windsor complained bitterly about the de Havilland privatization, Boeing taking over, and the suggestion that numerous jobs would be lost. I recall the shakes and shingles controversy and the suggestion by the Hon. Member's Leader that 4,000 jobs would be lost. In fact, nothing of the sort has happened. I believe everyone would say that the privatization of de Havilland was an excellent thing. The shakes and shingle industry has survived intact. People will note that our lumber industry is strong. Due to the quality of the product and the exchange rate, it is quite likely that we can withstand this lumber transaction, that the jobs will be preserved, and that the American consumer will be stuck with extra money which will accrue to the Canadian Treasury.

Will the Hon. Member clarify why he and the other members of his federal Party find so much wrong with the agreement while his provincial counterparts in British Columbia, the unions in British Columbia, and a number of the provinces think it is a pretty good deal?

Mr. Langdon: Mr. Speaker, there was a great deal wrapped up in one final question. I will not deal with the points which led up to the final question but, instead, will deal briefly with the final question itself. I have talked with my provincial colleagues in British Columbia, including the leader of the New Democratic Party there. It is their view that this deal does represent, for precisely the reasons which are detailed in my speech, an extremely dangerous assault on the economic independence of this country which will affect a whole set of natural resource industries besides softwood lumber.

That is also the expressed view of trade unions such as the Canadian Paperworkers Union and the Sawmill Workers Union which represent those who, quite frankly, work in the most vulnerable of the mills, those in northern Ontario, the Maritimes, and some of those in Quebec. They, too, are very strongly opposed to this agreement because of what they expect it will do to them. First, they expect it will represent a threat to their jobs. Second, they expect that the lumber companies themselves, because of the severe cost pressures which they will feel, will attempt to reduce wages, which will affect them quite significantly as well.

The final point I would like to make is that this agreement was worked out with a tremendous amount of concessions being given by our side. I challenge any Member of the Conservative side of the House to tell me of one single solitary concession made by the United States in this lumber agreement. In reality, they made no concession. We gave up everything and they gave up nothing. That is what I fear will happen in our free trade talks as well.

[Translation]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Resuming debate. The Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart).

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, this is a sad day for Canada because the result of the debate is that, on this issue, the Canadian Parliament is acting as a branch plant of the American Government. This decision and this Bill introduced by the Government do not reflect the will of Canadian men and women, nor that of the Canadian Government or of the Official Opposition, they quite simply are dictated by the American Government.

I am not surprised that we should have reached that point after two and a half years under the administration of the present Prime Minister. We need only remember recent events and remind ourselves that this man was appointed president of Iron Ore just so he would shut down operations without fanfare. Well, Mr. Speaker, again today we are witnessing a lack of leadership and courage in this matter. It is imperative that the people who are listening and watching should know why we are stooping so low, why the Canadian Parliament is being forced to follow the dictates of a foreign Government and impose a tax on Quebec and other Canadian companies, a tax which will be paid by Canadian workers.

Mr. Speaker, Quebec is hit as hard as the other provinces. For instance, the Saguenay—Lac-Saint-Jean region unfortunately is represented by four Conservative Members: yet not one of them has spoken against this measure. The forest industry is a major employer in that region and it will be severely affected by the decision of the Government. Abitibi is also represented by two Conservative Members, yet we have not heard a peep from them even though workers in those ridings may indeed lose their jobs. We must bear in mind that people like our grandparents fought against annexation by the United States. There are people who took up arms to keep this from happening. Even Quebecers, who sometimes like to set themselves apart from the rest of Canada, even Quebecers joined up with people from the other provinces to ensure that Canada would not become an American state. But as luck would have it, the landslide in 1984 brought us Chicken Little who was elected Prime Minister, so that today, in 1987, the debate is on legislation and decisions that are not being made by the elected representatives of the Canadian people.

Yesterday, I heard the Hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Hamelin) say it was the best possible settlement. There was nothing else we could do. I say that when people get to the point where they say there is nothing else they can do, there is something they can do: they can resign and make way for others who are prepared to protect and support the interests of Canadians.

Mr. Speaker, all this bullying and today's decision to agree to impose a 15 per cent tax on the lumber industry, a decision forced on us by the United States, all this will lead to further pressure. Tomorrow, the Americans will say: We don't like your unemployment insurance system, and you are going to change this and that. Conservative Members will say, with their Leader: Yes Sir, Mr. President, anything you say. And it will be yes, Sir, again, when the Americans start criticizing something else. For instance our health insurance plan, the best in this country, which enables all Canadians to be insured, whatever their income and gives them access to the best medical care, and helps them survive. With the kind of arrangement the Conservatives are accepting on bended knee today, tomorrow the Americans may well be telling us, since they do not have this kind of health insurance: We think you should get rid of your health insurance plan because you are competing unfairly with such and such an industry. That is what it will come to, Mr. Speaker.

When I think that the Hon. Member for Lévis (Mr. Fontaine)—oh, I'm not surprised. He is never on the right track, which is why the shipyards in Lauzon are in such poor shape. And speaking of tracks, Mr. Speaker, I have the impression he thinks Lauzon makes trains instead of ships, which is probably why the Hon. Member is so confused.

Mr. Speaker, I realize I don't have much time left. I want to make it clear that I intend to support my Leader in his battle to ensure that this Bill is not passed and that Canadians will continue to hold their heads high and decide for themselves what they will do to protect our lumber industry and uphold the dignity of this country.

DAY CARE CENTRES

GOVERNMENT'S RESPONSIBILITY

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, last week the Minister of National Health and Welfare tried to minimize Canada's urgent need for a comprehensive system of quality day care services. The Minister attempted to shift this responsibility onto families by making the most of the feelings of guilt and ambivalence of working parents who must leave their children in day care nurseries. The Minister's message to those parents is clear: he is not prepared to help such families despite the fact that they now form the majority of Canadian families.

The Minister stated that, in his opinion, day care services for children are a provincial responsibility, and he thinks it is rather interesting that the provinces should expect the federal Government to show leadership in this sector. Such an attitude flies in the face of the national leadership tradition which prevails in the case of all other major social programs in Canada.

On Thursday and Friday he will be meeting with his provincial counterparts to talk about day care. Mr. Speaker, I sincerely urge the Government to give this important task to a Cabinet member who can fully appreciate our needs and provide the kind of strong national leadership required in these circumstances.

MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

CONTENT OF HOUSEHOLDER MAILING

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, it will not take me 60 seconds to express my indignation and disgust concerning an example of a blatant abuse of public funds.

In the Member's Manual, our bible for honest and fair guidance in the exercise of some of our privileges, Members are reminded that the contents of their Householders should be non-partisan.

I have a recent Householder that is, for all intents and purposes, a political mail-out paid for by the people of Canada. At one point it refers to Conservatives as stupid and insensitive, which is blatantly untrue and unacceptable partisanship. Page after page is critical of the Government's sincere attempts to strengthen Canada's economy and our standard of living. I find this to be the most disgusting, politically partisan publication I have seen since coming to this Chamber. It cannot go unchallenged.

In case you are wondering from whence it came, call the office of the Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy).

VIA RAIL

RED CAPS LAID OFF IN WESTERN CANADA

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I want to bring to the attention of the House the indignation and anger felt in western Canada with respect to the fact that VIA Rail was allowed to lay off all its Red Caps in western Canada while Red caps were kept on in major centres in eastern Canada. This is another insult to western Canadians by the Progressive Conservative Government, and another attack on groups of people who least deserve to be attacked, including the disabled and pensioners, many of whom are CN and CP pass holders who make good use of Red Caps. They have been basically told no longer to use train service, particularly if they are from western Canada, because VIA has been allowed to lay off the Red Caps.

Furthermore, the new equipment for VIA Rail still has not been ordered, and I heard a rumour this morning that while VIA Rail claims not to have enough equipment it is actually contemplating leasing out some of its equipment elsewhere. I call on the Government to order the new equipment and take action on the discrimination against western Canada and the elimination of the important symbol and service provided by Red Caps.

FISHERIES

SEAL POPULATION GROWTH—DAMAGE COSTS SUFFERED BY FISHERMEN

Mr. Lawrence I. O'Neil (Cape Breton Highlands—Canso): Mr. Speaker, one year ago I appeared before the Malouf Royal Commission on Sealing and outlined the serious costs associated with not arresting the growth of the seal population. Fishermen whom I represent are suffering because seals are damaging nets and traps, contributing to the spread of parasites, and consuming fish.

One seal consumes 3,200 pounds of fish annually. There are in excess of 100,000 grey seals consuming millions of pounds of fish each year off Atlantic Canada.

At a time of conservation of stocks and increasing emphasis on quality, millions of dollars worth of fish are being lost. The loss in terms of jobs is also substantial.

In my view the situation requires a seal cull as soon as possible. The issue is critically important to the Atlantic Canadian fishery and all of Atlantic Canada.

HUMAN RIGHTS

FATE OF RAOUL WALLENBERG

Mr. Roland de Corneille (Eglinton—Lawrence): Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate you on permitting an exhibition of paintings by Canadian artist Armand Vallée in honour of Raoul Wallenberg, here in the House of Commons. Forty-one years ago this month, during World War II, Raoul Wallenberg of Sweden was seized by Soviet police. He was in Hungary where it was his task to direct efforts to save Hungarian Jews from deportation to Nazi death camps.

• (1405)

Raoul Wallenberg showed tremendous courage and total disregard for his own safety by saving an estimated 100,000 Jewish men, women, and children. He has been kept prisoner in the Soviet Union since 1945, with reports insisting he is still alive. This House of Commons in 1985 unanimously passed a Bill which made Raoul Wallenberg an honorary Canadian citizen. At that time we also encouraged the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) to take all diplomatic steps necessary to secure his release.

I urge the Government to increase its efforts to save Raoul Wallenberg. This violation of human rights by the Soviet Union cannot be tolerated. We must show the Soviet Union that Canada has not and will not forget this hero to humanity.

POLITICAL PARTIES

DESIRABLE OBJECTIVES

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Last weekend, Mr. Speaker, the socialists convened their hordes of renegades, former foes and political upstarts from Manitoba and Saskatchewan in an attempt to cajole Quebecers and win votes on rather theoretical subjects. Their efforts fell somewhat short and the socialists are still divided on the language issue.

When it comes to Quebec, Mr. Speaker, the socialists might take a more practical approach and do something to create jobs. Not to offend his Manitoba colleague, the leader of the socialist party spoke against the F-18 project in Montreal, to the detriment of Quebec.

During their weekend meet the socialists also failed to mention the economic fall-outs of the NATO program in the Labrador region, or the dissident views of Newfoundland socialist party leader Peter Fenwick concerning armaments and peace.

Mr. Speaker, the socialists should show more concern for job creation than for theories and advocate the same policy throughout Canada.

INVESTMENT CANADA

WEST KOOTENAY POWER AND LIGHT COMPANY—APPROVAL OF SALE TO UNITED STATES CORPORATION

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, Investment Canada recently approved the sale of West Kootenay Power and Light to an American firm, Utilicorp. of Kansas City, Missouri, U.S.A. West Kootenay Power is a crucial western Canadian utility involving both the generation of hydroelectric power and strategic water rights in the Kootenay region of British Columbia.

Investment Canada approved this sale even while the B.C. Utilities Commission hearings were taking place. At the very least the B.C. Utilities Commission should be allowed to complete its deliberations and bring down its report prior to Investment Canada approving this utility's sale to a foreign company.

I protest the undemocratic way in which the Investment Canada decision was made, essentially behind closed doors, with Parliament in recess, and beyond access by the elected representatives of the people of Canada. It should be noted that this decision by Investment Canada is in direct contravention of the commitment of the federal Government that Canadian resources should be Canadian owned.

PENITENTIARIES

OPENING OF ATLANTIC INSTITUTION

Mr. W. R. Bud Jardine (Northumberland—Miramichi): Mr. Speaker, this Friday, January 23, the Atlantic Institution will be officially opened by the Solicitor General (Mr. Kelleher). This institution is a maximum security prison located in an economically depressed area of my riding which has a chronically high rate of unemployment.

The project was initiated by the previous Government at this site to satisfy a requirement by Correctional Services Canada for additional units, and to create jobs. I thank the previous Government for that. It was completed by the present Government for the same two reasons—requirement and long-term employment. We are most grateful. Surely all Hon. Members will find no fault with that logic and I dare say will continue to lend their support to similar institutions in other areas of the country with the same requirements—need and employment.

REFUGEES

REFUGEE APPLICATIONS BACKLOG—CALL FOR NEW LEGISLATION

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, on May 21, 1986, the former Minister of State for Immigration promised to table new legislation in the fall session to deal with the refugee determination process and the growing backlog of cases. This followed the report of the Plaut Commission which was completed on April 17, 1985, and the reports of the Standing Committee on Immigration tabled November 7 and December 19, 1985. Both reports recommended legislation to deal quickly and fairly with refugee applications. In this way the Government could avoid large backlogs and discourage fraudulent claims.

It is now January 20, 1987, well beyond the target for tabling this legislation, and still no Bill is available. As a result, the backlog continues and phoney claims are encouraged. When will the Government act to deal with this important matter? It is well beyond the time to do so.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

ACID RAIN—NEED FOR ACTION BY UNITED STATES

Mr. Stan Darling (Parry Sound—Muskoka): Mr. Speaker, many Canadians are concerned about recent commitments to acid rain abatement from south of the border. While the United States claims to have spent over $6 billion on clean coal technology in 1986, Environment Canada officials are currently investigating whether actual acid rain abatement will occur. The Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) is closely monitoring the situation and shares the concern of every Canadian on the acid rain issue.

Our Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) will reiterate the need for acid rain controls when he meets with the Vice-President of the United States on Wednesday, and again when the President comes to Ottawa in early April.

For our part, Canada's plan to reduce 1980 sulphur dioxide emission levels by 50 per cent by 1994 is bang on target. This is the first Government to deal with the issue effectively. We will continue to seek an agreement with the United States on transboundary pollution.

SHIPBUILDING

PROPOSED CONSTRUCTION OF POLAR 8 ICE-BREAKER

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, the federal Government is reportedly again on the brink of announcing the construction of a Polar 8 ice-breaker. After more than a decade of indecision, confusion, and broken promises by both Liberal and Conservative Governments, the Government is apparently still toying with various design and construction options. Most recently it appears that the design may come from a foreign-owned company at a cost of $120 million more than designs put forward by Canadian firms. Ten years and millions of dollars worth of taxpayer-paid research may be discarded.

This ongoing saga is not amusing to the shipbuilding industry, or to the skilled labourers who need work badly. I implore the Government to move quickly, award the contract, and put our skilled shipbuilders back to work. Let us get on with strategies to renew Canada's shipbuilding industry across the country.

AGRICULTURE

APPOINTMENT OF FEDERAL APIARIST ADVOCATED

Mr. Lee Clark (Brandon—Souris): Mr. Speaker, there are almost 20,000 honey producers in Canada, nearly 5,000 of whom live on the Prairies. Unfortunately, like so many agricultural producers today, they are having a difficult time getting a fair price and establishing new markets for their honey.

While there are many problems which have to be resolved in this industry I think that recreating the position of federal apiarist would be an important first step. Unfortunately, this position was cut from the Department of Agriculture in the 1960s.

Part of the federal apiarist's job would be to enhance interprovincial trade. Furthermore, this person would be of great assistance to beekeepers who are now trying to expand honey exports to other countries, particularly in Europe and the Middle East. Ensuring that Canada maintains a high quality product for export would also be part of the job description.

Finally, I think that this person could become a federal ombudsman for Canadian honey producers and as such his or her assistance would be greatly appreciated.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

TREATMENT OF PENSIONERS

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland—Kent): Mr. Speaker, I wish to voice my strong disappointment in the Government for its treatment of pensioners who have had their UI benefits cut.

The December 5 statement of the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Bouchard) has only added to the confusion. Though the Minister directed his Department to re-examine cases in which people made retirement decisions on the basis of inaccurate information from federal government sources, some UI offices are telling pensioners to wait because they do not have enough information to know how to deal with their cases. It is also known that benefits will not be restored until legislation is passed in the House, something which is not expected until April.

The Government is to blame for these delays. It decided to wait until the Forget Commission reported, only to ignore its recommendations and only to allow some of the pensioners to reclaim their UI benefits.

The Minister's December 5 statement is unacceptable. The delays and hardship which our pensioners have had to endure are even more unacceptable.

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

PROSPECTS FOR DRUG RESEARCH

Mr. Don Ravis (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, there is an ongoing debate in the country regarding the need for more primary research to enhance our economic recovery through exports and to reduce our brain-drain.

Last week I had the opportunity to meet with faculty and graduate students at the University of Saskatchewan College of Pharmacy. They are looking forward to conducting drug research at this university in Saskatoon, and to finding research jobs in their own country.

• (1415)

Thanks to the opposition Parties and the media, the drug legislation debate has only focused on increased costs, rather than on long-term medical and technological benefits. I particularly regret the frustration felt by our seniors. Doris Campbell, a quadriplegic suffering from Lou Gehrig's disease, stated in The Winnipeg Sun:

> The issue is not whether a new drug will cost you a few dollars more, the issue is developing cures through research to save the lives of Canadians.

When research and new discoveries are under way at our universities and laboratories by Canadian scientists, then we can be proud for making the right decision.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

RESIGNATION OF HON. MEMBER FOR YUKON

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am honoured today to rise along with my friends, the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner), and the Leader of the NDP (Mr. Broadbent), to pay a tribute to the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen).

His resignation was greeted with sadness on this side, and obvious relief on the other side. Erik Nielsen has known triumph and tragedy, attack and applause. None of these was able to distract him from his chosen course. He is one of the remaining Members of the small band who served with such distinction under the leadership of the late Right Hon. John G. Diefenbaker in government and opposition, in good times and bad.

Words are inadequate tools to express the debt owed to Erik Nielsen by Parliament, by this Party, and by this country.

Occasionally the halls of Parliament bear witness to skill and dedication far beyond the normal. I will acknowledge that from time to time Erik was partisan. I owe him a special debt because I came into the House as a brand new Member never having been here before. I sat down over there, after walking in for the first time, not even knowing the sounds, and what have you. It is an intimidating experience to be here for the first time, and also to be here as Leader of a political Party. I had a few rough days or weeks in the process—very rough, in fact. One night I called my mother to ask her how I was doing. She said, "Brian, you are doing just great. You are doing fine. But when Mr. Nielsen says sit down, sit down."

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mulroney: Erik Nielsen as a parliamentarian is worthy to stand with the giants of the past. Those of us who had the good fortune to sit with him in the House must know that this was a man of no ordinary compass.

Hon. Erik Nielsen

[Translation]

He was fully devoted to the service of his country. He flew with the allied forces during World War II and upon his return from Europe he studied law and opened his own law office in Whitehorse.

His first election was controversial, and perhaps this was an indication of the kind of very tumultuous political career he was going to have. Throughout his 29 years on the parliamentary scene he has always been right where the action was—or certainly never far from it.

[English]

If there is one word characterizing Erik Nielsen's approach to life—irrespective of partisan differences—that word is duty. He made no excuses for himself and accepted none from others. He has always been relentless in the demands he placed on himself, holding down at one time the posts of President of the Privy Council, Deputy Prime Minister, and Minister of National Defence.

Erik Nielsen for 29 years epitomized the best qualities of parliamentary democracy. He enjoyed friendships on all sides of the House. I appreciated, on behalf of all Members, the generous comments of the Leader of the NDP yesterday, and of the Leader of the Opposition last evening. That was in the finest traditions of Canadian parliamentary life. As I say, Erik enjoyed friendships on all sides of the House, in spite of his reputation as a rough and tumble parliamentary fighter.

Erik has not always been the tough, relentless prosecutor pictured by the media. When circumstances warranted, he has frequently been known to temper the wind to the shorn lambs on the other side. Parliament will miss him, because he is a man who understood Parliament, and who worked tirelessly to make it more effective.

May I express the hope that he can be persuaded to serve Canada in the future in other ways.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (1420)

Mr. Mulroney: I know I speak for all Hon. Members of the House in that regard.

May I say personally that I shall miss his loyal service and his unflinching courage. He has been a very good friend and a very valued colleague.

In peace and in war, Erik Nielsen has served Canada and all of us honourably and well.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, may I respond to the words of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) in rising today to pay tribute to a man who has served the House of Commons more than half his adult life, indeed almost 30 years.

Hon. Erik Nielsen

I have had the privilege of knowing Erik Nielsen even before that because our law firm at the time used to handle his appellate work out of the Yukon. I have a genuine respect for him, and probably know him as well as anyone on our side of the House.

He is a very private man. He is a man who has suffered deep personal tragedy in his life and has overcome it. Few have known loyalty to friends, to Party, to cause, and particularly to country as has Erik Nielsen.

Publicly, yes, indeed he was a fierce partisan. We on this side of the House, particularly when we were on that side of the House, felt the sting of his attacks on innumerable occasions.

No one knows the rules of the House better than Erik Nielsen. No one knows how to use them better, and no one can use them with more effect, precision, and from time to time even ruthlessness.

[Translation]

When he led the Opposition in 1983 he proved to be a fearsome opponent and displayed great skill in his attacks against the Government then in office. He had for this House an intuition which was practically unequalled during his heydays here in Parliament.

[English]

He has a reputation for being terse in his comments both to the media and indeed on the floor of the House. He has many secrets. I happen to know a few of them—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): —and that may be my only protection, because I understand he is thinking of writing his memoirs.

I have read a lot of political books in the last year or so—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): —but this is one I will really be looking forward to reading.

We call him "Yukon Erik". There is no more beautiful riding or territory in Canada than the Yukon. Erik Neilsen has a great love for that territory, for its rivers and lakes, for the Ogilvie Range, and indeed for the tranquility of his cottage on Quiet Lake.

When I was Parliamentary Secretary to the late Arthur Laing—he was Minister of Northern Affairs—I used to be paired on several occasions with Erik as we travelled around his constituency. What a young man of faith I was; I rode with him in his aeroplane as we travelled over his constituency. One morning we were taking off from the Stewart River and we nearly did not make it. To use Erik's air lingo, "we nearly bought it", and I have never known to this day whether we were really in trouble or whether Erik Nielsen was testing me out.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): This brings us to the reminder that he was a fine pilot. He was a great bomber pilot during the war. He won the Distinguished Flying Cross.

When in May, 1985, the House was paying tribute to our Forces on the fortieth anniversary of VE-Day in Europe, Mr. Nielsen was sitting in the chair now occupied by the Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn). I do not think any of us ever heard a more eloquent tribute to those who fought and sacrificed for Canada during both wars than what we heard from the lips of Erik Nielsen.

• (1425)

I think all Members will confirm that, whether we agreed with him or not, and in this corner of the House more often than not we did not agree, he commanded our respect and even, from time to time, our admiration. I admire him particularly because he has dedicated his life to public service in war and in peace without flinching, without favour, without fear, without compromise, and with an absolute and total dedication to this House and to our country.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, we have a very interesting tradition and rule in this House. It is an unstated tradition that we say absolutely nothing good about one of our political opponents while he or she is in office if we can possibly avoid doing that. And then we do just the opposite, of course, when a person leaves the House of Commons. We find ways only to say good and honest things about that individual. For some of us it is more difficult than for others, but we avoid putting emphasis at all upon those matters on which one happens to disagree.

I would like to begin by joining with the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) in saying that Erik Nielsen is a man who served his country well in time of need when it was singularly necessary to have men and women come to the defence of this nation in wartime to protect the liberties and freedoms we are now exercising. Erik Nielsen was at all times there front and centre doing, in an exemplary way, what was required.

After that he became a local politician and went from there to being elected to the House of Commons. He has sat on this side of the House as a vigorous member of the Opposition. He has been a member of the Cabinet, and Deputy Prime Minister. For a few months he had an aberration of common sense and he actually became Leader of a Party. He quickly recovered, made it very clear that that was a temporary job, and he got out of it.

I do want to note at this time, however, that there are at least two other people in this House who will know that Erik Nielsen regarded the leading quality of any Member of Parliament was that of unquestioning loyalty to his Leader. I think that that is one of those commendable principles which Erik Nielsen followed.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: We all have our anecdotes about Erik Nielsen. The Leader of the Opposition talked about visiting the Yukon. I remember the first time I was there. I had the pleasure of flying over Mr. Nielsen's—I do not know if it is his cottage or his permanent home—I think it is his campsite—his location of recreation, and a beautiful site it was. I came back, told him, and was told something about an attempt that was made to hit my small plane with rocks. Had it been anyone else who told me the story I would have been sure he was kidding.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: But, being the partisan Tory that Erik was, I am sure he made the effort. I want to tell my friends in the Conservative Party that even then he was a loyal and dedicated Tory.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

• (1430)

Mr. Broadbent: He was, as has been said, devoted to this House. He did everything with a great deal of enthusiasm. Although on policy matters, as I had the occasion to say yesterday, I agreed with him on perhaps only 5 per cent of matters, I respect his commitment to what he believes in, and I admire his total dedication to the supremacy in our system of parliamentary democracy itself.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[Translation]

THE ADMINISTRATION

EXTENT OF PRIME MINISTER'S INFORMATION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. In his statement on Sunday, the Prime Minister told reporters twice that the Minister of State for Transport had been forced to resign because of facts that had been brought to his attention. The Prime Minister did not say allegations or accusations but facts. The obvious question is: What are those facts? Is the Prime Minister going to make a full statement before the House? We are talking about the resignation of a Minister of the Crown, and Canadians have a right to know the reasons for that resignation.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I said that certain facts were brought to my attention which I checked as soon as possible, and once I was fully informed, I took immediate action by asking the Minister to resign and asking for a full police investigation. All the information I had was immediately made available to the police. I think I have fulfilled my obligation to Parliament—

[English]

REQUEST FOR PUBLIC INQUIRY INTO GRANTING OF OERLIKON CONTRACT

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, we are having some difficulty getting at this matter. We are not talking about potential illegality nor are we talking about potential criminal events. We are talking about whether or not a Minister acted properly.

It is not illegal that one of the Prime Minister's key Tory organizers is now a director of Oerlikon's land subsidiary; it is not illegal that one of the key Tory organizers in Quebec is a paid lobbyist for Oerlikon; it is not illegal that a former member of the Prime Minister's staff is now working for Oerlikon. We are talking about other facts that have been revealed in the last 24 hours that, in our view, demand a public inquiry.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Once again, will the Prime Minister order this inquiry so that the facts which may have been persuasive to him can become public and Canadians may have a full, impartial view of everything that went on in Saint-Jean surrounding the granting of the Oerlikon contract?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think the overriding concern is the protection of the public interest. Having initiated a police inquiry of the most complete nature, I think it is important that we allow the RCMP to conduct this inquiry fully and to the very best of its abilities within the earliest time frame as it always does.

All of the information I had I conveyed to the police immediately upon requesting that they conduct a complete investigation. Of course, I do not establish the parameters of any inquiry. Because it is a complete inquiry, the police are free to go wherever the evidence leads them in the search for any wrongdoing of any kind. I do not think that anything ought to be done that would in any way inhibit that process. I believe the Canadian people want that kind of decisive action taken. They have received such action and can look for no better independent agency to conduct this kind of full and complete inquiry than the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

DISCHARGE OF MINISTERIAL DUTIES

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, if we were merely talking about the comportment of an individual, whether he were innocent or guilty of criminal charges, then the presumption of innocence about which the Prime Minister spoke yesterday and the RCMP inquiry might be relevant. However, this goes beyond that. We are talking about the proper conduct of a Minister in the course of fulfilling his duties. There must have been something that persuaded the Prime Minister to act the way he did.

We are not talking about a private RCMP inquiry that should properly be private to preserve the presumption of innocence. We are talking about a public inquiry that can re-establish confidence in the administration of the country's business. Once again, will the Prime Minister not yield and grant the country a public inquiry so that that confidence may be restored?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, it is not a question of a reluctance to yield in any way. It is a desire to do the right thing for the country. I think the action I have taken, both in requesting the Minister's resignation immediately and in initiating a full and complete Royal Canadian Mounted Police inquiry, is exactly the way one should go.

It may very well be that in the future, as the police inquiry goes on, other action will be required by this House, the Government, or the police. It may very well be that the action undertaken now will result in criminal prosecutions launched at some time in the future against some individual, in which case it is clear that nothing ought to be done that would compromise the ability of the RCMP to prosecute fully the initiatives they will have undertaken. It is my desire to make sure that the Canadian public interest is well protected, consistent with our obligation toward the presumption of innocence. I acted completely, fully and effectively in the action I took.

INFORMATION TRANSMITTED TO JEAN BAZIN

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Prime Minister. On August 25 a Mr. Lassonde wrote Jean Bazin's law firm, Byers Casgrain, expressing concern about irregularities that occurred in the land transfers in Saint-Jean. Is the Prime Minister informing the House that between August, 1986, and Tuesday, January 13, 1987, his good friend Jean Bazin never once mentioned these irregularities to the Prime Minister or his office?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I indicated my position and the information I had in the public statement I made on Sunday. Jean Bazin is a lawyer in Montreal and, I understand, is the President-elect of the Canadian Bar Association. He is a senior partner in Byers Casgrain and represents, as all lawyers have in the past, clients in a client-solicitor relationship, and was acting in good faith on behalf of his client, as have both the Leader of the Opposition and I in the past.

I made public the facts that were made available to me when they were made available. Because of Mr. Bazin's distinguished career in the law and as President-elect of the Canadian Bar Association, should anything have occurred, I presume he would have acted in the interests of his client pursuant to instructions received from his client. All I can tell the House are the facts, and those were the ones that were set out in the statement on Sunday.

MONEYS ALLEGEDLY RECEIVED BY RIDING ASSOCIATION PRESIDENT

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, yesterday in a response the Prime Minister denied the existence of a specific letter concerning the—

Some Hon. Members: No, he did not.

Mr. Frith: He said he did not know of the existence of a specific letter in which Oerlikon alleges that $970,000 was channelled to the president of the Saint-Jean riding association. Will the Prime Minister inform the House whether or not Mr. Bazin, when he met with the Prime Minister's principal secretary on January 13, informed the principal secretary of the allegations concerning the $970,000 being channelled to the president of the PC riding association?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I want it to be clearly on the record that there was a substantial error in the prefatory remarks made by the Hon. Member in regard to yesterday's statement in the House of Commons. I know my hon. friend would want to withdraw that in the interests of accuracy.

• (1440)

The information imparted by Mr. Bazin to my principal secretary was provided to me and immediately turned over to the RCMP. That resulted in two things happening: (a), the removal of the Minister and, (b), the initiation of a full and complete police inquiry. That is exactly what came to my attention and that is exactly what I did in the public interest.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: I might say to all Hon. Members that the Chair, in hearing the Hon. Member for Sudbury, took the view that if an error was made in the beginning of the question, the Hon. Member took steps to correct it during the question. Certainly that is the way the Chair took his comment.

CONTENTS OF AUGUST, 1986, LETTER

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Given Mr. Bazin's position with the land acquisition firm related to Oerlikon, given his position of counsel for Byers Casgrain, it seems almost inconceivable that the August 12 letter just alluded to would not have been known to Mr. Bazin some months ago. I would like to ask the Prime Minister if, in his conversations with the Prime Minister's principal secretary last week, Mr. Bazin drew to the attention of Mr. Roy the contents of that August letter?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am not acquainted with the dates my hon. friend mentions except to say this. Information imparted to me and what I have seen indicated to me there were transactions that took place which appeared to be odious and completely unacceptable, and at variance with the kind of conduct Canadians expect and are entitled to receive. It was for that reason that I initiated a full RCMP investigation and I know the police will prosecute whomever they deem to be involved in this matter, as they should.

REQUEST THAT PRIME MINISTER QUERY MR. BAZIN'S KNOWLEDGE OF LETTER

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I think that is about the third time the Prime Minister has not dealt with the specific question being asked. I would like to ask it in a somewhat different way. He has already indicated that Mr. Bazin should become a member of the Senate of Canada. Yesterday, in a different context, he alluded to the possibility of obstruction of justice if certain information was not brought forward at the time it ought to have been. Can he assure the House that he will find out if Mr. Bazin knew the contents of that letter written last August which called into question the land transaction, at that time or any time since then, prior to the discussions which took place with his principal secretary last week?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, no, I will not find out; the police will find out. That is exactly what this is all about. If anything was done wrong they will prosecute.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

REQUEST THAT PRIME MINISTER MAKE INQUIRIES PRIOR TO MR. BAZIN BECOMING SENATOR

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, it is not the RCMP who are naming someone to the Senate of Canada; it is the Prime Minister. He has the responsibility to get an answer to that.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: Since there is every reason to believe that Mr. Bazin ought to have known of the contents, and I will not put it stronger than that, a long time ago, will the Prime Minister take steps to ensure that before Mr. Bazin is sworn in as a Senator the Prime Minister will find out if he knew the contents of that letter?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the information we are considering today was brought to my attention by my principal secretary who received it from Mr. Bazin. That is clearly, in my judgment, the act of someone who wants the truth to be known and action taken. My hon. friend will not want to set aside consideration of the solicitor-client relationship which exists. The reason for my action was to make sure that the most independent police authority of which I am aware, namely, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, be given a full mandate to begin the complete inquiry which is necessary. I am not saying this in an argumentative manner but my hon. friend appears to be in disagreement with that approach. All I can indicate to him is that I believe it is the proper way to proceed.

All of the information made available to me was immediately given to the police with instructions to initiate the fullest investigation. I say to my friend, not in any argumentative way, that if he has any information, or if any member of the Opposition has any information, give it to the police so the prosecution can be ongoing, because that is the way it should be done.

Mr. Broadbent: It is a political responsibility.

DEFENCE CONTRACT TENDERING PROCESS—POSSIBLE ROLE OF MR. BAZIN

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister as well. I would like to ask him if he knows personally whether at any time during the tendering process for the LLAD system Mr. Bazin acted as a lobbyist or representative for the firm of Oerlikon, making representations to any senior official of the Government to obtain the contract for Oerlikon?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have no knowledge of that at all except I can tell my hon. friend that Mr. Bazin, as I say, is a lawyer from Montreal who represents clients. I am not aware of that client list but I can tell him that he is not a lobbyist, he is a distinguished attorney. He may from time to time represent people here or elsewhere. However, I am not personally acquainted with any of the suggestions made by my friend.

INQUIRY WHETHER PRIME MINISTER DISPOSED TO ASK MR. BAZIN TO DELAY BEING SWORN IN AS SENATOR

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the same question I asked the Prime Minister yesterday.

Considering the present controversy involving Mr. Bazin, would the Prime Minister agree to call his friend Mr. Bazin and ask him to voluntarily postpone his swearing-in as a member of the Senate until this investigation has come to an end, for the same reason he decided to ask one of his colleagues to step aside temporarily, as he said, as a Member of Cabinet until the investigation is over with? Is he prepared to make that telephone call now?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, as far as I know, there is no controversy, to quote my hon. friend, involving Mr. Bazin. The facts about his professional involvement in a matter were brought to the attention of the public, the same facts were brought to my attention and I immediately asked for a police investigation. And no one will receive special treatment in this respect: neither you nor I nor Mr. Bazin. All the facts are important and must be considered by the police, as far as Mr. Bazin is concerned, and I assume the same applies to anyone who has information on this case.

INQUIRY WHETHER PRIME MINISTER WILLING TO POSTPONE MR. BAZIN'S ENTRY TO SENATE UNTIL RCMP INVESTIGATION COMPLETED

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Prime Minister and it has to do with the same point, specifically.

As a lawyer and member of the Oerlikon board of directors, Mr. Bazin may have been entitled to keep to himself the information he was bound to have had concerning this land deal and the possibility of improprieties taking place in Saint-Jean during the period from August to January when the Prime Minister's Office was told about this matter.

With respect to a future senator, keeping in mind his character and involvement, we wonder whether the Government, which is led by the Prime Minister, should accept that Mr. Bazin be sworn in before the investigation has been completed. In light of this, is the Prime Minister prepared to delay Mr. Bazin's Senate swearing-in until the Royal Canadian Mounted Police have completed their investigation?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I may be mistaken but I have always been under the impression that according to Canadian tradition a Senate appointment becomes effective the day it is announced. The equivalent of the appointment itself constitutes the swearing-in and all the necessary requirements so that the appointee may become a member of the Senate.

That being so, in referring to Mr. Bazin my friend is making certain allegations which, I would suggest, are dangerous and do not seem to be substantiated or supported by documents.

In any case, the only way to analyze and study these facts so that justice be done is to ask, not you nor me but the RCMP, Canada's police force, to make an independent investigation to do justice and shed light in this case.

• (1450)

REQUEST THAT ENTRY TO SENATE BE POSTPONED

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, Mr. Bazin was a director of the company which was informed in August that there were apparent improprieties connected with its purchase of land in Saint-Jean. As director, he would presumably have been informed of this. In declaring the innocence of the former junior Minister of Transport, the Prime Minister nonetheless asked him to resign. Therefore, while accepting at this time the innocence of the prospective Senator, Mr. Jean Bazin, would the Prime Minister not act accordingly and defer his entry into the Senate until this matter is resolved by a parliamentary inquiry, a judicial inquiry, or the RCMP?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the question is essentially the same in English as it was in French. The answer is essentially the same as well. My friend mentions that there ought to be no presumption of guilt, and he is right. There is none, in any case.

Mr. Riis: How about the Minister?

Mr. Mulroney: Neither for the Minister. He is a Minister of the Crown.

Mr. Riis: You dumped him.

Mr. Broadbent: You fired him.

Mr. Mulroney: I indicated that that in no way implied a presumption of guilt.

Mr. Broadbent: Well, hold up the Senate appointment as well.

Mr. Mulroney: I do not think my hon. friend suggests otherwise. There is only one way that I am aware of to ensure that the facts with regard to any prosecution, any violation of any statute of any kind, be made available to the proper authorities. That is not by the Hon. Member, not by the Leader of the Opposition, or not by me, but by the RCM Police so that a full and exhaustive inquiry can be made and whatever charges are appropriate can be laid against the appropriate persons.

[Translation]

REQUEST FOR PUBLIC INQUIRY

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. In the case of the inquiry involving the former Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, the Prime Minister initiated a public judicial inquiry, chaired by Chief Justice Parker. However, in the case of the former Minister of State for Transport, he has asked for a police investigation, which means that there will be no public disclosure. Why the double standard? Why isn't the public entitled to a public inquiry in this particular case?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, as I said before, the information brought to my attention was entirely different in each case. In this particular case, the information was immediately brought to the attention of the police. That was a value judgement which I as Prime Minister made very quickly, and I think that was the right thing to do.

INQUIRY WHY GOVERNMENT DECIDED NOT TO ESTABLISH JUDICIAL INQUIRY

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, in justifying his decision to have a judicial inquiry, on May 16 the Prime Minister said in the House, and I quote: "I think we have acted properly. I would think that most Canadians would applaud the appointment of an impartial person." Why has the Prime Minister dropped the idea of a public judicial inquiry? Why would the public no longer be interested in finding out how the Government is running this country?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have dropped nothing. I opted for the instrument I considered to be effective and most appropriate in the circumstances, considering the facts that were brought to my attention, and that was an investigation by the RCMP, where the police establishes—

[English]

An Hon. Member: Cover up.

[Translation]

Mr. Mulroney: A Liberal Member says this is a cover-up. He doesn't trust the RCMP—

[English]

The Liberals apparently do not believe that the RCMP are independent. We do believe that they are independent and competent.

SCOPE OF RCMP INQUIRY

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Solicitor General, the Minister responsible for the RCMP. Will the Minister confirm that the scope of the RCMP inquiry in the Bissonnette affair is limited solely to potential breaches of federal law and does not include questions of morals, public ethics, or conflicts of interest? Will the Minister confirm as well that, if no charges are laid as a result of the RCMP inquiry, the public will never learn the facts underlying this whole sleazy affair? How can he justify that?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we indicated that the inquiry conducted by the RCMP would be a complete inquiry. That is exactly the kind it will be. There have been no requests or instructions of any kind imposed upon the police. Quite appropriately, they have been given complete freedom to do exactly as they think appropriate. They will follow the facts wherever they lead.

[Translation]

QUERY CONCERNING WHO WILL UNDERTAKE INQUIRY

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Prime Minister confirmed that this matter involved not only criminal law but, to quote the Prime Minister, morals and perhaps public ethics. Considering the fact that the RCMP cannot investigate matters of morals or public ethics or conflict of interest, who is going to investigate these fundamental issues? God the Father?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I really don't see what the Hon. Member is worried about. I said in response to a question by the Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques that we were not excluding any other options but that we were faced with a certain number of facts. On the basis of these facts I decided that the most appropriate and most effective instrument would be an RCMP investigation. The RCMP will conduct a full investigation, and we shall see whether any further action would be appropriate, but for the time being, I think we should support what is being done by the RCMP.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

ACID RAIN—CANADIAN POSITION

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment. Many Canadians agree with the recent statement of an American Senator that it is time for the Canadian Government to get tough with the United States over acid rain. Will the Minister advise the House what action the Canadian Government intends to take with the United States on the issue of acid rain? Is there anything which Canada can do other than shout, scream, and write angry letters?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the approach of shouting, screaming, and writing angry letters was taken by the previous Government and it got us nowhere.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: You're really making progress.

Mr. McMillan: In fact, by June, 1982, the Government of the day broke off negotiations with the U.S. Government on that subject.

As I have said publicly, we are disappointed with the lack of progress in the United States, specifically with regard to the Canada-U.S. acid rain envoys' report. We are going to insist tomorrow when we meet with Vice-President Bush that that report be implemented in its entirety as the President of the United States indicated would be the case. We believe that Canada must come to the issue with our hands clean.

I have met all day with the Environment Ministers from across the country who, with the federal Government, have renewed their commitment made in February, 1985, to slash acid rain causing emissions in Canada by 50 per cent by 1994 based on 1980 figures. In that connection the federal Government hopes to sign bilateral accords with the individual provinces before the President and the Prime Minister meet later this year.

OERLIKON LAND TRANSACTION—MONEYS PAID TO P.C. RIDING ASSOCIATION PRESIDENT

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Is he able to assure the House today that none of the nearly $1 million which was paid to Normand Ouellette, the President of the P.C. riding association in Saint-Jean, Quebec, has found its way into the accounts of the P.C. Party of Canada?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, that is for the RCMP to investigate. If any of the money involved went to the NDP, the Liberals, or the Conservatives, that should be prosecuted as well.

• (1500)

Mr. Speaker: I should point out to Hon. Members that the Chair very much appreciates the discipline that all Hon. Members have shown in this matter. However, questions ought to be carefully directed at the Prime Minister or a Minister on matters over which the Minister or the Prime Minister has jurisdiction, and immediate jurisdiction.

POSSIBLE ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMISSION OF INQUIRY

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, in light of statements given by the Prime Minister earlier in Question Period in response to the Leader of the Opposition, that other forms of investigation or inquiry may follow an RCMP investigation, is the Prime Minister telling us that he has not closed the door on the possibility of a public commission of inquiry into this whole affair?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am saying that the full Royal Canadian Mounted Police inquiry was and is the most appropriate and necessary means of inquiry in this matter. Nothing should be done that would in any way inhibit the fullness of that inquiry and the celerity with which it ought to be conducted. Clearly, at any time I would be guided by their results and their advice, or new facts that might in any way be worthy of consideration in that regard.

PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. On one hand he fired the former junior Minister of Transport for involvement in this affair while, on the other hand, he will not delay the swearing in of Mr. Jean Bazin to the Senate. Will he tell the House precisely why he is treating the two of them differently? After all, he has a choice.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have answered that question.

CONTENTS OF AUGUST, 1986, LETTER—MR. BAZIN'S KNOWLEDGE

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, in light of the fact that he has not answered the question, I want to ask the Prime Minister a very reasonable supplementary. Since Mr. Jean Bazin has not yet—

Mr. Speaker: Hon. Members can see the difficulty when questions which are very similar if not exactly the same are asked again and again.

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, I will put a different question. In light of the seriousness of this affair, before Mr. Bazin is sworn in as a Senator will the Prime Minister personally call Mr. Jean Bazin to find out when he became aware of the contents of the August 12 letter?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, that is exactly the same question to which I gave the same answer.

TRADE

SOFTWOOD LUMBER EXPORT TAX—REQUEST THAT CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS BE REOPENED

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Yesterday in the House the Minister for International Trade said that she knew of no lay-offs directly attributable to the direct export tax that the Government has brought in. However, this morning a number of representatives from the secondary manufacturing industry in western Canada said lay-offs are already taking place because of the close to 200 per cent to 300 per cent increase in costs related to the direct export tax.

During his discussions with Vice-President Bush tomorrow, will the Prime Minister seek to reopen the negotiations on the softwood lumber agreement to ensure that all manufactured lumber products are excluded from that agreement and that these lay-offs which threaten the existence of 80 to 100 plants in western Canada will not take place?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I want to point out that we take no lessons about job losses from the Hon. Member who served as Minister of Employment at a time when the unemployment rate in this country was the highest it ever was in the post-war period.

Mr. Axworthy: I thank the Minister for that enlightened, expansive answer to the question.

POSITION OF UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, the Secretary of State for External Affairs threw a hand grenade at his counterpart, Secretary of State Shultz, saying that the Government of Canada doubts the sincerity of the U.S. administration's actions and efforts on acid rain. If the Government doubts the sincerity of the U.S. Government's action on this very important issue, how can it have full trust in the sincerity of the U.S. Government that it will live up to its obligations in the softwood lumber agreement as well as the broader issue of free trade? How can we doubt the sincerity in one and not in the other?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I think there was a message being sent sotto voce by the failed Minister of the Environment, the Member for Davenport. If he wants to put a question to me, he can find the courage to stand in his place in the House of Commons and put it.

Ms. Copps: A failed Prime Minister.

Mr. Crosbie: Quiet, Copps.

Mr. Caccia: Read the envoys' report.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Mr. Speaker, we are deeply disturbed about the failure of the U.S. administration so far to act on its undertakings with regard to acid rain. It is precisely to address that concern directly that the Vice-President of the United States was invited to Ottawa by the Prime Minister. That matter will be discussed tomorrow as will other questions, naturally.

We believe that the way to deal with differences that exist between our two countries is to raise them directly and discuss them civilly, and make it very clear that Canada expects action on the acid rain commitments that have been given to us by the President of the United States.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

ACID RAIN—FORTHCOMING MEETING WITH UNITED STATES VICE-PRESIDENT

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. It concerns the question of acid rain and tomorrow's visit by Vice-President George Bush. Does the letter by the Secretary of State indicate that the Prime Minister intends to take a tougher line with the U.S. on acid rain? Will the Prime Minister ask the administration to go beyond the Davis-Lewis report and do something that will actually reduce acid rain emissions in the United States in the foreseeable future? Will he ask for that kind of action from the American administration?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, we are seeking the honouring by the U.S. administration of the commitment that was given to us by the President with regard to acid rain. We are asking for an honouring of the recommendations in the Davis-Lewis report which were approved by the President of the United States. We believe that action on those recommendations would mark a considerable step forward in the fight against acid rain. As my colleague, the Minister of the Environment, indicated earlier in the House today, it is essential for us to approach this issue with clean hands and to take as much action in Canada as we can. We have done that.

Mr. Blaikie: No one is quarrelling with the clean hands argument. The question is whether or not the Prime Minister, in his meeting with Vice-President Bush tomorrow, will be pushing the administration to act not only on the Drew-Lewis report but to go beyond it.

ROLE OF U.S. MEMBERS OF CONGRESS

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Prime Minister. If it becomes obvious that the Reagan administration has no intention of living up to that agreement or doing something concrete about acid rain, will he be frank enough with himself and Canadians to abandon putting all his faith in his special relationship with the President and seek to co-operate with members of the United States Congress who are ready to do more than is recommended in the Drew-Lewis report when it comes to acid rain?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, of course we are working with members of the U.S. Congress on the question of acid rain. However, if it is the proposal of the representative of the New Democratic Party that we should abandon our attempts to get action from the U.S. administration that would improve the acid rain situation in Canada, we will not abandon that action. The acid rain problem posed for this country is far too grave and serious for us or any Party to walk away from.

IMMIGRATION

CIRCUMVENTION OF LAW BY AIRLINE PASSENGERS

Mr. John Oostrom (Willowdale): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Immigration. People are circumventing and abusing Canada's immigration laws by using airline stopover points as a means of entering Canada. Will the Minister consider the application of in transit visas to stop this abuse, and the burden it is imposing on Canadian taxpayers?

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the transit visas referred to by the Hon. Member are one of the measures the Government is considering in an attempt to provide an immediate remedy for problems connected with the use of certain points of entry to this country, namely Toronto, Vancouver and Montreal, as transit points to stay in this country. It is one of several measures we are considering, on which decisions will be forthcoming in a matter of weeks.

Oral Questions

DAY CARE CENTRES

REQUEST FOR INCREASED FUNDING

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Since we are on the eve of a federal-provincial conference at which day care centres will be on the agenda, could the Minister, to demonstrate to provincial governments the Conservative Government's sincerity in this matter, inform the House whether his Government is prepared to increase funding for day care centres within the framework of the Canada Assistance Plan?

• (1510)

[English]

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Through you, Mr. Speaker, to the Hon. Member, the Prime Minister and others in the Government, including myself, have said clearly that to advance day care further, additional commitments will have to be made. That includes financial commitments. In terms of the Canada Assistance Plan, the Government of Canada now has a financial commitment of approximately $105 million this year. There are some points being made that if the provinces triggered more access to the Canada Assistance Plan, that could even be done. Therefore, the financial exposure is quite clearly known by all of us.

That is one approach the Hon. Member puts forward. I think she would recognize that is but one of a number of approaches which should be considered.

[Translation]

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT TAKE ACTION

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, in view of the urgency of the situation with respect to day care centres and considering the fact that the parliamentary committee's report on day care will not be tabled until March 1987, why doesn't the Government implement its priorities and set aside $150 million in its next Budget for capital and operating expenditures for day care centres? If it is a priority, why not act accordingly?

[English]

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I cannot discuss any budgetary proposals. The Hon. Member has made a representation in this House which has been heard, I imagine, by all members of Cabinet.

TRADE

SOFTWOOD LUMBER TAX—REQUEST THAT CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS BE REOPENED

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. The Coalition of B.C. Secondary Softwood Lumber Manufacturers has provided us with a list of 23 firms which will either wholly or partially close because of massive increases in prices because their final products have not been made exempt from the 15 per cent lumber export tax. Will the Prime Minister tell Vice-President Bush tomorrow in his discussions with the Vice-President that we must reopen this negotiation and get those jobs and firms safeguarded for the future?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I do not think the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor is presenting the facts. I would like to remind him that one of the reasons we negotiated the settlement with the Americans was to be able to recapture funds in Canada which could be returned to the provinces for silviculture, job creation, and worker retraining.

Mr. Axworthy: What has that got to do with it?

Mr. Broadbent: What has that got to do with the issue?

Miss Carney: Without our negotiation we would have a countervail and the provinces would have no funds. In the case of manufacturers, the NDP is consistently telling the Canadian public that the tax applies to the added value of the product.

Mr. Axworthy: It does.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): It does. Check with your officials.

Miss Carney: And I continually say that in the agreement we negotiated it only applies to the lumber input, not to the added value.

Mr. Axworthy: So why are they going broke?

Miss Carney: That was a major concession we won—

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): That is not the way they are applying it, no way.

Miss Carney: —because the final determination would have done away with it. Just in closing, I want to point out—

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor, a short question.

TAX EXEMPT PRODUCTS

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I have to tell the Minister that there have been very significant changes made in the product lists included between the countervail and the agreement. I wish the Minister would understand my question, and I will direct it to the Minister responsible for forestry in hopes he may understand. Is it possible that discussions can take place with Vice-President Bush, because this is a crucial trade issue, to see to it that these products are extended so that it is possible for these companies not to face increases of 230 per cent, 250 per cent and 260 per cent in their costs of production and have to shut down?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member lacks a certain credibility when it comes to his job losses—

An Hon. Member: Look whose talking.

Miss Carney: May I point out that in May, 1986, concerning shakes and shingles, the Hon. Member told the House: "Yesterday shake and shingle producers told us almost 4,000 jobs will disappear in British Columbia".

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): Stick to the question.

Mr. Riis: We will fight them on the beaches. We will fight them in the surf.

Miss Carney: They have not disappeared in British Columbia.

Mr. Riis: We will fight them in the palm trees.

Miss Carney: Only one firm has asked for funds for worker retraining. I suggest that the Hon. Member's estimate of job losses—

An Hon. Member: Back to the beach.

Miss Carney: —is terribly exaggerated.

An Hon. Member: You are a joke and you are incompetent.

Mr. Speaker: Hon. Members know that the Question Period is nearly at an end. I just want to advise that about 15 minutes were spent on the first three questions and answers. I know Hon. Members will understand that while there are still Hon. Members wishing to ask questions, the Chair does have to close it off. However, I will accept one question from the Hon. Member for Nunatsiaq and that will be the last question.

FINANCE

TAXATION OF NORTHERN BENEFITS—TRAVEL EXPENSE DEDUCTIONS

Mr. Thomas Suluk (Nunatsiaq): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. It concerns the taxation of northern benefits with regard to travel assistance. It is my understanding that travel assistance paid by employers to designated points in southern Canada will not be taxed. However, travel assistance taken in the territory will not be tax deductable. Since many northerners perceive this as an inequity, can the Minister, first, review the decision reached in December, 1986, and, second, can he provide an acceptable explanation in layman's terms of how this decision was reached?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the interest of the Hon. Member in this particular matter. What we are trying to do is put into place a permanent regime of what has been up until now a temporary regime provided under a tax remission order. The terms of the permanent regime are no different in this particular regard, transportation, than was the case under the temporary duty remission scheme.

What it is meant to do is provide people who live in the north access on a preferred basis to vacation in the nearest designated city. I appreciate the concern expressed by the Hon. Member and I will review the Hon. Member's comments accordingly.

Mr. Speaker: I should advise Hon. Members, including the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie, that there are a number of points of orders and questions of privilege. The Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell on a question of privilege.

PRIVILEGE

PRIME MINISTER'S STATEMENT DURING QUESTION PERIOD

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, yesterday you will recall that I served notice to you of my intention to rise today on a question of privilege. I have now had a chance to review Hansard carefully and I believe my privileges have been breached and that the Standing Orders of this House have been broken. I also served notice of my intention to rise on a question of privilege with the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) a few moments ago.

If you deem I have a prima facie point of privilege, Mr. Speaker, I am prepared to move the motion necessary to refer the matter to the Parliamentary Committee on Elections, Privileges and Procedure.

• (1520)

As reported at page 2362 of yesterday's Hansard the Prime Minister said: "If he has had that information for some months why did he not bring it to the attention of the RCMP—" and the next part of the sentence is the truly important part. It states: "—since his failure to do so could result in the obstruction of justice?" By inference, the Prime Minister in the House has accused me of performing a criminal act.

I draw to Your Honour's attention the fact that Section 127 of the Criminal Code very clearly states the definition of "obstructing justice". Clearly, I believe that I have not committed such a criminal act but, beyond that, the Prime Minister does not have the right to make such accusations in the House of Commons. I believe, Sir, that if I or anyone else were to accuse another Hon. Member of being a thief, a murderer or any other similar thing, that it would not be permitted by the House, and rightfully so. The same applies to this particular criminal accusation as well.

Section 127 of the Criminal Code deals with judicial proceedings, formal investigations, and attempts to convince others to falsify testimony. While I am not a lawyer, I fail to understand how the Prime Minister could make such accusations since he, of course, is learned in the law.

I draw to Your Honour's attention page 11960 of Hansard of March 19, 1976, where Speaker Jerome stated that where the charge is a direct allegation it must be withdrawn.

Further, I draw to your attention, Sir, Beauchesne's Rules and Forms of the House of Commons of Canada, Fifth Edition, page 107, where it is noted that on several occasions it has been decided that to accuse anyone of an illegal act is improper.

I also draw to Your Honour's attention Bourinot's Parliamentary Procedure, Fourth Edition, in which the following is stated:

> In the Canadian House, questions of privilege take a wide range, but it may be stated in general terms that they refer to all matters affecting the rights and immunities of the house collectively, or to the position and conduct of members in their representative character.

I also draw to Your Honour's attention the following from the same publication which states:

> The large number of rulings on the subject of parliamentary language, as applied to a member in debate, clearly indicate that any expression derogatory to his character as an honourable gentleman in private life or to his honour and personal character as a representative of the people is out of order.

On page 362 of the same document it is also pointed out that it is improper to attribute unworthy motives.

Finally, in the same document it states that when a Member has intimated that he would move the adjournment, or that he would in any other way threaten a Member of this House, the Speaker has interposed and called him to order for using language which is menacing to the House. In this case, language which is menacing to a Member is, in my view, menacing to the House of Commons.

In conclusion, I remind you, Mr. Speaker, that Beauchesne's also speaks to this issue. Citation 316 states that to make a personal charge against a Member is against the rules of the House and is identified in certain ways which are set out. Apart from the prohibitions contained in Standing Order 35 it has been sanctioned by usage that a Member, while speaking, must not make a personal charge against a Member.

Citation 326 states that threatening language is also unparliamentary. It states that when a Member has intimated that he would move the adjournment of the House, as I said previously, according to Bourinot, that that indeed would be deemed to be threatening the House and therefore disorderly and improper. For the same reason, and for all the reasons that I have expressed to you today, Mr. Speaker, I believe that the accusations made yesterday by the Prime Minister are improper and should be withdrawn. If they are not I intend to continue to ask that the matter be referred to the committee responsible for dealing with such matters, if Your Honour finds that I have a prima facie case of privilege.

It is my hope that that will not be necessary and that the Prime Minister will choose to withdraw the unfortunate remarks of yesterday.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I submit that the Hon. Member does not have a prima facie case of privilege, that an accusation was not levelled by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), and that the Prime Minister did not accuse the Hon. Member of a criminal act. To put the issue into context one has to reread the question and answer.

In the course of the Hon. Member questioning the Prime Minister, as reported at page 2362 of Hansard, he pointed out—in fact he boasted—that the media, certain Members and many Canadians had been aware of the transactions for two months already. I will deal later with the portion of the Prime Minister's reponse which the Hon. Member finds offensive.

I also understand that the Hon. Member went outside the House and boasted about the fact that he knew about the allegations and had information about this incident two or three months ago. If that is so then he is duty bound and he clearly has an obligation to provide that information to the RCMP.

Mr. Gauthier: Including Jean Bazin?

Mr. Mazankowski: Yes, including any Member he alleges to have information about. He has a duty to the House and his country to do just that.

The point is that the Prime Minister indicated in his response to the Hon. Member that if he has such information then he should rise in his place in the House of Commons to tell the House who has the information, what it is and, if he has had it for some months, why he did not bring it to the attention of the RCMP since his failure to do so could result in the obstruction of justice. The Prime Minister did not accuse the Hon Member but, rather, invited him to do this.

What I think the Right Hon. Prime Minister was doing was providing the Hon. Member with some good and timely advice. I think he should take it in that spirit. Quite frankly, if the Hon. Member is not prepared to substantiate what he alleges, then I think he should take that advice and consider it and perhaps reconsider his question of privilege.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I listened closely to the case being made by my colleague. Indeed, I believe there is evidence for a prima facie case of privilege. However, I would like to argue it in a different way.

The phrase uttered by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) yesterday states: "If he has had that information for some months why did he not bring it to the attention of the RCMP since his failure to do so could result in the obstruction of justice?" I remember clearly when the Prime Minister delivered that response to the Hon. Member that he used a very threatening pose. He raised his voice and used very strong language.

Some Hon. Members: Order, order.

Mr. Riis: As you well know, Mr. Speaker, threatening language itself is unparliamentary. There is no question that when one suggests to an Hon. Member that his behaviour could be interpreted as an obstruction of justice that that in itself is threatening language, particularly when used by the Prime Minister. I submit to you, Mr. Speaker, that as a lawyer who understands very clearly the allegations of "obstruction of justice" that you know just how serious that particular allegation is. It is language unbecoming a Member of this House, certainly when spoken by a Member in the position of the Prime Minister.

• (1530)

I believe the Prime Minister would serve the House well if he would consider the case being made today, and do the honourable thing and withdraw his remarks, rather than have you, Mr. Speaker, deliberate as to whether we have a case of privilege.

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): I rise on the same point, Mr. Speaker. I wish to take issue with the comments made by the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski). He indicated that the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell (Mr. Boudria), or indeed any Canadian who had knowledge of the facts surrounding the Oerlikon affair, was duty bound to bring the matter to the attention of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. I wish to ask the Hon. Deputy Prime Minister to point to some jurisprudence that substantiates the position that he has taken.

As was indicated by the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell, and confirmed by other individuals involved in this particular transaction, some months ago it was known that there were land flips involved in the awarding of this contract. Does the failure to report that type of information to the RCMP constitute an offence under Section 127(1) of the Criminal Code of Canada, which speaks to the offence of obstructing justice?

I wish to read from the Criminal Code which states:

127. (1) Every one who wilfully attempts in any manner to obstruct, pervert or defeat the course of justice in a judicial proceeding—is guilty of

(c) an indictable offence and is liable to imprisonment for two years, or

(d) an offence punishable on summary conviction.

In this particular case, I would submit that there was no judicial proceeding in effect at the time. The RCMP had not laid any criminal charges in the matter. There was no other judicial or quasi-judicial proceeding taking place. I take issue with the Deputy Prime Minister when he says that the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell, or anyone else who had certain information or facts, was duty bound by law to bring the matter to the attention of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Another point in passing, Section 127 speaks—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I may be able to assist Hon. Members, and the Hon. Member for York South—Weston (Mr. Nunziata) who is quite correctly stating what the general law is. He is addressing the Chair with a succinct and reasoned argument. The Chair understands completely the exact point that the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell has made. I hope that Hon. Members will stay away from arguing another issue now arising, that is, what the Hon. Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) may have said with respect to his view of the law.

The point that the Chair has to decide is whether the words used by the Right Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) yesterday, and in their context, amounted to an accusation which is unparliamentary and which has worked against the interests of the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell to speak freely in this Chamber. As a consequence, if they do, they should be withdrawn. That is the narrow point that the Chair must look at. The Chair must also take that in the context of the question asked.

I wish to advise Hon. Members, and it may save undue debate on this point, that yesterday the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell came to the Chair and he was clearly and visibly concerned. I assured the Hon. Member that this matter would be heard today. I have very carefully read the transcript. I am not quarrelling with the law as set out by Hon. Members. I am certainly not quarrelling with the law as set out by the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell with respect to what is or what is not privilege. That was again a very succinct and clear argument. I wish to assure Hon. Members that I have the point, and I will look at it very carefully. I will, of course, return at an appropriate time. That may assist Hon. Members who may be impelled to feel that the Chair has not got the point from restraining in exercising their clear right to speak, and it may save some Hon. Members from needing to enter into the argument.

I return to the Hon. Member for York South-Weston, who I know will want to complete his remarks shortly.

Mr. Nunziata: I appreciate your comments, Mr. Speaker, and I take your advice.

The reference that I was making to Section 127 of the Criminal Code was in reply to the statement made by the Deputy Prime Minister. You are quite correct in stating that the issue is whether it is appropriate for one Hon. Member to accuse another Hon. Member, whether directly or indirectly or by implication, of criminal activity. I would submit that the words used by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) yesterday, while he may not have directly accused the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell of criminal activity, certainly implied that the Hon. Member had breached the Criminal Code of Canada.

How can any Hon. Member in this House operate effectively when another Member, especially the Prime Minister, accuses a Member of criminal activity? I suggest that the privileges of the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell have been affected. We all know how reckless the Prime Minister is at times with his rhetoric. In this case, the Prime Minister got carried away.

Mr. Speaker: I know that Hon. Members when arguing procedure and the law about an event that happened in the past would not, out of enthusiasm, wish to create another incident that would have to be discussed and dealt with by the Chair tomorrow. I note with some satisfaction that there are smiles on both sides of the House.

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I wish to make some comments about the point of privilege. In doing so, I will bear in mind your admonition of a few moments ago.

I wish to read into the record the words complained of by the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell (Mr. Boudria). The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) said yesterday when speaking of the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell:

> If he has had that information for some months why did he not bring it to the attention of the RCMP since his failure to do so could result in the obstruction of justice?

I submit that the Prime Minister, speaking as he did about what the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell may or may not have done in the past, was in effect alleging a wrongdoing of a type that was contrary to the Criminal Code.

The Government House Leader (Mr. Mazankowski) said that the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell had a duty to bring the information in question to the attention of the authorities. If that is the view not only of the Government House Leader but of the Prime Minister, even though it is erroneous and incorrect on a reading of the section, and the cases of the courts interpreting it, it clearly shows, I submit with the utmost respect, what was the purpose of the Prime Minister in making the remarks yesterday.

I want to support what the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell said about there being grounds for a question of privilege. If it should happen, despite the very persuasive arguments of the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell in support of there being a question of privilege, that you do not happen to agree with him, then I submit it is also and still open to you, Mr. Speaker, to find that the language of the Prime Minister was unparliamentary and therefore subject to be withdrawn on your direction.

It is very clear according to Citation 319 that it is improper "to impute to any Member or Members unworthy motives for their actions in a particular case". Furthermore, Citation 324 reads:

> It is impossible to lay down any specific rules in regard to injurious reflections uttered in debate against particular Members, or to declare beforehand what expressions are or are not contrary to order; much depends upon the tone and manner, and intention, of the person speaking;—

I submit that not only are there grounds for you, Mr. Speaker, to find a prima facie breach of privilege but, in the alternative, to find that the Prime Minister's words were unparliamentary and therefore subject to being declared such by yourself and ordered to be withdrawn.

I also submit that the manner in which the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell approached you yesterday with his concerns about the language used by the Prime Minister, which you were good enough to place on record a few minutes ago, would constitute the notice ordinarily required in order to raise a matter of unparliamentary language.

I submit to you, Mr. Speaker, that not only are there grounds so ably argued by the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell and by the Hon. Member for York South—Weston (Mr. Nunziata) for finding a breach of parliamentary privilege; in any event there are grounds for you to find that the language used by the Prime Minister is unparliamentary and should be withdrawn.

Mr. Speaker: I want to thank Hon. Members for the interventions which will assist me in deciding this point. I assure all Hon. Members, especially the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell (Mr. Boudria), the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) and others, that I will give this matter appropriate and careful consideration.

I think the Hon. Solicitor General (Mr. Kelleher) wishes to raise another question of privilege, or it may be a point of order. It is one of the two; perhaps the Hon. Minister could clarify that, to begin with.

ALLEGED WRONGDOING

Hon. James Kelleher (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Yesterday during Question Period a question was put by the Hon. Member for York South—Weston (Mr. Nunziata) in which he raised the issue as to whether I as Solicitor General did not perform my responsibilities properly and did not act promptly in the matter of allegations against an exempt staff member who worked for the Minister of State. Indeed the Hon. Member's question and request for an RCMP investigation into my role in the affair implies wrongdoing on my part. The facts are as follows, and they will be very brief.

On November 5, 1986 my office received correspondence from a Montreal citizen that included allegations against unnamed individuals, including an unnamed staff member in an unnamed cabinet Minister's office.

On November 7, in keeping with standard practice in such cases, my office forwarded the correspondence to the RCMP for review, and a reply was made to the citizen's letter on December 19, 1986, indicating that those concerns were being looked into by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

On November 17, 1986 the Hon. Member for York Centre (Mr. Kaplan) provided me with copies of that correspondence, asking assurance that I would turn that over to the RCMP. I assured that Hon. Member by letter on November 27, 1986 that indeed I had already done so.

I was advised by the RCMP of the results of this investigation on January 8, 1987, and within hours the member of the ministerial staff was relieved of his duties.

Further, I am advised that the RCMP has no record of being informed with respect to this matter in May 1986, as the Hon. Member for York South—Weston has stated.

The Solicitor General has no responsibility for the administration of the Government's security clearance screening program. I reject categorically the suggestion that I was in any way involved in the security screening process in this case. As the chief law enforcement official for the Government of Canada and as a Member of Parliament, I cannot allow these imputations and allegations to go unchallenged.

Mr. Speaker: I see the Hon. Member for York South—Weston (Mr. Nunziata) indicating that he wishes to rise in response to the point of order of the Hon. Solicitor General (Mr. Kelleher). Of course I will hear the Hon. Member, but I want him to know that I have looked over very carefully the comments complained of. It would seem—and this may help shorten debate—that the Hon. Member for York South—Weston asked a question in which he said that it concerned the conduct of two Ministers, one being the Solicitor General. He was asking why a routine security check could not have been done and indicating that the Solicitor General, at least on the information which apparently the Hon. Member had at that time or perhaps thought he had, was notified in October.

Then the question is: in view of this will the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) initiate an RCMP investigation into the conduct of another Member, but this matter concerns the Solicitor General.

It is interesting that the Solicitor General has not risen on a question of privilege. The Solicitor General has merely come before the Chamber to say that he feels the question which was asked imputed some kind of wrongful or negligent behaviour on the part of the Solicitor General. What the Solicitor General has done today is read a statement in which he lays out very carefully certain facts. Of course when the Solicitor General, as all Hon. Members, makes statements like that, those facts are to be accepted in this Chamber, naturally.

It may be that the Hon. Member for York South—Weston will be satisfied with that relation of facts as they are. If by some chance the Hon. Member for York South—Weston is not satisfied with that relation of facts, then it would be appropriate, at another time, to rise in his place and put a question to the Hon. Solicitor General.

I would hope that in recognizing the Hon. Member for York South—Weston—and his comments may assist me—that we will not get into an argument over the facts, because this is not the place to do it. The Hon. Member for York South—Weston is of course the Hon. Member who asked the question, and I think it is appropriate that he rise and make an intervention. I hope it will be a short one, under all the circumstances.

I call upon the Hon. Member.

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, I can assure you that my submissions will be short. I simply wish to indicate that I have facts in my possession which appear to be at variance with the facts as indicated by the Solicitor General (Mr. Kelleher). You are quite correct in saying, Mr. Speaker, that this is not the forum in which to debate which version of the facts are accurate.

The Solicitor General has made a statement today. He is an Hon. Member, and I must accept his facts for the time being, and I will do so.

Mr. Speaker: The comments of the Hon. Member for York South—Weston are very fitting for the adjournment of a debate on such a point.

Is the Hon. Member for Don Valley East (Mr. Attewell) seeking the floor on a question of privilege or on a point of order?

ALLEGED UNPARLIAMENTARY LANGUAGE

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order concerning unparliamentary language used by the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson). At the finish of a question which he directed to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) in today's Question Period, if I am correct in my memory, he used the term "sleazy affair".

• (1550)

I think in all honesty, Mr. Speaker, you are to be commended for the new levels of decorum and dignity you have brought to this House along with the co-operation of Members in last few months. I am compelled to say that the language I heard makes the Hon. Member simply guilty of base political exploitation. I think the language is wrong on two counts. First is the word itself. Second, a very delicate sensitive case was launched just 48 hours ago, and to start almost pre-judging the situation with the use of the language used by the Hon. Member for Burnaby is unparliamentary. I would ask for your ruling on this, Sir.

Mr. Speaker: I thank the Hon. Member for raising the matter. The Chair heard very clearly this afternoon the comments of the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) who, unfortunately, is unable to be in the House at this time due to other duties that he is performing on behalf of his constituents. I will look carefully at the words.

I might say that the word sleazy is hardly comforting to those it is used against and probably does not help debate very much. There is some question, however, as to whether the Hon. Member for Burnaby was referring to the accusations that in some wrongful way, land was as they say in real estate terms, flipped and as a consequence some wrongful thing was done perhaps because of some kind of knowledge or some knowledge of some sort that ought not to have been available. If the word sleazy was referring to that particular accusation, then that is a matter of judgment for all citizens to consider. I would hope that when I look at the words of the Hon. Member for Burnaby that that is where the word sleazy is confined. If, of course, it refers or if it was meant to refer to the conduct of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the action which the Prime Minister took then that obviously would give me more difficulty.

I will consider the matter. I should say to the Hon. House Leader of the New Democratic Party that I will communicate with the Hon. Member for Burnaby and make the Hon. Member aware that this matter has been raised. The Hon. House Leader may wish to do the same. If the Hon. Member wishes to make an intervention, that can be arranged with the Chair at some time in the next few days.

I thank the Hon. Member for Don Valley East (Mr. Attewell) for bringing the matter to the House.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

SOFTWOOD LUMBER PRODUCTS EXPORT CHARGE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Miss Carney that Bill C-37, an Act respecting the imposition of a charge on the export of certain softwood lumber products, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee, and the amendment of Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra), (p. 2393).

Mr. Speaker: Order. Could the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray) stay for a moment to deal with my request. The Hon. Member for Montréal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) last had the floor and his debating had not been finished. The Chair is quite prepared to wait a minute or two if the Hon. Member is coming back. Perhaps the Hon. Member for Windsor West could advise the Chair.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, we appreciate very much your courtesy in this matter. We have been checking, but we find that the Hon. Member for Montréal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart) is unavoidably committed elsewhere at this point. He will simply have to forego the time otherwise available for the completion of his remarks. I again thank you, Mr. Speaker, for your courtesy.

[Translation]

Mr. Gabriel Desjardins (Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, it is with great interest that I take part in the debate on Bill C-37, an Act respecting the imposition of a charge on the export of certain softwood lumber products.

Mr. Speaker, I cannot remain silent after listening to the previous speaker, the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart), who in the course of his remarks made an unwarranted and shameful attack against Members from the Abitibi—Témiscamingue region. I would point out to the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie that Members from Abitibi—Témiscamingue do not have to listen to his lectures on behaviour or conduct. The fact that he did lecture us shows that although the Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie may be overly anxious to champion every cause in Canada, he does have his own limits and sometimes—quite often indeed—he talks through his hat.

When I listen to him talking about softwood lumber I am not quite sure whether the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie knows that when we in Abitibi—Témiscamingue talk about softwood lumber we are referring to sizes such as 1 by 3, 2 by 4, 2 by 8, and beams.

Sooner or later, Mr. Speaker, a Member reaches his level of incompetence, and I think this is what has happened to the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie.

Mr. Speaker, I simply wanted to set the record straight because I think that Members from Abitibi—Témiscamingue are proud to protect the interests of their constituents here in the House, and they do so in a dignified and responsible manner. Indeed, Mr. Speaker, responsible parliamentarians are expected to explain to the Canadian people what is at stake when important decisions are to be made. The decision we are talking about today is extremely important and we simply must explain to Quebecers and other Canadians why we decided to come to a compromise on softwood lumber, a compromise which was deemed to be both quite acceptable and the best option available to us under present circumstances.

Mr. Speaker, when they tell us regional Members don't talk about softwood lumber . . . Yesterday, the Hon. Member for Abitibi (Mr. St. Julien) spoke in the House about the woodchip problem we have in Abitibi—Témiscamingue. Unfortunately, the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie was not in the House as so often happens when we have something to say. He was probably out and around, stirring up trouble across Quebec. However, people realize that while he is often just clowning around, work is a serious matter. And there are people here in the House who realize that as well.

Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Rossi: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Bourassa (Mr. Rossi), on a point of order.

Mr. Rossi: The Hon. Member just referred to the fairly frequent absence of the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie from the House. With respect, I submit that the Hon. Member from Montreal—Sainte-Marie is in the House regularly and that the Hon. Member opposite was taking advantage of the fact that he is not in the House but in his office. He is not supposed to refer—

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I appreciate the comments from the Hon. Member for Bourassa (Mr. Rossi). I would hope that the Hon. Member for Témiscamingue (Mr. Desjardins) would not reflect on the absence or the attendance of any Member in this Chamber.

[Translation]

Mr. Desjardins: Mr. Speaker, I just want to point out, since he said we did not address our regional problems in the House, that this is the third time I have risen in the House to speak to the softwood lumber issue and that my hon. friend from Abitibi has also done so. I want to set the record straight so that we are judged accordingly.

Mr. Speaker, regarding the softwood lumber debate, I want to say that the region I represent here in the House is certainly the one in Quebec most severely affected by the 15 per cent export tax on softwood lumber. In my riding of Témiscamingue, we have the biggest softwood lumber producer in Eastern Quebec, and I am referring to Normic Perron. There are other companies in the forestry sector that are also very important such as Howard Bienvenue, Tembec—a very important company that is also involved in pulp and paper—and the Taschereau sawmill. Anyone who is aware of the importance of the softwood lumber trade with the United States knows that it ranks third among our exports. After cars and pulp and paper comes softwood lumber, a $4 billion market with 60,000 jobs in Canada and 11,000 of these in Quebec. Of that 11,000, there are several thousand in my riding and in the riding of my hon. friend from Abitibi.

Mr. Speaker, I spent the holidays in my riding, in my three riding offices, from December 19 to January 15, being available to the local population and explaining what the softwood lumber issue was all about. As a parliamentarian, I felt a moral responsibility to be in my riding to listen to the people and to explain the repercussions of the 15 per cent tax to the local media. When we take the time to explain the events and the agreement to our people and our industries in Abitibi—Témiscamingue, we find that they have been through worse in the past, Mr. Speaker. For families like the Perrons and the Bienvenues in Abitibi, who came to the area 50 years ago, working for the forest industry in Abitibi—Témiscamingue was not always easy. These people have been through worse. Naturally, they are not happy with the 15 per cent. They did not jump for joy and say that this was the best thing that could happen, but they understand the facts. They know that it was inevitable. There had been clear signs for a few years that such a compromise would be inevitable and that the Americans would eventually take strong action against our substantial lumber exports to the United States. This is indeed what happened. It was inevitable.

We had to act and we did so in the best interests of Canadians. People in our regions understand this. They know that the forest industry is subject to fluctuations, that it is a cyclical industry. In our region like elsewhere in Quebec and Canada, sawmills have had to close these last few years. However, others have been built and the trend will continue in coming years. The market fluctuates a lot and the 15 per cent tax will change nothing in the short-term for forest products in our region. I have some major producers in my region, but the smaller sawmills in Abitibi—Témiscamingue often sell 100 per cent of their products locally or regionally, which means that there will be no job loss.

Mr. Speaker, as I was saying, we have a responsibility as parliamentarians since we cannot really count on the Opposition to inform the population, even though we have to admit that certain Opposition Members can show good sense in such a debate. In any case, I think that it is our responsibility to inform the public and explain why the Government has to take certain action. We have to explain what we do, and the public understands.

I would like to give a chronological outline of what has been happening in the lumber industry this last year, but first, Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out that this issue is nothing new in Canada. It goes back at least 50 years to 1932 or 1933. Lumber was already a contentious issue between our two countries and there is therefore nothing new about this debate. The issue has been around for 50 years, and most recently in 1982 and 1983, when the forest industry won its case, except that—

Mr. Della Noce: Not by much.

Mr. Desjardins: As my colleague says, not by much. Our industry won a very close case in 1983 and it was obvious that the Americans were just biding their time.

After the 1983 victory the forest industry increased its softwood lumber exports to the United States. Our share of the American market expanded from 25 to 33 per cent, or thereabouts. Inevitably, sooner or later the Americans were bound to say enough is enough. The American industry put up an impressive and influential lobby which made strong representations to Government authorities and, in the past year, their signals and messages have been clear. Lawyers representing both countries were quite sure that this time countervailing duties would be imposed. For a year our Canadian ambassador in Washington had been telling the federal Government, the provinces and the forest industry to get ready because the next time around everything would break loose and we would have to negotiate every inch of the way.

If I may, Mr. Speaker, I should like to recall briefly the chronology of events during 1986. Mr. Speaker, in late May or early June the alarm was sounded: the American Commerce Department Secretary was considering launching an investigation into the allegedly illegal Canadian softwood lumber competition in the United States and thinking in terms of imposing a 35 to 36 per cent levy on our softwood lumber exports. This was in early June, Mr. Speaker. At the time the Secretary of State for External Affairs vehemently expressed our anger with respect to the American reaction. They were talking about 36 per cent, and this was enough to prompt us to marshall the most elaborate concerted effort of all interested parties in this country, including forest industry spokesmen, federal and provincial Governments, and labour unions. We set up one of the most extensive consultation process ever seen in this country on such an important issue. Mr. Speaker, consultations were held from beginning to end in this case, and nobody will ever be able to claim that the dispute was unilaterally settled by the federal Government. What should be understood, Mr. Speaker, is that natural resources like lumber belong to the provinces. It was the provinces' responsibility to defend their interest, but it was felt the federal Government was in a better position to do so. We decided to get involved because the industry and the provinces called on us to solve the matter on their behalf. This shows we did not act unilaterally but in consultation at all times.

Back to the sequence of events, Mr. Speaker, I was referring to early June, when the U.S. announced or planned a 36 per cent tax, which was unacceptable. I personally rose on two occasions in this House on behalf of the forest industry of Quebec and of my own area, to oppose that 36 per cent tax and to support the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) who had issued a call for calm and action, which we heeded.

So, on June 13, federal and provincial ministers decided to meet—that was on June 13, 1986, Mr. Speaker—to work out a strategy and fight that planned 36 per cent tax on our lumber exports. Again, during the whole summer of 1986, the various parties involved in the issue worked steadily answering a questionnaire, a sort of indictment, at the request of the U.S. Secretary of State. Because of alleged illegal competition, we had to produce a 7,000 page document in answer to the American questionnaire—7,000 pages, Mr. Speaker. We would be faced with exactly the same kind of thing if we had decided to go through the legal process—the Americans would have won the day and we would have been forced at any time—the industry, the governments, the various levels of Government—to open our books and to fill 7,000 page questionnaires as we had to submit on August 13. There would have been several of them in the future, and the industry was not interested in getting stuck in that red tape any longer.

Mr. Speaker, on September 13, 1986, the Government reached the practical decision to work out a strategy to offer a compromise to the industry and to our American friends. We brought forth, we proposed to the Americans a 10 per cent compromise. That was no unilateral step by the Government. The forest industry and the provinces were in agreement. We felt that, faced with a 36 per cent evil, why not come up ourselves with a less stringent proposal, let us say 10 per cent. We submitted that proposal on September 30 in a diplomatic note that went to the Embassy, to the U.S. Government in Washington, and the answer was no. That proposal was turned down, and later there was a preliminary finding that was not in our favour and there also was a 15 per cent proposal submitted by the American Government. So we met at a federal-provincial conference on November 20-21, one month before the December 30 deadline that had been set for the 15 per cent proposal.

Mr. Speaker, during the two-day federal-provincial conference held on November 20 and 21, we had to act and find a solution to a problem that had to be solved. There were three alternatives: first, go through the legal process, all the way—that was the Ontario position, the one that was often advocated here by their Big Brother in this House. However, Mr. Speaker, it is clear that this legal process was prejudicial to Canada. It would probably have meant the implementation of a tax exceeding 15 per cent and such a tax might not have been collected by the federal treasury and would probably have been set at 30, 35 or 25 per cent, a level which would have been most detrimental.

The second possible alternative would have been to withdraw from the negotiations as I have heard it suggested, Mr. Speaker, but that was not a solution. The United States would have carried on and would probably have levied, as I said earlier, a 30 p. 100 tax which would have entailed a terrible loss of jobs in Canada.

The third alternative was that as reasonable people, and as responsible governments which would like to solve the problem, we would find a third solution and reach a compromise. This is why we should congratulate our Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) and our Minister of State for Forestry and Mines (Mr. Merrithew) who sought the agreement of nine provinces. However, it should be stated, Mr. Speaker, that following extensive consultations, nine provinces out of ten approved the arrangement put forward at the federal-provincial conference. We should reconsider that arrangement which clearly stated that the 15 per cent tax appeared to us as the lesser evil, but the main thing was that the revenues were reinvested in Canada and redistributed among the provinces and it is on that issue that we won the day. This is not a major victory about which we should be mightily pleased. No, but as the elected government we had to assume our responsabilities and take action and we did so in the national interest.

On December 30, at midnight, therefore, everybody could watch on television the signing of this agreement and I will return to this in a minute. Let me say that people are more likely to believe comments made by well-informed editorialists and economists than those made by politicians anxious to make political gains. Well, according to the former, this compromise was the best possible deal under the circumstances, and I will quote some of their comments later on. So, on December 30, the agreement between our two countries was finalized.

But how did people react to it? The important point I am trying to make is the manner in which politicians, the media and the industry itself reacted the following day. Mr. Speaker, I am not likely to forget what happened on December 31. I was spending the holiday in my riding watching the situation as it developed. The ink on that document was not yet quite dry when the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) and the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) stated that the Government had sold out Canada to the United States, that it was outrageous. Mr. Speaker, there are times when a Parliamentarian feels that his colleagues should behave in a more dignified and responsible fashion. I was really shocked to see these Liberal Members of the Official Opposition behaving in such an objectionable and irresponsible way, trying to make petty political gains on such important issues.

As it was to be expected, Mr. Speaker, both opposition parties reacted as usual in a childish and ridiculous fashion. But we, on the Government side, are responsible administrators and we must make decisions. This one was clearly in the interest of Canada.

Everybody will agree, I am sure, that the provincial governments were satisfied with this compromise, especially those of Quebec and British Columbia which were delighted to recover all the money they could have lost. Therefore, nine of our ten provinces were all for it. The only province which was against it was Ontario. But what was Ontario doing debating the lumber issue, considering that it produces hardly 5 per cent of all the lumber in Canada? It was easy for the Premier of that province to make capital gains on an issue such as this. He did not hesitate to do so. But I feel that his views lacked credibility. Such was not the case of those of Quebec and British Columbia because they were the provinces most concerned and this compromise was acceptable to them. Mr. MacDonald, the Quebec Minister of Trade, said so in so many words. He said that this agreement is good, under the circumstances, because we intend to invest the money we are recovering in reforestation and retraining of the workers.

Mr. Speaker, I also wish people would mention the reactions of the media and our editorial writers. In fact, I would like to focus on the francophone media in Quebec, since a number of journalists have looked at the matter—how time flies, Mr. Speaker—and I would like to point out that people like Michel Roy and Alain Dubuc of La Presse who are not known as Conservatives but whose critical insights are often very apt, have said that in the circumstances there was no reason to panic, that the negative reaction of the Opposition should be ignored and that in this case, it was the best possible compromise. And, Mr. Speaker, I think we can count on the dynamic approach of the forestry industry in Abitibi—Témiscamingue.

We have seen worse, we will survive this and we will keep on working.

• (1610)

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Hon. Member for Témiscamingue (Mr. Desjardins).

Mr. Speaker, he just told us that the Bill before the House represents the best possible compromise in the circumstances. I remember clearly when I was here in 1973 and 1974, when we had a similar situation and I am referring to the oil crisis in this country when the Trudeau Government levied an export tax. After that, there was a terrific crisis in Alberta, British Columbia and Saskatchewan because we in Western Canada thought that oil was something that was "within the wings of the provinces", in other words, that it was under provincial jurisdiction.

You said that there had been consultations with the provinces about the lumber issue. However, there has not been any agreement with the provinces. In my opinion, this is very important, and I believe that the Member from Quebec will recognize that it is indeed important to have the agreement of the provinces. I recall quite clearly what I said about this at the time of the oil crisis 12 years ago in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Hon. Member whether, as a Quebecer and a Canadian, he believes that, in our federal system, it would be a good thing to go against the rights of the provinces by having consultations only without any official agreement even though the provinces have some rights in this area. Would he really agree that it would be a good thing for our country and our federal system?

Mr. Desjardins: Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his question because this matter also concerns me.

He spoke about getting the agreement of the provinces on this important subject. However, I pointed out in my speech that we had the agreement of nine out of ten provinces about the compromise which we accepted.

Before taking action, must we always wait to have the agreement of all ten provinces? We have been elected to govern, to make decisions, and its seems to me that, in this case . . . The Hon. Member mentioned what happened in 1973 and 1974, but I was very young at the time, and I can only speak about what I know well, namely the present lumber situation. Nine out of ten provinces is very close to a consensus. In my opinion, we could not go any further to reach a consensus.

Mr. Speaker, the only province not involved in this consensus, and I think that this has to be said, is Ontario, as I have already pointed out. With 5 per cent of the national lumber production, this province does not seem to have big stakes in this economic sector.

Mr. St. Julien: In answer to my colleague from Témiscamingue, Mr. Speaker, I might point out that on March 25, 1985 Quebec and Ottawa signed another economic agreement, this time with a third partner, the Quebec Lumber Manufacturers Association. This $3.42 million agreement is aimed at expanding our foreign markets to reduce the dependence of that industry upon the North American market.

I had three other points I wanted to mention to my colleague whose riding is next to mine. Since 1985 I have been in touch with the 27 forest companies in my riding to keep them up to date, because it is very important that our companies be aware of the latest developments with respect to coniferous trees, new agreements, and so on.

I would also point out to my friend and colleague that on August 1, 1985 I wrote a letter to the President of the United States concerning softwood lumber in my riding and in Canada. I got a reply from the President of the United States, signed by John J. St. John on behalf of the Administration, which reads as follows:

> On behalf of the President, I respond to your letter dated August 1 concerning the bill which is still pending before the American House of Representatives and which is aimed at imposing specific duties on Canadian lumber imports. As you probably know, under our system Members of Congress can introduce legislative measures without the authorization of the Executive Branch. The Administration is not responsible for nor does it support legislative measures which come before Congress and which might affect Canadian lumber exports. The Administration is opposed to protectionism and remains fully committed with respect to the Quebec City declarations concerning goods and services.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I would say to the Member for Témiscamingue, and especially to a certain Member from the Montreal area—his riding probably extends over ten square kilometres at the most, whereas we in Abitibi—Témiscamingue cover 50 per cent of the whole territory, roughly 800,000 square kilometres—that we have a lot of work and regularly attend House of Commons proceedings. I might add that for the first time in 100 years, in December 1986, the Minister of State for Forestry and Mines (Mr. Merrithew) was in the Abitibi—Témiscamingue region, in Val-d'Or to be specific, where he officially opened a Canadian Forestry Service office as a result of my request of May 1985. Mr. Speaker, in twenty years of Liberal rule, there was not a single Liberal MP available to help us open that office in Abitibi—Témiscamingue. But within two years we did it. I am happy for our Abitibi—Témiscamingue forest producers, for this will help them. We are going to help them day after day, week after week. I realize that sometimes there are difficult situations, but we are now going through a really fantastic period, and for that reason I support my colleague for Témiscamingue.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Perhaps the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) would like to ask a question.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, this is the period for comments and questions.

Mr. McDermid: That was a brilliant statement.

Mr. Riis: It was an interesting statement indeed. I have three short questions for the Hon. Member. First, would he explain why so many companies, perhaps as many as 120, which ought to have been exempted from the 15 per cent tax, were not exempted? Is he aware whether negotiations are planned to include these companies on the present list of 20 exempt companies?

Second, is the Member aware that the provincial governments have now guaranteed that the entire portion of the $600 million collected through the tax which will accrue to their provinces will be invested in the maintenance of the forest resource in the respective jurisdictions? Third, and perhaps most important, is the Member aware of studies which the federal Government has completed which would indicate, as closely as can be determined at this time, the potential or real damage which the new 15 per cent export tax will cause in the industry?

[Translation]

Mr. Desjardins: Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the Hon. Member for his comments and questions. As he will himself admit, the question he raises is a very involved one. The decision has been made, it has just come out. Certainly we have experts in our departments, responsible people who will look seriously at his representations and a decision will be reached in a relatively short time frame on the questions he has asked me. Although I am not an expert on trade matters, I am quite sure our department will study and analyse the matter he has raised and answers will be provided in due course.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate your support for the Ottawa Rough Riders.

But returning to the subject at hand, I should like to direct a very specific question to the Hon. Member for Témiscaminque. Is the Hon. Member aware that the Freight on Board or FOB price at the lumber mills in his own riding is much higher than in Western Canada, in British Columbia, and that because of this, the 15 per cent tax which his Government has just imposed will represent a larger amount for the Quebec lumber than for the British Columbia lumber? In fact, there will be a difference of $10 in the PCM between Quebec and Western Canada. My question is this: Does the Hon. Member feel it is fair that because of this tax, Quebec lumber producers will be more heavily taxed than their British Columbia counterparts? How could he justify this unfair difference between the tax treatment of these two regions of our country?

Mr. Desjardins: Mr. Speaker, I entirely disagree with the statement made by the Member for Ottawa opposite. The same conditions used to exist and I can assure my colleague that the forest industry in my riding is quite efficient, it takes in decent profits and it has always been successful in the past. I met with those people. They told me they could live with this 15 per cent tax. They have modern technological equipment and such a tax should not have any negative effect. Of course, they were not very happy but they are responsible businessmen and they told me. "Of course, our profits will be lower, but this is not the be-all and end-all." The Abitibi area has gone through many other problems in the past. We can live with that kind of a tax without massive layoffs and without scaring the Canadian people. I find those men very responsible and much more dignified than the Members opposite.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret but the period for questions and comments is now over.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

SOFTWOOD LUMBER PRODUCTS EXPORT CHARGE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Miss Carney that Bill C-37, an Act respecting the imposition of a charge on the export of certain softwood lumber products, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee, and the amendment of Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra), (p. 2382).

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words on this issue which is important to most of the provinces. Believe it or not, in Saskatchewan we also have a softwood industry. It is not as big as that of British Columbia, Quebec, Ontario or other parts of Canada, but we do have an industry and are concerned about the legislation before the House. This is an important issue just as is free trade. The issue of free trade is beginning to concern more and more Canadians. I have just spent a couple of weeks in my riding. More and more people in my constituency are concerned about whether we will sell the soul of our country in our free trade negotiations with the United States.

I remember well when our Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) was campaigning against his former leader, the Member for St. John's West, and other members of his Party for the leadership of his Party about three years ago. At that time he said in Thunder Bay that he was against free trade with the United States. He said that because the United States is so big and we are so small, free trade with the United States would be very similar to a mouse hopping into bed with an elephant. It may be fine for the mouse until the elephant had a nightmare and rolled over.

An Hon. Member: It was a lion.

Mr. Nystrom: I thought he said a mouse and an elephant, but the Member says it was a mouse and a lion. An elephant is bigger than a lion so perhaps that makes a better story.

[Translation]

However it is exactly the same thing, because there are 25 million Canadians, while the American population is ten times larger at 250 million people. That is a large population, and it is difficult to have free trade between a small and a large country. And it is my view that many people here in Canada do not like the arrangement where by Canadian sovereignty is really after the deal that is now there, because we are all Canadians. We are proud of this country and we must have a country that is very strong and very large in the future.

[English]

The legislation before the House compromises the sovereignty of Canada as many of our constitutional experts have already said. Quite frankly, I am very surprised to see a Conservative Government bring forth legislation which would compromise the sovereignty of our country. I believe that the Conservative Party has changed greatly in the last few years. It is increasingly seeing Canada as a fifty-third state because there is more continentalism in their philosophies about this world.

• (1630)

The Conservative Party of Sir John A. Macdonald had a national vision. It was the nationalist party in this country and the Liberal Party was the continentalist party. Our history tells about the battles of tariffs and free trade in the days of Laurier, when the Liberal Party wanted to have a free trade arrangement between Canada and the United States. It was a Conservative Party that stood up to protect this country, its people, its jobs and its future against that kind of move by the Liberal Party.

The times have changed. There has been a complete reversal of roles by the Conservative Party of Canada. Even more recently, John Diefenbaker had a national dream and stood up for this country. He was a Canadian nationalist who stood up to American presidents. Where is the Conservative Party of Macdonald and John Diefenbaker?

The Leader of the Conservative Party seems to believe he was elected in Maine rather than Manicouagan. Let us consider how the Conservative Party has sold out Canada in the last two years. First, the National Energy Program was eliminated as a result of pressure primarily from the United States and multinational corporations based in the United States.

Mrs. Sparrow: That was not a sell-out.

Mr. Nystrom: The Conservatives responded to that pressure and changed the National Energy Program. As timid as the Foreign Investment Review Agency was, the Conservatives opposite bended to the pressure of the Reagan administration to get rid of the Foreign Investment Review Act in spite of the fact that it was basically a toothless tiger. John Diefenbaker or Sir John A. Macdonald would not have done so, nor would a good red Tory like the Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson) if he was the Prime Minister. Another example is the patent legislation that is before the House.

[Translation]

I remember very well that in February 1985, at a meeting in Quebec City between Mr. Reagan, the U.S. President, and our Prime Minister, the President asked our Prime Minister for an amendment to the Canadian Patent Act concerning drugs. It was my feeling, Mr. Speaker, that the U.S. President told our Prime Minister there could be no free trade agreement unless the Patent Act was amended with respect to drugs. There again the U.S. President dictated a policy to the Canadian Prime Minister. And I ask once more, Mr. Speaker, where is John Diefenbaker's party, where is Sir John A. Macdonald's party, where is the former Conservative Party that used to be a nationalistic party here in Canada. What has become of that party? That is why the Conservative Party ranked third in a recent Gallup Poll. Never in our history has a government sunk so fast in the public opinion as the Conservative Party! Where is Mr. Diefenbaker's former party, a nationalistic party, that fought for a very strong Canada, Mr. Speaker?

[English]

Perhaps it is because they have a leader who was once the head of Iron Ore Canada, a branch plant of an American corporation, and has a vision of this country as a branch plant.

This Bill can be considered in the same way as the legislation I have already mentioned. Tomorrow the Vice-President of the United States will visit the Prime Minister to talk about free trade. I hope the Prime Minister delivers a stronger message about free trade, softwood lumber and many other issues of concern to us in the House.

This legislation will adversely affect Canada's sovereignty in the same way that the U.S. Farm Bill hurts Canada and American farmers. While the Americans preach free trade on one hand, they are subsidizing the export of American farm commodities into Canadian markets in places like Saudi Arabia and Siberia. That hurts my farmers and farmers throughout the country. The Prime Minister should stand up for Canada and tell George Bush that it is not good enough.

An Hon. Member: Start World War III.

Mr. Nystrom: The Conservative Member says "Start World War III". He is being frivolous when making such a comment. I am saying that our Prime Minister should stand up and speak loudly and clearly for Canada on issues like this. I am speaking in the House today because this is another example of how he has not done so.

The softwood lumber issue dangerously compromises Canadian sovereignty because the agreement allows for replacement of the export charge with stumpage increases only through U.S. agreement that the value of the stumpage increase alternative is equivalent to the export charge. If the Americans agree that the stumpage increase is equivalent to the export charge, then the provinces have the right to increase their stumpage charges. I suggest that policy in this country is not made in Washington but made in Canada. Agreements such as this are not good enough because they compromise the sovereignty of Canada. John Diefenbaker would not tolerate what those Conservative Members tolerate under their new leader, the man from Manicouagan.

The U.S. interpretation of the agreement specifically prohibits the provision of grants, low interest loans and other benefits to the forest industry by the federal or provincial Governments. In other words, we have agreed not to extend subsidies to the forest industry in this country unless we have the agreement of the U.S. administration. That is another compromise of Canadian sovereignty.

Mr. Greenaway: They should not be getting them in the first place.

Mr. Nystrom: The Member says that there should not be grants or subsidies from the federal Government to the forest industry. Old mills may have to be modernized or some sectors of the forest industry in parts of Canada may need assistance. If we are not allowed to give that assistance, I suggest that it compromises Canadian sovereignty. The United States will have the power to shape the future evolution of our forest industry and that is not good enough for Canada or for this Parliament.

Another issue which I believe should concern those free enterprise Conservatives who believe in free trade around the world is that the export tax applies only to the United States and thus may not be legal under GATT rules. This point has been conceded by spokespersons within the Government itself, and our forest industry competitors such as Sweden may go to GATT and insist we increase our lumber and other forest product prices on goods exported to the European Common Market by a similar amount, again causing more damage. Is it legal under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade to employ an export tax on exports to only one country and not other countries? Is it legal to export softwood lumber to the United States at a price 15 per cent more than it is exported to countries such as France, Spain, and Portugal? The Government admits that this may be a problem and it is another argument why it should reconsider this Bill.

This agreement states that any replacement stumpage increases must yield the same price increase on lumber exports to the United States as the tax. However, it is not possible to differentiate, I am told, between stumpage paid on a tree moving to the U.S. as lumber and stumpage paid on a tree moving to a pulp mill. In other words, overhauling the stumpage system in a manner which is dictated by the U.S. could, and probably will have adverse consequences for other sectors of the forest industry such as pulp and paper, lumber producers shipping to Japan, the European Common Market, and so on. These are some of the possible implications of the Bill before the House today.

Another concern I have is that I think we moved too quickly. The process in the United States had not come to a halt or completion. The U.S. Department of Commerce has still not made a ruling and it may not have found, for example, that there was discrimination because of Canadian subsidies or Canadian stumpage fees being too low, in its opinion. It may not have found injury and if it did not find injury and damage because of supposed subsidies, it may not have imposed or could not have imposed a countervail tariff. In fact, the legal advice from American lawyers to the forest industry was that the final determination of a subsidy and the final imposition of a countervail tariff could have been followed by an expedited annual review shortly thereafter. Therefore, the whole process may have gone on a long, long time. We would have had a lot of time to try to come up with a federal-provincial agreement on what to do in order to preserve our markets in the United States and expand the markets for Canadian softwood exports.

Another point I would like to make is if we had done this, we may have had a chance of winning the legal process in the United States. We also would have kept open the future option of a special appeal to GATT in Geneva. I think there are a number of reasons why we should not support the Bill before us today. In summary, it is because the Bill is a Bill which has been basically drafted by American officials. It is a Bill which does not allow any changes in our legislation unless it is accepted by American officials. It is a Bill with which the United States administration is treating Canada as a fifty-first state. I do not think that is good enough. I think it is a sell-out of our country. It compromises our sovereignty. It is softwood lumber today, what is it to be tomorrow? Will it be potash tomorrow? Will it be uranium the next day? Will it be steel products the day after that? We are not sure.

I see sitting across from me the Minister in charge of the Canadian Wheat Board. I know the frustrations he is experiencing with the U.S. Farm Bill in terms of the subsidies on exports of American grain and barley and such products.

Mr. Mayer: It is the Europeans who have the real problem.

Mr. Nystrom: It is also a problem for the Europeans. I do not deny that, of course. There is a trade war between Europe and the United States and I believe both of them are equally guilty, as the Prime Minister said in a press conference a few months ago. However, we are caught in the cross-fire as a smaller nation, as are the Australians and the Argentinians.

It is very frustrating being in that kind of a situation. There is not as much we can do in that kind of situation as we can when it comes to softwood lumber. There is something we can do about softwood lumber. That is why I am really surprised the Conservative Party, the Party which once included proud nationals like John Diefenbaker and Sir John A. Macdonald, would compromise our sovereignty and sell out our economy to the Americans on an issue like this.

[Translation]

This is a terribly important issue. According to the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis), about 700,000 Canadian men and women are directly or indirectly employed in the forestry sector here in Canada. The forestry industry is very important for Canada's future and for the employment situation here in Canada. Most companies in the industry predict there will be lay-offs because the agreement between Canada and the United States does not augur well for the future of this industry. Mr. Speaker, Canada's sovereignty and Canada's future are at stake. It is time for Canada to act.

[English]

Let us not pass this legislation before the House today. Let us have an agreement between the provinces and the federal Government as to what we should be doing. I was a bit surprised to hear a member of the Conservative Party from Quebec saying a while ago that consultation between the provinces and the federal Government by itself was good enough without an agreement. I remember being at the federal-provincial conference in Vancouver back in November and I remember Ontario did not agree, but I knew that process was only a process of consultation and we still did not have an agreement. We do not have an agreement in an area of vital provincial concern, yet taxing resources comes under our Constitution as a provincial right, under provincial jurisdiction.

I think it is very dangerous for federalism that the federal Government would go ahead unilaterally without an agreement and impose an export tax. Again, it surprises me that this would come from the Conservative Party which criticized the former Prime Minister, Mr. Trudeau, for so long and so hard for acting in exactly the same way when it came to an export tax on oil in 1973 and 1974.

[Translation]

The Hon. Member for Joliette was here at the time, since he was elected in 1968, the same year I was. He did not agree at all with Mr. Trudeau, when the latter did the same thing to the oil industry. He agreed with me and he was against Mr. Trudeau. And he said with the Conservative Party: There will be another system that will respect the rights of the provinces and the principles of federalism here in Canada where we need the consensus of all Canadians. And the Prime Minister referred to the need for national reconciliation.

The Hon. Member says so too. Mr. Speaker, if that is true, why is the Conservative Party now third in the Gallup polls in Canada? Why? With polls like these, Mr. Speaker, I am very glad I'm not a Conservative Member.

Mr. Girard: And so are we!

Mr. Nystrom: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, national reconciliation is not as important as provincial participation.

I remember when the Conservative Member sitting in the Chair at this moment rose in the House ten years ago to speak against the former Liberal Government and the levy of an export tax on oil exported from Canada to the United States. They often said that, with a Conservative Government, there would be a different system in Canada, a system where the provinces would deal with the Federal Government as between equals.

I would like to ask my friend, the Hon. Member for Joliette (Mr. La Salle), who was leader of the Quebec caucus and the only Quebec Member of his party at the time, what has happened since then. What has changed? Why is his party acting exactly like the party led by Mr. Trudeau as far as federal-provincial issues are concerned?

Mr. La Salle: Never! I would resign.

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, we have just heard some good news. The Hon. Member for Joliette will resign because he is also disappointed by his leader's policies, which are exactly the same as those of Mr. Trudeau.

Mr. La Salle: That is not what I said.

Mr. Nystrom: That would be a good thing. Mr. Nielsen yesterday and Mr. La Salle today.

Mr. Fontaine: Mr. Speaker, I am happy for the opportunity to ask a few questions to my socialist colleague for Yorkton—Melville (Mr. Nystrom).

Mr. Speaker, all Canadians know that, last summer, a ruling by an Ontario court found that it was illegal to use certain payroll deductions under the Rand formula to finance the socialist party.

I therefore wonder how the socialists can explain to the 31,000 members of the IWA why they object to our agreement with the Americans since the IWA president wrote early in January 1987 to the Minister for International Trade to express his full support for this agreement. My socialist colleagues should not forget that these people are financing them. It can hurt you a lot to attack your own sources of financing. In addition, we must not forget that this letter was signed by Mr. Munro, a former candidate to the presidency of the socialist party in British Columbia. In addition, the secretary treasurer of the association is Mr. Gerry Stoney, a former president of the socialist party in British Columbia.

I also wonder how you can agree with your colleague, the economic critic from British Columbia, who is in complete disagreement with what we you have said about our understanding with the Americans.

I conclude, Mr. Speaker. You mentioned that we may not have achieved national reconciliation, but at least we have achieved reconciliation within our own Party. The socialists from the various parts of the country do not even agree among themselves. Therefore, you would be well advised to seek ways to agree among yourselves, in order to make more informed representations to the House of Commons of Canada.

I should like you to reply to these questions. How are you going to explain that?

Mr. Gormley: Mr. Speaker, I have a question along a similar line. First, it is interesting to note how the Hon. Member from Saskatchewan can elicit such a reaction from Hon. Members from all across Canada so that they are equally offended by his comments and spring to their feet in indignation.

In terms of the Saskatchewan dimension, the Hon. Member has raised a point about sovereignty and the options the provinces face with respect to the collection of the tax. I met last week with Saskatchewan's Minister responsible for forestry. He told me that based on the alternatives, he welcomes the opportunity to be able to use some of this money to put into silviculture and reforestation. These are two projects which are of vital concern to native people and to those who live in northern Saskatchewan. How can this member of the New Democratic Party turn his back on an opportunity to be putting money back into forestry instead of paying a tariff as high as 35 per cent or 36 per cent?

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that the Hon. Member for The Battlefords—Meadow Lake (Mr. Gormley) is under considerable anguish these days. Perhaps it is as a result of the polls. The former Member of Parliament for The Battlefords—Meadow Lake, whose name is Anguish, was here yesterday, which perhaps explains the situation.

Mr. Gormley: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. It is worth noting that the man to whom the Hon. Member refers is a former Member of Parliament, which is why I am here.

Mr. Nystrom: The present Member for that riding will follow in his footsteps. There has been a precedent set in the riding.

Mr. Mayer: Anguish may in fact be the next Leader of the NDP in Saskatchewan. He may beat you out.

Mr. Nystrom: That just might happen, and it might be a good thing. I do not think there has been a Member of Parliament from The Battlefords—Meadow Lake who has survived more than one term—at least not for a long, long time. I remember the former Members Bert Cadieu and Elias Nesdoly. Nesdoly was defeated and Cadieu came back once. Then there was the terrific Member, Doug Anguish. Unfortunately, he lasted only one term, as will the present Member for The Battlefords—Meadow Lake.

Mr. Mayer: It should be noted that he is also a terrific Member of Parliament.

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, I think he is a good Member of Parliament. I have never said anything negative about him. I am simply saying that a precedent has been set in his riding whereby Members representing the riding last for only one term. Considering the way his Party is going nationally he will be lucky to run second, let alone first.

The Hon. Member said he talked to the Minister responsible for forestry in the Province of Saskatchewan. I would be very glad to have some of the money come back to Saskatchewan. My position is that it should all come back. It is a provincial resource and it should be a provincial right to impose a tax. That is why there should have been an agreement before we went ahead with this measure in the first place. I think there was the time to do that and I believe that has been pointed out in the House before.

[Translation]

In reply to the Hon. Member for Lévis (Mr. Fontaine), may I say that he often refers to the socialist party. Mr. Speaker, following the next federal election, Mr. Jean-Paul Harney, a socialist, will represent the Lévis riding. Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member asked about Mr. Munro and the union, as well as Mr. Gerry Stoney. On Saturday and Sunday, I talked in Ottawa to Mr. Gerry Stoney. I know Mr. Jack Munro very well, and both of them may not agree on the federal position of the NDP on this issue, but both will support the NDP and help it win the next federal election. It is perhaps exactly the same with the heads of some forest corporations which are against the Conservative proposal now before the House, but they will stubbornly vote for the Conservative Party at the next federal election.

[English]

Mr. Caldwell: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a question of the Hon. Member for Yorkton—Melville (Mr. Nystrom). He mentioned the problems we are having in agriculture in Canada. The Hon. Member will recall that just over one year ago the Americans placed a countervail duty on pork products going to the U.S. That countervail in terms of dollars amounted to something in the order of $200 million, which money has come out of the pockets of Canadian pork producers. It is money which could be well spent in Canada in aid of our farmers. The Americans took the case through the proper procedures and proved that in fact we were subsidizing our pork products. It now happens that they are keeping the money. I assume from what the Hon. Member is saying that because they have kept that money, our sovereignty is still intact. However, when he gets into the issue of softwood lumber and we are keeping the money on this side of the border, he seems to say that we have lost our sovereignty. I do not quite understand that position. No one wants tariffs to be imposed.

There was a situation in which our Government placed a tariff on U.S. corn coming into Canada. That is now affecting British Columbia producers. But we have retained our sovereignty. I do not quite understand where the Hon. Member is coming from. On the one hand the Americans take money and we keep our sovereignty while on the other if we keep the money we have lost our sovereignty. Would the Hon. Member please comment on that concept?

Mr. Nystrom: Mr. Speaker, I am not saying that we can win all the cases. I know that all the cases cannot be won. I have been involved in similar issues for many years. I know that some countries win some cases and sometimes they lose.

The point I am making is that we should stand up and fight for what we think is right. A decision had not been rendered in the United States and the process had not been completed. We are not sure what the results would have been. The process would have gone on for many more months in that country. What we did was duck and run. I think that was the wrong way to go.

There is also an organization called GATT. Like other countries we could have appealed to GATT. The point is that this whole process would have taken a long time. In that time we could have come to a federal-provincial agreement. I am a Member from the small Province of Saskatchewan where there are only one million people. We do not trample on provincial rights.

I think a provincial right has been trampled on in this case. I think a federal-provincial agreement could have been arrived at. It would have caused less acrimony in Canada and would have resulted in a more harmonious solution. We did not have time to do that. In the end it may have even won the case with the United States. I do not know. The Hon. Member opposite does not think we would have. But we could have bought more time and maybe we could have come up with an agreement with the provinces. I think we moved too quickly. We became too afraid too quickly.

Mr. Riis: I have a very short question for the Hon. Member. Now that the provincial governments will have the opportunity to roll some of this 15 per cent export tax into increased stumpage rates, does this mean that for other forest companies other than lumber, for example pulp or pulp and paper and other forest products, that their costs will be increased with stumpage rates going up? Also, the cost to the Canadian consumer will rise because of the increased stumpage and the increased cost for lumber and other commodities sold in Canada.

Mr. Nystrom: That is absolutely true, because there is no differentiation between a stumpage fee increase for what is exported and what goes into pulp and paper. The final point on that is there will be a problem between the provinces. I see the Hon. Member for The Battlefords—Meadow Lake For example, our stumpage fees are higher than those in British Columbia. That may create more problems for Saskatchewan than for B.C. Again, it is a differentiation between Quebec, Ontario, and the West. These are all problems that are difficult to sort out. Now we have a gun to our head, and I do not think that is fair.

CANADIAN HUMAN RIGHTS ACT, CANADA LABOUR CODE, PUBLIC SERVICE EMPLOYMENT ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

Mr. Bill Vankoughnet (Hastings—Frontenac—Lennox and Addington) moved that Bill C-229, an Act to amend the Canadian Human Rights Act, the Canada Labour Code and the Public Service Employment Act (whistleblowing), be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

He said: Mr. Speaker, Bill C-229 is an Act to amend the Canadian Human Rights Act, the Canada Labour Code and the Public Service Employment Act. This could be referred to as the whistleblowing Act.

The purpose of this Bill is to provide appropriate sanctions against retaliatory discharges by public sector employers of employees who report or blow the whistle on serious misconduct of their employers.

In protecting employees acting in good faith, this Bill would recognize that there are times when it is in the public's interest to encourage employee whistleblowing, particularly when the public health and safety are at issue. The price of doing right should not be the end of a career, scorn, or years of economic hardship.

This legislation is intended to protect people who are willing to expose illegal or unethical practices of their employers. It would allow employees to file with the Canadian Human Rights Commission information concerning actions of their employers which they believe to be a threat to the health and safety of the general public.

The Canadian Human Rights Commission would then determine if the revelations of the employee were made in good faith. If the Canadian Human Rights Commission decided that there was no malicious intent on the part of the employee, that individual would have the benefit of all protective measures provided by this legislation. Specifically, protection would be provided from dismissal, suspension, or the imposition of a financial penalty by an employer in retaliation for a complaint, or for a disclosure in connection with a complaint.

If the Canadian Human Rights Commission is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds to believe that the allegations contained in a complaint are true, and that it is in the public interest to reveal the allegations, the Commission would file an appropriate report to the Speaker of the House of Commons. Every report submitted to the House of Commons would be referred to a designated committee for the purpose of reviewing the ethics of conduct of public officials.

By providing appropriate protection for employees acting in good faith, this Bill recognizes that there are instances when it is in the best interests of the public to encourage employee whistleblowing. When the health and safety of the public are in jeopardy, this Bill will provide a clear and much superior method than the usual brown envelope procedure. This topic has not received as much attention in Canada as it has in the United States. I believe it is time for this type of legislation in Canada.

Whistleblowers have been called many names such as rats, traitors, publicity seekers, alarmists, trouble-makers, malcontents, weasels, and stool pigeons, to name a few. To some they have been branded as moral heroes. Recent studies in the United States suggest that whistleblowers are ordinary employees who are so troubled by the employers' conduct that they feel compelled to do something. Frequently, employers respond to such action by terminating their employment.

I believe that individuals who blow the whistle for legitimate reasons such as gross mismanagement, waste of public funds, fraud, corruption, as well as the health and safety of the general public, should, if proof can be established, be encouraged to protect society, and in turn have protection themselves. However, this Bill deals with the health and safety aspect of whistleblowing, and I feel it would be an important step. We should protect those who show courage, ethics, conscience, or moral concerns instead of blindly following orders from superiors, or looking the other way. The important thing to remember is not just the protection of a legitimate whistleblower, but the general public who may well be in danger.

It is time that we, as legislators, looked at what happens to whistleblowers after the events that could well change their lives. Whistleblowers almost inevitably pay a heavy price. With few exceptions, they are driven out of not just their jobs but their professions. It is long overdue that we give consideration to protecting those people who have legitimate public health and safety concerns, and have first-hand knowledge that the information is being suppressed.

Despite the need for this whistleblower's protection and the public concern for it, industry and Government remain cool to the idea. It would be a small price to pay for this legislation to protect society, and the careers and the emotional lives of conscientious whistleblowers.

For example, ethical whistleblowers exposing PCB dangers, harmful plant operations, environmental pollution, questionable food additives, violations of safety regulations, should be protected as they have a responsibility to our society. It has been established that most whistleblowers are loyal employees with many years of faithful service. They are not habitual complainers, members of the lunatic fringe, or anarchists bent on violent change. They are people who come face to face with a practice that they believe is wrong and decide to turn concern into action.

Only after first taking their concerns to the appropriate management, and then without action, would they have to use this Bill as protection. Instead of receiving thanks for bringing their legitimate concerns to light, they could presently be charged with damaging morale, hindering efficiency, or performing their duties incompetently. With this legislation, they would be protected. Even the union, if one existed, or if the employee was a member, might be reluctant to take up the issue.

The individual, or perhaps several people, would have the other options I stated earlier: the brown envelope method, the use of the media, or to seek assistance from their Member of Parliament to expose the wrongdoing. Normally, employees have a duty to respect the confidentiality of information learned through their employment which could be damaging to their employer. However, this does not apply to knowledge about actual known or planned crime. Thus the need for this legislation.

Whistleblowing is serious. This Bill intends to encourage the truth in order to protect the health and safety of Canadians through a legitimate process which would also protect the whistleblower. I ask that the House of Commons seriously consider this Bill by referring it to the appropriate committee for study.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): I wish to congratulate the Hon. Member for Hastings—Frontenac—Lennox and Addington (Mr. Vankoughnet) for introducing what I think is a very valuable and very needed piece of legislation. I agree with the Bill. I would support sending the Bill to a committee for further study and consideration, and possibly amendments which we are all open to. I wish to tell him in speaking to some public servants in my riding who over the years have come to me with this difficult problem of whistleblowing on their employer for reasons of health and safety that in their opinion, this is a much needed and important piece of legislation.

• (1710)

I repeat, I congratulate the Hon. Member on his initiative, and I hope the House sees fit to pass this legislative suggestion in due course.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the Bill before the House today deals with a question that sometimes creates problems for Government employees. As far as I know, there is no appropriate sanction in Canada to deal with retaliatory discharges by public sector employers of employees who report or "blow the whistle" on serious misconduct of their employers, particularly, as the Bill says, with respect to health and safety. By thus protecting employees against retaliatory action on the part of an employer who is unhappy about the fact that an employee has revealed certain information, I think we are recognizing the fact that the public interest sometimes requires that employees working in the public sector and who feel obliged to take action on matters or situations they find unacceptable, have the right to see and consult with a public person or an ombudsman and to tell that person, if they so wish, that they do not agree with a given measure because it constitutes a threat to public health and safety.

[English]

This whole question came to light some time ago, but Hon. Members will recall that articles appeared in the newspapers in 1986 dealing with an employee who had been fired from the Immigration Appeal Board.

I refer to an article by Philip Jalsevac which appeared in the February 13, 1986 edition of the Kitchener-Waterloo Record and read:

> The Immigration Appeal Board has followed the five-month suspension of a Toronto deputy registrar by firing him for giving internal documents to a lawyer and publicly criticizing the board.

It went on to explain what board chairman Michel Falardeau-Ramsay told Registrar Keith Forgie, 35, in the letter of dismissal which he received the previous day.

The Canada Employment and Immigration Union, through its spokesperson, Renaud Paquet, said that it would pursue the matter. At the time I was asked to comment, and I said that I believed legislation should be forthcoming. I also said that I believed strongly that a White Paper should be brought forward by the then Minister of Justice, espousing the Government's views on the matter. We asked for a discussion paper or a draft Bill from the Government. Our only reply was from the Minister of Justice who indicated the Government's position.

I should like to quote from another article written by Philip Jalsevac which read:

> Justice Minister John Crosbie says he can't see the need for legislation to protect public servants who make public improper or illegal government practices.

> However, he said his immediate reaction was that so-called whistleblowing laws aren't needed because public servants are protected like everybody else by the Charter of Rights and Freedoms.

I think that point is well taken. We in the House know that the Charter of Rights and Freedoms is before the courts for interpretation, but that is not the point.

There are other jurisdictions in the world, such as American jurisdictions, where certain protection is afforded people who for reasons of security, possibly safety, or health feel that a procedure or something they are being asked to do is against the national interest.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the concept of whistleblowing or whistleblowers is to be seen as an attempt to resolve the dilemma of employee loyalty and an employer responsible for running a public agency.

As I said earlier, in this context Canada provides no general protection for whistleblowers against retaliatory measures on the part of the employer. Federal public servants in particular have no legal protection should they reveal information on hazards to public safety.

The only legal protection at the federal level concerns the application of specific legislation. For instance, the Canadian Human Rights Act and the Canada Labour Code contain provisions that protect individuals against possible retaliatory action by the employer if they file complaints, testify or in any way participate in the enforcement of that specific legislation as it applies to their employer. This legal protection does not cover whistleblowing on activities that put the community at risk.

However, although not specifically aimed at whistleblowing cases, certain statutes may be referred to in support of whistleblowers. For instance, as the Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn) pointed out, Section 2 of the Canadian Charter of Rights provides protection for fundamental freedoms like freedom of opinion, expression and conscience. The mere reference to these freedoms does not protect whistleblowers, but since the courts are now in the process of interpreting the Charter, it might be a useful reference. As we know, everything depends on the court interpretation of the facts in the spirit of the Charter, Mr. Speaker. It is there, but it needs to be enhanced and interpreted by the courts.

On the other hand, the Access to Information Act might be useful to protect whistleblowers. As a matter of fact, if any disclosed information could have been obtained through this statute, it would mitigate the notion that a public servant must respect confidentiality with respect to his employer. Recourse to the provisions of this act does not by itself guarantee the protection of whistleblowers, but it can change the picture to the extent that the whistleblowing incident itself would become less dramatic.

Finally, given the absence of a legislative provision, common law might be used as a guideline. There have been a few such cases in American common law, and the result was that the protection given to whisleblowers is related to the accuracy and veracity of the information disclosed, as well as to the existence of real danger for the community. The burden of proof therefore weighs very heavily on the whistleblower. However, legal precedents have failed to establish criteria to enable us to assess the extent of evidence to be submitted with respect to real danger, nor have they given us a precise definition of the notion of community.

Therefore whistleblowers in Canada do not enjoy general protection and they can resort only indirectly to their means of defence against the possibility of retaliatory measures taken by their employer. A whistleblower acts at his own risk.

As I said earlier, the situation is different in the United States because they do have specific provisions barring any retaliatory measure against an employee who has disclosed information pertaining to any kind of danger for the public.

Mr. Speaker, I know that I have only two minutes left, which is not much. I wish to recommend most seriously to the House that it refer the subject matter of this well drafted and well considered bill to a committee for study and review and that it ask the Government for its support, because it is important that civil servants moved by their concern for public health and safety be protected against retaliatory measures when they make public statements about measures they are supposed to take on behalf of their employer.

Mr. Speaker, I should like again to congratulate the Hon. Member for introducing this bill and indicate to him that we support it. I hope that this bill is read a second time today.

[English]

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I enter into this debate partly because of my concerns about the rights of federal public servants, a number of whom I have in my constituency. However, I think it is a broader issue, as the Hon. Member for Hastings—Frontenac—Lennox and Addington (Mr. Vankoughnet) would of course maintain.

We suffer from the constitutional dilemma that the area of federal jurisdiction in Canada over employee-employer relations is considerably more limited relative to the total number of people in the workforce than perhaps it is in the United States where whistleblowing legislation has become quite common both at the federal level and at the level of state Governments.

The fact that the jurisdiction is more limited should not, I believe, prevent this Government and this level of Government from acting on behalf of those employees that are within its jurisdiction, and I hope in that case setting an example which will be followed by a number of provincial Governments in short order if Ottawa were to take the lead. I agree with the Hon. Member's proposal that Bill C-229 should be sent to a legislative committee and considered very carefully. I endorse the principles of the Bill. I think the idea of whistleblower legislation would benefit particularly larger organizations under federal jurisdiction. First and foremost would be the Government of Canada as well as the large Crown corporations.

I say to my friend on the benches opposite that I fear the Bill is rather weak and needs to be reworked substantially, but it would be better to do that in committee than to deny a committee the chance because I do not think the issues are that difficult to resolve. There are ample precedents that can be followed, and it would be my hope that a committee with a month or two of work and perhaps with some submissions and interventions from people knowledgeable about these matters could come back with a Bill that would serve us well.

This is a good idea but the mechanics are somewhat questionable. Just what is it we are looking for and what can be done in order to ensure that the whistleblower is respected? We have to deal with people who say; "You are going to create anarchy in the workplace" or those who say, "you are going to create a Bill which offers too little encouragement or offers too little protection to someone who feels that they should raise problems of health and safety, violation of public property, public policy or of gross mismanagement". People feel compelled to raise the issue in some way. How do you arrive at a balance on those questions?

There are really two issues. One is to provide what I would call a conventional means by which whistleblowers can lodge their complaints. It remains open to somebody who is very concerned about a particular issue and who just wants to blow on the issue to call a press conference or bring a banner to Parliament Hill or in some other way complain. The passage of whistleblower legislation will not do away with that remedy which is available right now.

The problem, of course, is that most people who blow the whistle in that way, except in exceptional circumstances, have to realize that they are taking their own fate in hand, that they carry a grave risk that they may get dismissed for disloyalty or for behaviour which is unacceptable to the employer. As well, many employers would be prepared to fire the employee for that kind of behaviour even if it cost them some money in severance pay to do so. That is why the whistleblower legislation which has been adopted in a number of American jurisdictions has tended to provide some means by which complaints can be lodged on a basis of confidence but which can be investigated without identifying the source of the complaint, by which the complainant can find out what was done, what was determined with respect to his complaint and what action, if any, was taken.

In certain cases there is still an ultimate step which leads to publicity of the complaint but, even in that case, it is often the agency or the investigating body which carries the complaint rather than leaving the individual employee in a situation where he or she risks an intolerable situation in the workplace by being identified as the whistleblower in public to his or her supervisors and employer.

The second part of the legislation is to protect the complainant. Confidentiality is a major means of protecting the complainant, but the American legislation also generally provides for anti-discrimination provisions which also have the effect of protecting the complainant against what the U.S. Federal Code calls personnel action, a generic term which includes not only dismissal but also being passed over on promotions, getting bad evaluations on performance reviews every six months or other types of actions that may have a direct or indirect impact on a person's employment prospects or on his or her ability to do the job effectively.

The Bill proposed by the Hon. Member for Hastings—Frontenac—Lennox and Addington does provide a mechanism through the Human Rights Commission to protect complainants against that kind of personnel action. I think my major concern is the fact that the avenue for complaints is not spelled out at all effectively, in fact I do not believe it is spelled out adequately. I think the Bill might benefit in committee. If it does not get to committee because it is talked out—I would hope that does not occur—then I hope the Hon. Member would be encouraged by the reaction in this House and perhaps go back to the drawing board and elaborate on that part of the Bill to come up with something that might be a more effective or workable model which, as I said, I can agree to and do agree to in principle.

I would cite the U.S. Federal Code, Mr. Speaker, which applies to members of the American federal Public Service and also, I presume, to a number of federal boards, agencies and commissions. The same principle about protecting the whistleblower exists. The same principle about providing protection against job action exists as has been provided for in rather briefer form in this Bill. What also occurs is that in separate legislation the Congress has adopted what it calls an inspector general system.

There are inspector general offices in all of the major American departments of Government. As Hon. Members know, the American ministries or departments are much larger than ours. They have only 10 members of Cabinet so those 10 departments make up what most of us cover off with 30 or 40 ministries in Canada. In addition, there are certain administrations such as the space agency, the veterans administration and small business administration which also have inspectors general.

Those inspectors general have a mandate to combat fraud, abuse and mismanagement. They do that not only at their own initiative but can also receive and act on complaints. The inspector general stands in relation to the department to which he or she is appointed. I presume they have some kind of a small office of investigators in much the same way as say our Auditor General stands in relation to the Government of Canada, that is, an independent relationship. Therefore, complaints from whistleblowers, from people who wish to raise matters with the inspector general can be raised. Matters of health and safety, abuse, fraud or mismanagement can all be raised. There is a means by which the employee is entitled to find out what happened to a particular complaint.

I do not know if that legislation is perfect. A very useful paper was distributed and prepared by Mr. David Johansen of the law and government division of our own Library of Parliament. In the literature there is some question in the United States as to what extent legislation should actively encourage whistleblowers and to what extent it should simply recognize that people wish and have an urge to blow the whistle. It should at least allow that to take place without people putting their jobs in jeopardy when they lodge complaints.

Also cited in the same paper is some very useful legislation in the State of Connecticut. I might read one or two clauses into the record. In Connecticut the statutory provision states:

> Any state employee—having knowledge of any matter involving corruption, unethical practices, violation of state laws or regulations, mismanagement, gross waste of funds, abuse of authority or danger to the public safety occurring in any state department or agency may transmit all facts and information in his possession concerning such matter to the attorney general—

The attorney general is the designated hitter in this case:

> —who shall make such investigation as he thinks proper. The attorney general shall have power to summon witnesses, require the production of any necessary books, papers or other documents and administer oaths to witnesses, where necessary, for the purpose of investigation.

It might be useful to have that kind of process even with respect to such things as the events that are now taking place or that have taken place in St. Jean-Sur-Richelieu. The clause continues:

> Upon the conclusion of his investigation, the attorney general shall (a) where necessary, report his findings to the governor, or in matters involving criminal activity, to the chief state's attorney, and (2) report to the complainant, upon his request, on such findings and any actions pursuant thereto. The attorney general shall not, after receipt of any information from a state employee under the provisions of this section—disclose the identity of such employee without his consent unless he determines that such disclosure is unavoidable during the course of his investigation.

• (1730)

There is a limit on personal action and as well a limitation that provides that if an employee is found to have knowingly lodged false charges, the employee puts himself or herself at some risk.

I think there are some valuable precedents in the United States. I realize my time is up but I would ask Hon. Members to look sympathetically at this proposal. While I do believe that the principle should be sustained, possibly the provision might be worked up in more detail so that we could have more effective whistleblower legislation.

Mr. Chuck Cook (Parliamentary Secretary to President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I rise to address the Bill to amend the Canadian Human Rights Act to protect so-called whistleblowers, by which I understand the Hon. Member to mean public servants who speak out to the news media or to Members of this House on alleged instances of government wrongdoing or misinformation. The concept of the Bill, as I understand it, is that unless those in positions of authority are subject to possible serious sanctions and punishment, they will seek to retaliate in the form of harassment and persecution of the employee or employees concerned.

Let me first say that I find this a concept which reflects a certain lack of awareness of the fine system of Public Service employee protection measures which have been built up in Canada over the last 120 years and which already permit employees to bring their concerns to the attention of Departmental management. I feel rather strongly that in this day and age, internal systems are in place that minimize or eliminate any need for so-called whistleblowing by employees.

The overwhelming majority of employees and appointed officials in the Public Service are hard-working, trustworthy and honest people who would take appropriate action using existing channels when instances of wrongdoing are uncovered by them or are brought to their attention. I believe there are adequate systems in place to ensure that any employee has access through internal routes to appropriate authorities. However, in extreme circumstances where employees might find themselves frustrated in attempts to get their messages through to officials of sufficient seniority, a whistleblowing situation might—and, I repeat, might—be envisaged. It is to this unlikely scenario that I would now turn.

I believe that the picture painted by this Bill is one of a Public Service in which employees are devoid of rights, of protection from harassment and persecution and of all redress mechanisms to guarantee their fair treatment and are generally subject to such a regimen that only amended human rights legislation could bring their mistreatment into the open and thereby control those who mistreat them. This image of the Public Service is, in my belief, at odds with reality. I believe Hon. Members would share that belief. Any image less reflective of today's reality in the Public Service is hard to imagine.

I make no claim to be an expert on Public Service redress methods, but I have investigated some of them. All Hon. Members are surely aware of the impressive body of existing personnel legislation and the rights these laws have afforded public servants over the years. Let us take a look at these laws.

Pursuing scenarios, let us suppose that after an alleged whistleblowing incident, a manager were to decide to punish the whistleblower. Could he or she do so with impunity? The answer is clearly no. Let us suppose a boss seeks to punish an employee by means of an annual performance appraisal that unfairly denigrates the employee's abilities. Such an action is immediately subject to the full rigours of the grievance procedures accorded to public servants by the wishes of this House under the Public Service Staff Relations Act (1967). I would remind the House of the comprehensive nature of this grievance process. Following a complaint, an aggrieved employee may have up to four further levels of hearings of his or her case before Departmental officers of increasing seniority until the case receives the personal attention of the Deputy Minister of the Department. In addition, in many cases employees would have the active support of their unions or associations in this regard.

Let us suppose again that based on some alleged whistle-blowing incident, the manager attempts to build a case for the release of the employee based on grounds of incompetence or incapacity. First, such an action is always based on performance appraisal reports which are subject to the redress mechanisms I have already indicated. Second, a decision to release an employee under this provision which is contained in Section 31 of the Public Service Employment Act is appealable. The first level of appeal is to the Public Service Commission's Appeals and Investigations Branch, a quasi-judicial tribunal. Should satisfaction not be found there, the aggrieved party may have recourse to the Federal Court and may eventually appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada itself.

In this regard, Hon. Members are no doubt aware that cases involving release or discharge under the Public Service's personnel legislation have indeed found their way to the Supreme Court. These actions have served to clarify the boundaries of legitimate managerial prerogative and conduct. Several of these cases have caused the learned judges of the Supreme Court to speak eloquently of the democratic rights of public servants in Canada. The very fact that these cases reach and are heard in detail by the Supreme Court is a tribute to the breadth and equity of the redress systems already available to public servants.

Next, let us suppose that the punishment selected by this imaginary but vindictive manager is to try to damage forever the employee's prospects of career advancement. Can this actually be done? No, it cannot be done because for every job opening that comes up in those parts of the Public Service where the employee is eligible to be considered, a potential appeal action may be brought to the Public Service Commission if he or she is not considered. From the appeals directorate, it goes up through that same network of redress through the courts I have already cited.

Frustrated on these points, this manager is in a little trouble about now. Let us say that the manager now seeks to punish the employee via the disciplinary route. All disciplinary action against employees stems from the powers granted to the employer to establish and maintain standards of conduct and discipline under the Financial Administration Act while the redress for employees is contained in the Public Service Staff Relations Act. Again, detailed and exhaustive multi-level grievance mechanisms already exist to protect employees from arbitrary and unfair action.

In addition to the internal grievance procedures I have already outlined, in these circumstances still further redress rights apply. Should satisfaction still not have been received in the view of the grievor at the final level of internal Departmental grievance review, further action is available through the Public Service Staff Relations Board which will appoint an adjudicator to investigate the matter. Even after that hearing, which may now be the fifth hearing of the case, redress lies through the courts. These are comprehensive rights indeed. Rights such as these would almost be unheard of in the private sector.

By this stage, our manager has run out of avenues to pursue in causing the employee's release by building a dossier of negative performance appraisals, by building a case for release on the grounds of incompetence or incapacity, by attempting to frustrate the employee's career path or by seeking a discharge on disciplinary grounds. All that is left is for the manager to attempt to make the employee's life miserable. However, such a campaign constitutes personal harassment and personal harassment is a most serious offence in the Public Service. If such action is wrongly taken, it constitutes a prima facie case of abuse of authority.

In addition to the normal grievance route, the employee may elect to pursue redress through the personal harassment policy. The first step is to see the Departmental personal harassment co-ordinator. This individual is responsible for the investigation of all alleged cases of personal harassment within a given Department. If the co-ordinator cannot rectify the issue, he can take the case to the investigation director and so on. In other words, this Act is really unnecessary given the splendid Public Service and various methods of redress we have.

I trust I have illustrated, at least in general terms, the breadth of rights, entitlements, recourses and redress mechanisms, both formal and informal, already enjoyed in the Public Service of Canada. I trust the House will realize this protection is strong enough to protect anyone seeking to address concerns of genuine wrongdoing and to thereby protect the public interest.

Mr. Vincent Della Noce (Paliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State and Minister responsible for Multiculturalism): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise to deal with Bill C-229 introduced by my hon. colleague. I do not share the views expressed by the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Centre (Mr. Cassidy) and the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier). Indeed, I do not even agree with the principle involved.

First of all, I wish to say that private employers have always expected loyalty and productivity from their employees. In the public sector, the Government here in Ottawa must respect its employees and cannot insist on productivity. It insists on loyalty and confidentiality. These are the only two things which I expect from my employees, because when they accepted their positions, they agreed on loyalty and confidentiality. The Canadian public already has a right to access to information. With Bill C-229, the Hon. Member would like to go even further and ask the Government to surrender confidentiality. As the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) said earlier, we agree with the principle, but this Bill certainly needs improvements.

Of course, people need information, but I suggest that they have been overwhelmed with confidential data over the past two and a half years. We get them in newspapers every day. Many in my riding feel that the Opposition is doing a tremendous job. It finds, sees and denounces everything. They are wrong, for it is not the Opposition which is doing a good job, but the journalists who obtain information through informers, the so-called "whistleblowers". As I said to my constituents, the Opposition makes no investigation and discovers nothing, being satisfied with buying the morning paper and reading the news. After meeting for one hour, it is ready to ask the Government embarrassing questions during the oral question period on everything that happens. If the news is somewhat positive, it will make it negative. And who are these people who inform the newspapermen? Well, they are the famous "whistleblowers". I like this phrase very much.

So to achieve this, Mr. Speaker, this Bill would have to amend the Canadian Labour Code, the Canadian Human Rights Act, and the Public Service Employment Act. The Canadian Human Rights Act would be amended so that discharging or suspending an employee, imposing a monetary sanction or putting him at a disadvantage would constitute a discriminatory act which the Canadian Human Rights Commission would be empowered to examine and correct. For instance, if an employee had good reasons to believe that his employer was acting illegally or against the public interest or was endangering public health or safety, he could lay a complaint before the Canadian Human Rights Commission, which would have the power to provide some protection in relation with disclosures made in good faith, going as far as rolling back retaliatory measures taken by the employer.

In this context, any disciplinary action by the employer against an employee could be viewed as an infraction.

If the complaint is founded, the Commission would refer any misconduct of a public sector employer to the House of Commons and its "Ethics Committee". As for the Canada Labour Code, it would be amended to specify that retaliatory discharges for bona fide whistleblowing will be considered as unwarranted or unjust.

In addition, an employee would not necessarily be guilty of disloyalty for making disclosures about his employer. Protection of denunciators is not a new idea, Mr. Speaker, and in this era of commitment to open Government, a number of countries have passed legislation for this purpose. However, attempts to legislate in this vast and important intermediary zone where an individual is neither obligated to respect a law nor free to act as he wishes have not always had the expected results.

The 1978 American Public Service Reform Act of which the two previous speakers have spoken protects public servants who make certain revelations against retaliation. It prohibits the imposition of sanctions by the officers in charge to the employee who has disclosed certain information. However the law is formulated and whatever the protection it gives denunciators, there will always remain a difficult question. What are the motives of the denunciators? This is where it becomes interesting, Mr. Speaker. Denunciation can be a defensive mechanism on the part of an employee under threat of disciplinary or other type of action for reasons which have no relation with the apparent misconduct. In other words, a public servant about to be discharged for unsatisfactory work might want to protect himself by accusing his superiors of misconduct. This could also be a catharsis for personal and organizational conflicts unrelated with the apparent misconduct. But in other terms, Mr. Speaker, all this could become some kind of a blackmail.

Could you tell me, for instance, Mr. Speaker, what good faith means? We all think we act in good faith, and believe me since I came here in Ottawa, I have often wondered about the definition of good faith. We all believe we act in good faith, and would never admit we could act otherwise. So, how could we then define good faith or the lack of it? How does the Bill succeed in enlightening us on that matter? It does not seem easy to me to define with enough clarity the concept of good faith.

I have another comment to make about this Bill. It seeks to protect employees blowing the whistle on an employer who is planning to act contrary to public policy. What is contrary to such policy? Some will say that any major change in public policy is contrary to that public policy until the Government has decided to amend it. There can be confusion between what is perceived as contrary to public policy and what is a normal process of change in that policy.

Further, Mr. Speaker, one of the basic principles underlying the public sector is that of employee allegiance and loyalty to their superiors. How are we to reconcile that principle with a Bill that involves a third party, the Canadian Human Rights Commission, in the process, before allowing the time needed for persons who have committed an action that may seem contrary to national interests to justify such action?

Finally, to what extent is the legislation actually needed, if there is nothing to lead us to believe that public sector employers act in a way that violates health and safety?

At present, there are a number of statutes and regulations that deal with industrial relations in the public sector.

For instance, the Canadian Human Rights Act, the very open-minded Access to Information Act, the Canadian Labour Code, the Public Service Staff Relations Act, the Public Service Employment Act and the Staff Harassment Policy do protect public service employees. Consequently, an act to protect them from sanctions by employers for whistleblowing in good faith would even be superfluous.

Let me ask you a question, Mr. Speaker, without even your having to answer. Who would hire a "whistleblower"? Who would hire someone who was not loyal or who could not keep his or her employer's confidentiality, for instance? That would be a conventional employee violation, but the employee who would do that kind of thing might have to live with those problems all his or her life, and this is where I say that at some point the grievance process could be used, but grievances only afford protection against harassment, discrimination and so on, but there is no way a grievance could protect against a lack of loyalty or confidentiality.

Mr. Stan Graham (Kootenay East—Revelstoke): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the motivation of the Hon. Member for Hastings—Frontenac—Lennox and Addington (Mr. Vankoughnet) for bringing this Bill forward, but I cannot help but believe that the Canadian Human Rights Act is not the appropriate place for the proposed provisions. To understand why I feel this way, it is useful to know some of the background to the development of the Canadian Human Rights Act and, indeed, other human rights legislation in the country.

Following the Second World War Canadians and members of other democratic nations became sensitive to the need to have effective mechanisms for protecting minorities against prejudice and discrimination. In 1948 the United Nations proclaimed the Universal Declaration of Human Rights which affirmed "the dignity and worth of the human person" and that "all human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights". The Universal Declaration also asserts that: "All are entitled to equal protection against any discrimination in violation of this declaration."

It was in this spirit that our early human rights laws were developed. Initially, these laws were quasi-criminal in nature and were enforced by officials of government Departments. These laws eventually evolved into our contemporary human rights statutes which take a more remedial approach. These statutes are designed to encourage the conciliation and settlement of complaints, and are administered generally by agencies and commissions which operate independently of the Government.

The Canadian Human Rights Act is administered by the Canadian Human Rights Commission. The Commission investigates complaints of discrimination and may appoint a conciliator to attempt to settle a complaint. If the complaint is not settled and the Commission believes that the complaint should not be dismissed, the Commission may request the President of the Human Rights Tribunal panel to appoint a tribunal to hear the complaint. The tribunal, which is an independent and impartial body, adjudicates the complaint and may order appropriate remedies if it finds that discrimination has occurred. This model of enforcement is followed by several jurisdictions in Canada.

The point of these laws has always been to combat discrimination and to ensure that all individuals have an equal opportunity to participate in Canadian society. It is worth quoting the purpose clause of the Canadian Human Rights Act which is as follows:

> The purpose of this Act is to extend the present laws in Canada to give effect—to the principle that every individual should have an equal opportunity with other individuals to make for himself or herself the life that he or she is able and wishes to have, consistent with his or her duties and obligations as a member of society, without being hindered in or prevented from doing so by discriminatory practices based on race, national or ethnic origin, colour, religion, age, sex, marital status, family status, disability or conviction for an offence for which a pardon has been granted.

The principle of equal opportunity is a principle to which the Government is fully committed. The Canadian Human Rights Act is one of the vehicles through which this commitment is realized. Hon. Members will understand, then, my reluctance to support amendments to this Act which would not fit together with its essential thrust.

The Canadian Human Rights Act currently provides protection on the basis of a number of prohibited grounds of discrimination including race, sex, colour, religion, national or ethnic origin, or disability. These grounds generally relate to characteristics which are either immutable or difficult to change. The Human Rights Act is designed to assist persons who have been denied an emloyment opportunity or access to services or accommodation because of invidious discrimination. It seems to me, however, that Bill C-229 relates to different concerns outside the principles of the Canadian Human Rights Act.

Bill C-229 would amend the Human Rights Act to provide protection for employees who report the misconduct of their employers, what some people call "whistleblowing". Bill C-229 would call discrimination the discharge or discipline of a "whistleblower". With respect, this is simply not the type of conduct which we have come to describe as discrimination. As far as I know, it is not the type of conduct that is dealt with by any anti-discrimination statutes in Canada. As such, it is not clear to me that such provisions should be grafted or tacked on to the Canadian Human Rights Act. To do so might well dilute the force of the anti-discrimination provisions of the Act as well as the ability of the Canadian Human Rights Commission to deal effectively with racial and other forms of discrimination.

I should point out that while I oppose these amendments to the Canadian Human Rights Act, I welcome efforts to keep the Act up to date in order to do what it is supposed to do, which is to prevent invidious discrimination. I am, therefore, pleased that the Government has committed itself to review the Canadian Human Rights Act in Toward Equality, the Government's response to Equality for All, the report of the Parliamentary Committee on Equality Rights. In Toward Equality the Government also agreed in principle to repeal those provisions of the Human Rights Act which permit mandatory retirement on a blanket basis. Generally, this will mean that employees cannot be compulsorily retired simply because they have reached what is called "normal age of retirement".

I applaud this commitment because it says that we will no longer abide the stereotypes of our older citizens and of what they can and cannot do. It recognizes that there is a real and continuing contribution which they can make to the economic life of our country. At the same time, I am pleased that the Government is considering transitional rules to ensure the orderly abolition of mandatory retirement. This is a complex area involving many collective agreements and pension plans, and transitional rules may be necessary to prevent undue hardship.

Another amendment to the Canadian Human Rights Act which the Government announced in Toward Equality, and which I support, is to incorporate the concept of reasonable accommodation. The Parliamentary Subcommittee on Equality Rights recommended that the Canadian Human Rights Act require employers to make reasonable accommodation to the special needs of members of classes protected from discrimination, except where this would cause undue hardship to the employer.

This amendment is particularly important to disabled persons to help them overcome the arbitrary barriers to employment. This amendment will also be helpful in providing for the accommodation of the religious observances of employees. It will do so in a reasonable way that balances the needs of employees and the capacity of employers.

These are the sorts of matters with which an anti-discriminatory statute should concern itself. I realize that the title "Canadian Human Rights Act" may have broad connotations, but the Act, like similarly titled provincial legislation, is geared to dealing with discrimination. It concerns specific enforcement mechanisms for dealing with specific types of problems and does not necessarily lend itself to dealing with other sorts of problems, particularly those that are addressed by the Bill which we have before us. I appreciate the intentions of the Hon. Member for Hastings—Frontenac—Lennox and Addington and I believe that he may find a different approach more appropriate.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hour provided for the consideration of Private Members' Business has now expired.

SOFTWOOD LUMBER PRODUCTS EXPORT CHARGE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Miss Carney that Bill C-37, an Act respecting the imposition of a charge on the export of certain softwood lumber products, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee, and the amendment of Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra), (p. 2382).

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have an opportunity to speak to Bill C-37, the export charge on softwood lumber. It is of immense importance not only to my constituents but to the country at large.

There is a dreadful tale behind the creation of Bill C-37. The Government has made a number of flip-flops on the whole issue. Last June, when the United States International Trade Commission accepted a petition from the United States softwood lumber producers, there was a clear indication by the Government that it would oppose a countervail duty at that time, which was proposed to be some 27 per cent or 28 per cent. Throughout the summer, all provincial Governments and Departments of Natural Resources spent hundreds of thousands of dollars preparing the necessary documentation. It is my understanding that some 7,000 items were prepared by the various provincial government Departments.

There was unanimity among the forest products industry, the Canadian Forest Industries Council, provincial Governments and the federal Government that the petition before the U.S. Department of Commerce trade administration section would be opposed. In fact, the Minister said that they would oppose it all the way.

Suddenly in late September the Government made a final offer of 10 per cent to the U.S. softwood lumber pricing coalition. We waited until mid-October when that Government came down with a preliminary determination of a countervail of 15 per cent. The Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) indicated that she and the Government would fight this all the way. That decision was supported by the Canadian Forest Industries Council. Suddenly in December, before the First Ministers met in Vancouver, she made a dramatic conversion after a phone call to Secretary Baldrige of the Department of Commerce in the United States, and the Government caved in and decided to pursue a final 15 per cent agreement. That agreement was reached at the end of December.

It is interesting to note that the Minister for International Trade was not even in Washington negotiating but was off on a holiday, apparently in Hawaii, while the civil servants struggled to negotiate this agreement. Most of the editorial writers across the country caught the spirit of that, perhaps none as much as the Toronto Star which is a great newspaper in the City of Toronto. I believe that editorial of January 7 captured the feelings of many Canadians. It states:

> One can only presume that, before she fled to Hawaii, International Trade Minister, Pat Carney—

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Mr. Speaker, we are discussing a piece of legislation which is very important to Canada, Canadians and the lumber industry of this country. I do not believe that personal attacks on an individual Member of the House is called for, especially from that Hon. Member who has been here long enough to know that it is in extremely bad taste. I suggest that he pay attention and speak on the subject matter of the Bill rather than make a personal, mean, nasty attack on a colleague in the House of Commons.

Mr. Foster: I hope that when the Parliamentary Secretary takes up my time to speak in the House that you will add that time to my speech. I do not care how many times he gets up to interrupt with irrelevancies, but clearly I do not want it taken off my time.

As I was saying, the largest newspaper in Canada, the Toronto Star, said in its editorial on January 7:

> They gave the Americans the final say on our resource policies, on our tax policies and how the proceeds from this settlement can be spent. Distant and silent while our sovereignty was being bargained away, the Minister had the audacity to come home and claim that the deal "was negotiated on our terms".

It is one thing to negotiate on our terms, but the question is: Who won? There is no question about who won to anyone, certainly the Forest Product Industries Council. Clearly, it was like Neville Chamberlain coming back from Germany in 1938 or 1939 when he said: "Peace in our time, peace at any price". Canada has certainly capitulated in this agreement.

The impact of the decision by the Government to impose an export charge will be devastating. It has already had an extremely adverse effect on the lumber industry in northern Ontario. The agreement is extremely unfair to northern Ontario because the export tax which the Government is already imposing is 15 per cent across the board. Northern Ontario pays an average stumpage charge of some $17.50 a thousand on softwood lumber, whereas British Columbia pays $4.50 a thousand. Yet the tax imposed on our producers is an identical 15 per cent.

The other adverse effect of this 15 per cent export tax is that it is imposed on an ad valorem basis. That is that the transportation cost is not taken into account and the transportation cost is the big advantage we have in Ontario because we are relatively closer to the large American markets. In December and January we had a number of shifts in our mills shut down. For instance, the Eddy Forest plant at Nairn Centre, Ontario, which is the largest sawmill in eastern Canada, producing some 176 million board feet last year, was shut down for a month. The Eddy Forest Products plant at Nairn employs about 300 people. The mill at Searchmont was shut down for seven weeks. There were layoffs in various shifts at the mill at Dubreuilville, Ontario. In fact, a report in The Sault Star on February 2 quotes the vice-president of the Ottawa based Eddy Forest Products which operates at the mill at Nairn, describing the agreement as a "humiliating capitulation". He said it would have a devastating impact. A minimum of 1,000 jobs will be lost in northern Ontario because of the tax. A representative of G. W. Martin Veneer Ltd., Mr. Brian Thompson, said they have sustained a 40 per cent reduction in softwood sales in the United States since the imposition of the American countervail duty on October 17.

There is no question but that this legislation will have an extremely adverse impact on northern Ontario. When those mills were shutting down in November and December, we had the advantage of an extremely strong market in the United States and the advantage in northern Ontario of 20 per cent of the industry on strike in British Columbia. Those advantages may well not be there in the new year as this tax comes into effect and begins to be felt.

Another point I want to make is that this tax is imposed without any consideration for our native people. An operator in the Garden River Indian Reserve, Albert Perrault operates a sawmill. He produces several hundred thousand board feet of lumber and employs 15 people. He has been told that the tax applies to native people even though normally the federal Government does not tax them for products or work done on Indian reserves. Clearly, when this deal was negotiated in Washington there was no consideration given to the native people. They do not pay a stumpage fee to any provincial Government. If they pay a fee, they pay it to their band council. Surely, that is within the family of the Indian band. That has not been taken into account and this export tax should be withdrawn with respect to native people. I certainly hope the Government will take that suggestion into account in the arrangements which are made with the United States because it clearly is a violation of the traditional arrangement that the federal Government would tax native people.

Mr. McDermid: What stumpage do they pay?

Mr. Foster: The Parliamentary Secretary is asking me what stumpage they pay. They pay the stumpage to the band council which, as I say, is within the family of the band council itself. It is not like an ordinary citizen living off the reserve paying stumpage to the provincial Government. I would hope the Government would negotiate an exemption for native people and at the same time not impose the export tax. If the Government is unable because obviously the United States has all of the bargaining chips in this agreement, it is up to the federal Government, not the provincial Governments, in my opinion, to provide retraining programs, income support and all the other assistance which is due our native people as a result of this agreement which was signed without the benefit of any cabinet Minister being available for the negotiation.

It is interesting that no cabinet Minister showed up to announce the agreement. When the Government announced the $1 billion program of assistance to Canadian grain farmers at the Agriculture Outlook Conference, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) arrived at the Conference Centre here in Ottawa and made a dramatic announcement. If this agreement was such a victory, it is strange there were no ministers to announce it.

The Canadian Forest Industries Council has spoken out very strongly against this agreement. It has opposed this agreement in every possible way. It has worked for years on this issue and has spent something like $10 million opposing it before the United States Department of Commerce and the International Trade Commission and other regulatory bodies in the United States. Then it had the ground cut from under it. One of the reasons the Canadian Forest Industries Council oppose the agreement is the fact that if the Americans can make this deal stick on softwood lumber, obviously they can make it stick on pulp and paper.

If we look at the figures for 1986, we see that the first nine months of our production of lumber in Canada totalled some $5.2 million, but our total production of other sawmill products of pulpwood, newsprint and other paper products amounted to some $17.5 billion. I am told our exports of pulp and paper and so on are almost two to three times as large as our exports of softwood lumber. What the forest industry is concerned about is that it has had the ground cut out from under it with regard to softwood lumber and are without any profits.

The reason the mills were shut down in November and December in my part of the country is because what would have been profit is being paid in anticipation of a tax. A tax is now in place. Whether it is directed to Ottawa or to the U.S. makes no difference, these companies will become totally unprofitable.

The other great concern to Canadians is the fact that when the Government has negotiated an agreement with the provinces, which is something that may or may not happen, the U.S. wants to ensure that a tax on stumpage will be imposed at a rate which will provide the same amount of tax that is levied on these exports. If that is done then what we will end up with is a stumpage charge not only on the trees which result in export lumber but on lumber produced for sales to all countries, as well as domestic sales.

The deal which has been negotiated will end up costing all consumers, both export and domestic customers, something in the neighbourhood of $870 million. That is all part of the deal, which is why the lumber companies are concerned. When the deal is transferred into a stumpage charge, as has been proposed by the Government, instead of being $600 million it will amount to close to $870 million. This will raise the price of Canadian softwood lumber to all customers, including Pacific Rim customers, the European market, as well as domestic customers. It is an extremely bad deal about which the forest products industry is concerned. Companies in the industry do not know how they will be able to operate and make any money, since they do not make $600 million in profit now. The industry as a whole does not make that much in profit, yet it will have to pay that in terms of the export tax.

Another aspect which is of great concern to Canadians is with respect to the powers which the United States has over this deal.

Mr. McDermid: Sit down!

Mr. Foster: I know that the Parliamentary Secretary does not like to hear the truth about the Bill which his Minister—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member but his time has expired. Are there questions or comments? The Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister for International Trade (Mr. McDermid).

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member obviously has his heart in this debate. He has done a great deal of work and research into the matter and he seems to understand it whole-heartedly. In terms of the lay-offs in the North about which the Hon. Member spoke, would he not be honest with Hon. Members and tell us that those lay-offs had to do with the traditional period of winter lay-offs? Also, is he not aware that in October Canadian lumber mills poured out a tremendous amount of production, which production was sent across the border? This is something about which he should be aware since it happened in his riding and close to his riding as well as in a number of other ridings.

If he had taken the time to consider the situation from Sault, Canada, to Sault, Michigan, he would have seen Canadian lumber stockpiled on the United States side of the border. Or if he had talked to the reloaders, as I did in Windsor the other day, he would know that they were so busy in October that they had to hire extra people to get the material into the United States. After that things quietened down in November, naturally, because of the stockpiling in the United States. When the Hon. Member talked about these myriad lay-offs did he not take that into consideration? Most of these mills are back producing today.

Mr. Foster: Mr. Speaker, I listened with great care to both the Minister and the Parliamentary Secretary, as well as to the Minister for Forestry and Mines (Mr. Merrithew), on many occasions. I have not heard them explain once how an industry that does not make $600 million worth of profits can pay that amount of tax and still make money and operate. I wish he would explain that to me at some point in time.

The Hon. Member asks about these lay-offs. I am delighted to be able to read to the Hon. Member a telex which was sent to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) on November 24, 1986. It is from the Senior Vice-President of E. B. Eddy Forest Products Ltd. who is a member of the Canadian Forest Industries Council. He operates the largest softwood lumber mill in eastern Canada which is in my constituency. It produced about 176,000 board feet of lumber last year, making it the largest industry in Canada. This is what he had to say in his telex to the Prime Minister:

> We at E. B. Eddy Forest Products were shocked to watch the Government of Canada take a 180 degree change in its position on the softwood lumber countervail case.
> With large sawmill operations in Ontario and Quebec, it has been necessary for us to announce a suspension of operations at our mill in Nairn Centre, Ontario, which is the largest sawmill in the province.
> We have spent thousands and thousands of dollars supporting the efforts of the Canadian Forest Industries Council only to have your Government annul all of that effort at the most critical time in the defence of our case.
> It is unbelievable that any Government could so abandon such a large Canadian industry and all of its employees.

The telex is signed by E. F. Boswell, who is the Senior Vice-President of E. B. Eddy Forest Products Ltd. His telex does not sound as if his lumber mill shut down just for Christmas or for some other reason. The fact of the matter is this sawmill was an extremely profitable operation and it suddenly became unprofitable. It would not make anything if it had to pay 15 per cent in export tax. That is the situation today. It may well be that the mill will operate since it is difficult to walk away from markets and hope to have them there when one returns, especially when the company is a composite forest products company which produces chips for pulpmill operations.

I would now like to relate the situation at the Searchmont Mill which is also a very large softwood operation. This company was selling pine lumber to the United States at something like $400 per 1,000. At one point in time it suddenly found itself paying $60 of that in countervail duty. The management of the company finally said that it could not pay that sum and still operate. What I want to know and what I have not heard the Parliamentary Secretary or the Minister say is how companies can do this.

Mr. McDermid: Sit down and I will tell you.

Mr. Foster: There was clearly an opportunity to fight this situation. We had a very good chance of winning it before the GATT panel.

Mr. McDermid: Dream on!

Mr. Foster: If the GATT panel decided that this countervail duty infringed on our sovereignty, and responsible legal counsel has said that it certainly does, then we had a 100 per cent chance of winning our case. To capitulate the way we did and to say that we are subsidizing our softwood industry after fighting the case for all these years places companies such as E. B. Eddy, which put up hundreds of thousands of dollars, in jeopardy. In fact, the Canadian Forest Industries Council has spent something in the order of $10 million over the past year fighting the case only to have it cut out from underneath them by the Minister who did not even see it important enough to stay and negotiate the case. It is little wonder that the industry is furious.

Mr. Cassidy: She was fighting it on the beaches.

Mr. Foster: That's right, she was fighting it on the beaches.

There is also another company in my constituency which, although it did not shut down, switched products so that it now does most of its work in hardwood lumber as opposed to softwood lumber. It laid off one or two shifts at its Dubreuilville operation. There is no question that the lay-offs in northern Ontario which we saw in November, December, and January, were due to the countervail. These companies do not know how they will operate and have any profit to justify the existence of their operation.

• (1830)

Mr. McDermid: The Hon. Member said how we pay for the increased tax was not discussed. It is interesting to note that the consumers in the United States will pay for it. The cost of lumber in the United States has already gone from $190 to $202. It has gone up 13 per cent in the last two weeks since the agreement has been announced.

Mr. Cassidy: It is 6 per cent.

Mr. McDermid: The market remains strong for Canadian lumber. They are buying Canadian lumber in the United States. The prices are strong and rising. That is how it will be paid, by the consumer in the United States.

Mr. Cassidy: You are living on cloud cuckoo land.

Mr. McDermid: It has gone up $13.

Mr. Cassidy: Six per cent is not 15 per cent.

Mr. McDermid: That is right, it is not 15 per cent. I said that it has gone up $13.

Mr. Cassidy: Fine. So the Canadians pay the rest.

Mr. McDermid: Just relax. He said that the industry is paying the whole 15 per cent. They are not. Just relax and you will have your turn. No wonder the NDP kicked you out as Leader. Now I understand why.

Mr. Crosbie: A bloody big lawn-mower.

Mr. McDermid: I wish to make one other thing clear—

Mr. Cassidy: They kicked your whole Party out of the legislature.

Mr. McDermid: The Hon. Member said that no Ministers were here to announce this particular agreement. That is not true. The Minister of State for Forestry (Mr. Merrithew) was here, a person who was vitally involved in the entire matter.

Mr. Foster: He wasn't at the press conference.

Mr. McDermid: He was at the press conference.

Mr. Foster: Was he under the table?

Mr. Cassidy: We didn't hear a peep from him.

Mr. Oberle: He spoke this morning, if you would wake up and get to work.

Mr. McDermid: He spoke this morning in the debate, had you got out of bed in time to hear him. The Minister was here and participated. The Hon. Member is misleading the House when he says that no Ministers were here. They were. The Minister was vitally involved in the negotiations all the way along. There is another bit of misinformation from the Hon. Member that we have been hearing all night in his speech.

Mr. Cassidy: The Minister was a Joe boy. That is all.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions and comments are now terminated. On Debate, the Hon. Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Oberle).

Hon. Frank Oberle (Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, I take pleasure in participating in this debate, perhaps not as much as the Minister of State for Science and Technology, but as a Member of Parliament from a lumber region in British Columbia which is perhaps the most important and most concentrated region to be affected by what we are doing here. It will also be affected by the events that have occurred over the last while as this problem re-emerged.

At the outset, I wish to make three brief points and then discharge them. One, if there was ever a case for the development of a comprehensive free trade agreement with the United States, this is the case.

May I make the analogy with the Auto Pact. Lumber has always been traded freely, and obviously it will not be in the future. If the Auto Pact was good for Ontario, and particular regions of Ontario, a free trade agreement involving lumber would be good for British Columbia, and for other regions. Knowing the benefits of the arrangement, be it sectorial as the Auto Pact is with the United States that provides regulated and free access of Canadian manufactured products, I cannot understand why the Premier of Ontario would stand in the way of other regions in Canada enjoying the same sense of security and benefits that flow from the type of arrangements that we are pursuing with the United States. That is point one. If there was ever a case for free trade, this is it.

Point two has to do with the sovereignty question. My friend and colleague, the Hon. Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) spoke this morning, and surely, together with the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark), she put this question to bed. If there was ever a case of a red herring, that was it. There is no sovereignty question involved in the settlement that we managed to arrive at with the United States.

Point three deals with the settlement. Of course this is not the way we would have liked this issue to evolve. It would have been great if the tribunal, as it did in 1983, had decided that the Americans have no case against Canada, that it should be discharged from the agenda, and that we would be clear and free. That is not the case. We knew that there would be an imposition of some duty, be it 15, 20, or 36 per cent, as the Pacific northwest producers were demanding. We knew that it was in the best interest to negotiate. The provinces asked us to negotiate, the responsible portions of the industries that knew what we were heading for and knew what would happen if we had to appeal to GATT suggested the mandate for us was that we enter into negotiation with the United States. Considering the options that were available to us, we arrived at the best possible deal.

The point I wish to make, Sir, and I know that I will be proven right eventually, is that there is a silver lining to this cloud. There is a disguised blessing here. The blessing is that the Americans may well have forced us to do in Canada what we, as politicians in the provinces, and to a lesser extent the federal Government, did not have the political courage and foresight to do ourselves; that is, to raise enough money in the form of economic rent, or from the harvest and the sale of the resource to make sure that in perpetuity we have a stable supply of this precious green gold that grows in every province and is so important to our economic well-being. Lumber and wood fibres are still the major and the main revenue source in terms of export earnings.

As you know, in 1979 I published a paper called "The Green Ghetto". Strangely enough, in 1979 I then defined $300 million as what it would have taken to make the adjustment from the farming mode of our forests to the intensive management regime that is in place in the United States, Sweden, and other countries. We now have that much money. The Americans have forced us to collect that money. We are obligated to pass that money through to the provinces.

If I may leave a message with my provincial colleagues and counterparts who are as foresighted as we are here, I would say to them to use that money wisely, and let us do some of the exciting things that we could do to create many new jobs, give us the stability and certainty that would enable us to pass on to future generations this great and precious resource with which we are so richly blessed.

These are the three points that I wished to introduce. I wish to come back to the last point a little later.

I have always made it a practice in my previous career to look fairly on both sides of an argument and an issue. I learned early in life that it is always good to know your adversary's position. As I said earlier, lumber has always been traded without restriction between Canada and the United States. However, in later years, and perhaps because of our dependence upon that particular industry for economic growth, our industry became increasingly more efficient.

• (1840)

There were several factors which brought this about, not the least of which was the fact that, since 95 per cent of timber in Canada was publicly owned, we were able to provide our private sector mills with the resource at a lesser economic rent than what private sector owners in the United States and other countries had to charge. I readily admit, having been in the industry myself, that there may have been an advantage to Canadian producers. The Americans may argue that that is a subsidy, but I say: "No". The sovereignty question enters into it, that we shall not be dictated to by anyone outside the country with regard to the value we attach to our natural resources. However, there were other factors.

The Canadian dollar decreased in value in comparison with the U.S. dollar from $1.04 to 73 cents, which is its present value. Perhaps that is the most important and most salient factor in the whole argument. Our industry has a 30 per cent advantage in the exchange rate before our competitors in the Pacific northwest and in other lumber regions in the United States even go to work in the morning. Our industry prudently invested some of this money in modernizing our mills, making incredible gains in efficiency, to the point where we, particularly in the part of Canada which I represent, now have some of the world's most efficient and productive sawmills. We are competitive anywhere, but particularly in the regions of the Pacific northwest and other lumber regions in the United States.

I have travelled through these regions and I have witnessed the devasation of mill closures. They are as difficult in the United States as they are here. I spoke with my friends in the U.S. Senate whom I met over the years. I understand the political reality which they had to face in the United States. I knew in 1983 that this question was not resolved. I knew that it would come back to haunt us because our industry was not prudent enough at that time to read the signals and to put voluntary curbs on their shipments. We were cutting more timber than we ever did before, we were turning out more lumber than we ever did before, and we were getting less money for it because we were driving down the price.

What do the Americans want? They talk about a level playing field, but the playing field has never been level. Let us look at the argument about the need for a different management regime. If we look at the Province of British Columbia today, there are still large areas of virgin timber which have never been touched. There are even some isolated areas to which we do not have any access. There are some timber stands to which there will never be access by road; they will have to be harvested from the air.

In order to manage the resource properly, intelligently, and prudently, one would want to integrate these virgin timber areas into a total management regime. Unlike some people who are less informed about this important industry and its resource, a tree does not grow to heaven. It is a living thing—it is born, it puts down roots, it grows, it matures, and it dies. There is a finite rate of growth even to a tree. It does not grow to heaven. When it matures and dies, it becomes a hazard to nature because it is subject to lightning and fire. We know how the evolutionary chain goes.

There are large areas of timber which is over mature, dead, and no longer commercially viable in British Columbia, as perhaps there are in other provinces. It is a burden because some of it is on prime land and to clear out the timber to make room for new growth is very costly. Thus a province or a manager of the resource would have to integrate these virgin stands into the total management regime. In order to do that in some cases roads must be built and they must go into remote areas. Therefore we said to the companies: "If you go in there and harvest this over mature timber before it dies and rots on us, we will give you a lesser stumpage". That is only prudent.

In turn, the Americans are harvesting third generation timber. First, they are not getting the same yield and, second, it costs more to grow second and third growth timber over the years. As well, the management of it is entirely different than the management of a virgin resource. That is an important point which the Americans have failed to understand, even though we have tried to make that argument repeatedly. It is not and has not been a level playing field, but it will be.

The Americans should have let us muddle along for another 30 years or 40 years, at which time we would have run out of timber in some prime forest areas in Canada, and the competitive factor would have been much less.

What do the Americans want? The American companies want and need an increase in price to be viable, and the imposition of this tax on Canadian lumber would bring about an increase in price. In the few days the tax has been in place there has already been a marked increase in price in the United States, so the American consumer is really paying the tax. However, we have to pass it through to the companies. It will be a very difficult adjustment but, as I said earlier, an adjustment which has a silver lining to it.

The Americans made the argument that our stumpage appraisal system and other techniques to manage our resource and to ask industry to convert the resource to economic rent and to social benefits was a subsidy. I do not care what argument they use because I was under no illusion with the political climate in Washington, having talked with my friends in the Congress and the Senate, that they would let us carry on increasing our market share, particularly as we did from 1983. At the same time as the dollar was at 73 cents, our market share in the United States went from 19 per cent to 34 per cent, where it is today.

I knew that we would be in deep trouble if we did not respond to it by finding some way to slow down, either voluntarily or otherwise, and perhaps develop better markets in the Asian countries or in Europe. In other words, I could understand that we had to relieve some of the pressure we had imposed upon Americans who were simply no longer competitive. That is the background.

We now have a tax which will raise between $500 million and $600 million, according to the estimates. It is a federal tax. There is a commitment by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to the provinces that the tax will be passed through, that the revenues will be returned to the provinces where they were earned and where they belong, and that the provinces should be using that money as they see fit.

Perhaps I may take a moment to make some suggestions, particularly to the Province of British Columbia, and perhaps to other provinces, about how they might use that money. In a publication some years ago I made suggestions about how we might gradually move to a more intensive management regime. When we talk about forest renewal, it is synonymous with planting trees; that is one aspect of it. We have been planting trees in British Columbia and in other provinces for the last 20 years, and we are still planting trees. However, if that is all we do, we are not really managing our forests.

• (1850)

We have very productive forest regions in British Columbia where we have planted trees for the last 25 years. We have a 25 per cent survival rate and we still rely on nature to do the rest. That is not a good way to manage forests. I cannot begin to tell you how excited I am about the prospect of developing in Canada over the next decade or so a forest management regime of the type in place in Europe, in Sweden and in the United States. It is exciting stuff.

Mr. Cassidy: In socialist countries. You are praising Sweden?

Mr. Oberle: If Members opposite consider Germany a socialist country, I will trade them anytime.

Mr. Cassidy: Germany has had an SDP Government for many years. What about Willie Brandt?

Mr. Oberle: It starts with the highest of new biotechnology and tree genetics. I get under the skin of these socialists. I wish they would let me finish my speech. It starts perhaps with the most exciting rewarding activities in biotechnology and tree genetics. There will be no problem for our universities in British Columbia or throughout the country to develop programs in these exciting areas. $100 million would be no problem for our universities to absorb. Then you have the planting, the weeding and the seeding. There is an exciting new dimension here in the invention of new equipment and machinery to help us with our forest farming techniques.

I see, Mr. Speaker, that you are telling me that my time has almost expired. I would like to talk all night on this subject.

In my province most of the revenue is earned in the interior and in the north. How great it would be if we could set up a heritage fund as Ontario is contemplating. I compliment the Province of Ontario for this initiative. If we could set up a heritage fund for the north it would permit those regions which are solely dependent on one or two of the prime industries, being mining and forestry but particularly forestry, to begin making the adjustment to the new modern industrial setting, recognizing that we will have to get away from total dependence on one or the other of these industries and diversify, adding new dimensions to our forest industry. Perhaps we could spend some of the money keeping pace with the social and the community infrastructure necessary as the industry expands and adds new dimensions. It is all very exciting and all permissible under the arrangement we have with the Americans that underlies the tax. There is no problem there.

This is just a suggestion to my colleagues in the provincial legislatures or wherever they are. It is an exciting prospect. I know that in five or six years from now the industry will be able to absorb this cost. Incidentally, my former peers in the industry tell me that they shall not have a problem absorbing this tax. Of course, it is painful when you have made efficiency gains and you see them eroded with a stroke of a pen as with 15 per cent taken away from the bottom line. Northern Ontario and other regions will be able to absorb it. When they have, and when this revenue is available to the provinces, I know it will be put to good use. In five or six years as this tax is phased out, as it is reflected in perhaps increased stumpage rates and some of the other things about which I have spoken, we will have people calling us from everywhere. Industrial, municipal and provincial leaders will say: "Thanks, federal Government, for what you have done. This was a stroke of brilliance under very difficult circumstances and you have done well for us."

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member's time has now expired. We have questions and comments. I will recognize the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis), the Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster) and then the Hon. Member for Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands (Mr. Manley).

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I will make my questions very brief in order to allow other Members to ask questions of the Hon. Minister. I listened to his interesting speech. I have two questions for the Minister. In the Minister's estimation, does the federal Government have the right to impose what some people have viewed as a tax on a provincial resource? I am thinking of the arguments during the federal Government's attempts some years ago to tax the petroleum resource in the Province of Alberta. Does the Minister believe that the federal Government has a right to do that?

Second, he knows in my own constituency some communities in the north Thompson Valley particularly, and in areas around the Shuswap, that may be hit significantly by this increased export tax. If they are hit, particularly the single industry towns, does the Minister see the federal Government stepping in with some program to provide special assistance to those people? Since IRDP has played such a critical role in his own constituency, will we be able to use IRDP funds for plant modernization as we have been doing in the interior and northern parts of British Columbia?

Mr. Oberle: Mr. Speaker, there are three questions here. Incidentally there is a difference in the case the Member states of a well-head or source tax, as this is a manufactured product that we are taxing. I am not a constitutional lawyer but the imposition of the tax comes mainly at the request of the provinces. The only people who would challenge us in the courts for the right to impose the tax would be the provinces. Logic tells me that that challenge simply would not be made. All we did was respond to a request from the provinces to find a way out of this dilemma.

Would the federal Government be willing to assist communities that may be affected by the imposition of this tax? The Member is using the programs extensively, the good Member that he is in Kamloops. For example, programs through the manpower adjustment and training programs are open to such communities. I feel absolutely confident, having been active in the industry as I was in my former incarnation, that the impact the Member predicts will simply not materialize. Should it, in an isolated area, the resources of the federal Government presently available in the programs would, of course, be applied.

Mr. Riis: In IRDP?

Mr. Foster: Mr. Speaker, I have just a couple of short questions for the Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Oberle). He is a well known expert on lumber. I have attended a few Canada-U.S. interparliamentary relations meetings with United States congressmen. I have seen the Minister argue Sam Gibbons, chairman of the House subcommittee on trade almost to the floor that we were not subsidizing our stumpage in Canada. I compare his conversion to the belief that we are subsidizing to that fateful trip that Saul made on the road to Damascus, because he seems to be saying suddenly that we are subsidizing stumpage in Canada. What a wonderful time Sam Gibbons will have with the Minister if he gets the chance.

The Hon. Member said that lumber prices have gone up dramatically in the last few weeks. In fact lumber prices, at least in the Sault Ste. Marie market which is just across the border from Michigan, did go up last week marginally but have come back down this week. Since the B.C. strike was over last month, prices for spruce and jack pine, as reported to me by Marshall Beaumier of Dubreuil Bros. Limited in Sault Ste. Marie have softened. He says that prices have softened by $15 a thousand for random length spruce and jack pine and that with a tax of around $35 to $45 at 15 per cent they will be absorbing some $50 to $60 per thousand on lumber. Clearly they have a lot to absorb. The Hon. Member said that it could be easily absorbed, but I am not very sure that that is the case for Ontario where the lumber industry is paying perhaps four times the stumpage that is paid in British Columbia.

The question I wish to put to the Minister is, I believe, terribly important. I have not heard this matter debated very much. The United States has a veto over how the export tax is converted to provincial stumpage. The United States administration is telling us that when we transfer that tax to stumpage, they want the tax to amount to the same as that on the lumber produced from those trees exported to the United States. We cannot have one stumpage charge for lumber going to the United States and another stumpage charge for lumber going to the Pacific Rim or the domestic market. It is claimed that when the total charge is converted into stumpage, rather than being $550 million or $575 million, it will be $870 million. Does the Minister really believe that a tax of that magnitude can be absorbed, leaving the forest products industry in the position of being able to make money, hire employees and modernize?

Mr. Oberle: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is quite right. If it were the desire of the provinces to offset the tax with stumpage alone, it is obvious that there could not be two different stumpage systems for export to Asia and Europe and for export to the United States. That would then result in an even larger imposition. What worries me more than that is that we would become less competitive in Asia and Europe because of the increase that would be offset against the tax. It is for that reason that I politely suggested that the provinces might consider techniques other than simply transferring the tax to stumpage.

The provinces may set up heritage funds and spend money, as I suggested, in converting to more intensive forest management procedures. This tax could be offset using such arrangements. The provinces could plan for industrial diversification in regions that are entirely dependent on one industry. I am sure the Hon. Member understands very well what I mean by that. We are always looking for opportunities to diversify industries and add additional dimensions to them in order to guarantee greater stability. A heritage fund could be spent on that.

The remote and isolated regions of Canada are dependent on single industries. In the foreseeable future, we will have to develop a program of diversification for these regions because Canada will not be able to depend as much on its primary resources as it has in the past, for a number of reasons, not the least of which is that there are now some important new players in the field from the developing world. Furthermore, the industrial revolution will very dramatically and profoundly change the industrial setting and will challenge primary resources through material substitution and dramatic downsizing. Commodity prices in the wood-converting sector in particular, as well as the mining and mineral sectors, will suffer declines.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Minister is great on this particular topic but I would like to entertain questions from the Hon. Member for Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands (Mr. Manly) and I will recognize him as the last questioner.

Mr. Manly: Mr. Speaker, I listened to the Minister describe the wonderful effects that will flow from this 15 per cent export tax. He seemed to say that the United States has saved us from ourselves. At one time there was a television sitcom called Father Knows Best and now we are engaged in a farce called "Uncle Knows Best".

I am sure the Minister did not mean to mislead the House when he said something to the effect that lumber has always been traded freely between Canada and the United States. That is not in fact the case. Donald MacKay in his book entitled Empire of Wood points out that in 1930, the Smoot-Hawley Bill imposed a 10 per cent tariff on B.C. lumber which decimated the entire forest industry. The workforce was cut in half from 21,000 to a little over 10,000. Exports which had been 360 million board feet in the late 1920s were cut back to 12 million board feet. In the early 1970s, the Americans wanted guarantees that we could continue to supply to their markets.

Are we not in fact being used by the United States as a classic case of a hinterland? Are we not being used by a colonial country which, when it wants our resources, wants our markets open, and when it does not want our resources, puts up tariff walls? Is that not in fact the relationship between our two countries?

Mr. Oberle: Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member were to get into his car, drive down to the Pacific coast lumber regions and speak to the people, he would not find anyone who would consider Canada to be a hinterland. Americans are afraid of us and for very good reason. We out-perform them, we out-manoeuvre them and we out-produce them, and we have been doing so for quite a number of years.

I would remind the Hon. Member who has questioned the prospect of exciting job creation in intensive forest management that in his area, the mayors got together to form a survival group. They made some very exciting and interesting proposals long before this question came up. They said that with $20 million a year going to the forestry region the Hon. Member represents, 2,000 jobs a year could be created for people who would do nothing other than intensive forest management.

British Columbia will probably receive perhaps $300 million of the $500 million or $600 million that is to be received. Multiplying $20 million a year by the seven forestry regions in British Columbia means that we could put every British Columbian to work. This is new money that will be going into the coffers of the provincial Government. If it is applied properly, I am sure the Hon. Member would be the first to agree that there would not be an unemployment rate of 15 per cent in British Columbia. We could put literally every young person in British Columbia to work over a period of a year and a half if we did nothing more than apply this brilliant idea which came, not from the Hon. Member but from the mayors he represents.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I wish to speak in general terms about the Bill which provides for what I believe is a bad tax badly applied. As well, I would like to speak in particular of the impact of this government measure on the Province of Quebec.

I want to recall for Hon. Members that it was just 22 months ago that the Shamrock Summit took place in Quebec City. In embarking on free trade negotiations the President of the United States, the greatest country in the world, undertook to make sure trade harassment measures would not be taken against Canada. There was a spirit of sunshine and optimism surrounding those talks. Who could have imagined that in those 22 months the Americans would have taken measures against our natural gas, steel tubes, hogs and fish? The U.S. is using massive subsidies to undercut Canadian sales of wheat in traditional Canadian markets. We had the attack on shakes and shingles and now we have the American countervailing duties and negotiations which eventually brought us this proposal for an export tax of 15 per cent now before the House.

A number of Hon. Members on the government side have stood up and said this is great. They are taking a disastrous defeat and trying to interpret it as a victory. If you have been solidly beaten perhaps that is all you can do. One reason the Conservatives are in third place in the Gallup poll is specifically because they have been so incompetent in these and other negotiations. No amount of reinterpretation is going to change the fact that we have just had the most disastrous defeat this country has experienced, certainly in my memory, in its trade negotiations and discussions with our great trading partner to the south.

It was argued that this was the best solution available. I have to ask who got us into this mess? The Hon. Member for Prince George—Peace River (Mr. Oberle) said that in 1983 he recognized what was happening and felt strongly that Canada was underspending in reforestation and perhaps putting too much product into the U.S. market. There was a need for the Canadian industry to act more prudently so it would not risk this kind of action by American lumber producers. That is something I can understand. We in this country, for example, have imposed that kind of pressure on Japanese automobile manufacturers, as have the Americans, and they responded with voluntary quotas as a preferred alternative to the action we have the power to take under GATT. If leading members of the Government recognized, prior to coming to office in 1984, that there was a problem here which needed to be managed and resolved, one has to ask how they could bring us to a no-win situation as a number of Members have defined it.

The Government has said, either we endure the continuation of the countervailing duty or we impose the export tax. There is no other option available to us. The Hon. Member for Nanaimo—Alberni (Mr. Schellenberg) put it in rather stronger terms. He said there is give and take in our trading relationships. Canada gave a 15 per cent export tax and the Americans took back their countervailing duty. What he ignored was that the duty had just been put in place two months before, and the precedent has been established whereby the Americans can get involved in this kind of give and take in every area where they believe we are too effective and competitive in our trade with the U.S. In other words, Canada gives and the Americans take. Canada will give and the Americans will take under free trade as defined by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Progressive Conservative Government. That is not good enough for Canadians!

Some Hon. Members: Louder!

Mr. Cassidy: Members opposite have contributed to the debate and some, like the Hon. Member for Prince George—Peace River, have been quite thoughtful. However, I want to introduce them to a bit of basic economics and what happens when an export tax of 15 per cent is imposed.

If the tax was applied evenly across the country, which it is not, and since Canada now has about 33 per cent of the American market, the impact will be, as any student of Economics 101 at any university will tell you, that the price will go up somewhat. Consumption in the American market will fall somewhat. U.S. production will rise somewhat because they become more competitive. Canadian production will be squeezed between a decline in consumption and an increase in American production. Some marginal Canadian producers will be shut down. Canadian profit margins will be cut and possibly turned into losses. Our ability to generate profits in order to invest and be more efficient will be reduced. It may well be that the American price will go up somewhat. This is a fluctuating market.

We had a cross-country tour last week involving lumber producers, industry unions and so on. We asked what are the effects so far? It is basically too soon to tell you. I can tell you what they fear. In Atlantic Canada they suggest 9,000 to 11,000 jobs lost in that region alone. However, it is too soon to say for sure. The pink slips have not yet gone out and a number of producers will for a time allow their profits to be cut into, or they will even operate at a loss in order to generate some cash flow to meet their depreciation and pay off their bank loans. It may be some months before the dust settles and we know exactly how this works.

However, the basic economics are not going to change. It is hard to see how the price in the U.S. is going to rise by 15 per cent because every rise of 1 per cent or 2 per cent in the price will allow some American producer to continue. It will allow some marginal American producers to come back into the market and displace some of the Canadian product. There is no question that a substantial amount of the 15 per cent tax will have to be eaten up by Canadian producers and Canadian workers, or in some other way.

It has been suggested that in the matter of shakes and shingles perhaps some of the forecasts made on this side of the House were a bit exaggerated. Some forecasts suggested the whole industry would be shut down. That has not proven to be the case. It is suggested now that Canadian producers of shakes and shingles are operating at about 80 per cent of capacity, where previously they were operating flat out. Therefore, a 35 per cent tax resulted in a 20 per cent cut in Canadian production. A 15 per cent tax, whether it is an export tax or countervailing duty, may therefore result in a 5 per cent or 7 per cent cut in Canadian production. That is enough to affect a lot of communities, particularly when you recognize that this industry is not concentrated in one area. There are a great number of single industry towns with no alternatives for the company or workers.

In addition, shakes and shingles is a very different market. There was a limited American supply of cedar logs and they cannot meet their own needs. If Canada's production were to dry up the American price would sky-rocket because there is more demand than supply. It is a value added product. There was effective marketing, most of it in certain regions like the southwestern U.S. and California where, for reasons of architectural taste, cedar shakes and shingles are in particular demand.

Mr. McDermid: You just said there would be 10,000 lay-offs.

Mr. Cassidy: Therefore it is a product where Canadians have a lot going for them as opposed to a product such as 2 by 4s and random lengths. Most users do not much care whether their 2 by 4s come from Georgia or Ontario or British Columbia.

Mr. McDermid: That is not true either.

Mr. Cassidy: All right, I recognize there are certain taste variations but not an awful lot. A lot of the users may be prepared to pay $5 extra a thousand feet for Canadian product, but not a huge sum extra. In shakes and shingles, nonetheless, Canadian profit margins have been shaved and Canadian production is down. U.S. prices have increased and U.S. production is up. That is what we are saying will happen in the lumber industry as a consequence of what the Government has done. That will be the consequence of the no-win negotiation policy which the Government followed.

• (1920)

When I spoke to the producers in Quebec last week it was very clear that when they agreed to the 10 per cent offer made by the Government in its sudden reversal of position in the early fall, they did so with a gun at their heads. When the 15 per cent was proposed to the First Ministers in early December, the producers had a half hour to consider it. They did not agree.

I am getting a bit sick of hearing government Members refer to what Jack Munro had to say in commenting on the box in which the Conservatives have put Canada because of their lousy and incompetent negotiating position. They continually ignore the fact that their friends, the producers, the members of the Boards of Trade, the Chambers of Commerce and the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, have turned on the Government because of its lack of competence in handling this situation.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I would like to comment specifically on the very serious situation existing in Quebec today as a result of the pernicious tax proposed in Bill C-37 and the unfair implementation of this measure which will have a particularly prejudicial impact on softwood lumber producers in Ontario, Quebec and the Atlantic provinces.

Mr. Speaker, the Quebec Lumber Manufacturers Association sent a telegram to the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney), dated January 7, 1987. In this telegram they said clearly that:

The Quebec Lumber Manufacturers Association deplores the terms of the agreement signed by your Government with the American Government, because:

1. It gives U.S. industry an entirely unwarranted right to monitor the progress of the operation and the implementation of replacement measures.

It is a matter of sovereignty, the same issue that was raised by my Leader (Mr. Broadbent) and the New Democratic Party.

2. It completely ignores the case of Quebec companies which have asked that a special rate apply to them.

3. It may lead to plant closings, especially near the U.S. border.

Mr. Speaker, further to its telex, the same association contacted the Minister for International Trade to raise other points. They said, and I quote again:

—the agreement signed with the U.S. Government contains taxable products that were not taxable according to the preliminary decision by the Department of Commerce on October 16 last year.

We are levying an export tax on products that were not affected by U.S. tax proposals in the first place.

A great number of processed products will therefore become taxable, such as lath, fencing materials and processed lumber.

All three are exempted by the Americans.

The Quebec Lumber Manufacturers Association Inc. therefore asks you to review the terms of your agreement with the American Government so that it applies only to the items listed in the preliminary ruling of October 16.

Can the Government make such changes? Essentially, under the terms of the agreement, the answer is no. The Government has agreed to impose a tax on all exports with a value equal to 15 per cent of $500 million.

What I ask, Mr. Speaker, is this. Is it fair to impose this tax to Quebec and other Eastern producers when stumpage fees in Quebec are between 50 and 100 per cent higher than stumpage fees on the same volume of unprocessed lumber in British Columbia? Is this fair? Certainly not.

However, Mr. Speaker, Quebec producers will indeed be paying the same tax even though their stumpage fees are higher.

My second point, and I am telling this directly to the Parliamentary Secretary, is that the f.o.b. value, which is the price at the plant, is about $230 Canadian per 1000 feet while it is about $140 to $160 per 1000 feet in British Columbia.

The tax is imposed on the export value at the sawmill. That means a 15 per cent charge on $230 in Quebec and a 15 per cent charge on the sawmill price of $160 in British Columbia.

Now, generally speaking, that means that the average charge will amount to aproximately $24 per 1,000 board feet in British Columbia and $35 in Quebec, that is $11 more. On top of that, as the Parliamentary Secretary admitted, stumpage fees paid by Quebec producers are much higher than in British Columbia. Is it fair to impose an export tax which is not equal throughout Canada, which is almost 40 per cent higher in Eastern Canada than in Western Canada? Is it fair for all the Quebec Members of the Progressive Conservative Party who support the Government? Are they really going to vote in favour of a bill which will establish a tax of $35 per 1,000 board feet in Quebec and $24 per 1,000 board feet in British Columbia? Is that fair to the producers, the workers, the companies, the sawmills of Quebec, Mr. Speaker? I say it is not.

Thirdly, Mr. Speaker, there are in Quebec some 18 sawmill companies, small border sawmills in the Eastern townships and in the Gaspe Peninsula, on the border between Quebec and the State of Maine. Well, those companies listened to the new Conservative philosophy of Ronald Reagan and the American Government, and therefore they do not get their wood from Canadian forests, but from the forests of the State of Maine. Therefore, they compete to buy their raw wood on the American market under all the U.S. regulations, with all the competition, free trade, etc. They import that wood in Canada. In Canada, they produce lumber in the sawmills and then they re-export that lumber to the United States.

The United States have now challenged the Canadian stumpage system. The wood used by these 18 sawmills near the border with Maine comes from the United States. Consequently, it is not subject to our stumpage fee system, but to the American one. Nevertheless, exports from these border companies, except five which have been exempted, will be subject to the 15 per cent export tax. These are thirteen companies which will have to close, as they will not be in any position to compete, since they have to pay the wood in U.S. dollars and then the same taxes as other producers in Quebec.

Fourthly, Mr. Speaker, Quebec just passed a Bill, unanimously, to increase stumpage fees and force lumber companies to reforest and manage the forests in a better way.

Mr. Speaker, despite the fact that this new system is being introduced in Quebec, there is no guarantee that the companies, saddled with these new responsibilities, will be exempted from the 15 per cent tax. Since in Quebec taxes are higher, stumpage fees are also higher and there are now new responsibilities regarding forest management, I suppose that the export tax will be eliminated faster than in British Columbia. To be fair, the export tax should be higher in British Columbia or, alternatively, the stumpage fee increase should be more substantial than in the East. I suspect, however, that people from British Columbia will say: 15 per cent and no more.

Finally, Mr. Bourassa, the Quebec Premier, gave a commitment to the National Assembly that all revenues from this new forestry regime would be invested in the forest industry. How could anyone guarantee such a thing, Mr. Speaker? According to the terms of this agreement, the Americans, in consultation with the forest industry in the United States, will have not only the right to be consulted, but also the right and even the duty to give agreement to these measures.

I could go on like this, Mr. Speaker, but I will conclude with this: in Quebec, the profit margin is 7 or 8 per cent. Should this tax be imposed, all affluent producers will be in a losing position.

• (1930)

[English]

Mr. Greenaway: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member was trying to equate this situation with shakes and shingles, telling us that the Americans preferred the shakes and shingles that we produce in Canada because of their high quality. He went on to say that he thought our lumber was not held in that high esteem and that a two-by-four is a two-by-four.

Let me quote briefly from an article that appeared in the Toronto Star on January 10. Harry Horrocks, a director of government affairs for the U.S. National Lumber and Building Material Dealers Association said:

> Home builders prefer Canadian spruce over American species, such as yellow pine, for window frames, trim and wall supports.

In the same article, Kevin O'Neal, a senior buyer with the Universal Forest Products Company based in Grand Rapids, Michigan, said:

> There are sound reasons why U.S. builders use Canadian softwood. It is far superior in many uses, so it isn't just a matter of price.

Canadian softwood has always been at a premium in the United States because it is so much superior to the product that is produced there. I want the Hon. Member to realize that, because it is not at all comparable to the shakes and shingles issue.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for his intervention. I must cede to his knowledge. Perhaps I have been somewhat more indirectly aware of the fact that the quality of our lumber is superior even in places like Georgie where there is a healthy supply of native product, but is preferred for different applications. That is one reason why we have been competitive. I do stand corrected in that matter, but I was trying to say that in the case of cedar shakes and shingles there is simply not the supply in the United States to meet the demand.

In the case of the lumber industry, it is arguable that the Americans do need some products from Canada because we have a third of their market. However, there is ample supply and the United States could go without the Canadian product for a number of years, even if they would prefer to have the quality products that are available from here.

The Hon. Member will recall that I suggested that some of the export tax will translate into a higher price in the United States but will have other impacts, including a very substantial effect on profit margins. I said in French that Quebec producers suggest that their 7 per cent or 8 per cent margins prior to the export tax and U.S. countervail will be cut down to zero or perhaps minus 1 per cent or 2 per cent as a consequence. While it will not be minus 7 per cent or minus 8 per cent, it will certainly drop to a level where they cannot stay in business indefinitely. That is a serious situation.

[Translation]

Mr. Keeper: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for my hon. colleague. I am amazed to see that there is not a single Conservative Member representing Quebec to ask him questions.

Mrs. Duplessis: That is a little too much, Mr. Speaker!

Mr. Keeper: Mr. Speaker, it is quite clear that you have—

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I do not want the Hon. Member to reflect who is in the House and who is not in the House. I can see Quebec Members, but I do not want any Member to reflect on who is or who is not in the House.

[Translation]

Mrs. Duplessis: Mr. Speaker, I wish to tell my hon. friend opposite that I am a Quebecer and that I represent the Louis-Hébert ridings which includes the cities of Sainte-Foy, Sillery, Cap-Rouge, and l'Ancienne Lorette. Unfortunately, it has no lumber industry. I will let my hon. colleagues who have lumber industries in their riding ask questions. It is because you said that there was no Member representing Quebec present in the House.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I hope that Hon. Members would take it easy. It is that time of day. I hope he will not reflect on attendance in the chamber.

[Translation]

Mr. Keeper: Mr. Speaker, I did not mean to reflect on the presence or absence of any Member, but I am quite surprised that no Conservative Member representing Quebec availed himself of the opportunity to direct a question to our hon. colleague following his remarks, especially because he said this tax was unfair for Quebec and that the taxation level was higher in Quebec than in British Columbia.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Does the Hon. Member have a question or comment for his colleague? If so, I wish he would put it. The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy).

[Translation]

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I think my colleague has asked a direct question, namely is the Government aware of the fact—

[English]

I will say this in English for the benefit of Members from outside Quebec. The tax will average $35 a thousand board feet on Quebec production compared to $24 a thousand board feet on British Columbia production if it is applied at the 15 per cent rate.

An Hon. Member: What about Ontario?

Mr. Cassidy: Ontario will be somewhere in between. The undertaking to the Americans was $500 million that would be achieved by a 15 per cent rate. It does not appear as though the Government is prepared to charge the tax at a 8 per cent or 10 per cent rate on production coming from Quebec, which might be more reasonable.

In other words, the Canadian negotiators were either ill informed or were such bad negotiators that they agreed to apply a tax that is $11 a thousand board feet higher on the higher cost producers in eastern Canada than it is on the lower cost producers in western Canada.

How can Quebec Members of Parliament from the government side justify a tax which will be higher on the high cost producers in eastern Canada than on the lower cost producers in western Canada? I point out that traditionally the transportation costs to end points such as Chicago levelled out the prices. Therefore, when Quebec production reaches Chicago it will be $10 or $11 a thousand cubic feet higher than products coming from British Columbia. Prior to the imposition of the tax that production reached that centre at roughly the same price.

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member said that business groups are not in favour of this measure. Since the Hon. Member likes to read telegrams and letters into the record, he might be interested in the following letter which is addressed to the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney). It states:

> This letter confirms our support for the negotiated settlement of the lumber duty problem between the Governments of Canada and the United States.

It goes on to be most supportive of the actions and, as a matter of fact, the last paragraph states:

> Informed business leaders in the west recognize that you achieved the best resolution possible out of a very difficult situation.

It is signed by Graham Clarke, Chairman of the Vancouver Board of Trade, which is a very significant West Coast business organization. They are very much aware of this industry and many of its members are involved in it. I suggest that it is an excellent endorsement of the activities of the Government.

Let me quote another letter that is addressed to the Minister for International Trade. It is from Westar Timber Ltd. It states:

> Westar Timber wishes to offer its support for the negotiated settlement of the duty dispute over softwood lumber with our American neighbours.

● (1940)

The final paragraph reads:

> As Westar Timber has withdrawn its membership from the Council of Forest Industries of British Columbia, we would appreciate being kept directly informed of any further developments.

I think it is fair to say that industries in general which are involved do support the decision which was taken and the solution.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I did read into the record the telegram which was signed by Richard Lacasse, the director general of the Association of Lumber Producers of the Province of Quebec. Quebec is the second largest exporting province to the United States after British Columbia, with 20 per cent of the production. I can tell you that he is a very competent and legitimate spokesperson for his industry. I have no suggestion that there is any quarrel with the opposition that the association has taken to the Government's decision—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Thank you.

Mr. Cassidy: —including when they make the point of the loss—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Thank you. The time for questions and comments has now terminated. Debate.

Before I recognize the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan), I would like to say that he is the last speaker for the 20 minutes. The eight hours will then commence. There will be 10-minute speeches after the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys completes his speech.

Mr. Gauthier: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. McDermid: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): One at a time. The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier).

Mr. Cassidy: Read the letter from Adam Zimmerman. He speaks for the industry, doesn't he? You keep forgetting about him.

Mr. Crosbie: He speaks for the NDP, not the industry.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, there is disorder in this place.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) on a point of order.

Mr. Gauthier: I would just would like some information from the Chair. I understand that you, Mr. Speaker, just referred to the eight hours of debate allowed at this stage of debate. Does that include the 10 minutes allowed for questions and comments? If it does, is there a rationale for that, because actually the 10 minutes is not debate?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I would have thought the Hon. Member would remember May 16, 1983, at page 25477 of the Commons Debates. The Chair had ruled at that time:

> The Chair understands that the Special Committee intended the ten-minute period to be included in the eight hours.

The Chair concludes:

> It is my conclusion that the time taken for the ten-minute question and answer period must be added to the actual time of speeches in determining the total eight-hour period during the second segment of consideration of second reading of a Bill.

I think that is clear. I know the Hon. Member will remember that.

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Speaker, I just have a point of clarification. I had checked with the Table earlier in the evening to ask when the eight-hour period would conclude. The information I was given was 7.36 p.m. That was the time that the eight-hour period was up.

Mr. Gauthier: Order.

Mr. McDermid: I am sorry, if that has changed—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I would like to bring to the attention of the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary that I have been keeping a very close time, along with the Table, and the final time was 7.43 p.m.

The Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan).

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, I have a great deal more faith in your watch than the watch of the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister for International Trade (Mr. McDermid).

I am very pleased to have this opportunity to speak on Bill C-37 because I believe it is an extremely important Bill, not only for what it brings forward in its contents but for its ramifications and what it is going to mean to this country if it is passed. I think this is a very bad Bill. The idea of the Bill is bad. What it is going to do to Canada's negotiating powers in the future I think will be even more detrimental than the detrimental contents of the Bill itself.

This whole idea of reducing and giving away Canada's sovereignty to the United States started in an ill-conceived speech in December to the Economic Club in New York. That was over two years ago. At that time the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) said that Canada is open for business. In reply the Leader of the Opposition said: "It may be open for business but Canada is not for sale". These were very prophetic words, because what we are seeing now is Canada and Canadians for sale. The interests and heritage of Canadians are for sale.

This particular Memorandum of Understanding which was signed, and which brought about Bill C-37, is a very bad document. It was badly negotiated and badly thought out. Its principle is just horrible. It started primarily on December 30, 1986 when the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) made her first final offer to the United States to settle the dispute by raising provincial stumpage fees by 10 per cent. This was turned down by the United States. She made a second final offer on November 26 when she suggested there be imposed a 15 per cent export tax on Canadian softwood. However, this offer was rejected by the United States. On December 12 the United States made a counter-offer and the Minister for International Trade rejected it because she said if it was accepted the United States would be able to manage Canadian resources. Yet on December 30 the United States accepted an offer of 15 per cent and that is exactly what it is doing, managing Canadian resources.

This is a very, very sad commentary. It reveals that the Canadian delegation was very poorly prepared. In fact, a report shows that there is a strong rebound in the price of the lumber industry's products and that the financial condition of this industry improved during 1985-86. This is not something which was taken into consideration by the Canadian delegation. However, it was something taken into consideration by the American delegation which decided it would accept the 15 per cent offer from Canada because, if it did go any further, the improved condition of the American forest industry would be a detrimental position for it as far as the arbitration and settling of this situation is concerned.

What also has happened, in addition to the poor economic deal, the Government has created a very bad and detrimental precedent for the future of this country. It has given away the right to negotiate the price for its own resources. Certainly Canada will negotiate prices. It will negotiate the care and control of its own resources. However, here the precedent is that it has allowed the United States to dictate the prices for Canadian resources.

The Government is saying that this is the best deal it could possibly get. This is the deal that it accepted with the gun to its head. This is not a negotiation. This is a fire sale of Canadian resources and the interests of Canadians.

What is going to happen? Canadians do not believe that this deal is going to be beneficial to Canada. Certainly, Canadians do not believe that this precedent is going to do anything but harm to the future economic possibilities and aspirations of this country.

What is happening now is that the Minister is going to embark upon a $12 million advertisement campaign to try to force this deal down the throats of Canadians, to try to gloss with smoke and mirrors and pretty pictures the catastrophe which looms in before the softwood lumber industry and other industries if this precedent is followed, as I am afraid it may be.

What is going to happen? Canadians are not going to be fooled. This deal is going to continue to rebound in the face of the Government and in the face of Canadians. What kind of Government would force this upon Canadians? The aspects, the eventualities which will happen in the future to this country have not been taken into consideration.

We have a 15 per cent export tax on softwood lumber. There is no allowance made in this agreement for a change in the difference between the Canadian and American dollar. If the Canadian dollar goes up vis-a-vis the American dollar this will just be devastating, wiping out a great many of our lumber producers in Canada, even more than will be wiped out by the agreement entered into and agreed to by by this Government. So there are many aspects to consider.

● (1950)

The Minister of State has called Clause 5a of the agreement the sovereignty clause because it provides the following:

The Government of Canada may reduce or eliminate the export charge on the basis of increased stumpage or other charges by provinces on softwood lumber production.

Yet Clause 2(3) of the Bill which is now before us states that the Memorandum of Understanding may be referred to in interpreting this Bill. This establishes that the Minister's sovereignty claim is not correct. In fact, Clause 5b of the agreement provides:

Calculation of the value of any replacement measures in relation to the export charge will be subject to further consultations and agreement between the two Governments.

The Government would have us believe that this export charge, presumably to be used by the federal Government and the provincial Governments, will go back into the lumber industry. The Americans have another idea with respect to the agreement. They do not for one minute expect that this money will go back into the industry. In fact, if it does go back into the industry they will consider it a breach of the agreement.

Clause 6 of the Memorandum of Understanding provides:

The Government of Canada will take no action, and will take all reasonable steps to ensure that no other governmental body in Canada takes any action, directly or indirectly, which has the effect of offsetting or reducing the export charge or replacement measures—

President Reagan has pledged in writing that he will take action if Canada does not live up to the terms of the agreement. Attached to the Memorandum of Understanding dated December 30 is a letter addressed to the Coalition for Fair Lumber Imports. In that letter U.S. Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige identifies seven different types of Canadian government assistance to industry which the U.S. will not accept. These include rebate, remission, deferral of the export charge, provision of grants or low-cost loans, exemption from other federal and provincial government charges, assumption of obligations currently borne by the industry, reduction in stumpage or other fees, changes in the way that the volume of timber harvest is measured, and the non-competitive awarding of contracts for silviculture, road-building, recreational and other forestry activities. This is something from which we will come away empty-handed.

I think that the only point the Government can make is that if we are to lose 15 per cent it is better that it remain in Canadian hands as opposed to American hands. But that is the only point that the Government can possibly make.

So what are we giving up? First, we are giving up something that we probably need not have had to pay. We are giving up something that the economic indicators in the United States tell us is something that is not necessary because the lumber industry there is healthy, and getting healthier all the time. While it may regress later on, at this point in time it is getting healthier. That strengthens the Canadian position, but it is not something which the Canadians took into consideration in their haste to sign this Memorandum of Understanding.

Second, if there is a change in the American-Canadian dollar ratio, and if the Canadian dollar improves with respect to the American dollar then this measure will become even more detrimental to Canada.

Third, we are selling future relations and negotiations with the United States down the river as a result of entering into this agreement, not to mention the fourth point which is what it will do to the lumber industry in Canada. It has been stated by Bob Rivard of the Canadian Lumbermen's Assocation that lumber production could drop by as much as 25 per cent in 1987. The Government of Canada continues to insist that the provinces can use their share of the export charge revenue as they see fit. There will be a very interesting session of meetings between the federal Government and the provincial Governments. If the provincial Governments buy this federal government line I will be very surprised.

Fifth, what will this measure do to Canada's relations in the GATT? How can Canada now say that what the United States is doing to our country is wrong when Canada directly and blatantly violated the principles of GATT by entering into this Memorandum of Understanding with the United States? This is the first time that we have imposed a tax on trade with only one of our trading partners, which violates the first principle of international trade. What we have done is we have said: "United States, you can negotiate with us and enter into our business. You can pass judgment on our laws and regulations. If something hurts you, then you can hold us up at the border by threatening a countervailing tariff or an import charge and we will just knuckle under". Why should the Americans not believe this when we have given them every reason even before this to believe it? We did away with FIRA.

In the negotiations with the United States we were blatantly told what should and should not be included. The Government said that there would not be countervailing sanctions or tariffs on Canadian products. The Government said that the United States would not do that. Yet what happened? It has been doing it ever since. The way in which the Government has handled these negotiations amounts to nothing more than waving a big red flag in front of the American lobby organizations. By saying that we want free trade with the United States we have alarmed all the lobby organizations which have run to Washington to talk to their representatives and their Congressmen. What we have done is we have firmed up the position of the industry in the United States by ensuring that Canadian imports and Canadian products will never be a threat again.

The softwood lumber case is not the only case to consider. I refer Hon. Members to the recent ruling of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission in the United States with respect to the sale of natural gas from Canadian producers to American buyers. The way the situation has worked in the past is that Canadian producers enter into agreements with American buyers. Included in these agreements is a clause with respect to a charge for transportation through the Canadian pipeline system. That charge is passed along to the purchasers in the United States. This arrangement is set out in the agreements and agreed to by the National Energy Board, which is the Canadian regulatory body. On December 3 the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission in the United States said: "No. You cannot do that. Canadian natural gas is becoming too competitive". We are hearing this from the same country which three years ago said that we had to get rid of the National Energy Program and treat Americans the same as Canadians. They told us that we could not show bias to Canadians, that we had to open up our oil and gas industry to Americans.

What happened? We opened up the industry and they turned on us. I am referring to the same regulatory body which in 1984 outlawed Canadian take-or-pay contracts with the United States. We do away with take or pay contracts. We do it the way the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission wants, we will get a competitive edge on price for a fraction of time and then they change the rules on us again.

Why should they not think that they can change the rules on us again? We have been down on our knees to them for the last two years begging for a free trade agreement, saying that we do not care what it is in the free trade agreement, take what you want, but when we sign it, call it a free trade agreement.

That is not good enough for Canadians, and why should it be? Canadians are the losers. Not only are Canadians losing, but they are being shut out. It is the most one-sided negotiation in the history of Canadian trade. The Government is not saying that there is a tarnishment or a reduction in Canadian sovereignty. It is saying that there is no reduction, there is no imposition on Canadian sovereignty. That is what it is saying to us in the House, but that is not what it is meaning with respect to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission decision.

The Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Masse) when he was in Los Angeles on January 7 said that this decision by the FERC was detrimental to Canada. He stated:

> It also raises serious questions of extra-territoriality—the extension of U.S. regulatory practices to matters under Canadian jurisdiction.

Then he goes on to talk about the discriminatory Superfund levies on imported oil. He stated:

> The U.S., also, has recently decided to implement discriminatory Superfund levies on imported oil. These additional tariffs, while small, represent an ominous step backwards in our progress towards freer bilateral energy trade. They are particularly burdensome to Canadian refiners who already face import duties on oil products exported to the United States, whereas American refiners incur no duties on almost all their exports to Canada. I am also concerned that this could establish a precedent for more substantial tariff increases.

Mr. Speaker, this is the Minister in the Government saying that the policies of this Government on trade with the United States is not working. He is saying that the extension of the U.S. regulatory practices raises serious questions, instead of saying that he is concerned that this could establish a precedent for more substantial tariff increases.

This Bill is not only detrimental, it will be a catastrophe for Canadian trade. The damage will not be pinpointed for a few years. As the years go on, we will look back on this legislation more and more with regret that we ever passed it.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): On questions or comments the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway (Mr. Waddell).

Mr. Waddell: I do not have an extensive comment. I know that my friend, the critic, has some comments. I will let him ask the questions.

I wish to congratulate the Hon. Member for flagging for the first time in this debate this additional issue. The fact is that there has recently been an implication that the Americans have continued on and have now moved to energy. They started with lumber, and now the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission has said that it does not like the way that Canadians are charging and pricing their natural gas. They even interfered in contracts that had been made in good faith by Canadian producers with American buyers. Where does it end? That is the flaw in the Government's case. It said that we will make a deal out of court. We will agree to a 15 per cent tariff and we will save the money. It could have been 30 per cent or 32 per cent. The flaw is that once you do that to a bully, and the United States is into a bully mood with Canada these days on trade, the bully will never stop. So this was the next step taken a week or two ago. It is outlined in a recent issue of The Financial Post. The Parliamentary Secretary would do well to read this. The United States is at it again. What is next? Steel, or other products? Hydro? They may not like the way we are handling our hydro.

Mr. McDermid: Don't forget the cut flowers and the raspberries.

Mr. Waddell: They think it is funny.

Mr. McDermid: No, we do not. We are trying to tell you to get into the real world.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. The Member for Vancouver—Kingsway has the floor.

Mr. Waddell: The real world is that the Americans have started to continue this.

An Hon. Member: Ask a question.

Mr. Waddell: I am making a comment. The Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan) has flagged this issue. The fact is that the Americans are already moving from softwood lumber on to energy. The Government has led Canada into that and it will keep going that way.

Mr. McDermid: Check with the EEC and Japan and see what is happening there.

Mr. Friesen: I have listened to the Hon. Member's speech. At one point he made reference to the fact that there will undoubtedly be a change in the value of the Canadian dollar, which could affect the flow of products across to the United States. It is a legitimate concern. In light of the point that he raised, I would ask the Hon. Member in all seriousness if he has read the entire Memorandum of Understanding?

Mr. MacLellan: I have not read the whole Memorandum of Understanding, but I have read a good part of it and excerpts. If there is a guard against that type of thing, I would appreciate the Hon. Member telling me.

Mr. Friesen: I would like to point out that the Hon. Member made a very dramatic speech. I must say I enjoyed listening to it, even if it was full of errors. But it was a good speech from his point of view. It was flawed because he has not read the Memorandum. The Memorandum does allow for a re-examination of the entire agreement when there is a dramatic change in product flow across the border. If the Hon. Member examines the effect of the Canadian dollar on the cost of the product, he will quickly agree that when the cost of Canadian product increases and becomes uncompetitive there will be a dramatic drop. If the Canadian dollar will affect the flow, the Memorandum and the whole agreement will be re-examined.

Mr. MacLellan: If my speech is flawed, so far none of the flaws have been brought out by the Hon. Member. When it refers to product flow across the border, to say that relates to the exchange and the currencies between Canada and the United States is really stretching the point. There is absolutely no relation to the product flow and the fact of the difference in the currency rate.

I am glad that the Hon. Member is not a lawyer. If he drew up an agreement containing that terminology with the intent of bringing into the wording the exchange rate between Canada and the United States, we would be in more trouble than we are right now with this Government.

Mr. Langdon: I have a relatively minor point to raise and register with the Member whose speech I have enjoyed. I wish to register the reports and briefs which we have received this week from the Canadian Paper Workers Union emphasizing their very strong opposition to this lumber agreement.

• (2010)

As the Hon. Member will know, they represent softwood lumber workers in the eastern half of Canada. Would the Hon. Member be able to explain the difference between perspectives which exist among workers in western Canada, represented through the IWA, and workers in the central and eastern parts of Canada, represented through the Canadian Paperworkers Union? Would he be able to comment on that?

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, I do not think there are any people involved in the lumber industry who are more concerned than the people in Atlantic Canada. At the present time the stumpage fees in Atlantic Canada are considerably higher than they are in Quebec, Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia.

It could mean that the actual cost to Atlantic Canadians will be even more devastating than it is to Canadians in other provinces. This is an area where the economy is less able to bear any kind of strain than any other part of Canada; that is not to say that the other four provinces are very affluent. It certainly does not mean that.

However, the economy of Atlantic Canada, as the Minister of Transport (Mr. Crosbie) knows, is in a very bad state indeed. This is where the worst results and the worst impact will be felt.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I will recognize the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary and the Hon. Member for Egmont (Mr. Henderson) on two very short questions.

Mr. McDermid: Mr. Speaker, I gather my hon. friend is a lawyer. He delivered a 20 minute speech in 35 minutes, trying to poke holes in an agreement which he had not even read. I find that to be absolutely irresponsible. I can understand why he got into politics and out of the practice of law.

Mr. MacLellan: Mr. Speaker, I am surprised by the comments of the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary. It just goes to show the straws which the Government and the Conservative Party are clutching. Those were the comments of a man who was putting forward the case for the Government, and the most significant thing he came up with was that I did not read the whole agreement. That is the worst thing he can say about what I said. I am still waiting for the flaws in my speech which Hon. Members opposite say are there. They have had their chance; obviously my speech was flawless, and I thank them for their plaudits.

Mr. Henderson: Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—The Sydneys (Mr. MacLellan) for presenting an excellent speech, but I have one very quick question for him.

As he will know, only five softwood lumber producers in the Maritimes will be exempt under the agreement. Producers from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick especially complained about being hit not only by the 15 per cent tax but about the fact that they were already paying the highest stumpage fees anywhere in Canada.

Since there has already been a diversion of softwood lumber which would normally be exported to the United States from Quebec, and since the 15 per cent tax has been put on that lumber, they are now undercutting the local New Brunswick and Nova Scotia markets.

Would the Hon. Member care to comment on that? Would he tell the House whether he has had any representations made to him by producers in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick?

Mr. MacLellan: I thank the Hon. Member for Egmont (Mr. Henderson) for raising that point; I forgot to mention it.

I received representations today from an association in Nova Scotia on that particular point.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The time provided for questions and comments has now terminated.

Mr. Lorne Greenaway (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of State (Forestry and Mines)): Mr. Speaker, I take it we are now on 10 minute speeches.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): That is right.

Mr. Greenaway: Then I can throw away the first half of my speech; the second half is the best, anyway.

Now we can cut out a lot of the rhetoric and get down to the point of this debate. The only thing I could say relating to the first half of my speech would be: I wonder what opposition Members would have been saying for the last two days if they had awakened on December 31 and discovered that we had wound up with a 20 per cent tariff and all the money going to the United States because we had not negotiated. I throw that out for what it is worth. We were caught in a tough position. I think we got the best of the deal as it was laid out to us.

As industry representatives said to me last week in Vancouver, "It is done. It is over. Let us get on with it". I think that is what Canadians want us to do now. They want us to put it behind us and get on with trying to make what we have work.

The Hon. Member for Egmont (Mr. Henderson) asked a very good question. There are about 350 sawmills in Nova Scotia. It is basically a domestic market. They are justifiably worried. If provinces with lower stumpages start shipping lumber to the East and it ends up in Nova Scotia, it will devastate that province.

That is one of the reasons the Minister of State for Forestry and Mines (Mr. Merrithew) set up the Council of Forestry Ministers. I pay tribute to him for that. It is probably the most significant thing he has accomplished so far in that the Ministers of Forestry will be meeting on a regular basis.

I happened to attend a meeting with them in Vancouver two weeks ago, and I was amazed at the goodwill between provincial and federal Ministers. They elect their own chairman, and the federal Minister sits as a member. They are now being called upon to work out some of the difficult details. It is not very difficult to collect it, but they are trying to work out all the problems over and above the problems caused by the implementation of the tax.

Hon. Members should know that in the determination which came down in October the commission found that 14.5 per cent of the 15 per cent tariff levied was due to a stumpage subsidy. This says to Canada that stumpage is the problem. The federal Government is caught in a position where it does not want to impose a tax on a provincial resource. Naturally we would like to get out of it as quickly as possible, but it will not be easy.

Someone mentioned earlier tonight that with the export tax there will be a $550 million per year levy on the industry. However, if we try to swing that over to stumpage, it will be over $800 million. If that were imposed upon the industry, it would be very disabling.

My own constituency produces 10 per cent of the softwood in Canada. The interior of B.C. ships 80 per cent of the softwood out of that province. If anything over 5 per cent of that 15 per cent were switched over to stumpage, it would be very dislocating. They could not take much more than that. They feel their stumpage system is pretty fair. I agree with them. I have looked into it very closely with an accountant friend and I think the interior of British Columbia—and there are two different stumpage systems—is paying its fair share.

I am glad the Council of Forestry Ministers is in charge of looking after this very difficult and perhaps impossible situation. Who should know better, other than perhaps industry with whom they will be in close consultation, as to how to work out the percentage stumpage increases versus export tax? As we know, there are some provinces paying high enough stumpage now and should not be asked to pay any more. It is not going to be easy. We have problems with some of the "Reman"—the manufacturing people. They were here to see us today. I think they saw all Parties. We do not say we do not have problems, but that too will have to be worked out with the council and with External Affairs. Hopefully we can renegotiate some of those inequities.

I think we are all very concerned about where the $550 million is going. We have heard what Ontario is going to do with its portion. The Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Oberle) came up with a very interesting proposal tonight. He suggested that my Province of British Columbia might look at something like a heritage fund and use some of the money to reforest and get into some permanent silviculture programs.

Mr. Waddell: Can we do that?

Mr. Greenaway: I would hope we could. We cannot impose our will upon the provinces.

Mr. Waddell: Do we have to ask the Americans?

Mr. Greenaway: No, we do not. We can do it. What we cannot do is give money to upgrade a mill, build a road or things like that. To the best of my knowledge we can do reforesting and silviculture. We can also spend money on research, also badly needed, and we can spend money on educating foresters. Most forestry schools are in desperate need of extra funds to buy good new high-tech equipment. We have to look at the pursuit of new markets. We should be using this money for that.

In the Province of British Columbia there will be a windfall of about $350 million. Obviously B.C. will not put all of that back into the forest resource. I think my colleagues in the federal Government from British Columbia will be urging the Government to put much of that money back into forestry because we are behind in reforestation. We have to go to some better silviculture methods not only in B.C. but right across the country. What has always bothered me is that we have been using silviculture as a job creation project. What we really need is to get into long term silviculture projects as was mentioned earlier by the Minister of State for Science and Technology. On Vancouver Island the mayor set up a program called the Vancouver Island Mayor's Program for reforestation and silviculture. It is an ongoing program. It puts many people to work and it pays tremendous dividends. That is what we should be spending our money on.

Just to get in a plug for my own area, 80 per cent of the resource of softwood lumber shipped out of B.C. comes from the interior. I am saying to the provincial Government that 80 per cent of any money returned should be returned to the interior because that is where the tax will be coming from. Let us put it back where it is desperately needed.

Over the last few months, I have been the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of State for Forestry and Mines. The appointment was made in October. Ever since this Government took office in 1984 many of us have fought and fought hard to have the ministry of Forestry and Mines elevated to a full line ministry. After watching this develop over the last few months, I think we would have been well served by a full ministry, properly staffed with a budget. We would have had a much easier time working with the industry. We would probably have had better statistics. I am not going to say we did not have good negotiators, but I would have liked to have seen a full line ministry of forests take a more active role.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Greenaway: That might not be popular with some members of the Government but I think it is common sense.

Mr. Manly: Right on.

Mr. Greenaway: If a man is going to be condemned in this place for saying a few things in that vein then so be it. Parliamentary secretaryships are not that expensive.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Greenaway: I see the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) here. He and I are in discussions at the moment. We have discovered that in his riding mainly and in part of mine we have an outbreak of spruce budworm which involves 200,000 hectares, which is a lot of land. The provincial ministry has not yet begun to get a handle on it. I have just received a report that if we could spend $7 million in this next season on spraying projects we might be able to get the problem under control. That is the kind of money we have to spend on our resource and that is what should be done.

I will leave it at that, Mr. Speaker. It is not a happy day for the country. We are not pleased with what happended. Anyone who thinks we could have got a better deal is whistling in the wind. I, for one, am pleased with what the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) has accomplished. I think she has made the best of a bad situation. Let us go on from here and see what we can do.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Hon. Member said at the beginning that he would have to throw half of his speech away and only read half of it. I would like to hear the other half now. I would give unanimous consent that he so proceed.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Greenaway: The other half is all political.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Debate. The Hon. Member for Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands (Mr. Manly).

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to speak on an issue that is vitally important to my riding, to my Province of British Columbia and to Canada. I was very interested in the comments of the Hon. Member for Cariboo—Chilcotin (Mr. Greenaway) who just spoke. It was generally a low key defence. He did not want to storm the baricades in defence of this Bill at all, but I was particularly interested in his final comments calling attention to the need for a full ministry of forestry. That is something that anybody who comes from a constituency that depends upon the forest industry, as so many of us do, would urge upon the Government with a great deal of force and conviction. It is a promise the Government made in 1984 which has not been kept.

I believe, as the Hon. Member suggested, that it is a promise we are paying for because if the Government had kept its promise we would have had better statistics and people who would have been able to negotiate and represent us better in this whole issue than has been the case. I very much commend the Hon. Member for saying that, particularly as the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of State for Science and Technology. He knows whereof he speaks.

There is a legitimate debate taking place in British Columbia at the moment about whether or not the 15 per cent export tax was the best deal possible with the United States after it had imposed the 15 per cent countervail. There are two sides to that debate. Because of its effect on Canadian sovereignty and because of the very bad precedent it sets for other industries, I believe it is a bad deal. Quite apart from that debate, I do not think there can be any debate about the more basic facts that the Government has bungled the entire Canada-United States trading relationship from day one. The softwood lumber fiasco is only the most blatant example of this.

The basic flaw in the Government's approach was the Prime Minister's (Mr. Mulroney) belief that his personal friendship with the President of the United States could guarantee and even enhance Canada's trading relationship with that country. It is a naive and rather touching belief that President Reagan would veto any legislation that was protectionist against Canada. This badly underestimated the degree of protectionism in the United States.

The Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton) two years ago warned about the dangers of protectionism and the way in which it would affect our softwood lumber. He urged that the Government get involved in a public relations campaign that would appeal to American consumers, home builders, home buyers and lumber retailers and urge that they put a balancing pressure on their Congressmen and Senators to prevent this kind of protectionism.

The Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Oberle) who spoke earlier indicated that he was aware of this continuing threat ever since the last decision came down in 1983. Yet the Government chose not to act, believing rather that everything would turn out okay because of the Prime Minister's friendship with Ronald Reagan. Two years ago, the IWA recognized that we faced a serious situation and said that we should negotiate and make a deal when we could rather than wait for the last possible minute.

The American protectionist attitude followed two basic tracks. The first track was the legislative route and there were any number of Bills as we have mentioned in this debate before that were before both the House and the Senate calling for protectionist measures. Some Bills such as the Gibbons Bill contained measures which were specifically directed toward Canadian softwood lumber. The second track was the quasi-judicial process by which the American lumber industry could appear before the International Trade Commission of the Department of Commerce to ask for a countervail duty against Canadian softwood because of what they consider to be unfair subsidies through low stumpage rates or other practices.

In return, Canada maintained a two-track defence. One track was that President Reagan would veto any Bill that imposed duties on Canada's softwood. The other was that our legal case was so strong that we would be able to win before a quasi-judicial tribunal. Confidence in our two-track defence policy began to wilt and disappear last May and I can pinpoint the very time it happened. It happened on May 22 when President Reagan personally announced a 35 per cent tariff on shakes and shingles. It was interesting to watch the Prime Minister when he appeared in the House the day after that. We could see that he was visibly shaken and his comments indicated that he was.

Mr. St. Germain: But he took the right action.

Mr. Manly: He took the right action? He said:

> We will try to prepare an appropriate response for the American administration which will convince them of the folly of this kind of action directed either against a great friend such as Canada or anyone else. This kind of thing is bad news.

He said he would take the appropriate action but what did he do? He put duties on Christmas trees, books and computer parts.

Mr. St. Germain: Order in Council prohibiting the export of cedar logs and that's what counts, sir.

Mr. Manly: He said he would take action to prevent that sort of thing from happening in the future. Instead, the Americans had a taste of blood and are now going for the jugular.

Far from convincing Americans of their folly as he said he would do, the Prime Minister whetted their appetite for our blood. A feeling developed in the government benches that even if we won in the courts, President Reagan could not protect Canadian softwood from American legislation. A basic distrust of our whole negotiating and defensive position has evolved.

We finally began to understand the price President Reagan was prepared to pay to get the fast track on the free trade negotiations. He mentioned that price in his letter to Senator Packwood which indicated that he would take all appropriate action to solve the softwood issue prior to and separate from the trade talks. Since then, we have seen a constant shift of position on the part of Canadians. First we talked of negotiating but Premier Bill Bennett of British Columbia said that he wanted to take a tough position. Canada started to take a tough position but then there was a change of premiers in British Columbia. Unfortunately, the wrong change was made and we are paying for it today.

Mr. St. Germain: That's your fault, Jim. You should have kept at it.

Mr. Manly: We should have done more, I will admit that. Bill Vander Zalm began to make noises about raising stumpage fees. He sent the Americans the signal that we would not talk tough any longer and that we did not really have that much confidence in our judicial position. The Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) flew to Washington in September to ask the Secretary of Commerce if the countervail process could be delayed somehow while British Columbia reviewed its entire forest policy. Of course, the Americans said no.

In October, the Minister announced her final position. She said we were prepared to offer 10 per cent, take it or leave it. Of course, the Americans had absolutely no reason to take it.

Then the Minister said that she would talk tough. Once again, the Americans came down with a preliminary ruling on October 16 announcing the 15 per cent countervail. At first we were inclined to fight it and we pointed out that the decision was flawed, that its mathematics were poor and that it was a poor application of American law. We pointed out that it was a decision that discredited the entire countervail process and had some very serious implications for international trade relationships. We felt that we had a strong case, but once again, the Government of British Columbia and Premier Bill Vander Zalm wanted to negotiate. Once again, he undermined the Canadian position and the Canadian Government entered into negotiations. It finally came up with an agreement in the dying hours of 1986.

What is there about this agreement that is appealing? For one thing, as some Hon. Members have pointed out, it does keep the money in Canada, but on the other hand we must recognize that whether there is a 15 per cent American countervail or a 15 per cent export tax, jobs will be lost. It will be the working people of British Columbia and other lumber-producing provinces who will pay for the Government's bungling.

This afternoon during Question Period, the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon) pointed out that there are 23 companies making nine different products which will have to close—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I am sorry to interrupt the Hon. Member. Could I ask him to conclude since his time has expired?

Mr. Manly: Mr. Speaker, I will do so as quickly as possible. The Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor asked the Minister if he would be prepared to renegotiate the entire contract to provide exemptions for these products. The Minister chose to ignore that.

We have serious questions about the agreement itself and its effect on Canadian sovereignty. It will not save Canadian jobs and we must condemn the Government for the whole way in which it has bungled the process of negotiating the Canada-United States trade relationship.

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, I too would like to join in this debate. I recognize that time is not very long to put forward a case on behalf of the Opposition, but I welcome this opportunity to put forward my opinion on the effects of the recent settlement recommended for signature between Canada and the United States with respect to the export tax placed on our softwood lumber industry.

I wish to preface my remarks by indicating to you, Mr. Speaker, that to a large extent, many of the emotional feelings Canadians have about this agreement revolve around the issue of sovereignty and, in the long run, whether or not Canadians have faith that the Government is capable of negotiating any agreement with the United States in a competent and effective manner.

I say that in all sincerity because one must recognize that regardless of which political Party assumes the reins of power, any Government will find itself in a period of crisis, perhaps not of its own making. What determines the faith of the Canadian public in the ability of the Government is its ability to handle those crises. In December of 1986, some two years and three months after the Conservative Government assumed power, the people of Canada no longer have faith in its ability to put forward a political agenda and, more important, a Canadian point of view on a number of issues. Softwood lumber is the last in a series of crises affecting the Government and the outcome does not leave me with any feeling of certainty that it knows what it is doing in its negotiations with the U.S.

The specifics of the case I put before you are well known to the Canadian public. Speaker after speaker in this House has pointed out the effect of this export tax on the Canadian lumber industry. More important, it should be pointed out that the complaint by the U.S. industry that there was an unfair subsidy to the Canadian industry is not a new one. In the early 1980s the American lumber industry presented a case to the tribunal concerned which complained that Canada unfairly subsidized its industry's exports. As you will recall, Prime Minister Trudeau did not pursue a political settlement. He was adamant about protecting Canada's sovereignty. As a result, the Canadian Government worked hand in hand with the industry to present its case before the tribunal in the U.S. We were very fortunate in the sense that a ruling was made in favour of the Canadian viewpoint. That decision was arrived at in the fall of 1983. Yet within months of the Conservative Government assuming office in the fall of 1984, those same American interests once again complained of unfair subsidies to the Canadian industry.

For the life of me I cannot understand why the Conservative Government chose to abandon the quasi-judicial process, fail to defend Canada's sovereignty and this very important industry, and cave in, in my view and that of many Canadians, to the American demands. The net result, in my view, is the unnecessary imposition of a 15 per cent export tax which will make us less competitive in the U.S. market in the short term, and raise prices of lumber for consumers in the U.S. in the long term.

It comes as no surprise, given the difficulty consumer groups, whether here or in the U.S., have in arousing any sympathy for their cause. However, I do know the net result will be a loss of sovereignty and a loss of manoeuvrability here, and higher prices in the U.S. I believe had the Conservative Government chosen a different route and worked hand in hand with, for example, Mr. Zimmerman and used our clout in the quasi-judicial process, we would once again have been successful in defending the Canadian view that there is no unfair subsidy.

I mentioned at the outset that Canadians no longer have faith in the Government's ability to put forward the Canadian viewpoint in its negotiations with the U.S. In my view this latest caving in to the Americans will be seen as a sign of weakness. While we are discussing the impact this will have on the lumber industry, I have no qualms in saying that other U.S. groups will see this Canadian weakness and institute proceedings which will affect other sectors of our economy in a similar way.

Perhaps my friends on the other side may feel that my reference to the fact that the Minister responsible for these negotiations was not even in the country at a crucial time was a cheap shot. However, the Canadian public deserve better than to have the Minister concerned at a distance from the negotiations at the time these crucial decisions were being made. It certainly did not give a feeling of comfort to the boardrooms and union halls of this country which will be adversely affected by this decision.

I represent a riding with a vested interest in the protection of the Canadian lumber industry. That industry is a very important component of the economic life of northern Ontario. We have a great fear that as a direct result of the imposition of this export tax we will see lay-offs in the industry. They have already occurred in northern Ontario as the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister for International Trade (Mr. McDermid) well knows. There have been lay-offs in northern Ontario as a direct result of this tax.

It also comes as no surprise to those of us with some knowledge of the industry that there is now a fear in northern Ontario that the B.C. lumber industry will try to make up for its loss of market in the U.S. by taking some of the market which has traditionally belonged to the Ontario industry. We not only suffer as a result of these negotiations with the U.S., but we may see one province pitted against another in an attempt to make up for markets lost as a direct result of the imposition of this tax in Canada.

Finally, I want to point out the feedback I have been receiving from my constituents. They greatly resent the fact that the Canadian Government has given U.S. officials the right to object to how the Canadian Government decides to use the $600 million in Canada. Although the Conservative Government wants to mask the fact that it has given up our sovereignty, the people in our constituencies strongly believe that the Government has caved in to the United States interests and has not upheld Canadian interests in this matter. Frankly, they are very disappointed in the way in which the negotiations were completed.

Hon. Stewart McInnes (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, I wish to participate in this debate because there are no issues more relevant to anyone in Canada, and particularly to people in Atlantic Canada, than trade and forestry. I have followed the debate closely with enthusiasm and great interest, and sometimes with fright and disbelief at the incredible remarks I have heard made by Members opposite. We have heard many statements based on fiction rather than fact. There are many inconsistencies among the Members opposite and, more particularly, among Members peculiar to a particular Party.

This issue must be debated with the general knowledge that Canada is in a very unique position with respect to trade. The difficulty which the Opposition has in presenting its case adequately is another example of the difficulty it has had in making intelligent or constructive comment on any matters relative to trade.

We must bear in mind that Canada is a very unique trading nation. We are more dependent upon trade than is any other country in the western world. One-third of everything we produce goes beyond our borders. We are a nation of only 25 million and are, therefore, more reliant upon trade than any other country. Only 10 per cent of what is produced in the United States is exported. Only 16 per cent of the production of Japan is sold abroad, and only 26 per cent of the produce of the United Kingdom is sold abroad. Therefore, the steps which we must take and the sensitivity which we must have is peculiar to Canada. Strategems which may have guided the destinies of other nations with regard to trade are obviously not appropriate for Canada. In 1970 Canada was the fourth largest trading nation in the world, just ahead of Japan. Today Japan has doubled its exports and Canada is in eighth place.

Some months ago we were hit with a countervail from the United States. That was not only a result of the protests of producers and purchasers of lumber in the United States about our situation with regard to lumber, but was symptomatic of everything that is happening in Canada with respect to trade with the United States. We experienced a series of tariffs, countervails, threats and protectionist legislation on hogs, beef, steel, fish, shakes and shingles, and raspberries. Every commodity of consequence which we have been sending south of the border has been subject to scrutiny, criticism, and attack from the elements there.

We are experiencing an international trade war. The European Common Market seemed unable to control its members who have participated in unfair trade practices. There has been retaliation by the United States. Recently a 200 per cent countervail duty was placed on the European Common Market. There will obviously be a reaction to that from the European Common Market and so on.

Members opposite ask us to ignore the realities of the situation. They say that we should allow the due process of law to proceed and take our chances in the legal and trade forums in the United States and GATT. The realities of the situation compel the conclusion that we would obviously not get a fair hearing. Our destiny was fixed. Therefore, after consulting with all of the provinces and receiving from them an endorsement and encouragement, the federal Government started negotiations with the United States. Those are the realities. My friends in the New Democratic Party must come out of their igloos. We are now in the 20th century. We must turn on the light bulb and become aware of the realities.

Members in that particular Party are against everything. It is about time they took a position with regard to what they are in favour of. I do not encourage them to take the position of the Liberal Party which has so many positions that it does not know where it stands on any issue. I plead with members of the New Democratic Party to tell us what they are in favour of and what position they would have taken in this matter.

If we had done nothing they would have asked why we did not stand up for Canada, why we did not take action to avoid the countervail, why we did not negotiate to minimize our losses when we had the opportunity to do so. Their chief argument, which has been repeated many times, is that we have conceded sovereignty. They say that we have allowed the United States to trespass upon the parameters of Canadian privacy and have, therefore, conceded our inalienable right forever and a day. They say that this is a precedent which will prejudice us forever.

During this debate Members have spoken about the sacrosanct Auto Pact. The Auto Pact is an agreement representing the positions of both countries. Is the Auto Pact a concession of sovereignty? Nay, Mr. Speaker. It is an assertion of sovereignty. When we enter a marriage contract, join a church, a political Party or an association, we assert our right and our sovereignty. We indicate which rights we wish to exercise with agreement and consultation with the other Party.

If the logic of Members opposite is followed, all of the international agreements which we have made throughout history involve a surrender of sovereignty. Obviously, that is not the case. There is no authority in Canada which will stand behind the representations made by Members opposite that our sovereignty has been intruded upon. I defy those Members to find an authority of consequence who would stand behind their position.

We have the money in our hands and we have the authority and discretion to spend that money for the betterment of forestry in Canada. I would like to compliment my colleague, the Minister of State for Forestry (Mr. Merrithew), who has promulgated the difficulties of his Ministry so well in Canada. He deserves the congratulations of this House as does the Minister of International Trade (Miss Carney).

• (2100)

In closing, this is a good deal for Atlantic Canada. It has the endorsement of the Maritime Lumber Bureau. They are saying enthusiastically and unequivocally that this deal was in the best interest of Canada. They told me that five minutes ago.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 66 deemed to have been moved.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS—NICARAGUA—BOMBING MISSIONS LAUNCHED FROM HONDURAS. (B) REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT URGE HONDURAS TO DISARM CONTRA FORCES

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I wish to address the question of Canada's relations with Central America. This arises out of a question on Honduras that I put to the Government on December 11.

I asked if the Government would request Honduras to obey international law by ceasing to host the Contra forces attacking Nicaragua, on pain of losing a large amount of economic aid that Canada supplies. On December 15 I received an entirely unsatisfactory letter from the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) in which he ignored the fact of Honduran support for the war against Nicaragua, but stated that Canadian aid is not "given on the satisfaction of certain political conditions". The Government tries to reduce terrorist attacks and violations of international law to questions of political conditions. The Hon. Minister ought to know that his letter obscures the difference between law and political considerations.

In 1981 Canada suspended bilateral aid to the Government of Guatemala because of its record of grossly tolerating human rights violations. Most Canadian church and non-government organizations informed about conditions in central America favoured that decision, supporting the rule of law, as did my own Party.

The Canadian Government halted Canadian bilateral aid also to El Salvador, again because that Government was tolerating human rights violations. However, Canada has now resumed bilateral aid to that country, claiming that the Duarte Government has substantially improved the human rights situation there. While I and many other informed Canadians believe that decision to be in error, Canada's Government clearly thought it was appropriate to make that decision on grounds the Minister would call political.

I might mention one further case. Canada stopped giving bilateral aid to Cuba on the grounds that it was supplying military aid to Angola, when Angola needed that support to resist external aggression by South Africa.

To claim that such considerations do not enter into decisions to grant or withhold bilateral aid, as the Minister claims, is nonsense. Canadians know that it is nonsense. Honduras is the largest single recipient of Canadian bilateral aid in Central America. As the Minister points out in his letter, that Government has received over $43 million in aid during the period 1982 to 1986. That Government is directly involved in the support of the U.S.-sponsored war of terrorist attacks against the people of Nicaragua. It tolerates the existence of some 14,000 Contra terrorists and mercenaries on its soil. Rather than disarming the Contras, it disposes of its own people, some 800 of whom were evacuated from Contra occupied areas in October alone. It has turned over the Swan Islands off the Atlantic coast and El Tigre in the Gulf of Fonseca to the United States for training and supplying the Contras and for staging attacks on Nicaragua. It provides the Contras with a string of air bases within Honduras, and shares the base at El Agucate with U.S. and Contra forces.

As an apparent consequence of Honduran support for these terrorist attacks, human rights abuses in Honduras are on the increase. In September, 1986, at least 14 men were assassinated. In October, 28 men and women were murdered.

The Minister says that Canada wants to reduce the underlying economic and social causes of tension in Honduras. I say to the Minister that one of the underlying economic and social causes of tension in Honduras is the presence of Contra bases and the support that Honduras is providing for President Reagan's war.

The same could be said of El Salvador. Again, the impossibility of fundamental changes in economic and social structures, and in human rights, is closely linked to the U.S. program of low intensity warfare. El Salvador provides the United States and the Contras with air bases, including the one at Ilopango which has been used to supply Contra invaders in Nicaragua by Hassenfus and his associates. In return, the U.S. supports the strength of the military and right wing elites that, at minimum, prevent Duarte from engaging in fundamental reforms.

The Government may believe that its resumption of bilateral aid to El Salvador has improved human rights there. I say to the Minister that he has yet to convince the Canadian churches and non-governmental organizations that have experience in that sorry country. At this moment, the Government is considering the resumption of bilateral aid to Guatemala. I want to warn the Minister that resumption of bilateral aid at this time threatens to draw Canada into the same trap as in El Salvador and Honduras.

We cannot pretend that bilateral aid has no political or military implications in a war-torn region where everything and everyone is judged by their relationship to the American war. We cannot pretend to alleviate human rights violations by supporting governments which exist at the mercy of those military and economic interests which oppose basic economic and social change. We must remember that the U.S. doctrine of low intensity conflict calls for mixtures of military and economic or so-called humanitarian aid to support repressive local elites.

It is time this Government issued a clear call to the Government of Honduras to cease and desist its support for the Contras. It is time we went beyond words and took action. The largest single recipient of Canadian aid in Central America should not be the primary base for U.S. terrorism in that region, which Honduras is. Instead, we should direct Canadian aid away from that country to a country where, in the opinion of many of the churches and non-governmental organizations with first-hand experience in the region, it would do the most good. At present, that country is Nicaragua which is vigorously struggling to rebuild its education, agriculture, housing, health care and all the arts of peace. The very first step we should take, which would use only 10 per cent of what we are now wasting in Honduras, is to open an embassy in the capital of Nicaragua, Managua.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Guy Hudon (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, as he was told by the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) in the letter dated December 15 last, the Hon. Member knows that Canada has clearly come out in favour of a pacific settlement of the current crisis in Central America. We are opposed to the intervention of a third party anywhere in that region, and we deplore the inclusion of Central America in the East-West dispute and the militarization of that region.

Canada is against the supply of weapons to the opposing factions of the region. The Honduran Government has proven to be moderate despite the difficult situation it has been put in by the presence of Contras and, more or less successfully, it has tried not to intervene militarily in the dispute. Apparently the Hondurans have formally requested that the Contra forces leave their territory. We are concerned about the raids made in Honduras by the Sandinistan soldiers in pursuit of Contras because this can only exacerbate existing tensions. It would be unrealistic to think, as the Hon. Member has suggested, that Honduras could act unilaterally and disarm the Contras which now have almost as many troops as it has. We hope that the problems created by the presence of insurgents in Central America will be solved through national and regional reconciliation efforts.

Canada has joined international initiatives to promote a regional peace plan by voicing strong support for the Contadora process and indicating its willingness to play a constructive role whenever it will be practical and appropriate. At the request of the Contadora group countries, we have conveyed our observations on the security and control measures contained in the proposed Contadora Act. The Secretary of State on January 18, 1987, reiterated Canada's support to the Contadora process in a message to the Foreign Affairs Ministers of the countries involved in the Contadora group and in the Lima Support Group, as well as to the Secretaries General of the United Nations Organization and the Organization of American States at a time when they are initiating a tour of the area to consider the prospects of a resumption of negotiations. The Minister was pleased with the Contadora group's latest initiative. The Government of Canada for its part feels that today more than ever, it is important that the process go on because it could help reduce tensions in the area and provide the framework for a possible solution.

IMMIGRATION—ACTION TAKEN BY IMMIGRATION APPEAL BOARD

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey—White Rock—North Delta): Mr. Speaker, just before Christmas the people of the lower mainland of British Columbia became aware that the Immigration Appeal Board in Vancouver a year previous had prevented the deportation of Mr. John Michael Lewis from Canada. He was a convicted child molester. He landed in Canada in 1981 and was already wanted in Utah and California on outstanding 1980 and 1982 charges involving sexual exploitation of minors. He had already served a jail term in B.C. for sex offences with boys. He has been allowed to stay in Canada since 1985 when the Board stayed a deportation order against him.

• (2110)

I guess what infuriates the public, and certainly what infuriates me, is the fact that there are literally hundreds of thousands of people from around the world who want to come into Canada simply to enjoy the good life and provide for their families. These are people who want to live quiet and peaceful lives and who will never violate the law. Yet the Immigration Appeal Board goes out of its way to spend its concern for somebody who is a felon, someone who has been convicted of a criminal offense. There is no accounting for it. It violates the sense of rightness in society. It violates the values in society. It possibly exposes the children of our society to danger since it seems that this man had a proclivity to children. There is no excuse for it.

The Immigration Act, 1976, in Section 19 outlines the inadmissible classes and states:

(1) No person shall be granted admission if he is a member of any of the following classes:

(c) persons who have been convicted of an offence that, if committed in Canada, constitutes or, if committed outside Canada, would constitute an offence that may be punishable under any Act of Parliament and for which a maximum term of imprisonment of ten years or more may be imposed—

Mr. Lewis falls into an inadmissible class. The Act goes on to state the following in Section 21:

Where a removal order is made against any person with respect to whom an inquiry is held as a result of a report made pursuant to subsection 20(1), the removal order against that person may be made on the basis that that person is a member of any inadmissible class.

I want to know why the Immigration Appeal Board, which was appointed by the previous Government I might add, ruled as it did in this case. I wish to give credit where credit is due and point out that one member of the Board was the former Leader of the Liberal Party in British Columbia. He voted against this application. It is the other two who are the guilty ones.

In the House before Christmas I asked if it would be possible to bring these Immigration Appeal Board people to justice for violating the law of Canada. I took the trouble to look at the oath of office which they take. I have never seen such an insipid, milquetoast oath that anyone has to take. It is clear that on that type of an oath they can do anything they want. They are not even asked to swear to uphold the law of Canada. I say to the Minister that it is time we looked at the oath of office so that those who sit on these appeal boards and adjudicate have at least to take an oath of office to uphold the law of Canada, as they did not do in this case.

I seek an assurance from the Minister that he will pursue the appeal about which he spoke in the House and that he will re-evaluate the process under which the immigration appeal system works and that the oath of office will change to make these people uphold the law of Canada.

Mr. Gordon Towers (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the opportunity to expand on the reply given by the Minister of State for Immigration (Mr. Weiner) to the Hon. Member for Surrey—White Rock—North Delta (Mr. Friesen) on December 16, 1986. I have a great deal of respect for the judgment of the Hon. Member and am very conscious of his concern with respect to this matter.

Where a permanent resident is ordered deported he may appeal that order to the Immigration Appeal Board. The Board has sole and exclusive jurisdiction to decide upon such matters, subject only to appeal on a question of law or jurisdiction to the Federal Court of Canada. There cannot be any political interference by the Government in these decisions of an independent judicial body.

• (2115)

In November, 1984, the Board exercised its lawful discretion and stayed the execution of the deportation order, subject to review in February, 1989, or at such earlier date as determined by the Board. Based on suspected non-compliance of the terms and conditions set by the Board when its decision was reached, a motion to review was filed by Immigration officials requesting that the Board reconsider its original decision. This motion was dismissed on December 5, 1986, as the Board was not satisfied that Mr. Lewis had failed to comply with its terms and conditions. The Department has therefore initiated action in the Federal Court of Canada challenging the Board's decision.

NATIONAL RESEARCH COUNCIL—(A) ALGONQUIN RADIO OBSERVATORY (B) PROFESSIONALS' FUTURE PROSPECTS

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, on November 3, 1986, I asked a question in this House concerning the Algonquin Radio Observatory, a project that came under the National Research Council, and I asked the Minister of Science and Technology (Mr. Oberle) whether the Government had in fact made the decision, as reported by certain newspapers, to close that radio observatory.

The Minister answered he was not quite sure, that he did not know whether the report would be confirmed and, as far as he was concerned, if a decision had been made, it had been by the National Research Council rather than by the Government.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the matter of research and development is of concern to me and to many Members in this House. I for one believe that research and development do create jobs in Canada and that we will go on being provided with that means of remaining competitive on international markets.

But the closing down of that radio observatory does not involve jobs only—there is also the whole matter of increased efforts by the scientific world to try and get from this Government funding and concrete support for research and development.

Mr. Speaker, I am not alone in sounding the alarm, in stating that the Government is slashing, cutting, reducing research and development funding. At the National Research Council, and the Committee got it straight from the President himself, some $60 million was cut in this year's budget, and further similar cuts are expected in order to transfer funds to the so-called space agency that is supposed to be set up shortly.

Mr. Speaker, during the holidays I was reading some newspaper articles on the subject of where we are headed in the science and technology sector. I clipped an article in Le Droit by Dexter, an editorial writer, who wrote on January 6 of this year, and I quote:

> The Government in Ottawa and pure research, a shocking state of affairs.

He went on to say:

> The Government in Ottawa is threatening our pure research sector by treating the National Research Council of Canada like a business. When Brian Mulroney poses for the camera and hands a cheque for $1 million to Rick Hansen, while NRC researchers get their pink slip, we see the sad spectacle of a head of state who has no understanding of the role of pure research in a society's maturing process.

Mr. Speaker, it was the Conservative Government that made the cut in the NRC budget. It is going to divert these monies to the private sector and to the creation of a Canadian space agency. This proves how inconsistent the Government is. Perhaps I may recall certain facts that will show how short-sighted this Government is, its total lack of vision and lack of any consistent policy.

The latest research and development effort undertaken since the NASA program is without a doubt the new research program dubbed Star Wars. The U.S. Administration has asked the Canadian Government whether it wanted to be associated with the project, and the Canadian Government said no, we are not interested. I can't blame it for that. It exercised its right as a Government to make that decision.

However, ever since the Conservatives came to power, more than $120 million have been cut from the NRC budget. The last cuts totalling $20 million, announced last October, will oblige the NRC to cut between 100 and 150 jobs. The Minister has announced a project worth $1 billion in investments, but this amount will come not from investments, but from commitments from the private sector if everything goes well. This is not new money, but promises.

The Conservative Government has announced the creation of a space agency which will take part in the manned orbiting station project of NASA. We refused to take part in the Star Wars program, but as we all know, there are rumors that we shall join the Pentagon for a space station project which will eventually be used for Star Wars. This is not really consistent or logical, but what can you expect?

Canada will therefore take part indirectly in Star Wars because it will take part in the space station project.

The Government is not being very farsighted in this affair, Mr. Speaker. We deserve some explanation and I hope that the Parliamentary Secretary will be able to clarify this issue. For my part, I do not understand how we can say no to Star Wars while taking part in the space agency project.

If we seriously want to do research in electronics and microelectronics, we shall have to do so through recognized scientific organizations such as the National Research Council.

In closing, as my allotted time is about to expire, I would like to say that I do not object to the proposed space agency. On the contrary, I believe that it should be integrated with the National Research Council, which has the capability to provide the necessary expertise and which has facilities here, in Ottawa. So I hope that the decision to set up this space program will be translated into a real Government objective, that it will be implemented, and that the National Research Council will be asked to play a leading role. Once the necessary and adequate funding has been provided by the Government, we might have a better research and development program, more jobs, more stable employment, more competition at the international level, and perhaps better Canadian products.

Mr. Gordon Towers (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity to reply to the Hon. Member's original question where he asked the Minister to explain what was happening with the Algonquin Radio Observatory. For some reason there is much misinformation and concern in respect of this particular item, and I welcome this chance to set the record straight.

NRC's mandate includes the responsiblity to "operate and administer any astronomical observatories established or maintained by the Government of Canada". At present, NRC runs three facilities—radio telescopes in Algonquin and Penticton, and an optical telescope and computation centre in Victoria. NRC also contributes to the Canada-France-Hawaii optical telescope in Mauna Kea, Hawaii, gaining thereby 40 per cent of the operating time. These instruments are heavily used by university researchers from Canada and other countries. As well, NRC has many fine astronomers in its own right.

The Algonquin Radio Observatory consists of three instruments—a 46 metre fully steerable parabolic reflector, a compound solar interferometer and a small solar radio telescope. The large reflector was constructed over 20 years ago and needs major refurbishment so that it can operate at millimeter wavelengths. This reflector is also expensive to operate and some astronomers question the cost-benefit pay-off from continuing to use the telescope as is.

Since an initial decision to proceed, the estimated cost of the refurbishment rose from $7.9 million to $11.7 million. In view of this, plans to refurbish the telescope have been cancelled. In the words of Dr. Kerwin, "We do not have the money and therefore we cannot resurface and therefore it becomes obsolete". The Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Oberle) had no role in directing the reductions toward the Algonquin Radio Observatory. NRC management took that decision.

As of now, no other decisions have been made. The facility will operate this winter, and further decisions may be made next summer. In addition, the NRC task group is reviewing NRC's decision on the telescope right now.

NRC, in consultation with Canadian astronomers, is looking at a variety of options for the Algonquin Radio Observatory. They want to give Canadians access to the best possible facilities within budget constraints. Alternative sources of funding are being sought which would permit the telescope to be operated at less cost to NRC. Ways of strengthing other facilities are being looked at so that some of the same services can be provided elsewhere. Finally, NRC is looking into obtaining increased access to existing observatories.

• (2125)

It is not a pleasant task to have to review existing operations and re-allocate resources. Nevertheless, if federal research efforts are to be focused on agreed priorities, priorities which have emerged after long and careful thought by all interested parties, then the issue must be faced squarely and appropriate decisions taken.

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

REQUEST FOR MORE LIBERAL GUIDELINES IN FAVOUR OF EARLY RETIREES

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Employment and Immigration has released the guidelines he issued to public servants to reimburse the 35,000 Canadian early retirees whose benefits were unfairly cut off as a result of unannounced changes made by Cabinet with respect to these people.

Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, close scrutiny of the guidelines issued by the Minister of Employment and Immigration and his officials reveals that most people will not be eligible for reimbursement on the basis of information provided by Hon. Members because the Minister does not consider that the information given by Hon. Members, employers and labour unions is acceptable for reimbursement purposes.

Mr. Speaker, according to the Minister's guidelines, which are based on the legislation as it was drafted at the time, a person who lost his job as a result of plant closure is not eligible for reimbursement.

Mr. Speaker, I urge all Conservative Members of the House to bring pressure to bear on the Minister so that he will issue less stringent guidelines and enable the 35,000 early retirees to seek justice and apply for the unemployment insurance benefits to which they are entitled.

SPORTS

VIOLENCE IN HOCKEY

Hon. Bob Layton (Lachine): Mr. Speaker, the recent bagarre—which is the French word for "brawl"—at the International Junior Hockey Championships in Czechoslovakia has focused attention on violence as an element of our national sport.

Recently the Pointe-Claire Cercle des fermières in my riding of Lachine sent me a petition against violence in hockey. These ladies urge the media to denounce all unwarranted acts of brutality in sports, and to promote clean play, pride and team spirit. I share their concern and I am sure the Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport (Mr. Jelinek) is earnestly trying to come to grips with this problem in his national campaign. The program stresses education and seeks to promote non-violence in sports.

HOUSING

PLIGHT OF THE HOMELESS

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, it is estimated that in Canada there are up to 40,000 people who have no place to live. In Metro Toronto alone there are between 5,000 and 10,000 people who depend on a growing number of hostels and emergency shelters for housing. Others, if they are lucky, may find a church basement, an abandoned building, or an underground garage to sleep in. Others not so fortunate do without and sleep in the open.

The United Nations has proclaimed 1987 to be the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless. The Canadian Council on Social Development has declared January 22, which is tomorrow, as World Shelter Day in Canada.

Canada's housing shortage is of crisis proportions and demands that the Government bring forward programs to alleviate it immediately. This is not because the United Nations or other bodies have called for it to do so, but because the need is obviously there and because it is the right thing to do.

The construction of housing would be one of the major employment-creation programs that the Government could undertake if it seriously believed in its election slogan of "jobs, jobs, jobs". It would not only provide employment programs, it would provide affordable and decent housing for thousands of people who need it.

THE CONSTITUTION

QUEBEC—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mrs. Suzanne Duplessis (Louis-Hébert): Mr. Speaker, the federal Minister responsible for constitutional matters and his Quebec counterpart met last week in Ottawa.

On that occasion it was decided that officials assigned to the dossier would meet in February. As a Member from Quebec, I am delighted with a decision that proves once again that this Government is prepared to conduct serious negotiations with the various parties concerned so that Quebec will become one of the signatories of the constitutional agreement. The House will recall that Quebec, both under the Parti québécois and the Liberals, has refused to sign the 1982 constitutional agreement because it fails to allow for the specific aspirations of Quebecers.

I earnestly hope that the Ministers in question will be meeting very shortly to further expedite the favourable settlement of a matter that is extremely important to all Quebecers and all Canadians.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

OERLIKON'S DECISION TO LOCATE IN QUEBEC

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) says that the Opposition in the Parliament of Canada has no right to obtain details regarding the Bissonnette-Bazin affair. If he will not listen to the Opposition, perhaps he will listen to Calgary Mayor Ralph Klein and a Calgary city MP who said yesterday, as reported in the Calgary Herald, that they believe political strings may have been pulled in a defence contractor's decision to locate in Quebec.

Klein and Calgary East MP (Mr. Kindy) suspect government intervention may have been involved in the decision to locate a new plant on 100 acres of vacant land near Saint-Jean.

On Monday Kindy said he was aware that the deal was almost struck for Oerlikon to locate in Calgary "but there was some kind of intervention".

Art Smith, past co-chairman of the Calgary Economic Development Authority, said Oerlikon officials told him they got a "better deal on land costs and servicing" from Saint-Jean. "The one thing that Calgary could not offer was a guarantee that it would get the $600 million defence contract if it located here", said the Mayor of Calgary.

The people of Canada want explanations, not only on the alleged criminal aspects of this particular affair but on what role the Government of Canada played in the allegations that have now been suggested by the Conservative Member of Parliament for Calgary East.

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

LAUNCHING OF LITHOPROBE PROJECT TO STUDY EARTH'S CRUST

Mr. Bill Tupper (Nepean—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Oberle) and the Minister of State for Forestry and Mines (Mr. Merrithew) together with NSERC have announced a five-year $25 million research project to investigate, using the latest in high technology equipment, the earth's upper crust. This project, known as Lithoprobe, was five years in the planning and will require extensive field experiments in four regions of the country. Some of Canada's best young scientists in our universities, government, and industry will be involved in one of the largest such projects ever undertaken in Canada. The four regions of experiment are the southern Cordillera in B.C., the Abitibi-Grenville greenstone belt in Quebec and Ontario, the Kapuskasing region in Ontario, and Newfoundland.

• (1410)

The project will concentrate on structural and earth forming processes, but the findings will be of long-term value in leading the way to hidden mineral and oil deposits in Canada, thus ensuring our economic future.

INCOME TAX

NON-PAYMENT OF TAXES BY HIGH INCOME EARNERS

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, every day hundreds of thousands of Canadians buy lottery tickets with the hope of hitting a tax-free jackpot.

Yesterday Revenue Canada released a report which shows that you do not have to win a lottery to beat the tax man, all you have to do is be rich enough to afford a good tax lawyer or tax accountant. The recent report cites figures that show that in the latest taxation year for which figures are available there were 1,830 Canadians who earned over $100,000 per year and who paid not one cent in income tax. In other words, they hit the jackpot. This Government allowed them to make the windfall because it is not interested in closing loopholes like the $500,000 capital gains allowance which allows such tax boondoggles to occur.

While the average Canadian in the next few weeks will be preparing to go through the annual chore of filling out income tax forms, he or she will know that there are people who have sold their condominium in Florida, or their interest in Texas oil wells, who will not be paying any income tax this year, courtesy of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). The message is clear. If you have the money, forget about the 6-49 lottery because you have a sure thing in the Income Tax Act.

ABORTION

INCORRECT REPORT ON CRIMINAL CODE PROVISIONS

Mr. Gus Mitges (Grey—Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, I am concerned about a recent news item which distorted the facts concerning Canada's abortion law. In reporting the case of an Alberta teenager seeking an abortion over her parents' objections, the national media stated erroneously or otherwise that Canadian law allows abortion only up to 20 weeks of gestation. This was reported on CBC radio, and in local and national publications.

As all Members of the House know, Section 251 of the Criminal Code, our unfortunate abortion law, makes no reference to any legal time limit on so-called therapeutic abortions. What individual hospitals may choose to prohibit is separate from what the law allows. If a doctor can be found who is willing to perform the procedure, an abortion could be performed at nine months.

I call upon the national media to correct this appalling fact, and to stop spreading misinformation aimed at making the killing of unborn children more socially acceptable.

MUNICIPALITIES

INFRASTRUCTURE REBUILDING—REQUEST FOR FEDERAL PARTICIPATION

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, the Government's plunge in public opinion is not an accident. Its record is littered with broken promises and contradictions. A recent example speaks volumes. The Canadian Federation of Municipalities has proposed a five-year plan to create 60,000 jobs a year by rebuilding infrastructure, including sewers. The Prince Edward Island Federation of Municipalities supports this. However, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) rejected the request for a one-third federal participation, because it is not a federal responsibility.

On December 4, 1986, the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) called St. John's and Halifax harbours open sewers, and declared that the lack of treatment of municipal waste in eastern Canada's urban centres was nothing less than a scandal. Is job creation a federal Government concern? Yes? No? Maybe? We have had enough rhetoric; let's have some action.

WOODWORKERS' SUPPORT FOR CANADA-UNITED STATES SOFTWOOD LUMBER SETTLEMENT

Mr. Lawrence I. O'Neil (Cape Breton Highlands—Canso): Mr. Speaker, it is because Canadians put economics above politics that they support the negotiated lumber agreement with the United States. Nine provincial Premiers support this agreement. Even the NDP of British Columbia support the settlement. The International Woodworkers of America, the union representing the workers, who are the people most affected, also supports the settlement. It is high time the opposition Parties put their rhetoric aside and supported the woodworkers in our country.

Last night I met with the representatives of the Atlantic Canadian lumber producers. They stated: "The negotiated settlement was the best possible solution under difficult circumstances". That is exactly what the Government has been saying. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), and the Minister responsible, must be congratulated for their leadership. I suggest the Liberal and NDP Parties reassess the support for their clearly partisan positions, and focus on people not politics.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

AWARD OF CF-5 MAINTENANCE CONTRACT TO WINNIPEG PLANT

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, today the federal Conservative Government has attempted to correct the damage which was done by the awarding of the CF-18 contract in November of last year. The people of Manitoba cannot be so easily fooled.

The awarding, without tenders being called, of the CF-5 repair contract will keep some jobs in Manitoba, but it will not help the continued growth and good health of an aeronautical industry in western Canada. Manitoba and the West continue to be treated in a second rate manner by the federal Government.

As the CF-18 fiasco and the Oerlikon affair have pointed out, the federal Government is not taking the best interests of Canadians into account in the awarding of major government contracts.

Some Manitobans, like other Canadians, are pleased with announcements affecting their province, but the federal Government is not acting in the interests of all Canadians who want to see an open, upfront system of awarding government contracts through tendering.

AWARD OF CF-5 MAINTENANCE CONTRACT TO BRISTOL AEROSPACE OF WINNIPEG

Mr. Lee Clark (Brandon—Souris): Mr. Speaker, although the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy) is disappointed with today's decision, I think the awarding of the CF-5 maintenance contract to Bristol is certainly good news.

In fact it turns out that there will be more jobs in Winnipeg because of the awarding of the contract than there would have been if Bristol Aerospace had received the CF-18 contract.

The CF-5 contract may be worth less money than the CF-18 contract, but the Winnipeg company will benefit from nearly all the contract, whereas the previous CF-18 contract was to be split among five companies located in five different cities.

In addition, as a result of today's announcement Bristol of Winnipeg will be able to bid for contracts from our NATO allies and perhaps have the opportunity to service some 2,600 F-5s, which it would not have been able to do under the other contract.

As a result, today's announcement is good news for Bristol, for Winnipeg, and for all Canadians.

WAR CRIMINALS

DESCHÊNES COMMISSION REPORT—CALL FOR GOVERNMENT STATEMENT

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise to express my uneasiness about the Government's silence on the report of the Deschênes Commission dealing with war criminals present in Canada.

When that Commission was launched, the then Minister of Justice said that the Government was concerned about harbouring individuals guilty of committing the horrible Nazi war crimes of World War II, and he added: "These individuals must be brought to justice".

No doubt the report is complicated and government consultations have to go on. However, the Government has had the report for over a month now. I think a clear statement is in order that the Government's intention, expressed in that statement by the present Minister of Transport (Mr. Crosbie), should be reiterated by the Government, and that its conclusions on the Deschênes Commission Report should be made public soon.

ALLEGED IRREGULARITIES SURROUNDING REAL ESTATE TRANSACTION AT SAINT-JEAN—PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Prime Minister my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. On Monday here in the House, when I put my first question to the Prime Minister, I asked him when he was informed of the irregularities that apparently were involved in the unusual land transaction at Saint-Jean. He said before the House that the answer to the question was contained in his press release and the statement he made before reporters. In other words, he was informed of the situation for the first time only on January 13.

Could the Deputy Prime Minister ask the Prime Minister whether he still maintains this as his answer?

[English]

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the Right Hon. Prime Minister indicated in his press release that he was informed of the facts, as related to him by his principal secretary, on Wednesday, January 14, 1987.

OERLIKON LETTER TO LAW COMPANY—POSSIBLE KNOWLEDGE POSSESSED BY JEAN BAZIN

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the lawyers for Oerlikon, the firm of Byers Casgrain in Montreal, in which Jean Bazin is a senior partner, were advised on August 12, 1986, about irregularities affecting the purchase of land. We now know from the Canada Corporations Act files that Maître Jean Bazin became a director of the Oerlikon firm as long ago as April 29, 1986. We also know that he is a close personal and political friend of the Prime Minister. Would the Deputy Prime Minister confirm with the Prime Minister whether the Prime Minister maintains his position that Jean Bazin did not learn of the transaction until just recently or, if he knew of the transaction, he only informed the Prime Minister on January 13 or January 14?

• (1420)

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, as the Prime Minister has stated before both outside the House and inside the House, his principal secretary was informed of certain facts relating to property transactions in the Saint-Jean-Sur-Richelieu area which were linked to the Oerlikon plant and on Wednesday, January 14, those facts were made known to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. It was on that basis that the actions taken on the weekend were, in fact, taken.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, those answers do not directly respond to the question. Indeed, we are left with a situation which, I believe, is severely testing the faith of this House.

An Hon. Member: Speak for yourself.

REQUEST FOR JUDICIAL INQUIRY

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the Deputy Prime Minister knows that the Prime Minister is leaving the country on official business in a few days. He also knows that he, as Deputy Prime Minister, will find himself in what I am afraid will be the embarrassing position of defending the Government's case along the lines that proved very difficult for his immediate predecessor in the role of Deputy Prime Minister.

Would the Deputy Prime Minister prevail upon the Prime Minister before he leaves the country to order an immediate, full, open, public, and even a judicial inquiry, so that the faith of the Canadian people can be restored in the political process and in the political operations of the Government?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister has ordered a complete RCMP investigation into this affair.

Mr. Broadbent: It is not the same thing.

Mr. Mazankowski: I am surprised the hon. gentleman across would want to undo, interfere, impair or, in fact, prejudice the work of the RCMP—

Mr. Johnston: How would that happen?

Mr. Mazankowski: —in getting to the bottom of this issue. I think the Prime Minister said, as he indicated in his answer—

An Hon. Member: Velcro II.

Mr. Mazankowski: —to the right hon. gentleman yesterday, it may very well be in the future, depending upon evidence and information that may come to pass, that further action may be necessary. I think the Prime Minister clearly left that door open.

FORMER MINISTER OF STATE'S (TRANSPORT) BLIND TRUST—CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): My question is for the Deputy Prime Minister, Mr. Speaker. The Canadian Press has alleged that Mr. Normand Ouellette, President of the Conservative Party Riding Association in Saint-Jean, the business associate and election campaign manager of the former Minister of State for Transport, is the manager of the latter's blind trust. Can the Deputy Prime Minister confirm these facts and tell us whether this kind of situation is a breach of conflict of interest guidelines?

[English]

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I am not quite sure I followed the Hon. Member's question. He referred Mr. Ouellette as the election campaign manager and being the administrator of this matter. Could he elaborate on that?

Mr. Axworthy: The blind trust.

ROLE OF NORMAND OUELLETTE—MANAGEMENT OF EX-MINISTER'S BLIND TRUST

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): I will repeat my first question, Mr. Speaker. I will say it in English. Canadian Press reported that Normand Ouellette, President of the P.C. Riding Association in Saint-Jean, also a close business associate of the ex-Minister of State for Transport, his campaign manager, would be the manager of the ex-Minister's blind trust. I would like the Deputy Prime Minister to confirm this and to tell us if, in his opinion, this will break the conflict of interest guidelines?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member refers to Mr. Ouellette as being the manager of the former Minister of State for Transport's blind trust. I cannot confirm that. There have been suggestions that he may have been, or is, a member of the trust, but those are facts that have to be ascertained.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker: Hon. Members are aware of the interpretation problem. Therefore the Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques (Mr. Guilbault) may repeat his question.

OPPORTUNITY FOR PRIME MINISTER TO DEFER VISIT TO AFRICA

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Another question for the Deputy Prime Minister, Mr. Speaker. Prime Minister Jacques Chirac of France has cancelled his trip to Canada because of internal problems in his country.

Mr. Nystrom: Quite so!

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Would the Deputy Prime Minister not agree that, given the crisis faced by the Government, the Prime Minister might give serious consideration to postponing his trip to Africa, if only to restore the confidence of Canadians in his Government?

• (1425)

[English]

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, if there is any crisis in this country, it is in the mind of the Hon. Member.

The fact of the matter is that the Prime Minister acted with dispatch, in a decisive manner and in the public interest.

APPLICATION OF CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Deputy Prime Minister who has responsibility for administration of the conflict of interest guidelines as they pertain to Ministers. I learned this morning that, before he met with the former junior Minister of Transport, the Prime Minister's Office was in touch with the Registrar General's office and obtained information about the former Minister's blind trust. Will the Deputy Prime Minister now confirm that as a result of what he learned, not about a law being broken but about a violation of a conflict of interest guideline, the Prime Minister requested Mr. Ouellette's resignation?

Some Hon. Members: Ouellette?

Mr. Broadbent: Bissonnette.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, that is true. The principal secretary did contact the ADRG and there was, in the examination, a view that there could have been a potential conflict of interest. That is clearly one of the conditions that were taken into account.

REQUEST FOR PUBLIC INQUIRY

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, for the first time the Government has finally acknowledged that there is something other than the framework of the law that is involved regarding Ministers' responsibilities. Considering that the Deputy Prime Minister has made this acknowledgement for the first time, will he now do the proper thing before the Prime Minister leaves the country by having a full public inquiry into this business?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Leader of the NDP seems to get rather excited and impatient. The fact of the matter is that there has been a full and complete RCMP investigation into this matter and in no way would it be desirable or, in my opinion, appropriate to engage at this particular time in any other kind of a parallel inquiry that may prejudice, interfere with or impede the process that is going on right now.

[Translation]

CONFLICTS OF INTEREST—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I might point out to the Minister that it is up to the Government, not the RCMP, to look into questions of conflict of interest. Such is the case. Since the Prime Minister's Office has examined Mr. Bissonnette's blind trust, I should like to ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he can confirm that, in the Prime Minister's view, the ex-Minister is involved in a conflict of interest.

[English]

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I will repeat the answer because it was essentially the same question. While I appreciate the suggestions from the Hon. Leader of the New Democratic Party and while I am sure he is presenting those suggestions in good faith, I would have to wonder why he would want to engage in any kind of a side study, or parallel study, or inquiry that could impair the work of the RCMP which must go on and which is of urgent necessity right now.

MINISTER'S STAFF—LACK OF SECURITY CHECKS

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister concerning the conduct of the Minister without Portfolio, the Hon. Member for Joliette. We have now learned that security clearance procedures were ignored for at least three members of the Minister's staff, two of whom have been fired. In view of the fact that the Minister has shown reckless disregard for security in his Ministry, for which he must assume full responsibility, will the Government order an independent inquiry to investigate all the facts surrounding this fundamental breach of security, and pending its conclusion will the Minister be suspended?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the other day I responded to a similar question which contained a series of allegations directed against the present Solicitor General and which were corrected yesterday. Let me simply repeat the answer I gave the Hon. Member on January 19. At that time I indicated there was indeed some breakdown in following strict security procedures. That has been investigated. I took the opportunity to assure the House that Ministers' staffs who have not been security cleared and who are handling sensitive information will certainly be subject to that procedure, and for those who have not been able to clear security appropriate action will be taken.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, there was no breakdown. There was a gross dereliction of duty for which the Minister must be held fully accountable. This is another example of how rotten and corrupt the Government is.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

DISMISSAL OF MR. MAJEAU

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary is directed to the Solicitor General. Yesterday in the House he indicated that Mr. Majeau was fired as a result of a two-month RCMP investigation. Will he not admit today that Mr. Majeau was fired because Maclean's magazine had called the Minister's office to make inquiries?

Hon. James Kelleher (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, as I advised the House yesterday, I asked the RCMP to investigate a letter I had received with respect to an unnamed individual in an unnamed Minister's office. I turned that letter over to the RCMP on November 7, within 48 hours of its receipt by me. On January 8 the RCMP advised me of the results of their investigation. I immediately advised the proper officials of that investigation and all I can say is that within hours a firing resulted.

FORMER MINISTER OF STATE (TRANSPORT)—SCOPE OF RCMP INQUIRY

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, the Deputy Prime Minister has confirmed that the allegations surrounding the former Minister of State for Transport went far beyond merely possible criminal wrongdoing.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Robinson: My question is directed to the Solicitor General who is responsible for the RCMP. Will he confirm that the RCMP inquiry cannot touch upon questions of conflict of interest and therefore explain exactly what the scope of that inquiry is, to whom the RCMP will report, and confirm that in the absence of any charges flowing from the report it will never see the light of day?

Hon. James Kelleher (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, as the Prime Minister has already advised the House, the RCMP were asked to make a complete investigation. That is what they are doing and I am awaiting the results of that investigation.

QUERY CONCERNING POSSIBLE CONFLICT OF INTEREST

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, the Minister is responsible for the RCMP and he does not seem to understand their role. Will he not agree that the RCMP have no jurisdiction whatsoever to investigate alleged conflict of interest on the part of federal cabinet Ministers? How on earth can the Minister stand in his place and say there is going to be a full inquiry when one of the central issues, conflict of interest, cannot even be investigated by the RCMP?

Hon. James Kelleher (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I can only repeat that the RCMP have been asked to do a complete investigation. That is being done. As the facts are made known to me by them, any and all appropriate action will be taken.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

OERLIKON CONTRACT—REQUEST FOR JUDICIAL INQUIRY

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. Does he believe that the public's faith in the integrity of the bidding process was maintained when three high-level officials of the evaluation team which recommended that Oerlikon receive the defence contract are now working for Oerlikon or its consulting firm? If the Government has nothing to fear, why does it not launch a full-scale judicial inquiry into this whole matter?

Hon. Paul Dick (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, it should be pointed out in dealing with this matter that there are two separate and distinct contracts. One is between the Government of Canada and Oerlikon and one is between Oerlikon and some commercial interests whereby it bought some land in Quebec. There is no doubt that the one between the Government of Canada and Oerlikon is clean and above-board and was let according to normal tendering procedures. The other problem is being investigated by the RCMP.

EVALUATION TEAM MEMBERS—EMPLOYMENT WITH OERLIKON

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, will the Minister confirm that three former officials of the Department of National Defence who were on the evaluation team which recommended Oerlikon receive the contract are now presently working for Oerlikon or its consulting firm?

Hon. Paul Dick (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, none of the people who were with the Department of National Defence and are now working with Oerlikon were in a sole decision-making position when they were with the Department.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Dick: I am not sure if the Opposition is really interested or whether they just want to laugh. Every one of these people went through the conflict of interest guideline rules to seek their release in accordance with the laws and regulations.

THE ADMINISTRATION

CONFLICT OF INTEREST GUIDELINES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. He will be aware that part of his responsibility is to ensure that conflict of interest guidelines for Ministers are lived up to. Since he has been aware of this matter for a week why has he not looked into this situation of abuse of conflict of interest and—

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Abuse of conflict of interest?

Mr. Riis: —when will he do so and report on his findings?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I am not sure what abuse of conflict of interest he is referring to. If he is suggesting that he wants another inquiry alongside the RCMP investigation, perhaps he might want to explain what he has against the RCMP and why—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mazankowski: —he would want to put in place another inquiry which might limit or prejudice or impair the work of the RCMP in getting to the bottom of this issue with due dispatch.

REQUEST FOR APPOINTMENT OF INQUIRY

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I am simply suggesting that the Deputy Prime Minister do his job and fulfil his responsiblities. There appears to be a cover-up. The people of Canada believe the Government is trying to cover up something—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Riis: —and that the Prime Minister is trying to—

• (1440)

Mr. Speaker: Order. If the Hon. Member has a question, he should put it.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, the people of Canada are now of the opinion that the Prime Minister is trying to cover up valuable information. Therefore, will the Deputy Prime Minister explain why the Prime Minister of Canada will not announce, before he leaves the country, an inquiry into this very critical matter in an effort to hold the reputation of the Government together?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, there is no cover-up. The fact of the matter is that the RCMP have been asked to conduct a full and complete investigation with no limitations whatsoever.

Mr. Broadbent: They don't deal with conflict of interest.

Mr. Mazankowski: I really do not know how in the name of God that could be referred to as a cover-up.

I have answered the question before. The reason that an inquiry such as the Hon. Member is suggesting has not been called for is that it may very well prejudice, impair, or unduly limit the work of the RCMP in the conduct of its investigation.

Mr. Murphy: You're refusing to look.

Mr. Riis: Have confidence in the RCMP.

Mr. Fulton: You're trying to sell a car with flat tires.

Mr. Riis: The RCMP will do their job.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Chair cannot help but notice that, as was commented upon yesterday, questions which are, if not exactly the same, certainly similar, are being asked.

Mr. Benjamin: You have to if you don't get an answer.

Mr. Speaker: When that happens, it is understandable that responses may become overly long in the opinion of some Members. I hope the Chair does not have to comment on this again today. I ask the Hon. Deputy Prime Minister to complete his answer.

Mr. Mazankowski: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I simply want to reiterate the words which the Prime Minister used yesterday in response to the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition. He stated as reported at page 2448 of Hansard:

> It may very well be that in the future, as the police inquiry goes on, other action will be required by this House, the Government, or the police. It may very well be that the action undertaken now will result in criminal prosecutions launched at some time in the future against some individual, in which case it is clear that nothing ought to be done that would compromise the ability of the RCMP to prosecute fully the initiatives they will have undertaken.

Mr. Benjamin: What does that have to do with conflict of interest?

REQUEST THAT SWEARING-IN OF JEAN BAZIN AS SENATOR BE POSTPONED

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. It has nothing to do with the RCMP, so maybe he can answer it. Yesterday in the House of Commons I asked the Prime Minister if Jean Bazin had made representations to the Government of Canada on behalf of Oerlikon in the past. The Prime Minister said that he knew nothing of it. There have been reports today that Mr. Bazin was making representations on behalf of Oerlikon and also that he was a director on the board of Oerlikon since April 29. Therefore, is it not obvious that the Prime Minister should telephone his friend, Mr. Bazin, and ask him to postpone his swearing-in to the Senate of Canada?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, my answer to the first part of the question is the same answer as the Prime Minister gave yesterday. The repetition of the second part of the question does not impress me, and I am sure it does not impress other Members in the House.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, answers such as that will earn the Deputy Prime Minister the nickname "Velcro Lips II".

[Translation]

REQUEST FOR WITHDRAWAL OF MR. BAZIN'S NOMINATION TO SENATE

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, in light of the fact that Mr. Bazin, according to a spokesman for Byers, Casgrain, a Mr. Vigneault, had been involved with Oerlikon since February 1986 and had been working as an administrator, as I said earlier, since April, I want to repeat my question to the Deputy Prime Minister: Will he or will the Prime Minister call Mr. Bazin today and ask him to resign his appointment to the Senate?

[English]

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, same question, same answer.

INCOME TAX

NON-PAYMENT OF TAX BY HIGH INCOME EARNERS

Mr. Don Ravis (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for Finance. Revenue Canada released information yesterday indicating that 287 people who earn more than $250,000 per year paid no tax in 1984. Would the Minister explain to the House how it happened that they paid no tax? What is the Government doing to avoid the recurrence of this situation?

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I join the Hon. Member in his concern about the number of people who paid no tax. Over one-third of those taxpayers can be traced directly to the Scientific Research Tax Credit brought in by Finance Minister Lalonde.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: What about the other two-thirds?

Mr. Hockin: We have stopped that program. Second, tax reform with the alternative minimum tax is a comprehensive approach. In addition to that, which will account for a large number of the others, we have halted the tax sheltered financing of yachts, hotels, and recreational vehicles. We have prevented the use of carve-outs. We are introducing at-risk rules for limited partnerships. We are introducing rules to deny the intercorporate dividend deductions with respect to investments.

Some Hon. Members: More, more!

OERLIKON LAND PURCHASE TRANSACTION—QUERY CONCERNING NORMAND OUELLETTE

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Deputy Prime Minister. It is a different and specific question. Can the Deputy Prime Minister tell the House when the Prime Minister or his office first heard about the possibility that Mr. Normand Ouellette, the President of the PC riding association, had received $970,000 in the Oerlikon land deal? If he can tell us when that happened, can he also tell us whether the Prime Minister's Office received this information from Mr. Jean Bazin?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the facts surrounding this issue were conveyed to the Prime Minister on Wednesday, January 14, by his principal secretary who had collected this information earlier that week.

Mr. Nystrom: I wish we could have an answer. He really is the son of Velcro Lips.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Broadbent is contagious.

Mr. Shields: Anything to assassinate a character. You're an idiot, that's what you are. You are a fool.

Mr. Gauthier: They are getting testy over there.

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps the Hon. Member could put his question.

FORMER MINISTER OF STATE (TRANSPORT) BLIND TRUST—PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary for the Deputy Prime Minister.

Here is my supplementary. What was the information the Prime Minister or his office received from Mr. Jean Bazin, which led the Prime Minister last week, between Wednesday and Friday, to ask for information on the blind trust of the former Minister of State for Transport? Could he answer that question?

NATIONAL DEFENCE

AWARD OF LOW LEVEL AIR DEFENCE CONTRACT TO OERLIKON CORPORATION

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. It is not about the land deal, but about the underlying contract with DND which the Minister has characterized as being so clean and above-board, even though the bidder is loaded with friends of the Government.

How can the Canadian people maintain their confidence in the way the Government manages contracts when so many cronies of the Government are heavily involved with government contractors? This LLAD contract, for which Oerlikon was not the lowest bidder in the first round, was increased from $600 million to $1.15 billion within two months.

Mr. Speaker: Order, order.

Some Hon. Members: Sit down.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for York Centre will put his question. I hope that his supplementary question will be appropriately brief.

Mr. Kaplan: How can Canadians believe that tough bargaining resulted in that increase of over $500 million when cronies were involved?

Mr. Paul Dick (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I would like to assure the Hon. Member of the independence of this contract. An independent American company was brought in to audit and to evaluate the process—

Ms. Copps: Who wrote that for you?

Mr. Dick: —which set the bidding in motion. This occurred in July of 1984. The contract was within budget. The bid of Oerlikon was first in price, first in technical evaluation, first in industrial benefits, and first in operational and maintenance costs. Not one person who had been with the Department of National Defence or otherwise with the Government joined Oerlikon until after the contract was signed.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

• (1450)

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for York Centre with a short supplementary.

Mr. Kaplan: That is all very nice.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): You struck out, Bob.

Mr. Speaker: Order. That was a very short preamble. Perhaps the Hon. Member could get to the question. Also perhaps some Hon. Members who are his closest colleagues could let the Hon. Member ask the question.

BIDDING PROCESS

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Is it not a fact that all of those "firsts" the Minister described were not firsts achieved by Oerlikon in the first round of bidding, but in the second round of bidding?

Hon. Paul Dick (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the process which was set up and approved by the previous Government in July of 1984 was carried through to the end.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

ACID RAIN—VISIT TO CANADA BY UNITED STATES VICE-PRESIDENT

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Secretary of State for External Affairs. It concerns the visit of Vice-President Bush to Canada today. I wonder if the Secretary of State for External Affairs could tell us whether or not Vice-President Bush is now persuaded that President Reagan's budget is inadequate with respect to acid rain? And was the Prime Minister able to get a commitment from the Vice-President that the recommendations of the Davis—Lewis report would be lived up to in full, and swiftly?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister, the Minister of the Environment and I certainly made that case to Vice-President Bush. We believe he understands the case of Canada.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): You don't sound very sure.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): We will be watching to see if in fact there is action taken by the United States—

Mr. Broadbent: Was there a commitment?

Mr. Blaikie: I am listening.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): —to honour the commitment which was given by the President of the United States with regard to acid rain. We expect that commitment to be honoured.

Mr. Blaikie: In other words, Mr. Speaker, it appears that a commitment was not received from the Vice-President.

REQUEST FOR MINISTERIAL STATEMENT

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): I want to ask the Secretary of State for External Affairs, without writing off the hope that some day it might be lived up to by the current administration, what alternate plans does the Government have for working with people in the United States Congress who want to reduce acid rain? What alternate plans does the Government have for seeking a remedy to Canada's trans-boundary environmental problems through that vehicle? Will either the Minister of State for External Affairs or the Minister of the Environment be soon making a statement in the House to say what the response of the Canadian Government will be to continuing American inaction, particularly on the part of the administration?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, one response of the Government of Canada was to call President Bush here to inform him directly of our concerns. If the Hon. Member is asking if we will be working closely with members of the House of Representatives and the Senate of the United States who are interested in action on acid rain, the answer is yes, we will continue to work with them. However, we will also continue to keep up pressure on the administration to honour the President's commitment with respect to acid rain.

ENVOYS' REPORT—UNITED STATES POSITION

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of the Environment who knows today the Prime Minister has been saying that the U.S. Government has not done nearly enough about acid rain. In saying so, the Prime Minister is trying to build a façade to make Canadians believe—

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Order.

Mr. Caccia: —that the acid rain agreement is about emission cuts, and the Minister knows very well that it is not. Will the Minister admit that, even if President Reagan lives up to the Envoys' report, the U.S. would not be committed to acid rain controls protecting Canada? Would the Minister come clean with the House and the public and admit that?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the premise of the Hon. Member's question is dead wrong. I quote from page 30 of the Envoys' report which the Hon. Member says has not addressed itself to acid rain emission and reductions. It says:

—although the primary purpose of this research program—

The clean coal technology program.

—is to demonstrate the kinds of technologies that would be needed for any future acid rain control program, it should also result in some near-term reductions in U.S. air emissions that affect Canadian ecosystems.

Go back to the report and read it. It is in black and white.

CANADIAN POSITION

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, in the very same quotation the Minister has just read, the emphasis is on research:

—the primary purpose of this research program is to demonstrate the kinds of technologies that would be needed—

Therefore, the emphasis is on research.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Hon. Members, I am sure, would want the Chair to point out that an exchange which gets into a lot of detail and goes into extensive quotations is really for debate. I would ask the Hon. Member, who has an important matter to raise, to put the question.

Mr. Caccia: I abide by your ruling, Mr. Speaker. Will the Government commit itself at the April Summit to accept nothing less than an acid rain control program of significance to Canada?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the objective of the Canadian Government in April, or whenever the Summit is held—as it has been all along—is the achievement of a bilateral accord between Canada and the United States to bring about substantial reductions in acid rain-causing emissions on both sides of the border. Translated into plain English, that for us means a reduction from about four million metric tonnes of U.S. emissions a year to about half, two million metric tonnes, which cross the border from the United States into Canada, doing irreparable harm to our environment.

TRADE

CHARGE PAID ON DRESSED AMERICAN LUMBER SHIPPED BACK TO UNITED STATES

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister for International Trade. Why is the Government charging Canadian remanufacturers 15 per cent on American lumber imported to Canada which is dressed here and shipped back to contruction companies in the United States?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I am glad the Hon. Member brought that particular anomaly to my attention and I will check into it and get back to him.

CHARGE PLACED ON EXEMPT NEW BRUNSWICK LUMBER EXPORTED THROUGH ONTARIO

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, while the Minister is checking into that one, I hope she will look at this one. Why is a lumber supplier in Ontario forced to pay 15 per cent on lumber from a mill exempt from the tax, like an Irving Mill in the Province of New Brunswick, simply because that lumber stops over on its way to the United States in Ontario?

Mr. Murphy: And how many more?

Mr. Broadbent: Will you look into that, Pat?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, as I said, these anomalies brought to my attention by the Hon. Member—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Miss Carney: —I am unaware of. I will check into them and report to the Hon. Member.

Mr. Orlikow: How many more are there?

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): There are a lot more.

CANADA-UNITED STATES AUTO PACT

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Minister for International Trade. At the conclusion of the meetings this morning, Vice-Pesident Bush is reported to have said that the Canada-U.S. Auto Pact was not even discussed at the meetings with Canadian Ministers. Knowing the extreme importance of the Auto Pact to the economy of this country, and the statements made by high U.S. officials that they want to have it negotiated as part of the free trade talks, why did we not raise the Auto Pact? And why did we not gain from Vice-President Bush a clear, clear repudiation of any attempts by the United States to negotiate the Auto Pact during these discussions?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member might also ask why we don't stop beating our wives.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Miss Carney: In this case we have said that we have not put the Auto Pact on the table. The Americans have not put the Auto Pact on the table. Why would we discuss something which is not on the table that we have indicated we are not willing to put on the table?

Mr. Axworthy: I can tell the Minister that I do not beat my wife but I cannot comment on the Tory Caucus. You will have to answer for your own actions.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

• (1500)

STATEMENT MADE BY UNITED STATES NEGOTIATOR

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, in a speech in Washington last week Peter Murphy, the chief negotiator for the U.S., said that the Auto Pact should be considered as part of the negotiations. That was confirmed by the Under Secretary of Commerce, Bruce Howard. It is clearly a major area of priority to the United States Government. Will the Minister tell us why the Government refuses to discuss something so vital to our interests? Why did we not make a clear statement to Vice-President Bush when we had him here that they should not touch the Auto Pact?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I think I have answered that question. I have pointed out that we are not proposing that the Auto Pact be put on the table, therefore we would not raise it with the Vice-President. The Americans have not brought it forward. We are discussing—

Mr. Axworthy: And this is our negotiator!

Miss Carney: Mr. Speaker, the only people who keep trying to force and drag the putting of the Auto Pact onto the table are members of the Opposition.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

BANKS AND BANKING

INCREASES IN BANK SERVICE CHARGES

Mr. Bill Attewell (Don Valley East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Finance. I realize that we are moving toward a re-regulated financial services market-place, and I support that initiative. However, I have received a number of complaints about the excessive increases in bank service charges and the lack of adequate notice. Will the Minister look into this particular problem? Can he assure us that through this re-regulation we will see more competition in the market-place to help combat these apparent excessive increases in service charges?

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, I would be very happy to look into this matter. I remind the Hon. Member that, with respect to the level of service charges, the financial institutions' policy framework which was brought in on December 18 will greatly increase competition which, hopefully, will affect the levels.

With respect to the terms and the posting of notices of terms which used to be posted on the inside of banks, people are now using cash machines and not going into the banks. This is a real problem. I have asked the OIGB to examine this matter to see if consumers' needs are being met. If they are not, changes must be made.

GOVERNMENT RESPONSE

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 106(8), I have the honour to table, in both official languages, the Government's response to petitions, Nos. 332-294 to 332-308 inclusive, 332-320 to 332-329 inclusive, 332-334 to 332-338 inclusive, 332-349, 332-353 to 332-358 inclusive, 332-370 to 332-373 inclusive, 332-385 to 332-395 inclusive, 332-399 to 332-402 inclusive and 332-440.

COMMUNICATIONS AND CULTURE

PRESENTATION OF SECOND REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Jim Edwards (Edmonton South): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour of tabling, in both official languages, the Second Report of the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture. The report is entitled: Taxation of artists and the arts. The Committee asks the Government to table a response to its report, pursuant to Standing Order 99(2). The Committee has started to examine a number of important issues relating to Canada's cultural policy, and one of its priorities is to make the position of artists and the arts a more equitable one.

[English]

The key recommendation of the report is to incorporate a definition of professional artist and artistic activity in the Income Tax Act, a measure which would give juridical status to artists and their work. This measure would give the current administrative practice followed by Revenue Canada the force of law.

Other recommendations deal with the highly distinctive economic circumstances of artists. One of these, if adopted, would extend to professional artists the right to use block averaging and the modified accruals basis of accounting in the same way as do farmers and fishermen.

The needs of organizations established to promote the arts and the welfare of artists are also the subject of our recommendations, as is the larger issue of deductibility of charitable donations.

[Translation]

The changes the committee is recommending have been considered at length and have received the unanimous approval of members of the arts world and of committee members representing the three federal political parties. Artists are hoping that changes in the legislation will be announced shortly. I would like to take this opportunity to thank Members from all three parties for their sustained effort in preparing this unanimous report for submission to the House.

PETITIONS

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour under Standing Order 106 to present a petition signed by residents of northern Ontario and by other Canadians in which they express their concern that the Government's intention to change the Patent Act relating to prescription drugs will increase drug prices for Canadian consumers and severely restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy necessary prescription drugs. In their petition the petitioners explain that they believe this is yet another example of the Canadian Government making concessions to the United States in the free trade negotiations at the expense of average Canadians.

OPPOSITION TO EXODUS LINK CONTRACT

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale—High Park): Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege today to present to the House a petition on behalf of the residents of Parkdale—High Park in which they express their opposition to the Exodus Link parole privatization contract which would locate up to 80 ex-convicts in their neighbourhood. I would like to add my strong support to their call for the Solicitor General (Mr. Kelleher) to immediately terminate funding to Exodus Link until a location outside the boundaries of Parkdale—High Park has been found.

REMOVAL OF MAILBOXES BY CANADA POST

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale—High Park): Mr. Speaker, residents of Parkdale—High Park have requested that I present a petition to the House of Commons on their behalf calling for the return of the mail post boxes which were arbitrarily removed from the streets of Toronto without consultation. The petitioners are residents of Springhurst, Tyndall, Cowan and Close Avenues who have been greatly inconvenienced by the decision. I am pleased to add my strong support to their demand that Canada Post restore the mailboxes and ensure the level of efficient and convenient postal service that Canadians have every right to expect.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and duty to present two petitions. The first is from Senior Power of the City of Regina. They ask the House of Commons not to pass the legislation regarding amendments to the Patent Act because the proposals of federal Government drug plans will result in higher priced drugs for the provincial Government and senior citizens.

• (1510)

TRANSPORTATION—ECONOMIC REGULATORY REFORM

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): I have a further petition from residents of Richmond, Coquitlam, Vancouver, Delta, West Vancouver, and North Vancouver in British Columbia, as well as Regina, in which they say that in the opinion of your petitioners transportation is a monopoly without economic regulation, and that Bill C-18 will create unnecessary chaos in the transportation industry. It will lead to unacceptable reductions in safety standards, as well as deterioration in service, quality, type, and frequency.

Therefore, your petitioners humbly pray and call upon the House of Commons to withdraw Bill C-18 and retain public convenience and necessity as a fundamental factor in the development of public transportation policy.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, it is my duty to present under Standing Order 106 a petition on behalf of a number of residents of Canada who are asking the Government to reconsider the plans to change the Patent Act. They feel it will result in significant increases in prescription drug costs. They believe that this will occur at the expense of average Canadians. They ask the Government to consider this, particularly in light of the free trade negotiations.

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 106, I have the privilege and honour to present a petition to the House. The petition opposes Bill C-22 and calls upon the Government to abandon it. The petitioners from the communities of Sudbury, Val-Caron, Chelmsford, Lively, Naughton, and Blezard Valley feel that changes to the Patent Act will unfairly hurt them and their health needs which require the purchase of prescription drugs on an ongoing basis. Furthermore, they believe that the proposals of the federal Government in Bill C-22 will result in higher costs to the provincial government drug plans.

Furthermore, they believe that this is just another example of the Canadian Government giving concessions to the United States in the free trade negotiations at the expense of ordinary Canadians. They thereby call upon this Government to withdraw this iniquitous Bill C-22.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition under the provisions of Standing Order 106 signed by residents of Regina, Fort Qu'Appelle, and other towns and cities in Saskatchewan. They say that the federal Government's proposal to change the Patent Act relating to prescription drugs will increase drug prices for Canadian consumers, and it will result in higher costs to the provincial govenment drug plans.

Therefore, they call upon Parliament to reject those proposals which will increase prescription drug prices for Canadians.

POSTAL SERVICES ESKIMO POINT, NORTHWEST TERRITORIES

Mr. Thomas Suluk (Nunatsiaq): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition under Standing Order 106. The petition is signed by 45 residents of Eskimo Point, Northwest Territories, who are unhappy with the discontinuation of postal money orders and C.O.D.s which have been unavailable since October, 1986. The community is only accessible by air and it is very time consuming to get them from other communities which are hundreds of miles away. The petitioners respectfully request the reinstatement of those services.

JIMMY ISHALOOK—REQUEST FOR PAROLE

Mr. Thomas Suluk (Nunatsiaq): I have another petition from 47 residents of the same community who are petitioning the House for the parole on humanitarian grounds of Mr. Jimmy Ishalook, who is an inmate of the Yellowknife Correctional Centre. Mr. Ishalook is suffering from an advanced state of cancer. He is presently being treated at the Cross Cancer Institute in Edmonton. Mr. Ishalook is now eligible for parole, but due to language difficulties, he has not yet filed an application.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I wish to introduce a petition under Standing Order 106. The petitioners ask Parliament, and particularly the Government, to withdraw Bill C-22, the legislation which would extend patent rights and allow the multinational corporations to increase their profits at the expense of the elderly and the sick.

OPPOSITION TO LOCATION OF TRANSFER POINT—DANGEROUS GOODS

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present two petitions today. The first one is from my constituents in the downtown area of Vancouver East, which includes Chinatown. It is from many citizens who are very concerned that the Canadian Transport Commission relocated the transfer point for dangerous goods to an area within the densely populated downtown part of Vancouver East. This is a hazard that is unacceptable in any inner city area, and particularly on the harbour side of Vancouver East.

Therefore, the petitioners are asking that the Canadian Transport Commission be required to relocate the transfer of hazardous commodities to outside the inner harbour of Vancouver, and finalize a permanent solution to the movement of hazardous commodities, which will be acceptable to the citizens of greater Vancouver.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): The second petition is from citizens in Cumberland, B.C. It is a petition concerning the changes to the Patent Act in Bill C-22 which will severely restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy prescription drugs, and will result in higher costs to provincial government plans and concessions to the United States. The petitioners strongly ask that the House of Commons reject the proposals in Bill C-22.

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and duty to present a petition from a number of residents of Manitoba in Stonewall, Selkirk, Pembina Highway, and Winnipeg who are concerned about the Government's determination to change the Patent Act relating to prescription drugs in a way that the petitioners believe will severely restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy the prescription drugs that they need. The petitioners are afraid it will particularly hurt Canadians whose health needs require regular prescription drugs. They feel that these changes are another example of Canadian Government concessions to the United States for free trade.

Therefore, they humbly pray and call upon Parliament to reject these proposals on the ground that they will increase prescription drug prices for most Canadians.

LOW-LEVEL FLIGHTS AT ARMED FORCES BASE AT GOOSE BAY

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): I also have the honour to present another petition. This one is from a number of residents of Alberta in places such as Calgary, Edmonton, Wetaskiwin, Athabasca, Blackfield, Red Deer, and also from Toronto, Ontario. These people are concerned about the low level flight training at Goose Bay in Labrador and they feel that it should be discontinued. They believe that the present training disrupts the environment and the life of the native people there, and also it is not in the best interests of the security of Canada on the ground that it is a provocative and aggressive preparation for a first strike, and it tends to endanger world peace.

Therefore, they ask Parliament to ensure that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) will end all the low level flight training in the Goose Bay Canadian Forces Base, and cease negotiations with NATO for the establishment of a larger base there.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt—Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, under the requirements of Standing Order 106, I have a petition submitted by residents of the Wynyard area in my riding who are availing themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to present a grievance common to the petitioners with certain assurance that the House will provide a remedy. They point out that changes to the Patent Act relating to prescription drugs will increase drug prices, will unfairly hurt those Canadians whose health needs require the purchase of prescription drugs on an ongoing basis, and will result in higher cost to the provincial government drug plans.

Therefore, they call upon Parliament to reject these proposals which will increase prescription drug prices to all Canadians.

• (1520)

OPPOSITION TO PRIVATIZATION OF TELEGLOBE CANADA

Mr. Bob Brisco (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 106, I have the honour to present a petition asking that the present service provided to the Canadian public by Teleglobe Canada while providing telecommunications to all corners of the world, whether profitable or not, be protected; that job security of Teleglobe employees be protected; that protection of acquired and contractual rights of Teleglobe Canada employees be respected by the Government; and that the Government take immediate action to halt the process of Teleglobe's privatization.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege today to present a petition on behalf of a large number of residents of the City of Toronto who are concerned about the plans of the federal Government to licence prescription drugs differently and to allow the profits from those drugs to flow to multinational drug companies.

They therefore call upon Parliament to reject those proposals.

LOW-LEVEL FLIGHTS AT ARMED FORCES BASE AT GOOSE BAY

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, I have a second petition to present today. It concerns the Goose Bay war fighting and training base in Labrador. These petitioners are opposed to the continuation of that base and any extension of its use for practising for war.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, my third petition is signed by a number of residents of the City of Winnipeg and by one from La Salle, Quebec. It also calls upon the Government to turn away from its plans to change the Patent Act and inflict higher drug prices on Canadians.

CANADIAN HUMAN RIGHTS ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

Mr. Albert Cooper (Peace River) moved for leave to introduce Bill C-239, an Act to amend the Canadian Human Rights Act (non-discriminatory practices).

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Shall the Hon. Member have leave to introduce the Bill?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Cooper: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the Bill is to allow an employer for whom the promotion of a religion is a main objective to require the observance of that religion by his employees.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 36, 43 and 55.

[Text]

INTRODUCTION OF C-7 RIFLE

Question No. 36—Mr. McKinnon:

1. Does the government expect the C-7 rifle, on which it started to take delivery in the spring of 1986, to be in ordinary use for drill and practice firing throughout the Armed Forces and, if so, on what date?

2. Has there been any unexpected delay in the introduction of the rifle and, if so, for what reason?

Mr. Bud Bradley (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Defence): 1. Yes, in 1987.

2. Yes, a problem with the Canadian produced ammunition delayed the introduction of the new rifle to 1 Canadian Brigade Group and to 4th Canadian Mechanized Brigade Group. Occasionally during firing some bullets fragmented, either in the weapon barrel or shortly after exit. The manufacturer has advised that the problem is resolved.

EXPANSION OF LORAN-C RADIO NAVIGATIONAL SYSTEM

Question No. 43—Mr. Parry:

Did the Minister of Transport receive correspondence from the Ontario Minister of Transportation and Communications requesting the expansion of the Loran-C radio navigational system in Ontario and, if so, what action is the Minister planning to take concerning this request?

Mr. David Kilgour (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): Yes.

Air navigation.

Transport Canada has been working closely with the United States Federal Aviation Administration to confirm existing areas of Loran-C signal coverage and to determine whether expansion of the signal coverage in Canada could be justified.

Transport Canada's position is to facilitate the use of existing Loran-C signal coverage. Any expansion of Loran-C coverage in Canada would involve consultations with the industry and would only be pursued if sufficient benefits for instrument flight navigation could be confirmed in order to offset the capital and operating costs involved.

Vehicle monitoring.

There appear to be a number of potential benefits associated with surface vehicle monitoring and these should be more clearly defined following a demonstration project being established by the Government of Ontario. However, it is not clear, at this time, if Loran-C is the most suitable system for determining the location of a vehicle. Other systems are being investigated and it is unlikely that an expansion of the Loran-C system can be justified, at this time, on the basis of surface vehicle monitoring alone.

* RCMP—REMEMBRANCE DAY CEREMONIES

Question No. 55—Mr. Cooper:

1. For the fiscal years ended (a) 1983 (b) 1984 (c) 1985 and (d) 1986, were wreaths provided to RCMP detachments for presentation during Remembrance Day ceremonies and, if so, at what cost?

2. Was the practice eliminated for the fiscal year ending 1987 and, if so, for what reason?

Hon. James Kelleher (Solicitor General of Canada): 1. RCMP policy provides for the purchase of wreaths for presentation on Remembrance Day by Division and Sub-Division Headquarters only. There is no provision for purchases for detachment use. Therefore, no such purchases from public funds have occurred during the years 1983 to 1986 inclusive.

2. The above noted policy is still in effect and consideration is not being given to changing same.

[Translation]

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: The questions enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary have been answered. Shall the remaining questions stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

MOTIONS FOR PAPERS

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I ask that all notices of motions for the production of papers be allowed to stand.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Shall all notices of motions stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

SOFTWOOD LUMBER PRODUCTS EXPORT CHARGE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed from Tuesday, January 20, consideration of the motion of Miss Carney that Bill C-37, an Act respecting the imposition of a charge on the export of certain softwood lumber products, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee, and the amendment of Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra), (p. 2382).

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I want to avail myself of this opportunity to speak for a few minutes on the export tax which is being imposed upon softwood lumber.

During an intervention yesterday by the Hon. Member for The Battlefords—Meadow Lake (Mr. Gormley), he suggested that the woods industry in northern Saskatchewan was supportive of and happy with the imposition of the tax. The Hon. Member said that he had been in that area during the last few weeks. I suggest that he should return to northern Saskatchewan and ask mill operators and workers about the tax now that they have had a chance to look at it and its effects. In fact, the entire woods industry in northern Saskatchewan now recognizes the negative effect of the tax.

Of course the market has not settled down because of the change in tax. However, there is no doubt that the industry is already adjusting to its inability to fit into the market which will be developed by the imposition of the tax. Even now in places like Hudson Bay, Big River, and Meadow Lake—and two of these areas are in the Hon. Member's constituency—people recognize that they are unable to compete with the B.C. market for the areas that have traditionally been the direction in which their lumber has gone. In fact, a Hudson Bay plant which produces studs almost entirely and exports them to a great extent to the United States, particularly the Chicago market, is indicating that it laid off 30 employees because of the tax.

A study which was conducted in British Columbia suggested that the price of studs would be $120 per thousand, which is down about 25 per cent to 30 per cent from what it was before the tax was imposed. Also, the mill rate, or what the mill will get, is down from $153 per thousand to about $120 per thousand. Even with the transportation advantage in Saskatchewan of moving to the Prairies and possibly even to the Chicago market, no plant in Saskatchewan can match that rate. The lowest possible rate which can be matched in that province—and it would be very difficult to confirm it—is probably well above the $140 per thousand which B.C. companies suggest they can match anywhere in Saskatchewan.

Plants in Saskatchewan cannot possibly produce studs or lumber at that particular rate. Even the Hon. Member for The Battlefords—Meadow Lake should know that no plant in Saskatchewan has the ability to compete with the B.C. industry if it tries to sell into the Canadian market. A good portion of Saskatchewan production is sold domestically within Saskatchewan and within the Prairies. The rest of it is exported to the Chicago market or that particular part of the United States. Some of it is domestic production and goes to Ontario. However, no plant in Saskatchewan has the ability to compete with the B.C. industry. Therefore, the taxation imposed upon softwood lumber will directly and negatively affect the production of the mills in Saskatchewan. No doubt some of them will be able to adjust, but they will all feel the effects.

The reason Saskatchewan mills are unable to compete with the British Columbia industry has nothing to do with quality or even efficiency. We just do not have the scale of operations in Saskatchewan that there are in British Columbia. For instance, there is not one optimizer in any of the mills in Saskatchewan. The capital investment which would be necessary to put that kind of technology in place is so great that no mill could afford it and stay operational. We do not have the world-class mills in Saskatchewan that are necessary to compete with British Columbia. We also have to take into consideration distance, the cost of wood and the transportation of wood to the mill. The cost of wood is so high to start with, having brought it out of the bush and to the mills, that the Saskatchewan mills already start with a disadvantage.

British Columbia mills have suggested that when they start selling into the new markets on the Prairies, in Ontario and in the United States, they will probably be forced to use the U.S. transportation system. If the Transportation Act, which is presently before this House, were to pass very suddenly—which we hope will not happen—it would allow Canadian companies to ship on U.S. transportation lines to U.S. markets. At present there is a requirement to cross the Canadian Prairies to reach the Ontario and U.S. markets.

In Saskatchewan, where we have a fairly large number of operations in places like Hudson's Bay, Big River, Meadow Lake and Prince Albert, this tax will affect us. Even where the market is domestic it will affect us. Other areas of Canada will be able to take over our market without too much difficulty. We will not be able to sell at the price which larger and more technically capable mills can from other provinces.

Management consultants studying the effect of this tax suggest that a large number of mills under the $153 a thousand or a little higher survived, but now they will be forced out of business. Jobs will be lost. We also know that with the little higher prices in the States, many mills will not be able to operate. With the added burden of the 15 per cent tax, many of those marginal mills in the U.S. will take over part of their own market. The total amount of lumber shipped to the United States will be considerably less than we expect it to be. Because lumber will be more expensive in the States this will translate into fewer U.S. housing starts. Not only will we have to pay 15 per cent more or take a 15 per cent drop in the price of lumber, because of the increased price in the United States we will not be selling the same amount of lumber as we have in the past.

Mr. Brisco: Who told you that?

Mr. Hovdebo: We will be looking for that lumber market in Canada.

I just wanted to point out that even in a place like Saskatchewan where a large portion of our market is domestic, we know the effect of this tax will be to reduce the markets we have available to us and will also reduce the amount of return and possibly force the closing of several mills.

Mr. Bob Brisco (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the comments of the Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo), particularly in the context of the concern he has over the price escalation for housing in the United States. But whose fault is that? That is something the Americans brought upon themselves. That is something the U.S. Congress inflicted on the consumer and something for which the democratic congressmen in the United States will have to answer.

In respect of the countervail action of 1982-83 the comparison has been drawn that we have not followed the same route followed then. At that time the Liberals were in power. We have heard that the matter was a piece of cake and we have complicated the process. What people have failed to acknowledge is that there was no preliminary determination in 1982-83. What people also failed to acknowledge is that in 1982-83 the Opposition remained silent in order to support a united position of the Government of Canada in battling the lumber industry of the United States. The Conservatives and the New Democratic Party restrained themselves and said that Canada must go into this united and together: Government, industry and labour. Granted the circumstances were not quite the same. Granted the stress on the U.S. trade imbalance was not quite as severe. But we did adhere to a position of solidarity and unity on the issue. How unfortunate that that circumstance did not prevail in this particular action we have just sweated through.

The remarks in and outside the House by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner), by the Leader of the New Democratic Party (Mr. Broadbent) and by other members of those two caucuses have been far from helpful. They have contributed to the problem. If they are so obtuse as to believe that the United States and the lumber coalition of the United States is not listening, then clearly I feel sorry for them. I have to consider, in the light of any other evidence, that it was irresponsible conduct. I do not think there is any other explanation for it. They have to live and be accountable for that kind of action.

Adam Zimmerman says the industry would have done a better job. What were the options, Mr. Speaker? He said the industry would have done a better job and they would have made a better deal. But can you not see the scenario, Sir? After the industry got whipsawed in Washington, people would have been back here in Canada dumping on the Government saying, "Where were you when we needed you?" It would have been a field day for the Opposition, which would have replied: "Where was the Government? Why didn't it get involved?" One cannot have it both ways. If we are to take the sage words of Mr. Zimmerman, we have to consider his track record, particularly as it applies to Noranda, and that, of course, creates a bit of a credibility problem.

If we had exercised the options left to us by the industry or the options the Opposition would have us pursue, what would we really have been left with? We would have had a countervail action, and if that was not fair we could have taken the Americans to court. Can you imagine, Mr. Speaker, two or three years of that process in court and the possibilities of winning? I cannot. However, if we did win, what would the next step be? It would be a Congressional Bill and there is not one member of the Opposition who does not realize that. They know of the protectionist mood in the United States just as government Members do. They know Congress would act separately and very strongly. The only other opportunity left would be the GATT. The whole country might just as well go to sleep while waiting for that decision.

Mill owners and operators in my riding have spoken out on this issue. Mr. Zammit of Westar Timber in Castlegar says that the export tax is the lesser of two evils and that he is willing to live with it as such. He did not tell me how much his mill exports to the United States but I do know that the volume is substantial.

There is a naysayer in my riding. Mr. Nelson of ATCO Lumber has said that he is totally dissatisfied with the export tax and would have preferred to see the issue run its course and be settled in court. Mr. Nelson is entitled to his day in court or out, and I had the opportunity to speak to him about this. However, he did not want to talk about it so I have not had the opportunity to fully examine his opinions. By the way, most exports from his mill go to the United States.

Kalesnikoff Lumber sends 35 per cent of its products to the United States. Ymir Forest Products exports 95 per cent of its products to overseas markets.

Ike Barber of Slocan Forest Products says, among other things, that the talk of new market development is not realistic, and I will turn to that later. He also says that much is already being done in that area. Slocan Forest Products employs 300 and exports 70 to 75 per cent of its products to the United States. It will not be shutting down.

For-Wood Manufacturing has not exported to the U.S. since May 1986. Mr. Mackie of that company believes that the stumpage rates should be higher. Mr. Aldinger of Meadow Creek Cedar believes that the settlement was the best possible under the circumstances. He believes that the tax revenue should be placed in a trust fund until a trade agreement with the United States is in place and then decide on the best use for the money. The tax does not affect him, however, because he exports most of his products to Japan.

Mr. Remple of Cooper Creek Cedar is not terribly disappointed with the negotiated settlement and says that under the circumstances, the Government did as well as it could. The tax will affect his operation but not to a substantial degree because there is a high demand for cedar in the United States. He exports about 50 per cent of his products to the United States.

Of all the mills in Kootenay West, I was unable to contact four, most of which are small mills. I look forward to having an opportunity to speak to those mill operators within the next few days.

In the press, in the industry, in this House and on the street, it is evident that the weight of argument in favour of the position taken by the Government, when put on the scales of justice, tips very heavily in our favour.

What is the response of the industry? The Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon) has said that the softwood industry across the country is reeling, uncertain and confused. I really thought that he was talking about his Party. I have had the opportunity to outline that confusion of which he speaks in Kootenay West. That confusion simply does not exist.

The Hon. Member spoke of initiating major moves in the industry and its unions to find new markets. The industry in Kootenay West has already found new markets. It takes a great deal of time to change and develop those new markets.

I only wish that I had a great deal more time to develop my arguments, justifying and demontrating that there is a very real problem in bringing about an effective change in housing habits in China, Japan and Pacific Rim countries. Perhaps the House wishes to reflect on this. I would end by asking Hon. Members to compare housing in Canada from British Columbia to Ontario, brick to wood, with Japanese and Chinese housing and accommodations.

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, I rise to enter this debate today to point out some obvious problems with the export tax. The most crucial point of all is the very idea that the Parliament of Canada should be considering such action at all. We are not responding to any Canadian concern, we are merely responding to American pressure. We are considering a tax on the export of softwood lumber because the United States says we should. That more than anything else is clearly unacceptable to me, to my Party and, in a general sense, to the people of Canada.

This tax comes before us as a desperate, last-minute arrangement made by the Conservative Government. It shows. There are obvious inequities and oversights in this proposal, showing that it was rushed through without sufficient thought or planning.

For example, the original complaint from the American lumber industry was about low stumpage fees. This tax has nothing whatsoever to do with stumpage fees. Instead, this debate is about a tax on the export of softwood lumber products. It is not the right measure to address the American complaint. It takes a broad-brush approach and victimizes many innocent people.

The American countervailing duty was assessed on the first mill price. Although we argue that this countervailing action was unjust, at least it was aimed at what the Americans saw as being the problem. However, the Canadian export tax is not levied at the first mill. Fifteen per cent on the export price is charged as the softwood crosses the border. The proposal indicates that the free-on-board mill price paid or payable for the products includes all costs incurred to produce the products. That involves a lot more than just stumpage fees.

The Government's export tax assumes two things: that all softwood leaving the country is taxable and that it comes from the first mill. That may not be the case. Let me explain.

There is a lumber supplier in my constituency of Brant who imports American lumber, cuts and dresses it and sells it to construction companies in the northern United States. However, the regional director of tax interpretation in London, Ontario, has ruled that this supplier must pay 15 per cent of such a sale and he is right. I have searched in vain for some provision in this Bill that would exempt such a transaction. There is no such provision. This proposal simply indicates that softwood exported to the United States is taxable.

We are protecting Americans in respect to their own lumber. The measure does not address a complaint about Canadian stumpage fees. It just assures that re-manufacturing takes place on the American side of the border. Canadian suppliers to American markets will be forced to close or move their operations South. Canada will stop exporting softwood and start exporting jobs.

There are other inequities in this proposal as well. Some mills are exempt from the tax. This will force some mills out of business and give others a decided competitive advantage. This tax may not only lose Canadian jobs but may contribute to increased corporate concentration. In addition, Canadian suppliers buy from these exempt mills but if they turn around and sell the same lumber to the U.S. they have to pay the tax.

A supplier in my riding buys stock from Irving Lumber in New Brunswick. Irving Lumber is exempt from the tax. However, the Ontario supplier will be forced to pay the tax when he tries to move the lumber to market in the U.S. I understand some 120 companies in Canada have drawn these anomalies to the attention of the authorities.

I use the word "anomalies" because that is the word the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) used in response to my two questions in Question Period today on this very subject. She did not say I was wrong. She said these were anomalies which had crept in. That is another way of saying we goofed. We did not take the time to plan. We did not take the necessary degree of exactness in our negotiations to make certain these anomalies did not creep in.

There may be ways of addressing such inequities but the agreement prevents the Government from assisting the lumber industry. The Americans assert that the tax revenue cannot be used to benefit the lumber industry. They assert that stumpage fees were an unfair subsidy and were able to get the Canadian Government to accept that fact by bringing in this tax. How will Americans look on modernization grants or low-interest loans which Canada might offer its lumber industry? The Government has allowed the U.S. to stick its nose into our stumpage fees. Will regional development assistance be next?

There may be even wider consequences to this Government's caving in. This tax applies only to exports to the U.S. That is dangerous for two reasons. It is inconsistent with the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade because it applies only to the U.S. That opens the door for other countries to pursue the same course of action. What is to prevent other producer countries from insisting that the tax apply to exports to their markets? After all, the Government has admitted our exports deserve to be taxed.

This tax invites more trouble and it will not come just from outside Canada. This tax is a recipe for federal, provincial and regional disputes. The export tax could be altered by a change in stumpage fees but stumpage fees are a provincial matter and the provinces have different levels of stumpage. Will all the provinces agree to raise their stumpage fees? Should stumpage fees be made uniform across the country? If only some provinces raise their stumpage fees will they not balk at paying the bill for lifting a federal tax? I do not envy the Prime Minister who has to negotiate such an agreement, whoever that person may be in a couple of years' time.

Finally, we should not kid ourselves that this tax is the end of the problem. I submit it is just the beginning. The Government has recognized that might makes right. The Americans have enormous economic power, therefore Canada has to jump when the Americans demand change, even if it infringes on our sovereignty and puts Canadians out of work. This is a very bad and dangerous precedent. There is no one in this House who can go home and face his or her constituents and tell them their jobs are safe. The Americans could suggest that any product exported from Canada will be next on the list. Canadians now know that the Government will not protect them from such an attack.

While this is an unfortunate cave-in, it may not be irreparable. If in a few years' time the next Government develops a degree of courage in facing up to the U.S., or any other country, it is possible that we may be able to bring in remedial legislation after the end of this Parliament. However, it is abundently clear to me that the present Government, in cosying up to the U.S. on a whole host of issues and disputes and problems, has weakened, not strengthened, our national identity, our Canadianess and our ability to cope with our problems. Witness the softwood lumber issue and our negotiations with a major power. No one ever said it was easy negotiating with the U.S. It never will be. However, if you negotiate from a position of weakness and on the premise that you have to give in at the outset of any negotiations, then God help us when it comes to other important issues in the future.

[Translation]

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland—Kent): Mr. Speaker, thank you for giving me the opportunity to speak to this Bill which concerns an agreement on softwood lumber exports to the United States.

Mr. Speaker, this could be called a panic agreement, since the Minister simply decided to sign an agreement to do the Americans a favour. As a result, a 15 per cent tax will be levied on all our softwood lumber exports to the United States. The tax will cause tremendous harm to our forestry industry, especially in the Maritime provinces, and will probably mean increased prices for the consumer.

Mr. Speaker, several experts have said there are a number of disadvantages for Canada in this agreement with the United States.

Mr. Speaker, first of all, it is an assault on our Canadian sovereignty. It is an assault on our Constitution, which guarantees the provinces control over their natural ressources, and it also deals a severe blow to relations between the Government and the softwood lumber industry.

Under the agreement, the Americans may accept or reject any replacement measures for the tax, on the basis of the income generated. Such income must be equivalent to the income generated by the export tax. This means that the Americans have the last word. And I could go on. It is clear that the disadvantages are many, and the way the Government has approached this situation from the outset is an outrage.

As we recall, on several occasions the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) changed her mind. One day it was a 7 per cent tax, the next day 15 per cent, and yet another day we were going to support the representations of the industry, only to end up with a second final offer.

It turned out to be a comedy of errors, Mr. Speaker, but I can assure you that the people in the industry did not think it was funny at all. We must keep in mind that the industry had already spent several million dollars in an attempt to defeat the American drive to impose countervailing duties. Canadian companies were convinced that we would have come out winners. In fact we had already won our case in a similar dispute a few years earlier and our stumpage fees had remained unchanged. Only the Government and the Cabinet have changed since then and unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, we can see now that the situation has worsened.

The industry blames the Government for fumbling the ball. I should like to read the comments of Mr. Knut Grotterod of the Fraser Company in New Brunswick, and I quote:

[English]

We had a strong case to make and we believe we could have won it before the Government interfered without consulting the industry.

[Translation]

Yet we can still remember this Government promising a new era of consultation and good will.

Mr. Speaker, more about the question of Canadian sovereignty. My leader has already mentioned the various ways in which this agreement threatens our sovereignty, so I will not repeat them here. However the Liberal Party is not the only one to say this, and you might be interested in this remark made by Mr. Max Cohen, an acknowleged Canadian international law expert:

The agreement on softwood lumber creates a dangerous precedent which threatens Canadian sovereignty.

Because of this agreement, the forest industry will have to face another threat. The fact is that the European Economic Community views this agreement unfavourably and has already indicated that it is considering obtaining a similar Canadian tax on Canadian lumber imports. All this is certainly a bad omen for our other forest products, as well as for all Canadian products exported to the United States or elsewhere. This agreement sets a dangerous precedent. The Americans could ask for a similar charge at any time on our pulp and paper exports or on our mining products, such as potash, zinc, lead, and many others. This would have a devastating effect on New Brunswick.

Let us look at the potential impact of this agreement on the Maritime provinces, Mr. Speaker. The Maritimes should undoubtedly have been exempt from this tax. The fact is that stumpage fees in the Maritimes are much higher than in other provinces. Our producers already have to pay their fair share in stumpage fees.

In New Brunswick, stumpage fees amount to $57 per 1,000 feet, compared with $8 in British Columbia. It should be added that five New Brunswick companies have been exempt, but only five. Over 100 do not benefit from this exclusion.

The Maritime Lumber Bureau, which represents 125 sawmills in the region, is organizing a committee to be called the Atlantic Coalition Against the Unfair Lumber Tax. The purpose of this Committee will be to do everything in its power to convince Ottawa to exclude the Atlantic region from the charge.

For the moment, about 130 producers and exporters from the Maritime provinces, in addition to paying the highest stumpage fees in Canada, will have to pay a 15 per cent charge on their exports to the United States, which is very unfair to this New Brunswick industry.

These small companies will certainly not be able to continue to export their products if they have to pay these two charges. According to Mr. Rumbold, Director of the Maritime Lumber Bureau:

• (1600)

[English]

Several firms are seriously considering the future of their sawmills because of the tax.

[Translation]

And according to Mr. Percy Wilkins, of Wilkins Sawmill in Fredericton:

[English]

I see quite a few sawmills in the province being wiped out. I just can't see them surviving. It's that bad.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to put on record two messages I received from people in New Brunswick, people in the industry. First, the New Brunswick Federation of Woodlot Owners, which state:

[English]

—that they:

—support the effort of the Atlantic Coalition Against Unfair Lumber Taxes to have the region excluded from the lumber export tax. The closure of any of New Brunswick's sawmills will have a serious detrimental effect on private woodlot owners.

[Translation]

I have here another message from Southampton:

[English]

Southampton Sawmills Ltd. of Nackwic, New Brunswick—wishes to express in the strongest possible terms its dissatisfaction with the Government of Canada's decision to implement a 15 per cent export duty on softwood lumber to the United States.

Southampton Sawmills cannot survive such unfair competition where we are taxed and our competitors are not. Southampton Sawmills cannot compete with low-priced lumber flooding our market.

[Translation]

Well, Mr. Speaker, I could go on and on. You know the industry in the Maritimes is threatened and, in conclusion, I urge the authorities, the Government, to do all they can to exempt the Maritime lumber industry from that unfair tax on lumber exports.

[English]

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey—White Rock—North Delta): Mr. Speaker, I am happy to take part in this debate about the softwood lumber deal between Canadian producers and the United States. I had a little trouble following the logic of the previous speaker. It ought to be noted for the record that the producers in New Brunswick probably have the best insurance package of any producers in Canada. It is strange that when 92 per cent of their producers have exemptions they are still crying foul on the deal. I am sure the producers in the rest of Canada think that New Brunswick is in pretty good shape.

We must go back to the beginning. Probably everyone would wish that we did not have to debate this issue. We would all wish that there had been be no penalties, taxes or countervails, and that we had a free and open access across the border. After all, that is what the free trade talks are about. They are to open up the business relationship between Canada and the United States to give Canadian businesses wider access to the American markets.

We must keep in mind, however, that the reason we were in a countervail situation and had to negotiate the softwood lumber deal was because of the strong American dollar and the weaker Canadian dollar. The Canadian lumber producer did have a 38-cent advantage. In fact, because of the difference in the dollar, Canadian producers could charge the same price on the American market as it charged on the Canadian market and have a 35 per cent or 38 per cent advantage. That is what brought on the tension between the producers in the United States and those in Canada.

Due to this, there has been increased trade across the border, not only in lumber, but in all other industries which have been taking advantage of the market in the United States. Canadian industries have been able to strengthen their market positions in the United States because of the lower Canadian dollar. One plant in my constituency put on an extra shift six or seven years ago when the dollar had dropped to about 80 cents. They believed that if the dollar stayed at that level or dropped further it would be profitable for them to run another shift and ship into the United States. They gambled that the Canadian dollar would remain weaker than its U.S. counterpart. They expanded their operation by employing another shift and have been doing very well. We are all happy for them.

I believe that even Opposition Members would agree that, although there are a lot of down sides to having a weaker Canadian dollar, it is because of that lower dollar that our manufacturers have been able to compete better in the United States. The fact is that this profitability has allowed our plants to improve and modernize and, consequently, in many cases, to be able to compete more effectively in the U.S. market. That is the good side of it.

In addition, this deal allows producers to plan. It is a fact that there has been insecurity in the forest industry in Canada for the past three years because it did not know how the American industry would respond to Canadian success. What we needed was a firm deal with the United States. It may be that we all wish that would not have been necessary, but the fact is that it was necessary. The Canadian industry now has a package which provides it with a framework which it knows will be in place and which allows it to plan its business in such a way that it can predict and anticipate the future. The clearest example of that was given by the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) the other day.

In the last days of December the stock market showed stock prices of some of the manufacturers as being 28 per cent below what it was after the deal. That is, after the deal the stocks of the leading manufacturers and lumber in Canada rose dramatically because the investors knew exactly where they were at and they could plan. They moved from a period of insecurity to a period of security. The deal allows investors to respond in a systematic way to U.S. competition.

Third, it is a good deal because it allows for adjustments to correct anomalies. The Hon. Member for Brant (Mr. Blackburn) pointed out that there are anomalies. All of us recognize that. There are members of the industry, particularly in the remanufacturing sector, who face anomalies and who will face a 15 per cent disadvantage in some of the product lines they manufacture. There is no doubt about that.

There is also no doubt that Appendix B is a very incomplete list. What Hon. Members of the Opposition have failed to point out, however, is that that list was compiled in the last days of the negotiation by the legal council of the remanufacturers from a list supplied to them by the remanufacturers. That is not to criticize those people. It is simply to say that it is an incomplete list and the deal in Clause 4(b) of the Memorandum of Understanding allows for those corrections by stating that there will be an opportunity to adjust the list. It states:

> The Government of Canada will collect an export charge on those products listed in Appendix B and such other further manufactured products as may subsequently be agreed to by the two Governments.

It allows for adjustment. While there may be some product lines not on the list, they will be there in the future. It allows for a change in trading volumes if the market turns in such a way that it puts the Canadian producer at a disadvantage. If Hon. Members will turn to Clause 8(d), they will see that the Canadian negotiators allowed for that kind of variable. Clause 8(d) reads:

> If exports from Canada to the United States of any of the products listed in Appendix A show a rapid and substantial decrease, the two governments will consult to determine whether any remedial action is required.

So what we have is an agreement which provides the framework for stability and adjustment.

Fourth, the deal allows for the kind of revenues to stay in Canada which allow us to upgrade our forest industry. Particularly those Hon. Members from British Columbia know that there is a lot to be done in British Columbia to bring the forest industry up to par so that we can continue to harvest that resource in the years ahead. We have fallen far behind. We will now have the resources to provide the kind of silviculture which will ensure that that industry is there in the future. I would certainly urge the Province of British Columbia to make sure those dollars which flow into B.C. as a result of these taxes will be earmarked for the rejuvenation of the forest industry in British Columbia.

Let me say in closing that many comments of the Opposition have centered on the fact that the U.S. gave us a rough time and a raw deal. That is the way it is in these dealings. The Americans are hard bargainers. However, what the Opposition is forgetting is that the United States does not have to buy. In a free market system it is not obligated to buy. We want to sell. We think the United States ought to buy, but it does not have to. The very fact there is protectionism in the United States indicates that it does not have to if it does not want to. Therefore, we have to bring about the kind of market conditions and negotiatons which will make the Americans want to buy our products. That is why we have negotiated this deal.

I appreciate the opportunity to speak in this debate. I am particularly appreciative of the negotiators who worked hard into the last hours of 1986 to ensure that our industry in British Columbia and across Canada will remain secure in the future.

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, let me say at the outset that this is a very sad day. I am very displeased I have to be here to deal with this legislation and listen to the kind of self-serving comments we have been hearing from the Government over the last few days. During the whole process of the American countervail action, the negotiations between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States, myself, my colleagues, the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon (Mr. Epp) and the Hon. Member for Kenora—Rainy River (Mr. Parry), the three New Democrat representatives of northern Ontario, kept in touch with our industry and with the two major unions involved, the Canadian Paper Workers Union and the lumber and sawmills union. At each step of the process we found out from them what the impact was, what the communciation links had been and what their feelings were in terms of the decisions.

I can sum it very briefly by saying that those unions, the individual workers, the owners and manufacturers in the sawmill industry in northwestern Ontario, feel betrayed. They feel sold out by the Government. It was pointed out to us by the industry that for a while there was some consultation. During that consultation there was the 10 per cent final offer and the 15 per cent final, final offer. They were told we were going to fight this offer, and then all of a sudden there was no more consultation, no more communication, no more questioning of the industry. They were not asked: "What would the impact be if we tried X or Y or Z?" Therefore, they feel betrayed and rightly so.

Let us examine the specifics of the impact. I listened with interest to the Minister's introductory comments Monday afternoon at the commencement of the second reading debate. One of the things referred to by the Minister was that even the New Democratic Party could not find any evidence of any job loss as a result of this decision. That is not what we said, Mr. Speaker. I was here at the press conference. I took part in the national survey of the industry. What we found out was that there was great uncertainty, that there had been mills closed as a direct result of the initial decision by the United States and those mills were still closed and their future was even more uncertain as a result of the decision of the Government to make this deal with the United States.

As a direct result, back in the fall in Thunder Bay, according to company officials, the Great Lakes Paper Company stud mill was closed, throwing 80 people out of work. At that time the company said: "We will have to wait and see what the Government comes up with to determine whether or not we can reopen the mill". That is what the company said within a day of the word getting out about the agreement which was signed on December 30. Great Lakes Forest Products was saying: "It really looks more uncertain now. In fact, we will have to take a look at our other stud mill operation in Dryden, Ontario," which mill had remained fully operational. Other mills elsewhere in the country have been closed, particularly mills in northern Ontario.

At the very least this agreement has dashed the hopes of those workers, at least in the short term, of getting their jobs back. It has thrown a spanner into other negotiations, since this same mill was forced to close a waferboard plant last May because of totally unrelated circumstances. I say that because I do not want to mislead Hon. Members. However, that has added to the confusion in that operation, which confusion has spread through the ranks.

I had a call from one of the workers who, on his own, spoke to some 100 workers who were doing some maintenance as a result of a temporary shut-down. He spoke to both mill workers and private contractors. They were angry about the decision and fearful for their futures. There is confusion out there, and there is fear about what has happened.

Something which has become clear to me through this process is that the Government of Canada and the officials directly involved in the negotiations really do not understand the forest industry in Canada. If they understood it they would not have done what they did. An American countervail duty, the Canadian export tax or an increase in stumpage fees do not in any way, shape or form affect the selling price of a product. The selling price is set by the market based on a variety of factors, most particularly demand. When people are building homes they are buying two-by-fours. When more people are buying homes more two-by-fours are bought and the price goes up because there is greater demand. However, when no homes are being built no one is selling two-by-fours. All the Government of Canada has done, in co-operation with the Government of the United States, is increase the input costs of softwood lumber, whether it be two-by-fours, treated lumber or the items spoken about by my colleague who referred to manufactured products. It has increased the cost of producing that product.

To use a word which has been bounced around frequently, the situation is an anomaly. At a time when there is great concern about the industry we are seeing share prices going up. The Chicago market has been going up. Because of the unusually mild winter, construction has continued on through what is normally a slump. That may last for a while longer. However, we do not know what will happen in the spring. Those mills which have stayed open in northern Ontario have been stockpiling. They have been keeping their workers employed as a result of stockpiling for the spring when construction will resume, at which time there will be a heavy demand. They do not know how long they will be able to do that. In fact, it can only be done up to the point when it will become cheaper to shut down than it is to continue to take a loss.

Ten minutes is a very short period of time in which to deal with a problem that is now affecting hundreds of people in northern Ontario, and which has the potential to affect thousands. I will be proud to stand in my place on behalf of my constituents to vote against this Bill when we have the opportunity to do so.

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, we have heard a number of Members, both today and in the last two days, outline some of the specific technical problems which we will face as a result of the Government's unprecedented move of kneeling down before the demands of the United States on the lumber issue. Today, I ask Hon. Members to look ahead with respect to the results of this agreement. For example, let us consider a constituent in the riding of Hamilton East who is looking at this agreement wondering what effect it will have on his or her livelihood in the future. We must recognize the general concern that is being felt across the country as a result of the signing of this agreement.

The Conservative Government has embarked on an unprecedented move. It has bowed down to the United States on trade issues to the point where, in this particular agreement, the Canadian Government has agreed to open its books on softwood lumber to perusal, to investigation, by the United States. I would like to quote from the Memorandum of Understanding which states:

> The Government of Canada will provide the Government of the United States of America with data concerning the level of Provincial and Federal softwood and total stumpage harvest, the total revenue collected from the sale of Provincial and Federal softwood and total timber, total export charge collected, total shipments of certain softwood lumber products to the United States of America, total lumber production by province and total softwood lumber production by province, for each fiscal year—

Mr. McDermid: From what are you quoting?

Ms. Copps: A direct quote from the Memorandum of Understanding which was signed as part of the infamous agreement which sets out the ground rules whereby the Government of Canada is saying to the United States: "Not only are we guilty but we will pay 15 per cent. On top of that we will open up our books to you so that you can come in and have access to them".

Not only will there be access, the agreement permits the U.S. Government to dictate domestic policy in Canada. We know quite clearly as a result of the tenor of the agreement that at the moment a 15 per cent export tax is being imposed by Canada. At the same time, to ensure that no other Canadian Government is involved in any way in assisting some of our failing industries, the Americans have made it quite clear that no provincial Government will have the authority to set domestic policy for timber agreements within the context of our provinces and our country. If I were a steelworker sitting in my easy chair in the riding of Hamilton East I would be feeling very uneasy at this moment. Today, the issue is softwood lumber. Who knows what it will be tomorrow.

Canada has been a fair trading partner in the steel industry, as we have been in the softwood lumber industry. This was borne out by the judgment rendered in 1983, at which time it was determined that, yes, Canada was a fair trading partner. We are a fair trading partner in steel. But now that the Americans have seen how quickly the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) dropped the ball, how quickly she bowed down to the Americans, why should they stop at softwood lumber? Why not deal with pulp and paper next? Or why not deal with the steel industry next? Why not the Auto Pact?

We all witnessed the pitiable situation in the House today when the same Minister, who was touting this agreement as being a safeguard to Canada's sovereignty, told the House that when George Bush came to Canada the Canadian Government did not have the guts to tell him in black and white that the Auto Pact is not to be a subject of discussion. That was not even talked about. The Canadians did not even bother, even though we have all heard the chief negotiator, both in the United States and in Canada, reiterating on more than one occasion that the Americans have not ruled out the Auto Pact.

On the one hand, we have before us a single agreement. However, what it represents is a sell-out by the Conservative Government. It is a sell-out which will not only cost us jobs in the softwood lumber industry in the short-term, and which will not only affect consumer prices in Canada with respect to softwood lumber and construction of homes, it will also foretell and portend future concerns in other industries in which we have already been deemed to be fair trading partners.

My colleague, the Hon. Member for Westmorland—Kent (Mr. Robichaud) stated earlier today that the European Community is looking greedily at this same agreement. If the Americans were so easily able to get the Canadian Government to bow down on softwood lumber, why should we not impose the same type of pressure?

By signing this agreement, Canada has effectively bargained away our position in the GATT because we are developing a bilateral agreement which excludes the same competitive aspects that may be available to other countries. What is Canada getting in return? We heard our colleague on the Conservative side say that the Americans are hard bargainers. We, in the House of Commons, through the Conservative Party, have made this so-called free trade agreement the corner-stone of policy.

Imagine my surprise when over the holidays I heard the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) state that he would stake his political career on the free trade agreement. If the softwood lumber deal is any indication of so-called leadership, translate capitulation, that we can see by this Government, then I can tell you that Canadians from coast to coast in the lumber industry, the steel industry, and the auto industry would rather trust our sovereignty to another Government, to another political Party.

Four years ago when the same type of protectionist noises were coming from the United States, a Canadian Liberal Government held firm. It said that we have fair trading practices, and we are prepared to test those in the international courts. We tested those practices and we won because we essentially believed that the softwood lumber industry in Canada was a fair, competitive industry which could compete with the best of any nation without government assistance.

Yet, on this side of the House, as soon as we heard noises from Washington, the Minister for International Trade and her colleagues bowed down. The first statement was that we will give you 10 per cent, that is our final offer. Then it was 15 per cent. Then over the Christmas break we saw the hastily constructed agreement which not only saw our Government agreeing to charge our producers 15 per cent to sell our softwood lumber to the United States, but at the same time we told the Americans to come and examine our books. The Minister for International Trade is empowered by this legislation to allow anybody that she wants to examine our books with respect to our export taxes.

In Clause 19(3) it states:

Every person required by subsection (1) to keep records—shall—make the records and books of account and every account and voucher necessary to verify the information therein available to officers and other persons thereunto authorized by the Minister and give them every facility necessary to inspect the records, books, accounts and vouchers.

That means that Canadian industries could be required by the Minister to allow any American to examine the books of our companies.

Mr. McDermid: It is a standard clause in all tax Bills.

Ms. Copps: The Member says it is standard tax policy. Is it standard tax policy that we allow Americans to come in and examine the books of Canadian companies? That is exactly what this particular section is recommending.

Mr. McDermid: That is wrong.

Ms. Copps: If the Member took the time to read the Memorandum of Understanding, he would know that the Americans make it quite clear that they wish to have the chance to come in and go over every nook, cranny, ledger, and every one of our books to determine whether, in their reckoning, we are paying the fair tax.

Mr. McDermid: What clause is that?

Ms. Copps: It is Clause 7, paragraph d.:

If the Government of the United States of America presents the Government of Canada with information showing its concern with an identified problem of evasion or underpayment of the export charge or replacement measures, the Government of Canada will provide to the Government of the United States of America information relevant to such concerns. The Government of the United States of America will hold such information in the strictest confidence—

We are opening our books, our country, and we are selling out to the Americans. It is being aided and abetted by a Conservative Party that does not understand the meaning of the word sovereignty. We should be fighting this Bill. It is the first step in a longstanding possibility of losing the type of sovereignty that we have known in Canada.

Mr. Aurèle Gervais (Timmins—Chapleau): Mr. Speaker, I want to thank you for giving me the opportunity to take part in this most important debate on Bill C-37.

[English]

I feel compelled to express my views today on the current Bill relating to the 15 per cent export tax on softwood lumber exports to the United States.

As the Member for Timmins—Chapleau, representing a constituency of northern Ontario, I have a vested interest in ensuring the federal Government's endeavours in the softwood lumber issue are in the best interests of all Canadians, particularly those in northern Ontario.

At issue is a 15 per cent federal export tax imposed by the federal Government on all softwood lumber exported to the United States. Considering the following facts, the potential ramifications of the tax on northern Ontario are serious indeed.

Let us consider a brief profile of northern Ontario as it relates to the sawmill industry, 90 per cent of all wood cut in northern Ontario is softwood; 80 per cent of total softwood cut in Ontario is from the northern region of the province; 28 mills account for 85 per cent of the softwood lumber cut in Ontario; 6,000 people are directly employed in the sawmill industry with an annual payroll of $117 million.

In northern Ontario, we are painfully aware that northern Ontario's economy is largely resource based. There are communities that are totally reliant on softwood lumber. Therefore, as a Member of Parliament representing a constituency in northern Ontario, I am sensitive to the special needs and concerns of the residents of the region. The reality of the situation is that, if Canada had not pushed the U.S. into an agreement on softwood lumber, the Americans would have imposed their own countervailing duty. In fact, they had imposed a 15 per cent countervailing duty on Canadian softwood going into that country since October, 1986. The American countervailing duty, if implemented, would have been disastrous for Canada and northern Ontario.
