HOUSE OF COMMONS DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SECOND SESSION—THIRTY-THIRD PARLIAMENT

35 Elizabeth II

VOLUME II, 1986

COMPRISING THE PERIOD FROM THE TWENTY-FIRST DAY OF NOVEMBER, 1986
TO THE TWENTY-SEVENTH DAY OF JANUARY, 1987

INDEX ISSUED IN A SEPARATE VOLUME

Published under authority of the Speaker of the House of Commons by the Queen's Printer for Canada

Available from Canadian Government Publishing Centre, Supply and Services Canada, Ottawa, Canada K1A 0S9.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Friday, November 21, 1986

The House met at 11 a.m.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[Translation]

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES

ADOPTION OF ACT ASSURING ACCESS TO SERVICES IN FRENCH IN ONTARIO

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, Ontario Francophones had cause to rejoice this week, when Bill 8, which provides for access to French language services, was passed by the Ontario legislature and received royal assent. I would like to congratulate Premier Peterson's Liberal Government, which in making this historic gesture has advanced the cause of minority language rights in Canada.

Providing services in their own language for half a million Ontario citizens and potential access for six million Quebecers or other Francophones is no mean feat. To us, French-speaking Ontarians, Bill 8 also reflects the provincial Government's goodwill and thus augurs well for future constitutional negotiations.

I would like to emphasize that the position of the Liberal Party of Canada in these negotiations is to invite the Government of Ontario to adopt Sections 16 and 20 of the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms and thus recognize in the Constitution the right of all French-speaking Canadians to use their mother tongue in Ontario.

* * *

[English]

AGRICULTURE

QUALITY OF WHEAT CROP AFFECTED BY RAIN

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, Canada needs some basic reforms if we are go keep our farmers on the land. Young and middle-aged farmers are frustrated and worried about their future. Here is just one example and there are hundreds more just the same.

A third generation farmer has just completed his books for the year 1986. He had had the second largest crop in the history of the farm, which his grandfather and his father had farmed before him. Even though the price of wheat was below the cost of production, he was buoyant and happy until the crop was swathed, and then hope and cheer diminished daily as the rains came and continued day after day. Finally, when the threshing was done, instead of number one wheat all he had was feed valued at about $2 a bushel. "I didn't even break even, and what am I going to do for groceries for another year, and what about the clothes and books for the kids?" What, indeed? Surely when we can put a man on the moon we can provide ways and means to keep our farmers on the land.

* * *

• (1105)

HARBOURS AND PORTS

NANAIMO HARBOUR COMMISSION—CALL FOR INVESTIGATION

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, political patronage is undermining the smooth operation of the five-member Nanaimo Harbour Commission. The three federally appointed members have been calling for the resignation of the locally appointed commissioner who is also chairman. In turn, the chairman has been calling for an independent investigation of the commission but this has been refused by the Minister of Transport (Mr. Crosbie).

The Hon. Member for Nanaimo—Alberni (Mr. Schellenberg) claims that the Commission is an autonomous body which must solve its own problems, this in spite of the fact that a majority of its members are federal patronage appointments, including Doug McBride, the Hon. Member's former campaign manager. McBride and the other federal appointees diverted $8,000 from the Harbour Commission to a job seminar sponsored by the Hon. Member. Whatever the merits of the seminar, this does not seem to be the best use of Nanaimo Harbour funds.

The Minister of Transport has an obligation to investigate the Commission so that it can quit playing politics and get back to its basic job of running the harbour.

* * *

NORTHERN AFFAIRS

HUNTING AND TRAPPING—ECONOMIC EFFECTS OF VIGILANTE TACTICS

Mr. Thomas Suluk (Nunatsiaq): Mr. Speaker, I am gravely concerned, along with a constituent of mine, Mr. Frank May of Arctic Bay on North Baffin Island, over the sinking of the two Icelandic whaling ships in Reykjavik harbour, Iceland. It is imperative that we show that Canada does not approve of or support vigilante tactics of this nature. The basis of the northern economy, the fur trade, has suffered from the vigilante action of similar organizations in destroying people's livelihood.

Sealing and trapping of fur-bearing animals used to provide income, however meagre, for at least 50 per cent of the population. Now less than 10 per cent do any trapping at all. This has resulted in chronic unemployment and inactivity, with disastrous social and cultural consequences. With the pull-out of oil and gas exploration from the Beaufort Sea and closings in the mining sector, the North has been economically bombarded from all sides.

I call on the Ministers who are part of the action force on Arctic initiatives to take swift and immediate action to correct this grave injustice which was created in part by these vigilante groups.

* * *

TARIFFS

REMOVAL OF BOOK TARIFF ADVOCATED

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, a high percentage of Canadians are illiterate. They have the right to learn to read in order to be able to participate in the Canadian process and be more effective in the market-place. We are concerned about their right to read and write efficiently and effectively. We are also concerned about their right to read, when they can and if they wish, books of their own choice regardless of the author and regardless of the country of origin. It is for that reason that Canadians are very angry about the improper tax on books put in place by the Government.

The Mulroney Government imposed a 10 per cent tariff on certain types of books. It is the wrong target, it is discriminatory, it has free trade implications, and is going to bring about job losses. It will cost the consumer more to buy books. It is a disincentive to reading, and I encourage the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) to remove this repressive tax.

* * *

APARTHEID

SOUTH AFRICA—WITHDRAWAL BY BATA SHOE COMPANY

Mr. Bob Hicks (Scarborough East): Mr. Speaker, as reported in today's Globe and Mail, one of the world's largest shoe-makers, Canadian-based Bata Shoe Company, has announced that it is selling its entire operations in South Africa to non-Canadian, non-South African buyers. This voluntary action flies in the face of a recent statement in the House by the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez) who said: "Voluntary guidelines regarding investment in South Africa are not working".

• (1110)

This action by the Bata Shoe Company is the latest move by a prominent Canadian company to pull out of South Africa in protest against that Government's policy of apartheid. Last month Dominion Textile Incorporated of Montreal announced that it was selling its 50 per cent interest in a South African-based textile company. I congratulate the Bata officials on this decision, and trust that other Canadian companies still doing business in South Africa will follow Bata's example.

* * *

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

OPPOSITION TO PASSAGE OF AMENDING LEGISLATION

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, I am sure Members in the House will be interested to know that my office and other Members' offices are being deluged by letters from Canadians who are concerned about what the Government is proposing to do to pharmaceutical drugs. To bring the Government into the real world, I am sure it would like to hear what some of these people are saying.

One of them said: "I would like to add my name to the list of supporters against the drug Bill being passed by Conservatives. I have many health problems and I find the regular price of medication is beyond our reach. The arthritic medication is out-priced and at times I have to go without because I can't afford it". Another person writes: "I strongly protest because I know what it costs my husband a year to buy the heart medication he is on, and what it will cost if the medication doubles or triples in price. It takes away a good lump sum of our yearly earnings. It does not serve a purpose to hit the low-income people in the pocketbook through such a vital element to life as health".

I could not agree with these people more. That is why we are in total opposition to what the Government is trying to do to the health care needs of Canadians.

* * *

WELFARE

NEED FOR EXISTENCE OF FOOD BANKS CONDEMNED

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, poverty in Canada is a national tragedy. There are 3.9 million Canadians living below the poverty line. That is almost 16 per cent of our population. There are 1.2 million children in Canada being raised in families which are living below the poverty line. The Government is not doing enough for the poor in Canada.

The fact that so many of our fellow Canadians live in poverty suggests very strongly that there is a problem with our social welfare system. Instead of helping those in need, the Government has chosen to help its affluent and rich friends on Bay Street and elsewhere.

The Conservative Government and the wife of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) take pride in opening food banks. However, we in the Liberal Opposition will not rest until every last damn food bank in Canada is closed. I call upon the Government to take immediate action to assist the millions of Canadians living in poverty.

* * *

AGRICULTURE

CANOLA—DROP IN PRICE PAID TO GROWERS

Mr. Jack Scowen (Mackenzie): Mr. Speaker, the Saskatchewan Canola Growers Association is very concerned with the downgrading of rates paid to growers by the companies. There seems to be a slightly higher chlorophyl content in the current crop as compared to last year's. It would appear that companies buying the seed are taking advantage of the producer to the tune of from $22 to $35 per tonne, and even more if the elevator agent buys the seed as No. 3.

Last year 57 per cent of the crop was bought as No. 1 seed while 75 per cent was loaded in Vancouver as No. 1 seed. That is a substantial loss to the producer. The grading system has not been perfected in canola purchases. The buyer simply puts 100 seeds in a receptacle and rolls the seed. The grade is established by what he thinks is green. The Canadian Grain Commission also grades, but this is time consuming.

The Canadian Grain Commission should make a policy whereby agents—

Mr. Speaker: I regret that the Hon. Member's time has expired.

* * *

HUMAN RIGHTS

PERSECUTION OF BAHA'I COMMUNITY IN IRAN

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, the Baha'i community of Canada has thanked successive Canadian Governments and successive Canadian Parliaments for the concern, interest, and leadership displayed in bringing to public attenion the tragic situation of the Baha'i community in Iran.

• (1115)

Repression, executions, torture, imprisonment, arbitrary arrest and arbitrary deprivation of property continue in Iran. This arises because of the failure of the Iranian constitution to recognize Baha'is as persons, instead labelling them as unclean infidels.

The House and all Canadians must call for the inclusion of rights for all persons in Iran in the constitution of that country.

* * *

HUMAN RIGHTS

U.S.S.R.—CHILD ALLOWED TO JOIN PARENTS OUTSIDE COUNTRY

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale—High Park): Mr. Speaker, some eight months ago I stood in the House to bring to your attention the case of Kaisa Randpere.

Kaisa, who is now three years old, was being held hostage by Soviet authorities who refused permission for the child to join her parents in the West.

The world community reacted to this inhumane separation of parents and child by mounting a campaign to free Kaisa. The letter-writing campaign played an important role in bringing to bear the weight of public opinion against the Soviet Union.

We have now received the good news that Kaisa will be allowed to join her parents at last. Her case is an example to all of us of what we can accomplish if we work together, speaking out against human rights violations wherever they occur.

Let us never forget that the greatest enemy of freedom is silence and that every Member of this House has a duty and responsibility to speak out for those who cannot speak for themselves.

* * *

SPORTS

CANADIAN FOOTBALL LEAGUE—BOOSTER FOR HAMILTON TIGER-CATS

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, the Hamilton Tiger-Cats are down but they are not out.

Mr. Nunziata: Go Argos.

Ms. Copps: As a matter of fact we happen to have in the galleries today students from my old high school, Bishop Ryan High School. They will be supporting the Hamilton Tiger-Cats because I and my team have promised, just like Vince Lombardi said, "When the going gets tough, the tough get going."

Mr. Nunziata: Down with the Tiger-Cats!

Ms. Copps: I am perfectly willing to bet with the Member for York South—Weston (Mr. Nunziata) that we will take him in the game this weekend.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

TRADE

UNITED STATES DUTY ON CANADIAN SOFTWOOD LUMBER

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister for International Trade my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. In a speech given to a group of U.S. businessmen three weeks ago, the Minister for International Trade said that the U.S. decision on softwood lumber was: "An unacceptable attempt to impose U.S. views on how other Governments should manage their natural resources." Last evening the Prime Minister accepted a proposal to negotiate with the Americans, as opposed to fighting that measure. Why has the Government now reversed its policy? Why has it done this double-backward somersault? Does this not put all the other natural resource industries in this country in real danger and at real risk to similar U.S. countervail action?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the short answer to the last part of that question is no. The Prime Minister will be making a statement later today as a result of agreements that have been reached between the Government of Canada and the Governments of the provinces which, as the Hon. Member will know, have been working together on this issue since it arose.

EFFECT OF POSSIBLE PRECEDENT

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, the reason we raise questions now is to try to determine why the Government has changed its position. Does this not set a very dangerous precident, if we accept in principle a U.S. decision that will have an application to the potash industry, the pulp and paper industry, and all other natural resource industries, and will give a signal to all the comparable U.S. industries to take similar action against these vital natural resource industries in Canada?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member, as the representative of western Canada in the Liberal Party, will know about time zone differences. I think he will find it advisable to await the statement by the Prime Minister, which will be made shortly in Vancouver.

Mr. Axworthy: It is because of the time zone difference that we are hoping that we can deflect the Prime Minister from this foolhardy position he seems to be undertaking.

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS—EXCHANGE VALUE OF CANADIAN DOLLAR

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, Mr. Murphy, the U.S. chief negotiator, said yesterday that a condition of a free trade agreement must be a change in the value of the Canadian dollar. Will that not put our resource industries in double jeopardy, not only facing an increase in export tax, but also losing their competitive advantage in world markets? Is that not another good reason for pause and not to undertake this dangerous course of beginning to negotiate a deal with the Americans rather than legitimately fighting it in the U.S. courts and international tribunals?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, in the course of one question the Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry has misquoted the U.S. trade negotiator and described as foolhardy a proposal that he has not seen yet.

• (1120)

AUTO PACT—STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO UNITED STATES NEGOTIATOR

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. It is clear from his speech yesterday that U.S. trade negotiator Murphy has not given up the idea of having the Auto Pact and its safeguards on the free trade negotiating table. Will the Secretary of State for External Affairs use this Question Period to send a clear message to Ambassador Murphy that the Government will not allow the Auto Pact, or its safeguards, to be up for negotiation in these free trade discussions and thereby give reassurance in this important matter to some 700,000 Canadian workers whose jobs are linked to the preservation of the Auto Pact and its current safeguards?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I would like to repeat the position taken by our chief negotiator, with a slight grammatical revision. Since the Auto Pact is not broken, we are not going to change it.

[Translation]

PROGRAMS FOR REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT IN PROVINCES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, in his speech, Ambassador Murphy also said that in the free trade talks his Governement will insist that the provinces change their purchasing and marketing policies.

Is the Government prepared to give up its important regional development programs for the provinces, or is the Government prepared to reject today this request by Ambassador Murphy?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, it is an established fact that when conducting negotiations, the spokesman for one side wants to express the position taken by that side. Mr. Murphy was speaking for the American side, and it is only natural that he should wish to indicate certain requests his side would make. The fact that he can do so is no indication that the Canadian side will acceed to those requests.

* * *

[English]

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

FEDERAL FUNDING INQUIRY

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. Yesterday at the First Ministers' Conference many Premiers asked the Prime Minister for additional federal funds for regional economic development. The Prime Minister said he was interested in fairness but regretted there was no money left in the pot. Is it not hypocritical to talk about fairness when the Government is denying money for regional development and at the same time can find $100 million in additional funds to go to multinational drug companies to pay for increased drug costs?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, what this policy does is give Canadians an opportunity to participate in the drug and biotechnology research which is so vitally important to the health and future of this country. We have done this in a way which produces fair prices for the consumer. There are at least 3,000 direct jobs involved, and there will be more than that. If the Hon. Member wants to consider this only in the context of an economic development policy, this is an exceptionally efficient economic development policy. Thinking in terms of the health of Canadians and the future for this country not being involved in this high tech area, I do not see how anyone can responsibly criticize what we are trying to do.

Mr. Axworthy: I have news for you.

Mr. Broadbent: No one other than the whole country is criticizing the Government for what it is doing in this area.

PROPOSED PAYMENT TO NOVA SCOTIA

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Would the Minister try to explain to an unemployed steelworker in Cape Breton why his Premier has to ask for $25 million more to pay for additional drug costs and at the same time is being denied additional regional development money which could provide a job, perhaps, for that unemployed steel worker in Cape Breton?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I assume that unemployed steelworker, along with the Hon. Member and everyone in this House, is vitally interested in trying to find a cure for cancer. I am sure he is vitally interested in trying to find better drugs for disease. I am sure we are all vitally interested in this important area. I am sure that hypothetical steelworker would not like us to say as a country: "We are getting out of this business. We will let the rest of the world do the research. We will opt out and simply pay for drugs from other countries which do the research, through our raw materials". I am sure that steelworker would not support that policy.

• (1125)

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my next question is addressed to the Deputy Prime Minister whose major responsibility is for allocation and making priority decisions.

[Translation]

My question is as follows: Is it fair for a Government to reduce its budget for regional development programs and at the same time increase the price of drugs and the cost to the very same provinces that need regional development assistance?

[English]

Mr. Thacker: Why do you hate young people so much?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I think the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs dramatically illustrated that this is a tremendously good economic development program, not only from the standpoint of jobs and the enhancement of Canada's scientific and medical research community, but that it will give Canada the opportunity to do its fair share promoting the human instinct to develop cures for many of the diseases for which a cure has not yet been found. Canada has had a proud tradition in the past. We certainly want to provide the climate for that to continue in the future.

PRICE OF DRUGS

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Lethbridge—Foothills asks us why we hate young people. We do not hate young people. We also intend to fight for the unemployed steelworker.

Why does the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs insist on saying that the prices of drugs will not increase when the Canadian Drug Manufacturers Association calls this Bill a $650 million annual pill, when several Premiers at the First Ministers' Conference pointed out yesterday that the price of drugs in their provinces will be increasing, and when the Consumers' Association of Canada has quite clearly said that across the board there will be drug price increases? How can the Minister persist in telling the Canadian public that black is white?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I guess probably 10 or 12 times this week I have tried to answer that question. When the Bill gets to committee we will have a chance to deal with it, perhaps in a calmer atmosphere. However, I will ask the Hon. Member a rhetorical question in return. Has the Liberal Party which, in 1983, recognized that the Patent Act had to be changed because we were penalizing Canadian researchers and not doing our fair share of medical research in the world, thereby jeopardizing the future of a great many of our young scientists, as well as perhaps not providing as good health care as would be possible if we had that research in Canada, changed its mind?

ONTARIO MINISTERS' LETTERS

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, the Minister talks about calmness. He has had over three months to respond to a letter from the Minister of Health of the province which will be most affected by this legislation. Why did the Minister not even bother to reply to an August 7 letter from the Minister of Health for the Province of Ontario who pointed out the need for discussion before any introduction of legislation? He also pointed out in his letter that the Province of Ontario is where drug prices will be increasing, where there is the highest number of consumers of any province, and where more than half of the pharamaceutical industry, including generic and brand-name industries, are located. Why would the Minister not meet with Murray Elston? Why would he not even reply to his mail?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, as Mr. Elston said in his letter, he wanted our officials to contact, and they have been in contact. In fact, there have been no significant changes since June 27. I have a letter from the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs of Ontario, Monte Kwinter, who states in part:

—it seems only fair that research-based companies in the pharmaceutical industry who expend large amounts of money for research in developing of new drugs should be able to recoup their moneys through patent protection for at least 12 years.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Beatty: Supplementary, Sheila!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Beaches.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER TABLE IMPACT STUDIES

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. His arguments that the unemployed are willing to subsidize the multinational companies to provide jobs for themselves reminds me of the same Government's arguments that senior citizens were willing to take a reduction in pensions to reduce the deficit.

Mr. Murphy: Equally as ridiculous.

Mr. Young: Mr. Speaker, yesterday a number of provincial Premiers—

An Hon. Member: Speech!

Mr. Mazankowski: Double-talk over there.

Mr. Lewis: Where's the question?

Mr. Young: Control yourselves.

Yesterday a number of provincial Premiers indicated that the compensation the Government was offering on these legislative changes was totally inadequate. In view of this will the Minister not now agree to table in the House those cost impact studies which the Government has done on the actual cost to Canadians?

• (1130)

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I suppose I have answered that question four or five times. In committee I am prepared to show in great detail why in fact those cost estimates the Hon. Member keeps raising are in there. The cost estimates are based on assumptions which simply have no validity and I will be able to demonstrate that to the Hon. Member in committee if he will keep an open mind.

CONFIDENTIALITY OF STUDIES

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, could the Minister explain to the House why those cost-impact studies are not available to Members in the House because of cabinet confidences but somehow magically will be made available to Members in committee? Could the Minister explain that to us?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I have explained that several times. I invite the Hon. Member to re-read Hansard of this week. I wonder why members of the New Democratic Party feel that it is somehow wrong for Canadians to invest in research and development. What is immoral about Canada doing its fair share of research and development?

* * *

[Translation]

PATENTS

PROVISIONS IN JUNE LEGISLATION—MULTINATIONALS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mrs. Thérèse Killens (Saint-Michel—Ahuntsic): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. The legislation prepared by the former Minister in June contained a clause obliging the multinationals to manufacture or purchase their active ingredients in Canada if they wanted to obtain a patent. The Ontario Minister of Health said yesterday on television that he deplored the fact that the new legislation had eliminated this provision. My question is as follows: why did the Minister give in to pressure by the multinationals?

[English]

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, as a matter of fact, on that matter we gave in to the generic companies which asked, as set out in their submission, "that compulsory licences to manufacture domestic synthetic fine chemicals be granted earlier than 10 years, as an example five or six years, in order to ensure a window of oppportunity for meaningful industrial activity". We provided a seven-year exclusivity so that generic companies will have that three-year window of opportunity and, incidentally, bring on generic competition in less time than 10 years. We did this in response to a request from the generic industry.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER REINSTATE PROVISION DRAFTED IN PREVIOUS LEGISLATION

Mrs. Thérèse Killens (Saint-Michel—Ahuntsic): Mr. Speaker, the June Bill gave a longer time of protection to the generic industry. This Bill will permit the multinationals to buy the ingredients outside Canada, in Puerto Rico for instance, and will not develop the Canadian fine chemicals industry. The Minister should read the Bill of last June and bring back that satisfactory provision. Will he bring it back?

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member knows perfectly well that the use of such terms is inappropriate. Perhaps she could continue her question.

[English]

Mrs. Killens: Will the Minister bring back the provision that was in the June Bill?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): The Hon. Member is asking me that we not provide for there to be generic competition after seven years for manufacturing and to restore the June provision which provided for a full 10 years. Does the Hon. Member want generic competition after seven years or only after 10 years? She should make up her mind.

POSITION OF PROVINCES

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. At the First Ministers' Conference the Prime Minister lectured the provinces on the need for keeping their deficits down, but at the same time the Government is loading millions of extra dollars of costs on the provinces so that it can give millions of dollars to multinational drug companies. Does the Minister think that Canadians are so dense that they will not be able to see through all this double-talk and hypocrisy?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, every province in Canada will benefit from the increased medical research at universities and teaching hospitals. The provinces will benefit from having better health care for citizens, from having research being conducted in the provinces, and from the creation of jobs for those young people who are now being educated in this important area. This will give them the opportunity to have a job in Canada and we think it is very important. We have done it in a way that produces fair prices, and if the Hon. Member would keep an open mind I am sure he would agree.

Mr. Speaker: Before the Hon. Member for Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands puts his second question, I would ask him to be more careful in the phrasing of it. He is getting very close to using words that are unparliamentary.

Mr. Manly: Mr. Speaker, I will try to be very careful with my words but this is a very important subject.

CREATION OF JOBS

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, the Canadian people are very concerned and want to know how the Government can go on talking about jobs in research when it has already cut back on just about every research program for which it has direct funding responsibilities. How can the Government do that and talk about research at the same time?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the restoration of patent rights will generate at least 3,000 research jobs in Canada. How can members of the New Democratic Party object to that? Is the Hon. Member saying that, for ideological reasons, the only kind of research worth doing is that done in Government laboratories paid for directly by the taxpayer?

* * *

RAILWAYS

IMPLEMENTATION OF HORNER REPORT RECOMMENDATIONS

Mr. Jack Scowen (Mackenzie): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. What action is the Minister taking to implement the recommendations for the method of payment submitted by the Horner Report last spring?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Transport, I will respond to that question. I know there has been work going on within the Department. The recommendations of the Horner Report are being studied and I can assume that, in due course, the Minister will make an appropriate announcement.

* * *

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

CRIME PREVENTION—DEPARTMENT'S BUDGETARY CUT-BACKS

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Solicitor General. In the light of two killings following convenience store robberies in Quebec and Alberta, I note that the Minister's Main Estimates will cut the crime prevention budget by more than 50 per cent. Convenience store robbery protection was a main emphasis of the crime prevention program. Does the Minister believe that crime prevention works, as he has said he believes? If so, why is he allowing his budget to be cut by more than 50 per cent in that important area?

Hon. James Kelleher (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I can advise the Hon. Member that I am well aware of the cuts made to the budget of my Department. After careful review of them, we are quite satisfied that no services such as those mentioned by the Hon. Member will indeed be affected in any way that will endanger the safety of the public.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, the Minister has been going around the country promoting crime prevention yet his budget has been cut by more than 50 per cent. How can he say that a cut of more than 50 per cent will not make a difference in the effectiveness of the convenience store robbery prevention program?

Hon. James Kelleher (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I have already answered the question. I will repeat the answer if the Hon. Member wishes. I have carefully reviewed the cuts that have been made to this particular Ministry and I can assure the Hon. Member that public safety and that of private citizens will not in any way be endangered.

* * *

TRADE

UNITED STATES DUTY ON CANADIAN SOFTWOOD LUMBER—U.S. PETITION

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Secretary of State for External Affairs and is about the 15 per cent countervail on Canadian softwood. Since a termination agreement must be reached prior to December 30 and a prerequisite for that under U.S. law is the withdrawal of the U.S. petition, would the Minister advise if the American petitioners have agreed in any way to withdraw their petition and negotiate an agreement, or is he counting on the U.S. administration to arrange for that petition to be withdrawn?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, my answer to that question must be along the lines of my answer to the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry earlier today. There has been a federal-provincial conference in progress over the last two days and there has been a very extensive process of federal-provincial co-operation with regard to the countervail matter. The Prime Minister will be announcing the results of that consultation and that common Canadian action in a few hours Vancouver time.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, as of late last night the head of the U.S. coalition, Bill Lange, knew nothing of this verbal agreement between Mr. Baldrige of the United States and the Minister for International Trade, and the key issue is whether or not they are prepared to withdraw the petition.

• (1140)

My supplementary question for the same Minister results from a statement made on November 5 by the Director of U.S. Trade in the Minister's Department regarding the 15 per cent duty. He said that the subsidy determination is flawed in law and logic, is inconsistent with established U.S. practice, and is based on erroneous assumptions. Is that still the position of the Government of Canada? Do we intend to continue fighting to remedy this tragic situation before the U.S. Department of Commerce and GATT?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I can appreciate that some Members of the House grow impatient with the federal-provincial process. We are a federal country. There is a provincial interest in this matter. As I said earlier today, the Prime Minister will be making a statement on this matter in Vancouver where the federal-provincial conference is under way.

* * *

PETRO-CANADA

SALE OF COME-BY-CHANCE OIL REFINERY

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. Premier Peckford of Newfoundland stated yesterday that in the sale of the refinery at Come-by-Chance, Petro-Canada placed restrictive market conditions upon the new owners. Will the Deputy Prime Minister tell us whether the statements of Premier Peckford are correct, that there were restrictive market conditions placed upon the new owners?

Hon. Gerald S. Merrithew (Minister of State (Forestry and Mines)): Mr. Speaker, the deal that was struck was between two companies, one which owned the particular asset, and the purchaser. As I understand, there were some conditions attached. But in the absence of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, who is at the First Ministers' Conference, I would prefer to bring it to his notice and he will respond in due course.

EXISTENCE OF MARKET RESTRICTIONS QUERIED

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, I accept it as galling that the Government is not able to give an answer to this very important question. Restrictive market conditions are wrong. I want to know why the Government allowed Petro-Canada to put these restrictive market conditions in this sale.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, without agreeing with the premise of the question, the Acting Minister has undertaken to provide a full and comprehensive answer in an appropriate fashion. I am surprised that the Hon. Member would find that non-acceptable.

* * *

TRADE

CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS—EXCHANGE VALUE OF CANADIAN DOLLAR

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. He will know that yesterday the free trade process took an ominous turn when the chief negotiator indicated that the American Congress would likely be calling for an increase in the value of the Canadian dollar. The only way that the Government could do that would be to increase interest rates significantly. Is the Government giving any consideration at all to increasing interest rates seriously as part of the free trade process?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Miss MacDonald: Are you advocating that?

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, the American trade negotiator said yesterday that these exchange rates between the two countries are generally not part of the negotiations. That is our Government's position.

GOVERNMENT'S POSITION ON INTEREST RATES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, that is interesting, because it was also quoted that Peter Murphy said that he did not know if he could possibly sell an agreement to the Congress if Canada does not make concessions on its exchange rate. Now, that makes it pretty clear to anybody concerned with this process that they are asking for concessions; and Congress will only sign an agreement if those concessions are likely made. My question to the Deputy Prime Minister is this. Will he say categorically that the Government of Canada will not give any consideration at all to increasing interest rates as part of these discussions?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member should know that interest rates have declined by almost four percentage points since this Government took office. The policy of this Government is to keep interest rates going down, not up like the Liberals and the NDP did when they were in office.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: When were we in office? That's a slip.

* * *

DISASTERS

AIR-INDIA CRASH—DELAY IN LAYING CHARGES

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, my first question is for the Solicitor General. I have given him notice of the question. It has been almost a year and a half since the Air-India crash; a year and a half since the premeditated, planned, and deliberate mass murder of 329 individuals, most of whom were Canadians. To date criminal charges have not been laid. Can the Solicitor General explain to Canadians, and especially to the families of the victims, why charges have not been laid? Will he not agree that there is insufficient evidence to pursue a criminal prosecution?

Hon. James Kelleher (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the fact that the Hon. Member advised my office of this question this morning. I can advise the House and the Hon. Member that I checked with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police before coming to Question Period this morning. I am advised by them that the investigation is still being actively carried on. It is continuing. I can give no further information at this time.

REQUEST THAT ROYAL COMMISSION BE APPOINTED

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, the delay is inexcusable. My supplementary question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. As the Hon. Minister knows, there has been an inquiry in Cork, Ireland; another in India. Yet there has not been an inquiry in Canada, notwithstanding the fact that most of the 329 victims were Canadians.

Will the Deputy Prime Minister, on behalf of the Government, immediately order a Royal Commission inquiry to investigate all aspects of the Air India crash, and specifically the conduct of External Affairs, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and the Canadian Security Intelligence Service?

An Hon. Member: Shame, shame!

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the Canadian Aviation Safety Board did undertake a very extensive investigation into this matter. It is my recollection that the conclusions that were arrived at, both by the Canadian Aviation Safety Board and the inquiry in India, were quite similar in nature.

* * *

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

NICARAGUA—UNITED STATES FUNDING OF CONTRA ATTACKS

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Will the Minister tell the House, when he meets with the U.S. Secretary of State, Mr. George Schultz, in what terms he plans to convey the repugnance that Canadians feel toward the continuing violation of the Charters of the United Nations and the Organization of American States by the U.S. continuing funding of terrorist Contra attacks from Honduras into Nicaragua?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Government of the United States knows that Canada differs fundamentally in our assessment of the problem in Central America, and consequently in the appropriate solutions. I have made that position clear on several occasions, and the Prime Minister has made it clear to the President. I will again be making that position clear to Secretary Schultz when I meet him later today. It is our view that our most constructive contribution to the resolution of the problems in Central America is to concentrate on the constructive, practical help that Canada can give, whether by way of development assistance, or by way of support for the Contadora process, rather than succumbing to the temptation of rhetoric and condemnation.

[Translation]

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT URGE HONDURAS TO HONOUR ITS COMMITMENTS

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate the Minister on this statement.

Considering the substantial amount of Canadian assistance being given to Honduras, could the Minister perhaps, through his good offices, urge the Government of Honduras to observe its commitments under the UN Charter and the Charter of the Organization of American States and cease giving asylum to the Contras?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate the Hon. Member, not only on the open attitude he has always shown with respect to political issues in Latin America but also on the competition he is giving me with respect to the use of French in this House.

I will take his question under advisement, and perhaps I could give him a more detailed answer on some other occasion.

* * *

[English]

NORTH ATLANTIC TREATY ORGANIZATION

INQUIRY CONCERNING POSITION OF LIBERAL PARTY

Mr. Bob Hicks (Scarborough East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Defence. It concerns an article in The Ottawa Citizen today which reported that the Leader of the Opposition refused to indicate whether he would go along with resolutions that will be presented at the Liberal Convention calling for Canada to withdraw from NATO, and also to end Cruise Missile testing in Canada. Is the Minister aware of this article? Does he feel that the Leader of the Opposition should not leave any doubt in the minds of Canadians as to where he stands?

Mr. Broadbent: That is not his ministerial responsibility.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. It is probably appropriate for the Chair to comment that there has been a great deal of leniency exercised in recent years in this Chamber with respect to the quoting of articles and comments from other places and using them as the basis for a question. The Chair does not want to be unfair. We have just had an example of the reaction that is engendered in the Chamber when perhaps too full use is made of such quotes. However, I would ask the Hon. Minister to respond, keeping in mind that a debate in this Chamber in Question Period as to what somebody is quoted as having said in the press is not always helpful.

• (1150)

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I will do my best to fit within the confines of your suggestion. I think I can say that since World War II NATO has stood as the most important defence of peace and freedom in the world. It has had the support of both major Governments in Canada, and any action by either major Party to indicate equivocal support for NATO will be viewed very gravely indeed by our allies.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

LABOUR RELATIONS

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION DISPUTE—CONCILIATION COMMISSIONER'S REPORT

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Communications. A commissioner appointed by the Department of Labour issued a report in early October on the labour dispute between the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and its employees who are members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees. The proposed settlement was acceptable to the union and workers are prepared to ensure labour peace on that basis. What steps is the Government willing to take to make sure that CBC implements the terms of the conciliation commissioner's report?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member knows, seven different issues have been negotiated with regard to the disputes that have been under way. Two bargaining unions, NABET and CUPE, are in an official position to strike. However, I understand that negotiations and discussions are still going on, and I am hopeful there will be some resolution from these negotiations without having to move into a strike position.

AMOUNT OF GOVERNMENT FUNDING FOR CBC

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question. Would the Minister not agree that the federal Government's cut-backs in the CBC are, in part, the cause for the problems that are being faced by the workers?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): No, Mr. Speaker, I would not agree with that. I would be glad though to elaborate on the amount of funding that has gone to the CBC over the last number of years. In fact there has been an increase of $71 million in actual dollars over the last three years.

* * *

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

PRICE OF DRUGS—EFFECT OF AMENDING LEGISLATION

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. Some provincial Premiers said that the price of drugs will increase in Canada. The Minister of Health for Ontario last night said that your proposals regarding the patent changes on pharmaceutical products—

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Gauthier: —will increase the price of all existing drugs in Ontario and promote untold increases in the prices for new drugs. Will the Minister not admit that he is jeopardizing the health care of Canadians, and that in the end the consumer will have to pay more for these drugs?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Of course not, Mr. Speaker. What I will admit is that this will restore some patent protection to researchers in Canada. It will result in 3,000 new high-tech jobs, the kinds of jobs the Member's Party keeps calling for. It will put us at least in the game of the exciting new biotechnologies that are coming along. It will mean that Canada will be a contributor to finding cures for diseases that still menace mankind.

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: After cutting right and left in Canada's research resources, university research and research budgets, it takes a lot of nerve to say that here in the House!

REQUEST FOR EXPLANATION OF DIFFERENCE BETWEEN COSTS AND PRICES FOR CONSUMERS

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, perhaps the Minister could explain, in the language of his choice, the difference between the cost to the consumer and the consumer price. Doesn't it mean the same thing? It certainly feels the same to the consumer, who will have to pay in any case.

[English]

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, if the Liberal Party will co-operate with us and bring this legislation to committee, we can have the kinds of discussion the Member apparently wants. We can then look at all these factors. I am sure that when the Member does that he will see that any costs involved are more than compensated by the enormous benefits that will come to Canada as a result of this legislation.

* * *

PUBLISHING INDUSTRY

CONTROL OF TEXTBOOK PUBLISHING COMPANY

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, the Government caved in on the sale of Prentice-Hall book publishers to Gulf and Western on condition that Gulf would sell control to Canadians of Ginn Company, a major publisher of elementary and high school children's textbooks. My question is for the Minister of Communications. Is the Minister aware that in its recent memorandum of sale, the American conglomerate, Gulf and Western, states that it now has absolutely no intention of giving up control over the operating decisions of the board of directors of Ginn Company? What has happened to the Tory policy of recovering Canadian control in this lucrative segment of the book publishing industry?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Hon. Member knows that the book publishing policy announced by my predecessor is in place. It is being followed, and applications that come before Investment Canada will be judged on the basis of that book publishing policy.

Mrs. Finestone: Mr. Speaker, if there is one area where words and deeds should match, it is in the book publishing area. Here we have a Canadian cultural industry that needs to be understood. I wish the Minister would read the memos.

Some Hon. Members: Speech.

GULF AND WESTERN CORPORATION'S POSITION

Mrs. Sheila Finestone (Mount Royal): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is for the Minister of Communications. Since Gulf and Western's decision to retain veto power at Ginn's board of directors is a direct violation of its commitment to Investment Canada, to the Baie Comeau policy, to the Prime Minister, will the Minister stop this subterfuge and direct Gulf to respect Canadian control conditions to which it had already agreed?

Some Hon. Members: More.

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, my colleague the Minister responsible for Investment Canada is charged with seeing that in any application before Investment Canada the players act in good faith. That includes Gulf and Western, and that will happen.

I also want to assure the Hon. Member that our interest in the book publishing industry is, thank goodness, better than that of the preceding Government which was represented by the Liberal Party. Just in this last few months, Sir, we announced new support for the book publishing industry in the amount of $65 million over the next five years, and that will go to assist Canadian publishers, Canadian writers, and Canadian publishing in this country.

* * *

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

LIFTING OF SANCTIONS AGAINST SOVIET UNION

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale—High Park): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Canada is on record as condemning the Soviets for atrocities and gross human rights violations committed against the Afghan people, and following the invasion of Afghanistan in 1980 imposed sanctions against the Soviet Union. Last week the Minister announced his intention to lift these sanctions claiming that they were ineffective.

Will the Minister advise the House and the people of Canada why sanctions against South Africa work, while they apparently do not work against the Soviet Union, and why the Government of Canada is negotiating to re-establish cultural and scientific links with the Soviets at a time when Soviet troops are intensifying their attack against Afghan freedom fighters?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I will try to respond very briefly. The sanctions that were introduced by a Progressive Conservative Government against the Soviet Union in 1979 were successful at the time because they helped galvanize world opinion against the Soviet actions in Afghanistan. Those actions in Afghanistan continue to be deplorable and deplored by this Government. It is clear that if we want to change other aspects of the practices of the Soviet Union, particularly with regard to the freedom to move of their citizens, to family reunification, to other issues that are very close to the Hon. Member and to me, then we have to try some other instruments. We are doing that.

With regard to South Africa, I think that every day there is an indication of the increasing effectiveness of the policy that has been followed by this Government. The most recent indication was the very welcome decision announced yesterday by Bata Canada.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Kenora—Rainy River. One question, please.

* * *

INDIAN AFFAIRS

LUBICON LAKE BAND—DISTRIBUTION OF INFORMATION BY CANADIAN EMBASSIES

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, since I am restricted to one question, I too would like to ask it of the Right Hon. Secretary of State for External Affairs. Can the Minister assure this House and the country with regard to the Lubicon Lake Band that he is not going to allow the use of Canada's foreign posts to distribute what, if not active disinformation, is at least a very highly coloured assessment of Canadian public opinion with regard to the Lubicon land claim?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, our view is that the Lubicon question is a question which should be resolved in Canada. There are legal processes that have not yet been exhausted by members of the Lubicon Band. We think it would be in everyone's interest, including the interest of resolving the question, if all parties would turn their attention of the resolution of that question here in Canada. Obviously, members of the Lubicon Band, as other Canadians, have the right to travel internationally and to make such representations that accord to the law of Canada and the country where they are visiting. They can expect to have the help of Canadian officials serving abroad in the legitimate activities they undertake.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Papineau: one question, please.

* * *

TRANSPORT

INQUIRY WHETHER GOVERNMENT PREPARED TO INSTRUCT RCMP TO CONDUCT INQUIRY INTO POSSIBLE SALE OF CN ROUTE

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of State for Transport and his Parliamentary Secretary, I would like to ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he is aware that CN Route is to be sold to a private company for about $23 million, although CN Route's real property is now estimated at between $50 and $70 million, and also that the sale of the company will put out of a job nearly 50 per cent of those who are now working for CN Route as permanent employees.

Is the Minister aware that CN has ordered a private investigation into certain allegations about the questionable aspects of this transaction? In the circumstances, is the Deputy Prime Minister prepared to ask the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to investigate?

• (1200)

[English]

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Transport I would rather take that question as notice. Since the Hon. Member has outlined what might be some very serious allegations I would rather reserve any comment at this time.

* * *

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

U.S.S.R.—OBSERVANCE OF HELSINKI PACT

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Secretary of State for External Affairs. Just four years after the Soviet Union signed the Helsinki Pact of 1975, the Communist army invaded Afghanistan and ruthlessly killed men, women, and children. It is still doing so. In recent trips to the UN and around the world has the Minister noticed any desire on the part of the Communists to live up to the Pact they signed in 1975 by withdrawing from Afghanistan, Ukraine, Poland, Hungary, et cetera?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): The answer to that, Mr. Speaker, is no, I have not noted any particular interest or willingness on the part of the Soviet Union to change policies which are traditional to them and which are in many cases repugnant to Canada. It may be that there is a change in their attitude with regard to some questions of human contact. There is certainly a change in their rhetoric. I think we would all do well to judge them on their actions, not by their words. We should also do everything we can to encourage them to follow their words with concrete action.

* * *

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Speaker: I should like to bring to the attention of Members, with respect to Private Members' business, that I have received written notice from the Hon. Member for Western Arctic (Mr. Nickerson) that due to a prior commitment he is unable to be present in the House on Monday, November 24, 1986 to move his motion during the hour for Private Members' business. Accordingly, I am directing the Table to drop that item of business to the bottom of the order of precedence. Since that notice will thereby be removed, the hour for Private Members' business will be extended and, pursuant to Standing Order 39(2), the House will continue with the business before it prior to that hour until the ordinary hour of daily adjournment.

* * *

PRIVILEGE

ALLEGED PRIOR KNOWLEDGE OF LEGISLATIVE CONTENT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I indicated earlier in writing that I intended to rise today on a question of privilege regarding a very serious breach of the rights and privileges of this House. I would like to refer first to Citation 16 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition where it describes the privileges of the House as the rights which are:

—"absolutely necessary for the due execution of its powers".

On Tuesday last the CBC program The Journal aired an interview with a Mr. C. J. Stettler, a former president of the U.S. Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association. In that interview, taped some time before the tabling of Bill C-22, the drug patent Bill, Mr. Stettler indicated that he knew of specific changes made in the Bill since its passage was denied last summer. Let me re-emphasize that point because it is very important. An American citizen had prior knowledge of what was in this important Bill before it was actually laid upon the Table and its contents made known to Members of this House. Citation 22 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition states the following:

> The power of the House to enforce its rules extends not only to Members and others admitted within the precincts of Parliament, but also to members of the general public who may interfere with the orderly conduct of parliamentary business.

Clearly this particular citizen of the United States had prior knowledge of this Bill. That constitutes an interference with the orderly conduct of parliamentary business. I submit that this is comparable to a leak of budget information. In other words, given prior knowledge of the contents of this Bill, those individuals with that knowledge would be able to take advantage of it and make private personal gain. If foreign nationals were aware of the contents of a Bill which would significantly alter the production and marketing of drugs in Canada, it could have obvious and profound implications for the value of certain businesses both here and in the U.S.

I would like to make special reference to the leaking of information in the past which indicate the severity of this particular instance. In 1974 in the United Kingdom the Chancellor of the Exchequer made an offhand comment to a journalist on the evening of the presentation of his Budget. Because of the timing of a certain edition of the paper for which the journalist worked, news of a particular detail of the Budget came out prior to the Budget Speech. The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Hugh Dalton at the time, when he recognized his indiscretion, submitted forthwith his resignation which was accepted the following day.

In 1936, also in the United Kingdom, a Minister of the Crown made certain comments about the Budget which led to certain activity on the stock market. As soon as the Chancellor of the Exchequer learned of this, and believing that there was at least a clear possibility of a leak of budgetary information, he immediately initiated an investigation. That investigation led to the disclosure that the other Minister was responsible and the Minister in question felt the obligation to resign.

We all remember the incident not long ago, and I remember it vividly because I was finance critic for the NDP at the time, on Monday, April 18, 1983, when the then Minister of Finance, while leafing through his Budget Speech before the television cameras, inadvertently revealed a number of pages of the Budget Speech. I think it would be useful for Members of the House and yourself to read for a moment from Hansard the comments made at that time by the then Leader of the Opposition, the Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen). On Tuesday, April 19, 1983, he had this to say:

> Madam Speaker, I rise to raise a question of privilege involving a most serious budget leak which occurred yesterday. This being the first opportunity to raise that question, I take the opportunity. After hearing my submissions, no doubt you will want to seek the advice of other Hon. Members on the matter I raise. I would be prepared to move the appropriate motion should you find that there is a prima facie case of privilege.

He went on to say, and this is the critical part:

> Budget secrecy is a basic principle of our traditions of parliamentary Government. It means that the Minister responsible for bringing down a Budget is also held responsible to see to it that the provisions of that Budget are not prematurely released. The reasons for this are many. Foreknowledge of budgetary measures has led to the acquisition of private gain and to sharp market fluctuations.

• (1210)

As an aside, the case I am making today would indicate that the two cases we are now discussing are not dissimilar. Individuals, in this case outside of Canada, certainly stood to gain privately from prior knowledge of what the Bill was to include.

The Member for the Yukon went on to say:

> My information is current that those fluctuations are taking place and that the Canadian dollar is indeed now falling on the markets.
>
> It is not a principle that it is necessary to defend; it has been accepted in the parliamentary system ever since budgets existed. A breach of budget secrecy has always and invariably led to the resignation of the Minister.
>
> It must also be regarded as a breach of the oath which the Minister takes as a member of the Privy Council.
>
> A well known case in the United Kingdom was that involving the then Chancellor of the Exchequer, Hugh Dalton, who, in a casual conversation with reporters, hinted at a rise in the tax on tobacco. I will be coming back to that precedent. His resignation as a result of this imprudence took place immediately.
>
> Showing the seriousness with which the British House regards such matters, even though Mr. Dalton resigned the matter was referred to a special committee for a full investigation. Referring to the Dalton case among others, Professor S. R. Finer in public administration says that it was a case which raised "such doubts about his personal prudence and integrity as to cause him to resign".
>
> That is exactly the present case. This is not the first time the Minister has found himself in difficulties. He signed approval of the Gillespie contract and forgot that he had signed or seen it. It must be recalled that Mr. Gillespie was in a position to profit as a result of a measure included in the first budget presented by this Minister.
>
> While the Prime Minister (Mr. Trudeau) was satisfied that there was nothing in the guidelines to concern him in that episode, this is not a mere matter of guidelines. This is a matter reaching into the very heart of parliamentary integrity.
>
> What of the Minister's integrity? It would seem even redundant now to discuss it. It is a thing of rags and tatters. Prudence is a word that cannot be uttered in the same breath as the present Minister of Finance (Mr. Lalonde).
>
> There is extant a videotape showing the previous Minister of Finance at a photo opportunity and deliberately holding the page of his budget address close because, as he explains, "The cameramen are equipped with farseeing lenses". I am referring now to the previous Minister who, when caught in the same circumstances, held his budget close. He would not open the pages because he was aware of the telephoto lenses. That was his attitude at that time.

The then Leader of the Opposition went on with the following important comments:

> This Minister is entirely different. He clowned, he joked, and he talked in his interview of zoom lenses. I have a copy of that tape. He joked and said: "I hope you fellows do not have zoom lenses".
>
> He joked about the secrecy of that document and closed it up at one stage during that photo opportunity session so that it could not be seen. But he later opened it up to the exposure of the telephoto lenses. The question might be asked: "Did he know that they were shooting the pages of the budget as he turned them? He certainly was aware of the availability of zoom lenses because he himself mentioned that fact. All the time that this was going on and he was basking in the sunshine of self-indulgent publicity, his budget was being transferred to videotape. The great video leak was in full swing.

I remember that very distinctly, Mr. Speaker, because at the time which the then Leader of the Opposition was explaining, I was discussing the situation with the then Minister of Finance. He was indeed very concerned. We had a lengthy discussion during which he recognized that if there was sufficient information to be used inappropriately, it was in fact a breach of the privileges of the House. He recognized that at that time. However, as it turned out, as you well recall, that was not deemed to be the case by the Speaker. The Hon. Member for Yukon (Mr. Nielsen) continued:

As a result of this Minister's culpable indiscretion and lack of prudence, he has created a fatal flaw in the confidence of the House and the country. What was opened as a crack in the Gillespie affair is now a virtual chasm. It is a chasm that the Minister cannot cross. As a result of his clowning and desire for personal publicity, he made available across this country, to the moneymarkets and financial circles, an advance knowledge of the budget which could be used for personal gain.

Anyone with a knowledge of finance, being aware of the amount of the deficit revealed by the Minister and the amount of incentives to be raised by job creation—

Which, as you will recall, Mr. Speaker, was included in that Budget.

—would be able to draw certain conclusions which might be of great interest in financial circles and make available that gain.

In other words, private gain for certain individuals who would possess prior knowledge.

He continued:

It is not incumbent upon us at this time to show that great profits have been made, or even that it was possible for such to have taken place. Nor was this a case in the episode of Mr. Dalton or Mr. Thomas.

The following is the most important of my remarks:

Their resignation took place before the investigations by a special committee were made. It was merely necessary to show that a budget leak had taken place in those precedents. The resignations followed immediately and automatically.

In other words, proof was not necessary. The possibility of such an action taking place was sufficient to result in their resignations.

The Member for Yukon continued:

In this country in 1963 Mr. Walter Gordon's resignation went to the Prime Minister when he admitted bringing in outside economic advisers.

You will recall, Mr. Speaker, as a student of history, and knowing the individual personally, that he registered serious concern. The remarks continue:

No leak was shown. All that was shown in that case was that Mr. Gordon had consulted four economists in the preparation of his budget. When that was disclosed, he immediately tendered his resignation to the then Prime Minsiter, Mr. Pearson, who chose not to accept it. But nonetheless, the proper thing was done and the resignation was tendered. That does not alter the fact, Madam Speaker, that the resignation was tendered.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I think you would find the House very sympathetic to the position that the Chair allow Members a reasonable amount of time in which to put forth their questions of privilege in order that you can decide whether or not a prima facie case of a breach of privilege has been made. While we find the remarks of the Hon. Member for Yukon to be interesting, this is not a case in which a question of privilege is being used as an escape valve to let off steam in the House. Therefore, I wonder if the Hon. Member might come directly to his question of privilege in order that the Chair may consider this and we may get on with it.

Mr. Speaker: The Chair thanks the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary for his intervention. I was just about to rise to ask the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) whether he could assist the Chair in making a clear link between the situation of a leak of budget information and the present grievance which the Hon. Member brings to the House.

There is a convention, albeit not a rule, with respect to leaks of budget information which puts very great pressure on the Minister. Perhaps the Member could assist the Chair by showing exactly how those examples are apposite to the grievance which the Hon. Member brings which, as I understand it, briefly put, is that information as to the contents of a Bill which was going to be introduced into this Chamber somehow or other got out of the hands of the Government of Canada and was received by a stranger, if I can put it that way, before Hon. Members could see the Bill. That seems to be the grievance which the Hon. Member brings to the Chair.

I ask that he now concentrate on the link which I have asked him to establish. I do not say it is necessary to establish that link. As the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary has said, Members are impressed with the erudition of the presentation, but I now ask the Hon. Member to tighten up his presentation and get to the point in order that the Chair can deal with the matter. The Chair should advise the Hon. Member that the Chair views the matter as serious.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate your intervention. I also appreciate the intervention made by the Parliamentary Secretary. I think it was appropriate. However, I would point out that the comments of the Hon. Member for Yukon went on for many more pages than I referred to. That is just to make the point that this is a very serious issue. As you have indicated, Mr. Speaker, you concur. I appreciate the intervention and will draw my comments to a rapid conclusion, knowing that other Members will want to participate in this discussion.

• (1220)

To put the concern very succinctly, we learned that the former president of the U.S. Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association indicated clearly that he had prior knowledge of the contents of Bill C-22. I presume that the next number of days will determine whether will lead to significant changes in the amount of research, if any, being done in Canada, as well as the type of research. It will affect the success of Canadian drug companies and the relative success in Canada of multinational drug companies, particularly those located in the United States.

My point is that individuals having prior knowledge of the content of the Bill would obviously stand to gain financially and privately because of the implications that this information regarding these companies would have in terms of the value of their stocks on the stock-market or the value of the company operations per se.

I have attempted to relate this as being as serious a breach of privilege as that experienced when a budget leak occurs. As you have indicated, Mr. Speaker, the experience here and in the mother of parliament is very clear when it comes to budget leaks. I see a direct relationship between the two and suggest that they are in fact similar to an end. I believe this is a prima facie case and a breach of privilege of all Members of the House. I hope that you concur with that observation.

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, the House Leader for the New Democratic Party has presented a very interesting and important point. It may be argued by a representative of the Government when one rises, that what the Hon. Member is talking about is not covered within any of the existing precedents with respect to parliamentary privilege as far as they apply to the Canadian House of Commons. However, I want to draw your attention to the fact that in amending our Standing Orders we changed the language of Standing Order 1, "Public Business". While I do not have the previous Standing Order in front of me, my recollection is that it was rather narrowly drafted to limit, what the Speaker could do in ruling on these kinds of claims, to what had previously been established or is still being established in the Parliament of the United Kingdom, as well as our own Parliament. However, Standing Order 1 headed "Public Business" now reads:

> In all cases not provided for hereinafter, or by other Order of the House, procedural questions shall be decided by the Speaker or Chairman, whose decisions shall be based on the usages, forms, customs and precedents of the House of Commons of Canada and on parliamentary tradition in Canada and other jurisdictions, so far as they may be applicable to the House.

Therefore, I submit that you are entitled to find that when it comes to dealing with matters of privilege, the final word has not been said and that it is possible for you to make a ruling, in effect extending what parliamentary privilege means for this House of Commons, to cover what may be new ground.

It might also be argued by a spokesperson for the Government that the tradition with respect to leaks of information about legislation has, until now, been limited to leaks of information contained in a budget statement or budgetary document. I submit if my contention is correct, that the final word has not been said on what constitutes parliamentary privilege for the Canadian House of Commons that it would be open for it to be held that this tradition should be extended to leaks of information involving legislation other than budget statements or budgetary legislation.

This is particularly a point to be considered when we are talking about something that a Government considers so serious and important as the legislation on prescription drugs now before the House. I think it is particularly important, if we are talking about information about this legislation falling into the hands of lobbyists—perhaps I should say representatives—of organizations in other countries.

If the Government is serious about respecting the paramount role of the House of Commons and its own accountability to the House of Commons, it should limit the information it gives about its intended legislation, prior to its tabling, to its own officials and the Members of the House of Commons to whom the Government is accountable. There is a tradition that some two hours or so in advance of the first reading of a Bill there is a briefing given to opposition critics about the contents of the Bill, and a copy of the Bill is sometimes given to them as well as other explanatory material. In fact, sometimes there is no briefing but the Bill and material explaining it are given under embargo to opposition critics. No matter which party forms the Government, I think it can be said to the credit of Hon. Members that such confidentiality has always been respected.

It is quite another matter if we are talking about giving that material to people who are not Members of the Canadian House of Commons or officials in the Public Service of Canada, but to others, particularly people in other countries. Therefore, I submit that it is open to you to find in these circumstances that our approach to privilege can be extended to the matter raised by the House Leader of the New Democratic Party.

In conclusion, if what we are discussing is not a breach of privilege, it is at the very least a breach of ethics. I think the House and the Canadian people should take note of the implications of detailed information about what is in a key piece of legislation, not yet presented by the Government to Parliament, coming into the hands of someone in another country who clearly is not authorized to have that information, at least a week before the Bill is tabled in the House. If this is not a matter of breach of parliamentary privilege, it raises a very interesting and important question of ethics.

I also believe that it is open to you, sir, to decide that, when it comes to parliamentary privilege as it pertains to the Canadian House of Commons, the precedents already there for you to consider are not the final word. It is open for you to extend the definition of privilege to new areas, and the area we are discussing could well be one of them.

Mr. Speaker: Before recognizing the Minister, the Chair wants to thank the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray) for his intervention. The question of ethics gives the Chair some concern. Perhaps the Hon. Member can assist the Chair and the House. I take it that when the Hon. Member raised the question of ethics, it was not an imputation against the present Minister or Members. That is the way the Chair has taken the remarks and I would want to assure all Hon. Members of that.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): I would be happy to confirm that.

• (1230)

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, this has been a very interesting discussion of the law, so to speak, of parliamentary privilege. It is, however, not based on any facts which would warrant us now to divert into this kind of discussion.

I am sure it did not escape the notice of the Chair that the House Leader of the New Democratic Party (Mr. Riis) did not quote what Mr. Stettler said in the interview he gave to CBC Journal. The reason he did not is because Mr. Stettler did not say he saw the Bill. Mr. Stettler said: "I think it's a better package than the draft released in June". He said: "I think it's a better package".

Mr. Benjamin: He knew the contents.

Mr. Andre: As I indicated in the House in answer to questions on more than one occasion, I believe, we have been engaged in consultations on this legislation since the end of June. We have discussed it with the Consumers' Association of Canada, the National Pensioners and Senior Citizens Federation, the National Anti-Poverty League, the Canadian Drug Manufacturers Association and the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association of Canada. My officials have been in discussion with all kinds of officials and people in my office have been in discussion. That is what consultation is all about. However, no one saw the Bill.

I will have to check the dates because I cannot be sure but I think that the interview Mr. Stettler gave The Journal was before I presented the Bill to my Cabinet colleagues for their approval. Therefore, he could not have known what was in the package because the package, per se, might not even have been established at the particular time of the interview.

I find it a little disturbing that my ethics would be questioned, that suggestions would be made that I have been consulting or taking instructions from a foreign Government, in view of the fact I stated explicitly here that I have talked to no one in the United States, from the Trade Office, or from the American Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association. I stated that directly. In essence, what the Hon. House Leader of the New Democratic Party is doing is suggesting that I misled the House. He is saying that I did not tell the truth when I made that statement—

Mr. Benjamin: He didn't say that at all.

Mr. Andre: —because he is suggesting that somehow I caused the Bill to be shown to others previously.

Mr. Benjamin: No, he didn't say that either.

Mr. Andre: The only breach under the broad definition of "ethics" which occurred is when I extended the usual courtesies and told the New Democratic Party that I was going to introduce the Bill for first reading, gave those Hon. Members a briefing, and they used that knowledge to put together a filibuster procedure to prevent me from doing so. For the first time in Canadian history we actually had the refusal of a Party to grant the right to introduce a Bill.

Mr. Murphy: It's not the first time.

Mr. Andre: Never has the fundamental principle of democracy been challenged in that way. Never before has that happened. If there was a breach of privilege, Mr. Speaker, that might be the breach of privilege. To attempt to deny someone to introduce a motion or a Bill attacks the very roots of democracy.

Mr. Speaker: I do not want to cut off the Hon. Minister, but I do want to do something which I think Speakers probably do with some hesitancy. I want to mention the issue of relevancy and say that I think we should stay on point.

Second, I can advise the Hon. Minister, and I think it may be of some comfort to him, that I have not taken this point of privilege, or the remarks which have been made, as an attack on the honour and ethics of the Minister or of any Hon. Member in the Chamber.

Mr. Riis: Absolutely not.

Mr. Speaker: I have not taken it in that way.

Mr. Andre: I did.

Mr. Speaker: The reason the question of ethics did concern the Chair was that I was—

Mr. Benjamin: Now you are paranoid.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The reason the issue of ethics did concern the Chair was that there might be some misunderstanding in the Chamber as to the direction in which those remarks were aimed. That is why I rose a few moments ago. I hope all Hon. Members can accept that the Chair does not take anything which has been said as an attack on the personal honour of the Minister or any Hon. Member in the Chamber. I think that is the disposition. I see heads nodding in agreement on the opposition side. Will the Hon. Minister please continue?

Mr. Andre: If in fact there is no direct challenge or suggestion on the part of the New Democratic Party that I released the Bill or gave someone its contents, then why are we discussing a point of privilege? If the New Democratic Party accepts my word that in fact no such release was made by me, what can be the point of privilege? What is the use of this discussion about privilege if in fact those Hon. Members accept my word that I did not release.

I now have a copy of the transcript from the debate where Mr. Stettler said: "Some of the pricing features in that Bill were pretty bad and I think there's been some changes". He said: "I think there's been some changes". On the basis of that, that Party makes the accusation that I told the Americans before I told Canadians and have raised this frivolous point of privilege.

Mr. Benjamin: No, we didn't say that.

Mr. Andre: I personally find that offensive. I have been honest and courteous with that Party and it has used my courtesy in an attempt to frustrate this House from operating, and I find that offensive.

Mr. Benjamin: On the same point of privilege, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: In the interests of perhaps keeping the discussion to the point, I just want to reiterate the point as the Chair sees it at this time, that is that, in whatever manner, information which was in a Bill, information as to the contents of the Bill, got into the hands of someone outside of this place before it was in the hands of Hon. Members. I understand that is the short point, the narrow point, the point I am being asked to consider.

On that basis, the question is whether I should send this matter to the appropriate committee for considertaion. If I have missed the point, I would certainly ask the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap to correct me but I think that is the point and I would ask Hon. Members to keep to it.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): I think you are perfectly correct, Mr. Speaker, and I believe the Minister has missed the whole point. There is absolutely no reflection on the Minister personally. My colleague's question of privilege does not allege that the Minister himself personally gave the Bill to anyone who had no right to it or any business knowing about it. That is not the point.

The breach of privilege, as my colleague, the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis), pointed out, was a breach of the privilege of all Hon. Members of the House, and you as the guardian of that privilege have to rule, even if it is a precedent—it is time we had one—on the fact that someone outside this House and, more seriously, not necessarily from Canada but someone from another country, knew of the contents. He did not see the Bill. That is not being alleged in the question of privilege. What is being alleged as a question of privilege, and being stated by my colleague, is that someone from outside of this country knew about the contents of the Bill.

You, Mr. Speaker, have sat for some years in this place, as I have, as a private Member, and I believe you understand that I personally resent someone receiving knowledge of the contents of a Bill before Members of Parliament know about its contents.

• (1240)

The Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) will appreciate, as do I, that in the course of negotiations and discussions dealing with legislation, as a matter of courtesy, a cabinet Minister will make available to a colleague in his own Party or to a colleague from this side of the House some knowledge with respect to what is in the Bill without showing him or her the Bill. That is something sacrosanct for those of us on this side of the House.

The Hon. Member's question of privilege has nothing to do with whether or not someone from outside this Chamber saw the Bill. They must have known about some of the contents of the Bill or how else could they have said that the contents are better than they were? This means that someone from outside the House, and what is worse someone from outside the country, knew about the contents of the Bill or some parts of it. Surely that is a breach of the privilege of all Members of the House, most particularly those Private Members who are not members of the Privy Council.

Mr. McDermid: You have no proof of that whatsoever.

Mr. Benjamin: There is such a thing as ministerial responsibility. We accept and believe the word of the Minister that at no time did he disclose the contents of the Bill, at no time did he show the Bill to anyone outside this Chamber. We accept that and take him at his word. However, when one considers the consultations that went on between legal eagles, drafters of legislation, officials of departments and other organizations, someone somewhere in the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs or in the Department of Justice, or elsewhere, had to have disclosed some of the contents of the legislation to people outside the Chamber.

Mr. Malone: Name them.

Mr. Benjamin: You cannot name them. All we know from the evidence, which is clear in the CBC transcript, is that a person knew about some of the contents of the legislation, otherwise they could not have said something to the effect that the new legislation will be better than it was. How else could they have said that if they had not known about the contents of the Bill?

Mr. McDermid: Quote them accurately!

Mr. Benjamin: This means that even though something happened about which the Minister knew absolutely nothing, and in which he had absolutely no part and is totally innocent as a Minister and as a person, there is still such a thing as ministerial responsibility. He is responsible for all that goes on under his authority in his Department.

I do not think it is proper—in fact, I think it is unforgivable—that anyone outside this Chamber would have knowledge of the contents of a piece of legislation. As a Private Member I ask you, Sir, that you rule that when someone makes statements outside of Parliament in terms of the contents of a piece of legislation that that in fact is a breach of the privilege of Members of the House.

Mr. Speaker: I wish to thank the Hon. Member for Regina West (Mr. Benjamin). I now call upon the Parliamentary Secretary to the Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council (Mr. Lewis).

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I have a few brief points with respect to procedure which I would like to raise. First, I wish to compliment my colleague, the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis), who, as everyone knows, is a well-informed Member of Parliament. Based on the fact that he is a well-informed Member of Parliament, I suggest to Your Honour that he saw this program, and I believe this is what he stated, on Tuesday evening, November 18. Citation 81 of Beauchesne's states in part:

> By its nature, a question of privilege is of such importance that it may be raised at any time, and S.O. 17 makes provision for the precedence of a question of privilege over all other business of the House.

Citation 82 of Beauchesne's states:

A question of privilege must be brought to the attention of the House at the first possible opportunity. Even a gap of a few days may invalidate the claim for precedence in the House.

I suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that in that this program was shown on Tuesday evening and was but a momentary thing, if one wanted to bring a question of privilege related to it it should have been raised on Wednesday. I suggest that what we are arguing about here is a matter of debate with respect to whether and when the U.S. official had the alleged notice.

Your Honour will recall that as a result of diligent action on the part of the Government this Bill was printed on November 7. My colleague refers to a taped program shown on November 18. By my mathematics that leaves an 11-day gap during which officials would have had an opportunity to review the Bill as printed and appear on a television program.

Finally, I suggest that if this is a bona fide question of privilege which should be sent to the Standing Committee on Elections, Privileges and Procedure, then in fact we have an interesting situation. I say that because my colleagues opposite often practise a double standard in this regard. A Government document was leaked to the NDP on November 7 concerning alleged secret negotiations between Canada and the United States on automotive trade. That document was used in Question Period with no suggestion that its leak created a breach of privilege. If a leak with respect to a Bill is alleged to be a breach of privilege, then perhaps every time there is a leaked document Your Honour will find Members on the Government side suggesting that that, too, is a breach of privilege. I think one would not want that double standard to be lost in the technical arguments which I have just made.

Mr. Speaker: The Chair wishes to thank Hon. Members for their interventions. I will reserve on this matter which, as I have said, is a serious one. I see that the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) is rising.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I will keep my remarks brief. They refer primarily to the comments made by the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre). I wish to clear the air in that respect.

At no time would I want to suggest that the Minister himself was in direct consultation or receiving direct advice from a citizen of a foreign country. I did not state that, Mr. Speaker, and I simply do not want the Minister to suggest that he is being accused of that.

The point is that in the television interview to which we are referring it was not so much the information which came about on that particular day, which I think was the eighteenth, but the comments made by Mr. Stettler reflecting comments and discussions he had had sometime prior to that, perhaps a week, a month or a year—who knows. It was simply at that point that it became, in a sense, a public issue in Canada. The reason I did not raise it earlier was because I was primarily referring to comments made in the House regarding information which occurred in the last couple of days. So my reference was not particularly to the television program. To clarify for the Parliamentary Secretary, it was information gleaned prior to the interview that concerns us.

As the Minister has accurately stated, he not speak directly to the principles being named here today, but simply referred to the fact that, and I think he confirmed this, Mr. Stettler, the Past President of the American Pharmaceutical Association, simply stated that it appeared to him to be a better package. Perhaps he was not absolutely certain of that, he did not say. However, it appeared to him on the information that he had received from some officials within the Minister's office or Department that it was a better package.

That is why in my earlier comments I referred to the point in the precedent set in the United Kingdom which talked about budget leaks, that it was not that individuals had seen the Budget in advance, or that they had it in their possession or that they had spoken to officials about specific clauses. At times it was something as inadvertent as the Minister involved referring in an off-handed manner to an increase in tobacco tax. That was deemed to be sufficient reason for the individual to essentially step down. That is precisely why I made that particular point.

• (1250)

I appreciate having an opportunity to say a word or two about the earlier statements, just to set the record very straight. I would ask, Mr. Speaker, since you have indicated that we have had adequate input to this point, that you rule on this matter. If you feel it appropriate, I look forward to pursuing this discussion in the appropriate committee upon your reference, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, we have heard from the Hon. House Leader of the New Democratic Party twice and his submissions have been very helpful. I do not want to be too technical and I am sure you will be fair in your ruling, but it does seem to me that the Hon. Member has, upon having had the floor twice, failed to follow up his question of privilege with a motion, as requested in Citation 81(2) of Beauchesne's that a complaint of a breach of privilege must conclude with a motion providing the House with an opportunity to take action. This is not done upon hearing your ruling, Mr. Speaker, but upon completing one's submission. I would submit that the Hon. Member has had two opportunities to make and complete his submissions but at no time did he move a motion.

Mr. Murphy: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. If we check the records of the House, we will find that many Speakers have indeed listened to presentations ending with the Hon. Member saying that if the Speaker should deem it a prima facie question of privilege, the appropriate motion could or would be made. I think we are dealing with an attempt by the Government to prevent you from coming to your own decision, Mr. Speaker.

This case has been presented at some length and the precedents that do exist have been pointed out. As well, the seriousness of the issue has been pointed out. For the Parliamentary Secretary to be nit-picking as he is at the present time is not helpful to the process. I believe he has been a Member of the House for the same number of years as, and perhaps a year or two longer considering his advanced years, but he does know the history of this and I do not believe—

Mr. Speaker: Order. At the risk of making any Hon. Member feel that we are closing off this debate prematurely, I will nonetheless advise the House that I think I have heard all the points made. Of course, as we know, Hon. Members are skilful in debate and all points that could be made for one side or the other are brought to the attention of the Chair. I am sure that was all the Parliamentary Secretary was doing. On the other hand, I must say that I am persuaded that the Chair has not been put in a position, as a consequence of anything the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) said or did not say, of not being able to deal with the matter.

* * *

POINT OF ORDER

REQUEST FOR THE TABLING OF QUOTED DOCUMENTS

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I rise on another point of order. During the course of Question Period, the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre) did again quote from a document which he has not tabled in the House. In this case I am referring to a letter, from which he read at least one sentence, from the Minister of Corporate and Consumer Affairs of the Province of Ontario. I believe his name is Monte Kwinter. I believe it would be very important for the House and certainly within the rules and traditions of the House that the letter in its entirety be tabled at this time.

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I would certainly be pleased to do that. I will have to get a copy of it, but if we can assume that I am tabling it I will give it to the Clerk as soon as I can return after picking up a copy.

Mr. Murphy: Mr. Speaker, on a similar and related point, during debate on the Question of Privilege raised by the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) the Minister again brought in a document of which he had possession but which was not in the possession of other Members of the House. I believe this was a transcript of the CBC program The Journal which was broadcast last Tuesday. Again, without taking too much of the time of the House, I would point out that that document should be tabled in the House and I think it would be very important, particularly in light of the question of privilege raised by the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap. However, the Minister is not here to respond—

Mr. Speaker: I think I should advise Hon. Members that the Minister had to leave the Chamber momentarily. I see the Minister returning. Perhaps he can respond to the point made by the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy).

Mr. Andre: Mr. Speaker, I have been trying to get all of the facts before the House. I am being prevented from doing so by specious points of order and questions of privilege. I would be delighted to table anything and everything I can.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I have just heard words that I cannot believe. The Minister told me about half an hour ago that he could not tell me about the costs and prices of drugs because he wanted to discuss, reveal and explain the matter in committee. The Minister cannot have it both ways. He should tell us now and he should not tell us that he has told us everything.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member has a point. It is not a point of order.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

HUMAN RIGHTS

GOVERNMENT RESPONSE TO FIRST REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) and pursuant to Standing Order 99(2), I rise to table in both official languages the comprehensive Government response to the First Report of the Standing Committee on Human Rights concerning sanctions against South Africa and aid to front-line states.

I move, seconded by the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre):

That the House now proceed to Orders of the Day.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order in reference to the motion that has just been introduced by the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski). I had submitted a Notice of Motion asking for an emergency debate and I think the two motions are in contrary order. I think it would be proper for the House to give me the courtesy of at least having the opportunity of presenting the Notice of Motion.

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) that the Chair is bound to deal with the motion of the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) now. I can advise Hon. Members that I received notice of an application made by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry under Standing Order 29 for an emergency debate with respect to the discussion that has been in the public domain relating to Canadian and U.S. discussions and disputes over softwood lumber. I know that this is a matter of importance to all Hon. Members, but I cannot deal with it now and I would hope that the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry would realize that I am not in a discretionary position.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: I think the Chair is in the position of now proceeding with the motion and is bound to continue.

Mr. Mazankowski moves that the House now proceed to Orders of the Day. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Call in the Members.

The House divided on the Motion (Mr. Mazankowski) which was agreed to on the following division:

• (1300)

(Division No. 23)

YEAS

Members

Andre	Gurbin	McLean
Beatty	Halliday	Merrithew
Binns	Hamilton	Mitges
Blouin	Hicks	Nowlan
Boyer	Holtmann	Peterson
Cardiff	Jepson	Pietz
Champagne	Kelleher	Plourde
(Saint-Hyacinthe—Bagot)	Kempling	Scott (Hamilton—Wentworth)
Clifford	Kindy	Scowen
Côté (Lac-Saint-Jean)	Leblanc	Sparrow
Crouse	Lewis	Suluk
Daubney	Lopez	Thacker
Duplessis	MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands)	Towers
Fennell	MacKay	Tupper
Forrestall	Malone	Valcourt
Gérin	Marin	Wilson (Swift Current—Maple Creek)—55
Gormley	Mazankowski
Graham	McCain
Gray (Bonaventure—Îles-de-la-Madeleine)	McCuish
	McDermid
	McKenzie

NAYS

Members

Axworthy	Grondin	Nicholson (Trinity)
Benjamin	Heap	Parry
Boudria	Hopkins	Riis
Finestone	Isabelle	Young —17
Gauthier	Kaplan
Gray (Windsor West)	Manly
	Murphy

• (1330)

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

PATENT ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed, from Thursday, November 20, consideration of the motion of Mr. Andre that Bill C-22, an Act to amend the Patent Act and to provide for certain matters in relation thereto, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee; and the amendment of Mrs. Killens (P.1378).

Mr. Speaker: It being after one o'clock p.m., I do now leave the chair until two o'clock p.m.

At 1.40 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

Mr. Speaker: When we last considered Bill C-22, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow) had proposed to move an amendment to the amendment of the Hon. Member for Saint-Michel—Ahuntsic (Mrs. Killens). The Deputy Speaker took the proposed sub-amendment under advisement and I am now prepared to rule.

Beauchesne 5th Edition, Citation 743 states:

An established form of amendment, such as the "six months" formula used to obtain the rejection of a bill, is not capable of amendment.

For this reason I must reject the proposed sub-amendment. I advise Hon. Members that debate will resume on the motion for second reading and the amendment. The Hon. Member for Burlington.

Mr. Riis: Point of order.

Mr. Bill Kempling (Burlington): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to rise in the House today and speak to Bill C-22, an Act to amend the Patent Act. First, I want to offer my congratulations to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre) for introducing this piece of legislation which, in fact, I believe will benefit all Canadians. Bill C-22 represents a significant step toward the achievement of the Government's goals of sustained national economic growth and job creation, and the continued protection of the Canadian consumer.

The proposed amendments have five principal objectives: to transform Canada's pharmaceutical sector into a world-class industry led by an unprecedented increase in investment and jobs in pharmaceutical research and development; to ensure drug prices remain reasonable throughout the creation of an independent price review board; to guarantee that the pharmaceutical industry's commitments for research and development are met; to maintain opportunities for growth in the Canadian generic industry; and finally to harmonize Canada's intellectual property laws with those of other western industrialized nations.

The protection of the consumer is an important part of this Bill. It is ensured in four different ways: a continued presence of existing generic drugs; a transitional payment to provincial drug plans; the provision for further generic competition; and the drug prices review board. This board will work in close cooperation with the provinces because of their particular interest in drug prices.

Provincial Governments will have the right to make representations directly to the board if they suspect an abuse in drug pricing. In cases of excessive prices, the board will have the authority to remove periods of protection. Not only will the board be monitoring the prices of all patented drugs, it will also have the power to review the performance of the innovative pharmaceutical industry through annual reports on research and development activities. This, together with a Cabinet review after four years and a full parliamentary review in the tenth year, will ensure that the commitments of the innovator sector to increase research and development in Canada are fulfilled.

Changes to the Patent Act to encourage investment in research and development in the pharmaceutical industry in Canada have long been sought by numerous scientific, medical, pharmacological, and research groups. The Government has received a firm commitment from the innovative drug sector to double the R and D to sales ratio from the prepolicy level. This represents a move from 4.9 per cent to 8 per cent in 1990, then to 10 per cent in 1995. That level is enjoyed by most other industrial countries. This amounts to a total of $1.4 billion in incremental research and development outlays above and beyond the normal expected growth.

The increase in research and development activities generated by Bill C-22 will result in the creation of about 3,000 scientific and research-related jobs in the innovative sector. This means that Canadian university graduates will have an excellent opportunity for employment here in Canada and that we will continue to benefit from their technological and scientific expertise. The new policy provides for research and development investment by the innovative sector by ensuring compensation for the risks associated with the research and development of new health-care products.

Bill C-22 will also provide for continued opportunities for the generic companies to grow and proper. First, it is important to remember that all generic drugs that have a compulsory licence and have received a notice of compliance from the Department of Health and Welfare are unaffected by this policy, and will continue to be available. Furthermore, there are new opportunities for fine chemical manufacturing by generic companies. All existing brand name drugs now on the market are available immediately to a generic firm if it manufactures the fine chemical ingredients in Canada instead of simply importing the chemicals, thereby creating additional jobs.

To allow for the immediate manufacture of a product in Canada by generic firms, all existing licences to import that have been granted to generic companies will automatically be extended to a licence to manufacture. One should also remember that the generic firms are not entirely dependent on products covered by compulsory licences to import.

The sale of drugs via compulsory licence, on average, amounts to less than 50 per cent of the revenues of generic firms. Therefore, the existence of a flourishing generic industry does not, and should not, depend upon compulsory licencing. Nevertheless, seven years after the first notice of compliance, or NOC, is granted for a new drug, a generic company will be able to manufacture the chemicals in Canada and sell the drugs in direct competition with the innovative company.

• (1410)

Opportunities for generic firms also exist through the sanctions available to the drug prices review board. If excessive pricing has been determined, the board could remove the period of patent protection to allow for generic competition.

In the case of the innovative sector, the law will include a Cabinet review of research and development commitments of the industry after four years. If the industry has not met its commitments, the Government will either reduce or remove the period of protection.

Consumer protection is ensured through generic competition of drugs now on the market, and in the future through a transitional payment to provincial drug plans by the drug prices review board. Canada's patent law will also be harmonized with the rest of the world resulting in increased investment, not only in the pharmaceutical industry but in other industries as well.

By promoting new investment, Canada will enter the same league as Japan, Italy and the United States in terms of R and D expenditures as a proportion of sales. The Canadian pharmaceutical sector will become a world class innovative industry led by a significant increase in investment and jobs and in research and development. In short, Bill C-22 will bring positive economic benefits to Canada while protecting Canadian consumers.

I might just say as well that I have been here for a few years and this subject has been on the table many times. I can recall many years ago sitting in the House when a Bill in draft form was brought forward and it was suggested that patents be eliminated. That came about as a result of an item which appeared in the report of the Economic Council of Canada. Someone had come to the conclusion that patents were the cause of inflation so the Liberal Government of the day, now the official Opposition, decided it was going to bring forward draft legislation and hope to have it accepted.

The object of the legislation was to eliminate patents altogether over a period of 10 years, which would then place us in the same position as the Soviet Union, the only other country in the world which does not recognize patents. In fact, our inventors and scientists were going to be issued a certificate of achievement rather than a patent. I recall travelling across the country speaking against that proposal.

Through the years we have seen other initiatives brought forth which were not accepted. We have watched the development of new drugs in other countries. I feel the Bill before us today is a move in the right direction. I want to see it moved forward in debate and into committee as quickly as possible. In view of that, I now move that the previous question be now put.

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member for Burlington (Mr. Kempling) that the motion he has placed before the House is out of order. I cite Beauchesne's Fifth Edition, page 158, Citation 459, and May, page 379. As a consequence, debate will continue.

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, first let me say that I am shocked and amazed that a distinguished Member of the House, the Hon. Member for Burlington (Mr. Kempling), who has long proclaimed his interest in the freedom of speech and debate in the House, would resort to a subterfuge of parliamentary tactics to try to suppress and expunge the free expression of opinion on a matter which affects so many Canadians. It is a great disappointment, not only to Hon. Members on this side of the House but, I am sure, to his constituents, that he would make such an effort to try to close off and snuff out the opportunity of the House of Commons of Canada to at least have a preliminary examination in second reading of this Bill.

However, Mr. Speaker, once again the wisdom of the Speaker has prevailed and we can now proceed to look more seriously at the pretensions and protestations we have heard from the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre) who, in his activities in the House, in trying to justify the rationale for this particular piece of legislation, has looked so much like a person suffering from an extreme case of summer heat rash, uncomfortable, irritable and totally out of sorts with himself and with what he is trying to do.

The fact is that in trying to find the slightest shred of reasonable and rational justification, he has resorted to what is commonly known in the language of communications as the "big lie", the fabrication or setting up a whole series of straw arguments which do not hold any weight or substance. If I might, I would like to spend a moment or two examining some of the positions put forward by the Minister and refute and challenge them so that we can once again get back to the real issue, which is why do we have this Bill in front of us?

The first argument of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs is that really this is not going to have any impact upon price. He said it may increase the cost but will not affect the price. That is one of those interesting forms of what one can only call "Tory logic" that somehow the increase in cost has no impact upon the price.

• (1420)

The fact of the matter is that under the present system when a pharmaceutical manufacturer introduces a new drug it comes in at an artificially high price. It is only when the generic drug is introduced that the competitive dynamic forces the price down. So when the Minister says that this measure will not affect the price in any way he is talking about the original set price when a new drug is introduced. He is not talking about the type of price that would be in consequence of a competitive dynamic at work. He has neglected to explain what is the fundamental, rudimentary element of a market economy. That is surprising coming from a Conservative Minister since such Ministers love to wave the flag of the market economy.

In this case they are denying in no uncertain terms the workings of a market economy. They are saying that we are breaking the monopoly position established through the patent right and that through compulsory licensing we will change that. They are saying that we will eliminate the force of competition upon a particular drug, therefore eliminating the downward push and pressure on prices. That was clearly the import of the Eastman recommendation.

Dr. Eastman said that the compulsory licensing procedure had to be maintained at a reasonable rate for four years in order to maintain the competitive pressure on prices. When the Minister resorts to the form of dissembling information which states that, well, back in 1983 the Liberals said they would do the same as we are doing now, it is an unadulterated case of hog-wash. What was set up was the Eastman Commission which made recommendations to keep compulsory licensing and to increase royalties, but only somewhat for a four-year period. If that had been the prescription put forward by the Government then maybe we would be having a different type of debate today. The fact is that the Government has exceeded the impacts of the Eastman recommendation. In fact, by going to the 10-year patent protection the type of competitive force that we had has been eliminated.

What is interesting to consider is that if we look at the way in which the system will now work we will see that as pharmaceutical manufacturers introduce drugs they do so giving those drugs an eight or ten-year shelf life, at which time the generic drug manufacturers are prepared to come in to start competing with the drug. At that time the original manufacturer will introduce a modified version of the drug, perhaps with a slight improvement or a change in packaging, or perhaps it will even throw in another small ingredient thus starting a new cycle of drugs. Through its massive marketing machinery it will be able to reintroduce this drug into doctors' offices and hospitals. This will prevent the generic drug producers from providing competitive pressure. In fact, what we will be faced with is a perpetual monopolistic situation.

It would have been more honest of the Minister if he had explained the working of such a system. However, he has totally ignored it. He has totally ignored the fact that we are now debating not some small modification but a major restructuring of the drug industry in Canada, along with the basic elimination of generic drug manufacturers.

That leads me to my second point. The Minister loves to stand up and say that this move will create 3,000 new jobs, new investment and new R and D. Where is the proof and substance for that? First, in the commentary of the 1983 Economic Council of Canada report it was clearly indicated that prior to the imposition of compulsory licensing in 1969 there was no higher rate of R and D investment. It was indicated that there was no higher rate of research and development in terms of cures for cancer and all the other things mentioned by the Minister. In fact, the level of R and D investment by the major pharmaceutical manufacturers was the same after 1969 as it was before 1969 when full patent protection was in place. Based upon this history there is no confidence that there will be any increase in investment.

What we will find is that there may even be less commitment since one of the changes that has taken place between June and October—a strange interlude of time in which the American drug manufacturers apparently had far more knowledge than Canadians did as to what was going on—is that the Government eliminated one of the few safeguards that was in the June legislation, a guarantee for manufacturers on investment in Canada. The one thing that the Government had said in June that would require foreign manufacturers to guarantee manufacturing in Canada has now been eliminated.

The question that will be raised in everyone's mind is, why did the Government cave in once again to the PMAC lobbyists south of the border? We know why. Once again, we know that the Government is selling out in order to try to appease its partners in the negotiation on free trade. Once again another price is being paid. Once again there is another surrender, another sacrifice. So far these negotations have cost Canadians far more than we could ever calculate. We have already paid incredible prices for the negotation, and we are paying it once again. Once again we are finding that the Canadian Government has found itself in a position in which another item on the American shopping list has been ticked off. Now that the issue of pharmaceuticals is out of the way it moves on to natural resources and the Auto-Pact. It is a weekly adventure to see what the next item on the American wish list will be. What we do know is that the wish list of last week will be the Government's surrender of this week. In fact, that is the history with respect to what has taken place.

I point out that another part of the fabrication we have heard in the House is with respect to the Minister's projection of new R and D and investment that will occur. In any account has the Minister made reference to the fact that the generic manufacturers themselves were beginning to provide more research and development and more investment? In fact, we are at the stage of reaching a critical point. There was a grant advanced under the IRAP by a Tory Government to a drug manufacturer in Ontario in developing new facilities for the development of chemical ingredients.

The Minister talks about the jobs that will be gained. He does not talk about the jobs that will be lost. The Minister talks about the potential for R and D, not about that R and D which will be lost. If one wants to do a fair and proper calculation with respect to what is the net benefit, if there is any in this Bill, then it is only proper that all the facts are placed on the table.

What is interesting is that when it comes down to the question of how does Canada begin to develop its own industrial base we once again find ourselves in a situation in which 90 per cent of all drugs manufactured in Canada are manufactured through foreign subsidiaries. The only area in which we were beginning to develop a Canadian-based industry was in the area of generic drugs. The industry was beginning to develop a capacity for R and D and for manufacturing.

What will be the end result of the legislation the Government is bringing forward? It will wipe out the Canadian-based drug industry. Once again it will ensure that we are totally dependent upon the decisions made in boardrooms beyond our borders. That is one of the end results and one of the prices that we will end up paying.

I believe the Minister said today in Question Period that this is a cost-free incentive in terms of R and D. He is saying that this is a wonderful industrial strategy, that we can get all sorts of R and D moneys from these foreign corporations because we are changing the patent legislation. As I pointed out in my earlier remarks, the big foreign multinationals were in no hurry to invest in Canada prior to 1969. They have certainly not invested at any higher rate since 1969. I know they are making announcements now because they have been saving them up. They have been playing skilled lobbyist games.

• (1430)

Again, I would like to refer back to the Economic Council studies. In the long run, major incentive for developing R and D in competition with other countries has little to do with patent legislation. It has far more to do with direct incentives and support for R and D.

Of course, we know what the Conservative Government has done with research and development. It has slashed every single research and development budget of every single Crown corporation and every single department. What is more, we are discovering that certain countries like Ireland and Puerto Rico give enormous tax-free benefits and front-loaded incentive grants for R and D. Will we find ourselves having to compete with those countries to get the R and D? The big guys will come along and say: "They have taken off the patent legislation but now we have received an interesting offer from the Irish to set up R and D facilities there". How are we going to match those grants? Will we find ourselves once again playing this game of industrial blackmail?

All of this massive support the Minister says will be pouring into Canada will be subject to some very interesting new conditions. Once again there will be a different kind of competition for investment than there had been before. Not only are we providing a major deterrent to the development of Canadian-based industries, we will find ourselves without any particular advantage in the competition for large multinationals. Therefore, the expectation of new jobs and investment will have to be seriously questioned and challenged.

Ultimately, we have to return to the evidence that is before us. If this evidence were to be presented in a courtroom, one would say that by far the circumstances weigh against the arguments made by the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. What the Minister has forgotten is the basic fact that from 1969 on drug prices in Canada were the lowest of any other country in the industrialized world. That is a fact, and that meant that for people who were subject to illnesses and increasing costs of medical care Canada was taking the lead in one clear area. In fact, our system was being studied for implementation by many other countries.

The cost estimates of this are anywhere from Eastman's figure of $200 million to the figures provided yesterday by the generic drug manufacturers of close to over $600 million. In very simple terms, that translates to the kind of correspondence I have received from my constituents. For example, I heard from an older woman who pays $40 or $50 per month for prescriptions. That cost could potentially be $60 or $70 per month. When one relies upon a fixed pension plan for one's sole source of income, an extra $10 or $20 per month makes a very big difference in the lifestyle one can afford and creates a much higher level of anxiety.

The most desperate form of sophistry I have heard from the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs is his statement that somehow, by voicing the concerns of Canadians in the House of Commons, we are causing fear among Canadians. It is not our legislation. We did not bring this Bill into the House. If there is any cause for fear and anxiety among the hundreds of thousands of Canadians who know what their medical bills and prescription costs will be, the responsibility for it rests squarely upon a Government that made a decision that had nothing to do with the question of health and medical care and everything to do with its benighted quest for the great blueprint of a free trade deal with the United States.

Everything is put at the altar of a quick fix and a deal before the end of 1987. Everything else has been washed out by the Prime Minister's quixotic quest to fulfil his historic mandate. The people who will pay the price for that are the people who will have to buy prescription drugs, and those are the people least able to bear that burden. That is the real reason for debating this Bill and the reason the Government brought it in.

The Government was under the most exorbitant and incredible pressure from the Reagan administration and major multinational drug lobbies exercising a combination of economic and political power to change the law, and it caved in. It gave up. This comes as no surprise because the record of the Government since 1984 has been one of caving in and giving up. Surely on an issue that goes so much to the heart of the well-being and quality of life of so many Canadians, the Government might have been able to say no and to stand up to that kind of pressure in this one instance, but it did not. As a result, the vast Government majority will attempt to steamroll in this legislation. The end result will be questionable jobs, virtually no research and development and a much higher level of pain and suffering for ordinary Canadians.

Mr. Manly: Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to see that the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) is on side in this issue and is fighting against these changes to the Patent Act. However, I would like to ask him where the Liberal Party was in 1983 when the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet), who was at that time the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, appointed Martin O'Connell, a former cabinet Minister and former consultant to a multinational drug company, to head up a study on this issue. Mr. O'Connell brought in a report recommending legislation substantially similar to that which the Conservative Government brought in today. Why was the Liberal Government following the same track back in 1983?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I would be more than pleased—

Mr. Benjamin: Try to get out of that one.

Mr. Axworthy: I will. First I will remind the Hon. Member of the real history behind this matter. Back in 1969 I had the privilege of being an executive assistant to the then Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, the man who is now the Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Turner). It was that Minister with whom I worked who initiated the development of the compulsory licensing legislation for Canada. It was the present Leader of the Official Opposition who authored and initiated that legislation, and I consider that to be one of the finer moments I have enjoyed in public life.

In 1983, the then Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs said that we wanted to examine the application of the compulsory licensing system, and I think that was legitimate since it had been in operation for over 15 years. The report that was prepared on the matter outlined three options. It recommended legislation, some revisions to the compulsory licensing provisions or a change in the royalty system. What was also clear to me as a member of the Government was that none of those recommendations was accepted by the Cabinet. We did not bring in legislation like this Government did. In fact, the matter was re-examined by the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and the end result was that the then Minister, Mrs. Erola, provided for the inquiry under Dr. Eastman. He came forward with his modified version of the compulsory licencing. That was the step the Liberal Government took at that time. In 1983 we rejected full square anything that had the type of demonic and destructive impact of this legislation.

[Translation]

Mr. Gray (Bonaventure—Îles-de-la-Madeleine): Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) for saying those were . . .

• (1440)

[English]

—the finer moments in Government. Without due recourse, I hope that he has enjoyed his finer moments, because I would suggest that they are coming to an end.

As a new Member of Parliament and working as a Canadian, the thing that amazes me about the new pharmaceutical Bill is why the Liberal Party would be against the advancement of new jobs, new technology, and keeping our technology here in Canada. Can you refute that?

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I thought that I did. But I am glad to have the opportunity to repeat my argument, because obviously repetition would be of some assistance to the Member.

First, there is no evidence whatsoever that there will be increased investment as a result of this legislation. When there was full patent protection, the investment of multinational drug companies was no better and no higher than it was when we had compulsory licencing. There was full protection at that time. That was at a time when there was lots of money, lots of opportunity, lots of freedom, and they did not do it. They were investing in R and D somewhere else.

Second, at the present time under compulsory licencing the pharmaceutical industry in Canada has one of the highest rates of return of any industry in Canada. It is not a matter of it being short of cash that is preventing it from doing it. They have all the cash in the world. In The Globe and Mail a few days ago it was stated that the Merrick Company had profits of $300 million. If they wanted to do it, they could be doing it right now. They are playing a game of industrial blackmail upon this country. They want to maintain control and monopoly.

I would also point out to the Hon. Member, and he should take this under advisement, that what was beginning to emerge under the compulsory licencing regime was the development of a Canadian-based drug industry, based upon the generic drug manufacturers. After a period of years they were reaching a point of development where they were beginning to establish their own operations on chemical ingredients. There was an IRAP grant given last year to initiate that. The end result of this legislation will be to wipe out those generic drug manufacturers. We are saying that once again we are prepared to let all the drug manufacturing, and the decisions be made in the boardrooms of foreign owned companies, rather than encouraging and giving incentive to Canadian-based and owned industries.

I suggest to the Hon. Member that what he will probably find in the course of time is that the consequence of his supporting this bad piece of legislation will be working to the detriment of the development of an effective Canadian drug industry.

Mr. Gray (Bonaventure—Îles-de-la-Madeleine): Mr. Speaker, just a short supplementary on the question of pharmaceuticals.

Whereas the Liberal Party in the past was not willing to take a positive position on pharmaceuticals with the Patent Act, and in view of the fact that we will have an increase of 3,000 jobs—unfortunately the Opposition does not want to recognize that there will be in excess of 3,000 jobs created in our country—why should they go against us with their official Liberal policy, working against us to the detriment of Canada? At some point in time they should take a firm stand, and be proud of what we are doing for Canada.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, the answer to that question is simple. We are protesting the fact that this legislation will substantially increase the cost of prescription drugs for hundreds of thousands of Canadians who cannot afford it. That is the reason we feel this legislation is so bad. The Government is not defending the interest of Canadians. What it is doing is simply submitting, on its knees, to a lobbyist pressure of a major industrial group, without any consideration whatsoever to the basic interest of Canadians who need to have proper prescription drugs. That is what the legislation is all about. All this talk of new jobs and R and D is simply peripheral to that central, fundamental fact.

In the last 20 minutes I have challenged the Government to prove where the jobs will come from. I challenge the Government to show that it will gain more jobs than the jobs it will lose by wiping out the Canadian drug industry. I challenge the Government to show how it can assure the guarantee of manufacturing when between the legislation in June and October this Government took off whatever safeguards were there. It made the legislation even worse than it was in June by eliminating the type of guarantee and safeguards that should have been there to require those foreign multinationals to at least put some investment into this country and make sure the manufacturing is here. We will end up with decisions being made in Switzerland, New York, and everywhere else but a place called Canada. When the battle has been won, we will see how quickly those promises are forgotten.

Mr. Daubney: Mr. Speaker, as a Member concerned about research and technology, and research and development in this country, I find it very disconcerting to hear from the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy), whose only contribution to R and D in the past was as a member of a Cabinet which introduced one of the greatest political boondoggles and scams in Canadian political history, namely, the SRTC. That cost this country billions of dollars in revenue and in lost R and D opportunities. The Hon. Member's personal commitment to R and D was to erect the Lloyd Axworthy memorial building in downtown Winnipeg which is now an empty shell. There again, millions of dollars of taxpayers' money down the chute for his own political glorification prior to the last election.

Mr. Benjamin: That's what you get for trusting private enterprise.

Mr. Axworthy: I would like to pose this question to the Hon. Member who says that he is interested in R and D. The Hon. Member states that there is an empty building in downtown Winnipeg. I wish to tell him what the building was going to do. It was going to be a world class national research centre on robotics and artificial intelligence machines. There is no such institute in this country at the present time. There are four or five in the United States, several in Japan, and several in Europe. There are none in Canada. We decided to put it in Winnipeg, and I know it runs against all Tory principles to have anything of technology going on in Manitoba. We have seen that kind of decision in the past two weeks. We know what their attitude is about having western Canadians undertake research and technology. The fact is that a decision by the Hon. Member's Government to eliminate the funding for that building has left it empty. That is the reason it is empty. If it had been left to a Liberal Government, right now there would be 170 engineers and scientists working with private industry and attracting investment from across the world into Canada. For the first time we would have had a major centre undertaking basic research into that technology. That shows my commitment.

I find it exceedingly strange that a Member who comes from Ottawa has the nerve to stand up and talk about what his Governnment has done when we see the rape that is going on in the NRC, and the total desecration of research budgets in every department and Crown corporation. Fortunately, when it comes to 1988 and this Member puts his commitment to research on the line, we know what the people of Ottawa will say to him.

Mr. Benjamin: Plague on both your houses.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Ottawa West is rising. Is this question and comment, or debate?

Mr. Daubney: Question and comment, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that the time for question and comment has expired. On debate, the Hon. Member for Regina West.

Mr. Dick: You don't know anything about this.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member suggests that I don't know anything about this. He might be right.

Mr. Lewis: That never stopped you before.

Mr. Benjamin: What I have forgotten will far surpass what he knows, or what he thinks he does.

Both yesterday and today I listened carefully to speeches by Hon. Members on both sides of the argument. I wish to say, Sir, that I am reminded of something in the opening statement of the Winnipeg declaration of 1956 at a CCF national convention during which we spent many hours examining the Canadian economy and society. We said in that declaration that a society motivated only by a desire for profit was basically immoral. I happen to be one of those who believes personally that those in an area such as drugs who would profit from the misfortunes of others are also basically immoral. Those who would profit from picking the pockets of the sick, the poor and the old have to be accused of having minimal social consciences.

• (1450)

I am not one of those socialists who believes that the Government should own, operate and run everything. I never have believed that. I have always believed in a mixed economy of the private sector, the public sector, the co-operative sector and the voluntary sector. There are some few areas though in which I submit private enterprise has no business. For example, the area of research and development, testing, distribution and sale of drugs for sick people.

We hear about recovery costs for research and development. I agree that that recovery could go on for many years. It could cost millions, tens of millions or hundreds of millions before some new development is arrived at, tested and available to the people who desperately need it.

How do you find out what the costs are of research and development no matter how many years it takes? We would need a system to monitor and make those doing the research and development accountable for every single item and every single hour of expense. But what we will be doing is giving them a blank cheque to recover what they claim to be their costs plus a mark-up, plus a profit for 10 years. We have no way of knowing whether they spent $10 million or $100 million. If they claim $200 million plus their profit, plus their return on investment et cetera, they could recover $200 million, $300 million, $400 million, a billion dollars in 10 years by the kind of price mechanism they will have on a patent protected product.

I happen to be one of those who believes that research and development, testing, distribution and the sale of drugs should remain in the public domain. That is where it should be. That is where it can be done the best and the most economically for the benefit of those who desperately need drugs. I think that the whole area of research and development should be in the hands of medical schools, university research facilities and the Department of National Health and Welfare because, as I said earlier, private companies, and especially those from outside our borders, have no business in the business of drugs for our old and our sick.

There is no problem about investment in Canada because this kind of investment out of both the public and private purse is the most civilized and humane kind of investment we can make. It is not because we want to make fast bucks, but rather how well and how civilized our society functions. The test of any society is how well it treats its old, its poor, its sick and its young. In this area, Sir, I profoundly believe that Canadians would support public and private investment in research, development, testing, distribution and sale of drugs on, at worst, actual cost recovery. There should be no profit made from those who are sick.

The Minister has repeatedly said in the House that this Bill will only apply to new developments in drugs. He implies that if we did not have this Bill we could prevent the development of a drug for some form of cancer or some other disease that mankind is trying so hard to find a cure, or we could prevent the development of a drug to ease a terrible disease.

Can you imagine what would have happened had this legislation been in place in France when Dr. Pierre Curie and Madam Curie were doing their research? What would have happened had there been a 10-year locked-in patent, a 10-year monopoly, when Drs. Banting and Best discovered insulin which relieved millions of people all over the globe? Nobody was making large profits and fast bucks out of that one. What if there had been this kind of legislation when Dr. Jonas Salk came up with his vaccine for polio, which was a plague on mankind around the globe? We did not have that kind of legislation in place in Canada. Thank God for that. There was nobody making big profits and fast bucks off the Salk polio vaccine.

Many efforst are being made to provide drugs for any kind of cancer, multiple sclerosis, Alzheimer's disease and a host of things to which we are still trying to find solutions or to alleviate many other terrible afflictions, but let me tell the Minister that nobody needs or should have a 10 year guarantee recovery cost when we have no way of knowing how much the costs actually are.

I suppose if I force myself I could live with the Eastman report recommending a four year patent protection, and generic drug manufacturers paying a 14 per cent royalty, although I would like to see a limit on that. How long do you pay and pay and pay? All costs get passed on to the consumers of drugs. Drug developments should be and remain in the public domain.

We had a world leader in research and development, the testing and distribution of drugs in Connaught Laboratories which was part of the Canada Investment Development Corporation. It was a winner, not necessarily a winner in dollars in profits, but it was a winner for people. It was the finest example of public endeavour for the public good. Only the Tories would attempt to sell a winner, and I guess they have. To whom? I do not know. It was something that the people of Canada had put their wealth into, it was a world leader, and the Tories said, get rid of it. However, under the aegis of National Health and Welfare, the Connaught Laboratories, our universities and medical schools, we can still have the best research and development, testing, distribution and sale at the lowest possible price because this is in the public domain.

• (1500)

I have had occasion over the last several years to require medical treatment, so I have some personal experience. People in the medical profession, including some hon. colleagues of mine in this House, have been good friends and have been good advisers to me on more than one occasion. I wish the drug industry had as good a conscience, as good an attitude, as they have had about how drugs are dispensed, used, and priced.

The other thing I find totally unacceptable is that people from outside our borders make demands upon us concerning how we govern ourselves. In this instance, the demands concern our methods of research and development, testing, distribution and sale of drugs. This is another of many examples of blatant interference with our sovereignty and independence. No self-respecting country of any kind would hold still for that. I, as one Member of Parliament and a proud Canadian, am not going to hold still for that. I am sick and tired of our crawling on our hands and knees to Washington and asking how high when they holler at us to jump.

Mr. Gormley: Do you really believe that, Les?

Mr. Benjamin: I certainly do. This is not the first time we have had blatant interference with our independence and sovereignty from the U.S. It certainly will not be the last so long as we have a Tory Government more concerned about getting a pat on the head and approval from the U.S.

This legislation is obscene. It is brought forward in the name of so-called free and open market competition. I say that drugs for the sick, the old, the poor should not be subject to competition in the free and open market. It is because of that kind of obscenity that I move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy):

That this House do now adjourn.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Benjamin) which was negatived on the following division:

(Division No. 24)

YEAS

Members

Axworthy	Isabelle	Parry
Benjamin	Killens	Riis
Boudria	MacLellan	Young —18
Cassidy	Manly
Copps	Murphy
Finestone	Nicholson (Trinity)
Grondin	Nunziata
Heap

NAYS

Members

Andre	Graham	Mitges
Binns	Gray (Bonaventure—Îles-de-la-Madeleine)	Nowlan
Blouin		Peterson
Boyer	Halliday	Pietz
Cardiff	Hamilton	Plourde
Champagne (Saint-Hyacinthe—Bagot)	Hicks	Scowen
	Holtmann	Suluk
Clifford	Jepson	Thacker
Côté (Lac-Saint-Jean)	Leblanc	Towers
	Lewis	Tupper
Crouse	MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands)	Valcourt
Daubney		Wilson (Swift Current—Maple Creek)
Dick	Malone
Dorin	Marin	Witer—46
Duplessis	Mazankowski
Fennell	McCrossan
Forrestall	McCuish
Gérin	McKenzie
Gormley

• (1540)

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion lost. The Hon. Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) on a point of order.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

I regret to advise the House that I have not been able to come to an agreement with my opposition colleagues pursuant to the provisions of Standing Orders 115 and 116. It is quite obvious that the Opposition does not want to debate this Bill. There have been several dilatory motions—

Mr. Benjamin: One by you!

Mr. Mazankowski: —frustration in terms of trying to introduce the Bill, points of order and questions of privilege, all of which have been rather phoney and extraordinary—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Cassidy: Where is the sweetness and light?

Mr. Mazankowski: It is quite obvious—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. If it is indeed obvious, then perhaps a long speech is not required.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, thank you very much. It is quite obvious that the substance of the Bill on which we had hoped to have an enlightened debate does not interest members of the Opposition. Rather, they are interested in frustrating the process. Therefore, I wish to inform the House that next Monday I will be bringing forward a motion asking that two additional days of debate be granted for the consideration of the Bill at this stage.

Mr. Riis: Democracy is dead.

Mr. Speaker: Debate.

Mr. Nunziata: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. Due to a situation beyond my control, I was unable to attend the taking of the vote which took place at approximately 1.30 p.m. I wish to indicate to the House that had I been here I would have voted with my Party.

Mr. Speaker: Resuming debate.

Ms. Copps: I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. Given that the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) has just boot-legged a warning of closure in his alleged point of order, I would like to boot-leg a warning on the part of this side of the House that we will fight this closure as long as we can. We will continue to fight it in the House of Commons and outside.

Miss MacDonald: Good for you.

Mr. Benjamin: You have two hours, Sheila.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Nepean—Carleton (Mr. Tupper) on debate.

Mr. Bill Tupper (Nepean—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise this afternoon on behalf of my constituents in Nepean—Carleton and share with them and Members of the House some of my thoughts with respect to Bill C-22 and its amendments. One of the intriguing things to a person who is in relative terms a newcomer to the House of Commons is how difficult it has been to bring this piece of legislation on to the floor of the House of Commons for debate. I say this because it is a piece of legislation that has received a great deal of attention, not only in the House but across the nation. It is an important Bill. It deals with an issue that clearly needs to be debated by all Members of the House. It needs to be thought through carefully by all Canadians. All Canadians require an opportunity to be as fully informed as they can about the pros and cons of this Bill, those things that might relate to potential increases in drug prices and so on, and to have those things really established in this forum. I think we should move on with the debate and send the Bill to committee as quickly as we can.

The changes that Bill C-22 bring forward are based on respect for intellectual property, incentives to Canadian industry and continued consumer protection. I think all Members of the House would recognize, knowing something about my background in science and my interest in research, that I have a dramatic interest in any legislation that would affect research or potential research and development in Canada.

As we look at this legislation, the cornerstone of the policy that we are addressing is a return to patent protection for those who discover and develop new drugs. Our Government believes in the principle that intellectual property rights must be respected and protected. Canada is the only industrialized country in which patent rights for new drugs can be assessed at any time by a compulsory licensing procedure. In fact, if all countries had such regressive laws no new drugs would be discovered anywhere in the world.

It is time that we brought our patent law into line with the rest of the world. This legislation will transform Canada's pharmaceutical sector into a world-class innovative industry led by a significant increase in investment and jobs in research and development. Upgrading Canada's Patent Act will also give us access to the Patent Co-operation Treaty, facilitate the dissemination of new technology, especially to small and medium-sized businesses, and decrease costs and increase productivity by eliminating much of the duplication that currently takes place. The goal, then, in amending the Patent Act, is to create an inviting climate for research and development in Canada's pharmaceutical industry. This is vital to our Government's goal of economic renewal and industrial growth.

There is much less pharmaceutical research and development being done in Canada than the Government and the Canadian research and development community would like, particularly the Canadian university community. This is because Canada has been regarded as a country with a hostile climate toward the protection of information such as that to which we are addressing ourselves this afternoon. Innovative drug companies doing basic research do not want to invest here because Canada has refused to protect their discoveries. Drug research in Canada is now almost totally oriented toward the clinical research and trials necessary to obtain permission from the Department of National Health and Welfare to market a drug in this country. The basic research that should provide employment for our university science graduates is being done in other countries, at Canada's loss.

Bill C-22 attempts to correct this inequity for Canadian pharmaceutical research. It will lay the groundwork for employment in Canada for Canadian universities and for Canadian science, in particular for graduates and post-graduate students in chemistry, biochemistry, biotechnology and in our medical schools. It is important to note that very little commercialization of the products and ideas of Canadian university and other pharmaceutical research organizations now happens in Canada. This is partly because there is no real manufacturing capability in Canada that could commercialize these products and ideas. By providing an incentive for firms to manufacture fine chemicals, the basic ingredient in drugs, rather than to simply process imported materials into dosage form, the Government is laying a second part of the foundation required for the Canadian pharmaceutical industry to become a significant player on the world scene.

• (1550)

Bill C-22 will generate more products and more ideas from the Canadian pharmaceutical research and development establishments. In order to get the maximum benefit from these products and ideas, however, it is necessary to have a productive and adequate manufacturing base available. Otherwise, the commercialization of Canadian research products and ideas will be done elsewhere and Canada will not benefit from the employment and further investment opportunities this process could generate.

I believe the steps being taken in this Bill and the new investment in research and development that will result are major steps forward in the support of a truly significant pharmaceutical industry. The investments resulting from Bill C-22 will benefit all of Canada. Research centres capable of performing pharmaceutical research will benefit from this increase in investment because a greater proportion of the extramural research expenditures of the pharmaceutical companies will be made outside Quebec and Ontario.

Last weekend, I spent a considerable amount of time in Alberta. I met with representatives of the pharmaceutical community there and found that they were anxious to establish a pharmaceutical research capability in that province. They encouraged us to proceed with this legislation so that they could participate by having research facilities established in Alberta, particularly in association with medical schools.

The changes this Bill will bring about have long been called for by the Canadian scientific and research community and particularly by the university community. Bill C-22 will result in a significant amount of new research and development expenditures going to Canadian universities, hospitals and private research institutions.

The June 1983 discussion paper released by the then Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet), called for a rebalancing of the 1969 policy. This was because there was a need, the paper said, to generate more investment in research and development in Canada. In September of that year, the present Liberal critic for science and technology in the House, the then Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, said that the Government's objective is to maintain low prices for consumers and to create a business climate that will support development of the industry with an emphasis on the growth of return, the development of exports and an active ingredient manufacturing in Canada. The Eastman Commission, in its report, confirmed the need to rebalance existing patent policy by providing a guaranteed period of protection to innovative companies.

Many scientific, medical, pharmacological and other research groups across Canada have also called for amendments to the Patent Act to promote more pharmaceutical research in Canada. These groups have included the Canadian Federation of Biological Societies, the Canadian Society for Clinical Pharmacology, the Canadian Society of Hospital Pharmacists, the Research Institute of Montreal, l'Industrie du Médicament, the Deans of Pharmacy of Canada, the Medical Federation of Quebec and many others. We have heard from these groups as recently as this past week.

Bill C-22 answers these calls for the promotion of pharmaceutical research and development in Canada. The Government anticipates that the new investment will total some $1.4 billion and that these investments will create some 3,000 high quality research and technology jobs in the pharmaceutical industry across Canada. Other estimates of the number of jobs that will be created are even higher. According to an October 1986 article in Le Devoir économique, the former Dean of the University of Montreal said that the number will increase from the present 17,000 to 25,000. These are the jobs for which the pharmaceutical and medical research groups have been calling.

I think it is absolutely essential that as the House moves forward with this debate, we as parliamentarians do whatever we can to promote research and development in Canada. In thinking about this Bill, it is essential that we ask ourselves what our track record in drug research has been over the last 10, 20 or even 50 years. We would be disappointed to learn that our creativity in the bringing forward of new drugs to protect the health of Canadians and other men and women around the world has not been as productive as we would have like it to have been.

Thinking about this further, and accepting that philosophy, we are in large part on an ongoing and continuous basis putting ourselves in the position of having to rely on research being done in other countries for many of our health care needs. If we are to do that, we will then have to pay what might be called the international price for new drugs. If that will be the case, we will have no protection whatsoever because we will not be able to establish in our own domain the method of controlling prices of drugs that are so important to the poor, the elderly, the needy and indeed all Canadians.

New drugs are expensive. Recently, I have read a little bit about the new drug cyclosporin, a drug that has revolutionized the entire approach to the transplanting of organs. This drug has been able to overcome the rejection phenomena we have been until now unable to accommodate. This has been a marvellous new development in scientific research and in human health. However, for those who have to use it, the drug is expensive. I understand that its use costs between $2,000 and $4,000 a year. However, that is the price of progress. I am sure that those who live with new organs find that a small price to pay.

There is another dimension to this. There is an entire generation of young scientists who are interested in biochemistry, biotechnology and medical research who are denied access to research laboratories because of our lack of encouragement and the lack of the appropriate economic and protective climate needed to allow pharmaceutical research in Canada. If these young men and women graduates of our universities want to pursue careers in this area, they usually have to go elsewhere.

It is expected that as much as 30 per cent or perhaps $400 million of the new research and development expenditures will go directly to Canadian universities, hospitals and other private research groups. Medical schools and research institutes will all benefit from the increase in basic and clinical research and development that will occur as a result of this Bill.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): It being five o'clock the House will now proceed to the consideration of Private Members' Business as listed on today's Order Paper.

• (1600)

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS--MOTIONS

[English]

THE CONSTITUTION ACT, 1982

RIGHT TO LIFE OF UNBORN HUMAN PERSONS

Mr. Gus Mitges (Grey—Simcoe) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, the government should consider the advisability of amending the Constitution Act, 1982, to include unborn human persons, and that the Governor General issue a Proclamation under the Great Seal of Canada to amend section 7 of the Canadian Charter of Rights so that it reads as follows:

"7. Everyone including a human foetus or unborn being has the right to life, liberty and security of the person and the right not to be deprived thereof except in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice."

He said: There is no question, Madam Speaker, that this country of ours has split into two decidedly hostile factions since the Criminal Code was amended in 1969 to exclude from prosecution those abortions performed in hospitals which have therapeutic abortion committees.

Those who feel that easy access to abortion is necessary to protect women who are unwillingly pregnant state that a woman should be able to terminate an unwanted pregnancy, and that abortion should be available to all women regardless of age, marital status, or income level.

Those who disagree base their reasoning on the definition of human life given by members of a scientific group in Washington, D.C., and I quote:

> The majority of our group could find no point in time between the union of sperm and egg and the birth of the infant at which point we could say that this is not a human life. The changes occurring between implantation, a six-week embryo, a six-month fetus, a one-week child, or a mature adult, are merely at stages of development and maturation.

It is difficult for those who accept this concept of life to find a common ground on which to meet those who desire abortion as a means of enduring childbirth by choice.

We who oppose abortion do so because we believe in the right to life. We are falsely depicted by those who are pro-abortion as unconcerned with the reality of the 15-year-old girl who is pregnant because she does not know any better, or the mother of five who can see no way to support another child, or the woman who is carrying a defective child. We are seen as forcing a theory of life on a world that is torn by suffering and personal torment. Individual liberty and freedom of choice are catch phrases that are fast gaining control of our society.

People's feelings are for what they can see, not what someone has told them exists. Their eyes and minds focus on the woman, not the child she carries. Their sympathy is for the suffering of those already born, not for the one who is waiting to be born. They care not for the right to life, but only for the lives that are apparent. They seem to infer that to fight abortion is to put women into a state of perpetual pregnancy.

I am against abortion, but I do believe in birth control and the education of the public regarding various means of preventing conception. The public has become confused by the fact that those who favour abortion state that every woman should have the right to decided whether or not to carry a child. To them abortion is a matter of personal conscience and no woman should be forced to carry a child, or terminate her pregnancy. Aside from the fact that women can and have been frightened or manoeuvered into having abortions, the destruction of the child is the main issue.

The Canadian Association for the Repeal of the Abortion Law states that Canada must be willing to join other countries where legal abortion is readily available. Their reasoning for this is that it prevents illegal abortion and that it faces the reality of abortion as a major health issue. It preserves the physical, mental, social, and economic well-being of the women concerned. If it does those things, it is a hypothesis which has not yet been proved.

The ends envisaged can be met through other means. Proper education solves many problems, especially when the education gives complete understanding of birth control methods available, and a thorough understanding of the value of human life. Man must learn that the preservation and continued growth of the human race demands that the weak must be protected from the strong, and the unborn must be protected from the mature. The concept of equality before the law demands that all participants be included, not just those who can yell the loudest.

Many doctors today now admit that there is no medical reason for abortion. Even the late Dr. Guttmacha, who was one of the strongest allies of the abortion movement stated:

> Today in our modern society it is possible to take almost any woman safely through her pregnancy except if she has cancer or leukemia, in which case an abortion would not save her life much less prolong it.

One of the big problems for those fighting abortion and the destruction of innocent life, is that while there is proof that life begins at conception, people are willing to destroy that life and make the social and economic status of the mother more important than the right to life of those who cannot speak for themselves. We are fast losing sight of the traditional western ethic which has always placed emphasis on the basic worth and equal value of every human life regardless of its stage or condition. By destroying another life to ensure one's economic and social success, the human race is losing whatever dignity and honour it has worked to build for itself over the centuries. It is only right and proper that the individual be protected, that he or she be granted the God given life and the right to grow and learn at his or her own rate.

Unfortunately, all individuals are not granted the same rights. The legalization of abortion implies that the end justifies the means, that destruction is allowable if a certain quality of life is preserved for those who remain. Self-interest then is held to be more important than the common good. Truth becomes lost as man learns to define himself in terms of what he thinks is useful and convenient.

To place a utilitarian value on human life, to see each person only in terms of his economic worth, can and will lead to the destruction of human life. It will lead to the murder of those already born who through mental or physical incapacity are not able to contribute to society what may be demanded of them by extremists. These and any other attempts to negate life, to state that it has no value in itself must never be tolerated.

Life is an automatic value, and the handicapped child has the same right as any other person to develop his or her full potential as a human being. Abortion, infanticide, and mercy killing have a tendency to follow one upon the other. To destroy life on any level is to accept that all life has only a relative value.

Can those who propose the complete legalization of abortion guarantee that it will end there? Can they guarantee that the legal murder of the unborn will not lead society to other forms of murder? I think not.

Statistics show that the number of abortions have increased by leaps and bounds, which creates a situation where those hospitals which choose a lax interpretation of the law are now experiencing difficulty dealing with the backlog. Needed elective surgery is backed up and operating theatres are constantly tied up. Abortionists would like to force the other hospitals and doctors into accepting the backlog. That must be prevented at all costs. Never do I want to see individuals and institutions forced into the taking of life of those who are classified as unwanted by a society that cannot be bothered with the question, let alone try to find an answer.

In most of the disagreements and arguments that have taken place between pro-lifers and pro-abortionists, the focal point has been the issue of contraception. Those who favour abortion state that pro-lifers want to put women into a state of continual pregnancy. I have said before and I must stress again that proper birth control methods must be made readily available to all. Sex education must be taught in such a way as to make all people understand those methods. Money can and should be spent on the education of all people, not just those attending high school or college. Once that is done, people will be able to make the choice concerning the birth of children.

As it stands now, abortion is becoming a means of contraception. Many women and men are choosing not to make full use of contraceptives. It has become much easier to terminate an unwanted pregnancy than to take the time to use proper birth control methods. Destruction of the unborn child has become the accepted means of ensuring that a sexual relationship is not based on artificial means.

Even the Badgley Commission agrees that the number of abortions will continue to rise if some means is not found to ensure that women have contraceptive protection.

For those who do not wish children, contraception is proper and necessary. Once conception takes place there can be no more contraception. Once a life has begun it has the same right to reach its natural end. That life has the same right to protection under the law as has its mother or any other member of society. The Right to Life movement must be willing to show the people of this country that it does care. It must show that it is aware of the problems of illegal abortions, of the pregnant women who need assistance and guidance before, during and after pregnancy. The public must learn what the Right to Life movement is really trying to do, not what pro-abortionists say it is trying to do.

• (1610)

Governments and the medical profession must be willing to offer assistance and to explain what that assistance is to women who are pregnant. Men cannot be forgotten either. The development of women's rights does not demand the end of male responsibility. Sexual relationship demands responsibility on both sides in the understanding and use of contraceptives, and in the care of any child which may result from that relationship. The legalization of abortion must be averted and the type of abortion available must now be ended before there will be any change in the values of Canadian society.

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to speak on this subject. It is one that has concerned me for a good many years as it has many other people. I take it very seriously. The motion is:

That, in the opinion of this House, the government should consider the advisability of amending the Constitution Act, 1982, to include unborn human persons—

I want to come back to that phrase, Madam Speaker:

—and that the Governor General issue a Proclamation under the Great Seal of Canada to amend section 7 of the Canadian Charter of Rights so that it reads as follows:

7. Everyone including a human foetus or unborn being—

I will come back to that phrase also:

—has the right to life, liberty and security of the person and the right not to be deprived thereof except in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice.

Although the motion itself does not mention abortion, it is of course not produced for the purpose of a philosophical discussion only, but as the Hon. Member for Grey—Simcoe (Mr. Mitges) has illustrated it is a part of the discussion on the laws relating to abortion.

I do not consider this an easy subject, Madam Speaker. I have struggled a lot with it. I think perhaps the Hon. Member for Grey—Simcoe does not consider it easy. He does not want to be stereotyped as somebody who is out of sympathy with women who are pregnant, troubled with other circumstances. I think he is quite right not to want to be stereotyped and put down as being unsympathetic. I have many good friends who take the same position as the previous speaker has. I also would not want to be put down as somebody not concerned for the foetus.

As a father of some children and a grandfather of some children and as one who had some minimal familiarity with disappointments relating to miscarriage, although no experience directly with the choice of abortion, either by my wife or anyone else, I have great respect for the foetus which is the subject of this motion. I do not understand it yet, at least in quite the same way as the Hon. Member for Grey—Simcoe does. To say that this is a human being, a human person or a unborn being with the right to life, liberty and security of the person is farther than I am conscientiously able to go at this time, farther than many people quite serious, quite compassionate of both the mother and the foetus are able to go at this time.

The peculiar situation that does not exist anywhere else in our law is that if we talk about the foetus as a person and we talk about protecting the rights of that person, we must protect a person inside another person. That is obvious, but I think the point may have escaped some. I cannot force a woman to protect a life that is inside her. I may encourage her, persuade her, help her or whatever, but without risk of serious damage to one or both—the person outside and the alleged person inside—I cannot compel her. The attempts to do so have been very unhappy with very poor results in public experience.

I think the decision the Member for Grey—Simcoe has asked us to make is at best premature. It may be that society will arrive at a point where that is the view, but it has not yet arrived in Canada and in many other countries. Certainly that view was not arrived at among the people who wrote The Bible. There is no foundation for the speaker's view in the teachings found there. If there were more time I could go into one of the few examples which shows a different attitude in the Old Testament, the laws of Moses, that rated the life of the foetus distinctly lower than the life of the pregnant woman, distinctly lower, not only the life, but the well-being of the pregnant woman. If the Member wants to check on that he can look up Exodus XXI and XXII.

We should not rush to a decision on this while people of good will are so strongly and, roughly speaking, so evenly divided on it. If we were to go by polls we might notice that 70 per cent of Canadians, according to polls, support the right to choice, as it is called. It is perfectly possible for a person to be opposed to abortion but in favour of the right of choice. It is perfectly possible to say that I wish women would not choose abortion. Because I wish that, I would do whatever I can to encourage that choice and to encourage the consequences of that choice rather than the consequences of the other choice. It is perfectly possible to take that view and yet to take the view that if she disagrees then my obligation is not to punish her in some way, because that is really what is at stake here—we can talk about the doctor but it is the pregnant woman who is the focus of concern when we talk about legal action—by perhaps delaying an abortion that she still seeks or preventing her or penalizing her for having it. We have to say that for the sake of that woman's life, even if we disagree with what she is doing, for the sake of the foetus which perhaps will be born and be clearly a person or perhaps will not, for the sake of both we have to make sure that the medical conditions are satisfactory. If she insists on the abortion, that means medical conditions of a sound abortion procedure.

I have just read a very interesting speech which was delivered in 1984 by Mario Cuomo, Governor of New York. I do not know whether he still is the Governor but I hope he is. He speaks as a Catholic layman to the Department of Theology at the University of Notre Dame. He speaks of himself as a graduate of the university. He says that as a Catholic he is obliged to protect the right of non-Catholics to do things that he would disagree with because that right is reciprocal.

• (1620)

As a legislator, both as a member of city council and here, as someone responsible for making laws, that responsibility being given to me by a plurality of voters, I will not choose to enforce the sort of law implied by this motion on the foetus or even on people who I think may do something I wish they would not do. I do not believe enforcement of the law in that way will help life, either the life of the pregnant woman or the life of the foetus. Therefore, I urge the Hon. Member and other Hon. Members to consider that this is a matter for much further and deeper public soul-searching. We should not be attempting to coerce by legislation.

[Translation]

Mrs. Anne Blouin (Montmorency—Orléans): Madam Speaker, first of all, I want to congratulate the Hon. Member for Grey—Simcoe (Mr. Mitges) on his concern for the rights of the foetus. I realize the matter is very important to him, and I respect his views and praise his courage.

Madam Speaker, the issue is one of the most serious ones facing Canadian society today: What legal protection should be given the human foetus? We must not lose sight of the fact that if this motion were adopted, it would have a major impact on our abortion legislation. Agreed, many Canadians would applaud this kind of change. And many would be appalled.

It is an extremely controversial issue, on which Canadians are divided. And because this is such a burning issue, I have some reservations about the avenue chosen by the Hon. Member to amend the relevant legislation. Is a five-hour debate the right way to amend this country's fundamental laws? Hon. Members will no doubt recall the long and impassioned debate that followed the proposal to amend the Criminal Code in 1969. I am not at all convinced that a five-hour debate will be sufficient to give thorough consideration to the many aspects of this issue. I do not believe that five hours will be enough to examine the various interests at stake.

The Hon. Member for Grey-Simcoe is proposing to have Section 7 of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms amended so that a foetus, like a person, has the right to life, liberty and security and the right not to be deprived thereof except in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice.

The Hon. Member is no doubt aware that amending the Constitution is a serious matter. Remember how long it took to develop an amending formula for the Constitution.

Madam Speaker, experience has shown how difficult it is to obtain a consensus among the provinces and the people of Canada.

We must not forget there is a set procedure for amending the Constitution. Part V of the Constitution Act, 1982 provides that an amendment, in addition to being approved by the House of Commons and the Senate, must also be approved by two-thirds of the provinces that represent 50 per cent of the population.

The amending procedure involves consultation with the provinces on the impact of the proposed changes. Any change in Section 7 can have major implications for the provinces.

Before we start consideration of an amendment to Section 7, I would like to know how this will affect family law.

I think it would be advisable to continue consultations that have already begun on amendments to the Constitution. Madam Speaker, we must keep encouraging co-operation between the provinces and open up the fullest possible debate on the issue. It is imperative that we obtain a national consensus on this fundamental issue.

Madam Speaker, it is also of the utmost importance to allow Canadians to express their views on whether protection of the foetus should be guaranteed by the Constitution. Our Goverment sees it as its duty to consult before making such a fundamental change in our legislation. Indeed, what could be more fundamental than an amendment to the Constitution?

We have always consulted Canadians about social benefits and issues involving equality. We cannot amend our laws on abortion and entrench the rights of foetuses in the Constitution without consulting the various groups concerned.

This matter is too important for us not to try to achieve the highest degree of consensus.

I do not believe that we can resolve such a complex issue in so short a debate. Before bringing in laws on abortion, we must ensure that we know all their implications, and most important, that we have the support of the greatest number of people, otherwise, we might be creating more problems than we would solve.

Again, Madam Speaker, I repeat that a five-hour debate would not be sufficient for a thorough and complete review of all the consequences of constitutionally guaranteeing the rights of the foetus. Consultation with the provinces on the possible impact of such an amendment is imperative.

I urge the Hon. Members of this House in favour of enshrining the rights of the foetus to realize that amending the Constitution is no simple matter. We would first have to examine thoroughly the consequences such a step might have, and consultation, in particular, would have to be extensive. Finally, Madam Speaker, may I say that the debate on abortion has already been a very divisive factor among Canadian men and women that I feel it would be much too dangerous to proceed with the very significant amendment proposed by my hon. colleague.

[English]

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to speak on an issue which is important to all Members of this House and all Canadians. Basically I see this as another back-bench Conservative attempt to make it more difficult for Canadian women to obtain safe, legal abortions. At the same time the motion, if it were adopted, would distort the whole concept of human rights in Canada. It calls on the Government to extend to the human foetus the basic legal rights we have under Section 7 of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. The implications are staggering. It moves the entire debate about abortion away from the medical sphere where it properly belongs, and into the legal sphere.

We can all accept that abortion has some very important moral elements which both individuals and society have to deal with. However, the medical questions are most properly addressed by the woman and her doctor. The moral questions must be addressed by the woman and her own conscience, perhaps with the help of a priest or some other counsellor. We have to recognize the need for more counselling facilities for women in this situation. I therefore particularly urge upon the Government and government Members the necessity for more funding for women's centres so they can receive the kind of counselling they need to reach their own decisions.

I am concerned that if this motion is adopted the procedure I have just outlined will be completely derailed by a very complex legal process. We all know the difficulty women face under the present legislation. Hospitals lack the required therapeutic abortion committees in order to approve abortions being performed in those hospitals. This is particularly the case in rural areas. Women in rural areas often have to travel long distances to major centres to get safe and legal abortions. At present the Provinces of Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland have no hospitals with therapeutic abortion committees.

• (1630)

I suggest, Madam Speaker, that the answers to our concerns about abortion do not lie in banning abortion, but rather in safer methods of birth control and proper education. The Member who sponsored the motion says he is not opposed to birth control. I am pleased to hear that. However, we must recognize that safe and effective methods of birth control do not exist in our society. They still need to be found. We know the health problems which women are having due to the pill, the IUD, the Dalkon shield and now with Depo Provera. Yet, research funding for safe contraceptive methods has been cut in Canada and the United States.

A study was done for International Family Planning Perspectives, a publication in New York. The authors asked 62 pharmaceutical manufacturers whether they were doing research and development on birth control. Of the 42 American companies which responded, 33 said they had abandoned such projects. This is the model of research which was held up this afternoon by government speakers saying we need more research in various areas. However, in this area in which we desperately need research, the pharmaceutical companies are cutting back. This is obviously an area in which the Government should be getting involved. Instead, it is cutting back in this field.

In a July 22, 1985, news release of the Planned Parenthood Federation of Canada, Nancy Sunderland, the Treasurer, pointed out that the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) has "contradicted himself by not treating all organizations funded under the family planning program in the same manner". While cutting the Planned Parenthood Federation of Canada by 12.5 per cent and the Canadian Committee on Fertility Research by 75 per cent, Serena, an organization that promotes natural family planning methods, received a 12 per cent increase in its funding.

The need for research into adequate contraceptive methods is being completely ignored by the Government. In addition to adequate contraceptive methods, there is a need for education. Education does work. Planned Parenthood of Ontario has pointed out that there has been a decline in the adolescent pregnancy rate in Ontario. In 1983 there were 42.3 pregnancies per 1,000 women between the ages of 15 and 19 as compared to 60.4 pregnancies in 1959.

The nine-year overview proves that prevention works. It demonstrates that public prevention programs of sexuality education in school and family planning services in public health units have not caused adolescent pregnancy rates to rise. Furthermore, access to abortion services have not increased sexual irresponsibility that would cause adolescent pregnancy rates to rise. The study goes on to point out that young people who live in rural areas and poorer areas lack access to such family planning education in their schools. This is something which must be corrected.

In conclusion, I would like to make it very clear that I cannot support this motion. I think it would run counter to the best interests of the Canadian people. Instead, I call upon the Government to remove all references to abortion from the Criminal Code.

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Madam Speaker, the topic which we are discussing this afternoon is not one on which one can be a political winner. It is not a vote-getting issue or a partisan issue. However, it is certainly a complex issue. The easiest thing for any Member to do would be not to speak at all. However, I do not believe that is what the people of our constituencies sent us here for. I was in the lobby earlier making telephone calls to constituents. I heard the debate taking place in the House and deliberately chose to come in and participate in it. This is at the same time a religious issue, a moral issue and a social issue.

[Translation]

Above all, Madam Speaker, it is more than a simple constitutional issue. I am sure the Hon. Member who is sponsoring the motion to amend the Canadian Constitution means well. Unfortunately I believe he is taking the wrong approach to make his point. Should a Member feel that the legislation respecting abortion ought to be changed, then I think this should be done through a Criminal Code provision rather than a constitutional amendment because, as I said earlier, we may be debating a number of issues this afternoon but honestly I do not believe we are now talking about a constitutional matter. We may be talking about many other things, but certainly not that one. If I may elaborate briefly on the constitutional aspect, it has been pointed out a moment ago that any amendment to the Constitution calls for consensus and agreement between the federal Government and a number of Canadian provinces—two-thirds of the provinces representing at least 50 per cent of all Canadians—plus a resolution of the House of Commons.

There is another aspect to be taken under consideration, Madam Speaker, namely that if we amend the Constitution, which then becomes subject to interpretation, I have serious reservations about the manner in which the motion or the constitutional amendment is worded. Members might seriously wonder what would be the consequences and the legal implications. When for instance I see in this proposal the words "unborn human persons", I ask myself, not knowing the answer, whether there is such a thing as an unborn human person, if it is even possible to write such a self-contradictory thing. People might say that someone who is not yet born is not a human being, it is a human foetus, etc. Some may debate that point at some other time, but the fact remains that enacting a constitutional amendment and trying to see later how the courts will interpret it, would be an extremely dangerous way to go about it, according to the Hon. Member's intent. If the Hon. Member simply wants to ban abortion, this may be his choice—and I am not suggesting it is although I have a feeling this is probably what he intented—he might introduce an amendment to the Criminal Code. I must add that I would not agree to support such an amendment had he proposed it, but anyway such is not the situation now, judging from his speech.

• (1640)

[English]

It is also difficult to discuss this issue for religious reasons because some of us are of certain religious persuasions in which abortions are not permitted. I happen to belong to such a group. As a practising Roman Catholic, as a married person and a father, I am very concerned about the debate on this issue. On the one hand, I find it unusual that this afternoon, all Members except one who have spoken so far have been men who, of course, will never bear children. Women have had the opportunity to participate in this debate in the House this afternoon, but only one has done so.

The argument that has been made by others is that while it is true that only women bear children, the responsibility for those children does not lie with women alone, but rests with society collectively. Therefore, as legislators, be it men or women, we must state our views on this very difficult issue and others like it. Notwithstanding the fact that I would have appreciated hearing more contribution in the debate from some women Members of the House, I decided to speak because I feel very strongly that this motion should not proceed.

The current law as it pertains to abortions has attempted to cover the middle ground. There is the position that abortions should never occur, which is historically incorrect. Abortions have always taken place in spite of attempts to hide that fact.

The other position is that abortions should always be available and the decision should be left to the woman and her doctor. I have already explained why I disagree with that position.

I suggest that the present law is probably a just middle ground, although I do not believe it has always been administered according to its original intent. I suggest that the law is not administered uniformly. While this is not the only reason, it is a major cause of what is wrong with the present legislation. The law is interpreted differently in some provinces, some jurisdictions and even within some cities.

This does not mean that the spirit behind the legislation is wrong or that even the law itself is wrong, but, rather, that it needs to be administered uniformly. Obviously, legislation such as this cannot be applied on the basis of geography. What is wrong in Hawkesbury in my riding cannot be right in Ottawa; and what is right in Ottawa cannot be wrong in Montreal. It is either correct or incorrect, and the same criteria in identical circumstances, in whatever city or community in Canada, should give an identical result.

As the Member opposite pointed out in his speech earlier, that is not the case right now. The laws are obviously applied very differently in some cities than in others. I do not believe that society wants, should advocate or in any other way state that abortions are an accepted means of birth control. That would be wrong. On the other hand, to pretend that they have not occurred in the past and shall not occur in the future, notwithstanding any law, would also be unrealistic. I am pleased to have had the opportunity to speak on this very difficult subject.

[Translation]

Mr. Charles-Eugène Marin (Gaspé): Madam Speaker, abortion is a subject on which many Canadians have views that are diametrically opposed. I understand the motives and the feelings underlying the decision by the Hon. Member for Grey—Simcoe (Mr. Mitges) to move this motion to amend the Constitution. Some people may think that the hour set aside for Private Members' Business is not necessarily the right time to consider an amendment to the Constitution on such an important issue. It is, however, an opportunity for us today to discuss the matter and to have some exchanges with Members on this important subject. We must ensure that any decision to amend the Constitution is taken only after examining all relevant aspects, once we have fully grasped the scope of the issue.

Madam Speaker, I would like to take a few minutes to examine this very delicate and polarizing question. I will concentrate on the medical aspects. Medically speaking the physician is inextricably bound up with the question of abortion. His patients and the community ask him certain things and even go so far as to demand them. Like all citizens, the physician is governed by the laws of the land. He works in a hospital that either regulates abortion or prohibits it entirely. The physician's conduct is also governed by his own moral principles and by the ethical approach he takes to this situation. The order of physicians constantly monitors the ethical aspects from the medical point of view. Furthermore, the provinces each have a health insurance plan through which they can exercise financial control over these matters and thus indirectly control the practice of abortion as in the case of other areas of medical practice. What I have just said shows the complexity of this issue. A single opinion or decision cannot bring about a complete change in the abortion policy.

Naturally, the physician is subject to the pressures of many sectors of society. As the Hon. Members are probably aware, there have been changes to the Criminal Code in relation with abortion. Very militant groups have asked for abortion on demand. A number of physicians have apparently been influenced by these groups and by the fact that other countries and many American states have very flexible abortion laws. It is amazing to find such a change in attitude among physicians of whom many were initially very strongly opposed to more generalized abortions. Madam Speaker, I believe that there will never be abortion on demand because there will always be cases where abortion is refused even if we have very flexible laws and amenable physicians. However, since there is an increasing number of abortions, there will be a lot of serious problems, both medically and socially.

Indeed, an abortion can lead to medical complications. For instance, there have been cases where an interrupted pregnancy has caused the death of the mother. Permanent damage to the cervix can also endanger future pregnancies since they result in a risk of spontaneous abortion, miscarriage or premature labour.

On the other hand, if there were extended access to abortion services, we would have to examine the implications for the morale of hospital personnel, such as the anesthetists, the surgical nursing staff, the technicians, without forgetting the gynecologists themselves. Most of the latter would be working in a situation where they would have to perform many more abortions than at the present time. As physicians, their work is to protect, not to destroy life.

This could even lead to the point where some gynecologists would only practise abortions.

If, because of those legislative amendments, abortion became available on demand, gynecologists would become mere technicians who would not have to decide on the merits of an abortion.

If, on the other hand, certain criteria were established that would have to be met before a decision to abort could be taken, conscientious gynecologists would then have to spend a lot of time studying scores of cases. Even in such circumstances, there could still be women who, because of the influence of others, their own perseverance or additional funds, could obtain an abortion when other women could not.

The time needed for these abortions should also be considered. However, if the Act were to be made less stringent and if it were provided that the majority of abortions would have to be made outside major hospitals, because of the strict regulations enforced there, gynecologists would then abdicate their responsibilities as specialists.

Finally, if binding guidelines were to be established, it might very well be that certain smaller hospitals outside large urban centres would become mere abortion clinics.

Thirdly, despite expectations raised by more flexible legislation, the latter does not necessarily lead to fewer abortions. The explanation for that would be that apparently, from the moment abortion would be viewed as a socially acceptable treatment, some women who at present would not consider having an abortion might then apply for it. On the other hand, if certain criteria were to be adopted, some women who would not meet those criteria would be turned down and, in order to have an abortion, would go through a criminal process. Further, some women—although they could obtain an abortion—would not wish to record their names on whatever Government form, and would therefore not apply to a recognized medical clinic.

Madam Speaker, when abortion is readily available, understandably people will feel a lesser need for ordinary birth control methods. A great many women even feel no real need for contraception when they can have access to abortion. Later on, these same women are greatly incensed when they realize, after they have become pregnant, that abortion is refused to them. Such an attitude would explain, even among married women, this common lack of concern and frequent disregard for the most simple and easily accessible contraceptive measures to avoid unwanted pregnancies.

Finally, it should be emphasized that repeated abortions lead to a great many medical problems for the patient, as well as the medical profession and the community as a whole.

Even without such problems, it is clearly a tragedy to treat human life, be it just an embryo or a foetus, with total disregard and to suppress it because it is expedient to do so.

Madam Speaker, those are the considerations I wanted to bring to the attention of the House.

• (1650)

Mr. François Gérin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Madam Speaker, I want to thank the Hon. Member for presenting the motion. This is a very delicate matter indeed and, as a result of our parliamentary reform, a Member may now raise a votable item after a five-hour debate. I am grateful as well to my colleagues for listening to and participating in the debate.

The motion under consideration deals with one of the most pressing issues with which Canadians have to come to grips. I am convinced that the remarks made by the Hon. Member for Grey—Simcoe (Mr. Mitges), among others, will be a source of enlightenment to us.

I would suggest that Parliament can make a useful contribution to this issue, but I do not think time has come to amend the abortion legislation, nor that these debates are the ideal approach. A constitutional amendment process has already been adopted under which the provinces and the federal Government must give their approval, so we ought to consult the provinces before going any further. It must be done. Besides, we must ensure that we amend our Constitution only after a thorough analysis of all the factors involved, and not before Canadians have had every opportunity to voice their opinion on the issue.

The question of protecting the unborn child has given rise to a great deal of controversy, and many Canadians have taken firm stands on this issue. In a famous U.S. court judgment in the case Roe vs Wade, Judge Blackmun of the United States said as follows, and I quote: "First of all, we admit we are aware of the emotional and delicate character of the abortion debate and the clashing and vigorous opinions held on the subject, even among physicians." In fact, we have just heard the Hon. Member for Gaspé (Mr. Marin), himself a physician, express his own concerns in this respect, saying that he was aware of the deeply held and apparently absolute belief that were often involved. The general ideas and experience of a person, what he or she knows of the problems of life, his or her religious upbringing and attitudes towards life and family and the values they represent, as well as the standards he or she tries to live by, all this can influence the ideas and beliefs of this person about abortion."

The Members who are moving this resolution are proposing that the rights guaranteed under Section 7 of the Charter be conferred upon the human foetus or unborn being. That Section of the Charter guarantees to everyone the right to life, liberty and security of the person and the right not to be deprived thereof except in accordance with the principles of fundamental justice. The issue of whether or not the Charter protects the rights of the unborn child is already before the courts. In the case of Borowski vs the Attorney General of Canada, those who oppose the current abortion provisions of the Criminal Code argue that Section 7 already protects unborn human beings, that the foetus is a person and that, therefore, the word "everyone" in Section 7 guarantees the protection of the unborn child. In other words, the courts were asked to rule on the question of whether a foetus is a legal person from the time of conception, or immediately afterwards. The trial court decision was that the word "everyone" in Section 7 does not apply to unborn human beings. However it indicated that it was difficult to rule on the question of whether legal status should be conferred upon unborn human beings. Justice Matheson stated that although, in view of the great strides made in the medical field, from a social viewpoint, it would be desirable to confer legal status on the foetus, whether or not it would prove viable in time, it is Parliament's responsability and not that of the courts to draft the appropriate legislation to confer on the unborn child some or all the rights enjoyed by living individuals. Nothing in the law can lead us to conclude that the foetus is a legal person. That is why, on the basis of the term "everyone" as it appears in the Charter, the applicant's request must be denied".

That decision was appealed before the Saskatchewan Court of Appeal which has taken the case under advisement and should make its decision known within the next few weeks.

The matter of the consistency of the Canadian legislation on abortion with the Charter has also been reviewed in the case of the Queen vs Morgentaler, Smoling and Scott. In that case, it has been alleged that the restrictions to abortion as set in the Criminal Code were an infringement to the right to life and to the freedom and security of the individual. The Ontario Appeal Court has rejected that plea and has deferred it to the Supreme Court of Canada which has taken it under advisement and should deliver its judgment in the forthcoming months.

Madam Speaker, you have indicated that it is 5 o'clock and that we should now adjourn. I understand that I will have the opportunity to conclude my speech whenever this debate is resumed.

Right to Life

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Order. The hour provided for the consideration of Private Members' Business has now expired. Pursuant to Standing Order 36(3), this item shall be dropped to the bottom of the list of precedence on the Order Paper.

It being five o'clock, this House stands adjourned until next Monday at 11 a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

The House adjourned at 5 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Monday, November 24, 1986

The House met at 11 a.m.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

PETITIONS

GOVERNMENT RESPONSE

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 106(8), I have the honour to table, in both official languages, the Government's response to petition Nos. 332-3, 332-4, 332-5, 332-6 and 332-8.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition signed by residents of Winnipeg and towns in Manitoba, including Birtle, Rossburn and La Rivière in which they say that the proposed measure, meaning the change in the patent drug law, will unfairly hurt those Canadians whose health needs require the purchase of prescription drugs on an ongoing basis. Therefore, they humbly pray and call upon Parliament to reject these proposals which will increase prescription drug prices for Canadians.

Mr. Speaker: Order. A few days ago I drew to the attention of Hon. Members that it is the practice for an Hon. Member who rises to present a petition that all petitions which that Hon. Member wishes to present at that time ought to be presented together. I know the Hon. Member who has just spoken co-operated with the Chair in that regard, but I would ask Hon. Members to keep that in mind.

REQUEST TO WITHDRAW TARIFF ON ENGLISH LANGUAGE BOOKS

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I have several petitions that request the Government to withdraw the unjust tariff on books—

[Translation]

—and humbly pray and call upon Parliament to rescind this tariff which may cause irreparable harm to the book publishing industry in Canada and jeopardize the federal Government's position on cultural industries in the free trade talks.

Mr. Speaker, these petitions were sent to us from every Canadian province, including my own riding.

[English]

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by several Canadians who are outraged at the Government's intent to tinker with the Patent Act which will result in higher drug costs. The operative paragraph is brief. It says:

Wherefore, the undersigned, your Petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to reject these proposals which will increase prescription drug prices for Canadians.

[Translation]

REQUEST TO WITHDRAW TARIFF ON ENGLISH LANGUAGE BOOKS

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, this petition has been certified correct as to form and content, in accordance with Standing Order 106. The petition asks—

[English]

—to the honourable House of Commons and Parliament:

WHEREAS the Government of Canada has imposed a retaliatory tariff on imported books in the English language which has limited the access of Canadians to literature and information, and;

WHEREAS the tariff has little negative effect on the publishing industry of the United States, yet penalizes Canada's consumers, book publishers, book sellers, distributors and Canada's culture, and;

WHEREAS rising book prices have placed a strain on the book acquisition programs and policies of our nation's public and specialized libraries.

WHEREAS the undersigned, your Petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to: rescind this tariff which threatens irreparable harm to the Canadian book industry and compromises federal policy on cultural industries in respect to free trade negotiations.

That is one petition I have, Mr. Speaker, from the Province of Ontario. I have other petitions.

The second petition is signed by several residents from the City of Windsor. In light of the fact that rising book prices have placed a strain on book acquisition programs and the policies of our nation's public and specialized libraries, the petitioners are calling upon Parliament to rescind this tariff which threatens irreparable harm to the Canadian book industry.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I have another petition addressed to the Canadian Government. This petition was signed by a great many people from Toronto, who are asking the Government to rescind the present duty on books, since the duty is only having an impact on small Canadian businesses and has no impact at all on the Americans, and because libraries and the education of Canadians are being affected. This is another petition I had the honour of tabling today.

Mr. Speaker, I have another petition from the City of Windsor, Ontario, in which the Canadian Government is being asked to rescind the retaliatory duty imposed on English-language books only, which is unfair, and our petitioners are against the negative effect this may have on the publishing industry, because the Canadian publishing industry is being penalized. That was another petition.

Mr. Speaker, I have one more petition.

• (1110)

[English]

I have one more petition to present, Mr. Speaker. It is signed by residents of Bracebridge, Huntsville and Belleville, Ontario. It calls upon the Government to rescind the tariff on imported books in the English language because it has limited the access of Canadians to literature and information and has little or no negative effect on the publishing industry in the United States. These petitions have been presented for your consideration.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, this petition has been duly certified by the Clerk in accordance with Standing Order 106. It is signed by a number of Canadians protesting the federal Government's proposal to change the Patent Act. The petitioners indicate that these changes will result in higher drug prices for both individual consumers and provinces. They see this as another instance of Canada bowing down to the United States and they call upon Parliament to reject these proposals which will increase prescription drug prices for Canadians.

[Translation]

REQUEST TO WITHDRAW TARIFF ON ENGLISH LANGUAGE BOOKS

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland—Kent): Mr. Speaker, today I have the honour of tabling five petitions from the province of Nova Scotia and more specifically from the people of Fall River, Halifax, Windsor Junction, Dartmouth, Bedford and Sackville.

[English]

Since the Government has imposed a retaliatory tariff on imported books, the petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to rescind this tariff which threatens irreparable harm to the Canadian book industry and compromises federal policy on cultural industries in respect of free trade negotiations.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, it is my duty and honour to present, on behalf of a number of citizens of Canada, a petition which points out that the changes to the Patent Act relating to prescription drugs will increase prices for Canadian consumers and restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy necessary prescription drugs. The petitioners call upon Parliament to reject the proposals which will increase prescription drug prices for all Canadians.

REQUEST TO WITHDRAW TARIFF ON ENGLISH LANGUAGE BOOKS

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, taking your earlier admonition fully into account I will submit a group of petitions signed by 170 residents of Windsor, Amherstberg and vicinity who ask the Government to rescind the book tariff for the very simple reason that it penalizes the Canadian consumer, book publishers, book sellers, book distributors and Canadian culture as a whole.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED EXCISE TAX

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I have the privilege of presenting a very extensive petition from residents of Winnipeg, Fisher Branch, The Pas, St. Boniface, Ashern, Lauder, Eriksdale, Gimli and other points in Manitoba. There are 1,250 names in total. The petition has been certified by the Clerk. It reads as follows: Whereas a cabinet committee of the federal Government is considering a special excise tax on goods used by the consumptive users of wildlife, hunters and fishermen; guns, ammunition, rods, reels, lures, and on the nonconsumptive users as well such as canoeists, backpackers, campers and birdwatchers to name a few, wherefore the undersigned, your petitioners, humbly pray and call upon Parliament to halt this proposal immediately.

OPPOSITION TO CUT-BACKS TO RESEARCH, SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to table a petition signed by a number of citizens of Canada who are exercising their right to do so. They protest the cut-backs of the National Research Council. They ask that those cuts be rescinded and demand that the Government act on its commitment to increase the rate of expenditure for research, science and technology to 2.5 per cent of the Gross National Product.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by a number of Canadian citizens, exercising their right to do so, expressing their concern about the concession to United States interests represented by legislation being introduced which would have the effect of raising the price of drugs in this country. The petitioners demand that the Government withdraw this legislation and give consideration to a more appropriate approach to patent policy.

REQUEST TO WITHDRAW TARIFF ON ENGLISH LANGUAGE BOOKS

Mr. Carlo Rossi (Bourassa): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of petitions from Canadian citizens in British Columbia who humbly call upon the Government to rescind the tariff which threatens irreparable harm to the Canadian book industry and compromises federal policy and cultural industries.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition of citizens of Thunder Bay and Dryden in northern Ontario. I have a similar petition from people in Toronto, Scarborough and Mississauga. I also have a long petition signed mostly by people from Windsor, Ontario. All these petitioners oppose changes to the Patent Act which will increase the price of drugs for ordinary Canadians, particularly for senior citizens. They call upon the federal Government to withdraw the legislation before us and to favour a more affordable price of drugs.

REQUEST TO WITHDRAW TARIFF ON ENGLISH LANGUAGE BOOKS

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, those who read, publish, sell and distribute books see the book tariff as a threat to Canadian culture. I have a large number of petitions from northern Ontario, southwestern Ontario, the Kitchener-Waterloo area and from the Toronto area which call upon the Government to rescind the book tariff.

Hon. William Rompkey (Grand Falls—White Bay—Labrador): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by several hundred residents of Edmonton calling upon the Government to rescind the tariff it has imposed on imported books because it will not be effective and it imposes a severe and irreparable strain on the book publishing industry in Canada and on Canadians who want to read.

* * *

PRIVILEGE

NOTICE OF QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE—RELEASE OF SOVIETS

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege. I seek your guidance. It is my understanding that on matters of this sort one is required to give immediate notification if one believes one has a question of privilege. I regret to interrupt the submission of petitions. I seek the Speaker's guidance with respect to the concern which I wish to express.

As you know, Mr. Speaker, there is a great deal of concern and interest in the release of five Soviet deserters into Canadian hands. At this moment the press is involved—

Mr. Speaker: Order, order. The Hon. Member has sought the guidance of the Chair and he may get that guidance in a moment. I ask for order. Perhaps the Hon. Member could help the Chair. It would seem from his remarks that his question of privilege arises from something that has taken place outside the Chamber. If so, I would remind all Hon. Members that that would require one hour's notice to the Chair. I would be quite prepared to take his representation now as the beginning of that notice, but the one hour is required.

• (1120)

Mr. McCurdy: I appreciate that, Mr. Speaker. My concern is with respect to the fact that the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) is at this moment, or very shortly, providing a briefing to the press on the circumstances surrounding the release of the prisoners. It is a briefing which, as a result of communications with the Minister, has been denied to Members of Parliament. Surely it is—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You can go over to the press club.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I think that under the circumstances it would be best if the Chair accepted the intervention of the Hon. Member as notice of a question of privilege and the Chair will deal with it later in the appropriate fashion, without in any way prejudicing the Hon. Member's right to speak on the matter further.

* * *

PETITIONS

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Petitions.

Mr. Gauthier: Petitions.

Mr. Mazankowski: I move:

That the House proceed to Government Notices of Motions.

Mr. Gauthier: He does not have the floor for petitions.

Mr. Riis: Question of privilege.

Mr. Speaker: The Chair realizes that the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) has risen on a question of privilege. However, before I hear the Hon. Member, and I will, let me deal with the motion that has been presented by the Hon. Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski).

The motion is that the House proceed to Government Notices of Motions, which means that, if the Chair should rule that it is in order, a number of items that are in the usual order under Routine Proceedings would not be heard. It is the view of the Chair that that would be inappropriate and that we should proceed from item to item. Consequently, I regret to advise the Hon. Deputy Prime Minister that in the view of the Chair the motion is out of order. The Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I was going to pursue a question of privilege but, based on your ruling, at this point there is no need for it.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I rise to present a petition from my riding, the first I have presented on this matter. It contains numerous signatures and concerns the federal Government's proposal to change the Patent Act relating to prescription drugs. The petitioners state that this will increase drug prices for Canadian consumers and will severely restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy necessary prescription drugs. There has been an overwhelming response to this in my constituency and I want to table the petition.

[Translation]

REQUEST TO WITHDRAW TARIFF ON ENGLISH LANGUAGE BOOKS

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): Mr. Speaker, this morning I have the honour, in accordance with our Standing Orders, of tabling various petitions on two different subjects, but I will table only two.

[English]

The Government of Canada has imposed a retaliatory tariff on imported books in the English language which has limited the access of Canadians to literature and information. It is a long petition which comes from Windsor.

I have another petition and, since you stated to present all the petitions together, I will do so.

These petitioners state that whereas the tariff has little negative effect on the publishing industry of the United States and yet penalizes Canada's consumers, book publishers, book sellers and distributors in Canada's culture, and whereas rising book prices have placed a strain on book acquisition programs and policies of our nation's public and specialized libraries, the undersigned petitioners in these two long petitions humbly pray and call upon Parliament to rescind this tariff which threatens irreparable harm to the Canadian book industry and compromises federal policy on cultural industries in respect of free trade negotiations.

I have abided by your ruling by making no comment, but I see that the Minister responsible for culture is here and I hope she will take action on this very important subject.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (Saint-Denis): Mr. Speaker, I have another petition on an equally very important matter. It is only the first of a multitude and multiplicity of others coming from my district and all across Canada. These petitioners are not from my district, but from Selkirk. Many of my colleagues from that district have the honour of presenting the same petition.

These petitioners state that whereas the federal Government's proposal to change the Patent Act relating to prescription drugs will increase drug prices for Canadian consumers and will severely restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy necessary prescription drugs, and whereas the proposed measures will unfairly hurt those Canadians, and whereas the proposal of the federal Government will result in higher costs to provincial Governments, the undersigned petitioners call upon Parliament to reject these proposals which will increase prescription drug prices for Canadians.

REQUEST TO WITHDRAW TARIFF ON ENGLISH LANGUAGE BOOKS

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition concerning the retaliatory tariff on imported books in the English language. Most of these petitioners life in Calgary. The citizens point out that increased book prices place a strain on acquisitions in libraries, that the Government's decision is causing great hardship to the book industry in Canada, and they call upon Parliament to rescind this tariff which threatens irreparable harm to the Canadian book industry and compromises federal policy on cultural industries in respect of free trade negotiations.

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, I also have a petition, duly certified by the Clerk of Petitions, regarding the retaliatory tariff on imported books in the English language, which has limited the access of Canadians to literature and information. The undersigned petitioners pray and call upon Parliament to rescind this tariff which threatens to seriously harm the Canadian book industry. This petition is signed by some 25 persons in the Toronto and Ottawa areas.

I have another petition from 28 persons in the area of Dryden, Ontario, who are also concerned about the same matter of the retaliatory tariff on imported books in the English language. Again, these petitioners call upon Parliament to rescind the tariff.

• (1130)

I have a third petition, Mr. Speaker, from people in the Ottawa area and from Peterborough and Bracebridge, Ontario. It is signed by 26 petitioners. The petition as well has been duly certified by the Clerk of Petitions.

I have a fourth petition on the same subject. This is signed by some 25 persons from the Toronto area. The petitioners again call upon Parliament to rescind this very damaging tariff.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I have another petition from people in the London area. I would urge Hon. Members from the London area to take note of it. The petitioners again call upon Parliament to rescind this tariff. This tariff is hurting Canadian book readers, particularly at this time prior to Christmas when a lot of people buy books for their own use and to give as gifts. If Parliament would rescind this tariff prior to the adjournment for Christmas it would be appreciated.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, it is my honour to present a petition on behalf of a large number of Canadians who are concerned that the Government of Canada has imposed a retaliatory tariff on imported books. This has limited the access of Canadians to literature and information of all sorts particularly, as the previous speaker has indicated, during this time of year when people are purchasing more books than they would during the rest of the year. This penalizes Canadian consumers, book publishers, booksellers and distributors and Canada's culture, and the petitioners call upon Parliament to urge the Government to rescind this tariff which threatens irreparable harm to the Canadian book industry and compromises federal policy on the cultural industry with respect to free trade negotiations.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): I have another petition which draws to the attention of the House the Government's intention to change the Patent Act relating to prescription drugs. I think by all accounts it is accepted, except by the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre), that this will result in increased drug prices for Canadian consumers. In fact, I believe even the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs recently indicated that it will. This will severely restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy the necessary prescription drugs. The petitioners call upon Parliament to reject this legislation and urge the Government to reconsider its introduction.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): It is my pleasure to move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy):

That this House do now proceed to the Orders of the Day.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis) has moved, seconded by the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy), that the House do now adjourn—I am sorry, that the House do now proceed to the Orders of the Day.

Mr. Rompkey: That's the next one.

Mr. Murphy: Don't rush us.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member's comment was heard by the Chair but will be momentarily ignored.

We are now at Petitions in the proceedings, which has been going on for some minutes. I have already ordered this morning that it would be improper to move from Petitions to another item of business in the Routine Proceedings. However, with respect to the motion which has been put by the Hon. Member for Churchill, I draw to the attention of all Hon. Members the fact that this particular motion is covered by a specific rule of this House, that is, Standing Order No. 27:

A motion for reading the Orders of the Day shall have preference to any motion before the House.

As a consequence I feel I am not entitled to take any discretion in this matter; nor can I call upon practice. I find that it is my duty and obligation to enforce the order. Therefore, it is the view of the Chair that the motion to proceed to Orders of the Day, moved by the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis), seconded by the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy), is in order.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Riis), which was agreed to on the following division:

• (1140)

(Division No. 25)

YEAS

Members

Allmand	Fulton	Mayer
Andre	Gauthier	Mazankowski
Axworthy	Gérin	McCain
Belsher	Girard	McCuish
Benjamin	Graham	McCurdy
Berger	Gray (Bonaventure—Îles-de-la-Madeleine)	McDermid
Bertrand	Greenaway	McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood)
Blackburn (Brant)	Grisé	McDougall (St. Paul's)
Blackburn (Jonquière)	Guilbault (Saint-Jacques)	Mitchell
Blouin	Hawkes	Mitges
Boudria	Hees	Murphy
Bourgault	Hnatyshyn	Nicholson (Trinity)
Brisco	Hockin	Nicholson (Niagara Falls)
Broadbent	Hopkins	Nowlan
Browes	Hovdebo	Nystrom
Caccia	Isabelle	Oberle
Chartrand	Jelinek	O'Neil
Collins	Keeper	Oostrom
Copps	Kindy	Orlikow
Cossitt	King	Ouellet
Crofton	Ladouceur	Parry
Crouse	Langdon	Penner
Darling	Lanthier	Pennock
Desjardins	Lewis	Price
Dingwall	MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands)	Prud'homme
Epp (Provencher)	Manly	Reid
Fennell	Mantha	Ricard
Fontaine	Marin	Riis
Foster
Frith

Robichaud	Suluk	Waddell
Rossi	Thacker	Winegard—99
Schellenberg (Nanaimo—Alberni)	Towers
Scowen	Tremblay (Lotbinière)
Shields	Turner (Ottawa—Carleton)
Sparrow

NAYS

Members

nil

After the taking of the vote:

• (1210)

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I gave notice on Friday concerning a proposed emergency debate on the softwood lumber issue. I realize that with the support of this motion, once again my motion will be superseded. However, I should like to preserve my right to lpropose that emergency debate on tomorrow.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. The Hon. Member cannot have it both ways. He is supporting a motion to move to Orders of the Day. At the same time he in fact precludes his own initiative.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, that is totally unrelated. The Hon. Member asked Your Honour to keep in mind that tomorrow he will reintroduce the motion—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Some emergency.

Mr. Gauthier: Well, it is your fault.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) may have views about whose fault something is, but he knows that it is inappropriate to address another Member as "you" or to use the word "your".

The Chair has listened carefully to the comments of the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) and takes note of them. Of course the Chair will expect him to bring his application tomorrow at the appropriate time.

I declare the motion carried.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

PATENT ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed from Friday, November 21, consideration of the motion of Mr. Andre that Bill C-22, an Act to amend the Patent Act and to provide for certain matters in relation thereto, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee; and the amendment of Mrs. Killens (p. 1378).

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, you must have noticed that the Opposition is not very pleased with the initiative of the Government to pass Bill C-22. We on the opposition side of the House are not too pleased with the Government wanting to curtail debate to only a few hours. I for one do not think that the Parliament of Canada should deal with the issue in only a few hours. Hon. Members of the House should have an opportunity to speak, be they for or against the particular issue. However, as we know, the Conservative Government does not want it. The Government wants to curtail the debate. It wants to ensure that the debate is over quickly. The Tories want the pain to go away. They want Canadians to forget the very harsh provisions of the Bill.

Your Honour should not think for a moment that I am the only one who does not like the Bill. Perhaps there are Tories across the way who have the same view; perhaps they think that my views are somewhat tainted by partisanship. It is unlikely that you, Mr. Speaker, would think that.

Miss MacDonald: Never.

Mr. Boudria: Let me draw to the attention of the House some comments of people in the media. I am glad the Minister of Communications (Miss MacDonald) is listening very carefully. She was in my riding recently—

Miss MacDonald: And was well received.

Mr. Boudria: Undoubtedly she was well received. I would gladly have been there to greet her had she given me prior notification. Let me read for the Minister of Communications this editorial in the November 24, 1986 issue of the The Toronto Star, a very objective and serious newspaper. The article is entitled "Patently Bad Legislation". It reads:

• (1220)

After vehemently denying that drug prices will go up under his new patent legislation, Consumer Affairs Minister Harvie Andre now says drug prices, in fact, could rise. With that admission, Andre has come half-way to the truth.

His Bill would give multinational drug companies up to 10 years to market new brand-name prescription drugs before they can be copied and sold under generic names by Canadian firms. In other words, Andre is proposing to expand the multinational drug companies monopoly power. Whenever a firm enjoys a monopoly, prices not only can be pushed up, they inevitably are.

That's been the experience in every other area where monopoly power has been brought to bear. And so it is a virtual certainty that drug prices will go up—not just for new ones in the future but even for those now available. Luciano Calenti, chairman of the Canadian Drug Manufacturers Association, last week said that if generic drug companies are not allowed to bring in new products, they will have to raise prices on their existing products to stay in business.

You have it right there, Mr. Speaker, in black and white. It is not the opinion of just an opposition Member of this House, it is a totally objective opinion coming from elsewhere. I thought I would take a moment to share that with you.

Let me share with you, Sir, some of the other reasons that Liberals cannot support this legislation as presented. First, we have to remember that it was a Liberal Government of the past, a Government very concerned about the sick, the needy and the elderly which brought in the 1969 Patent Act amendments. It was the then Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs in 1968 who introduced the Bill and is now the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner). Another Minister continued with the same Bill after it had stayed on the Order Paper and died because of the very successful 1968 election. The new Government continued this very progressive legislation which lead to lower drug prices and to a situation which was very helpful for very many Canadians.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, if the Bill before the House today were to go through all stages in the House and end up as an Act of Parliament, most of the Members of this House would still be able to buy the pharmaceutical products they need, there is no doubt about that. Nor is there any doubt that a large number of Canadians will not be affected by these measures. However, I have to say, as the Member for an electoral district that is not very wealthy, that many of my constituents will have considerable problems when they will want to purchase the drugs they need.

[English]

The Liberal Government recognized that more funds were needed for investments in research so that our young people could have jobs. Our Government appointed the Eastman Commission and it produced a report. This is not to say that with the Liberal laws now in force that Canada lost a substantial portion of its investment. As a matter of fact, Dr. Eastman in his report, which I have here, says that:

> Total expenditures on intramural research and development for the pharmaceutical industry were equivalent to 3.5 per cent of the value of factory shipments in 1967 and 3.8 per cent in 1982.

Therefore, the legislation that is in force now has not drastically reduced investment, at least not according to Dr. Eastman.

However, no one should be satisfied with that. Of course we want more investment into that area. We also want the people to be able to afford to buy what the factories produce. That surely should be the main concern of Members of this House, Mr. Speaker.

Let me talk a bit about the growth of the industry. I refer you to page 65 of the Eastman Report from which I read the following:

> Increases in both the total number of employees and production and related workers only has been greater in Canada than in the United States. Though these differences in growth since 1967 are relatively small, they are indicative of a more buoyant market for pharmaceuticals and medicines in Canada than in the United States.

You see, Sir, that the existing legislation, in spite of what these Tories across the way are leading you to believe, has not been all bad. It has lead to lower drug prices than otherwise. Many people would argue that it is still expensive and too expensive when you need to buy drugs, but in any case we do have lower drug prices. We have not, according to the Eastman Report, reduced the amount of research proportionately. It is greater now than it was before this legislation was passed. Finally, the report says that Canada has been an area of larger growth for that industry than the United States.

Why do we now have this Bill, Mr. Speaker? Why do we have a Bill that will give 10 years of protection for patent holders in some cases and seven years of protection in others? During this 10 year period manufacturers of products will be able to charge virtually anything that they can get away with in the market-place.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, Canadians will be hard-pressed to pay the additional, yes, I say additional, costs they will be charged as a result of this Bill, Bill C-22, if the House decides to approve the proposed legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I think the Eastman Commission suggested a happy medium that would be just about fair. The Commission recommended four years of exclusivity. In the former Minister's Bill, the Government offered ten years of exclusivity in every case.

After last summer's Cabinet shuffle, the new Minister shortened this somewhat by granting ten years in some cases and seven in others, but still twice as much as the Eastman Commission recommended.

It is difficult to understand why the Government insists on pursuing this Bill. Some of us, however, have drawn our own conclusions. Some of us believe that pressure has been put on the Government of Canada by the US Administration, and that is why the Government wants to proceed with this legislation.

One thing for sure is that the American drug manufacturing multinationals have made strong representations to U.S. administration officials urging them in turn to lobby here in Canada to have us amend our legislation and make it more favourable to the Americans in terms of profitability.

• (1230)

[English]

I will bring to your attention, Mr. Speaker, a few examples of how prices are more advantageous to Canadian consumers under our present law than they are to consumers in the United States where producers of prescription drugs can charge almost any amount. The Canadian generic price for chlorpropamide is $19.03 for 1,000 250-miligram tablets. The brand name product in Canada sells for $141.80. The brand name product in the United States costs $431.58. The price ranges from $19 for the generic Canadian product to $431 for the U.S. brand name product. I have a whole chart of such examples.

Why would the Government want Canadian consumers to pay $431.58 for something for which they now pay $19.03? Is it reasonable to want the Canadian consumers, whom we are here representing, to pay those exorbitant prices? Surely, Mr. Speaker, being the objective person that you are, you have already recognized that this is not reasonable. The Canadian consumer should not have to suffer such price increases.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I bring to your attention that the display of exhibits in the Chamber has traditionally been considered inappropriate. The Hon. Member has referred to a big stack of reports relating to his topic.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, could I just get to my point of order?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I know what the Hon. Member is trying to portray. I do not think he was displaying any Bills or anything like that. I feel that that is debate. If the Hon. Member does have a point of order, I wish he would come to it.

Mr. Hawkes: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I just wondered if the stack which he is displaying includes informationn on the 93 per cent of drugs which have no generic equivalent. Has he seen whether we are getting gouged in that area?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): That is not a point of order. That is debate. The Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell (Mr. Boudria) has the floor.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, as you probably recognize, not only is that not a point of order, it is not even a good point. I do not have a large stack of reports in my hand. I was referring only to one list. The rest of these documents have nothing to do with this issue, and I never said they did. Perhaps the Member across the way could listen a little closer, and I will tell him more about the price increases to which the Canadian consumer will be subjected.

The most difficult thing is to pronounce the names of these drugs.

Mr. Hawkes: Go to school.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, someone said, "go to school". I will not apologize for my humble beginnings. They have served me well until now. I will trade my oratorical skills for those of the Hon. Member at any time.

One thousand 100-miligram tablets of the Canadian generic product of chlorthalidone sells for $37.29. The U.S. brand product costs $613.01. The Minister has said in the House that prices will not really increase. However, the people whom he has hired to adminisiter say that they will. The Minister then did not say that they will go up, but they could go up. Well, if something can go up and someone has a monopoly on it, it does go up. Most of us know that if there is an opportunity to make more money, more money will be made. If there is an opportunity to make the consumers of Canada pay more, the consumers will pay more. That is the way it works.

We have good legislation now. We could, of course, provide better protection for the people in the industry in order to encourage research. Research has been increasing, but we should not be satisfied with that. We want more research and more jobs. It is a motherhood question to ask whether we want more research. Obviously we do. However, that is not the issue before us today. We are dealing with whether Canadians want to give exclusivity through this Bill which will result in Canadian consumers being gouged in the manner in which I have just described. Surely that is not why we were elected to this place.

[Translation]

Last summer, Mr. Speaker, the Liberals held public hearings on drug patents. These hearings took place here in Ottawa and in Toronto, and I was privileged to attend them. We received briefs, we met with Canadian Consumers' Association executive members—a totally nonpartisan body, as we all know—and they proved to us Members of the Liberal Party . . . Had Conservative Members done the same thing, they too would have been advised by the Canadian Consumers' Association that this Bill as drafted does not serve the interests of Canadians.

I therefore urge Members from all political Parties, Conservatives, New Democrats and colleagues in my own Party, to vote against this Bill and prevent this measure from going any further because Canadians do not stand to benefit from it.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Are there questions or comments?

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I listened with interest to the Hon. Member, both in the House and in my office.

Mr. Boudria: You were not even here.

Mr. Mazankowski: I said "in my office". Once in a while even the Hon. Member himself should look at his television image. In view of what has been transpiring, and pursuant to the notice I gave last Friday, I would like to advise the House that I will be moving a revised motion, which will provide for an additional one day of debate for the consideration of the Bill at this stage, at the appropriate time.

Some Hon. Members: Shame, shame.

Mr. Boudria: May I comment on that?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): You may if you want to.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, the Minister bootlegged that statement in under his privilege of asking questions on my speech. I want to use this opportunity to remind him that the notice of time allocation was given after two hours and 23 minutes of debate on offensive legislation.

• (1240)

Some Hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Boudria: Two hours and 23 minutes of debate on offensive legislation of this magnitude. That is what we are being subjected to in the House, the tyranny of the majority.

Mr. Orlikow: Dictatorship.

Mr. Boudria: The Tory tyranny.

Mr. Mazankowski: Eleven hours and 20 minutes.

Mr. Boudria: The Canadian people will not put up with this because they know what is right and they know that the Government is wrong.

Mr. Hawkes: Mr. Speaker, having participated in the tyranny of the minority on important causes like the Constitution of Canada, I have some comprehension of tyrannies on both sides of the House. It is one thing to talk about the time to be spent on debate, but I would like them to assess the time of the Chamber at $500,000 a day that is being wasted on motions to adjourn and ringing the bells just to deal with the situation. There have been over 11 hours of debate.

I want to get to the substance of the Member's speech.

Mr. Riis: Remember the bells.

Mr. Hawkes: He came forward to say that he has done research that has shown what marvellous things the generic industry has done.

Mr. Riis: Charge the Speaker. Jump out of your seat.

Mr. Hawkes: He called it unbiased research. Ninety-three per cent of the drugs have no generic competition. I want the Hon. Member to give us his unbiased research about that 93 per cent of drugs that have no generic equivalent.

Mr. Rossi: What about the 14 days of bells?

Mr. Hawkes: How much are we being gouged? Will he admit that this Bill will put us in a position to order a roll back on 93 per cent of the drugs where the gouging may be occurring? Will he share his unbiased research with the House?

Mr. Rossi: You were the leader, remember the 14 days of bells.

Mr. Boudria: I want to tell the Member who has become worked up over this issue that with regard to the cost for the amount of time taken in the House for the Bill, and that it cost $500,000 a day to operate Parliament, that I do not apologize for the price of democracy. It is a darn sight better than anything else, at any price.

Second, the price-tag for the Bill we are talking about is $650 million.

Mr. Mazankowski: Prove it.

Mr. Boudria: The House could sit a long time for that price.

The Hon. Member tells us about the time being spent by the House on an issue. It is difficult for me to take moral lessons from a group of individuals and the Member himself who was responsible in whole or in part for an event some years ago involving a couple of weeks of Parliament just listening to bells. I have no moral lessons to take from him on that issue.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I want to set the record straight for Hansard with regard to exactly how much time has been spent, not on the substance of the Bill, but on the delaying tactics of the Opposition. The Chair should note that we have spent 11 hours and 20 minutes on the nonsense. They never wanted to get to the substance of the Bill because they are afraid of it. They do not want reseach and development and jobs for Canadians.

Mr. Riis: How much time on the Bill?

Mr. Lewis: That is before today. There is more nonsense when one considers the time that has been spent today.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): Just withdraw the Bill.

Mr. Lewis: Why does the Opposition refuse to allow us to go ahead with a Bill that will bring research and development to Canada and help find cures for disease, and provide jobs for Canadians? Why all this time on useless delay?

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member says that there has been 11 hours on what he has referred to as nonsense. I do not know of any parliamentary process or procedure in the House which could be called nonsense. As far as I am concerned, procedures involving the rights and privileges of Members of Parliament are just that and cannot be categorized in any way, shape or form as nonsense, even by that Parliamentary Secretary. He said that 11 hours have been used in that way. I want to remind the House that the notice of time allocation was given after two hours and 23 minutes of debate.

Mr. Mazankowski: Eleven hours, and you know it.

Mr. Boudria: Time allocation itself was moved after two hours, 39 minutes of debate. There has been two hours, 23 minutes of debate if we just consider the time involved between the beginning of the debate and when the notice of motion was given in the House.

Mr. Mazankowski: Eleven hours of frustration.

Mr. Boudria: In my view, that is unsatisfactory. The Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) says: "Eleven hours". I disagree with that. Even if we did take 11 hours, does not a $650 million assault on Canadian taxpayers deserve 11 hours? It requires all the time of the House because it is an important issue for my constituents and the constituents of everyone else in the Chamber. We will take whatever time is needed.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I listened very carefully to the Hon. Member. Would he agree with this comment which was made on July 17, 1981, and reported at page 11679 of Hansard:

At the very outset I must say that I abhor this tactic.

Referring to what the Government was attempting to do:

I find it offensive. I find it repugnant because it strikes at the basic fabric of our parliamentary democracy. Instead of having a parliamentary democracy, we have what resembles a parliamentary dictatorship.

Mr. Rossi: Who said that?

Mr. Riis: That was said by the Hon. Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) on July 17, 1981.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): How could you, Don?

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Hon. Member is quoting a statement out of context.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mazankowski: Any time that the function of Parliament is frustrated and not allowed to work, denying any Government Member, cabinet Minister or Private Member the right to introduce a Bill and have it debated, the right for Parliament to work and the right for democracy to work, it is a total subversion of the parliamentary process. That is what we have been putting up with here for the last week.

Mr. Rossi: That is what you did in 1981.

An Hon. Member: That is why you are out of power.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): That is debate. The Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) has the floor on a question or comment.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I was asking my hon. friend what he thought of the quote. I will just finish it. The Hon. Member for Vegreville (Mr. Mazankowski) said:

If we believe in parliamentary democracy and the right to freedom of speech, then we must ensure that the rights and privileges of Parliament are always secure. I think those rights and privileges are very sacred. After all, Parliament is the foundation of and very fundamental to our basic freedoms, and to suggest that we might be better off without it frightens me very much.

By virtue of a closure motion today we have a further contempt for and erosion of the spirit and privileges of this institution.

He goes on to say in closing:

I believe tyranny begins when parliamentary debate ends.

Would the Hon. Member comment on that?

Mr. Mazankowski: We want parliamentary debate.

Mr. Boudria: Very briefly, Mr. Speaker, I want to say that that was very well said indeed.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions and comments are now over. The Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme) on a point of order.

[English]

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. You said that the time for questions and comments is over, but I think in all fairness that we should take the time used by the Hon. Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) in attempting to give us a lesson. We need no lessons from people who wanted to let the bells ring for 14 days.

• (1250)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I would like the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme) to note that I gave the Hon. Member for Glengarry—Prescott—Russell (Mr. Boudria) an extra minute and a half because of the questions and comments. Therefore, the period for questions and comments, as I said, has now terminated. Resuming debate.

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to speak on Bill C-22 because it has become obvious that this is going to be a very rare opportunity. I was surprised on Friday when, after only seven speakers had addressed themselves to this Bill, the Government House Leader indicated he would bringing in a motion for time limitation, a form of closure.

This is a Bill of great importance to all Canadian people, yet the Government is introducing a form of closure after only a few speakers have had a chance to address themselves to this issue. We have introduced Petitions from literally thousands of Canadians from coast to coast who protest against the nature of this Bill. They point out it is going to result in increased costs to themselves and to their provinces. They object to the way in which this Government is bowing down to the United States. They are calling upon the Government to not proceed with this Bill. But we have a Government which wishes to push the Bill through the House as quickly as possible. We expect it will then try to do the same in committee because it is afraid of its own Bill. It does not like what is in this legislation and does not want the legislation to be examined by the Canadian people.

Our purpose in this debate and in the entire process, both within the House and outside of it, is to try to draw as much public attention to this Bill as we possibly can, because when the people realize what is in the Bill they will oppose it. The Government knows it is in some trouble with Bill C-22 and wants to try to dispose of it as quietly as possible. We do not intend to let that happen.

Canadians do not like this Bill for a number of reasons. The more they know about it the more they dislike it. First, of course, they see it as just one more example of the way in which the Government is bowing down to the dictates of Uncle Sam. Uncle Sam is spending $100 million to send the Contras into Nicaragua to try to make it say "uncle". They do not need to do that in Canada because we are prepared to say "uncle" at any given time. We have seen one example after another of the way in which the Government has done that; for example, the way in which it abolished FIRA, the gutting of the national energy policy, and backing down from its own stated policy—not a Liberal policy but a Conservative policy—regarding the publishing industry when Gulf and Western took over Prentice- Hall. We have seen the shambles of the last weeks with the Government's mishandling of the softwood lumber dispute with the United States. First, the Government was going to negotiate, then it was going to fight, now it is going to negotiate again. It reminds us of the Grand Old Duke of York who had 10,000 men. First he marched them up the hill, then he marched them down again. We are marching the people up and down the hill on this question of whether or not we are going to fight the United States on the issue of softwood lumber. No one seems to be very sure of the Government's intentions. The Government has made a comple shambles of that particular issue and it will pay for it. That is just one more example of the way in which the Government is completely mishandling our relationship with the United States.

The Government desperately wants some kind of agreement on free trade, yet the word coming from the chief American negotiator, Peter Murphy, is that if Canadians want free trade they are going to have to make more concessions. Peter Murphy did not say that last year. He said it last Friday after we had made one concession after another. But he says Canada is going to have to make more concessions if it wants a free trade deal.

There was pressure put on the Government at the Shamrock Summit by President Reagan. He told the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) how important it was for them to get some action on changes to the Patent Act. Clayton Yeutter put on pressure, Peter Murphy put on pressure and, of course, the pharmaceutical companies have put on their own steady pressure.

As Canadians see what is happening in a wide range of spectrums, they do not like what they see. They see the entire Canadian-United States economic relationship being badly mishandled. They see we are bowing down to the dictates of the United States rather than standing up for the interests of Canadians. This Government, with the largest majority in Canadian history, just refuses to stand up for the interests of the Canadian people. We have drug legislation which is basically prescribed by the United States pharmaceutical companies.

Second, Canadians oppose this Bill because it is going to mean higher drug costs. All last week we saw the spectacle of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre) as he tried to quibble with the opposition and with the Canadian people as to whether or not there were going to be higher prices. Canadians are going to have to fork out more money to purchase drugs at higher prices. That is not debatable, it is a fact. It is going to mean more money coming out of the pockets of Canadians to pay for drugs. The Minister himself finally had to admit that.

In the 1960s there was widespread concern in Canada about drug prices. The Hall Commission noted at that time that our drug prices were among the highest of any industrialized nation in the world. Drug companies at that time had 17 years of protection under the Patent Act.

There were three different commissions in the 1960s which looked at this issue. Each one of them called for more competition. They had different suggestions as to how this should be done. The 1963 Restrictive Trade Practices Commission recommended a very radical move, the total abolition of drug patents. Perhaps that would have been the advisable route to go. However, two later commissions, the Hall Commission and the Harley Commission looked for some kind of compromise route, and in 1969 a policy was adopted which allowed for a limited amount of patent protection and gave to other drug companies the possibility of producing generic copies of the original drugs in return for paying a royalty to the pharmaceutical company which had developed those drugs in the first place.

This policy, although it was passed by the Parliament of Canada and became the law of the land, was never really accepted by the pharmaceutical companies. Their opposition took two forms. First, they dragged through the courts practically every attempt to introduce a generic drug. The generic drug companies had to face court case after court case which slowed the whole process down and, incidentally, added considerable cost to drug prices for Canadians. Second, the pharmaceuticals opposed this whole issue by putting a great deal of pressure on the Government to change the Patent Act.

The Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet), who was the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs in 1983, was the recipient of a lot of that pressure. He buckled under that pressure and the Government at that time changed his ministry and he was shuffled off to something else. However, under the pressure, the Trudeau Government in 1984 appointed Professor Harry Eastman to a commission of inquiry into the pharmaceutical industry. Professor Eastman made a number of very interesting points. He pointed out that since the 1969 amendment to the Patent Act, there had not really been any decrease in the profits of the drug industry. In fact, the profits had continued to grow.

May I call it one o'clock, Mr. Speaker?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Yes. The Hon. Member has 10 minutes left for his debate when Orders of the Day are called, plus 10 minutes for questions and comments.

It being one o'clock p.m., I do now leave the chair until two o'clock p.m.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

S.O. 21

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[Translation]

FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL RELATIONS

THE MARITIMES—ALLEGED LACK OF CONSULTATION BY FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland—Kent): Again, Mr. Speaker, the Government has ignored the Atlantic region. A few months ago when the Government decided to retaliate with a tariff on Christmas tree imports from the United States, it did not even bother to consult eastern Canada producers whose Christmas tree exports represent a $70 million industry.

The same thing is happening now. The Government did not even get in touch with eastern producers when it was attempting to reach agreement with the United States concerning the 15 per cent lumber tariff. Well, Mr. Speaker, organizations like the Maritime Lumber Bureau are furious. Should the U.S. administration endorse the agreement, the Maritimes will be in a difficult position because producers in our region already have to pay higher royalties than anywhere else in this country. The situation in the Maritimes is not the same as in the rest of Canada, but the federal Government could not care less and does not even bother to consult us, and this is altogether unacceptable.

* * *

[English]

CANADA POST CORPORATION

EFFECT OF PROPOSED POSTAL RATE INCREASES ON COMMUNITY NEWSPAPERS

Mr. Stan Darling (Parry Sound—Muskoka): Mr. Speaker, the proposed postal rate hikes for second-class mail pose a great threat to community newspapers and newsletters.

The publisher of one of the weekly newspapers in my riding told me his mailing costs will increase $3,000 next year if the proposal is passed. The Presbyterian Record, having contracted to a new printer, will lose its subsidized second-class status and be faced with increases totalling $17,000 monthly, or 400 per cent, with third-class service. The United Church Observer could also be looking at formidable postal increases which could have a devastating effect on this vital publication.

I advocate that Canada Post officials and the Government abandon the notion of cruel price hikes that threaten the existence of Canada's news organs. It is wrong to offset the post office deficit by gouging those fragile businesses operating on their own shoe-string budgets.

* * *

FOOD

FOOD IRRADIATION ALERT—CALL FOR LABELLING OF TREATED FOODS

Mr. Jim Manly (Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands): Mr. Speaker, many people in my riding share concerns with the approximately 12,000 members of the Food Irradiation Alert. These people request an immediate moratorium on the sale of irradiated foods. They are concerned that irradiation is a by-product of the nuclear industry and that it radically reduces essential nutrients in the products which have undergone treatment. The jury is still out on the questions asked about this process.

At the very least the Government must take responsibility for ensuring that consumers can know what they are buying. Therefore, I propose that any food irradiated food should be clearly labelled in such a manner as to indicate the purpose of the treatment; the dose or doses absorbed by the food; and the types of ionizing radiation source utilized in the process.

People have a right to know whether the food they buy is irradiated or not.

* * *

[Translation]

COMMUNISM

EVOLUTION OF REGIME—LESSONS TO BE LEARNED

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, on the weekend, the media announced that the communist regime in Moscow is now allowing citizens to operate small businesses. Lenin, the great leader of socialists throughout the world, was wrong in 1928. We could say he was the grandfather of the 29 Canadian socialists here in the House today, Mr. Speaker. The message of this return to private enterprise is one that should be understood by our 29 socialist colleagues. It will not be long before the socialists of this House, who finance their party with donations from workers living under our strong capitalist system, will have to explain quite frankly why socialism does not work. Canadians will ask the Leader of the socialist party to clarify his position and they will insist on hearing the same message across this country. The same message for Quebec and Manitoba, for francophones and anglophones.

• (1405)

[English]

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

GUELPH TOXICOLOGY CENTRE—CANCELLATION OF FUNDING

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) told chemical industry representatives that "we know virtually nothing about the health and environmental impact of 80 per cent of the 800 chemicals known to exist in the Great Lakes". At the same time the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre) defended changes to the Patent Act on the basis that not changing the law would jeopardize the future of a great many young scientists.

If these two statements truly reflect the Government's concern, one wonders why it cancelled funding for the Toronto-Guelph Toxicology Centre that would answer questions about the 800 chemicals in the Great Lakes and would provide a future for young scientists. If the Government means business, it should reinstate the funds for the Toxicology Centre it cancelled in November, 1984. How else can we take seriously those two Ministers of the Crown?

* * *

TRADE

UNITED STATES DUTY ON CANADIAN SOFTWOOD LUMBER—CANADIAN PROPOSAL

Mr. Ross Belsher (Fraser Valley East): Mr. Speaker, the dispute with Americans on softwood lumber exports continues to occupy our thoughts and attention. The issue is still being decided through the required steps in the U.S. courts.

Because of the seriousness of the effect of the action taken by the United States lumber industry, it was necessary for the Governments of Canada, federal and provincial, to become involved. Thus the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney), with the backing of provinicial Premiers, albeit one reluctant Premier, put forward a proposal to the U.S. Commerce Secretary that would result in an out of court settlement. This entails a commitment on our part to raise various fees to a 15 per cent rate equal to the assessment made earlier by the Department of Commerce.

I read in this morning's paper that U.S. Commerce Secretary Baldrige endorses this plan and will be taking it forward on our behalf to the U.S. lumber industry. We compliment the Minister along with the provincial Premiers for this proposal which we trust will lead to a solution for a most difficult problem.

S.O. 21

EMPLOYMENT

NUMBER OF WOMEN IN TRAINING PROGRAMS

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, a recent study done by the Canadian Congress on Learning Opportunities for Women showed that between 1977 and 1985 the number of women in federal job-training programs dropped by 10 per cent. Short-term training programs under the Canada Jobs Strategy are not serving women adequately. The practice of contracting out training programs does not protect spaces for women, and it is a well-known fact that the training programs of employers favour men.

Immigrant and visible minority women, at their recent conference, repeatedly criticized the federal Government for not having more language and job-training programs combined with child care and counselling. Women from remote areas have little access to training or educational programs. Many women are trapped forever in low-paying and part-time jobs because of the requirement that they be unemployed and out of the labour force to qualify for training.

Token words spoken by First Ministers are not good enough. The Government must adequately fund relevant training for women, along with child care.

* * *

REFUGEES

ADMISSION FROM AFGHANISTAN OF SOVIET DEFECTORS

Mr. John Oostrom (Willowdale): Mr. Speaker, again, as in 1979 during the turmoil in Iran, the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) deserves our hearty congratulations. Through his sheer determination in dealing with a volatile geographical area of the world, he was successful in obtaining the release of five Soviet Army defectors from Afghanistan. This task was extremely complex since it involved overcoming overwhelming bureaucratic obstacles and the fact that no country wanted to assist them in crossing the border due to potential retaliation by the forces conducting an immoral war in Afghanistan.

• (1410)

These five defectors are solid proof that the Soviets are not succeeding in convincing even their own soldiers that this war is just. Their statements show the barbarity and brutality exhibited by the Soviets towards the Afghans in order to enforce the slavery that Communism brings to all the people it has touched. The Secretary of State for External Affairs has again shown the world that Canada will always assist those who seek freedom. We should all applaud his actions.

S.O. 21

INDUSTRY

FUTURE OF SYDNEY STEEL CORPORATION

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I rise today to condemn the Government's inaction on the future of the Sydney Steel Corporation. While the future of Sysco and the city of Sydney and the surrounding municipalities hangs in the balance, the Conservative Government drags its feet. This Government assured the people of Cape Breton that Sysco's future was not in doubt. But we all know now that Sysco's future is very much in doubt and the Government does nothing.

The Government of Canada, as the sole shareholder of Canadian National, could have ordered the railway to increase its orders of steel rail from Sysco and provide this mill with a long-term contract. As we all know, the Government has ignored its responsibility to the employees of Sysco, to the people of Sydney and the surrounding areas, and it has chosen to do absolutely nothing.

The Government has dragged its feet too long on assuring the second phase of the Sysco modernization program. It has failed to direct CN to live up to its responsibility as a federal Crown corporation to assist regional development. The people of Cape Breton will not soon forget the hollow Tory commitments on regional development.

* * *

PEACE

PARLIAMENTARIANS GLOBAL ACTION—FIVE CONTINENT PEACE INITIATIVE

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, along with some of my House colleagues I recently participated in a parliamentary forum at the United Nations sponsored by Parliamentarians Global Action. This unique, non-partisan group of over 600 parliamentarians from 35 countries on all continents, has an unprecedented track record.

No NGO has ever been able to mobilize so quickly and so successfully the leaders of six nations, Mexico, Sweden, India, Greece, Tanzania, and Argentina, into the powerful force called "The Five Continent Peace Initiative" that now shapes public opinion on the need to focus more on disarmament and development in the world.

Professor J. K. Galbraith's plea that we bring the world military power into full, candid, and open discussion by focusing on arms buyers as well as arms sellers was echoed by Peru's Prime Minister and Vice-President, Dr. Luis Castro. Canada's Ambassador for Disarmament, Doug Roche, in an October 16 speech to the UN General Assembly, stated:

> The current levels and trends in global military expenditures stand in sombre contrast to the state of the world economy.

I call on all parliamentarians and the Government to assist in the vital search for a solution to end the arms build-up.

God help us all if we fail!

* * *

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

FAIR TREATMENT URGED

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, at the First Ministers' Conference, and at a fund-raising affair in Calgary the other night, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) criticized the Premier of Manitoba and defended the indefensible decision to give the CF-18 contract to Montreal on the grounds that Manitoba had a low rate of unemployment.

If the Prime Minister applied that principle to other areas of Canada, northern Ontario could forget about getting any assistance because Toronto has a low rate of unemployment; rural Nova Scotia could forget about getting any Government assistance because Halifax has a low rate of assistance; and northern Saskatchewan and northern Manitoba would be in a similar situation because their cities have a low rate of unemployment. It is time for the Prime Minister to stop playing pork-barrel politics and treat all parts of Canada fairly.

* * *

SPORTS

CANADIAN FOOTBALL LEAGUE—GREY CUP FINALISTS—MEMBERS' WAGER

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I realize that it is against the Standing Orders to congratulate, so I will not congratulate the Hamilton Tiger-Cats on snatching victory from the jaws of defeat.

As I predicted last week, I have forced the Member for York South—Weston (Mr. Nunziata) to eat his words, and to eat his bet. I wish to inform you, Mr. Speaker, that I have just sealed a deal today with the Member for Edmonton North, the former great football player—albeit for the wrong team— and I trust that I may break the Standing Orders and use his name—Mr. Steve Paproski. We have it on the line that Hamilton is going to take Edmonton this weekend. The Grey Cup convention will be the highlight of a fantastic weekend for the Liberals and for Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

POLITICAL PARTIES

RESIGNATION OF PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE PARTY SUPPORTER

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, the people of Manitoba are very angry with the Government. I wish to read the letter of resignation from a member of the Tory Party, Mr. Douglas Broeska of Fort Garry. The letter is addressed to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and it states:

Dear Sir,

I am deeply sorry to have to inform you of my resignation from the Conservative Party of Canada. In addition, I intend to discontinue any future support or involvement of myself and my company with Conservative Party activities.

The blatant favouritism shown Canadair over Bristol Aerospace in the awarding of the CF-18 maintenance contract has shown the people of this country that the Prairies and Western Canada are effectively disenfranchised when it comes to making major development decisions.

It continues:

It is the reason that I hereby resign my Party membership and the basis on which I will work to defeat a Government which espouses such an unprincipled policy.

Respectfully,
H. Douglas Broeska.

• (1415)

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

TRADE

UNITED STATES DUTY ON CANADIAN SOFTWOOD LUMBER EXPORTS

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Now that the Canadian Government has buckled under once again to the United States, when is a final offer a final offer?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, there has been no buckling under of any kind. I assume my right hon. friend is referring to the lumber issue which is of such great importance to British Columbia, the province he represents. The position endorsed by the First Ministers was strongly endorsed by the Premier of British Columbia, the Government of British Columbia, and the Premier of Quebec, both of whom I believe control in excess of 80 per cent of the resource. The approach considered by the First Ministers is clearly in the national interest. We think that it will be of benefit to Canada—to British Columbia and to all other provinces.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister might forget that in citing some endorsement from some provinces, he is really saying that he yielded a purely federal matter in commerce and trade. He should be dealing with it on his own responsibility and on the responsibility of the Government of Canada.

[Translation]

CANADA'S ATTITUDE TOWARD UNITED STATES—CONSEQUENCES

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, does the Prime Minister realize that by giving in to the Americans on the lumber issue, he is now laying himself open to U.S. attacks on pulp and paper, steel, the Auto Pact, fish, grain and so many other Canadian products?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we have not made any concessions whatsoever to the Americans. The approach formulated by the federal Government and supported by all provincial premiers who were seriously involved, including Premier Bourassa from Quebec and his active support, is one that the federal Government judged to be in the national interest. The procedure is an entirely normal and responsible one, and with it we hope to be able to resolve a very serious problem, a problem that cannot be solved by the partisan appeals my hon. friend is making.

[English]

PRIME MINISTER'S POSITION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, could the Prime Minister tell the House, in his obsessive pursuit of a free trade agreement with the United States, how far he is planning to go in selling out Canada? When will he begin to stand up for Canadians?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, what the Minister for International Trade put forward for consideration following discussions—and it was a position endorsed by nine provinces, nine First Ministers—has the objective of wiping any negative decision of any precedent value from the books against Canada, of managing Canadian forest resources on exactly our own terms, and of keeping approximately $600 million per year in Canadians' pockets. I say to the Leader of the Opposition that he should explain to Mr. Vander Zalm and the people of British Columbia why he is proposing a course of action which would put $600 million per year in American pockets. We are opposed to that.

TERMS OF CANADIAN OFFER

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my question is also for the Prime Minister. While we are on the topic of explaining things, would the Prime Minister be good enough to explain to the House what it is exactly that we are offering the Americans? What is in the deal? What is in the proposal? So far we have seen no terms. Is it a stumpage fee? Is it an export duty? What in fact is the Canadian Government offering as part of its concession to the United States?

• (1420)

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, in terms of offering concessions, what we are talking about is a matter that had been decided by an appropriate authority in the United States. They are saying that "if you want access to our markets, here is the price of poker." We contested that. We continue to contest it very vigorously.

Mr. Orlikow: What is the price?

An Hon. Member: Vigorously?

Mr. Mulroney: The cost of the original price of poker—very vigorously and very energetically.

Mr. Tobin: Spoken like a wimp.

Mr. Speaker: Hon. Members will realize that all Hon. Members in this Chamber have the right to be heard both when they are asking questions and when they are answering them. Comments such as I just heard do not make it easier for Hon. Members to do the task that is appointed to them. They lead to disorder in the Chamber. I would ask that all Hon. Members restrain themselves. The Hon. Prime Minister.

Mr. Mulroney: What is taking place, Mr. Speaker, as I say, with the endorsation of the First Ministers involved, is an approach designed to resolve a very complex matter in Canada's favour which would guarantee our ongoing access to the market. His Leader is briefing the Member. I will be happy to answer any further questions he may have.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, as a supplementary, I would say to the Prime Minister that I think the matter has only been compounded in its confusion by his last statement.

You say you are negotiating on some kind of proposal—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Axworthy: Pardon me. I will rephrase my question, Mr. Speaker. I would like to ask the Prime Minister why it is that we are making an offer about which we do not know any of the details at the same time as the Prime Minister is saying that we are continuing to pursue the matter in front of the U.S. tribunals and the international tribunal. You cannot be proposing to negotiate a deal, and at the same time say that the deal is no good before a tribunal. You cannot contradict yourself continually this way. We would like to know what is it that you are doing. Are you trying to negotiate a deal or are you going to pursue the matter before those tribunals?

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member knows very well that the last part of his question went well beyond what is the accepted standard. I know the Hon. Member wants to put his question with force, but I would remind the Hon. Member that the Chair has had to rise several times with respect to questions of that sort. I know that the Hon. Member would please the House if he could put his questions with force and vigor, but I would ask that he be more careful about the use of the word you.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, I will rephrase the question, if I might. My question is for the Prime Minister. Is the Government now pursuing another final offer to the United States based upon imposing taxes here in Canada, or is it continuing to pursue the matter in the international tribunal and in the U.S. tribunals? What is it that the Government of Canada is proposing to do?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we are seeking to reach agreement on an approach that will resolve a very complex matter in Canada's interest that will keep the $600 to $700 million a year in Canadian hands to be plowed back into, for example, the forestry in British Columbia as opposed to elsewhere.

My hon. friend refers to the question of contradictions in regard to trade negotiations. I refer to an analysis by Mr. Cohn of The Toronto Star in which he concludes:

> Now, there are four Liberal positions on free trade: Johnston gung-ho for negotiations; Axworthy, calling for a moratorium; Gray, flat-out opposed. And then there is Turner . . . If there is confusion about all the crossed signals—

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member for Oshawa.

MINISTER'S ANNOUNCEMENT

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question concerns the position of the Government of Canada. First the Minister for International Trade said there should be no bargaining because it would undermine our position which was before a tribunal. Then she undermined that by saying there would be a 10 per cent final offer. Then she went to a 15 per cent offer, and then at the First Ministers' meeting she announced there had been a deal with the Department of Commerce in the U.S. which was, within hours, denied by the Department of Commerce. Does the Prime Minister think the Government of Canada has any credibility left in terms of negotiating now?

• (1425)

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think the Leader of the New Democratic Party will want to deal from objective facts. He says that the Minister announced a deal. The Minister did not announce a deal. The Minister announced agreement among us all on an approach to attempt to resolve—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Axworthy: Now it's an approach.

Mr. Mulroney: The sidekick of the Leader of the NDP, the Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry—

Mr. Axworthy: Be nice now.

Mr. Mulroney: —appears to be perplexed.

Mr. Axworthy: Dalton Camp is going to get you.

Mr. Mulroney: May I refer to the statement made. It was: "We have agreed on a proposal. There is agreement on the approach that Canada has taken". Perhaps my hon. friend has not seen the text. It continues: "Until there is something signed there is no deal obviously".

We were seeking, very much in the national interest and very much in a mature and reasonable way, to obtain agreement on an approach which we believe, when negotiated with the United States, will be of great benefit to Canada, British Columbia, the producers, and the timber industry.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, half the country saw the news report of the Minister for International Trade announcing that there was agreement with the Department of Commerce. Within hours the Department of Commerce of the United States announced that there had been no deal established with the Government of Canada. That is the truth, no matter what the Government wants to say today.

[Translation]

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is as follows.

In the United States, the Department of Commerce and even major newspapers like The Los Angeles Times are against the position taken by the American lumber industry on this issue.

My question to the Prime Minister is therefore: Why is the Canadian Government supporting the U.S. industry?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, it is exactly the other way around.

The Government of Canada has agreed, for instance, to support the Government of Quebec, which manages this natural resource and which under another formula would have lost as much as $150 million per year. The Leader of the New Democratic Party supports a position that would cost the Government of Quebec between $100 and 150 million per year. That is totally unacceptable.

[English]

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister knows that if the Government of Canada spoke up with the traditional position taken by the Government of Canada, we could be winning that case in the international tribunals without costing Canadians one cent.

GOVERNMENT ACTIONS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): The Prime Minister in the House, and the Minister outside the House, have said today that no precedent is being set by this plea bargaining by the Government of Canada. The position which we have taken in the U.S. is now being considered there and is being appealed to GATT by the Government of Canada. Will the Prime Minister not acknowledge that by this constant plea bargaining we are undermining the future of several other sectors in Canada?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I do not know why my friend draws in words like "plea bargaining" which have pejorative connotations for other areas. There have been and always will be discussions on matters this complex. We are attempting to resolve the issue with conditions favourable to Canada, British Columbia, Manitoba, Quebec and the other involved provinces.

Mr. Benjamin: You just wrecked our case. I sure wouldn't hire you for a lawyer.

Mr. Mulroney: One of the NDP Members just said that the Government surrendered the case. Jack Munro, the President of the IWA in Vancouver, said on Friday that the Government was completely right on course and that he supported the initiative of the Government and that of the Government of British Columbia completely.

CANADIAN APPROACH

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, this afternoon the Prime Minister looks very much like a fellow who has fallen into quicksand and is foolishly trying to kick his way out. We all know what happens. Will he confirm whether he is telling the House of Commons that, contrary to statements made by the Minister for International Trade last weekend in Vancouver, in fact she has reached no agreement with Secretary of Commerce in the United States, Malcolm Baldrige? Will he also tell us why the Deputy Minister for International Trade, Mr. Gerry Shannon, is in Washington today trying to negotiate a deal that was announced last Friday by the Prime Minister and the Minister for International Trade?

• (1430)

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has his facts wrong. On Friday the Minister did not say there was an agreement with the United States. With your permission, let me quote the following:

> Without committing himself to all the details involved, Secretary Baldrige informed Minister Carney that he endorsed such an approach—

That is what we are talking about, an approach to try to get out of this very difficult and complicated situation.

IMPACT ON HOUSING COSTS

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Prime Minister, who has now become the head waiter for the White House, compared to when he was head waiter to the provinces. Why did the Government of Canada not consult the forest industry in this country before taking this approach? The Government did not consult all the provinces in advance of Friday. Does the Government know what the impact of a 15 per cent increase in stumpage fees will be on the domestic housing industry in this country? Will it be inflationary?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, may I just say that it is better to be a head waiter than a dumb waiter.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Foster: Pretty dumb answer.

Mr. Mazankowski: Pretty dumb question.

UNITED STATES COUNTERVAIL DUTY

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. On October 1 the Minister for International Trade made a 10 per cent out-of-court offer in relation to the duty. On October 16 the U.S. Department of Commerce came down with a 15 per cent preliminary ruling. On October 21 the Minister for International Trade said:

First, we will fight to reverse this verdict.

We then learned last Friday that 15 per cent will be the new top. There are more mixed signals than one would find in the backfield of the Toronto Argonauts.

Does the Prime Minister stand by what the Minister for International Trade said in Vancouver, that 15 per cent this time is the top, the final irreversible offer by the Government of Canada?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member knows that these negotiations are taking place. An agreement was made between the provinces, which own the resources, and the federal Government on an approach to try to solve the problem. That is being undertaken right now.

SUBMISSION MADE TO GATT

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Prime Minister. On October 27 the Minister for International Trade said:

—we feel that this preliminary ruling by the U.S. Commerce Department has no basis in U.S. law, is badly flawed, and is inconsistent with the U.S. obligations under the GATT.

Will the Prime Minister and the Government continue this fight before GATT, or are we buckling under entirely?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the case before GATT is still going on at this time.

ANNOUNCED CLOSURE OF TERRACE BAY SAWMILL

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. This morning the president of Kimberly-Clark Canada called me to say that the sawmill at Terrace Bay, Ontario, was being closed. He said this is a direct result of the 15 per cent tariff. He also said that even if the 15 per cent were to be applied in a different way, as the Government has proposed in its approach to the Americans, sawmills all across northern Ontario would be closed and thousands of jobs would be lost. Why has he agreed to approach the Americans in this manner, rather than fighting that unfair 15 per cent, because we could have won?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I remind the House that the Liberals brag that they got rid of the problem in 1983. The problem did not go away. It is still here. We are proposing to try to solve the problem once and for all so we do not have it hanging around.

STUMPAGE FEES—EFFECT ON NORTHERN ONTARIO

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Prime Minister. Is he aware that if the 15 per cent were to be applied to stumpage fees, it would mean a threat in northern Ontario not only to the lumber industry but to the production of pulp as well? Why has he decided to abandon northern Ontario? Is it because he knows he cannot hold on to those Tory seats anyway?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, on the contrary, we are not abandoning northern Ontario.

Mr. Penner: You are.

Mr. McDermid: We are not.

Mr. Penner: You are.

Mr. McDermid: We are fighting on their behalf to preserve those jobs—

Mr. Penner: You have abandoned northern Ontario.

Mr. McDermid: We are fighting to solve a very difficult problem that has been around for many years. The Hon. Member knows that.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Winnipeg North.

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

PRICE OF DRUGS—EFFECT OF AMENDING PATENT LAW

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. On innumerable occasions, both inside and outside the House, he said that the results of the patent legislation which he has brought forward will not mean increases in the price of prescription drugs. On Friday he said that there is a worst case scenario in which this could very well happen. Given that the generic companies have said that this legislation will increase their prices very substantially, and that the provinces have said it will add millions of dollars to the cost of their pharmacare programs, what information does he have on the actual increases that will take place after this legislation is passed?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the answers to all those questions are contained in my speech to the House during second reading on Bill C-22 last Thursday. I remind the Hon. Member that that is probably the reason for Citation 359(12) in Beauchesne which states that questions should not be asked about subjects that are currently a matter of debate before the House.

EXTENSION OF PATENT RIGHTS

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, the Minister also told journalists that the legislation was needed: "To quiet criticism from the U.S., Britain, France and other countries that Canada does not protect patents properly." Is the Government also extending the life of all patents from 17 to 20 years because it is afraid that we cannot have a patent policy of our own within the industrial property conventions we have already signed?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, again this is a good reason to get the Bill to committee. The effect of moving from 17 to 20 is no change. Twenty years comes into effect as soon as the patent is applied for, while previously it was after it was granted, which was three years. The 3 and 17 add up to 20, or no change.

* * *

AIR CANADA

EMPLOYEES' PENSION PLAN—REQUEST FOR FULL ANNUAL REPORTS

Mr. Ross Belsher (Fraser Valley East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport. Many retired Air Canada employees are concerned about the lack of information being made available to them on the excess funds in their pension plan. Will the Minister allay their concerns by asking Air Canada to provide them with full annual reports of the contributions made to their pension fund and ensure that the full amounts of the surplus funds be used for enhancing their pensions?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, there is an annual report on the Air Canada pension fund and that report is made available to the pension committee. The pension committee includes representatives of management, employee groups, and retired employees. The report is not distributed but the information from it is available to all groups through their representatives on the committee. If anyone has any difficulty getting the necessary information, if they contact me I will personally see that they get it.

* * *

[Translation]

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT TABLE SECRET STUDIES ON DRUG PRICES

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. Over the weekend the Minister admitted what thousands of Canadians already know, namely that his Bill will have a direct impact on the price Canadians pay for drugs.

Since the Minister himself did acknowledge that it will have a very negative impact on the price of drugs in Canada, would he tell the House why he is not prepared to table forthwith the secret studies on drug prices? What does he have to hide?

• (1440)

[English]

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I am more than willing to have a complete discussion. That is why I am anxious for the debate to carry on so we can get the Bill to committee and have that discussion.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, the Minister for hoof and mouth disease on the weekend—

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member, I am sure, would not want to proceed in that way. I know she will probably withdraw the remark.

Ms. Copps: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I will withdraw the nomenclature.

MINISTER'S POSITION

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): The Minister stated on the weekend that he was not going to give this information to the House because he did not want to provide "fodder" so the Opposition can "beat us over the head".

Mr. Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Question.

Ms. Copps: Is that not just an admission that the facts in that secret study are so dangerous he does not even want them brought up on the floor of the House?

An Hon. Member: Cover up.

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): No, Mr. Speaker, I am most anxious that all the facts be discussed. That is why I am asking the Hon. Member to urge her colleagues to help us take it to committee so we can study all those facts and she and her constituents can be aware that this is good legislation for Canada—

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Table the stuff if it's that good.

Mr. Andre: —and it is going to generate thousands of jobs. It will provide a lot of research funds and is something the Hon. Member really ought to support.

* * *

CHILD CARE

REQUEST FOR BUDGETARY MEASURE

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister who stated at the First Ministers' Conference that his commitment to a child care program is real and he is prepared to allocate substantial resources to this initiative. I commend him for that. In view of the urgent child care crisis right across Canada, will the Prime Minister allocate in the next Budget an emergency federal fund for child care services?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Indeed, Mr. Speaker, the commitment of the Government to child care is real and substantial. We have worked very closely with the provinces. The Minister of National Health and Welfare will be convening, I think in early January, a meeting of the appropriate Ministers to deal specifically with this issue.

It must be dealt with, as my hon. friend knows, jointly with the provinces, and the federal Government will be providing both leadership and resources to bring this about.

Ms. Mitchell: Mr. Speaker, we have a national case of child neglect in Canada. We need action now. It could take years to complete those negotiations.

REQUEST FOR $320 MILLION

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Will the federal Government do what Katie Cooke advocated and allocate $320 million in the upcoming Budget and begin to deal with this emergency during the period when negotiations are going on with the provinces? We need to upgrade and extend child care services in the meantime.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, my hon. friend is quite right when reference is made to the fact that this very important matter of child care has been neglected by the federal Government for years. That is an accurate statement.

Ms. Mitchell: What are you going to do about it?

Mr. Mulroney: My hon. friend will not have to wait for years to have this matter resolved.

Ms. Mitchell: This Budget?

Mr. Mulroney: It is a priority for this Government and I hope for this House.

Ms. Mitchell: This Budget?

Mr. Mulroney: On behalf of Canadian women, appropriate action will be taken.

* * *

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

COST AND PRICE OF DRUGS

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, the Government tells us the price of drugs may go up for provincial Governments and that is why there is $100 million allocated in the Bill—that is the cost of drugs—but the price of drugs will not go up for Canadian citizens. The Minister explains that difference by saying: "The truth lies in recognizing the difference between price and cost". That is about as clear as Milk of Magnesia. I would like to give the Minister an opportunity to explain in clear and simple English what he means when he says the cost of drugs may go up for the provincial Governments but the price of drugs will not go up for Canadians?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I sure wish the Hon. Member and his colleagues were willing to listen to that explanation.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Well?

Mr. Andre: If they were, they would help us take this Bill to committee so I could explain exactly that fact, and explain to Canadians, through the committee, how thousands of jobs are going to be created—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Andre: —and the net benefits which will accrue to Canada as a result of this legislation.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, the Americans have persuaded the Government to increase the price of drugs to Canadians. They have persuaded the Government to increase the price of lumber to Canadians. I ask the Prime Minister if the Government does not now agree that the cost of satisfying the Americans is too high a price for Canadians to pay?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I remind the Hon. Member again of what the Government he supported in June of 1983 said: "To generate further growth in this industry, the Government of Canada has decided to change the Patent Act to rebalance the 1969 policy". We are balancing the 1969 policy, carrying forward on the decision his Government had made.

Mr. Gauthier: That's a set-up.

* * *

ENERGY

ALBERTA OIL COMPANIES

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister who said the other day in western Canada in response to cries for economic health: "Canada is much more important, much bigger than a cheque". It seems to me that westerners do not want a blank cheque, they want a pay cheque. Will the Prime Minister tell the House what he meant by that and what concrete action he proposes to take to help, for example, the small Canadian oil companies which are now going under in Alberta?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, for example, an indication of—

Mr. de Jong: No!

Mr. Mulroney: Is that against the law, Mr. Speaker, what is going on over there?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An Hon. Member: They are strong arming. They are not the odd couple.

Mr. Speaker: Hon. Members will agree that much goes on that is not against the law.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mulroney: If it is legal, so be it.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): He is getting adjusted, that is all.

Mr. Mulroney: In response to my hon. friend, what was intended was simply that, of course, the value of Canadian citizenship ought not to be measured by what Edmonton or Victoria "did for me yesterday". Canada is much more important than simply a balance sheet added up at the end of any given week. It is a question of our heritage and what we mean to one another and what regions can do for one another.

However, regarding illustrations of the kinds of actions on behalf of national unity, I think the position adopted by the Government of Canada, which was so strongly supported by the Government of British Columbia on Friday, is a clear indication, and getting rid of the PGRT in close co-operation with the Government of Alberta is also an indication of what we can do together.

SITUATION OF SMALL OIL COMPANIES

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, getting rid of the PGRT really only helped the big American multinational oil companies, not the small Canadian companies. Will the Prime Minister tell us why it is Government policy, according to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, that financially troubled Canadian oil companies are up for sale to foreign buyers? Is that not a step backwards and not really of any particular help to Canadian small oil producers?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, what we are trying to do, in concert with the Government of Alberta and the industry, is try to deal with the new situation—new this year—brought about by the calamitous decline, from a producing point of view, of prices in energy. That is a situation which did not obtain in 1984. It is a situation which did not obtain when we put together the Western Accord. The Western Accord was clearly beneficial because 1985 was a great year in terms of energy in western Canada.

Mr. Benjamin: Tell that to the folks in P.E.I.

Mr. Mulroney: We now have new dimensions of a problem which we are going to have to work with very closely. I am hopeful we will be as successful in dealing with the new problem as we were when we came in and were able to negotiate the Western Accord.

* * *

LABOUR CONDITIONS

ENGAGEMENT OF MONTREAL COMPANY TO STUDY YOUTH UNEMPLOYMENT

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment. Why was an untendered contract in the amount of $124,000 granted to Secor Inc. of Montreal to study youth unemployment when Claude Forget was a partner in that firm and had already been given a similar mandate as chairman of the Royal Commission on Unemployment Insurance? And how was Secor able to produce its report on September 5, 1986, three days after it signed the contract? Who in Government approved of this wasteful and bizarre deal?

Hon. Jean J. Charest (Minister of State (Youth)): Mr. Speaker, it was agreed upon by myself with Mr. Gaucher and Mr. Wright that they needed an analysis done and not a report on very specific issues concerning youth. We have an ongoing agreement to share in this research. That is why it was done in this way. It was agreed upon to use Secor because of the expertise they knew was there, and Canada Consulting Group was also used for the basis of the analysis we now have at our disposal.

AWARDING OF CONTRACT

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, we already had the Senate Committee on Youth reporting in February, 1986. We had the President of the University of Waterloo given a similar mandate in March, 1986. How can the Minister justify the fact that he only approached one contractor when the Treasury Board policy states that when a contract is over $50,000 several contractors must be considered? How does he explain that?

• (1450)

Hon. Jean J. Charest (Minister of State (Youth)): Mr. Speaker, Mr. Gaucher, Mr. Wright and myself agreed that this group was the best prepared. With respect to the very specific questions, we wanted it done rapidly at that time, which is a big difference between the way we operate and the way the previous Government operated. In March of 1983 the back-benchers of the Party of the Hon. Member signed a petition asking Cabinet for a military youth program, and in the same breath complained that the then Minister did not—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

CONFLICT OF INTEREST INQUIRY

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. It concerns a $124,000 contract given to Secor. Does the Minister not consider it a conflict of interest to give this contract to Secor when Claude Forget is the Chairman of the Commission of Inquiry into Unemployment Insurance, which federal inquiry is making a major part of its study youth unemployment? Is it not a conflict of interest when a company in which he is a partner obtains a contract to study something he is already studying?

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, there is no conflict of interest since the Forget Commission does have a mandate to inquire into unemployment insurance. There is no connection, in my opinion. We do not feel that the fact that they belong to the same company creates a conflict of interest, and this is why both studies can be made at the same time by the same company without raising the possibility of a conflict of any kind.

INQUIRY WHY COMMISSION USED UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE FUNDS

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): So what is this all about, Mr. Speaker? The Commission also spent close to $2 million more than provided in the Budget. Can the Minister explain why the commission used unemployment insurance funds instead of general revenues? Why did the commission carry out its inquiry by spending the money of Canadian workers, men and women alike, instead of general revenues? What does the Minister have to say about that?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): There are two questions, Mr. Speaker. With respect to the first one, the figures are false. We have spent, that is the Forget Commission so far has spent and will spend a maximum of $5.2 million. Its appropriations were in excess of $6 million, but they will not be totally expended; $5.2 million is the official figure.

Second, I already answered the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East concerning the use of Unemployment Insurance Commission Fund; there is a provision under which we are authorized to use the general fund, this is why we did just that, and everything is quite normal.

* * *

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

REQUEST FOR REASSURANCE OF QUEBECERS

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs and deals with the pharmaceutical industry. In recent days, Quebecers have been very worried by the negative attitude of the leader of the Socialist party, who is making every effort to prevent a job-creating pharmaceutical industry from locating in Quebec.

Mr. Speaker, this massive and negative movement of Socialists against Quebec is of concern to us and I would like to ask the Minister to reassure my friends in Quebec.

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): First, I would like to thank the Hon. Member for Levis for asking this question. The Bill introduced in the House three weeks ago is good for Canada and for Quebec. Indeed, pharmaceutical companies have already announced several investments in Quebec. We expect this bill to produce over $600 million in Quebec.

[English]

TRADE

UNITED STATES DUTY ON CANADIAN SOFTWOOD LUMBER—GOVERNMENT CONSULTATION

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Right Hon. Prime Minister. It concerns the softwood lumber issue. I wish to quote for the Prime Minister comments made by the director of the Maritime Lumber Bureau who said:

> I'm horrified that the Government would go over our heads to make this deal when the industry has spent $10 to $12 million fighting this thing, and was on the way to a decent settlement—

I ask the Right Hon. Prime Minister where was the consultation with the industry, the people who are so desperately affected by this particular move by the Government of Canada? Has the Prime Minister abandoned consultation with the industry with regard to a very important issue, the softwood lumber issue?

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, not at all. Consultations on this particular subject have gone on over a great number of months with the industry and the unions. As the Prime Minister said today, the unions are solidly behind this decision, this approach which we are taking with the United States.

Mr. Dingwall: Mr. Speaker, I say to the Hon. Member, he is not a head waiter, he is not a dumb waiter. He is like the Prime Minister; he is a dumb head waiter.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member will recognize that that is probably not necessary. Will he proceed and use more appropriate language, please?

Mr. Dingwall: Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister, if he has guts enough to stand in his place and answer questions in the national interest.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Some Hon. Members: Sit down!

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Kenora—Rainy River.

* * *

ABORIGINAL RIGHTS

SETTLEMENT OF COMPREHENSIVE CLAIMS

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Native people in Canada have been waiting for some time for a reaffirmation of the commitments the Prime Minister gave them during the early months of his mandate. He now has that opportunity with the introduction of a policy on comprehensive claims to Cabinet. Will the Prime Minister stand up in the House and answer the native people of Canada by providing a statement that his Government will indeed bring in a policy that provides for the fair and equitable settlement of comprehensive claims?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, to reiterate a point which I think has been made by the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, may I say to the Hon. Member that he in fact does take this whole question very seriously. He is working very hard in terms of the comprehensive land policy. We expect that progress will be made.

GOVERNMENT FUNDING

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that an under-funded policy could lead to costly court settlements and undoubted damage to the social fabric of Canada, will the Minister of Justice assure the House and the native people of Canada that the policy will be funded so that claims can be settled fairly with all the resources necessary for that settlement?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, no one can doubt the hard work that my colleague, the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, is putting into this particular endeavour. I simply want to reassure the Hon. Member and the House that this is a matter which the Government takes seriously in conjunction with other matters affecting the aboriginal people of Canada. I can tell the Hon. Member that when the policy has been determined and the consultations have been carried out it will be one which he will be happy to support.

* * *

FITNESS AND AMATEUR SPORT

STUDENTS' ACCEPTANCE OF AMERICAN ATHLETIC SCHOLARSHIPS

Mr. Jim Jepson (London East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport. There is a growing concern that some of Canada's top athletes are leaving the country to attend schools in the United States on athletic scholarships. Will the Minister tell the House what he is doing, what efforts he is making to keep our young and talented athletes at home in Canada?

Hon. Otto Jelinek (Minister of State (Fitness and Amateur Sport)): Mr. Speaker, this is indeed a problem that is of great concern to many Canadians. That is why some time ago I initiated discussions with interested parties, including the provinces, with a view to developing a scholarship program. I am glad to report that recently the CIAU has supported this initiative and principle. As a result, the former President of York University, Dr. Ian MacDonald, has accepted the role of co-ordinating our efforts to come up with some resolutions and suggestions which we hope to start implementing as early as next year.

* * *

INDUSTRY

SALE OF MITEL CORPORATION—EMPLOYMENT SAFEGUARDS

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew—Nipissing—Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion. However, in his absence I will direct my question to the Prime Minister.

On February 26 of this year speaking on behalf of the Government of Canada with regard to the sale of Mitel to British Telecommunications the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion stated:

> Jobs will be preserved as a result of this transaction as Mitel's manufacturing as well as research and development activities will continue to be carried out in Canada.

What safeguards to back up this commitment of the Government of Canada were placed on the conditions of the sale of Mitel to British Telecommunications?

• (1500)

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion I would say that I know he and members of the Government recognize the unfortunate situation that has occurred with respect to Mitel. I can also tell the Hon. Member that the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion is looking into the matter and in fact is checking out the commitments under the safeguards to which the Hon. Member referred.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT TABLE DOCUMENTS CONCERNING SALE

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew—Nipissing—Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, will the Government undertake to table in the House of Commons today the details of the sale of Mitel to British Telecommunications so that Canadians can find out what provisions, if any, were made to keep this research and development and these jobs in Canada?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I will take that question under advisement. I think the Hon. Member would know that documents which would pertain to commercial confidences would have to be excluded, but I will certainly undertake to look into that and report back to the Hon. Member.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

AFGHANISTAN—SOVIET INVASION—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Prime Minister. The Government deserves the congratulations of the House and the Canadian people for having successfully achieved the freedom of the Soviet prisoners from Afghanistan.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. McCurdy: However, my question is the far more serious one of the freedom of the people of Afghanistan. What steps has the Government taken to obtain the removal from Afghanistan of the Soviet Union military which has imposed upon those people a dictatorship of foreigners, freedom from which should be achieved by the participation of all free countries in the world?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member knows that Canada took a very strong stand against the invasion of Afghanistan in 1979 and took very strong measures to demonstrate that. It was under the leadership of the then Secretary of State for External Affairs, my colleague, the Hon. Member for Kingston and the Islands, and I think she deserves to be fully commended for that initiative.

The passage of time has not diminished our resolve with regard to the unacceptability of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. We are also very deeply concerned about the massive violation of human rights and are doing everything in our power not only to facilitate an end to the war that is taking place but particularly to deal with the area of human rights. I join with the Hon. Member in congratulating all those who were involved, including the Kingston Whig-Standard, the Ukrainian Immigrant Aid Society, the Secretary of State for External Affairs and indeed the entire Department of External Affairs, in the latest very bold initiative.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[Translation]

PATENT ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Andre that Bill C-22, an Act to amend to Patent Act and to provide for certain matters in relation thereto, be read a second time and referred to a legislative committee; and the amendment of Mrs. Killens (p. 1378).

Mr. Speaker: When the House rose at one o'clock, the Hon. Member for Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands (Mr. Manly) had the floor.

[English]

Mr. Manly: Mr. Speaker, when I was interrupted at one o'clock, I had been referring to the Eastman Report. I would like to put before the House some of the points made by the Eastman Commission regarding the drug industry in Canada.

First, with regard to the growth in profits in the drug industry since the 1969 amendment, Dr. Eastman says—Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I could have some order?

Mr. Speaker: I know all Hon. Members will want to hear the remarks of the Hon. Member for Cowichan—Malahat—The Islands (Mr. Manly).

Mr. Manly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Regarding the growth in profits in the drug industry since the 1969 amendments, Professor Eastman has said:

An overall summary of the comparison of the growth and development of the pharmaceutical industry in Canada relative to that of the United States yields the straightforward conclusion that growth has been more buoyant in Canada than it has been in the United States since 1967.

That statement appears on page 65 of the report. On page xix, Professor Eastman said:

Compulsory licensing has not had a discernible negative impact on the profitability and rate of growth of the pharmaceutical industry in Canada as a whole.

Looking at the question of employment in the drug industry since the amendments were made in 1969, Professor Eastman, as recorded on page xix of the report, said:

Turning to employment, it turns out that total employment in Canada between 1967 and 1982 rose by 28.8 per cent whereas in the United States it grew 22.6 per cent; the number of production employees in Canada rose by 29.9 per cent and in the United States by 13.2 per cent.

One could ask if all this growth and employment occurred as a result of the generic drugs taking business away from patent-holding companies, and the answer is no. Again, on page xix, Professor Eastman has said:

The growth in the industry in Canada is not dominated by the growth of the generic sector. In 1969 the number of employees in the industry was 12,645, few of whom were in generic firms. In 1982, the employment was 15,707 of whom approximately 1,300 were employees of generic firms.

In other words, the vast majority of employees in the Canadian drug industry were not employed by generic firms and the growth itself was not at the expense of employment in patent-holding pharmaceutical companies.

One could ask whether or not the major pharmaceuticals were suffering unduly from this. Professor Eastman is very clear about that. On page 274 of the report, he said:

In spite of (several problems in making cross-country comparisons), the data—suggest at the very least that pharmaceutical operations in Canada are no less profitable than they are in the other countries in which these multinational corporations operate.

I believe these statements illustrate very conclusively that the 1969 amendments to the Patent Act benefited the Canadian people, benefited employment in Canada's pharmaceutical industry and did not impact unfairly on the major pharmaceutical companies.

Just to give the House an idea of how important the 1969 amendments were to the Canadian people, in 1983 alone, some $211 million was saved by Canadian consumers who were able to purchase generics rather than higher priced brand-name drugs.

In an article of June 23, 1986, The Ottawa Citizen published results of a survey which sampled some 20 drugs used to treat such diseases as diabetes, anxiety, insomnia, arthritis and urinary problems. Of the 20 drugs surveyed, 15 were available in generic form. The survey showed that the purchase of 1,000 units of each of these 15 drugs would cost on average $42.41 for the generic Canadian drugs; $83.49 for the generic American equivalents; $137.71 for the brand Canadian equivalents; and a staggering $349.80 for the brand American equivalents.

Whether we are comparing Canadian generics with American generics or Canadian generics with Canadian brand names or Canadian brand names with American brand names, the results are the same and are very conclusive. The 1969 drug legislation which made changes to the Patent Act was very beneficial for Canadian consumers.

• (1510)

These are the changes that the present Government wants to rescind. It wants to turn back the clock to the pre-1969 situation when Canada was paying the highest, or the second highest drug prices in the industrialized world, instead of in the present situation where we are paying perhaps the second lowest.

We have tried to get information from the Government as to what the increased costs to consumers will be. The Government has refused to release any studies, citing reasons of confidentiality. A study that was done by Currie Coopers & Lybrand, a respected accounting firm, shows that by 1995 Canadians will be paying some $650 million a year more than they are now paying for their drugs, if this legislation goes through.

The Bill before us gives the pharmaceutical companies 10 years of protection from any generic equivalents. Not only that, it is retroactive to include drugs that are already in the pipeline. Generic companies are working at present to try to get on the market their generic products equivalent to those brand name drugs. Drugs that are presently in the pipeline will be adversely affected.

How the Minister can maintain that this is not going to cost one cent more, that there is not going to be one cent of price increase, is something that the average Canadian will not accept. Even the present generics will cost more. Last week Luciano Calenti, the Chairman of the Canadian Drug Manufacturers Association stated:

Generic drug companies will have no choice but to raise prices because of the Government's new drug patent legislation.

The Government uses three justifications for bringing in this legislation. The first is perhaps the most basic. It is what the Government calls the intellectual property argument. It sees patents as a form of intellectual property. The Minister in his speech defending the legislation appealed to a centuries-old tradition. There are also centuries-old traditions where knowledge is to be used for the benefit of all humankind, not just the personal advantage of the people who developed it.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Manly: I wish to remind the House that no property rights are absolute, whether they are intellectual property rights, or not. This summer when I returned to my place in British Columbia I found that the Department of Highways had driven stakes through my property because it thinks that it might want to build a highway there. My property rights are subject to considerations of the public good.

That is also true in terms of intellectual property. There is a great need for the Government to maintain some level of control in this area. For example, research that has been done by the Imperial Oil Company of Canada does not belong to the Imperial Oil Company of Canada. It belongs to the parent company. The idea of intellectual property can be used for syphoning intellectual research results away from Canada down to the headquarters of multinationals in the United States or elsewhere.

What are the rules for intellectual property regarding drugs? Even the present legislation acknowledges that there are some limitations. The present Patent Act provides for a two-year protection period. The Government legislation states that there will be a 10-year protection period. Even the Government's own legislation acknowledges that there are limits to the concept of intellectual property rights. These limits have to be very clearly stated. They have to be made in the interests of the Canadian people. The multinationals have known what the rules have been since 1969. They have been prepared to come into Canada under those rules, and they have been able to make money under those rules. I do not feel that the justification of property rights stands up—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret to inform the Hon. Member that his time has more than expired.

Do we have questions and comments?

Mr. Greenaway: Mr. Speaker, before lunch the Hon. Member gave us a litany of items about the present Government, what it had accomplished and what it had not accomplished. One of the things that the Hon. Member said was that we had gutted the National Energy Program. As a western Member, I was wondering if the Member or his Party was in favour of the National Energy Program?

Mr. Manly: The position of our Party on the National Energy Program is very well known to the Hon. Member. We supported some aspects of it, and we opposed other aspects of it. The part that the Government did away with that I am particularly concerned about was the back-in provisions, where Canadian people have supported exploration and drilling through their taxes.

On the basis of that, we believe that the Canadian people, through their Government, should have the right to a certain percentage of the resources that were found as a result of that exploration. The Government has done away with that. That was another example of caving in to the United States, which was not in the interests of the Canadian people. I am sure that the Hon. Member would agree with me.

Mr. Greenaway: No, I do not agree you. I was wondering if you consider that that one item justified gutting the whole program?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Would the Hon. Members address their questions and comments through the Chair, please.

Mr. Manly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will try to do that.

Certainly the back-in provision, as far as we were concerned, was one of the most important aspects of the National Energy Policy. I will concede to the Hon. Member that the Liberal Government, before this one, had already gutted its own National Energy Program when it did not include strong Canadian content regulations, regulations that would have made it the type of National Energy Program we on this side could have supported 100 per cent. But the elimination of the back-in was a very serious mistake on the part of this Government.

Mr. Murphy: Mr. Speaker, the member of our caucus who was speaking earlier was making an excellent speech as to why he was opposed to the legislation which is being shoved down the throats of Canadians, especially those who are really suffering because of the already fairly high drug costs. This legislation will increase drug costs, especially for the elderly. The Member had one or two more remarks to make. May he finish his speech and explain exactly why he is opposed to this legislation.

Mr. Manly: Mr. Speaker, there are a couple of other points that the Government has given as justification for this legislation. The first is that there would be a prices review board to monitor prices. The Government states that even if prices go up, there is the prices review board. Everybody in the House, including the Members opposite, know what this Government's attitude is toward such a mechanism as a prices review board. They regard that as the very essence of unnecessary regulation. We saw this Government going around the country during the last election campaign making promises that it was going to be deregulating. It is bringing in legislation to deregulate the whole transport area. Do we have any confidence that it will bring in a prices review board that is going to have any real teeth, that is going to be able to take hold and say to these pharmaceutical companies, "Your prices are too high. We are going to cut them down". That is not the style of this Government. It does not believe in that approach to regulation. It believes in deregulation and letting the market decide.

The second thing, Mr. Speaker, is that they have been promising a number of research jobs. There are no commitments in this legislation, and there have been no real commitments that are ironclad which have been given by the pharmaceutical companies. There have been a number of promises. We hear about all the possible research jobs for young Canadians coming out of college. But we have seen what the action of this Government has been in the last few weeks. It has been cutting research jobs, and slashing the National Research Council. We have no confidence whatever in its whole research policy.

I would simply urge Members opposite to think of what is in the best interests of their constituents. The fact is that their constituents will be paying higher drug prices. Provinces will pay more for pharmacare programs. This Bill is not in the interests of Canadians. It is not in the interests of their constituents. I urge them to send a message to Cabinet to withdraw the Bill.

• (1520)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret that the time provided for questions and comments has now terminated.

[Translation]

Mrs. Gabrielle Bertrand (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the new patent policy tabled in the House by the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre) aims to achieve several objectives. One is to make Canada's pharmaceutical industry into a first-rate innovative sector by substantially increasing investment in research and development.

Today, Canada's position in drug research is not a particularly enviable one. In fact, we spend relatively little in this field, compared to other countries. Canada ranks far behind the United Kingdom, Switzerland and the Federal Republic of Germany, while Japan, the United States and Italy are also ahead of Canada in the amount of money they spend on research. The kind of research done in Canada in the pharmaceutical sector is not considered basic research. It is mainly pharmaceutical formulation involving clinical research only.

The reason is the climate of uncertainty and hostility that has prevailed in Canada since 1969, when a system of compulsory licences for importing active ingredients was introduced. Brand companies had no guarantee as to the period of protection they could expect for products patented in Canada. Developing a new drug is laborious and risky. Sometimes it takes as long as ten years, while the financial investment is considerable, between $50 and $100 million. In this country, as soon a product had substantial commercial potential, it could be copied by a manufacturer of generic equivalents without the brand company receiving adequate compensation for its risk-taking and the considerable investment made. This unfair situation has been criticized both nationally and internationally, Canada being the only industrialized country that puts restrictions on intellectual property.

The amendments to the Patent Act will change that. The new policy will encourage research by broadening patent protection. The potential for expanding research in the Canadian pharmaceutical sector is considerable. Our new policy will lead to unprecedented growth in R&D investment in Canada.

Drug manufacturing companies have formally agreed to boost their research and development outlays, which now amount to 4.9 per cent of their sales. They will go up to 8 per cent by 1990 and 10 per cent by 1995. In other words, implementing our current policy will double these investments, $1.4 billion more over the next decade. Since last June only, over-all investments announced from coast to coast are roughly $647.6 million.

In addition, Hon. Members should note that these investments will put Canada in the same league as Japan, the United States and Italy with respect to expenditures for drug research in terms of percentage of sales.

We also made it clear to the companies that they will be expected to concentrate their efforts in both clinical and basic research. This might be the appropriate time to point out that our definition of research and development is consistent with that of the Income Tax regulations. More research spells more benefits, and it has been estimated that this will create more than 3,000 jobs for Canadians.

Our graduates will have challenging employment opportunities, and their scientific and technical know-how will be a source of lasting benefits to all of us.

Universities, hospitals and private research institutions also stand to gain from increased research. Everything indicates that these institutions can expect to receive up to 30 per cent or $420 million of higher research and development outlays.

The new policy will be a boon to all regions of Canada, not only to Quebec and Ontario. Companies doing research have been encouraged to have more of their work done by universities and hospitals throughout the country.

As I have already mentioned, these installations will get over $400 million more. For instance, it was recently announced that research investments in British Columbia would increase from $1.5 million to $15 million by 1995 as a result of the amendments to the Patent Act.

I should add that the Medical School of the University of British Columbia and its affiliated university hospitals will be the main beneficiaries of these investments. In Alberta, the Bio-Mera research company in Calgary and other firms in Edmonton will also benefit.

Medically, the increase in research will have immeasurable benefits. First, there is the medical knowledge that our researchers will acquire through analysis and tests on drugs. This knowledge will lead to the discovery of new drugs and to the development of better pharmaceutical products. For instance, treatment for cancer, AIDS, Alzheimer's disease, and so on, could become quicker, better and less expensive. In fact, this will mean an improvement in the health of all Canadians. Greater medical knowledge and better quality drugs should also make our medicare system more efficient. In the long term, hospitalization costs should also go down.

The promotion of pharmaceutical research will put Canada in the forefront. Canada will no longer be considered a place where there are only clinical tests and virtually no fundamental research. Canadian companies will receive more encouragement to undertake all stages of research leading to the marketing of a new product.

Mr. Speaker, for over a year, editorial writers throughout Canada have written often and well in support of this new legislation.

On May 25, 1985, Frédéric Wagnière wrote an article entitled "The Social Usefulness of Patents" in the newspaper La Presse which said the following:

It is just as certain that the Canadian legislation which has allowed this imitation since 1969 penalizes pharmaceutical companies which carry out or used to carry out research in Canada. But the return to an adequate protection of patents would not necessarily affect consumers negatively: a dynamic Canadian pharmaceutical industry, at the forefront of progress, would certainly be an excellent guarantee against the constant increase in medical costs.

And Mr. Wagnière to conclude:

When making his decision, the Minister will have to take into account the interests of consumers on the one hand, and those of a major industry on the other. These interests are not incompatible; but the industry must regain strength and enjoy the same protection as its competitors in all the other countries. The Government must be able to curb the abuses of this protection, but a few cases of abuse should not warrant striking a death-blow to an industry.

In the February 26, 1986, issue of the Ottawa Le Droit daily newspaper and under the headline: Our scientists are crying for help, Alain Dexter wrote:

Canada is the only country in the free world to have legalized this type of practice which is nothing but a form of piracy.

• (1530)

He wrote further:

A number of Ontario and Quebec scientists, including famous endocrinologist Dr. Michel Chrétien, from the Clinical Research Institute of Montreal, have denounced Bill C-102 which gave rise to the generic drugs industry. According to Dr. Chrétien, experience has shown that the legislative action taken in 1969 to create competition in the drug industry has mostly discouraged research, forcing a number of our most prominent pharmacologists to move to the United States.

And the editorialist to conclude:

At the same time, Canada has lost nearly 2,800 highly specialized jobs. In the area of pharmaceutical research, we have now the status of a banana republic of an Eastern country. Our scientists are perfectly right to be crying for help.

On March 25 last, even before the previous minister, Hon. Michel Côté, introduced his bill in the House, Albert Juneau wrote in Le Devoir newspaper:

Has the time finally come to put an end to one of the most costly and absurd liberalities Canada has allowed itself over the past few decades? Since 1969, there is no longer in Canada any patent rights on pharmaceutical products. Canada is the only OECD country not to guarantee such rights. Everywhere else, pharmaceutical discoveries are protected for a period of at least 17 years.

Mr. Juneau continued:

The impact of the Patent Act is mainly being felt in research centres. There is no incentive for large corporations to invest in research and have research teams, knowing that they have no guarantee of recouping their costs. In that context, what can be the future of a University of Montreal graduate in Canada if research opportunities are greatly reduced by legislation and competition that is really unfair?

He concludes with the following:

The unreasonable giveaways in the current legislation have led to one of the rare unanimous motions being passed in the Quebec National Assembly. On two occasions, in June 1984 and in the summer of 1985, both parties in the Assembly called for an amendment to the federal legislation that would offer better protection to the drug industry. Canada cannot afford to hand out any favours to competing countries. The federal Government must restore a situation that was totally jeopardized by an untimely intervention.

Mr. Speaker, I could go on, but let me quote the Canadian pharmaceutical industry which says:

For the benefit of Canadians.

Canada has everything to gain from a renewed policy that would better recognize patent rights on drugs. The long-term benefits to consumers, derived from better incentives to do research, exceed any savings gained on generic drugs; such savings are deceitful, because they are of a temporary nature and on a very short-term.

Mr. Speaker, I conclude with a final quote from Ottawa's Le Droit of November 19, 1986, which is very recent. Under the headline "It was about time", columnist Alain Dexter wrote:

The Mulroney Government took courageous action when it introduced a bill aimed at returning to the drug industry which is investing in research and development the ownership that was taken away from it by the previous Liberal Government, allegedly to prevent a sharp rise in drug prices in Canada.

And Mr. Dexter adds:

There is nothing exaggerated in speaking about the courage of the Mulroney Government. Indeed, we believe the opposition will jump at this opportunity to take it to task immediately there is the smallest price increase on the drug market. Such a behaviour would be really demagogic because such a bill as presented by the Government could not possibly have a conclusive effect on prescription drug prices before a few years down the road. And even if it were to happen, the Patented Medicine Price Review Board provided for in this Conservative legislation would have a power of intervention that nobody could ignore.

Mr. Speaker, I will conclude by pointing out that we are eager to proceed as early as possible with the debate in committee where all parties involved may state theirs views on the bill which we feel is of the utmost importance.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I would like to commend the hon. parliamentary secretary for rising to speak. She has been the second member on the Government side to speak on this Bill and we expect that others like her will have the guts to rise and explain the reasons for this Bill to the Canadian people. This is in fact why I would like to discuss this matter briefly with her. We know that the Eastman report clearly states about compulsory licencing, and I quote on page 259:

The profitability of pharmaceuticals clearly exceeds that for all manufacturing industries.

That is a fact. Drug companies make more money than the average industrial company. This is what the Eastman report says elsewhere:

Compulsory licencing has not had a discernible negative impact on the profitability of the pharmaceutical industry in Canada.

In other words, the generic drug industry has had no negative impact on the drug industry in Canada. This is the Eastman Commission speaking, not me.

We also know, Mr. Speaker, that 4 million Canadians are not covered by a private or Government medical insurance plan. Not just a few, but 4 million people! They are not protected against the price increases which we expect to result from this new legislation. More important, Mr. Speaker, generic drugs have helped Canadian consumers save some 211 million dollars. Ironically enough, the U.S. Government, which knows very well that our present drug system in Canada may be one of the best, one of the most competitive and one of the fairest in the world, presently is reviewing our system and considering implementing our methods in the United States where the price of drugs is terribly high, as we all know.

My question to the parliamentary secretary is very simple. Given the three or four arguments I just mentioned which, although not necessarily related, have an impact on the Canadian consumer, and considering that the Minister—and this is the subject of my question—has been repeating for a week that the cost of drugs will go up but not the price to the consumer, I would like the parliamentary secretary, who knows the Department well and is speaking on behalf of the Minister, to explain to us, during the few minutes remaining, how the Minister and the Government can say to Canadians that the cost will rise, but not the prices? How can we reconcile, in plain language, this apparent contradiction?

Mrs. Bertrand: Mr. Speaker, what the Minister has been saying since the beginning is that the price of drugs will not increase as a result of this Bill. Naturally, if there is some inflation and if all prices go up, the price of drugs might follow, but it will not be because of this Bill.

Secondly, a prices review board will monitor all drugs sold in Canada. You mentioned the percentage of Canadians not covered by a plan that will have to pay, or already pay, for their drugs. We have statistics showing that 85 per cent of the population is covered by Government or private pharmacare plans.

I have difficulty understanding the opposition to this Bill, especially from the Liberals, considering that in their days, in 1983, they published a working paper, probably under pressure from the phamaceutical companies, where they proposed changes to the Patent Act in order to promote investment and research.

In the working paper he signed, Andre Ouellet, the then Minister for Consumer and Corporate Affairs, said: "In order to speed up the development of this industry, the Canadian Government has decided to modify the Patent Act in such a way as to counterbalance the policies adopted in 1969". Even though the minister had decided in 1983 to amend the act, the Liberals never had the political gut to go through with those changes. Mr. Ouellet also said in that same working paper that: "The capacity to invest more into research and development seems to remain the privilege of patent holding companies. The provisions to extend the patent ownership protection period could be more favorable in that regard."

Mr. Gauthier: It is true that in 1983 the Hon. André Ouellet tabled a discussion paper to have the whole issue examined. It is also true that following that, the Eastman Commission was appointed to inquire into the problem and submitted its report. My position is not that the issue should not be examined, but I suggest to the Parliamentary Secretary that the problem is the following: in 1968, before amendments to the Patent Act were introduced, drug prices in Canada were among the highest in the world. Drugs were very expensive. Ever since we introduced amendments to the Patent Act, we have enjoyed in Canada the lowest drug prices in the world. So there is a connection between those two facts, there certainly have been downward pressures since, according to statistics, we now have drugs at the lowest prices and of equal if not higher quality than those of many other countries. Here is my question to the Parliamentary Secretary: How can she reconcile the fact, as has been confirmed, that our drug prices are now among the lowest in the world with the fact that those costs were among the highest before the introduction, in 1969, of legislation to amend patents? How can she acknowledge those facts and claim today that, although she will give in to drug companies and eliminate competition from generic manufacturers, we will maintain for sick or old Canadians a price system that is fair, equitable and reasonable?

Mrs. Bertrand: In my view, one does not exclude the other, Mr. Speaker. We can still have very low cost drugs, as we presently have, the only change being that it will take longer for generic drugs to reach the market than at present. It takes approximately 10 years for generic drug manufacturers to put a product on the market, and the protection we are extending to pharmaceutical firms is 10 years. Therefore, there will be no change.

Now, you said that Canadian drugs prices are the lowest in the world. Good for us! But since the 1969 Act was passed, drug companies have left the country, scientists have gone and our young university graduates cannot find research jobs. I therefore believe that we can accomodate all these interests, those of researchers, scientists as well as university graduates, and at the same time, through a price review board mechanism which has never existed before, control the prices of generic drugs and other products.

• (1540)

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I will allow the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) a further short supplementary in order to maintain continuity.

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: Just a short supplementary, Mr. Speaker. In view of what the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary has just said, would she once in committee accept an amendment which would freeze prices at their current level precisely in order to maintain this fairness, this profitability, this quality that Canadian plans have of being cheaper than those existing in other countries? Would she accept an amendment in that regard that would freeze prices at their current level?

Mrs. Bertrand: This debate deals with second reading; once we get to committee stage, there will be ample time to discuss it.

[English]

Mr. Hovdebo: Mr. Speaker, the Government has spent a considerable amount of time trying to convince the people of Canada that there will be no increase in the cost of drugs. That statement has been made on many occasions by Government Members. Would the Parliamentary Secretary explain why the Government is paying $25 million per year to the provinces as a result of this Bill? Why are the multinational drug corporations guaranteeing Canada a couple of million dollars if there will be no increase in their profits?

[Translation]

Mrs. Bertrand: Mr. Speaker, since the provinces buy 60 per cent of our medical products, they obviously are the largest buyers in Canada and they set the parameters of the plan that covers their clientele. Therefore they will have to readjust their procedures. There will really be some change in the way they do the distribution. So this could bring about some additional costs. That is why the Government has provided for that cushion, in proportion to the population in each province, in case it should cause any additional costs to the provincial Governments.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The period for questions and remarks is now over. Debate. The Hon. Member for Hull—Aylmer (Mr. Isabelle) has the floor.

[English]

The period for questions and comments is now terminated.

[Translation]

Mr. Gaston Isabelle (Hull—Aylmer): Mr. Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to take part in the debate on Bill C-22, a very important Bill whose purpose is to amend the Patent Act. Since I have practised medicine for nearly forty years, the subject is of particular interest to me because it directly concerns the physician's main tool, the pharmaceutical industry, and indirectly, the patient or consumer.

This very important question demands close scrutiny because the issue is a complex and difficult one. Discussion and debate on the subject has been going on for nearly twenty years, and as you know, no other industry has ever had such a powerful lobby in the corridors of Parliament. I think the pharmaceutical industry has been lobbying quite ferociously, but as a good politician, I will refrain from rhetoric and concentrate on the facts.

To understand the general characteristics of an industry that is indeed unique, I think it would be useful to outline briefly what the pharmaceutical industry actually is. First of all, throughout the world, the industry is heavily multinational in character. The major companies in countries which have no or hardly any domestic drug industry are American, European or Japanese. That is the case in Canada, for instance, where 84 per cent of our drugs are made by foreign-controlled companies, mainly American. Actually, there have been no major changes since 1970, when this percentage was 87 per cent.

The multinational character of the industry has been furthered from the fact that the world demand for most drugs can be met by the production of only a few plants. The chemical components of a drug are generally produced in a single plant located not far from the headquarters of the multinational company to benefit from substantial savings in the areas of production, research, development and quality control.

Another factor which promotes the development of a multinational industry is the fact that there are two phases in drug production, the synthesis and chemical composition, and the blending of the components to manufacture the final product.

The last stage of manufacture, the blending phase, is generally carried out by a subsidiary of the multinational in the country where the final product will be sold. This allows the multinational company, through its subsidiary, to benefit from existing tariff protection in that country.

• (1550)

It can be said that the pharmaceutical industry is characterized by a lack of competition. Indeed, there is relatively little competition, especially as far as prices are concerned.

The control pharmaceutical companies have on prices results partly from the importance of the Patent Act for this industry.

As we all know, in Canada, the Patent Act generally grants an exclusivity period of 17 years. The exclusivity period of the patent allows the inventor to recover his research and development costs and to make substantial profits as a reward for his innovation. The American companies which dominate the Canadian pharmaceutical industry rose to their position on the Canadian market by obtaining Canadian patents equivalent to those which gave them the monopoly for their products on the American market.

The practice of granting patents associated with a period of exclusive right to commercialize an innovation is common throughout Canada as it is in all industrialized nations. However, the pharmaceutical industry is in a somewhat special situation in this respect because such patents would provide a monopoly for the production of goods which could influence the health of consumers. The establishment of public health insurance plans in Canada during the 1960s has helped spread the notion that health goods and services should be accessible to all at reasonable prices. Moreover, when it became common practice to reimburse the costs of medicine through public health insurance plans, the need to maintain reasonable prices for drugs became a major concern of the various Governments and the general public. We know that 60 per cent of total spending for medicine is taken on by the provinces through Medicare.

When pharmaceutical companies compete for the production and marketing of similar therapeutic products, the competition is not at the level of prices but mostly in the differentiation of their products. This is due in part to the fact that the Canadian patents legislation grant patents on the process used to make the drugs and not on the drugs themselves. This could result in research and development expenses which are hardly productive socially since they often result in production of drugs which are essentially identical. These drugs are sold at prices which are by and large the same, in view of the fact that companies compete only at the marketing level. To grant a patent on a process rather than on a product, as is the situation in the pharmaceutical industry in Canada, Mr. Speaker, and which the Eastman Commission wanted to change, at least in its recommendations, is largely useless in an industry where new processes do not translate into lower prices. The lack of competition in the Canadian pharmaceutical industry results also from structural characteristics of the prescription drug market. First of all, for a number of reasons the demand for drugs does not fluctuate along with prices. When a physician writes a prescription he does not take the price into account since he is not the one who will buy the prescribed drug. In addition, the consumer, patient or beneficiary—to be quite clear, let us say the person who is sick—who is buying the prescribed drug does so under relatively urgent circumstances which make prices almost irrelevant in the sense that it is a matter of health. On top of this we developed private and/or public health insurance plans which freed the consumer from undue concern about the price of drugs since they were covered under such plans.

Mr. Speaker, this is the general characteristic of the drug industry which I have just mentioned.

As we have pointed out, Bill C-22 would amend the Patent Act, more specifically section 41(4) of the Act.

Section 41(4) allows generic drug manufacturers to market copies of patent drugs provided they pay a 4 per cent royalty to the manufacturer of the registered brand. This is a major exception to the Patent Act. As you know, the patentee usually benefits from a 17-year exclusivity period. Since 1969 when the Patent Act was amended, the multinational drug manufacturing industry has been protesting—and continues to protest—against what it considers as being outright injustice, discrimination and property seizure.

The multinational corporations, Mr. Speaker, claim that the protection of new drugs over a given period time is essential to recoup the large investments needed for research and development—the figure could well be up to $100 million. However, before 1969, the Patent Act was applied without question. Did the drug companies do more research than they are doing now? Perhaps, but it did not amount to much, and for that reason indeed the then Government was forced, following the findings of the Harley Commission, to enact certain recommendations of the Parliamentary Committee to avoid an excessive increase in the price of drugs.

Because of this objection, the Bill now before us wants to grant the patentee an exclusivity period of 10 years or 7 years, as the case may be, but this provision is being opposed by generic drug manufacturers and consumer organizations who feel that it gives multinationals an opportunity to maintain the price of drugs at artificially high levels because of that monopoly situation. That is self-evident.

Generally speaking, generic drugs currently sell for half the price of the equivalent patented drugs. Last week, in Washington I think, Ayerst-McKenna published the findings of a $50,000 study it had commissioned on whether generic and patented drugs actually sold at comparable prices. It was found that, indeed, occasionally, generic drugs sold for about the same price as the equivalent patented medicine. But the basic explanation is that the manufacturer's price was much lower for generic drugs than for patented medicines, except that some drug stores took advantage of that situation by increasing their prices to a level somewhat equivalent to that of patented medicines.

Needless to say, Mr. Speaker, multinational corporations strongly support those amendments. On the other hand, they are committed to invest $1.4 billion more by 1995 in research and development of new drugs. Mr. Speaker, you know as well as I do that research and development, especially in the medical field, is not done by the drug companies but mainly by the universities and foundations. We all know the example of the University of Toronto and the Connaught Institute which, I believe, was created in 1914 and which gave us insulin, one of the great discoveries of the century.

So when we hear this talk about spending a lot of money, I think that what the drug companies mean is that they mainly want to spend a lot of money on clinical research, Mr. Speaker.

It is important to understand why we radically changed the legislation in 1969. Today, the Government, against the advice of the Eastman Commission, intends to restore what was considered to be excessive pricing around the middle of the sixties. The Canadian Restrictive Trade Practices Commission recommended abolishing all patents on pharmaceutical products. There was the Hall Report on medical services which recommended a compulsory licensing system under which Canadian companies would be able to produce and market generic drugs, provided they pay a royalty to the original manufacturer.

The system also received the support of the Harley Committee of the House of Commons which examined this question, and I may point out to the House that in the course of its investigations, the Harley Committee found that Canadians were paying 75 per cent more than consumers in other countries, for the same drugs.

The amendments to Section 41(4) of the Patent Act, providing for compulsory licenses, have had major consequences both for the pharmaceutical industry in Canada and for the consumer.

In 1983, Mr. Speaker, there were 70 drugs under compulsory licence in Canada, with sales worth $328 million. This amount represented 20 per cent of the total sales of ethical drugs in Canada. Of that $328 million, generic manufacturers sold and paid royalties on, 32 of the 70 drugs. Their sales totalled $46 million. They paid royalties totalling $1.8 million to the original manufacturer, and while the 17 generic manufacturers in Canada employed, as I said earlier, 1,300 people in 1983, the 64 brand manufacturers employed 14,400.

While the manufacturers of generic drugs have not replaced the patent holders, they have brought on vigorous competition, as noted by Dr. Eastman. On the average, as I have just said, the price of generic drugs is about half that of brand name products.

In addition, competition urges the patent holders to reduce their prices. To have an idea of the impact of the compulsory licencing system, let us look at valium. The retail price of valium, which is a well-known drug sold by the Hoffman-La Roche company, is $345.93 in the United States, while the same quantity sells for only $80 in Canada. However, the generic drug equivalent Diazepam sells for the modest price of $2.31. The consumers paid a total of 211 million dollars less in 1983 than they would have done without compulsory licencing.

There are other examples. The Pfizer company charges $431 for a product called Chlorpropamide in the United States, while the same product is sold for only $141 in Canada. However, because there is competition from a generic product called Diabinese, Canadians can pay only $12.03 for the same quantity of this generic product for diabetics.

There are many other such examples, Mr. Speaker.

In view of these substantial savings for consumers, we are justified in asking why the Government wants to replace compulsory licencing by an exclusivity period of ten or seven years. In spite of the opposition of many groups, including a coalition of 14 non-Government organizations which wrote to the Prime Minister last September 3 in this regard, last year, the Eastman Commission advised the Government to maintain the compulsory licencing system. Since it is amending the Act, the Government seems to have accepted the objections of the multinational pharmaceutical industry, which has long claimed that its property rights were being violated. Naturally, the generic companies pay royalties to the multinationals, which royalties amounted to $1.8 million in 1983, as I mentioned earlier, but these are considered insufficient in view of the cost of innovation, research and development in Canada. During the 1970s and the early 1980s, several foreign drug manufacturing companies put an end to their research activities, but we must remember, Mr. Speaker, that all these companies which were involved in research, those which have left or have threathened to leave, were not doing any research in Canada anyway; however, they could still claim here income tax deductions and send the money abroad.

Since I still have a few minutes left, Mr. Speaker, I wish to say that I know the Government wants to establish a medicine prices review board to control any increase in drug prices. I hope this legislation will have teeth. We are in the dark now about this.

To conclude, Mr. Speaker, may I say that there exists a better way to increase competition, as well as research and development in Canada. Instead of abolishing the compulsory licensing system, the Government should take Mr. Eastman's advice: increase royalties to 14 per cent would certainly compensate adequately innovative efforts and encourage investment. With 14 per cent royalties, makers of generics would have payed $6.4 million to multinationals instead of $4.8 million. Mr. Speaker, the Government seems to believe that by amending the Patent Act, it is acting in the best interest of Canadians, but a great many Canadians think otherwise. A moment ago I referred to a non-Government coalition of 14 organizations, representing the poor, the elderly and other consumers, which wrote to the Prime Minister in September and is still waiting for a reply. A recent Gallup poll reveals that at least one third of Canadians believe that drug companies ought to be protected for ten years; more than half, 50 per cent of people polled think that when a new drug hits the market it should be available as a low-cost generic drug. But then Canadian Drug Manufacturers' Association spokesmen for 17 no-name drug companies are highly critical of the Bill because, in their opinion, it seriously undermines the prospects of an industry which is thriving right now.

Mr. Speaker, I hope the Government will not be swayed by the pressure tactics of three major drug companies which, hours before the Bill was tabled in the House, told everyone who cared to listen that they would spend $102 million for research and create the odd job. I said so at the outset, Mr. Speaker, the drug industry operates the world over and Canada will always be a branch plant. Of course we will have to concentrate our efforts on expanded research and development, but I hardly think we have taken the right approach or the best way to put Canada on the map when it comes to research and development.

[English]

Mr. Weiner: Mr. Speaker, I listened intently to the words of my hon. colleague. I know the time and effort he has put into the practice of medicine in the past and, as a practising pharmacist, I certainly want to put myself on record on a number of issues to which I am in direct opposition.

• (1600)

Something I would like to underline is that I do not want to relegate the youth of our country to being copy-cats for the rest of their lives. Our young people have an expertise, a quality of experience and intelligence that is second to none.

When I travel around the country visiting universities why should I have to say to the students and graduates that they will never be able to work in Canada, that they will never have a future in the fields of biotechnology or pharmaceutical research? To start with, the sum of $1.4 billion will create 10,000 jobs, and probably many more. I can tell the Hon. Member that as a result of visiting universities I know that there are compounds being synthesized which are deserving of being brought out on the market in Canada and not in any other country.

As a doctor the Hon. Member would want to be concerned with the quality of health care. He would always want to ensure that his patient receives the best medical care possible. Right now Canadians are being deprived of that privilege because new pharmaceuticals which are available in other parts of the world are not being brought to the Canadian market. They are not available to Canadians. Thus we must very often make do with second-class medical care.

There are enough examples of drugs and pharmaceuticals which are available in Europe, Japan and elsewhere which take years to come to Canada. That deprives us of the best care possible. As a physician, and in focusing on costs, one may also want to focus on the over-all costs of the health care package. From what I understand, pharmaceuticals represent only about 8 per cent of the total cost. When one considers the advantages that can be derived from new medication being made available sooner rather than later I tell the Hon. Member that there will be significant savings in the over-all package of what it costs to treat a patient. That is a consideration.

Those are a few of the thoughts I have on the matter. Since the Hon. Member has been so kind as to keep bringing us back to 1969, I would like to ask him if he would not mind reflecting on the percentage of pharmaceutical research done under Medical Research Council funding in 1969 as opposed to what it is in 1986.

[Translation]

Mr. Isabelle: Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to know that my friend who just asked that question has been practising as a pharmacist for a number of years. In the first place, I must tell him that with respect to research, it is a myth in my view to tell our young people who now have to go abroad to find work, that by 1995 all of them will be working in research, especially those who are in that field in Canada.

As I said earlier, the pharmaceutical industry—I am not talking about research and development in the field of health care—but what I am saying is that in the drug industry, the multinational pharmaceutical industry is a very special one, one that can produce in a few plants around the world. The drug industry has already shown that when it could not make enough money or when wages were too high on the North-American continent, they went to Ireland or to the Southern United States. Therefore, I do not think I can tie the whole of Canada's future to that, and as far as our young people are concerned, I cannot tell them: You will have openings for your research potential. I do not believe the Canadian drug industry will provide them with that.

Second, you also referred to drugs that a physician must prescribe in order to give his patient the best level of care, using of course the best drugs available. As a pharmacist, you know very well that generics also must pass the Canada Food and Drugs test. They must be of the same level of quality as those made by the innovator. So I see no danger there. Moreover, the provinces in 1970, faced with the astounding level of expenditures on medicines or their usage, requested as you know that when Librium is prescribed, for instance, the pharmacist may fill in with the generic equivalent.

So, the provinces themselves encouraged the generic drug industry, no more and no less. Why? Because these drugs have the same quality for less money. It is a matter of savings in my view because, basically, the consumer is not that much involved. The provinces are involved because they have to foot the bill for prescriptions that are totalling millions of dollars every year and this amount will go on increasing. Besides, the Canadian Government, if I am not mistaken, will have more money made available to the provinces.

Concerning the matter of whether there is more money now than there was some years ago for the research and development fund, well I hope there are more funds than previously. But it is not by relying on private industry that we will provide for an increase in research and development. I am sure of that.

Therefore I hope I answered the questions. Surely you will not be satisfied with that, but those are the answers to the basic questions you wanted to ask me.

• (1610)

One thing is certain: when an industry gets into a monopoly situation, clearly prices can be controlled at will, and this is self-evident. So much so that when we look at the price of drugs, as you well know being a pharmacist, comparing the prices paid for drugs in the United States with those paid in Canada for the same thing, with generics, you will find that competition has made prices much lower in Canada than elsewhere. Besides, a number of foreign countries want to copy our system.

Mr. Weiner: Mr. Speaker, I would merely have a short comment.

I think the Hon. Member missed my point. I did not comment on the quality of drugs that are available now with generics and equivalents. That is not the point.

We have means of finding bioviability. What I am referring to are the drugs that are not available in this country although they are elsewhere. For instance, we have drugs that are a new kind of Digoxin, a very potent medicine with quite severe side effects.

There is a drug that has been available in France for six or seven years but does not exist here. This is only one example.

There are dozens of drugs that are not available here, and because of that we have second class care.

I am not discussing those drugs that are available. I also support generic drugs, because as a pharmacist we have all the drugs and will have more and more generics on the Canadian market.

What I am discussing is simply that we do not have certain drugs and we will not be having them for years to come. This is something I do not want.

Mr. Isabelle: Mr. Speaker, I must tell the Minister that I simply do not think that anyone can prevent any drug from any country from entering Canada except that, as my colleague from Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) points out, it has to meet the food and drugs legislation standards. This may take several years in some cases, but the mere fact that no basic research is done in Canada does not justify barring new drug entries into this country.

All I am saying is that from a commercial standpoint the drug industry is highly specialized, it is unlike other industries because it is always doing business with sick people and patients, its customers.

Mr. Speaker, this is why if ever you experience problems with a drug I hope you will get in touch with food and drug officials to give them its name just so Canadians will benefit from these extraordinary drugs you are talking about.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. The time for questions and comments has expired.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[Translation]

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 66, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: the Hon. Member for Laurier (Mr. Berger)—Science and technology—(a) National Research Council—Abolition of 200 positions in April—Government position. (b) Government funding; the Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson)—Banks and banking—(a) Estey Commission report—Non-publication of uninsured depositors' names. (b) Inquiry concerning possible interim reports; the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow)—Pharmaceutical industry—Statement attributed to United States negotiator. (b) Consumer Association's position.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

PATENT ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Andre that Bill C-22, an Act to amend the Patent Act and to provide for certain matters in relation thereto, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee; and the amendment of Mrs. Killens (p.1378).

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, the Bill before us today, Bill C-22, a Bill that will amend the Patent Act, is an example of one of the more shoddy ways the Government has bowed down to pressure from American corporations by putting the interests of multinational corporations ahead of the interests of Canadians. This is occurring in an area which is extremely important. All people will need access to drugs at some time in their lives. Our population is aging and will require the increased use of drugs. Yet the Government is introducing and trying to push through legislation which will result in rather substantial increases in the cost of drugs.

• (1620)

Let us look at how we got ourselves into this situation. In recent years, Canadians have seen a diminution in the price of drugs as a result of very specific legislation. Canadians are very upset at the thought that those advantages will soon be lost if this legislation is passed.

In the bad old days when there was no competition from generic drugs, drug prices in Canada were enormously high. In the 1960s, the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission in 1963, the Hall Royal Commission on Health Services in 1964, and the Harley Special Committee of the House of Commons on Drug Costs and Prices in 1967 all investigated the pharmaceutical industry in Canada. These three major inquiries agreed that drug prices were too high and that government action was required to bring them down and to stimulate price competition.

The Hall Commission concluded that Canadian drug prices were among the highest in any industrialized nation in the world. All three inquiries felt that it was the foreign-based multinational drug companies that were dominating the Canadian drug industry and using their 17-year patent periods to set prices which were too high.

The Restrictive Trade Practices Commission recommended complete abolition of drug patents, a very strong remedy indeed. The Hall Commission and the Harley Committee recommended a compromise policy designed to stimulate price competition while maintaining the principle of patent protection but a reduced patent protection allowing companies that wished to import and sell generic equivalents of patented brand names to do so upon receipt of a compulsory licence and the payment of a royalty. This compromise was indeed legislated in 1969 and became Section 41(4) of the Patent Act. This, of course, is the section that is at risk now.

Since that time, multinational corporations have attacked compulsory licensing and they have stepped up the attack in recent years. I recall being a part of the Canadian delegation to the United Nations a couple of years ago. While we were in New York, American multinational companies took the occasion to lobby Canadian legislators. I must say that I was ashamed by the behaviour of Conservative members of that delegation who simply listened respectfully to the multinationals and said: "Yes, sir, you are unhappy with what we are doing with pharmaceuticals, we will change it". This occurred very soon after the 1984 election, so Conservative members said to the multinationals: "Just give us a chance. It will not take us long to do what you want but we have only just come into office. We can assure you that you will get the kind of legislation that you want". Of course, what they were saying was that the interests of American multinationals would be put ahead of the interests of the Canadian people.

I am getting ahead of my chronology somewhat. In 1984, the federal Government appointed Professor Harry Eastman of the University of Toronto to head a commission of inquiry on the pharmaceutical industry. His report, which was released in May of 1985, recommended that we retain compulsory licensing. However, he proposed that patent holders be guaranteed four years of exclusivity and freedom from competition and that companies that actually do research in Canada be able to receive royalties higher than the current 4 per cent. Again, that was something of a compromise but one which did maintain the principle that compulsory licensing would be, if modified, nonetheless continued.

Since the introduction of compulsory licensing in 1969, drug companies have still, of course, enjoyed enormous growth and very adequate profits. The idea that this measure created a difficulty for them is not supported by any factual investigation. On that, the Eastman Report said:

> An overall summary of the comparison of the growth and development of the pharmaceutical industry in Canada relative to that of the United States yields the straightforward conclusion that growth has been more buoyant in Canada than it has been in the United States since 1967.

If compulsory licensing had completely ruined the industry, this would not be the case. The idea that we should adopt the American model for growth is simply not borne out.

Again, the Eastman Report said:

> Compulsory licensing has not had a discernible negative impact on the profitability and rate of growth of the pharmaceutical industry in Canada as a whole.

That is pretty clear as well.

We have seen pharmaceutical companies take legal action to try to get even higher profits by challenging the compulsory licensing provisions. A decision was made in November, 1985 involving a multinational drug company's challenge to this section of the Patent Act under the Charter of Rights. At that time, the Federal Court stated that there was no information to demonstrate that compulsory licensing was denying either the multinational companies or their Canadian subsidiaries a reasonable return on their investments. So much for the contention that compulsory licensing has been harmful to the industry and the contention that there has been any unfairness.

On June 30, 1986, the former Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs released the Government's draft amendments to the Patent Act outlining the provisions we are studying today. These provisions were, of course, brought in under a great deal of pressure. I already noted the example of drug companies lobbying parliamentarians directly. Of course, we know that they have lobbied the American Government and have managed to get President Reagan to take up the issue, indeed at the highest level, with the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) himself.

The issue was discussed at the 1985 and 1986 so-called Shamrock Summits. We know that the Prime Minister agreed to knuckle under to the American pressure at that time. The pressure continued as the Government did not respond fast enough. In early April, 1986, the United States Trade Representative, Clayton Yeutter, rapped Canada's knuckles for failing to honour the commitments made by the Government through the Prime Minister by saying that the drug issue "—should have been resolved a long time ago. We've been exercising uncommon patience. But even our patience ultimately begins to wear thin". That was pretty heavy-handed indeed, and I am sorry to see that anyone would respond to it.

In late April when President Reagan's plan for so-called fast-track free trade negotiations with Canada ran into trouble, the drug industry in the United States actively lobbied committee members to go along with the President and the Canadian Government. We have seen how the talks on free trade have been brought into play in this issue as well. On several occasions in 1986, the Government appeared to be on the brink of giving in to pressure but backed away. Ultimately, the Government did capitulate.

The Bill before us raises many questions. The commission of inquiry into the pharmaceutical industry found that profit levels of multinationals were higher than in most home countries including Switzerland, West Germany, the United Kingdom, France and Japan, all major producers in the industry. The one exception to that was the United States which has had among the highest drug prices in the world. Of course, Canada provides tax incentives to research which are among the most generous in the world.

• (1630)

The manner in which this legislation is supposed to operate assumes that decisions are made a certain way within the companies as to where they will do their research and where they will produce their product. Drug manufacturing breaks down into two phases. The first is the making of the active ingredients, the chemicals themselves. Then there is the preparation of the final formulation, including combining the active ingredients with various inactive ingredients: colourings, flavourings, stabilizers, packaging, labelling, and those aspects of the final preparation of the drugs.

At the present time, almost no active ingredient manufacturing takes place in Canada. Both the patent holding and the generic companies import their active ingredients. Then they do some of their final stage manufacturing in Canada. That holds true for both the generics and the patent drugs. I think that we have to understand that.

A few small countries have developed active ingredient manufacturing industries to serve world markets for generic drugs. Generic companies in Canada have the right to apply for compulsory licences to manufacture the active ingredients. This right has existed since 1923. But they do not very often do so because the Canadian market is too small to make such an operation viable.

The failure of the 1923 policy to create drug price competition in 1969 led to the creation of compulsory licences to import because we did not have domestic production. We know that often a single factory in one particular country meets a company's world-wide markets. Usually these factories are located in the multinational's home country, or in some place like Ireland or Puerto Rico that offer particularly generous tax breaks, and sometimes tariff-free access to major markets. So there are these structural reasons in the industry itself.

While we cannot expect a big change as a result of the legislation that we have before us, these are conditions that we have known about for some time.

Despite all of this, the federal Government claims that the Bill before us will stimulate both generic and multinational firms to make the active ingredients in Canada. This claim rests on the provisions of the Bill that generic companies will still be able to acquire compulsory licences to manufacture generic active ingredients in Canada, although subject to qualification. Patent holding companies can avoid this type of generic competition if they notify the Commissioner of Patents that they intend to make the patented active ingredient in Canada completely or substantially to meet Canadian demand. If they do notify the Commissioner, they must begin manufacturing within two years, or risk losing their market exclusivity.

It is not at all clear to me why generic companies would manufacture more active ingredients in Canada under this Bill than they did between 1923, when they could have done so, and up until 1969, when the patent legislation was changed. Why are we bringing in a provision that has already been tried for more than 40 years, and it did not result in domestic manufacturing of the active ingredients? We can have no optimism that that will change now.

With regard to the final product manufacturing, there is every reason to expect that multinational companies will invest in plant expansions in Canada within the next few years, regardless of whether or not this Bill before us today is passed. These are the trends. There is an increase in the demand for drugs. There is a change in the demographics. There are more elderly people with health care concerns and people needing drugs. We would otherwise have expected to see this type of expansion, with no thanks to this legislation whatsoever. Yet there is no confidence that the legislation will bring about the change in the manufacturing of the active ingredients themselves.

The Government has made many claims that this legislation will improve research and development in Canada. We must look at those claims. I am sure our Party would be very partial to legislation that would improve research and development in Canada. Unfortunately, when we examine more closely what the Bill says, this result will not happen either. Canada has very little basic research. This was true in the pharmaceutical industry in the period prior to 1969 as well as since. We have no reason to believe that the same pharmaceutical companies that were not doing research and development before 1969, when there was no generic drug legislation, would suddenly do it now.

In 1983, only about 15 per cent of research and development expenditures by pharmaceutical firms were for basic research. That is considerably less than 1 per cent of the value of those firms' sales in Canada. That is a pretty shameful record indeed. It is pretty typical of countries whose pharmaceutical industries are dominated by the subsidiaries of multinationals.

The levels of drug research and development in Canada are similar to those of some other small countries which do not have independent non-multinationals or their own pharmaceutical industries.

Most pharmaceutical research in Canada involves clinical testing of a drug's safety and effectiveness. That is simply to meet requirements of our own health and drug legislation. It is not basic research. It is simply to meet the requirements of the Food and Drugs Act.

Despite these well-known facts, the federal Government claims that its draft Bill contains "strong new incentives" for research. I would like to quote what the Government has stated:

> Drugs invented and manufactured in Canada will receive full 17-year patent monopolies.
>
> If the Government is not satisfied with the industry's research investments by 1990, it may remove some or all of the exclusivity granted under the Act.

The federal Government claims that the new policy will turn Canada into "a world-class centre for the research, development, and manufacture of pharmaceuticals".

Unfortunately, these very fine hopes entirely ignore the conclusions of the federal commission of inquiry that Canada is not well placed to become a major world centre for pharmaceutical research, or for the production of active chemical ingredients for the very reasons that I have just related. We have these multinational companies, and it is not their practice to do research and development, or indeed to manufacture the active ingredients in smaller countries. In the case of research and development, they do it in their home country. They do the manufacturing under very specific conditions.

The question of drug prices has been pretty hotly debated in the House over the last weeks. It is being considered very actively by the Canadian public. We have had extremely outlandish statements by the Government that this new legislation will not result in an increase in drug prices.

The generic competition stimulated by the 1969 amendment has saved Canadian consumers hundreds of millions of dollars. This has been calculated at $211 million for 1983 alone. Of course, when added up over the years, it is into the billions of dollars that Canadians have been spared by having generic drug competition.

We have a Minister who claims that the new policy will not cause drug prices to rise, indeed that the new policy will not cause an increase of even one cent in drug prices. On the other hand, when you get down to the fine print, the Government has to admit such things as, and I quote, that it "may, however, result in a delay of the price reductions associated with the introduction of new generic drugs".

This is a pretty roundabout way of admitting that when a new drug comes on to the market there is the four-year period of protection. After that the prices go down. So you must look at the costs at least over a 10-year period. If you look at a 10-year period, you will see that prices are indeed considerably lower under the condition of generic drug competition than with the monopoly situation that the Government wishes to reintroduce.

Canadian consumers can expect substantially higher drug costs during the 10-year delay in the introduction of new generic drugs. I note that the federal Government's published cost estimates for the new policy stop at 1990. This is a convenient place to stop, because the Government does not want to admit that the prices are then going to go up. Reductions that would otherwise have happened because of generic competition simply will not happen. That drug competition which the 1969 policy brought in will have ended.

Despite its claims about drug prices, the federal Government has nevertheless promised to pay the provincial Governments $100 million in transitional payments by 1991. I think that this rather embarrassingly belies the argument that there will not be any increases. Why is the federal Government handing over $100 million if there will not be any increases? Any person with common sense will certainly be asking that.

It will be very scant consolation to Canadian taxpayers to know that they will be subsidized through federal taxes instead of provincial taxes. The money will go to provincial Governments so that they can pay the multinational corporations for these increased prices. The point is that increased prices will hurt. If it means that provincial Governments have to pay more for their particular medicare costs, then the federal Government will have to pay more. Even if it is not the individual consumer, we know that these costs have to be borne.

• (1640)

We expect the Government will then say that the cost of drugs has risen and that medicare is costing too much money. In that event, it will be required to cut back somewhere else in the medicare system. It will have to cut other services to make up for the increased costs of drugs.

Of course we do not want to see that happening. We do not want to see medicare hurt. We do not want to see other services being cut back as a result of increased prices in pharmaceutical products.

In winding up my remarks, let me point out that the proposal of the Government for a regulatory board to look at drug prices is not a satisfactory option. It is not clear how much authority the board will have. The Bill provides for provincial and federal health Ministers to intervene in hearings. However, there is no provision for consumers or other public interest groups. It is a very unsatisfactory business altogether. We will have another bureaucracy to carry out a policy which is not as good as the present one.

I urge Hon. Members to look at the past progress with generic drug competition and the enormous savings for Canadians as a result of the policy. I ask them to reject this extremely misguided approach which puts the welfare of American multinational pharmaceutical companies ahead of the needs of Canadians for decent drug prices and adequate competition in the pharmaceutical industry to ensure that prices remain at a reasonable level.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Hon. Member for Broadview—Greenwood (Ms. McDonald). We heard the Minister say that he would bring information to us in committee but that he would not bring us specific documents relating to the costs or an analysis of the costs which will be faced by consumers. Would the Hon. Member speculate on why the Government does not want to release those documents?

Ms. McDonald: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) raises an extremely important question. She will know that her colleagues and members of my Party have raised with the Government in Question Period the need to have the documents tabled so that Canadians and consumer and advocacy groups can look at the cost estimates.

She will also know that the Government indicated that it would not cost a cent more but that it would not provide the information which gives specific estimates as to the costs in particular years. This must be a fraudulent claim, if the documentation is not to be put before Members of the House and the Canadian public.

A Government which really had hard information showing that prices would not rise would be delighted to document it and to hand over its study results. We have to be entirely suspicious of a Government which uses taxpayers' money to collect information and then denies Members of the House and the Canadian public access to the information on which they can make their own reasoned assessments and reach their own conclusions.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, could the Hon. Member for Broadview—Greenwood also elaborate on some of the reasons the Government would see fit in certain instances to inform some multinational drug companies of what was coming up in the way of legislation without letting Hon. Members of the House have that same information?

Ms. McDonald: Mr. Speaker, indeed the Hon. Member for Hamilton East raises a touchy question. I hope the Government was extremely embarrassed to have this information come out. Multinational corporations were given information which Canadian parliamentarians were not given. This coincides with my own experience of seeing government Members lobbied by representatives of the same interest and seeing them completely willing to capitulate. They were willing to put second the interest of Canadians and to put first the pressure from American multinational corporations. It is shameful. The incident to which the Hon. Member referred is simply the last in a very shameful series of incidents of this nature.

Mr. Kilgour: Mr. Speaker, I have a number of questions for the Hon. Member for Broadview—Greenwood (Ms. McDonald). She might answer any or all of them, if there is time.

Could she tell the House when the last drug was invented in Canada? I think she will find that it goes back a great many years, partly because the system as it is now provides no incentive whatsoever to discover drugs which perhaps her mother or my mother might need. We are trying to create an atmosphere in the Bill where the Japanese will not have a drug which we do not have in Canada.

Perhaps the Hon. Member does not understand that $600 million has been committed by the drug industry for research and development and product development in Canada because of the Bill. I do not know how many thousands of jobs it will mean in Toronto, but I am sure her city will receive a lot of them.

The main point of the Hon. Member's speech was that prices will rise under the Bill. It is very clear that the prices of existing drugs will not rise as a result of the Bill. What is happening is that they are speculating about drugs which may be on the market in 1995 or whenever. How can the Hon. Member feel that the Bill will make prices higher in 1995 than they would have been otherwise?

Also I wish the Hon. Member would say something about the recent Eastman Report which recommended balancing the interests of consumers like her mother and my mother with the interest in getting some new development of drugs in Canada. The Hon. Member might know that presently people are simply filling bags in Toronto, Montreal, Edmonton or wherever. No research is being done. Nothing is being developed. This is why the situation is intolerable.

Britain, Germany, Switzerland, and a great many other countries think that Canada has been acting in a highly irresponsible way for many years. It is time we grew up and did things in the same way as the rest of the industrialized world.

Ms. McDonald: Mr. Speaker, in the very short time left to me, let me touch upon the questions raised by the Parliamentary Secretary. Turning to the question about higher drug prices, certainly Dr. Eastman said that the prices would be going up because there would not be reductions as would happen under generic drug competition. As soon as the generics come on to the market, there is competition and prices fall. This process will not happen in the future if the Bill is passed.

Let us turn to the question about the discovery of drugs. Of course it is a very important one. We would be very sympathetic to legislation if we thought it would result in increased research and development and the invention of new drugs in Canada. There is no reason to think that that will happen because there are structural reasons for how multinational corporations decide to do their research.

In the very long period of time between 1923 and 1969 very little research was done in Canada. The change in generics only came about in 1969. If the Hon. Member wants to make the point that there has not been enough drug discovery in Canada, then he must explain why it did not happen before 1969 when the same conditions held as the Government proposes for after 1986 or whenever the legislation is adopted.

The question of jobs is a very tricky one. Naturally we would like to see more jobs created in research and development and manufacturing. However, I note that there are no firm guarantees. An exchange of letters is no guarantee whatsoever. We have seen shameful examples in the past of corporations being given fantastic hand-outs, taking their profits and running. The problem is in the structure of multinational corporations. They do not have the incentive to do that work in Canada.

With increasing prices in drugs, money will go out of the economy. Money which goes in profits to multinational corporations will result in job loss. It is money which Canadian consumers, either directly or through their health plans, will be paying. It will go into increased profits outside Canada and to the headquarters of multinational corporations. That is money that might otherwise be staying in Canada and creating jobs here. We have to expect a net job loss as a result of the adoption of the legislation before us today.

• (1650)

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I regret to inform the House that the period for questions and comments has now terminated. Debate. The Hon. Member for Capilano (Mrs. Collins).

Mrs. Mary Collins (Capilano): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity to participate in the debate on this very important Bill and to express my support for Bill C-22 which the Minister has brought forward and to disagree with the amendment under debate.

I found it interesting listening to the debate and to the questions that have been asked in the 14 to 15 hours of discussion in this House on this issue because so much of it is based on either false information or what appears to be a desire to either scare or misinform the public about the real intentions and impact of this legislation.

We know that this is not a new subject. The previous speaker spoke about the history and the development of patent protection. I would like to bring Members back to 1982. In June of that year there was a debate in this House on patent protection. The then Minister of State for Science and Technology, Mr. Roberts, said:

> The Government is very concerned about the over-all low level of research and development in the private sector and is actively pursuing a number of measures to improve Canada's performance in this area. We recognize the importance which a strong patent system can play in encouraging industrial investment in R and D thus creating the appropriate climate for innovation.

On that same day the former Liberal Member for Scarborough East said:

> With the return of Great Britain to patent protection, Canada remains the only developed country with this unique discouragement to product innovation and manufacturing in the pharmaceutical industry.

This is not a new debate, Mr. Speaker. When the roles were reversed, our colleagues across the floor in the Liberal Party were asking for this kind of patent protection. But it was not only the members of the Official Opposition. I recall that in November, 1982—Members may check back in the records of Hansard—our colleague in the New Democratic Party, the Hon. Member for Yorkton—Melville (Mr. Nystrom), raised in the House the following concern:

> The transfer will mean the lay-off of some 300 employees, many of them full-time researchers at the lab.

Obviously he was referring to a situation in his own riding. He then questioned the Minister and said:

> I would like to know from the Minister what action the Government is going to take to make sure we can do this pharmaceutical research in our own country.

The then Minister for Economic Development, the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount, (Mr. Johnston), replied:

> I am hopeful, as are my colleagues, that in the very near future we will have something that will enable us to retain this very important expertise in the area of science and technology.

There was a recognition of the problem and we knew that the amendments put through in 1969 had had a detrimental impact on research and development in Canada. We know that these amendments were totally unfair and inconsistent with what was happening right around the world; we knew that changes needed to be made. There were committees and commissions meeting on the subject, but basically there was no action. People were concerned about the difficult and complex issue, but it is no easy task to ensure that the public understands it, so no action was taken. We remained behind not only the rest of the western world but behind countries in Asia, in the Pacific Rim and even Taiwan which have patent protection. Nevertheless, we just toddled along in our way and nothing was done until our Government, after reviewing the situation, brought forward legislation to remedy it. It is important legislation which tries to be fair to all of the parties involved.

I share the conviction of the Hon. Minister that these amendments, to the compulsory licensing provision of the Patent Act will correct the disservice which arose out of the 1969 amendments which largely ignored the role of research and development in the pharmaceutical industry. These amendments will address the situation and, in time, Canada will become one of the world's leaders in research. Not only will Canada's status as a research oriented country be enhanced, allowing it to compete on a realistic basis in the future of research and development investments, but individual Canadians will benefit, as consumers of pharmaceutical products and as a result of increased employment generated by these amendments. That is something about which we have heard a great deal in the debate. It is not just wishful thinking. The Minister has produced.

Just recently in Vancouver, in my own home province, a biomedical research institution has announced that it will be investing $40 million in research through the University of British Columbia. This will create in itself 50 technical, professional jobs, and we all know the kinds of spin-offs that come with that kind of employment as well. A new centre for biomedical research in Vancouver will be created.

A recent announcement by the University of Alberta was for $100 million. There were other announcements in central Canada, Quebec and Ontario of projects that will be going ahead as a result of these proposed changes. These will create jobs and ensure that we are to fulfil the commitment and expectation the Minister has mentioned of research and development increasing by $1.4 billion. Three thousand jobs will be created as a result of the changes. That is a lot of jobs in your riding, Mr. Speaker, in my riding and right across the country, and it is in one of the areas in which we need to concentrate.

May I digress for a moment, Mr. Speaker. At the First Ministers' Conference in Vancouver which I had the opportunity to attend, the Premier of Ontario, Mr. Peterson, was talking about the high priority that must be placed on science and technology, that we had to make this the field on which to concentrate in the future. Our Government has shown we support that kind of a priority. We are undertaking the kind of legislative changes to encourage it. But all my colleagues across the way who are members of the same Party as Mr. Peterson can utter is doom and gloom. It is complete nonsense, Mr. Speaker.

Let me refer to The Globe and Mail. Many of us on this side of the House are not totally happy with some of the articles and editorials in The Globe and Mail. In an editorial in the November 18, 1986, issue the writer understood what the Government was doing through this legislation and was certainly supportive. It talked about international concerns and reads:

> If gentle, first-world Canada opts out of patent protection for certain products, what are the prospects for the rest of the world? The new round of talks at the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade has identified intellectual property rights as a priority for new agreements. Canada's isolationism on pharmaceuticals is a troubling aberration among industrial states committed to fair play in international trade.

That opinion, Mr. Speaker, is also supported by comments I received last week when I attended a meeting at the Pacific Economic Co-operation Conference held in Vancouver with representatives from all of the Asian countries. One of the major priorties in addition to agriculture in discussions in the new round of talks on tariffs and trade on which we have to co-operate with the Pacific Rim countries were issues related to intellectual property. But how can Canada play a meaningful role in these kinds of meetings on these kinds of issues if we ourselves have not taken the steps to bring Canada into line in providing protection for intellectual property, something which this Bill will do? I am pleased that not only in previous incarnations were my hon. friends on the other side of the House agreeing with the principle of what we are doing, but that our country's leading newspaper, The Globe and Mail, also agrees with what we are doing.

• (1700)

Since Canada does not provide the same protection for intellectual property in this field as do all other industrialized countries, research and development activity by the pharmaceutical industry has stagnated. In other countries full protection for intellectual properties has generated enormous investments. Canada has missed out on investments it might have shared in had we provided a better environment and system of incentives for investing in research.

I would like to turn to another aspect of this issue which has received a great deal of attention. We know that the 1969 compulsory licensing amendments did produce savings for Canadian consumers of pharmaceutical products. The changes the Government is introducing to compulsory licensing will continue to provide Canadians with price savings while generating significant employment in research, development and manufacturing. In fact, the amendment to create a Drug Prices Review Board will provide more complete price protection for Canadians than has been possible until now. The 1969 amendments relied soley on the introduction of generic drugs to provide price competition and to lower the price of these products. If no generic drugs existed, there was no means of price competition. In effect, this means that no price competition existed from anywhere from five years to 15 years. This was the time it took for a generic product to reach the market. In addition, there are certain types of medicines which are never copied and, hence, there is no price competition.

I recommend that my colleagues look at the amendments just introduced. They help ensure fairer drug prices by providing for price reviews even before the generic products become available. Perhaps that is a point which has been missed. I emphasize that with Bill C-22 there will be price reviews for all patented drugs, not only those that are copied. This is a significant step forward in providing protection for Canadian consumers.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I seek your guidance, but I just noted that it is past five o'clock. Normally we would be proceeding to Private Members' Hour at this time. I understand that we are not going to Private Members' Hour today because a member of the Conservative Party is off visiting in South Africa on a private trip.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The House was properly informed on Friday of what is happening here today. I do not think that was necessary. The Hon. Member for Capilano (Mrs. Collins) has the floor on debate.

Mrs. Collins: Mr. Speaker, I will continue because I think all Members of the House have a great deal of interest in this Bill. I am pleased that we have an additional hour in which to debate it.

In order to make Canadian intellectual property laws similar to those in other industrialized countries, patentees of pharmaceutical products will be provided with up to 10 years of market exclusivity. Furthermore, the commission of inquiry into the pharmaceutical industry reported that it has taken on average 11.5 years from the time the original drug is introduced on the market until the generic copy is sold. The proposed 10 years is, therefore, really not far out of line with the present situation.

Let me remind Hon. Members that generic firms will not have to wait for seven years to apply for a licence. They can apply for and receive a licence for a drug at any time. They will simply not be able to sell the drug in Canada for a specified period of time. The fact that they have the licence will help minimize any delays in getting a generic product to market once the appropriate period of protection has ended. Seven years after the drug is first introduced on the Canadian market the generic drug companies will be permitted to activate their licences to manufacture, and after 10 years they can import the drug without any restriction.

By making the period of protection shorter for manufacturing licences than for licences to import, the Government is maximizing the employment benefits for Canadians and maximizing the opportunities for the manufacture of fine chemicals industry in Canada. If these periods did not differ, there would be no incentive to actually manufacture the drug and/or its ingredients in Canada, and the benefit to Canadians would be diminished. This is an important part of the Bill to remember because it is a major improvement over what had originally been recommended.

It is important to recognize as well that the generic drug firms, in their discussions with the Minister, actually said that they felt that six years was a time period with which they could quite happily live. The protection is to be only seven years, which is not much longer than they had originally suggested was possible to live with.

The changes the Government has proposed in Bill C-22 provide incentives to generic firms to set up fine chemical manufacturing facilities in Canada to provide earlier access to the market. These provisions will increase employment for Canadians and will increase the availability of Canadian-made drugs to Canadian hospitals and pharmacies and to individual citizens.

The Government is also providing an incentive for Canadian drug research and development in Bill C-22. When a drug has been invented and developed in Canada, that is, when the drug is the product of Canadian research performed in Canada, it will be given protection from imported generic competitors for the full time of the patent. In that way we will again be encouraging the Canadian industry and the development and manufacture of Canadian drugs. To take full advantage of this protection the patentee must manufacture the drug in Canada. If that is not done, after the same seven-year period as for non-Canadian drugs, the generic firms will be able to activate their licences to manufacture the drugs themselves. The difference between the length of the periods of exclusivity for manufacturing and importing licences provides a much greater incentive for manufacturing in Canada and will maximize the employment benefits of Canada.

As I noted earlier, the Drug Prices Review Board will be headed by Dr. Harry Eastman who is, as we all know, one of the foremost outstanding authorities on this industry. This Board will provide a level of protection from excessive drug prices which is far greater than has until now been available to Canadians. The Board, which will have strong powers to call evidence and to pass judgment on the appropriateness of drug prices, will be independent. Its responsibility will be to ensure that Canadians continue to enjoy moderate and reasonable prices for patented drug products.

The provincial Governments, through their constitutional responsibility for the delivery of health care to Canadians and their involvement in drug cost reimbursement plans for their citizens, are the largest purchasers of prescription drugs. The importance of the provincial role in health care and the provision of drugs at reasonable prices is recognized in this Bill. The Drug Prices Review Board will be required to notify the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) and the Ministers responsible for health in the provinces of any hearing which the Board is going to hold. The provinces are in fact being given a statutory right to present evidence to the Board in order to guarantee that they are heard. The Board will have the powers to compel companies to provide evidence on the prices for which they have sold the medicine in Canada and in other countries. When necessary, the Board will take into account the cost of making the medicines and determining whether the price is appropriate. If the Board, after hearing and reviewing the evidence, decides that the price of a medicine is excessive, it will have the authority to compel the company to reduce the price to whatever level the Board feels is appropriate. As further punitive measures, when the Board deems it appropriate, it will also be able to revoke the exclusivity for a second patented product sold by that company.

• (1710)

It is intended that the Board be able to act quickly in any cases of suspected excessive prices. That is why the Board will be small, consisting of not more than five persons, and will be supported by a secretariat.

The Board will review the prices at which new drugs are introduced, the prices at which they continue to be sold, and will deal with all patent medicines. By giving the Board wide scope in terms of the drugs it can deal with, and stronger powers to call for evidence and enforce its decision, Bill C-22 both extends and solidifies the price protection available to Canadian consumers of patented products.

I am confident that these amendments to the compulsory licensing provisions of the Patent Act will strengthen Canada's position as a participant in pharmaceutical research and development, and I am confident that it will strengthen Canada's pharmaceutical manufacturing centre and continue to provide Canadians with moderate and reasonable drug prices.

My hon. friends opposite should take note of the editorial in The Globe and Mail to which I referred earlier. It states that moving toward normal patent protection for pharmaceuticals is like getting out of rent controls. Opposition Parties fulminate, consumer groups agitate and, in this case, others will add the anti-American view. Fortunately, the Government has both the cause and the powers to do the right thing.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order. Questions or comments. The Hon. Member for Edmonton—Strathcona (Mr. Kilgour).

Mr. Gauthier: I have a question, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Kilgour: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Gauthier: Point of order, Mr. Speaker. I have a lot of respect for the Member you are recognizing—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. Is the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) rising on a point of order?

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I take it that you will be asking the Member to put a very short question because the purpose of questions and comments is for the Opposition to question the Member, as has taken place during the day.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order.

Mr. Gauthier: The Government gets to question us, we get a chance to question it. It is not for the purpose of back scratching.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order. I recognize Members as I see them. I was indicating to the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mrs. Collins) that her time had expired and I saw the Hon. Member for Edmonton—Strathcona rise.

An Hon. Member: Nonsense.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I don't find any of these remarks necessary at this time. I will recognize the Hon. Member for Edmonton—Strathcona.

[Translation]

Mr. Rossi: Mr. Speaker, on the same point of order. I have been here often enough during debate to know this is not the first time when a Conservative Member has the floor and we get to the period for questions and comments, another Conservative is recognized by the Chair. I think the Chair should have the courtesy to recognize Opposition Members, for comments. I think the Opposition should be shown this courtesy. This happens too often.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I will repeat that questions and comments are usually for the Opposition—

Mr. Rossi: Yes.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): —not always for the Opposition. Questions and comments are generally for the Opposition. Would the Hon. Member take his seat.

Mr. Rossi: Yes, they are not always for the Government.

An Hon. Member: Sit down.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Edmonton—Strathcona.

Mr. Kilgour: Mr. Speaker, I have not seen so many Liberals and NDP Members in the House for a long time.

Some Hon. Members: Order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member knows that he should not reflect on the attendance in the House.

Mr. Penner: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Hon. Member who just spoke knows that it is not in order for an Hon. Member to make a comment on the presence or absence of other Members in the House.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I just said that. I agree with the Hon. Member.

Mr. Penner: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Kilgour: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Hon. Member who is seated behind me. Does she know of any country other than Canada that has a regime like our present regime for generic patent drugs? This includes OECD countries and others that consider themselves to be advanced industrial democracies.

Mrs. Collins: Mr. Speaker, I have never experienced having so many colleagues interested in questions and comments following a speech. I am pleased to have the opportunity to respond to my colleague's question.

I am not personally aware of any other countries which have a regime such as ours, that does not allow protection of intellectual property rights, as in this case of patent medicines. As I said in my speech, that is why representatives of countries from the Pacific Rim who attended the Pacific Economic Co-operation Conference find it hard to understand why we have not had those kinds of protections. Of course, they encourage us to have it so that we can be seen as being fair in the international community.

Let us consider a country such as Japan which has such laws. There has been a great emphasis in that society on developing the research skills of their people, the employment of university graduates, and encouraging the development of research in this area of drugs and medicines. Canada has been left far behind because it makes no sense for anyone to make that investment knowing there is no opportunity to benefit from it. A portion of this Bill will bring us into the 20th and 21st century.

Ms. Mitchell: I have a question for the Hon. Member, who comes from Vancouver. Is she aware that there are numerous senior citizens' groups from the district in and around Vancouver that have been following the debate and are very concerned about this Bill? In fact, we received a telegram from several seniors groups indicating that they had sent a letter to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) reminding him of how seniors had banded together over the deindexing, and are ready to do so again on the generic drug issue.

They also want to point out that these groups are very aware that the drugs that are on the market now will not be affected, but that seniors are always trying something new for illnesses, such as arthritis. They cannot afford the time to wait for the cheaper priced drugs to become available since many of them will not be around in 10 years. They are concerned about this, and a very broad-based group has been organized.

Has the Hon. Member talked to seniors in her riding, particularly those on low income? Perhaps she does not have many low income people in her riding?

Mrs. Collins: Mr. Speaker, as my hon. friend knows, there are many seniors in my riding. In fact, part of my riding has perhaps the largest percentage of seniors.

Her comments disturb me because I believe there is much false information being spread about the potential impact of this Bill. It is simply not true. The Opposition is alarming people, including senior citizens. I believe that that is irresponsible and unfair. They may not have had the opportunity to listen to the full debate and understand all the issues in order to recognize the kind of protection that has been placed in this Bill, to understand that there will be no increase for existing drugs, and that it will be 10 years before the new drugs are on the market. They are being unnecessarily alarmed. As responsible Members of Parliament, I do not believe we should do that to our constituents.

• (1720)

I would like to refer back to the time a few years ago. It is funny how people's views change. The Hon. Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith) said in May, 1985: "Higher drug prices might be justified if it led to more drug research in Canada". We really hear some different perspectives depending on when the issue comes to the fore. I would caution my colleagues, and I do so very sincerely, that in the long run, I do not think the Canadian public will appreciate the false alarms that Hon. Members opposite are pursuing on this particular issue. I have confidence in the ability of Canadians to understand what we are doing and to recognize the tremendous benefits it will bring to Canadians, their children and their grandchildren, without increasing the price of the drugs they use.

Ms. Mitchell: Mr. Speaker, I would like to clarify with the Hon. Member that they were senior citizens talking, not myself. I think they would like to know why the Government will not release these studies so that the people will have the facts.

Mrs. Collins: Mr. Speaker, I think I have already commented on that. I understand that the Hon. Member has petitions and I know what it is like to receive petitions—

Ms. Mitchell: Then why don't you release the study?

Mr. Young: Give us the study.

Mrs. Collins: Do you want me to answer the questions?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): At this point I think the time for questions and comments has now terminated. Debate.

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I have been sitting here in the House listening to questions, comments and interventions by Hon. Members on the government side of the House and, frankly—

An Hon. Member: Wait until our turn.

Ms. Copps: That is right. Wait until our turn. It will not be too long, either, until we are on the government side of the House.

Frankly, I cannot believe my ears. This is the Canadian Parliament. The last time we looked we were in Canada, it was not the American Congress and we were not bowing to the American multinationals. We have here a number of mouthpieces for American multinational corporations who are prepared to sell out the rights and responsibilities of Canadians so they can bow down to the Americans.

An Hon. Member: Shame.

Ms. Copps: It starts with the seat right across from us occupied by the Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Mulroney), the aptly self-described head waiter to the President of the United States. Hearken back fellow Members of Parliament to the Shamrock Summit. It was the greatest moment of two Irish blarney makers getting together. They came out of that meeting with a new Accord, a new relationship between Canada and the United States. However, the sham was the sham which was perpetrated on the Canadian people because one of the things we sold out as a Government on March 17, 1985, was the Patent Act. The Prime Minister told us we were going to bring in changes to the Patent Act. When the Americans say jump, we ask how high, and here we have another classic case of a high price being paid in our hot pursuit of a so-called free trade agreement with the United States.

We heard the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mrs. Collins) talk about the number of jobs which were going to be created, and we have already heard that story. However, let us go back to 1969 when the first legislation was introduced. At that time there was no research and development being done by the multinationals in Canada. Yet we were twinned with the United States for the highest drug prices in the western world. We had the highest drug prices in the western world. Now Members of Parliament on the Conservative side of the House want to see our drug prices follow the way of the American medical system. Do we in Canada want to see emulated in our pharmaceutical system the kind of rip-off we have seen in the American medical system?

An Hon. Member: No.

Ms. Copps: We have built a country which is unique, where the medical system is universally accessible, as a result of Liberal legislation. Because we recognized the problem almost 20 years ago, we went from paying the highest prices for drugs to paying the lowest prices for drugs in the western industrialized nations. The cost will be $3.5 billion, which will come out of the pockets of the sick, the needy and the elderly over the next 10 years. That cost translates into a loss of 9,000 Canadian jobs. The Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association did not tell the truth back in 1969 when it said that this was going to cause all kinds of problems with research and development, because it never developed drugs in Canada. Even before 1969 when it was taking Canadian consumers to the cleaners, we still did not have research and development in this country.

The issue here is more than simply a question of jobs. It is an issue of sovereignty.

[Translation]

But the Hon. Member for Bourassa (Mr. Rossi) cannot overlook this. In the Liberal Party, we are all united throughout the provinces and throughout the country in our fight for the rights of the elderly. I am delighted to see the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart), because frankly, Mr. Speaker, when we see how the elderly stood up against this Government on the issue of Old Age Security Pensions, we can expect the same thing to happen on the drugs issue. Mr. Speaker, what we are about to sacrifice today is not just the elderly and the sick and women who are the most frequent users of our health care system in Canada. We are about to sacrifice our sovereignty as a country.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order. The Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps).

Ms. Copps: It is not simply a question of the cost to senior citizens and it is not simply a question of the cost to women who are the primary users of our health care system. It is a question of Canadian sovereignty and whether we in this Parliament of Canada are going to allow our policies to be dictated by the whims of the multinational corporations south of the border. I would like to ask the Hon. Member for Capilano who spoke earlier about jobs, whether the workers at Goodyear in Toronto today, who have been given their walking papers because of a plan to develop their corporation in the United States, have in fact been protected. Is the Canadian Government going to say to those workers: "It is fine and dandy you are going to lose your jobs. We are going to see 1,300 people in the Toronto area out of work but that is all right because we are getting along with our neighbours to the south"? We are getting along cap in hand. We are on our hands and knees. We hear the Prime Minister talk about this great new relationship with the United States. When the Liberals were in power and when the softwood lumber issue came to the court, the Liberal Government fought the case and we won. We did not cave in. We did not buckle down and wince and whimper, which is the kind of activity we have seen from this Government.

• (1730)

Unfortunately, the head waiter and the butler—the self-described head waiter of the Canadian Government—is not prepared to fight on this issue. Why can he not take the same initiative that the senior citizens of the country took with respect to deindexing? Why can he not say to the Americans: "We have the lowest drug prices in the world and we want to keep it that way"? In fact, there is an indigenous, generic Canadian industry that is not only creating jobs, it is creating more jobs than we had under the pre-1969 legislation invoked by the Liberal Government as a result of the patent protection of American multinational corporations.

I do not buy the argument that all of a sudden we will see tens of thousands of jobs created by the pharmaceutical companies. These companies, mostly multinational pharmaceutical companies, will continue to create jobs in areas in which they will receive the best bang for their buck. What we will see is that the cost to Canadian consumers will sky-rocket.

I would like to refer Hon. Members to an example of this which is so unbelievable that when I read it it boggled the mind. I refer to one particular drug sold in Canada before the Liberal Government introduced protection for consumers back in the late sixties. At the bulk level this particular drug sold for $200 per kilo. That kilo was eventually sold to the Canadian public in the form of pills for some $96,000 per kilo. That is a $95,800 profit, or roughly a 50,000 per cent mark-up. That was the type of gouging, the multinational rip-off that forced the previous Liberal Government into a position in which we had to build in some protection.

Over the last 15 years we have gone from being the people who paid the highest prices for drugs in the world to those who now pay the lowest prices. Yet we see our American counterparts across the way—that was a Freudian slip. They are not our American counterparts, although they might as well be. We see the incredible spectacle of ordinary Members on the government side of the House elected with an unprecedented majority actually standing up in the House to defend the decision of their Government to prop up American multinational drug companies at the expense of the Canadian consumer just so we can get into another fast-track free trade agreement. First it was shakes and shingles. Then it was softwood lumber. Now it is the drug question.

An Hon. Member: Shrill Sheila!

Ms. Copps: The Hon. Member for Ottawa—Carleton (Mr. Turner) says: "Shrill Sheila".

Mr. Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): No, I did not.

Ms. Copps: If it was not the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Carleton, then it was someone else.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, I will be shrill on this issue. I want to tell Members opposite that when I was back in my riding of Hamilton East on the weekend, people spoke to me and said: "You had better go back there and fight that drug issue as hard as you can because it is just like the senior citizens' issue".

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

I make no excuses, Mr. Speaker, because I am fighting for my constituents. There is one thing those in the Conservative Party who are just starting their political career should remember. If they don't want to see that career come to an untimely end, Mr. Speaker—

An Hon. Member: It already has. They are already finished.

Ms. Copps: —I think it would be a good idea if they would start listening to their constituents—

[English]

Mr. Fennell: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. There have been discussions among all Parties with respect to the question of extending the sitting hours of the House tonight. I wish to advise you, Mr. Speaker, that there is no intention on behalf of the Government to extend the hours of sitting. In this respect we have the agreement of the chief opposition Whip and the House Leader of the New Democratic Party. I feel this will put us all at ease and allow us to relax. We on this side of the House and Members opposite will not be calling for extended hours this evening.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. There have been discussions in this respect. Perhaps just to make it perfectly clear, Your Honour could ask for the unanimous consent of the House with respect to adjourning at six o'clock today, after which time we will go into the proceedings on the adjournment debate.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

[Translation]

Ms. Copps: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I was suggesting to the Conservative Members who are taking the bait, as it were—

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. The Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) has the floor.

[Translation]

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I think "mangent la ligne" is not a very good translation of the English. But in English, when you go fishing and a bunch of little fish eat your bait, the minnow or whatever . . . What the Conservative Members are doing now is, they're eating the bait, they're eating the whole thing. They are not listening to their constituents who will tell them in no uncertain terms: We want you to fight this legislation which is going to affect us as consumers and will cost us about $3.5 billion in ten years. For instance, if we consider the province of Ontario . . .

[English]

In the Province of Ontario alone in current costs there will be an increase of $43 million per year to the people who are buying current drugs. The real danger for the average consumer is not in the increased cost of current drugs. That is something which has now been accepted by the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre). All last week he claimed that there would be no effect. What he says now is that there will not be an increase but that the decrease which is provoked by competition by the generics will occur less quickly. That is how he now explains it.

Let us consider a new drug coming on stream, for example, Tagamet which was a wonder drug for people who suffer from ulcers. These new drugs will continue to cost consumers sometimes $100, $200, even $500. In the case I just cited, there was a 50,000 per cent mark-up. This was brought about because we allow these companies carte blanche to monopolize the Canadian market-place. If our Conservative colleagues are really interested, then there will come a time when they will have to break away from the pack—and I do not mean the Rat Pack. There will come a time when they will have to break away from the Party line. I think all of us here have seen that in our own respective Parties from time to time. I humbly suggest that this is one time that those invisible masses in the Progressive Conservative Party, those Members who were elected with a huge landslide back in 1984 and from whom we have heard almost nothing since, should part company with the powers that be. This would be a good time for them to part company with the actions and political strategies of people such as Senator Atkins, and others, who desperately want to get the Prime Minister back on track but who, unfortunately, have failed to recognize the key to the Achilles' heel of the Conservative Party, that is, the question of Canadian sovereignty. That question has never been more clearly put than it is put in the Bill which is before us. Here we have a blatant, flagrant example of how the Government is prepared to sell out millions of Canadians, senior citizens, sick people and those on disability pensions. These people are not covered by provincial drug plans.

Having spoken to the Minister of Health for the Province of Ontario I can tell Hon. Members that we are putting these provincial drug plans in a strait-jacket as a result of this legislation. If a new drug comes on the market, and it may be a wonder drug, it may do for other diseases what Tagamet did for ulcers, then can Hon. Members imagine the savings to the Canadian health care system? Tagamet eliminated the need for surgery in the case of ulcers. If a new wonder drug comes on the scene because of these new monopoly provisions then, unfortunately, the cost will be so prohibitive that in most provinces a tremendous delay will occur before the drugs can be covered under the drug benefit formulary. If any Member has dealt with this issue he or she will know that if a drug is not on the drug benefit formulary then it is not covered by a provincial drug plan. I have many seniors in my own area who are forced to purchase drugs which do not currently come under the drug benefit formulary. The Minister's suggestion that the slack will be picked up by provincial Governments or insurance companies is simply not true. It is the consumer who will pay in the short term and it is the consumer who will pay in the long term.

• (1740)

I believe that our system has worked. It has taken Canadian drug prices from being the highest in the world to being the lowest in the world. If it ain't broke, don't fix it. Here we have a classic example of over-fix. The Government is making an attempt to fix something that is not broken and in truth it is attempting to buckle down to pressure from American multinationals in the drive for a free trade agreement. The Government is now prepared to sell out Canadian senior citizens and the sick, those who are the least able to pay.

I heard a Member from the government side talking about following the system in the United States. I would ask that Hon. Member to see in which kind of shambles the American health system is. Over the last couple of years, because my husband's family is from the United States, I have had a chance to visit there. Almost without exception, every time I have been to my husband's home town of Tampa, Florida, I have read in the paper accounts of at least two or three cases of suicides, people who have killed themselves because the cost of medical care is so prohibitive. The last time I was there, I heard of a murder-suicide. A young mother whose son had been in a motorcycle accident and who did not have medical insurance killed her son and herself because she simply could not face the thought of losing everything the family had worked hard for. There was no hope because of the condition of her son. I do not think we should hold up this kind of a system as one to emulate.

We know that the current Canadian pharmaceutical system was studied by experts from the United States who wanted to find a way of bringing down the escalating costs of drugs. Those experts looked to Canada for leadership. At a time when our Government should be showing leadership and telling American multinationals that we like our system and are going to keep it, why are we buckling down to pressures from multinationals? Why has the Prime Minister led us down the garden path on our merry way ever since the Shamrock Summit, a summit which really did put the sham back into the word "shamrock"?

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps). She made a very eloquent speech in which she attacked the Government for bringing forth this legislation which will add tens of millions of dollars each year to the costs borne either by individual Canadians or private or public pharmacare plans for prescriptions. She has lauded the legislation passed in the late 1960s by the Liberal Government which gave us the system which the Conservative Government is proposing to change in such an ill-advised manner.

If those are her views and the views of her Party, why, when the Liberals were in government, did the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet), who was then the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, buckle under to the pressure of multinationals by telling them he was willing to think about changing the system? Why did his successor, Mrs. Erola, appoint Prof. Eastman to look at the question if the system was working well? Why did the Hon. Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith) in June assure Conservative Members of Parliament that if the Government brought the Bill forward before the summer break, the Liberals would not oppose it and only members of the NDP would, so they would get it through quickly? Why do Liberal Members continue to talk on both sides of every question?

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I believe the response of the previous Liberal Government to pressure from multinationals was in fact to set up the Eastman Commission. As I understand it, from discussions with members of the New Democratic Party as well as members of the Liberal Party, there is a broad range of views on how far Eastman went, how far he should have gone and what recommendations should be accepted. I believe it is common knowledge that Liberal Members were prepared to accept some of the recommendations of the Eastman Report, and that is also the case for members of the New Democratic Party. I am not quite sure what the Hon. Member is driving at.

The Liberal Party did not change the patent law. It appointed an expert who would look at the question and return to Parliament with a report, thus giving us a chance to examine the questions as he has suggested we should do. We did not get the Eastman Report in this Bill, we got a carbon copy of the message Mr. Ronald Reagan sent to the Prime Minister at the Shamrock Summit. Even though Eastman did his work and tried to find out the general feeling among the population as well as the producers, his recommendations were ignored. What we have before us is basically a regurgitation of what American multinationals wanted from the Prime Minister and got from him in the first place.

The Hamilton and District Labour Council, a member of the Canadian Labour Congress, wrote to the Prime Minister with a carbon copy to me, the Member for Hamilton East, objecting to this measure. Surely the Hon. Member is not suggesting that I should not voice to the Government my concerns and the concerns of the Hamilton and District Labour Council about the changes which will result in this kind of monopoly. Surely he does not want us to stop fighting the Government on this issue. Is that what he is suggesting?

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. This morning I rose to indicate my intention to serve notice that there would be an amended motion put providing for the number of additional days for debate on this issue pursuant to a notice I gave last Friday. I understand there has been some uncertainty as to the interpretation of the number of days in the motion and I wish to make it very clear that in the motion I proposed—

Ms. Copps: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Mazankowski: I am speaking on a point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Ms. Copps: I had the floor. There was a question and answer period and I believe that I had—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order.

Ms. Copps: Well, I had the floor. You can't stand up on a point of order in the middle of anything.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) has the floor. I will recognize the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) on a point of order if she wants after the Deputy Prime Minister is finished.

Ms. Copps: But—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Yes, it is a point of order.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I had indicated last Friday that I would be bringing forth a motion asking that two additional days of debate be granted for the consideration of the Bill at this particular stage. This morning I rose to indicate that I would be bringing in a new Notice of Motion pursuant to the notice I gave last Friday which would provide for the substitution of one day of additional debate rather than the two days of additional debate as is presently recorded under the present government Notice of Motion. In effect, we are reducing the number of days provided from two to one.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, the reason I raised my point of order is that I find it highly unusual that in the middle of a question and answer period following a debate during which the Minister was not present and in which he did not participate—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order. It is not unusual. It was a point of order brought by the government House Leader and Deputy Prime Minister. I recognized him and he is now finished with his statement. I will now return to questions and comments. Are there any further questions and comments?

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, I was not questioning the point the Hon. Member was making in her speech opposing the Government's legislation, but she did not answer my question. Of course, once Prof. Eastman brought down his report, Members had to look at the report to see which parts of it they could accept, if any. If the system was working well, an argument she has made with which I agree, why did the former Government appoint Prof. Eastman and why did the Hon. Member for Sudbury, who is present in the House now, tell Conservative Members in June that if they brought forward the Bill at that time, the Liberals would not oppose it and it would pass quickly?

Mr. Frith: Eastman, we'll take Eastman.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I suppose I am repeating myself, but I think the point was that the Hon. Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith) believed that the recommendations of the Eastman Report were the ones that would be tabled in the form of a Bill.

Mr. Orlikow: That wasn't the Bill.

Ms. Copps: That was not the Bill. That is the point. That is why we are here debating this issue.

The heavy boots of the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) are now entering into the middle of this debate. The Hon. Member for Capilano said that there had been 14 hours of debate. As of this afternoon, we have had a total of two and a half hours' debate on this Bill. That means that we have had less than one hour for every billion dollars of the cost of this Bill. The Deputy Prime Minister now comes in and suggests that we cut the closure from two days to one day. I think that it is outrageous.

• (1750)

An Hon. Member: I think it's childish.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please.

[Translation]

Mr. Gérin: Mr. Speaker, I don't think the Hon. Member should be allowed to make that kind of comment when she is discussing the Bill. To be relevant, she should stick to the Bill and give direct answers to the questions that have been asked and the many questions we want to ask as well, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I wish to recognize another Member on questions and comments. The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Public Works.

[Translation]

Mr. Lanthier: Mr. Speaker, I would like to comment that the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, a man who can count since he is an engineer, informed us here in the House of two things: first, Canadians will not be spending more on drugs. Second, if you want to discuss details, the House of Commons is not the appropriate place. This should be done in committee.

This afternoon, Mr. Weiner, who is a pharmacist, said substantially the same thing, in addition to saying that we Canadians were doomed to receive drugs—

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member should know that he should not refer to the Minister by his name. He should be referred to as Minister of State for Immigration (Mr. Weiner). I recognize the Hon. Member for Saint-Denis on what is, I hope, a point of order.

Mr. Prud'homme: I rise on a point of order. It has been three times today. Mr. Speaker, you know the rules so well that you knew as soon as I got up that it was exactly to call to order the Hon. Member and to remind him that we do not refer by name even to the Minister of State for Immigration. It is not a custom of the House. I know you have done it, so my task is very simple. I thank you very warmly for perceiving ahead of time that this is exactly the point of order that I wished to make.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps). Was there a question there, or an answer that the Hon. Member wished to give?

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I am not an engineer. I am not a pharmacist. But I was elected to represent the people in my riding. Where you represent the people is in Parliament. That is why we are elected to come here and debate issues on the floor of the House.

The Members on the government side of the House know that the reason they want to get this Bill into committee is to scuttle the type of publicity and negative reaction which we have seen on a daily basis as we hear the contradictions, the obfuscations, and the Neanderthal meanderings of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. This weekend the Minister in fact contradicted his own words when he said that there would be a detrimental effect on prices, because the prices of drugs would not go up. But any new miracle drugs coming on the market would not see their prices lowered as quickly as they might be, because they would not have competition from the generic drugs. It is going to hit us in the same place, that is, in our pocket-books.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): There are still two short questions. One is from the Hon. Member for Surrey—White Rock—North Delta (Mr. Friesen) and the other is from the Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young). I will recognize two very short questions put to the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps).

Mr. Friesen: I listened with care to the Hon. Member's speech. I was a little afraid that she had overdosed on gripe water there for a while.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Friesen: The purport of her remarks was that the legislation and the Government here are simply a mouthpiece for the United States. I have noticed for the past couple of years that the Hon. Member has taken positions similar to the Congress of the United States on such issues as Nicaragua and South Africa. I wonder if the Hon. Member is speaking as a mouthpiece of the United States when she does that. Is it not possible to have a parallel conclusion based on what is right, without being a mouthpiece for another country?

Second, if it is right to protect Canadian intellectual property, for example, authors, the works of Margaret Atwood, or movies, why is it not right to protect other intellectual property, too?

Ms. Copps: First of all, Mr. Speaker, going back to the introduction of the legislation which protected Canadian consumers back in the 1960s, the reason it was introduced was that this so-called intellectual property which was supposed to be flourishing in Canada was non-existent. Consumers were being taken to the cleaners.

The Hon. Member states that I have patterned my views after the views of the American Congress vis-à-vis South Africa. The Hon. Member mentioned the fact that I have taken the position of other countries. Yes. I am proud of the fact that unlike a colleague on his side of the House I am not going to go on a South African propaganda trip and give up my chance to be speaking here in Parliament. His Government has been getting away with speaking out of both sides of its mouth on the South African issue. There is one Member who is running off on a propaganda trip, which the Minister of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) has said is so outrageous that he is closing down the South African tourist board. Then there is another Member coming in and stating what a great job we are doing. I will pit the record of this Party on the issue of South Africa, and on the issue of the pharmaceuticals, against any other Party bar none, Mr. Speaker, and with no apologies.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Young: I will try to make my question short, Mr. Speaker. Does the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) agree with what the government Members are arguing, that there is somehow going to be a Drug Prices Review Board provided in this legislation which will protect the interest of consumers? On the other hand, we know that the pharmaceuticals, the multinationals, have literally spent millions of dollars in challenging generic drug firms before the courts. Does the Hon. Member think that the multinational corporations would not alter their approach to generic drugs by indeed challenging any application that they may make before a review board? Dr. Harry Eastman expressed exactly the same fears in a report in The Globe and Mail this morning. Would the Hon. Member comment on that?

Ms. Copps: Far be it from me, Mr. Speaker, to criticize previous Liberal Governments. Some of us remember back to the mid-1970s when we had the prices review board under the very able leadership of Beryl Plumptre. There was a feeling among a lot of people that it is very easy to control wages. It is something quite different to control prices. The studies that have subsequently been done on the experience of the prices review board at that time show that it is very difficult, if not impossible, to control prices.

If you look at Clause 14, proposed Section 41.18 to proposed Section 41.25, the so-called prices review board that is being set up here is so vague that the Government chooses not even to define what is research and development. If there is no definition of research and development, how will we be able to equate the costs of the drug, and the costs that are to be borne by consumers?

Surely the issue of R and D—we have heard all this talk about intellectual property—is fundamental enough to the Bill that it should be included in the legislation, as opposed to left to the whim of some regulator who may, in fact, decide that something which is absolutely not Canadian R and D will be paid for by Canadian consumers.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Questions and comments are now terminated.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I have been more than kind. Order, please. Questions and comments are now terminated.

Ms. Copps: I rise on a point of order.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): On a point of order, the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps).

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I wish to raise this point of order. I do not mean to be frivolous. But in the course of the the questions and answers, because of the noise level at times and the number of interventions that were coming from a number of Conservatives, I am not sure whether I answered all of the questions, or whether there was at least one Member from the Conservative side of the House who had the opportunity to pose a question without my having the opportunity to respond. Generally speaking, the strategy is to have a question followed by a response. Because of the mêlée, I was not sure whether that objective was achieved.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): I think that the Hon. Member did very well today. I also think she has answered all the questions. I will vouch for that.

• (1800)

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 66 deemed to have been moved.

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY—NATIONAL RESEARCH COUNCIL—ABOLITION OF 200 POSITIONS IN APRIL—GOVERNMENT POSITION. (B) GOVERNMENT FUNDING

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, on October 15, I raised the now infamous cuts at the National Research Council in a question in the House. On that day officials of the NRC announced at a press conference that they would be cutting $20 million from their budget and provided Canadians with a detailed list of the cuts. That $20 million cut was being made to a budget of some $400 million. The Government had previously cut the budget of the NRC by some $120 million in the two years since it took office. The cuts now total almost 30 per cent of the previous NRC budget of $520 million in November of 1984.

Also on October 15, John Polanyi, Professor of Chemistry at the University of Toronto, won the Nobel Prize. The coincidence of Dr. Polanyi winning the Nobel Prize and the Government cutting further in the area of research and development caused these issues to appear on the front pages of our newspapers and in the evening telecasts.

As an aside, some Tory Members several weeks later had the audacity to suggest in committee that the NRC had somehow planned to make these cuts on the very day that John Polanyi won the Nobel Prize. They indicated that there was some sort of conspiracy which the NRC had conjured up to try to make the Government look bad. How ludicrous.

I attended the press conference given by the NRC officials. They announced the $20 million in cuts at the direction and under the orders of the Government. The press conference coincided with a meeting of the executive committee of the NRC, following a meeting of the full membership of the council in September. At the end of that rather dreary press conference, I remember a member of the media saying to Larkin Kerwin, the President of the NRC: "Did you know that John Polanyi just won the Nobel Prize?" Dr. Kerwin was pleasantly surprised and somewhat taken aback. How ludicrous it is for members of the Conservative Party to suggest that there was some sort of conspiracy on the part of the NRC to announce the cuts on the same day as Dr. Polanyi won the Nobel Prize.

We know what happened thereafter. There was an outcry from all parts of the country when it was learned that the public safety office at the NRC was being sacrificed. That office had done some work in the area of detection of drugs and bombs at airports. It had done considerable work with police forces across the country. There was a protest from the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police. We also learned that cold weather research would be affected. Work in the area of icing of structures in the North, such as transmission lines and helicopter blades, is going down the drain. We learned that the work of the scientists who had developed the mechanism which controls the Canadarm was being cut out.

• (1805)

We were told by the Minister of State for Science and Technology (Mr. Oberle) that there would be no lay-offs at the NRC. Several days later he told us that there would be no lay-offs this year. After that he said he personally would try to place scientists in universities and in the private sector to prove that there would be no lay-offs. The truth is somewhat different than what we were told by the Minister. We were told by officials at NRC that all the fat had been cut out in the past several years and that it would be difficult to avoid lay-offs this time around.

I could talk about the effect on morale of people at the NRC which is at all-time low, however, I would like to conclude by saying that the Minister's tactical retreat is unsatisfactory. The Minister has named a task force to review the cuts, but he has not said that it has the authority to reverse the cuts. He has not said that the Government will restore the funding of $20 million to the National Research Council. That is what I ask the Minister to do today, and I hope all Canadians will send him a message to that effect.

Adjournment Debate

Mr. Gordon Towers (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the chance to reply to the Member's question because it gives me an opportunity to set the record straight and lay to rest many of the exaggerated and unfair statements raised recently.

First, the extent of the reductions has been exaggerated. The Hon. Member said that the cut was 30 per cent when in actual fact it is only 9 per cent.

Mr. Berger: Take a look at your estimates.

Mr. Towers: An area of gross exaggeration has been the impact on people. It has been claimed that the reductions affect some 200 positions. In actual fact, as the Hon. Member for Laurier (Mr. Berger) found out in the Standing Committee, only 184 people are directly affected, something like half of them will be reassigned before the end of the year and the remainder will have a minimum of 13 months more in which to find satisfactory work. NRC expects to use many innovative ways to help these people. For example, the NRC wind tunnel will be commercialized and actively marketed. This could actually result in an expansion of employment at the facility if it goes to two shifts per day.

NRC is also discussing the possibility of transferring various research teams to Canadian universities or other departments so that they can maintain their R and D activities with limited disruptions. NSERC funding may be provided to help ease the transition.

NRC has also imposed a freeze on outside hiring, and an early retirement program will be introduced. All together these actions will ensure that valuable research and technical resources remain effectively utilized, even if they are not employed by the NRC. Finally, NRC will be getting additional person-years for some programs so that by next year their person-year authorities will be expanding.

Another issue that has often been raised is the question of IRAP. In spite of everything the Opposition has said, it can now be confirmed that IRAP contributions will not be reduced. We have always recognized how important that program is and have never wanted to cut it.

Lastly, many people have raised concerns over certain specific reductions. Many problems have been raised and a variety of dangers alluded to. We have now appointed a task force with three eminent persons to review the reductions to ensure that no such problems arise. In sum, the reductions and reallocations at NRC are only part of the Government's program in science and technology. They can be seen as necessary and important redress from the situation we inherited. The NRC situation has been exaggerated out of proportion. In actual fact, the extent of the cuts is not very great, the impact on people has been contained and the NRC remains a strong and viable research facility with new resources in important areas like biotechnology and space.

• (1810)

I recognize that the Hon. Member did not have the courtesy to remain for the answer.

BANKS AND BANKING—ESTEY COMMISSION REPORT—NON-PUBLICATION OF UNINSURED DEPOSITORS' NAMES. (B) INQUIRY CONCERNING POSSIBLE INTERIM REPORTS

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, since the report of the Estey commission was released last month, I have asked a number of questions concerning the uninsured and as yet unnamed Canadian Commercial Bank and Northland Bank depositors who were fully reimbursed by the Government out of public funds. For over a year now my colleagues and I have been asking the Government to justify its refusal to release the names of those uninsured depositors who received nearly $1 billion in ex gratia payments out of the public purse. I would remind the House that these are the so-called sophisticated investors since we are talking about a wholesale bank. In fact, at least one investor on the secret list received $1 million of taxpayers' money to compensate for a lost deposit.

First the Government said that the provisions of the Bank Act precluded it from releasing the names. However, when my colleagues and I asked exactly what portion of the Bank Act and asked to see the legal opinions on which the Government was basing its interpretation of the Bank Act, we received no answers. I also asked why the Government was citing the Bank Act in the first place since the situation involved former banks then in liquidation whose affairs might reasonably be considered to be subject to the provisions of the Winding-Up Act rather than the Bank Act. Again I received no answer.

Finally, on October 1, 1985, I was told by the former Minister of State (Finance), as reported at page 7206 of Hansard:

—I am quite prepared to release the lists to the commission and have Mr. Justice Estey decide—

We now have the report of the Estey commission and, as illuminating and thorough as it is, it is completely silent on the matter of the uninsured depositors. On October 31, 1986, when I pursued this with the current Minister of State (Finance) (Mr. Hockin) he said, as reported at page 950 of Hansard:

—when the commission was established the question of the names of depositors was something on which Mr. Justice Estey was to decide . . . . It is not now our position to challenge Justice Estey's decision since it was his decision. He received the names and he has decided not to publish them.

When I pursued this further on November 3, 1986, I received a different response from the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) who said, as reported at page 1007 of Hansard:

We decided it was inappropriate for us to release those names . . . We know that the matter could have been considered by Mr. Justice Estey. He chose not to do so.

In fact, we now know that the matter was never referred to Mr. Justice Estey. It was never a part of his terms of reference. Finally, after 18 months, the Minster of Finance admitted that it was his decision and that of his Cabinet colleagues and was not particularly based on a legal opinion or on Mr. Justice Estey or anyone else behind whom they had tried to hide.

I do not think that Canadian taxpayers, who surely have the right to know where their tax dollars are going, will accept that the matter rests there. We in the Official Opposition have always taken the position that taxpayers have the right to know and we agree with the former Deputy Prime Minister who said in this House on October 4, 1985, as reported at page 7332 of Hansard:

—public funds are at all times subject to the scrutiny of Parliament. That is what this place is all about.

However, the Government has been less than forthcoming and has contradicted itself in the little that has been said. First we were told that there was a decision on the part of the Estey Commission not to release the names of the uninsured depositors. Then we were told that in fact it was the Government's decision and that the matter was not considered by the commission and was never part of its terms of reference.

It is not acceptable for the Minister of Finance to say, as he did on November 3, that it was the Government's decision not to release the names and to attempt to close the book on it without any reasonable explanation. A secret list of people who got $875 million from the taxpayers' pockets requires a very full explanation.

• (1815)

Mr. Gordon Towers (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of State for Science and Technology): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has raised the question of the publication of the list of uninsured depositors of the CCB and Northland Bank who were compensated under Bill C-79.

As was indicated in the House last fall, and reiterated this month, the Government felt it would be inappropriate to release the names of the uninsured depositors of the two banks because it holds as an important principle respect for the privacy rights of individuals. Protection of this privacy is consistent with the intent of the Bank Act and the Access to Information Act. The private financial information given by a depositor to a bank is given in confidence and treated with confidence from that moment forward under the privacy provisions of the Bank Act. Such protection of the privacy of individuals continues to be the position of the Government.

While the Government protected the names of depositors, it did table in the House a detailed breakdown of the categories of depositors compensated under Bill C-79. These lists were organized into more than 40 categories for each institution, representing a very clear and concise picture of the individuals and types of organizations who received compensation under the Bill. The breakdown clearly demonstrated therefore where and to what major groups in society the funds were to be paid. By doing so, the Government acted responsibly in providing as much information as possible, and at the same time did not violate the right to privacy of uninsured depositors.

The Government, while it did not feel entitled to release the names of uninsured depositors, did send the list of these individuals to Mr. Justice Estey. I want to clarify to the House, however, that the list was provided to the commission as part of a package of background information regarding events related to the Canadian Commercial Bank and Northland Bank failures. Mr. Estey was not asked to decide whether or not the list of uninsured depositors should be made public.

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY—STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO UNITED STATES TRADE NEGOTIATOR. (B) CONSUMER ASSOCIATION'S POSITION

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, on November 19 I put a question to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre) with regard to a statement by the U.S. special trade representative on whether drug prices will rise as the result of the Government's legislation. Of course, the answer is that Mr. Yeutter said drug prices will rise. According to the transcript of the program, he said:

Any improvements in this area are clearly in the best interest of Canada as a nation. Now in some cases maybe this will raise the price at the retail level of some of these products, but if we're going to have low retail prices based upon piracy it seems to me that's not a sound way to run a country.

My point was simply that if Clayton Yeutter said drug prices will rise and if Professor Eastman and the Canadian Drug Manufacturers Association said drug prices will rise, then there is not much doubt.

I realize that the Minister valiantly held out by insisting that the savings Canadians would make would come in the form of lower prices rather than higher prices, but he too finally conceded the point on Friday when he said his "worst case scenario" meant that drug prices could rise. I wonder if this could be confirmed tonight? I asked again in Question Period this afternoon, and I did not get any real answer, as to how much prices will rise as a result of this Bill.

The second part of Mr. Yeutter's comments was the reference to Canadian policy being based on piracy. Canadian patent rules are based on our national needs within recognized international conventions. They have withstood the many challenges which the multinational companies have made, the most recent being the Federal Court decision of 1985 which found that Canada's drug patent law was not an abridgement of the freedoms granted under the Canadian Charter of Rights, and further had not stopped the companies from earning substantial profits.

Compulsory licences, which authorized generics in this country, are a well-known patent device. They are recognized as such and the only reason they are being restricted, as proposed in this Bill, is not because they are theft, piracy, or that the people who apply for them are scavengers, but that the United States does not like them.

To change the present policy is to say that we must act like the big boys who are our trading partners. It ignores the fact that Canada is a very small minnow in the world drug market.

We are 2 per cent of that market. There are no multinationals with headquarters in Canada. All the indigenous Canadian drug companies have largely been bought up by multinationals and often had their research transferred to the United States.

Faced with this situation, the Government made the right choice in 1969. It said that we will not get much in the way of research and employment in an industry that is not employment intensive, so we have opted for lower prices and a smaller indigenous generic industry.

• (1820)

It is another form of the Auto Pact where we have recognized international reality and made the best deal for ourselves. The Government's legislation will now sacrifice both these aspects of a successful drug policy. I invite the Member who replies on behalf of the Government to confirm that we will no longer have low prices as our policy goal in prescription drugs, that we will have a generic drug industry which will be stalled for at least seven years before it has new drugs to produce and we will have a system which is essentially like that of the United States. Certainly Clayton Yeutter will be happy, but most Canadians will not be. I invite the Government to recognize why Canadians are not happy and why the majority is so opposed to this Bill.

[Translation]

Mrs. Gabrielle Bertrand (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, in reply to the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow), who has quoted Mr. Yeutter, I would like to say that perhaps there is some misunderstanding about the contents of this bill and about the role and functions of the Patented Medicine Prices Review Board. As the Minister has said on numerous occasions, this Bill will not affect drugs now sold in Canada and will not cause any increase in their price. The drugs which now have generic equivalents will continue to have them and competition between the manufacturer of innovative products and the generic company will continue to guarantee low prices for these products.

In the case of all existing drugs for which there is no generic equivalent at this time and of new drugs marketed in the future, the Prices Review Board is empowered to guarantee that the prices are reasonable and that any increase corresponds to the Consumer Price Index.

The Patented Medicine Prices Review Board is also empowered to compare the prices asked for a drug in Canada with those asked in other countries and to ensure that prices in Canada are reasonable and fair to Canadians. When the Board identifies an unreasonable price, it will have the power to revoke the exclusivity period for the product involved, and in extreme cases, to remove the exclusivity of another product of the same manufacturer.

Mr. Yeutter used the word piracy. I strongly oppose any allegation that our compulsory licensing system is an illegal counterfeiting scheme. The changes which will be made under Bill C-22 had long been suggested by other OECD countries. The previous Government had started a review process and corrections are now being made to our compulsory licensing policy, not as a response to these accusations, but because the Government wants to encourage investment in pharmaceutical research and development in this country. The Government wants also to stimulate the growth of a high quality chemical product branch in the pharmaceutical industry. The current policy has made very little progress on either of these fronts and the changes Bill C-22 will bring about will help remedy the situation. This initiative will create at least 3,000 new jobs for Canadians and will attract huge investments in research, development and manufacturing in the pharmaceutical industry in Canada.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

The House adjourned at 6.24 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Tuesday, November 25, 1986

The House met at 11 a.m.

[English]

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order with regard to business of the House. There were some initiatives taken this morning to facilitate progress on Bill C-22. Would it be reasonable to request the undertaking of the Government House Leader (Mr. Mazankowski) that the Government will not take steps to move time allocation while negotiations are taking place and that we will continue with second reading stage of Bill C-22?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, nothing concrete has been offered at this time. If parties want to provide something concrete, I would certainly entertain it. However, if he is referring to a letter which was sent to me a few minutes ago, the proposal he is making is tantamount to him offering me $1,000 for a $10,000 automobile.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

PETITIONS

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Ontario (Mr. Fennell):

That the House do now proceed to the next item of routine business.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order. He does not have the floor. You called petitions. We are on routine proceedings and you did call for petitions. I rose to present a petition. I maintain that while we are on petitions, only petitions can be received. No point of order can be entertained while petitions are being presented.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, on the same point of order, the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary did have the floor. He had the floor under—

Mr. Gauthier: On a point of order.

Mr. Mazankowski: He had the floor. This is consistent with your ruling on November 7 as reported at page 1192 of Hansard. I see absolutely no difference. As a matter of fact, that has been going on across the way for the last few days. Similar types of dilatory motions have been moved to move to routine proceedings or government orders. Such a motion was moved yesterday. In order to be consistent, Mr. Speaker, this would have to be ruled in order.

Mr. Benjamin: He already called petitions.

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, the Government House Leader (Mr. Mazankowski) is right in a way. Yesterday he moved to move to orders of the day. I remind the Chair that there is a specific Standing Order which allows this to be done and specifies how it should be done. However, I know of no specific Standing Order which would allow us to move to another item within routine proceedings. Can the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary tell us where he finds provision in our Standing Orders to do what he has just done?

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, in addition to the precedent to which the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) referred, which was established on November 7, I bring to the attention of the Chair and my colleagues Beauchesne's Citation 417(1)(b)(ii) which refers to dilatory motions and includes a motion "That the House proceed to the next business". It is in there quite clearly. We are doing nothing more than following a precedent set November 7.

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a few comments. I submit that routine proceedings is an item of business and the effort of the Government to leap over one item of business under routine proceedings is not what is contemplated by the motion which the Government is trying to present at this time. I do not know why the Government would want to blank out an entire item of routine proceedings. I submit again that the motion offered by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Government House Leader (Mr. Lewis) is not intended to allow the Government to pick and choose among the various components of routine proceedings.

• (1110)

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, what we are trying to do is facilitate the business of the House. We have been frustrated for some 16 hours in trying to move this Bill forward for debate. The purpose of this is to prevent the kind of frustration and phoney procedural points that have been taking place from time to time, and allow debate on this Bill to take place. It is quite in order, under Citation 417, to move the motion that the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary has just moved. As a matter of fact, it is taken word for word from Citation 417.

Second, on November 7, a similar motion was presented and accepted under the same category of Routine Proceedings. I submit that, notwithstanding the protestations opposite, this motion is in order and the question should be put.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I believe we need some clarification. When you called for petitions, Hon. Members were standing to be recognized under that order of business. Members had a number of petitions they wished to present on behalf of their constituents. The Parliamentary Secretary rose on a point of order—

Mr. Mazankowski: He did not.

Mr. Benjamin: He did so.

Mr. Riis: There were no petitions.

Mr. Mazankowski: He did not. He was recognized, he did not say a point of order. Stop putting words in people's mouth.

Mr. Riis: It was petitions.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I recognized the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary but he did not say "Point of order", nor did I say point of order.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, on what was the Member recognized if it was not a point of order? It was petitions. You called petitions. I stood because I had a petition. If he did not have a petition, he had no business being recognized. That is the point.

[Translation]

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, what appears to be happening in the House may well have occurred before. However, I submit, with respect, that just because there may be a precedent—that may well be erroneous—that does not mean we should use that precedent today.

[English]

Second, I want to take strong objection to what the Hon. Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) just said about an exercise in frustration, and "phoney". I take objection to that. We all have had past experience—I am not talking to Hon. Members who came here in 1984—with events that took place in the House many times in the last years when we, having been in government, went through what the Hon. Deputy Prime Minister may be going through today. I object to the word "phoney" and to the vocabulary used by the Hon. Deputy Prime Minister about the right of Members to either present petitions or use any rules at our disposal to perhaps show our displeasure about some legislation. Certainly, that is exactly what the House is all about.

The Hon. Deputy Prime Minister is imputing motives about what my Party or the NDP are trying to do today. What we are trying to do may be very clear, but it is legal and very acceptable according to the rules of the House.

The Deputy Prime Minister may be extremely frustrated to see that we are not proceeding as fast as he would like, but he is the last person here who should show his displeasure when we remember that we had to endure bell ringing, night and day, for 14 days in the House. That was quite acceptable according to the rules of the House. He is showing his displeasure because we are not passing his legislation immediately, within very few hours. The Deputy Prime Minister and his colleagues are calculating some two hours and eleven minutes or two hours and seventeen minutes, or four hours for a very important piece of legislation.

I do not think that kind of vocabulary should be used in the House, to impute motives to our action today, this afternoon, tomorrow, the day after and even next week. It is not our custom to impute motives.

Second, in my view, any Member cannot rise at any time, on any subject, and move a motion. There are certain rules. You were calling petitions and we have petitions to introduce.

I may be wrong, Mr. Speaker, and you will have to decide what is proper at this time, but I submit that it is proper to go through the proceedings. If he could do that today, why did he not do it yesterday? If it was illegal yesterday, why should it be legal today. We are now on petitions and let us see what the rest of the day will bring.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I want to respond to the Hon. Member.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): He was responding to you.

Mr. Mazankowski: I simply want to respond to the comments that have been made. Perhaps if the Hon. Member were patient he would like what I have to say. I have tremendous respect for the Hon. Member for Saint Denis (Mr. Prud'homme). He has been a distinguished Member of the House for a long time and I in no way want to impute any motives. To the extent that I used the word "phoney" or anything that may be perceived as unparliamentary, I want to withdraw those statements.

However, I do remind him that he is really asking you to propose a sort of double standard in applying the rules. First, the Opposition did not want this Bill presented. They did not want to debate it. Now they want to debate it.

I submit that over 16.5 hours of House time has been spent in consideration of this piece of legislation.

Citation 417 is very much in order. Let me quote Citation 417(2)(ii):

> Dilatory motions are designed to dispose of the original question either for the time being or permanently. They are usually of the following type:

This motion comes directly from these examples. These are the examples:

> That consideration of the question be postponed to—
>
> A certain date.
>
> That the Orders of the Day be read.

That is exactly what the Opposition did yesterday in a similar set of circumstances. The third one, which is the motion we moved yesterday but was ruled out of order, is:

That the House proceed to (name another Order).

You in your wisdom, Mr. Speaker, ruled that out of order.

The fourth example is:

That the House proceed to the next business.

That is precisely the wording that was entertained on November 7, which you found in order, and which has been presented today under similar circumstances.

The other examples of a dilatory motion are:

That the debate be now adjourned.

I submit that there are clear examples of dilatory motions. This is but one example. I submit that it is in order and the question should be put.

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, I have six petitions from residents of British Columbia and Alberta who have asked me to present them to the House today. These petitions concern the retaliatory tariff that the Government has imposed on imported books. This affects those residents and they do not view presenting these petitions in the House as being a dilatory procedure. It is a very real issue to them and I hope that Members opposite will understand how western Canadians feel about some of the Government's policies that are affecting them, and how they want those concerns to be brought to the House of Commons through their representatives or people speaking on their behalf.

I have these petitions and I ask you to return to petitions so I can present them on behalf of residents of British Columbia and Alberta.

• (1120)

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, I will not bore you with the details of all of the petitions I have, I just want to make a procedural point. The Chair may or may not rule in favour of the Parliamentary Secretary because it did recognize him on petitions. I thought he had a point of order, too, but I accept the Chair's ruling that he did not say "point of order". However, he did get up on petitions.

In terms of co-operation in the House of Commons and not misleading each other, I do hope that since the Parliamentary Secretary was recognized on petitions that he indeed does have some petitions. To start rising on Petitions and move motions instead, I think will cause some very bad feelings in the House. It will mislead the Speaker—indeed, it does mislead the Speaker because he will think a certain Member has petitions to present which he does not have. It also misleads Hon. Members of the other Parties. If we get into that kind of mess, this Parliament will really get bogged down as it was a few years ago with the ringing of the bells. I make that as a point, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I want to place before you for your consideration two points; first, there has been reference made to a ruling made by yourself, Sir, on November 7. I took a look at Hansard and all that ruling seems to say is that a person cannot be recognized twice on the same day during the hearing of petitions to present petitions. I submit with the utmost respect that that ruling has nothing whatsoever to do with the issue before us.

Second, in Hansard of yesterday I see that after the Government House Leader moved that the House proceed to Government Notices of Motions immediately after petitions were called, the Chair ruled as follows:

The motion is that the House proceed to Government Notices of Motions, which means that, if the Chair should rule that it is in order, a number of items that are in the usual order under Routine Proceedings would not be heard. It is the view of the Chair that that would be inappropriate and that we should proceed from item to item. Consequently, I regret to advise the Hon. Deputy Prime Minister that in the view of the Chair the motion is out of order.

I respectfully submit that what we are faced with today is exactly the same situation we were faced with yesterday which led to the ruling I just quoted. If yesterday, after petitions were called, a motion by the Government House Leader that the House proceed to Government notices of motions was out of order, surely a motion today on behalf of the Government that the House proceed to the next order of business, a motion made after petitions had been called, would also be out of order.

I respectfully submit, Sir, that the ruling the Chair made yesterday with respect to the motion that the House proceed to Government notices of motions is directly applicable in the same way to the motion made today by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Government House Leader, and whether that motion is in order is the question to be decided.

Mr. Lewis: If I may, Mr. Speaker, I just have two brief points as a result of comments made by other Hon. Members of the House. I find it odd that Hon. Members of the New Democratic Party who moved yesterday to cut off routine business by moving the House proceed to the orders of the day should today complain if someone moves to move through routine orders of the Day.

Mr. Benjamin: We didn't do it after petitions had been called.

Mr. Lewis: I just do not see how they can argue one thing one day and another thing another day. Specifically—

Mr. Cassidy: We moved the motion yesterday. You could have had it yesterday.

Mr. Lewis: If the Hon. Member of Parliament who has just recently joined us would let me finish so we can get on with this debate.

Mr. Cassidy: Don't be so sensitive.

Mr. Lewis: Sensible as opposed to you.

Mr. McCurdy: Order.

Mr. Riis: Order.

Mr. Lewis: The Hon. Member for Egmont (Mr. Henderson) made the point that he has petitions—

Mr. McCurdy: Point of order.

Mr. Lewis: —to file with the table. I would point out that under Standing Order 106(3):

A petition to the House may be presented by a Member at any time during the sitting of the House by filing the same with the Clerk of the House.

Mr. McCurdy: Point of order.

An Hon. Member: He is still on a point of order. Sit down.

Mr. Gauthier: You are just putting oil on the fire, Doug.

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps the Parliamentary Secretary can close off his remarks.

Mr. Lewis: I just wanted to draw to your attention, Mr. Speaker, and to the attention of my colleagues opposite who may not be familiar with this particular Standing Order, that under Standing Order 106(3), which refers to petitions, my hon. colleagues will know that rather than tie up the time of the House by filing petitions verbally with the Table, the provision is in the Standing Orders for filing the same with the Clerk of the House.

Mr. Speaker: I think the Chair has heard enough argument and is ready to rule.

Mr. McCurdy: Point of order.

Mr. Speaker: The Chair is making a ruling. I know the Hon. Member would respect that.

On November 7, 1986, the House was in session. It was under Routine Proceedings, Petitions, and the Hon. Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) rose and moved that this House now proceed to the next item of routine business. After consideration, the Chair accepted that motion as appropriate and a vote was taken.

The Chair feels the situation is the same today. All Hon. Members will remember that on another occasion, I believe yesterday, the Chair said that in its opinion it was not appropriate that the Government under Routine Proceedings jump over items. That is not the case here. The motion is to move to the next item under Routine Proceedings. I, therefore, decide that the motion is in order.

The question is on the motion of Mr. Lewis, seconded by Mr. Mazankowski, that the House do now proceed to the next item of Routine Business.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion, the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Lewis), which was agreed to on the following division:

(Division No. 26)

YEAS

Members

Andre
Beatty
Belsher
Bernier
Bertrand
Binns
Blackburn (Jonquière)
Blais
Blenkarn
Blouin
Bouchard
Bourgault
Brightwell
Brisco
Cadieux
Caldwell
Champagne (Champlain)
Clark (Yellowhead)
Clark (Brandon—Souris)
Collins
Comeau
Cook
Corbett
Cossitt
Côté (Lac-Saint-Jean)
Crofton
Crosby (Halifax West)
Crouse
Dantzer
Darling
de Cotret
Desjardins
Domm
Duplessis
Edwards
Epp (Provencher)
Fennell
Ferland
Fontaine
Forrestall
Fretz
Friesen
Gagnon
Gass
Gérin
Girard
Graham
Gravel
Greenaway
Grisé
Guilbault (Drummond)
Gustafson
Hawkes
Hees
Hnatyshyn
Hockin
Holtmann
Jepson
Johnson (Bonavista—Trinity—Conception)
Joncas
Kilgour
Kindy
King
Ladouceur
Lanthier
Layton
Leblanc
Lesick
Lewis
MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands)
MacKay
Mantha
Martin
Masse
Mayer
Mazankowski
McCain
McCuish
McDougall (St. Paul's)
McKnight
McMillan
Minaker
Mitges
Nicholson (Niagara Falls)
Nowlan
O'Neil
Pennock
Pietz
Plamondon
Plourde
Porter
Price
Ravis
Reid
Ricard
St. Germain
Schellenberg (Nanaimo—Alberni)
Schellenberger (Wetaskiwin)
Scott (Hamilton—Wentworth)
Scowen
Siddon
Sparrow
Suluk
Tardif (Charlesbourg)
Thacker
Towers
Tremblay (Québec-Est)
Tremblay (Lotbinière)
Tupper
Turner (Ottawa—Carleton)
Valcourt
Van De Walle
Warner
Wilson (Etobicoke Centre)
Winegard
Wise—116

NAYS

Members

Allmand	Gray (Windsor West)	Murphy
Angus	Grondin	Nicholson (Trinity)
Benjamin	Guilbault (Saint-Jacques)	Nunziata
Blackburn (Brant)	Henderson	Nystrom
Boudria	Hopkins	Orlikow
Cassidy	Hovdebo	Ouellet
de Corneille	Kaplan	Parry
de Jong	Keeper	Penner
Dingwall	Killens	Prud'homme
Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon)	Langdon	Riis
Finestone	Malépart	Robichaud
Foster	Manly	Robinson
Frith	Marchi	Rodriguez
Fulton	McCurdy	Young —47
Gagliano	McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood)
Garneau	Mitchell
Gauthier

• (1200)

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion carried.

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski):

That the House now proceed to the next item of routine business.

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. We are now at the introduction of bills stage as a consequence of the motion moved by the Parliamentary Secretary. As I am required to do, I am dealing with each of the Bills of which we have notice and in the names of Ministers or Members.

I have not recognized the Hon. Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn) but think that the Minister of Justice is attempting to use this occasion to introduce a motion that the House do now proceed to the next item of routine business. That of course was the motion upon which the House has just voted.

• (1210)

The Chair had occasion to consider this general question a few days ago. On November 7, at page 1194 of Hansard, the Chair said:

In the view of the Chair, in these proceedings the House is bound by the Bills as set out in the Order Paper. I think the Chair is bound to advise that we must follow the Order Paper.

Therefore, the Chair so rules and we will continue with introduction of bills.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Mr. Hnatyshyn, seconded by Mr. Mazankowski—

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker, I was recognized and—

Some Hon. Members: No, you were not.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: Mr. Speaker,—

Some Hon. Members: Sit down!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: I am not going into the Bill—

Mr. Speaker: I think it is the wish of the Hon. Minister of Justice that the Bill stand.

* * *

AN ACT TO AMEND THE CANADA ELECTIONS ACT (LEAVE OF ABSENCE)

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt) moved for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Canada Elections Act (Leave of Absence).

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour of the motion please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Rodriguez) which was agreed to on the following division:

(Division No. 27)

YEAS

Members

Allmand	Hovdebo	Murphy
Angus	Isabelle	Nunziata
Benjamin	Kaplan	Nystrom
Boudria	Keeper	Orlikow
Caccia	Langdon	Parry
Cassidy	Malépart	Penner
de Jong	Manly	Prud'homme
Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon)	McCurdy	Riis
Finestone	McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood)	Robinson
Fulton	Mitchell	Rodriguez
		Young —31

NAYS

Members

de Corneille	Gray (Windsor West)	Nicholson (Trinity)
Dingwall	Grondin	Ouellet—10
Gagliano	Killens
Garneau	Marchi

• (1240)

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion carried.

* * *

CANADA ELECTIONS ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt) moved that Bill C-237, be read the first time and be printed.

• (1250)

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. As Your Honour knows, government Members abstained from voting on this particular issue—

Some Hon. Members: Shame, shame!

Mr. Benjamin: That is not a point of order.

Mr. Keeper: What's your excuse?

Mr. Mazankowski: As you know, Mr. Speaker, normally Bills of this nature are routinely introduced and passed by all-Party agreement on a unanimous basis. We regret that there were some differences of opinion across the way. We elected to allow the opposition Parties to sort out their differences between themselves. However, it just illustrates further the games that are going on here which are making a farce out of this institution.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, there is a well-established principle that it is not in order to reflect on a vote of the House, certainly not in the manner—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: The Chair has taken the point of the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray).

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: No.

An Hon. Member: Explain!

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez).

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleagues for allowing me to present this Bill.

The Bill is entitled an Act to amend the Canada Elections Act. The purpose of the Bill is to extend—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member knows that this is not a time for a speech, but for a brief explanation.

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the Bill is to extend the leave of absence provisions respecting a candidate in a federal election to a candidate who is successfully elected as a Member of the House of Commons. It would apply to all employees who come under the jurisdiction of Part III of the Canada Labour Code.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Mr. Rodriguez, seconded by Mr. Riis, moves that the Bill be now read a first time and be printed. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Mr. Robinson: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

Mr. Speaker: I think the Hon. Member will realize that the Chair is putting the question and that it is not the time to raise a point of order.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: No.

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Speaker: All those opposed to the motion will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Speaker: In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Speaker: Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Rodriguez) which was agreed to on the following division:

(Division No. 28)

YEAS

Members

Angus	Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon)	Grondin
Benjamin	Finestone	Hopkins
Blackburn (Brant)	Foster	Hovdebo
Caccia	Fulton	Keeper
de Jong		Langdon
		Manly

Marchi
McCurdy
McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood)
Murphy
Nicholson (Trinity)
Nystrom
Orlikow
Parry
Penner
Prud'homme
Riis
Rodriguez
Young —28

• (1330)

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion carried.

Mr. Mazankowski: Point of order. Mr. Speaker, the Government abstained from voting on this matter. For reasons I outlined earlier, we believe—

Mrs. Finestone: You are commenting on the vote.

Mr. Mazankowski: I am not commenting on the Hon. Member's vote. I am explaining the disposition of the Government for the information of the Hon. Member.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. It has been known to happen in this Chamber that Hon. Members insist on the right to come into the Chamber and indicate how they would have voted had they been in the Chamber. We have had some recent experience along those lines. I think the Hon. Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) can give the reason why Government Members did not vote.

Mr. Mazankowski: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. We believe it is the inherent right of every Member in this House, whether on the Government side or the Opposition side, to introduce a Bill. We do everything we can to facilitate that process in every way possible.

Mr. Speaker: When shall the Bill be read a second time? At the next sitting of the House?

Some Hon. Members: Now.

Mr. Prud'homme: One o'clock.

Mr. Gauthier: Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Prud'homme: One o'clock.

Mr. Speaker: It being one o'clock p.m., I do now leave the Chair until two o'clock p.m.

At 1.35 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

S.O. 21

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[English]

TRADE

UNITED STATES DUTY ON CANADIAN LUMBER—EFFECT ON NORTHERN ONTARIO

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, the people of northern Ontario are angry because the Government has caved in to the Americans and agreed to an arrangement for making permanent a 15 per cent cost imposition on our softwood lumber. Whether that 15 per cent is a tariff, an export tax, or an increase in stumpage fees, the result will be equally devastating for northern Ontario. Saw mills are and will be closed. Thousands of jobs will be lost. The industry in Ontario cannot afford the burden of an additional 15 per cent cost. Even if the $600 million or $700 million referred to by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) remains in Canada, it cannot be poured back into the industry without risking a further 15 per cent from the Americans.

We in Canada have the sovereign right to place a value on our natural resources. For the Americans to try to dictate the worth of our resources is a violation of our sovereignty. We should have stood our ground and fought. Instead, we yielded to American pressure. Today we gave in on lumber. Tomorrow it may be pulp or paper. We in northern Ontario feel betrayed and we will not forget this act of unfairness and injustice.

* * *

DRUGS

NEED FOR LISTING OF INGREDIENTS ON DRUG LABELS

Mr. Lee Clark (Brandon—Souris): Mr. Speaker, the federal Government has made genuine progress in making the environment safer for people who have allergies. The Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) has banned the use of sulphites so that people will no longer risk having an allergic reaction to food which they eat in restaurants or buy at a store.

However, more needs to be done. Every time we take a drug we risk having an allergic reaction because the ingredients of drugs are not listed on the label and we do not really know what is contained therein. One Canadian died this year when she unknowingly took a drug which contained a preservative to which she was allergic. Another Canadian has been near death on several occasions because he did not know that the drug he was taking contained an ingredient to which he was allergic.

These situations could have been avoided if the ingredients of the drugs were listed on the labels. Ingredients of drugs should not be kept a secret. Canada has one of the best ingredient lists on foods in the world. I urge the Minister of National Health and Welfare and the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre) to apply those same standards to medication.

S.O. 21

AIR CANADA

DISMISSAL OF EMPLOYEE FOLLOWING RESULT OF DRUG TEST

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, an Air Canada employee in Winnipeg was fired on October 14 on the basis of a drug test. I understand that the worker was not informed that he would have to undergo the drug test performed by an Air Canada physician as part of a mandatory medical examination, and that a number of other applicants for the same job were not informed that they would have to undergo similar testing.

This man was hired on August 15 and worked for almost two months before being fired on the basis of a finding of cannabis in his test taken prior to being hired. An Air Canada official has stated that the worker's job performance was not even taken into consideration. The employee states that he discontinued the use of marijuana when he was hired at Air Canada, and went back to the same clinic which Air Canada, uses for another drug screen. The test revealed no trace of the drug.

I believe that this is an example of indiscriminate drug testing by Air Canada. Air Canada is particularly despicable in its use of the tests for failing to inform applicants that they will be screened for drugs and, in this particular instance, for firing someone on the basis of a two-month old drug test without even giving any consideration to the person's performance record on the job. The Minister responsible for Air Canada should end this questionable practice immediately.

Mr. Speaker: I regret that the Hon. Member's time has expired.

* * *

[Translation]

NATIONAL DEFENCE

IMPORTANCE OF CADET CORPS

Mrs. Anne Blouin (Montmorency—Orléans): Mr. Speaker, last weekend I had the pleasure of joining officers and members of the civilian committee of Squadron 630 of Montmorency to celebrate their 30th anniversary. The cadets of Squadron 630 receive a yearly financial contribution of about $500,000 from the Department of National Defence, which is used to pay for salaries of officers and civilian instructors, uniforms, summer camps, administrative support at the bases in Valcartier and Bagotville, flying classes, and so forth.

Mr. Speaker, thanks to the assistance provided by the Department of National Defence, these boys and girls from the riding of Montmorency—Orleans are cultivating a sense of public duty and discipline and a responsible attitude that will certainly serve them well in the future.

I am aware how important it is to have these cadet corps, and I am sure National Defence will continue its support.

* * *

• (1405)

[English]

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

"GREENHOUSE EFFECT" PREDICTION

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, Doctor Ken Hare, a climatology expert, says that "the greenhouse effect" is a reality. He predicts that temperatures in the Arctic will rise by as much as eight degrees by the year 2040 and that the planet will be affected, with particular impact on Canada.

As a nation we will have to make major adjustments to cope with the rise in temperature. I urge the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) to develop an action plan on the greenhouse effect. This is a complex and inter-generational issue. We must ensure that as a nation we are equipped to deal with the changes that the rise in global temperature will bring about.

We also ought to help plan a global response and set up the international structures needed to tackle a global issue of such magnitude. Let us hope that the World Commission on Environment and Development will design the international structures necessary to slow down, if not check, the greenhouse effect, and that the United Nations will act on their recommendations expeditiously.

* * *

[Translation]

SOCIAL SECURITY

UNIVERSALITY OF PROGRAMS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Guy Guilbault (Drummond): Mr. Speaker, once again, our Conservative Government is keeping its promises to Canadian taxpayers by maintaining and promoting the universality of social programs, including family allowances. Our Government has made it possible for 756,000 families with incomes of less than $15,000 in 1985 to receive advance payments for 1986 of $300 per child, and this will apply to about 1,300,000 children in Canada.

This year, the maximum child tax credit payable in the spring of 1987 will be $454, an increase of $70, and in 1988 the maximum will be $524. This means that from now on families will no longer have to resort to using the services of tax discounters who in some cases were taking advantage of the precarious financial situation of low-income Canadian families. Mr. Speaker, this is one more example of the sense of equity and justice that guides this Government.

[English]

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

ANNOUNCEMENT OF MONCTON LAY-OFFS

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, the people of Moncton and the employees of the Moncton shops have more cause to distrust Canadian National and the Government today than they have ever had before. For years, unions representing the workers, the workers themselves, the City of Moncton, and Members of Parliament have begged and pleaded with the Government for accurate information on the future of the shops.

Last week I took such a concern to the President of Canadian National in the Transport Committee. In response to questions from the Member for Moncton (Mr. Cochrane) and myself about whether or not CN was planning to proceed with further lay-offs at Moncton, CN told the Standing Committee on Transport that no lay-offs were imminent.

Yesterday, CN announced that lay-offs would proceed at Moncton due to a reduction in work. I submit that no reduction of work has occurred between last Tuesday and today, and that CN is again using smoke and mirrors to exercise economic blackmail on its employees and on the city, in spite of a job protection clause—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to inform the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

* * *

[Translation]

WOMEN

ECONOMIC EQUALITY FOR WOMEN—GOVERNMENT'S PERFORMANCE

Mrs. Lise Bourgault (Argenteuil—Papineau): Mr. Speaker, for the first time in Canadian history the ten provincial Premiers and the Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. Mulroney) agreed to discuss the economic equality of women at the annual conference of First Ministers in Vancouver. In his statement the Prime Minister focused on existing inequalities between men and women.

Mr. Speaker, the Liberals thwarted and derided Canadian women for the last 15 years, and finally it took a Prime Minister like Brian Mulroney to give women in this country a reason to hope for a brighter future. For 15 years the Liberals did nothing but talk and philosophize, promising women that they would gain their rightful place.

In just two years, Mr. Speaker, our Government took action. There are too many examples to mention, and you know them anyway. Again today as I am speaking, three women are being sworn in as senators, three exceptional appointments which, I am sure, will stimulate other men and women who have been in the other place for too long already. Mr. Speaker, another performance which will be hard to beat at the next election!

* * *

• (1410)

[English]

REFUGEES

DEPORTATION OF IRANIAN FROM UNITED STATES

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, I rise as I did last week and once again ask the Minister of State for Immigration (Mr. Weiner) to reconsider his decision on Mr. Akbar Moatamedi. Mr. Moatamedi is a 25 year old Iranian who, for the second time, will be deported back to Iran tomorrow by the United States. Earlier this year, for the second time, Mr. Moatamedi attempted suicide rather than face certain torture and probable death in Iran.

There is a sponsoring group in Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, which is prepared to house, finance, and support this individual if he is admitted into Canada as a refugee. He is a university graduate and is employable. Canada earlier won the Nansen Medal Award for its service and work for refugees on compassionate and humanitarian grounds. I would ask the Minister of State for Immigration not get caught up in technicalities, that we recognize as a Government and as a country that we have the potential to save one human life. To turn our eyes away from this individual is to co-operate in this individual's eventual torture and probable death. I urge the Minister once again to have some humanitarian consideration—

Mr. Speaker: Order.

* * *

[Translation]

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

GENERIC DRUGS

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): In 1968, Mr. Speaker, in this House, the present Leader of the Liberal Party who was then Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs tabled a Bill to allow generic drug companies to duplicate pills in exchange for a mandatory 4 per cent fee to the inventors. What the Bill introduced by the Liberal leader did not say was that Canada would lose thousands of jobs. Since then, 1968, there has been no research and development in Canada because the Liberals gave the green light to pill copiers. Today, Mr. Speaker, as a result of the system set up by the present Leader of the Liberal Party, some of our sick people have to go to the United States or other foreign countries to obtain the drugs they need.

Mr. Speaker, the fact that the Liberals now support the socialists against our excellent Bill designed to rejuvenate the Canadian drug industry shows that they have jumped into bed with the socialists, the former bent on regaining power at all costs, the latter blinded by their negative approach to Quebec.

Mr. Speaker: I am sorry but the time allotted to the Hon. Member has expired. The Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez).

* * *

[English]

INDUSTRY

FUTURE OF SYDNEY STEEL CORPORATION

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, the future of the community of Cape Breton hangs in the balance. The future of the Sydney Steel Corporation is determined by both the federal and provincial Tory Governments. The federal Tory Government has a responsibility to the people of Cape Breton to ensure the viability of Sysco. As Mr. Wes Stubbert, a Cape Breton County Councillor, said: "The Cape Breton economy rotates on Sysco's axis. It is the heart of our community and has to be strong. It is the main vein in the economic body of Cape Breton".

The viability of Sysco is in the hands of the federal Tory Government. Sysco needs rail orders. Only the federal Government can instruct CN to order its rails from Sysco. The Government has already established the principle that it is prepared to intervene where large numbers of jobs are endangered and a community is threatened. Such is the situation in Cape Breton—

Mr. Speaker: I regret to advise the Hon. Member that his time has expired.

* * *

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

SUPPORT FOR AMENDING LEGISLATION

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, one of Canada's leading newspapers, The Globe and Mail, printed today that the Government's direction on proposed changes to the Patent Act concerning the pharmaceutical industry is the right pill for Canada. In an article by Philip Seeman, chairman of the University of Toronto's Pharmacology Department, he states that drug designers have been packing their bags and leaving the country for years.

• (1415)

Canada is simply not inventing new drugs, but we have the capacity to do so. Most countries consider us drug pirates prepared to lay low behind some secure inlet and steal what others produce.

Jobs for thousands of young, enthusiastic Canadian researchers will be produced through hundreds of millions of dollars of R and D. Price stability will be assured by the drug prices review board.

Canadians may wonder what silly parliamentary games have been going on in this House lately. They should tell members of the Opposition to pack their bags and let Canada become a producer, not a pirate.

* * *

[Translation]

THE ADMINISTRATION

GOVERNMENT'S PRIORITIES

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, today, we heard to three Conservative Members. During their first year, people said they lacked the experience, but today, we can say they lack the competence.

The first Member said her Government had done a great deal for women. Unfortunately, the Hon. Member overlooked the fact that her Government was the first to discriminate against women by depriving 80,000 senior citizens in Canada of the spouse's allowance just because they are separated or divorced.

Mr. Speaker, another Member talked about pharmaceutical products, and I think it is clear this Government and these Conservative Members are interested only in big bucks and the big companies. That same Government, with no compunction whatsoever, levies a 10 per cent tax on people's health, taxing the sick to reduce the deficit.

Mr. Speaker, another Conservative Member talked about family allowances. These people had the nerve to de-index family allowances, to take away Canadian families' bread and butter with a 3 per cent cut in family allowance cheques.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

TRADE

UNITED STATES DUTY ON CANADIAN SOFTWOOD LUMBER—FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL POSITION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Prime Minister I direct my question to the Deputy Prime Minister. I had the honour of meeting earlier today with the Premier of British Columbia. I told him what I have already told the Prime Minister in this House, that is, plea bargaining with the United States is not the way to handle the lumber issue. It is admitting a case when we have a solid case before the case is brought down and decided.

An Hon. Member: What does he have to say?

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, I can assure you within the rules that the Premier can speak for himself.

The Minister for International Trade gave the strong impression—indeed, she told the provinces—that there was a deal with the United States. That now appears to be reduced to an agreed approach. Will the Deputy Prime Minister tell us what the deal is and explain it clearly to the House of Commons?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I might be permitted on the beginning of my week in the House of Commons to express my very best wishes to the Right Hon. Leader of the Official Opposition as he goes through a period of travail with which I am only too well acquainted.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): If the hon. gentleman needs any help in getting out of enemy territory, just have him call me directly, Mr. Speaker.

Some Hon. Members: No, no!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Mr. Speaker, the Minister for International Trade indicated in Vancouver that there had been an agreement by the majority of the provinces and the federal Government to discuss an approach with the Government of the United States that would not only bring to an end the countervail petition against Canada but which would also allow us to keep in Canada money that might otherwise drain away to the United States. That is being pursued.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, of course I wish to thank the right hon. gentleman for his good wishes. However, I wish to assure him that I have no intention of retaining him as a consultant in this particular matter.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

CANADIAN APPROACH

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, it now appears that the so-called agreed approach with the provinces is falling apart. Ontario is not there. It appears that Quebec and British Columbia might well go it alone to apply individually for suspension agreements with the United States. Will the right hon. gentleman tell us that not only does he not have a deal with the United States but that he no longer has an agreed approach with the provinces?

• (1420)

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, we have an agreed approach with the provinces excepting Ontario, and we expect that that agreed approach will lead to an arrangement with the United States that will end the countervail and will stop the potential drain away from Canada of hundreds of millions of dollars.

TERMS OF CANADIAN OFFER

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister's latest final offer is 15 per cent. Will the right hon. gentleman tell us if the Government would be prepared to go from 15 per cent up to 20 per cent or 25 per cent in order to satisfy our American neighbours?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I will convey the Leader of the Opposition's recommendation to the Prime Miniser. However, I do not think this is a week in which the Leader of the Opposition and I want to discuss percentages.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Tobin: Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Official Opposition, unlike some other Right Hon. Members in this House, can count.

EXPORT TAX INQUIRY

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. The Secretary of State has just tried to tell the House that the co-ordinated approach is in good shape. However, as the Leader of the Official Opposition has said, the Premier of British Columbia can speak for himself. He has told the Government it has two days to put it together or the Province of British Columbia and, apparently, possibly the Province of Quebec, will go it alone.

Will the Secretary of State agree that, given the late stage of these negotiations, indeed the only way Canada can satisfy U.S. lumber industry interests is by imposing, contrary to what has been said, an export tax on the Canadian industry?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I have been asked whether or not I would agree with that. My answer is no, I would not agree with that.

PROPOSED CANADIAN MEASURES

Mr. Brian Tobin (Humber—Port au Port—St. Barbe): Mr. Speaker, it is time for the Minister to put aside his opportunity for making quips for a moment and to tell Canadians exactly what is being proposed. The major players agree that it is impossible to put a stumpage fee increase in place at this late stage. One province and possibly two are threatening to walk away from the co-ordinated position by Friday. Can the Secretary of State tell Canadians in plain, simple language what is it the Government of Canada is doing, if anything at all, besides floundering around in the sea of international trade?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, let me quote from the statement made by the Minister for International Trade:

> The Canadian Government has proposed an agreement that would lead to a complete withdrawal of the countervail action by the U.S. lumber producers. In return, Canadian governments would agree to take measures to offset the effect of a 15 per cent countervailing duty. Details of the Canadian measures will be disclosed following further consultations with provinces, industry, labour and the U.S Government.

The Deputy Minister for International Trade is consulting now with provinces—

Some Hon. Members: She is in Japan.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): The Deputy Minister for International Trade is consulting with provinces right now in the Pearson Building which, when I last looked, was on Sussex Drive and not in Japan. We will continue that kind of consultation looking for a way to bring an end to the countervail and stop a potential haemorrhage of hundreds of millions of dollars out of Canada to the United States.

CANADIAN APPEAL TO GATT

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I have to say that the Government's trade policy has turned into a farce of flip-flops and U-turns. It is frankly no wonder that the Minister—

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member will put his question.

Mr. Langdon: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I just wanted to note that it was no wonder that the Minister for International Trade has gone off to Japan—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I know the Hon. Member wants to note many things, but the Hon. Member will put his question.

• (1425)

Mr. Langdon: Will the Minister of External Affairs admit that the Government has caved in on its harsh attacks on U.S. customs surcharges by changing its GATT appeal from Section 23 of the Code, which allows for tough action against the United States, to the toothless Section 22 that only involves consultation?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): Put your dentures in and answer.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, after the Hon. Member passed from his statement under Standing Order 21 and began to ask a question, I listened to him with precision. The answer to the precise question that he asked is no.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I think that the Minister has been out of the country too long to realize what has taken place.

Second, I would like to ask if there are sufficient strengths and sufficient commitment in this Ministry to say today to Premier Vander Zalm that, despite his statements of threat to us at the national level, there is one national trade policy in this country and it is set by Ottawa.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the NDP just spent four or five weeks using the House of Commons to attack Premier Vander Zalm. They have reaped the benefits of that particular tactic. I would have thought that they would have learned something from that.

Mr. Hnatyshyn: They gained another moral victory.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Yes, they gained another moral victory, as my colleague, the Minister of Justice, revealed.

From the beginning, since what was at issue in this question had to do with provincial practices, the Government of Canada has exercised leadership in bringing together all of the parties, the provinces, labour, industry, and the federal Government. That is the approach that we intend to continue, and that is the approach that we expect to have continued by all of the people who are involved in the process.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

HOUSE OF COMMONS

PRESENCE IN GALLERY OF PREMIER OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

Mr. Speaker: In view of the questions and answers that have been given, Hon. Members will know that I am resisting the temptation to recognize a stranger. I call upon all Hon. Members to recognize the presence in the gallery of the Hon. Bill Vander Zalm, Premier of British Columbia.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

TRADE

CANADIAN SOFTWOOD LUMBER—INDUSTRY'S POSITION

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): If the former Prime Minister is so certain of his support, why is it that the lumber industry, the Province of Ontario, and thousands of people across this country recognize this not as a moral victory, or anything else, but as a sell-out by the Government?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, we regard a process which can keep hundreds of millions of dollars in Canada, and can keep jobs in Canada, to be serving the national interest.

May I also say to the Hon. Member for Essex-Windsor that I was pleased to see him standing up when the rest of his Members were sitting down.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

NEGOTIATIONS WITH UNITED STATES—FEDERAL JURISDICTION

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): If I may, I would like to pursue the same line of questioning with the Secretary of State. As the Hon. Minister knows, this is a matter that goes very much to the heart of the question of who speaks for Canada in the trade issue.

In the reported statements in the press today Premier Vander Zalm indicated that his province will go it alone by Friday unless there is a deal worked out, and indicated that Quebec may join British Columbia. Would the Secretary of State for External Affairs make it very clear in the House that the federal Government would not accept any province undertaking unilateral action to negotiate an agreement on its own with the United States, and that it must be done through the federal Government? I would ask the Minister if the federal Government agrees with the approach being put forward by Premier Vander Zalm?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, obviously on questions of international trade the jurisdiction lies with the Government of Canada, and we intend to exercise that. As the Hon. Member knows, because he too was part of the delegation, this particular Government has recognized that there is no point in our hiding down in foxholes of jurisdiction and using the Constitution to divide the country. Rather we have approached trade issues by trying to bring in all of the parties. We did that with regard to the multilateral trade negotiations under the GATT in Uruguay when the Hon. Member was present, as were representatives of four provincial Governments.

• (1430)

We have done that in the approach to all trade discussions with the United States, including the approach to the lumber countervail. That is the position and the spirit in which the Government of Canada intends to act, and that is the spirit we intend to see respected.

POSITION OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is for the same Minister. I have no quarrel with the spirit. We are concerned about its application and implementation. We now have a situation where the lumber industry is opposed to the measures taken by the Government, and we now have two provinces indicating that they are going it alone. Will the Secretary of State for External Affairs clearly state that the position put forward by the Province of British Columbia is not acceptable? Will the Government of Canada clearly establish in the House what measures and what proposals it in fact is making in the United States so that we will know exactly what kind of deal is in the offing?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, these questions are getting repetitive, and I apologize to the Chair.

Mr. Axworthy: I just want an answer.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): I answered his colleague from Newfoundland in respect of what is being sought. He can consult the record on that. I have indicated the position of the Government of Canada with regard to international trade. I also indicated that it is our approach, supported by the Government of British Columbia, the Government of Quebec, and the Governments of all other provinces except Ontario, that we should seek an arrangement with the United States which will bring an end to the countervail and keep in Canada hundreds of millions of dollars that might otherwise flow to the United States.

Mr. Speaker: I should like to say to the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor that I inadvertently interrupted between his second and third questions, and I apologize for that.

LEGALITY OF U.S. DUTY QUESTIONED

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs who seems to be handling softwood questions today. Yesterday the Prime Minister said that the 15 per cent offer now on the table from Canada was the "price of playing poker" with Uncle Sam. Since the Minister for International Trade is on record as saying that the 15 per cent preliminary duty is illegal, does the Government still think that the 15 per cent level is illegal?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Yes, Mr. Speaker. We think it is an illegal proposal. We think we could prevail upon the process. We think there is a risk, given the nature of the process, that we might not. During the long period of risk there would be a draining away of hundreds of millions of dollars from Canada. We think it is better to keep that money in Canada, to keep security in Canada, and to try to bring a sense of stability back to the Canadian softwood industry.

INQUIRY CONCERNING POSSIBLE RETALIATION

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the same Minister. It seems preposterous to me, and I think to most workers in the forest industry, that when a dealer is caught cheating at cards, as we caught Uncle Sam, that you suddenly ante up $600 million. Do you intend in any way to retaliate—

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member will correct the question.

Mr. Fulton: Does the Right Hon. Minister plan in any way to retaliate now that we in the House know that we have caught Uncle Sam and the Department of Commerce cheating at cards?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, we have a view as to the legality of the countervail action. We could pursue that case in the quasi-judicial process and in subsequent legal proceedings in the United States which would take a long, long time, prolonging uncertainty in Canada and continuing the drainage away from the country of hundreds of millions of dollars each year. We could do that. We have chosen not to do that. We have chosen instead to try to seek an arrangement which will terminate the countervail and stop the potential haemorrhage of hundreds of millions of dollars out of Canada, and stop an uncertainty which can bring an industry in Canada into deeper trouble.

* * *

CANADA POST CORPORATION

DEFECTIVE MAIL SUPERBOXES

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, months ago we all feared that Canadians would have difficulty opening the locks on superboxes. Now we are hearing from all parts of Canada that Canadians have no problem opening the lock on the superbox; in fact the box door is already open before they get there. Would the Deputy Prime Minister indicate whether the Government intends to compensate people who have lost cheques or other mail in the 304 locations across Canada which were found to have defective superboxes by Canada Post yesterday, right from Vancouver to St. John's, Newfoundland?

Hon. Bernard Valcourt (Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): Mr. Speaker, what the Hon. Member refers to is a problem with the installation of certain mailboxes. We are informed by Canada Post that it is being looked after. I understand that later today the modification to these boxes will be made and completed.

Mr. Baker: Mr. Speaker, like our Canadian mail these days, that answer, my friend, is blowing in the wind.

REQUEST THAT SUPERBOXES BE SHELVED

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. Now we know that superboxes have lousy locks, will the Government recognize that this incident is only the tip of the iceberg, that the superboxes should be shelved, and that Canada Post should get back to delivering the mail to the people of Canada?

Hon. Bernard Valcourt (Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): Mr. Speaker, it is too bad that Party was not doing what it is now preaching. Right now Canada Post has a business plan which is before a committee of the House. The whole issue may be discussed there. If members of the Liberal Party are so interested in Canada Post, they can go there and make their representations.

SECURITY OF MAIL—REQUEST FOR ASSURANCE

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister responsible for Canada Post. Last night super mailboxes were wide open. There were no locks or keys. What assurances does the Government have for Canadians that this incident will not repeat itself? How can Canadians feel confident that the privacy and security of their mail will not be breached again?

Hon. Bernard Valcourt (Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): Mr. Speaker, we are going to have to try again. Let me assure the House that modifications to those boxes—and I repeat it—will be completed by the end of the day, so the mail will be safe.

COST OF ADVERTISING SUPERBOXES

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, previously the Minister assured us that the use of super mailboxes would be an improvement in service. Canadians want to know that their mail will be secure. Does the Government not believe that wide open mailboxes raise questions about the million dollars the Government is spending to advertise these boxes? Do they not raise questions about the entire super mailbox program?

Hon. Bernard Valcourt (Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): Mr. Speaker, as usual, the NDP would like to scare Canadians across the country. The fact of the matter is that those boxes are secure. The problem—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Valcourt: They find that funny.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): It is like pouring water into a sieve.

Mr. Valcourt: Obviously they do not want the answer, do they? Do they care very much about postal services to Canadians? They do not even listen. There were problems with the installation, not with the design of the boxes. They are safe, so we are informed and believe. The problems which were singled out will be corrected today. That is it.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

HUMAN RIGHTS

PERSECUTION OF BAHA'IS IN IRAN

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Secretary of State for External Affairs. I was honoured to have been at the United Nations last week representing Canada when the perpetual issue arose concerning human rights violations. What position or what action will the Canadian Government take concerning the persecuted plight of the Baha'i believers in Iran?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, a resolution was introduced in the United Nations, which generally has the support of the House of Commons, with regard to the situation of the Baha'i people in Iran. This year Canada is co-sponsoring the presentation of that resolution.

* * *

[Translation]

CANADA POST CORPORATION

INQUIRY CONCERNING MAINTENANCE AND REPAIR COSTS OF MAIL SUPERBOXES

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister.

Yesterday, it was found that community superboxes are not as super as the Government made them out to be. We heard that Canada Post has just checked 7,600 boxes that are very easy to open.

Here is my question: What does it cost to repair and maintain these boxes? How much?

Hon. Bernard Valcourt (Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): Mr. Speaker, in answer to the Hon. Member's question about the cost involved, I will have to make enquiries, and as soon as I get the information, I will see that he receives it.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT ORDER MAIL BE DELIVERED TO HOMES

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, instead of making enquiries—people have been making enquiries at Canada Post for months—why doesn't the Minister order Canada Post to deliver mail door to door instead of wasting taxpayers' money to repair boxes which are neither secure, economical or desirable?

Hon. Bernard Valcourt (Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): Mr. Speaker, the answer is quite simple. The Government cannot do this because the previous Goverment left us with a crushing deficit. It takes money to do that sort of thing.

What we are trying to do is give Canadians—

An Hon. Member: Come on!

Mr. Valcourt: Just listen and you'll learn something. What we are trying to do is give Canadians a good postal service at the best possible price. That is what we are trying to do.

* * *

• (1440)

[English]

TRADE

UNITED STATES EXPORTS OF WHEAT TO ALGERIA

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, I, too, have a trade question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Mr. Crosbie: It will be the first one.

Mr. Nystrom: It was announced very recently that the Americans are planning to use their Export Enhancement Program to subsidize the sale of 300,000 tonnes of Durum wheat to Algeria, a very important and long time grain market for Canadian farmers. Can he explain to this House why our Government has been so ineffective in convincing the Americans not to go after our markets? Why have the talks and telegrams and telexes, begging, cajoling and pleading, not worked? Why have we been so ineffective?

Hon. Charles Mayer (Minister of State (Canadian Wheat Board)): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member should know that Canada's sales efforts in the last crop year worked. Not only did our exports of wheat, including Durum, go up, Canada's percentage of world sales went up.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mayer: Contrast that with what happened in the U.S. Its exports have gone down and its percentage of the world market has gone down by something like 6 per cent or 7 per cent.

As to what we are doing, the Secretary of State for External Affairs raised this issue as recently as last Friday in his meeting with Mr. Shultz.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, the Americans say their fight is with the European Common Market, not with Canada. The sale of 300,000 tonnes of Durum wheat is a very important issue for Canadian farmers. What is the Prime Minister or his Minister going to do to convince the Americans not to go after our markets? What is new? What is he going to do to be effective?

Hon. Charles Mayer (Minister of State (Canadian Wheat Board)): Mr. Speaker, first the Hon. Member should know that, as a result of the leadership of the Secretary of State for External Affairs, agriculture is being addressed for the first time in the GATT negotiations. He should also know that this Government will not stand by and see what happened under the previous Government in the early 1970s happen again. We will not see us get into a LIFT program where we back away from production. We are standing by our producers and will do everything we can to maintain and increase our share of world markets.

* * *

LABOUR CONDITIONS

CONTRACT AWARDED TO SECOR INC. TO STUDY YOUTH UNEMPLOYMENT

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and concerns the $124,000 untendered contract to Secor Inc. Yesterday the Minister denied there was a conflict of interest in the granting of that contract. Today we learn that, in addition, Claude Forget engaged three permanent employees of Secor to serve as his personal staff on the Royal Commission. How can the Minister justify this preferential treatment for Secor when that kind of action is in contravention of Article 7(F) of the Conflict of Interest Code?

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, yesterday I said there was no conflict of interest. Again I repeat today that, in the case of Claude Forget, it is a commission of inquiry on unemployment insurance. The other contract awarded to Secor Inc. had to do with the mandate of the Wright-Gaucher Commission. The same company, but two different objectives.

I repeat that, in my judgment, there is no conflict of interest. There is not necessarily a conflict of interest in the fact that a company may have employees working on various contracts and dealing with the federal Government, as in this case.

[English]

REASON FOR COMMISSIONING STUDY

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, the Minister is not familiar with Article 7(F) and he has not answered my question. Why has this phony pork-barrelling contract been proceeded with when the same subject matter has already been studied by the Senate Committee on Youth, the MacDonald Royal Commission, and the Forget Commission?

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, we can always look into the Hon. Member's allegations. Before anyone begins questioning the quality of studies that have been made we will table them and the Hon. Member will then be in a position to make a value judgment.

* * *

[English]

FINANCE

CAPITAL GAINS TAX EXEMPTION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. In his speech to the Canadian Tax Foundation last night he stated that "every tax preference in the system will come under very careful study". Does that statement apply to the $500,000 capital gains tax exemption the Government introduced 18 months ago? Is the Government re-examining that tax preference for wealthy Canadians so it can bring tax rates down for the average Canadian taxpayer?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I indicated quite clearly in my speech last night that all of the various tax preferences are under very careful scrutiny. However, I have commented recently that the purpose of the capital gains tax exemption is to encourage people to take risks and start up new businesses. One of the reasons we have had a considerable increase in the start up of new businesses, each of which creates new jobs, is because of that particular exemption.

REQUEST THAT EXEMPTION BE ABOLISHED

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, the Minister also said in his speech that "the proliferation of incentives has strengthened the perception that very high income earners do not pay their fair share of tax". Will the Minister send a signal to the average Canadian taxpayer that the system is fair by taking this huge tax preference away from wealthy Canadians and cutting rates for ordinary Canadian taxpayers?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I guess I could say I will take that as a representation. I indicated in my speech that we are going to be listening carefully to what various interested Canadians have to say about the process of tax reform. We tried to put a very clear focus on this last night. As I indicated, decisions will be made around the time of the next Budget.

* * *

INDUSTRY

FUTURE OF SYDNEY STEEL CORPORATION

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Transport.

The Premier of Nova Scotia stated that the continued operation of Sydney Steel Corporation is dependent upon its securing a long-term rail contract from Canadian National. He asked the Prime Minister for his support in securing this contract. Will the Minister tell us now that the federal Government will instruct CN to enter into such a long-term contract with Sysco?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, it is not necessary for the Government to instruct CN to enter into contracts with Sysco for the purchase of steel. It has been doing it for a number of years. Of course, CN is in a position where it has to stand on its own feet. It has its own financial problems. Traffic is down and has been down for the last several years for the rail companies. Given the circumstances in which CN has to exist it will certainly do its best to see that as much steel rail as possible is purchased from Sysco.

I do not have the time now to give all the figures, but in the present year, at the present time, 28,500 tonnes of rail are on order from Sysco for next year, as I understand it. There is a possibility of more besides.

Mr. MacLellan: CN is also buying 30,000 tonnes of rail from western Europe and Japan. This is our own Crown corporation.

MODERNIZATION OF PLANT

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. The Province of Nova Scotia says that the modernization cannot continue without such an agreement. Will the Deputy Prime Minister state now that the federal Government will honour its commitment to the modernization of Sydney Steel Corporation, or is this commitment dependent upon market studies during the term of this modernization?

• (1450)

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the Government of Canada stands ready to do its part with regard to Sysco, as it always has.

Mr. MacLellan: That's not an answer.

Mr. Crosbie: With regard to the rail question, the life or death of Sysco does not depend solely on the purchase of rail by CN. With regard to steel purchased outside Canada by CN, 18,500 tonnes of low alloy head-hardened steel—"head-hardened" reminds me of the Hon. Member—which cannot be manufactured—

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): You're a soft alloy.

Mr. Crosbie: Does the Leader of the Opposition want to give this answer?

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): I could faster than you can. You can't pronounce the word.

Mr. Crosbie: Oh, he knows everything.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Oh, come on.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member for Beaches.

* * *

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

AMENDING LEGISLATION—REPORTED OPPOSITION BY MEMBER FOR KENT

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. The Minister has been telling Canadians that in opposing this legislation the New Democratic Party is just trying to scare the disabled, the elderly, the sick, and other concerned Canadians.

Some Hon. Members: Right on.

Mr. Young: Mr. Speaker, is the Minister aware that a colleague of his, the Hon. Member for Kent, is advising constituents as follows: "As I indicated, as matters now stand I see no alternative but to oppose the present legislation"?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Riis: There they go.

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, if the member of the New Democratic Party and his colleagues are so confident that this Bill will be badly received and will do political damage, they should be joining us in trying to get it to committee in order that all of the facts of which he speaks can be exposed there. If he is confident in his position, why is he doing everything he can to prevent the proper disposition of this Bill by the House of Commons?

FILING OF PETITIONS OPPOSING LEGISLATION

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the same Minister. Is the Minister aware that in addition to this statement by his colleague from Kent, the Hon. Member for Perth and the Hon. Member for Swift Current—Maple Creek are filing petitions with the Clerk opposing this legislation?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: That has nothing to do with it.

Mr. Young: How much opposition does the Minister have to receive before he will advise the House and Canadians that he will withdraw that obnoxious piece of legislation?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Hon. Member is aware of an editorial in today's Edmonton Journal which reads:

The Mulroney government's proposals to extend the patent protection on prescription drugs are complex and controversial. They demand careful, rational scrutiny.

Yet the New Democrats and the Liberals refuse to take part in intelligent debate. They are too busy trying to score cheap political points by whipping the public into a frenzy over potential cost increases to consumers.

* * *

AGRICULTURE

GRADING OF CANOLA SEED

Mr. Jack Scowen (Mackenzie): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State (Canadian Wheat Board). Could the Minister advise what is being done to assure producers of commercial canola seed that they are getting fair grades? Has the Canadian Grain Commission given any thought to some mechanical means of establishing grades which could be used by the buyers?

Hon. Charles Mayer (Minister of State (Canadian Wheat Board)): Mr. Speaker, the Canadian Grain Commission has a very good reputation for grading. It monitors receipts of canola at terminal positions on a daily basis.

In response to the second part of the Hon. Member's question, the Canadian Grain Commission, along with the industry, has considered some non-subjective means of grading. Discussions on that have been ongoing for a couple of years. I will look into this issue and see what kind of progress is being made.

Mr. Speaker: I advise Hon. Members that there are still a number of Members rising. As we are running out of time, could Hon. Members make their questions short and could Ministers reply accordingly?

* * *

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

LAY-OFFS AT MONCTON SHOPS—REQUEST FOR POSTPONEMENT

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland—Kent): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Minister of Transport. Yesterday CN issued a communique stating that more lay-offs would take place in Moncton because of the impasse with the CN-CGE deal. Since 1985 more than 300 workers have been laid off. The Minister of National Revenue has stated that CN should be used as a tool for regional development. In light of those facts, will the Minister of Transport instruct CN to hold off on lay-offs at the CN shops until a reasonable and acceptable solution can be found?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, a reasonable solution was found and put forward by Canadian National. A most generous offer of benefits was put forward by Canadian National. It was accepted by 96 per cent of the union members in Moncton. It was turned down by two unions, basically by the Machinists Union national executive. I am proud to say that the Government encouraged CN to make this generous offer.

The solution is for the International Machinists Union to reverse its selfish and petty disregard for the workers of Moncton and to accept the offer which has been made by CN.

Mr. Speaker: I will recognize the Hon. Member for Broadview—Greenwood for one question.

* * *

[Translation]

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

CHOICE OF DORVAL AS PRINCIPAL AIRPORT FOR MONTREAL—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of State (Transport). According to several members of the task force on the development of the Montreal region, there is a consensus to the effect that Ottawa will choose Dorval as the principal airport for Montreal. Will the Minister accept the pro-Dorval recommendation made by the task force which was set up by the Government itself?

Hon. André Bissonnette (Minister of State (Transport)): Mr. Speaker, I think that the task force report presented yesterday morning is excellent in many respects. We will consider the recommendations concerning the airports and, at the appropriate time and place, we will hold a press conference when we are ready to announce the stand we want to take about the two airports.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: I will recognize the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—East Richmond for one question.

* * *

INDUSTRY

FORTHCOMING CLOSURE OF GOODYEAR PLANT IN TORONTO

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. Foreign financiers and the headquarters of Goodyear in the United States have put pressure on their plant in Toronto resulting in the forthcoming closure of that plant in May of 1987. This will effect 1,500 permanent lay-offs.

Will the Minister inform the House what action he has taken to keep this profitable plant open? Will he also explain to the House what impact this closure will have on the other Goodyear plants in Canada, in Valleyfield, Quebec, and in Medicine Hat, Alberta?

Hon. Bernard Valcourt (Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member knows, the Toronto plant is Goodyear's oldest tire plant. The Department is aware of this situation. We are prepared to discuss with the company any alternate plan it may have with regard to future Canadian investment. Discussions are presently under way between officials of the Department and the company in order to minimize the impact of that announcement.

Mr. Speaker: I will recognize the Hon. Member for Windsor—Walkerville for one question.

* * *

APARTHEID

SOUTH AFRICA—POSITION OF BRITISH COLUMBIA GOVERNMENT

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. The Province of British Columbia has the worst record of enforcement of human rights legislation. It is also the only province which has refused to join in the application of voluntary sanctions against South Africa. Has the Secretary of State for External Affairs engaged in conversations with the Premier of British Columbia to change this situation which is an affront to government policy and the people of Canada, not to mention the blacks of South Africa who are seeking freedom?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Premier of British Columbia and I have agreed to meet tomorrow morning to discuss that question.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): Lucky you.

* * *

[Translation]

TREASURY BOARD

THE LAPRADE FUND—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Gilles Grondin (Saint-Maurice): Mr. Speaker, last week, the President of the Treasury Board announced that by the end of November, he would have some interesting statements about the Laprade fund. Will the President of the Treasury Board confirm before the House that he will not give in to pressure from the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources and that the Laprade fund will be reserved exclusively for the only riding included in Quebec economic area 04, which covers the ridings located north, south, east and west of Trois-Rivières, as was announced previously?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to confirm, as I did before the media, that there was, and is, no plan to change the geographical boundaries of the Laprade zone as defined in 1979, which is basically, as the Hon. Member said, zone 04. There has been no change in the zone itself, and in a few weeks' time, I hope to be able to provide details of the new criteria for access to the Laprade fund.

* * *

• (1500)

[English]

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

PRIVATIZATION OF PAROLE SERVICES IN TORONTO

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Solicitor General. I have a confidential Government memorandum indicating that parole services in the Toronto area will be privatized not just to the John Howard Society but to several other private agencies as well, in a significant expansion of privatization. Will the Minister indicate why he is expanding privatization to these other agencies as well as the John Howard Society? Will he not agree to impose a moratorium on all privatization plans until the people involved have had an opportunity to comment and appear before the Justice Committee on this dangerous and destructive proposal?

Hon. James Kelleher (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, there has been full and ample discussion with all the parties involved. It is not a dangerous proposal. It is a well thought out proposal that will render better service to the people who are being discharged from our prisons and better enable them to return to society.

* * *

[Translation]

CONSUMER AFFAIRS

PHARMACEUTICAL PRODUCTS—OBLIGATION OF MULTINATIONALS TO MANUFACTURE BASIC INGREDIENTS IN CANADA

Mrs. Thérèse Killens (Saint-Michel—Ahuntsic): My question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, Mr. Speaker. In the former Minister's Bill, the Bill prepared last June, Clause 41(14)3(b) provided that multinationals had to manufacture their active ingredients in Canada. If after two years they had not done so, their ten-year protection was revoked under this legislation. The new Bill does not oblige multinationals to manufacture their active ingredients in Canada. Why did the Minister change the original Bill in this respect?

[English]

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, this is typical of the kind of question that should be asked in committee where we could go over it in detail. As I answered when she asked a similar question the other day, we did it because we were asked to by the generic companies and the Canadian Drug Manufacturers Association.

* * *

NARCOTICS

CONSULTATIONS ON NATIONAL ANTI-DRUG AND ALCOHOL ABUSE POLICY

Mr. Don Ravis (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. The prevention of drug and alcohol abuse among young Canadians is of particular interest to my constituency. The national PRIDE office, located in my riding, and the Saskatchewan Alcohol and Drug Addiction Commission have been instrumental in educating the public on the dangers of this problem. Since public awareness has increased on this issue, will the Minister indicate when the consultations to enforce a national drug strategy, as alluded to in the Speech from the Throne, will begin?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that the Hon. Member has asked the question. I want to take this opportunity to commend various groups, including PRIDE which is located in his riding, for the work they have done.

The major component of the drug strategy on which we have been working is the education component. I have said all along that we must consult the various groups, including parent-teacher groups and people in the community who have a lot of experience in this area, because they are the ones who have to proceed with this program. The federal Government wants to help them. Considering some of the work we have done internally, I think that that consultation can begin early in the new year and I hope that we can have the plan ready for everyone sometime in the first quarter of next year.

POINTS OF ORDER

REQUEST THAT DOCUMENTS BE TABLED

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, in answer to my question during Question Period, the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Bouchard) said that he would be willing to table certain documents relating to the question. Does this mean he is willing to table the Douglas Wright report on youth unemployment, as well as the untendered Secor report? Are these documents that he is willing to table, and will he table them right away?

Mr. Speaker: Is it the Hon. Member's position that the Minister quoted from the document?

Mr. Allmand: No, Mr. Speaker, but the Minister did say that he would table certain documents relating to the questions that I was asking. I am trying to clarify which documents, and I want him to table them right now.

Mr. Speaker: I think I should advise the Hon. Member that if the Minister did not quote from a document he cannot be forced to table it. If the Minister wishes to table that, of course it is his business.

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, what I referred to in my answer to the question put by the Hon. Member, what I said was that the research done by SECOR as part of the report to be provided by the Wright-Gaucher Commission, and a number of studies were made, I said: We are going to wait for the Wright-Gaucher report on the integration of young people in the labour market before deciding exactly what the merits are of the research done by the company. This has no connection with the tabling of documents in the House today.

[English]

ALLEGED MISSTATEMENT

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I want to raise a point of order arising from Question Period and the exchange between myself and the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark). I believe he may have inadvertently misled the House. I simply note that from his own Department, specifically Doug George in the GATT Secretariat in his Department, there was confirmation to us that the clauses were changed from Clause 23 to Clause 22 in our GATT appeal, after we originally made an appeal under GATT 23.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member knows that he sent me a note on the question and I replied to him. I listened to his question with precision and care. He asked if the Government had caved in. My answer was no, the Government has not caved in. If he wants to use inflammatory language in the House of Commons he will have to suffer the consequences.

PRESENTATION OF PETITIONS—POSITION TAKEN

Mr. Albert Cooper (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, during Question Period the Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young) made reference to Members of Parliament tabling petitions and it was my impression that he was arguing that the fact that those Members had tabled those petitions reflected their particular position on an issue before the House of Commons. I think that is a disservice to Members of Parliament. I think it is important that it be noted because it has been a longstanding practice in the House of Commons that all of us table petitions, not so much as a reflection of our positions but as a service to our constituents.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, when the Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young) was making his comment in the House of Commons and referring to petitions he was simply saying that the constituents in that constituency were reflecting their concern about Bill C-22. It was not necessarily imputing that the Member presenting that petition held that position. It was simply a reflection of his constituents' view.

Mr. Speaker: The Chair has heard the representations of Hon. Members and they have heard the representations of each other. I think the point is taken.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

PATENT ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed from Monday, November 24, consideration of the motion of Mr. Andre that Bill C-22, an Act to amend the Patent Act and to provide for certain matters in relation thereto, be read a second time and referred to a Legislative Committee; and the amendment of Mrs. Killens (p. 1378).

Mr. Speaker: The Chair is advised that the last Member to speak in debate was from the Liberal Party. Therefore, I think it would be appropriate, since there is no government Member standing to be recognized, to recognize the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson).

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise today to take part in this very important debate on a matter which affects literally hundreds of thousands of Canadians directly and virtually all Canadians indirectly.

I and my colleagues in the New Democratic Party have strongly opposed Bill C-22 which is being proposed by the Conservative Government since it first attempted to introduce it this spring. And on a previous occasion when the former Liberal Government made moves to weaken the protection which was accorded to the producers of generic drugs we put that Government on notice that we would not stand idly by and allow these protections, which were initially implemented in 1969, to be in any way weakened to the detriment of those who are the most vulnerable in our society.

• (1510)

All Members of Parliament have received many representations on this legislation. I want to give a couple of illustrations of the kinds of responses I have received from my constituents as the Member of Parliament for Burnaby. I quote from a letter received from a gentleman and his wife who live on Gatenby Avenue in Burnaby:

> Both my wife and I suffer from chronic ailments requiring constant medication. The cost of these drugs is already high, especially to one like myself who is on pension. Any major increase would be an additional strain on our finances.
>
> I urge you and your Party to take energetic measures to block the passage of any legislation that would increase the price of drugs.

I have heard the same thing from many senior citizens in my constituency who live in the Winch Towers, the Vista Towers Senior Citizen's Complex, Doug Drummond Manor, the Hall Towers Senior Citizen's Complex, and from many others I could name if time permitted. However, in the interests of moving along in the debate I will not name all of them. Suffice it to say that these people share a sense of anger and a sense of deep concern that drugs which are already too expensive may increase in price.

We have to ask ourselves why this Conservative Government chooses to move forward at this time with a Bill which would increase the price of drugs to Canadians. What we are told is that if in fact the compulsory licencing provisions which were introduced in 1969 are eliminated it would somehow encourage more research in Canada and create more jobs. That does not make any sense. Before 1969 there was no compulsory licencing, yet Canada had some of the highest drug prices in the world, and before there was compulsory licencing there was a very low level of research on new drugs. Therefore, this myth that somehow there will be a significant increase in the level of research and development is merely a carrot being dangled by the Government and the multinational drug industry in an attempt to obtain protection under the Patent Act.

We in this Party do not buy that kind of corporate bribery. We certainly reject the suggestion that the consumers of Canada, the disabled, the poor, the seniors and those who are least able to afford drugs should be required to bear the burden of this Conservative Government's ideological fixation with paying off American multinational drug companies.

The Minister for Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre) has said there will be no significant increase in the price of drugs; in fact, he said there will be no increase in the price of drugs. Why is it that the same Minister has refused to make public the cost impact studies of this particular Bill? What does he have to hide? If in fact the studies, paid for after all by the taxpayers of Canada, disclose that there will be no increase in the price of drugs, we all know he would be the first person to table those studies here in the House of Commons. We know the truth, Mr. Speaker, and the truth is that the cost impact studies commissioned by the Government show that the Minister is not levelling with the people of Canada when he says there will be no increase in the price of drugs.

What does that mean in real terms? Let us take a couple of examples of the drugs with which we are dealing. One of the more common drugs used in Canada is the drug Tagamet. It is very widely used by people who have ulcers. One hundred tablets of the brand name drug Tagamet costs approximately $40 in Vancouver. The generic equivalent of Tagamet costs approximately $15. I know Hon. Members of the House would not want to move forward legislation which could in effect significantly increase the level of drug prices such as Tagamet.

One of the newer antibiotics brand name drugs, Amoxicillin, costs approximately $18. The generic equivalent costs about $9, about half that price. One of the most widely prescribed drugs in Canada is Valium. In Winnipeg, for example, the retail price for 100 tablets of the brand name drug Valium is approximately $15. The retail price for the generic equivalent is just a little over $5.

I think my constituents in Burnaby and, indeed, the people of Canada, have a right to know why it is the Government is caving in to the pressure of the American multinational drug companies. Is it not a fact that the real hidden agenda here is that the Tory Government is trying to grease the skids for its free trade negotiations with the Americans? We know, for example, that Clayton Yeutter, the chief American negotiator on free trade, has put strong pressure on the Canadian Government to move forward, to increase the price of drugs. He said that drug prices will rise. For example, he said:

> Any improvements in this area are clearly in the best interest of Canada as a nation. Now in some cases maybe this will raise the price at the retail level of some of these products, but if we're going to have low retail prices based upon piracy it seems to me that's not a sound way to run a country.

At least Clayton Yeutter has the honesty to level with Canadians that the prices of drugs in Canada will rise.

Professor Eastman, who headed up a commission in this area, was very clear that the long-term prices of prescription drugs in Canada will increase as a result of this Bill. The Minister himself has effectively conceded to the consumers of Canada that drug prices will increase. On the one hand he said, no, there will be no increase in the price of drugs to Canadians. On the other hand, when dealing with the provinces, he said: "What I will do is put aside $25 million a year for four years". The reason for that is to cover the increase in the price of drugs to their pharmacare plans. So the Minister is saying one thing to provincial Ministers of Health, and at the same time the Minister is speaking out of the other side of his mouth to consumers telling them there will be no increase in price. If there is no increase in the price of drugs, why on earth does the Minister have to guarantee to provincial pharmacare plans that he will give them more money? The only possible reason for giving them more money would be to increase the profits of the multinational drug companies. We already know that this has been one of the most profitable sectors in Canadian society.

I would like to take a moment to address the question of a health care system and, more particularly, an industry which is geared solely to the pursuit of profit. I want to suggest that as democratic socialists, and as Members of the New Democratic Party, we believe there are certain sectors of the economy which should not be driven solely by the pursuit of profit and greed but which should be based upon the effective serving of human needs. I can think of no more appropriate sector for that particular philosophical approach than the health care sector. As long ago as 1961 my Party in its founding documents spoke clearly and with great eloquence about the importance of a health care system in which all of the health care needs of Canadians would be served and in which no Canadian would be deprived of affordable health care because he or she could not afford drugs, dental care or decent medical care.

• (1520)

In 1975, at the federal convention of my Party, we proposed and adopted the following resolution. It was arrived at after discussing the deterioration of health care and the fact that the fundamental principles which were the cornerstone of our medicare system were being eroded; fundamental principles which people such as Tommy Douglas, Woodrow Lloyd, Allen Blakeney and other New Democrats and CCFers fought long and hard to establish.

In our resolution we stated that we should be extending federal-provincial cost-sharing of services to include all extended health care services currently provided in some provinces but not others. There are still provinces today which do not offer their citizens pharmacare plans. What this means is that if one is a poor person living in one of those provinces and if one happens to be sick, disabled or dependent upon a particular drug, then he or she will suffer.

I am proud of the fact that it was a NDP Government in my own Province of British Columbia which introduced a pharmacare system in 1973. I hope that Governments all across the country will recognize the obligation to their citizens, and that no one should be forced into poverty because he or she happens to be sick and needs drugs.

One of the essential elements of the health care resolution that was adopted by the New Democratic Party in 1975 was that a NDP Government would assist the provinces to reform the health care system by setting up a Crown corporation to manufacture and bulk purchase low-cost generic equivalents of the 80 most common drugs prescribed. There are some who say that that is a radical proposal. They ask: "What about the free enterprise system? What about competition in the marketplace?" In that respect let us look at the underlying premises of the Patent Act.

By adopting the legislation which is proposed by the Tory Government what we are saying is that the only way that we can encourage the development of new drugs in our society is, effectively to bribe the corporate sector by giving it the exclusive rights to drugs for a period of 10 years. What type of a distorted approach is that to health care? In this country, and, indeed, globally—and I can talk at some length about the abuses of multinational drug corporations in Third World countries where there is the dumping of substandard drugs and, indeed, in some cases, hazardous drugs—it is fundamentally wrong for us to adopt an approach in which effectively we say to the multinational drug companies that we have sicknesses and diseases in our society which we want treated. Our citizens have pains and disabilities which require drug treatment. We want you as a corporate community to assist us in responding to this pain, this suffering and this sickness. The only way that we as a Government are prepared to move forward on this issue is to give you exclusive rights for 10 years to the patent. I say that that is nonsense. We should be adopting a fundamentally different approach.

As a society we should be saying that if drugs are developed to deal with illness, pain and suffering, then we should not have to bribe the corporate sector with guarantees of exclusivity for 10 years to develop those drugs. No. We should be saying to the scientists in our society that we believe the best minds in the country, the best men and women scientists in the country, should be working collectively to develop responses to illness and pain. We should not have to bribe multinational corporations to conduct research in secret laboratories or have scientists working in splendid isolation from one another on cures for the same disease. That approach to health care is fundamentally immoral.

I suggest we have to look at the underpinnings of this legislation. We must recognize that when it comes to the provision of health care services and to the provision of quality drugs this approach is profoundly wrong. I suggest that the Government is caving in to the demands of American multinational corporations without any guarantees whatsoever that there will be any significant increase in research in Canada.

My colleague, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow), who has led the fight on behalf of our caucus with respect to this Bill, said that there was no significant research done prior to 1969 and the advent of compulsory licensing. The companies about which we are talking are major multinationals, European and American companies which have labs in their home countries. They are not going to do research in any significant degree in Canada. They will do it in labs in their own jurisdictions. It is nonsense to suggest otherwise.

Earlier I mentioned the letter I received from the pensioners in my constituency of Burnaby who suffer from chronic ailments requiring constant medication. I have received letters as well from those who are disabled and who rely on drugs to help make their lives bearable, to help ease the pain. The Tory Government is saying to those who are most vulnerable, to those who depend on drugs to make their lives a little more bearable, that we will increase the price of those drugs. Why? Because we have been promised by American multinationals that they will create jobs in Canada. I do not buy that promise. I do not buy it because there is no evidence to back it up. I do not buy the promise of the Minister that prices will not increase when the evidence is clear that they will. The Minister has not even had the courage to table in the House the studies which were done by his Department at the expense of the taxpayers of Canada which deal with the impact in terms of costs.

In conclusion, I wish to make it clear that I and my colleagues in this Party are proud of the tradition of the New Democratic Party, both provincially and federally, in terms of standing up for an effective health care system in Canada. We will do everything—and I underline the word "everything"—in our power to prevent the Conservative Government from caving in to the pressure of multinational corporations in a way that will result in increases in the price of generic drugs, indeed, in the price of all drugs, an increase which will hit those who are most vulnerable, the sick, the disabled and seniors.

We will not stand by while Tory MPs try to railroad this Bill through the House of Commons using closure. It is disgraceful that Members on the government side are actually seriously prepared to try to ram this Bill through without any type of meaningful debate whatsoever. It is audacious of the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) to stand up and say that we are trying to obstruct this Bill. Damn right; we are trying to stop the Government in its tracks with respect to this legislation. We certainly believe that we are speaking on behalf of the people of the country. We are speaking up on behalf of those who say that it is nonsense for the Tory Government to be kowtowing to American multinational drug companies in a way that will result in harm, in pain and in suffering to those in our society who cannot afford it.

I hope that Members of the House will reflect on the substance of the legislation which is before us and that Tory Members in particular will stand up and be counted, as the Tory Member for Kent (Mr. Hardey) has done in saying that he cannot in conscience vote for this Bill. If Tory Members vote for this legislation, they will be voting against the interests of each and every one of their constituents and they will be voting solely in the interests of American multinational drug companies. That will be to their shame.

• (1530)

Mr. Young: Mr. Speaker, I must say that I enjoyed and appreciated the remarks made by the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson). As you know, Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has been serving this House for quite some time. In fact, he became a Member of the House prior to my election in 1980. As such, he has a much greater awareness than I of the dynamics of the House of Commons.

Given the knowledge that everyone accepts the Hon. Member does have about the way this place operates, perhaps he would care to predict how many other government Members will likely join with the Official Opposition and the New Democratic Party in opposing this legislation, as has the Hon. Member for Kent (Mr. Hardey) who has expressed his opposition to this legislation to his own constituents.

I know the Hon. Member for Burnaby has had a wealth of experience in this place. In fact, he saw Members on the government side come out in very vocal opposition to the Government's attempt to legislate the cost-of-living increases on old age pensions. In fact, it tried to deindex old age pensions and when senior citizens rose up in a united opposition to what the Government attempted to do, it did not take too long for government Members to come out suddenly in opposition to the measure. As a result of that united effort, the Government's attempt was defeated. I predict the same thing will happen to this legislation and I would certainly appreciate hearing the comments of the Hon. Member for Burnaby.

Mr. Robinson: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate those kind and unsolicited remarks made by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Beaches. He has led with courage and distinction the battle on behalf of my Party on a whole range of issues, particularly with respect to the rights of the disabled as our representative on that committee. I am honoured to serve in this Chamber with my colleague, the Hon. Member for Beaches, and I look forward to doing so in the future.

My colleague has asked me about the extent to which the splits, cracks or splinters will start to show in the Tory caucus over the coming months on this particular legislation. I would like to be a bit more optimistic than some of my colleagues on this point but I am very concerned indeed that we may see that Tory back-benchers will not stand up on behalf of their constituents. There will be one or two lonely souls who will be forever consigned to the oblivion of Tory purgatory as a result of having had the courage to stand up and be counted on behalf of their constituents. I predict, sadly, that when the crunch comes and this Bill is voted on, Tory Members will rise one after the other to vote, not as their constituents would want them to vote on this legislation but, rather, to vote against the interests of the disabled, the sick and senior citizens.

Perhaps I could conclude with one example of this. If in fact Tory Members of Parliament had had the courage to stand up and be counted on this issue, they could indeed have stopped this Bill from going ahead. My colleagues from Skeena and Beaches will remember that Tory back-benchers stood up to the Minister responsible for the Post Office by saying that they would not allow the postal increase to go through. They did that because of the heat they were getting from their constituents, but, to their credit, they did do it.

Why are those same Tory back-benchers not standing up for their constituents on this issue? If they do not have the courage to do so in the House, they should at least stand up for their constituents in caucus. They should tell the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre) that they will not allow him to destroy the future of the Party, a progressive Party, the Progressive Conservative Party. They should tell him that they will not allow him to destroy the Party's tradition by bringing forward measures which will not only result in a significant increase in the price of drugs but which, during the next election, will result in the decimation of the Tory caucus in Canada.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, I would like to compliment the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) on his excellent remarks. I have two questions on matters that have been raised in this debate. Americans representing large pharmaceutical companies were quoted on the CBC program The Journal as having said they had had knowledge of the contents of this Bill prior to its being tabled in the House. I wonder what kind of conclusions the Hon. Member for Burnaby would reach on where they would get this kind of information and why they would know it in advance. Perhaps they had been involved in some kind of a lobbying effort.

Second, it is well known in this House that the Conservative Party raises most of its funds for electoral purposes from large corporations. Could the Hon. Member draw any conclusions as to why the Conservative Government would bring forward legislation that is so visibly unpopular and yet stands to be of such great benefit to large multinational corporations principally from the United States?

Mr. Robinson: Mr. Speaker, my colleague, the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton), has raised a very important point. Before this legislation was introduced, the Government consulted. However, government Members left out a few people in their consultations. They consulted with representatives of the American multinationals and the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association of Canada. They consulted as well with some representatives of the generic drug industry, but the people they ignored in the consultation process were those most affected.

Did Conservative Members consult with groups representing senior citizens? Of course they did not. Did they consult with groups representing the disabled, groups like the Coalition of Provincial Organizations of the Handicapped? Of course they did not. The people with whom they consulted and who saw this draft legislation were not those who would be hardest hit by it but those who stood to gain along with American multinational drug companies.

My friend, the Hon. Member for Skeena, has suggested that this may have something to do with the fact that the Conservative Party receives very extensive funding from large corporations in Canada. I think it would be unparliamentary for me to attempt to impute motives to the Government for the introduction of any particular legislation, but I think Canadians themselves are quite entitled to draw the appropriate conclusions about the very intimate link between the corporate sector and the extent to which the Government is bending over backward to serve its interests and not the interests of the people of Canada.

Mr. Brisco: Mr. Speaker, I totally disagree with the Hon. Member for Skeena. I invite him to examine the record. It is a matter of record from where contributions to the Conservative Party come. I invite the Hon. Member to attend the next fund-raising event in my riding and I invite him to look at the list of those who attended the last one which was on Saturday night. It was very successful, I might add.

Mr. Robinson: What's happened to your riding, Bob?

Mr. Brisco: My riding is 100 per cent, Svend. I would suggest you look at your own. Mine has never been in better shape, both geographically and politically.

Mr. Robinson: What about redistribution, Bob?

Mr. Brisco: The Hon. Member wants to avoid the subject of the Bill before us. If he wants to know about redistribution, I can tell him that there were 43 submissions made before the Electoral Boundaries Readjustment Commission. Every municipality, chamber of commerce and labour union in the constituency came before that panel of judges and said that they should not destroy Kootenay West.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I can see a point of order coming on relevance.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I think it is pretty clear that the Hon. Member, as is often the case, is talking about things totally irrelevant to the Bill before us.

• (1540)

Mr. Brisco: Mr. Speaker, I am sure that you are aware, and the House is aware, that the question was posed by the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton), and by the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson).

In the context of what the Member for Burnaby has said, Mr. Speaker, I would like to revert to the debate that dealt with the child tax credit. There is a similarity, and there is an analogy to the purpose and intent of members of the NDP. If you examine the record and listen to the speeches, you will note that what they are saying is that 25 years from now the child tax credit will be worth $2.25, or $3.50.

Mr. Fulton: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. We are dealing with the drug legislation, we are not dealing with the child tax credit. It seems that the Member's comments are still irrelevant.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair allows analogies from Members to prove their points. However, they may not last too long.

Mr. Brisco: Obviously, the Member for Skeena did not wish to hear the other side of the analogy. Perhaps he will permit me to continue.

The analogy is simply that they were making comparisons that will apply 25 or 30 years from now, and not taking into account changes in policy, changes in interest rates, changes in inflation, improvements to policy, and the absence of a horrendous deficit, as long as we retain power—

Mr. Robinson: That won't be long.

Mr. Brisco: —and the opportunity to put Canada on a firm financial footing. Given that, the same argument applies in terms of the generic drug argument. The simple fact is that I wish to see students in my riding, and in the riding of other Members of Parliament, involved in the scientific community and research, which is to the ultimate benefit of everyone.

Mr. Robinson: Mr. Speaker, I would certainly hope that the students in the Hon. Member's riding, who might become sick or disabled, would not have to pay exorbitant prices for drugs, as a result of his support for this particular legislation. I suggest that the chances of that happening are far greater than the somewhat nebulous chances that maybe one or two of the students from his riding would be able to get a job in that industry.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I know that the Hon. Member has been around the House for some time. I think that he was probably confused in his analogy. The analogy that he should have drawn to the attention of this House was, rather, with the Tory Government's attempt to deindex old age pensions. That is the appropriate analogy. I know that the Member for Kootenay West (Mr. Brisco) wanted to tell the House that just as Tory Members finally came to their senses and spoke out against the deindexation of old age pensions, we hope that the Member for Kootenay West and other Tory Members of Parliament will stand up and be counted and speak out, too, against this increase in the price of generic drugs in Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hnatyshyn: You are against research and development. Shame on you.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Resuming debate with the Hon. Member for Edmonton East.

Mr. William G. Lesick (Edmonton East): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure for me to stand up in favour of what the Government is endeavouring to do in passing the new Patent Act, Bill C-22.

This represents the efforts of the Government to increase the level of pharmaceutical research and development in Canada, to ensure fair prices for consumers, and to create more jobs for Canadians. What seems to be wrong with this proposal? As a pharmacist for 35 years, I believe that it is time that we started to work to get more jobs in research, more jobs for graduate pharmacists, more jobs for researchers in our universities, and in the companies that will spend more money for research and development. Among the most important of the objectives is the protection of the consumer. We have stated this over and over again. It is strange that members of the Opposition have their ears plugged and their mouths working diligently trying to disprove the truth.

The Bill ensures that prices will not get out of hand by guaranteeing continued generic competition, by providing for transitional payments to the provinces, and by creating a Drug Prices Review Board. These are sound principles that are contained in this Bill. So why not deal with these one at a time?

Furthermore, by providing a more appropriate length of market protection for innovative products, the patent system will become a more effective vehicle for promoting research and development, and the transfer of technology for the benefit of all Canadians. These amendments are designed as a balanced package of measures to provide improved patent protection of pharmaceuticals, a better investment climate, and continued access by Canadians to reasonably priced drugs. It is very important that we should emphasize "reasonably priced drugs".

With the extended market exclusivity there will be expanded incentive for the creation of new employment opportunities in Canada for scientists and researchers. As a result of Bill C-22, we predict that within the next five to six years there will be up to 3,000 new high-tech jobs. High paying jobs will be created.

As a result of this legislation, there will be a reduction of Canada's dependence on technical developments in foreign countries. Why shouldn't we do this in our own country? Why shouldn't we have the pride of having our own development? The costs are not great. The costs are absolutely minimal. The public will not be obliged to pay the exorbitant prices that have been alluded to by the members of the Opposition.

The Government has received commitments from the industry, and it will increase its ratio of research and development to sales to more than double the pre-policy level by 1995. This means that the innovative sector will spend up to $1.4 billion. This is $1.4 billion in research and development over and above the amount that would have been spent otherwise. This is a commitment. With this new investment, Canada will move into the same league as Japan, Italy, and the United States. We look at these countries and say, "Why can't we be like them? Why can't we be like the Japanese and so effective, or like the Americans?" We cannot do that by piracy. We cannot do that by hiding under the covers of our supernationalistic ways of doing things. We have to be wide open and get into research and development. It is this Government's aim to develop Canadian oriented brand name drugs, to increase innovative effort and put Canada among the leaders in pharmaceutical research. I believe that this Bill is meant to achieve this goal, and it will.

For generic companies this legislation provides continued opportunities to grow and prosper. Generic drugs now marketed in Canada are unaffected by this policy. Furthermore, all existing innovative drugs now on the market will immediately be available for generic competition, provided that the generic company manufactures the fine chemical ingredients instead of importing them. So we are looking after this area as well. To that end, all existing licences to import will be immediately extended to licences to manufacture. Licences to import and to manufacture will be available to generic drug companies wishing to export the drug.

The aim of these amendments, Mr. Speaker, is to allow pharmaceutical products to enjoy a legislative period of protection before they can be copied by the generic companies. It is important to remember that while Bill C-22 will affect the timing of the entry of new generic drugs into the market, generic companies will still have immediate access to all drugs at the end of the exclusivity period, and upon the expiry of the drug's patent.

Talking of patents, the chairman of the patents committee at the University of Alberta is the dean of pharmacy. The dean is absolutely ecstatic with our proposals. He believes that the Department of Pharmacy at the University of Alberta, as well as other departments, will benefit from this innovative Bill that we have before the House. The dean knows that he will have greater access to more researchers. He knows that the work that is being done at the university will be greatly enhanced. He knows that the University of Alberta will be contributing to the betterment of health care in Canada.

• (1550)

The Chairman of the patents committee has told me that there are patents waiting to be put on the market. However, no one will do that if the pirates are just around the corner ready to pounce on them. This is information from the University of Alberta. What about the other universities? New medications are not being put on the market because companies are not anxious to invest money.

Beyond the continuation of competition from the generic sector, an independent Drug Prices Review Board is to be established to ensure further fair pricing of pharmaceuticals. Under the current Patent Act, compulsory licensing has been used to generate competition to keep down prices and thus protect consumers. However, not all drugs have been copied. According to the Eastman Commission, for those which have been copied it has taken about 11.5 years after the brand name product was introduced for them to get to market. Therefore, consumers are not fully protected. With the proposed legislation the Board will widen consumer protection by looking at all prescription drug prices to determine best the fairness of the price charged to consumers.

Had the Drug Prices Review Board been in effect today, it might have looked at the prices of drugs as they have increased over the last five years. I will use the drug Beclovent as an example. In 1981, its cost was $6.60. Today, its cost is $10.90. Calculating the inflation rate at 34 per cent, it might have cost $8.84. In other words, there was a 31 per cent increase. The Drug Prices Review Board might have looked at it and asked drug companies why the price was so high. It might have asked why it had increased the price 31 per cent higher than the inflation rate over the last five years.

Another example would be the heart drug, Lanoxin. It is an inexpensive drug which is used by tens of thousands of Canadians. Its price has increased by $18 per thousand more than the inflation rate. Had the Drug Prices Review Board been in place today, it might have looked at this drug. Then there is the medicine called Dilantin which is also used by tens of thousands of Canadians. It is used for epilepsy. Its price is 185 per cent higher than the inflation rate. Surely this indicates a need to have the Drug Prices Review Board to which reference is made in Bill C-22.

According to the report of the commission of inquiry on the pharmaceutical industry, on the average, Canadian consumers pay about 80 per cent of what their American counterparts pay for the same single source drug or a drug not subject to generic competition. This is not simply the result of generic competition on a narrow range of drug products. It is evident that the bulk purchasing power of public hospitals and the power of provincial health care systems are major factors in the price differential between Canada and the United States. We can expect the trend to continue.

Dr. Harry Eastman will be heading the Drug Prices Review Board which will work in close co-operation with the provinces to ensure that drug prices continue at reasonable levels. Because of the particular interest in maintaining fair drug prices, provincial Governments will have the right to make representations in cases of alleged price abuse directly to the Board through their Ministers of health. The Board will have the power to remove patent protection from drugs priced at excessive levels.

Let us look at Nicorette. How many of us wish to quit smoking? Nicorette are for those people who have quit smoking and cannot stand the strain of not having any nicotine in their blood, so they chew it. It has risen in price by 103 per cent above the rate of inflation over the last five years. Surely it is another case for the Drug Prices Review Board. The provinces would have the right to have the Drug Prices Review Board look into drug prices.

Because the Bill changes the rules to determine exactly when a generic copy would appear on the market, it may have a short term impact upon provincial pharmacare plans which were devised without detailed knowledge of this piece of legislation. To counteract that, the Government is proposing a transitional payment of $25 million per year for the first four years of the policy. This is meant to cover any possible increases in prices which provincial Governments are not prepared to pay through their drug plans. It ultimately represents additional security for individual consumers covered by provincial plans.

Bill C-22 provides a balanced package of measures designed to fulfil a variety of objectives. It will ensure an expansion of investment in research and development. It will ensure fair prices for all drugs for Canadian consumers. It will develop new jobs and opportunities in both research and development and chemical manufacturing fields. Of course it will be to the benefit of all Canadians.

We protect many industries. We from the West have always felt that we have tended to protect manufacturing industries which are particularly based in southern Ontario and in Quebec. In terms of the automobile industry, all Canadians pay extra money to protect jobs in southern Ontario and in Quebec. It is an obligation; it is a right. As a matter of fact, we from the West sell most of our products, if not all our natural resources, at the world price. Sometimes, as was done by the previous Government, they are sold below the world price to the detriment of those of us from the West.

I believe this piece of legislation is good for all Canadians. It will be good for the manufacture of medicines and for research and development in all areas of Canada, although it may be based particularly in eastern Canada. The West and the Atlantic provinces will experience a certain amount or a greater amount of investment in their areas.

In addition to the amendments proposed by the Government in Bill C-22 relating to the pharmaceutical area, there is a series of general amendments in the legislation. In brief, the objectives of the amendments are, first, to modify the Patent Act in order to benefit small and medium sized businesses which are the heart of job creation in Canada at this time. Why do members of the Opposition, in particular those in the NDP, say that it will be harmful to all Canadians? It will be to the benefit of all Canadians. Many more jobs will be created. It is essential that Bill C-22 be passed.

Second, they will reduce the costs Canadian inventors must pay for obtaining patents around the world by ratifying the Patent Co-operation Treaty. That is important because we live not only in a country but in a world of many countries. We must get along with them and they with us. That will be to the benefit of inventors in Canada.

Third, they will introduce a prompt and low cost method so that any interested party can request the re-examination of a patent by the Patent Office at any time during the life of the patent, rather than being obliged to suffer high litigation costs. It will also harmonize Canada's patent system with those of most other countries, making it simpler for Canadians to obtain patents abroad. This is a form of reciprocity which I believe is essential for Canadians, Canadian drug companies, researchers, chemists and pharmacists. I believe it will be to the benefit of the sick and maimed, those who require these medicines.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[Translation]

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 66, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: the Hon. Member for Cape Breton—East Richmond (Mr. Dingwall)—

Regional Industrial Expansion—(a) Sydney Steel Corporation. (b) Initiation of marketing study; the Hon. Member for Fraser Valley East (Mr. Belsher)—Copyright—Use of videotaped material for educational purposes; the Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster)—Agriculture—(a) Government assistance for grain farmers. (b) Government's obligation under Western Grain Stabilization Act.

• (1600)

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

PATENT ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Andre that Bill C-22, an Act to amend the Patent Act and to provide for certain matters in relation thereto, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee; and the amendment of Mrs. Killens (p. 1378).

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The question and comment period will begin with the Hon. Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith).

Mr. Frith: Mr. Speaker, I have listened very carefully to the points the Hon. Member has made. Would he care to explain why he as a pharmacist, from a professional standpoint, believes his Government chose to ignore the major recommendations of the Eastman Report? Why has his Government chosen to go far beyond the needs of the industry to the detriment of the consumer?

Mr. Lesick: Mr. Speaker, I am afraid that the Government cannot accept the allegation that this Bill is to the detriment of all Canadians. The Bill is intended to be for the benefit of all Canadians. It will mean that we are more self-sufficient in this industry and that we increase research and development of our own medicines in Canada.

Mr. McCurdy: Mr. Speaker, I find it curious, as I am sure any rational person would, that in defending the legislation the Government repeatedly tells us that 93 per cent of the drugs currently in the market-place will be unaffected by this legislation. If one examines that statement carefully, one finds that the Government is saying that the old legislation, since it applies to 93 per cent of the drugs on the market, is good legislation. It therefore seems ridiculous to change it, and I would like to hear the Hon. Member address that question.

I am also interested in his purported interest in the stimulation of research in Canada. As I think everyone is aware, but perhaps many Members on the government side are not, there is nothing in this legislation which guarantees that research will be carried out. We have a hope, a prayer and a promise. The Eastman Report provided a mechanism through royalties which would ensure an effective inducement to have research undertaken in Canada. Our position is that that report should at least be subject to examination before legislation is introduced. How can the Member claim that letters, promises, hopes and prayers are better than a specific mechanism to ensure that research is done in Canada?

Mr. Lesick: Mr. Speaker, we have had consultations and made arrangements with all the companies. The companies and Governments concerned have to work together. If we pass laws to cover every single agreement made, we will have nothing but laws, laws, laws. In 1969, after the previous legislation was passed, we experienced, especially in Montreal and in southern Ontario, a great loss of employment among experienced researchers. We want those jobs back. We want Canadians in the forefront of research and development. We want Canadians to develop medicines for the benefit of our country. Why not do that? Why wait for someone else to develop it and then import the ingredients? Let us manufacture them here. We have to work with other countries so we can export our knowledge and our products around the world as well.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Hon. Member a question which has preoccupied some of my constituents. On November 20, as reported at page 1361 of Hansard, the Minister said:

> The price of drugs will not go up, but because of this group of 41 generics which are caught by the changes between the old and the new Acts there might be some delay, between two months and five years depending on the drug, which might have the effect of, at the maximum, increasing the cost to provincial pharamacare plans—

Does the Hon. Member know, being part of that Government which is trying to increase costs to consumers, why there is a delay in bringing on this group of 41 generics? Is the bureaucracy that heavy? Is it because the Government has put a moratorium on their development?

I would also like to know if he is willing to accept a complete freeze on prices for all drugs for the next year so that we can adapt more easily to this cost increase?

Mr. Lesick: Mr. Speaker, once a company is able to put a drug on the market there is a time lag because of government regulation and bureaucratic control. For want of a better word we can call it the pipeline. We had hoped this legislation would go through last June because these drugs would have gone through that pipeline and we would not have had any problem. But we have had this delay and so we have to face the fact there will be a delay before these drugs are available on the market.

The Hon. Member also asked a question about a freeze.

Mr. Frith: On drug prices.

Mr. Gauthier: Those in the pipeline.

Mr. Lesick: There will be a freeze on those in the pipeline but I thought the Hon. Member said a freeze on all drugs on the market today. There is of course no freeze on drug prices because, as I said earlier, there has been a general increase in the price of medecine as well as many other things. I have quoted several. Ortho-novum has increased by 7 per cent more than the inflation rate. For tens of years women used Ortho-novum for birth control. There will be no problem with drug price increases as a result of Bill C-22. The Minister has made it clear that that will not happen. I just wish to reiterate what the Minister has said and what the Government knows to be true.

• (1610)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I will recognize the Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow) and the Member for Saskatoon East (Mr. Ravis) for questions and comments. We will then resume debate with the Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith).

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, it has been quite a number of years since I have worked as a pharmacist. I note that the Hon. Member who just spoke is a pharmacist and I presume he will know recent history. Under the present law, generic drugs can come on the market after the multinational corporations have had exclusive rights for four years. Under the proposed law which the Hon. Member is supporting that will take 10 years.

The price for 100 brand-name Valium tablets in Winnipeg is $15.10. The price for that amount of the generic drug is $5.64. Tagamet is used by people who have ulcers. The cost per 100 tablets of Tagamet is $39.38. The price for the generic equivalent is $15.34. One of the newest antibiotics, Amoxicillin, costs $18.25 for the brand name drug while the generic version costs $9.25.

The system which we have has brought the price of prescription drugs down to less than half of that for brand name drugs. Is that what the Hon. Member's constituents want him to vote against?

Mr. Lesick: Mr. Speaker, I hear these words—

Mr. Orlikow: These are facts, not words.

Mr. Lesick: People add two things together and get four. It just does not work that way. Of course I am in favour of lower drug prices.

Mr. Orlikow: You're not.

Mr. Lesick: I have dispensed whatever the doctors have prescribed. When the prescription is open, we dispense the medicine which we feel is the better of the two. If it is a generic, so much the better. That saves my clients money. This will not change. All the medicines which we have today will not change at all.

Mr. Orlikow: Six extra years. What about the future?

Mr. Lesick: We will not notice any changes. There will be only minimal changes over many, many years. However, we will provide up to 3,000 new jobs in high tech. The companies will spend $1.4 billion in investments. That will mean jobs in addition to those for chemists, professors and all others who will be involved in research and development. This Bill will have absolutely no effect whatsoever, as has been stated by the Minister and the Government.

Mr. Ravis: Mr. Speaker, I had the pleasure of attending a high tech conference in Saskatoon the other day. The issue of our science and technology deficit of $12.5 billion was raised there. If we were to reduce that deficit to zero, we would reduce our unemployment situation by 120,000 people, which amounts to 10 per cent of our unemployed. I am not suggesting that all of this will be done by this legislation. However, I think this legislation moves in the right direction.

There is a major university in my constituency. I was interested to read some comments in The Globe and Mail this morning by Philip Seeman, the chairman of the pharmacology department of the University of Toronto. I think this person knows what he is talking about. He says that drug designers have been packing their bags and leaving this country. He said that in recent years 19 drug companies have stopped conducting research and frozen their investments in Canada. The scare squad in the NDP is suggesting that the roofs of senior citizens will cave in on them as a result of this legislation. That is absolutely false. If there are any increases, there will be protection from them.

I know that there is a major university, the University of Alberta, in the Hon. Member's city. Does he expect that some of the spin-off contract research and development may take place at the University of Alberta as a result of this legislation? I certainly expect that that will be the case in my riding.

Mr. Lesick: Mr. Speaker, I thank the Member for Saskatoon East (Mr. Ravis) for that question which is very important to those of us from western Canada, particularly those of us from Saskatoon and Edmonton. My colleague is right. We cannot hide under the blanket of fear which has been thrown out by members of the Opposition, especially those in the NDP. We must move ahead and develop. This will mean great things for the University of Saskatchewan, the University of Alberta and the University of British Columbia, which has a faculty of pharmacy as well.

It is very important that we start expanding our research and development. Our scientists will be better off. We will not lose our high-tech people to other countries as we have in the past, especially after the 1969 Patent Act was passed. Over 300 such people left Montreal because there were no longer jobs for them. There will be more jobs in Saskatoon, at the University of Alberta, and in Edmonton in general. Bill C-22 is going to help provide them.

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, I will preface my remarks by saying that I view with some skepticism the words which have just been mouthed by my colleagues from Saskatoon and Edmonton. Government members purport to be committed to the concept of research and development, particularly in the scientific community. The Members who have just indicated their so-called support for research and development ought to look to their Minister of Science and Technology (Mr. Oberle) for solace after the debates we have had in the House of Commmons this autumn with respect to the cut-backs at the National Research Council which will affect universities across the country. However, I stray from my thesis. I will turn to a discussion of Bill C-22 which is before Parliament today.

In the next 20 minutes I hope to be able to convince my colleagues in the Conservative Party that the proposed changes to the Patent Act go too far. I hope to be able to convince my colleagues in the New Democratic Party that they should change their position as they presently support no change. To support no change flies in the face of all the debate which has ever taken place in the House of Commons. It is clear that Governments introduce legislation as a result of a need for change. That need for change is brought about by various interest groups in our society. These interest groups are often competing.

I have heard my colleagues on all sides of the House argue for the need for jobs. Who among us will oppose the creation of jobs for the youth of the country? Who among us will oppose the need for increased funds for research and development? I suspect that no one will, Mr. Speaker. Once a Government has tabled a piece of legislation, it is up to the other political Parties to determine what position they will take with respect to it. During the course of the debate on this Bill, some Members of the Conservative Party have quoted statements I have made on behalf of the Liberal Party in my capacity as health and welfare critic. As well, they have quoted other statements the source of which I frankly do not know. I wish to respond to those charges that have been made during the debate.

• (1620)

I strongly believe that the Liberal Party's position on Bill C-22 can be logically and intellectually defended on the basis of the major recommendations in the report of the commission of inquiry on the pharmaceutical industry, commonly known in the political world as the Eastman Commission. Those recommendations fundamentally form the basis upon which the Liberal Party makes its position clear about the needed changes in the industry.

I want to explain why we require change to the 1969 Patent Act and I hope that the force of my logic will convince Members of the House that the Liberal Party's position is the correct one.

We accept the need for change. We accept one of the Eastman Commission's major findings that to some extent the 1969 legislation did go too far.

First, let us review the history of this subject so that all Members may have the same basis upon which to make a proper assessment of the law. The odyssey began with changes to the Patent Act in 1969. The Leader of the Opposition was Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs at that time. After three major studies in Canada, the Government of the day decided it was time to change the Patent Act to allow more competition into the market-place. The Government of the sixties had found that the pharmaceutical manufacturers of Canada had unwarranted profit levels and unwarranted periods of exclusivity with respect to their own patents. Therefore, changes were made to the 1969 Patent Act.

I note that one of my colleagues who is in the Chamber this afternoon, the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet), was the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs responsible for the launching of the review into revisions to the 1969 Patent Act. He established the Eastman Commission which, I submit, must be the foundation upon which any Government must base the change, the purpose and direction of the 1969 law. Surely no one can argue that the Eastman Commission represents the largest source of inquiry into the impact of the 1969 laws on the pharmaceutical industry, the research and development, and its impact on job opportunities for our university graduates.

In summary, the Eastman Commission Report represents the state of the art in information with respect to the pharmaceutical industry in Canada today.

I want to refer to some of the major findings of the Eastman Report. For example, he found that the 1969 Patent Act amendment has not, as expected, been detrimental to the profitability of large multinationals. In fact, he found that the profitability in the pharmaceutical industry exceeds every other industry within the major sectors of the Canadian economy. In terms of growth, he found that there has been no difference in growth in job opportunities between the pharmaceutical industry in Canada and that of the United States.

I think we do a disservice to the debate to use the rhetoric of anti-American sentiment. I do not think it does much to advance the quality or intellectual raison d'être of the Bill. Second, I will not resort to using examples of drugs that have become completely outpriced in Canada because it also clouds the decision-making that must occur with respect to Bill C-22.

The Government of the day introduces a Bill before the Parliament of Canada because it believes there is a need for change as a result of the competing interests that are subject to that legislation. The concern is, to what extent is change necessary in the industry?

I believe the only way we can properly assess the need for change is to base it on the recommendations of the Eastman Commission. Let us use research and development credits as an example. Conservative Members in particular argue that this Bill is necessary because it will allow a tremendous increase in the amount of money that the pharmaceutical industry will commit to research and development in this country. I would assume, therefore, that they anticipate that more jobs will be created for graduates from our universities, providing meaningful employment in their area of expertise in the scientific community. Eastman said that we should be increasing the royalties that are paid to the pharmaceutical manufacturers in Canada from 4 per cent to 14 per cent, to create a very large pool of research and development funds that would be allocated back to the pharmaceutical manufacturers on the basis of their R and D commitment in this country. I will deal with research and development more specifically later.

I indicated that the Eastman Commission found that there was no effect on the profitability of that sector, and that the 1969 legislation had in fact saved consumers in this country $256 million per annum. One must respect the findings of the Eastman Commission after 18 to 24 months of intensive study of the industry. It is important to note what is said about the 1969 legislation. Let me quote the following from page 30 of the Eastman Report:

> Despite the considerable achievements of these policies, the Commission recommends some major modifications and extensions. The process leading to authorization for marketing should become more rapid and more consultative.

In other words, despite those major findings, he recommended modifications and change. That is why I am fundamentally opposed to the position taken by members of the New Democratic Party. They should realize that the recommendations of a commission of this importance which studied the results of the 1969 legislation should be seriously considered by every major political Party. Eastman goes on to state:

> This modified Canadian system for the pharmaceutical industry would make Canada a more attractive site for pharmaceutical production and research.

I have no qualms about that at all. He says:

> The relative attraction of Canada for the industry compared to other countries will increase further in the foreseeable future because of the growing trend for Governments of most industrially advanced countries to interfere directly and forcefully in the activities of the pharmaceutical industry.

He goes on to point out that in his opinion Canada is not well placed to become a major world centre for pharmaceutical research or for the production of active chemical ingredients. That is very important because the Liberal Party's position on the pharmaceutical legislation reflects the major findings of the Eastman Commission. That is why the Liberal Party takes the following position: It supports the introduction of a four-year period of exclusivity for patent holding firms during which time a generic company would be precluded from obtaining a licence to import, coupled with a hefty royalty increase, amounting to approximately 14 per cent of a licencee's sales which would be paid into a pharmaceutical royalty fund and returned to the pharmaceutical manufacturers of Canadian members, according to the amount of R and D undertaken in Canada.

I am suggesting that this Bill goes too far in looking after the interests of the pharmaceutical manufacturers of Canada, and does not go far enough in protecting the needs of the consumers in this country. Clearly, the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre) either does not understand the Bill or is deliberately hiding from Canadians the effects of this Bill on manufacturing and pharmacy prescription prices in Canada.

• (1630)

If we were to take the Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister at his own word when he says that the cost of drugs will not change by one penny, why is it that his own Bill has provision for $100 million in transitory payments, $25 million a year, which will be given to the provincial Ministries of Health to cushion the impact which this proposed legislation will have on provincial Governments which have the constitutional responsibility for the delivery of pharmacare? I submit that the Minister knows full well that he is simply playing with definitions, that in fact this Bill will increase the cost of drugs to consumers and will have an impact on provincial Treasuries as well through the Ministry of Health expenditures.

For the life of me, I do not understand why the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs simply does not say it is going to have that effect. He defends it on the basis of the need for change so we can have greater opportunities for our young people coming out of universities and more commitment toward research and development. The point I am making is, how can a Government, after accepting the report of a commission, which is one of the most widely respected with respect to the pharmaceutical industry in Canada, totally ignore the major recommendations of its report and go far and beyond the recommendations?

The Eastman recommendations, in my opinion, represent a balanced view between the needs of the industry, which I believe are legitimate, and the consumer. I have listened to my colleagues from the Province of Quebec who have eloquently argued the need for a change to the pharmaceutical Act so that there can be some degree of job protection for the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario which, to some extent, is the heart of the pharmaceutical industry. I accept that argument from my colleagues from Quebec. In addition, I accept the argument from my colleagues from all three political Parties in the House about the need for more commitment to research and development. That can be attained just as easily by accepting the recommendations of the Eastman Commission as it can by implementing the law being proposed under Bill C-22.

Clearly our position, as a Liberal Party, is somewhat between the position taken by the New Democratic Party and that taken by the Conservatives. The question is, which one of us is correct? That will be at the heart of the debate. I submit to you, Mr. Speaker, that I have accepted the determination of the Eastman Commission that Canada is not well placed to become a major world centre for pharmaceutical research and for the production of active chemical ingredients. However, we could increase the royalty funds on generics from 4 per cent to 14 per cent and could in effect create a sizeable fund for research and devlopment, perhaps not as a world class centre, which is the point today's Government is making, but certainly it would aid in the creation of jobs for our young people in the pharmaceutical industry and in the scientific community.

Where I find it difficult to accept the argument is that the Government had to go beyond the recommendation of the Eastman Commission to the point where it almost doubled the degree of exclusivity recommended by the Commission. In addition, I must confess I have some difficulty with the Eastman Commission accepting the position of the Chairman of the Drug Prices Review Board. It seems odd to me that the Conservative Party, which came to power with the philosophy of deregulation, is now bringing forward a piece of legislation which is going to complicate the pharmaceutical industry. It is going to put into effect another layer of bureaucracy and regulatory mechanisms in order to ensure that consumers are not going to be ripped off by this law. If the Government was concerned about the consumers, why did it not just simply implement the recommendations of the Eastman Commission?

The Eastman Commission's recommendations would have allowed better opportunities for the pharmaceutical industry, yet it would have gone a lot further in protection of consumer affairs without the need to resort to a regulatory mechanism than what is represented in this law.

I therefore appeal to my colleagues on all political fronts that when this Bill does finally manage to go to committee, we will be allowed the fullest opportunity to call witnesses. I want to find out from those witnesses whether or not they agree with the recommendations made in Bill C-22, as proposed by the Conservative Government, or if they are more in favour of a balanced view represented by the recommendations of the Eastman Commission. I believe very strongly that intellectually the arguments which have been marshalled by the Eastman Commission could be used to represent a balanced view for the needs of consumers and for the industry. As I said earlier, I respect the needs of the industry, but I happen to disagree that it requires 10 years of exclusivity to achieve its goals and aims.

Finally, I suspect that the reason the pharmaceutical manufacturers of Canada have hurried to such a great degree in pressuring the Government for the implementation of Bill C-22 is not only tied up, to some extent, in the free trade negotiations with the United States, a fact I view as deplorable, but that, in addition, the 1969 legislation, coupled with the changes recommended by the Eastman Commission, would have become a model piece of legislation in other jurisdictions throughout the western world. That, I believe, is at the heart of the matter. What the pharmaceutical manufacturers of Canada fear most is not the impact the Canadian legislation has on their percentage of world-wide sales but the impact the Canadian legislation would have if enacted by European countries or by consumer advocates in the United States. What they fear most is the impact of the 1969 Patent Act in other jurisdictions.

In conclusion, I believe we should look at how best the Canadian Parliament could serve the needs of consumers, the needs of the pharmaceutical industry, the needs of the young to have access to jobs in the scientific community, and the need for jobs. I submit that what we should be doing is bringing forward a piece of legislation which reflects the major recommendations of the Eastman Commission and not the legislation proposed by the Conservative Government.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the Hon. Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith) several questions. He referred to the 1969 legislation passed by the Liberal Government when the present Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Turner) was the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. The Hon. Member said, and he knows, that it worked very well. It saved the people of Canada tens of millions of dollars. Why, then, was it necessary to open up the whole question? An article which appeared in the August-September issue of This Magazine, written by John Sawatsky, goes over the history of what happened. Mr. Sawatsky gives as the reason the fact that Liberal Members of Parliament were putting the pressure first on the then Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet), and then on the following Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, the former Hon. Member for Nickel Belt, and she appointed Professor Eastman mainly to neutralize the pressures she was getting from Liberal Members of Parliament. I am sure the Hon. Member for Sudbury has read this article, and I would like him to comment. Mr. Sawatsky is talking about discussions which went on last June about the former Bill. He wrote:

> Then, behind the speaker's chair on the floor of the Commons, Coté quietly met with Liberal MP Doug Frith, a Sudbury pharmacist who serves as his party's caucus chairman and critic on social policy. They cut a deal in which Frith agreed not to oppose Coté's interim legislation. The Conservative-Liberal agreement suddenly made temporary legislation politically viable. "Only the NDP will bitch," they agreed.

That is a very serious charge. Finally, I want to put to the Hon. Member that we are not debating Professor Eastman's recommendations.

Mr. Frith: You want no change?

Mr. Orlikow: On the contrary. If the Government had brought in a Bill based on Professor Eastman's recommendations—

Mr. Frith: Oh, good.

Mr. Orlikow: —we could have discussed those recommendations.

Mr. Frith: That's what I wanted to hear.

Mr. Orlikow: But we are not debating that. If and when the Government brings in that type of legislation, we will look at it clause by clause and probably support a good part of it. But that is not what we are debating. What we are debating is a Bill which gives the multinational corporations just about everything they want. That is why we are opposing it.

• (1640)

Mr. Frith: Mr. Speaker, I believe I should probably begin my response by asking a question. I find it passing strange that the New Democratic Party finally admits that it would be in favour of a Bill which would reflect the findings of the Eastman Commission. That does not differ at all from the position of the Liberal Party, a position I have taken consistently throughout the last two years. I have listened to my colleagues from the Province of Quebec who have legitimate concerns about the impact of the 1969 legislation on the pharmaceutical industry in their province.

The so-called secret deal that was made behind the Speaker's chair is simply this. The Minister of the day was finding out whether or not we would be amenable to the recommendations made by the Eastman Commission. I say it publicly to Ministers opposite that if they wish to amend this legislation to reflect the major recommendations of the Eastman Commission then we would not be in full debate in this House on this particular legislation today.

I also wish to indicate to my colleague from Winnipeg why it was that the former Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs established the Eastman Commission in the first place. The establishment of the Commission came about as a result of a request made at a federal-provincial conference held in the early part of the 1980s signed by every one of the provincial Ministers which indicated that they wanted to have an inquiry into the pharmaceutical industry established because of their concern about the impact of the 1969 legislation on research and development levels in Canada. The then Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, the Hon. Member for Papineau, acceded to the request.

As I have indicated before, I think the Eastman inquiry represents the highest state of information that we can possibly attain in Canada with respect to the state of the pharmaceutical industry. My Conservative colleagues opposite would do well to change their minds with respect to the proposed legislation.

[Translation]

Mr. Leblanc: Mr. Speaker, may I say that I fail to understand why today, after so many years, the Liberals still do not realize they made a mistake when they passed legislation which did not protect our drug research and researchers. At the time, we the people of Montreal could predict that tens of thousands of jobs would be lost, and today we can still see the empty buildings vacated by companies which did drug research. They are responsible for this and during those seven years they did not have the courage to backtrack and introduce the kind of legislation we are advocating today.

I can appreciate the position of the New Democratic Party, with their socialist approach and conviction that the Government should control everything. But I do not understand the Liberal Party, they are supposed to be in favour of liberalization. It is very difficult to understand. Why should this debate last so long? Why so much protest to make the debate last as long as possible and to mislead people?

Should we have more unemployed or people who can afford to pay for drugs? That is the main issue. What are we going to do with unemployed people if they cannot pay for drugs? The best thing is to have people with money to pay for them. That is the point.

My question is simple. Why didn't the Liberals, why didn't your party have the courage to table a Bill as sound and well drafted as the one we are tabling today? Why not say: Yes, we will let people invest in research and development and at the same time, we will control prices in the long term? Why don't you agree with this position?

Mr. Frith: Because, Mr. Speaker, we are not stupid.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Frith: I think the Hon. Member is mistaken in his allegations about unemployment in this industry. After examining the issue for eighteen months, the Eastman Commission found that the 1969 legislation did not affect the employment situation in the industry, and Mr. Speaker, I think that if the Conservatives want a higher level of research and development in this country, it would be much easier to change the royalty system in the industry, as recommended by the Eastman Commission, by increasing royalties by 14 per cent. To me, Mr. Speaker, this would be much easier and more effective than the legislation we have now.

[English]

Mr. Robinson: Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a brief comment with respect to the speech of the Hon. Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith) and, in particular, in response to a question raised by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow).

This Party has certainly long fought for an affordable health care system. It was never our position back in 1982 or in 1983 that the provisions that were brought in in 1969 to deal with what were some of the highest drug prices in the world should in fact be changed in the absence of compelling evidence that there could be significant improvements, both in the quality of drugs offered to Canadians as well as enhanced research, without jeopardizing the prices paid by consumers.

Certainly, if one is given a choice between the Draconian proposals put forward by the Government and the provisions of the Eastman Report, then clearly the Eastman Report is preferable. I wish to make it clear, speaking as one Member of Parliament, and I know I speak on behalf of my colleagues on this point, that I am not satisfied that the very high levels of profits of the multinational corporations in the drug field should be further enhanced by any changes to the 1969 compulsory licensing legislation.

Mr. Frith: In conclusion, I rest my case. I began my treatise this afternoon hoping that I could convince some of my colleagues that the Eastman Commission's recommendations were the route to follow. I have now found during the debate, and I appreciate it very much, that my colleagues from the New Democratic Party now admit, as the Liberal Party does, that the Eastman Commission represents the direction to follow in terms of the pharmaceutical industry in Canada.

[Translation]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Resuming debate. The Hon. Member for Charlesbourg (Mrs. Tardif).

Mrs. Monique B. Tardif (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, first of all, I would like to express my personal satisfaction with the tabling of this Bill by the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre) I also want to take this opportunity to mention the support received from the Fédération de l'Age d'Or du Québec. The president of the Association, Mrs. Rose-Aimée Leblanc, sent a letter to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, and I would like to quote some passages from this letter:

On behalf of the Fédération de l'Age d'Or du Québec, I would like to reiterate our support as expressed on many occasions for the changes in the Patent Act announced by the Government. The Fédération de l'Age d'Or du Québec is agreeable to having an adequate period of exclusivity guaranteed for new drugs.

The present legislation is unfair and discriminates against researchers and scientific experts in the pharmaceutical industry, because it denies them the protection enjoyed by other industrial sectors and by researchers in other countries.

We are convinced that these changes in the Patent Act are necessary to stimulate research and find discover new drugs to treat diseases for which a cure has yet to be found such as cancer, Alzheimer's disease, AIDS and various cardio-vascular diseases.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to get back to the pride Canadians feel in what they do and their pride in the quality of their products, and to how important it is for Canadians to be involved in pharmaceutical R & D.

• (1650)

The purpose of the Bill before the House today is to ensure that consumers will pay reasonable prices for drugs and that the pharmaceutical industry will meet its commitments to engage in research and development, and we see these two objectives as the primary objectives of the new legislation. To ensure these objectives are achieved, the new policy provides for establishing an independent Board that will review drug prices and monitor investments by the drug companies. The Board will have a very important role. The Review Board will consist of five members, and will be chaired by Dr. Harry Eastman himself, who is a professor in the Department of Economic Science at the University of Toronto. Dr. Eastman was chairman of the Commission everyone is talking about today which submitted its report in May 1985. All members of the Board will be appointed by the Governor in Council for a period of five years and may be reappointed for one further year. Members must be persons without any interests in the pharmaceutical sector. I think this guarantees that hearings held by the Board will be used to hear the complaints or requests of consumers. The Minister may also, if he so wishes, establish an advisory panel to be composed of members of the various groups concerned, which will advise the Minister with respect to the appointments of members of the Board. I think that is also a useful addition.

To guarantee that drug prices will be fair, every patentee of a invention shall provide the Board with information on the prices of patented medicines manufactured or sold by the patentee. To determine whether drug prices are excessive, the Board must consider factors such as the consumer price index—if there are price increases in other sectors, there may also be increases in the pharmaceutical sector—the price of such products in other countries, which is also an important factor, the price of similar drugs in Canada and, if necessary, we could go even further, the cost of making and marketing drugs and such other factors that in the opinion of the Board are relevant. When the Board's experts indicate that a given price is excessive, the Board will establish a maximum. If a company persists in selling the product at a price above the established maximum, the Board may, after holding public hearings, rescind the period of protection against imports of generic equivalents or the manufacturing thereof. Furthermore, the Board may rescind the period of protection granted for other drugs produced by the company. I may recall that although public hearings will be held, the Government's purpose is to keep procedures simple and to hand down decisions as quickly as possible.

The Board will be working in close co-operation with the provinces. We are all aware of the interest the provinces have in drug prices. Provincial Health Ministers will have the right to appear before the Board and explain their position.

Public participation is also important since the public can advise the Board of any case of allegedly excessive prices. In certain cases, investigations will result directly from inquiries from the public, while at the present time, members of the public have no idea to whom they should complain. The hearings held by the Board will not constitute an exclusive forum for the pharmaceutical companies. The general public will be able to attend.

The Bill also grants real powers to the Review Board. This will enable the Board to offer greater price protection than is now possible. Many drugs have no competition from generic products. Consumers therefore have no idea if they are paying a reasonable price for these products. I think that we all know that, only 7 per cent of all prescription drugs now have a generic equivalent. This means that there is no generic equivalent for 93 per cent of all prescription drugs and that it is therefore impossible to verify the prices of these products. The Board will be responsible for reviewing the prices of all drugs now being sold to determine whether the consumer is paying a fair price or not.

The Board will also review the price of drugs well before generic equivalents are available. This is also an important factor. The Board will put pressure on companies to lower prices as soon as the drugs appear on the market. This is another major improvement over the situation which has existed since 1969. Today, prices go down only when a generic product comes on the market. From now on, the Board will be able to determine as soon as a product is put on the market whether its price is excessive and ask that it be lowered. Consumers will not have to wait for a generic product to come on the market to benefit from competitive prices.

It is very important to note also that during the average period of 11 years and a half between the time a patentee offers a new drug on the market and a competitor develops its generics, there is absolutely no competition on the level of prices. The Board, therefore, will have to protect consumers both during this period and following the introduction of generics.

Another responsibility of the Board will be to see to it that patentees meet their R & D commitments. They have agreed to double their R & D investments within the next ten years. To ensure that these corporations fulfill their promises, the Board will be empowered also to collect and analyze information on their R & D activities. The Board will annually prepare and submit to the Minister a public report on the performance of the industry.

Let us mention also that the legislation provides for two formal review of the policy. The first one will take place four years from now, that is in 1990, and will be carried out by the Cabinet. The Government will be able to issue an order in council to reduce or revoke the protection period granted to the patentees who fail to keep their promises.

Mr. Speaker, I feel that the part we expect this independent board to play is an important one for consumers as far as the prices of medicine are concerned. It is important to note as well that the legislation provides also for a second thorough review of the policy ten years from now. I suggest that we set out the course and provide ourselves with some points of reference so that this policy will be reassessed in order to avoid the recurrence of situations such as we have known since the implementation of the 1969 legislation, because nothing was done to meet the expectations of both consumers and scientists.

As I recall my previous experience, I think that consumers did complain quite often about drug prices ever since the legislation of 1969 has been in force.

Mr. Speaker, it being close to 5 p.m., pursuant to Standing Order 9(4)(a), I move:

That the House continue to sit beyond the ordinary hour of daily adjournment for the purpose of continuing the debate on Bill C-22.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. Mrs. Tardif (Charlesbourg), seconded by Mr. Tremblay (Quebec East), moves that the House continue to sit beyond the ordinary hour of daily adjournment for the purpose of continuing the debate on Bill C-22.

The motion as proposed is in order.

I will read the relevant Standing Order:

In putting the question on such motion, the Speaker shall ask those Members who object to rise in their places. If twenty-five or more Members then rise, the motion shall be deemed to have been withdrawn, otherwise, the motion shall have been adopted.

• (1700)

[English]

Will those Members who object to the motion please rise in their places.

And the count having been taken:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In the opinion of the Speaker, twenty-five Members having risen, pursuant to Standing Order 9(4)(b), the motion is deemed to have been withdrawn.

[Translation]

Order, please. It being 5 p.m., the House will now proceed to the consideration of Private Members' Business as listed on today's Order Paper.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS--PUBLIC BILLS

[English]

MISSING CHILDREN SEARCH ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

Mr. Howard Crosby (Halifax West) moved that Bill C-234, an Act to require assistance in the search for missing children, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

He said: Mr. Speaker, as the motion indicates, I have presented to the House of Commons Bill C-234 respecting the search for missing children. This Bill was presented on a previous occasion to the House of Commons. It has been widely discussed among those interested in the subject of missing children.

I wish to advise you of the reason that I seek approval for this Bill on second reading. For many years in the municipalities and across each of the provinces, the problem of missing children has caused great consternation and difficulties, not only to the parents of missing children, but to the authorities that under our social system are responsible for young persons.

The provinces, through their legislative assemblies and their Governments, have been unable to provide a suitable solution to the problem of missing children. For this reason, I attempted to draft in a Bill suitable for passage through the Parliament of Canada, a solution to the problem of missing children. It is important that Parliament understand that it does have jurisdiction in this matter. Heretofore it has been considered that the problem of missing children was the concern of the provincial Governments and the legislative authorities of the separate provinces.

However, I wish to point out to the House of Commons that Parliament has already taken responsibility with respect to children under the age of 16 years. In Section 197 of the Criminal Code it is made very clear that every parent, foster parent, or guardian of a child under the age of 16 years is under a legal duty to provide the necessities of life to that child.

In order to perform and implement that obligation under the Criminal Code, it follows that as part of our criminal law jurisdiction we should provide a parent or guardian with the method to ensure that the child remains under their care and control, in order that they can perform their legal duty. It is under that authority that I drafted and presented to this House as a Private Members' Bill, Bill C-234, which has the short title Missing Children Search Act. I will just state briefly, because I have indicated the contents of the Bill on other occasions, that the Bill is to authorize a parent to in turn give authority to a police officer to search for a missing child, that is, a child under the age of 16 years.

What is important is not that we regard the specific provisions and words of this Bill, but that we grasp the subject matter of it, and recognize that there is a huge problem. The Parliament of Canada, if it has any legislative authority, should exercise it in favour of a resolution of the problem. Even if the House does not see fit to give second reading to this Bill and reference to a legislative committee, I would be more than content if the House of Commons would see fit to refer the subject matter of this Bill to an appropriate committee. I think the appropriate committee would be the Standing Committee on Justice and Solicitor General. However, I will leave that to the determination of the House.

I wish to make a couple of remarks that very graphically bring to the attention of the House of Commons and the Canadian public the concerns that have resulted in the introduction of this Bill.

When I first introduced this legislation in the House of Commons, I made the statement that police forces across Canada could tell you whether your motor vehicle was stolen or missing, but they did not keep any record of missing children. I was challenged on that point. Unfortunately, it was true. Since then the Solicitor General has directed the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to add missing children to its CPIC register. To a certain extent, the problem has now been resolved.

I wish to present some other facts so that Members will know the extent of this problem. Of the 11 children whom Clifford Olson admitted killing, only one was a subject of a police search. That is the extent of the difficulties that arise from police involvement in searches for missing children. I am trying to bridge that gap and bring parents and the police together, so that missing children will be found and a search will be conducted immediately.

In the few moments I have at my disposal, I wish to say that there have been many people who have concerned themselves and made it almost a career to deal with the problem of missing children. I mentioned Judy Cullen, with whom I have had a number of discussions. I also wish to refer to Mr. and Mrs. Gary Rosenfeldt, who have been crusaders in this field. We all owe them a debt of gratitude.

I wish to present to the Parliament of Canada, and the people of Canada, one case which I think typifies the problem. It is the case of Jeffrey Murray, who went missing in January of 1986 from his home in the Halifax-Dartmouth area of Nova Scotia. Ten months later this 14-year-old boy was still missing. I wish to quote the following from a media account of Jeffrey Murray's situation:

> At first RCMP, treating Jeffrey's disappearance as a runaway case, did receive tips there were a few local sightings of Jeffrey, but they were unable to track him down.
>
> Finally, Mrs. Murray and her husband Robert,
>
> —made the difficult decision of signing Jeffrey's guardianship to the province, giving police power to arrest their son and bring him home.

That is a very poor solution, Mr. Speaker, to a very real human problem. In order to receive police assistance and empower the police to search for one's own child, a parent in the Province of Nova Scotia—and it is the same in most of the other provinces in Canada—has to in effect make a complaint that his or her child is a delinquent and that they require public assistance by way of guardianship. That is the solution that the provincial legislators have provided. It is not a good enough solution. If the Parliament of Canada in the exercising of its authority under the Constitution of Canada can provide a better solution, then I think that we should at least explore it.

I have suggested the device of a parent being able to authorize the police to make a search. That is one suggestion. There may be better suggestions. I would be the first to recognize a better form. What there has to be in any solution to the problem is the ability of parents to enlist very quickly the aid of the police forces in their community and across Canada in the search for a missing child. Why should they do that? It is because it has been established time and time again that runaways or children who leave their homes and go missing become almost inevitably the victims of crime. Anyone, including the Solicitor General (Mr. Kelleher) if that is his position, who tells me that there is not a connection between missing children and the criminal law of Canada simply does not know what he or she is talking about. Missing children become, almost in every case, victims of violence or victims of crime. In the best of cases they are simply inducted into a world of outlaws in society; they become outlaws. If we visit major urban areas across Canada, we see graphic evidence in this regard on every main street from Halifax to Vancouver including St. John's, Newfoundland.

• (1710)

We are trying to respond to a real problem. The solutions may not be perfect, but at least it is a start. I enlist the assistance of all Hon. Members of the House in attempting to determine a course of action which can be taken under the laws of Canada to resolve this very serious social problem.

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to make some very brief remarks with regard to Bill C-234. At the outset I should like to congratulate the Hon. Member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby) for taking the initiative and for being concerned about a particular problem which is national in scope. I had the pleasure of speaking to the predecessor of this particular Bill, Bill C-230, when it was given first reading in the House on March 20, 1985. I said then—and I say it again today—that the Official Opposition, the Liberal Party, is supportive of the general thrust of the legislation. We believe that the subject matter of the legislation ought to be considered by the Standing Committee on Justice and Solicitor General.

All too often in the House, given the nature of our parliamentary system, there is considerable partisan debate. I believe very strongly that the problem of missing children in Canada is the type of issue where we can all set aside any partisan concerns we may have and work together to develop some effective legislation or an effective solution to the problem.

Again I congratulate the Hon. Member. Indeed, I commend the Government for some of its actions on this important subject over the course of its mandate.

As we know, the former Solicitor General announced in December, 1985 several initiatives to address the particular problem of missing children. For example, it was announced that there would be a central registry on missing children. The press release indicated that the RCMP would be creating a central registry in Ottawa to assist police forces and concerned agencies across Canada in locating and identifying missing children. Also it indicated that the registry would be linked with the Canadian Police Information Centre which had on-line terminals in almost all police departments in Canada. It would also be linked with similar information systems in the United States and through Interpol to the rest of the world. The plans were to have the registry operational by July, 1986.

As I speak this afternoon, I am not clear on whether or not the central registry is fully operational. However, I believe it is a step in the right direction. I think the Government is truly concerned about the particular issue.

As the Hon. Member for Halifax West pointed out, there is no national legislation in Canada to deal with the problem of missing children. There is such legislation in the United States. Mr. Speaker, as I am sure you are aware, over 2,000 children are reported missing every year in Canada. It is a large number of children. The Canadian police information computer usually has an accurate record of the number of missing children. Of course the 2,000 figure is an estimate. At any given moment in time there are approximately 2,000 missing children. While the CPIC usually has an accurate record of the number of missing children, as I understand it the circumstances of their disappearance are not included in that computer. At times we are told that police departments may enter incomplete descriptions or conflicting information.

Missing children fall into three categories—runaways, stranger abductions, and parental abductions. Contrary to popular belief, most police departments do not wait a prescribed period of time, for example 24 hours, before recording a child is missing. My information is that generally police departments treat each case individually, taking into consideration factors such as whether the child is known to be a runaway or whether there are feuding parents and parental abduction is likely. At times precious little can be done with regard to a missing child when there is parental abduction. Of course there are stranger abductions. They are of paramount concern. It is an offence under the Criminal Code of Canada.

As well, when we are dealing with runaways, while some children may rebel and decide to run away from home, we know that at times they all too often fall into the hands of certain degenerate elements in society and begin a life of crime, whether it be prostitution or drug peddling. There are those individuals in society who decide to use runaways. Of course runaways are very vulnerable to exploitation by different people in society.

We all know that Canadian corporations are eager to become involved in the search for missing children. Many corporations in Canada are prepared to offer financial assistance. However, I believe the bottom line is that the Government of Canada and we as parliamentarians have a responsibility to ensure that as a Parliament we do whatever we can to ensure that the problem is dealt with. While the Government of Canada has taken certain initiatives for which I commend it, I do not believe we have gone far enough.

There is now a central registry on missing children. The Government has declared a National Missing Children Day on May 25 of each year. Pilot studies are being initiated in different Canadian cities. I believe, as does the Hon. Member for Halifax West, that there is a need for national legislation. At the very least, there is a need for the subject to be debated and discussed at the national level here in the Parliament of Canada through the Standing Committee on Justice and Solicitor General. Once the matter is referred to that particular committee, the committee will have the opportunity to invite various groups and individuals in society to come forward, such as the Canadian Centre for Missing Children. That is a voluntary organization in Edmonton. I would like to commend it publicly for the work it has done concerning missing children. In particular I would like to congratulate it for the literature it has produced on the subject. I believe it is doing some very fine work and I would like to hear from its representatives. I would like them to come to the committee to discuss their concerns so we as parliamentarians can decide how to deal with this national problem.

• (1720)

As the Hon. Member pointed out, the issue should be addressed by the Parliament of Canada. While different provincial Governments are discussing and dealing with it, we have to recognize that the problem is national in scope. When children go missing they often cross provincial borders. Therefore, we have a need for national legislation.

I have some technical concerns regarding this Bill. I have asked the Library of Parliament to review the legislation and provide me with a report on its potential legal problems. However, nothing should stop us from dealing with the subject matter in committee. Therefore, I would like to move that the subject matter of Bill C-34 be referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs for further consideration.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It has been moved by Mr. Nunziata, seconded by Mr. Gauthier:

That Bill C-234 be not now read the second time but that the subject matter thereof be referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Solicitor General.

The debate will continue on the amendment with the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson).

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise on behalf of my colleagues in the New Democratic Party to support the amendment before the House and the motion that this very important subject matter be referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Solicitor General. I will be brief because I do not want in any way to deny other Members of this House an opportunity of voicing their concerns.

I hope the motion will be adopted because as one Member on the Committee on Justice and Solicitor General, I can think of few subjects which are more appropriate for consideration by that committee than the one brought forward today by the Hon. Member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby). I want to take this opportunity to commend the Hon. Member for his tenacity in moving forward on this subject. I have looked back over the records of this Parliament and I know he has raised the issue not just in Private Members' Hour but also during the Adjournment Debate. On one occasion he said, and I quote:

I want to present to this House as many times as I have the opportunity the subject of missing children.

It is to his credit that he has persevered.

We can all relate to the sense of anguish and despair faced by the parent of a child who has disappeared. We can relate to the frustration and anger they feel when they believe that perhaps the police have not responded as quickly as they should have. We can understand and empathize with those who are angry with the fact that in many cases when a child is abducted and taken out of the country, the parent in question is in effect told there is no possible way of dealing with that abduction.

There are three different forms of child abduction that we deal with under the general scope of this Bill. The first is the child who chooses to run away. The second is the child abducted by a parent. The third is a child abducted by strangers. It is very difficult indeed to know what sort of numbers we are dealing with. We are certainly talking about hundreds and hundreds of children. For example, as of January, 1984, over 1,200 children between the ages of 10 and 16 went missing. An additional 160 under the age of 10 were also missing. I suspect those figures under-represent the extent of the problem. However, what is clearly beyond the shadow of a doubt is that this Parliament must recognize there is a problem and that the subject matter should be studied by the committee.

I want to join with my colleagues in commending the initiatives taken by the former Solicitor General, the Hon. Member for Wellington—Dufferin—Simcoe (Mr. Beatty), in this area. Approximately one year ago he announced the creation of a central registry on missing children, a Canadian information centre on missing children, and the establishment of a National Missing Children's Day, as well as consultation through a national conference on this whole question. Those are all important initiatives. It is also important not to lose sight of the fact that while legislative structures are important, we have to examine why children are running away. Too often these children are fleeing from absolutely intolerable conditions at home. They run away as a last resort. Certainly we as a society have to recognize the problem and examine responses. Too many children are fleeing from abuse, whether it be sexual, physical or phsychological. I suggest that it is essential to put in place the resources necessary to deal with the problem. Legislation on the subject of sexual abuse of young children is now before Parliament. As a member of the legislative committee studying that problem, I know we look forward to improvements being made to the legislation, both in its definition of offences and in improving the ability of young children to communicate their story in court.

I also believe that while it is important to look at the legal structure, the committee dealing with this subject must also call witnesses to give evidence about why children in larger and larger numbers are leaving their homes. We have to examine, for example, the question of violence in the family. We have to ask ourselves, as I said during the debate on Bill C-15, whether we are prepared to continue to tolerate a provision of the Criminal Code which allows children to be beaten by their parents or guardians. We have to ask ourselves if perhaps the time has not come to move beyond that, as has been done already in Sweden.

I want to commend the groups which have been active in this area. They have been vocal and they have put incredible energy into dealing with this problem, often at great personal expense. I think of, for example, the group known as Mothers Against Abduction and Murder. This is a group of mothers who in many cases have experienced personally the tragedy of the loss of a child. Sharon Rosenfeldt, the mother of one of the victims of Clifford Olson, is active in this group as well as in Victims of Violence and with the Canadian Centre for Missing Children. I believe we owe a debt to the organizations, and the individuals who work so hard within them, which have helped push this matter. Today it will be referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Solicitor General.

• (1730)

In conclusion I would like to indicate on behalf of my Party that we urge government Members to allow the Standing Committee on Justice and Solicitor General to consider this important subject matter. It is long overdue for consideration. The Member for Halifax West has been a vigorous advocate in this area. In addition to the subject matter of this Bill, I hope the committee will consider very seriously the preventive measures which society must take to ensure that our most precious resource, our children, are not in a situation of having to flee or being subject to abduction.

Mr. Don Ravis (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to join with my colleagues today during Private Members' Hour to discuss the Bill and the amendment to it. There are four things which I think are very serious in Canadian society. They are drug and alcohol abuse, child abuse, pornography, and missing children. I believe that these four things are attacking the social fabric of our society. I commend the Member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby) for the efforts he has made to ensure that this Private Member's Bill will be referred to the appropriate committee.

In the past, the tragedy of missing children only came to our attention through the media. Today there is a greater awareness of missing children through pictures in bus shelters, post offices and newspapers. I have even included them in my quarterly householder to my constituents.

Today, in addition to the Bill, I want to dwell on the vital part which the community can play in the tragic saga of missing children. Community volunteers aid in the search for children and in educating parents and children to try to prevent child abduction and runaways. I would like to speak about a program in my constituency which I think presents a partial solution to this problem. Governments at all levels must work with our volunteer agencies. The program All About Me ID was commenced in Saskatoon a couple of years ago. It was shown on national television about a year ago. The objectives of the program are to provide an accurate and complete description and identification of children and, perhaps more important, to educate parents and children about preventing abduction.

The All About Me ID program started in March, 1985, in Saskatoon with a massive volunteer effort co-ordinated by Saskatoon media and Child Find Saskatchewan. With the help of hundreds of volunteers and retired RCMP officers, and with donations from many corporations and volunteer organizations, this program was put into place. Approximately 45,000 passports were issued to Saskatoon school children in a major campaign. That includes a large majority of the school-aged children in our city. The program also registered 17,000 children in the rural areas surrounding Saskatoon. I am pleased that there has already been a decrease in the number of cases reported to the police.

As you are probably aware, Mr. Speaker, each year in the neighbourhood of 1,000 to 1,200 children go missing. While many of those children have only forgotten to call home while they are out after school with playmates, last year five children were never found. As far as I am concerned, that is five too many.

The All About Me ID program is also under way in Prince Albert where over 7,000 children have already been registered. Plans are under way to implement the program in Calgary. I learned today that a radio station there has undertaken to give the program a boost, much as it received in Saskatoon. The campaign is also under way in the Province of Quebec. In Saskatoon all costs associated with the production of the passports were borne by volunteer and service groups in the city. At present the passports cost approximately $1.50 each.

I do not have a copy of a passport with me, but it is basically a piece of paper about eight inches by 11 inches folded three ways. Inside it has a picture, fingerprints, and all vital statistics pertinent to the particular child. The passport is the property of parents who make it available to police in the event the child goes missing. Of course, the fingerprints and picture become the key elements of the passport.

With the enactment of the Bill currently before the House, police agencies across the country would be brought in to assist in the search for missing children. The All About Me ID passport will be of great assistance in the search. By providing police with ready-made identification and vital fingerprints the All About Me ID program eliminates a burden for them and puts the search in motion much sooner. Time is always of the essence in abduction cases where the trail grows cold very quickly.

The All About Me ID program has a preventive component as well. There is a list of 12 precautions contained in the passport. They may appear to be pretty basic, but I believe they cause many children to go missing. For example, never leave a child unattended. Remind children never to talk to strangers or accept candy from them. Make sure children know the telephone numbers for their home and for the police station. Encourage children to tell parents of encounters which are threatening to them. Tell children to go to Child Find if the worst happens. Help can be found there. I think the Child Find organization is one of the better known national organizations with agencies in every city.

The Bill before the House today is of vital importance to the well-being of all Canadian children. When my hon. colleague introduced the Bill for first reading in March, 1985, he stressed that this Bill "would ensure the assistance of police officers and searchers and encourage the participation of other agencies and the public". It is high time this action was taken. My own City of Saskatoon has proven that a co-ordinated effort of volunteer agencies can provide an invaluable service to the police. This type of action would occur on a nation-wide basis with the enactment of this Bill. Both the City of Saskatoon police and Child Find Saskatchewan feel that they have an excellent working relationship which is of great benefit in the searches for missing children.

By enacting this Bill we must not assume that the entire burden of finding children who tragically go missing will fall on police agencies. They already have limited resources and manpower. We would be defeating the noble and vital purpose of this Bill if we strained those resources by placing the full responsibility of search and find on the law enforcement agencies. Through this Bill my colleague intended to encourage joint participation by families, communities, volunteer organizations and law enforcement agencies across the country. The RCMP registry is now in place. I am pleased that that has happened. From Ottawa we are now co-ordinating with police forces in every province of Canada.

My own community has proven that this entire co-ordination effort is possible. I applaud such successful action. I urge the House to support this Bill and refer it to the appropriate committee so that the Government can encourage community actions like those taken in Saskatoon to become national in scope. By working together, police, individuals and communities can fulfil the intent of the Bill currently before the House and end the anxiety of so many Canadians.

• (1740)

Mr. Patrick Crofton (Esquimalt—Saanich): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to have this opportunity to say a few words on this very important matter in Bill C-234. As Members know, the Government is very cognizant of its responsibilities in this very important social issue and has already taken concrete steps to put in place legislation and procedures to deal with this matter. Certainly more remains to be done, and, as in other areas of government responsibility, this important social issue requires regular review to ensure that the legislation and procedures of the day remain effective and appropriate.

It would be very gratifying if some single Act of Parliament, some specific piece of legislation which we could all support, would deal with the problem in a comprehensive and effective way. Unhappily, this is not the case. The matter is complex, touches on many social issues, and invokes a host of legal views and constitutional principles that are very often conflicting in nature.

We are all aware of the pain and the grief to the parent or guardian and other family members, the injury or hurt to the missing child himself or herself, when these unfortunate events occur.

Children absent themselves from their homes or residences for a variety of reasons. Sometimes it is forcibly, sometimes voluntarily. All tools at hand must be employed to determine the whereabouts of a missing child, and, where appropriate, return that child to its home. Obviously, our various police forces can and must play a significant role in the location process. Effective federal legislation is an important part of the formula. Heavy handed legislation, on the other hand, can only give birth to endless litigation and is counterproductive.

Bill C-234 contains several clauses which give me considerable difficulty. I very much hope that the appropriate committee will consider some of these clauses closely when it has the opportunity to do so. In particular, I single out Clause 7(3) which states:

> When a warrant is reported in respect of a missing child, the parent of the child or any police officer or member of a police department may enter and search any place or premises as though the warrant was a warrant to search for the child issued under the Criminal Code of Canada.

I am confident that every member of the House, as would any normal thinking member of Canadian society, would have every sympathy for a parent or guardian searching frantically for a missing child and would, in most conceivable circumstances, co-operate willingly in the search. However, to enact legislation which gives the right of search of private property by a parent or guardian without any reasonable control or limitation seems to me to fly in the face of many of the protections accorded private citizens under the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. A distraught adult, at whatever the hour, day or night, brandishing a piece of paper and demanding his or her right to search my home or business, would give me pause for thought. Who is this person, how credible is his or her story, what abuses to my security or privacy are put at risk by giving free entry? How am I to know, how is some elderly widow or anyone else to know, whether the warrant, assuming the claimant has produced such a piece of paper, is valid or legal, or indeed an invention?

Clause 5(4) of the Bill mandates that every police officer who receives or acquires knowledge of the warrant shall assist in the search for the missing child. Again, I suggest that the proposed legislation is very heavy-handed. Police forces have many responsibilities, both demanding and conflicting. Those responsible for the day-to-day, indeed minute-to-minute, allocation of police time frequently have to make unhappy choices. Is this legislation intended to place in the hands of a distraught parent the incentive to bring criminal action against each and every policeman or policewoman not perceived to be searching diligently?

Surely those in charge of any local police force must have the authority to allocate resources as circumstances dictate. However well intentioned this subclause may be, in my view the wording would create many more problems than it solves.

A third area of concern is one that is not addressed in the Bill. What happens when the child voluntarily absents himself or herself because of child neglect or abuse? Under what circumstances is a missing child returned to his or her parent or guardian? Is it on all occasions, some occasions and, if so, which ones? If a neighbour's child comes to me with some reasonable story of abuse, am I required by law to return that child to the parent or guardian, or do I have the option of consulting appropriate authorities? According to Clause 7(3) which I described earlier, I am obliged to allow free access to the parent or guardian to my private property. Do I now have a fight with the parent over the child? Indeed, do I not have a responsbility to that child?

I have every sympathy with the Hon. Member for Halifax West (Mr. Crosby) in his desire, indeed the desire of all Canadians, to see appropriate mechanisms put in place for the speedy and safe return of children who are legitimately identified as missing. No doubt, others will speak about the need for well thought out co-ordination of the various police forces and agencies who need to be involved. Co-operation is most certainly required in areas where legislation is inappropriate or ineffective. While Bill C-234 addresses some of the important issues, in my view it is defective, particularly in the areas I have illustrated. Time constraints do not allow me to explore some of the other areas.

I congratulate the Hon. Member for Halifax West in bringing this forward. I hope the committee will look at this proposal carefully and make the appropriate changes, because I have concerns about the wording of some parts of the Bill.

[Translation]

Mr. Maurice Tremblay (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, first of all, I want to congratulate the Hon. Member on his very serious concern for the plight of missing children as expressed in Bill C-234. Missing children are a major concern in our society. As politicians, we cannot ignore the anxiety being experienced daily by so many Canadian families.

By introducing this Bill in the House, the Hon. Member has demonstrated his desire to help missing children and their families. His is a noble gesture. However, I believe that in its present form, the Bill does not answer its avowed purpose. One example, Mr. Speaker, is that it fails to consider the fact that many children run away from home because they have been victims of physical violence, mental crualty or sexual abuse. By doing everything we can to return these children to their parents we are not necessarily acting in their best interests.

Since under the Constitution, responsibility is shared in this area, the police come under both federal and provincial jurisdiction. Should a federal Minister give instructions to a police officer or a police force, he would clearly be ultra vires. Even if that were not the case, any legislation in this respect would require extensive consultation between the federal Government and the provinces. Indeed, some clauses such as Clause 7(3), could probably be challenged successfully under the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Under the provisions of the clause, a warrant signed by a parent or parents would apparently be the equivalent of a search warrant issued by an officer of the court upon receiving a sworn statement. Once issued, the warrant would allow proceeding with search and seizure while ignoring the requirement for reasonable cause.

Furthermore, the Bill does not take into consideration recent measures to improve police procedures for intervening in this area, such as the creation of the RCMP's Central Registry on Missing Children and instructions from the RCMP to all detachments advising them to act immediately on all reported cases of missing children.

Currently, there is no evidence, Mr. Speaker, to support allegations that the police are not acting as they should in reported cases of missing children. In fact, police forces across Canada are providing the best of co-operation where the central registry is concerned. Research projects being conducted by the Department in four Canadian cities will also enable us to assess police action on reported cases of missing children. That study, once completed in March 1988, and the experience gained with the RCMP's central registry should provide the information needed to determine whether any additional legislative action is needed in that area.

This of course does not mean, Mr. Speaker, that I do not think something should be done for missing children. In that area, this Conservative Government which I am proud to be part of has been and is still doing pioneering work. The Government already has acted on its commitment. In August 1986, for instance, the Solicitor General officially opened the central registry for missing children. By linking all police forces across Canada, that registry significantly contributes to effective steps being taken nationally to address the problem of missing children.

This however is merely a first step, and the Solicitor General has promised to co-operate with all the agencies involved in order to find the most effective, long-term solutions to the problem of missing children. Moreoever, thanks to the efforts made by a number of agencies and levels of Government, progress to some extent has been achieved. National and provincial groups such as Child Find Ontario and Enfants-Retour, to name but those two, have made us more aware of the problem and have provided valuable services to the victims and their families. The circumstances surrounding the disappearance of children vary. However, all those children have one thing in common—they are all in danger.

Children who have been abducted by strangers are most obviously in danger, and such incidents make front-page headlines. Fortunately, Mr. Speaker, they are rare. Still a child abducted by his mother or father after a divorce is also in danger, especially so if the parent involved decides to go in hiding to avoid being found.

As to run-away children, they have to survive in a cold and harsh world. They may have run away because they were sexually abused, illtreated or neglected, but once they hit the streets they may very well face worse conditions, easy prey as they are for pimps and drug pushers. They might even engage in criminal activities—breaking and entering or shoplifting, for instance—just to feed themselves, Mr. Speaker.

As a rule, police will be the first to be told a child is missing and it is their responsibility to decide whether a search ought to be organized and to find ways to warn other local, regional, national and even international police forces so they too will be on the lookout.

But, Mr. Speaker, what coordinated measures can we take? How do we go about coordinating searches to find thousands of missing kids? The establishment of the registry is a first constructive step, but obviously we still have a lot to learn. We are still not fully aware of the extent and nature of the problem, let alone the best ways to solve it. Greater police efficiency is only one part of the solution, Mr. Speaker. We need more communication and co-operation at all levels. The search for a missing child has to involve social agencies, a large number of departments at all government levels, volunteer organizations, professional associations and the private sector.

In April last, for the first time in Canada, representatives of all the groups concerned with the problem of missing children met in Toronto at a national seminar on missing children organized by the Department of the Solicitor General. The object was to better identify the problem and to open discussions on how to co-operate in finding solutions.

The Solicitor General agreed to provide further opportunities for pooling information, discussing experiences and establishing national strategies for all parties involved in child welfare and concerned with crimes committed against children.

It is also important, Mr. Speaker, to foster parent awareness of the need to caution children against the dangers of the streets. To that end, parents of course must themselves be better aware of the dangers involved.

Mr. Speaker, in the few seconds I have remaining, I believe that by unanimous consent we should refer the matter to the Standing Committee on Justice and the Solicitor General.

• (1750)

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the amendment of the Hon. Member for York South—Weston (Mr. Nunziata). Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the amendment?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Amendment (Mr. Nunziata) agreed to.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Shall the motion as amended carry?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion, as amended, agreed to.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Accordingly, the order is discharged, the Bill withdrawn and the subject matter thereof referred to the Standing Committee on Justice and Solicitor General.

Order discharged and Bill withdrawn.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Shall I call it six o'clock?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 66 deemed to have been moved.

REGIONAL INDUSTRIAL EXPANSION—SYDNEY STEEL CORPORATION. B) INITIATION OF MARKETING STUDY

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I rise today with regard to a question I put to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Côté) concerning the Government's commitment to the Sydney Steel Corporation. On November 4, 1986, I asked the Minister whether that commitment was a firm commitment. Unfortunately, the answer which was forthcoming was not very satisfactory at all, not only to myself but to the people of Cape Breton.

It should be noted that in August of 1984, the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), the self-proclaimed head waiter for the United States, made a commitment to the people of Cape Breton Island that he would fund and provide modernization moneys for the Sydney Steel Corporation. That was in August of 1984. On December 28, 1985, an announcement was made in Cape Breton whereby the Government of Canada and the provincial Government announced that the modernization program would be taking place. Between August 1984 and December 28, 1985, 480 days elapsed before the federal Government, a Tory Government, made an announcement confirming its commitment with regard to modernization. It took 480 days and it took members of the Opposition, municipal leaders, a provincial Premier, and the provincial Leader of the Opposition to convince the Government to move in a positive way. That great former Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion said on December 28, 1985: "I am here to tell you that it is going. The agreement is there and there should be no doubt now concerning the future of Sysco".

If the people of Cape Breton have ever been misled, it has been by the Tory Government which took 480 days to make an announcement. On November 25, 1986, 330 days later, we have the spectacle of a Government which is waffling on its commitment with regard to a modernization program for Sydney Steel. That amounts to a total of 810 days in which the Tory Government misled, intentionally or otherwise, the people of Cape Breton with regard to the modernization program of Sydney Steel.

• (1800)

What do we hear from the government benches? We hear the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. MacKay) say that CN should be buying its rails from Sysco. Why does he not do something about it instead of being a mouthpiece—

Mr. Forrestall: Why didn't you?

Mr. Dingwall: I want to tell the mouthpiece, the Hon. Member for Dartmouth—Halifax East (Mr. Forrestall), that the Liberal Government in 1984-85 ordered CN to purchase $125,000 worth of rails. In 1983-84 we ordered it to purchase $108,000 worth of rails. Perhaps the Hon. Member would like to know something about 1972-73?

Mr. Forrestall: Sure, go ahead.

Mr. Dingwall: Perhaps the Hon. Member would like to know something about 1973-74? Would the Hon. Member like those figures?

Mr. Forrestall: Sure.

Mr. Dingwall: In 1972-73 the figure was $89,000. In 1973-74 it was $110,000. In 1974-75 it was $112,000. In 1975-76 it was $124,000. The figures go on and on and on.

The Tory Government led by the self-proclaimed head waiter for the United States has not committed itself to regional economic development or to the Sydney Steel Corporation. The Hon. Member for Dartmouth—Halifax East knows full well that the Premier of the province knows that the Prime Minister and the Government of Canada are not committed to modernization. If they were, they would approve and honour their commitment of $157 million, and they would do something with CN.

Under the provisions of Section 99 of the Financial Administration Act, the Prime Minister and the Minister of Transport (Mr. Crosbie) ought to order CN to purchase its rails from Sysco. But, no, 810 days have elapsed. That shows ample proof, unqualified proof, that the Tories talk out of both sides of their mouths. They are not committed to regional economic development. They do not believe in equality of opportunity for all regions of Canada. No, the Government will allow CN, a Crown corporation, to go abroad to Europe and Japan to purchase its rails while people in my constituency, one of the poorest regions in the country, have to put up with misleading statements, not only those of the Prime Minister of 1984 but those of the former Minister, the present Minister of National Revenue (Mr. MacKay), and, indeed, the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Forrestall). Shame on this Government.

Mr. J. M. Forrestall (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, the outraged Member should perhaps be reminded that for 6,205 days the Liberal Government of the country did absolutely nothing about the modernization of Sysco. In spite of the Hon. Member's rhetoric in front of the television cameras for the benefit of the people of Cape Breton who are in trouble, the fact of the matter is that the modernization program at Sydney Steel is not a broken promise. Quite the opposite is true.

A subsidiary agreement for Sysco modernization was signed on February 28, 1986. The Hon. Member knows that. A business plan prepared by Sysco was used as support information for a Treasury Board submission regarding ratification of the subsidiary agreement. Prior to the preparation of the Treasury Board document, both the federal and the provincial Governments, through the Canada-Nova Scotia planning subsidiary agreement, had commissioned A. D. Little of Canada Limited to prepare rail market projections. This study was used by Sysco in the preparation of the business plan. The plan was submitted and accepted by both levels of government. Treasury Board approval was received on June 4, 1986.

The Hon. Members knows that and his rhetoric is exactly that. It is fog, mirrors, smoke and brimstone which does nothing to further the useful objectives of Sysco.

• (1805)

We did receive 1985 market information. It is being asked now that the same firm update that market information.

On September 19, 1986, the Premier of Nova Scotia and my colleague, the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion (Mr. Côté) who is responsible for Sysco and others, announced that SNC/DRAVO had been awarded a contract to undertake basic engineering work with respect to this modernization program.

On October 1, 1986, representatives of the engineering firm began work in co-operation with officials of the Sydney Steel Corporation. Let me tell my hon. friend that that work is in fact proceeding on schedule.

Sysco is currently in the process of updating its comprehensive business plan and this will incorporate and use the updated market study previously undertaken by A. D. Little in 1985. The updating of a market study is normal business practice and this is essential to the development of Sysco as a viable operation. The market study will be just one important element of the business plan.

Since there has been confusion about this study, I would like again to emphasize to the Hon. Member that this is not a new study. Rather, it is an update of the 1985 study done by the same company. Market conditions do in fact change and it is essential to keep up with changing market demands.

COPYRIGHT—USE OF VIDEOTAPED MATERIAL FOR EDUCATIONAL PURPOSES

Mr. Ross Belsher (Fraser Valley East): Mr. Speaker, instructors at Fraser Valley Community College in Abbotsford and Chilliwack, British Columbia, have advised me that copyright and its application has posed various problems for educators and they have asked that the new copyright Bill address the issue of ensuring that classroom use of videotapes and movies be considered private performances rather than public ones. In response to the question I put to the Minister on November 5, the Minister stated that classroom use of copyright material should be exempted from the copyright legislation and so stated in the copyright legislation.

It is hoped that this recommendation will be implemented and perhaps dealt with in an even greater depth so that colleges such as Fraser Valley College will be able to rent videos or movies at the prices charged for private showings. After all, education is one of our society's most valued commodities. By giving educators better and cheaper access to materials, we will inevitably help students receive the best education possible.Realizing that the entire concept of performance in public has been traditionally dealt with in the courts and is a question of fact, I still think that the term "in public" should be more clearly defined in the new Act.

Before discussing the actual problems colleges such as Fraser Valley experience in the regular process of educating young Canadians, we should first take a quick look at the history of copyright in Canada. As we know, Canada's Copyright Act has not been revised in over 62 years. Back in the 1920s, of course, the most advanced technology would have been the gramophone. As the old saying goes, we've come a long way. Today, houses across the country contain video machines, stereos, compact disc players and the like. Businesses, Governments and schools use photocopiers daily. It is obvious then that the time has come to update the law regarding copyright.

In the Government's Economic Statement of November 1984, copyright revision was recognized as an urgent priority matter. In January of 1985, the White Paper on copyright entitled From Gutenberg to Telidon was referred for study and report to the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture. The subcommittee on the revision of copyright was immediately formed and in October of 1985, tabled its report entitled A Charter of Rights for Creators.

The report of October of 1985 stated that new copyright legislation must recognize the balance between the legitimate needs of creators to be paid for the use of their works and the needs of users to have access to those works. The creator of any work, be it written, drawn, photographed, sculpted or whatever, must be recognized as the legal owner of that work. We must not ignore the needs of the user of the goods either.

Permit me now the opportunity to outline to the House the problems experienced by the staff of Fraser Valley Community College and other community colleges as a result of current copyright legislation. One teacher wanted to get the video of the movie Pride and Prejudice which had been shown on television. This teacher found out that he would have to pay $450 for each part of the five-part series, in other words, a total of $2,250. In fact, that community college would have to buy the movie. The staff were not asking to tape it off the air while it was being shown on TV. They are aware of the laws relating to this. They only wanted to show it to a class as part of their curriculum, as another method of studying that great piece of fiction.

• (1810)

Let me give you another example of a problem that educational institutions face because of the classification of public performance. In order to rent a movie for one showing at the college they had to pay $150. If one of the students had rented that same video from a video shop, and the whole class had gone to that student's home to watch the movie, rental fees would have cost them a total of $7. That seems pretty preposterous to me.

Community colleges would like the new Act to state that the use of videos in classrooms be classified as private performances. They do not stand to make any money, as they are not charging the students in the regular classroom situation for admission, and are therefore not depriving the creator of the work from receiving any accrued revenue or recognition.

The subcommittee on the revision of copyright recognized that it is possible that under jurisprudence, groups of unrelated individuals would not constitute a "public" solely because they happen to share living quarters as a result of their work, education, vacation, or detention, and that this should be clarified in the new Act. I would like to take this one step further and recommend that a classroom not constitute a "public" place, because it is a confined environment with people sharing common goals and purposes. The students have to watch the video. It is part of the teacher's strategic plan for the purpose of study or research.

The White Paper on Copyright stated that a limited specific exemption from the exclusive right of public performance will be granted for certain performances for educational purposes. Further to this, in the subcommittee's report, Recommendation 90 states:

> The revised law should provide an exception to permit teachers and students, in the normal course of teaching activities to:
>
> a) perform a work in public;
>
> b) transmit and retransmit a work within the confines of a single educational institution.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, may I commend this Government for its prompt action in reviewing and recommending revisions to the antiquated Copyright Act. With all the advances in technology over the last several decades, it is imperative that revision of copyright remain at the top of our agenda.

[Translation]

Mrs. Claudy Mailly (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Communication): First of all, Mr. Speaker, I wish to reassure my friend the Hon. Member for Fraser—Valley East (Mr. Belsher) that the Minister of Communication (Miss MacDonald) is fully aware of the problem educators who want to use and copy videotaped material for their classes are faced with.

[English]

The issue of exemptions for educational purposes was a addressed by the October, 1985 report of the parliamentary subcommitee on the revision of copyright of the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture, as my hon. colleague just mentioned. In preparing its report, that subcommittee held nation-wide consultations during the summer of 1985 with a wide range of copyright interests. As a result of such consultations, Recommendation 90 of the subcommittee's report, which my colleague has just mentioned, suggested that the new copyright law permits classroom use of copyright materials. It was accepted by the Government.

On February 7, 1986, the Government issued its public response to the subcommittee's report. It stated that it accepted Recommendation 90. My colleague just read the particular part of that recommendation. For the record, I would like to repeat it. It states:

> The revised law should provide an exception to permit teachers and students, in the normal course of teaching activities to:
>
> a) perform a work in public;
>
> b) transmit and retransmit a work within the confines of a single educational institution.

In other words, the very clause read by my colleague is the one the Government approved of on February 7, 1986.

[Translation]

On February 7, therefore, the Government indicated in its public response to the Subcommittee report that it would accept Recommendation 90. School teachers use a great many copyright material in a great many ways. During an academic year, for instance, educational institutions use most categories of copyright material. By doing so, they may infringe on a good many copyrights, such as reproduction, public performance, radio broadcasting, adaptation, translation, etc.

However, educators need to have quick access to copyright material, including videotapes and movies. Moreover, because of their very limited budgets, they must be able to have access to them at reasonable prices. On the other hand, and I think my hon. friend will agree with me, creators must be equitably compensated for any use of their material. To reconcile these contradictory interests, the Government feels that the collective administration of copyright and the issue of compulsory licenses should meet the needs of instructors on the one hand and respect the rights of creators on the other.

• (1815)

The answer is not to grant access without payment, but to recommend the only practical method to issuing licenses and payments, that is the creation of collective management corporations and the obtention of general licenses. Evidence of the practical nature and good operation of such a system was provided in Quebec where two corporations have been established to manage the copyrights of literary works and audio-visual material. These two types of works are abundantly reproduced in Quebec educational institutions.

In the light of all this, Mr. Speaker, I can assure you that the new Copyright Act will take into account the very important concerns expressed by the Hon. Member for Fraser Valley—East (Mr. Belsher), as well as the need to protect the creators.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

The House adjourned at 6.17 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Wednesday, November 26, 1986

The House met at 2 p.m.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[English]

FISHERIES

OVERFISHING BY FOREIGN VESSELS—CALL FOR INCREASED AIR SURVEILLANCE

Mr. George Henderson (Egmont): Mr. Speaker, the fishermen in our country depend on the fishery resources to survive. These resources have been threatened by the dramatic increase of infractions and overfishing by foreign offshore vessels. The number of violators caught and punished are just a drop in the bucket compared to the global problem. But what has the Government done to stop this illegal activity?

In a document released at the recent First Ministers' Conference, it was clearly pointed out that air surveillance and observer coverage were well below the effective levels established in the late 1970s. Air surveillance has been greatly reduced, by 550 air hours since 1970. Observer coverage on foreign vessels has been reduced by 50 per cent to 80 per cent.

Does the Government expect these violators to turn themselves in because they are overcome by remorse? If they are not caught, they cannot be prosecuted. The price of fish is high today. With a low likelihood of being apprehended, the risks are worth it. But these risks are taken at the price of Canadian fishermen. I demand that the Government increase its air surveillance and observer coverage on foreign vessels immediately, before there are no fish left for anyone to catch.

* * *

[Translation]

INDUSTRY

MATANE PAPER MILL PROJECT—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Luc Joncas (Matapédia—Matane): Mr. Speaker, very soon it will be a year since a now well-known project has been unveiled—the Matane paper mill. First I might indicate that, for some people, this project may have been oversimplified, even though Lower St. Lawrence and Gaspé residents view it as a rather challenging and extremely important venture.

Be that as it may, Mr. Speaker, given such protracted negotiations between the various interested parties, people generally and my constituents in particular are now becoming increasingly concerned and wondering whether they are being taken for a ride.

Indeed no one would tax me with being excessive if I were to suggest that, in some respects, this project which has been bandied for over 20 years smacks of some kind of mental cruelty.

Mr. Speaker, I am sure you understand why my constituents now want the powers that be to honour their commitment and come up with an early decision on this matter which has a serious impact on a region of our country where unemployment is rampant.

* * *

• (1405)

[English]

FISHERIES

GRANTING OF FISH FARM LICENCES

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, a moratorium on the granting of fish farm licences is in effect in British Columbia while a Commission of Inquiry led by David Gillespie takes place. However, a real comprehensive study of the aquaculture industry is long overdue. The concerns of both aquaculturalists and traditional fishermen must be addressed. The fact that this Socred Commission has a mere two weeks to report, however, proves the present process a farce.

The federal Government has its own role to play in the granting of fish farm licences. It must ensure the environmental quality of salmon habitat and guard against the deposition of substances like tributyl tin and other chemicals that prove toxic to fish. British Columbians look to Ottawa for leadership but all they find is a Conservative administration which has not done one comprehensive public review of the budding aquaculture industry. Because of continued inaction, events have been allowed to proceed to the present state of chaos.

It seems those involved in the fishing industry can expect little else from the Mulroney Government. It promises $200 million for salmon enhancement and then delivers cut-back after cut-back. It promises a $100 million for fleet stabilization and now, over two years later, still nothing. It allows weather forecasting to deteriorate and is now abandoning lighthouses. The Minister's Advisory Committee has been abandoned—

Mr. Speaker: I regret the Hon. Member's time has expired.

S.O. 21

LABOUR CONDITIONS

UNEMPLOYMENT RATE REDUCED

Mr. Jim Jepson (London East): Mr. Speaker, Canada's unemployment rate has gone down again. More Canadians are finding gainful employment across this vast nation of ours. Last month Canada's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate stood at 9.4 per cent, down from its previous September rate of 9.5 per cent. Moreover, the unemployment rate for my Province of Ontario is now 6.9 per cent and 17,000 new jobs were created last month.

In the city of London, where my constituency is located, 12,000 new jobs have been created since the last election, and the unemployment rate has fallen from 9.9 per cent in September, 1984, to a level of 6.1 per cent today. I know there are regional disparities in the country but our Government's Speech from the Throne on October 1 specifically referred to new efforts and initiatives which will redress these imbalances. Our Government is determined to see that improvements in employment situations will be brought forward to benefit all Canadians from coast to coast. Truly, Canadians do have hope for tomorrow.

* * *

[Translation]

REGIONAL ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

EMPLOYMENT—MONTREAL EAST—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Last Monday, Mr. Speaker, regional development advisory committee president Picard released his one-year study report. Everyone recalls that last July 4 the Montreal East survival committee members met with Mr. Picard's team to make sure that the advisory committee report would contain constructive suggestions to help Montreal East residents develop new employment opportunities.

Mr. Speaker, allow me to voice my disappointment because the reports submitted by the committee members are little more than pious wishes. Unfortunately they failed to make sound recommendations to restore the confidence of people who work for Vickers, Canadian Steel Wheel, La Forge and Bombardier. It is a shame, Mr. Speaker, and I hope the Conservative Government and Conservative Members will wake up and find ways to create jobs for Vickers and Bombardier workers in Montreal East.

[English]

SMALL BUSINESS

GOVERNMENT ENCOURAGEMENT OF ENTREPRENEURIAL SPIRIT

Mr. Don Ravis (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, Canada has more than 700,000 small businesses which are the backbone of our economy. They are our greatest resource of new ideas, new opportunities, new wealth, and new unemployment. Our Government encourages entrepreneurial spirit, the same spirit Kristan Shannon, head of the Canadian Trend Report, referred to at Forum 2000, a national New Democratic Party Satellite Conference on the Future.

Ms. Shannon stated: "Canadian workers will have to look more to their entrepreneurial spirit and self-help potential". The Conservatives recognize the every-day risks involved in independent business and the fact that jobs cannot be guaranteed. The New Democratic Party and some unions must face the economic realities in Canada that we cannot guarantee all jobs. Small-businessmen and women across the country can continue to count on the support of our Government which is committed to entrepreneurial drive.

* * *

POLITICAL PARTIES

CONSERVATIVE PARTY ORGANIZER'S DEFENCE OF GOVERNMENT DECISIONS

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, at a recent meeting of the Conservative Party in my riding, Frank Clark, a paid federal organizer for the Conservative Party, was reported in the Thompson Citizen as stating that he defended the move of a penitentiary to the Prime Minister's Manicouagan riding, a move which will cost the taxpayers $40 million extra, because its former location was in a Liberal stronghold.

• (1410)

He also defended the recent CF-18 decision, saying that it was "morally unjust" but "politically correct".

Mr. Clark's clumsy defence of the Government brings to mind the story of a man who was accused of visiting a prostitute. He excused his action by saying that it was morally wrong but biologically necessary. The judge replied that the man must learn to follow the dictates of society rather than the dictates of his own needs.

The Government must learn to respond to the needs of the Canadian people whom it was elected to represent, not the needs of the Conservative Party.

VOLUNTARY ORGANIZATIONS

CHILDREN'S PROJECT TO HELP THIRD WORLD UNFORTUNATES

Mr. Albert Cooper (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I wish to draw to the attention of the House a great example of Canadian volunteerism, a book entitled Dear World/ Cher Monde. This book is part of a Canadian children's project to help children less fortunate in the Third World. The question was asked of our youth: "What would you do to put the world right?" Their drawings and messages are both a celebration of hope and a cry from their souls puzzled by the cruelty and disparity of the world.

These young people remind us that this is indeed a dear world. By their talent, honesty, and desire to contribute their thoughts and ideas they give us confidence to continue an ongoing search for a resolution to the disparity and turmoil around us.

Most of the money earned from the sale of this book will go to Global Ed-Med Supplies, a Canadian charity which provides medical training, supplies and other support material to developing countries. Specifically, funds will be used to establish health care clinics in Jamaica and Haiti.

If youth are the barometer of tomorrow, I can tell you, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member's time has expired.

* * *

LABOUR CONDITIONS

YOUTH UNEMPLOYMENT—CRITICISM OF GOVERNMENT POLICY

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, as you know, youth unemployment in Canada is a national tragedy. The Conservative Government is doing absolutely nothing about it. There are some 600,000 young people in Canada who are without jobs. That is an unemployment rate of 16 per cent to 18 per cent, double the adult unemployment rate. Yet the Government has not seen the wisdom to address itself to this very serious problem.

Instead of combating youth unemployment the Government and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) are content to build prisons in his riding.

If the Government is able to find $1 billion for farmers, $1 billion for banks, and billions of dollars for the oil industry, then surely the Government can find sufficient resources to give our young people hope for the future instead of wasting millions of dollars to accommodate the Prime Minister's constituents in his own riding. I call upon the Government of Canada to be—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member's time has expired.

S.O. 21

ABORTION

CALL FOR MORE FREQUENT PUBLICATION OF STATISTICS

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, it was announced recently that Statistics Canada will only compile and publish complete socio-economic and medical data on abortions in Canada once every three years. In England and Wales information on legal abortion is not only published in regular annual reports, the agency concerned also publishes quarterly reports on abortions, including specific demographic and medical data.

Under the former Therapeutic Abortion Program of Statistics Canada, the interval between the date of data collection and the date of publication was about two years. We have no reason to believe this system will in any way be improved. Therefore, with complete data collected every three years, we can expect the next complete statistics to be compiled in 1988 and published in the year 1990.

The abortion issue is a vital one for all Canadians. We should be publishing this data more frequently, as is being done in Britain, not less frequently as Statistics Canada has recently announced.

* * *

CANADA POST CORPORATION

RURAL SERVICE—PRIVATIZATION OF LOCAL POST OFFICES

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, as a representative of a rural riding I am alarmed by what I see the federal Government doing to rural postal service in Canada in the name of cutting costs. Currently, Canada Post has 5,221 rural post offices. From the President's statement on November 20 it appears that there are 5,221 too many, not to mention rural route service. The plan is to turn 3,500 of these offices over to the private sector. One does not have to be a prophet to see the resulting variation of services in different areas with no national standards. The remaining 1,700 offices are to be amalgamated or replaced with multiple-site mailboxes.

• (1415)

When Canada Post was created it was established to extend its products and services and provide a standard of service that would meet the needs of the people of Canada. Neither these goals nor the rural way of life are obsolete but they could become so if the Government does not change its current tack.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, in most villages and smaller cities the post office is the only sign of a federal presence, the only place where residents can see the Canadian flag. The closure of rural post offices undermines Canadian unity.

Mr. Speaker: I regret to interrupt the Hon. Member, but his allotted time has expired.

[English]

UNITED NATIONS

TRIBUTE TO CANADIAN AMBASSADOR'S SPEECH ON SOVIET OPPRESSION IN AFGHANISTAN

Mr. John Reimer (Kitchener): Mr. Speaker, on May 7 I spoke critically in the House of Canada's Ambassador to the United Nations, Mr. Stephen Lewis. Today I rise in praise of the Ambassador for his November 5 address to the United Nations in which he justifiably condemned U.S.S.R. Foreign Secretary Eduard Shevardnadze for his gross misrepresentation of events in Afghanistan as a "national democratic revolution". Mr. Lewis properly characterized this incredible description of Soviet intervention as a "linguistic mask designed to hide the brute face of oppression".

When Mr. Shevardnadze later complained that the UN debate on Afghanistan was destroying "the fruits" of the revolution, the Ambassador quickly cited the one million Afghan dead and asked "what revolutionary fruitfulness transforms an entire country into a killing field?" Canadians will not be appeased by pathetic rhetoric and Ambassador Lewis is to be commended for reminding the U.S.S.R. of that fact.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

TRADE

CREDIBILITY OF CANADA IN FUTURE TRADE NEGOTIATIONS—GOVERNMENT'S PERFORMANCE

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): It will be even more enthusiastic on this side of the House and less enthusiastic on that side of the House on Monday.

[Translation]

My question is directed to the Prime Minister. These days, developments regarding the final agreement on softwood lumber are showing once again the incompetence of the Prime Minister and his Government. Doesn't he realize that his Government's performance will destroy Canada's credibility in any future trade talks, not only with the United States but with other countries?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think the position taken by the Government of Canada is a position that shows reasonable and thoughtful leadership, in that we are trying to find a formula that will resolve a complex and serious problem in the interests of Canadians. I admit quite frankly this is not an easy matter. It is a very complex situation, but nevertheless, we are trying to solve these problems on an entirely reasonable basis. Up to now, the approach submitted by the Minister for International Trade and supported by the provincial premiers seems to be working in favour of Canadian interests.

[English]

POSSIBLE EXPORT TAX INQUIRY

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, today there is complete confusion in provincial capitals about the position of the federal Government in these negotiations, and indeed, no agreement as to any rate of stumpage fees individual provinces might impose will leave the federal Government in a position of having to impose an export tax if it will fulfil its understanding with the United States, whatever that understanding is. Will this export tax be on lumber directed solely to the United States market, something which would be contrary to international trade law, or will it be an export tax on lumber generally, something which would absolutely destroy our Pacific Rim markets and opportunities?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition has been a long time in Parliament and knows the rules about hypothetical questions. I am not in a position nor is anyone in the Government to describe the nature of action Canada might take in the event of an agreement with the United States except to say that the action proposed now would keep in Canada money that would otherwise go to the United States and would end a countervail petition that could be harmful to this country.

• (1420)

GOVERNMENT POSITION IN NEGOTIATIONS

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): The Secretary of State may call the question hypothetical. He has two days left to make it concrete, because time is running out for him.

My final question is for the Prime Minister. When are he and the Government going to stop acting like branch plant managers allowing the United States customer to set our prices for international commodities?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I would think that the Leader of the Opposition would want to refrain from using phrases like "time is running out".

An Hon. Member: Be careful, Joe, it is a very delicate situation.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, that is obviously the voice of experience talking.

WASHINGTON MEETING—CANADIAN APPROACH

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): My question is directed to the Prime Minister. The Secretary of State said that the proposed deal is hypothetical yet we know that a meeting was held in Washington today between Canadian officials, lumber industry officials, and members of the U.S. Government. Does the Prime Minister not think that now that the U.S. lumber industry knows what the deal is, the U.S. Government knows what the deal is, it is time that Canadians knew what the deal is and what it will cost? When is the Government going to come clean as to what it is going to cost Canadians in this type of deal that it is offering the Americans?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, yesterday in the House of Commons I read into the record the statement that had been made by my colleague, the Minister of International Trade, as to the nature of the approach that is being discussed with the United States. It is known here in the same terms that it is known elsewhere.

As to the consequences, if there is an agreement by the United States, among the consequences will be that hundreds of millions of dollars would stay in Canada that would otherwise flow from Canadian hands to the United States. We think that that is a goal to be pursued.

IMPACT ON LUMBER INDUSTRY

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Secretary of State. When the Minister says hundreds of millions of dollars will stay in Canadian hands, is it not true that those hundreds of millions of dollars will either be drawn from the Canadian consumer because of exorbitantly higher prices for Canadian housing, if the stumpage fee is raised, or those hundreds of millions of dollars will be added to our exports to other countries? What we are trying to find out in the House is what is the Canadian Government putting on the table. What is going to be the impact of cost to the Canadian lumber industry of that deal? Why will the Government not tell the truth in the House as to what it is offering the Americans?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I make it a practice of telling the truth. We are doing that here. We have indicated to the House of Commons the nature of what is being discussed with the United States. There is no question at all, the simplest mind can comprehend it—

Mr. Axworthy: We want you to do it. That's why we asked you.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): —that if we are able to have an arrangement that keeps in Canada money that would otherwise go to the United States, that is in the interest of Canada.

STUMPAGE FEES—EFFECT ON EXPORTS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is a very serious question for the Minister. The Minister knows that the Government has publicly said that one of the proposals is to have stumpage fees increased by the provincial Governments. Considering that only one-fifth of the $18 billion in forest product exports is made up of softwoods going to the U.S., will the Minister now acknowledge that the Government's proposed solution is going to drive up the cost of 100 per cent of Canadian exports in this sector?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): No, Mr. Speaker, I will not acknowledge that.

Mr. Broadbent: Why not?

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): What I will do is remind the House of Commons that not very long ago when my colleague, the Minister of Finance, brought down a Budget, the response of the Leader of the New Democratic Party was to predict that there would be massive job losses across the country. His prediction was wrong then. His record of prediction is well known. He will be proven wrong again.

Mr. Broadbent: Mr. Speaker, you can always tell when a Minister does not wish to answer the question. He knows that the truth will be painful for his Government.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): I wish to ask the Minister this. Doesn't he realize that by yielding to this U.S. blackmail in this way he is going to drive up the cost of all our exports in this sector, which will likely cost jobs in almost every province in Canada. How stupid can you get?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (1425)

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I do not like to sink to this level, but not as stupid as the Hon. Member.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps the Hon. Member could use some appropriate restraint in his final question.

[Translation]

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I hope the Minister will answer questions about the facts. If the Minister is willing to discuss the facts, we can have a discussion without the rhetoric. However, it is up to him and to the responsible Minister to answer. My question is simply this: Does he agree that by taking this approach, the Government will increase the price of all exports in this industry? Is that true, yes or no?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, as is always the case under a truly bilingual system, the answer is the same, in French and in English.

[English]

ANNOUNCED CLOSURE OF LUMBER MILL AT NAIRN, ONT.

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Last night he received a telegram from the Vice-President of Eddy Forest Products indicating that the company is shutting down its softwood lumber mill at Nairn, Ontario, which employs some 300 workers, because the Government has undercut the efforts of the Canadian Forest Industries Council in its fight against the United States countervail, and thus abandoned the industry and workers involved. Why is it abandoning the industry and the workers involved and causing these lay-offs?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Government of Canada is taking action which will precisely protect Canadian workers and the Canadian softwood industry. We are now faced with a situation which not only involves the exodus from Canada of hundreds of millions of dollars but could perpetuate a system of uncertainty in that industry. That is not in the interest of the country, of the industry, or of the people who derive their employment from it.

Mr. Foster: It is too bad the Prime Minister would not respond to the question, since 300 workers are involved and it is the third sawmill to shut down in northern Ontario in the last week.

RESTORATION OF JOBS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Prime Minister. How will the Government restore these 300 jobs lost at Nairn and the others in northern Ontario? When will the Government stand up to the countervail, fight for Canada and fight for Canadian jobs?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, there is absolutely no contesting the fact that, as a result of protectionism in the United States and elsewhere, jobs across the country are threatened. The position the Government has been putting forward for some time is that we should not simply back away from that reality and accept continuing unemployment and continuing deterioration as a part of Canadian reality, as did the old Liberal Government. Instead, what we must do is try to put in place a better system. That is why we are undertaking trade negotiations with the United States and with the world to try to restore Canada's reputation as a competitive and effective international trader.

POSSIBLE EXPORT TAX—ALLOCATION OF REVENUES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. It has been confirmed that the Department of Finance has now drafted legislation for an export tax. Will the Minister of Finance assure us that moneys raised from such an export tax from each province will be returned in full to the provinces so that revenues raised in the Province of British Columbia and others will in fact be returned to them to reinvest in the forest industry?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, as the Secretary of State for External Affairs has said, these discussions are proceeding with the Governments of the provinces. When there is an announcement to make to that effect, to answer the question put by the Hon. Member, the announcement will be made.

REQUEST THAT REVENUES BE PAID TO PROVINCES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is for the Minister of Finance. Since legislation has been drafted and the imposition of such a tax is now inevitable, does the Minister of Finance not think it would be appropriate, to alleviate any fears and concerns in the producing provinces, for him to stand in his place to guarantee to Canadians, particularly to Canadian forest producers, that any revenues raised from such an export tax will in fact be returned to the province from which the money is derived?

• (1430)

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member knows well that there is very, very close discussion and consultation going on between the federal Government and the provincial Governments. That is the intent of the proposed legislation and the precise means by which that will be done will be discussed and announced in due course.

* * *

HOUSE OF COMMONS

PRESENCE IN GALLERY OF VICE-PRESIDENT OF ECUADOR

Mr. Speaker: I wish to draw to the attention of Members the presence in the gallery of His Excellency Blasco Penaherrera Padilla, Vice-President of Ecuador.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

CANADA POST CORPORATION

USE OF MAIL SUPERBOXES—SECURITY OF PARCELS

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister responsible for Canada Post. We understand that the so-called superboxes do not provide security for parcels as they are placed together in one parcel compartment. They can be seen or taken away by anyone accessing the parcel compartment. How does the Government intend to provide security for these parcels? Would it not be a better solution to deliver parcels to Canadians at home, which is what they want?

Hon. Bernard Valcourt (Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): Mr. Speaker, it is the responsibility of Canada Post to ensure a safe system of delivery. The Government will ensure that Canada Post lives up to its obligations.

We have witnessed in recent days something happening with the supermailboxes. We are informed by Canada Post that measures have been taken to correct the situation. We are also informed that the system is safe.

Mr. Gauthier: The open-door policy.

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, it is certainly the open-door policy. How can parcels be secure? They are all bunched together in the same compartment.

[Translation]

COST OF RATIONALIZATION PROGRAM

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Mr. Speaker, the Government is about to close down 1,700 rural post offices, which means that Canada Post customers will have to go out and get their mail elsewhere.

I want to ask the Minister why the Government is cutting a service that is so essential, especially for rural areas. Why ask people in remote areas to pay the cost of the Government's rationalization program? The Conservative Government is the worst thing that could have happened to our postal services.

Hon. Bernard Valcourt (Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): Mr. Speaker, I would be tempted to answer that the worst thing that ever happened to Canadians was the previous Government.

Mr. Speaker, the issue raised by the Hon. Member is before a committee of the House, and that is where these issues can be discussed.

Contrary to recent reports, however, I have been informed by Canada Post that it will not be closing down 1,700 post offices across the country. In fact, together with the private sector, Canada Post will be opening more facilities over the next ten years. This does not mean less service, it means more service. Furthermore, business hours will be extended beyond what they are now, for the benefit of Canadians.

[English]

TRADE

UNITED STATES DUTY ON SOFTWOOD LUMBER—LAY-OFFS IN NORTHWESTERN ONTARIO

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. In northwestern Ontario we have hundreds of workers being laid off. We have plants closing in the softwood lumber industry. What hope can the Prime Minister offer to those workers that action taken by the Government will put them back to work in the same jobs they had when the lay-offs started? What action will the Government take to do that?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the action that this Government is taking on the trade front is to try to pursue an approach that has been discussed with United States Government authorities that might end the situation, first, where uncertainty prevails in the softwood lumber industry and, second, where there is a haemorrhage of money out of Canada that would otherwise stay in Canada.

The action we have taken on the economic front through a series of very courageous and effective measures introduced by my colleague, the Minister of Finance, has been to lead to the creation of in excess of 600,000 jobs in Canada since the Progressive Conservative Government was elected. We intend to continue with those policies which will bring benefit to all regions of the country.

Mr. Angus: Mr. Speaker, I can certainly tell the Minister that the people in northwestern Ontario do not want part-time jobs and part-time wages.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, the Minister has spoken a number of times about keeping money in Canada and stopping the haemorrhage. When did the Minister decide that we could not win this case?

An Hon. Member: When did he sell out?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, what we know about the case and what was agreed among all the Governments gathered at Vancouver, with the exception of the Liberal Government of Ontario—

An Hon. Member: And New Brunswick.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): —was that it would take a long, long time for us to go through all of the procedures that are available under the system now in place in the United States. During all that time Canadians are paying, paying, and paying. What we are looking for is a situation where we may be able to stop the haemorrhage out of this country of hundreds of millions of dollars and provide security for an industry.

* * *

[Translation]

REGIONAL ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

MONTREAL EAST—LOSS OF JOBS AT CANADIAN VICKERS

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the President of the Treasury Board. Monday, the Chairman of the Consultative Committee on the Development of the Montreal Area published his report. The Minister is aware that the Montreal East Survival Committee met with the Picard Committee on July 4 to ensure that the report would contain specific and concrete recommendations for saving jobs in Montreal East.

My question is this: Now that the report is published, can the President of the Treasury Board give the 450 employees of Versatile Vickers who were laid off six months ago the assurance that they will be able to get their jobs back in time for Christmas?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, first of all, I think it is clear the Hon. Member did not read the report. And he never understood exactly what the report was for. And this is also an insult to all the volunteers in the Montreal area who helped to prepare this report, which deals with the region's economic problems as a whole.

It is also obvious, by the very fact that we had a consultative committee and that there is a Cabinet committee, that we intend to take quick and effective action to restore the vitality of Montreal's economy. As we have said many times before, the Government intends to keep its promises.

REQUEST FOR PARTICULARS

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, the Minister's answer is an insult to the 4,000 workers in Montreal East who need the Government's help to get jobs.

Mr. Speaker, this report is nothing but 351 pages of mutual admiration and pious wishes. What I want to know is where the people who worked for Bombardier, Canadian Steel Wheel, Vickers and La Forge are going to find jobs in this report for Christmas and the new year? Where are they going to find recommendations to help them?

Hon. Robert de Cotret (President of the Treasury Board): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie has a very short memory. Monday afternoon, I was with the Hon. Member at the official opening of Kemtec, which has created 200 new jobs directly and 75 jobs indirectly in Montreal East. Where were you? Don't you remember?

[English]

AGRICULTURE

ASSISTANCE FOR GRAIN PRODUCERS

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance. It has been eight weeks since the Prime Minister announced a billion dollar assistance program for grain producers. Farmers now believe that delay has nothing to do with the method of payment but everything to do with the fact that the Finance Department has not been able to come up with the money. Would the Minister of Finance assure us today that he has the billion dollars in this year's fiscal accounts and that the pay-out will be made to the farmers as a price support program and not as a loan program?

• (1440)

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the Hon. Member's continuing interest in the plight of the agricultural industry. If he were truly in touch with the farm community he would recognize that at the conclusion of our last meeting a number of challenges were issued to us. We are exploring those and doing the final calculations on the two or three requests made of us by the farm community.

PROVISION OF FUNDS

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, the grain producers would like to believe the Minister of Agriculture. They would also like to know that the money is available in this year's budget and will be paid out as a support program, not as a loan program. I direct that question to the Minister of Finance.

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member is following the exchanges in the House on the aid package he would recognize, as clearly stated in Hansard, that we ruled out two options, one being a LIFT program and the other being a loan program.

* * *

REFUGEES

DEPORTATION OF IRANIAN STUDENT FROM UNITED STATES

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Immigration. It concerns the request made by Canadians from Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, regarding the refugee application by a 25-year old Iranian student who will soon be deported by the U.S. back to Iran. This man has already tried to commit suicide rather than return to Iran where ten of his family members have been executed. He will surely face the very same fate. Therefore, why has the Minister consistently and coldly refused to allow this gentleman status in Canada? It is an issue of life or death and Canadians are prepared to sponsor this man. Why the obstacles?

Hon. Gerry Weiner (Minister of State (Immigration)): Mr. Speaker, Akbar Moatamedi is an American issue. He has lived in the U.S. for eight years. The Hon. Member and others should be making representations to the highest authorities in the U.S.

REQUEST FOR CANADIAN ACTION

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, it is ironic that the Minister gives a special immigration permit to a Hungarian spy and an individual with 20 criminal convictions, yet turns down an application by an individual who will lose his life if he returns to Iran. Why can the Minister and his Government not extend the hand of humanitarianism and compassion in order to spare this man's life? Why is it that meritorious and life or death cases cannot capture the attention and goodwill of the Minister?

Hon. Gerry Weiner (Minister of State (Immigration)): Mr. Speaker, the Americans have taken a new interest in the case. I can assure the Hon. Member that they are reviewing the case. Akbar Moatamedi is being given every opportunity to bring new information forward.

* * *

INDUSTRY

GOODYEAR LAY-OFFS IN TORONTO

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, yesterday in Toronto the Prime Minister boasted of the economic prosperity his Government has created.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: Give us the figures again.

Mr. Langdon: In view of that, what does he intend to do about the almost 3,000 Goodyear and General Motors jobs lost in Toronto in the last month which make a mockery of his words?

Hon. Bernard Valcourt (Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): Mr. Speaker, we indicated yesterday the reason why Goodyear made this decision. We indicated that this Government was willing to sit down with the company and look at its long-term plans for new investment in Canada. At this time officials of the Department are in contact with the company to see how we can minimize the impact of that decision.

REQUEST FOR GOVERNMENT INTERVENTION

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, is the Minister aware that action by the Ohio Legislature saved Goodyear jobs in that state? Will his Government effectively intervene in the same way in order to save those 1,600 jobs for the workers who will be so badly affected?

Hon. Bernard Valcourt (Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): Mr. Speaker, I will repeat that the Department is ready at any time to sit down with company officials and be as helpful as we can given the circumstances of the case.

* * *

CANADA EMPLOYMENT CENTRES

SAINT-DENIS OFFICE—NON-REFERRAL OF BLACKS FOR WATERFRONT JOBS

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment. As he knows, racial discrimination is illegal in this country by virtue of the Charter of Rights, the Canadian Human Rights Act, and the employment equity legislation passed last spring. Therefore, will he appoint an independent investigator to examine the charges that his employees in the Saint-Denis Employment Centre in Montreal have been given instructions not to refer blacks for jobs on the Montreal waterfront? Would he also tell us how many blacks are now working on the Montreal waterfront?

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Yes, Mr. Speaker, the matter raised by the Hon. Member was brought to my attention quite recently. We took immediate action to look into it and, as a result of our preliminary investigation, the supervisor involved has been suspended for the time being.

However, I think we would show fairness if we were to continue the investigation and, as soon as more definite conclusions are available and if they confirm the situation, we will certainly take the appropriate steps because, under the Employment and Immigration Act, the attendant regulations and the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, we simply cannot tolerate any kind of discrimination against anybody in this country.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER TABLE GUIDELINES GIVEN TO EMPLOYMENT CENTRES

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Will there be an independent inquiry? After the employment equity legislation was passed last April, what specific implementation guidelines were given to Canada Employment Centres? Is the Minister now prepared to table these guidelines in the House?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, employment equity provisions come under the jurisdiction of the Department of Employment and Immigration. All manpower centres and agencies covered under this legislation have been advised and provided with the necessary background information concerning the extent and meaning of the law. I should think that none of the Canada Employment Centres can pretend to be unaware of the law, because we have taken every appropriate measure with this in mind. I repeat, we simply will not condone any kind of discrimination in this country.

[English]

ANTI-DISCRIMINATION MECHANISMS

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I want to follow up on the last two questions. Information brought forward indicates that this practice is widespread in the Department across the country. Can the Minister tell the House what mechanisms he would put in place to ensure that kind of discrimination is not perpetuated?

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): First, Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to answer for the first time a question from my New Democratic Party critic. On the basis of one case singled out by the Hon. Member for Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East, I think it would be premature to conclude that such incidents are a common occurrence in this country.

I repeat that an investigation is under way. Temporary measures have been taken and, should we have any indication that a similar situation might prevail elsewhere, of course the same measures would apply in every instance.

[English]

PROTECTION OF EMPLOYEE DENOUNCING DISCRIMINATION

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, in light of what the Minister has said and the investigation we hope will follow—

[Translation]

—my supplementary is for the same Minister. Can he guarantee that the employees who denounced this racial discrimination will be protected?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, there is only one answer: absolutely!

* * *

• (1450)

[English]

ABORIGINAL RIGHTS

GOVERNMENT LAND CLAIMS POLICY

Mr. Thomas Suluk (Nunatsiaq): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. Many northern native groups, such as the Tungavik Federation of Nunavut, are anxiously awaiting a decision on a new land claims policy. Will there in fact be a new policy and, if so, when can we expect the decision?

Hon. Bill McKnight (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is certainly aware of the need for a new claims policy. It has been discussed on the initiative of my predecessor, the present Secretary of State. We will continue to reflect the contents of that task force report. In the very near future we hope to be able to present a new claims policy that will remove the log jam to development in a large part of our country and to give a final settlement to aboriginal people that will make Canadians proud of the Government.

SETTLEMENT OF LAND CLAIMS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Prime Minister. He will know that in the meeting last week with the provinces and territories, the Governments of the Yukon and Northwest Territories put the settlement of the land claims at the top of their agenda. Will the Prime Minister assure the House and, more relevantly, the native people that the Government of Canada will press forward as fast as possible to achieve a land settlement that is based very solidly on the Coolican Report?

Hon. Bill McKnight (Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development): Mr. Speaker, the answer to the question put by the Leader of the New Democratic Party is that which I just provided to another Member of the House. However, I can assure the Hon. Member that the efforts of the Government to remove the blockage not just of economic development but of justice that all Canadians want to see for aboriginal people are a priority of the Government. This will be put forward in the very near future.

* * *

PHARMACEUTICAL PRODUCTS

EFFECT OF AMENDING LEGISLATION ON PRICE OF DRUGS

Mrs. Thérèse Killens (Saint-Michel—Ahuntsic): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. The CDMA has said that the average multinational drug cost is 200 per cent to 400 per cent more than the no name equivalent. How can the Minister still deny that under his Bill dramatic price increases of 200 per cent to 400 per cent will not be commonplace?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, since 1979—seven years ago—there have been 145 new brand name drugs introduced in Canada and only one generic copy of those drugs. According to our Bill, after seven years those drugs, if manufactured in Canada by a generic, can be marketed in Canada. That is why I make the claim I do.

PRICE OF VALIUM PILLS

Mrs. Thérèse Killens (Saint-Michel—Ahuntsic): Mr. Speaker, the Minister knows that the prices of most drugs will at least double. Valium brand name pills are 3,000 per cent more expensive than a no name drug—$80 compared to $2.31. Why is he taking away the competition? Why is he selling out the sick and the old of this country?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, valium is off patent here and in the United States. The generic copies will continue on valium. Generic competition will continue to be there. It will serve the purpose that the Hon. Member is talking about. The price increases that the Hon. Member talks about are fictitious, but most important there will be 3,000 research jobs in Canada for the young scientists who are working in Canada and searching for cures to the diseases that afflict Canadians. I think the Hon. Member would be in favour of that.

* * *

APARTHEID

SOUTH AFRICA—ECONOMIC SANCTIONS—POSITION OF BRITISH COLUMBIA GOVERNMENT

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. This morning he met with the only Canadian Premier to have ignored the Canadian sanctions against South Africa and who indeed has become a collaborator with the apartheid regime. What was the outcome of that meeting in terms of attempting to change that stance of the British Columbia Government that is so offensive to so many Canadians?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, first let me dissociate myself from the language that was used by the Hon. Member. I do not think language of that kind is helpful or constructive. Second, this morning I had a conversation with Premier Vander Zalm which I think was quite helpful. I set forth to him our view of the situation in South Africa, the very great danger of explosive violence if there is not a change in policy on the part of the South African Government, as well as an indication of our encouragement at finding the private sector taking actions to an increasing degree which will increase the pressure on South African authorities. I indicated our view that it would be helpful for all aspects of government and indeed the private sector in Canada to contribute to, rather than detract from, that pressure.

REQUEST SANCTIONS BE MANDATORY

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, is it not just about time that the promise of the Prime Minister was kept, and that the present voluntary sanctions be made mandatory so that the people who listened to the Prime Minister at the United Nations will have confidence that his promises will be kept?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, we have recently heard from the President of Cameroon and the President of the Central African Republic in this country. We have heard from a variety of other people directly involved with trying to bring some resolution, hopefully peaceful resolution, to the situation in South Africa in a way that will respect human rights. All of them have been unstinting in their commendation of the policy that has been followed by this Government with respect to the situation in South Africa. We are trying to build up steadily, step by step, pressure by Governments and by the private sector to cause the South African Government to bring an end to apartheid. We think that that practical progress is more important than an excess of rhetoric.

* * *

TRADE

POSSIBLE EXPORT TAX ON LUMBER

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance. It appears that this afternoon he admitted that he was planning an export tax on lumber. I want to hear from him because, if that is so, will he draft that tax in accordance with international GATT rules? In that case it will have to apply to Canadian exports of all lumber to all countries, not limited particularly to the United States.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I can understand the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition's interest in hypothetical matters.

Mr. Axworthy: He said it.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): He said it to the Member for Kamloops—Shuswap.

Mr. Axworthy: There is nothing hypothetical. He admitted to it.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): It is difficult for me to get the attention—

Mr. Axworthy: He said it.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): If the Hon. Member for Winnipeg-Fort Garry will permit me, I will try to respond to the question.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I think Hon. Members would want to hear the Minister.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Any announcements that the Government of Canada has to make as a result of the approach that is being discussed with the United States will be made in the appropriate course. There is no point in making announcements or exciting speculation about those announcements until those events have occurred.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): We will check the "blues" on that.

EFFECT OF POSSIBLE EXPORT TAX

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I have another question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs, if he insists on answering this way. Has he not recognized that instead of merely furnishing provincial coffers by way of stumpage in the short term, if an export tax is phased in, this tax, applied to Canadian lumber world-wide, will absolutely cripple the Canadian lumber industry, particularly in the Pacific Rim?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I do not know what tax the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition is talking about, and neither does he.

MINISTER'S STATEMENT

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Finance who referred to it earlier in the Question Period when he said to the House Leader of the New Democratic Party that the purpose of the tax that his Department was considering was to ensure an equitable distribution of the benefits to the provinces. Will he tell us what tax he was talking about?

• (1500)

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, just to clarify for both the Leader of the Opposition and the Leader of the New Democratic Party, what I meant when I said "That is the intent", was the recycling. That is what I was referring to. It has been made very clear by statements by the Secretary of State for External Affairs and the Minister for International Trade that the final decision on the mechanism has not been taken.

RECYCLING OF PROCEEDS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): The Minister has put his foot into it even further. He just talked about recycling. The recycling of what? Can he explain that to the House?

An Hon. Member: Come on, Mike.

Mr. Axworthy: Where is the money coming from?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I forget which of the Hon. Member's colleagues asked the question, but the point—

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): The Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap, that's the guy.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): The Hon. Member's seatmate asked the question in the sense that were the proceeds going to be shared with the provinces. That is what I acknowledged in my answer.

Mr. Broadbent: Thank you, Michael.

* * *

INDUSTRY

FOOTWEAR IMPORT QUOTAS—REQUEST FOR REVERSAL OF POLICY

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. It concerns the Conservative Government's job elimination program in the footwear industry. A year after the quotas were imposed, quotas that the Prime Minister himself and his colleagues said were going to lower footwear prices and that we were not going to lose Canadian jobs, can he tell us why the factories in my riding have had two-thirds of their employees laid off? One thousand people in this industry have lost their jobs and footwear prices have increased by 12 per cent over one year. Is it not time to admit that this policy was a failure and revert back to the old Liberal policy which was far better than the policy of this Government?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I take it that the Hon. Member is putting a question with regard to the specific application of a policy with respect to particular industries in his constituency. In the absence of the Minister for International Trade I will take that question as notice and we will try to get back to the Hon. Member with specific information on that very specific question.

[Translation]

REQUEST THAT MINISTER MEET CANADIAN SHOE INDUSTRY REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): I wish to direct a supplementary question to the Prime Minister, Mr. Speaker. Four times since the beginning of July, Canadian shoe industry representatives have sought to meet with Department officials and the Minister for International Trade, but to no avail. Will the Prime Minister tell his Cabinet colleague to meet immediately with these representatives, or is he waiting for that industry to collapse before he steps in?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Minister for International Trade I can assure the Hon. Member that the Minister and the Department officials are ever prepared to meet with representatives of the industries involved. Should he have specific requests he might convey them to me and I will see if I can arrange these meetings.

* * *

[English]

POINT OF ORDER

MINISTER'S ANSWER DURING QUESTION PERIOD

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I have a point of order arising out of answers made in this House by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). On October 8, in Hansard at page 192, I asked the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney):

> Will the Prime Minister explain why the Minister of Finance drafted a softwood lumber export tax and what its terms of application are going to be?

The Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) answered:

> Mr. Speaker, I can only assume that the Hon. Member is dreaming.

I then asked at page 193:

> —will the Prime Minister assure this House that, should the export tax be put in place, those dollars will be returned to the forest sector for job retraining, market diversification, and reforestation?

The Secretary of State for External Affairs then said, and this is my point of order:

> Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is speaking of a tax which he has invented, and he is now asking us to comment on its implementation. We do not propose to implement his inventions.

I think it is clear now that the Minister of Finance—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I have listened to the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton) on his point of order. I think it is quite clear that that is not a point of order, it is a matter for debate.

Mr. Murphy: Mr. Speaker, yesterday as reported at page 1501 of Hansard the Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young) quoted from a letter—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Could I ask the Hon. Member if he is rising on a point of order or question of privilege?

Mr. Murphy: Point of order.

Mr. Speaker: I should advise the House that the Chair has notice of a question of privilege. If it pleases the House I think we should proceed to it. I recognize the Hon. Member for Etobicoke North (Mr. Pennock). I will hear other Hon. Members after that.

PRIVILEGE

INVESTIGATIVE INDEPENDENCE OF STANDING COMMITTEES

Mr. Bob Pennock (Etobicoke North): Mr. Speaker, today I raise a question of privilege which affects every Hon. Member because it directly impacts on the conduct of our committee system and in particular on the spirit and intent of parliamentary reform. Although I will deal briefly with specifics, I use them only as an example because I am more concerned about the global implications for all committees.

On November 12, 1986 the Chairman, on behalf of all Members of the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture, wrote to the Auditor General seeking answers to nine questions regarding the Auditor General's most recent audit of the CBC, which was referred to the committee by the Minister. Rather than have the Auditor General appear before the committee, it was felt that writing a letter would save valuable time and money.

In responding to this direct request, the Auditor General sent the information to the Minister of Communications (Miss MacDonald) and the President of the CBC to obtain, by his own admission, their concurrence before releasing the information to the Standing Committee. This information was intended to be used in developing a specific line of questioning for witnesses. Any direction the committee might have taken with respect to this information has now been altered by the actions of the Auditor General. Would a lawyer supply a witness with a list of questions before he or she takes the stand?

This action goes against the spirit and intent of parliamentary reform because it limits the effectiveness of the investigative capacity of the Standing Committee. This is a dangerous precedent. I believe that as a servant of Parliament the Auditor General should respect the independence of the Standing Committees. I feel he had no right to vet this information through the office of the Minister of Communications and the president of a Crown corporation before the members of the Standing Committee had a chance to view the information. These are questions he would no doubt have answered if we had called him to appear as a witness. I feel he infringed on my privilege as an Hon. Member to have the capacity to privately seek information from a servant of Parliament.

In closing, my concern is that this action could establish a precedent which would ultimately reduce the independence of Standing Committees. Your decision in this matter, Mr. Speaker, is of critical importance. Parliamentary reform is still in its infancy. It is up to this House to ensure that the new authority and independence of the Standing Committees is respected.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Etobicoke North (Mr. Pennock) has raised a matter of obvious concern. Other Hon. Members in recent weeks have risen on matters arising out of committee and I believe the Chair has had an opportunity to comment on the fact that the committees working under the reform procedures are breaking new ground. The Chair takes quite seriously the representations which have been submitted to the Chair and the representations made by the Hon. Member for Etobicoke North. I can advise the Hon. Member that I will carefully consider his representations and report back to the House.

I said I would hear the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy) on a point of order.

* * *

POINT OF ORDER

REQUEST FOR TABLING OF LETTER

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, yesterday in the House the Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young) quoted a letter from the Hon. Member for Kent (Mr. Hardey). By the rules of the House I believe it is necessary for that Hon. Member to table the document with the House. I think it is very important.

Mr. Speaker: I do not believe the Hon. Member about whom the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy) refers is in the House at the moment. The Chair will take notice of the request and perhaps return to the Chamber on the matter.

Mr. Young: I have no difficulty at all in tabling the letter, Mr. Speaker, if that is what you desire.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member has made his point and, as I said, the Chair will consider it and come back to the House at an appropriate time.

• (1510)

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

BANKS

PROPOSED SALE OF BANK OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)): Mr. Speaker, we will be seeking leave to introduce a special Bill this afternoon, something which I gather has been provided for by special agreement among all three Parties for consideration this afternoon.

Hon. Members have no doubt been aware for some time about media reports concerning the difficulties being faced by the Bank of British Columbia. Attention recently has been focused on the efforts of the bank to find a buyer to assume its assets and liabilities and to put the operation back on a strong financial footing. I am grateful to you, Mr. Speaker, and to Members on all sides of the House for being able to bring this motion forward.

Recently, the search for a buyer intensified as the financial condition of the bank continued to weaken as a result of the erosion of its capital base. This erosion was caused by non-performing loans. For the past several weeks, at the request of the bank, the federal and British Columbia Governments have been assisting in the effort to find a buyer to carry on the business of the bank. This effort has been successful. I am speaking today because the bank has requested the assistance of the House now in facilitating the sale of its operations. Our role is to facilitate this sale.

In responding to this request the Government has been guided by four basic considerations. First, such a transaction should ensure the long-term financial viability of the ongoing institution.

[Translation]

Second, such a transaction should provide to the fullest extent possible for the needs of the depositors, other creditors, borrowers and shareholders.

[English]

Further, and this is most important, it should result in a strong regionally-based institution to serve the needs of the western-most part of our country. Finally, this should be done without the expenditure of federal public funds as part of the purchase agreement. In short, the buyer of the bank should be able to inject new capital, maintain the confidence of depositors, assume its assets and liabilities and keep the bank operating as a going concern.

During the search for a buyer a few institutions indicated some degree of interest in the Bank of British Columbia. However, in the opinion of the management and the board of the bank, only one proposal adequately meets the needs of depositors, other creditors, borrowers and shareholders. It has been put forward by the Hongkong Bank of Canada, a subsidiary of the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation. The board of directors of the Bank of British Columbia met in special session to give its formal approval to the offer and to request that the Government propose legislation to Parliament to facilitate the sale.

The Government has determined that this purchase fully meets the basic considerations that I have outlined, the four objectives to which I have spoken. The purchaser is a subsidiary of one of the world's largest banks. It has the resources to maintain and strengthen the business of the Bank of British Columbia, and it has pledged to do so. In fact, it will be obligated to do so if we agree to this transaction. Moreover, the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation is firmly based in the Pacific Rim, as is the Bank of British Columbia. As many Hon. Members are aware, Premier Vander Zalm has publicly indicated his preference for a Pacific Rim bank. Furthermore, he has endorsed this transaction with enthusiasm, as has the Government.

The management of the Bank of British Columbia has advised the Government that this transaction is necessary for its survival, and the Government agrees with that assessment. The rapidly worsening condition of the bank has been closely monitored by the Office of the Inspector General of Banks.

I would like to quote from the press release issued by the Bank of British Columbia just a few moments ago which contains the details of the transaction. It states:

> The board of directors of the Bank of British Columbia believes that it is essential for BBC to enter into a transaction if liquidation is to be avoided and further believes that no other transaction can be identified that would be as beneficial as the proposed transaction with Hongkong Bank of Canada.

[Translation]

Liquidation would not be in the interests of the Bank's 1900 employees, its depositors, other creditors, borrowers and shareholders. It would not be in the interests of the Province of British Columbia and it would not be in the interests of the Canadian banking system.

[English]

As part of the initiative to ensure that the business of the bank continues, the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation has agreed to extend the sum of $200 million to help recapitalize the bank. I remind Hon. Members that the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation is funded entirely from premiums paid by deposit-taking institutions. There will be no impact on the Government's deficit.

The only realistic alternative, as the bank's board has indicated, would be for the bank to shut its doors. The cost of paying the insured depositors in this situation would be considerably greater than $200 million. Consistent with its statutory authority, the board of directors of CDIC has determined that this payment will minimize future losses for the corporation. The board of the CDIC must determine in matters of this sort whether it will pay less than it ordinarily would through liquidation unless it is determined very clearly.

I would like to explain briefly the role the House is being asked to play in facilitating this transaction. Ordinarily we would say that this is a transaction which has been done, why are we taking the time of the House in this matter? Sections 273 to 275 of the Bank Act provide that the sale of bank assets and liabilities be approved at a shareholders' meeting 28 days after formal notice is given of the terms of sale. What has happened is that the Government has been requested by the board of directors of the Bank of British Columbia to avoid the uncertainty that would be created by such a delay and thereby to minimize disruption for depositors and borrowers. Accordingly, Parliament is being asked to enact the necessary legislation to enable the transaction to be completed on a timely basis.

The legislation recognizes the interests of shareholders. It provides for a shareholders' meeting with 14 days' notice to approve the consideration received for the sale of the bank's assets. Or, if shareholders so choose, when they have their meeting they can choose to have an independent assessor appointed to evaluate the value of their shares immediately prior to the time of sale. This evaluation by the assessor would be binding.

• (1520)

This Bill facilitates a solution that is in the interests of depositors and other creditors, borrowers and shareholders of the Bank of British Columbia. It is in the interests of the Province of British Columbia and very much in the interests of the Canadian banking system.

[Translation]

I ask Hon. Members to adopt this Bill immediately.

[English]

I urge immediate and unanimous approval. This piece of legislation will ensure the safety we need for the depositors, other creditors, borrowers, employees and branches of that bank in the province. It will also ensure a window to the Pacific Rim, to the connections and network of the Pacific Rim that the financial system of British Columbia has long wanted. I am very pleased to bring this Bill before the House and I thank Hon. Members on all sides for making this possible.

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, once again, in a hasty, spontaneous, disorganized way, the Government has raised an issue of major importance to the Canadian banking system. It is quite clear from the way Ministerial benches have proceeded that the Government is in disarray once again on the crucial and vital issue of Canadian banking.

The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) was courteous enough to call me this morning and advise me of what he had in mind. Before that, those of us representing constituencies in British Columbia had some understanding of the difficulty in which the Bank found itself. This action shows how badly the Government has managed the rebuilding of confidence in our financial institutions. We have been waiting for two years for the proposed reform package for financial institutions. We still do not have it. The Canadian public is still waiting. Of course, another stop-gap, ad hoc measure is being taken to rescue a bank at the last moment.

Taking you back a bit in history, Mr. Speaker, the Bank of British Columbia was at the leading edge of the aspirations of the people of the province and western Canada to have their own financial institutions. They wanted to do things their own way at their own speed and to have credit authorizations given by British Columbians who lived in the province close to where the people seeking credit lived. It was created in part at the behest of the late W. A. C. Bennett, then Premier of the Province of British Columbia. Despite political differences, he was certainly one of the great institution builders of British Columbia.

I recall that Premier Bennett came personally to Ottawa in 1967 to ask the Government to incorporate the Bank of British Columbia. He sat in the Prime Minister's gallery while the Bill was being debated. He personally attended the opening of the first branch of the Bank and he summoned all British Columbians to give it their full support.

The Bank of British Columbia has played an important role in bringing about the creation of small and medium-sized businesses in British Columbia and, indeed, throughout western Canada. It proved that in British Columbia the best decisions for small and medium-sized businesses were made closer to the businesses and operations concerned. That is why the regional banking system was so welcomed in western Canada.

At the beginning of 1985 the Bank of British Columbia was the most conservatively financed financial institution of its size in the country. It had a leverage ratio about comparable to the average ratio of the leading banks in Canada. It had very little foreign exposure and, of course, it had a substantial market share in British Columbia. Many of the problems it is having today originated with the collapse of the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northland Bank.

You know our views on the collapse of those two banks, Mr. Speaker. The banks were very badly mismanaged to begin with but the way the Government handled that crisis led to the current instability in the banking system and later effected the forced merger of the Continental Bank with Lloyd's of London and now the proposed arrangement between the Hongkong Bank and the Bank of British Columbia.

The Government made two grave errors. When the Minister of Finance and the predecessor of the Minister of State for Finance brought the bail-out package to Parliament, we asked the Ministers and indeed the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) whether or not the bail-out package was sufficient. We were assured that it was, but it turned out that the Ministers and officials had not bothered to look at the books of the Canadian Commercial Bank. The arrangement was insufficient. On the basis of what the Minister of Finance, the Governor of the Bank and the Minister of State for Finance's predecessor said, people continued to deposit money in those banks as well as in the Continental Bank and the Bank of British Columbia.

A year ago September, it was found that the package was indeed inadequate and the Government had misrepresented the viability and solvency of those two banks to Parliament and the Canadian people. As a result of that lack of confidence, both the Continental Bank and the Bank of British Columbia have had repeated difficulties in persuading other banks, large corporations and credit unions to maintain deposits. I can understand that. The teasurer of a major organization, a town council or a municipality has a fiduciary role to play. He must protect the money of his shareholders or taxpayers. Therefore, both banks, the Continental Bank and the Bank of British Columbia, had a difficult time persuading other banks and depositors to stay with them.

We blamed the Government on these two issues. First it did not know what it was doing when it brought in the original bail-out package for the Canadian Commercial Bank. Second, it misrepresented the facts to the Canadian people and Parliament between March and September. Mr. Justice Estey confirmed that the bail-out was an amateur night effort and that it was insufficient. He confirmed as well that the two banks had not been solvent.

We are now being asked to provide a hurried solution in the form of a sale of assets of the Bank of British Columbia to the Hongkong Bank of Canada, a Schedule B bank. The parent bank is one of the world's largest and best managed banks. The headquarters of the subsidiary of the Bank is in Vancouver and thus we understand that the executive direction of the Bank of B.C. division of the new bank will be maintained in Vancouver. This provides at least some solace for the regional aspirations of British Columbians. There will at least be one institution of its size with a head office in British Columbia.

The employees of the Bank of British Columbia, some 1,400 in number, will, I am advised, have continuing employment assured, and I hope the Minister will assure us of this during the course of the debate. I am also told that the 39 branches of the Bank will continue to be open for the time being. The Bill will obviously be of some assistance to the employees and will assure some 200,000 depositors of the safety of their funds.

I am not unmindful of the fact that the CDIC, an agent of the Government of Canada, is declaring a loss of some $200 million in connection with the Bank of B.C. It is our understanding from what the Minister of State for Finance has told us that if this Bill is not passed today or tomorrow the shareholders themselves stand to lose whatever net worth is today available to them. Frankly, although we want to hear more about it during the course of debate, this is probably the only reason that I personally would agree to a Bill of this kind.

The Bill limits drastically and in a Draconian fashion the rights of shareholders under the Bank Act. The Hon. Minister is frowning, but he knows about the delays that are necessarily incurred in sending out notices telling shareholders that they have the right to approve of or disagree with any merger or deal like this. From what I understand the Minister to say, under this Bill the shareholders will be limited to either approving or disapproving of the amount of the deal, not the deal itself. That is a very drastic limitation of the rights of shareholders, and we will require proof here in the House that that is necessary.

[Translation]

Before the Bill is adopted by the House, Mr. Speaker, I think we should insist that the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs be allowed to proceed with a full review, as it did in the case of the Continental Bank and Lloyds, review, with witnesses and officers of the two banks appearing before the Committee, so that we as Members of this House will have the assurance that there was indeed an emergency and a pressing need to have this Bill adopted.

• (1530)

[English]

It is deplorable that the Government should only this morning spring a request for parliamentary action in these circumstances. It is not a compliment to Parliament.

[Translation]

It is without a doubt an admission of incompetence on the part of the Government and it is one more example of the state of complete disarray of the Government's policies, especially where the banks are concerned, and as I said at the beginning of my speech, it reflects the utter chaos caused by the Government originally in the case of the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northlands Bank several months ago in this House.

[English]

However, I believe in the interests of British Columbians as depositors, employees, and shareholders, that we are compelled to accept the Government's representation. As to the need for haste, we are going to hold the Government responsible in demonstrating to us and to the country the need for that urgency, the need for a restricted debate, the need for the restriction on the right of the shareholders of the bank. We will want that confirmed in a hearing of the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs after this debate is concluded.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, we come to this issue understanding the urgency—if the representations of the Government can be accepted at face value—but still stung by the experience that we had in this House in March, 1985 when the Minister of Finance and the then Minister of State for Finance brought us a bail-out package for the Canadian Commercial Bank. We were misled. The Government did not know what it was doing. It had not searched the books. Parliament was taken for a ride. We do not underestimate the gravity of the situation. We do not underestimate what the Minister of Finance told me personally, and what the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin) told Parliament this afternoon. The burden of proof is clearly on the Government. We are relying on the Government.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, this particular project is brought forward because of the situation of the Bank of British Columbia. It is a regional bank. Members of my Party, and particularly my colleagues who come from western Canada, are very much concerned about the continuing need for regional banking in western Canada. Whether that will be achieved with this particular proposed takeover by the Hongkong Bank is another matter. Within the time that is available, which is not long, and for reasons that I will come to shortly, essentially on this side of the House we are not in a position to judge whether or not the Government has taken the correct course of action.

I have some substantial misgivings over what the Government is prepared to do. However, having only been brought into the Government's confidence on this issue at 9.15 this morning, our role is simply to decide whether to adopt this measure in the course of the next day or two, or to string it out and let it take a week or two weeks, whichever it might take, if the parliamentary devices available to us were used, or if the matter was to be referred to the Commons finance committee for a hearing prior to passage some time early next week.

It has been represented to me and to my Party that delay at this time would or could lead to difficulties for the Bank of British Columbia in terms of its deposit base, and that that in turn would affect the viability of the bank in terms of its ability to do business in British Columbia and Alberta under the new ownership. I accept that that argument has some validity. Therefore, since the only solution that the Government has been prepared to put forward has been this particular takeover, we are in the position of either saying that we are going to resist it, although we are not in a position to put forward an alternative because we do not have the facts or the number of seats in the House to make that work, or alternatively to simply accept the Government's decision.

Let us be very clear that this is a Government decision. The only role that Parliament can play is to decide whether we wish to make this decision and allow this decision to become law by tomorrow evening, or to string this out for another few days. I have had occasion to speak to people in financial circles in Vancouver, including people from the Vancouver City Savings Credit Union, which was in very serious discussions with the Bank of British Columbia a few days ago. It is disappointed at being excluded from doing a deal with the Bank of British Columbia, largely because of a policy decision by this Government. It, too, indicates that if it is going to be done at all, it is better to do it in a couple of days than to allow the agony to continue.

Let us be very clear that the Government says in the statement of the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin) that it is important to retain a strong and regionally based institution to serve the needs of the most western part of Canada. It is questionable whether that will be what is achieved by this particular measure.

I do know that the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation, using what are essentially public funds, will advance $200 million to the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank, the parent company of the Hongkong Bank of Canada. The parent Hongkong Bank will then turn around and give $60 million to the subsidiary, and that in turn will be passed on to the Bank of British Columbia in return for transferring substantially all of its assets and liabilities.

In other words, we Canadians, if I can be simple about it, are paying $200 million to a foreign institution so that they can take over the control of a $3 billion Canadian bank. That is essentially what the Government is telling us is the best solution that was available for this important regional institution in British Columbia, an institution which was founded with high hopes some 10 years ago, and which has extended service to many people in western Canada over the course of the last couple of years.

The Government is also telling us that the asset base of the Bank of British Columbia was sound, according to the Inspector General of Banks and a special team review, in October, 1985. At that time the bank portfolio was studied in detail. The Inspector General told us that it was okay, in fact that loan loss experience was going down. The Government is now telling us that there is an over-all erosion of those assets which, by my calculation, is somewhere in the nature of $300 million to $350 million. This is enough to wipe out the equity of both the preferred and the ordinary shareholders of the bank, and then to contribute to a loss of some $150 million, or thereabouts.

Nonetheless, the Government is stating that in its wisdom and opinion the shareholders and the preferred shareholders of the Bank of British Columbia should be repaid to the extent—not a lot, I agree—of $60 million or $75 million. That money essentially is going to come from the taxpayers, at least for the next six or seven years.

The Minister's statement is that this payment to the Hongkong Bank, so it can take over our Canadian bank, is being made without the expenditure of federal public funds as part of the purchase arrangements. I have had occasion to look at the annual report of the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation. At the end of 1985 this institution was in the hole to the extent of $1.25 billion. It was paying that off at the rate of about $200 million a year through an increase in premiums, which went through the House a few months ago. The $200 million which is now being advanced from the Consolidated Revenue Fund, that is, from the taxpayers to CDIC to go to the Hongkong Bank, will not, therefore, be repaid until 1993, assuming that the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation has no further losses to contend with—no other institutions go bust or require its assistance over the course of the next six or seven years.

I recognize that the situation is difficult. Financial markets are changing very rapidly. But I wish to point out that the Government could have had a regional solution with control in the head office fully under the control of British Columbians by means of assistance to the Vancouver City Savings Credit Union proposal. Apparently the Government of British Columbia was not prepared to go along with that particular measure, and neither was the federal Government. The Government could have kept control of the Bank of British Columbia's business in Canada, because there are at least a couple of Schedule A banks, the Bank of Nova Scotia and the Toronto-Dominion Bank, which are not heavily represented in their branch network in western Canada, and from which there would have been a good fit if discussions on a merger or takeover of assets had been encouraged by the Government, rather than discouraged or ignored. Instead, the Government has chosen a foreign solution which will cost everyone who gets bank interest over the course of the next year or so $1 for every $1,000 of investment. If I may put it in very practical terms, that will be the cost.

• (1540)

I hope we will receive a commitment from the Government that the matter will go before the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs after the Bill has receivd passage tomorrow. For the reasons I have given, we have agreed, although we have questions about the Bill, that it should at least come to a conclusion tomorrow. However, I believe that the issue should not be forgotten because the Bill itself goes to third reading and is then given approval by the Senate and Royal Assent.

This is ad hoc banking policy. The Government has had two years to implement a policy on financial institutions. It has not done so. Canadians are now paying the price. They are paying the price in terms of the $1 billion or so we advanced in respect of the failure of two western banks the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northland Bank. Now they are paying an additional price. One way or another, as taxpayers, depositors, or customers of Canadian banks, every Canadian will participate in the cost of $200 million which is now being advanced to take control of the Bank of British Columbia. It will take control out of British Columbia hands, out of regional hands, out of Canadian hands, and put it into the hands of the Hongkong Bank.

* * *

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, there have been discussions with the House Leaders of the opposition Parties with respect to the business for the rest of today and tomorrow.

I have a series of four motions which I should like to put. Perhaps I could seek leave of the House to introduce them one at a time.

The first one concerns the Standing Committee on External Affairs and International Trade, and I seek unanimous consent to put the motion.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Does the Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council have unanimous consent of the House to introduce the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

* * *

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS AND INTERNATIONAL TRADE

AUTHORIZATION OF STANDING COMMITTEE TO TRAVEL

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I move:

That the Standing Committee on External Affairs and International Trade be authorized to travel to Africa to visit Tanzania, Ethiopia, and Senegal before December 15, 1986, to study specific projects which are recipients of Canadian aid.

[Translation]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Does the Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council (Mr. Mazankowski) have the unanimous consent of the House to introduce his motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House has heard the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

* * *

[English]

CHILD CARE

PROPOSED MOTION FOR CONCURRENCE IN REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the second motion concerns the proceedings of the Special Committee on Child Care. I would seek leave of the House to present a motion based upon the discussions which have already been held.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Does the Deputy Prime Minister have unanimous consent to move the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I move:

That, notwithstanding any standing or special order of the House, the House now proceed to motions, Mr. Speaker call the motion of Mrs. Martin, Chairman of the Special Committee on Child Care, and Mr. Speaker then recognize, for comments of 10 minutes each, on the motion to concur in the first report of the Special Committee on Child Care, presented to the House on Wednesday, November 19, 1986, the following Members: Mrs. Martin, Madame Pépin, Ms. Mitchell; and that Mr. Speaker then forthwith put the question for the concurrence.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

* * *

CHILD CARE

CONCURRENCE IN FIRST REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE

Mrs. Shirley Martin (Lincoln) moved:

Motions

That the first report of the Special Committee on Child Care, presented to the House on Wednesday, November 19, be concurred in.

She said: Mr. Speaker, in requesting concurrence in the report of the Special Committee on Child Care, I am asking the House for the opportunity to table a quality document reflecting the evidenced needs of Canadian children and parents, while making responsible suggestions for government action through the range of components which comprise the child care delivery system in Canada.

Our committee travelled to every province and territory in Canada to listen to the needs and recommendations of Canadians. The response was impressive. Over 2,000 people were heard and almost 900 written submissions were received. In addition, existing research in the field required investigation, and new research was required. As we reviewed our initial report, we determined that to rush the preparation of this document would be a great disservice to the people of Canada.

I know that Hon. Members of both opposition Parties join with me in their concerns that the report provide the best available research and recommendations. Therefore, in the interest of all Canadians, especially the children of Canada, I respectfully ask that this extension be granted with the approval of all Hon. Members of the House.

[Translation]

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, unfortunately, I cannot accept a proposal by the Chairman of the Special Committee on Child Care for an extension for the Committee's report. In fact I find it very distressing. When we consider the urgent need for daycare centres, asking for an extension of several months does seem rather strange. I might have been agreeable to an extension of several weeks, but I think that in the circumstances, several months is out of the question.

All we have to do is go back to the reports of the various commissions of inquiry, including the Bird Commission and the Report on Equality in Employment, where the situation is described and identified as a priority, because something must be done for children, not just for children from zero to five but also for children from six to fourteen, especially when we consider that 54 per cent of our children are alone after school.

We have had a parliamentary committee that travelled across the country and heard a number of briefs, many from parents who were unanimous in urging the Government to take action and do so very soon.

I read news reports on the First Ministers' Conference last week, when the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) said quite clearly that it was very important for women to have employment equity and that he felt employment equity started with daycare. I would like to remind him—of course daycare centres are important for women—but he said that daycare was a women's problem, and I would like to say here to the Prime Minister that daycare is a problem for society and for our families, not just for women.

He also said that he intended to start consultations with the provincial governments. I am all in favour of consultations with the provincial governments, but since 1984 when the Conservative Government and this Prime Minister came to power, all we have seen has been consultations and discussions. I think that it is important for the Government to act and to stop consulting because this is a priority issue. Each child is entitled to daycare services.

It is rather shocking to see that the only result we have had is still more consultation. It is difficult to believe that the Prime Minister really wants to take action.

Our Committee voted to request an emergency fund of $150 million in the next Budget in January 1987, because the Prime Minister has said several times since his Government has been in power that the 1987 Budget would provide the allocations needed for child care programs. The report would by then have been tabled in the House. The Prime Minister also said in Vancouver that the funds would be allocated. If the Conservative Government is really serious about child care, it will allocate at least $150 million as an emergency fund to be used from February 1987 until the report of the Parliamentary Commission is implemented, perhaps one year from now.

In addition, the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) has asked for a Social Affairs Ministers' Conference in January 1987. If the Government wants to show its commitment to child care, one of the priorities at this conference should be to examine this issue because the only way we can know whether the Government wants to give priority to child care services will be to see it do it with our own eyes.

We have been hearing about daycare centres for two years, but this should not remain at the level of lip service or be simply an exercise in public relations. If the Government is truly serious, the first thing to do is to prepare the report quickly and the second is to make sure that the amounts allocated in the next budget are large enough to provide an emergency fund as well as daycare services for our children. Moreover, the Minister of National Health and Welfare should make this a priority issue at this meeting next January.

• (1550)

[English]

Ms. Margaret Mitchell (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, there is no question at all that adequate funding of quality child care services is one of the most important issues facing the Government, and especially the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson).

I am very concerned that the report of the Special Committee on Child Care will be delayed to March 21, long after the 1987 budget has been prepared and presented. We would have preferred to have extended the reporting date to January 21 so as to include recommendations for funding in the upcoming budget. This delay leaves one to suspect that despite the Prime Minister's (Mr. Mulroney) lip service again last week in Vancouver, the federal Government does not intend to introduce federal initiatives to deal with the well-documented child care emergency in the coming year. Obviously the Government prefers to delay such action until just before the next election when the Government can say: "Look what we are doing for children and families". The Government wants to leave it to provincial Governments to initiate action in the child care field knowing that this will be delayed for several years.

We opposed this motion in committee, Mr. Speaker. We do not approve of a delay unless Government Members are prepared to support a motion which I presented to the committee for emergency federal funding for child care services. The motion I presented last week reads:

> That the committee request the Minister of Finance to include in the upcoming budget a child care fund of up to $150 million to be used as an emergency fund for stabilizing and upgrading child care services until the committee report is tabled and implemented.

This is a very reasonable request. I hate to use the word, but it is a very conservative request. As a matter of fact, the New Democratic Party for several years has advocated federal expenditures in direct grants of up to $320 million. We estimate that this amount is needed to upgrade the quality of existing day care services to help reduce fees so that that care is affordable, and to create an additional 25,000 new child care spaces. This money would also cover a development fund to assist poorer regions and native communities which have a deplorable lack of child care services.

I expect a positive answer to the motion I presented, which I am glad to say was seconded by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Outremont (Mrs. Pepin) of the Official Opposition. As a result of the presentation, several questions have been raised in relation to the request. First, is there a child care emergency? Second, funding should be based on sound research and planning.

Speaking quickly to the emergency, there is no question that there is a national case of child neglect in Canada. This was documented extensively in the Chile Care Committee report and has been repeated over and over again in public hearings held across Canada. The lives and well being of children are at risk in an informal babysitting arrangement because working parents simply have no other alternative. There is no licenced monitored child care in many communities, and if there is, most parents cannot afford it.

One working mother told us she had to use nine different babysitters in the first year of her child's life. She had to work because her family was living on poverty income. Many children have no care at all or are left in the care of older siblings.

We were told repeatedly of concerns about latch-key children who go home to an empty house and who have unsupervised situations during the summer months because there is no affordable child care.

Many day care centres have questionable standards. Children are being placed in situations where care is not up to the standard it should be. Centres are forced to charge fees that are too high. They pay very low wages to care givers because child care centres are grossly underfunded.

The only way centres can improve their standard of care is with direct government grants to help defray overhead costs, to reduce fees and to pay adequate wages. Dedicated care givers will continue to subsidize child care across the country. Many of these people are burning out and leaving the field because the federal Government refuses to act in this year's budget. Many long hours at minimum wages are expected of care givers. This refutes the statements made by the Prime Minister in Vancouver about equality. The Government is condoning the exploitation of women workers by refusing adequate funding for child care services in the upcoming year.

Many communities have no licensed child care services at all. Children of farm families are left alone in unsafe conditions. There are no services for children in northern and isolated communities and native communities. Shift workers and seasonal workers need flexible hour care. They have none. Children are often removed from their homes in native communities because there is no emergency care and no support of family services. This is a tragedy.

Funding should be based on a sound plan, of course. I agree, Mr. Speaker. A team of researchers and experts spent several years documenting the needs resulting in the Cooke report. They came up with an adequate plan advocating good faith grants from the federal Government that would stabilize existing services and establish a floor of good quality services until provinces can develop a comprehensive, affordable system of quality child care right across Canada. The Cooke report also proposed that federal grants be available as conditional grants to every province and territory on condition that funds be forwarded to licensed non-profit centres to provide operating and capital funds until cost sharing arrangements can be worked out with the provinces.

The Cooke report also proposed a formula. The plans are there. The research is there, Mr. Speaker. All we need is the Government will to start in 1987 with some up-front funding to show its intentions are right. We are tired of platitudes and words from the Prime Minister and others which really mean nothing unless there are some funds available to do something about this drastic emergency.

I am surprised that the Minister responsible for the Status of women yesterday in committee would say to me: "If it was just a matter of direct grants, Margaret, your committee would come out with a one-line report." That shows how little that Minister knows about the situation. There have been 15 years of reports that documented the needs. Obviously the Minister has not studied the Cooke report which provides an adequate funding mechanism and formula that could be adopted in the upcoming budget.

I repeat to this House and the Government that the need for adequate funding of child care services is urgent. Children are being damaged, dedicated care givers are being exploited and working parents are being subjected to unnecessary stress and worry while the Government apparently is refusing to take action in providing any funds in this year's budget.

The Prime Minister's promises last week are a laugh. He talked about equality. Obviously he wants the women's vote. I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, he is not going to get it unless he puts some money where his mouth is. We are appalled at his lack of understanding. The main need in the whole field of child care is for some out front federal funding and it must be in this year's budget. That is why we do not want to delay any longer. We want to go forward with a proposal for emergency funding in this year's budget and we want to get our committee report out just as quickly as possible.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I wish to inform the House that because of the ministerial statement this day's sitting will be extended by 30 minutes.

* * *

BANK OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

CONSIDERATION OF BILL C-27

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Further to previous motions, I seek leave to deal with another motion, which is a motion dealing with the introduction of a Bill to facilitate the continuation of the business of the Bank of British Columbia. If I could have leave to do that, I would so move.

• (1600)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Mazankowski: The motion reads as follows:

That, notwithstanding any standing or special order of this House;

that, when the House reaches Government Orders this day, the House shall proceed directly to second reading and reference to a Committee of the Whole of a Bill entitled "an Act to facilitate the continuation of the business of the Bank of British Columbia"; that, on Thursday, November 27, 1986, the first order of business under Government Orders shall be the continuation of debate on the above-mentioned Bill; that, not later than 4:45 o'clock p.m. on that day, Mr. Speaker shall interrupt any proceedings then before the House and shall put forthwith and successively, without any further debate or amendment, all questions necessary to dispose of the remaining stages of the said Bill; that, at the ordinary daily hour of adjournment on Thursday, November 27, 1986, if necessary, Mr. Speaker shall suspend the sitting to the call of the Chair for the purpose of giving Royal Assent to the said Bill.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I seek leave of the House to introduce a motion concerning the business of the House, that we proceed directly to Orders of the Day to consider this Bill.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, I seek a bit of clarification with respect to the business tomorrow. Does the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) or any of his colleagues contemplate taking any action under the heading of Motions tomorrow before we reach Government Orders?

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to our discussions earlier this day, I would indicate that the purpose of this order is to move on the Bill concerning continuation of the business of the Bank of British Columbia in all stages. There will be no motions and hopefully no petitions or any stalling tactics so we can get through the Bill in all stages and give all Hon. Members an opportunity to debate it in full.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to indicate our intention to co-operate fully in this very serious matter. I just want it to be perfectly clear, and I seek some assurance from the Government House Leader, that anything dealing directly or indirectly with Bill C-22, either today or tomorrow, will not be considered by the Government.

Mr. Mazankowski: I will repeat again that both Hon. Members know there are discussions going on in an attempt to seek an all-party agreement as to time. As long as those discussions are going on, then in the spirit of goodwill we will certainly co-operate in that regard.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Does the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) have unanimous consent of the House to move the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I move:

That, the House now proceed to Introduction of Bills, for introduction and first reading of a Bill by the Minister of State (Finance), following which the House proceed directly to Orders of the Day.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

BANK OF BRITISH COLUMBIA BUSINESS CONTINUATION ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)) moved that Bill C-27, an Act to facilitate the continuation of the business of the Bank of British Columbia, be now read the first time and be printed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the first time and ordered to be printed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: When shall the Bill be read a second time?

Some Hon. Members: Now.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Point of order, Mr. Speaker. I wonder if the Government has printed copies of the Bill, even if it does not know the Bill number. Perhaps they could be distributed?

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, I thought the respective critics had copies of the Bill. There are others available and they are being distributed now.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

BANK OF BRITISH COLUMBIA BUSINESS CONTINUATION ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)) moved that Bill C-27, an Act to facilitate the continuation of the business of the Bank of British Columbia, be read the second time and referred to Committee of the Whole.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I will be brief. I just want to make a few comments in reply to some of the questions posed a few minutes ago.

First, the urgency of this legislation has been explained. I agree with the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) who identified precisely what this Bill will do. It does not prevent shareholders from meeting to determine compensation. It will allow that to happen. He understood that clearly. The Bill also deals with winding up and so on which I can explain when it goes to committee.

The issue of financial institution reform has been a major priority of this Government. It has been decades since we have had financial institution reform. We propose to bring forward a comprehensive set of reforms very shortly. The Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition expressed his concern that we would be making ad hoc decisions forever unless this reform takes place. The new framework will be put in place very shortly, but until then, of course, we operate within the existing framework. It is my hope we can bring it in very shortly and that it will cover essentially both parts of the financial institution regime, that being inspection and supervision. It will address all of the problems that Mr. Justice Estey referred to which concern Canadians regarding the liability of inspection and supervision of deposit-taking institutions, insurance and trust companies. Nothing has been done in this regard for literally decades and I am very proud to have the opportunity to bring in major changes which will further strengthen the Canadian financial system. I will not speak further about that because the time will come for that.

The second part of our task over the next few months is to come to terms with the rules of the game, so to speak, as they affect ownership and the function of financial institutions. As we all know, financial institutions would like to broaden their base of activity. What should be the parameters? Who should be able to own a financial institution? How big should they be? Those questions have been examined in very great detail through a host of studies, foremost of which would be in the standing committee of this House. That committee had important things to say on these subjects. As well, the Senate dealt with it, and there have been important studies at the provincial level. Then we have the Estey report. I would say that never has a subject been better researched or prepared for than financial institution reform. Therefore we are ready for reform and ready to bring in the package. I will be consulting with provincial Ministers on this issue on Sunday and Monday. That is one of the very last steps we must take in order to bring the package forward. I hope all Members will agree that this package will greatly strengthen the system and lay down rules so that business plans can be made and the activities of our financial sector can grow and prosper. I believe depositors will feel more secure and borrowers will find a more competitive environment. We will be internationally competitive, rather than a financial non-competitive island unto ourselves. This massive new structure will be in place shortly.

• (1610)

In my view, the Bill before us is a symbol of the confidence that foreign banking institutions show toward this country. Our banking system must be extremely strong to attract this kind of interest. While I share with my colleagues a concern about too much foreign ownership, the transaction we are being asked to facilitate today constitutes only approximately 1 per cent of the Canadian banking system. I believe that Schedule B banks will move from 10.7 per cent to 11.8 per cent of the total assets of the Canadian banking system, so that this is not a massive foreign invasion of the Canadian banking system.

When the Bank Act was changed in 1980, we explicitly wanted to have foreign institutions admitted to Canada. This would allow reciprocal rights for our financial institutions abroad because they cannot operate effectively unless there is an opportunity for foreign institutions here. Second, we wanted the competition and the skills that foreign entry can sometimes bring. What better example of that than this legislation?

In my opinion, this legislation is the quintessential example of the importance of having Schedule B banks at certain times because it allows the skills, contacts and the network that exists in the Pacific Rim with one of the largest banks in the world to be linked with the Bank of British Columbia.

Let me make it clear that banks that are constituted as Schedule B banks are not branches. They are separate corporations with their own directors and a Canadian head office. It is important to note that it is a Canadian operation. The Bank of British Columbia will have its head office here and the majority of directors will be Canadian. Its branches and employees will remain in place. By giving it this transfusion, I believe we have found a way not only to save an institution that was wounded, perhaps fatally, it will be stronger and more robust than ever. That is the purpose of the Bill.

Furthermore, this legislation will add a presence in the Pacific Rim that British Columbia has never had. I know that Hon. Members will want to deal with the importance of this to Canada and the western part of our country. This Bill represents an act of confidence and makes proper use of the provisions of the Bank Act.

Let me deal with how the operations of the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation are affected by this transaction. The CDIC is an institution with its own board, and operates on premiums it receives from member institutions. Its decision on whether to make a transfusion of $200 million is based on the consideration of whether it will ultimately pay less through this transfusion than if the Bank of British Columbia were liquidated. That is the decision that the CDIC is making, and it has been constituted to make those kinds of judgments.

There is concern that we are asked to make last minute decisions. Decisions on any transactions such as this often must be made quickly. Quite frankly, this is an opportunity for the CDIC to minimize its obligations while allowing the bank to grow and prosper.

Mr. Cassidy: You protest too much. It is hardly an independent institution.

Mr. Hockin: I will explain. If the Bank of British Columbia were to be wound down the CDIC would have to make approximately $1.3 billion in pay-outs to insured depositors. Furthermore, upon liquidation, lower recovery values to the CDIC would have to be anticipated. Therefore, this solution is most appropriate from the perspective of the CDIC.

It is quite true that the Governor of the Bank of Canada and the Deputy Minister of Finance are on the board of the CDIC. We are in constant contact with the CDIC when it makes decisions. However, it is an independent board—

Mr. Cassidy: It is not.

Mr. Hockin: It has to make judgments about what is best for those who pay the premiums.

Mr. Cassidy: The Deputy Minister of Finance is independent?

Mr. Hockin: The contributors of premiums are the ones paying for the CDIC.

Mr. Cassidy: They have no say.

Mr. Hockin: Yes, they do. Let me make it clear that the CDIC is constituted to make these judgments not when banks collapse but to prevent them from collapsing. In this situation, this transfusion will allow this institution to become healthy and more robust than ever.

I believe it has been alleged that the Government is paying $200 million. While the CDIC receives advances from the Government, they are paid back with interest. It is important to understand that the financial operations of the CDIC are not a burden to the cash requirements of the Government of Canada in the long run.

Mr. Gauthier: If we wait long enough.

Mr. Hockin: This is one example of the many cash inputs from the Government of Canada that must be paid back.

I am grateful to all Members that we could introduce this legislation today. It makes it possible for the Province of British Columbia to have a linkage with the Pacific Rim that did not exist before. It will allow this important institution to continue and even grow stronger, given the additional skills and contacts it will have through this international linkage. I commend this Bill and I thank Hon. Members for letting us bring it forward.

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, we in the Official Opposition have agreed with some reluctance to the Government's request to consider and pass this legislation immediately. Our reluctance was overcome by our wish to safeguard the jobs involved and to avoid disrupting the regional economy. However, we take strong exception to the habit the Government has developed of ad hoc regulation and legislation in the financial services industry. It is ad hoc because, despite the promises in two Throne Speeches, we have had no reform legislation on financial institutions. The Government continues to operate in a policy vacuum.

All of us remember only too well when, on March 25, 1985, the former Minister of State for Finance announced the Government's decision to bail out the Canadian Commercial Bank and asked for the co-operation of the House in passing the enabling legislation immediately. We agreed and found out later that the information we were given was totally inaccurate. The Government gave guarantees that with the bail-out package the Canadian Commercial Bank could be viable. We found later that those guarantees were worthless. The Government did not know and did not use information which was available.

• (1620)

When the committee on finance examined the situation, after the passage of the legislation, it became clear that the loan assets of the Canadian Commercial Bank had not been accurately valued and that there were many problems with its administration. These were problems of which the Government should have been aware but was not. There was a Memorandum of Understanding signed but there was a 30-day period before that memorandum was confirmed. In that 30-day period, the Government made no serious examination of the loan assets, even though the other banks participating in the bail-out had requested this be done.

Therefore, we in the official Opposition agreed to give passage to a Bill in the spring of 1985 because we believed the Government. We accepted the undertakings we were given, but later we found these undertakings were worth nothing.

Even up to mid-August of 1985, the Government was still saying that with the bail-out package it had arranged, the Canadian Commercial Bank was viable. Yet, as we know, by September 1 it was in liquidation.

Perhaps we should be appreciative of the fact that the Government is not seeking that sort of arrangement this time. However, we would not be responsible members of the Opposition if we did not insist on better information from the Government than we were given a year and a half ago. We intend to hold the Government responsible for the accuracy of information it brings forward in this debate. Our passing of this Bill is conditional on our receiving an assurance that the matter will receive a very thorough examination afterward by the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs.

After the bail-out of the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northland Bank depositors last year, there was the takeover of Canada Trust, a financial institution, the fourth largest holder of personal savings accounts in Canada, by the industrial giant, Imasco Limited. This was a clear situation of a financial institution coming under the control of a non-financial group, which is something the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs had recommended against in its report on the Government's Green Paper on the Regulation of Financial Institutions. However, the Government has not responded to that report, nor indeed has it responded to any of the stack of reports on financial deregulation. Therefore, when the Canada Trust-Imasco deal came up, the Government had no legislation in place to deal with it, with the less than satisfactory result that the deal was approved but the new owner was asked to give certain undertakings. Again, we have an ad hoc solution.

On October 2 this year, there was the announcement that the Government had approved a sale of assets enabling the British owned Lloyd's Bank to take over the Continental Bank which is, or was, a Canadian bank. Again, we in the official Opposition directed our criticism not at the particular transaction but at the Government, because yet again it had put itself in the position of having to make important and precedent setting decisions involving financial institutions without the benefit of a policy framework. That is no way to govern.

As I have said before on a number of occasions in this House, the process of reform of financial institutions' legislation began with the previous Government and bogged down with the present Government at a time when the need for it is becoming clearer and clearer. The pace of change in the financial services industry is not slackening, it is accelerating. The Government must get a handle on this to ensure that these changes work in the best interests of Canadians.

Almost a year and a half ago the Government made a hasty and ill-considered decision to bail out a bank. Less than six months later that bank and another small regional bank had failed amid well founded charges of Government mismanagement and misinformation. Since then it has become more and more obvious that the Government has failed in its responsibility to restore stability and confidence to the banking industry, and that small Canadian regional banks have been the major casualties.

Look at the evidence, Mr. Speaker. First, the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northland Bank failed and are now in liquidation. Then the dominos began to topple. Morguard Bank was taken over by Security Pacific Bank of Canada, a subsidiary of a U.S. based parent. The Mercantile Bank was taken over by the Canadian owned National Bank, or Banque national. Last month the Continental Bank was taken over by British-owned Lloyds Bank. Now we have the Bank of British Columbia going in with the Hongkong Bank. What is happening to the regional banks under this Government? It seems that they are disappearing one by one in the fall-out from that ill-fated attempt to save the Canadian Commercial Bank, a bank which, as Mr. Justice Estey has confirmed, was already dead on its feet.

The Bank of British Columbia, on the other hand, was by all accounts a healthy institution before the CCB bail-out raised fears and anxieties which spread to all small regional banks and financial institutions. As my leader said earlier, in January 1985 the leverage ratio of the Bank of British Columbia stood at 13 as compared to an industry average of over 20. It was in sound condition but, faced with the Government's poor handling of affairs at the Canadian Commercial Bank, it just could not recover the investor and depositor confidence on which financial institutions depend for their life and health.

The press release issued today by the Bank of British Columbia does indeed point the finger fairly clearly at the relationship between that bank's difficulties and the Government's actions in relation to the Canadian Commercial Bank. There is a reference in the news release to the fact that the Bank of British Columbia has been canvassing for possible partners or successors with the ability to carry on the business of the Bank of British Columbia. It states:

> The canvass was initiated as a matter of prudent foresight in late 1985 when the board of directors of the BBC concluded that BBC, like a number of other smaller Canadian banks, would have difficulty recovering from the loss of confidence that followed the events then taking place in the banking system and that the time for recovery might be unacceptably long.

Therefore, we have a bank, which by all accounts was sound, well managed, put into a difficult situation where it cannot survive by the actions of the Government.

• (1630)

A much smaller institution in British Columbia also collapsed as a result of the Government's ill-advised and uncoordinated attempts to deal with the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northland Bank. I refer to the British Columbia Teachers' Investment and Housing Cooperative. This was an organization apparently in good shape up until the collapse of the Canadian Commercial Bank when some members of the organization became anxious. There was a run on deposits which caused the organization to fold. This was a particularly difficult situation because so many of the deposits were not covered by deposit insurance. Those of us who have received very poignant letters from retired teachers who have seen their whole retirement security disappear certainly feel that the Government has a lot to answer for.

I would now like to return to the terms of the takeover of the Bank of British Columbia. This bank will be taken over by the Hongkong Bank, which is one of the world's largest. I believe it is the fifteenth largest bank in the world. It is well managed with its Canadian operations headquartered in British Columbia. Since the Bank of British Columbia has to have a merger it has undoubtedly found an acceptable partner. My criticisms are not in any way directed at the Hongkong Bank but at the Government which has again put Parliament in a situation of having to make a last minute decision in a policy vacuum.

For two years the Ministers have been dreaming and studying but not bringing forward clear decisions. The Government has not been willing to deal with the question of ownership. The Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin) tells us that legislation will be forthcoming within a few months. We might feel more assured by that statement if we had not heard it so often. If the recommendations of the finance committee with respect to ownership had been adopted then the Bank of British Columbia in its canvas would have had a much broader base. There would have been many other choices. Similarly, the Continental Bank would have had many other choices. However, in a policy vacuum the Government makes some type of ad hoc decision.

We will not be opposing the legislation, as I said earlier, because on the face of it this is a fair solution. Some 1,400 staff members of the Bank of British Columbia are guaranteed that their employment will continue. I believe there are about 39 branches of the bank which are expected to continue in operation. The depositors will be protected. However, the shareholders will certainly be losing something. It seems as though this solution is the lesser of the two evils for them.

There is a proposed $200 million infusion from the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation, which infusion will be financed by a levy on the financial institutions concerned. This, of course, means that somewhere along the line a consumer will be paying something for it. None of this would have been necessary if it were not for the Government's ill-advised actions 18 months ago and all the chaos which flowed from it.

Our leader spoke of the fact that the Bill removes from shareholders the right of approval. They have a limited right to approve the sale; but the basic right to assess the quality of the decision making is being removed from them. I am very uneasy about using Parliament for this type of measure. Again, I reluctantly recognize that it is probably the best decision that could be taken in the circumstances.

I repeat, if the Government had acted earlier with legislation we would not be so circumscribed, and nor would the Bank of British Columbia be so circumscribed in this situation. It would have had a broader range of options if it wished to have a merger or sale. If the Government had acted differently, I am convinced we would not have had such an erosion of confidence in the economy which caused the Bank of British Columbia's difficulties in the first place.

I conclude by pointing out that we on this side of the House will want fuller information from the Government with respect to this matter, more than can be had in a short debate. We will want to have committee hearings after the event. We will want an opportunity to assess the accuracy of the information provided to us today.

I can hardly say strongly enough that it is more than time for the Government to proceed with legislation. Again today the Minister of State for Finance promised us legislation "soon" on the aspects of supervision and regulation. There was proposed legislation of that type on the Order Paper before the House recessed in July. The Government chose not to proceed with it. However, the all-important and more fundamental issue of ownership has not been addressed. While the Minister of State tells us it will be addressed in the next few months, all I can say is that we have heard that before. We have been promised new legislation in two Speeches from the Throne and in innumerable statements in the House. That leaves us to ask: When, oh when?

I sincerely hope that we have seen the last of this type of ad hoc solution and that the Government will come forward with some serious attempts to define policy for financial institutions before we run out of financial institutions.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of comments to make on this Bill. As I said in response to the Minister's statement, we come to this debate in sorrow, regret and in a great deal of puzzlement because of the lack of information upon which we have to act. I understand that there are some difficulties, because in dealing with financial institutions a great many of the discussions between Government and those institutions, of necessity, and for reasons of confidentiality, have to be carried out in secret. However, we were called in today and asked to react constructively and positively to the Government's proposal that legislation be enacted which would, within a day or so, wipe out the provisions of the Bank Act for the protection of shareholders. We are being asked to allow this particular transfer of assets to take place, in the course of which yet another of our chartered Schedule A banks will be put under foreign ownership.

In response to the Minister I expressed my reservations and my concerns about this move. I have to say that the information which I have so far been able to find indicates that there is substantial reason to believe that there were other options available to the Government with respect to the future of the Bank of British Columbia which, for various reasons, the Government, having a major say in this, chose not to follow.

• (1640)

The legislation before us, Bill C-27, allows changes to the Bank Act which essentially override the provisions for the approval of shareholders of the transfer of assets from the Bank of British Columbia to the Hongkong Bank of Canada and presumably its parent company in Hong Kong. The shareholders will not be able to ruminate over this deal and come up with a decision in a month's time as it is the advice of the Director of the Bank of British Columbia, advice which has been accepted by the Department of Finance, that that would create uncertainty and that that uncertainty would be damaging to this important regional institution. Therefore, if the deal is to be consummated, it should be consummated now. The wedding night should be tomorrow night. We should not wait for another month before putting this Bill through. A period of engagement would be destabilizing for the bank.

An arbitration process is put forward in the Bill. I do not think we know how that will work because it is virtually without precedent. The shareholders have been told that the only thing they can do in a couple of weeks' time is to decide whether to accept the offer which will be in trust from the Hongkong Bank or, in the hopes of getting more, to put the matter to arbitration. They will receive some $60 million to $75 million, I am not exactly sure of the total amount, and after preferred shareholders are paid off, as we were told this morning by the Minister, shareholders will receive about 75 cents per share for common shares. Incidentally, as recently as a year or two ago, those shares sold for some $6 per share. In a few weeks' time, the shareholders are likely simply to take the money they have and run with it.

All of the evidence before us shows that in a liquidation mode, the bank is not solvent. It may be, as has been argued by Department of Finance officials, that as an operating bank it was solvent. This is a matter about which we have no information. While I have asked in the corridors for some background information about the situation, for any evaluations made available to the Department of Finance and for other kinds of information about the options, that information has not yet been forthcoming.

Perhaps I could say a word about the process. The House of Commons has moved into a new era and I think now we must go beyond the view that the government of the day and the civil servants serving the government of the day need only provide information which supports the publicly announced decision of the Government and that no other information will be made available.

I have a number of misgivings about this particular deal. I have had a very short time to come to grips with exactly what has happened. I have had the opportunity to talk to one or two people from Vancouver and to have my research staff do some work. However, I do not know what information was availble to the Government and the only information I have is that the Government has said that this was a judgment call and we have to trust it.

The fact is that we have trusted the Government before by allowing legislation to come to third reading without unduly blocking it and we have been deceived and dismayed by the results again and again. The Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson) has commented on the bail-out of the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northland Bank. At the Estey Commission and at hearings of the House of Commons Finance Committee with which I was involved from time to time, we have heard of a sorry story of regulation. The Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin) has just talked to us in rosy terms about how on the one hand the Bank of British Columbia was terminally ill and how on the other hand it would become robust and walking through the takeover by the Hongkong Bank. He has also suggested that this takeover will give British Columbia a presence in financial circles around the Pacific Rim. That suggestion, I submit, may prove to be somewhat naive. It is like saying that Canada has a presence in the world automotive market because of General Motors of Canada, a subsidiary of General Motors of the United States. Everyone knows that that is not true and that while General Motors is a productive corporation which provides much employment and has a relatively good investment record, it has next to no influence on the world-wide or American operations of its parent company in the United States.

The Bank of British Columbia, or whatever it is to be called under its new ownership, will have assets of $2 billion or $3 billion and will be part of a banking empire which stretches around the world and has particular emphasis in Australia, the United Kingdom and the Far East and assets of over $50 billion. It is an international trading bank. The Bank of British Columbia has been devoted to lending to small and medium-sized businesses. It has a network of some 39 branches in the Lower Mainland and throughout British Columbia with only one or two branches left in Alberta since the downsizing that took place a few months ago. Will the Bank of British Columbia with 3 per cent or 4 per cent of the assets of the Hongkong Bank group really have the kind of leverage it will need to influence the operations of that group or will it be in the same situation as General Motors of Canada? I could cite many other Canadian subsidiaries of American companies with far less influence, a good example of that being Goodyear Canada which has just been forced to close its plant in Toronto, creating the lost of 1,500 jobs, because of corporate manoeuvring involving takeovers on Wall Street which have affected the parent company in the United States.

This is a very serious question. The Government has been looking for positive arguments to justify a measure which is difficult to justify, which at best is regrettable and which at worst may in fact be an avoidable loss of control of yet another important regional financial institution. The Government has tried to put the best face on it but I really think it exaggerates the case a bit too much according to what the Minister of State for Finance said a few moments ago.

The Minister of State also suggested that the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation was somehow acting independently in reaching a decision as to what should be done about this particular case on its injured list. I cannot believe that he can say that after looking at the composition of the Board of Directors of the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation. The Board of Directors consists of the Governor of the Bank of Canada, the Deputy Minister of Finance, the Superintendent of Insurance and the Inspector General of Banks. I presume that the Chairman works full time with the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Does the Deputy Minister of Finance act independently when he puts on his hat as a member of the board or is he not in fact carrying out government policy? Does the Superintendent of Insurance not carry out government policy when carrying out his duties on the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation Board? The same is true of the Inspector General of Banks. I am not sure if he has been replaced since Mr. Kennett offered his retirement just a few months ago.

The CDIC collects premium incomes from banks and other financial institutions but there are no representatives of the banks that provide that premium income on the board. There is no indication that the board has an independent view. It is simply a quasi autonomous government organization but nonetheless it is still a government organization.

If the CDIC was acting in place of the Department of Finance during the course of these proceedings, it is wrong for the Government to try to claim that it was somehow acting at arm's length. In fact, when I asked what had happened, I was told that the Department of Finance acted in this particular measure as a facilitator. The statement made by the Minister of State today would indicate that that was in fact the case.

It would appear that the operation of the Bank of British Columbia began to turn rather more sour sometime in the summer or fall of 1986. As a consequence, its quest for a merger or a takeover partner intensified. What we do not know and, therefore, this is one of the reasons why this is really a matter for judgment, as far as the Government is concerned, is under what circumstances that search for a merger partner took place.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I am wondering whether or not the Government paved the way for merger discussions between the National Bank of Canada, which operates mainly in the Province of Quebec, and the Bank of British Columbia.

Here are two Schedule A chartered banks which do not compete with one another since the National Bank does business in eastern Canada whereas the Bank of British Columbia deals almost exclusively within provincial boundaries.

So was there any possibility of these two banks merging or, when they did entertain such a possibility, did the National Bank know that the federal Government was quite prepared to provide $200 million one way or another to help the Bank of British Columbia get back on an even keel, to make sure it would continue its banking operations in western Canada?

In the discussions with the Vancouver City Savings Bank it was made quite clear that an injection of about $200 million was to be expected just to make sure the merger of the two banks would put both institutions on the right track.

• (1650)

[English]

But what I am asking, Mr. Speaker, is if the National Bank, for example, was aware of the possibility of getting $200 million in financing to make a merger possible? What about the Bank of Nova Scotia? What about the Toronto-Dominion Bank? If the Government was prepared to come in with legislation and to ask the House to legislate in order to expedite this particular deal, then was it possible that there was a trust company somewhere in western Canada, or elsewhere in Canada, that wished to enter into an arrangement with the Bank of British Columbia, and which would have done so had it been aware that the Government was prepared to bring legislation before the House of Commons?

I know that in the case of the Continental Bank when it was considering a merger with Lloyd's Bank, which is a Schedule B bank, it shied away from that particular solution on the grounds that it thought that legislation would take too long. Therefore, it chose a transfer of assets. It was able to do so with the consent of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and then of the Governor in Council in a way which effectively evaded any form of parliamentary scrutiny.

But in this particular case the Government was prepared, as apparently it was not prepared for Continental, actually to bring legislation into the House of Commons. It puts us in the Opposition into a very difficult situation. We finally have to say, "Look, you guys have chosen to take this particular course of action. We are going to have to go along with you and let you have your Bill because of the impact upon depositors and the institution if this is allowed to drag for a period of time". This is not real accountability to Parliament. This is just a debate of a couple of days. Unless overnight there is a groundswell of anger and outrage over the fact that yet another Canadian bank is being sold to foreign interests, we are in a situation where, by agreeing to allow all matters to come to a vote at 4.45 p.m. tomorrow, we have essentially agreed to allow Parliament to be defanged and have no effective power to force the Government to back off from this particular proposal.

We do not have enough information, Mr. Speaker. All we can do is simply go along with the Government when it says, "Trust us".

I look at the list of banks which have disappeared from this country over the last couple of years, Mercantile, CCB, Northland, and now the Bank of British Columbia. There was another small one, I believe.

Mr. Hockin: It hasn't disappeared.

Mr. Cassidy: Of course, it's disappeared. The Hongkong Bank is coming into its place. Continental has disappeared, it is no longer a Canadian bank.

Mr. Hockin: It's keeping the branches.

Mr. Cassidy: The branches will be there, but it will be under another proprietorship. I am not sure if the Bank of British Columbia will keep its present name, or whether it will become the Bank of British Columbia (Hongkong). I am not sure. But, for example, the Continental Bank, which had built up a great deal of goodwill in terms of its name, is now Lloyd's Bank of Canada. It is no longer the Continental Bank. I am not sure of the arrangements. All I am saying is that this Government which is dedicated to maintaining the corporate sector and maintaining free enterprise, has presided over a tremendous disappearance of Canadian banks over the last few years. The Government has not functioned to try to keep those important institutions in the hands of Canadians. Let us be very clear about that. We are spending $200 million. It is coming out of my pocket and out of the pockets of the Member for Joliette (Mr. La Salle), and all of the other Members here, and every Canadian one way or the other from premiums and from taxes. That money will be paid to the Bank of Hongkong so that they in turn can turn around and buy this bank. That is exactly what is happening, of course it is coming from taxes.

Mr. Hockin: It comes from premiums.

Mr. Cassidy: It is not coming from premiums. There is no money available from premiums, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of State for Finance is interrupting me, Mr. Speaker. He says it is coming from premiums. Let me read the figures. The Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation is currently in the hole, according to its last annual report, to the tune of $1.25 billion. With the increase in its premiums to three times the former rate, it will pay that off sometime in the next six or seven years, assuming that there are no further losses. After that, it can then get around to paying the $200 million which it will owe as a consequence of this particular infusion of capital into the Hongkong Bank.

Now, if I can continue—and I say this to the Minister of State for Finance, who seems to be quite worked up about this situation—in addition, over that period of time, the Canada

Deposit Insurance Corporation will have to pay interest on the money that it is currently borrowing to the Consolidated Revenue Fund. Borrowing $200 million dollars at 10 per cent per annum, and keeping it for six years until it is repaid, means that the CDIC will have to find an additional $125 million in interest for the money which is being advanced to the Hongkong Bank. The Minister nods his head. I am glad I have his agreement finally.

The point I am trying to make, Mr. Speaker, is that whether it is $200 million or $300 million, that is an awful lot of money. The CDIC, if it is going to get out from under this particular liability, will likely want to increase its premium rate yet again. The directors, all of whom are appointed by the Government and are high government officials, will turn around and will say to the Minister of State for Finance, "Look, we need to increase our premium rate again". Right now we pay through taxes or through interest on the national debt, or whatever it is, for money that is being advanced. Sooner or later we, who are customers of the banks, and we cannot help but be, and I speak for all Canadians, will have to pay for this particular reinjection of capital into the Hongkong Bank. One way or the other we are paying. Right now, I suggest the Minister is being quite specious when he states in his statement that one of his goals is to do all of this without the expenditure of public funds as part of the purchase arrangement.

I raised this question when it came to the Continental Bank. We were told that the sale of the Continental Bank was good for the shareholders because they got more dollars than if the Continental Bank had merged with a Canadian Schedule A bank. We were told it was good for the depositors because they had the backing of Lloyd's Bank which is one of the biggest and wealthiest banks in the world. We were told that it was good for the lenders because they had this source to all types of new capital. We were told that it was good for the employees because there would not be any downsizing of the bank. What we were not told was that in the meantime a substantial chunk of the financial industry in Canada was passing under foreign control. The Minister has suggested that only 1 per cent of Canadian banking assets are going under foreign control as a result of this particular deal. But it was 2.5 per cent with Lloyd's, it is 1 per cent with this particular deal. I am not sure what will come next. But that is a substantial shift in control in the matter of a couple of months. It shows no sign of coming to an end. In fact, I suspect that the Government will very shortly come to us and say that the 16 per cent limit on foreign banking assets in Canada will have to be increased, because all the Schedule B banks are getting too close to the limit, and so we will have to increase it.

• (1700)

I am not sure where all that leads us. However, I can say that there has not been nearly as vigorous a drive by the Government to see whether there were Canadian solutions.

I talked with officials of the Department of Finance today. Essentially I asked them what was really going on. They said that by going with the Bank of Hongkong, by paying $200 million for Hongkong to buy our bank, we minimize the risk and we minimize uncertainty as far as the Treasury or the CDIC is concerned. The Minister cannot have it both ways. If he is trying to minimize risk to the Bank of Canada, he cannot argue at the same time that the CDIC is not the Government of Canada. Also I was told that if a Canadian solution had been pursued, there would have been greater risk to CDIC.

I find the information before us is in fact contradictory. The Bank of British Columbia was given a clean bill of health by a special inspection team of the Inspector General just 13 months ago. In its release today the Bank of British Columbia indicated that in the event of liquidation, the shareholders might come out without anything and that there might be some loss to uninsured depositors. That would suggest, according to the records of the Bank of British Columbia, that in liquidation there would be no net loss to the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation.

The Minister of State or the Government may argue that there are public policy reasons, even if that were the case, for the deal to go through in the form in which it is now proposed. Nonetheless, it suggests at the very least that there is a very substantial difference in perception between the people who know best the business of the Bank of British Columbia and the Government of Canada. The Government is saying that there will be a net loss of some $300 million or $400 million of which $200 million will have to be taken up by means of the CDIC infusion of capital. I am not sure what is the situation.

The economic situation in British Columbia has not changed that appreciably. It was pretty bad a year ago and it is pretty bad today. It is not as though there has been a sudden new and sharp downturn in the economy of British Columbia over the course of the last period of time. The Bank of B.C. says that while there might be a net loss of uninsured depositors, it is not suggesting that it will go further than that. On the other hand, the Government says that it is going an awful lot further than that.

One question must be asked—who is right? While taxpayers, either as taxpayers or as premium payers, are putting up $200 million, is it fair that the shareholders in a bank which is essentially without net worth or net assets should walk away with $60 million or $75 million? I ask that question. I cannot give an answer to it. I do not have the information from the Government. Is it in fact that it is in the form of a bribe from the CDIC so that shareholders will shut up and not make waves in terms of legal action which might impede the particular deal?

Mr. Hockin: It has net worth as a going concern.

Mr. Cassidy: I hear the Minister of State. We are being told at the same time that the bank was finished as a going concern, if not this month, next month or the month thereafter.

They cannot have it both ways. If the bank is to be finished in a couple of months without either a merger or a takeover, the moment it became known, the bank would be finished—and the Minister knows enough about finance to know it—because banking rests so much on confidence.

Also the Bank of British Columbia indicated that no organization was identified with which a transaction on a going concern basis would have been feasible. I have suggested a few, but it was suggested to me that the Government of British Columbia did not want to see an eastern bank take over control of the Bank of B.C. In its view it was better to have Hongkong than eastern Canada. That is questionable. I do not necessarily want to come down on either side of that, but I suggest a better solution—better a B.C. solution than any other.

I am very disturbed that the proposed merger of the Vancouver City Savings Credit Union and the Bank of British Columbia was stymied. I want to find out why. This is one reason I trust the matter will in fact go to the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs. In fact, the Minister of State has assured me that he will use his best offices—I think that was the essence of our discussion—to ensure that the matter is raised before the standing committee. Two and a half weeks ago negotiations between Vancity and the Bank of British Columbia were going well. If it took place, it would triple the size of Vancity from $1.5 billion in assets to $4 billion. It would take Vancity from 15 per cent of the British Columbia market, where it was behind the Royal Bank and the Bank of Commerce in terms of deposits, to a point where it would become the largest financial institution in British Columbia. If I may say so, the Government is putting up a red herring in suggesting that the problem was that the Bank of B.C. would become a trust company. The problem was making the necessary legislative arrangements, because it was a provincial institution, in order to ensure that the long-term merger could take place.

Frankly I have not had enough time to establish exactly what was in mind. Within a very short period of time it was intended that the Bank of British Columbia would become a kind of co-operative bank as a consequence of the merger with Vancity. The trust company solution would ensure that the Bank of B.C. could continue to serve its customers and depositors over the period of time in which that took place. As we are seeing today, when there is a political will and when there is co-operation from the opposition Parties, it is possible to put new arrangements in place very quickly. That is one of the attributes of the parliamentary system.

The problem was not between Vancity and the Bank of B.C., according to the information I have. It was the fact that the Government of British Columbia backed away from suggestions it become involved in order to ensure that there was a B.C. based regional bank. That was Premier Vander Zalm who made a number of bold promises during the course of the election campaign. When it came down to putting some money where his mouth was, in the form of debentures which would carry interest and would have been repaid, he backed away.

When it came to the role of the federal Government, it was simply asked to have CDIC take over a portion of the debt of the Bank of B.C. It was soft debt or questionable debt. Since the shareholders would begin by absorbing their losses, it was very unlikely that it would have come up to $200 million. The net cost to the federal Government would have been the same or less as this particular solution. The net benefit to B.C. would have been an institution which remained a British Columbia institution.

Since 1982 there has been no increase in loans from the big five chartered banks in British Columbia. In other words, they have not been doing the job of putting money raised in deposits back into the province. They have increased their deposits in B.C. by $10 billion since 1982, but they are not putting money back into the economy of British Columbia. While we talk with reason about the need for a regional banking institution in British Columbia or in western Canada, there is also a responsibility on the part of chartered banks to do their job and not to suck dry financial assets from western Canada in order to lend them abroad or to bring them into Ontario or central Canada. That has been the complaint of British Columbians for a long time. I say to my hon. friends from British Columbia that I speak as a native of B.C. who was born in that province in 1937 and as someone who retains a certain attachment to the province even though I was moved by my parents at a somewhat early age.

Mr. St. Germain: I did not know what it was.

Mr. Cassidy: I hear the Hon. Member.

An Hon. Member: Maybe you should run there.

Mr. Cassidy: I will see what my constituents have to say about that.

Another matter I should like to raise is that obviously the Bank of British Columbia could not make up that shortfall in deposits on its own. There is an over-all problem in terms of banking policy toward British Columbia in which the Government since 1984 could have and should have become involved but did not.

We do not know if there is a job guarantee from the Bank of Hongkong. I note there is no reference to it in its statement. We do not know what kind of bank or business plan it has. The Government says that it does not know what is the business plan. In other words, they are buying on the reputation of the Bank of Hongkong, not on specific commitments to Canada. The Hongkong Bank is an international trading bank. I suspect one of the reasons the Government has bought this solution is that it believes that it will somehow encourage the desire to make Vancouver an international financial centre.

• (1710)

I will have some words to say at some other time about the proposed tax exemption being discussed. Most people who are experts in the banking system say that whatever the political rights or wrongs of the proposal, it is unlikely to bring banking business to Canada that would not otherwise have come here. Will an international trading bank with business on four or five continents want to continue to provide loans of $200,000 to $2 million to motel operators, hardware store operators, outfitters, tourist operators and that kind of thing in the interior of British Columbia? Is that possible or will the Hongkong Bank in its new role as the owner of the Bank of British Columbia decide that that is not the strategic direction the Bank should follow?

I was looking for a list of the bank's branches in the interior of British Columbia, but unfortunately I do not have it. But from Hong Kong to Kamloops, from Hong Kong to Lillooet, from Hong Kong to Port Alberni, is there a real fusion of interest that will allow branches in those areas to continue to be in operation, or will we see a further pruning of the Bank of British Columbia in order to turn it into an international trading bank? If that is the case, Mr. Speaker, I suggest we might have been a lot better off having kept this institution under Canadian control.

What about the question of the head office? If the head office of the Bank of British Columbia (Hongkong) is going to be in Vancouver, does that mean decisions will be made there, or will the real decisions be made at North American corporate headquarters in New York or in world headquarters which, I presume, are in the Far East? I do not know. I think that is a very relevant question. It is certainly clear that the Government has not used any leverage at all in seeking to get answers on those questions from the Hongkong Bank. Nothing I say is to denigrate the stability, the size or the reputation of the Hongkong Bank. It is one of the largest banks in the world. I go back to the example of Continental and Lloyds. If every time we have a Canadian financial institution in trouble we allow it to be taken over by a stronger institution, we will wind up with no financial institutions in Canada in Canadians hands. They will all be bought up by banks or other financial institutions abroad which happen to be bigger than most of our Canadian financial institutions.

What arrangements has the Government made for additional branching? We do not know. That is a question I have to which it is not possible at this moment to have an answer. I would ask the Minister of State and his officials to provide as much information as is possible between now and tomorrow prior to our going into committee on this Bill. I would like to raise a number of questions with him and his officials at that time.

It does seem to me, however, in looking—

[Translation]

—it seems to me as a Member of the Opposition who has examined this Bill that the only sound and valid reason to adopt this measure is simply the argument that, if after studying the Bill the House of Commons were to endorse the Government's option to allow the Bank of British Columbia to be sold to this foreign institution, the Hongkong Bank, the only justification would quite simply be that a long period of uncertainty might compromise the survival and profitability of the Bank of British Columbia under its new owner, the Bank of Hongkong.

Of course, if the Government uses its majority to provide for the financing with this Bill, or if the two banks, with the approval of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the Governor in Council were able to transfer assets without permission from the House of Commons, it would be our responsibility as Members of the Opposition to accept the situation. This does not mean we agree with the Government's decision, but we must accept its right to make that decision.

However, there are all sorts of precedents indicating that many mistakes have been made on the initiative of the Inspector General of Banks, and that may have been the case last October, when the Inspector General judged the Bank of British Columbia to be in good shape. We are now hearing statements to the effect that the Bank is not in good shape.

There are many indications that this Government, because it has delayed introducing a new policy on financial institutions, has allowed our financial institutions to lose a considerable amount of funds and credibility.

We have seen how much this has cost taxpayers through taxes and the premiums paid to the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation. It cost us nearly one billion dollars after the collapse of the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northlands Bank. Now we are spending, either directly or indirectly, a total of $200 million that will go to a foreign bank, which in turn is going to pay $60 million to the shareholders of the Bank of British Columbia.

I find it very difficult to support this measure. We are being asked to accept the Government's judgement that this is the best solution available, despite the fact that the Government has done practically nothing in the way of looking for and supporting a truly Canadian solution, such as a merger with the National Bank, with one of the chartered banks in Eastern Canada or the merger that was almost achieved with the Vancouver City Savings Credit Union, an institution with assets of $1.5 billion and which, I believe, was quite capable, with the support of this Government and the provincial Government of British Columbia, of becoming the real owner.

The Canadian or regional option was ignored in favour of a foreign option.

[English]

We have lost sight of the possibility of regional solutions. Instead the Government has chosen to have solutions which involve alienating once again the control of a prominent and important regional and Canadian financial institution by putting it into foreign hands.

Bank of British Columbia Business Continuation Act

Mr. Gerry St. Germain (Mission—Port Moody): Mr. Speaker, problems with our financial institutions is not a subject matter in which one should revel or celebrate. I know that the Government has been working on this matter for a considerable period of time and has monitored the situation. The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin) should be complimented on coming forward with a solution that minimizes the loss to Canadian taxpayers.

Mr. Speaker, the Act which is Bill C-27 which is before the House is a Bill to facilitate the continuation of the business of the Bank of British Columbia. I think those words in themselves are of great significance to all of us that are British Columbians. I know one of the dreams of W.A.C. Bennett, a man who governed our province as Premier from 1952 into the 1970s, was to have a regional bank to deal with the concerns and needs of British Columbians. Today, as we prepare the legislation that will maintain or continue the operation of the Bank of British Columbia, I think it is a positive step.

With regard to the legislation, the Government has been guided by four basic considerations, Mr. Speaker, in this transaction. Firstly, to ensure the long-term financial viability and continuation of the institution. Secondly, to provide to the fullest extent possible for the needs of its depositors, other creditors, borrowers and shareholders. Thirdly, to serve the needs of the westernmost part of Canada and to do so without the expenditure of federal public funds as part of the purchase arrangement. In addition to that, it secures the jobs of bank employees at the 39 bank branches. Job security has to be a significant factor. When we look at the plight of the employees and the high level of unemployment in British Columbia, the unacceptable level that the federal Government is making every effort to reduce at the present time, this particular aspect of the legislation definitely has to be taken into consideration.

• (1720)

Members of the NDP spoke about their dislike of foreign ownership. Philosophically and ideologically they oppose any foreign ownership in Canada. They compare the situation of this bank with the Goodyear closure in Toronto. There is really no comparison. Obviously, if you are philosophically opposed to something, there is no way you can accept it. Any critical remarks they make in this situation have to be seen in that light. The NDP Members also made reference to General Motors in this context. That company is a good, responsible corporate citizen. It may be foreign-owned but it is a part of Canada. This is a huge country with too small of a population and that is why we have to attract foreign investment, but under our terms of reference.

I would now like to speak about the Hongkong Bank of Canada. It is a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank Corporation. It began operations as a Canadian chartered bank in Canada in July, 1981. As of October, 1986, its assets exceeded $735 million. It offers the entire range of banking services such as term and operating credits, trade financing, deposit services, foreign exchange, remittances, documentary credits, personal banking, private banking, and assistance with business activities in the Pacific Rim. We have to address the importance of the Pacific Rim countries as trading partners for British Columbia, and I will deal with that a little later. The bank has its head office in Vancouver with offices in Toronto, Montreal, Edmonton, Calgary, Saskatoon, Winnipeg, Halifax and Victoria. The Board of Directors has five Canadians and two non-resident representatives of the shareholders. The Chairman is Angus R. Petrie, and the President and Chief Executive Officer is Eugene Nesmith of Vancouver. That is an indication of the bank's intention to do business in Canada utilizing Canadians and making the entire operation a Canadian operation.

We also have to look at the fact that it is a world-wide bank. The Hongkong Bank group, headquartered in Hong Kong, has consolidated assets exceeding $108 billion as of June 30, 1986. It has 1,200 offices in 55 countries with more than 46,000 employees. That is an indication of the financial depth and strength of this institution. Members opposite have referred to the fact it is a foreign-owned bank with branches in Australia and New Zealand. That fact will be of assistance to us. It will give us a common interest with the Pacific Rim countries and countries like New Zealand and Australia. We on the West Coast have to establish a more viable trade relationship with these countries. We cannot be as dependent as we have been on our trading partner immediately to the south. Members of the Hongkong Bank include a multitude of banks, including the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation and the Marine Midland Bank, just to name two. This is another indication of the bank's tie-in with the world banking community. Other companies in this group are involved in commercial and merchant banking, investment management and financing, as well as leasing and insurance services. There are more than 400 branches in Hong Kong and an extensive Asian branch network in one of the world's most rapidly developing areas. It has more than a century of experience in financing international trade. These are the things that Canada and British Columbia need.

As the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) pointed out, I do not think anyone in Canada would settle for anything less than total Canadian ownership if it were possible. That would be Utopia. Unfortunately, that is not the way it is in the real world. The credentials of the Hongkong Bank of Canada are impeccable and it will bring financial stability and security to the banking community, especially the Bank of British Columbia.

In dealing with some of the problems in western Canada we have to ask why these banks failed. That question is going through the minds of a lot of Canadians, including my constituents in Mission—Port Moody. People like Alistair Brown are really concerned, wondering just what has happened to cause these bank failures. I guess the first question you have to ask is whether it is a matter of regulation. What kind of regulation? Should the regulations be changed? Should they become more stringent? Should we have done it more quickly? Should the previous Government have taken a stronger role in changing the regulatory environment which governs these institutions? Or is this simply an indication of the economic plight of western Canada? That is something western Canadians have tried to point out to eastern Canadians time after time. Or is it possibly the policies of the federal Government in the late 1970s and early 1980s which led to high interest rates and runaway inflation? These are some of the questions we have to ask as we enter this debate on the problems the banks are facing.

As a small businessman in the housing construction business in the late 1970s and early 1980s, I can tell you unequivocally that high interest rates and runaway inflation, as well as Ottawa's monetary policies, are at least partly responsible for the dilemma we are facing today. Eastern Canadians have to understand what is really taking place in western Canada today. Let us consider the commodities industries, such as the grain industry. There are massive subsidies by the European Common Market, and the United States Government is massively subsidizing grain in retaliation. This is devastating the economy of the grain farmers in western Canada.

• (1730)

We can look at the mining industry. It is suffering one of its worst slumps in our history, and there is no indication of an improved market. Our coal industry is barely holding on as a result of the reduced orders from our major customers in the world. The forest industry in British Columbia is plagued by a strike that has resulted in some $20 billion in lost income. This is compounded by the uncertainty brought on by the countervail action of the U.S. lumber industry under the International Trade Commission.

The really devastating impact has been the price drop in the world oil market. The federal Government and eastern Canadians, especially those in central Canada, must understand that all of these factors combined have led to a severe economic dilemma in western Canada. We are not asking for hand-outs, just for consideration. The uniqueness of our industries and of our sources of income means that we must have banks with their headquarters located in our regions so they can understand our uniqueness and the needs of our various industries and agricultural sectors.

There are Members who oppose the free trade initiative. I mention free trade because the free trade initiative and the other requirements I have mentioned are a prerequisite in establishing a viable and strong economy in western Canada. We cannot terminate this very positive initiative of the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) because in order to remain viable and enhance our economic position, a free trade agreement with the United States is absolutely necessary.

If we do not establish such a free trade initiative, there will be further countervail actions like that taken by the U.S. lumber producers. We will become islands, without a secure access to at least 250 million people. We will become non-traders as opposed to the aggressive traders that we are today.

Dealing with regional disparity must be a priority. That is why the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin) and the Minister of Finance have seen fit to take the action they have in regard to the banking dilemma facing western Canada.

The Hon. Member for Trinity (Miss Nicholson) referred to bail-outs of banks. The banks were not bailed out, the depositors were assisted in that situation in western Canada. We must address the western economy as a whole and the British Columbia economy in this case. Let us consider what the Government has done to assist western Canada and assist British Columbia in removing any economic uncertainty and providing banks, businesses and British Columbians with an opportunity to prosper.

I want to review some of the events that I believe were devastating and caused the collapse of banks in certain cases and required the consolidation of others. I believe the National Energy Program was one of the most devastating programs for any region of Canada, and it was one of the major contributing factors to the dilemma that these banks in western Canada faced.

Since you have indicated that I only have two minutes left, Mr. Speaker, let me say in conclusion that Parliament was requested by the private sector to take this initiative. We were asked to assist in facilitating this transaction.

The management of the Bank of British Columbia advised the Government that this transaction is necessary for its survival. The Government agrees with that assessment. The Bank of British Columbia announced today that its Board of Directors believes that it is essential for the bank to enter into a transaction if liquidation is to be avoided. The board further believes that no other transaction can be identified that would be as beneficial as the proposed transaction with the Hongkong Bank of Canada.

Smooth transition is another aspect that had to be taken into consideration. Parliament was asked to expedite this private sector transaction in order to ensure the smoothest possible transition, in the best interest of all concerned.

Shareholders' interest had to be taken into consideration. The legislation recognizes the interests of shareholders. It provides for a shareholders' meeting, with 14 days notice, to approve the consideration received for the sale of the bank's assets, or if the shareholders so choose, an independent assessor will be appointed to evaluate the worth of their shares immediately prior to the time of sale. This evaluation would be binding.

The transaction does not appreciably increase the level of foreign participation in the banking sector. The level is raised slightly, to 12 per cent of the assets of the entire system, which is well below the permissible 16 per cent.

The transaction has the support of British Columbians. The Member for Ottawa Centre questioned the role played by the Premier of the province. The Premier of the province was elected by the majority of British Columbians, and we are proud to have a Premier with such a strong majority in British Columbia. I know it was a moral victory for the NDP, but it was a true victory for Mr. Vander Zalm.

Mr. Cassidy: It was a victory for gerrymander and you know it.

Mr. St. Germain: The Premier shows that he supports a viable regional bank in British Columbia and supports the economic base in British Columbia. I am proud to take part in this debate on behalf of British Columbia.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I am glad to hear that the Hon. Member supports gerrymandering, which is what gave the Premier of British Columbia his majority in the latest election.

• (1740)

The Hon. Member also says he is proud of the fact that his Premier supports a foreign controlled regional bank. Would he not prefer to have a Canadian controlled regional bank? Specifically, if the Government of Canada comes up with $200 million, would he not think that a solution which perhaps allowed for some injection of capital into the Bank of British Columbia might make greater sense rather than putting it into the hands of foreigners, which is what is happening?

We are now in a situation where directly or indirectly taxpayers are coming up as customers, depositors or as taxpayers with this $200 million that is going into the hands of a foreign bank, into the hands of the shareholders, but in fact we are losing control of a bank in the process.

Mr. Siddon: You want to nationalize the banks?

Mr. Cassidy: Perhaps that is a good idea, as a matter of fact. The Hon. Member suggests that we should put out $200 million and not get a nickel's worth of equity for the people of Canada in the process. That is irresponsible investing, it seems to me. I do not think the Minister would do that in his own personal life. Would he take $200,000, if he had that much, Mr. Speaker, and put it into an enterprise and have no equity, no ownership? Would he do that? Of course, he would not. He would insist on getting something back. The Minister, I suggest, would know he was taking risk for that money. In fact one could argue that perhaps by bailing out the shareholders in this particular case we would get far more than liquidation value in terms of the value of the shares.

What would the Hon. Member think of simply keeping the Bank of British Columbia owned and controlled by British Columbians even if it meant using some of that $200 million in order to do so?

Mr. St. Germain: Mr. Speaker, again our socialist friends want to nationalize the banks. At this point in time they always want to nationalize the banks. When it gets close to election time they say: "Oh, no, we would never nationalize the banks", but between elections they want to do so.

As a British Columbian, as one who lives there, who is very current with its financial institutions, and as one who deals with one of the major credit unions, I was quite excited to hear that Vancity Savings was interested. I was disappointed it was not able to facilitate the acquisition of the Bank of British Columbia because it would have been better. There is no doubt about that. Anything Canadian owned is better, and I will stand front and centre for that at any point in time. However, the fact remains that like the free trade issue, if we do not develop a bilateral free trade arrangement which gives us access to more people, we will become a little island surrounded by ourselves. Unfortunately, we cannot rely solely on Canadian investment, although that would be Utopia. Had the Hon. Member listened to my speech during the debate, that is what I pointed out.

It is without question that I would feel better had the bank been Canadian owned. However, I think the Hon. Member leaves a misconception and possibly a misunderstanding with the general public and Hon. Members of the House in saying there is $200 million coming out of the taxpayers' pockets. There is not $200 million coming out of the taxpayers' pockets. It is coming out of the CDIC funding. The CDIC is planning to raise its premiums to recover the $200 million. It is not the best deal in the world but it is a good deal for British Columbia and anything that is good for British Columbia, I will support.

Mr. Angus: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody (Mr. St. Germain). I listened with interest to his remarks, particularly his remark about, shall I say, the sensitive nature of the coal industry in British Columbia. Listening to him today was the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) and the Minister of Transport (Mr. Crosbie) both of whom have recently, among others, presented a report which recommends the use of western Canadian coal in Ontario Hydro generating stations. I wonder if the Hon. Member could advise us whether he thinks that report will be the salvation of the western Canadian coal industry, particularly the B.C. coal industry? If so, what action is he and his colleagues taking to convince the powers that be to implement that report?

Mr. St. Germain: Mr. Speaker, unfortunately I have not read the report. The fact is it is something I have not studied at length. However, I know one thing, and that is, that this administration is moving in that direction. It is taking a leadership role in shipping coal from the west to central Canada. That is something that when the New Democratic Party was in government in British Columbia, it could not do. I can tell you, Mr. Speaker, that the Premier of British Columbia is in Ottawa today. He is going to Toronto tomorrow. He made a public announcement. And the entire Government of Canada supports working towards this initiative. I can assure the Hon. Member that every effort will be made, and like everything else the Government does which is good for Canada, this will become a reality and he will see that western coal flowing east as it should have been doing 20 to 30 years ago.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member suggested that the $200 million would come from the CDIC, that somehow it would not come from the people of Canada. Does he not understand that the funds of the CDIC come from premiums paid by the financial institutions, and not only has its funds for the next number of years been used up by the failures of the banks but, in any case, the premiums it pays will come from its customers because it will just pass the cost of paying for those premiums on to its customers?

Mr. St. Germain: Mr. Speaker, obviously the Hon. Member deals with one of the "big five". I deal with a credit union. I do not believe the credit unions contributed to the CDIC. I believe in the credit union because I believe in community banking as something which is good for the communities. Possibly the Hon. Member who is from Manitoba does not realize the disparities and problems we have suffered over the years. That is why it is so important that we have regional banks in British Columbia.

All I wanted to point out with regard to the Hon. Member's comment is the fact that this will not be paid from Canadian tax revenues. I merely point out that it will come from the CDIC which, as the Hon. Member points out, is an insurance corporation which receives premiums which are deducted through the large banks, and logically someone has to pay. I do not believe that anyone would believe that money drops out of the sky.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member comes from British Columbia and I come from Manitoba, which is also a have-not province. I am particularly supportive of credit unions and the concept of regional banks. However, one would hope, one would want, and I would almost say one would insist, that regional banks be run better than the Bank of British Columbia which seems to have got into trouble along with the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northland Bank. We do not need banks, regional or otherwise, which are operated in such a manner and with such little care and attention that they get into the kind of situation of those three banks so that the public either directly or through the CDIC has to carry the burden.

Let me just say to the Hon. Member that I am a supporter of the credit union but, unfortunately, the "big five" do 75 per cent, 80 per cent, 90 per cent of all the banking business in this country. I wish that the credit unions were in the same position as the big banks, but they are not.

• (1750)

Mr. St. Germain: Mr. Speaker, logically, I am glad to see that the Hon. Member definitely supports the credit union system. I would have been disappointed if he did not.

As for the Hon. Member coming from a have-not province, I think that this is what part of this debate is all about. Traditionally, had the National Energy Program dealt with the West fairly we would not have seen the collapse of these various banks. There is no doubt that no one relishes or enjoys standing up in a debate of this nature. We would sooner have seen the banks succeed, each and every one of them. However, we are faced with a dilemma with which we must deal. I can only say that I am pleased that British Columbia will have a regional bank as a result of the actions taken by the Right Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), the Minister of Finance and the Minister of State for Finance.

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, to set the record straight and just so the Hon. Member's remarks will not leave any doubt in the public mind as to whether or not the caisses populaires contribute to the deposit insurance fund—

[English]

I wish to tell the Hon. Member that all banks and all credit unions pay premiums to insure the deposits of those who have moneys in their institutions. I think the Hon. Member would want to rectify his remark in which he said that he did not think that credit unions pay premiums to the CDIC.

Mr. St. Germain: Mr. Speaker, as far as the insurance is concerned, my understanding is that credit unions certainly pay a deposit insurance but that it is managed by the provinces and not at the federal level by the CDIC in Ottawa. That is the only clarification I have to make.

[Translation]

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, for the second time in about fifteen months here we are in the House debating the banking situation, the possibility of a bank going under, or situations such as we are experiencing today. I have no intention of going over the debates and arguments we had when we examined the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northland Bank failures because obviously we would have to rehash the past and repeat many of the arguments which focused on the Government's incompetence when it comes to the administration of its own financial institutions, particularly with respect to the western banks, the Northland Bank and the CCB, and now the Bank of British Columbia.

Mr. Speaker, this time I do not understand anything. I do not understand anything because, for openers, the Government wants us to act quickly without giving us full details and, secondly, those we do have are contradictory. If I may, Mr. Speaker, I should like to comment on some of the information given to the public at large by these financial institutions, more specifically on the information made available about the Bank of British Columbia. In the document provided by the Financial Post information service which reports—this is not an analysis—which reports a number of facts, we read this among other things, and if I may, Mr. Speaker, I will quote the report on the Bank of British Columbia.

Bank of British Columbia Business Continuation Act

[English]

An inspection of the bank's loan portfolio was completed in October, 1985 by a special team of inspectors acting under the jurisdiction of the Inspector General of Banks. The review concluded that the bank's loan portfolio was "sound".

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the Inspector General of Banks conducted a special investigation of the Bank of British Columbia and reached the conclusion that its loan portfolio was sound.

He goes on to say that in the course of a year, the percentage of losses on loans had dropped and that percentagewise, non-performing loans were below the average for the banking sector. That was in October 1985. If we look at how the Bank evolved since then, and I have been looking at quarterly and annual results, we see the following: after nine months, on July 31, 1986, the Bank's net profit was $6,653,000, compared with $5,696,000 for the first nine months of the previous financial year, an increase of nearly one million dollars, and this information supported the conclusions of an investigation conducted by the Inspector General of Banks, which indicated that the Bank's loan portfolio was sound.

Mr. Speaker, we are told that the bank is in great difficulty. It was always my understanding that the problem at the Bank of British Columbia was not the loan portfolio but the deposits, and that what happened to the Canadian Commercial Bank in Alberta and the Northlands Bank had created a climate of uncertainty, leading depositors to withdraw their money, and that the loan portfolio was sound. Like many other Members of this House, I had every reason to believe the report of the Inspector General of Banks who had conducted a special investigation in October 1985. Today, we are told it is not a matter of depositor confidence but of the value of the Bank's assets. The Minister goes on to say that this Government, through the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation, will be giving $200 million to the Bank of Hongkong which will be used to purchase all or almost all of the assets of the Bank of British Columbia for $63 million. They are going to put $200 million into the assets of the Bank of British Columbia, as a branch of the Bank of Hongkong, without receiving in return any shares or ownership in the new bank that will have been created. They are going to give it to the Bank of Hongkong, and—

[English]

—the Hongkong Bank of Canada will buy the Bank of British Columbia or place in a trust fund for shareholders some $63 million. That is the deal that we have in front of us.

I cannot understand why the Canadian Government will take $200 million from the pockets of Canadians in one way or another, through insurance premiums or otherwise, to place it into the equity of the Hongkong Bank, British Columbia Division, while at the same time allowing the shareholders $63 million. There is something wrong with that. If the assets of the bank are sound, as was suggested in the report of the Inspector General of Banks in October of 1985, then I see no reason why the Government would put $200 million into this deal. The Minister cannot have it both ways. Is it that the report of the Inspector General of Banks was wrong, or that since October of 1985 the situation has deteriorated substantially?

We do not know exactly what happened because we do not have the facts. What the Bank of British Columbia told us in its statement dated November 26, 1986, is that liquidation is not a reasonable alternative as realized asset values, in the view of the Bank of British Columbia's board, would be affected to the point that it would be questionable whether any amount would be available for the shareholders of the BBC and there might well be a loss to uninsured depositors.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, this is a very serious matter, because according to the Board of Directors of the Bank of British Columbia, liquidation would, to all intents and purposes, mean the loss of all assets held by common and preferred shareholders, of subordinate debentures and of cumulated surpluses, if any. Furthermore, uninsured depositors would be put in a loss situation.

• (1800)

Mr. Speaker, if that is the case, I ask the Government: Why take $63 million in taxpayers' money, because the taxpayers are in fact paying for the insurance premiums that are paid out of the banks' surpluses, and basically, Canadian depositors, whether they have their deposits in banks or credit unions all contribute towards guaranteeing deposits of up to $60,000—why take $63 million to protect shareholders who knew perfectly well that by taking shares in a bank they were taking a chance and that they were not protected in any way?

Mr. Speaker, I think it is incredible the Government should be proposing this kind of solution to the problem.

In this case I am saying to the Government that, if the assessment made in the Bank of British Columbia report sent to the shareholders accurately depicts the existing situation, and if chances are that liquidating the bank's assets would entail similar losses, this means, and already I can hear the tacit argument of the Minister, namely that as a going concern it may have some value. Fair enough. I agree, it has some value. But, as I see it, only if the same shareholders are involved.

If, as a Government, we were to decide to maintain a regional bank and use Canadian taxpayers' money, not as taxpayers but as depositors in financial institutions on which, as depositors, they pay premiums through the financial institutions which take their money, then I say: Why not add the $200 million to the assets of the Bank of British Columbia shareholders and give BBC shares to the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation? Why not take the risk, if we are going to hand the money over to the Hongkong Bank, why not take the risk with the present shareholders of the Bank of British Columbia and keep the bank going as a regional institution which can operate normally? Because, I will be told, it was a matter of long-term credibility.

Until now, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Hockin: It is not enough.

Mr. Garneau: —the Minister says it is not enough.

Well, if it is not enough it is because somebody somewhere is not doing his job. What I cannot understand is that, although it is enough for the Hongkong Bank, it is not enough for Canadian taxpayers. As a matter of fact, just what is the position of Hongkong Bank management? They say: We put up $63 million, we get $200 million to boot, so we will go ahead and buy a network of 39 branches with 200,000 depositors and a ready-made clientele. Try and develop a network of 39 bank branches and build up a certain reputation and attract 200,000 to 300,000 depositors. Try and do this within a financial institution and see if it doesn't cost at least $63 million. It's a good deal for them. It certainly is. It would be a good deal for just about any foreign bank that does not have a network and that wants to buy one. I wonder, however, why we are taking taxpayers' money to do this. And if we do, and that is what the Minister is suggesting— Yes I realize they will assume all the Bank's liabilities, but they are getting $200 million to help them do that, $200 million that will go into their equity. Imagine! The Bank of Hongkong doesn't have to do much to have the lowest ratio between assets and equity of any bank in the Canadian system.

They already have $200 million which isn't costing them a cent, and there are assets worth $2.8 billion. They're starting practically with a ratio of one to ten. All they have to do is put in a few million more and they will have the lowest equity to asset ratio there is in our banking system and our financial institutions here in Canada, except perhaps for the other bank that was taken over, which of course had practically no deposits and was very highly leveraged, as they say. But I don't think that is a very relevant example.

Mr. Speaker, the fact remains that they have taken $200 million in taxpayers' money—I don't think we have to quibble about this being taxpayers' or other people's money—it all belongs to Canadians, because the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation belongs to Canadians. They are taking $200 million and giving it to the Bank of Hongkong, which then turns around and buys almost all the assets for the sum of the $63 million, and also assumes responsibility for the Bank's liabilities, as the Minister said. I should hope so.

I submit, with respect, that taking the money of Canadians to sell one of our financial institutions to foreign interests, and I'm not questioning the competence of the Bank of Hongkong, on the contrary, I think they are very astute businessmen to have managed this kind of deal, and if they manage the bank as well as they managed the deal with the Government, I think the new bank's depositors can rest easy.

However, the fact remains that if the Government is at all concerned about good management of public funds, and if we want to help British Columbia have a bank that is regional and managed by their own people, we do not take $200 million and give them away to foreign interests. We take the $200 million and make a deal with the present shareholders. The Minister says it might cost more than that. And I say to him: He must have . . . Well, I suppose the Office of the Inspector General is somewhat confused these days, but somewhere in this Government there must be somebody and there are experts elsewhere as well who can determine exactly what is involved.

If these $200 million . . . Mr. Speaker, as a Member and on behalf of Canadian taxpayers, I would much rather support a $225 million payment and end up with Bank of British Columbia shares held by the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation than hand over $200 million and never again see the colour of my money. Why, with 200 or 225, if I am wrong the Minister will correct me later. We will have a question period, but right now he is disturbing my concentration. Perhaps that is precisely what he wants to do.

If the solution I am advocating were to be accepted, the shareholders of the Bank of British Columbia would continue to be shareholders of the Bank of British Columbia. The Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation would become a BBC shareholder. Let no one talk to me about nationalization, we are not dealing with theology here, this is a practical matter because we are going to pay out $200 million. If we were to form a partnership, the Canadian people with the Deposit Insurance Corporation and the present shareholders, I am sure that with such an asset to equity ratio we would be able to restore confidence and maintain a regional bank under the management of British Columbia residents and for the benefit of British Columbia residents. What we are doing now . . . It is true that the bank will stay in British Columbia, it is true that it will employ local people, but any decision concerning a wholly-owned branch whose head office is in Hongkong will be made by management in Hongkong.

Before concluding, Mr. Speaker, I would have many other questions to raise, but I have only 20 minutes. I would like to say something about the bank staff.

Mr. Speaker, the Hongkong Bank will acquire most of the assets.

We are told—and I have yet to receive confirmation of this—that the 39 branches will be kept open. We do not know yet. There are 1,400 employees. In the case of the merger, of the take-over of the Continental Bank's assets by Lloyds Bank of Britain, we were told all the employees would be maintained in their jobs.

This time we have no such assurance. Firstly, we have no assurance that tomorrow morning the new owners who were given a $200 million handout to buy a business for $63 million will guarantee those employees' jobs.

Secondly, according to the Board of Directors, discussions are still going on with the Inspector of Insurance and Superannuation Plans for $10 million to be withdrawn to the benefit of the Bank of British Columbia's present shareholders, and if such a request is guaranteed or accepted over the coming months, that money could be redistributed to the shareholders. Not only is the Hongkong Bank given $200 million to buy the Bank of British Columbia, and shareholders given $63 million, part of their assets, but $10 million may be taken out of the employees' superannuation fund to increase the price the shareholders will be getting for their shares.

Mr. Speaker, this is written in black and white on the document I have before me, which was published by the Bank's Board of Directors, and from which I quote:

• (1810)

[English]

During the second quarter of the fiscal year 1986, the Superintendent of Insurance approved the withdrawal of surplus contributions from the pension fund of BBC based on an independent actuarial report. After the Bank's year end the Superintendent of Insurance, in view of subsequent jurisprudence, revoked his permission to withdraw these surplus funds, but has left it open for BBC to re-apply to withdraw the surplus in accordance with new guidelines. This may result in BBC having to reverse $20.4 million of pre-tax income during 1986.

In connection with the sale to Hongkong Bank of Canada, it is proposed that the pension plan account balances of all BBC employees will be transferred to an equivalent pension plan with the Hongkong Bank of Canada. BBC will re-apply to the Superintendent of Insurance for permission to withdraw the surplus funds remaining in its pension plan. If the application is successful, this surplus would accrue to the benefit of the shareholders of BBC.

[Translation]

If, Mr. Speaker, in addition to giving $200 million to a bank which, according to its own board of directors, is not just insolvant but would be nibbling at uninsured deposits, if in addition to handing out those $200 million, we allow them to use the superannuation fund to increase the amounts the shareholders would be getting, I am at a loss to understand. What I am saying is, we will have to pass the Bill because we have no choice, and because the Government insists that if we do not pass it the whole system will collapse. Mr. Speaker, I must tell you it is with the utmost reluctance that I am going to support the Bill. It is only because the Government is pointing a gun at our heads that we must take its word for it. I had really promised myself after March 25, 1985, when we were asked to approve the package to solve the problem of the Canadian Commercial Bank that I would never again take the word of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) about a banking matter. Yet, once more, we have to give our approval because we are asked urgently to pass legislation to maintain a financial institution in Western Canada, to protect jobs and to keep an institution under foreign control in business. I must say that it makes no sense to ask responsible Members of Parliament to approve such a measure in only 24 hours.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: On questions or comments, the Hon. Member for Mission—Port Moody (Mr. St. Germain).

Mr. St. Germain: Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member states that it does not make sense. The Hon. Member was not part of the last Government that brought in the devastating, destroying horror story of the national energy policy on western Canada. I cannot blame him for that, but his Government did.

Mr. Gauthier: Did you read the Estey Report? Estey said there was nothing involved.

Mr. St. Germain: Estey exonerated all Ministers of any blame, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Gauthier: You should read the Estey Report.

Mr. St. Germain: The point is, Mr. Speaker, that the $200 million is from the CDIC, which is an insurance corporation which has a mandate and which is completely within its own right to act in this particular instance. Had we not gone this route and had the Hongkong Bank not decided to carry on—and it is committed to carry on the operations of the bank—the loss to taxpayers would have been $1.3 billion or more. Is this what the Hon. Member would advocate? Or is the Hon. Member anti-western?

Mr. Gauthier: Oh, come off that.

Mr. St. Germain: Does he not want these regional banks? That is the only question I ask. If he does not want to vote for this, he would have to be anti-bank, and anti-bank in western Canada is anti-regional bank. Now, Mr. Speaker, I do not believe that the Hon. Member honestly thinks like that. However, this is the best deal that will provide security, provide a regional banking system in British Columbia which is an absolute necessity because of the uniqueness of our economy in British Columbia, which in a lot of cases eastern Canadians do not understand. I ask you, Mr. Speaker, would the Hon. Member have sooner seen the collapse of the bank and the destruction of the western economy, or have a $1.3 billion situation staring him in the face, rather than take this action? Obviously, Mr. Speaker, we would have sooner had a Canadian owner. But the Hongkong Bank is a viable organization. In our understanding, and in my understanding, it is a reputable firm. Would the Hon. Member not sooner have this solution? And if not, why not?

Mr. Garneau: Mr. Speaker, I am even more worried now that the Member has just asked the question than I was before. The Member is telling us something that the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) did not tell us. He is telling us something that nobody in the House, and nobody outside of the House, dared to say, that the loss could be $1.3 billion. This is what the Hon. Member said.

Mr. Gauthier: It is irresponsible.

Mr. Garneau: If that is the reality, and what the Member just said is true, it means that we are giving away $63 million to keep the operation open to shareholders who do not deserve to have one cent.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is telling us, and I do not know where he is taking his figures—does the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin) confirm that the amount is $1.3 billion? This would mean that, in one year, after the report of the Inspector General of Banks prepared under this Conservative Government, which said that the assets of the bank were solid, the situation has so deteriorated that the value of the $2.8 billion assets of the bank now constitutes losses of $1.3 billion. Mr. Speaker, this is enough to scare any Member of this House. The Government is about to give away $63 million. First, this Conservative Government found $1 billion for uninsured depositors, and now, it will give away $63 million to protect shareholders.

It would not protect the shareholders, even if they were the small Northland Bank or Commercial Bank shareholders, and now, it will spend $63 million to protect those of the British Columbia Bank. Moreover, it may get for these same shareholders $10 million from the pension fund for assets which, according to the Hon. Member from B.C., are not worth their book value; indeed there would have to be losses of over 50 per cent.

I am compelled to ask the Minister: Are these figures accurate? If so, I am wondering about the value judgment of the Hongkong Bank directors, for they are purchasing—well it is given to them—as much as $1.3 billion in liabilities against net assets of $200 million less $63 million.

Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member wanted to know whether we are for or against banks or Western Canada.

I have no lesson to receive from him because I have criticized his Government's actions concerning the Northland Bank on the basis of the data then available, because the option I was suggesting was based on these informations. The Northland Bank could have been saved. I was then even more sure of that. We had a report from the Inspector General of Banks which had been provided to us, under the authority of the Minister, which said that the assets were solid. Now, we are being told something else. I agree that the Bank of British Columbia should be saved, but if what the Minister has told us is true, I say: Let us not give $200 million to the Hongkong Bank; let us keep them for the current shareholders and keep the British Columbia people with their bank to administer. They are Canadians. But if the remarks made by the Hon. Member who raised this issue are true, it is then another story altogether and it makes an intelligent study of this bill even more difficult.

• (1820)

[English]

Mr. Friesen: Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau). He has been very exercised about the $200 million, and it is no small amount. However, I remind him that the National Energy Program—

Mr. Gauthier: Oh!

Mr. Friesen: The Hon. Member should not say "Oh". Many westerners are saying a lot more than that. It drained $60 billion out of the western economy which normally would have stayed in western Canada. I think that is an admitted fact by the former Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources, Mr. Lalonde.

Over the years 1977, 1978, and 1979 the banks in western Canada lent money on properties on the strength of the economy of western Canada, particularly the oil economy. With the introduction of the National Energy Program in 1980, the resources which would have normally flowed into those banks so that they would not be so exposed were not there.

Now that we have been raped of $60 billion and have left the banks exposed so that they could not cover their losses, is the Hon. Member saying that the transfer of $200 million from CDIC is wrong? Is he saying that it is wrong to transfer this money to a western institution which was made vulnerable because of the $60 billion drained out of the western economy?

Mr. Garneau: Mr. Speaker, I do not know how many times I will have to repeat what I said. The Government wants to put in $200 million. I say to it that it should go ahead but should put it into a Canadian institution and have shares in return for the $200 million.

They are taking $200 million from the CDIC and giving it to the Bank of Hongkong so that that company can buy the assets. It is nonsense. It should be given to the Bank of British Columbia as a shareholder side by side with those there now to keep the bank alive.

Turning to the energy situation, I have asked many times in the House, who destroyed the energy policy? It is this Tory Government. I have always said that, and I repeat it.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Garneau: Hon. Members may laugh, but the energy policy was like an elevator. It should have worked both ways. At one point the price of oil was excessive. It was not due to the Canadian market, but it was due to decisions taken outside of Canada by a monopoly or cartel. In that event Canada turned to the owners of the resources, generally Alberta, but it should have also turned to the multinationals. The Hon. Member said that the $60 billion would have stayed in Canada. I am not sure whether it would have been paid in dividends to the multinationals and would have been sent to the United States.

The former Liberal Government, through its energy policy, built an elevator. The elevator played it one way when the price was high. Now that the price is low, not due to Canadian producers but due to a decision taken by the cartel, the elevator should have gone up and helped western producers. However, government Members destroyed the elevator, so they have no instrument with which to help Canadian producers. This is why they are in difficulty.

By the way, the Estey Commission suggested after a thorough analysis that the economy of western Canada had nothing to do with the collapse of the CCB. The Minister and the Hon. Member should have known that. If they read the Estey Report, they would know that the energy crisis had nothing to do with the collapse.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The period for questions and comments is over. Am I correct in calling it 6.30 p.m.?

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I am sorry, but I should like to participate in the debate. I thought I would have at least 10 minutes in which to put a few comments on record.

As a western Canadian I am deeply concerned about what happened today. We have seen a western Canadian financial institution going down like ten pins. I agree with some of the comments of Hon. Members opposite which point to the fact that the source of the problem is in the past. However, for the Government to believe that the only reason was the National Energy Program of the Liberal Party is to delude itself. It is a case of bad management on the part of the previous Government and as far as this Government is concerned.

We have been promised reforms. We have been promised legislation dealing with financial institutions for almost two years. Members of the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs spent last summer travelling the length and breadth of the country to hear submissions. We have been promised legislation, but the Government has not brought in any legislation. I do not think the Government knows where to go.

It is not surprising from a Government which believes in the free market economy that it would let the free market sort it out. However, this generally means as far as Conservatives are concerned that if there are profits to be made, they should not be touched. On the other hand, they believe that if they are in difficulty, public funds should be used to bail them out. We have seen the Government bail out several major financial institutions. Now it is doing it again.

The Government is helping the shareholders of the Bank of British Columbia and it is helping the Bank of Hongkong. I sat here listening to members of the Conservative Party from British Columbia who said: "But we are saving a regional institution". I do not understand. Again it is Orwellian thinking. How can the Bank of Hongkong be a regional institution?

I am also greatly concerned about the types of guarantees we will have. Will the head office remain in British Columbia? What will happen to the 1,400 employees? What will happen to the branches throughout the interior of British Columbia? Is the Bank of Hongkong interested in keeping open a branch in the interior? Is it interested in keeping open branches in local communities and in servicing local communities? Is the Bank of Hongkong only interested in some of the major branches in Victoria and Vancouver?

Unfortunately we are again in a position where we have a gun to our heads. We should be discussing the details of the matter in committee before being asked to vote.

What efforts did the Government make to find Canadian buyers? I have read in the press that Vancity was very interested in taking over the Bank of British Columbia. I want to know what type of negotiations occurred. Why was it not possible for Vancity, a Canadian institution owned by the people of British Columbia, to take over the Bank of British Columbia? Many very important questions need to be asked. Unfortunately we are being asked to vote on the Bill without hearing the answers.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being 6.30 p.m., this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1)

The House adjourned at 6.30 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Thursday, November 27, 1986

The House met at 11 a.m.

[English]

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, there have been discussions among the Parties as to the order of business today. I believe you will find unanimous consent of the House for me to put a motion which would have the effect of moving the House directly to Orders of the Day.

Mr. Speaker: The House has heard the motion and the Chair will resist all temptation to take it under advisement. Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by Mr. Bouchard:

That the House do now proceed to Orders of the Day.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, there have been discussions among the Parties as to the order of business today. We have agreed that Bill S-2 will be called first and dealt with in all stages by the House. Immediately thereafter, the House will proceed to completion of debate on Bill C-27.

I would ask that Bill S-2 be called at this time.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANADA-NETHERLANDS INCOME TAX CONVENTION ACT, 1986; CANADA-JAPAN INCOME TAX CONVENTION ACT, 1986; CANADA-CHINA INCOME TAX AGREEMENT ACT, 1986; CANADA-MALTA INCOME TAX AGREEMENT ACT, 1986

MEASURE TO ENACT

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)) moved that Bill S-2 (from the Senate) an Act to implement conventions between Canada and the Kingdom of the Netherlands and Canada and Japan and agreements between Canada and the People's Republic of China and Canada and the Republic of Malta for avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax, be read the second time and, by unanimous consent, referred to Committee of the Whole.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I want to begin by thanking Hon. Members on all sides of the House for allowing us to introduce this technical, but very important Bill which must be introduced today if we are going to take advantage of the fiscal year which begins on January 1, 1987. Apparently a 30 days' notice is needed so if this Bill is passed today we will have the proper notice period.

The purpose of this Bill is to implement conventions between Canada and the Kingdom of the Netherlands, Canada and Japan and what are known as agreements, not conventions, between Canada and the People's Republic of China and the Republic of Malta for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax. Before discussing the details of the Bill, and I will try to be very brief, I would like to say a few words about the whole desirability of the role of tax treaties.

Tax treaties are useful in order to promote international trade and to facilitate international investment. In particular, the existence of a tax treaty enshrining the basis as well as the rate of the applicable taxes provides a general air of tax stability which can only be reassuring to investors and traders. In short, a treaty rate of tax cannot be increased unless the treaty itself is modified or terminated. That is the heart of it. Termination is a rare event while revision is a lengthy process requiring the concurrence of two Governments. In both cases, taxpayers will normally receive advance notice of the impending changes.

• (1110)

Tax treaties also reduce annoyance in the operation of the tax system by eliminating the necessity of paying tax to the source country, if there is no permanent establishment in that country, and by providing a mechanism to settle problems encountered by taxpayers. More important, tax treaties eliminate or alleviate double taxation in instances in which international transactions are involved that may give rise to the same income being taxable in the hands of the same person by more than one state.

For the purpose of eliminating double taxation the tax treaties establish two categories of rules. First, in the case of a number of items of income, an exclusive right to tax is conferred on only one of the contracting states. In this way, the other contracting state is prevented from taxing and double taxation is absolutely avoided. Second, for other items of income, the right to tax is not an exclusive one. These provisions confer on the state of source or situs a full or limited right of tax, and the state of residence must allow relief so as to avoid double taxation.

As we all know, the major reform of Canada's income tax legislation in 1971 required Canada to expand its network of double taxation conventions with other countries. Since that time negotiations for the conclusion of new treaties, or the revision of existing ones, have been entered into with almost 60 countries. I will be naming an additional number of them this morning.

In this Bill the four tax conventions under review follow the general pattern of the conventions previously approved by Parliament. Thus this Bill does not break the pattern but is consistent with it. The number of tax treaties in force at present is 40. The coventions with Cameroon, Guyana, Kenya, the Soviet Union and Zambia approved by Parliament in 1984, 1985 and 1986 are expected to be ratified in the near future. After their ratification the number of conventions in force will reach 45.

I would like to indicate briefly the main elements of these tax treaties. The country of which the payer is a resident can withhold tax, but the rate is generally limited to 10 per cent or 15 per cent in the case of dividends, branch tax and interest and, in the case of royalties, to 10 per cent.

Under the Canada-Netherlands Double Taxation Convention, the rate of withholding tax on dividends is reduced from 15 per cent to 10 per cent if the recipient is a company, other than a partnership, which owns directly at least 25 per cent of the capital of the company paying the dividends. However, the existing convention contains a provision allowing corporations which meet a number of specific conditions to rapatriate dividends without having to pay any withholding tax. That convention will continue to apply for qualified corporations until December 31, 1988. The exemption in the Netherlands for mortgage interest received from Canada will continue to apply until June 30, 1987.

Some of the other matters also dealt with in these tax treaties include the following: capital gains, pension annuities, teachers and double taxation relief. I would be happy to go into them if it is necessary.

On balance, the terms of the tax conventions provide equitable solutions to the various problems of double taxation existing between Canada and these countries. Each of these countries hopes to implement the bilateral tax convention as soon as possible. Consequently, I commend this Bill to the most favourable consideration of the House.

[Translation]

Mr. Raymond Garneau (Laval-des-Rapides): Mr. Speaker, I analyzed the hearings held by other place and read the answers given by officials from the Department of Finance. This morning, the Minister gave us the assurance that this was in fact a housekeeping measure similar to measures implemented under other treaties, and we shall therefore support the Bill without further debate.

[English]

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, we too have every intent to facilitate the rapid passage of this Bill. It is a technical Bill. The Minister has outlined it very clearly in terms of a tax treaty that Canada has with such countries as China, Japan, Malta, Netherlands, and part of the package that we have with some other countries. Before I make specific comments about the Bill before us I wish to raise the issue that the Bill has to be passed today. As the Minister has indicated, it is the eleventh hour and we have to move on this Bill.

I must say that this makes me somewhat uncomfortable, especially on a day when we will be debating again the rescue of the Bank of British Columbia. We are debating this legislation under a great deal of duress in terms of time. We have not had adequate information. I suggest to the Government that, whenever possible, rather than wait until the absolute maximum limit in regard to matters on which the House of Commons has to move, it bring these matters forward more quickly. In this way if the Opposition were interested in carrying out some examinations with regard to this particular Bill to avoid double taxation, perhaps we would have a whole number of questions. Again, we feel limited because we simply cannot pursue those inquiries. However, we have faith in the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin). We will certainly take his word today with no hesitation that this is a technical Bill, that the appropriate thought has gone into its implications by members of the other place and that it really updates previous legislation. But the principle is important, especialy if it had been another Minister, a Minister who in the past has not always been as forthright as the present Minister, a Minister who in fact on other occasions might have inadvertently misrepresented an issue. I speak of none other than the present Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) who, on many occasions, has told Members of the House and the people of Canada about the security and stability of certain western banks which proved to be totally and utterly incorrect comments.

We do not plan to impede the progress of this Bill. We want to co-operate as much as possible. Again, the principle of the Bill that we are debating at second reading recognizes Canada's participation in other countries in a whole variety of ways, whether it is through mortgage lending, work, investments or incomes derived from investments in foreign countries. Nationals in Canada deriving income from one source or another, working in a variety of capacities, are simply facilitated by this Bill, and encouraged by it. As Members of Parliament we want to do everything in our power to encourage Canadians who have the expertise and the interest to go abroad to carry Canadian expertise and the Canadian way of life into other countries. This Bill simply encourages that. It recognizes the contribution that Canadians are making in other countries and the contributions that others make in Canada. It is our pleasure to co-operate and move the completion of second reading of this Bill.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt this motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and, with unanimous consent, the House went into Committee thereon, Mrs. Champagne in the Chair.

• (1120)

[English]

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order. House in Committee of the Whole on Bill S-2, an Act to implement conventions between Canada and the Kingdom of the Netherlands and Canada and Japan and agreements between Canada and the People's Republic of China and Canada and the Republic of Malta for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax.

Shall Clause 1 carry?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Clause 1 agreed to.

Clauses 2 to 24 inclusive agreed to.

Schedules I to VII inclusive agreed to.

Title agreed to.

Bill reported.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): When shall the Bill be read the third time? By leave, now?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Hockin moved that Bill S-2, an Act to implement conventions between Canada and the Kingdom of the Netherlands and Canada and Japan and agreements between Canada and the People's Republic of China and Canada and the Republic of Malta for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax be read the third time and passed.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the third time and passed.

* * *

BANK OF BRITISH COLUMBIA BUSINESS CONTINUATION ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed from Wednesday, November 26, consideration of the motion of Mr. Hockin that Bill C-27, an Act to facilitate the continuation of the business of the Bank of British Columbia, be read the second time and referred to Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Benno Friesen (Surrey—White Rock—North Delta): Madam Speaker, I rise to speak on this Bill with some pleasure, pleasure because it is satisfying for us from the West to be able to perform a service for the western people by dealing with legislation to enable the Bank of B.C. to continue its operations. I rise also with some sadness that it is necessary to do this. It is a tragedy for the Canadian economy and particularly the western Canadian economy that it has been made necessary to deal with legislation of this kind.

I would like to remind Hon. Members that the Bill is entitled an Act to facilitate the continuation of the business of the Bank of British Columbia. This Bill is about making sure that the Bank of B.C. can continue to operate without the threat of closure. We are acting upon the request of the Board of Directors that we do this. This is a business transaction that has taken place between two banks in order to facilitate the continuing operation of one of them.

Yesterday I listened at some length to the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau). I enjoyed his intervention very much. He spoke like a banker. It was plain to see that he had been in the banking business for some time. He was at ease with the subject. It was clear that he was preoccupied with the ledgers of the banks and particularly the transfer of the $200 million from the CDIC to this particular transaction. I wish he had been equally concerned with some of the transactions in which the Big Five are engaged. I wish he had been as concerned about the millions of dollars the Bank of Montreal has had to write off in Latin America. Perhaps he could explain to us sometime how much that cost consumers of the Canadian banking industry.

The Big Five banks took risks in Latin America and now they have to write off amounts which they are asking Canadian consumers to pay. What about the Big Five's investment in Dome Petroleum to the tune of billions of dollars? They have exposed themselves so much that Dome has them where it wants them. The banks are continually rescheduling their debts so that Dome can stay afloat and they have to agree with everything for which Dome asks.

I wish the Hon. Member had been just as concerned about the activities of the Big Five as he was about the $200 million from CDIC which he keeps calling taxapayers' money. It would have been more proper for him to say that it was a part of company accounts and transfers into the CDIC made to ensure that the banking industry could remain afloat.

Why is this sale of the Bank of British Columbia to the Hongkong Bank necessary? As a non-banker, I would like to suggest that no bank the size of the Bank of British Columbia can withstand pressure from other corporations over a long period of time without getting into trouble. I would like to refer Hon. Members to a series of articles that appeared in Western Report magazine in January of this year. The first such article appeared on January 27, to be exact, and was entitled "Let the T-D deny it's trying to devour the West's winning bank". In the opening paragraphs, Mr. Ted Byfield said:

A curious paragraph apepared last week in a Vancouver Sun advertisement run by the Toronto-Dominion Bank. It informed Vancouverites that the Toronto-Dominion is "a bank for British Columbians." The T-D has a quarter of a million customers in B.C., said the ad. It is "a major investor in B.C.," and while "nation-wide" in its operations it's "a British Columbia bank too."

A similar advertisement appeared in The Calgary Herald, aimed at Albertans. No such ads appeared, so far as we can tell, anywhere else in Canada. The question, of course, is why. Why this sudden regional consciousness? Why this abrupt discovery by a purely Toronto-based institution of an intense identity with the aspirations of two western provinces?

There can be only one possible answer. The only bank that operates chiefly in these two provinces is the Bank of British Columbia. The ads must therefore be aimed at the Bank of B.C. Unlike its two hapless Alberta neighbours, the Canadian Commercial and the Northland, the Bank of B.C. has achieved in the last two years an astounding success. It has written down its real estate loans to realistic levels.

It has wiped out most of its sour foreign investments (something that Toronto's Big Five have not attempted and do not like to discuss). It has secured an enormous injection of new equity capital. It has registered a $7 million profit. It has steadily expanded the number of its depositors. It has western stockholders, western directors, and western management, and it stands ready to provide alternative financing for western business when our loan applications are referred by the Big Fives' branch managers to their bosses in Toronto. So what's wrong with it? In the view of orthodox Canadian banking, one thing alone. Its headquarters are at Burrard and Pender Streets in Vancouver. To be a "sound" Canadian bank it must be located within a block of King and Bay Streets in Toronto. It must, that is, belong to The Club.

• (1130)

The article goes on to describe what Mr. Byfield sees as a concerted attempt on the part of the Big Five, or certainly on the part of the TD, to siphon off or drain away the customers who have been the loyal customers of the Bank of British Columbia, and therefore, weaken its position in the banking industry in western Canada. He then also invited the Toronto-Dominion Bank to reply, which it did in a subsequent issue. But Mr. Byfield goes on to say, in the February 17 issue of the Alberta report, under the headline "Just a few figures the TD mysteriously didn't notice". He makes several very important points as follows:

1. Between June 1983 and June 1985, Alberta bank deposits increased by $599 million. That is, Albertans loaned that money to the banks. During the same period total bank loans to Albertans dropped by $1.24 billion. This can only mean that there was an outflow from Alberta of $1.84 billion over the period. Odd that the T-D didn't notice this.

2. Similarly between June 1982 and June 1984, deposits of B.C. residents increased by $1.347 billion while total reported bank loans in B.C. declined by $769 million, resulting in a capital outflow from B.C. via the banking system of $2.116 billion. During the subsequent 12 months to June 30, 1985, deposits continued to grow faster than loans resulting in another $170-million outflow via the banks.

3. In contrast, during the period from June 1981 to June 1983, bank loans in Ontario grew by $14.918 billion while bank deposits rose by a mere $2.359 billion. This reveals a $12.559-billion inflow into Ontario via the banks. This, of course, was when the Ontario-supported National Energy Program struck Alberta.

The statistics reveal another noteworthy fact. As of June 30, 1985, almost three-quarters of the $15 billion in business loans booked in Alberta fell into the category of $5 million or more, meaning of course that they would require approval in Toronto.

It goes on to deal with one other very important point. It says:

There is one other banking statistic that the T-D has (one suspects unwittingly) divulged. It operates, it says, 122 branches in Alberta and 101 in B.C. According to the Canadian Payments Association Directory, Volume 1 for 1984 the Toronto-Dominion Bank as of December 1983, had 134 branches in Alberta and 107 in B.C. In other words during that 24-month period the T-D has closed 18 branches in Alberta and B.C., almost one every six weeks, a cutback of about 7.5 per cent.

The same directory reveals that between December 31, 1983 and December 31, 1984, the T-D reduced its national branch network by 10 (from 983 to 973), six in Alberta, four in B.C. and none in Ontario. As the Wyoming cattleman said, "When things get tough in our industry, our bank keeps on loaning money to us 'cause our bank's got nobody else to loan money to". The T-D on the other hand can find all kinds of people to loan money to, but they aren't in Alberta and B.C.

Now that, Mr. Speaker, is one of the reasons why I suspect the Bank of British Columbia has been in some difficulty. There has been a cash outflow by way of deposits from British Columbia and Alberta into central Canada into the five majors. There has been a disproportionate unwillingness to carry on a loan activity in those provinces that would become comparable to the type of investments made by the people of those two provinces in the five majors. If there is that type of siphoning off of cash from the western provinces, and an attempt on the part of the TD, and possibly the others, but certainly on the part of the TD, to get a market share that normally would have gone to the Bank of British Columbia, we can understand why there has been some pressure on the Bank of British Columbia.

I mentioned yesterday that the other possible reason is the fall-out from the National Energy Program. It would be easy to blame everything, all of our ills and woes on the National Energy Program. While much of it can be, it may be unfair to do all of it. I think we can conclude this. As I mentioned yesterday, we now know that about $60 billion flowed out of Alberta alone by way of the National Energy Program into eastern Canada, $60 billion that otherwise would have stayed there and would have been used in some other way than through the national tax scheme. That $60 billion means a lot to the western economy. Is it not possible, Mr. Speaker, that the Bank of British Columbia, in all good faith during the good years, lent $5 million, $10 million or $15 million to a small business in Alberta or British Columbia on the assumption that the economy was doing well, it would continue to do well, and that the cash flow would continue? Then, with the introduction of that Draconian tax program, bit by bit the $60 billion flowed out of the western economy.

• (1140)

The businesses were shocked by that siphoning off of funds from the economy and could no longer continue because of excessive taxation. They became overly exposed and had to declare bankruptcy. The Bank of British Columbia had to recognize that many of its loans were bad loans. It was not necessarily because of bad management; some of them may have been. It was because of a dramatic shift in the economy which nobody in the banking industry could have predicted.

There are just not the reserves in an institution the size of the Bank of British Columbia to withstand that kind of shock.

It is tragic that we have to deal with this legislation. It should never have happened. However, since we must do so, I am pleased the Government is in a position to help the economy of British Columbia and to help the B.C. banking industry remain solvent. The good news is that we will now have a bank in place in British Columbia which will have the security to withstand the kind of shock the Bank of British Columbia had to face and was unable to withstand. The Bank of Hongkong with its reserves will not be easily shaken by the kind of treatment the Bank of British Columbia had to endure.

There are some other advantages. B.C. is looking forward to taking part in western and Pacific Rim expansion. All of us recognize that much business is legitimately carried on through networking. The Big Five in Toronto know personally members of the corporations with whom they do business. They pick up the telephone and make agreements. It is not because they are avoiding any traditional business-like way of doing things, but because they know each other. We call it networking. That is one of the big pluses in having the Bank of Hongkong involved in a very substantial way in the banking industry in B.C. It opens up a whole new world of networking in the Pacific Rim. That is something which is possible now and was not possible hitherto. These people know each other. There is every reason to believe that people involved in the Bank of Hongkong know who are the movers and shakers in the Pacific Rim industry. They are willing to work with them. They can talk to them. That is very important in this business.

I am pleased that the federal Government is operating as a steward of our resources. At a time when we are to monitor financial institutions to make sure that they are solvent and functioning well, we can be facilitators to ensure that the industry on the West Coast can operate as it ought to. The opposition Parties are supporting us in this endeavour. I am pleased that they are, but I know that they are kind of reluctant debutantes. They would like to use this occasion to flail the Government. I am pleased they are supporting us because they know the welfare of western Canada is tied up in the welfare of a sound banking industry in British Columbia.

I return to my original statement. If the five major institutions had not been so avaricious in their dealings with Latin American countries, if they had not looked for an easy way out and over exposed themselves in Dome Petroleum, that $2 billion or $2.5 billion would have been available to Canadian consumers, particularly western Canadian consumers. They tried to negotiate a quick, slick deal with Dome Petroleum and leveraged themselves beyond all reason in the transaction. They withdrew from the small business community the millions and billions of dollars which would have been available to consumers and would have been of vital importance to the health of the business community, particularly in western Canada.

Again I return to my beginning remarks. This Bill will facilitate the operations of the Bank of B.C. so that it can continue in business and can continue to contribute to a healthy western economy. In that event it will get its fair share of the market out there and provide healthy competition for the rest of the Canadian banking industry.

Mr. Riis: Madam Speaker, I listened with interest to my hon. colleague from British Columbia. I have two or three questions for him.

I would like to know what he would do if someone offered him the following deal—we will take $200 million of Canadians' money and give it to him, but once he gets it he must use $63 million of it to buy the bank. He would probably take that deal.

Why is the Hon. Member so enthusiastic about a deal where the people of Canada are putting up $200 million and getting absolutely nothing for it in terms of equity or ownership? Why is he enthusiastic about it being given to a foreign bank which will take $63 million of it to buy the Bank of British Columbia? How is that a good deal for Canada? Could he explain?

While he is on his feet, would he also explain why we have required no guarantees that the new Bank of British Columbia (Hong Kong) keep open its branches in B.C.? After the deal is finalized, it may perhaps decide to close down most of them. Why would the Government accept a deal with no guarantees whatsoever or no ownership whatsoever on $200 million of enticement money to the Hongkong and Shanghai banking corporation?

Mr. Friesen: Madam Speaker, in order to answer that question, I will draw on the wealth of experience I have had in the boardrooms of the banking industry in Canada.

Mr. Rodriguez: Your time is up.

Mr. Friesen: That is right. I will tell him why it is a good deal. It is because it is so much more attractive than the alternatives. Would the Hon. Member rather have, as the Chairman of the board said last night, a total loss, or would he rather have the bank stay in business? If he watched television last night, he heard the Chairman of the board say that it was no longer possible for the bank to stay in business. It seems to me that the $200 million was a much more attractive option than going out of business.

Mr. Riis: Guarantees.

Mr. Friesen: Guarantees. Knowing that the New Democratic Party believes in institutions, structures, regulations, and so forth as a security blanket for everything to stay in place—

Mr. Riis: Tell that to the CCB.

Mr. Friesen: —I can understand that it would not appreciate the dynamics of a free market competitive system. The fact is that the branches will remain open because it is good for the bank. The Bank of British Columbia intends to make money from them, and that is a good thing.

Mr. Garneau: Madam Speaker, I should like to ask a question of the Hon. Member for Surrey—White Rock—North Delta (Mr. Friesen). I listened to his speech. I would like the Member to explain to the House whether the difficulty of the Bank of British Columbia came from uncertainties facing depositors. In other words, were depositors withdrawing their funds because of lack of confidence in the bank after the unsuccessful bail-out of the Canadian Commercial Bank? Is it a question of confidence on the part of depositors or did the difficulty come from the quality of the assets? I would remind the Hon. Member that the Inspector General of Banks in October, 1985, after analysing the assets stated they were sound. Did the difficulty come from the deposit side of the balance sheet or from the value of the assets?

• (1150)

Mr. Friesen: Mr. Speaker, as I said in my earlier remarks, the man talks like a banker and he is good at reading ledgers. As I said to the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) the problem is solvency. When you are concerned about staying afloat, you are terribly concerned about why you are drowning. What you want is to be rescued. That is what we are dealing with today.

Mr. Garneau: Madam Speaker, I am very worried that government Members are reluctant to give us information. I do not disagree with the fact that the objective is to keep the regional banking system alive in western Canada. I said that in my speech yesterday, but it is the way it is done that concerns us. We are asking Canadians through CDIC to put $200 million into the equity of the Bank of Hongkong Canada, a division of the Bank of British Columbia which will be the Bank of Hongkong, without receiving any shares. The Bank of Hongkong will buy the quasi-totality of the assets and liabilities of the Bank of British Columbia for $62 million. If it is a question of uncertainties on the part of depositors, then the problem of the bank is a problem of liquidity, and there are solutions for that. If, however, the problem comes from the quality of the assets, that is another problem. Once again I want to ask the Member, who is a member of the government side and who must know the details, what is the situation about the quality of the assets? Another Member from British Columbia suggested yesterday that those assets may have to bear a $1.3 million loss. Is it true or not? I would like the Hon. Member to comment on that.

Mr. Friesen: Mr. Speaker, I think the banker would realize that if all of the insured depositors had to be reimbursed through the CDIC then it would come to $1.3 million. That is not a very desirable option.

Mr. Garneau: Is it true?

Mr. Langdon: Madam Speaker, I want to raise a question with the Member emanating from his suggestion that there is no option but to shut down the bank, and thereby obviously hurt British Columbia, or to sell it to non-Canadians, and thereby lead to further difficulties in our monetary policy being effective in the future. Specifically, was the offer not a viable offer from the Vancouver City Savings Credit Union? That offer could have been supported at less cost than this particular bail-out and it would have kept the bank in the hands of British Columbians instead of handing it over to foreign bankers from outside the country.

Mr. Friesen: Mr. Speaker, I would like to correct a couple of statements and perhaps make a point. The amount of foreign ownership in the banking industry has increased by less than 1 per cent by this transaction. It is well within the limits of the regulations of the Bank Act. I think the Member would agree with that. Certainly the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap, since he is a former financial critic, would agree with that. Second, while I think it is desirable to have as much of the banking industry owned by Canadians as possible, I do not think that we should be so xenophobic about foreigners coming into any kind of a commercial enterprise as long as it strengthens the Canadian economy. To say that it is a foreign bank—

Mr. Riis: That is correct.

Mr. Friesen: Yes, of course it is correct. I do not deny that at all. But to say it is a foreign bank is distorting the major issue. We will have a sound, very strong Class A bank on the West Coast that can contribute to a Pacific Rim option which British Columbia has had a hard time developing and which it hopes to exploit in the years ahead. We think this will help. It will not do everything, but it will help.

As to the other option which the Member speaks about referring to Vancouver City, as I understand it there were several weeks of discussions with Vancity's Board of Directors. I will restate what I said earlier, we are discussing a request by the Board of Directors of the Bank of British Columbia. The Board of Directors felt that the finances involved were not adequate to satisfy the security requirements for the Bank of B.C. Therefore, it did not become a viable option because the cash reserves were not there.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Resuming debate. The Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis).

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Madam Speaker, unlike the previous speaker, I am saddened to stand up this Thursday, November 27 to rescue another failing bank. I think it is fair to say, without causing any undue concern, that we have been asked as a Parliament to rescue a failed bank.

We must be perfectly clear about what led up to this emergency debate in the House of Commons rescuing the Bank of British Columbia. I remember not many months ago when the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and the then Minister of State for Finance stood in their places and indicated that we had nothing to fear because the Inspector General of Banks had evaluated the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northland Bank in western Canada and said they were totally sound and secure. The Governor of the Bank of Canada, Mr. Bouey, spoke out publicly for one of the very first times in Canadian history and said Canadian depositors and people doing business with the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northland Bank had nothing to fear, that everything was sound. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) stood in his place and said we had nothing to fear, that everything was sound with the two western banks. As you well know, Madam Speaker, all of those people were wrong. The Governor of the Bank of Canada was wrong, the Inspector General of Banks was wrong, the Minister of Finance was wrong, the Minister of State for Finance was wrong, and the Prime Minister was wrong.

• (1200)

As a result of many, many months of inquiry into the collapse of these two western banks it turned out that there was a great deal of bungling going on. The Inspector General of Banks was pointed at and told that he did not do his job properly, and he has left his position, as he should have.

In a sense, and probably inadvertently, Members of the House of Commons and the Cabinet responsible for the Canadian banking industry misled Canadians. They were using, I guess, the best information presented to them by financial officials, the Inspector General of Banks and the Governor General of the Bank of Canada, and said everything was fine. The Inspector General of Banks, in October of 1985, sent an inspection team to review the Bank of British Columbia's loan portfolio. That review concluded that the portfolio was sound. It was a sound banking institution. All Members of Parliament from British Columbia knew for many, many months, as it was known on the streets of British Columbia and on the streets of the financial community in Canada, that that was not the case. Anyone who understands banking, anyone who understood what was going on in the British Columbia economy, knew that that was inaccurate. Yet once again we are being asked to co-operate with the Government to ensure that this rescue package is assembled in two days. Unfortunately, once again, our backs are against the wall. We have no choice but to co-operate and we do so in the best interests of the Canadian economy and financial community.

Whether they be borrowers, creditors, depositors or shareholders, the confidence western Canadians have in the ability of the Government to manage the financial affairs of Canada is abysmally low. The Government has bungled in the matter of the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northland Bank. When that happens, confidence is eroded. When word got out on the streets of western Canada that the Bank of British Columbia was in some difficulty, there was no confidence at all that the federal Government, the Inspector General of Banks, the Bank of Canada, or the Minister of Finance could do anything about it. In fact, I suspect a lot of people in western Canada were hoping that no one, not the Prime Minister, the Minister of Finance, the Inspector General of Banks or anyone else would go to western Canada because every time they did, they messed up totally. If anyone here disagrees, please indicate where those people and organizations have not messed up. Where has their involvement not made the situation worse? Now we are told to have faith because this time they have done it right. Yet we do not know what the Government has done. We do not have any details. The Government asks us to have faith, but many of us have lost faith in its ability to manage the financial community.

Two years ago the Government promised it would bring in legislation to stabilize our financial industry, but it has done nothing. Last summer the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs sat late night after night, long into the summer, giving up what is traditionally the summer recess, to advise the Government on what it thought was appropriate. Yet the Government did nothing for months and months. What we have ended up doing now is almost unbelievable.

I think it is appropriate to indicate just what the Hongkong and Shanghai banking corporation is. Based in Hong Kong, it has 1,200 offices in 55 countries around the world, employing 46,000 people. It has consolidated assets of $110 billion. In short, it is one of the world's largest financial institutions. So when the Government approached them, presumably, or they showed some interest in this small western Canadian bank—

Mr. Friesen: Which Government?

Mr. Riis: —they said, "we would like to help out, but good grief, we need some help." So the Government of Canada said it would cough up $200 million of taxpayers' money. It would sugarcoat the deal to entice the bank into this rescue package. All the bank would have to do in return is pay $63 million. Can you imagine that kind of a deal? Canadians give the Hongkong Bank $200 million and the bank gives back $63 million of that to buy the Bank of British Columbia. You can bet that is a good deal for the Hongkong and Shanghai banking corporation. I suspect that in its boardroom in Hong Kong the directors are sitting around today drinking champagne and giggling because they cannot believe there is a Government that would be so silly. We have a Government that practises day and night to make up these goofy deals. Every deal so far has been just that. When you look at what we have done it is almost unbelievable.

I am a Member of Parliament from British Columbia. In my home community of Kamloops we have a Bank of British Columbia office. It does a good business and has helped an awful lot of people. As a matter of fact, my mother and father had some of their money on deposit in that bank. Yet what guarantees are there for the continuation of that bank's operations? None. If the Hongkong an Shanghai banking corporation wants to close down two-thirds of the Bank of British Columbia's branches, that is fine. If it wants to lay off all its employees in British Columbia, I guess that is okay. There are no guarantees. Nothing.

The Bank of British Columbia is a regional bank. It was set up so that western Canadians, mainly in Alberta and British Columbia, could have their financial decisions made in western Canada. If you were putting a deal together you did not have to go to an eastern bank. People were suspicious of eastern banks. Yet we now have two easts here, the near east and the Far East. There was some fear of the near east. We said we do not want Toronto bankers. I certainly do not think British Columbians want Hong Kong bankers making investment decisions in the province. Yet that is exactly what we have. The major decisions on the what, where, when and how on investments will now be made in a foreign country. It was bad enough when they were being made in Toronto, but now they will be made in Hong Kong.

Do members of the Government really believe that a board of directors in Hong Kong will have the best interests of British Columbians at heart when it makes its financial decisions? Of course not. When the decisions were being made in Vancouver, the people involved were concerned about their friends, their communities and their industries. They were personally involved. That is the kind of financial institution we need in Canada. We need regional institutions in this country to cater to special needs.

• (1210)

We have sold out once again. This is a sell-out Government. There were other people interested. In the beginning there was a great deal of negotiation with Vancouver City Savings Credit Union, one of the largest credit unions anywhere. It is very profitable and sound and does an increasing level of business each year. It indicated an interest, but I suspect it got very little consideration from the federal Government or the British Columbia Government. Mr. Vander Zalm, the Premier of British Columbia, is delighted that a foreign bank now controls the Bank of British Columbia. I cannot see how anyone can be delighted that a British Columbia bank is now foreign controlled. I do not see how that is, to use his terms, "a fantastic idea".

The Vancouver City Savings Credit Union was a co-operative. I do not suspect it got much of a hearing when it put forth various options for taking over the Bank of British Columbia and continuing to operate it throughout the province. It needed support from the federal and provincial Governments which was not forthcoming. No one was prepared to entertain those ideas.

Let us be honest. I believe that both the federal Government and the provincial Government of British Columbia believe that foreigners can do the job better. It is almost as though we welcomed foreigners to take over when we get into difficulty. When the Continental Bank got in trouble, it was rescued by Lloyd's of London, a British bank. The Morguard Bank was taken over by Security Pacific Bank of Canada, which is a subsidiary of an American-based parent. Now the Bank of British Columbia is being taken over by the Hongkong Bank. I believe that the Government actually thinks this is good business, that it is in our best interest to lose control of our own destiny. New Democrats do not believe that.

Mr. Rodriguez: What happened to good old risk-taking?

Mr. Riis: Well, there was no risk-taking in this. When one is given $200 million, one only has to give out $63 million and can pocket the rest, there is little risk involved. That is a very good deal for the Hongkong and Shanghai banking corporation.

Members of Parliament have not been given the necessary information. We have once again been asked to buy a pig in a poke by supporting this emergency legislation. When background information has been provided in the past we have found most of it to be inaccurate and inadequate. We are very reluctant to be enthusiastic about what we are doing today. However, in the best interests of the security of financial markets and the like we will co-operate. I say that with a great deal of trepidation and hesitation. We certainly expect the Minister of State (Finance) (Mr. Hockin) to ask the Finance Committee to examine this matter to determine what went wrong and who, if anyone, was at fault.

The Government ought to have built guarantees into this very lucrative agreement with the Bank of Hongkong. We should have guarantees that the branches will be kept open. The Hongkong and Shanghai banking corporation could say that the 41 branches in western Canada are not making enough money, that it is in the business of international profits and it would be in its interest to close them down.

That is not why the Bank of British Columbia was started. It was created to be sensitive to the needs and concerns of western investors, depositors and business people. It was concerned about its 1,400 employees. Now that this bank is in the hands of one of the largest foreign banks in the world, we have lost the sensitivity about which British Columbians felt so strongly that they kept their deposits in the bank during the very difficult times. I am disappointed that the Government did not make more of an effort to make a deal with a Canadian institution, specifically the Vancouver City Savings Credit Union which indicated a real interest. If it had been given the same support which the foreign bank received from the Government of Canada and a bit of support from the provincial Government of British Columbia, it could have put a deal together. We could have kept the decision-making on financial matters in British Columbia in the hands of British Columbians. Decisions on investment in B.C. could be made in board rooms in British Columbia rather than being subject to intervention from a foreign country.

If the Government of Canada had operated in a prudent, professional, business-like way in the best interests of western Canadians and had understood the reality of economic conditions in western Canada at the time, the Bank of British Columbia would not have gotten into difficulty. Western Canadians would have had confidence in the office of the Inspector General of Banks, the office of the central bank, the office of the Minister of State (Finance), the office of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), and the Government. It is very sad that that confidence no longer exists.

As far as western Canadians are concerned, we have simply replaced the dominance of an eastern bank in Toronto with that of an eastern bank in Hong Kong. The only change is from near east to Far East. In the minds and imaginations of British Columbian citizens they are equally far apart. This is a sad day. Had the Government of Canada acted in a more proactive manner rather than sitting back and trying to put together a sugarcoated deal to develop the Bank of Hongkong throughout British Columbia and parts of Alberta, we could have kept this bank in Canadian hands so that investment decisions for British Columbia would be made by British Columbians rather than in the board rooms of Hong Kong.

Mr. Garneau: Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) represents a constituency in British Columbia. Since this debate has begun, we have not been able to get much information from the government benches. Could the Member tell us whether, if the same offer as was made to the Bank of Hongkong had been made to Vancouver City Savings Credit Union, it would have been able to buy the Bank of British Columbia?

Mr. Riis: Madam Speaker, it is unfortunate that the Hon. Member has to ask this question, that we do not already have this information. That is a most reasoned question. It is unfortunate that we do not have the precise details. The best information we now have is that if the Vancouver City Savings Credit Union had been offered up to $200 million in enticement money from the Canadian Deposit Insurance Corporation and had received some support from the Province of British Columbia, the Bank of British Columbia would today be a western Canadian financial institution. We have only scanty information, but that is the best I am able to offer at this point.

• (1220)

Mr. Rodriguez: Madam Speaker, I recognize that my hon. colleague was the finance critic for the New Democratic Party in the previous session and I would like him to explain something to me. The CDIC is putting up $200 million to the Hongkong Bank to purchase for $63 million the Bank of British Columbia. That $63 million is going to be put in trust for the Bank of British Columbia or the Hongkong Bank to pay the shareholders. Does the Hon. Member not think that the whole $200 million ought to be paid to the shareholders of the bank? Why are they only going to receive $63 million? Where is that $137 million going? To whom is it going? Why can the shareholders not receive that money?

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, the response to that very important question is simply that the difference goes to the Hongkong Bank itself. That is the enticement, the encouragement, the sugar coating on this financial deal which has made it attractive to this foreign bank. I think it is important that we recognize that this is not some small financial institution. We are talking about one of the largest banks in the entire world. It has $110 billion in consolidated assets, branches in 55 countries and tens of thousands of employees. Is it realistic, Madam Speaker, to expect Canadian men and women, through their financial institutions and the Canadian Deposit Insurance Corporation, to use their hard earned dollars to bring in this giant to take over this small regional bank? Surely to goodness, as a bottom line, if we were going to use Canadian money in the amount of $200 million to give to this foreign bank, we should take some ownership or equity. We should not just shovel it out as a gift. Is this the free market-place at work? Is this the invisible hand of the market-place operating? As someone said the other day, not only is the invisible hand operating but we are getting the digit finger from that invisible hand.

I simply want to say that this is a very serious situation. We have no equity and no ownership. It is just an outright enticement grant, and that is wrong. As my hon. friend, the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez), pointed out through his question, the majority of the $200 million goes directly to the Bank of Hongkong, not to the shareholders of the Bank of British Columbia who are going to take an incredible beating as a result of this particular transaction.

Mr. Ravis: Mr. Speaker, I have some questions for my western colleague, the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis). I think he understands well the kinds of difficulties we went through in western Canada as a result, particularly, of the oil industry being devastated through the national energy policy. As someone from Saskatchewan, I am very disappointed to see any regional bank in difficulty, and we have had our fair share of them.

Why is the Hon. Member for Kamloops-Shuswap saying his back is against the wall, that he has to co-operate? He lives out west, in British Columbia of all places, the home of the Bank of British Columbia. Surely to goodness, he is prepared to stand up for those people who are depositors of that bank, the shareholders and the people who are looking at the positive side of this mess, who will be able to come out with this bank intact rather than letting it slide, in which case rather than $200 million being put in from CDIC, it could very well be triple or even quadruple that amount.

My second question is with regard to confidence being eroded. I remember so well, with respect to one of our own Crown corporations, the talk about banks which are in trouble. Does the Hon. Member think that that contributed in any way to the erosion of some of the western regional banks, especially when people in the media might scare the shareholders by indicating that perhaps a bank is in trouble? I would react in exactly the same way. I would rush down the next day and withdraw my deposits.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate receiving those questions from my colleague. Let me make it perfectly clear at the outset that we are in no way suggesting, nor is anyone suggesting, that the Bank of British Columbia should be allowed to collapse and fail as did the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northland Bank. That is not what we are saying.

What we are saying is that we have our backs to the wall today because the Government has presented to us only one option. It has said: "Buy this because if you do not, we are going to get into serious trouble financially", which is true. However, what are the other options? There was the Vancity option and other banks. Have we approached the other Schedule A banks with respect to their participation? Was there, for example, any effort made that the depositors and major shareholders mutualize the bank? Was there some interest in having the people already involved take over the bank? Was that option explored? But we were told nothing. There was no information. We were simply told: "This is it. You have to buy this". That is my concern. I am not suggesting for a moment that we should not rescue this ailing financial institution and try to get it back on its feet.

Second, I think we have to recognize that activities of the Bank of British Columbia, by the name itself, have been largely focused in British Columbia, although very recently in Saskatchewan because of the collapse of the Pioneer Trust.

While the national energy policy, as the Hon. Member for Surrey—White Rock—North Delta (Mr. Friesen) indicated earlier, might have had some minimal implication on the economy of British Columbia, we have also had the 50 per cent tariff on softwood, and the shake and shingle tariff imposed by the United States closed down a whole set of sawmills in my constituency and other constituencies. I am aware that a number of them did business with the Bank of British Columbia. I think it was a whole number of things. However, had the Government of Canada handled the collapse of the other western and regional financial institutions in a more sophisticated, business-like and appropriate manner, I do not believe the domino effect would have continued and we would not be debating this Bill today. I only hope that it will now stop and the domino effect will not continue to affect other financial institutions.

Mrs. Mary Collins (Capilano): Madam Speaker, I am pleased to have the opportunity to participate in the debate today on the the sale of the assets of the Bank of British Columbia to the Hongkong Bank of Canada. I come to the debate with mixed feelings because, of course, as one who comes from British Columbia, I remember when the Bank of British Columbia originally started. I remember the very high hopes we had for it. We were all excited about having our own bank in British Columbia. Now because of what has happened in the last few years, we have come to the realization that the bank itself cannot stand on its own and that the assets must be sold. So in that sense it is not necessarily a happy debate.

On the other hand, I am very pleased that the Bank of British Columbia has been able to work out what I think will be an excellent purchase arrangement with the Hongkong Bank of Canada, and I would like to speak about some of these issues as we proceed in the debate.

I have been concerned by some of the comments I have heard from my colleagues opposite because I do not think they truly reflect the situation with which we are dealing today. In fact, the legislation which is before us today is legislation which was asked for by the Board of Directors of the Bank of British Columbia. It is not something that the Government imposed on the bank. This is not a Government deal about which we are talking. It is a private sector arrangement between the Bank of British Columbia and the Hongkong Bank of Canada.

• (1230)

In order for this arrangement to take place without further erosion of the assets or confidence in the Bank of British Columbia the legislation we are discussing today will enable the sale to go through and to delay a meeting with the shareholders for 14 days. As the Government what we are doing is helping to facilitate the arrangement. This is not in any way a sale that we have arranged ourselves.

My colleague, the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis), asked what the other options were. If we look back at what has happened over the last year in which the Bank of British Columbia recognized the difficulties it was facing, as my colleague from Saskatoon has mentioned, we see that many of these difficulties were brought on because of the previous Government's initiatives concerning an energy policy which left many western companies in a bad situation. As I remember it, the Bank of British Columbia had a great deal of sensitivity for western concerns and western companies. Unfortunately, many of the companies which have had loans with the bank have not succeeded and have fallen on hard times. The loss position in the bank's loan portfolio has increased dramatically. In fact, it was in the fourth quarter of this year that the bank recognized that with the growth in this loss position it would have to take action quickly or face liquidation.

I understand that in the last few months the bank has had discussions with a number of other financial institutions, including financial institutions in eastern Canada. Perhaps some Hon. Members will agree with the article in this morning's issue of The Globe and Mail which quotes the President of the Toronto-Dominion Bank, Mr. Robin Korthals. He is reported as saying that the deal with the Hongkong Bank of Canada was the best solution under the circumstances for the shareholders and depositors of the Bank of British Columbia. He stated that their only other alternative was liquidation. He also pointed out that despite overtures from the Bank of British Columbia to other major Canadian chartered banks, and some U.S.-based banks, eastern Canadian banks would be concerned about the problems in the Bank of British Columbia's loan portfolio.

I also know that there were discussions with Vancity and that some proposals were put forward. However, my understanding is that that company was not able to raise the capital required. Discussions then proceeded with the Hongkong Bank of Canada.

I would now like to clarify a point since there has been some discussion about the decisions being made offshore. What is happening with this transaction is that the assets of the Bank of British Columbia are being sold to the Hongkong Bank of Canada and the new bank will operate as a Canadian bank, a subsidiary of the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank. The new bank will have its own board of directors based in Vancouver. Canadians will be involved in the decision making with regard to the future of the bank. It is not as if that function were suddenly to be shipped off someplace outside the country. The people I have met who will be involved with the bank have shown great concern and interest in the future of British Columbia. I have every confidence that they will make decisions that will be in the best interests of the business community and the depositors of British Columbia.

Another point I wish to make is that this sale is equivalent to 1 per cent of the total assets of banks in Canada. So in terms of foreign ownership it is a very minor portion of banking assets in Canada.

When one considers the alternatives compared to with what has happened, I must congratulate the Bank of British Columbia and the Hongkong Bank of Canada for being able to come to this arrangement. I believe it is an arrangement that will augur a great deal of potential in terms of the expansion of the bank's activities.

Premier Vander Zalm was here in Ottawa only yesterday. We met with him and he is pleased with this arrangement because it will give British Columbia another window into the Pacific Rim. We know of the extensive assets of the parent company, the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank. We know of its connections around the world and its experience and knowledge in terms of international finance. I believe it will be a positive asset in terms of opening up business opportunities in the Pacific Rim, something which is of top priority for British Columbia since we see much of our future in trade as being with the Pacific Rim.

One topic of discussion which we have undertaken with the Government is with respect to the possibility of establishing an international financial centre in Vancouver. The arrangement with the Hongkong Bank of Canada illustrates the importance of such a move, and it helps to facilitate its becoming a reality.

Other Hon. Members have mentioned a concern about what will happen to the branches and the employees. If a sale arrangement had been made with one of the traditional eastern banks which already has branches in British Columbia, then the chances would have been very great that the purchaser would close down the branches and that there would not be much potential for growth. However, the purchase by the Hongkong Bank of Canada, as pointed out by its President, presents an excellent opportunity for the Hongkong Bank to expand its personal branch network. Western Canada will continue to benefit by having a strong bank with its headquarters and its major assets in the west.

I recognize that there may have to be some rationalization in terms of the sale. We all know that in business people cannot be ordered to keep all their offices open and to keep all their employees. What the Hongkong Bank of Canada is buying as part of its assets is certainly these branches, deposits and goodwill that have been generated by the Bank of British Columbia. This deal augurs the best opportunity for the 1,400 employees and the 41 branches to be maintained.

There has also been some discussion that the taxpayers are involved in this deal. I would like to clarify that point because I think it is important that the public understand what is involved in this deal. The $200 million which the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation will be putting into the new bank is money to help recapitalize it. The funds from the CDIC are not funds from the federal Government or from general revenues. They are funds that the CDIC collects on a premium basis from all banks in Canada. The payment of this sum of money will help to ensure the continued viability of the new Bank of British Columbia.

I think this is a much better deal for the depositors of the Bank of British Columbia and for British Columbians. The other alternative was liquidation. If the bank were liquidated, there would be nothing to pay out to the shareholders and there would have been a potential run of up to $1 billion on the CDIC as a result. It seems to me that this course of action is the prudent one in terms of being able to maintain the credibility of the deposit base and the employment in the bank for what I hope will be many years to come.

• (1240)

Because of the sale of the assets to the Hongkong Bank of Canada, we now look forward to the existence of a new bank in British Columbia. This bank will have the backing, expertise and network of the parent company and this will assure depositors. In my opinion, most of the employees and branches will be maintained. I would hope that the bank will be able to deal with the problems of outstanding loans and the loss provisions and once again emerge as a very healthy western-based bank, a bank that will indeed be sensitive to the kinds of initiatives and opportunities for expansion and trade in the Pacific Rim that we in British Columbia wish to undertake.

I think this initiative and many other initiatives the Government is now taking will improve the economic conditions in western Canada. I know that my colleagues on all sides of the House are familiar with those initiatives. There have been important initiatives in the energy industry. We have got rid of the National Energy Program and the PGRT. There has been $1 billion of assistance to western farmers and there are activities in British Columbia through ERDA agreements. The Micro-Tel agreement is helping to strengthen the business base in British Columbia.

In the past two days, a group of 50 business people from the secondary manufacturing sector in British Columbia came to Ottawa to seek out new opportunities. Many exciting businesses are starting out in British Columbia in the marine and high-tech industries. Many of these businesses are looking for export markets and new kinds of financial arrangements. I am sure that the new bank in British Columbia will assist in those endeavours. With the kind of initiatives presented by the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) who recently implemented a $350 million line of credit for the Export Development Corporation to China, we will be able to look forward with some degree of comfort and confidence to moving in the right direction and providing a new financial outlook for businesses and the financial community in British Columbia.

I would hope that my colleagues on all sides of the House will give swift passage to this Bill today so that the sale itself will be able to go forward and meetings will be able to be held with shareholders. We in British Columbia will be able to look forward with confidence to a viable bank in British Columbia in co-operation with its new parent, the Hongkong Bank of Canada.

Mr. Ravis: Madam Speaker, I was particularly interested in hearing my colleague from Vancouver talk about the importance of western-based banks, particularly with reference to Pacific Rim countries. British Columbians certainly feel much closer to the Pacific Rim than do we in Saskatchewan, but when we think of international markets, we too look in that direction. I certainly feel much the same way as she does even though she lives in the City of Vancouver where much of the commercial activity is related to Asian countries.

I would like to ask the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mrs. Collins) what kind of reaction she has had, if any, from her constituents. Has she received any phone calls or has she spoken to anyone about how the average person in Vancouver feels about this issue? Do British Columbians think that it is a positive move to salvage the bank even though it will be owned by the Hongkong Bank which comes from outside the country?

Mrs. Collins: Madam Speaker, I would like to thank my colleague for the question. As I mentioned, Premier Vander Zalm was in Ottawa yesterday and had the opportunity to be aware of this discussion. He, of course, has welcomed this move and has drawn attention to the regional strength of the Hongkong Bank. He feels that this is an opportunity for unparalleled investment and growth opportunities in the region. The new arrangement with the Bank of Hongkong will help facilitate and accelerate that growth.

I was rather interested to learn this morning that the morning issue of the Vancouver Province ran this particular story on page 41. There was a rather unfortunate incident at the Vancouver Aquarium yesterday which took over the headlines. The local news has carried the bank story, and I feel that there has been a sense of relief over it.

Over the past year, there have been concerns about the Bank of British Columbia. These concerns began when it closed down some of its branches in Alberta and Saskatchewan. Over the past few months, that uneasiness has grown as rumours have circulated first in the financial community and then in the market-place. As we all know, rumours in the banking community can be very hurtful because they may undermine the credibility of a bank. When this happens, people wonder whether to leave their deposits in the bank or take them out.

It was important to have a firm deal announced and a very credible purchaser. That announcement would ensure a feeling of confidence on the part of depositors, and that is what has happened. I sense a sigh of relief in the community. Anticipation is sometimes worse than reality and the reality here has, I think, been the icing on the cake.

In my own constituency, I think there will be both a sigh of relief and a very good feeling about this action. The Hongkong Bank of Canada has been an extremely good corporate citizen of Vancouver. It has been involved in the business community and has been very accessible. It has created a great deal of goodwill so I think there will be a great deal of goodwill surrounding this particular sale as well.

Mr. Rodriguez: Madam Speaker, the Hongkong Bank will be receiving $200 million from the CDIC for this bank, but something else really bothers me. In Ontario, there has been a great deal of sensitivity about moneys taken from pension funds. There was the case of Conrad Black who went into the Dominion Stores employees' pension fund and court decisions have ordered Dominion Stores to put the money back into the pension fund.

I understand that part of the discussions surrounding the sale of the Bank to the Hongkong Bank have been about giving the new owners permission to go into the pension fund and remove $10 million which would then be paid to shareholders along with the $63 million. I understand that consultations are going on between the directors of the bank, the Inspector of Insurance, the Inspector General of Banks, and the Governor of the Bank of Canada. Are the employees being consulted in any way? Does the Government have a position on this, given the sensitivity about removing money from pension funds? If there are surpluses in a pension fund, they ought to be used to improve the pension plans for the employees.

I am not prepared to accept a Bill like this one. Perhaps the Hon. Member and the Government are prepared to break a bottle of champagne over this deal, but I think there are some tough questions to be asked. The question I am asking her is, can she stand in her place and agree that the funds from the employees' pension fund can be taken to sweeten the pay-off to the shareholders? I wish the Hon. Member would come clean with the House and tell the British Columbian people that is what she is prepared to do.

• (1250)

Mrs. Collins: Madam Speaker, I wish to reply to the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt (Mr. Rodriguez) on this question, because obviously it is a very important question. Perhaps I could draw his attention to the facts of what has actually happened with respect to the pension fund situation.

During the second quarter of the fiscal year 1986, the Superintendent of Insurance approved withdrawal of surplus contributions to the pension fund of the Bank of British Columbia, which was based on an independent actuarial report. That was then revoked and no further withdrawals were allowed, although it was left open for the Bank of British Columbia to reapply to withdraw the surplus, in accordance with new guidelines.

In connection with the sale to the Hongkong Bank of Canada, it is proposed that the pension plan accounts with the balances of all Bank of British Columbia employees be transferred to an equivalent pension plan with the Hongkong Bank of Canada. So those assets will be transferred. The Bank of British Columbia may reapply to the Superintendent of Insurance for permission to withdraw surplus funds remaining in the pension plan. If the application is successful, this surplus could accrue to the benefit of the shareholders. I would like to advise my hon. colleague that the Superintendent of Insurance and the Inspector General of Banks are on top of this situation. No withdrawals will be allowed if it is not in the interests of the employees of the pension fund. I can assure my colleague that they are much more aware than I am of how the actuarial benefits for the pension plan are done. I am confident that this matter will be addressed. If it is possible for any surplus funds to be transferred to the benefits of shareholders, it may be so. But there is no decision on that, and there will be no decision on that unless the Superintendent of Insurance and the head of the banking system for Canada are absolutely assured that that can be done without in any way harming the pension entitlement of the employees of the Bank of British Columbia. I am confident that this is the case.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The time for questions and comments has expired. Resuming debate, the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier).

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Madam Speaker, I cannot say I welcome the opportunity to take part in this debate. However, I am doing so because my constituents in the riding of Ottawa—Vanier are starting to wonder about this Government's ability to manage its affairs. Considering the experience we had with the Canadian Commercial Bank and the Northlands Bank, we are very seriously wondering, first of all, whether the Government really wants to know what is going on, and second, whether it is a good manager. And I could argue demonstrably that the Government has been very remiss in the way it has managed the business of this country and has failed to give the House all the information it needs to be able to give all these issues careful scrutiny.

Madam Speaker, Bill C-27, an Act to facilitate the continuation of the business of the Bank of British Columbia, is one more example of the Government's incompetence and clearly shows that this Government has yet to establish an overall policy, to review legislation and keep its promises. Goodness knows, Madam Speaker, they said they would do so many times. They said they would review all the legislation on financial institutions. And today we have yet to see any concrete evidence of this on the part of the Government.

[English]

I would like to remind the House that we have had at least seven or eight in-depth studies on the question of financial institutions, yet this Government has not come forth with anything. We had the Green Paper in April, 1985, we had the Wyman Report in June, 1985, we had the House of Commons committee go into the whole question in November, 1985, we had the Senate Finance Committee Report, we had the consultant's study on the Office of the Inspector General of Banks, we had the Estey Commission, and now we have from the Economic Council of Canada a whole document on this question published in November, 1986. Yet this Government has failed to act and has not come to terms with the problems that are facing this country. We are caught again in the House having to approve, in an adult manner, a very difficult situation. We are asked to approve urgently another bail-out of a bank.

Let me state very clearly that we are unfortunately in a situation of having to accept that information coming from the Government. We know for a fact, because of the documents that we have gathered overnight, that the information is not forthcoming, that the Government is not coming clean with us in the House as to what it knows on this matter. Therefore, we are very hesitant to go ahead and give the Government our support.

Nevertheless, will the Government make a reference of this whole question, in due course after passing the legislation, to the Finance Committee for extensive study? Will the Government allow witnesses, those involved in this whole mess, to come before the committee and explain to parliamentarians why this was necessary? We want to know when the Government will act on financial institutions. We want to have the assurance that the Government takes things seriously and will act accordingly. We would insist on guarantees for the staff of that bank. We would insist that they be taken into account and that the Government get the guarantees necessary for their continued employment. We would insist that the Government obtain from the Hongkong Bank an assurance that the Bank of British Columbia will be maintained as a regional bank. We believe that there is a need, and we believe that there is a right to have regional banks. We would like to see that guarantee from the Government that would give us that assurance. If we get these guarantees, reluctantly—very reluctantly—we will support this measure in the House.

[Translation]

Madam Speaker, the Government must act responsibly and, here again, it should take full responsibility for this disaster. The problems with the Bank of British Columbia are due to the incompetence of this Government and its lack of concern for the situation in our banks and for the need to amend the legislation on financial institutions. The Government has been amateurish in this respect. We saw this with the Canadian Commercial Bank, we saw it with the Northland Bank, and we are seeing it again. They come rushing in with a piece of legislation and they tell Members: Take our word for it, adopt this Bill because it is vital to support this bank and prevent another bank from going bankrupt.

[English]

I would like to give a brief summary, Madam Speaker, of what this Bill does. The Bill eliminates the need, under the Bank Act, for shareholders of a bank that has sold its assets to approve the transactions at a meeting to be held within 28 days of the announcement of the deal.

Second, the Bill proposes that 14 days' notice be given before calling a shareholders' meeting. Failure of the shareholders to adopt the proposal at the meeting will not affect the transaction itself. Instead, it would lead to the appointment of an assessor who will determine whether the $63.5 million paid by the Hongkong Bank should be increased or decreased. This evaluation would be binding. If the assessor concludes that the purchase price must be increased, CDIC, and not the Hongkong Bank, will pay the excess. If the assessor concludes that the purchase price must be decreased, the excess will be paid to the CDIC.

That is a brief summary, Madam Speaker, of this Bill. I will be brief because we are getting close to one o'clock. I would like to resume my comments at three o'clock.

This is a bail-out of a bank, Madam Speaker. It is a $200 million bail-out of a bank. Let us be frank about it. Let us call things as we see them, with the information that we have at our disposal right now and after reading the comments of the Minister and reading the comments of the Board of Directors of the BBC, which ruled out liquidation and I will quote as follows:

> Liquidation is not a reasonable alternative, as realized asset values would—be affected to the point that it would be questionable whether any amount would be available for shareholders of BBC and there might well be a loss to uninsured depositors.

An Hon. Member: That's a bail-out.

Mr. Gauthier: This means, Madam Speaker, that this is a bail-out.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Perhaps I may remind the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) that he will have twelve minutes later on to continue his speech.

It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair till two o'clock this afternoon.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[English]

ABORIGINAL RIGHTS

LAND CLAIM SETTLEMENT POLICY

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, important decisions are about to be announced by the Government on a new native claims policy. At last week's First Ministers' Conference in Vancouver, the government Leaders of both Yukon and the Northwest Territories tied the political and economic future of the North and its people to an acceptable new claims policy. They said that the new policy must recognize the right of aboriginal people to share in the resources of their traditional lands and to participate in the management and development of those resources.

On Monday Canadian churches sent a similar message to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), urging him to adopt a policy which recognizes aboriginal rights, including the right of self-government.

I expect these elements, which all fair-minded Canadians believe essential, must be incorporated into the new claims policy. I call upon the Government to announce the policy without any further delay.

* * *

MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT

ALLEGED BREACH OF PHOTOCOPYING PRIVILEGES BY LIBERAL MEMBERS

Mr. Ted Schellenberg (Nanaimo—Alberni): Mr. Speaker, recently the media reported that several Liberal Members of Parliament who oppose a leadership review this weekend have used their House of Commons photocopying privileges to duplicate press clippings favourable to their present Leader.

One newspaper reported that a set of clippings containing 28 pages was mailed to 2,000 delegates. That is 56,000 photocopies for which Canadian taxpayers paid.

I suggest we review the "Unacceptable Requests" list from the House of Commons Printing Branch to see if this is acceptable.

Section 1 mentions that "solicitations of party membership" are a no-no, as are "requests for monetary contributions". Section 6 indicates that "party leadership election campaign material" is unacceptable according to the Printing Operation Branch.

I suggest that when the Hon. Member for Shefford (Mr. Lapierre) tells the media "if you want to have anything printed—you're more than welcome as a Member of Parliament, aren't you", the answer is no; 56,000 times no.

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

OPPOSITION TO AMENDING PATENT LEGISLATION

Mr. Neil Young (Beaches): Mr. Speaker, I want to share with the House some additional letters we have received from Canadians about the Government's proposal to amend the Patent Act in so far as pharmaceutical drugs are concerned. One writer writes:

Dear Mr. Broadbent:

I am very much opposed to any legislation put forward that would increase prices of drugs.

I have no medical plan for drugs and could not afford to buy them for my high blood pressure and arthritis, if they go any higher. I am not old enough to receive old age pension and there are many Canadians like me.

Another person writes to the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) as follows:

I am 61 years old and have been retired for three years.

My wife and I live on a fixed pension which is not indexed as yours would be.

I enclose a photocopy of my most recent bill for Amiodorone. I am sure that you can readily verify my statement by contacting Toronto General Hospital . . . I can only wait very apprehensively to see what will happen to the prices of the rest of my medication.

Will you please send a copy of this letter to Mr. Andre so that he can be aware of how one former Conservative feels—

P.S. And a very Merry Christmas to you too!

* * *

INDUSTRY

SITUATION OF SUGAR-CANE REFINERIES

Mr. Bob Corbett (Fundy—Royal): Mr. Speaker, concern has been expressed by sugar-cane refiners and those who use refined sugar in their products about the inquiry by the Canadian Tariff Board into the operations of Canadian sweeteners industries.

This sector is understandably afraid that measures will be installed to make raw sugar less competitive than it is now. Should this favourable situation be seriously disrupted, the consequences would be very serious indeed.

In Saint John, New Brunswick, there are 400 men and women employed at the Atlantic Sugar Refinery whose livelihoods depend upon the competitive price of raw sugar. There are many thousands more people throughout the city and the region whose livelihoods indirectly depend upon the vitality of the refinery. The refinery plays a significant role in the economy of the region. It brings business to the port and injects millions of dollars worth of business into various goods and services.

I would strongly urge that no action be undertaken which would disrupt the vitality and viability of sugar-cane refineries and force the loss of jobs in an area already suffering from high unemployment and a weak economic performance.

S.O. 21

• (1405)

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

OPPOSITION TO AMENDING PATENT LEGISLATION

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, on the occasion of the thirty-fourth birthday of my colleague, the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps)—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Dingwall: —I rise today to express my outrage at the attempt by the Government to raise the cost of prescription drugs for Canadians. Canadians are appalled that a Government elected on its commitment to protect sacred trusts would take such action that will undermine the health and well-being of Canadians.

The Conservative Government has decided that appeasing foreign multinationals is more important than providing affordable prescription drugs for all Canadians. Canadians are well aware that the people who will be hurt the most by this legislation will be those least able to bear the burden of increased drug costs, namely, the elderly and those on fixed incomes. It is predictable and fitting for the Tories to ignore the interests of those Canadians, but as we all have come to know, Mr. Speaker, the interests of those with special influence and money will always get more attention from a Tory Government.

I call on the Government to withdraw this reprehensible piece of legislation immediately and allow the sick and the elderly to have affordable prescription drugs. If the Government believes so much in its case, why does it not call an election and call it now?

* * *

THE ECONOMY

INCREASED PRODUCTION LEVELS—CREATION OF FAVOURABLE INVESTMENT CLIMATE

Mr. Don Ravis (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, Japan's most powerful business group has highly commended Canada as being one of the most promising markets for Japanese foreign investment.

Today I rise in praise of Canada's economic stability which has provided an incentive for countries such as Japan to invest with us. Canada has significantly improved production levels which are of the best among OECD industrial countries. Clearly the investment climate is favourable in Canada. Our energy costs are low and the labour force is well educated. Japan recognizes a strong relationship among academics, industry, and the Government in basic research and development, and the cost of production has become more competitive.

The business group found the risk of investing in Canada to be among the lowest anywhere.

I congratulate individual Canadians and small-businessmen and women who have contributed to this surge in productivity and have helped stimulate growth in the economy.

* * *

INDUSTRY

LAY-OFFS IN NORTHERN ONTARIO INDUSTRIES

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, there is a need for immediate action by the federal Government to halt the rapidly declining economy of northern Ontario. Week by week we hear of lay-offs, closings, and shutdowns of different forestry and mining operations which are the backbone of our northern economy, culminating yesterday in the announcement of the closure of northern Ontario's largest sawmill.

We all know that the Government is aware of the economic situation within the region for it has talked of what it calls a recovery package for northern Ontario. However, actions speak louder than policy papers, statements, and the establishment of even more committees. Time is of the essence and the people of northern Ontario are anxiously awaiting leadership on the lumber front, announcements that will result in actions leading to job creation and the end to recurring reports of the laying off of workers in Ear Falls, Sudbury, Terrace Bay, Nairn Centre, Wawa, Thunder Bay—and the list goes on and on.

Northern Ontario does not want patronage, palliatives, or a penitentiary, such as the one planned for the Prime Minister's (Mr. Mulroney) riding with the Solicitor General's (Mr. Kelleher) acquiescence. What our communities need are jobs.

* * *

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

CRITICISM OF GOVERNMENT ACTIONS

Mr. Len Hopkins (Renfrew—Nipissing—Pembroke): Mr. Speaker, it is about four weeks ago today since we first learned that the Government and National Research Council senior officials were secretly arranging to close down the world-class Algonquin Radio Observatory in Algonquin Park. The Government is always bragging about promoting research and development, and yet it is destroying more science and technology and research and development in Canada than it ever thought of implementing.

During the election campaign the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and every Tory candidate talked about the wondrous things that were going to happen in the science community and every area of the Canadian economy. Today Canadians are wondering how they are ever going to tolerate or withstand another two and a half years of this Government. Everything the Government puts its hands on, from science and technology to the softwood lumber industry, seems to disintegrate before our very eyes.

The phasing out of the observatory in Algonquin Park and the severe cuts in science and technology are a disgrace on the part of the Government, and the departure of highly trained Canadians to other countries to find new challenges is a brain drain on Canada from which it will take many years to recover. It will be three weeks tomorrow since the announcement by British Telecommunications to close down the four year-old Mitel plant in the town of Renfrew—

Mr. Speaker: I regret the Hon. Member's time has expired.

* * *

HUMAN RIGHTS

U.S.S.R.—REPRESSION OF RELIGIOUS FREEDOM

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale—High Park): Mr. Speaker, for a Canadian it is impossible to imagine being the object of harassment or imprisonment for religious beliefs. It is a scenario we cannot comprehend because religious freedom is considered a basic human right to which we are entitled as Canadian residents. For Pavlo Hryhorovych Protsenko, a Ukrainian religious dissident, such freedom must seem luxury indeed. On June 4 of this year he was arrested while visiting the home of a nun. His family has been subjected to threats of arrest for attempting to defend his position. Prior to his arrest, Protsenko was detained at a Moscow station and searched, ostensibly, for drugs. All that was found was a Bible, a prayer book, a cross, and a religious manuscript describing the life of orthodox believers in the U.S.S.R. Dangerous items indeed.

• (1410)

It is inconceivable that we who enjoy such freedoms should stand silently by while such acts of repression are perpetrated against those who dare to stand up for their religious beliefs. I urge the Government to make Soviet officials forcefully aware of our opposition to their continued repression of religious freedom.

* * *

[Translation]

NEW DEMOCRATIC PARTY

PARTISAN ADVERTISING

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, I should like to draw the attention of the House to the fact that, this fall, Quebecers received correspondence from the office of the leader of the socialist Party.

This overtly political message relates to old age security pensions and the Canadian tax system, it is printed on House of Commons stationery, and it was delivered by Canada Post at taxpayers' expense.

Can the socialist leader explain why his Party did not pay for distributing their partisan literature?

Should the majority of Canadians, who are not socialists, be expected to foot the bill for this socialist message?

The socialist leader often talks about fairness, justice and integrity, but he ought to be the first one to show respect for Canadian taxpayers by paying for his own publicity without reaching into the pockets of others.

* * *

[English]

STATUS OF WOMEN

PROPORTION OF WOMEN IN JOB TRAINING PROGRAMS

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, last week the Canadian Congress for Learning Opportunities for Women released a very important study on the status of women in education, training, and development. The study says the proportion of women in federal job training programs dropped 10 per cent between 1977 and 1985. Those were Liberal years. Since the National Training Act came into effect in 1979, women's participation has dropped every year.

The federal Government dumped the NTA and replaced it with programs under the Canadian Jobs Strategy. CJS emphasizes private-sector training. The Congress believes that emphasis will worsen the trend of participation by women because employers are more likely to train men than women. As executive director Aisla Thompson observed: "CJS puts the training money into employers' hands . . . you can reach your own conclusion". This important study says that setting targets for groups such as women is not good enough. The Congress calls for controls which will monitor the amount and type of training women receive.

* * *

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

SUPPORT FOR AMENDING PATENT LEGISLATION

Mr. William G. Lesick (Edmonton East): Mr. Speaker, drug prices will not go up as a result of Bill C-22. Yesterday four prominent Canadian medical researchers strongly endorsed our Government's plan to provide patent protection to producers of newly-discovered drugs. They, as well as other academics, including Dr. John Bachinsky, Dean of Pharmacy at the University of Alberta, agree that these changes are long overdue.

Dr. Jacques Gagné, Dean of Pharmacy at the University of Montreal, used the example of a powerful new heart drug called milrinone. That drug is unavailable here as the manufacturer does not want to leave it open to copy-catting by generic drug producers. As you can see, Canadians are missing out on the latest drug discoveries. Why should we be forced to do without the best in medical technology? Why should we allow a brain drain to the U.S.? As a pharmacist and concerned Canadian, I, too, add my voice to the strong support given these changes and urge all Canadians to endorse the fairness of full patent protection for the benefit of all Canadians.

* * *

• (1415)

[Translation]

RAILWAYS

CN SHOPS IN MONCTON—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland—Kent): Mr. Speaker, the other day in New Brunswick, people heard the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. MacKay) say on the radio that CN should buy rails from SYSCO and create jobs for workers in Cape Breton.

I certainly agree with the Minister that CN should try and create jobs for Canadians. Only yesterday, CN announced it will be laying off 87 workers in Moncton, adding up to a total of 403 since 1985.

Why do we never hear federal Ministers from New Brunswick support local workers? We never hear them say that CN should maintain its shops in Moncton.

Why shouldn't these Ministers do like their colleague, the Minister of National Revenue? Why the silence about the CN shops?

If the problem is ever settled, the Ministers will never be able to say they did what they could, because they did nothing. If I didn't know better, I would think that as far as the CN shops are concerned, New Brunswick has no representation at all in Cabinet.

* * *

[English]

THE ECONOMY

JAPANESE REPORT ON FAVOURABLE INVESTMENT CLIMATE IN CANADA

Mr. John Oostrom (Willowdale): Mr. Speaker, Canadian Press reported yesterday that Japan's most powerful business group has issued a glowing report on the investment climate in Canada. In 1976 this same group, in assessing the investment climate, said that Canada was a country plagued with labour problems and political strife, and with a population of over-paid and under-productive workers.

This is clear evidence that the Government and its policies are making us an economic power once again. The report praised our free trade initiative with the United States and it praised Investment Canada, an agency we created for encouraging foreign investment. Further, the business group found that labour problems have died down. Our productivity levels are among the best of the Twenty-four Countries for Economic Co-operation and Development.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) deserve our congratulations for initiating this major economic reversal which will give all Canadians a secure financial future.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

TRADE

UNITED STATES DUTY ON CANADIAN SOFTWOOD LUMBER—POSSIBLE IMPOSITION OF CANADIAN EXPORT TAX

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister of Finance I will direct my questions to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Yesterday when we attempted to obtain answers about what the Government was proposing in the United States on the softwood lumber issue we received nothing but a stonewall. Fortunately that fountain of information, the Premier of British Columbia, revealed last night that the Canadian package will include stumpage fee increases and an export tax.

I would like to ask the Minister specifically about the imposition of the export tax. According to Article 1 of GATT an export tax must be applied to all contracting parties. What will the impact be of Canada honouring that obligation to apply an export tax to all countries to which we export lumber products? What will the cost be to the industry and its competitiveness? What will be the cost in terms of lost markets?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, as I have indicated before, while there are still negotiations under way it is, at best, premature to get into a discussion of the specific nature of any border measure which might be applied by the Government of Canada.

U.S. INDUSTRY'S ACCESS TO INFORMATION ON CANADIAN POSITION

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, why is it proper for the U.S. lumber industry to have full access to information on what the Canadian Government is proposing when the Canadian lumber industry does not have that information? Why are we discriminating against our own lumber industry? It will not be able to make any response to the directions or decisions which the Government has taken. Why are we supplying information only to the U.S. lumber industry?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, it is the U.S. lumber industry which brought the countervail action. It is the U.S. lumber industry which we must persuade to stop the countervail action. I think all Canadians would be encouraged by the statement of the Chairman of the Coalition for Fair Lumber Imports in the United States, Mr. Stanley Dennison, who said yesterday after his conversation with Mr. Baldrige:

> The Coalition is approaching this proposal in the spirit of seeking a mutual resolution to a difficult problem. We do have a number of questions about the proposal. Our next step is to consult with the membership of our Coalition and we plan to give our government—

—that is the United States Government—

> —a response during the coming week.

POSSIBLE TAX LEVEL

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, as indicated by the Minister's own response, is it not only fair that our own lumber industry be given the same right to make a response? Have we made it very clear in that proposal to the U.S. lumber people that there would be no consideration whatsoever of increasing, beyond the 15 per cent already established, the concessionary package which Canada is offering? Can we get that assurance from the Minister today?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member knows, there were extensive consultations between the Government of Canada and the industry, the provinces, and the labour unions involved, prior to the discussion with American authorities of the approach now under consideration. I really do think it is premature to discuss the contents or consequences of that approach until there has been a response by the U.S. lumber industry. They are the people who have to make the decision either to continue with or to withdraw the countervail.

• (1420)

COURSE CHOSEN BY GOVERNMENT

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Would the Minister explain carefully to the House and to the country why the Government chose an out-of-court settlement with the Americans on the softwood lumber issue when the entire lumber industry in Canada from coast to coast has urged the Government to stand firm and fight that countervail? In replying, I would ask the Minister if he would please not use that spurious argument that he is stopping the haemorrhaging of funds into the United States because he knows those moneys would be returned to Canada once the countervail action had been won.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I am very much aware, as is the Hon. Member because he approaches his responsibilities in this House seriously, that the process which is begun with a countervail action in the United States can be a very, very long process. It can lead to appeals of various kinds. It can consume not just months but years. While it is true that if at the end of that process we do prevail, as we believe we would, there would be the piling up of Canadian payments to Americans in the neighbourhood of $600 million a year, year after year after year. That is money taken out of circulation in Canada. It might be returned if we win; it would not be returned if we did not.

Mr. Axworthy: It would be returned.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): It would at least take a long time. What the Hon. Member should be particularly concerned about, coming as he does from northern Ontario, is that it would perpetuate a climate of uncertainty which is not good for the industry and particularly not good for the people who work in that industry.

Mr. Penner: Mr. Speaker, under a Liberal Government this country fought and won a countervail action.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

COUNCIL OF FOREST INDUSTRIES

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, in considering the imposition of an export tax on lumber, how does the Minister respond to the Council of Forest Industries who have said that such a tax would be outrageous, unaffordable, that it would lead to the closure of more sawmills and the loss of thousands of more jobs?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, a Liberal Government left in place a trading system which has resulted in this countervail.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): A Progressive Conservative Government is seeking to negotiate a better trade arrangement with the United States—

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): That is pie in the sky.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): —so we will not be faced with this kind of situation in the future. With regard to what I take to be the substance of the concern quoted by the Hon. Member, we are confident that any border measures we take will not result in any actions under the GATT.

STATEMENT MADE BY CANADIAN MINISTER

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. He will be well aware that at the end of last week the Minister for International Trade said: "We have a firm commitment from the United States administration that they will seek to have the industry withdraw the petition". The Minister will also know that last night it was reported that the United States lumber industry was not at all satisfied with this last final, final, final offer and it has indicated that the United States administration is behind it all the way. Can the Minister explain why the Minister for International Trade said that the support of the American administration was behind this offer?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I have two responses. First, she said it because it is the case. Second, the Hon. House Leader of the New Democratic Party may find it more useful to rely upon the actual words of the chairman of the Coalition for Fair Lumber Imports in the United States which I have read into the record than relying upon news reports of the attitude of that organization. They are capable of speaking for themselves. They have.

STATEMENT ATTRIBUTED TO UNITED STATES SECRETARY OF COMMERCE

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, perhaps the United States Commerce Secretary, Malcolm Baldrige, is also able to speak for himself when he indicated that he never intended to convey the impression that a 15 per cent lumber price increase by Canada would do anything more than give the two sides something to talk about. He feels his credibility is being undermined by the Minister for International Trade of Canada. Will the Minister simply explain why Mr. Baldrige says that in no way did the administration of the United States give any indication that it was in support of this 15 per cent position?

• (1425)

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Hon. Member would help me out a little bit. He has just quoted an inaccurate CBC report about the position of the Coalition for Fair Lumber Imports. Will he tell me from what document he is quoting now and whether or not the declaration he just read is in quotes?

RESPONSE TO CANADIAN APPROACH

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, rather than refer to the article in The Financial Post by Mr. Solomon—

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): In quotes?

Mr. Riis: —in quotes—I wish to ask the Secretary of State for External Affairs this question.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Riis: After we did our homework and put an iron-clad position before the ITC we backed off. Then the Minister for International Trade put forward the last and final offer of 10 per cent, after doing our homework, and it failed. We now have another final offer of 15 per cent. Why is it that after we do all of this homework, time after time we come up getting an "F" on our report card?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, Mr. Solomon is not Mr. Baldrige.

What is at issue here is an approach that is being discussed. I have just read the statement of the Coalition for Fair Lumber Imports in the United States which brought the countervail action. It is seriously considering the approach. I think that all Canadians who are interested in bringing stability to the Canadian industry and in keeping money in Canada hope that that approach will succeed.

* * *

NUCLEAR ARMAMENTS

SALT II AGREEMENT—ALLEGED BREACH BY UNITED STATES

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri—Westmount): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. The Government has been almost silent while the United States has jeopardized disarmament talks, pursued its star wars program, launched a new program for chemical weapons, refused to match the Soviet moratorium on nuclear testing, and today we learn that it intends to breach its obligations under SALT II by putting a B-52 in service armed with Cruise missiles. Canadians want to hear from the Government. They want a message sent to the Americans. Will the Secretary of State for External Affairs send a note of protest to the President of the United States advising him that Canada finds a breach of those obligations under SALT II totally unacceptable?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, we have made clear our views about the importance of respecting the SALT II limits from the very beginning of the rumours that there might be an intention on the part of the United States to breach those limits. Within the last week both myself personally to Secretary Shultz and the Prime Minister to President Reagan reaffirmed our position that it would be better for the world if the United States would respect the SALT II obligations. Canada is heard from on international affairs and arms controls questions. Canada is respected on those questions.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): Then do something about it.

[Translation]

OBLIGATIONS STEMMING FROM SALT II TREATY—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri—Westmount): Mr. Speaker, I think the time has come for action. I would like to ask the Minister: Would the Government consider putting pressure on the United States to respect its obligations under the Salt II Treaty and stop the Cruise missile tests?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, in Canada we have an obligation, a commitment signed by the previous Government of which the Hon. Member was a Minister, a commitment to NATO on the Cruise missile. We intend to respect our obligations.

* * *

[English]

TRADE

UNITED STATES DUTY ON CANADIAN SOFTWOOD LUMBER—POSSIBLE RETURN OF REVENUE

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs who, frankly, is trying to squirm out of this issue of return of duties. He said that these duties might be returned. I wish to ask point-blank the following of the Minister. Is it not absolutely clear-cut that if we win our case, as every Minister has predicted we would, that we would get every penny back from the United States?

• (1430)

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Langdon: I thank the Minister for the most frank answer we have heard this week.

EFFECT OF POSSIBLE EXPORT TAX ON JOBS

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, would the Minister admit the findings of the Informetrica study on the question of countervail on softwood lumber which shows that a 15 per cent export tax will cost Canadians exactly as many jobs as a 15 per cent duty from the United States, and that in fact it will throw at least 14,000 workers out of work?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I am rarely sure just what it is the Hon. Member is asking me. I am afraid I am no surer about that question than I am about several he has put to me.

I think the Hon. Member is asking me to comment on a study made with regard to a measure that has not yet been put in place. I cannot do that.

CANADA POST CORPORATION

LOCATIONS OF SUPERMAILBOXES—EFFECT ON PROPERTY VALUES

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister who is answering for the post office, if there is one. On November 24 Fred Masaro went before the North Vancouver District Council to complain that Canada Post, without warning or apparent concern for individuals, installed a supermailbox in front of his house. Is the Minister aware that the placing of supermailboxes in front of a house depreciates the value of that property? A recent study in Ontario showed that this depreciation amounted to $7,000 on a $100,000 house, and in Calgary $14,000 on a $200,000 house? Is that fair?

Hon. Bernard Valcourt (Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of the matter the Hon. Member has raised. Certainly I will look into the matter today.

[Translation]

REQUEST THAT INCONVENIENCED HOME OWNERS BE COMPENSATED

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, given that the Government has created a superfiasco when it introduced the supermailboxes, will it compensate Canadians whose real estate property value has declined since these supermailboxes were installed in front of their homes?

Hon. Bernard Valcourt (Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism): Mr. Speaker, one thing Canadians have made quite clear is that they now would much rather have these supermailboxes than the old rusted green boxes of the Liberal Party. Mr. Speaker, a Decima poll taken last summer indicates that 93.4 per cent of Canadians serviced through these supermailboxes are satisfied with them.

* * *

[English]

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

AMENDING PATENT LAW—POSITION OF ROYAL CANADIAN LEGION

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. What has been his response to a letter that says in part:

> On behalf of our organization, which has a membership in excess of 590,000, I wish to express disapproval to the Government's proposed course of action which may force Canadian taxpayers to pay more than they now do to subsidize the pharmaceutical industry.

What has been the Minister's answer to the Royal Canadian Legion?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, my answer has been to encourage that organization and every other organization to have members of the NDP let us take this Bill to committee so that we may explore all aspects of it, and so the Legion and everyone else can see that this is a good Bill for Canada. It will generate thousands of jobs, it will improve health services to Canadians, it is fair to consumers, and it is a package they ought to support.

Mr. McCurdy: I hope that the Minister of Veterans Affairs listened to that answer which was no answer at all.

REQUEST THAT MINISTER RECONSIDER LEGISLATION

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, let me pose another question. Don't you think, in view of the fact that the—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I know the Hon. Member will pose the question through the Chair.

Mr. McCurdy: Does the Minister not think—

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. McCurdy: —that in view of the objections of the Government of Ontario and the Ontario Hospital Association, and in view of the help he received from scientists yesterday which left him so helpless, he ought to reconsider this Bill, go back to square one, give us a Bill in the interests of the Canadian people, and cut the strings to the United States?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member is so confident in his opinion, why then is he not encouraging his colleagues to help us get this Bill into committee so we may explore all those questions? He knows that this is a good Bill. It is a necessary Bill if Canada is to participate in these important areas of health research. It is for the benefit of Canadians so that we may develop drugs and cures which it will serve the health needs of Canadians as well as the economic welfare of young Canadians who are now doing research and earning degrees in this area. They will be able to have jobs in Canada. I do not know why members of the New Democratic Party are opposed to having those people work in Canada.

* * *

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

DELETION OF BIRTHPLACE FROM PASSPORT DATA

Mr. John Oostrom (Willowdale): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. A short time ago groups in Canada raised with the Government the concern that having the places of birth of passport holders printed on their passports could, in certain cases, make them the targets of terrorist attacks. The Government undertook to review the policy at that time. When will the Government announce the results of that review?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, let me thank the Hon. Member for the very real interest he has taken in this issue. He has helped bring to my attention deficiencies in a former policy. We have changed that policy and I am pleased to announce today that it will now be possible for Canadians to obtain Canadian passports without having places of birth shown.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

ATLANTIC CANADA OPPORTUNITIES AGENCY

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. Much has been said about the Atlantic Canada Opportunities Agency. In fact the Premier of Nova Scotia has said of this agency: "You can set up an agency—but unless you fund it properly, then it wouldn't work".

How much money has the Government budgeted for this particular agency? What is the time frame for the agency? Will the Deputy Prime Minister inform the House whether or not a specific request has been made of the First Ministers of the Atlantic provinces to make matching contributions to this agency?

Hon. Bernard Valcourt (Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member knows, the Government has appointed a person to effect consultations with the Atlantic Premiers and with groups in Atlantic Canada on the agency in question. We will have to wait for the report of this gentleman before we will be able to answer the specific questions raised by the Hon. Member.

PROVISION OF FUNDING

Mr. Dave Dingwall (Cape Breton—East Richmond): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. I admit that consultations are important but what is more important is action. I find the vacillation on the part of the Government of Canada with regard to this funding issue to be remarkable. Would the Deputy Prime Minister inform the House and the people of Atlantic Canada how much money will be bugeted for this agency, or is this yet more political rhetoric on the part of the Prime Minister who has no real concern for the people of Atlantic Canada?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the Government has initiated a number of programs which would help alleviate the problems in Atlantic Canada including the Atlantic Enterprise Program, the Cape Breton investment tax credit, the topping-up assistance program, and the Enterprise Cape Breton Program. All of these programs have been geared to help specific areas and indeed the entire Atlantic region. If the Hon. Member has a little patience, I am sure he will find that the program that was announced in the Speech from the Throne will be promulgated in a proper fashion with Atlantic Canadians having input in the process so that it will serve not only the Atlantic provinces but indeed will allow Atlantic Canada to take its rightful place in the Canadian Confederation.

* * *

[Translation]

NATIONAL DEFENCE

PROPOSED TEST RANGE IN LAC-SAINT-JEAN REGION—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): My question is for the Associate Minister of National Defence and relates to the proposed F-18 fighter firing range in the Saguenay—Lac-Saint-Jean region. Considering that for three and a half years now local residents have been voicing strong opposition to this military project, can the Minister assure the House that, if Quebec Government officials were to withhold approval for this project, the federal Government would accept their decision and refrain from expropriating these Crown lands?

• (1440)

[English]

Hon. Paul Dick (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, the fact of the matter is that negotiations have now been going on for about eight or ten months. There were very slow replies made to the inquiries by the federal Department in the winter and spring. But the two Governments have been sitting down and discussing these matters. It is not only that range, the Péribonca Range, but there are two other ranges, one in Ungava and one near Labrador City. So there are three ranges involved in the Province of Quebec. We are continuing with those discussions.

[Translation]

REQUEST THAT DEPARTMENT'S RESPONSE BE MADE PUBLIC

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): A supplementary, Mr. Speaker. Of course the Minister did not answer my question, but local residents did send me metallic confettis which were dropped from military aircraft flying over their farms and which even killed their ducks. I have some here, Mr. Speaker. Will the Minister make public his Department's answer to the questions asked by the Quebec interdepartmental committee, apparently as unacceptable and unsatisfactory as it is? When will he make the answer public?

[English]

Hon. Paul Dick (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, it seems that the unacceptable and unsatisfactory thing is the Member breaking the rules of Parliament once again, as he always does when he tries to make a point around here.

* * *

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

INTRODUCTION OF LEGISLATION ANNOUNCED IN SPEECH FROM THE THRONE

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of the Environment. Two months ago in the Speech from the Throne we were promised a new environmental protection Act, we were promised measures to improve water quality, we were promised measures to safeguard citizens from the hazards of chemicals, and we were promised that there would be established a work-place hazardous material information system. That was two months ago. Would the Minister advise the House and Canadians when we can expect to see at least the first of these pieces of legislation introduced in the House?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the Environmental Protection Act has been approved by all relevant committees of Cabinet, and by Cabinet itself. It is now being drafted by the Department of Justice. Most of the drafting is completed. I expect to have the complete drafted Bill in my hands within the next three weeks. We will then make it public as an instrument for consultation throughout the winter for entry into Parliament early in the new year.

* * *

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES

CANADIAN SECURITY INTELLIGENCE SERVICE—VIOLATIONS OF ACT

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Deputy Prime Minister. The Canadian Security Intelligence Service is breaking the law. The Government knows it, and it is doing absolutely nothing about it. For over two years the spy agency has been systematically violating the Official Languages Act. The Government's inaction reflects its lack of commitment to bilingualism. Will the Deputy Prime Minister admit today that the spy agency is in fact breaking the law? Will the Minister take immediate action to ensure that the Canadian Security Intelligence Service complies in each and every respect with the Official Languages Act?

Hon. James Kelleher (Solicitor General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I would like to assure the Hon. Member that we are aware of some difficulties down in the Province of Quebec with respect to the use of the French language vis-à-vis CSIS. But having been made aware of it, I can tell you that this Government acts. We requested several months ago that the Security Intelligence Review Committee look into the problem. It is conducting a full study on it. I expect to have a report in my hands by the end of the year.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, the problem isn't down in Quebec, it is right here in Ottawa with that Minister. The law is being broken. The Government knows it, and it is doing absolutely nothing about it. You cannot be half pregnant. You have to comply with the law.

REQUEST THAT SERVICE BE ORDERED TO COMPLY WITH ACT

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): I would like to repeat the question to the Government. This time I hope that the Deputy Prime Minister answers, because we are getting nothing from the Solicitor General.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Distance yourself from Bay Street.

An Hon. Member: Watch your back, Joe.

Mr. Nunziata: Will the Government take immediate action? If the Government is truly concerned and truly committed to bilingualism in Canada, will it act to order the Canadian Security Intelligence Services to comply, starting today, with every section of the Official Languages Act?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman has repeated the question. The Hon. Solicitor General has provided a full and comprehensive answer. Surely that should be good enough. The Solicitor General will certainly undertake to report back to the House immediately upon the investigation being concluded.

* * *

[Translation]

AIR TRANSPORT

MONTREAL REGION—CONSULTATIVE COMMITTEE'S REPORT—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Transport concerning the advisory committee report to the Cabinet committee on the development of the Montreal region.

The advisory committee concluded that Toronto would stand to benefit, and that services would decline in Montreal. It is indeed a two-airport system, and committee members have recommended that all air transport activities be concentrated at only one airport, Dorval in this case.

Is the Government prepared to accept this recommendation and shift all activities to Dorval, or will it maintain the two-airport system in Montreal regardless of the negative impact on air transportation in that region?

Hon. André Bissonnette (Minister of State (Transport)): Mr. Speaker, I answered this question earlier this week but, for the benefit of Hon. Members, I will repeat it again and say that the Montreal advisory committee report is very important for the development of Montreal and the region. As Mr. Picard pointed out, the chapter on airports was the result of an analysis made by another group on airports headed by Mr. Sauriol which proved to be rather incomplete.

The Government and I, in this case . . . I am considering every aspects of this report and will make an announcement very soon.

AIR SERVICES AT MIRABEL—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a supplementary question to the Minister.

Is the Government prepared to maintain the white elephant created by the Liberals if it should decide to keep Mirabel operational, for now is the time to upgrade air transportation in the Montreal region, in Dorval to be precise?

Hon. André Bissonnette (Minister of State (Transport)): Mr. Speaker, I do believe the Hon. Member ought to seek relevant information about the Mirabel-Dorval issue before before making unfounded statements in the House.

Any time he wishes I am prepared to give him a thorough briefing along with full background information just so he might be in a better position to appreciate our problems at Mirabel and Dorval.

Hopefully I will have the full support of the Hon. Member when I announce our decision.

* * *

[English]

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

LAY-OFFS AT MONCTON SHOPS—GOVERNMENT COMMITMENT

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland—Kent): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport. Yesterday CN announced a further lay-off of 87 workers in Moncton. This brings the total lay-offs in Moncton to 400 since 1985. More lay-offs are planned before Christmas. How many more lay-offs will there be in Moncton before the Minister of Transport honours his Government's commitment that there would be no massive lay-offs, or have he and his Government forgotten the meaning of the word "honour"?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I think that the hon. gentleman is fully aware of the fact that the Canadian National, with the encouragement of the Government, has done everything possible to ensure that further employment would be offered in Moncton to certain employees who had to be laid off in Moncton because of changes in the rail transportation services in this country about which neither CN nor we can do anything. It is a pity that the hon. gentleman has not attempted to persuade the small minority, in the two unions which refuse to accept the proposals that were put forward. He should be using all his efforts to persuade them to withdraw their objection, so that these people can be employed, and so that Moncton's economy can be strengthened as we have arranged, if only they would co-operate.

[Translation]

REQUEST THAT MINISTER MEET UNION LEADERS ON ISSUE OF CN SHOPS IN MONCTON

Mr. Fernand Robichaud (Westmorland—Kent): Mr. Speaker, I am doing everything I can to try and persuade the Minister to take some kind of action because, up to now, he has done nothing at all and it is about time he moved on this issue.

Is the Minister prepared to meet with the union leaders to discuss the problem of sub-contracting and any option that might save jobs at the CN jobs in Moncton?

• (1450)

[English]

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the hon. gentleman conveniently forgets that during the period from 1980 to 1984 while his Party was in power, 8,000 jobs disappeared from the Canadian National Railways system, with the hon. gentleman not opening his mouth once about them.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Robichaud: What about now?

Mr. Crosbie: In respect of what action we have taken, we have set up a fund with CN of $4 million to help economic and industrial development in Moncton. I have met with Premier Hatfield. I met with him again yesterday and with the Hon. Member from Moncton who is trying to be constructive and do something, while the hon. gentleman is doing nothing but being destructive and negative in his approach to the problem.

FINANCE

HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY'S FUR AUCTION—BIDDING IN U.S. CURRENCY

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Finance. The Hudson's Bay Company will be holding a major fur auction in Toronto in which it is insisting, for the first time ever, that all bids be made in American dollars. Would the Minister explain to Canadian fur merchants why they cannot buy Canadian goods on Canadian soil with Canadian dollars?

Hon. Tom Hockin (Minister of State (Finance)): That is a good question, Mr. Speaker. I will try to get the answer for the Hon. Member.

* * *

[Translation]

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

LAY-OFFS IN SAINT-LAURENT REGION—POSSIBILITY OF MORATORIUM—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Guy St. Julien (Abitibi): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Transport. For several months, the CN in the Saint-Laurent area has been preparing a single track strategy for Abitibi—Témiscamingue: the exit track. Following all the memoranda made by the CN to prevent the use of its tracks, the Senneterre Chamber of Commerce, our CN workers and their families, our mayors and businessmen are worried about some of the lay-offs orchestrated by the CN.

Mr. Speaker, my question is as follows. Would it be possible to get an immediate moratorium on these lay-offs, before an independent company, in co-operation with the Government of Quebec and the Government of Canada, starts and completes a study on the railway network in Abitibi—Témiscamingue?

Hon. André Bissonnette (Minister of State (Transport)): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member's question is most relevant, and I want to congratulate him on his concern for the people of his riding. Mr. Speaker, CN has to rationalize if it is to continue to exist, for the greater benefit of Canadians and of these tens of thousands of workers.

Mr. Malépart: Who wrote the speech?

Mr. Bissonnette: I thank the Hon. Member. Not long ago, I had a meeting with CN representatives, even this morning, as a matter of fact, and employees affected by cutbacks in the region will be reassigned to other jobs. They will be retrained and transferred, if they are willing.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that these measures will be of assistance to the people of Abitibi.

[English]

FOOD

IRRADIATION WITH COBALT-60

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. The public is increasingly nervous about the idea of irradiating food with cobalt-60. Apparently it is now the practice south of the border with certain food items. Could the Minister inform the House whether he intends to approve the practice and, if so, what time frame he has in mind?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the process of irradiating certain foods, such as in the treatment of potatoes, onions, wheat, and flour, has been used in the United States for some period of time. It is being used in Canada as well. In 1983 the former Government put forward an information letter proposing further regulations for the expansion of the process developed in Canada by, for example, AECL, a Crown corporation. I have recommended that we put forward proposed new regulations regarding the process, possibly in February next year. There is then a period in which there can be public comment. That did not exist before when regulations were to be changed. It is the process we now have in mind. Every study by the United Nations, agriculture, and the World Health Organization, within their prescribed limits, indicates that it is a safe process.

SCIENTISTS' RESERVATIONS—SAFETY OF PRACTICE

Hon. Chas. L. Caccia (Davenport): Mr. Speaker, there is a tremendous pressure to add additional food items such as poultry and certain fruits to the irradiation process. Certain scientists have expressed serious reservations about the health consequences of the practice, as already observed on mice. In view of these facts, will the Minister assure the House that he will not proceed with additional items until he is 100 per cent sure that the practice is safe and until the public at large is clearly informed about irradiated produce by way of labelling?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the concern for safety is overriding, and that remains. I could only repeat the information which we have in Canada—both prior to the election and today—that it is a safe process within the limits which have been prescribed. All international studies have indicated that. What I have said additionally is that unlike previously regulations can be changed now. The Government has put in place a pre-notice period wherein the various representations to which the Hon. Member has referred can be made.

Oral Questions

AGRICULTURE

ASSISTANCE FOR GRAIN PRODUCERS—ROLE OF PROVINCES

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt—Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Agriculture to obtain some clarification on the billion dollar farm aid promise. On October 23 in the House the Minister suggested that he hoped the provinces would add supplementary funds to the federal program. How can he justify supplementary provincial payments in this case, yet vigorously oppose what he called provincial "top loading" in all other agricultural assistance schemes such as agricultural stabilization programs?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member is mixing apples and oranges in his question.

Mr. Althouse: It is the same principle.

Mr. Wise: No, it is not. The Hon. Member makes the same mistake as do many people on the fringe of agriculture by trying to generalize. I indicated to him that he was quite accurate in his reference to encouraging provincial assistance. Given the shortfall in the grain and oilseeds market today, it is obvious from our point of view that those farmers need all the help they can get from the federal Government and indeed from the provincial Governments. The Hon. Member knows enough about tri-party stabilization not to confuse it with this issue or to combine the two of them in the same question.

Mr. Althouse: I assume from that answer that, if the provinces commit funds, they will be committed on an equitable basis; they will all commit equal amounts of funds.

REQUEST THAT PROVINCES NOT BE PERMITTED TO GARNISHEE FUNDS

Mr. Vic Althouse (Humboldt—Lake Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have another question for the purpose of clarification. Since the Minister previously indicated that the billion dollars would not be used as a loan, could he further guarantee that the provinces will not be permitted to garnishee any of these funds in order to collect on provincial loans which may be due and payable by farmers by the time the federal help is put in the mail?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, the importance of the agricultural industry from the point of view of the federal Government and the provincial Governments is a given. Obviously I cannot guarantee what provincial Governments will do, but I cannot imagine, given the tough conditions of the time, that any provincial Government would take such action.

ENVIRONMENTAL AFFAIRS

INVESTMENT IN TOXICOLOGICAL RESEARCH

Mr. Don Ravis (Saskatoon East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of the Environment. I am sure he is well aware of my ongoing interest in toxicological research, particularly at the Western Canadian Toxicology Centre in Saskatoon. Could the Minister comment upon the recent press release of the Canadian Chemical Producers' Association regarding potential investment intentions in toxicological research in conjunction with the federal Government?

Hon. Tom McMillan (Minister of the Environment): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member knows that the federal Government and the provinces spend fairly massively on toxicology. The Hon. Member has been vigorous in putting forward the idea that the centre already existing in Saskatoon, should, in effect, become a regional centre of excellence. The same proposal has been put forward for Toronto and Guelph. In light of the idea from the Chemical Producers Association that the industry might link arms with government in funding such centres of excellence, I have instructed my officials to begin negotiations for that purpose.

* * *

• (1500)

[Translation]

ENERGY

DIFFERENCE IN GASOLINE PRICES BETWEEN CANADA AND UNITED STATES

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. The price of gas is rising in Canada, while it is dropping in the United States. Yesterday, the price of a litre of gas at a Petro-Canada station in Montreal was 59 cents CDN, while at an Atlantic Petroleum station in northern New York State, it was 25 cents CDN.

When will the Minister stop taking advantage of the public and offer Canadians gas at a reasonable price?

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member knows perfectly well it is not up to the Government to set the price of gas at the pump, and I wonder why he is raising the issue in the House.

[English]

PRICE CHARGED BY PETRO-CANADA

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, the Minister knows full well that he can order Petro-Canada to reduce its price to a reasonable level for consumers in Canada. Why is the Minister telling Petro-Canada to gouge the Canadian consumer for the sole purpose of fattening up this Crown corporation for privatization?

[Translation]

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, Petro-Canada is a Crown corporation that operates the oil sector according to normal business practice.

* * *

[English]

NUCLEAR ARMAMENTS

TESTING OF CRUISE MISSILE

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Secretary of State for External Affairs. It has now become patently clear that the Government's representations to Washington with respect to increasing the number of B-52s armed with Cruise missiles have come to naught. The United States is determined to break the SALT II Agreement, and that is that.

Will the Minister now screw up his courage at the next NATO Ministers' conference and tell the United States that Canada will not permit any further testing of the Cruise missile over Canadian territory?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I know that question is based in the ideological opposition of the New Democratic Party to Canadian membership in NATO and Canada playing its part in the defence of freedom. This Government believes that we have a part to play in the defence of freedom. We regret the decision that has been taken by the United States with regard to the SALT II limits. We have made that clear. We have a commitment to NATO to test the airlaunch Cruise missiles. We intend to keep our word.

Mr. Heap: You have a commitment to SALT II.

REQUEST THAT TESTING WITHIN CANADIAN TERRITORY BE STOPPED

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, the Secretary of State for External Affairs is obviously aware of the fact that one of the major components left out of the nuclear arms talks is Cruise missiles. He also knows that both the West and the East are on the verge of expanding greatly the number of Cruise missiles. Is it not prudent, therefore, for Canada to show a lead in trying to reduce the number of Cruise missiles being produced on both sides? This could be accomplished by sending a very strong signal to both Moscow and Washington that we will not have the Cruise tested in Canada because of that reason.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, in arms control negotiations that rely principally upon the ability of the superpowers to meet and negotiate with authority, one does not show leadership by breaking agreements or breaking out of alliances of which you are a part and indicating to the Soviet Union that there is a weakness on the western side, which might exist if there ever were a New Democratic Government in Canada but which does not exist while there is a Progressive Conservative Government in Canada.

Mr. Heap: Break SALT II instead.

* * *

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

WEEKLY STATEMENT

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, this being Thursday, I want to ask the Government House Leader what business he intends to call for the coming week. We know the House is not sitting tomorrow, but we would be interested in knowing what business he has in mind for Monday on to next Thursday.

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member is correct. The House will not be sitting tomorrow because of a very important event that is taking place in Ottawa.

Today we will conclude Bill C-27, the Bank of British Columbia Business Continuation Act. Monday I intend to call Bill C-25, that is, privatization of Canadair, followed by Bill C-22. The Hon. Member is aware that there are currently discussions going on with respect to trying to reach an agreement with regard to the timing of that piece of legislation. This will be followed by Bill C-18 and Bill C-19, the two transportation Bills.

* * *

POINTS OF ORDER

OFFICIAL REPORT—RECORDING OF DECISION

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I want to point out that on page 1551 of Hansard during a discussion on the matter of concurrence in the report of the Special Committee on Child Care, it reads in Hansard that the motion was agreed to. It should read that the motion was passed on division. I just wanted to make that point clear.

REQUEST FOR WITHDRAWAL OF ALLEGED UNPARLIAMENTARY REMARK

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, I gave Your Honour notice of a point of order which arose from the response of the Associate Minister of National Defence to a question that I asked of him during Question Period. In his response, the Minister in question indicated that the Hon. Member is always out of order. Not only is that factually incorrect but, more important, I believe it is the role of the Chair and not the role of the Minister or any other Member to make that kind of suggestion which, as I emphasize, is completely unfounded. Nevertheless, I would ask that Your Honour call upon the Minister to withdraw the suggestion which is both unparliamentary and unfounded.

Hon. Paul Dick (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, on a number of occasions, more than any other Member, the Member from Burnaby tries to show exhibits in this House, which is against the rules of the House. He did so today.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) has raised a point of order. The Hon. Minister responded until the Chair intervened. Perhaps both Hon. Members, the Minister and the Hon. Member, would leave it to the Chair to decide who is or who is not out of order. The Hon. Member for Burnaby is often in order and sometimes is out of order.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

OFFICIAL REPORT—RECORDING OF DECISION

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) rose on a point of order with regard to a procedure that took place yesterday. He has left the House. I am not just precisely sure to which motion he was referring. I understand that what he wants to do is to make a correction to Hansard inasmuch as he suggested that the motion was agreed to but that it should have been stated that it was agreed to on division. I would like to have the clarification as to which it was. Just further on that point, Mr. Speaker, may I point out that the reason I rose is that I was in the House at that time and I did not hear a dissenting voice at the time. It may be a very minor technicality. However, I certainly did not hear any "noes" or interjections, and neither did the Speaker in the Chair at that time.

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I noticed the procedure as it appears in Hansard because I was in my place at the time and thought I said in a loud enough voice "on division". Presumably, I should have followed it up. I assumed that it was never in question. That is why I wanted to raise that point today just to put it clearly on the record that while the motion passed it was, in fact, on division. It was not a unanimous motion.

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps the Deputy Prime Minister could help the Chair here. It seems that the Hon. Member is rising to place in the record what the Hon. Member intended to do. If there is no disagreement with that, I think the Chair could take notice of that and the appropriate steps could be taken.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[Translation]

BANK OF BRITISH COLUMBIA BUSINESS CONTINUATION ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Hockin that Bill C-27, an Act to facilitate the continuation of the business of the Bank of British Columbia, be read the second time and referred to Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Speaker: When the House recessed at one o'clock the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) had the floor.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, again I remind the House that the Official Opposition reluctantly agreed to the Government request to study and adopt Bill C-27 in one and a half days. Mr. Speaker, we did so because we were concerned about employment security and also because of our strong support for this regional concept. We want to say quite clearly that even though we feel compelled to believe this Government, it will have to bear the onus of proof, assume its responsibilities, and produce all figures and details for the Canadian public, because it was the Government that brought this issue before the House and sought our support. We are prepared to co-operate, but we can tell the Government that we have just about had it, we are beginning to be rather tired because, ever since this Parliament opened, we have been asked many times to rescue this Government which does not know how to manage, behaves like an amateur, and shows incompetence when it has to deal with such important issues as our financial institutions. Mr. Speaker, I am not mincing my words because this same Government has delivered two throne speeches in which it kept repeating that it would introduce a Bill to eliminate the flaws in the legislation on financial institutions.

• (1510)

[English]

I do not want to take too much time. I know the House wants to proceed to the question and we would like to get into Committee of the Whole. However, I want to give a brief overview of this Bill. It is indeed a bail-out, a $200 million bail-out, by CDIC. We are operating in a policy vacuum. The Government has failed to come forward with legislation to tighten control over financial institutions. Over the last year we have been asked, after the fact, to legislate the Imasco-Genstar takeover, the Lloyds Bank merger, and here we are again being asked to approve this takeover after the fact. The Government promised on many occasions, in every Throne Speech and every speech made on the CCB and Northland Banks, that everything would be all right. The Government asked us to trust it. However, everything was not all right. The Government had not done its homework. It did not know what it was talking about. We trusted the Government but we are getting pretty fed up with doing that when it does not deserve it.

Mr. Fennell: That is a convention speech.

Mr. Gauthier: I hear them laughing over there. This is not a laughing matter. We are talking about billions of dollars. We are talking about the financial institutions which are so very important to the survival of this country, economically and otherwise.

I want to touch on two very specific items. First, the CDIC will have to put up $200 million, and in return the Hongkong Bank will buy the B.C. Bank for $63.5 million. Shareholders will have no say. According to the Bill, if they do not agree with the deal an assessor will be named. The assessor will decide whether the purchase price of $63.5 million is all right. If it is excessive, the excess will go back to the shareholders of CDIC. If it is deficient, then the CDIC will have to produce the money to allow the deal to go through.

Then there is the question of the pension fund. I know the Hon. Member for Capilano (Mrs. Collins) is not here but she mentioned that this morning. I agree with her to a certain extent that the BBC received permission from the Superintendent of Insurance to withdraw the pension fund surplus. That surplus could go back to the shareholders if, and this is the big "if", the Superintendent of Insurance allows it. Our position is that since the CDIC is the one doing the bail-out, it should get that money. Even better, the employees, whose pension fund is at stake here, should get the money.

We are concerned about the jobs involved and the regional bank system. We are concerned about this whole deal. We will be asking questions in Committee of the Whole. We will support the Bill in principle. We have to because the Government says it has an obligation to govern and we will help it to do so. However, we are getting pretty damn fed up with giving this Government our confidence.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is the House ready for the question?

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The question is as follows: Mr. Hockin, seconded by Mr. Mazankowski, moves that Bill C-27, an Act to facilitate the continuation of the business of the Bank of British Columbia, be now read the second time and, by unanimous consent, referred to Committee of the Whole.

Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Hockin) which was agreed to on the following division:

(Division No. 29)

YEAS

Members

Andre
Axworthy
Belsher
Berger
Binns
Bissonnette
Blenkarn
Blouin
Bradley
Brightwell
Brisco
Browes
Caldwell
Cardiff
Champagne (Saint-Hyacinthe—Bagot)
Champagne (Champlain)
Clark (Yellowhead)
Coates
Collins
Cook
Cooper
Copps
Corbett
Côté (Lac-Saint-Jean)
Crofton
Crouse
Dantzer
Daubney
de Cotret
Della Noce
Desjardins
Edwards
Ellis
Epp (Provencher)
Fennell
Foster
Fraleigh
Fretz
Friesen
Garneau
Gass
Gauthier
Girard
Graham
Gray (Bonaventure—Îles-de-la-Madeleine)
Gray (Windsor West)
Greenaway
Grondin
Guilbault (Saint-Jacques)
Gurbin
Hawkes
Henderson
Hicks
Hnatyshyn
Hockin
Holtmann
Howie
James
Jelinek
Jourdenais
Kaplan
Kelleher
Killens
King
La Salle
Layton
Leblanc
Lesick
Lewis
Lopez
MacDonald (Kingston and the Islands)
MacLellan
Marchi
Mazankowski
McCuish
McDougall (St. Paul's)
McInnes
McKenzie
McKnight
McMillan
Nicholson (Trinity)
Nowlan
Oberle
O'Neil
Oostrom
Ouellet
Penner
Pennock
Peterson
Porter
Ravis
Redway
Robichaud
Roman Rompkey
St. Germain
Schellenberg (Nanaimo—Alberni)
Scott (Hamilton—Wentworth)
Scowen
Shields
Sparrow
Stevens
Suluk
Tardif (Charlesbourg)
Taylor
Towers
Tupper
Valcourt
Vézina
Warner
Wilson (Swift Current—Maple Creek)
Wise—112

NAYS

Members

Althouse	McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood)	Riis
Cassidy	Mitchell	Robinson
Fulton	Murphy	Rodriguez
Heap	Nystrom	Young —17
Hovdebo	Orlikow
Keeper	Parry
Langdon

• (1540)

Mr. Speaker: I declare the motion carried.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, I would like to indicate that I was present for the vote but I abstained.

Mr. Nunziata: Mr. Speaker, I too was present and I too abstained because of a conflict of interest.

Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to Standing Order 78, I do now leave the Chair for the House to go into Committee of the Whole.

Motion agreed to, Bill read the second time and the House went into committee thereon, Mrs. Champagne in the Chair.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Order, please. House in Committee of the Whole on Bill C-27, an Act to facilitate the continuation of the business of the Bank of British Columbia.

Shall Clause 2 carry?

On Clause 2—Interpretation

Mr. Cassidy: Madam Chairman, I believe that on Clause 2 we are allowed to ask a few questions which may go somewhat beyond the clause but which relate to the Bill and why it has been brought forward.

First, I would like to congratulate the Minister of State for Finance on the first Bill that he is taking through the House, or perhaps it is the second.

Is the Minister prepared and does the Government welcome reference of this matter to the Finance Committee at a relatively early date even though the Bill will be given third reading later today?

Mr. Hockin: Madam Chairman, I have indicated to the Hon. Member that if I am called before the committee I am prepared to attend. Of course, my being invited is up to the committee. I believe it will invite me and I will be pleased to attend and discuss this matter.

Mr. Cassidy: Madam Chairman, effectively, there seems to be in this deal the fact that the Government of Canada will give $200 million to the Hongkong Bank in order to facilitate its taking over the assets of the Bank of British Columbia, with a payment of some smaller sum to shareholders. Is this payment related to a reluctance on the part of the Government to see a credit union grow the way that Vancouver City Savings Credit Union would have grown had it gone ahead with the projected merger which was under very active discussion just a couple of weeks ago and which was suddenly forgotten at the time the Hongkong Bank deal came forward?

Mr. Hockin: Madam Chairman, I think this is one of the more important issues which can be raised with regard to the Bill. I am happy to respond to the Hon. Member. Since we are limited in time and there may be a number of questions with regard to the Bill, I will try to answer as many questions as possible as quickly as possible.

With respect to the question of Vancity, it was afforded the same degree of consultation and opportunity to bid as anyone else. It turned out at some point in time that there was an agreement between Vancity and the Bank of British Columbia to begin negotiations. There was no agreement on the deal, but there was an agreement to begin negotiations, which did not go anywhere. With respect to what actually happened, the Hon. Member will have to ask those involved in the transaction. Of course, all we are doing here with the Bill is facilitating a sale and dealing with the time period concerning the notification of shareholders.

I have been told that the parties could not consummate a deal because Vancity's capital base was not sufficient to go it alone. It was something like a mouse swallowing an elephant. If Vancity could have obtained a large source of capital to add to its own capital base then it might have been able to go through with the transaction. However, that did not happen and then this other offer emerged.

Mr. Cassidy: Madam Chairman, I would like to pursue this matter a bit further. The Minister knows that the Vancity proposal included a request to which the Province of British Columbia was sympathetic, that is, that it participate thereby enabling the Bank of British Columbia or its successor to remain as an important and regionally-controlled financial institution which would operate under the control of British Columbia in the Province of British Columbia.

• (1550)

We have often seen situations of foreign bidders being given contracts in Canada because they have the technology while Canadian companies with equivalent skills are shunted aside or ignored because they are seen to be too small or inexperienced. These companies cannot get the experience because they cannot get the bids and therefore they cannot grow. It seems to me that this may be the case in this particular instance as well.

Did the Government indicate to Vancity that if the B.C. Government was prepared to come into the deal, it would have the political will to put this deal through, or was the Government's indication of being willing to legislate, as we are now, only a commitment made to the Hongkong Bank? In other words, were we kowtowing to a foreign bank because of its size while failing to co-operate with a domestic institution on the grounds that it was too small?

Mr. Hockin: Madam Chairman, it was not the Government that was involved in these discussions, it was the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation. The Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation was aware of the discussions because it might have been asked to participate at some point in arrangements leading to a deal.

I think the Hon. Member would have to ask the Government of British Columbia about what went on between Vancity and the Government of British Columbia. The assessment made by the Government of British Columbia in deciding whether or not to help in this transaction would be something about which the Hon. Member should ask that Government. Otherwise, I would have to make the same inquiry myself. Since this was a private transaction, I think it would be best for the Hon. Member to ask the Government of British Columbia what its assessment of that was.

Mr. Cassidy: Madam Chairman, in the first place, government consent was required for the transfer of assets. Therefore, the Government cannot say that it was not involved. Presumably, if the Bank was seeking the Government's consent, some discussions were taking place.

Second, is the Minister saying that the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation committed $200 million to this deal without the approval of the Government or was the approval of the Government sought? I find it inconceivable that the CDIC would make this commitment without informing and getting the approval and acceptance of the Government.

Mr. Hockin: Madam Chairman, I understand the question. The Government was not informed in the first instance of any Vancity-Bank of British Columbia discussions because a deal had not been put together which involved the CDIC. It never got to the stage that the Government would have to be informed. We were informed, of course, of the arrangement which is the background to the Bill we are putting forward now.

The Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation made some prudential decisions. It decided that a capital provision of $200 million for the Hongkong Bank of Canada would do two things. First, it would protect the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation against the future because this new entity, a strong bank almost the size of the world Bank of Canada, would be taking the bank over with its reputation and resources behind it. All the uninsured depositors and liabilities would be off the hands of the CDIC and would be taken on by this new entity. Therefore, protection against the future was part of the reason for the expenditure of $200 million.

The second reason is that the money is to be used as a source of capital, as a provision against future loan losses and as a capital base that will allow the Bank to do any corporate reorganizations that may be required. The decision made by the CDIC protects against the future and provides capital for a strong base for the present. CDIC decided that $200 million was much better than what it would have been exposed to had there been a liquidation. It could have been exposed to an amount many times greater than that.

Mr. Cassidy: Madam Chairman, this is all very bizarre. Did the Government have specific information on the quality of the loan to the Bank of British Columbia that led it to judge that the expenditure might be several times $200 million if this particular course of action was not taken? May we see those reports?

Second, if the CDIC was prepared to offer $200 million to a foreign bank to bail out the Bank of British Columbia, was that specific offer made to Vancity? Was Vancity asked to put together a deal which included the provision of $200 million for recapitalizing and taking over the Bank? Was that specific offer made to the Canadian financial institution which was worth $1.5 billion or was it only made to foreigners?

Mr. Hockin: Madam Chairman, let me start with the question about foreigners first. That is for the Hon. Member to ask CDIC, the extent to which—

Mr. Cassidy: Oh, no, you're the Minister; you reply here.

Mr. Hockin: I would be quite happy to reply but the fact is that the resolution of whether or not to offer amounts of capital in the place of continuing liabilities for deposit insurance was made by the Board of the CDIC and—

Mr. Cassidy: But you speak for CDIC. You're the responsible Minister.

Mr. Hockin: Yes, I do. I am not saying that I am not responsible.

Mr. Cassidy: Then answer.

Mr. Hockin: I am answering. I am saying that the Board of CDIC did the negotiations and can tell the Hon. Member about the ins and outs of its discussions with Vancity and the proposals that were put. I can tell the Hon. Member that—

Mr. Cassidy: This isn't satisfactory.

Mr. Hockin: No, no. Because Vancity did not have the capital base to offer that amount of money it would not give the kind of guarantee into the future that could be given by strong institution like the Hongkong Bank of Canada. That is the reply to the second part of the Hon. Member's question. I forget what the first part of the question was. I suppose I will have to ask the Hon. Member to repeat it.

Mr. Cassidy: Was this offer made to Vancity, and I gather you are answering no.

Miss Nicholson: Madam Chairman, I rise on a point of order. I believe it has been customary that general questions are asked when dealing with Clause 1. When Your Honour called Clause 2, we assumed that we would have to wait to ask our questions on a clause-by-clause basis. Since the Chair has agreed to accept general questions from the Hon. Member of the New Democratic Party under Clause 2, I assume the Chair will extend the same privilege to us.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I intend to act exactly the same way when the Hon. Member will be recognized for putting questions to the Minister.

Mr. Cassidy: My understanding was that I had 10 minutes. I think I may have pushed it a bit and I was expecting at about now that the Hon. Member from the Liberal Party would intervene in the same way as I had.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The Hon. Member has had 20 minutes and that is why I did not interrupt.

Mr. Cassidy: Oh, in that case, I do beg your pardon, Madam Chairman.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre has the floor.

Mr. Cassidy: Madam Chairman, did the Government seek any specific commitment from the Hongkong Bank in terms of maintaining jobs in the Bank of British Columbia, and what was that commitment?

Mr. Hockin: Madam Chairman, the agreement as structured by the CDIC gives an unconditional guarantee by the Hongkong Bank of Canada, supported by its parent, to carry on this bank indefinitely into the future. That is the commitment that we probably could not get from anyone else without a great deal of trouble. The Hongkong Bank will carry this bank, its liabilities and its risky loans into the future. To do that, it will have to do some reorganization.

I noticed that in the press release, no reference was made to numbers of branches or employees. However, the Hon. Member should compare a bank such as this buying the assets of the Bank of British Columbia with a Schedule A bank buying the assets. A Schedule A bank would probably have a branch right across the street from every one of these BBC branches. A Schedule A buy-out would have been disastrous for the employees and branches. Many branches would have been declared redundant and therefore many employees would have been declared redundant.

• (1600)

Mr. Hockin: This particular transaction affords a very great opportunity for the vast majority of employees to remain employed, and the branches to remain open. That is another very attractive feature of this particular transaction.

Mr. Cassidy: My pursuant question is this. The Minister has said that there was not a specific employment guarantee. The Bank of British Columbia has as number of interior branches in British Columbia, in Kamloops, Vernon, Kelowna, Penticton, Cranbrook, Abbotsford, Chilliwack, the Kootenays, Delta, White Rock, Langley, Port Coquitlam, and Surrey.

Mr. Friesen: Which of those are in the interior?

Mr. Cassidy: Some of those are a bit more interior than others, I would say to the Hon. Member.

As I was saying yesterday, being a British Columbian native, I would like to ask the Minister, in view of the fact that the Hongkong Bank is essentially an internationally trading bank, which has not been focused on retail banking or small business banking, what commitment, if any, did the Hongkong Bank make with respect to maintaining those banks which provide valuable service, and perhaps valuable competition to the eastern banks at those branches in the interior of British Columbia? What commitment, if any, did it make to continuing the focus on small and medium business loans where the Bank of British Columbia was providing a particularly valuable service?

Mr. Hockin: My prediction would be that because its retail base has been small in Canada, this is an additional reason for it to keep as many branches as possible. If, in fact, it was a heavily retailed bank taking over a heavily retailed bank, there would be very severe redundancies in the offing, and I would be as concerned as you. In this case we have a beautiful fit whereby, as you quite rightly say, it has not been into retail deposits in a big way. This is the kind of fit that they need to allow them to do it. I am very optimistic that there will be more branches in the long run rather than fewer.

But in terms of guarantees about the interior of British Columbia, this is a private company, a private bank. We do not ask for guarantees from every bank in Canada that is operating in the private sector—

Mr. Langdon: It's a foreign bank.

Mr. Hockin: —to maintain certain branches and move them across the street, or whatever. This is a private transaction. We do not require those types of guarantees from any other bank about rationalizing branches. Therefore, it would be quite inappropriate for that to be structured as part of the deal. I really must express my optimism that, because of the fit here, we will see more branches in the long run, not fewer.

Mr. Cassidy: I am delighted to hear the Minister's optimism, but once again it is clear that there are no specific commitments. What troubles my Party and myself on this particular issue is this. The Hongkong Bank, thanks to the intervention of the Government of Canada, through the Minister of Finance and the Governor in Council giving their approval to the transfer of assets, and through the Government's using its majority in the House and its powers of persuasion perhaps on opposition Parties to get this legislation through, is enabled to increase its assets roughly sixfold, to increase its branch network about fourfold in Canada through Government action. In addition, it is being paid $200 million to do so. This obviously raises the question that if we cannot ask for these commitments when we are giving it permission to greatly increase its business, and those are essential permissions—it could not do this without Government permission—and paying it a very large amount of money in the process, then under no circumstances does Government have any right to seek any commitments. Is it always just a matter of seeking favours from private business? I know that is a rhetorical point.

I have one other point I wish to make, followed by a specific question. In October, 1985, the Inspector General's staff and special inspectors reviewed the loan portfolio of the Bank of British Columbia and concluded that the bank loan portfolio was sound. Now we are told it was not sound and that the bank would have to close if the Hongkong deal was not approved immediately. At what point was the Government told by the office of the Inspector General that the 1985 report was no longer valid, and that the activities of the bank were not sound? Or are we seeing another instance where the Inspector General's office blew it, and where in fact the early warning system broke down and the Government should have known long before November, 1986 that there were serious problems in the Bank of British Columbia?

Mr. Hockin: Let me take the last point first. This is an example of us finally proving how in fact the Inspector General of Banks has done such an excellent job in the last year with the early warning system identifying the health of banks—

Mr. Cassidy: God save us if they have blown it.

Mr. Hockin: —warning us early enough abut this that we can put together a deal. This results from their research, their supervision, inspection, and constant efforts, and I must tell you that we are talking about seven-day weeks, long days by very hard working people in the OIGB who have identified the problem and helped through their work to put together this deal. I think that the people of British Columbia should thank them for the role that they have played.

The second point I wish to make has to do with commitments about the number of branches, because you asked the question again in a different way. The Bank of British Columbia's history was down-sizing, down-sizing, down-sizing. Because it was losing money at a very rapid rate, it came up with a corporate plan to down-size, so that it would cut its overhead expenses. This was its way to try to stay alive. It seems to me that there has already been much of that down-sizing there should not be too much need for any more. That is another reason for my optimism. It may be the reason, too, why Mr. Nesmith, the President of the Hongkong Bank of Canada said that tomorrow will be business as usual at the Bank of British Columbia, that the Bank of British Columbia customers can expect the same innovation and service that has been the bank's trademark since opening and that it is an excellent opportunity to expand their personal branch network, and western Canada will continue to benefit by having a strong bank with its headquarters and its major assets in the west. The basic down-sizing has occurred, therefore, this expression of optimism can be there for the present.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The time has expired for the Member for Ottawa Centre. I see many Members rising to ask questions. I wish to point out that, even though there are 20 minutes available to each Member, if each Member takes 20 minutes it will not be possible to hear all of you before 4.45 p.m. Please try to keep that in mind.

Miss Nicholson: I would like to ask the Minister some questions about matters that are not specifically covered in this Bill, but which he did include in his speech, or which were referred to in the press releases which he also mentioned in his speech.

To begin with, what about the other assets of the Bank of British Columbia, which are not included here, which apparently the Bank of Hongkong decided to leave behind, particularly REIT Properties Ltd., which is a real estate company fully owned by the Bank of British Columbia? I would like to know what arrangements are being made in that regard.

Perhaps it may save some time, Madam Chairman, if I ask more than one question at a time and the Minister may answer them together.

I would like to know why the pension funds are being treated differently from the way they were treated in the case of Canadian Commercial Bank. In the case of the Canadian Commercial Bank, the surplus pension funds went to the liquidator. In fact, experienced staff lost their vested pensions. But in this case we are advised that the surplus pension funds may go directly to the shareholders. I would like to know the reason for the different treatment here. I would also like to know the rationale for this use of pension funds. I would also like to know more about the role of the Department of Finance. The Minister referred to officials who helped to put together this deal. I would like to know if the officials particularly sought out this bank more than any other financial institution.

Mr. Hockin: In answer to the REIT Properties Ltd. question, on the approval of the Governor in Council being obtained, all of the assets of BBC will be transferred to Hongkong Bank of Canada, other than the shares of REIT Properties Ltd., which is a wholly owned subsidiary of BBC that owns real property. I will check my notes, but I think there is litigation in connection with that property and that is why it was not conveyed.

• (1610)

The Hon. Member's second question concerned—

Miss Nicholson: The use of pension funds surplus.

Mr. Hockin: Yes. It was covered in the news release in a rather detailed way. By way of summary let me say that the pensions surplus will only go to the shareholders if there is enough after the transaction is sorted out. Of course any dealings with the surplus have to be fully in accord with Mr. Hammond and his office and the supervision provided thereby.

Miss Nicholson: Madam Chairman, if it is possible, I should like to yield some of my time to the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides. Perhaps I could ask one last question before doing that. What about the $430 million which the Bank of Canada advanced in liquidity support? What are the arrangements for paying that back?

Mr. Hockin: Madam Chairman, the information I have is that the Bank of Canada had advances totalling $583 million to the Bank of British Columbia in September, 1986. I could obtain more up to date information, but I do not have it here.

The Hon. Member asked whether or when it will be paid back. It is a bit like the Continental Lloyds arrangement. It will be paid back very soon in a manner which is best for the Bank of Canada and the bank in question.

There is a problem with the deposit of the Bank of Canada because it has a preferential position. That often discourages non-insured depositors to deposit in a bank if they know they are parked behind the Bank of Canada and the insured depositors. The so-called solution—and very often it must be a solution in the short run—of the Bank of Canada putting in deposits to maintain liquidity ends up being a bit of a kiss of death. I think the bank will be anxious to get that preference removed and the Bank of Canada paid back.

Mr. Belsher: Madam Chairman, I should like to go over some points with the Minister.

Miss Nicholson: Madam Chairman, I rise on a point of order. Perhaps I misunderstood. I thought that by not taking my full 20 minutes, the rest of the time would be given to the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides. I requested that and I thought that you, Madam Chairman, nodded. If I misunderstood, perhaps you could explain and in that case I could continue.

Mr. Langdon: Madam Chairman, I rise on a very brief point of order. There is no precedent which I have yet seen for yielding time to another Member.

Miss Nicholson: In that case I would like to continue.

Mr. Langdon: Thus I think your ruling, Madam Chairman, was quite correct when you recognized another Hon. Member. I think you should continue to do so so, that each of us who wish to raise questions may do so as quickly as possible.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Earlier I asked Hon. Members to try to keep their interventions short so that as many Hon. Members as possible could ask questions of the Minister. The floor has been given to the Hon. Member for Fraser Valley East.

Mr. Belsher: Madam Chairman, how long had the Bank of British Columbia been seeking a suitor? It is my understanding that it is the Bank of British Columbia which asked CDIC to make a $200 million deposit. Am I correct, or is it the Hongkong Bank which asked for it? There seems to be some misstatement of the facts, and I should just like to make sure of them in my own mind. Some of the interior branches to which reference has been made happen to be in Abbotsford and Chilliwack. One from British Columbia does not consider those communities to be in the interior. When I return home this weekend I should like to be able to assure my constituents of some of those facts.

Mr. Hockin: Madam Chairman, I appreciate my hon. colleague's interest in the matter and I want him to take back the facts to his constituency. I will summarize them as best as I can.

I have in my possession a press release by the Bank of British Columbia which perhaps will provide the Hon. Member with some additional information. In terms of suitors or how long the courting period went on, I think it really started in the summer. The Bank of British Columbia was becoming increasingly concerned about non-performing loans and loan-loss provisions. There were not many suitors, I must say from what I understand, but there were a few. The Hongkong Bank emerged in the fall as a serious suitor. However, I would not say that in the summer it was necessarily involved as a serious suitor, although I think the name was mentioned.

The whole canvas was initiated as a matter of prudent foresight really as early as late 1985, according to the press release, when the Board of Directors of BBC concluded that BBC like a number of other smaller Canadian banks would have difficulty recovering from the loss of confidence which followed events then taking place in the banking system and that the time for recovery might be unacceptably long. Then the canvas was accelerated during recent weeks when it became apparent that the BBC financial results for the fourth quarter ending October 31 could signal a worsening of the financial position of BBC. "This would be likely to continue through 1987 and probably longer", to quote from the press release. Tentative discussions were initiated during this recent period with a number of possible candidates.

I am glad to talk about the press releases of various parties to the transaction. However, essentially what we are doing in the Bill is just facilitating a private arrangement by adjusting the time period of notice for shareholders.

Mr. Belsher: Madam Chairman, I guess that is the point I want to make sure is clearly established. This is a request from the Board of Directors of the Bank of British Columbia through the CDIC for permission to go ahead and consummate the deal. In order not to have to give 28 days' notice to shareholders, it is necessary for the legislation to be enacted.

Could the Minister tell us what could have been the worst case scenario as far as the CDIC was concerned, rather than paying out $200 million at this time to facilitate the arrangement?

Mr. Hockin: Madam Chairman, in answer to the Hon. Member's first question I will again refer to the press release. It indicates that expeditious completion of the transaction was essential if the continuity of the business of BBC was to be preserved and the interests of depositors, employees, shareholders, and others were to be protected. In recognition of this, the BBC has requested the Government of Canada to introduce before Parliament special legislation to authorize expeditious completion of the transaction. That is what we are doing now.

In terms of the worst case scenario, I do not know how helpful it is to portray a nightmare scenario. However, I will give the Hon. Member the facts. If the Board of Directors of the Bank of British Columbia feels, as it felt, that the possibility of the bank remaining viable in the months ahead is very slender, we are faced with $1.3 billion worth of deposits insured by CDIC. That is a very big hit on the CDIC's budget, less whatever is recuperated by way of assets. That is the worst case scenario. That is the liquidation. Depositors would be nervous and would go somewhere else. As British Columbians they would probably have to go to a non-regional institution. Borrowers would be very unsettled and this experiment of having a regional bank would have failed.

• (1620)

A very important thing about this deal is that not only are the depositors doing business as usual, and borrowers doing business as usual with the regional bank continuing to go from strength to strength with a very good capital base, it will have an international network which is really what the people of British Columbia have been looking to in terms of trade, investment and everything else. It is something we have had some difficulty putting in place up until now.

[Translation]

Mr. Garneau: Madam Chairman, unfortunately, we have only seven or eight minutes left to ask questions, and I am very disappointed in what the Minister had to say.

From the outset, he has been trying to explain this is a private transaction and that the Government and the House of Commons are merely facilitating that transaction.

I say to the Minister that $200 million in public funds are going to the Hongkong Bank, funds that belong to the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation which is a Crown corporation. These are public funds. Two hundred million dollars in public funds will be given to the Hongkong Bank. There is also the fact that Parliament is being asked to sit in an emergency session to adopt a Bill. And this is supposed to be a private transaction?

Madam Chairman, some people are trying to shirk their responsibilities and wash their hands of the whole affair.

Madam Chairman, we have eight minutes left till 4:30 p.m., when the Minister, as agreed, will go to the other place to answer questions from Members of the other half of this parliamentary institution to which we belong.

For the first time, a Minister, the Minister of State for Finance, is saying and repeating, as a Minister of this Government, that the possible loss on the transaction could be around $1.3 billion.

Madam Chairman, if that is the case, I ask the Minister why we are going to take public funds to help this company's shareholders. Why are we going to take the employees' pension fund surplus and add it to the $63 million referred to earlier?

Madam Chairman, there is something here that does not make sense, and as the debate on this Bill progresses, I find that although I have no objection to giving concrete assistance to one of our western financial institutions so that it can continue to offer its services to the people of British Columbia, I am becoming increasingly convinced of the Government's utter lack of competence in this affair.

For instance, what is going to happen with the assessor referred to earlier, unless the Minister intends to use scare tactics to get shareholders to vote immediately in favour of the proposal that will be put before them. Otherwise, I would ask the Minister: If an assessor is appointed, should the shareholders refuse to accept the proposal, does that mean that the only money the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation is likely to recover would be the $63 million in public funds invested through the Hongkong Bank? Would the pension fund surplus go to the shareholders, as well as the contract guarantee of one of the senior officers, for which the former bank will maintain responsibility, and also the surplus of the $23 million in assets, that is, the $8 million referred to in the documentation?

If, as the Minister said, losses could be around $1.3 billion, does that mean that all funds other than the $63 million would go to the bank's shareholders, and that the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation would shoulder the entire burden?

[English]

Mr. Hockin: Mr. Chairman, let me say to the hon. gentleman that I will try to stay for 15 minutes more, if I can, so that he can get as many questions in as possible. I understand the Member is trying to get to the bottom of a number of issues.

First, the pension funds will not be released for distribution to the shareholders unless Mr. Hammond, the superintendent, agrees. They will not be released unless it is appropriate for the funds to be released, in the same context as for any other company. It is very important that I make that clear.

The second point has to do with the $200 million. I understand the point the Hon. Member is making, namely, that CDIC's premiums, although collected from member institutions, benefit from cash flow injections from time to time from the federal Government. Therefore, CDIC has a kind of public character that I should not forget and Parliament should not forget. Hon. Members should not forget that it is just a cash flow situation. It is not a transaction that affects the deficit of the Government of Canada. If nothing was done you would have exposed the CDIC to a far greater amount.

Essentially what has been done with the $200 million—there is nothing magic about it—is bought future protection and avoided the huge costs of liquidation now. The costs of liquidating now would have been much higher, plus having to pay a receiver and having to go through all those other nightmare expenses. CDIC found it could avoid that and maximize protection into the future by paying the $200 million. It is a prudential decision in order to avoid further expenses in the future. The job of the CDIC board is to make those kinds of resolutions and decisions. Having done that it looks as though the board will save the CDIC a great deal of money in the future and, by extension, giving the analogy the Member used, it has lessened the pressure on the Government of Canada from a cash flow point of view.

[Translation]

Mr. Garneau: Madam Speaker, concerning the superannuation fund, the Minister does not seem to realize what is going on. I am not talking about the actuarial fund that is to be transferred to the Hongkong Bank to provide for the benefits the employees will be entitled to as employees of the new BBC Division of the Hongkong Bank. I am not talking about that, I am talking about the surplus.

The actuarial surplus will be going somewhere. Either it will follow the bulk of the superannuation fund moneys and accrue to the Hongkong Bank, because with an actuarial fund having a $20 million surplus, or $10 million after tax, their contributions to the pension fund could be cut down over the years, and we just gave the Hongkong Bank another $20 million before tax. That is one option.

The alternative is that the surplus could stay with the Bank of British Columbia, the selling out bank which is liable to be dismantled, I would think, some time in the future. This $20 million surplus, or $10 million after tax, will be used by someone, and this is the question I am asking the Minister, and it seems to me that if in fact, as he told us, the potential loss could reach the $1.3 billion mark, I cannot see why that money would be paid out to shareholders who, according to what we heard from the board of directors, would not get a penny if the bank were dissolved, with a possible loss of uninsured deposits on top of that, or at least a partial loss.

So, turning back to the pension fund issue, I would like to point out that there is a problem that somehow would have to be solved. Either it is turned over to the Hongkong Bank to be included in the management of the existing employee pension fund, or it is distributed among employees who have already retired, or again it accrues to the benefit of existing BBC shareholders. I would like to know what the position of the Minister is on that.

Secondly, with respect to the determination. As I understand the mechanism, if the amount set by the assessor is in excess of $63 million, the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation will pay the difference. If the amount is much lower, then the $63 million could be used up.

I also ask the Minister, since I assume his remarks to be true, whether the potential loss could be $1.3 billion because when you refer to the legislation, you are led to believe that the reference points on which the determination will be based will be the selling out value of the assets, in any case the words used both in English and in French seem to me to mean the winding-up value. And in that case, if the Minister is right, unless he wants to scare the shareholders and force them to accept the deal, it could be that $500 or $600 million—and this I would like to know—would have been paid in excess. Clearly then, the Hongkong Bank people would have made a very bad deal and I would be quite surprised if such were the case. However, if it were so, since the Minister has mentioned that possibility, would the surplus left with the selling out bank, as I gather it is called in the Bill, be available to the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation? Could that surplus not be used to the benefit of the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation?

And this is perhaps the last question allowed to me, Madam Chairman. I would also like the Minister who said it was a private transaction to tell us if by chance that private transaction will have to be approved by cabinet. Since we are dealing with public funds, can the Minister assure the House that before this order in council is accepted by the Government, not the order in council itself but the other one which will ratify the contract submitted to the shareholders, that this contract will be referred to the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs so it may have an opportunity to debate it and eventually hear witnesses, because that is the crux of the issue we are debating today, this contract which in a way will be a Government contract since it will have been approved by Cabinet?

• (1630)

[English]

Mr. Hockin: Madam Chairman, there are essentially three questions. First, it is very important that we understand the pension surplus matter. It is clear that we are not making new pension policy on the fly here this afternoon. Any pension surplus will not be distributed to anyone except the pensioners without the agreement of Mr. Hammond and the appropriate supervisors. If the Hon. Member is saying that any pension surplus, even if it is over and above what the supervisors feel is properly owed to the employees, should still go to those employees, then he is making pension policy on the run. I cannot agree to that.

Second, as to the assessor, I appreciate the distinction the Hon. Member is making. Insured deposits are $1.3 billion. I cannot speculate on what the losses would be on liquidation; of course, it is a different number. It could be less. The losses on liquidation—

Mr. Cassidy: You could not make a decision without having an estimate.

Mr. Hockin: Of course we have an estimate but I cannot speculate on what the exact amount is.

Mr. Cassidy: What is it?

Mr. Hockin: No one knows that.

Mr. Cassidy: If you had an estimaté, what is it?

Mr. Hockin: I should not speculate on that.

Mr. Cassidy: Either you have an estimate or you do not.

Mr. Hockin: The assessor has to make a judgment on that.

As to whether the Order in Council will be submitted to a parliamentary committee, the deal has to be approved and it has not been. We have an offer but we do not have a deal which has been approved. When it is approved we will have a document that I can take to committee with me when I discuss this matter.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: The Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides has the floor but I ask him to use as little time as possible so other Members who have not yet spoken will have an opportunity.

Mr. Garneau: Madam Chairman, the Minister just said he does not have a deal.

Mr. Hockin: Formally, that is right.

Mr. Garneau: We have been told that the deal has been signed by the board of directors of the two banks. Otherwise, what are we doing here?

Mr. Hockin: It has not closed.

Mr. Garneau: We have been told through a press release that the board of directors of the banks have agreed upon this transaction. The final decision is linked to the decision of this House. So there is a deal. The only decision to be made concerns the shareholders. Are they going to accept the $63 million, yes or no? If not, an assessor will be appointed to deal with it. So there is a deal.

I want to ask the Minister about the involvement of the Government concerning two things. First, who brought the Bank of Hongkong back into the discussion at the last instance? Second, who made the decision? The Minister said he cannot speculate on the value of the assets. Someone made a decision and the Government will have to approve the deal through an Order in Council. The Government had to make a decision at some point.

Who brought the Bank of Hongkong back to the negotiating table? What was the involvement of the Government in the decision concerning the $200 million and the $63.5 million? What involvement did the Minister have in that transaction?

Mr. Hockin: Let me clarify the question of the deal. The deal does not close until we pass this legislation. We are shortening the notice period to shareholders in this Act. When I say we do have a deal, I am speaking formally. We have to do what we have to do today in Parliament and then the deal can close. I just wanted to clarify what I was saying. I did not mean to mislead. The deal is closed, dependent upon our doing what we have to do.

What is the value of the assets? The assets are now part of the ongoing new bank. For us to speculate on what they are worth now—

Mr. Garneau: Some $200 million is not speculation.

Mr. Hockin: It is more than that.

Mr. Garneau: How have you been able to establish that? Someone must have made a decision on the $200 million?

Mr. Hockin: CDIC has to do that and they did it.

The third question dealt with who brought the Hongkong Bank into the picture.

Mr. Garneau: Brought them back.

Mr. Hockin: The Bank of British Columbia brought them back. The Government of Canada was informed by the CDIC that they were brought back. That occurred in the last month or so.

• (1640)

Mr. Dantzer: Madam Chairman, I have a question for the Minister following up on the discussions of the last few days. We have heard a lot of complaints from the Opposition that a Canadian banking institution should have taken over this bank. That is a motherhood question. I guess we would all liked to have seen that happen. However, there are good aspects of having this large Asian bank take over the assets of this British Columbian bank. I would like the Minister's opinion on my remarks.

Anyone who has lived in western Canada and done business there for the last 30 years, as I have, will know that when there were no regional banks in western Canada the minute there was a credit crunch or recession the central Canadian banks immediately called in their loans in the western Canadian towns and cities. I have had personal experience with that. As a practising lawyer I have had many clients complain that their loans had been called in. It is only natural that the big banks headquartered in central Canada would look after their most important customers first, who were usually located in central Canada.

The presence of the Hongkong Bank in western Canada will provide much more competition for the central banks. If we have a credit crunch in Canada, the Hongkong Bank with branches worldwide would not necessarily have such a credit crunch and would be in a better position to meet the needs of western Canada.

Would this bank which has worldwide connections not provide British Columbia and Canada with much greater access to the tremendous opportunities which will continue to occur in the Pacific Rim? Will the Minister confirm my opinion that this bank is a better choice than a central Canadian bank?

Mr. Hockin: Madam Chairman, I thank the Hon. Member for his comments. As far as I know there is no greater source of surplus capital in the world today than that which is sitting in Hong Kong. This particular bank has 400 branches soaking up this capital. If things went bad in the Canadian economy and British Columbia did not have the access to loans from Canadian banks which they would like, they would have tapped into this huge source. Canada is internationally mature and should have sources of capital independent of the five major regional banks and Canadian investment sources.

In addition to the 400 branches this bank has in Hong Kong, it has another 800 branches around the world which will provide a source of capital needed by British Columbia. If I were in British Columbia I would be glad to have such a balanced source of capital. They have sources of Canadian capital and sources of the huge surpluses in the Pacific Rim through this network. In my opinion this is very good news. I join the Hon. Member in his assessment that this is good for Canadians. We are only being asked to adopt a very brief Bill which deals with shareholders' rights. The background to it is this opportunity.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I will recognize the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor for a very short question.

Mr. Langdon: Madam Chairman, you should know what a challenge that is. I would like to deal with the issue of the Vancouver City Savings Credit Union Option. In his earlier comments the Minister stated that a large amount of capital would have to be provided for such an arrangement to take place. Precisely how much capital would be needed? Would it have been more than the $200 million which CDIC is providing in this case? Our information is that any figure discussed was considerably smaller than $200 million and that we could have kept this bank in Canada under the auspices of an important regional institution in Canadian hands—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: If the Minister wishes to answer, I must now interrupt the Member.

Mr. Hockin: Madam Chairman, I remind the Hon. Member that this remains a Canadian institution. It is not a branch of the Hongkong Bank but a separate subsidiary with its own board, directors, head office and branches in Canada. It is a national institution in that sense.

Mr. Langdon: Not Canadian-owned.

Mr. Hockin: Getting to the Member's wider question—

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I regret that I must interrupt the Minister.

Mr. Hockin: I would be glad to pursue this further with the Hon. Member outside the Chamber.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: I must interrupt the Minister now.

[Translation]

It being 4.45 p.m., pursuant to order made Wednesday, November 26, 1986, it is my duty to interrupt proceedings and put forthwith every question necessary to dispose of the Committee of the Whole stage of the study of Bill C-27 now before the House.

[English]

Clauses 2 to 12 inclusive agreed to on division.

Clause 1 agreed to on division.

The Assistant Deputy Chairman: Shall the title carry?

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Title agreed to.

Bill reported.

Mr. Cassidy: Madam Speaker, I see that the next item of business will not take place until five o'clock when we move to private Member's business. Under those circumstances possibly Your Honour would allow a few comments on third reading as is normal at this time—

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Cassidy: —with an understanding that the time will be shared among those who wish to comment as there will be no division taking place at 5 p.m.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): There is a special order that we stop at 5.45, so there should be no further comments. I am obliged to put all the questions at this time pursuant to order made on Wednesday.

Mr. Cassidy: Madam Speaker, I listened in vain for some unanimity from the other side that this might take place.

Mr. Gurbin: So were we a little while ago.

• (1650)

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is there unanimous consent?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Lewis: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Since it was a House order, everyone has agreed that this would be the only item of business dealt with today. In view of the fact that there is Private Members' Hour at five o'clock, I would suggest we suspend the sitting until five o'clock, which will enable my colleagues opposite to begin at five, and anyone from this side who expected to speak on the Bill of my colleague would have ample time to get here.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I have yet to put the question. I think the point of order is a bit premature.

When shall the Bill be read the third time? By leave, now?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: On division.

Mr. Hockin (London West) moved that Bill C-27, an Act to facilitate the continuation of the business of the Bank of British Columbia, be read the third time and passed.

Motion agreed to and Bill read the third time and passed.

SITTING SUSPENDED

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is it the unanimous wish of the House to suspend the sitting to five o'clock?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

At 4.52 p.m. the sitting of the House was suspended.

• (1700)

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Order, please. It being 5 p.m. the House will now proceed to the consideration of Private Members' Business as listed on today's Order Paper.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS—MOTIONS

[Translation]

SOCIAL AFFAIRS

REVISION OF EMPLOYMENT POLICY AND OBJECT OF PROGRAMS

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie) moved: That, in the opinion of this House, the Government should consider the advisability of reviewing its policy on employment and the thrust of its programs so that social and community organizations may really fulfil their self-assigned role.

He said: Madam Speaker, I think this motion concerns Members from every part of this country. At least once a year, and sometimes twice or more, Members meet with non-profit or community agencies in their ridings to discuss and select so-called job creation projects for the Challenge '86 programs, formerly known as Summer Canada projects or job development programs, formerly Canada Works.

Madam Speaker, I am sure that last year, all Members received, and are still receiving, complaints or were told about people's dissatisfaction with some of the criteria for these programs which have been maintained this year. The criteria may affect a number of agencies and even threaten the very existence of certain non-profit organizations that fill a need and provide an excellent service to the people in our respective ridings. I am thinking of various organizations that deal with senior citizens, young people, the handicapped, women's rights and various other concerns. One of the criteria I referred to just now provides that to be eligible for the projects that provide training, the candidate must have been unemployed for 24 of the last 30 weeks.

This year, if no changes are made, thousands of men and women in Canada, in our respective ridings, who last year agreed to work or receive training under various job development programs, will not be eligible this year and will thus be forced into unemployment as a result of a decision by the Conservative Government. There are those who will say: Yes, but the rule was made to give everybody a chance. A mistake governments tend to make, whether they are Liberal or Conservative or otherwise at the provincial level, is that they sometimes make regulations and laws that apply across the country but are not flexible. For instance, in the riding of Montreal—Sainte-Marie, we would need this flexibility to enable one of our community groups to survive and to give somebody a chance, and this is an example in my own riding where we have a mother who has been on welfare for 10 years. It took two years to convince that person to get involved in a job development program. If she was afraid to get involved in such a program, it was not because she was afraid to work—for she did a lot of volunteer work—but simply because she was afraid to get off social welfare and be compelled to ask to get back on it once the projects were completed. Madam Speaker, after being trained for two years, if changes are not made, this person will be compelled this year to seek again social welfare.

I am convinced that this concrete example is repeated hundred of times in my riding, and thousands of times everywhere in Canada. Sometimes, a six-month training period will not be considered adequate by the private sector to hire that person.

Madam Speaker, I think this is a major point. In the case of non-profit organizations, I think the Government has had the unfortunate tendency to favour the private sector too much at the expense of non-profit or community organizations. The best example of this is Challenge '86, where the Government insisted that, in each riding, a certain quota be reserved for the private sector.

In my own riding, and I am sure such is the case in all the other ridings in Canada, some companies employed young people who had not received better training than employees of non-profit organizations, but they saved money because they created jobs just the same and could claim Government subsidies, instead of spending their own money.

I am sure that other Members would have similar cases to report in their own ridings.

Instead of that, and I am not against providing subsidies to the private sector, the Government should use as criterion the projects which would provide the best training and would better benefit the public. Such projects should be accepted, no matter the quota or the amounts of money involved. It may be that in a riding like mine 75 per cent of the community organizations would have the best projects, or it may be that in another riding elsewhere in the country 80 per cent of the best projects would come from the private sector, so these would be accepted.

We at the federal Government level are making a mistake. I should think that all Members, particularly in Ontario and Quebec, know that every member of the provincial legislature has a budget for recreational activities, a budget which ranges from $30,000 to $50,000, and recommendations can be made to give grants or assistance to any non-profit organization related to schools, the elderly, sports, or recreational activities.

Unfortunately the federal Government does not make this kind of grants. The only way we can help various organizations is through employment creation programs. I am sure all Hon. Members agree that the Government should launch the kinds of programs available at the provincial level, programs to fund applicants submitting financial statements and where Members might act as advisers. There is a program at the Department of Secretary of State, for example, so all we need to do is to provide funding for each riding and Members could make recommendations from a list of projects. For instance, this organization in my riding is active in such or such a field and needs $2,000 to carry out this or that project.

I think that setting all political considerations aside, Members should get together and pressure governments to do something about this. And I don't see this as a way to win votes. It's not a matter of winning votes, because I have won elections without having those budgets. There are other people here who were elected without the benefit of this funding.

In any case, I think it would help give Quebecers and Canadians generally a perception of the federal presence across the country.

If we consider sports, I have a list of organizations here from the riding of Lac-Saint-Jean. Madam Speaker, these organizations do not receive federal grants but they are eligible for grants at the provincial level. The federal Government is prepared to provide funding for skating, hockey, skiing and athletics, but only for top players and young people who do well in competition.

I think that organizations involved in sports, recreation, cultural activities and social concerns, whether they are in Vancouver, Alberta, New Brunswick, Quebec, the Sagenay—Lac-Saint-Jean area, or anywhere else in Canada, should be eligible for federal grants. After all, the people in these ridings pay federal income tax. I hope Hon. Members will be agreeable to the Government earmarking funds for this purpose.

• (1710)

[English]

Mr. G. M. Gurbin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Employment and Immigration): Madam Speaker, I am pleased to be able to respond at least in part to the motion put forward by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Montréal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart). I did not quite follow the last intervention the Hon. Member made regarding sports, but I think we will have to leave the question of sports aside for today. We can get involved in sporting activities another day.

The essence of the motion the Hon. Member has proposed has really to do with the Canadian Jobs Strategy and the difference between what that Hon. Member would do as a part of a Government and what this Government has done with remarkable success since 1984. I think all Canadians would be interested in knowing that 610,000 new jobs have been created since September 1984 and there has been a net increase of 255,000 Canadians of all ages, all stripes and both sexes employed who were not employed before. This has occurred largely because of the approach the Government has taken to provide Canadians with job opportunities.

The motion suggests that we have provided these jobs by somehow causing non-profit organizations or community groups to do without or to not be allowed to participate in the activities we are trying to encourage. That is far from the truth. The figures do not justify any of the suggestions in the Hon. Member's motion or any of the comments he has made.

The Hon. Member has spoken of the groups in his riding. It is fair to say that not every group has been funded, but neither have they ever all been funded.

In the short time I have, I would like first to describe the Canadian Jobs Strategy. It consists of about six different parts and Community Futures, one part of the Canadian Jobs Strategy, and provides perhaps the best example of how we are trying to encourage community acitivity. That program is 100 per cent oriented toward letting individual communities themselves determine their futures and their best opportunities. The program itself is entirely based on flexibility and on opportunities for long-term jobs, not make-work projects. It is not for a Member of Parliament from any constituency to give a person a job for a few weeks and then leave that worker hanging with no future, no dignity and no hope to be able to provide for security in the long term.

We have provided the Canadian Jobs Strategy with programs like Community Futures, Job Development and Challenge programs. We have spoken of private and non-private sectors. Under the Challenge '86 Program, the total number of jobs provided by the private sector in 1986 is 29,619 and for the non-private sector, that figure is 48,204. The percentages are the most important in terms of the motion before us. The percentages entirely refute anything the Hon. Member has suggested or tried to suggest. The total percentage of jobs created in the private sector is 38.1 while in the non-private sector it is 61.9. The same kinds of figures can be given for the rest of the Canadian Jobs Strategy.

The private sector is certainly an area that has been targeted because that is where the long-term jobs are. However, the private sector has by no means taken over the show. In fact, in general the non-private sector accounts for most of the continuing activity.

It is important for the Canadian people to understand that there is flexibility in the Canadian Jobs Strategy. In Ontario, there is a great deal of activity and many jobs. The unemployment rate in Toronto is now 5.1 per cent. However, perhaps there are not that many jobs in the Hon. Member's riding or in Newfoundland. The Canadian Jobs Strategy provides the flexibility to deal with that. The figures prove it is working in terms of employment and the absolute figures prove that we are still encouraging the non-private sector to become involved in the Canadian Jobs Strategy. The figures are there for the Hon. Member or any other Canadian to see if they choose to look at the statistics.

The real difference will be proven in the coming six months to one year. The unemployment rate in Canada has dropped dramatically. It is now at 9.4 per cent, the lowest it has been in nearly seven years. All of the other economic indicators suggest that the programs supported by the Hon. Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) and other Ministers are working for Canadians and are providing the long-term economic climate in which Canadians can thrive and provide for their own futures.

I think it would be fair to say that the Canadian Jobs Strategy has yet to prove itself entirely in all of its different components. There is one component of it called Innovations that will allow private or non-private individuals or groups to come forward with ideas which we may incorporate into our thinking. It is almost like a mini research and development program and it will let individual Canadians and groups, perhaps some from the Hon. Member's own riding, come forward to make suggestions to Government. With our support, they will be able to find out if new approaches and new ideas might work better in a particular job scene.

I would like to make a suggestion to the Hon. Member. He talked about the involvement of individual Members of Parliament. Another important element of the Canadian Jobs Strategy is the local advisory council. That local advisory council is meant to include the Member of Parliament if he or she chooses to become directly involved and it provides sensitivity to the local area. It provides an opportunity for the Member of Parliament to tell the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Bouchard) and the Government itself what is wrong with the programs as they are delivered into particular areas.

I do not know if there is a local advisory council in the riding of the Hon. Member for Montréal—Sainte-Marie and I do not know if he participates on it. He is shaking his head to indicate no. That means that he is a little bit like a dinosaur. In spite of the fact that solid results that have worked right across Canada are there, he is resisting them. He is even resisting participation. His constituents are probably suffering because he will not take the initiative to change from the old way, which was to hand out jobs that lasted two weeks or two months and then to leave people stuck at the end of it.

This Government will not approach the employment scene that way. It is developing its strategy and has a solid performance record to date. We know that within another six months or so we will be able to give an even better total assessment of our efforts and make changes where necessary. We will look forward to suggestions for constructive changes from the Hon. Member who put this motion, but this motion is clearly out of order. It is certainly inaccurate because the figures simply do not bear it out. I could tell the Hon. Member of other figures that support my position as well.

Under the Challenge '86 Program, as I have mentioned, the non-private sector is still getting the lion's share. Nearly two-thirds of the Challenge '86 Program is on the non-profit side. There are no quotas. We have targets, because the private sector is one that we are trying to support, as it provides long-term jobs. It provides jobs that last not two weeks, not four weeks, not six weeks, but two years, four years and six years. The Hon. Member who has spoken against that belongs, I think, in the Party he represents and on the other side of the House.

• (1720)

[Translation]

Mrs. Anne Blouin (Montmorency—Orléans): Madam Speaker, I find it difficult to take the Hon. Member seriously when he says that social and community groups have no place in the Government's employment programs.

No other administration has shown as much determination in consulting Canadians, and I may say all Canadians, on the future orientation of this country's labour market. Private citizens as well as agencies responded to the call for consultation and met the challenge to work with us and find solutions to the unemployment problem.

Madam Speaker, the job strategy does not exclude any part of our society that could help develop the human resources of our country. On the contrary, its aim is to obtain the co-operation of all intervenors and to meet and identify needs as specifically and appropriately as possible. Our challenge is to select the best way to meet identified needs, and that is the strength of our program. Thanks to its great flexibility, the job strategy is able to meet a range of needs as vast and diversified as the country itself.

Our program does not overlook the contribution made by social and community agencies that are active in our towns and cities and on the reserves. Although the program stresses action by the private sector, that does not mean non-profit organizations do not have a role to play. In many cases, they will remain the real basis of many of our initiatives. Many communities rely on them for their infrastructure.

For instance, Challenge '86, our summer employment program for students, has demonstrated that non-profit organizations play a major role in providing career-oriented training. In fact, 62 per cent of the jobs were created in co-operation with non-profit organizations, including municipalities, while 69 per cent of the funding went to that sector.

Madam Speaker, this Government realizes that in some communities in this country, the private sector is practically non-existent.

The increasing emphasis, however, on private sector employers in the job strategy compensates for the years of neglect by previous governments. Consultations which led to the employment planning process taught us that young people, women, long-unemployed Canadians, and workers confronted by technological progress have one common aspiration, that training be geared to labour market opportunities.

Quickly implemented ad hoc employment-creation programs were an appropriate and temporary approach, a good solution. These programs had become necessary and made it possible for workers and communities alike to mark time through short-lived economic downturns.

Madam Speaker, conditions have changed in recent years. The way the previous administration tackled this problem during the recession of 1981 and 1982 prompted us to reconsider our employment strategy. Now we know that workers want a sound vocational training system which will make it possible for them to keep pace with the current technological evolution. Training must be consistent with the dictates of the economy and lead to lasting employment. Through sheer necessity, employment planning tends to meet the practical and basic needs of our labour force, and by that I mean all Canadians.

Thanks to the employment equity legislation adopted last summer the most vulnerable groups—women, native people, visible minorities, the disabled—know they can take an active part in the six programs of our strategy.

Madam Speaker, employment planning principles acknowledge that job training and development must be viewed as the aim of collective efforts on the part of the private sector, non-profit organizations, and other management levels. Our strategy rests on the enduring good will of all Canadians. The small businessman, the community worker and the volunteer worker can still make their contribution. Madam Speaker, we would be remiss not to give consideration to the most underprivileged in our system. Our efforts to remain competitive on international markets would be wasted if we were to ignore the fundamental structural problems of our society.

Our strategy is directed to responding to the needs of the unemployed that are genuinely underprivileged. This means developing our resources, and it is in that area indeed that the non-profit social and community groups have a major role to play. Long after an economic recession, we will still have to deal with the problems caused by long-lasting unemployment. This is why social and community groups are entirely free to take part in the implementation of our employment strategy.

For instance, the success of an important program called Job Development largely depends on the participation of community groups and volunteer organizations. That program is aimed more specifically at solving the problems caused by long-lasting unemployment.

We are strongly urging community and social groups to play a co-ordinating role within the Integration and Re-integration options of the Job Integration Program. As you know, that program was designed to help young people move from the classroom to the workplace, and women from the home to the labour market. Beside the participation of those agencies is essential to ensure program efficiency.

Under the Innovation Assistance Program, community and social agencies are invited to apply for funds to test new solutions to problems linked with to the labour market. The potential is tremendous.

Madam Speaker, the Community Futures program is based on direct community resources. It is aimed at supporting iniatives originating from the private sector and the community. Madam Speaker, I do insist on the latter, the community initiatives.

In addition, social and community groups are invited to become active and efficient members of local advisory councils. Their participation is especially appreciated when it comes to establishing priorities with respect to local labour market planning. With the help of local advisory councils, a key objective in our employment strategy is being achieved which is that programs should respond to regional and local needs.

Clearly, Madam Speaker, the Canadian Jobs Strategy provides for a prominent role by community and social organizations. The problems resulting from long term unemployment will not be wiped out overnight. To achieve this, it will be necessary to spend much time and resources in the purest tradition of local and community enterprise.

Madam Speaker, co-operation is the very source of the strength which characterizes our country. The Canadian Jobs Strategy relies on this strength because, in this area, the past is a guarantee for the future.

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Madam Speaker, I should like to speak briefly on this motion moved by the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart). I support this motion. It reads:

> That, in the opinion of this House, the government should consider the advisability of reviewing its policy on employment and the thrust of its programs so that social and community organizations may really fulfil their self-assigned role.

Madam Speaker, when I say that I support this motion—

[English]

I wish to read into the record some of the points of view about the Canadian Jobs Strategy of a number of social and community organizations. Madam Speaker, some of the social and community organizations are concerned about the direction of the Canadian Jobs Strategy in terms of more and more privatization, and a move away from organizations like community colleges.

First of all, I have a letter written to me by Lynda Murdoch who is from Mohawk College in Hamilton. She is concerned about a number of aspects of the Canadian Jobs Strategy. She states in part in her letter:

> Under Canadian Jobs Strategy, the Government of Canada is severely restricting training opportunities for under-employed women and implementing eligibility criteria for unemployed women which encourage them to remain unemployed for longer periods of time.
>
> In direct contravention of the Government's stated goal of promoting equal opportunity, projects based in the profit-making sector which are funded under the Re-Entry component of Canadian Jobs Strategy are providing training which reinforces job ghettos.

● (1730)

As I indicated, the communication was from Lynda Morgan Murdoch of Mohawk College. She is concerned that the re-entry component of the Canadian Jobs Strategy will reinforce job ghettoes with women working as waitresses and so on. That is one of her concerns as a result of analysing the programs.

I also have a copy of a brief which was sent to me, as well as to a number of Members of Parliament and Senators. It is from Mr. Terry Dance, Chairperson of the Community Outreach Department of George Brown College in Toronto. The brief was presented in response to the Canadian Jobs Strategy in which he expressed concerns similar to those of other community colleges in Canada. In part it reads:

> The Job Entry Program in the Metro area gives a representative picture of the diversity of projects, and the new funding priorities of the federal Government. Of the 40 projects funded for youth and re-entry women in Metro Toronto as of March 20, 1986, over 70 per cent were in the profit-making sector.

It continues:

> Consulting firms and individuals, previously unknown in the training field, are tapping into the Job Entry Program.

Terry Dance indicated that over 70 per cent were in the profit-making sector and that various unlicensed firms with no experience and previously unknown in terms of training were now tapping the field. He is concerned about the matter and how it affects long-term training. He is a member of an institution which is well known in the Canadian educational field.

In that we only have 10 minutes each within which to speak, I will refer very briefly to the comments of a third person from the Province of Saskatchewan.

Back in May I received a letter from Mr. Julius Friesen, Executive Director of Saskatchewan Community Colleges Trustees Association.

Mr. Friesen: Julius Friesen.

Mr. Nystrom: I do not know whether he is related to the Hon. Member for Surrey-White Rock—North Delta (Mr. Friesen), a very esteemed Member of Parliament from British Columbia. Perhaps he is his cousin. However, I think Julius Friesen is more enlightened than the Conservative Member across the way. I know that he thinks in a very progressive way politically; I know him very well. In any event, he is the Executive Director of a very important organization in my province. In referring to the Canadian Jobs Strategy, he wrote:

> It appears CJS has not established linkages with post-secondary institutions. Some linkages are essential if the quality of the CJS sponsored programs is to be adequate. In Saskatchewan, at least 80 per cent of industry and business firms employ fewer than 20 people. These firms rarely have the expertise, time or financial resources to develop training programs to meet their needs. In the absence of linkages with the traditional post-secondary institutions, sometimes hastily formed consulting firms and private trade schools are developing projects which may not meet the needs of our business sector, which are not monitored with respect to quality standards, and which may raise false expectations.

He is concerned that some of these hastily formed training schools, companies, and firms may produce people who are improperly trained for many of the small businesses in Saskatchewan. I also have a copy of the letter which he sent to the then Minister of Employment and Immigration, the present Minister of Communications (Miss MacDonald), but I do not have the time to go into it. It is along the same lines.

I should also like to refer to a letter dated March 6, 1986 which was sent to me by J. P. Robert LaRose, Executive Director of the Association of Canadian Community Colleges. Attached thereto is a brief to the Standing Senate Committee on National Finance which was presented by the Association of Canadian Community Colleges. It deals with national support for post-secondary education and it is dated January, 1986 for presentation on March 13, 1986. With reference to the Canadian Jobs Strategy, the brief indicates:

> While there are great advantages to on the job training—as part of a comprehensive strategy for training and employment, cautions should be exercised. On the job training is by its nature job-specific, and inappropriate reliance on this kind of training can only lead to enormous costs of retraining at a later date in the kind of fast paced economy to be experienced by Canada in the immediate future. Secondly, a predominant emphasis on the job training undervalues the potential of the training infrastructure built up by the community colleges through Canada over the past 25 years.

I see Madam Speaker signalling that I have only two minutes remaining. I should like to refer very quickly to the assessment of the Canadian Congress for Learning Opportunities for Women of the status of women. It indicates that training programs are becoming less and less relevant for women over the passage of time. I do not have time to read parts of the document into the record, but I should like to indicate that its concerns are similar. It is a very well researched document and I recommend it to Hon. Members of the House. They can obtain copies by contacting the association's office.

My last point concerns what we find in the Government's documents. For example, there is a tremendous increase in funding for unlicensed people in training. I have a copy of a document whose source is Canada Employment and Immigration. It indicates the status of job entry programs as of June 30, 1986. I should like to put a few of them on record.

Of a total expenditure of some $17,738,000 in Ontario as of June 30, 1986, almost half or some $8.8 million was spent in the unlicensed sector. We also find that colleges received $1.8 million; schools, $1.5 million; private vocational schools, $2.2 million; non-profit organizations, $1.8 million; and subcontracts to colleges, under $500,000.

I should like to refer to my very last point. Of the 161 projects in Ontario as of June, 1986, 70 of them went to unlicensed organizations. The community associations to which I have referred are concerned about that direction of the Government. Perhaps some government Members could respond to those concerns later. I have referred to the comments of these organizations. They were not partisan comments by any politician on either side of the House.

[Translation]

Thank you, Madam Speaker, for your kindness towards me this afternoon. You are very nice.

[English]

Mr. W. Paul McCrossan (York-Scarborough): Madam Speaker, it is with pleasure I rise to participate in the debate today. Upon reading the motion my first impression was perhaps to agree with it. Any Government should be constantly reviewing its policy on employment and the thrust of its employment programs. Any Government should be looking at the role of social and community organizations in its job strategy.

However, the implication in the motion is flawed. It is indicated that the Government has not been doing that. Obviously the Government has been much more active in terms of redesigning job programs than any recent Government. Certainly our activities in the non-profit field—and the previous Hon. Member who spoke challenged me to refer to it—have been very active.

Recent economic forecasts indicate that the Canadian economy will experience significant real growth in the future. As a result, Canadian workers should enjoy improved employment prospects. However, these better times will not be shared equally by all Canadians. The seriousness of the situation and the changing demands of the labour market call for new approaches to the problem if Canadians are to have improved employment opportunies now and in the future.

In response to the employment needs of Canadians, the Government has undertaken several initiatives. For example, it has undertaken a major restructuring of labour market policies to assist all workers and has recently entered into an agreement with the provinces and the territories to increase the labour market opportunities of social assistance recipients. In large part the voluntary sector deals with such recipients. I can assure the Hon. Member that the initiatives contain strong community focus and involvement which effectively strengthen the interests of community and social organizations.

All Canadians who wish to hold a job can now look to the future with greater expectations with the Government's new strategy to prepare Canadians for the changing labour market—the Canadian Jobs Strategy. Because the strategy is based upon consultations with Canadians concerning their greatest needs, it addresses a wide variety of employment and training needs which range from labour shortages in some areas to the requirements of lower skilled and disadvantaged Canadians who would otherwise have little hope of ever entering the labour market. The flexibility of this new approach to the employment needs of all Canadians ensures that particular community and local needs will be addressed.

• (1740)

Briefly, the Canadian Jobs Strategy is a blueprint for revitalizing Canada's labour market. Currently it has six programs which have been created to meet immediate needs and to offer a framework for national action. They are not the final solution, but they are just specific and pressing problems.

Skills Investment, the first program, helps workers whose jobs are threatened by changing technology. The second program, Job Entry, helps young people and women to get their first job.

With respect to the challenge thrown out by the Opposition, it is worth noting that with the job entry programs in the last fiscal year some 47 per cent of the moneys was distributed to the non-profit sector. So far this year distribution is running at 57 per cent, hardly indicating that the motion has validity.

The third program, the Job Development Program, offers meaningful assistance for the long-term unemployed. Just looking at this program, we can see also that the motion is flawed. In the last fiscal year 63 per cent of the moneys under this program went to the non-profit sector, 28 per cent to the private sector and 9 per cent to the municipal sector. This year, so far, we are running at 54 per cent to the non-profit sector with a decrease in the private sector to 18 per cent and an increase in the municipal sector to 28 per cent, exactly what the motion would suggest we are not doing, namely, putting money into non-profit and community organizations. Fourth is the Innovations Program which stimulates the search for new initiatives. Fifth is the Skill Shortages Program which ensures that critical skill shortages are alleviated. Sixth is the Community Futures Program which offers help to workers in communities facing chronically high unemployment, plant closures or massive lay-offs. So far, Madam Speaker, 90 communities have been selected. There is an obvious commitment by the Government to communities to give communities a voice in their own futures, exactly what the Hon. Member's motion is suggesting. I think the Member should be applauding us for doing what we are doing rather than suggesting in some way that we have been negligent.

Let me turn now to the agreement that the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Bouchard) and the Minister of National of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp) have concluded with their colleagues in all the provinces and territories on initiatives that will assist social assistance recipients to move to self-sufficiency. After all, most of the non-profit organizations around are concerned with those on welfare. Obviously there have been major initiatives to help those on welfare.

We tend to forget that social assistance recipients represent a significant portion of unemployed Canadians. In the past, their participation in federal employment programs has not been representative of their share of the jobless. The agreement that we have signed with the provinces and territories is intended to provide social assistance recipients with the opportunity to participate fully in the Canadian Jobs Strategy. Moreover, the initiatives in this agreement should be more responsive to the needs of individuals at the community level.

One initiative in the agreement states that participation levels for the social assistance recipients will be set in the Canadian Jobs Strategy. As a result, Canadians having serious difficulty in entering the labour market can expect improved job and training opportunities from the increased access to programs in the Canadian Jobs Strategy. This initiative is a major step forward for disadvantaged Canadians.

In addition, another feature of the agreement provides the provinces and the federal Government with the ability to divert resources that would have been used to maintain a person on social assistance to work experience and training programs.

In the February, 1986 Budget, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) announced that the federal Government would provide $100 million a year for this agreement for the next three years and that this would be matched by the provinces. To date, three provinces have signed agreements; British Columbia, Saskatchewan and Newfoundland. As well, we have developed a national evaluation strategy to provide a cost benefit analysis framework so that we may determine which programs work best during this three year experimentation process rather than just throwing money at the problems, as the previous Government did, and not assessing the worth that is produced.

Other measures in the federal-provincial agreement have also been initiated to make existing programs more responsive to individual needs. One measure deals with changes to the guidelines to the Canada Assistance Plan, a major program in the Department of National Health and Welfare which supports Canada's network of social assistance and social services. While the program meets its basic task of maintaining persons who are on social assistance, it will now provide improved tools to assist those persons in getting off social assistance and into long-term employment. This agreement goes a long way toward minimizing disincentives to work or training for social assistance recipients. The changes to the CAP guidelines permit provinces to allow social assistance recipients to keep some of their social assistance benefits in addition to their training allowances.

This initiative has provided three important achievements. First, we are spending the money smarter. The money is not just going to help maintain an individual on social assistance, but to enhance the employability of that individual. Second, we are aiding the poorest of the poor and helping them to become employable. Third, we are working in excellent harmony with our provincial counterparts and in community organizations which are most concerned with the poor.

As the Hon. Member can see, the Government is committed to helping unemployed Canadians receive training and find useful and productive jobs. Moreover, this commitment is based on a flexible strategy, that is, one responsive to individual and community needs. As well, these programs are targeted to those regions that are hardest hit and those Canadians that are most disadvantaged. This Government recognizes its role in helping these Canadians and has responded to it by establishing a job strategy that keeps pace with a continually changing labour market and does so with simple, realistic, effective programs that develop our most important resource, the people of Canada.

[Translation]

Mr. Gilles Grondin (Saint-Maurice): Madam Speaker, I just wish to add a little weight to the proposal made by my friend the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie (Mr. Malépart). You will certainly understand why I would not readily support what my hon. colleague was asking for the organizations which had been made by this Government in the job creation field and especially for those from non-profit organizations.

Madam Speaker, you will understand that I, for one, think that one of the basic points raised by my friend the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie was dealing less with job creation than the assurance that non-profit organizations could benefit fully from programs offered by the Government. As a matter of fact, even though I was not then a Member of this House, I had the opportunity to work with organizations in my region, and the basic problem which we faced this summer was that, with the change in eligibility criteria, non-profit organizations in the region were penalized and could not find programs or were unable to find projects which would have allowed them to create a few jobs, to develop and to survive because, without the financing of the federal Government, these organizations would have great difficulties in surviving.

Madam Speaker, I also want to point out to the Parliamentary Secretary that, unfortunately, the federal Government and Quebec have not signed any agreement for training. This absence of an agreement causes problems for the non-profit organizations which would like to apply for training programs.

The examples mentioned by the Parliamentary Secretary are more closely concerned with the Toronto region, while we are proposing programs for all of Canada. As for me, I am more interested in dealing with programs for young people.

• (1750)

If we look at an assessment of the Challenge '85 program prepared by the Department of Employment and Immigration, we find for instance that only 33 per cent of the jobs giving work experience in the field of study of young people were found in the private sector. Generally, the non-profit sector has had more success in creating new jobs than the private sector.

Analysis of the program also confirms that many jobs, especially in the private sector, would have been created in any case, even without the support of Government subsidies.

Madam Speaker, although my hon. friend from Edmonton stated that many programs were being offered to non-profit agencies, 300 agencies in this country have joined together to form a coalition, and they have indicated they were being affected by most of the cutbacks in the federal Challenge '86 program. This program is of course concerned with providing jobs for young people.

In fact, although it had a budget of $215 million in 1985, the Challenge program's budget for this year is $180 million. To everyone's surprise, it was the non-profit sector that absorbed most of the cutbacks, over 95 per cent, although that sector was given the best evaluation last year. And the private sector, which did not do as well as expected in the summer program last year, suffered only minor cutbacks. If we put this in percentages, about 40 per cent of Canada's non-profit organizations have been affected by this measure.

I think that although my hon. friend was enthusiastic about the Government's decision to promote programs that would benefit all Canadians, the fact remains that at least 300 agencies have protested these cutbacks.

When all is said and done, there were concrete results in British Columbia: out of 20 Vancouver organizations sponsoring youth summer camps, eight had to abandon their projects, two kept operating with budget cuts of 50-odd per cent, and one with budget cuts of about 20 per cent. This prompted the Little Mountain Neighborhood House executive director to say that indeed this Government is inspired by a philosophical trend whereby social services have much less priority, and ever larger funds are given to the private sector rather than to non-profit organizations.

Madam Speaker, I should point out as well that this year 65 per cent of the Challenge '86 budget was allotted to the public sector and non-profit organizations in British Columbia. Last year, the proportion was up to 75 per cent. The federal Government made job creation by the private sector one of its priorities, even though, as I said, the evaluation of the program Challenge '85 that was done by the Department of Employment and Immigration showed that the non-profit sector was generating more jobs than the private sector.

Closer to us, about a hundred groups have protested against the cuts in Challenge '86, pointing out that last summer's $34 million cutbacks deprived nearly 115,000 canadians of the services they had enjoyed in previous years. Summer camps for underprivileged young people and assistance programs for senior citizens especially were affected.

Finally, before I conclude I would like to bring to your attention, Mr. Speaker, certain figures which reach beyond the statistics that may be used regularly by Government Members to justify or show a measure of job creations, because we note from year to year that programs or budgets allotted by the Government keep decreasing. Taking for instance the budget for Challenge '86, there were $180 million for job creation, of which $127 million went to the major components Summer Employment and Job Experience. The Challenge '85 budget included $205 million for job creation, $163 million of which were used for Summer Employment and Job Experience. This means there was a $25-million cutback for 1985-86.

Under Challenge '85, non-profit groups produced twice as many jobs throughout Canada as the private sector. And the distribution of the 29,170 jobs, jobs generated in Quebec under Challenge '85 was: 50 per cent with the non-profit groups, 40 per cent with the private sector, and 10 per cent with the municipalities.

All this, Madam Speaker, goes to show that this Government's commitment to reducing the reliance on non-profitable organizations as compared with previous years is a policy which is very bad in itself and which condemns the federal Government's current action. I therefore support the proposal put forward by my colleague for Montreal—Sainte-Marie, which is to go ahead with the best projects submitted, whether they come from non-profit or profit groups, provided they give an opportunity to young people in a given region to work and acquire job experience.

Mr. Clément M. Côté (Lac-Saint-Jean): Madam Speaker, I just could not begin my remarks the way the Hon. Member for Saint-Maurice (Mr. Grondin) did and say that I will try to give more weight: you will understand that it would be difficult for me to give more weight, but I will try to set the record straight, Madam Speaker.

On the one hand, the Hon. Member for Saint-Maurice (Mr. Grondin) stated that in the Greater Toronto area, under Challenge '86, more money had been given to the private sector than to non-profit organizations. Well, I hope that the Hon. Member can use a pencil to jot down a few figures. In the Greater Toronto area, some $6,195,672 were given to the private sector, compared with $9,829,757 to non-profit organizations.

I should like to add something to what the Hon. Member for Yorkton—Melville (Mr. Nystrom) said concerning job creation for women. Madam Speaker, may I say that compared with the former program, there has been an increase from 36 per cent to 45 per cent in the number of jobs for women.

The objective sought by the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte Marie is quite commendable, that is for the Canadian Government to give more to non-profit organizations and to the most needy. Where the Hon. Member for Montreal—Sainte-Marie gets off the track is when he asks the Government to scrap the present policy on job development and return to the previous system. He mentioned a while ago the riding of Lac-Saint-Jean. Let me say, madam Speaker, and I could deal with that for an hour or even more, that in my riding, the new program made it possible this year to increase the number of recommended projects by 28 per cent. I wish I could have dealt more with this program which is quite welcome back home, because it is very helpful to the unemployed, the needy, and the non-profit organizations, contrary to the former program.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The hour provided for the consideration of Private Members' Business has now expired.

Pursuant to Standing Order 42(1), the item is dropped from the Order Paper.

Pursuant to the Order adopted on Wednesday, November 26, 1986, the House is now suspended to the call of the Chair.

[English]

SITTING RESUMED

The House resumed at 8.35 p.m.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I have the honour to inform the House that a message has been received from the Senate informing this House that the Senate has passed Bill C-27, an Act to facilitate the continuation of the business of the Bank of British Columbia, without amendment and with observations.

THE ROYAL ASSENT

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Order. I have the honour to inform the House that a communication has been received as follows:

Royal Assent

Rideau Hall
Ottawa,

27 November, 1986

Sir,

I have the honour to inform you that the Honourable Antonio Lamer, Judge Puisne of the Supreme Court of Canada, in his capacity as Deputy Governor General, will proceed to the Senate chamber today, the 27th day of November, 1986, at 8.25 p.m., for the purpose of giving Royal Assent to certain Bills.

Yours sincerely,
Léopold H. Amyot
Secretary to the Governor General

A message was delivered by the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod as follows:

Madam Speaker, the Honourable Deputy to the Governor General desires the immediate attendance of this honourable House in the chamber of the honourable the Senate.

Accordingly, Madam Speaker with the House went up to the Senate chamber.

[Translation]

And being returned:

• (2040)

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I have the honour to inform the House that when the House went up to the Senate Chamber the Deputy Governor General was pleased to give, in Her Majesty's name, the Royal Assent to the following Bills:

Bill C-27, An Act to facilitate the continuation of the business of the Bank of British Columbia—Chapter No. 47, 1986.

Bill S-2, An Act to implement conventions between Canada and the Kingdom of the Netherlands and Canada and Japan and agreements between Canada and the People's Republic of China and Canada and the Republic of Malta for the avoidance of double taxation with respect to income tax—Chapter No. 48, 1986.

It being 8.47 p.m., pursuant to an Order made on Friday, November 7, 1986, this House stands adjourned until 11 a.m. Monday, December 1, 1986, pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

The House adjourned at 8.47 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Monday, December 1, 1986

The House met at 11 a.m.

[English]

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, there have been some general discussions this morning among House Leaders. I believe that Your Honour will find that there is a disposition to let the Government's time allocation motion under Government Notices of Motion stand for today. I wish to seek that clarification before we proceed.

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I would have thought that what I suggested to my colleague in person just moments ago would have been sufficient. However, that is the case.

Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I could ask if you have already called Tabling of Documents? If so, I would seek the unanimous consent of the House to revert.

Mr. Speaker: I have already called it. Does the Hon. Member have the unanimous consent of the House to revert to Tabling of Documents?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Speaker: Tabling of Documents.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

PETITIONS

GOVERNMENT RESPONSE

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 106(8), I have the honour to table, in both official languages, the Government's response to five petitions, Nos. 332-9 to 332-13 inclusive.

REQUEST TO WITHDRAW TARIFF ON ENGLISH LANGUAGE BOOKS

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I have several petitions from Canadians living from the East to the West Coast who ask that whereas the Government of Canada has imposed a retaliatory tariff on imported books in the English language which has limited the access of Canadians to literature and information; and whereas the tariff has little negative effect on the publishing industry of the United States yet penalizes Canada's consumers, book publishers, booksellers, distributers and Canada's culture; and whereas rising book prices have placed a certain strain on the book acquisition programs and policies of our nation's public and specialized libraries, the petitioners pray and call upon Parliament to rescind this tariff which threatens irreparable harm to the Canadian book industry and compromises federal policy on cultural industries in respect to free trade negotiations.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGE TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present yet another petition. Pursuant to Standing Order 106 the petition has been certified by the Clerk of Petitions. It deals with the matter of the generic drug laws. In the petition the people from Lynn Lake, Manitoba, indicate that they too are opposed to the Government's attempt to raise the price of drugs in order to appease the Americans in the free trade talks. The petitioners are worried about the increase in prices for drugs and hope that the Government will reject the proposal to change Canadian drug laws.

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, I too have the pleasure to present a petition from several residents of the Winnipeg area who also protest the Government's attempt to change the Patent Act which they feel will result in an increase in the cost of drugs and medications.

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I have the duty and responsibility to table a petition signed by many residents of Winnipeg, Manitoba. The petitioners call upon Parliament to oppose and reject the proposals which will increase prescription drug prices for Canadians. They feel that the proposals to change the Patent Act relating to prescription drugs will not only increase drug prices but that they will also unfairly hurt Canadians whose health needs require the purchase of prescription drugs. In fact, these changes will result in higher costs to provincial Government drug plans. They call upon Parliament to reject this legislation.

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I also wish to present to Parliament a petition signed by numerous Canadian citizens who call upon the Government not to proceed with the legislation extending patent rights* to multinational pharmaceutical firms. The petitioners urge Parliament to maintain the existing Act as is.

• (1110)

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and duty, pursuant to Standing Order 106, to present several petitions from Canadians who are concerned about the proposed changes to generic drug laws. They are concerned that the new legislation will increase drug prices for Canadian consumers and will severely restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy necessary prescription drugs. Since this will also cause higher costs to provincial drug plans, the petitioners humbly pray and call upon the House to reject these proposals which will increase prescription drug prices for all Canadians.

[Translation]

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have here a petition signed by thirty people from the province of Manitoba, concerning the price of pharmaceutical products and the impact of the Government's proposed legislation, which will be to increase the price of drugs. Mr. Speaker, these people are particularly concerned that concessions made by the Government to the Americans in the context of the free trade talks will have the effect of putting a heavy financial burden on Canadians who are ill, and petitioners are therefore seeking to retain the existing legislation on the price of drugs.

[English]

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and duty to present a petition which was sent to me by the Parkside Golden Age Club Incorporated, Parkside, Saskatchewan, and most of the signatories of the petition are members of that club. They ask the Parliament of Canada to reject proposals which might increase the cost of prescription drugs and that Parliament reject entirely the changes to the Patent Act.

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from a number of residents of my riding who point out that changes to the Patent Act relating to prescription drugs will increase drug prices for Canadian consumers, that these changes will hurt Canadians who require prescription drugs on an ongoing basis and will increase the costs to provincial government drug plans and that this is another concession to the United States in the free trade negotiations. These petitioners call upon Parliament to reject these proposals which will increase prescription drug prices for Canadians. I am glad to see that the Minister is here listening to the presentation of these petitions.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I too have a petition from a number of citizens of Canada who protest this dastardly and terrible piece of legislation that will penalize senior citizens and force up the price of drugs. I am proud to present this petition on behalf of these ordinary people of Canada.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The Hon. Member is presenting a petition with a certain degree of enthusiasm. The Chair would remind the Hon. Member that it is not an occasion to make a long speech but just to describe what is in the petition.

Mr. Waddell: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. They feel strongly about this one so I will file this petition.

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, I will try to control my enthusiasm a bit. I have several petitions to present to the House as well. It is very much the case, as these petitions suggest, that right across Canada there is swelling opposition to what is happening to the patent legislation. The first of these petitions comes from Alberta. The petitioners indicate their strong opposition to the certain increase in drug prices which they see in the future. The second petition comes from Manitoba and makes the same point. It also indicates that the petitioners feel very strongly that this action is tied as a concession to the free trade talks with the United States.

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I will restrain myself from exposing my strong emotional feelings in exercising the honour to submit petitions from several citizens of the Cities of Windsor and Saskatoon. The petitioners are protesting the Government's intention to amend the Patent Act and are asking the Government to withdraw the legislation and listen to the people of Canada with an attentive ear, not an ear that hears the voice of the President of the United States in determining Canadian policy.

Mr. John Parry (Kenora—Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, today I have the responsibility and privilege of presenting a petition from citizens of my riding who are also opposed to the initiative of the Government manifested in Bill C-22. I think it might be instructive for the House to know that citizens of Dryden, Devlin, Mine Centre, Emo, Fort Frances, Thunder Bay, Rainy River and La Vallée have all signed this petition calling upon the Government to reject the proposals which will increase prescription drug prices for Canadians.

[Translation]

Canadians throughout my riding and throughout the country object to this disastrous piece of legislation.

[English]

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to present a petition on behalf of a number of residents of western Canada who now avail themselves of their ancient and undoubted right thus to present a grievance common to your petitioners in the certain assurance that your Honourable House will therefor provide a remedy. The remedy they seek is for the Government and Parliament to reject the changes to the patent drug Act that would result in significant increases in the price of prescription drugs for ordinary Canadians.

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 17, 22, 23, 26 and 28.

[Text]

CMHC—HOUSING PROJECTS APPROVED IN VICTORIA—HALIBURTON

Question No. 17—Mr. Scott (Victoria—Haliburton):

1. Since September 4, 1984, have any housing projects been approved by CMHC in the constituency of Victoria—Haliburton and, if so (a) how many (b) what was the total (i) federal (ii) provincial contribution?

2. Which government has the authority to publicly announce approval of these projects by CMHC under the current federal-provincial agreement in the Province of Ontario?

Hon. Stewart McInnes (Minister of Public Works): I am informed by Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation as follows:

1. (a) Four housing projects have been approved by CMHC in the constituency of Victoria—Haliburton since September 4, 1984. (b) (i) and (ii) The total maximum annual subsidy contributions for these projects was:

Federal	— $ 344,190
Provincial	— $ 162,159

2. Under the terms of the federal/provincial agreement in Ontario signed on February 28, 1986, project publicity is made jointly by the federal and Ontario governments. The joint news releases are issued to the media by the Province.

CANADA WORKS PROGRAM—FUNDS FOR MATAPÉDIA—MATANE

Question No. 22—Mrs. Killens:

1. Did the Department of Employment and Immigration allocate grants to the constituency of Matapédia—Matane under the Canada Works Program (Phase II - 1985) and, if so, in each case, in what amounts?

2. In each case, what is (a) a description of the projects submitted and the (i) title (ii) name and address of the sponsor (b) was the list of projects accepted and the (i) amount of the grant (ii) number of jobs created?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): 1. and 2: See reply to question No. 21 tabled this day.

CANADA WORKS PROGRAM—FUNDS FOR RIMOUSKI—TÉMISCOUATA

Question No. 23—Mrs. Killens:

1. Did the Department of Employment and Immigration allocate grants to the constituency of Rimouski—Témiscouata under the Canada Works Program (Phase II - 1985) and, if so, in each case, in what amounts?

2. In each case, what is (a) a description of the projects submitted and the (i) title (ii) name and address of the sponsor (b) was the list of projects accepted and the (i) amount of the grant (ii) number of jobs created?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): 1. and 2: See reply to question No. 20 tabled this day.

SALE OF DE HAVILLAND AIRCRAFT CORPORATION

Question No. 26—Mr. Kaplan:

Is the Government aware of any liabilities or potential liabilities arising from sales of products by de Havilland Aircraft Corporation, which continue to be the final responsibility of the taxpayers of Canada because of the sale of the corporation to Boeing Commercial Aircraft Company and, if so, what are they?

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Privatization)): Every company incurs real obligations and exposes itself to potential liabilities in the course of doing business. De Havilland was no exception to this rule, and in the high technology world of aerospace these liabilities are potentially much more serious.

The arrangement with Boeing is, in this regard, a positive element in the sale of de Havilland. If de Havilland had not been sold to Boeing, the Canadian taxpayer would have been exposed to the full weight of the various obligations and potential liabilities incurred by de Havilland. However, as part of the sale of the company to Boeing, the Government was able to negotiate an arrangement which significantly reduces the exposure of Canadian taxpayers to these risks. For Boeing, assumption of a portion of the risks associated with de Havilland is, in effect, part of the price that is being paid for de Havilland, and is in addition to the $90 million in cash, the royalties, and the commitment to place up to $325 million in new work in Canada.

CBC—BROADCASTING OF SPEECH FROM THE THRONE

Question No. 28—Mr. Wilson (Swift Current—Maple Creek):

1. Did the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation provide coverage of the October 1, 1986, Speech from the Throne and, if so (a) what cost was budgeted (b) what were all direct and indirect actual costs (c) how many CBC employees were directly and indirectly involved?

2. Were any persons who were not CBC employees on contract for the occasion and, if so (a) how many (b) for what period of time and at what cost?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): I am informed by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as follows:

1. Yes. The October 1, 1986, Speech from the Throne was broadcast live by the CBC French and English radio and television networks

On all four networks, the Speech from the Throne was included in news specials that had been produced to cover the events associated with the opening of the second session of Parliament, and to provide some reaction to material contained in the Speech from the Throne.

Television coverage of the events was provided by a single technical team. That team was assembled by the English television network, and it provided pool coverage to CBC French television and other Canadian broadcasters (CTV, Global, TVA and Quatre Saisons).

(a) There was no separate, special budget allocated for coverage of the opening of the second session of Parliament and the Speech from the Throne. Instead the costs involved were covered by the regular budgets allocated to news specials for the various radio and television services.

(b) The direct and indirect costs of the four news specials are components of over-all program costs, and it has not been customary to require the CBC to provide such details of its internal management and administration. The background to this custom is explained in detail in the reply to question No. 2530 answered November 6, 1975. It should be noted, however, that pool costs were recovered from other participating Canadian broadcasters.

(c) There were 91 CBC employees directly and indirectly involved with production of the four news specials for the CBC networks as follows: English television 52, French television 27, English radio 7, French radio 5.

2. No.

[English]

Mr. Speaker: The questions as enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary have been answered.

* * *

QUESTIONS PASSED AS ORDERS FOR RETURNS

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, if Questions Nos. 20 and 21 could be made Orders for Returns, the Returns would be tabled immediately.

Mr. Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House that Questions Nos. 20 and 21 be deemed to have been made Orders for Returns?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

[Text]

CANADA WORKS PROGRAM—FUNDS FOR RIMOUSKI—TÉMISCOUATA

Question No. 20—Mrs. Killens:

1. For 1984-85 and 1985-86, did the Department of Employment and Immigration allocate funds to the constituency of Rimouski—Témiscouata, under the Canada Works Program and, if so, in what amounts?

2. In each case, what (a) was the list of projects submitted and the (i) title (ii) name and address of the sponsor (iii) description of the project (iv) amount of the financing (b) according to the latest figures available, was the (i) list of projects accepted (ii) amount of the grant (iii) number of jobs created?

Return tabled.

CANADA WORKS PROGRAM—FUNDS FOR MATAPÉDIA—MATANE

Question No. 21—Mrs. Killens:

1. For 1984-85 and 1985-86, did the Department of Employment and Immigration allocate funds to the constituency of Matapédia—Matane under the Canada Works Program and, if so, in what amounts?

2. In each case, what (a) was the list of projects submitted and the (i) title (ii) name and address of the sponsor (iii) description of the project (iv) amount of the financing (b) according to the latest figures available, was the (i) list of projects accepted (ii) amount of the grant (iii) number of jobs created?

Return tabled.

[English]

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I would ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Speaker: Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANADAIR LIMITED DIVESTITURE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

Hon. Barbara McDougall (Minister of State (Privatization)) moved that Bill C-25, an Act to authorize the divestiture of Canadair Limited and to provide for other matters in connection therewith, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

• (1120)

She said: Mr. Speaker, I am rising today on behalf of the Government to introduce to the House for its second reading the Canadair Limited Divestiture Authorization Act, Bill C-25. The Government is proud to table Bill C-25 to conclude the sale of Canadair to Bombardier of Montreal. This legislation will provide the authority to carry out the final step in turning Canadair back to the private sector where its potential as a dynamic, competitive company can best be achieved.

A decision to sell Canadair to Bombardier was based on the principle of maximizing the social and economic benefits for all of Canada, and not simply of maximizing the selling price. I would like to describe to you in some detail the privatization process of Canadair. I would like to show the House that this divestiture was carried out with sensitivity to the concerns of the many interested parties, that it achieves a fair return for taxpayers, and that it creates the best environment for a strong and competitive company which is capable of sustaining growth and creating more secure employment prospects.

In assessing the terms of the sale, I would ask Canadians to take two factors into account. First, the purchase price. We have been seeking the maximum economic benefits for the country. This may not always mean the highest price. Second, Canadians must realize that no sale could recoup the billions of dollars already expended on Canadair.

In the early 1980s, after having owned the company for more than five years, the Government took the regrettable but necessary step of financially restructuring Canadair. This was done at significant cost to the Canadian taxpayer, but it only treated the symptoms. The difficulties facing this company could not be solved by financial restructuring alone.

[Translation]

Operating in a very competitive industry, Canadair was frustrated in its attempt to remain in the forefront of a rapidly expanding aerospace industry.

Considering this background and after careful study, the Government decided to sell Canadair.

This decision was made because we concluded that maintaining the Government's participation would restrict Canadair's prospects for the future.

[English]

In October of 1984, the Government announced that Canadair was for sale. Mr. Paul Marshall, President and Chief Executive Officer of the Canada Development Investment Corporation, co-ordinated the marketing and financial analysis necessary before recommending to Government a prospective purchaser for Canadair. The search for appropriate buyers was based on sound business principles. The criteria for evaluation by the financial advisers included the following characteristics: proven managerial, technological, marketing and manufacturing capabilities; established financial depth; and industry experience.

[Translation]

The CDIC's objective was to select buyers who would develop the assets of a competitive aerospace enterprise with a view to the export market, further develop aerospace technology in Canada, maintain employment prospects in Canada and support regional development priorities.

[English]

By early 1986, the groundwork had been laid to start a final bidding process. On February 6, 1986 bids were invited from the six interested parties. They included Bombardier Inc., Canadian Aerospace Corporation, Candian Aerospace Technologies Ltd., a consortium led by Fleet Aerospace Corporation, IMP Limited, and Magna International Inc.

The financial advisers then opened negotiations with the six interested purchasers by providing the additional technical and financial information on Canadair. The team of financial advisers actively worked with the bidders to negotiate final improvements in the submissions. The CDIC board closely reviewed the proposals and recommended Bombardier as having the offer with the superior bid.

The last step of this lengthy and thorough process included a review of the CDIC recommendation by the Ministerial Task Force on Privatization. After reviewing the recommendation and the supporting financial analysis, and after additional study of the proposal by the Government's own financial adviser, the Ministerial Task Force decided to pursue the Bombardier offer.

[Translation]

We also carefully examined the financial background and growth capability of each of the buyers concerned. Again, I want to make it clear that during their scrutiny of this sale, the Ministers not only considered the price and the advice of financial experts, but also the economic and social benefits.

We also examined the consequences of liquidating the company and of maintaining Government ownership. After considering these options and Bombardier's offer, we are convinced we made the best possible decision for the company's future and that of its employees.

[English]

On August 18, together with my colleagues, the Hon. Michel Côté, the Hon. Robert de Cotret, and the Hon. Marcel Masse, I announced the signing of the letter of intent to sell Canadair to Bombardier.

The terms of the Canadair sale to Bombardier are complex, and have been arrived at only after months of detailed negotiations and careful considerations. I am pleased to provide you with highlights of the agreement my Government has entered into with Bombardier. I have also provided the Hon. Members with a supplementary information package to help in their understanding of this sale, and in preparation for a speedy passage of Bill C-25. The terms of sale address a number of important employee issues. Mindful of the importance of gaining the confidence of Canadair's workforce, Bombardier has agreed to offer participation to all Canadair employees in Bombardier's existing employee stock purchase plan. Bombardier welcomes the desire of workers to buy into the company, and to participate in the future of Canadair.

[Translation]

Bombardier undertakes to maintain the manufacturing operations and the headquarters of Canadair in Quebec.

[English]

An important feature of the agreement with Bombardier is that Canadair will keep the world product mandate for current products and their derivatives. However, through the CDIC, the Government will retain the ownership of the advanced Challenger technology. The Government will licence this technology to Canadair for future annual royalties, which are estimated to amount to $173 million.

Upon closure of this transaction, the Government will receive an immediate cash settlement of $120 million in payment for the shares of Canadair. In addition, the Government will receive $100 million of special shares of Canadair Bombardier Inc. to ensure that Canadair's working capital is dedicated to the further development and to the future of the corporation. A further $50 million of special shares are being issued, which will have the effect of increasing Canadair's research and development, stimulating the development of export markets, and increasing the use of Canadian supplies. Furthermore, Bombardier has committed itself to submitting a plan to increase the level of Canadian content in the Challenger aircraft program.

It is obvious from this long list of sale arrangements that benefits will flow not only to Canadair and its employees, but also to the aerospace industry in Canada and to all Canadians.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, we believe that Bombardier will provide Canadair with the kind of innovative management that has made it a leader in the transportation technology sector, both in Canada and on international markets, and thus give Canadair the new direction it needs to compete effectively.

[English]

By joining up with Bombardier, Canadair will benefit from a sound management capability for improved performance and growth; through a sound business strategy, efficient operation backed by strong marketing skills; and a sound financial base to finance the extensive capital requirements entailed in new product development.

• (1130)

The Bombardier offer of purchase not only provides the Government with an immediate cash return, but it also provides many benefits and advantages to Canadair. The alliance with Bombardier will reinforce Canada's capacity to develop effectively as a leading aerospace manufacturer.

In sum, the purchase of Canadair by Bombardier creates a merger of Canada's technology and skilled workforce with Bombardier's management expertise and international marketing experience.

This partnership will provide Canadair with the opportunity to improve its ability to compete in global markets, to provide the best possible future for Canadair's employees, and to make a continuing contribution to the Quebec and Canadian economies.

We firmly believe that the return to the private sector of a company like Canadair is in the best interests of the company and its employees. It is private resources which can best be engaged in the business of designing, producing, and marketing aircraft. That is why we propose to privatize Canadair.

It has been a great honour and pleasure for me to begin debate on second reading of Bill C-25. For the good of Canadair, for the good of Canada, for the good of Quebec, for the good of its workers, and for the good of its suppliers, I recommend the unanimous support of all Hon. Members for speedy passage of Bill C-25.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Mr. Jacques Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Madam Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to speak to Bill C-25, and first of all, I would like to say that we on this side of the House welcome this legislation. In fact, my only criticism would be that the Government has taken so long to bring this Bill to fruition. The Government announced its intentions in October 1984, and subsequently the whole process was left to languish which had a number of adverse effects including that of creating a climate of uncertainty which did not help Canadair. During all this time, there were repeated visits by Canadair's competitors which did not lead to any subsequent purchase offers, and which may have harmed Canadair commercially in its attempts to sell certain products on foreign markets. I will comment in detail later on, with quotes from a number of business enterprises who tried to use these visits to get ahead of Canadair.

In any event, to get back to the positive side, I can say we are delighted that Bombardier came out the winner in a competition against only one other company in the final stages, namely, Canadian Aerospace Technology, the Dornier Webster group. We are delighted Bombardier won, because first of all, Bombardier is a Canadian company. The Government was careful to avoid its previous mistake when it sold de Havilland to a foreign company, namely Boeing. Bombardier is a Quebec company, it is one of ours, and I am sure that across the country, people appreciate the fact that a Canadian company is purchasing Canadair, and especially in Quebec, in the Montreal area, because Bombardier has proved its mettle in large-scale production. It started with snowmobiles, followed by locomotives, and is now getting involved in the aerospace industry, a sector that is even more important. We want to offer our best wishes to Bombardier, which has the competence and the experience required to manage big projects, and the marketing skills to compete on a world scale. Bombardier is in an excellent position to manage Canadair's operations and to maintain it as a profit-making enterprise.

Bombardier also has a definite advantage because Canadair's technology is going to stay in Canada. And this time, the Government made sure the technology would belong to all Canadians, which represents a considerable improvement over the previous privatization operation involving de Havilland, which was purchased by Boeing. In that case, purely Canadian technology is now in the hands of a company that belongs to investors who reside in the United States. So in fact the Government is correcting a mistake and taking a more enlightened approach in this second aerospace industry major privatization process.

Needless to say Bombardier is striking a good deal as well because Canadair happens to be on solid financial ground. Canadair now reports profits for 1984, 1985 and even for this year, after experiencing serious financial difficulties in recession years 1982 and 1983, as did most other aerospace corporations throughout the world. Indeed Canadair began recovering in 1984 and posted profits of $6 million that year, and $27.6 million the year after. In other words, it turned into a profitable operation. It is still too early to categorically state that in 1986 Canadair operated in the black because the year is not over yet, but Canadair officials are talking in terms of profits of about $23.8 million. So the Government is privatizing a company which is quite healthy, in spite of some Government's mistakes, in my opinion.

As I said earlier, the privatization process took so long that prospective buyers were able to visit Canadair facilities and gain access to what is known as sensitive data in the trade. As a matter of fact, in an attempt to take full advantage of the situation, some firms like Gulfstream wrote to interested Challenger buyers and pointed out that privatization was taking too long and did create an atmosphere of uncertainty.

Madam Speaker, I have here a memo from Gulfstream Aerospace Corporation whose head office is located in Savannah, Georgia, in the United States. On July 23, 1985 Mr. H.L. Humble wrote this to Mel Simon & Associates:

[English]

With your involvement in the investment business, I have to ask if your pending purchase of the Canadair CL-601 is really best for you? CDIC's plan to sell Canadair is public knowledge. When that happens, to whom will you look for support? Spares? And what will be the effect on your long term investment in that product?

We can offer new Gulfstream III's now and Gulfstream IV's downstream, and we know who will be there to fully support your investment.

I cite the memo to explain that Gulfstream and others had access to confidential and sensitive information about the operations of Canadair, which they later used to their advantage and to the detriment of Canadian workers and Canadian technology. One wonders how Canadair was able to survive and to show profits in 1984-85 despite the fact that other competitors had inside information which they were trying to use to their advantage.

• (1140)

[Translation]

In May 1985, Canadair board directors felt that this way Gulfstream might too easily acquire strategic data and unanimously refused to let Gulfstream have confidential information such as lists of clients, marketing plans, research projects, customer service programs, future projects, in short a host of details which any company dealing with a competitor would rather keep under wraps.

However, CDIC officials in Toronto chose to reject Canadair management objections and forced them to release all this information to their Gulfstream competitor. Armed with this information, Gulfstream did not waste any time and, as early as July, sent Canadair customers a harmful telegram—I just quoted it in English—in which it claimed that Canadair would be unable to offer support services on products and spare parts.

Madam Speaker, the Toronto press does not usually spring to the defence of Montreal business firms, but in this case it did speak up to denounce the situation. But again for the second and third times, as recently as August 1985, CDIC officials directed Canadair to play ball with Gulfstream experts. The rest is history: having laid their hands on all Canadair strategic data, Gulfstream management confirmed the fears of the Canadair board of directors and, finally, last October 4, announced rather contemptuously that they had decided not to buy Canadair. Of course Gulfstream had not really set their sights on Canadair, all they wanted was to obtain trade secrets which might eventually be useful to them.

To come back to the letter of intent between Canadair and Bombardier, even there, everything is not perfect.

If I may, Madam Speaker, I would like to refer to the study commissioned from the Salomon Brothers firm, which had been asked to review this agreement and to comment the proposed sale. In particular, Salomon Brothers had been asked to comment, first, the process used by the state and its outside advisors to sell Canadair, and second the adequacy of the Government's assessment of the two bids received by the CDIC.

One of our concerns is that there has been repetition of a mistake made in the de Havilland takeover. Once more, the Canadian public will be responsible for any possible increase in the insurance premiums which Bombardier Canadair Inc. might have to pay.

Indeed, the Salomon Brothers report said the following:

The only important provision in the Bill that neither promotes Crown objectives nor conforms to traditional commercial practice is that which provides for risk sharing should insurance become "economically impracticable to procure". The general notion of this provision results from precedent set in the de Havilland transaction. In de Havilland the Crown was at risk for a portion of insurance cost increases, even if de Havilland could afford to pay them. Here, the Crown is at risk only if the insurance becomes unobtainable at an economically practicable cost.

I do not see why, when the state sells a profitable corporation, as I said earlier, Canadian taxpayers should be asked to pay for increases in an insurance cost which should, from now on, be borne by Bombardier, which has taken over Canadair.

Madam Speaker, Canadair is one of the major employers in the Montreal region, with 4,000 employees at the present time. Through you, Madam Speaker, I would like to ask a few questions to the Government and the Minister who is sponsoring this Bill.

First, there is the employment issue and the fact that 4,000 workers are worried about their jobs. The Minister was very vague about this earlier when she said that one of the objectives of privatization was to make jobs more secure. However, she gave us very few details. If we look at clause 7 of the letter of intent, on page 4, we find an open door for laying off employees. If I may quote this short paragraph in the letter of intent, it says the following:

Bombardier is committed to maintaining existing levels of employment at Canadair subject to cyclical shifts and sound business practices, and will pursue new programs and opportunities so that the level of employment at Canadair and its suppliers will increase.

We should not be taken in by such a vague paragraph. The phrase "subject to sound business practices" means that there will be a rationalization and that, to increase profitability or to adjust the management practices of Canadair to those of Bombardier, the management could easily decide to lay off some of the employees. Now what is very important in my view is to make sure that those 4,000 people will have a job.

The paragraph included in the Letters of Intent is a speculative commitment to maintaining existing levels of employment, but with two major qualifications, being cyclical changes and sound business pratices. This in the final analysis means that the paragraph is no guarantee at all that the 4,000 people working for Canadair will be kept in their jobs.

Second, there is the matter of research and development. We on this side of the House believe that research and development should remain in the Montreal area. There again, if one reads the Letter of Intent, this is not clear.

As for the Minister he indicated that Bombardier has agreed to maintain manufacturing facilities and the company Headquarters in Quebec. This is at least something. But, we also happen to know that the place where research and development work is done is also very important. If you go back to page 3 of the Letter of Intent, this is what you will see:

> The existing R&D capacity of Canadair will be enhanced to maintain Canadair as a complete aircraft company with ability to compete in commercial and defence markets.

But there is no indication whatsoever as to where specifically those R&D activities will be carried out. This is wishful thinking, some sort of a vague promise that they will try and increase research and development, but without specific details of course.

Another matter of concern to Canadair workers, who will now be transferred to a new employer, Bombardier, has to do with the question of guarantees regarding their pension funds. On that matter the Letter of Intent includes some guarantees in general terms. This is spelt out in two lines only on page 2, Item 5, and reads as follows:

> Amounts currently in the Canadair pension plans will be for the sole benefit of Canadair employees.

We could hardly expect anything less. What is not stated, however, because details are lacking, is whether Canadair employees who are to be transferred to Bombardier will have a pension fund that will be as generous as their former one. This is what employees are concerned about. They know the funds will be to their sole benefit, but they do not know what the new provisions will be and how they could be affected upon retirement. Those are questions I am asking the Minister.

In any event, as I said, on this side of the House we will support quick passage of the legislation. We wish Bombardier good luck with that major takeover. It is our hope that privatization will benefit all those involved—Bombardier, the Canadair employees, the Canadian aerospace industry—and that it will also benefit residents of the Montreal area by providing jobs for many years to come, and that finally all Montrealers, who for years have been so proud of Canadair, may now count on Bombardier-Canadair Inc., which will the name of the new company, to continue as one of the major employers in the area and one of the mainstays of the Canadian aerospace industry.

With that in mind, we wish Bill C-25 and Bombardier-Canadair Inc. the best of luck.

• (1150)

[English]

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Madam Speaker, it is a great pleasure for me to give my first speech as NDP critic for privatization. I see the smiling Minister across the floor. She is the second woman Minister I have been critic of in this Parliament, the first being the former Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. According to the press, both are rising stars. That gives me particular pleasure. It is always more fun being critic of a rising star than the other way around. I hope the Minister's star will continue to rise because, goodness knows, the Cabinet needs to have at least one or two rising stars in a group of generally falling stars.

I know the Minister has to leave soon to give a speech. I guess she will have to read all of my words in Hansard later. I believe the Minister is also responsible for the status of women. I was just wondering if she had considered the irony in that generally the Civil Service and Crown corporations have a better record on employment benefits and all kinds of things for women than those in the private sector. She might look at that and we will come back to it in some future debate. She may have a bit of a conflict there.

We in the NDP are opposed to this Bill for three reasons. First, it has been brought forward for ideological and not for sound economic reasons. The Conservatives original strategy for dealing with the aerospace industry was to combine de Havilland and Canadair into one super aerospace Crown corporation. That was in 1984. Now, in 1986, the strategy is the complete opposite, that of privatization. The Conservatives have been carried away with radical right-wing ideology, something that is out of step with the Canadian tradition.

Second, it is obvious to me that there is no clear plan and goal for privatization. I must tell the Minister that she gave a pretty weak speech on privatization. I hope she will pay more attention to her next one. We heard a lot of rhetoric but not one reason why this Crown corporation should be privatized. Surely the people of Canada, if not the House of Commons, are entitled to reasons for selling these Crown corporations. The Minister might consider the rationale of different Conservative policies. Her Government had Petro-Canada spend $866 million in 1985 to buy 1,800 service stations and four refineries from Gulf Canada. That was expansion of a Crown corporation. Now, if I am to believe what the Minister said, for ideological reasons the Conservatives are privatizing a Crown corporation. On the surface they are inconsistent policies. For example, the policy on Petro-Canada is to increase Canadianization and make it more efficient and effective. I can understand that. However, what policy is the Government following in privatizing this corporation? There was nothing in the Minister's speech. She gave no reason at all. "General public policy" is not a reason.

The nature of the deal itself is the third reason why the NDP opposes the Bill. It is a distress sale. It is like selling one of your Crown jewels for a pittance.

Mr. Blenkarn: Some jewel.

Mr. Waddell: Yes, considering the Government has put about $2 billion in—

Mr. Blenkarn: That is right, some jewel.

Mr. Waddell: —this company and is now giving it away at fire sale prices. My colleague, the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon), will analyse this sale in some detail, as will some of my other colleagues. My colleague from Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo) will be speaking on how we in the NDP view the use of Crown corporations and the sound and sensible economic reasons for maintaining—

Mr. Blenkarn: Including white elephants.

Mr. Waddell: Perhaps the Hon. Member should listen and at least come up with a theory, as opposed to mere rhetoric, as to why the Government is selling Crown corporations.

Let me deal with a little bit of the history of Crown corporations. The Government's privatization campaign is not a response to public pressure. Rather, it seems to stem from a neo-Conservative ideology which I think is at odds with Canada's history. Crown corporations go back to the construction of the Lachine Canal in 1921. That was our first public enterprise and it was undertaken by the Government of Lower Canada when a private firm involved failed. We have seen the same pattern throughout Canadian history. Our Crown corporations have been a binding force for a small population in this vast country which is next door to the most powerful country in the world. We have had our reasons for Crown corporations. They have been justified by the need to provide essential services, develop national resources, operate public utilities, bail out private sector firms, or pioneer in new fields. They were established not only for a public presence but also a Canadian presence in areas where the Americans might well have otherwise stepped in. Canadair is an example. I believe it was 1976 when that company was bought from General Dynamics for $48 million to prevent closure of an important plant in Montreal, protect jobs and research and development in the vital aerospace industry.

We have had good reasons for utilizing Crown corporations and the NDP believes there must be equally good reasons for selling Crown corporations. It is incumbent upon the Government to tell us why. It is not in our tradition and the Government has no mandate to sell these Crown corporations. As a matter of fact, research has shown that people with incomes over $50,000 a year in the private sector hate the public corporations and want the Government to sell them. In many cases they want to feather their own nests because they will benefit from the sale.

This is not the Thatcher Government. It is not the Reagan Government. Canada is different. The Crown corporation is part of the Canadian tradition. We have 233 provincial Crown corporations and 464 federal Crown corporations. That includes the two largest non-financial enterprises in Canada, and 37 more are ranked in the top 500 corporations in this country. I think The Toronto Star, in an editorial on July 8, 1986, put it very well, as follows:

> There is certainly a case for privatization, but only where a reasonable balance between public purpose, accountability, and flexibility cannot be achieved. But where that balance can be realized, crown corporations should not be sacrificed to an ideology that denies so much of what this country has attained.

The Minister said nothing in her speech to alleviate these fears. To use a legal term, the onus of proof of the benefit of privatization is on the Government. We in the NDP are not necessarily against privatization. We are not saying in every case we should not privatize; we are saying you have to have sound economic reasons for it. We want to know what they are in this case.

• (1200)

The Conservatives had a strategy for the aerospace industry. That stratey is contained in a news release dated August 27, 1984. It is a statement by the MP for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson) on the need to establish a Crown corporation for the aerospace industry. He said:

> As taxpayers we have a large investment in Canadair and de Havilland. Our objective is to get our money's worth for this investment, in terms of employment sales and development.

Who could argue with that? He continued:

> We will set up a separate Crown corporation for Canadair and de Havilland with a mandate for the development of the aerospace industry and not merely financial control. This organization will be responsible for developing in conjunction with the aerospace strategy so that Canadair and de Havilland will become commercially viable and will continue to be so into the next century.
>
> We will increase aerospace expertise in this new corporation so that the management are not merely bureaucratic financial wizards, but people with hands-on experience and a thorough knowledge of the aerospace market. In particular, the Chief Executive Officers of both Canadair and de Havilland will sit on the board.

During the election campaign of 1984 the Member for Etobicoke Centre, who is now the Minister of Finance, was proposing a Conservative policy of amalgamating Canadair and de Havilland into a more efficiently managed super Crown corporation. That was the strategy. However, the Member for York—Peel (Mr. Stevens), a right-wing ideologue, took over the portfolio and put the Government on a path of privatization. That goes directly against the policy enunciated by the present Minister of Finance on August 27, 1984.

The goals of privatization have never really been outlined by the Government. The closest I could find is in the budget papers of May, 1985. In those papers at page 26 under Rationalization and Privatization of Crown Corporations and Other Federal Investments there are six points mentioned. I draw to your attention point number four:

> Crown corporations will not be sold at distress prices merely to transfer them quickly to the private sector.
>
> A large deficit and normal fiscal prudence dictate that the privatization program should proceed at a measured pace with careful consideration of all the issues, not the least of which is the receipt of a fair and reasonable price for each asset.

In my view this is a distress sale. The Government fattened up Canadair prior to the final sale. At the very moment the CDIC began the bidding process, the Government approved $30.9 million in DIPP assistance for the production of the CL-227 systems and another $20 million for Canadair participation in a joint venture with West Germany on the CL-289 for a total of $50 million. Canadair will be eligible for more DIPP money; $14 million to improve the CL-215 water bomber, $10 million for modifications to the Challenger, and $5 million for new equipment. That is approximately $30 million in grants which have not been announced but are assumed.

We are creating a system like that of the Americans which, of course, is what the Government does all the time. We are creating a defence industry which is supposed to be private, but is in fact subsidized by the Government without government control through a number of grants and contracts. Canadair was given the contract for the $1.7 billion F-18 jet fighter instead of the Winnipeg consortium after much debate in the country and this House. That is a guaranteed $50 million per year for 20 years. That is not a bad deal. More important, the Canadian taxpayer will continue to assume Canadair's long term $1.2 billion debt, the annual interest payments on which exceed the cash price of $120 million which the Government is getting from the sale.

I will review those figures. combardier is paying $120 million which is less than the $300 million liquidation value or the $224 million book value or the $300 million to $400 million estimated technology value, in addition to getting $50 million in federal grants in January, $30 million to come, unspecified export financing, a $1.7 million defence contract, no financial obligation related to Canadair's debt or outstanding liabilities, plus profits of $20 million in 1985 and $2.8 million in the first quarter of 1986. That is not bad for a $120 million investment and the equivalent of $20 million in royalty payments.

That is why I say the Government of Canada is giving this company away, that this is a distress sale. What kind of economic policy is that? That is why I say this is an ideological policy. Economic good sense has been clouded.

We are concerned as well about jobs. Mr. Normand Cherry and the workers in the machinists union fought hard to preserve jobs in their industry in Montreal. However, we are still not happy with the job guarantees in the memorandum of understanding because we do not believe they have any legal force. With regard to research and development, the Government has worked out a system whereby Bombardier stays honest by way of special shares, but no such guarantee exists for jobs. The job statement reads as follows:

> Bombardier is committed to maintaining existing levels of employment at Canadair subject to cyclical shifts and sound business practices, and will pursue new programs and opportunities so that the level of employment at Canadair and its suppliers will increase.

As ever, Madam Speaker, this statement is only as good as the paper it is written on and Bombardier's record as a good corporate citizen. We will have to ensure that the jobs stay in Montreal.

I would like to speak about privatization, as the Minister should have. She owes this House a statement about the Government's goals on privatization. There has been much confusion and rhetoric on privatization. There has not been much public support, except perhaps from the Financial Post and a few other sectors which support privatization. A number of people are lining up at the trough for a piece of the new privatization action. I will not comment in detail, but I await the report of the inquiry into the affairs of the former Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion with respect to the dollar-a-year people who are advising the Government about privatization and then having involvement in the companies which are buying these crown corporations at distress prices. That will be worthy of debate later. We will have to await that report.

There are side issues related to privatization. Contracting out is tied in with privatization and is an issue across the country. Another issue is deregulation, which is itself a form of privatization. This will increasingly become an issue. To some people privatization means the sale of all shares of a government corporation. To others it means selling only a portion of the shares, and others would give the shares away. In any case, I think we need more definition from the Government. We need to approach the big question. Why should a government-owned corporation be privatized anyway? The Minister says that it is for the good of Canada, but that is not enough. What are the reasons?

• (1210)

I suggest that the Minister should read a speech given by Professor John Langford to the Institute for Research on Public Policy at its conference on privatization. Professor Langford is Professor of Public Administration at the University of Victoria. He attempted to analyse the reasons for advocating privatization.

One belief is that privatization will remove the state enterprise threat to the mixed economy. The premise is that governments now own too much of the economy. How much state enterprise in some industrial sectors is significant or insignificant? The fact is that state enterprise accounts for only about 12 per cent of the economic activity in Canada. This is not out of line with the situation prevailing in a number of other successful industrialized countries. That refutes the argument that there is too much state enterprise.

Another reason given in support of privatization is that it will create new jobs, new investment, a renewed economy and a rationalized private sector. While that may sound promising, there is not much historical evidence in this area. The experience in my Province of British Columbia with privatization suggests that it will not lead to any economic miracle. There was no economic miracle as a result of privatizing the BCRIC shares in British Columbia. In fact, it might lead to a series of corporate takeovers in which private giants swallow public giants. As the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) said: "I have yet to see a takeover that created a single job—except for lawyers and accountants". Privatization could simply lead to further corporate concentration.

Another thought is that Crown corporations demoralize or damage the private sector by draining off available capital and competing unfairly. Let us consider the special prerogatives of some Crown corporations. They have access to capital at government rates, legal and tax immunities, closer access to the policy process, and ability to avoid paying dividends. While those are advantages, what about the disadvantages? Crown corporations must pursue money-losing national interest objectives, sometimes carry heavy debt loads, and deal with a complex and bureaucratized shareholder, namely, the Government of Canada or the provincial Government. In this instance, the argument is balanced and it is difficult to tell which is better.

It is suggested that privatization will lead to enhanced competition. How will this happen? In the case of de Havilland and Canadair, there is no real competition. Some of the candidates for privatization will be sold to monopolies.

It is suggested that public corporations do not make as efficient use of the factors of production as private firms. I could stand here and say that Dome Petroleum, Massey-Ferguson, and Maislin Trucking are examples of bad private sector corporations, just as there are bad corporations in the public sector. It depends upon which corporations one focuses to see winners and losers.

Another argument in support of privatization is that it will have a positive impact on Government. First, privatization can be used to get rid of the public corporations whose mandates are irrelevant to wider policy objectives. In this case, instead of arguing that Crown corporations are inefficient, the line is that they are ineffective. However, how do we decide if the mandates of public corporations are irrelevant if we cannot find a clear mandate statement for them? Perhaps they should be given a clear mandate and be made publicly accountable. Perhaps they should be reformed rather than eliminated, per se.

Professor Langford says that the most pronounced hostility to public corporations and the most pronounced support for privatization comes from people in managerial and supervisory positions making more than $50,000 per annum.

This is essentially the first debate on privatization that we have held in the House. The Minister gave a very disappointing speech today because she did not deal with some of those issues.

Mr. Mantha: Yours is beautiful.

An Hon. Member: She is a rising star.

Mr. Waddell: There is a difference between giving a public relations speech by reading the notes from bureaucrats, and actually showing some understanding of the issue. This issue needs to be debated in Canada. We should not try to focus on the neo-Conservative ideology behind this issue, but on the economic realities. This applies to my Party as well as the Liberal Party. We cannot oppose the sale of all Crown corporations, but we can, as responsible politicians and political parties, say that we want to know why the Government supports privatization. Is it to protect jobs in Montreal, in this case? If so, job protection is weak. Is it to gain money for the Government? As I have pointed out, this is practically a distressed sale. Is it a matter of economic planning or future development in the aerospace industry? Previously, the Conservatives wanted a super Crown corporation by combining de Havilland and Canadair. Now they have sold de Havilland to an American corporation. Where is the planning?

While it may be more beneficial to sell to a Canadian corporation in this case, than to an American corporation, where is the expertise in Bombardier? It is a good corporation, but where is the expertise in international marketing of aircraft and aerospace parts? The Government gave that expertise for the rationalization of the sale of de Havilland to Boeing. The Government's policy is riddled with inconsistencies.

We are opposing the Bill for three reasons. First, the Bill is based on ideological and non-economic grounds. Second, there are no clear goals for privatization of this Crown corporation, indeed for any other privatizations proposed by the Government. Third, the nature of the deal itself is a distressed sale of a fattened Crown corporation, practically given away to the private sector with inadequate job guarantees for the workers. That is why we oppose this Bill.

[Translation]

Mr. Guy Ricard (Laval): Madam Speaker, it is an honour for me today to deal in this House with the privatization of the Canadair Corporation and its sale to the Quebec-based Bombardier Corporation. I am pleased also to see that the Liberal Party is supporting this sale as well as this Government bill. I am not surprised to see that the New Democratic Party is against it, for its position is well known: it is always against any legislation which is not biased in favour of the unions. No wonder, therefore, that it is against this particular bill.

Madam Speaker, any Quebecer worthy of the name—I know several—can only rejoice when he realizes that the only Quebec airplane manufacturer will remain in Quebec, that it will employ a skilled workforce from Quebec, that it will keep its technology in Quebec while selling its production on the international market.

Let anyone propose a better arrangement than this and I am willing to analyze it. Although those who oppose the economic development of Quebec may say that the Government made a political decision when it selected Bombardier as buyer for Canadair, the fact remains that Quebec is and will always be interested in its technological development, and the private sector, together with its government partners, will do everything it can to achieve this aim.

Madam Speaker, we should not forget that Montreal and its metropolitan area has always been recognized as Canada's aeronautic and aerospace hub. That does not mean that there are no similar activities elsewhere in Canada. Quite the contrary: Canada is well-known the world over as being at the forefront of the aeronautic development. However, one should remember that over 50 per cent of all the jobs in the aeronautic industry are in Quebec, and more specifically in the Montreal region.

Why Montreal, Madam Speaker? Because the Montreal region has the airports and infrastructure necessary for increasing the economic activities in this area. Moreover, foreign corporations have opened shop there because they have faith in the capacity of the Quebec labour force and the opportunities offered to them. Indeed, it should be recognized that over many decades, successive Governments have contributed to the aeronautic development of Canada. But we should not overlook the fact that the present Conservative Government is making every effort to maintain this momentum and open up new markets abroad.

• (1220)

Madam Speaker, the Quebec people are proud people. They are proud of their roots, proud of their aspirations and especially proud of its Government which respects its ability to pay. It is important for the Government of Canada that the Quebec people should preserve their pride. It is important for the Government of Canada that the Quebec people should be treated with the same interest as other Canadians elsewhere in this country. It is especially important that the national wealth should be shared equally throughout Canada. However, the most important point remains the respect which the Federal Government should have for all regions in the areas of investments and transfer of technology.

Much too often we have seen in the past the setting up of industries in locations based on the mere recommendation of a Minister acting under the pressure of influential businessmen groups.

Quebecers still remember being conned when the contract was awarded to build F-18 airplanes. They will remember it for a very long time.

Madam Speaker, I should like to come back for a moment on the privatization as such. In his economic statement, the Minister of Finance had indicated his intention to privatize a number of Crown corporations with the sole purpose of eliminating the competition in which the State was involved through these corporations with the private sector. I suggest this decision must have been a good one, for the provinces as well as the Government of the United States are planning to do likewise.

Even though the Opposition is trying to prove otherwise, the Canadair Corporation is not being privatized to make up for the financial mistakes of the past. It is returned to the private sector for the sole purpose of creating the best possible future for the corporation and its employees.

While not taking into account past mistakes, it is nevertheless important to remind the House that the Canadair Corporation was bought from General Dynamics in 1976 for $46 million. It operated at a loss every year until the spring of 1984, when the Government of the time decided to soak up its $2.4 billion deficit with the money of Canadian taxpayers. From that date on, it has shown signs of recovery and declared a profit of $16.8 million in 1985 on sales of some $227 million. During that same period, from 1976 to 1984, the number of jobs went from 7,200 to 4,800, for a net loss of 2,400 jobs, demonstrating again that in the private sector, small and medium-size businesses create more jobs than the public sector.

Now, Madam Speaker, you will ask me: Why sell a company which has finally come around to making profits? The answer is simple. Canadair is a company that manufactures aerospace equipment, a high tech business selling sophisticated products on the international markets. The sale is consistent with the privatization policy of the Government. One of the objectives of that policy is to improve the management of all Crown corporations and to privatize those in which the Government no longer needs to be involved in order for the objectives of our public policy to be reached. This pragmatic approach enables the Government to improve its financial management and to create within the nation a stable climate favourable to private entreprise.

I would also like, Madam Speaker, to speak briefly about the process used by the Government to privatize Canadair. The Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques (Mr. Guilbault) said earlier that selling the corporation took a long time. However, let me explain the process used by the Government.

As soon as it was asked to privatize Canadair, the Canada Development Investments Corporation (CDIC) went through the following steps:

In co-operation with the management of Canadair and officials of the DRIE, two different levels of information were collected. A public information kit was made available to all parties concerned and a privileged information kit containing further details was provided to potential buyers who had to prove their financial capacity and sign a statement of confidentiality.

The CDIC hired the services of a consortium made up of the firms Burns Fry Limited (Canada), Merrill Lynch Capital Makets (United States) and S.G. Warburg & Co. Limited (U.K.) which was entrusted with the mandate of financial adviser for the purpose of selling Canadair.

The financial advisers prepared other information kits and in co-operation with CDIC contacted some 150 interested parties around the world.

Approximately 25 applicants did show sufficient interest for proceedings to be continued. Some of them visited the plant and discussed matters with the management of Canadair.

By the end of January 1986, six groups had stated their interest and negotiations were launched with each one of them.

On June 6th, the CDIC board of directors met and each of the interested groups which had filed proposals made its submission. Later on, the board of directors asked CDIC to further negotiate with two of those groups, Bombardier Inc. and Canadian Aerospace Technologies Limited because in the board's opinion their offers were well above the others.

Discussions were held later with representatives of Bombardier and Canadian Aerospace Technologies Limited to set aside the items considered unacceptable to CDIC and to have both groups improve on their respective offers. The revised offers were received on June 17.

On June 20, three days later, the board of directors met once more and, after hearing explanations from Burns Fry's officials on behalf of the DRIE's financial advisers and officials, the board recommended that the Government accept Bombardier's offer. That is how the offers were considered, Madam Speaker. Nothing was hidden, no tricks-complete straightforwardness and integrity prevailed throughout those negotiations.

Approximately a year and a half elapsed between the Minister's announcement and the sale of Canadair. This is a far cry from the actions of the previous Government, which supported it for eight years.

Aside from that, Madam Speaker, I would like to tell the House what were this Government's concerns with respect to the offers to purchase.

During the negotiations, the Canadian Government has required more than a checkbook to hand over ownership of Canadair. The Government demanded that the transaction ensure a good balance between the priorities of the state and the initiatives of the private sector.

The Government assessed the bids of potential buyers based on three criteria:

A healthy management capacity;

A solid financial basis; and

Contribution to the maintenance and development of a viable and dynamic manufacturing aerospace industry in Quebec and Canada.

Why was the Bombardier bid given preference, Madam Speaker? Simply because it was the best, both economically and technically. The price of the sale includes many important components:

The Canadian Government will receive a cash payment exceeding $120 million for the Canadair shares.

The Government will remain the owner of the Challenger technology and grant a usage permit for this technology in exchange for future annual royalties which Bombardier has evaluated at $173 million. This is a major point, Madam Speaker.

The third point is that the Cartierville airport grounds will be sold at their market value, which has been assessed at $11.5 million.

The Government will also receive special shares worth $100 million and other special shares worth $50 million to promote an increase in research, development, export and Canadian contents.

Finally, the Government will receive a special dividend of $3 million as well as part of the amount paid to Canadair once its dispute with one of its suppliers has been settled.

Madam Speaker, that is an outline of the contents of that transaction. It is not as bad as some doomsayers have hinted. On the contrary, we believe that it is a very good deal, for Canadair and Bombardier also have made the commitment to meet the following sales conditions: Bombardier will maximize the Canadian content in the Canadair products; the present research and development capacity of Canadair will be increased to make Canadair a real aircraft manufacturing company able to sustain the competition of commercial markets and the defence equipment market; and to answer the question raised earlier by my colleague from the New Democratic Party, Canadair employees will be eligible to participate in the Bombardier employee share purchase plan. There are more conditions, but I just wanted to mention those, Madam Speaker.

That is what the Government and the Bombardier company have committed themselves to. Contrary to what some people have been suggesting, we had no intentions to stab anybody in the back.

Madam Speaker, when some Opposition Members use scare tactics in linking this privatization with the CF-18 maintenance contract with possible layoffs and a technology transfer, this is all I can say: You know just as well as I do, that the CF-18 maintenance contract is totally unrelated with the sale of Canadair. You know that it was awarded on the basis of merit to industrial bidders, and that it makes up for the disgraceful action by the previous Government with respect to the spinoff of the CF-18 manufacturing contract.

As to the loss of jobs and the technology transfer, Madam Speaker, let me remind you of the scare tactics used by some Members, and especially the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy), during the debate on the sale of de Havilland. Believe me, I am very much in a position to know. In 1986, de Havilland had record sales, as a group of Canadian carriers ordered 42 Dash-8 for a total value of $400 million, bringing the company's firm orders and purchase options to a combined total of 132 aircrafts. This means two and a half years of work. Here is, ladies and gentlemen of the opposition, what the sale of de Havilland has meant. You scared the population without cause and I wonder why you did it.

To conclude, Madam Speaker, I would like to emphasize that this transfer of a Crown corporation to the private sector proves, beyond any doubt, that the Conservative Governement is committed to giving this sector of our economy the place it should have. It wants to eliminate the competitive imbalance between the private and the public sectors and to encourage the private sector to demonstrate its initiative and ability to invest in advanced technology, and research and development.

Madam Speaker, my speech would not be complete without some quotes from people affected by this transaction. Patrice Bleau, a Canadair employee: "We must develop new markets, and I think this sale will help." From Laurent Beaudoin, President of Bombardier: "We are very proud of this transaction, because it fits in with Bombardier's development plans." From Normand Cherry, of the aerospace workers union, who unlike the young Member of the New Democratic Party in his comment earlier, said: "This augurs well." And he is the union president. From Jean-Luc Bélanger, a Canadair employee: "I think it means the jobs are going to stay here. I trust Bombardier." From John Turner, the Leader of the Official Opposition:

[English]

—"In general terms, we favour the deal".

[Translation]

And finally, Mr. Speaker, one last quote: "If they say that the City of Montreal has pride of place, then the Government led by the master hand of Brian Mulroney stands for equality and common sense". That quote, Madam Speaker, is mine.

• (1230)

[English]

Mr. Kaplan: Madam Speaker, I would like to take a few moments to discuss the subject. I have a great interest in the Government's privatization program. I do not accept as a principle of ideology that privatization is always good or preferable.

I regret very much that the Government is so dominated by the philosophy of privatization that even the administration of the parole service is being turned over, not to professionals but to volunteers in the private sector. I believe it is a big mistake to approach social problems or economic issues with an ideological prejudice that prevents us from examining the advantages and disadvantages of various forms of ownership.

During the last election campaign the Opposition, as it was, came up with a very attractive proposition for the aerospace sector. The Government, as are the Governments of many other countries, was involved in the aerospace sector and owned de Havilland Corporation in Toronto, a company which manufactures propeller aircraft, and Canadair in Montreal, a company which manufactures jet aircraft.

The Canadian people were promised that if the Conservatives formed the Government, a company called the National Aerospace Company, if I recall correctly, would be formed. This company would be offered to Canadians as shareholders in three categories. Some of the shares of the company would be offered to the industrial sector so that it could be taken over by corporations like Bombardier which is a very good corporation. It would be possible as well for a miniority position to be taken by an excellent aircraft company from the United States, like the Boeing Corporation. Another bloc of shares in this company were to be offered to employees of the corporations that were being taken over by the new venture and the third group would be offered to the public. That was an excellent idea. It was attractive politically and made a lot of sense.

I think there has been an incredible betrayal of the Canadian people. The Conservatives had an excellent and popular concept, one which I myself would have supported, as would my colleague who sits beside me. When he was President of the Treasury Board, he also discussed in a very positive way an evolution of the ownership of Crown corporations. Instead of making the slightest effort to get that project going, the Government immediately announced that these corporations were for sale to the highest bidder on a distress basis. In other words, the Government said that a willing purchaser would not have to give fair market value for the corporations because the Government was desperate to sell. As the months went by, it showed more and more desperation so—

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Order. I would like to remind the Hon. Member that he seems to be getting into debate. Other Hon. Members are seeking the floor to ask questions of the Hon. Member for Laval (Mr. Ricard). The Hon. Member may wish to put an end to his speech at this time.

Mr. Kaplan: Madam Speaker, I am very sorry. I thought that I had been recognized for debate. I would intend to seek the floor, and perhaps the normal time allotted for questions and comments might be given back to the Hon. Member. I had not intended to fill his 10 minutes that way.

• (1240)

[Translation]

Mr. Langdon: Madam Speaker, I have a few questions for the Hon. Member for Laval (Mr. Ricard). My first one is: Why is there a difference between what the Government said about de Havilland and what it said here about Canadair? In the case of de Havilland, they said it was necessary to have a company that would help de Havilland with its marketing problems. They also said they had to find a company that could provide de Havilland with the technology. But now, it seems there is something different. There is a suggestion that the sale to Bombardier is supposed to help Canadair complete and that their technology is supposed to help Canadair. Aside from those considerations, is it a successful deal? That is my first question.

My second question is about what the Hon. Member failed to mention about the price. We as Members of this House must be able to evaluate the issues, and specifically the price factor. However, there was nothing in what the Hon. Member said to enlighten us. I would like to know whether the Hon. Member believes that the price, which is much lower than the assessed value indicated in the company's report . . . Should we as Members see that as a problem?

Mr. Ricard: Madam Speaker, first, I wish to thank the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon) for asking these two questions. He asked about the difference in the position taken by the Government in the case of the de Havilland and Canadair transactions. I do not think that there was any difference in our approach to these two transactions. In the case of de Havilland, we had an airplane manufacturer which was unable to sell its products, and Boeing was the best choice as purchaser since it both manufactured and sold airplanes.

In the case of Canadair, it was successful in selling its products, but it no longer needed the support of the federal Government and was in direct competition with the private sector. It was therefore decided that both Crown corporations should be privatized.

I do not believe that there were any differences in views, strategies or procedures in the case of de Havilland and Canadair. Both transactions comply with the comprehensive policy developed by the Canadian Government since our coming to power, and we are going to respect this policy. We are going to keep the technology in Canada. In the case of de Havilland, if we look at sales to date and those anticipated for the next four years, I do not believe that there can be any talk of any loss of employment or lack of technological transfers since we are keeping both jobs and technology in Canada.

The same is true for Canadair. Bombardier has made a commitment to maintain the number of jobs at Canadair. It has also made a commitment to invest in research and development and to keep its technology in Canada. To my mind, all this is very coherent and easy to understand.

The other question asked by the Hon. Member dealt with the price for which Canadair will be sold compared with its book value based on the evaluation of those responsible for analyzing the balance sheet of Canadair.

When we call for tenders to sell something and invite 150 companies to bid on a project of this magnitude, it is obvious that all of the 150 bidders are not stupid. Although similar bids may be submitted, we must admit that these people analyzed the financial standing of the company, met with officials and looked at the corporate books, all of which told them how much the company may have been worth and just where it stood in terms of goodwill. Having weighed all such factors and compared prices, they made an offer which was accepted by the Government. Therefore I fail to see why we should be concerned only with the price issue since both Government and CDIC officials found the offer acceptable.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): On debate, the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount (Mr. Johnston).

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri—Westmount): I will not debate at length, but I would like to make a few points with respect to this sale, and a few points with respect to privatization as seen from my perspective, and I think the perspective of most of my colleagues on this side of the House.

I remind Hon. Members that when Canadair was acquired in the mid-1970s, the Liberal Minister of the day said that it was the intention of the Government to return Canadair to the private sector at some appropriate time in the future. That philosophy and that policy had never been abandoned by the Liberal Government. In fact, in 1980 when I was President of the Treasury Board, the then Prime Minister, Pierre Elliott Trudeau, gave me the privatization mandate.

One of the companies that we looked at at the time was Canadair. Studies had been done with respect to Canadair and other corporations. But as history has now shown with such clarity, it is pretty difficult to embark upon any type of sensible privatization, especially during a period of economic decline such as we had experienced in the early 1980s.

Madam Speaker, colleagues, and fellow Members, the overriding principles of any privatization scheme are that it is in the best interests of the Canadian taxpayer; that it is a sensible commercial transaction pursuant to which Crown corporations are disposed of; that there is no longer, for example, a national interest which would require that such corporations be retained by the Crown. Those are the type of principles which guided me in my thinking as I looked at the privatization mandate.

I have never been ideologically driven with respect to Government intervention through Crown corporations. Crown corporations have and continue to serve very important needs of this country, both at the provincial and federal level.

Need I only remind some of our Conservative friends from western Canada of the extent to which the then considered right wing Government in Alberta intervened in many sectors of the economy through Crown corporations. So there should be no ideology in this debate. We should look at this as hard-headed politicians trying to do our very best for the Canadian taxpayer. How will technology be preserved? How will jobs be maintained? How will highly skilled jobs be increased in number? What effective return will be realized by Canadian taxpayers?

• (1250)

I have looked at certain parts of the transaction, and there is one in particular to which I should like to refer.

[Translation]

It is right there under our noses, if you will, and I am referring to the risk which will remain for at least roughly fifteen years, if I have the correct dates here. Madam Speaker, this may turn out to be an extra load on the shoulders of Canadian taxpayers.

[English]

I am speaking about the issue of product liability. I have noted that, at the request of the Government, Salomon Brothers was apparently assigned the task of evaluating the extent to which Bombardier's offer for Canadair complied with generally recognized business practices. I understand that Salomon Brothers concluded that the form of risk sharing in respect of insurance premiums did not comply with such business practices. In fact, I have here what Salomon Brothers allegedly reported, that the only important provision in the letter of intent of Bombardier that neither promotes Crown objectives nor conforms to traditional commercial practice is that which provides for risk sharing should insurance become economically impracticable to procure. The general notion of this provision results from precedents set in the de Havilland transaction. Of course Canadian taxpayers would like to know the potential cost of this provision.

Under the product liability provisions of the particular transaction we see that if insurance becomes impracticable to procure, Canadair and the Crown—and the Crown means taxpayers of the country—will share cost in the following proportion: years one to five, Canadair 10 per cent and the Crown 90 per cent; years six to ten, Canadair 40 per cent and the Crown 60 per cent; and years eleven to fifteen, Canadair 70 per cent and the Crown 30 per cent. Only after year fifteen will the potential liability of Canadian taxpayers be eliminated.

[Translation]

Madam Speaker, I am concerned about the fact that our Conservative friends and the Conservative Government are taking an approach dictated by ideological principles more than by trade considerations and criteria. There lies the difference I want to emphasize in our approach—when we were in Government and responsible for privatization—and that of the present administration.

Madam Speaker, we have every reason to be quite worried because there are other Crown corporations which the Government would like to put on the block. More important still, the critical question is this: Are these sales really and basically in the interest of Canadians?

[English]

That is the point to which I return. I have always believed that when a corporation has served its purpose in terms of national interest, indeed it should be a candidate for privatization. The ownership of it can then be with those Canadian shareholders who truly want to participate directly in the activities, in the future, and in the profits of the corporation. We must bear in mind that when a company is privatized, Governments remain substantial partners in any case through the operation of the income tax system. We, the taxpayers of Canada, are always there with an interest in every profitable corporation.

Let us not let ideology dictate which companies should be sold and the terms and conditions of those sales. Let it be common sense and the interests of Canadian taxpayers which guide our thinking in that regard. That is the message I should like to leave with the Government today.

Mr. Blenkarn: Madam Speaker, I have a question for the Hon. Member for St. Henri—Westmount (Mr. Johnston) dealing with product liability insurance. He will note, in going over the documentation, that Canadair is required to pay all insurance costs except if insurance becomes unobtainable. Then the risk is split on a declining basis over 15 years. He will know that the Government, as owner of the corporation, presently has to carry all insurance risk. When there is a very difficult time with product liability insurance, obviously the effect of his suggestion would be that the Government would have to take over all companies to cover their insurance. He knows that that is not practical. The real question is, would he say that the position for his Party is that because of the possible insurance risk the deal is a bad deal and that Canadair should not be privatized?

Mr. Johnston: Madam Speaker, I usually find that my friend speaks with somewhat more clarity and more lucidity than that comment. I heard him say that I am suggesting the Crown should assume product liability for all corporations. That is what I heard the Hon. Member attribute to me. There was no such suggestion at all.

When a company is disposed of in a normal commercial transaction indeed it is rare, as the Salomon Brothers pointed out, that the vendor should continue to assume the insurance cost on product liability if it becomes impracticable for the purchaser to obtain that kind of coverage for a period of 15 years. Certainly it is understandable that the vendor should be prepared to assume responsibility in respect of certain contingent liabilities which exist by reason of events that precede the sale. Here we have a continuing obligation on the taxpayers of Canada to assume a risk for a period of up to 15 years. At least that is how I understand the comments of Salomon Brothers.

If my friend has some additional details which can satisfy us that that is not the case, then I should very much like him to bring them forward. If he can cite other precedents in the private sector where major takeovers of this kind have occurred and the vendor has continued to guarantee the availability of insurance on a profitable basis to the purchaser, I should like to have those precedents as well. If he were able to produce them, I might be more satisfied that there is some commercial precedent in the private sector for such transactions.

Mr. Thacker: Madam Speaker, the position of the Liberal Party in respect of the privatization of Canadair is not clear. We know that members of the NDP will vote against it. They would rather see taxpayers throwing in another $1.4 billion to $2 billion, as they already have. It will be fun campaigning; they want taxpayers to continue pumping billions of dollars into the company rather than privatizing it which would cut their losses. What is the position of the Liberal Party? Is it in favour of the privatization or not?

Mr. Johnston: Madam Speaker, I thought the Hon. Member for Lethbridge (Mr. Thacker) was in the House when I made my comments. I thought I explained that in fact when Canadair was acquired the Government or the Minister of the day said that it would hopefully be returned one day to the private sector. That policy never changed. Canadair was transferred to the investment holding company created by the Crown in order to facilitate privatization upon the right terms and conditions at the appropriate time.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Order, please. It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock this afternoon.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[English]

DISARMAMENT

POSITION OF LIBERAL PARTY

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, at its convention over the weekend the Liberal Party took strong positions for nuclear disarmament and arms control. In Priority Resolution No. 11, the Liberal Party asked Canada to seek a multilateral, verifiable disarmament treaty together with a policy of non-interference by superpowers in the internal affairs of other nations. In Priority Resolution No. 12, we resolved that the Canadian Government should stop testing of the Cruise missile in Canada. In Priority Resolution No. 34 we resolved that the Canadian Government should move immediately to make Canada a nuclear-free zone, to support a comprehensive test ban treaty, and to oppose completely the star wars proposal.

Considering the recent willingness of the superpowers to examine these proposals seriously in Geneva and Iceland, now is the time for our Government to take a more committed and aggressive position on these issues.

* * *

ST. LAWRENCE SEAWAY

ANNOUNCED ALLOCATION OF FUNDS TO REPAIR WELLAND CANAL

Mr. Allan Pietz (Welland): Mr. Speaker, on Friday the Minister of Transport (Mr. Crosbie) announced the allocation of $175 million for the rehabilitation of the Welland Canal. This demonstrates the federal Government's commitment to one of the most important transportation systems in the world, namely, the St. Lawrence Seaway, of which the Welland Canal is a central component. The Seaway has played a vital role in the development of Canada's economy, particularly with respect to the transportation of western grain.

Last year the Welland Canal faced a crisis situation with the unexpected blow-out at Lock 7. I have spoken often in this House on the need for upgrading the Canal. The Government has responded. Hundreds of new jobs will be created in the Niagara Peninsula. The Minister of Transport's announcement clearly indicates the Government's commitment to the future.

* * *

UNITED NATIONS

NEW CALEDONIA INDEPENDENCE RESOLUTION—CANADIAN SUPPORT URGED

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, the United Nations will be voting this week on a resolution which could lead to the independence of New Caledonia. Past Liberal Governments and the present Conservative Government have failed to support this move toward creating a self-governing nation. Canada must change its vote. It is not enough to abstain. We must vote yes.

New Caledonia has been fighting the French colonial presence since 1853. Without a peaceful settlement in sight, it is now clearer than ever that Canada must take an active role in urging France to decolonize. Canada's close sisters in the Commonwealth, Australia, New Zealand, and Fiji are taking the lead in promoting independence for New Caledonia. Canada should join with those and other nations in this effort. We can start by voting yes at the United Nations.

* * *

WINTER OLYMPICS

OPENING OF OLYMPIC PARK

Mr. Gordon Taylor (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, Canada's Olympic Park is beautiful to behold. Created specifically for the 1988 Calgary Olympics, I am sure it will thrill every Canadian and every participant from other countries.

It was my pleasure last Saturday to represent the Minister of State for Fitness and Amateur Sport (Mr. Jelinek) at the first pre-Olympic ski-jumping competition held in the park. As I watched the skiers start their run, momentarily disappear and then suddenly reappear, flying high in the sky like huge eagles and landing beautifully on the slope, I was proud of the Canadians who designed and built this splendid facility. As I presented the unique Canadian trophies to the top three skiers representing East Germany, Czechoslovakia, and Norway, I could see in the future a Canadian standing on the top podium receiving the first place trophy because Canadian youth, when they have equal facilities, stand shoulder to shoulder with the best athletes in the world.

Thank you, Mr. Minister, the Canadian Government, the Calgary Olympic Committee, and the Canadian people for this beautiful park.

S.O. 21

SPORTS

CANADIAN FOOTBALL LEAGUE—GREY CUP WON BY HAMILTON TIGER-CATS

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I know that you would not want me to break the Standing Orders, nor would the Hon. Member for Edmonton North (Mr. Paproski), nor would the Hon. Member for York South—Weston (Mr. Nunziata), by congratulating the Tiger-Cats. I will not break the Standing Orders.

• (1405)

It was a great weekend for Liberals. It was a great weekend for Canadians. Most of all, it was a great weekend for the people of Hamilton.

I just happen to have a hat which I will not wear in the House because it is again a violation of the Standing Orders. However, I plan to deliver it personally on a red Liberal platter to the Hon. Member for Edmonton North (Mr. Paproski) who has promised to eat it as his part of losing our bet. The weekend shows Canadians that the greatest team in football is the Hamilton Tiger-Cats and the greatest come-back team in politics is the John Turner Liberal team.

Oskee wee wee.

Oskee wa wa.

Holy Mackinaw

Tigers and Turner eat 'em raw!

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: I know Hon. Members will understand, as Speaker, and being from the west, that I had to get this over with.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

* * *

THE SENATE

CALL FOR REFORM

Mr. Alex Kindy (Calgary East): Mr. Speaker, it is time for Senate reform. Canadians from all regions are tired of an appointed Senate being able to block the legislation of those elected to represent them in Ottawa, the Hon. Members of this House of Commons.

Canada being a confederation of provinces, regional interests must be represented effectively in Ottawa on an equal basis. Therefore, Senate reform which would include elected Senators equal in number from each province would remedy the feeling of alienation that eastern and western Canadians have toward Ottawa. Only then would they become equal partners in the decision-making process taking place in Ottawa. I urge the Government to seize the opportunity for constitutional negotiations with the provinces and bring in an elected, equal, and effective Senate.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

JAILING OF NEWFOUNDLAND NEW DEMOCRATIC PARTY LEADER

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, the courts in Newfoundland have chosen to jail Peter Fenwick, the provincial Leader of the NDP, for two months. His crime was to walk a picket line with workers in Newfoundland.

Members of the Legislature, like Members of Parliament, are elected in a free and democratic process by Canadians who put their trust in them. The duty of elected leaders is to challenge society to make changes seen to be in the best interest of the men, women and children they represent. In our society judges are appointed by the Government in power. The police who lay the charges and the Crown attorneys who prosecute them are directed to do so by the Government in power. Courts are held in respect only so long as justice is done and seen to be done.

Peter Fenwick walked the picket line for 15 minutes before his arrest. For that he will spend two months in jail. Surely this is unjust in a free and democratic—

Mr. Speaker: Order. Hon. Members will realize that it is often the obligation of Members to criticize a law, but it is equally an obligation not to attack the—

[And the Leader of the Opposition having entered the Chamber.]

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: The Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) has just entered the Chamber and received a courteous and warm response which the Speaker joins in extending to him.

As I was saying a moment ago to the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton), it is often the obligation of Members of Parliament to criticize a law. However, Members also realize it is not their place to castigate a court or judge or the decision rendered under a law. The Hon. Member has made his point.

• (1410)

[Translation]

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

LAY-OFFS IN NEW BRUNSWICK

Mr. Albert Girard (Restigouche): Mr. Speaker, at this time last year, I was advised by CN officials that we would be losing jobs in Campbellton, in my constituency. This year, CN is doing away with 20 more jobs in New Brunswick, 11 of which will directly involve people from Campbellton. CN is not even trying to save those jobs, and I rise in this House today to publicly condemn CN management for the incompetence and lack of concern shown in announcing right before Christmas this piece of bad news to the heads of those 20 families. Such an announcement will certainly shatter the holiday spirit and the joy that usually prevails in families at this time of the year.

I am outraged at that kind of action and I certainly hope that CN, as an arm's length corporation, will do something to end without delay such an unacceptable and unbearable situation.

* * *

FOOTWEAR INDUSTRY

SITUATION IN CANADA

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, one year ago today the Government implemented its disastrous policy on the abolition of footwear import quotas.

Men's footwear imports have jumped by nearly 50 per cent since then. Footwear imports from Southeast Asia in particular have gone up from 63,000 to 213,000 pairs, 38 per cent more. Last year the Shoe Manufacturers' Association of Canada did predict that serious unemployment would be the result of Government abolition of footwear imports. The Government got away with it by claiming, and I quote: "This decision would lead to savings of half a billion dollars for Canadian consumers".

Canadians are now facing the truth. More than 1,000 jobs have disappeared in this sector, and one of the three industries in my riding, Alexandria Footwear, had to lay off two-thirds of its workers.

Four times since last July members of the Shoe Manufacturers' Association of Canada have been denied the privilege of a meeting with the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney). She claims that she does not have time.

If the Government keeps on refusing to meet with these manufacturers, we will lose the remaining 20,000 jobs in this industry.

S.O. 21

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

BILL C-22—POSITION OF QUEBEC GOLDEN AGE FEDERATION

Mr. Gilbert Chartrand (Verdun—Saint-Paul): Recently, Mr. Speaker, the nearly 200,000 elderly people who belong to the Fédération de l'âge d'or du Québec voiced their unqualified support for Bill C-22 concerning drug patents. In their letter to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre), these citizens expressed their view that the adoption of Bill C-22 would greatly spur research on a number of still uncurable diseases which strike the elderly in particular.

Elderly residents of my riding and of Quebec can no longer stand being manipulated. They did not believe the silly predictions of Opposition Members who, without ever referring to the purpose of the Bill, have been brandishing the spectre of higher drug prices. Older Canadians know that the new legislation will be a boon to drug research and that very soon they will benefit from discoveries to be made by this revitalized industry.

* * *

[English]

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

OPPOSITION TO AMENDING PATENT LAW

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I want to share with Members of this House the views expressed by one of my constituents on a very important issue to be dealt with here. She says:

> I am a senior citizen 76 years of age and I am taking life-giving medication every day (15 pills) totalling a cost of approximately $400 per month. I am told I am to be on these drugs for the rest of my life. So needless to say my pension cheque goes almost entirely on keeping me alive on pills let alone food, which now becomes secondary.
>
> Even with the Pharmacare program in effect, this would not alleviate the problem. It takes 6-8 weeks to process the rebate—
>
> Time and time again the elderly and the struggling families with children or even young people who must take drugs are the ones that this federal Government has put the burden on. Maybe it's time to change the make-up of the federal Government quickly. I sincerely trust you voice my feelings along with the many others on this serious issue.

* * *

TRADE

SUPPORT FOR CANADA-UNITED STATES NEGOTIATIONS

Mr. John A. MacDougall (Timiskaming): Mr. Speaker, I wish to comment on the recent agreement reached by our Government with the provinces which has successfully halted the flow of millions of dollars in taxes to the United States. As a Member from northern Ontario, I feel it is vital for the Canadian Government to correct the injustices of our established trade system and realistically approach the protectionist forces to the south of our border. The Conservative Government is committed to this end.

In light of the contradictions aired within the Liberal Party this past weekend on the issue of trade with the United States, no Member across the way can criticize the Government for its steady and consistent trade initiatives.

The people of northern Ontario want firm action. They do not want the rhetoric of the Liberal Party. The 15 per cent punitive duty placed on softwood lumber imports by the United States would cripple the forest industry. Northern Ontarians and the Government realize that. We will continue to act for the betterment of the industry and the country.

* * *

• (1415)

NUCLEAR ARMAMENTS

LIBERAL PARTY RESOLUTION OPPOSING CRUISE MISSILE TESTING

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, nothing is more important than a powerful idea whose time has come. Last weekend, rank and file members of the Liberal Party from St. John's, Newfoundland, to Victoria, British Columbia, passed important resolutions calling on Canada to put an end to Cruise missile testing and to declare Canada a nuclear-free zone. In so doing, our Party sent a clear message not only to our fellow Canadians, but to the world. Peace and nuclear disarmament are too important to be left to the superpowers, and the survival of the planet is more important than Canada's commitment to NATO.

As more and more people are coming to realize, it is sheer madness to contribute to the nuclear arms race. As a middle power, Canada has a significant role to play. We have an unique opportunity to show some leadership and independence in the fight for peace. It is neither responsible nor necessary for us to follow the United States in a lock-step down the road to Armageddon.

The Liberal Party spoke last weekend and the message was eloquent. We owe peace to the children of Canada.

* * *

WESTERN GRAIN STABILIZATION ACT

FINAL CROP YEAR PAYMENT TO FARMERS

Mr. Geoff Wilson (Swift Current—Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, last Thursday the Minister of State for the Canadian Wheat Board (Mr. Mayer) announced the final payment of $279 million under the Western Grain Stabilization Act for the 1985-86 crop year.

Close to 80 per cent of prairie grain farmers participate in this voluntary program which they fund jointly with the federal Government and which assists them when net cash flow from grain and oil seeds falls below the past five-year average.

This spring an interim payment of $580 million was made. Together with the final payment, this means farmers will receive a total of $859 million, the largest pay-out in history.

This is another in a long line of federal government initiatives to help Canadian agriculture. It is further evidence that this Government will spare no effort in seeking to protect the interests of Canada's farming community in the face of unfair pricing and subsidy practices conducted beyond our borders.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

AMENDING LEGISLATION—EFFECT ON DRUG PRICES

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker—

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, all I can say in response to Hon. Members is thank you, but I do not really recommend the experience.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): My question is directed to the Prime Minister. The Canadian Consumers' Association, senior citizen groups right across the country, provincial Governments, and indeed even Doctor Eastman himself are all concerned that with the present legislation before the House, drug prices will rise in Canada. Surely he must realize that there are hundreds of thousands of Canadians who are having trouble paying drug prices at their current rate, without his Government bringing in legislation that will prompt higher prices. Will he do something about that?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, on behalf of all government colleagues and I believe all Members of the House, may I convey to the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition our genuine congratulations on his achievement over the weekend.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mulroney: In regard to the question raised by my right hon. friend, the Government's legislation is designed to accommodate that concern and to generate new capital for research and development. We believe the Government has put forward a balanced and thoughtful approach.

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, I think the Prime Minister is trying to lure me into a different tone, but I do appreciate the generosity.

• (1420)

MINISTER'S STATEMENT

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs said recently on the CBC radio program, Sunday Morning, the following:

> There has been pressure on Canada since 1969 to change that law and it costs us a lot. Because when you go down to talk about anything, acid rain, you know, lumber, talk about anything and this has been going on a long time, this is raised.

Why would the Prime Minister make drug prices and the pharmaceutical industry part of the bargain with the United States? Why would he knuckle under to American interests and inflict higher prices on our pensioners, our older people and our sick?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, there is no knuckling under. There is no inflicting of higher prices on anyone. I think my right hon. friend knows that. As I have said, it is a balanced and, we think, progressive package consistent with the requirements of an industrialized country in competition with other countries around the world and desirous of establishing our share of that research and development industry here.

I have not read the transcript to which the hon. gentleman refers, but the Minister has given, in other circumstances, assurances in regard to prices that I hope will satisfy my hon. friend. They are intended to ensure that the less well-off in our society do not in any way suffer and that the prices will not rise to affect them.

Mr. Nunziata: We don't trust you.

[Translation]

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT WITHDRAW LEGISLATION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister's opening comments were most generous and I appreciate that.

Perhaps he could be as generous to the ill and the aged in Canada. In the circumstances, could he ask his Minister to withdraw the Bill that will affect the price of drugs?

[English]

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the right hon. gentleman must recognize that the manner in which he puts his question does not cover the full aspect of the matter having to do with the very best and newest drugs in Canada and that Canadians can also have access to and research in those drugs.

I want to indicate to the Hon. Member as well that it is not quite as clear in terms of senior citizens. The Fédération de l'Age d'Or du Québec has come out strongly in favour of the Government's legislation. I think we should recognize that as well.

POSITION OF MULTINATIONAL CORPORATIONS

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Is it not true that the major reason the U.S. Government pressured the Canadian Government to change the Patent Act with respect to pharmaceuticals is that U.S. multinationals fear that other industrialized countries will adopt the Canadian system forcing generic competition as the model legislation in the world?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the answer is no, it is not only the United States. It includes France, Britain, and other countries in Europe especially. I say to the hon. gentleman that we want the very best health care system, inclusive of technology, and one of the major technologies is with respect to new drugs. We as Canadians expect the very best, and we should have the very best.

If I were to ask the Hon. Member to name a drug developed in Canada over the past 50 years from inception he could not give me one.

An Hon. Member: Insulin

Mr. Epp: Insulin was developed 64 years ago, which is proof of the reason why we have to change this Act.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, perhaps the Minister of National Health and Welfare can answer this question. Why is it that his Government has totally disregarded every one of the major recommendations of the Eastman Report and has gone far and beyond the recommendations in that report, and you have succumbed, you have knuckled under—

Some Hon. Members: Order, order.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Frith: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I apologize.

The question I want to ask, which is the more important one is this. Why is it that the Government has knuckled under to the interests of foreign-dominated multinationals without any concern for the interest of Canadian workers and consumers?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, none of the charges is correct. The Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs has just announced a $70 million program in Dalhousie and Memorial Universities. It is that type of research we want at Dalhousie, in Montreal, in Ontario, and in the West. There are young Canadians who want to do that research.

• (1425)

Let us look at the example of cyclosporin. We all applaud when a successful transplant operation takes place. Other people have developed this technology and I am saying that we, as Canadians, can develop some of those drugs as well. It is about time that we recognize that, stand up and take some credit for what we do.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION OF COST IMPACT STUDIES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister, but before I ask it, please excuse me. I have sent my personal congratulations to the Leader of the Opposition. I wish to say now, on behalf of all my colleagues, that we do congratulate him most sincerely on coming through a tough personal experience of which all political leaders know something. We wish him well, and I am sure he will understand if we say that we wish that all his future happiness be strictly personal.

On to other matters. I would like to ask the Prime Minister about the change in the drug legislation being contemplated by the Government. I met with senior citizens and druggists in Toronto, Hamilton, and Windsor on the weekend. Without exception, they urged the Government to withdraw the present legislation. Given that, will the Prime Minister produce the studies that provide evidence of the reduced costs described by the Minister in the press release that was sent out on the weekend? Will the Government at least come clean and provide those studies so that the House may look at them?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, this is a question that was asked of me in writing by the NDP health critic and we responded at that time. It is within the jurisdiction of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, and the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs has said very clearly that he would like to get this matter into committee because that is where the discussions should take place and the facts should be assessed. Let us allow the parliamentary process to work. Bring the matter to committee so that the Hon. Member may get results.

REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION OF ALL STUDIES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, what the Minister has said is not the case. He has refused to produce the studies, saying that they are cabinet documents. I am referring to a new set of studies. I am directing my question to the Prime Minister who preached open government. Considering that the Minister has refused to produce the earlier studies done on the impact of this Bill and that he put out a press release on Friday referring to additional studies, will the Government please come clean, be honest with the people of Canada and give us all the studies now?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the Government of Canada is being honest. The Government has looked at this matter very clearly. In the health care system there is always a balance between the ability to pay and the ability to have the very best and the very newest.

Day after day I hear Members saying in the House that we need more money for universities and more opportunities for our young people to do research. This is one way we can do that. Surely the best way to look at the details of this, as all Hon. Members with experience in the House know, is to take this matter to committee where these studies or other facts as the Hon. Member likes to portray them can in fact be investigated and examined.

[Translation]

REQUEST THAT MINISTERIAL STUDIES BE MADE PUBLIC

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister, who promised the Canadian people open government.

Last week, the Minister refused to publish the departmental studies. This is another example of departmental studies being withheld.

I want to ask the Prime Minister: Does the Government intend to disclose these studies for the benefit of the public? Where is this open government?

• (1430)

[English]

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, it's the same question, and the same answer applies. I can only ask the Hon. Member to do the thing that every parliamentarian understands. When a matter has been debated in the House, it goes to committee for full examination.

* * *

CANADA POST CORPORATION

SUPERMAILBOXES—COST OF REPAIR

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, we all know about the national blitz to inspect thousands of superboxes last Monday and Tuesday, and the repair of over 300. Today we have another national blitz. It is called a security retrofit of all the superboxes across Canada, although last week in the House the Minister assured us the mail was safe. I ask the Minister if he has any estimate of what it is costing to transport the technicians to every corner of the country, pay for their hotel rooms, their labour, and so on for the second time in a week to repair those supermailboxes? Would the Minister agree that it would be much cheaper to restore door-to-door mail delivery?

[Translation]

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, first of all, I would like to point out that the Government has asked Canada Post to become self-sufficient by 1987-88 while at the same time improving service. Meanwhile, Mr. Speaker, the Corporation has submitted a corporate plan. We have analyzed the plan, and it does indeed meet these two objectives. We are satisfied with the decision made by Canada Post.

[English]

LOCK AND KEY COMBINATIONS

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Last week a superbox could be opened without a key. The Government says that it has corrected that. We now learn today that a key will open a whole bunch of superboxes. Superboxes become Pandora's boxes for this Government. Can the Minister confirm that because there was only a limited number of lock and key combinations purchased for superboxes, Canada Post will now have to change all the locks on every superbox in the country? Is it not cheaper to restore door-to-door mail delivery?

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I am told that in certain regions it takes a crowbar to open these supermailboxes, so that certainly represents security, Mr. Speaker.

* * *

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

AMENDING LEGISLATION—PRESS RELEASE LINKING NAMES OF OUTSTANDING PERSONS

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Right Hon. Prime Minister who will know that this morning the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs circulated a very partisan press release to all Members of Parliament linking the names of Terry Fox, Steve Fonyo, and Rick Hansen with the Government's Bill changing the Patent Act. Does the Prime Minister of Canada believe that linking these three outstanding Canadians to a Bill that the Government is introducing is an appropriate use of their names?

An Hon. Member: Did you get their permission?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, all of us applaud the work of those three Canadians who, in their various ways, have advanced medical research. What I think is important in the area of health is that Canadians want and expect to have the very best of health care. We have a choice to make as Canadians, and that is we either purchase almost entirely new technology from abroad, or develop some of it in Canada. I am suggesting to the Hon. Member that that balance is important. I am absolutely convinced that Canadian research can lead—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

USE OF INDIVIDUALS' NAMES

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is again directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. Does the Prime Minister think it is appropriate to use the names of great Canadians like Terry Fox, Steve Fonyo, and Rick Hansen in support of the initiative of this Government which will result in a significant increase in prescription drug prices? Does the Prime Minister believe it is appropriate that these individuals who have pursued fund raising for medical research are now having their names used in support of this government legislation?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have not seen the document to which my hon. friend refers. I will be happy to look at it, because there would be no intention of associating anyone with a proposal or a piece of legislation without his or her authorization, so I will examine it very carefully, and I will reply to my hon. friend.

* * *

TRADE

UNITED STATES DUTY ON CANADIAN SOFTWOOD LUMBER

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of International Trade. In her absence, I will direct it to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Over the weekend an External Affairs official in a briefing arranged by the Minister himself was reported to say that the federal Government no longer believes that it can win its lumber case against the Americans. Therefore, it has abandoned its decision to fight through every possible legal channel. Is this defeatist position now the official position of the Government? Have we indeed abandoned the recourse that we have through the American tribunals and the international tribunals to fight against the softwood lumber case?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I believe that the Hon. Member is misquoting the official he is purporting to report. Perhaps when he rises again he might indicate to us whether, as the official spokesman on trade matters for the Liberal Party, he speaks for the position they adopted on Saturday morning, or the different position they adopted on Saturday afternoon, or the different position they adopted on Sunday morning.

Mr. Axworthy: Mr. Speaker, since the Hon. Minister is seeking information, I will advise him that I speak for the position on the resolutions that I proposed and were passed at the convention.

Mr. Broadbent: Where were you at Cabinet, Lloyd?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I would ask that all Hon. Members refrain from extending the enthusiasm of the weekend throughout the entire Question Period.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary is for the same Minister. Can the Minister explain to the House why the Government is not scheduled to make representations to the Commerce Department's public hearings which begin this week on the softwood lumber case? Has the Government indeed abandoned its position? Why is it not appearing before the public hearings when all other parties to this bid will be appearing there and the case will be judged based upon these representations? Why are we not in front of that tribunal making the case for Canada?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the position of the Government of Canada supported by the vast majority of the provinces, and certainly very actively by the spokesmen of the labour union involved in this issue, is to try to seek an arrangement that will bring stability to the Canadian forest industry and stop the possibility of our losing literally hundreds of millions of dollars. Insofar as public debates and hearings are concerned, I am quite prepared to arrange immediately a public hearing so that we can learn the views of the Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount on the position put forward on trade by the Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry.

* * *

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

REQUEST THAT PRIME MINISTER MEET WINDSOR RETIREES TO DISCUSS AMENDING LEGISLATION

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister. During the period when the Government was considering the deindexation of old age pensions the Prime Minister met with senior citizens, to the benefit of his edification and the withdrawal of that legislation. My question to him is simply this. There are some retirees coming from Windsor and other cities who would like to discuss the Patent Act with him. Will he meet with them tomorrow?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I know that the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs has met with various groups that have views on this Bill.

Mr. Orlikow: Like the drug companies?

Mr. Epp (Provencher): Not only the drug companies. I have met with senior citizens. I have met with the drug companies and senior citizens, and I have met with others. So I say to the Member for Winnipeg North Centre, yes, we will meet with those groups, and we are willing to have discussions with them as well. There is always a balance between trying to protect the ability to have access to drug plans, as well as the balance on the other side for research and development, so that Canada can be at the leading edge of health technology.

• (1440)

POSITION OF SENIOR CITIZENS

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I think there has been some mistake. My question was directed to the Prime Minister. Will he meet with retirees and senior citizens, or should we have a little old lady guard the front door of the House to accost him as he was accosted last time to have the Government consider the interest of Canadians, rather than constant obsequiousness in the face of American pressure?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, that kind of proposition is preposterous and is very dangerous because people of all ages expect the best health care. I have letters from people who want new drugs. New drugs help to save lives. Let us get on with it and start having some optimism about ourselves, our country, and our future.

* * *

COMMUNICATIONS

VOLUNTEER FIRE DEPARTMENTS—RADIO LICENCE FEES

Mr. Gerald Comeau (South West Nova): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Communications. Some time ago I made representations to the Minister on behalf of the volunteer fire departments of Canada. It had been proposed by her Department that volunteer fire departments be required to pay individual licensing fees for their two-way radios. This would have added substantial costs to the operations of the volunteer fire departments. Has the Minister been able to resolve the matter and continue the previous practice of charging one licensing fee?

Hon. Flora MacDonald (Minister of Communications): Mr. Speaker, I thank the Hon. Member for South West Nova for his representations on this issue. Indeed, I have received representations on the issue from a number of other Members. I should like to advise him and the House that I have decided to defer for the time being any changes to the regulations as they apply to radio licence fees for municipalities and volunteer fire departments.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss MacDonald: These changes are quite separate and distinct from those included in Bill C-3 which applied to federal and provincial agencies and Crown corporations. They will be proceeded with. However, the changes as they affect municipalities and volunteer fire departments will not be proceeded with.

* * *

[Translation]

NUCLEAR ARMAMENTS

SALT II TREATY—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri—Westmount): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Thursday I put a question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs about the cruise missile tests and the SALT II Treaty. In response, he stated that the Prime Minister had advised President Reagan that it would be better for the world if the United States met the commitments it made under SALT II. Mr. Speaker, the President does not seem to have heeded this wise counsel. Could the Prime Minister advise President Reagan that Canada does not intend to proceed with the cruise missile tests until the U.S. Government decides to meet its obligations under the SALT II Treaty and the ABM Treaty?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): This question was asked and I answered it on Thursday afternoon. Canada believes it was a mistake on the part of the United States not to observe the SALT II Treaty. We have advised them accordingly several times, most recently in a personal letter from the Prime Minister to President Reagan. However, we have NATO commitments in connection with the cruise missile tests, and we intend to respect those commitments. I deeply regret the fact that on the weekend, the Liberal Party rejected the commitment signed by Mr. Trudeau and also rejected Canada's membership in NATO.

[English]

CANADA-UNITED STATES AGREEMENT

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri—Westmount): Mr. Speaker, if I am not mistaken, the testing of the Cruise missile comes under a bilateral agreement of February, 1983, with the United States. Paragraph 23c of the undertaking reads:

> Either Government shall reserve the right to cancel, suspend, postpone or terminate any specific test and evaluation project, if in its opinion, any unforeseen imperative circumstances should so warrant.

Surely the breach by the Americans of their obligations under SALT II would constitute such an eventuality if the Government so elected to stop testing the Cruise missile.

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I noted with interest and dismay the position of the Liberal Party on the weekend in respect of our capacity as a country to fulfil our obligations to NATO as it regards—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): It is not a NATO agreement.

Mr. Fulton: You need another briefing, Joe.

Mr. Speaker: I know Hon. Members would want to hear the Minister.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): I was dismayed at the agreement of the Liberal Party with regard to its vote on a nuclear free zone to reject Canada's obligations under NATO in so far as the protection of Canada is concerned against some 300 Soviet submarines in our waters. I also regret the concern—

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): In whose waters?

Mr. Ouellet: Where are they?

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): I also regret the action of the Liberal Party now in suggesting that we have no obligation to contribute to the collective defence of NATO, an obligation which we have accepted. Unhappily the nuclear deterrent remains a reality in the world. This country cannot opt out of our obligations. This Government does not intend to walk away.

REQUEST FOR HALT TO CRUISE MISSILE TESTING

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, the Minister seems to be reading the briefing books of the past Liberal Government. Would he just answer one or two straightforward questions on the issue? Does the Government yet recognize that there is a link between the breaching of the SALT II limits and air-launched Cruise missiles? Does it see the link about which we are talking? If so, why does it not do the honourable thing and dissociate us from the breach of the SALT II limits and cancel air-launched Cruise missile testing?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): There is an area of profound disagreement between the New Democratic Party and now the Liberal Party which has joined it, and the Progressive Conservative Government. Somehow or other the Liberals and New Democrats believe it is honourable to break agreements and to say that other people should defend freedom but we will only talk about it, and then back away from the obligations which those involvements entail.

Ms. Jewett: The Minister is apologizing for the American breach of the SALT II treaty; that is what he is doing. His own colleague, the Minister of Communications, when she was External Affairs critic, pointed out that it was not a breach of NATO—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member will put her question.

Oral Questions

MINISTER'S POSITION

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, is the Minister prepared to recognize that growing numbers of Canadians oppose Cruise missile tests, are alarmed at the breach of arms control agreements, and want Canada to be a nuclear weapons free zone? Does he recognize those facts?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I know there is a great deal of concern in Canada about the inherent danger of living in a nuclear world. That is why Canada is doing everything we can to encourage arms control agreements which would move toward a reduction of that nuclear danger. One way to stop arms control agreements would be for a prominent member of the Western Alliance to turn its back on the Alliance, to turn its back on Europe, and to turn its back on the United States. That is what Mr. Gorbachev would like to see happen. That is not what this Government would like to see happen.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

• (1450)

CANADIAN JOBS STRATEGY

RE-ENTRY PROGRAM—TRAINING OF WOMEN

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. There is growing evidence that under the Canadian Jobs Strategy Program women seeking equality in the workplace are being let down. As a matter of fact, women who want to train for non-traditional work are not being covered. Under the Re-entry Program, 76 per cent of the female participants are being trained for traditional low paying jobs, and thousands of others do not qualify at all. Would the Minister recognize this deficiency in the Canadian Jobs Strategy Program and re-introduce the 30 per cent priority which was for women training for non-traditional work, which priority his Government abolished earlier this year?

Miss MacDonald: It is 42 per cent.

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): As I see it, Mr. Speaker, the jobs strategy results prove that we have achieved some of our objectives. More than 350,000 of the 610,000 jobs created in this country in the last two years were for women.

It is obvious that, through the various elements of the Jobs Strategy Program, the Government seeks to give women more opportunities to secure employment elsewhere than in what we traditionally refer to as low paying jobs.

However we cannot at the same time deny women the opportunity to look for jobs which, less well paid though they may often be, are open to Canadians generally.

Similarly, our employment strategy is to give women more opportunities to land better paying jobs.

First and foremost jobs are our concern, and it stands to reason that we will not prevent women from taking such jobs.

[English]

PRIVATE SECTOR TRAINING

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, the Minister has not answered my question. I was asking about women who want to train for non-traditional work. The movement is backwards with respect to these women. Only a very small percentage are able to qualify for training programs for non-traditional work under that program.

Would the Minister reconsider the Government's preference for training in the private sector as opposed to training in the institutional sector which, likewise, discriminates against women who want to train for non-traditional work? Would the Minister consider that?

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I am trying to understand when the Hon. Member claims that we put more emphasis on private sector than on institutional training. Such is not the case at all.

I would suggest that the Government still invests 90 per cent of the funds in the institutional sector. I never gave instructions under which indirect purchases are to be made outside the institutional sector.

According to our agreements, institutions in some of the provinces take full responsibility for training. Of course, we intend to abide by these agreements.

* * *

[English]

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

FORGET COMMISSION RECOMMENDATIONS—COST TO PROVINCES

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. In reading the Forget Commission Report recommendations—and I understand the Minister had his copy on Friday—I have noticed that two particular recommendations, the annualization of the calculation of entitlements and the elimination of regional extended benefits, will cost Newfoundland $240 million in direct payments; Nova Scotia $140 million; New Brunswick $230 million; Quebec $1 billion and B.C. $370 million.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): One disaster to another.

Mr. Rodriguez: Will the Minister confirm these figures, and will he give us the assurance that these cruel and harsh recommendations will not be implemented?

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I did receive a copy of the Forget report last Friday. On that day I also indicated that I would make a statement in the House on Wednesday.

I should think that my colleague and I will probably have lots of opportunities to discuss the Forget report. Just to set the record straight at the outset, may I say it would be unrealistic to think that I might answer any question whatever about the Forget report recommendations before Wednesday afternoon.

[English]

REQUEST FOR MINISTERIAL ASSURANCE

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is for the same Minister. In view of the fact that the Minister has read the report—I have a copy of the report and I have read it—I am asking him to confirm the figures. If he is doing his job, he would confirm them. Will he confirm these figures now and give us the assurance that these cruel recommendations will not be put into effect?

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I thought my answer was quite clear: I will not comment on the Forget report recommendations before Wednesday afternoon.

* * *

[English]

BANKS AND BANKING

SALE OF BANK OF BRITISH COLUMBIA—PROTECTION OF SHAREHOLDERS

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Finance and it concerns the Government's decision to give the Hongkong Bank $200 million to buy assets of the Bank of B.C. including its shares valued at $63 million. Will the Minister explain why the Government made a precedent-setting decision to use the Canada Deposit Insurance Company to protect shareholders when its mandate is to protect depositors?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think that is precisely the reason that the CDIC did what it did. CDIC recognized that there was value in the bank at the time the decision was taken. It also recognized that the life of the Bank would not be very long without some action similar to what took place with the Hongkong Bank. In providing some support to the ongoing bank through the purchase by the Hongkong Bank, CDIC saved a considerably greater loss which would have ensued had the bank gone bankrupt or been liquidated. That is the basis for the decision by the CDIC.

SHAREHOLDERS' RISK

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, the Governor of the Bank of Canada has confirmed that this $200 million payment is a grant, not a loan. I repeat: why is $63 million of it going to shareholders who knew when they bought those shares that they were taking a risk?

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member and I would agree that it was important to see the ownership of the Bank of British Columbia transferred to new owners. To do that required the CDIC giving some assurance to the new owner to protect the owner against losses that were potentially in the bank.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): That is what you call free enterprise.

Mr. Wilson (Etobicoke Centre): Had the Bank of B.C. not being taken over by the Hongkong Bank, it is likely that it could have gone under, in which case the CDIC would have incurred much greater losses. The Hon. Member knows that the CDIC is empowered under its mandate to put in money to alleviate losses.

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): Always protect the bankers.

* * *

EMPLOYMENT

CANADAIR'S HIRING CAMPAIGN—CF-18 MAINTENANCE CONTRACT

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. It concerns the anger in Winnipeg, the city where the CF-18 contract should have gone, about reports that Canadair is advertising abroad for engineers. Why in the response the Minister issued on Friday, presumably to these reports because he refers to recent press reports, did he not deal with the CF-18 contract in particular? Why is there no mention of the CF-18 contract in the Minister's response to those reports?

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I did not refer to the F-18 matter. That is very clear. The authority to advertise or request services from abroad is open to everyone.

One thing is clear, the Department of Employment and Immigration to date has never authorized Canadair to recruit foreign workers, and where we are convinced that all those jobs of whatever nature pertaining to the F-18, the CL-215 or whatever, can be filled by Canadians, there is no question of authorizing foreign workers to enter this country.

[English]

REQUEST FOR RE-EXAMINATION OF CONTRACT DECISION

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, could the Minister tell the House whether he has looked into the matter of why Canadair would need to advertise abroad? Was that matter looked into when the contract decision was being made? Can he give assurances to this House now that if Canadair does arrive at that position that this entire process will be looked into once again?

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, this is hypothetical. Anything can be raised, anything can be suggested. It is easy to make that kind of suggestions to try and raise a non-existing problem. No foreign worker is authorized to work in this country for Canadair at this moment.

* * *

• (1500)

[English]

AGRICULTURE

CHILLED LAMB IMPORTS—EFFECT ON CANADIAN SHEEP INDUSTRY

Mr. Geoff Wilson (Swift Current—Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Agriculture. Western Canadian lamb producers and processors are being seriously affected by increased shipments of chilled lamb air-freighted from Australia and New Zealand. Is the Minister able to do something about it? In particular, can he approach the Governments of those countries and request voluntary restrictions on the amounts being shipped?

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Yes, we have, Mr. Speaker, but the Hon. Member will know that, given our obligations under GATT and existing legislation, there is no unilateral action we can take. Imports from Australia and New Zealand appear to be up about 77 per cent. However, on the brighter side, imports from the U.S. seem to be down about 35 per cent. The Canadian sheep industry is currently considering whether or not to launch a countervailing duty action. If the industry decides to do so, then of course we will assist them in the same way we assisted the Canadian Cattlemen's Association, the Canadian Pasta Association, and most recently the Canadian corn producers.

REFUGEES

DEPORTATION OF IRANIAN FROM UNITED STATES

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Immigration. It concerns his Department's refusal to save the life of the 25-year old Iranian who will soon be deported by the U.S. to Iran. David Drysdale, of the U.S. Embassy in Ottawa, has just confirmed that Ottawa has refused to offer refugee status to this man. Why did the Minister's Department block the initiative taken by Canadians from Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, to sponsor this man? Is he not somewhat ashamed that recent department decisions have rewarded questionable candidates while people facing death have received the cold shoulder?

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, it seems that the Minister of State (Immigration) was very clear on that matter last week. The young Iranian the Hon. Member is referring to has been living in the United States for eight years. The issue involves the U.S. Government and this applicant has not been deemed eligible to immigrant status under Canadian law. This question, therefore, should be addressed to the American Government. We have no business raising the question. He is not qualified to enter Canada as a refugee.

[English]

REQUEST FOR ISSUANCE OF MINISTERIAL PERMIT

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, the Minister has the power to issue a ministerial permit for this man. It is not an American issue. Canadians have asked to sponsor this man and I would like to know, as would other Canadians, why he refuses to save this man's life? The ability to do so is vested in his Department. He has the authority. Will he not, with humanity and compassion, reach out and bring this individual to Canada?

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, as we have told Hon. Members opposite on three occasions last week—and I have just done so once again—that individual has now been in the United States seven or eight years, and his case is still under review in the United States—he has not been deported from the United States to my knowledge—and he does not qualify. Besides, it is my view that the Minister's first obligation is to require or make sure that the case is acceptable under Canadian rather than American law.

[English]

NORTH ATLANTIC TREATY ORGANIZATION

LIBERAL PARTY CONVENTION RESOLUTIONS

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of National Defence. Over this past weekend the Liberal Party adopted as policy the declaration of Canada as a nuclear-free zone and the banning of Cruise missile testing. Would the Minister advise the House if policies of that sort would weaken Canada's commitment to NATO and NORAD—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Redway: —and ultimately cause the withdrawal of Canada from NATO and NORAD?

Mr. Speaker: Order. Some questions are more leading than others. Perhaps the Minister would like to respond.

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I was saddened to see the resolutions passed on the weekend—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Beatty: —because it is very clear that anything which substantially weakens Canada's commitment to NATO would indeed weaken the Western Alliance and not contribute to the fulfillment of peace. I agree with the Leader of the Opposition who said, when he was Prime Minister, that if we are going to have any influence in working towards world peace we must first of all fulfil our commitments to our NATO allies.

Mr. Speaker: I would like to advise the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Centre that I have his notice of a question of privilege and will hear it shortly.

I would also advise the Hon. Member for Swift Current—Maple Creek that I have notice of his question of privilege and will deal with that in a few minutes as well.

I also might advise the Hon. Member for Skeena that I understand he has a point of order and I will get to that as well.

* * *

SPEAKER'S RULING

PETITIONS INTRODUCING PRIVATE MEMBERS' BILLS

Mr. Speaker: The Chair wishes to report to the House on a matter of some importance concerning petitions introducing laws, and I will read the ruling.

[Translation]

An entry in the Votes and Proceedings of November 17 recorded the presentation of a petition whose petitioners requested the tabling of a Private Bill. The entry indicated that the petition was presented pursuant to Standing Order 132, which provides a time limit for receiving petitions for Private Bills.

[English]

The Standing Orders relating to petitions were recently changed. However, no account was taken of the implications of those changes in relation to private Bills. The present Standing Orders dealing with petitions are Standing Order 106 and Standing Order 106(2)(g). They provide that a petition must contain at least 25 signatures. No distinction is made between petitions seeking redress of grievances and those requesting private Bills. On the face of it, therefore, the requirement of 25 signatures applies to all petitions including those relating to private Bills. It was for that reason that the petition in question was shown as having been presented pursuant to Standing Order 132 instead of Standing Order 106.

[Translation]

However, I feel the petition should have been presented pursuant to Standing Order 106, despite the requirement for twenty-five signatures. I suppose the fact that petitions for Private Bills are not exempted from this requirement is merely an oversight.

[English]

I do not believe it was the intention of the House to deny any individual or group the right to petition for a private Bill by reason of the failure to obtain 25 signatures. I am therefore ruling, until such time as the House decides otherwise, that the requirement of 25 signatures does not apply to petitions for private Bills, but that the other provisions of Standing Order 106 do apply. Presentation of all petitions will thus continue to be governed by Standing Order 106.

[Translation]

I suggest that the Standing committee on Elections, Privileges and Procedure examine this problem in the course of its business and recommend amendments to the Standing Orders as appropriate.

* * *

[English]

PRIVILEGES

ALLEGED MISREPRESENTATION—PRESENTATION OF PETITION

Mr. Geoff Wilson (Swift Current—Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, I wish to raise a question of privilege rising out of Question Period on Tuesday last. My concern is that my action as a Member in presenting a petition on behalf of some of my constituents was the subject of misrepresentation by another Member in this House, specifically the Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young).

The gist of what went on during my absence was that the Hon. Member for Beaches misled this House, and indeed anyone observing the proceedings, as to my stand on Bill C-22, the amendments to the Patent Act. Indeed, others were misled and that is quite clear from a headline in Le Droit of the next day which read to this effect:

[Translation]

"Patent Act: three Tory Members joined the dissenters."

• (1510)

[English]

It is pretty clear that my name is being used in vain. I want to assure the House that I stand fully behind Bill C-22. I am perturbed that the Hon. Member, who I believe should know better, misrepresented my simple act of filing a petition on behalf of constituents. I believe there is a clear understanding in this House that Members have a duty to present petitions on behalf of their constituents. However, the fact that he presents a petition does not imply that he agrees with the contents in any way.

That is the point I wish to make, Mr. Speaker. I feel that my rights as a Member of Parliament have been abused by this process. I suggest that the Member for Beaches ought to issue a clarification and extend an apology to me and to the Member for Perth (Mr. Brightwell) who was likewise affected.

Mr. A. H. Harry Brightwell (Perth): Mr. Speaker, I want to confirm what the Hon. Member for Swift Current—Maple Creek (Mr. Wilson) has just said. I was included in this misrepresentation. I consider it a responsibility to file petitions for my constituents. I do not accumulate petitions to try to hold up action in the House. I do as I should, and I believe that I, too, deserve an apology and retraction from that Member.

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young) is not here. He is on a nation-wide tour drumming up opposition to Bill C-22.

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Murphy: I believe that in the Member's presentation he followed the rules of the House. He mentioned that he had in his possession a letter from a Member of Parliament indicating that he opposed the legislation. He had the right to mention that in the House of Commons, as he did. He also had the right to mention that two Conservative MPs had received petitions and presented them on behalf of their constituents. Those petitions protested the legislation to change the Patent Act. I believe the Member for Beaches acted in accordance with the rules of the House and did not breach the privilege of any Member. If Members are upset that their actions were mentioned in the House of Commons, that may be something for them to worry about, but it is certainly nothing for us to worry about.

Mr. Wilson (Swift Current—Maple Creek): Mr. Speaker, if what the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy) says is correct, we should all be dreadfully concerned about the operation of this place. It is quite clear that during Oral Questions on Tuesday last a misrepresentation occurred. It is evident that the misrepresentation was heard widely because it was responded to by journalists. Journalists other than from Le Droit, which I mentioned, at least had the decency to call and seek clarification.

However, as a result of the misrepresentation by the Member for Beaches, which I trust was accidental, a headline was issued across the country suggesting that my stand was something it is not. I suppose that was an attempt to embarrass the Government. I suggest it was done in a sly and sneaky way to try to create an innuendo that I was somehow opposed to this legislation when, in fact, I am not.

Mr. Speaker: The Chair has listened carefully to the representations of the Hon. Member for Swift Current—Maple Creek (Mr. Wilson). The matter arose some days ago. I think Hon. Members will recall that the Hon. Member for Peace River (Mr. Cooper) rose and pointed out that Hon. Members often present, on behalf of their constituents, petitions of which they may not necessarily approve. The Chair is certainly not going to impute motives to the Hon. Member for Beaches (Mr. Young), but it is clear that what the Hon. Member for Beaches said on that day caused a misunderstanding and that that misunderstanding has been picked up by the media to the embarrassment of Hon. Members. The Hon. Member for Perth (Mr. Brightwell) has also made his position clear. I listened with care to the intervention of the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy) whose interventions are, of course, always helpful.

I believe the proper ruling in this case is to point out that there is a difference between a question of privilege and a grievance. Hon. Members here have heard a grievance. Hon. Members have indicated that they hope the cause of that grievance was not intentional, and that, of course, would be the hope of the Chair as well. This perhaps gives an indication of how careful all Members ought to be in saying anything which could leave a suggestion that an Hon. Member's position is different than what it is in fact.

Therefore, the Chair must rule that this is not a question of privilege. It is a grievance. I thank all Members for their interventions. I hope Hon. Members will be careful not to create a situation which will necessitate the Chair hearing such representations as these in the near future.

ALLEGED WITHHOLDING OF INFORMATION—SALE OF BANK OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a question of privilege concerning my rights as a Member of Parliament which arises out of discussions we had in this House last Wednesday and Thursday about the Government's Bill relative to the takeover of the Bank of British Columbia by the Hongkong Bank. This is the earliest opportunity I have had to raise this question. The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) is here. I am sorry that the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin), who was involved in the passage of the Bill, is not, but I am sure my comments will be relayed to him.

I intend to raise this issue with the Committee on Privileges and Elections because I think it raises very serious questions about information which Members of the House of Commons had on which to make a decision on that Bill.

At the request of the Government the Opposition Parties agreed that that Bill would be passed in two days, and an order of the House was given unanimous consent which effected a deadline for the passage of that Bill, whether or not we were satisfied with the information made available.

In the House the Minister of State repeatedly insisted that this was basically a private deal, that the Government was simply passing a Bill to facilitate the sale. He stated: "It was not the Government that was involved in these discussions. It was the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation". He called it "a private transaction". He said that the CDIC was making "some prudential decisions relative to the bank". He suggested that certain questions which we had should be put before the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation, the British Columbia Government or the Bank of British Columbia which, of course, was not open to us because of the limited time to which we had agreed. He referred to this as a private transaction. When asked directly for an estimate of the losses if the bank had been liquidated he stated: "No one knows that", and did not respond to questions about how much the potential loss had been calculated to be.

I am raising this question of privilege because I read in The Globe and Mail the next day a detailed report of answers to many of the questions I and other Members of the House of Commons had put in this House to which we had been unable to get satisfactory answers during committee stage the previous day. At the very time that we were raising questions with the Minister of State for Finance substantial answers to those questions were being given to the Senate Banking Committee. I have been unable as yet to get a transcript of that committee hearing, although I requested it last Friday, but according to press accounts the Department of Finance was aware as long ago as October of 1985 that there were a significant number of problem loans in this particular bank.

The information we had, which was public, was that the bank was deemed to be sound at that time. While we were told that the Finance Department of the Government was a facilitator of this issue, the Senate was being told that the six chartered bank presidents had been called to a secret meeting with the Governor of the Bank of Canada, of which the Department of Finance was surely aware, and that the Department of Finance had been involved in two frantic weeks of negotiations and work in British Columbia in order to pull the deal together. While we were denied any detailed report on the bank's financial situation, the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation was giving an estimate, again of which the Government was surely aware, that the losses would have been $600 million had liquidation gone forward.

• (1520)

We sought documentation with respect to the Government's judgment that the Hongkong Bank was the best and only deal. Information was promised privately but was not forthcoming in any way, yet the evidence reported in the press indicates that that information does exist and portions of it were put to the Senate Banking Committee while we were here in Committee of the Whole being stonewalled by the Minister of State for Finance.

We asked about the information the Government had and we were not informed that there were at least three further inspections by the Inspector General of Banks between October, 1985 and the time that the Hongkong Bank transaction was finally underway. We asked in the House when the Government learned that the Bank of British Columbia was not sound. The Minister of State for Finance made no mention of misgivings that arose in 1985 or of those three further inspections, nor of the meeting with the six chartered bank presidents.

If this Bill had come forward in the normal course of events and had taken several weeks or months to work its way through the House, it would have been at least possible for the Opposition Parties to have sought some of that information from the street, from relevant parties and so on. We did not have the time to do so. We acted in good faith in accepting the Government's request that the Bill be adopted at the earliest opportunity. I do not believe that we were treated in good faith, when information was being given to the Senate that was being denied to us both in response to private requests and in response to questions in the House of Commons.

I point out that in its message back to the House, as appears in Votes and Proceedings for November 27, the Senate reported that the Committee's examination left partly unanswered the question of why the shareholders of the Bank of British Columbia are to receive $63.5 million plus additional recoveries which may raise the total compensation to nearly $100 million, when the Bank of British Columbia, as evidenced by the CDIC advance to its purchaser, was not viable. That question was very much on our minds, but we were given very vague and general answers.

I suggest that if the Government is asking Members on all sides of the House to co-operate on a matter of urgency, it has an obligation to share all the available and relevant information. That was not done in this case. Had this Bill gone forward in the normal way, it is the right of the Government under our parliamentary system—deplorably so—to refuse to impart that information. However, if it seeks special co-operation from the Opposition Parties I think it has a special responsibility to be fully co-operative. It was not in this particular case.

That is why I believe this matter should be referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections. I intend to bring it before that committee and I would seek your co-operation, Mr. Speaker, in supporting a referral of the matter to the Standing Committee on Privileges and Elections. I believe that my rights as a Member, as well as the rights of all Members, particularly those in the Opposition, have been impaired by the actions and omissions on the part of the Government with respect to this particular piece of legislation.

Hon. Michael Wilson (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I listened with interest to the Hon. Member's comments. I am sorry that he feels this way. But let me say to him that at no time have I tried to withhold from him information on this particular deal. As he knows, he and his colleague, the Member for Kamloops-Shuswap (Mr. Riis), and I met for some time last Wednesday morning. I was not in attendance during Committee of the Whole last Thursday afternoon when questions were asked, so I cannot comment on that specifically. However, I draw to his attention that the purpose of the Bill was not to discuss the remuneration, the role of CDIC or anything like that. The purpose of the Bill was to discuss the amendments to the Bank Act which affect the position of the shareholders under this particular transaction.

I believe that the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin) has indicated to Opposition Members that he is prepared to meet with the Finance Committee and discuss this particular transaction and any elements relating to it.

I listened to the questions that the Hon. Member said were not answered. I do not recall not answering those questions—perhaps they were not put. There were committee meetings in the other place that were arranged by the Senate Finance Committee, so that obviously more questions would be asked during the course of the day as a result of that committee meeting. However, I do not believe that this is a question of withholding information in any way. That was not the attitude or the way in which the Government dealt with this matter.

I repeat that the Minister of State for Finance has agreed to appear before the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs to respond to any questions that Hon. Members wish to put on the broader element of the transaction with the Bank of British Columbia and the Hongkong Bank of Canada. However, I believe that every question addressed to us on the specific nature of the Bill was answered.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same question of privilege. Many of us in the House are not always familiar with all the procedures of the House. When we receive a report back from the Senate, as we did on Thursday, why are the observations on that Bill made by the Senate not read into the record of the House at that time? We had to go back to Votes and Proceedings on the next day or days following to find out what the Senate had to say about Bill C-27. Is this a custom or tradition? Why do Members of the House have to wait until we see Votes and Proceedings the next day to find out what the Senate said about a certain Bill?

Mr. Speaker: We will return to the question of privilege in a moment. I want to say to the Hon. Member for Ottawa-Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) that the Chair will look into that matter and report back.

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I believe our position was properly covered by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson), but I want to add two points. First, it seems to me from listening to the question of privilege by the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) that he is concerned about matters of debate concerning whether or not he and his Party were satisfied with answers they received to questions they put.

Second, while I do not want to nitpick or in any way prevent a Member from raising a question of privilege, I want to reiterate that while I believe the use of a question of privilege is a form of safety valve in the House, I believe that if a Member lays a complaint of a breach of privilege it should conform to Citation 81(2) of Beauchesne which states:

> A complaint of a breach of privilege must conclude with a motion providing the House with an opportunity to take some action.

After all, Mr. Speaker, that is what you are deciding, whether there is a prima facie case. In other words, has a prima facie case been made of a question of privilege which would, by and in itself, be proper to put before the House? While the Minister, who is not here, can review the Member's comments, in order for him to respond properly the Minister must have an actual motion so that we know exactly what privilege the Member is claiming has been breached.

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, first I want to respond to the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary. I believe he made that complaint a number of weeks ago in relation to another question of privilege. I do not believe it is necessary for a Member who raises a question of privilege to indicate a willingness to move such a motion at the end of his remarks. I do not believe that is a requirement with respect to a question of privilege. If I am correct, I believe Your Honour has indicated that in the past. Regardless of that—and you will of course deal with that in your response—the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) indicated in his presentation that he wanted the support of the Speaker and was quite willing to have the matter referred to the Standing Committee on Elections, Privileges and Procedure. I believe that we do have a bona fide case.

• (1530)

At the same time that the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre, as reported in Hansard of last Thursday at pages 1600 to 1602 inclusive, was asking questions of the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin) and was being told that such information was not available, the Senate was receiving such information. I argue that the privileges of the House will be breached if the Government is willing to provide information to one House but not to the other. As the elected representatives of Canadians, we are certainly entitled to any information that the Government deems can be made public, information which it deems it can give to the Senate and information which in fact it is denying the elected Members of the House of Commons.

In closing, I would ask Your Honour to look at the records of both Houses as well as those of the Senate Banking Committee to see if there is information which was being denied to us which was being asked for by the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre. If that is the case, then I believe there has been a real breach, not only of the privileges of this House but certainly of the whole idea of parliamentary accountability.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: I was about to indicate to the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) that the Chair has probably heard enough on this point. However, if the Hon. Member wishes to say a few more words then the Chair will hear him.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I will be brief. Of course, if you wish me to move a motion then I will do so.

Perhaps I can just bring to Your Honour's attention a couple of the specifics and the contrasts in what was being reported about what took place in the Senate at that time. I asked the following question:

Did the Government have specific information on the quality of the loan to the Bank of British Columbia that led it to judge that the expenditure—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Chair suggests to the Hon. Member that the point he is now addressing may very well be pertinent. Would the Hon. Member be satisfied to send this information to the Chair through the Table Officers? The Chair has the points and has heard sufficient argument to deal with the matter. I will deal with it carefully and seriously and report back as soon as I can.

Mr. Cassidy: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will be glad to do that.

* * *

POINTS OF ORDER

STATEMENT UNDER S.O. 21 RESPECTING SENTENCING OF PETER FENWICK

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I seek clarification from the Chair regarding a motion from which I was reading during Statements by Members.

As Your Honour is aware, before I was elected to this place I was an officer of the court in British Columbia. One of the roles that I had as an officer of the court was to make recommendations in relation to sentence. In speaking today about the sentencing of Peter Fenwick, who is the Leader of the New Democratic Party in Newfoundland, I was not referring to the judgment of the court or of the learned judge. What I was referring to was Canadian tradition generally in terms of jail sentences. There are certain criteria in all the courts of Canada—provincial, federal and territorial—with respect to certain matters which should be taken into account when one is sentencing someone to jail. Certainly, the person has to be some kind of danger to society, or there must be the potential for considerable negative effect on individuals or on groups within society, if he is to be given a jail term. Jail is not a place generally in which Members of the Legislature or Members of this House are taken as a result of attending public functions, public duties, or, in this case, a picket line, where there are large numbers of their own constituents. In this case, Mr. Fenwick was on a picket line for just a few moments and was selectively chosen from the crowd and then selectively prosecuted. That is to what I was referring in my remarks.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member raises a matter, of course, which the Chair views as one of concern. The difficulty that the Chair is in in this case, and in others, is that the Hon. Member was making a statement and that the Chair is not always able to know exactly what will come in a statement. The Chair is concerned about the distinction between Hon. Members being critical of the law and cognizant that the Chair has an obligation—and it is a tradition—to constrain Members whose comments may in fact be an attack or a criticism of a judgment exercised by a court. That is the dilemma that all of us as Hon. Members have to find our way through.

As I think I said to the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) some days ago, there is a distinction between criticism of the judge and a court and criticism of the law under which that judge or court may be mandated to act.

The other difficulty is that the Hon. Member is really now into an explanation of why the Hon. Member, and no doubt others, as has been reported—and the Chair is cognizant of that—may feel that a sentence meted out by a court under particular circumstances was not appropriate. The difficulty here is that the court is presumed to have all of the relevant information upon which it acts. All of that information is not here before us in this Chamber which, as some people have said and which has been historically considered, is the highest court of the land. As a consequence, it puts judges and courts in a very difficult position indeed if Hon. Members are in effect second-guessing the judgment of that court. I know that the Hon. Member did not intend to do that. However, I also know and take cognizance of the fact that the Hon. Member is not happy with what happened. That of course is the Hon. Member's right. However, the Chair feels in this case that perhaps it is enough to accept the intervention of the Hon. Member, and I made it very clear to the Hon. Member that I would hear him out at this time.

I would ask all Hon. Members to bear with the Chair in this difficult distinction between the undoubted right of Members of Parliament to criticize laws and the right that those who have to administer the laws not be subjected to attack for exercising what they are in fact mandated to do. I ask the Hon. Member to accept the sincerity of the Chair in this matter. I have taken note of it. I shall be, as I try to be, very careful before I interrupt a statement of any Hon. Member, but there are times that the Chair can be in some difficulty. In this respect, if an Hon. Member has a statement which he or she wishes to make which may come close to giving the Chair some difficulty, then perhaps the Hon. Member could exercise greater care indeed.

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, I too rise on the same point of order. I have listened with care to your remarks. Are we to take it then that as Members of Parliament in this assembly gathered we cannot stand up on our own two feet and criticize the judgment of a judge or that we cannot criticize a sentence handed down by any judge in any federal or provincial court in the land?

Mr. Speaker: I think the response of the Chair is that there may be appropriate cases by notice and motion, or by other procedures, whereby such a procedure or such a criticism may be effected. Clearly, the Chair has to say that it is not the place to do it in Statements by Members. As I say, I am not in any way suggesting to Members that they should be limited in criticizing a law. However, I think Hon. Members can see the difficulty that the Chair is in because there are only a relatively few seconds for the Chair to determine whether the statement is within the rules or outside the rules.

• (1540)

Mr. Keeper: Mr. Speaker, I seek clarity. I understand you to be saying that a Member of Parliament cannot in this House criticize sentencing, whether it be too lax or too tough, a right which every Canadian exercises. Are we in this place then to have less rights than an ordinary citizen? What happens when legislation comes before the House designed to deal with sentencing? Are we to be restricted to the particular letter of the law? I would like some clarification on this issue. It sounds to me as though you are saying that we cannot criticize sentences handed down by courts.

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper) is repeating the difficulty the Chair and all Hon. Members have. The Chair is not ruling that there may never be a circumstance when a sentence or some other thing connected with a court ought to be criticized. The Chair is saying that during 60-second statements, Hon. Members would, I hope, be very careful not to trespass against the admonition which is traditional and historical and is contained in Citation 321 of Beauchesne's, which reads:

> All references to judges and courts of justice of the nature of personal attack and censure have always been considered unparliamentary, and the Speaker has always treated them as breaches of order.

The Hon. Member will know that the Chair did not treat the remarks of the Hon. Member for Skeena (Mr. Fulton) as being any serious breach of order at all, but the Chair is drawing to the attention of all Hon. Members the difficulty the Chair is in in these cases. There may well be other appropriate ways to raise the concerns of the Hon. Members for Churchill (Mr. Murphy), Skeena, and Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper) who may very well feel the need to raise them at another occasion. I think that deals with the matter as well as the Chair can deal with it at this point.

CORRECTION TO STATEMENT MADE DURING QUESTION PERIOD

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order to correct the record. During Question Period, I said that there were some 300 Soviet submarines in our waters. I had intended to say that there were 375 Soviet submarines capable of entering our waters.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANADAIR LIMITED DIVESTITURE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mrs. McDougall that Bill C-25, an Act to authorize the divestiture of Canadair Limited and to provide for other matters in connection therewith, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Mr. Speaker: When the House rose at 1 p.m., there were five minutes remaining in the question and comment period following the speech of the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount (Mr. Johnston). I will now recognize Hon. Members who wish to continue the question and comment period. However, the Hon. Member is not here. I recognize the Hon. Member for Sarnia—Lambton (Mr. James).

Mr. Ken James (Sarnia—Lambton): Mr. Speaker, on May 6 this year, I rose in the House to call attention to the expansion and growth experienced by de Havilland following its sale to Boeing. At that time, I pointed out that during the debate, the hue and cry and outrage voiced by opposition Members led many to believe that the days of de Havilland were numbered. This has been proven to be so far from the truth that it is ridiculous. Just as the hue and cry with respect to de Havilland did not produce the dying gasp of a company about to go belly up, the argument then with respect to—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I regret very much to interrupt the Hon. Member but I understand that the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount (Mr. Johnston) entered the Chamber just as it was indicated to me that he was not here. He is in the Chamber and if it would be the disposition of the House, I think it would be appropriate to allow questions and comments if there is consent to do so, and we will hear the Hon. Member for Sarnia—Lambton (Mr. James) in a few moments. Is that agreed?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Questions and comments.

Mr. Blenkarn: Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount (Mr. Johnston) said that it was the policy of the Government when it purchased Canadair to turn it back eventually to the private sector. He was asked earlier today if he thought that this was a good deal and that now was the appropriate time to turn Canadair back to the private sector. I wonder if he could give us his advice, as a former President of the Treasury Board, a key spokesman for his Party with respect to this matter and a Member from the Montreal area. Could he tell us if he feels that Canadair should at this point be turned back to the private sector or if he feels that we should continue to carry Canadair on as a Crown corporation.

Mr. Johnston: Madam Speaker, I said very specifically that with the right terms and conditions, the previous Government had agreed that Canadair would be returned to the private sector. It was not an ideologically-driven sale. It was a sale which was intended to preserve jobs, technology and Canadian ownership and effectively to allow the company to perform in the private sector and fulfil its original destiny as a major player in the Canadian aerospace sector.

I might add that the Hon. Member has now asked us on this side of the House for our advice as to whether this is a good deal or not after the horse has left the barn. I would be happy to accept that challenge as would my colleagues. We would be happy to be consulted about the deals that are done before they are delivered half baked before the House.

That being said, I raised a very specific point and I have not yet heard an answer from the Hon. Member. As I understand the comment of the Salomon Brothers, there is a contingent obligation on the people of Canada for product liability which lasts for 15 years and it lasts if the purchasing company is not able to obtain adequate or practical insurance coverage. Salomon Brothers have said that that is not normal in a commercial transaction. In my experience, it is certainly not normal. The Hon. Member for Mississauga South (Mr. Blenkarn) has yet to tell us whether or not he thinks it is normal, notwithstanding the fact that I asked him to comment on that specific point.

Having looked at the documentation that has been made available to me, I put it to the Hon. Member that we are not talking about product liability for aircraft or parts manufactured while the company was a Crown corporation, we are talking about future liabilities which may be incurred while the company is in the hands of the purchaser. I would ask my colleagues if that is normal in a commercial transaction. That liability which diminishes over time does not disappear until 15 years have gone by.

I know the Hon. Member is not honour-bound to answer my question. However, knowing the Hon. Member and his willingness to express his candid views, I look forward to hearing from him.

Mr. Blenkarn: Madam Speaker, I like the way the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount bounces around and is afraid to come clean. Let us talk about insurance. At one time, the Hon. Member was a member of the Finance Committee which was studying financial institutions, and he knows the problems involved with liability and product insurance. He knows the concerns manufacturers have, particularly with a deal like this where $173 million more is at stake if planes cannot be sold and land has to be given back for the amount it was purchased for if planes cannot be sold for 20 years. Obviously, the buyer has to have some assurance from the Government that the Government will make sure that public liability insurance is available at realistic costs. That is the type of deal it is. Let us point out and make it clear that the buyer pays the cost of insurance. All that is happening here is that the Government is making sure that the insurance is available. Even if it is not available, there is a shared cost arrangement. So obviously, this deal cannot go forward. We cannot manufacture airplanes if we cannot insure them. We cannot be an exporter and developer of aircraft unless we can insure it. That is the type of responsibility that this Government is prepared to face, and face nose on.

• (1550)

I am surprised at the Member shilly-shallying around and afraid to come out clean and say whether or not he approves the deal. Would he rather keep it in the control of the Government, or would he rather sell it? Would he rather get on with the business of making aircraft, or does he want to keep on with socialism, more socialism, and more socialism?

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The time for questions and comments has expired. Do I have the consent of the House to extend the time?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Johnston: First of all, Madam Speaker, I have answered the question many times that this Government, my Government, and previous Liberal Governments, have never been ideologically bound to either retain or dispose of Crown corporations. That point has been there. Canadair was one of the companies which was on the privatization list. But it seems to me that the Hon. Member has announced a new interventionist policy of his Government that states it is prepared to take responsibility for providing product liability insurance to the aircraft sector. This is a company now qui traite à distance. That means that the future products of this company will be insured by the Government of Canada, if it cannot be obtained elsewhere. I presume from that that the Government is probably entertaining doing this for other manufacturers as well, because the same principle would apply. In any high technology risk field, product liability is a problem. If it is going to be extended to Canadair, I presume the Government is also entertaining the notion of extending it throughout the industrial sector. We look forward to seeing the program when it is tabled in the House.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Resuming debate. The Hon. Member for Sarnia—Lambton (Mr. James).

Mr. Ken James (Sarnia—Lambton): Madam Speaker, I will digress from the speech that I was going to make, and I will start off by alluding to the conversations and debate that have just taken place. I believe that the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount (Mr. Johnston) was alluding to a letter of August 11 from Salomon Brothers, the last paragraph on page 3 which states as follows:

The only important provision in the LOI that neither promotes Crown objectives nor conforms to traditional commercial practice—

What he failed to go on and mention is that in the bottom of the paragraph it states:

Here, the Crown is at risk only if insurance becomes unobtainable at economically practicable cost.

In addition to that, he failed to mention other correspondence, which undoubtedly is in his possession, from Marsh & McLennan. This is a letter of June 24 to Mr. R. A. Delvecchio, Director, Aerospace Directorate, which states:

Dear Mr. Delvecchio:

RE: Product Liability Insurance - Bombardier/CAT Proposal

After reviewing the proposals as related to the product liability insurance we would comment as follows:

1. Bombardier Inc.

They have agreed to purchase insurance without any participation of premiums by the government. In the event the insurance may not be available they propose to share the cost of the claims with the government for a 15 year period on a sliding scale.

It goes on to state:

CONCLUSION

It is obvious from the foregoing that the Bombardier proposal is clearly superior in that it relieves the government of any on-going premium involvement or financial participation in deductibles. We feel there will always be insurance available in some form and therefore the proposals made by Bombardier and CAT in the event insurance becomes unavailable are academic.

The letter was signed by Mr. Dave F. Taylor, Senior Vice-President.

On May 6 of this year in the House I called attention to the expansion in growth experienced by de Havilland following its sale to Boeing. At that time I pointed out that during the debate the hue and cry and outrage voiced by the opposition Members led many to believe that the days of de Havilland were numbered. When this was proven to be far from the truth, I find it ridiculous that we are sitting here today listening to the same type of argument.

Just as the hue and cry with respect to de Havilland did not produce the dying gasp of a company about to go belly up, this argument with respect to the sale of Canadair does not hold water either. Privatizing Canadair will not make it close down. Rather, the opposite will happen, as happened in the case of de Havilland. Canadair will now have at its disposal the resources to be innovative and competitive in the market-place. Research and development is always the key to the success of any business venture in today's changing world markets. This will now be possible for Canadair under its new ownership arrangement. Jobs will not be lost. In fact, as previous experience should have taught the Opposition, jobs will be secured.

I wish to examine for a few moments the success of the sale of de Havilland. Since Boeing assumed control of de Havilland in January of this year, the turnaround of de Havilland has been resoundingly evident. On April 30 a major facilities improvement program at de Havilland was announced. The first phase investment was valued at $25 million. How's that for strength of commitment on Boeing's part? Boeing has given the go ahead to develop the new Dash-8 series 300. This is a major development program which will not only broaden the market potential of the Dash-8, but, what is most important, will generate more jobs in Canada. Boeing is further adding to de Havilland's family of aircraft by offering an additional 14 seats to the Dash-8-100 series. Since Boeing assumed ownership of this company, orders for the aircraft have increased so significantly that a launch market for this new aircraft has been provided.

In May of this year Boeing announced that its Winnipeg plant will produce fairings for the 747 super jet. The result is annual sales of $11 million in Canada over this move. But this is not all. Two hundred and fifty new jobs is the significant result. Forty per cent of this work will be subcontracted in Canada with de Havilland being one of the prime candidates for receiving a good portion of this work.

Although de Havilland is not suffering from a lack of significant work, because it certainly has a lot, record sales were made in June of this year. The company now has orders and options on hand for another 132 aircraft. These 132 aircraft represent about two and a half years of production as forecasted at the current production rates.

As I stated in the House in May of last year, no matter how far I stretch my mind, this record does not seem to me to be one that is the last gasp of a dying company. Through the transfer of ownership of de Havilland jobs have been secured and private initiative in this short space of time has turned de Havilland into a growing and innovative company. The strength of Boeing's commitment to de Havilland has been proven time and time again. When Boeing assumed control, announcements were made indicating substantial investments in de Havilland and increased employment opportunities at de Havilland as a result of the anticipated subcontract work for Boeing.

The facts speak for themselves. Boeing has honoured its commitment fully. We must applaud the Government for the initiative it undertook to find the best possible purchaser for the de Havilland plant. Given the same success of past sales, can we not assume that this Government is committed to finding and approving the best possible buyer for Canadair? Why does it always seem so difficult for the Opposition to accept the fact that this Government is committed to improving and strengthening the economy, and to providing new jobs for those Canadians who are unemployed, while at the same time assisting however possible in the acquisition of job security? To my mind, the best source of job security is through private ownership and initiative.

The combination of management expertise and private sector initiative worked for de Havilland, and it will work for Canadair. Under continued Government ownership Canadair will become a very competitive enterprise. Given our serious attempts to reduce the federal deficit, Government can no longer justify or rationalize investing huge amounts of money into enterprises which can be better protected and developed through the private sector. Government cannot provide Canadair with sufficient funds for initiatives in research and development that are needed.

• (1600)

With the injection of private sector management and funds into Canadair, the company will enlarge and expand just as the de Havilland example has proven. The Government must be satisfied, though, in all respects that the purchaser is bringing to the transfer of ownership more than just money. The Government must be convinced that there is a workable combination which joins together Government priorities and private sector initiative. There are three main aspects of any potential purchaser which must be satisfied, or there will be no sale.

First, the purchasing company must exhibit a sound management capability. It must indicate an ability to help protect the company and to improve growth and performance with a sound business strategy, efficient operations, and solid marketing skills. Through the track record exhibited by Bombardier, it clearly has the ability and experience in management and marketing to fulfil this important role. Undoubtedly Bombardier can bring the drive and direction necessary to make Canadair a winner in this highly competitive industry.

Second, the purchaser must prove a strong enough financial base to handle not only the initial acquisition but also to finance the extensive capital requirements needed for product development. Once again Bombardier came out on top. According to the team of financial analysts—Burns Fry Limited, Merrill Lynch, Capital Markets and S. G. Warburgs and Company—which assessed the submissions for the purchase of Canadair, Bombardier exhibited the strongest attributes financially. Their report to CDIC indicated that Bombardier was in a superior financial position.

The third and final aspect which must be proven is the potential of the purchaser to make a major contribution to the maintenance and development of a viable and dynamic aerospace manufacturing sector. The purchase of Canadair by Bombardier creates an alliance of Canadair's technology and skilled workforce with Bombardier's management expertise and international marketing experience.

It is only logical and sound public policy for Crown corporations to be well managed. However, in cases such as de Havilland and Canadair, Government does not have the resources to make the firms as competitive as they should be. In many respects our continued ownership handicapped these companies for a number of years. We were unable to assist them in keeping up with the fast moving and highly competitive aerospace industry. It is imperative that Canadair make some important strategic decisions on programs like the Challenger and the water bomber. Selling to Bombardier at this time will nearly ensure their successes. At the very least the sale will ensure that the decisions will be commercially based and responsive to the demands of the market-place.

We are not looking just to increase our Government coffers with the sale. We are also looking for a method by which we can provide the most social and economic benefits for the country as a whole. This is not an abrupt or rash decision. The process involved is not only time lengthy but also intensive and very extensive. The terms of the sale are complex and not easily understood, I am sure. The terms of sale were arrived at only after months of negotiations by a large number of expert financial advisers to the Government. Obviously their suggestions, recommendations, and advice were carefully considered by Ministers in the decision-making process. As I have already stated, the CDIC employed the services of three independent investment firms to act as the main financial advisers in the sale.

The process of negotiation was conducted in an equitable and business-like fashion. However, clearly this business-like conduct must ensure that the Government of Canada pay heed to the shareholders—the Canadian people. CDIC and its financial advisers put the word out in 1985 that Canadair was being considered for sale. Some 150 potential purchasers were contacted, and interest was generated in the company by many of them.

The list of prospective interested and suitable purchasers was narrowed down to the six who submitted proposals for the purchase of Canadair. Based upon an extensive study to which I referred earlier, CDIC recommended to the Government the submission of Bombardier.

The six bidders submitted proposals, at which time prospective buyers were narrowed to two, one being Bombardier. Finally the proposals and the CDIC recommendation came before Government. After conducting its own review of the proposal and conducting its own financial assessment, the ministerial task force on privatization determined that its best option would be to support the Bombardier proposal.

Given the expert advice it received and the consideration put into the proposal, the Government whole-heartedly selected Bombardier. There is no mystery or closed doors surrounding the selection of Bombardier. When the sale was announced last August, the Government released an extensively detailed set of documents which described the entire transaction. Similarly, when Bill C-25 was given first reading, the Minister of State for Privatization (Mrs. McDougall) released details of all competing bids for Canadair. We as a Government are not seeking privatization to recoup our financial losses. There is no possible sale which could replace the moneys invested in Canadair from the government coffers. Since the Government of the day purchased Canadair in 1976, a total of about $2.4 billion has been invested in loans and equity. Additionally, the original purchase price of $46 million was topped up with $120 million in DIPP payments.

Our primary motive is to ensure the best possible working environment and security of jobs for the employees of Canadair. This is our first and foremost consideration. Closing Canadair will not achieve this, nor will the continued infusion of limited government capital into the company produce job security or expansion. What is needed is the financial discipline, management expertise, and international marketing skills of Bombardier. These will ensure a secure and stable future for Canadair and its employees. Hon. Members must remember that it was always intended that Canadair and de Havilland be sold back to the private sector. Former Prime Minister Trudeau considered privatization. During his campaign, the Right Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) used Canadair and de Havilland as examples of what can go wrong when Government tries to interfere in areas in which the private sector has a wealth of experience and initiative. He might be wishing he had not said that, after this weekend.

We must accept that the sale of Canadair to Bombardier is the best possible solution to the problems which plague the company. Canadair, under the directioan of Bombardier's experienced management, will be given the potential to develop as a leading aerospace manufacturer.

Also major benefits for the country will be realized through the sale. Bombardier has committed to assigning Canadair with its world product mandate for its main product lines. This will be invaluable in promoting a strong Canadian aerospace capability. Similarly, Bombardier will ensure maximum Canadian content in all existing and future products of Canadair.

The infusion of capital and experience into Canadair will enhance research and development to ensure its growth as an integrated aircraft manufacturer which can participate in major Canadian and international defence and commercial projects. This sale truly represents another example of the commitment of the Canadian Government to work hand in hand with the private sector for the betterment and security of all Canadians.

In closing, I should like to bring to the attention of the House a statement made by the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) earlier today. He made mention of the fact that the Hon. Member for Etobicoke Centre (Mr. Wilson) now the Minister of Finance made a statement in 1984 to the effect that the Government would set up a separate Crown corporation for Canadair and de Havilland with a mandate for the development of the aerospace industry. It appears that the Member has taken the statement out of context as was the case on January 16, 1986, in a regional development committee meeting when the same statement was brought up out of context by another Member of the New Democratic Party. In 1984, the Member said essentially that there could be a more suitable way to run de Havilland and Canadair if they continued under government ownership, not that they were going to continue.

• (1610)

Mr. Keeper: Madam Speaker, I have a question for my hon. friend as a member of the Government. I have a question that many Manitobans are asking. Was the awarding of the CF-18 contract by his Government to Canadair not a part of the original deal for the sale of Canadair to Bombardier? In other words, was the CF-18 contract used as a means to ensure the success of the Government's privatization policy? Otherwise, how else does the Member explain the awarding of the CF-18 contract to Canadair, particularly in light of the fact that Bristol Aerospace of Winnipeg won the bidding process and has access to something like $30 million worth of technology which Canadair appears to need to fulfil the contract? We now have the example of Canadair advertising abroad for engineers. What I would like to know from the Member, who is a representative of the Government, is whether or not the CF-18 contract was a part of the original deal to sell Canadair to Bombardier. If he claims that it was not, will the Government table all of the documents relating to the original sale so that any objective observer could evaluate the original deal to see whether the CF-18 contract was part of the original deal?

Mr. James: Madam Speaker, in response to the question put by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper), the decision to award the CF-18 contract, as he knows, was made on its own merits and was completely independent of the decision announced in connection with Canadair being sold to Bombardier.

The Member did not mention this, but there was an offer of a royalty payment by Bombardier in its bid to purchase Canadair. That was not considered and it was made public by the Government that it was not considered and would not be considered. There were never any promises made to Bombardier. I do not think there have been any voluntary statements by anybody to that effect. I am sure we all understand why the question is being raised, but that is the case and I have no objective statements by anybody of anything different. I hope that answers the Member's question.

Mr. Johnston: Madam Speaker, my question relates to the issue that I raised during my brief comments earlier. I would like my hon. friend to tell me, if he would, whether he thinks there is a role for Government generally in supporting the costs of product liability insurance for those Canadian manufacturers who find it impractical or unduly burdensome to obtain such insurance in the market-place? I would like him in thinking about that also to reflect on the fact that in this contract, as I understand it, the Government of Canada or the Crown will remain responsible on a diminishing basis for a period of up to 15 years, and that this could include products introduced into Canadair by the new owners which are not currently manufactured by Canadair and will, of course, be obviously new products. Could the Hon. Member tell us whether generally he thinks that is an appropriate response of the Government to the manufacturing sector, and if he does not, what justifies a provision of this kind in this particular contract?

Mr. James: Madam Speaker, I believe the Hon. Member for Saint-Henri—Westmount (Mr. Johnston) was listening when I read the letter from Marsh & McLellan, the most noted and experienced people in the insurance business. I will restate Marsh & McLellan's reaction. As the Hon. Member knows, there is a provision in the sale that there will be participation by the Government if insurance becomes unobtainable at an economically practical cost. Marsh & McLellan did say that it was a definite improvement from other agreements that Marsh & McLellan have examined because it only becomes unobtainable. We all know this has arisen because of the concern of liability insurance of insurance companies accepting insurance and then finding it at a somewhat inequitable cost. It raises concern and probably was of concern in finalizing the sale. I must go back and make reference again to Mr. Taylor's letter in which he said:

It is obvious from the foregoing that the Bombardier proposal is clearly superior in that it relieves the government of any on-going premium involvement or financial participation in deductibles. We feel there will always be insurance available in some form—

This is again from Marsh & McLellan who are recognized by the Hon. Member and all of us as being experts in the field. They said:

We feel there will always be insurance available in some form and therefore the proposals made by Bombardier and CAT in the event insurance becomes unavailable are academic.

Marsh & McLellan pointed it out as being academic.

Mr. Johnston: Madam Speaker, I have a supplementary question. I was interested that this very sophisticated contract has academic provisions in it. It seems to me that our time would be better spent dealing with concrete provisions that are likely to have application. I must say that I would be of the view that it is a very important provision in the contract. It raises a number of questions that I do not think the Hon. Member for Sarnia—Lambton (Mr. James) even attempted to address, namely, if he and I want to go into a high technology manufacturing business in Canada, aircraft, ground transportation, advanced technology, any area where there is a product which might give rise to product liability, and if the burden of insurance for product liability becomes so great, is the Government of Canada prepared to be the insurer of last resort? That effectively is what is being said in this contract, as I understand it. Does the Member think that a good idea? The Member very skillfully avoided answering that question but I would like to give him another opportunity to answer it.

• (1620)

Mr. James: Madam Speaker, under the agreement the Crown is to share insurance exposure if insurance is unavailable. People a lot more knowledgeable about the business than I am are saying that it is really academic. Whether the Hon. Member wants to dispute if it is academic or not, that is what Marsh McLennan is saying. The agreement also records that the insurance would be on a sliding scale basis, 90 per cent over the first five years, 60 per cent for the next five years, and 30 per cent for the last five years. As was pointed out, this is a lot more favourable to the Government than having to accept all the liability of Crown corporations it owned previously. If that ever did happen, although it is noted as being academic, that is certainly an awful lot better than the $2.4 billion which my hon. friend's Government made available to Canadair in the form of loans and equity investments after buying the company. I guess I can appreciate his concern about the spending of taxpayer's money, but I would also be interested in knowing about his great concern for those dollars being spent on Canadair when he was President of the Treasury Board.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I will allow one short question from the Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo).

Mr. Hovdebo: Madam Speaker, my intervention is by way of clarification. The Hon. Member suggested that the representations by our Party were taken out of context when referring to the statement by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) then known simply as the Hon. Member for Etobicoke Centre. The press release is dated August 27, 1984, and says nothing about divesting. The press release says:

We will set up a separate crown corporation for Canadair and de Havilland with a mandate for development of the aerospace industry and not merely financial control. This organization will be responsible for developing in conjunction with the Aerospace strategy so that Canadair and de Havilland will become commercially viable and will continue to be so into the next century.

That was a commitment made by the present Minister of Finance on August 27, 1984.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Hon. Member for Sarnia—Lambton (Mr. James) with a short answer, please.

Mr. James: Madam Speaker, I will attempt to be brief but it was kind of a long question or statement or whatever it was. In the committee hearing of January 16, 1986—

Mr. Hovdebo: After the election.

Mr. James: —the then Minister said this:

The reference you have there, Mr. Cassidy, is something that I think with all due respect you would have to admit has been taken out of context. It was made in connection with a much bigger, if you like, comment on the part of Mr. Wilson.

He then went on to say:

No, I am saying, Mr. Cassidy, you have taken something out of context and I think you will find that it was in the context—I do not want to put words into Mr. Wilson's mouth—where he was saying a more suitable way to run de Havilland and Canadair, if they are to continue in government ownership, would be under one entity, as opposed to two separate entities.

Adjournment Motion

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[Translation]

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 66, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: the Hon. Member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon (Mr. Epp)—Co-operatives—Task force report—Government reponse. (b) Encouragement for co-operatives; the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway)—Insurance—Liability insurance—Request reinsurance market be organized; the Hon. Member for Prince Albert (Mr. Hovdebo)—Agriculture—Assistance for grain producers. (b) Provision of funds.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANADAIR LIMITED DIVESTITURE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mrs. McDougall that Bill C-25, an Act to authorize the divestiture of Canadair Limited and to provide for other matters in connection therewith, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Madam Speaker, it seems that each time Christmas arrives the Conservative Government wants to give evidence of its munificence to the corporate sector. Last year there was the tremendous giveaway of de Havilland. This year, in what is almost a repeat performance in celebration of the start of the Christmas season, we have before us this tremendous gift package for our approval. As much as I am in favour of Christmas, there are some more deserving candidates than Bombardier and Boeing Corporation. In looking at those two instances of what is frankly a gross sell-out of assets belonging to the people of Canada, it seems to me completely different arguments are being used to justify the two sales.

I would like to do something that I have yet to see done in this House by paying a tribute to Canadair, its management and workers. They succeeded in what was a very difficult situation. General Dynamics had sold them out. They faced a very difficult period of time in developing a new and important product, the Challenger, at great cost. They succeeded in carrying that plane through to successful development. That is a great example of the research and development we have to support, albeit at a lesser cost in the future.

Besides the Challenger, which is typically associated with Canadair, there is a tremendous amount of work, much of it highly sophisticated and very successful, which has taken place on pilotless reconnaissance planes. So much so that throughout the Western Alliance, Canadair is recognized as one of the leading producers of pilotless drones. In fact, shortly before the company was sold, it signed with the Federal Republic of Germany and with France a Memorandum of Understanding to proceed jointly with the pre-production phase of the Canadair CL-289 pilotless airborne reconnaissance system. This is just one example of the tremendous success which the engineers, technicians and working people at Canadair have succeeded in achieving over the difficult past 11 years.

• (1630)

I would now like to deal with the fundamental inconsistency in the argument made initially with respect to de Havilland and now with respect to Canadair. I am sure we all recall the compelling argument put forward with extreme force by the previous Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion with regard to de Havilland. The argument was that first we had to have world-wide connections to sell the aerospace products which we were producing in this country. Second, we had to have world-wide input of technology on which we could call in order to be successful in a very difficult high technology industry. The Government of Canada decided that the Boeing Corporation, with its world-wide marketing network and tremendous access to technology, was the best hope for de Havilland. In fact, the previous speaker referred to this at some length and made very much of it.

We now have a quite similar company, Canadair. The first suggestion being made is that there be no company brought in which has a world-wide network of aerospace marketing capacity. Second, there is no suggestion made that we must have technology available to the engineers and technicians at Canadair because they certainly will not get the world-wide capacity to market or the tremendous technological in-put from Bombardier.

I will read you an assessment of Bombardier, not from a trade union source, but from the Canadian Aerospace Corporation. It assesses Bombardier in the following terms:

> The management culture (at Bombardier) is also oriented towards the licensed manufacture of ground transport . . . . The capital intensive demands of aerospace research and development are simply not conducive to the heavy manufacturing culture at Bombardier. Bombardier then, has a tremendous political advantage over the other competing bidders, however they have not yet assembled the aerospace partners or capital required to make Canadair viable in the long term.

That is absolutely diametrically opposed to the argument made in the case of de Havilland. The Government cannot use one piece of logic to deal with one corporation and apply completely contradictory logic to another corporation if it expects the Canadian people to take it seriously.

The Conservative Member who spoke last used a phrase which indicated that the Government was not just looking to increase government coffers. I hope I have that quotation correct. Such a phrase in any speech is a sure tip-off that the taxpayers of the country are somehow getting squeezed, somehow getting skewered, somehow being pushed to pay a cost which should be paid by a private company. When members of the Government say that they are not interested in getting a fair return or in increasing government coffers, that is the best indication that there is embarrassment on the government side about the low price achieved for the sale of this public asset.

I would like to illustrate for back-benchers just exactly what an appalling price they achieved for this asset. This asset did not belong to anyone other than the people of Canada. The poor price received represents a very serious cost to the taxpayers. The book value of this enterprise is undoubtedly much greater now, but at the time of the sale it was $224 million. Its estimated technology value was $300 million to $400 million.

Mr. Blenkarn: To whom?

Mr. Langdon: One of the Hon. Members asked "to whom?" I think the case of de Havilland indicates that that was a tremendous giveaway. Now that the giveaway has taken place, de Havilland is making tremendous amounts of money. Precisely the same thing will happen in this case. I remind Members and people across the country that this company is not a basket case. Last year it made profits. According to the Government's own CDIC, the company has prospects this year of making profits close to $30 million. Yet the total price in cash is $120 million. We get a dividend of $3 million and payment for an airport of $6 million. I am not quoting from some kind of left wing magazine, but from the Government's own documents. It states that the deferred cash payments at present value for the royalties are worth $20 million. The contingent payments for possibilities such as the CF-18 royalty amounted to between $8 million and $12 million. At the very most, it is a price which was well under the $150 million for a company which cost the taxpayers of this country over $2 billion to develop and now has a book value of at least $224 million. All of this is before the awarding of the CF-18 contract which of course makes the company tremendously more valuable.

• (1640)

Personally, I cannot believe that one would put a clause in the documents which we received that permitted payment of royalties in the event of the CF-18 contract being awarded while at the same time having absolutely no thought that the CF-18 contract would be awarded. If there was enough uncertainty to put it into the documents in the first place, then the sale should have been postponed until it was possible for the company to be sold as an entity not just with the Challenger, not just with the pilotless reconnaisance planes, but also with this tremendously lucrative CF-18 contract.

I believe the people of Canada have been hosed on this deal. They have certainly given a Christmas gift to Bombardier, a company which I respect, but one that frankly does not have the required technology and has absolutely no background with respect to the marketing of aviation products. It is simply illogical to marry this company and Canadair. It surely makes far more sense to follow the advice of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) whereby we would have been able to combine de Havilland and Canadair and create the base in this country on which to have a high-tech, effective, world class aviation company that would be able to market its products world-wide. The question of whether the company was in the public sector, private sector or a melange of the two was far less important than the question of getting the right deal for Canadian taxpayers, and far less important than getting a potential enterprise in this country that would give us a role in aerospace in the future.

While the question of price is absolutely crucial, there are two further points we must consider. First, I suggest to Members of Parliament from Montreal in particular that there is no serious guarantee of jobs in this agreement. Second, and perhaps even worse, there is no guarantee that this company will not be sold by Bombardier. That irresponsibility, combined with the price for irresponsibility, makes this perhaps an even greater Christmas gift than the de Havilland gift that was given last year.

[Translation]

Mr. Gérin: By way of a comment, Madam Speaker, I should like to suggest to the Hon. Member who has just spoken that he should have his speech printed and distributed in the Eastern Townships, in Quebec, where I am sure people would be delighted to read it and continue to do what they have done repeatedly over the past few elections, namely, to reject the New Democratic Party outright, because it is essentially a party which is against workers, against Quebec. What my hon. friend has just done is extremely unfortunate. He has just spoken against a region which needed and still needs this investment.

I just cannot understand his attitude. On the one hand, there are a number of members of this party, especially the other one from Ottawa who is sitting over there—who visit the province of Quebec and say: This is fine and dandy: we are going to do marvels in Quebec.

On the other hand, when they are called upon to support a Bill which would help a Quebec firm, they will not. You wonder what they would do if they were in power. What would Quebec get? What would you give to Quebecers? You speak on both sides of your mouth. I suggest this is not right. You should be honest with yourselves. But if you just cannot be honest, I will. I will see to it that your speech is published everywhere in Quebec and that the people keep it in mind until the next election. This way, you will be rejected in Quebec just as you have always been.

Mr. Cassidy: Madam Speaker, since I have just been quoted by the Hon. Member, I will offer my friend the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon)—

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Order. I think it would be right if the House will allow me to permit the Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon) to answer the question.

[Translation]

Mr. Langdon: Madam Speaker, it is a fine comment the Hon. Member has just made but it is also beside the point. He listened to what I had to say, but he forgot the most important things. For instance, what I suggested was that we should make sure that Canadians from coast to coast get a fair price for that corporation. It is a corporation in which all Canadians, those from my riding, from Quebec and from Western Canada have invested a lot of money; and now we have discovered that the Government has decided to give this corporation away as a Christmas gift. I, for one, feel that this is not something Canadians generally and Quebecers in particular want.

My second remark is that our country must have an aerospace industry which can sell its production everywhere in the world. We must have an aerospace corporation with the necessary technology to do that. There are two possibilities. We could give away a Christmas gift. That is a possibility. But the other possibility would be to set up a corporation made up of de Havilland and Canadair which could be a leader with all these technology advances which are so important in the aerospace industry today. We feel that is the most important thing. Personally, I think it would create more jobs. If the Hon. Member thinks—

• (1650)

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I think the Hon. Member knows that other Members have risen to ask questions. He may want to answer some of those. The Hon. Member for Edmonton—Strathcona (Mr. Kilgour).

Mr. Kilgour: Madam Speaker, will the Hon. Member tell us which of the 434 federal Crown corporations, if any, his Party would consider privatizing if his Party were ever to come into office?

Mr. Langdon: Madam Speaker, we would not take an ideological position on this question, unlike the position of the Government.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Langdon: The Government has come into power with a single-minded pursuit of selling companies just for the sake of selling them. When we come to power, and I hope it will be soon, it will be with the purpose of getting the economy back on the rails again—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Langdon: —creating regional fairness and establishing an industrial base right across the country. To achieve that end Crown corporations can help. We might find that some would not help—

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Which ones?

Mr. Langdon: —and we would be quite pleased to sell them. However, that would not be our preoccupation. Our preoccupation would be to build the economy, which should be the preoccupation of any Member of this House.

Mr. Lewis: Madam Speaker, I have just a short question which relates directly to building our national economy. A debate has been raised in our caucus with respect to whether or not the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon) is driven to work in a Honda, which is a foreign-made automobile, in an effort to avoid embarrassment to his colleague, the Hon. Member for Windsor—Walkerville (Mr. McCurdy), who drives to work in a Mazda RX-7. Both cars are built outside the country. Can the Hon. Member tell us how he is furthering our national economy by taking such actions?

Mr. Kilgour: You're blushing, Steve!

Mr. Langdon: Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member has sunk very low, I must say, to ask this type of question.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Langdon: That is not my car. It is not a car in which I have any share. It happens to belong to someone who happens to drive me to work.

If Hon. Members would like to see the cars which I do own, I will point them to a 1976 Comet and a 1983 Mustang.

Mr. Cassidy: What about Jepson's car? How many Tories drive foreign cars? Let us conduct a census.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Order, please.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Are you a two-car Member of Parliament?

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Order, please.

Mr. Cassidy: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. My Ford Mercury is parked in the parking lot. Madam Speaker, will you direct the Whips of all three Parties, and particularly the Whip of the government Party, to provide for the House, on the record, the results of a census to be taken with respect to all foreign cars driven by Conservatives to and from the House of Commons?

Mr. Fennell: That's a good idea.

Mr. Thacker: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The point is that the New Democratic Party does not appear to be sanctimoniously representing workers by driving foreign cars.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Order, please. Members should know that these are not points of order, nor are they interventions on debate.

Mr. Cassidy: On a question or comment, Madam Speaker.

Mr. Langdon: Madam Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege—

[Translation]

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Madam Speaker—

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I will hear the Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques (Mr. Guilbault) first. I will then hear the question of privilege of the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon). The Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques has the floor.

[Translation]

Mr. Guilbault (Saint-Jacques): Madam Speaker, my point of order is more serious. The Hon. Member for Argenteuil—Papineau (Mrs. Bourgault), who should be the next to speak, is ready to rise. However, since there are only about two minutes left before 5 o'clock, could we have the consent of the House to call it 5 o'clock so that her speech will not be interrupted and she will not have to speak two minutes now and go on later?

I think that all Hon. Members would agree to that.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I must hear the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor first. I will then come back to the point of order raised by the Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques.

Mr. Langdon: Madam Speaker, if I am not mistaken, questions of privilege are to take precedence over points of order—

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Chair had already recognized the Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques. The Chair has recognized and is now hearing the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor. If he has a question of privilege, then I will gladly listen to it.

Mr. Langdon: Madam Speaker, it seems to me that the last intervention has raised a level of personal attack which is best left outside the House. It seems to me that if we are to continue to follow this course then the privilege of Members of this House will be very badly abused in the future.

Mr. Cassidy: Hear, hear!

Mr. Langdon: If that is to be the case, then, first, I want to express my regrets. Second, I wish to appeal to the Hon. Member to withdraw the comments which he has made.

• (1700)

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I will tell the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon) that the Chair does not think that this is a question of privilege. Nevertheless, I completely agree with the Hon. Member that this was not the type of language that should be used in the House, and it did not relate at all to the Bill that was being debated. At times, Hon. Members want to show that they have a sense of humour and they want to have fun. Unfortunately, they sometimes hurt other people's feelings. I am sure that this is not what was meant.

It being 5 p.m., the House will now proceed to the consideration of Private Members' Business as listed on today's Order Paper.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS--MOTIONS

[English]

EQUALITY RIGHTS

PROHIBITION OF DISCRIMINATION ON THE BASIS OF SEXUAL ORIENTATION

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, the Government should implement the recommendations of the sub-committee on Equality Rights of the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs of the First Session of the Thirty-third Parliament:

(1) That the Canadian Human Rights Act be amended to add sexual orientation as a prohibited ground of discrimination to the other grounds, which are race, national or ethnic origin, colour, religion, age, sex, marital status, family status, disability, and conviction for an offence for which a pardon has been granted.

(2) That the Canadian Armed Forces and the RCMP bring their employment practices into conformity with the Canadian Human Rights Act as amended to prohibit discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation.

(3) That the federal government security clearance guidelines covering employees and contractors not discriminate on the basis of sexual orientation.

(4) That the Criminal Code be amended to ensure that the minimum age or ages at which private consensual sexual activity is lawful be made uniform without distinction based on sexual orientation.

He said: Madam Speaker, on October 25, 1985, the special committee of the House on Equality Rights unanimously recommended to the Government that change to prohibit discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation in Canada was long overdue.

[Translation]

The Committee had this to say: "We were shocked by a number of the experiences of unfair treatment related to us by homosexuals in different parts of the country. We heard about the harassment of and violence committed against homosexuals. We were told in graphic detail about physical abuse and psychological oppression suffered by homosexuals. In several cities, private social clubs serving a homosexual clientele were damaged and the members harassed. Hate propaganda directed at homosexuals has been found in some parts of Canada. We were told of the severe employment and housing problems suffered by homosexuals." Indeed, many of the individuals who appeared before us expressed the fear that their participation would jeopardize their jobs.

Madam Speaker, the social and legal affairs task force of the United Church of Canada said this in its presentation to the Committee: "Homosexual persons should not be excluded from the protection granted to all other citizens because the Government has neglected or omitted to extend the legislation which would provide such protection. Banning a group of citizens from society is a serious precedent. In a democracy, it is just as dangerous to let the public decide whether to include or exclude from recognition of their human rights any distinct group, whatever the time in history."

Madam Speaker, I wish to point out that the recommendations of the Committee were unanimous, which means that the five Conservative members, the Liberal member and myself, who had the honour of representing the New Democratic Party, shared unanimous views about these recommendations.

[English]

The Government responded to the unanimous recommendations made by the committee on March of this year. In its response, the Government took a courageous and forward-looking approach. It said:

The Government believes that one's sexual orientation is irrelevant to whether one can perform a job or use a service or facility. The Department of Jutice is of the view that the courts will find that sexual orientation is encompassed by the guarantees in section 15 of the Charter. The Government will take whatever measures are necessary to ensure that sexual orientation is a prohibited ground of discrimination in relation to all areas of federal jurisdiction.

The motion which is before the House today calls upon the Government to make that commitment a reality. It calls upon the Government to amend the Canadian Human Rights Act to include sexual orientation as a prohibited ground of discrimination.

I emphasize that this motion does not seek special rights for any group in society. We are not talking about special rights, we are talking about equal rights. There are those who say that these changes are not necessary in our society. I would like to use the brief time I have to mention a couple of examples of why indeed it is necessary.

I received a letter from the parents of a young woman who live in Priddis, Alberta. That letter reads in part:

Our 24 year old daughter is gay. She is a person of extremely high morals, a beautiful Christian woman—a person who cares greatly about her fellow man. She is currently working in a home for the handicapped . . . but will be returning home in two months to resume studies at the University of Victoria . . . All we are asking of our government is the dignity of including homosexuals under basic human rights protection.

In a further letter submitted to me, these parents said:

Our daughter has been brought up as a moral and responsible Christian woman. The omission in our laws of a protective category for sexual orientation seems to leave her and any other homosexual person in Canada no alternative but to lie about their orientation, or to tell the truth and face the loss of jobs and many other psychological stresses. As parents we see this situation as a grave injustice. We also see the exclusion of sexual orientation as a protected area as a condoning of the present discriminatory attitudes and practices.

That is an important point. It is not only changes in laws which are essential in society but it is changes as well in the attitudes and values which lead to discrimination and intolerance.

In Toronto recently, a young, deeply respected school librarian was brutally murdered by five teenagers in a park. A psychiatrist who testified at the trial of these teenagers stated that one of the factors that led to that violence was the subtle social permission to victimize homosexuals. This contributed to these people acting like a gang of predators the night the young man was murdered.

Similar social pressures are mounting in some quarters against persons with AIDS. It is important that we as a society and we as a Parliament say clearly that equality must be a reality for all and not just for some.

The Special Committee on Equality Rights heard from an 18-year veteran of the RCMP who told us that he did not have the courage to appear openly before the committee but he wanted the committee to recognize the impact of the present laws which held that a man of distinction who had served his country for many years could lose his job solely on the basis of his sexual orientation. This weekend, I met with a member of the Canadian Armed Forces who told me that he is deeply concerned that the Armed Forces will not in fact move forward to implement the recommendations of the Government and that it will use the excuse of operational effectiveness to deny equality to members of the Canadian Armed Forces. The Armed Forces itself estimates that there are 4 per cent of the members of the forces who are gay or lesbian. How can we tolerate the kind of pain and oppression to which they are being subjected as a result of the current policies? The impact in very real and personal terms of this denial of equality is a stark reality for too many Canadians.

• (1710)

I have received a letter from a young man who wanted to join the Armed Forces. He has pointed out the discrimination to which he was subjected. The letter in part states:

To all those people who oppose Bill C-225 this is who you are killing, not child molesters or prostitutes, but some of our nation's brightest, talented youth. How many more lives? What a shame, what a tragic loss. We are all responsible for their fear and despair.

Being condemned for something I have no choice in is just as evil as discrimination of the basis of colour.

I underline that point as well, Madam Speaker. We are not dealing here with a matter of choice. Some say that these people choose their orientation, therefore, they must not be protected under the Canadian Human Rights Act. The evidence shows clearly and beyond a shadow of doubt that that is not in fact the case at all.

Because my time is limited, and because I know that other Members wish to participate in this debate, I am going to close by calling upon Members to recognize the fundamental importance of equality for all in our society, including equality for gays and lesbians.

I wish to close with some lyrics from a very beautiful song by a song writer and poet named Ferron:

We are the children in the rafters,
We are the babies in the park;
We are the lovers at the movies,
We are candles in the dark.
We are changes in the weather,
We are snowflakes in July;
We are women grown together,
We are men who easily cry.
We are words not quickly spoken,
We are the deeper side of try;
We are dreamers in the making,
We are not afraid of why.

The time has come for equality for all.

[Translation]

Mr. Charles Hamelin (Charlevoix): Madam Speaker, in rising to speak to Bill C-212, I am breaching a taboo subject. The word taboo was brought back from Polynesia by Captain Cook in 1777—

An Hon. Member: It was Captain Bonhomme!

Mr. Hamelin: And the word taboo meant sacred, forbidden, and so forth. At this point I would like to quote an old friend of mine—it seems he was a homosexual—whose name was Seneca. He always said: "We all run away from ourselves".

I think there are some taboo subjects, Madam Speaker, which must be addressed directly today.

The purpose of today's Bill, which refers to sexual orientation, is to amend Section 2 of the Canadian Human Rights Act to include sexual orientation, although it already refers to equal opportunity without discrimination on the basis of race, national ethnic origin, colour, religion, age, sex, and so forth. And now they want us to add sexual orientation.

Madam Speaker, like most of the Members of this party, I believe that in Canada we must show the greatest possible tolerance and respect for differing views, but I would qualify this by saying positive views. In our society, we have passed so many laws that it has become a veritable disease. Our laws are merely a crutch for the freedom of mankind. Normally, we would not need laws. All the laws adopted by Parliament in the past, the laws we are adopting today and those we will adopt tomorrow, have been, are and probably will be, so many crutches to support the expression of our human freedom. We have a country where, unfortunately, although perhaps to a lesser degree than in other countries, the rights of the aggressor have overpowered the rights of the victim, where protecting the criminal has become more important than protecting the victim, where millions of dollars are being spent on criminals and nothing on their victims, because as far as justice is concerned, for instance, it is said that pain cannot be be quantified, and where allowing rapists their rights means that the victim is publicly humiliated and made to suffer in our courts. And today, we have another piece of legislation, an amendment which this time concerns sexual orientation. Now I think we have to speak out, in spite of our great respect for positive differences. Personally, I am afraid our society is becoming ultra-permissive. Sure, let sodomites, pederasts and proponents of bestiality become the custodians of our children! Why not? We are modern. We aren't afraid of taboos. Go right ahead! Let any idiot indulging in his unbridled sexuality get into the police force—we saw that in Quebec—and have fun with our children. Why not? It's a free country. We are a permissive society. Let's go! Let's be cool!

Madam Speaker, I want to say in the House today that Bill C-212, despite its virtuous appearances and good intentions, will not do. And it will not do because as it says in the text: — compatible with their duties and commitments to society. I do not believe that sexual preference has anything to do with rights and duties, at least as this would imply.

If we were to agree to this Bill tomorrow, any sexual pervert could use the provisions of the Act to defend the way he is and what he has already done or could do in the future in our society. I should say that I have a lot of respect for lesbians and homosexuals. I respect them. I have friends among them. I respect them as individuals and respect their situation, which can be difficult, but I am not ready, and I believe that a lot of people share my views, to take action which would give us a piece of legislation which could lead to the worst of abuses.

We also hold myths such as that of the honourable thief. Some may smile, but it is rare in society to find thieves who are also honourable. It is quite rare. It is very difficult to find a Robin Hood who takes from the rich and gives to the poor in the mob. Such ideas might sound wonderful, and the same is true about the notion, which sounds theoritically very easy to defend, that you cannot stop someone from working because of his sexual preference. What does this mean finally? What does this involve legally as far as our rights are concerned? It involves many things. I think that we should stop and no longer accept just about anything on the excuse that society is changing. I do not believe that we should do so now. Personally, I do not think that we should ever do so, or at least not now.

We should therefore show the greatest tolerance and respect for our differences, but by this I mean the positive differences which make Canada what it is because we, the Conservatives, want to protect what are our most precious assets. We want to be progressive, of course, but without destroying everything that was done before, and forgetting our traditional values. This is what it means to be a Progressive Conservative.

To conserve means to improve and to keep what we have best and to do so with tolerance, with the respect of our differences, but not with unbridled laxity, which only creates chaos and makes it difficult to teach our basic values.

Madam Speaker, at the risk of being taken for a dinosaur, I am going to vote against this Bill and I hope that no one will support it.

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Madam Speaker, I have just arrived, and I was somewhat surprised at the high pitch of the remarks made by the Hon. Member who has just spoken to this motion which is rather significant from a standpoint of equality.

Whenever we are debating human rights and equality issues, I fail to understand why we always drift towards the somewhat homophobic argument that we are seeking to extend rights to certain people like pederasts, for example, or others who profess their sexual deviations. Indeed, although I did appreciate the question pertaining to research on equality, it was the past Minister of Justice himself who publicly stated that no discriminatory provision related to sex ought to be included in our legislation, including sexual orientation. Still according to the former Minister of Justice, if we can believe him, all Canadians, both men and women, have the right to work, the right to gain access to public services, the right to all kinds of things regardless of their sexual preferences and orientations.

So the motion introduced today is just another way of setting the record straight once and for all with respect to the whole issue of sexual orientation, because the former Minister of Justice claimed that people whose sexual orientation differs from that of the majority are protected under existing laws, including the Charter of Rights and Freedoms which does cover sexual matters.

To anyone who takes time to look into legal precedents it becomes quite obvious that under the existing legislation an employee can be dismissed on grounds of sexual orientation alone, even though such sexual orientation may not in any way prevent the employee from satisfactorily performing his or her duties.

• (1720)

[English]

I am always amazed when this question comes up—and I have received telegrams about the Bill which is in the Ontario Legislature at the moment—that the argument against providing equality to each and every Canadian man and woman, regardless of sexual orientation, is countered by those who talk in a very homophobic fashion about things like pederasty and other sexual deviations which are not exclusive to anyone of a homosexual orientation.

It seems to me that what we are discussing here is a follow-up to statements which were made by the former Minister of Justice. In preparing his response to the equality report, the past Minister of Justice told the House of Commons and the people of Canada that in today's day and age no Canadian, regardless of sex and sexual orientation, should be fired from his or her job or denied access to public services simply because of sexual orientation. What is being proposed in this Private Member's Bill is an attempt to ensure by further amendments to the Canadian Human Rights Act that sexual orientation, most specifically, be a prohibited ground of discrimination.

Any reasonable Canadian man or woman recognizes that we are not talking about according special rights to any group of persons or person. We are not talking about special status. We as Canadians are talking about a law which provides equally for all persons to have access to earning a decent living, to have a job, and to live in a community in an apartment or house of their choice, regardless of whether or not they happen to be homosexual or heterosexual. Surely there is no Canadian in Canada, in 1986, who believes that people should be fired from their jobs simply because they happen to be homosexual. I do not think anyone believes that people should be barred from a job simply because they happen to be homosexual.

We must recognize, notwithstanding the statements and commitments of the former Minister of Justice in the House vis-à-vis implementation of the Charter of Rights and Freedoms, that the cold reality in 1986 is that if persons are homosexual they can be legally fired from their jobs without recourse. We have seen the argument taken all the way to the Supreme Court of Canada. In fact, a former employee of the Ontario Racing Commission was fired from a job after many long years of service. He had not been selling sexual favours on the job and had not been in any way utilizing his own sexual orientation. Someone found out that he was a gay man, and he was fired from his job. He pursued the route suggested by the former Minister of Justice, that is the common law route, to redress the injustice. The court said that the current law—the Ontario Human Rights Code in that case and specifically the Canadian Human Rights Act in other cases—did not protect homosexuals from being fired because they were not specified in the legislation.

The Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn) told the House that every Canadian should have the right to a job and to equal opportunities. If we are to believe him, then surely the proposal of the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) is simply an attempt to clarify further in legislation what the Minister of Justice claimed de facto was the law.

Sometimes I think politicians tend to live in the Dark Ages vis-à-vis their constituents. I remember struggling with this question when I was a member of the Opposition in the Ontario Legislature back in 1981. We were involved with drafting a new Ontario Human Rights Code. As labour critic, I had to come to grips with whether I would move an amendment to include sexual orientation as a prohibited ground of discrimination. I discussed it with many people. It was called Bill 7 at the time. It was the first time I had carried a Bill through the Legislature. Frankly I was frightened. I wondered what kind of backlash there would be in my community if I introduced such a piece of legislation. After talking with a number of people, I decided I had to move a motion which was in accord with my conscience, and I did.

I should like to refer to what happened. There was no backlash in my riding of Hamilton East, a riding of steelworkers, the most industrial riding in Canada. When they realized that I was not talking about special rights or special status, they believed in and supported it. I was talking about affording protection to homosexuals, or to heterosexuals for that matter, who were being discriminated against simply on the basis of sexual orientation when it had no relationship to or did not interfere with their ability to do a job.

• (1730)

Why is it that our politicians always seem to be light years behind what the public believes and thinks? The public is not talking about special status for homosexuals. People in Canada are saying, if you can do a job you should have the right to do the job regardless of sexual orientation. Our former Prime Minister once said that the state has no place in the bedrooms of the nation. I think the current Government through the former Minister of Justice basically reinforced that very notion. This Private Member's Motion is simply to clarify the law as the majority of Canadians would support it. I urge all Members to consider it. We are not talking about special status, we are talking about equality for every Canadian across the board. I think it is a supportable Liberal principle.

Mr. Ron Stewart (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Supply and Services): Madam Speaker, I rise very unhappy and very disturbed today mostly because the equality report stemmed from the Progressive Conservative Party. I am very deeply hurt by that fact and hope that Bill C-212 will never see the light of day in this House of Commons.

I cannot be genteel when discussing particularly the amendment in subparagraph (1) in which the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) tries to purport that there would be no special rights for gays. What a joke, Madam Speaker. That is exactly what gays want. Already the paragraph covers sex. This is not an amendment on sexual orientation. This is an amendment on sexual deviation. Homosexual is anti-biological. It is anti-medical, anti-biblical, and I quote: "Go ye forth and multiply". It is anti-family and it is anti-social. It is pro-deviate and it is absolutely disgusting to most Canadians.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Order, please. I would like the Hon. Member and all Hon. Members to be careful and realize that we are not debating Bill C-212 today. We are debating Motion No. 11. I know the subjects are quite similar but I think we should be careful in our debate so that we do remain closer to what Motion No. 11 is about.

Mr. Stewart: Madam Speaker, I just referred to subparagraph (1). I am putting my case forward that it does have special rights. Is the Hon. Member for Burnaby actually talking of his own sexual ideas or does he espouse the complete doctrine of the New Democratic Party, or both? It would be interesting to know.

Sexual orientation, which this is all about, or in my view sexual deviation, is learned. It is a learned response. The toleration of the so-called gay lifestyle by some people in Canada is being advanced in our public schools, through movies and TV. Is that really what we want? Do we really want an amendment such as this to give special rights to that form of lifestyle?

I know first hand only too cruelly of a case in my own riding of a school teacher who took his sexual deviation, his sexual orientation, and foisted it upon many members of his class. In my view, our children must be protected.

The New Democratic Party is calling for the elimination of smoking but it champions homosexual acts by this very amendment. You cannot get around that. It makes about as much sense as taking us out of NATO.

As I mentioned, homosexualism is anti-biological. It is committing biological suicide. It is anti-medical, it is hygienic insanity. It is a crime against humanity whether medical or moral. All of us know what is happening with AIDS, that dread disease, for which there is no cure. How is it spread? AIDS is overwhelmingly a homosexual disease in every western country in which AIDS has been reported. Gays are the first persons to be stricken. In time others become infected. AIDS is thought to have started in the U.S., and U.S. homosexuals account for 73 per cent of all AIDS victims. I could go on and on with the statistics of what we are opening up with this bombshell of so-called human rights. It is human suicide.

Disease is disproportionately experienced by homosexuals. They are 14 times more apt to have had syphilis, three times more apt to have had gonorrhea and eight times more apt to have had hepatitis. Think of all the needles of the drug users and what is happening with this scourge of AIDS. Homosexuals are five times more apt to have had scabies. With lesbians they are 19 times more apt to have had syphilis and 29 times more apt to have had an oral infection. Are these the rights that we as Canadians want? Does this go by our religious teachings?

There is a group called ISIS operated by members of the medical, business, theological and legal professions. It is chaired by Paul Cameron, Ph.D. I wish I had the time to read this paper in full because it is very enlightening. It is something that every person in the world should read. It goes on about the abnormality of homosexualism and lesbianism. If we are to have human rights, we must have human protection. Man, if he were a rational animal, would not need laws and I would not need to be standing on my feet today. Unfortunately, we are not. Homosexualism is a sickness that should not be in our society. Let me read a bit of the ISIS position paper until my time runs out:

> Viable societies are organized to sustain themselves by producing and educating succeeding generations. Each child is expected to repay society for all he has inherited by creating and nurturing a new generation.

Let me emphasize "a new generation". How does that happen in the homosexual community?

> Western society, workers generally receive sufficient income to both sustain themselves and raise a family. Parents partially satisfy their debt by teaching their children that soon it will be their turn to repay.
>
> Homosexuals renounce their social obligation and slavishly devote themselves to self-aggrandizement. They rob society to pleasure themselves. Money remaining after their basic requirements are met is regarded as additional opportunity for personal pleasure rather than a loan to be put into the service of societal betterment. Getting more by doing less, homosexuals soon come to regard special treatment as their inherent right.

That is what the paragraph in the motion says. It is special treatment by mentioning homosexuals and not the word sex:

Those who are rewarded for leeching soon come to regard society with contempt, deserving destruction.

Homosexuals often spend their "extra" disposable income roaming the world in search of sexual adventure.

I might add that according to statistics it is estimated that a homosexual has from 20 to 106 partners per year. Think of that in terms of AIDS alone, Madam Speaker:

Because of their promiscuity and incredible unsanitary sexual practices—

I have reams and reams of documented medical evidence here of how terrible that is:

—pathogens once localized in a given geographic region are rapidly being spread throughout the world. AIDS is a first fruit of this process and many more plagues stemming from homosexual behaviour are bound to occur. Homosexuals have already compromised the nation's blood supply and are straining the resources of the medical community.

Mr. Robinson: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Speaker on another occasion when language used was deemed to be deeply offensive to many Members of this House called the Member in question to order and suggested that his language might indeed give rise to a situation of disorder. I suggest that this kind of pathological homophobic attack which is being made by the Member falls into precisely the same category of language, particularly when it is his own Government, his own colleagues, the Minister of Transport (Mr. Crosbie) and the former Minister of Justice whom he is accusing of being anti-biblical because they have adopted the principles included in this motion. I would ask that you, Madam Speaker, recognize that the language is out of order.

[Translation]

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Hon. Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada (Mr. Gérin) rises on a point of order.

Mr. Gérin: Madam Speaker, it is because we are in a situation where we have to use such expressions which, under other circumstances, might not be appropriate. But because of the very nature of the motion moved by the Hon. Member, we have to use these terms.

I suggest it was the choice of the Hon. Member who moved this motion to force the House to use these terms which my hon. friend has just used.

Under the circumstances, I suggest we should allow the Hon. Member to continue.

• (1740)

[English]

Mr. St. Germain: Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member was merely pointing out the statistical facts produced by the medical profession and other organizations. It was no more than that. It was not a question of attacking any group or segment of society. He was merely laying the facts on the table as seen by certain people in the medical profession.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): At this point the Chair thinks this is really a point of debate. It is not a matter of being offensive and it does not relate at all to a ruling given by Mr. Speaker a short while ago. I ask the Hon. Member to conclude within a minute, please.

Mr. Stewart: Madam Speaker, if I were to read some of the statistics and some of the homosexual acts recorded here, perhaps the Hon. Member opposite would have something to complain about.

Homosexual activity, combined with modern modes of transportation, ensures that the world's medical problems become both our risk and our financial burden. It goes on to talk about drug addicts, but I shall conclude by saying that the last thing we as Canadians need is to listen to moralizing by someone who does not believe or march in step with most of the people whom I believe and march in step with. I can remember when "gay" meant "happy". That is the last thing it means today. If we allow something like this to happen in Canada, God help us in the future.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Madam Speaker, I want to speak briefly in support of the motion put forward by my colleague, the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson). Because it is reflected in-party policy it also has the support of the NDP. Our practice in conventions is to pass policy which then becomes the policy of the Party rather than pass motions which are advisory to the Leader of the Party.

I have to say that if some Members wished to oppose this resolution and did so in a measured way, I might have accepted that. However, I am appalled by the language and approach taken by the Hon. Member for Simcoe South (Mr. Stewart) and the Hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Hamelin) in their interventions. I remind Hon. Members that this proposal was considered at great length by the Subcommittee on Equality Rights of the Standing Committee on Justice and Solicitor General. It is now encompassed in a proposal accepted by the Government.

Both the Canadian and the American Psychiatric Associations, whose members have a great deal of knowledge of psychiatric disorders, have for more than a decade taken the view that homosexuality is not a disease. It is an orientation taken by a significant proportion of our population, both male and female. By all accounts it is not chosen, it happens. People grow up with it and it affects both men and women. There are homosexuals in the Government of Canada, the Armed Forces, our police forces and the RCMP. They work in the Department of External Affairs. They are undoubtedly Members of Parliament. Homosexuals are to be found among teachers, the clergy, doctors, lawyers, factory and shop workers, indeed among most walks of life in our society. That does not create a problem except to the extent that people become victimized because of their sexual orientation or because of fear of what would happen if they are found out. As a result they stay in the closet. That means a tremendous cost in personal happiness and tragic consequences at times given what happens to some people if their sexual orientation becomes a matter of public record.

I have a friend who is mildly homosexual. He is also happily married with one or two children. He was fired from his job as a teacher because the police decided to crack down. They were surveying a particular washroom in a city in Ontario and he was one of the people charged with a very minor offence. However, it was enough to have him fired from his job and virtually destroy his personal life over a substantial number of years.

If people are concerned about the well-being of young people in our schools and the danger of their being accosted by teachers, then let us talk about the fact that this occurs from time to time with male teachers who molest or interfere with young female students. It is just as indefensible when it is done by a heterosexual teacher as when it is done by a homosexual teacher. In either case, everyone agrees it is not acceptable behaviour. However, what we are talking about here is people who have a job or who wish to rent an apartment or do business with a particular company. They should not be prevented from doing so because they happen to be homosexual. That is what the proposed amendment in this resolution would do. Nothing more. It would mean that homosexuals would no longer have to fear their career can be brought to an end because of discrimination not for what they do but because they may have that orientation.

The present situation leads people to lie. If they admit to being homosexual when applying for a job, they can now quite legally be denied a job. If found out after many years of successful and productive work, they can be fired with no regard at all to whether or not they ever did anything improper.

The question we are dealing with here is that of people being victimized solely by reason of their sexual orientation. I can speak from personal experience. Nine and a half years ago I hired a riding assistant. He was the former President of the Gays of Ottawa, a homosexual organization active in this city for some 20 years. He was an activist, therefore, in the gay community. I have to confess I had a certain trepidation about that. However, he was the best applicant for the job. Recently he moved upwards in his career and took another job. I pay tribute to him for being one of the finest riding assistants any provincial Member of Parliament has had. I would also point out that in all of those years, in a riding with a substantial Catholic, Italian, French and West Indian population, groups who might share some of the concerns expressed here, that concern has not been expressed. At most, perhaps once in those nine or ten years. There was no problem at all except in the minds of certain Members of Parliament. I call on those Members of Parliament to take heed of their Government and the subcommittee.

What is being asked is that we simply acknowledge the fact that whether or not one approves of other people being homosexual, other people are homosexuals. They did not make the choice but it has happened to them. They should not suffer discrimination in their economic or social lives because of their sexual orientation. That is all that is being proposed here and I call on Hon. Members to allow this matter to come to a vote before six o'clock.

[Translation]

Mr. Darryl L. Gray (Bonaventure—Îles-de-la-Madeleine): Like some of my hon. friends who have spoken tonight, Madam Speaker, I should like to say a few words about Bill C-212 or even amendment No. 11. I should like first of all to indicate that I am married and the father of four children. For us, and I mean our society, our churches, what really matters is our children and those who will come after us. I suggest this is something the House should always take into account when dealing with any legislation.

With all due respect for the Hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Hamelin) and the Hon. Member for Simcoe South (Mr. Stewart), I should like to add something. If the House is going to adopt legislation to allow exceptions in our society, where is it going to stop?

• (1750)

[English]

When debating an issue such as the one before us this evening we must look at it very clearly. A few moments ago the Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) said that the state has no business in the bedrooms of the country. I accept that premise. However, we are not talking about being in the bedrooms of the country. We are talking about being in the RCMP and the Armed Forces. We are talking about people who are saying, "You have to let me in because I am homosexual, because I am a woman and want to sleep with a woman or I am a man and want to sleep with a man". That is not the issue.

Whether we are NDP, Liberal or Progressive Conservative we must respect the laws of our society. If we go along with homosexuality we will become like the African tribe that believed in castration. Within one generation they became extinct. We cannot do that, Madam Speaker. As the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) indicated, the former Minister of Justice said that there is justice for all. We stated that. We are committed to the principle that all Canadians should have an equal opportunity to participate as fully as possible in our society. I agree 100 per cent with that. However, if I want to apply to the RCMP, the Army, the Air Force, or the Navy, I should not be able to say that I must be hired because I am homosexual. We hire people in these forces to protect society, and we must continue to do that.

Mr. Cassidy: No homosexuals need apply.

Mr. Gray (Bonaventure—Îles-de-la-Madeleine): The condition for employment is not whether you are homosexual, Liberal or Conservative.

Mr. Cassidy: Exactly.

Mr. Gray (Bonaventure—Îles-de-la-Madeleine): It is a question of whether you can do the job.

Ms. Copps: That's right.

Mr. Cassidy: That's what the motion says.

Mr. Gray (Bonaventure—Îles-de-la-Madeleine): However, to legislate that homosexuals are entitled to 5 per cent of the employment is a crock of cow dung from the Gaspé. The Canadian population is not looking to its Government to protect a homosexual society because it is going nowhere. We will allow homosexuals in the bedrooms of the nation, but let us never allow them into our Armed Forces or the RCMP. We will work with them so that they can remain silent.

[Translation]

Mr. Marc Ferland (Portneuf): Madam Speaker, I rise tonight on this amendment, and since the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) knows our rules, he knows I will make sure that I kill the motion. What the Hon. Member for Burnaby is asking actually is that the Canadian Human Rights Act be amended to prohibit discrimination based on sexual orientation. However, the Canadian Human Rights Act is undergoing a complete review, the results of which should be known very soon. We are all willing to recognize, I am sure, that the Act offers complete human rights protection in the areas of federal jurisdiction. This issue is among those being looked at in the review process. I feel that we should wait for the results of that review before we consider the steps that this motion would force us to take.

This Government has always been concerned with human rights, and before I resume my comments on the motion, I would like to refer to the commendable role played historically by the Progressive Conservative Party in that area, and this should be pointed out in the present context. Some 25 years ago, when the Hon. John G. Diefenbaker was Prime Minister, the enacting of the Canadian Human Rights Bill was a major step in the history of human rights in Canada, being the first attempt by a Canadian Government to consolidate and guarantee the basic rights of all Canadians. Since then, the Progressive Conservative Party has supported the Canadian Human Rights Act and the Canadian Charter of Freedoms and Liberties, both of which are in line with our tradition of protecting the basic human rights in Canada. However, none of those documents that are so important in this country's history was prepared or enacted overnight. They all had to go through a process of in-depth examination before they could be voted on, so they would offer the most effective and appropriate means of attaining each and every major objective set for Canadians. The same applies to the matter at hand.

The Government already has defined its position in Toward Equality, which is this Government's response to the 85 recommendations made by the Parliamentary Committee on Equality Rights and its report entitled Equality for All. It is stated in Towards Equality that "the Government will take whatever measures are necessary to ensure that sexual orientation is a prohibited ground of discrimination in relation to all areas of federal jurisdiction". That commitment is in perfect harmony with this Government's established policy on equality and social justice. The present Government is firmly resolved to guarantee equality and social justice for all Canadians so that each and everyone will be able to fully realize his or her unique and personal potential.

Madam Speaker, although the present Government has not been in power for very long, it has made remarkable progress in the field of human rights, equality and social justice. The Government of Canada recently adopted amending legislation to the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms which was the culmination of a review of over 1,000 federal Acts made for the purpose of ensuring their conformity with the Charter. More than 50 Acts were amended to make them compatible with the Charter. Under this particular legislation, the Canadian Human Rights Act was amended to improve mechanisms for protecting human rights. There is no doubt that this Government is determined to maintain and improve the effectiveness of the Canadian Human Rights Act and the Commission in order to further minimize and attempt to eliminate discrimination in the areas mentioned in the Act.

Madam Speaker, I wonder whether this is the right time to amend the Canadian Human Rights Act in response to the motion presented today, since the Government is currently examining this question as part of a full review of the Canadian Human Rights Act. Couldn't we wait for the results of this review before determining whether we should add separately any prohibited grounds of discrimination to the Act?

Madam Speaker, the present Government has made a commitment to ensure that sexual orientation constitutes a prohibited ground of discrimination in all areas under federal jurisdiction, and it has reiterated its commitment with respect to equality and social justice. The Government firmly believes in the principle of equal opportunity, and it continues to demonstrate that belief. The merit principle continues to govern access to employment in the federal public service. Thus, sexual orientation usually is not a job criterion.

The present Government has recognized that the application of this principle should be expanded and that sexual orientation has no connection with a person's ability to perform his or her duties or to use services or facilities.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Order, please. I am sorry but I have to interrupt the Hon. Member. The hour allotted to the consideration of Private Members' Business has now expired.

Pursuant to Standing Order 42(1), this item will be dropped from the Order Paper.

• (1800)

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[English]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 66 deemed to have been moved.

CO-OPERATIVES—TASK FORCE REPORT—(A) GOVERNMENT RESPONSE. (B) ENCOURAGEMENT FOR CO-OPERATIVES

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Madam Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to say something more about a question I asked in the House on October 15. I asked, as reported at page 374 of Hansard:

A year ago today in the middle of another Co-operative Development Week I asked the Minister when the Government planned to respond to the report of the National Task Force on Co-operative Development.

Soon after I became the member in our caucus responsible for co-operative development, the week to commemorate such development arrived. I asked the Minister at the time when the Government would be responding to A Co-Operative Development Strategy for Canada which dates from 1984. It was a desire to have the Government respond to that report that led me to ask the question in 1985 and to repeat it on October 15 this year.

A year ago I had an opportunity to debate the matter further in the adjournment debate. While I will not repeat my comments at that time, I want to refer people to them. I noted the existence of A Co-Operative Development Strategy for Canada which dated from May, 1984, and explored four particular areas in which this document laid out potential areas in which Canada could use co-operatives as a means of solving problems and achieving economic and social development.

Those four different areas were worker co-operatives, community health clinics, fisheries co-operatives, and co-operative housing. Not only did I note these four areas in which co-operatives could provide much for Canadian development, I also noted the fact that in several recommendations of the task force report there were recommendations for specific action by the federal Government to support co-operative development.

Let me note those as a basis for pursuing the matter this afternoon. Recommendation No. 30 of the task force states:

In order to simplify and strengthen co-operative relations with Government, the federal government should create a co-operative affairs mechanism within government that could assist co-operatives in dealing with policy areas under federal jurisdiction. The federal government should consider a Minister of State for Co-operatives—with a small supporting secretariat—as a way of accomplishing this objective.

Recommendation No. 32 states specifically:

The Department of Regional and Industrial Expansion and the Department of Employment and Immigration should each ensure that co-operatives are receiving a fair allocation of development funds and other assistance.

Based on those comments of more than a year ago, I asked when the Government would bring down its response to the task force document. I went on to ask whether the Government was considering the establishment of an agency which might do for co-operative development generally what Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation has in fact done to support co-operative housing development over the years. The Minister said that to answer the question would be to prejudge the decisions of Government. Of course, that makes my question all the more urgent. When will the Government provide its response to this strategy? It should be answered not in words here but in the release of a document with respect to a proposal for action by Government, the establishment of new institutions, or whatever may be required. It should be answered in whatever way the Government may think advisable in order to achieve the objectives of the National Task Force on Co-operative Development for Canada.

• (1805)

I know that the Government has been considering this question carefully. It obtained the services of two experts from the co-operative sector, one from western Canada and the other from the Province of Quebec. These are gentlemen who are well familiar with what the co-operative sector has been doing in the various regions of Canada. They are gentlemen who are thoroughly equipped to give Government advice on how to act to support the development of co-operatives.

In respect to recommendation No. 32 I wish to note specifically that the documentation that has been provided for the aspect of the Canada Jobs Strategy issue by the Canadian Employment and Immigration Commission indicates the importance of these questions. There are several options which a Community Futures Committee may select under this particular aspect. I would like to point out the first three of them.

The first is with respect to a self-employment incentive to enable individual unemployed workers in communities to become self-employed by providing grants in the form of an allowance while the business is being established. The second one is with respect to business development centres which would be used to support a community's plan for the creation of additional permanent private sector employment through the provision of advice and investment to small businesses. The third is with respect to the provision of a community initiatives fund, which would assist committees in implementing their strategies for community employment growth and recovery which they may develop.

I find it striking that the Minister of Employment and Immigration (Mr. Bouchard) has issued these particular objectives without any recognition of the potential in community-based development for co-operatives to be used as the basis. That seems to me to indicate very nicely why recommendation No. 32 is so important. It is essential that the Department of Regional Industrial Expansion and the Department of Employment and Immigration ensure that the programs they develop be tailored to the needs of co-operatives as well as to business developments.

I call again on the Government to issue a response at the earliest possible date, if possible to issue one this evening, given that it has not happened earlier, so that we can react to it in order to assist in the development of programs.

[Translation]

Mr. François Gérin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Madam Speaker, the government appreciates the question from the member for Thunder Bay—Nipigon, coming as it did in the middle of National Co-operative Week.

Indeed, figures released by the Minister of State (Canadian Wheat Board) indicate our co-operatives had another productive year. Revenues of non-financial co-ops stood at $14.3 billion in 1985 and membership grew to almost 3 million Canadians.

The co-operative sector makes a significant contribution to the social and economic fabric of Canada. Their strength lies in their community roots and their regional orientation.

Their member-owned structure and democratic control give co-operatives a unique sensitivity to the membership, the communities and the regions they serve. This last week-end, the Desjardins movement had a convention in Montreal where over 5,000 participants expressed views similar to those of my hon. colleague.

The federal government has reviewed the proposals put to it by the National Task Force on Co-operative Development and is currently considering the most appropriate means of formally recognizing the role of the sector, in a way that will best allow the achievement of their goals.

[English]

It should be pointed out that the Government has hosted two meetings of federal-provincial co-operative Ministers and that industry leaders have had a key role in these discussions. I also wish to add that the Minister met last week with co-operative leaders to discuss proposals and that they are close to making formal decisions.

• (1810)

[Translation]

As well, co-operative members have been named to advisory committees to assist the Government in bilateral and multilateral trade negotiations. And, mindful of the importance of international co-operative to co-operative trade, the Government was able to take co-op members on trade missions to such countries as China and Japan.

These are several ways the Federal Government is working with co-ops to ensure they have as many opportunities as possible to be a part of Government programs. This Government will ensure that when programs are being developed co-operatives will have as much a chance as other sectors to have input into developing policies. We are determined to provide an open and unencumbered method of addressing—and resolving—issues of importance to co-operatives in Canada.

[English]

INSURANCE—LIABILITY INSURANCE—REQUEST REINSURANCE MARKET BE ORGANIZED

Mr. Alan Redway (York East): Madam Speaker, I have a question for you. Have you ever had the experience of making a claim on your liability insurance policy and finding out that you had no coverage? I did not think you had. I can see you indicating no. I have a friend who had that experience, a friend by the name of Norm Maughan. He was insured for years and years with the same insurance company and the same agent. He paid his premiums faithfully. Then one day an elderly lady fell on the sidewalk in front of his home and sued my friend Norm.

When Norm phoned his insurer to ask about his insurance coverage on that claim, he was told that one day he had missed making his insurance premium payment and as a result he did not have coverage for that one day. For all of those years he had had insurance coverage with the same agency and the same firm but for that one day, he did not have coverage. You guessed it, Madam Speaker: that is the one day that elderly lady slipped on his sidewalk, fell and sued him for thousands and thousands of dollars. Poor Norm faced an enormous claim just because he did not have coverage for that one day.

Norm had a problem with his liability insurance coverage but right now thousands and thousands of Canadians and Canadian businesses have a similar problem with liability insurance coverage. The problem, of course, is that some Canadians cannot get liability insurance coverage at all at any price while there are others who can get liability insurance coverage like my friend Norm but who have to pay an enormous amount for that coverage.

In fact, there has been a terrible increase in the price of liability insurance just this past year. I am told that municipalities, for instance, have seen an average increase of 350 per cent in liability premiums in 1986 over 1985. Some of the increases have been as high as 2000 per cent. That has amounted to a total of some $1.5 billion in insurance premiums collected by liability insurers.

Is all of that necessary, Madam Speaker? Of course, liability insurers tell us that it is. They tell us it is necessary because they are faced with enormous claims and because they cannot tell how much these claims will be and what sort of judgments will be handed down by the courts. They usually point to a well-known case from Brampton, Ontario, the McErlean case. A young boy was riding on a dirt bike and crashed into another head-on in a gravel pit owned by the City of Brampton. The trial court awarded something like $6.3 million in damages. As you know, Madam Speaker, that case is going to the Ontario Court of Appeal in January and possibly something will happen as a result of it. However, liability insurance companies are still collecting additional premiums of $1.5 billion for this year while their losses are only $150 million. There is something wrong there.

What is the answer? What is that, Madam Speaker? Are you saying that perhaps they should go bankrupt? You know, Madam Speaker, that any claim against a municipality, if it tried to go bankrupt, would just be thrown out of bankruptcy court. That will not work. Nor will it work if you have one single, solitary liability claim against you, Madam Speaker, because no bankruptcy court will forgive that.

What other ideas might you have, Madam Speaker? Perhaps you think the claim should be limited, that there should be a cap or ceiling put on the claims that can be awarded by the courts. Of course, you would not think it fair if someone was injured and had to spend the rest of his life either in a hospital bed or a wheelchair with 24-hour-a-day care without collecting from someone else who had been negligent for the cost of that care. I know that you would not feel that that was fair, Madam Speaker. I know that.

• (1815)

The real answer is a case of leadership. It is leadership on the part of the Minister of State for Finance (Mr. Hockin) to get together all of the insurance industry in this country and to establish a national reinsurance market in Canada. That is what we need. That is where the problem is. There is a lack of that national reinsurance market. The problem is that for reinsurance Canadian insurance companies have to go to places like London, England, places where they do not distinguish between claims made in Canadian courts, the small, piddly claims, and the big whopper claims made in the United States.

Madam Speaker, I know that you are telling me that that is a provincial matter, that it is not really a federal matter. Of course, there is a lot of merit in that, Madam Speaker. You are right. Last week in the Province of Ontario there was legislation introduced to establish a Canadian insurance exchange. You know that, and I know that, Madam Speaker. But at the same time, it is a national problem as well. It is not just a local Ontario problem, but a national problem. It is a national problem for which we should have leadership from the Minister to solve.

I know, Madam Speaker, that tonight you will be extremely disappointed, I will be extremely disappointed, and the people of Canada will be extremely disappointed if we do not hear from the Parliamentary Secretary that the Minister is taking leadership, and will solve this problem immediately.

[Translation]

Mr. Pierre H. Vincent (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, the problems associated with liability insurance were precipitated by what may be characterized as largely external forces. A major contributing factor was a worldwide tightening of reinsurance markets, partly in response to the recent high incidence of disasters which insurance companies have had to cover, and partly in response to increasing difficulties reinsurance companies are having in assessing the court awards associated with the accidents they cover. Court settlements, particularly in the United States, have escalated in size and number over the past few years. This has been attributed to a changing interpretation of negligence in the courts, and to an increase in lawsuits in general. These trends have constricted insurance markets globally. As you well know, Madam Speaker, Canada is not immune from these international conditions. However it is encouraging to see that insurance companies and those seeking insurance have responded to the market disruption in a constructive way. Insurance companies have endeavoured to cover their more dangerous risks collectively through pooling arrangements. Where businesses or public agencies have been unable to acquire coverage through traditional insurance market routes, in many cases they have created self-insurance schemes or reciprocal insurance pools as alternative means of obtaining coverage. These are indeed positive responses that help in solving the current market problems.

As has been recognized, there is considerable provincial responsibility in this area, as contract and tort law are within provincial jurisdiction. This Government has been most supportive of provincial initiatives, and has encouraged the solutions the provinces have developed to meet the problems. For example, as was mentioned, last January the Ontario Government set up a task force to seek solutions for cost and capacity problems in the property and casualty industry in Ontario. The task force's comprehensive report recommended against Government intervention in insurance markets in general. It did suggest, however, that for the markets experiencing more pronounced difficulties, such as pollution liability and export liability insurance, the Government might intervene in a limited way through establishing insurance pools. The Ontario Government has acted on this recommendation, setting up pooling arrangements to make coverage more readily available within these difficult liability insurance lines.

The Hon. Member will be particularly interested to know that the Ontario Task Force on Insurance also recommended creation of a Canadian Insurance Exchange to expand capacity in the Canadian reinsurance market. My understanding is that this reinsurance exchange is scheduled to be in operation in January 1987, if not before.

The federal government has also taken an important initiative for the long term health of the industry. We have introduced Bill C-8, which increases capital and surplus requirements to improve solvency and stability in the property and casualty industry.

• (1820)

[English]

AGRICULTURE—ASSISTANCE FOR GRAIN PRODUCERS. (B) PROVISION OF FUNDS

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Madam Speaker, last Wednesday I asked a very straightforward question regarding the announcement by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) of a $1 billion assistance program for grain producers. I asked whether the Government had the billion dollars in this year's fiscal accounts.

The basis of the question was a growing belief in the Canadian agricultural sector that the delay in the pay-out being made to farmers was because the Government did not want to find the money and did not intend to make payments until after April 1 of next year, in other words into the next fiscal year.

The Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) to whom I directed my question refused to answer it. He left it to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Wise) who also did not answer it.

On the basis of this non-answer, we are forced to make certain assumptions. For example, if the money were available, we are sure the Minister of Finance would have bounced to his feet and assured everyone that the money was in place and that they were only awaiting the method of payment to be decided before making those payments to farmers who have been waiting for the last eight weeks. The Minister of Finance avoided answering the question, as did the Minister of Agriculture. Since neither Minister rose to assure us, we could only assume that there will be no payment until the next fiscal year.

In other words, producers will be required to wait until after April 1 and, knowing that the Estimates will not be passed until May 24, possibly into May or June before they can expect any help.

The Prime Minister promised the $1 billion during the recent Saskatchewan election campaign. At that time it was supposed to be a package to counter depressed prices created by the trade war between the United States and the European community.

During succeeding weeks we watched the Government gradually withdraw from the possibility of paying out the money, until we are not sure just exactly whether or not it intends to pay it. The succeeding weeks have been a slow process to let down the West.

First, the Minister of Agriculture told us that it was not only for the West, that it was for all Canadian grain growers. Second, we were told that the method of payment was slowing down the process, that there was no action because they could not decide how to pay it. Finally, we were told that the package put before the Minister by the agricultural community was acceptable but that farmers would not receive it before the end of the year. That is within a month, and now we know it is an impossibility. There is no chance of the Minister doing what he said he would do—first, have it before the end of October; then, have it before the end of November; and now, have it before the end of December. Farmers who believed the Prime Minister and looked for help this year will be disappointed.

This means that many farmers will be that much deeper in debt. Some of them will be forced out of business because the money is not forthcoming. It would seem that the chances of them getting the money this fiscal year are becoming more remote.

• (1825)

The need for the money is beyond question. Without prompt support, much of the agricultural industry may disappear. The grain producers have the right to know when they can expect their portion of that billion dollars, if it is going to come. They have been told it is in exchange for the CF-18 contract which did not go to the West. Work on that contract will be two years away. Will the farmers have to wait that long before they get some action on the promised billion dollars? I am again giving the Government an opportunity to assure the farmers of western and eastern Canada that the billion dollars will be available for them to pay off some of the debts which are facing them right now.

[Translation]

Mr. Pierre H. Vincent (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Madam speaker, I welcome this opportunity to take part in this discussion and outline the ongoing efforts of this Government to put into place a fair and equitable assistance program for Canadian farmers hurt by the international subsidy war.

As Members of this House well know, the massive subsidies being offered by the United States and European Economic Community have drastically reduced the world price of grains.

Although Canada is not a part of the subsidy war, our grain and oilseed farmers have been caught in the crossfire.

The Government of Canada has worked strenuously at the international level to bring an end to these unfair subsidy practices. And we will continue to represent our farmers' interests loud and clear on the international scene until fairness and sense have been restored to world trade.

But in the meantime, our grain farmers need special cash flow assistance to help them through this difficult period.

That is why this Government has made a commitment to the most substantial assistance initiative ever undertaken in Canada on behalf of farmers.

The commitment is there, and it is firm. But it is important to satisfy ourselves that the assistance will be delivered in a fair and equitable way. Therefore, the Minister of Agriculture has invested time in consulting with the provinces and farm leaders.

The investment has paid off. As a result of two meetings with farm leaders, a consensus was reached on the principles of a formula for distributing the assistance.

I would like to commend the Minister, and the farm leaders, for their hard work in reaching this important consensus.

The formula they agreed on involves a combination of seeded acreage, production and grain values. The farm leaders left it up to the Minister and his officials to iron out details, and to determine a base year.

Now the consultation process is complete. Calculations are being done. And an announcement will be made as soon as possible.

Mr. Speaker, I do not think this Government has to be reminded of the urgency of farmers' cash flow problems. It is this Government that has responded in the past with a strong record of initiatives on behalf of Canadian farmers—a record that stacks up very well against any other.

And we fully intend to deliver special assistance to grain and oilseed farmers—not just quickly, but also fairly and equitably.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1)

At 6.30 p.m. the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Tuesday, December 2, 1986

The House met at 11 a.m.

[English]

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I wish to advise the House that negotiations between the Parties on Bill C-22 are continuing. Under those circumstances, the Government has no intention of moving on the motion of the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) which is on the Order Paper under Government Notices of Motion dated November 24, 1986.

* * *

[Translation]

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

Mr. Speaker: I have the honour to inform the House that a message has been received from the Senate informing this House that the Senate has passed Bill S-3, an Act to amend and repeal the Alliance Nationale Consolidated Act, 1945, to which the concurrence of this House is desired.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, you may recall that, yesterday, I raised the matter of what happens when the Senate sends a message to the House. I asked the Chair to inform Members of any comments and to explain whether it was an old custom that we sometimes had to wait until the next day to have these comments and hear what the Senate had to say about the Bill in question. Regarding the Bill I have just called, are there any comments, yes or no? And if so, may we hear them today?

[English]

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member has raised a point which was raised obliquely in representations made yesterday and the Chair is considering the matter and will report back to the Chamber. I thank the Hon. Member.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

REGULATIONS AND OTHER STATUTORY INSTRUMENTS

PRESENTATION OF FIRST REPORT OF STANDING JOINT COMMITTEE

Hon. Bob Kaplan (York Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present the first report of the Standing Joint Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments.

[Editor's Note: See today's Votes and Proceedings.]

* * *

PETITIONS

REQUEST TO WITHDRAW TARIFF ON ENGLISH LANGUAGE BOOKS

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present several petitions concerning the imposition of a retaliatory tariff on imported books in the English language which has limited the access of Canadians to literature and information. The tariff has little negative effect on the publishing industry of the United States but penalizes Canadian consumers, book publishers, book sellers and distributors and Canada's culture. Rising book prices have placed a strain on the acquisition programs and policies of our nation's public and specialized libraries.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the undersigned humbly pray Parliament to drop this tariff which threatens to cause irreparable harm to the Canadian book industry and to compromise federal policy on our cultural industries within the context of the free trade talks.

[English]

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGE TO PATENT ACT

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition pursuant to Standing Order 106 from residents of Winnipeg, Morden, Winkler, Portage la Prairie and others. The petitioners say that the federal Government's proposal to change the Patent Act relating to prescription drugs will increase drug prices for Canadian consumers and will severely restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy necessary prescription drugs. Therefore, they humbly pray and call upon Parliament to reject these proposals which will increase prescription drug prices for Canadians. I have—

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and privilege of presenting petitions signed by many residents of Selkirk and Winnipeg, Manitoba, and these petitioners are opposing the Government's proposal to change the Patent Act relating to prescription drugs on the grounds that the changes will increase drug prices for Canadian consumers and that they will unfairly hurt Canadians whose health needs require the purchase of prescription drugs, and further that these proposals will result in higher costs to provincial Governments. The petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to reject these proposals which will increase prescription drug prices for Canadians.

• (1110)

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, my hon. colleague, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North (Mr. Orlikow) had another petition to present on a different topic. The Hon. Member wished to have leave to introduce that petition at the same time as he was introducing his original petition.

Mr. Speaker: Hon. Members know that the practice is to present all petitions at one time. However, the Chair feels that it would be appropriate to recognize the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North again.

OPPOSITION TO CUT-BACKS TO RESEARCH

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 106, I have the honour to present a petition signed by residents of Gloucester, Ottawa, Russell, and others, in which they state that severe funding cuts to the National Research Council that have been imposed by the Government of Canada have caused disruption of scientific activity and threatened the economic future, as well as the health and safety of Canadian citizens. Therefore, they humbly pray and call upon Parliament to rescind the funding cut-backs to the National Research Council, including all consequent terminations and cut-backs in research activities, and to provide funding for the space program from sources other than the NRC budget.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGE TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, I have been called upon by petitioners from Unity, Saskatchewan to present a petition to Parliament. The petitioners request that the Government withdraw its legislation which extends the patent rights to 10 years for the multinationals. The petitioners are fearful of an erosion of the drug plans that exist in this country. The petitioners feel that the extra costs that the poor, the elderly, and the sick will bear will be to the benefit of the multinationals.

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I also have the honour under Standing Order 106 to present a petition which has been certified correct by the Clerk of Petitions.

In the petition people from the communities of Gillam, Thompson, and The Pas, Manitoba, have expressed their concern about the proposed measures that will unfairly hurt those Canadians whose health needs require the purchase of prescription drugs. In other words, they are complaining about the federal Government's attempt to change the Patent Act relating to prescription drugs. They feel that this will result in increased drug prices, especially for those who have a severely restricted ability to pay, and those who have a need to consume large amounts of prescription drugs. The undersigned petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to reject these proposals, which can only result in the increase of prescription drug prices for Canadians.

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, I wish to present a petition this morning from a number of people in the Yorkton—Melville riding from the town of Preeceville in the northern part of my riding. They, too, are concerned about the Government's proposition to change the Patent Act. They say in their petition that the proposal of the federal Government will increase the cost of prescription drugs to Canadian consumers, and severely restrict the ability of the average Canadian to buy the necessary pharmaceutical drugs in this country. They also go on to state that this will hurt the health needs of Canadians, and result in higher drug costs in the Saskatchewan drug plans and, therefore, hurt the revenues of the Saskatchewan Government, and so on. I do not have time, of course, to read the entire petition, but these people are very serious. They humbly pray that Parliament listen to their request, will do what they are saying, and withdraw this particular Bill that is before the House. As I said before, Mr. Speaker, these people are from the town of Preeceville in the riding of Yorkton—Melville.

Mr. Jim Fulton (Skeena): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise and present a number of petitions pursuant to Standing Order 106 that have been certified correct by the Clerk of Petitions. The petitioners are concerned about the Conservative Government proposal to change the Patent Act relating to prescription drugs. It is their view that this will increase drug prices for Canadian consumers, and severely restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy the necessary prescription drugs. The petitioners are also concerned that the proposed changes are another example of Canadian Government concessions to the United States in relation to the free trade negotiations. They ask that the House of Commons reject the proposals brought in by the Government to change the Patent Act in relation to prescription drugs.

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, I, too, am honoured to have this opportunity to table in the House petitions from my own riding of Windsor, Ontario, and from Regina, Saskatchewan. These petitions represent a part of the mounting numbers of Canadians who are taking the opportunity to express their opposition to changes in the Patent Act, which would result in higher drug prices. The petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to reject the proposals by the Government which will increase prescription drug costs for all Canadians.

[Translation]

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour of tabling a petition in which it is stated that the changes the federal Government wishes to make in the Patent Act will increase the price of drugs and will have a particular impact on persons whose state of health requires the ongoing use of drugs, that those changes will increase the cost of all provincial health insurance programs and that they are typical examples of concessions made by the Canadian Government to the United States in the free trade talks.

Mr. Speaker, petitioners are asking Parliament to reject those proposals.

[English]

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, I, too, have the honour to present a petition from a number of people in Winnipeg, St-Vital, and St. Boniface petitioning the Parliament on the matter of the generic drug Bill that is now before Parliament, pointing out that this will bear very unfairly on people of low income, including senior citizens, because it will inevitably raise the price of drugs. Therefore, your petitioners humbly pray and call upon Parliament to reject these proposals, which will increase prescription drug prices for all Canadians.

OPPOSITION TO CUT-BACKS TO RESEARCH

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): I also have a petition on a different matter. This is a petition from a number of people in the areas of Ottawa, Gloucester, and nearby. It concerns the National Reseach Council funding. The petitioners regret the recent cuts in the funding, and they point out that the cutbacks will do serious harm not only to Canadian research, but to Canadian industry. The funding for the space program does seem irrelevant as an excuse for the cuts in the NRC program.

REMOVAL OF MAILBOXES BY CANADA POST

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): I also have a petition from a number of residents of Spadina, and other parts of the City of Toronto, concerning the post office and its action this summer and fall in removing about a third of the mailboxes, the letter drop boxes in which people mail their letters in the city. They pointed out that this was done without the proper consultation to find out which boxes were heavily used. They request that Parliament ensure that Canada Post will put the mailboxes back, and will consult with the residents of the communities affected before Canada Post removes these boxes, or any other services in the future.

80190—10

LOW-LEVEL FLIGHTS AT ARMED FORCES BASE IN GOOSE BAY

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): I also have a petition from a number of people in Spadina, and in other parts of Toronto, concerning the Canadian Forces base at Goose Bay in Labrador, and the low-level flight training which is carried on there and over parts of Labrador and Quebec. The petitioners feel that this is not in keeping with a good Canadian defence policy, but in fact increases the risk of war, as well as disturbing the life of the people who live there. Therefore, they request Parliament to ensure that there will be an end to the low-level flight training at the Canadian Armed Forces base in Goose Bay, and an end to the negotiations with NATO for establishing a larger base there.

[Translation]

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGE TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Madam Speaker, I also have a petition. This petition has been certified correct in all respects pursuant to Standing Order 106 and it comes from small towns in Quebec, such as Cap-de-la-Madeleine, Trois-Rivières, Shawinigan, Saint-Étienne, and so on. This petition deals with the Patent Bill. The petitioners state that the proposed legislative changes will probably increase the price of drugs and that this is another instance of a Canadian concession in the free trade talks.

• (1120)

[English]

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Madam Speaker, it is my duty and honour to present a petition to the House of Commons on behalf of a number of western Canadians. They point out that the proposed changes to the Patent Act will result in prescription drug prices increasing significantly. They suggest that the increase may even be as much as $650 million per year by 1995. They simply call upon Members of the House, particularly members of the Government, not to proceed with the legislation which would result in reducing competition in the Canadian drug industry and consequently in higher costs for prescription drugs to Canadian citizens.

* * *

[Translation]

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 16 and 33.

Order Paper Questions

[Text]

INDUSTRIAL AND REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

Question No. 16—Mr. Scott (Victoria—Haliburton):

Since September 1984, have any grants and loans been approved by the Department of Regional and Industrial Expansion under the IRDP program to companies within the constituency of Victoria—Haliburton and, if so (a) how many (b) by year, what was the total value?

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): In so far as the Industrial and Regional Development Program is concerned: for the period September 1, 1984 to March 31, 1985, two grants were approved for a total of $612,200; for the period April 1, 1985 to March 31, 1986, three grants were approved for a total of $1,227,833; for the period April 1, 1986 to October 7, 1986, one grant was approved for a total of $1,250.

DIOXIN LEVELS IN FOOD

Question No. 33—Mr. Caccia:

1. Has the Department of National Health and Welfare been collecting data on dioxin levels in food and, if so (a) since what date (b) what levels have been measured and what is the significance of these levels?

2. Are there data on dioxin levels in the human body and, if so, what are the recorded levels and what is the significance of these levels?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): 1. (a) The Health Protection Branch has been monitoring dioxin levels in food for more than 10 years. These studies have indicated that the foods most likely to contain dioxins are those with the higher levels of fat such as fish, meat, etc. Examination of fruits and vegetables has revealed no detectable amounts.

Two extensive studies of fish from the Great Lakes have revealed the presence of the most toxic dioxin isomer in some fish, primarily from Lake Ontario. A regulatory limit of 20 parts per trillion for this dioxin in fish was established in 1982. Compliance action is taken whenever violative levels are found. Studies of dioxin in fish are still under way.

A national survey of poultry and swine products revealed the presence of the higher (and less toxic) chlorinated dioxins in some products, probably arising from the use of pentachlorophenol in and around poultry and swine establishments. Action was taken by Agriculture Canada in 1981, following discussions with the Health Protection Branch, to limit the use of pentachlorophenol in such situations. A further national survey of poultry and swine products is under way.

The Health Protection Branch will continue its food monitoring program in these and in other areas, such as a total diet program, to provide continued reassurance of the wholesomeness of the food supply. Action will be taken to protect the consumer if any problems are detected.

2. The Health Protection Branch has conducted a survey of approximately 80 samples of human adipose tissue collected nationwide during 1972, 1976 and 1980. The data indicated a general low level contamination of adipose tissue in Canada with several dioxin isomers at levels ranging from approximately 0.005 ppb (parts per billion) for the most toxic isomer to 0.8 ppb (parts per billion) for the least toxic isomer. There were no significant qualitative or quantitative differences in contamination across regions or over the time period investigated. The source of contamination was not apparent from the general pattern of contamination.

Although the significance of this extremely low level of contamination is not known at this time it should be noted that similar levels of contamination are apparent in adipose tissue from other industrialized countries such as Sweden and the U.S.A.

Health Protection Branch scientists are presently working with scientists from other countries through the World Health Organization to more fully assess the significance and source of this contamination.

* * *

[Translation]

QUESTION PASSED AS ORDER FOR RETURN

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, if question No. 31 could be made an order for return, that return would be tabled immediately.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The questions enumerated by the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary have been answered. Is it the pleasure of the House that question No. 31 be deemed to have been made an order for return?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

[Text]

DOLLAR VALUE OF GRANTS

Question No. 31—Mr. Stackhouse:

1. For each year 1984 and 1985, did the Department of Regional Industrial Expansion make any grants and awards and, if so, by province and territory, what was the total dollar value?

2. For each year 1984 and 1985, did the Department of Supply and Services award any contracts for goods and services and, if so, by province and territory, what was the total dollar value?

Return tabled.

[Translation]

Mr. Lewis: Madam Speaker, I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

[English]

POINT OF ORDER

ALLEGATION RESPECTING PRESS RELEASE LINKING NAMES OF OUTSTANDING PERSONS TO BILL C-22

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Madam Speaker, I rise on a brief point of order. Yesterday during Question Period the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) raised two questions, as reported on page 1641 of Hansard, in which the suggestion was made that the Government was linking the names of Terry Fox, Steve Fonyo, and Rick Hansen to the Government's Bill changing the Patent Act.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) undertook to review the matter. As reported on the same page of Hansard, he said:

—because there would be no intention of associating anyone with a proposal or a piece of legislation without his or her authorization—

We have now had an opportunity to review the news release in question. I will not read the entire news release. Of course it is available. It indicated that the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre) "went on to say that Canadians obviously believe in the need for medical research. Terry Fox, Steve Fonyo, and Rick Hansen had raised millions of dollars, he noted".

Obviously in the news release the Minister was referring specifically to the question of medical research. There is no effort in the news release to link these individuals to the Bill. I do not believe my hon. colleague wished to leave a false impression with the House. I am simply correcting the record, as the Right Hon. Prime Minister indicated he would do.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Madam Speaker, I am very disappointed that I must rise in response to the reaction of my hon. colleague. In the press release to which the Hon. Member referred, arising from comments yesterday during Question Period, Mr. Hansen, Mr. Fonyo, and Mr. Fox were in a sense implicated by association. The press release dealt with the Government's plan to change the Patent Act, which would result in higher drug prices. It was a very partisan press release. It referred to opposition Parties in a very negative way and implied all sorts of negative things. Sprinkled throughout the press release were the names of these three great Canadians.

In the next press release which will presumably come out today, I submit that we will hear the names of Dr. Suzuki, Dr. Polanyi, Karen Kain, Peter Gzowski, Wayne Gretzky, or whoever else.

By implication these people were associated with the theme and thesis of the press release which was to make a case for the Government's changes to the Patent Act, the Bill presently before the House of Commons.

I submit that it is absolutely wrong and kind of sleazy for the Government to take the names of people, without their approval, and sprinkle them throughout a press release. It implies, by association, that these individuals stand behind the point or the thesis being made by the particular press release. Quite frankly I think it is inappropriate.

I appreciate the fact that the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) indicated in his response that he was not aware of the press release. I am sure he was not aware of it because, if he had been aware of it, he would have said to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre) that to use the names of these people would be inappropriate. That is exactly what he said, and I think it is totally out of order—

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Order, please. I think both Hon. Members have had a chance to make their points. Should it be necessary, the Chair reserves a decision and the possibility to return to the point. However, at this time I think we should proceed.

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. I understand the Parliamentary Secretary was conveying a message on behalf of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). I should like very much for the Prime Minister himself to respond in the House as he indicated yesterday he would do and come clean on this question.

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Madam Speaker, I concur in the comments of the Hon. Member for Papineau (Mr. Ouellet) and of the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis). In my view it was in extremely poor taste for the Government of Canada to use the names of those three individuals.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Order, please. Hon. Members should realize that I have already ruled on the question and that we should now proceed.

• (1130)

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[Translation]

CANADAIR LIMITED DIVESTITURE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed, from December 1, consideration of the motion of Mrs. McDougall that Bill C-25, an Act to authorize the divestiture of Canadair Limited and to provide for other matters in connection therewith, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Madam Speaker, I was a member of the Government that made a firm and unequivocal commitment to developing a genuine Canadian aerospace policy. This wise decision has made our country one of the world leaders in the aerospace industry. I therefore welcome this opportunity to speak to Bill C-25 and to say that, today, Canada has a strong dynamic and innovative aerospace industry, thanks to the efforts initiated by the previous Government in the seventies.

Members will recall that the Liberal administration bailed out de Havilland and purchased the company in 1973 to save thousands of jobs in the industry in Canada. When the same situation arose in Montreal at Canadair, the Liberal Government at the time—this was in 1976—had no hesitation in intervening to save well-paid and interesting jobs at Canadair in Montreal.

At the time, we were taking over a company that was ailing, but since then, the company's administrators and its employees have made it a flourishing concern.

In fact, Canadair has become the cornerstone of the aerospace industry in Quebec, and during the past three years, its net profits have totalled several million dollars.

Unlike the Conservatives who at the time—this was in the seventies and the beginning of the eighties—were constantly criticizing the Liberal Government's attempts to support both de Havilland and Canadair, we have always believed in the future of these two companies, and especially Canadair. That is why we never had any hesitation in investing substantial amounts of money to provide a sound basis for the company's development.

Before I go any further, I would like to say that on this side of the House, we are delighted—as was the Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques (Mr. Guilbault), the party critic on this matter—with the sale of Canadair to Bombardier. Canadair, Quebec's aerospace motor, will be owned by another giant of Quebec's industry, and we are very happy indeed.

We are particularly pleased to see that the Government did not repeat the mistakes it made when it sold de Havilland. It seems that for once, by selling Canadair to a Canadian company, it has acted to protect the interests of Canadians instead of those of our neighbours to the South.

I am sure that Bombardier, a pioneer in the transportation field, will be able to diversify its capabilities and skills through its involvement in aircraft after having manufactured snowmobiles, locomotives and all-terrain vehicles. I have no doubt that the company's administrators have the ability to make Canadair a success.

And that, Madam Speaker, is as far as my words of praise go. Unfortunately, they must stop here. Once again the Conservative Government has shown its true colours in handling this deal—incompetence and carelessness—shrouded in haziness as it is. First, why did the Government give confidential information to the competitors? Second, why did the Government sell without first making sure that long-time Canadair employees, some with at least ten years' seniority and others with as much as twenty or even more, would be adequately protected? How could the Government make this sale without any concern for the job security of these people? Third, why did the Government not come clean with respect to the sale price and the assets transferred to Bombardier?

One very unclear aspect of this deal is this: did the buyer actually pay the price that was supposed to be paid for the corporation?

Fourth, why did the Government mishandle the F-18 maintenance contract so badly that in many regions of the country, at least among the Halifax company workers and those of the Winnipeg firm who were misled in the contract awarding process, people are now convinced that the Government made an outright gift to Bombardier in its selection of the successful bidder? Why did the Government so bungle and mess up the awarding of this contract? As I see it, those are the four questions which have yet to be answered and which account for the fact that this deal and this Bill are not as open and as clear as they should be.

If I may go back in time, to October 1984 to be precise, when we first heard that the Government was going to put Canadair on the block, the newly-elected Conservatives appeared to be in such a hurry that we could have expected the matter to be resolved very quickly. Unfortunately such was not the case and, as a result of endless foot dragging, we had to wait for more than two years before the Government introduced this Bill to finalize the sale of Canadair.

Now then, let us first consider the consequences of this ideological haste in the early years of this new political regime which simply had to get rid of all Crown corporations regardless of cost, circumstances or terms. The one-track mind Conservatives were determined to get rid of all Crown corporations.

What happened however is that the so-called Gulfstream case turned out to be an absolutely appalling experience for Canadair employees. As we recall, American-owned Gulfstream asked to see Canadair facilities. Should anybody be unaware of the fact, Gulfstream happens to be Canadair's main competitor on the jet and turbojet aircraft market, and its G-3 and G-4 products directly compete with Canadair's Challenger 601. Indeed, both Gulfstream and Canadair practically have the same customers.

In May 1985, Canadair board directors felt that this way Gulfstream might too easily acquire strategic data, so they unanimously refused to let Gulfstream gain access to confidential information such as the list of clients, marketing plans, research projects, customer service programs, future works, in short nothing less than the whole corporate planning of a concern in direct competition with similar companies. But what is absolutely incredible is that the Conservative Government, through Canada Development Investment Corporation which is the parent corporation of Canadair, ordered Canadair's Board of Directors to reveal all this information to Gulfstream, its competitor. With the list of its customers in its possession, Gulfstream, as early as July 1985, sent to the customers of Canadair a telegram totally detrimental to the sales of Canadair, and I should like to quote this telegram which is quite revealing and demonstrates to what extent this Conservative Government is either naive or incompetent. I quote:

which is quite revealing and demonstrates to what extent this Conservative Government is either naive or incompetent. I quote:

• (1140)

[English]

"With your involvement in the investment business, I have to ask if your pending purchase of the Canadair CL-601 is really best for you? CDIC's plan to sell Canadair is public knowledge. When that happens, to whom will you look for support? Spares? And what will be the effect on your long term investment in that product?

We can offer new Gulfstream III's now and Gulfstream IV's downstream, and we know who will be there to fully support your investment."

[Translation]

That is the kind of letter which was sent to the prospective clients and purchasers of Canadair. Although the newspapers of this country obviously denounced this situation, the Conservative Government found nothing wrong with it. Quite the contrary. CDIC again forced Canadair a second and even a third time to open its doors to Gulstream's experts. Well, having obtained all the strategic information it wanted about Canadair, Gulfstream, thus confirming the fears expressed by the Board of Directors in May 1985, announced in October in a very despicable fashion that it had changed its mind and would not buy the Challenger program from Canadair.

For this reason, I do not hesitate to say that the Government's slowness in proceeding with the sale of Canadair has probably resulted in several prospective buyers turning to products made by its United States competitors. There is no doubt in my mind that the Conservative Government must be held responsible for this serious situation. And I do not hesitate to say that the Government's indecision and administrative irresponsibility have certainly resulted in the loss of major contracts for the Ville-Saint-Laurent company. Its lack of concern has fed the employees quite legitimate worries. Indeed, Canadair's employees have mentioned three major concerns during the Government's discussions to sell Canadair.

First of all, in the area of job security, the employees feel that the guarantees are not strong enough. In fact, it can be said that there is practically no guarantee in that respect. Here is the commitment made by Bombardier in its memorandum of understanding and accepted by the Government.

The Bombardier company has committed itself to maintain existing levels of employment at Canadair, subject to cyclical shifts and sound business practices. What does that mean? In practical terms, that does not mean anything at all as far as the job security for thousands of Montreal workers is concerned. The Government has decided not to ease their fears, not to satisfy their request which I deem quite legitimate, and I accuse the Conservative Government of having abandoned Canadair employees to their fate.

Hon. Members will recall that during the seventies and in the early eighties, the Conservatives were against maintaining the large subsidies granted by the Liberal Government to ensure the survival of this company. Now, the first thing the Conservative Government does is to sell this profitable company to the private sector and to tell the employees: We are no longer responsible for your welfare; you have to rely on the new owners; good luck and goodbye. The Canadair employees are worried not only about their jobs, but also about their pension plans. The Government is refusing to provide the explanations which are absolutely essential in my opinion because these people, who have worked for this company for dozens of years and have invested their time, their talent, and also part of their income to prepare an adequate pension for themselves, are now faced with uncertainty about their pension plans. They have not been told whether their pension plans will be transferred to the new management of Canadair. The Bombardier commitments deal with the amount accumulated in the pension fund but the future use of these amounts is left completely vague, and nothing is said about the plan itself. I refer, Madam Speaker, to the commitment made by the Government and Bombardier: "CDIC and the Government garantee that the Canadair pension plans will be fully funded at the date of closing." But what will happen after the transaction? In addition, Bombardier and the Crown acknowledge that amounts in the Canadair pension plans will be for the sole benefit of the Canadair employees. Once more, we would have expected more forthrightness and clarity from the Government on such a major issue. Finally, the employees are also worried about the fact that nothing would prevent Bombardier from moving part of its Canadair operations to other plants in Quebec, elsewhere in Canada or even abroad. Obviously, these workers, who have been the key of the success of this company over the years, could have obtained better guarantees of a job and security for themselves and their families in the Montreal region. However, I am not surprised at the vagueness of the approach taken by this Government since it did nothing a while ago to save thousands of jobs in Eastern Montreal. One company after another had to close or to lay off employees who had worked for many years in transport related industries in Eastern Montreal. For weeks and months, the Conservative Government did absolutely nothing to counter this disaster in the Montreal region. And in the case of this transaction which turns over to the private sector a Crown corporation that could, through the Government, provide those people with thousands of jobs, the Government has done nothing to ensure that the purchaser, a private corporation, would remain as good an employer as the Government has been for its many employees over the years.

In conclusion, I would simply like to ask, as I did earlier in my remarks when I raised four questions: Why did the F-18 maintenance contract lead to such controversy? It is clear to me that at the time Bombardier was negotiating with the Government the takeover of that corporation, everyone knew the F-18 maintenance contract was to be awarded to a Canadian corporation as provided by the very deal that was struck when the F-18 contract was signed. The previous Government had included in that contract a commitment that phase two of the F-18 maintenance work would be done in Canada by a Canadian corporation. That was in the original contract itself. And certainly Canadair's purchasers, Bombardier, did discuss that with this Government.

In conclusion, I will say it is clear in my mind that the people in Halifax and Winnipeg were taken in, because there was no other way than the right one, which was to give that maintenance contract to Canadair, the company that was the best prepared and the best equipped for the contract. I find it absolutely disgraceful that this Government should have decided on that tender process, the only effect of which was to deceive people in Halifax and Winnipeg since, from the outset, the contract was to be awarded to Canadair in Montreal. So this piece of legislation will have to be scrutinized in committee, because there are too many questions the Government has failed to answer.

• (1150)

[English]

Mr. Hovdebo: Madam Speaker, can the Hon. Member tell us what he believes should be done to ensure that the employees of the corporation are not disadvantaged in the turnover? Is it necessary to have further negotiations, or is it just a matter of delineating the areas of concern?

Mr. Ouellet: Madam Speaker, I appreciate very much the question of the Hon. Member. I am ready to support this legislation at second reading stage in order that it be sent to committee where we will study it clause by clause. In committee we will have a chance to ask the Government more questions about the intricacies of this contract and, hopefully, obtain satisfaction. However, if we do not obtain the answers to our questions, the onus will be upon members of the Opposition to submit amendments which would give the employees of Canadair greater guarantees.

I know many of these employees. Some of them live in my riding. They have been working for Canadair for years. These people deserve better treatment than the Government wants to give them. I believe the onus is upon Members of Parliament to ensure the continuity and vitality of this organization. It has provided a very useful service and a number of well paid jobs in Montreal. It would be a disaster if these people were not guaranteed future employment.

Mr. McDermid: Madam Speaker, I listened to the Hon. Member today and to the Hon. Member for Saint-Jacques (Mr. Guilbault) yesterday. They made the incredible claim that Gulfstream had some confidential information which no one else had and that it got this secret information through a telegram from Gulfstream to someone who is purchasing an airplane. That is the greatest red herring that has ever been brought up in the House of Commons.

A salesman for a company which is trying to sell an airplane will naturally use everything at his disposal to sell the airplane. It was public knowledge that Canadair was for sale. A salesman would tell the client not to buy the product of a company which is for sale. That is exactly what we are talking about. It is totally untrue to say that they have some confidential information. Gulfstream had no confidential information. It is absolutely ludicrous to try to tie it in with a salesman doing his job for Gulfstream. I believe that the facts should be presented as they are rather than as the Liberals see them.

Mr. Ouellet: Madam Speaker, I regret that I must disagree with the Hon. Member. However, it has been established that the members of the Board of Directors of Canadair were forced by the Government to give Gulfstream the list of potential clients of Canadair and those who have already purchased Challengers. They also had to give Gulfstream their research plans and marketing plans. I cited a letter which was sent. It is quite clear that in order to send such a letter Gulfstream would have had to have the list.

Therefore, three vital pieces of confidential information were given to a competitor. They were given to a competitor because, regardless of cost or risk, the Government wants to get rid of Crown corporations. The Government more or less gave de Havilland to Boeing. It was an absolutely scandalous sale. Fortunately Bombardier made a good offer for Canadair. If the employees had not objected and people of Montreal had not become furious with the Government, Canadair would have been sold to Gulfstream.

Day after day we see the Government's madness to sell Crown corporations at any price. The Government is selling CN Route for less than its book value. All across Canada employees of CN Route are being told that they will lose their jobs due to this sale. I am afraid the same thing will happen with Teleglobe. The Government has twisted the rules of the game three times already. It is so desperate to sell Crown corporations that it will sell them at any cost. We resent this and object to it. I want to say clearly and unequivocally that the Government was foolish to give so much confidential information to Gulfstream, the prime competitor of Canadair.

Mr. McDermid: Madam Speaker, the Liberals established approximately 400 Crown corporations during their years of so-called service to the country. As the Hon. Member knows, there is no mad rush to buy these Crown corporations. However, the Canadian people want Crown corporations which are not serving the public policy of the country to be in private hands. They told us that clearly on September 4, 1984. The Government is carrying out its promise in a reasoned and reasonable way.

• (1200)

I suggest that the Hon. Member talk to the workers at de Havilland today and ask them how they feel about the deal. They will tell him that there is more employment and more activity. They are doing very well. Approximately 1,000 of those workers live in my constituency and they are thanking me because, for once, there is some certainty and, for once, they now know they can have jobs. They are telling me that they are selling planes and they do not have the Government using them as a toy.

Mr. Ouellet: I remind the Hon. Member that this very viable Canadian company is now an American company. When things get tough, I want to see the Hon. Member come back and tell us what that American company will do to the workers.

Mr. McDermid: Who owns the technology?

Mr. Ouellet: The other point he raised concerns the number of Crown corporations. Yes, the Liberal Government created a number of Crown corporations, all of which were legitimate, all serving a useful and important role.

Mr. McDermid: Nonsense.

Mr. Ouellet: From CBC, to Air Canada, to Teleglobe, to a number of Crown corporations all across the country, like the Cape Breton Development Corporation. Where private sector business did not create the jobs and was not there to take the initiative, the Liberal Government created Crown corporations to ensure employment in every region of Canada, particularly in areas where the private sector will never go.

[Translation]

Mr. Gérin: Madam Speaker—

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Does the Hon. Member rise in debate?

Mr. Gérin: No, Madam Speaker, I simply wanted to make a comment on the speech—

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Order, please. The period for questions and—

Mr. Gérin: I might add, Madam—

Mr. Ouellet: No, it is over.

Mr. Gérin: It would not have been a favourable comment.

Mr. Ouellet: Have respect for the Chair.

Mr. Gérin: What a sophistical speech!

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I would ask the Hon. Member to resume his seat. Is the House ready for the question?

[English]

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Madam Speaker, a number of my colleagues have pointed out some of the details that need to be considered in this divestiture of the Crown corporation. I want to comment on the direction the Government is taking in the divestiture of Crown corporations. We oppose this Bill for a number of specific reasons that do not necessarily relate to the particular Crown corporation in question but rather, relate to the policy and philosophy of the Government in its approach to privatization.

Its approach seems to be based on ideology that is quite different from the Canadian tradition with respect to Crown corporations. The provincial and federal tradition has been to deal with Crown corporations as part of the economy of the country. For example, that tradition has led to a mixed economy in Canada because Crown corporations have been able to assist the development of private corporations.

Previous Conservative Governments contributed a great deal to that mixed economy through the process of establishing Crown corporations. For example, the economy of the entire nation was developed as a result of the Conservative Government's establishment of Canadian National Railways, a Crown corporation. It contributed to the development of the manufacturing industries of Ontario and Quebec by being able to deliver the resources of other regions of Canada to those industries.

The Conservative Government is breaking a tradition that Conservatives themselves established, and it has not explained how the ideological reasons behind this decision will help develop the country.

Furthermore, this divestiture is against the mandate that it requested during the election in September, 1984. At that time, the Conservatives sought and received a mandate not to sell corporations like Canadair and de Havilland because they are key to an aerospace industry that the Conservatives wanted in Canada. In a press release on August 27, 1984—one week before the election—the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) stated that this organization would be responsible for the aerospace strategy, so that Canadair and de Havilland will become commercially viable and will continue to be so into the next century. When the Government was elected, its mandate was not to divest itself of the aerospace industry and put it into private hands, but to establish it as a viable industry that would take us into the next century.

It should be noted that even the ideological reasons behind this divestiture are confusing. The Government does not seem to be consistent in how it will treat the Crown corporations that it is selling. The Government will use any excuse, regardless of whether it makes sense, as a basis for its divestiture of these Crown corporations.

Crown corporations have been established in Canada as instruments of public policy. Every Crown corporation has been established for good reasons such as economic development, job preservation and regional job development. While there are many examples of poorly operating Crown corporations, the reasons for that include the unfortunate policy of former Liberal and Conservative Governments over the years that these Crown corporations should be free-standing and at arm's length from the federal Government once they have been established. The Crown corporations seemed to take on a life of their own, which was not necessarily the objective when they were originally established. Therefore, rather than continuing to be instruments of public policy, Crown corporations had a tendency to become commercial enterprises bringing no basic benefit to the country. If that happens and if it is impossible to change the direction of those corporations, then I, and I suppose my Party, have no real quarrel with the idea of selling them to the private sector as long as it is done in a way that does not disturb the basic economy.

• (1210)

When a Crown corporation stands alone commercially and starts to operate as if it were a private commercial enterprise, then it need not be sold automatically. We must look at it and decide if it was established for a policy reason and, if so, there must be some way in which it will affect the economy of Canada if it is removed from the public sector. Rather than putting it on the block for sale, we should ask why it was set up and see if we can return to the reason for its establishment. We should ensure that the people of Canada are getting the policy development for which the particular Crown corporation was established.

Sometimes successful Crown corporations are filling a need. Those needs are broad and many. Crown corporations have been used to develop resources and regional industries. They have been used as a window into a particular industry, an opportunity for the Government to know what is occurring in the industry and to know what kind of development is needed. This makes it less necessary to depend on multinational corporations whose reasons for being are quite often not necessarily of benefit to the Canadian people. If a corporation is put in place and does have an impact on a particular sector of the economy, the private corporations are forced to get in line in a competitive way.

As well, in the past, Crown corporations have often been leaders, either in a positive or a negative way, in examples of environmental control. Quite often these Crown corporations have also been used to establish the regulatory structure which is necessary in the development of an economy. The Government's privatization program is in place only for ideological reasons. The Government suggests that it is better for a private corporation to operate these industries rather than for a Crown corporation to do so.

For many years, the Government of Saskatchewan was involved in establishing a number of Crown corporations. Many people in the House and across Canada have suggested that the formation of Crown corporations is a basic principle of socialist Parties, while in fact there have been fewer Crown corporations developed in the Province of Saskatchewan than there have been in Conservative Alberta. Conservative Alberta has been much more prone to the development of Crown corporations so it may control the development of its industries. Saskatchewan confined its Crown corporations to the development of utilities and resources.

Tommy Douglas had a favourite saying which was: "You don't have to own an industry in order to have some control over it". He felt that it was quite possible to set up a structure which allowed a fair, easy and worth-while development of the economy of the province or the country without putting Crown corporations into place. That was the basic philosophy under which the Saskatchewan Government operated for those 30 years that Tommy Douglas was the Premier.

During the time Tommy Douglas was the Premier of Saskatchewan, the amount of private investment in Saskatchewan was very high. It contributed tremendously to the development of the province. Saskatchewan went from being a have-not province to being a have province. It went from having the highest per capita debt to having the lowest per capita debt in those years. It also ended up with a diverse economy.

This Government really does not know why it is pursuing privatization. I think that is the basic reason we feel that we cannot support this kind of divestiture, as much as we think that there are reasons in some cases for supporting the divestiture of Crown corporations. Until the Government has in place a policy which we can follow, we feel that we cannot support this kind of divestiture.

Canada is not the same as the United States. We would not have developed in the way we have if we had not had in place over the years Crown corporations like CNR. We would not have developed culturally in the way we have if we had not had in place another Conservative Crown corporation, the CBC. These Crown corporations contributed immensely to the development of Canada. To a great extent, the resources of Canada have been developed by Crown corporations.

It is not as if the Government had suddenly decided that certain Crown corporations were no longer commercially valuable, although that is what occurred with de Havilland. We are now told that de Havilland is producing tremendously and there is no reason to believe that it would not have produced just as well if it had remained a Crown corporation.

Canadair is the fourth, the fifth or the sixth Crown corporation the Government has sold off. It started out by selling off the Northern Transportation Company. I would venture to guess that the subsidies being paid to the present Northern Transportation Company are just as large as they were when it was run as a Crown corporation. The service to northern areas which was a requirement under the Crown corporation's mandate has diminished. Many communities in the north are no longer able to depend on the Northern Transportation Company for transportation.

The Government also sold the Kidd Creek Mines. The Kidd Creek Mines were to close down, but as I understand it, there was a need to keep a number of jobs in that particular area. There was no particular reason why the Kidd Creek Mines should not have been sold. Since it was part of the Canada Development Corporation, it did not require legislation to sell it.

• (1220)

We went through the process of selling de Havilland. Again, as with Canadair, it looks as though we will sell another corporation at a value much less than the people of Canada should have expected for the type of investment that they had made.

The Government sold Canadian Arsenals. Again, I think that the reason was ideological, and had nothing to do with the commercial aspects of the situation, because there were really good reasons for keeping Canadian Arsenals. There are many people in this country, and many people in the world, who would like to take the development or the production of armaments away from the private corporations that operate on a straight profit basis, and instead give it to the state that will then make it part of its keeping of the peace, rather than the making of war.

The Government needs to look very carefully at why it is doing what it is doing. We are different from the United States. Many years ago the Conservatives stopped the making of the Avro-Arrow, and by doing so eliminated the aerospace industry from Canada for many years. We still have not caught up to that Conservative mistake.

What the Government needs to put before this House is a plan for privatization, which we can accept and know that it will work and be for the benefit of Canadians.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Questions or comments.

Mr. McDermid: I wish to make one brief comment on the Hon. Member's speech. It worries me when I hear an Hon. Member like my friend from Prince Albert stand up and talk about how great nationalization is, and how well the Government can run everything. It is obvious that the philosophy of the New Democratic Party is different from the philosophy of the Progressive Conservative Party. That is well known throughout the country. I cannot believe that the Hon. Member can stand up and say that all 400 odd Crown corporations that were created by the Liberals all served a very useful purpose and did a great job. Has the Hon. Member taken the time to look at those Crown corporations to which he refers in a very wide-ranging manner, and examine them like this Government has, and found some to be not serving the public policy position, and not doing the job for which they were intended?

Mr. Hovdebo: The Hon. Member has enlarged on the exact point that I have been trying to make, and that is that Crown corporations were established in the past for some reason. If that reason was good then, it should be looked at again before we divest ourselves of Crown corporations. I recognize that the 400 corporations that were established are not necessarily valid to the economy now. In fact, many of those Crown corporations were subsidiaries of Crown corporations that were purchased for a particular reason. For instance, there are 82 Crown corporations which are subsidiaries of Teleglobe. Because they were established in a variety of countries, they all contribute to Teleglobe as a Crown corporation which is viable and which is doing something for Canada. It is also providing service not only to Canada but to many other nations. The idea that a Crown corporation, because it is not making money or doing any good, should be kept or sold, is something that the Government needs to look at. I recognize that, and I suggest that the Government does a better job of looking at these Crown corporations. I do not think much of the idea that if it is making money, sell it; if it is not making money, then nobody wants it, so you keep on. If this continues, before long the costs of operation of Crown corporations will be much greater than at present because the Crown corporations that are being sold because somebody will buy them, will be the ones that make money. The Crown corporations that end up being operated by the Government will be those that are losing money.

Mr. McDermid: I wish to thank the Hon. Member for endorsing this Government's position on Crown corporations, that is, to review those Crown corporations that are in existence, and if they are not serving the public good, either fold them up, sell them or dispose of them in a manner that is right and proper. I wish to thank the Hon. Member for endorsing the Progressive Conservative policy on Crown corporations, and encouraging the Minister of State for Privatization (Mrs. McDougall) to get on with her job.

Mr. Hovdebo: As I pointed out earlier, we opposed this particular divestiture for three reasons. One, we have been given no reason why it should be sold. Regardless of whether it has been reviewed or not, the Government has not told us any good reason why it is to be sold. If you put a for or against situation here, there would be a long list of things against the divestiture, and a very short list for the divestiture.

Second, there has been no guarantee of jobs. There is no basic plan in place for privatization. We are asking that a plan be put in place for privatization, and then we can criticize the plan and know what the Government is doing.

Third, the price is wrong. It is a bad deal. There are three good reasons for keeping the company, and no good reasons for selling it.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Questions or comments. Is the House ready for the question? On debate, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy).

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Thank you, Madam Speaker, for the opportunity to participate in the debate of a very important subject which affects all regions of the country. It is certainly one that has been the cause of substantial concern and interest, particularly in my home Province of Manitoba.

The debate that we have listened to about the relative merits of privatization versus nationalization are worthy of some comment from this side of the House.

The reason for the existence of public corporations is that they are there to serve a public interest purpose. Certainly, in the case of Canadair, when the Liberal Government purchased it in 1976, it was clear that we were engaged in a major effort to maintain a substantial air frame manufacturing component in Canada itself. This was compared to some of the past egregious mistakes made by previous Governments. We all have long memories of the serious problems caused by the sale of Avro-Arrow, and the disbanding of that capacity in the Canadian aerospace industry to produce airplanes.

The fact is that it was a government policy at the time to maintain and to preserve Canada's competence and capability in aerospace production. There is no question that Canadair is and was a major force in the development of the aerospace industry. Therefore, it can be justifiably said that there was a very definitive public interest to be served.

I wish to echo the comments that have been made that privatization for its own sake that simply proceeds from a preconceived, predigested notion of a market economy that has no place for government involvement simply does not make sense. In the case of Canadair, the involvement of government purchasing, marketing, and investment was the primary reason a major aerospace firm was able to continue in the City of Montreal. I would hope we would get away from the sterility of debate itself. The test must be whether there is a public interest to be met. If so, quite rightly the Government has a responsibility to assess where and how it can be most effective in its support.

• (1230)

In the case of Canadair, the Liberal Government of 1976 felt that it had to become a Crown corporation in order to survive. At the same time it was the clear intent that when, if and how management could be restored to the private sector, our Government was prepared to do it if all conditions involving research and development, job retention guarantees, and the maintenance of activities were met. Under the rubric of CDIC there was active development of the basic foundations of looking for a private sale.

This brings me to the specific initiative of the Conservative Government about which we are talking now—the actual sale to Bombardier. Is the sale proper and correct? Does it live up to the rules? In that respect I draw to the attention of the House correspondence which I directed to the Minister of State for Privatization (Mrs. McDougall) on August 20 of this year. I thanked her for sending me information on the proposed sale and the letter of intent. I also drew to her attention a condition incorporated in the letter of intent which indicated that there was a direct relationship between the sale of Canadair to Bombardier and the awarding of the CF-18 contract. I indicated that in the letter of intent the conditional nature of the royalty was far from apparent. Instead, the CF-18 systems engineering support contract was listed as an element of the Canadair sale price and given an estimated nominal value of royalties based upon Canada's share of program revenues. In my letter I went on to say that the transfer of the CF-18 systems technology would cause Canada to pay Crown royalties equal to 1 per cent of Canada's share of the program revenue.

I was really drawing to the attention of the Minister on August 20 that quite clearly in the bargaining and negotiations the Conservative Government had decided to provide the CF-18 work as one condition of the sale in order to get cash flow into Canadair sufficient to satisfy the requirements of Bombardier.

After August 20 there were repeated statements by various Conservative Members and Ministers declaiming any kind of connection or responsibility. After a two-month delay, the Minister of State for Privatization wrote back to me on October 7. Perhaps answering correspondence is not one of her strong points. In her letter she indicated that there was no connection between them. On September 4, the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp), who acts as a nominal regional Minister for the Province of Manitoba, indicated that the awarding of the CF-18 contract had nothing to do with any kind of prior commitment or sale, and that it would be done purely on the basis of its merits and on the basis of a fair tendering process.

I should like to indicate in the House today one reason the tendering process was skewered, biased, and unfair. Also it is one reason the contract was not awarded on the proper criteria. Clearly the Government of Canada had made it a conditional part of the sale when it negotiated with Bombardier. It is duplicity. It is a clear, unmistakable example of a Government not prepared to deal openly and honestly in the House and with Canadians. It says one thing and does another; it makes one claim and takes action in the opposite direction.

I do not have to tell the House the response generated by that particular action. Across the country there is clear recognition that the present Government of Canada cannot be trusted. There is a deep sense of betrayal and a deep sense of indignation.

I should like to refer to the results of a public opinion poll. They indicated, not surprisingly, that over 40 per cent of the persons polled in western Canada felt that it was an unfair and unacceptable practice on the part of the Government. It is also interesting to note that there was the same recognition in other parts of Canada not directly affected by the awarding of the contract. For example, 54 per cent of the people polled in the maritime provinces felt that the decision was unfair. In Ontario the figure was 48 per cent. The national average was 56 per cent.

What must be done to correct an incredible shabbiness which has in effect tainted the particular sale and has caused people to wonder what other kinds of deals and fixes are underneath the table? Obviously the Government of Canada should state clearly some time soon its intentions with regard to the Canadian aerospace industry. Does it have any real intention of ensuring a proper and continued development of Canada's aerospace capacity? I raise that question because two events have since occurred which give some cause for concern. One was the statement of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources (Mr. Masse). When commenting upon the awarding of the CF-18 contract, he clearly stated that it was a decision of the Conservative Government to concentrate and focus the development of aerospace technology in one region of Canada. This raises a question because obviously it has not been the historical pattern up until now.

Since World War II the development of the aerospace industry has been in the Province of Quebec and the Province of Ontario. There has been a substantial portion in the Province of Manitoba, with a number of subcontracts being done in Vancouver, Halifax, and Calgary. If indeed it is the intention of the Conservative Government to begin to consolidate and concentrate the aerospace industry in one or two regions, then it should say so. It might find some capacity to be honest with Canadians. If that is the decision, it should be prepared to spell it out. However, at this point there is no aerospace development plan. There is no strategy. We have no idea what it is, other than the statement of the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. That was then followed by the task force report on the City of Montreal. In its own way that was an important and laudable achievement. However, why was it not done for other cities and regions? Why only for one? Why are all the other regions ignored when it comes to trying to develop an effective plan for federal involvement in regional development? I applaud the efforts to bring together business and labour with federal, provincial and municipal leaders to develop a strategic economic plan for an important region of this country. However, surely to goodness it should be done in all major regions of Canada. That would ensure that the principle of fairness is applied. It would show that we recognize the importance of equal sharing of the development in all regions. That principle is particularly important in the aerospace industry which is highly dependent upon government investment, contracts and research and development incentives. It is not a market-based industry. It would be nice if it were, but in fact it is highly sensitive to government decisions. A large part of its work is defence related and dependent upon government programs for research and development and expansion.

• (1240)

Right now there is a high level of uncertainty and anxiety in the industry. My City of Winnipeg has major aerospace manufacturers like Boeing and Bristol. They do not know what is coming next. They do not know how to proceed. They do not know if they should bid on contracts because they do not know the rules of the game anymore. Even after the CF-18 contract was awarded, tenders were put out on other government related aerospace work with the same kind of criterion, it being "social economic benefits", a one line criterion with no further elaboration. That is contrary to the demands we made in this House at the time the CF-18 contract was awarded. We said that if the Government was going to introduce new criteria such as that, it has a responsibility to ensure that the companies bidding on those contracts at least know what test they will be required to meet. However, that has yet to be done even though Ministers of the Crown must surely know by now what an egregious and stupid mistake they made in the way they handled that contract. Yet they have done nothing to correct it. As a consequence, the major players in the industry do not know whether to expand or whether to put money up front in the bidding for new contracts because they do not know whether the game is going to be played by the rules set by the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources in his interview with La Presse, or by the rules of the tendering process set out in the manuals.

Here we are, in a climate of deep uncertainty, talking about the need to sell Canadair to a private company. The industry has no way to focus on its future direction. I had hoped the introduction of this Bill would afford the Minister responsible an opportunity to spell out how she sees privatization as part of an over-all plan for Canada's aerospace industry. How would she see it fitting in to relationships between Governments? Were there any other "favoured status" agreements that Canadair can use? What other understandings exist? The only way to clarify and clear away the lingering suspicion and skepticism about the way the Government does business is to put on the table exactly what it is the Government expects to happen. Yet nothing like that has been done. We have not received any kind of guarantee about what the future responsibilities and obligations of the federal Government will be to Canadair and the other major aerospace companies. The Government is seeking approval for the sale of a major aerospace company, and that is why I believe the onus is on the Government to provide to this House and the Canadian people, particularly the 45,000 workers in the industry, a clear indication of what the future will be.

The sale of Canadair raises no specific problems so long as we can clearly see that it was done by the proper rules and in the public interest. However, it was not done that way as the correspondence I have read in the record clearly shows. There has been no definition of what the public interest is. As a consequence, this sale will simply further muddy what are already very murky and troubled waters.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Questions or comments? The Hon. Member for Brampton—Georgetown (Mr. McDermid).

Mr. McDermid: Madam Speaker, you are getting to know my riding very well. It is a great riding.

I enjoyed listening to my hon. friend and there are three things I would like to talk about. He spoke about workers and employment. It is interesting to note that when the Government owned de Havilland, employment went from 5,400 down to 2,800. It is now back up to some 4,800 employees, 600 of them hired since Boeing took over de Havilland. In the period of time when the Government controlled Canadair, employment dropped from 7,200 to 4,800 where it stands today. Obviously what the Hon. Member said about a Crown corporation providing a certain amount of certainty to its workers is totally untrue.

The Hon. Member also talked about uncertainty in the industry. He said the companies do not know what to do. If the companies are so uncertain, I want to know why they are hiring people in record numbers. Why did Boeing announce on May 21 that some 250 new jobs were being created in the Hon. Member's City of Winnipeg? Why did de Havilland have record sales in June? That was due to the world-wide marketing program of Boeing which I think the Hon. Member will agree is one of the best in the world.

• (1250)

Finally, the Member suggests that there is linkage between the CF-18 contract and the sale of Canadair. Innuendo is very difficult to defend against. The Hon. Member has absolutely no proof that there was any linkage. The fact is that there was no linkage. As a matter of fact, I understand that Canadair had been involved for some time in the CF-18 proposals. I was somewhat involved in the CF-18 deal at its inception many years ago. We were talking about the servicing contract at that time. I think the Hon. Member will agree that there is no proof whatsoever of linkage in this particular sale.

Mr. Axworthy: Madam Speaker, I would be pleased to respond to the three points raised by my distinguished and hon. colleague opposite. He raised the question of whether it is better to have private control or public control with regard to the retention of jobs, research and development. I will remind him that it was only the purchase of de Havilland and Canadair by the Government of Canada that saved those companies. Had that not happened there would be absolutely no jobs in those industries. The foreign companies which owned de Havilland and Canadair were going to close them down. The Government faced a tough decision in the mid-1970s. We realized that the only way to preserve a major component of the aerospace industry was to put these companies under public ownership.

During that period of time both those companies were engaged in the development of new airplanes. They realized they had to keep up with the newly competitive market and had to invest large sums of money in the development of the Dash-8 and the Challenger. Development is not nearly as employment-productive as mass assembly. The private owners of de Havilland and Canadair will now reap the benefit of that major public investment which they acquired at fire sale prices.

The taxpayers of Canada put a lot of money into those companies to keep them contemporary in the very tough and competitive aerospace market. I believe that since the private owners can now utilize the technology which was developed they are obliged to give some guarantees. No one can say that we received proper and acceptable guarantees in the sale of de Havilland. In fact, it was reported recently that fixed-wing technology may be transferred from north to south rather than the other way around because the previous Minister did an abominable job in negotiating.

I am prepared to say that there was an improvement in this case. However, it cannot be argued that the way in which the ownership was directed indicates the superiority of the private side. It only shows that in this case the public sector lived up to its responsibility.

I was very interested in the comments about all the wonderful new jobs that are being created. My hon. friend ought to tell the workers at Bristol about that. The management of Bristol is contemplating closing down its air maintenance division unless it receives some work very soon. The way in which the contracting procedure was ruptured in the CF-18 decision was a clear transgression of these rules and has caused uncertainty. It will be very difficult to get boards of directors to authorize bids on contacts in the aerospace industry when they do not know whether the decision will be based on political muscle or proper criteria. That is the cause of the uncertainty at this time.

I do not know whether the Hon. Member was in the House when I referred to the correspondence which I sent to the Minister of State for Privatization on August 20. Bombardier's offer of 1 per cent royalties was included as part of the letter of intent. Based on that clear evidence, it is difficult not to see that there must be some connection.

I cannot prove what went on inside the Cabinet room. I was not there and I was not a direct party to the negotiations. However, when the letter of intent arrived on my desk on August 20 and I read the condition, the bells began to ring and alarms went off. I immediately phoned the people at Bristol Aerospace and told them they had a problem. That was a very clear indication that something was going awry. While I do not have the definitive proof which I wish I had, a good detective could see from the circumstantial evidence contained in that letter of intent signed by the Minister of State for Privatization that there was something more than smelly taking place in this deal.

Mr. Redway: Madam Speaker, during debate the Hon. Member spoke at length about and was highly critical of the awarding of the CF-18 contract to Canadair of Quebec as opposed to Bristol Aerospace of Manitoba. If the Liberal Party formed the national Government at this time, would it have awarded that contract to Bristol Aerospace of Manitoba rather than to Canadair of Quebec?

Mr. Axworthy: Madam Speaker, I am more than pleased to answer that question. First, a Liberal Government would honour a fair and proper tendering process. It would not screw around with it as the Government did. The clearly recognizable distortion which was engaged in would not be acceptable. As I said in my remarks, it is equally important that the Government of Canada establish a clear aerospace policy which would outline the proper development and maintenance of the aerospace industry for the country.

Members of the Government have not said how they will provide support and sustenance and ensure a fair distribution of aerospace work. That also would not be tolerated by a Liberal Government. We believe that the entire country deserves care and concern with regard to regional development. That would be the policy of a Liberal Government. We believe that regional development must be the preoccupation of the entire country. Coming from the city from which he does, and based upon those two criteria, the Member should have the same worries as we have in Winnipeg.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The period for questions and comments is over. With the consent of the House I would like to call it one o'clock. It being one o'clock, I do now leave the chair until two o'clock p.m.

At 1 p.m. the House took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The House resumed at 2 p.m.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[Translation]

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

FORGET COMMISSION RECOMMENDATION CONCERNING EARLY RETIREES

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Tomorrow, Mr. Speaker, the Minister will table the Forget Commission report recommending that the Minister make up for the unfair treatment meted out by this Conservative Government and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) to 50,000 early retirees in Canada.

As everybody recalls, Mr. Speaker, last year at this time people who were being forced to take early retirement to enable younger workers to keep their jobs were entitled to withdraw their private pension funds and apply for unemployment insurance benefits.

Mr. Speaker, it was getting close to Christmas time so this Conservative Government—on the sly and without warning, as usual—decided that these people would no longer be eligible for UIC benefits. Commissioner Forget will strongly urge the Government to redress such unfairness, and I would hope that all Hon. Members will support Mr. Forget's recommendations.

* * *

PENSIONS

AMENDMENTS TO CANADA PENSION PLAN

Mr. Jean-Guy Guilbault (Drummond): Mr. Speaker, I should like to focus on another social measure of the Conservative Government, namely the Minister of Health's Canada Pension Plan amendments which will be in force as of January 1, 1987.

Under the new policy, Canadians will benefit from more flexible retirement conditions, the extension of the survivor's benefits in case of remarriage, and new rules on the sharing of credits and pensions between spouses.

Contributors will thus be eligible for CPP benefits between the ages of 60 and 70, and benefits will be reduced or increased according to the age of the contributor.

As well, disability benefits will increase from $87.56 to $224, up to a $588.58 monthly maximum. Benefits for survivors and retirees will also be going up.

These changes reflect the new needs of Canadian society and are one more proof of our Government's sense of equity and fairness.

* * *

[English]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

ISSUANCE OF PASSPORTS IN HONG KONG

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, are Canadian passports being marketed in Hong Kong? The recently formed Alberta World Securities Fund ran afoul of the Hong Kong Securities Commission with an unauthorized press conference. Even the presence of Alberta's Minister of Career Development and Employment failed to save them from having to apologize and withdraw their public offer of investment and immigration services.

But it seems that Canadian passports are the real investment. The South China Morning Post quotes the fund's marketing expert as saying that anyone with $500,000 would be more concerned with the passport than with the return on investment.

She said: "My belief is that the immigration option is their first priority".

Current Canadian regulations can admit anyone who passes health and security checks, has half a million dollars, and invests $250,000 in Canada.

This and the entrepreneur program are taking staff time away from processing Canadians' applications to sponsor their relatives to enter Canada. This causes slowdowns for family applications, one reason why the Government has failed to meet its 1986 levels for family reunification.

The Government puts dollars ahead of people.

* * *

REFUGEES

IRANIAN AND HUNGARIAN CASES

Mr. John Oostrom (Willowdale): Mr. Speaker, in dealing with immigration, the Government has a responsibility to consider each case on its own merits.

S.O. 21

In recent weeks the Opposition has put the Immigration Minister on trial through a series of misrepresentations which I would like to correct.

The case of the Iranian in the United States is entirely under American jurisdiction. Not only has he lived in the United States for the past eight years, he was found not to be a convention refugee by both American and Canadian officials. Contrary to what the Member opposite is suggesting, I am informed that neither he nor members of his family, his parents, brothers or sister, have ever suffered any persecution in Iran.

Does the Opposition not realize that to allow this person to enter Canada on the basis of humanitarian and compassionate grounds where none exist would simply invite increasing pressure for us to do so in other similarly undeserving cases?

• (1405)

In the case of the Hungarian and his family, the Minister's permit has now been issued and, of course, these individuals must pass the necessary medical and security checks before they are allowed to come to Canada.

* * *

[Translation]

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

CONSEQUENCES OF PATENT LAW AMENDMENTS

Mrs. Thérèse Killens (Saint-Michel—Ahuntsic): Mr. Speaker, in his bill on drug patents, the Minister has totally ignored Dr. Eastman's recommendations. The Minister is still arguing that the prices will not increase by a single cent following the passage of his bill. It is a fact that the presence of generic products tends to decrease prices, said Dr. Eastman. He has also stated that in 1983 Canadians paid $200 million less for medical treatment because 32 generic drugs were available.

[English]

In answer to the Minister's denial of price increases, Dr. Eastman said:

My expectation is that the proposed legislation will delay generic competition for some of the new drugs and in consequence delay the reduction in their prices which such competition causes.

What this Bill is doing is removing the competition in the market-place. That is why we are against it.

[Translation]

That legislation will have serious consequences. It will remove all competition for 10 years. The Minister uses the sick to try to create jobs. How disgraceful, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS

PENSION PLAN—COMMITTEE'S RECOMMENDATIONS

Mr. Ken James (Sarnia—Lambton): Mr. Speaker, in early May of this year a subcommittee of the Standing Committee on Transport tabled in the House a report on the Canadian National Railways Pension System. The Committee recommended, first, that a measure of inflation protection be a priority item at the next round of contract negotiations between CN and the railway unions and that the matter be bargained with a serious intent to reach a solution and, second, if the parties fail to reach a solution, or if the solution fails to provide a reasonable measure of inflation protection, the Government itself should introduce legislation providing a reasonable measure of inflation protection in the CN plan, the cost to be borne by CN and its employees.

The Committee was asked to examine this problem at the request of CN pensioners. The Minister of Transport (Mr. Crosbie), after the report was tabled, asked CN to respond. I would call to the attention of the House that six months later the CN pensioners are still awaiting a response from the corporation. I would ask the Minister of Transport to follow through with CN as to the timeliness of its reply.

* * *

CANADA POST CORPORATION

RURAL SERVICE—OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED PLAN

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, I call to the attention of the House how the Mulroney Government is planning to devastate Canada's rural mail service.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Chair must call to the attention of the Hon. Member that the use of the words as used is improper. Would the Hon. Member continue.

Mr. Foster: Consider the few facts which are available so far. Over 9,000 jobs with the Post Office will be lost in rural communities by 1991 at a time when unemployment is already high, 2,000 post offices in communities of less than 1,000 people and 1,500 post offices with less than 75 points of call will be turned over to the private sector, and 1,700 smaller post offices will be amalgamated with larger ones. Thousands of hamlets across Canada which are not incorporated municipalities will lose their postal and community identity forever. People living on rural sideroads will lose the rural route service they have had for the last 50 years and have to travel some 50 miles to "super" boxes to get their mail.

The handling of postal services is just like everything else the Government does, it makes a super mess of it. I call upon the Government to abandon this plan to destroy rural mail service in Canada.

ENERGY

HUSKY HEAVY OIL UPGRADER PROJECT—ADDITIONAL SUPPORT ADVOCATED

Mrs. Barbara Sparrow (Calgary South): Mr. Speaker, I would ask the Government to give consideration to additional support for the Husky upgrader at Lloydminster. We should not, of course, support uneconomical private undertakings, but if an oil price of $20 U.S. per barrel returned within a year or so, as quite reliably forecast, the upgrader would be an economically viable project. With Government support, the scheduled start-up date of 1990 could be achieved.

It appears that the need for government support is being dictated by the financial institutions due to the size of the project. If support is not forthcoming, developments such as this may, and I repeat "may", only be undertaken by major oil companies, and independent small Canadian companies will be shut out.

The technological expertise is being rapidly dissipated and we could well face the situation where, to undertake such a major project, we would need substantial foreign technical assistance.

* * *

• (1410)

SOCIAL SECURITY

NON-PAYMENT OF CHILD TAX CREDIT

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, one of my constituents, Cindy Iles of The Pas, Manitoba, did not receive an advance child tax credit payment last month. She was eligible under the new program but Revenue Canada has not been able to update her records.

In October of 1985 Mrs. Iles had bankruptcy proceedings against her discharged and this information was forwarded to Revenue Canada. However, one year later when the prepayment cheques were issued, Mrs. Iles was disqualified because Revenue Canada's computer still had her listed as a bankrupt.

Mrs. Iles and her husband have three children. Her husband was on sick leave for eight months this year and the family is financially strapped. Without exaggeration, it can be said that because of Revenue Canada's incompetence they will not have a very merry Christmas this year.

How many thousands of other Canadians are also facing a bleak Christmas for this same reason? It is up to the Minister to make sure that the records of the Department are up to date. To be one year behind the date is completely unacceptable.

S.O. 21

CRIMINAL CODE

FORTHCOMING LAW REFORM COMMISSION PROPOSALS

Mr. Andrew Witer (Parkdale—High Park): Mr. Speaker, this week the Law Reform Commission will table the first instalment of its proposals for a new Canadian Criminal Code. Canadians are anxiously awaiting these proposals having made it clear that they expect the Government to take effective action to deal with crime and the criminal element.

I have received many calls and letters on this issue, both from my constituents and from people across Canada, demanding the imposition of stiffer penalties, particularly against those crimes which endanger life and property. Canadians are tired of being victimized and are angry that the justice system provides little protection for victims of crime while providing criminals with every possible consideration and safeguard.

Canadian citizens deserve adequate protection from the legal system. I urge the Government to ensure that any legislation resulting from the Commission's proposals will reflect the views of a growing number of Canadians who demand justice for the victims of crime.

* * *

AIRPORTS

SYDNEY—REDUCTION IN TRAFFIC CONTROL SERVICE

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, the Conservative Government seems to be intent on destroying the economy of Cape Breton Island and the will of its people. At a time when the Government talks of encouraging investment and building the economy of the Island, it has announced that air traffic control service will be cut at the Sydney airport.

Service by professional air traffic controllers will only be available during the daytime hours between 8 a.m. and 4.30 p.m., a reduction of six and a half hours. Officials attribute this decision to intermittent air traffic. However, flights have increased by 15 per cent in the past year.

This move will result in the loss of jobs on Cape Breton Island and will increase the risk to the travelling public. Furthermore, it will further discourage economic investment in Cape Breton. I urge the Minister of Transport (Mr. Crosbie) to reconsider this terrible decision which will result in the saving of only $60,000 to $80,000. Obviously money is more important to the Government than people.

S.O. 21

DISARMAMENT

LIBERAL PARTY RESOLUTION ON NUCLEAR-FREE ZONE

Mr. Alex Kindy (Calgary East): Mr. Speaker, while watching the Liberal Convention on television this weekend, I was amazed by the Party's resolution to declare Canada a nuclear-free zone for the sake of peace. This resolution must have come as a shock to our allies in western Europe and the United States of America.

What this resolution really means is that we would abandon NORAD—no more air defence for Canada—and pull out of NATO—no more defence for Canada against the Warsaw Pact nations. In short, we would become a puppet for the Soviet Union.

Canada's policy should be, and according to this Government is, to bolster its defences so that it can make a meaningful contribution to NATO in order to preserve peace and forestall the expansion of the Soviet empire as witnessed in Hungary, Czechoslovakia, and Afghanistan.

* * *

EMPLOYMENT

AWARDING OF TRAINING CONTRACTS IN ONTARIO

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, after long and difficult negotiations Ontario finally obtained an agreement with the Government of Canada to improve Ontario's capacity to provide high quality training for its citizens, particularly its young citizens. That agreement included provisions to ensure that community colleges in Ontario would receive a fair chance to bid on training contracts funded by the federal Government.

In these days of high government deficits that refuse to decline, why, I ask, would Canada allow half of those purchases for training to be made outside the college system where the costs are very much higher? Not only is this bad management, something for which the Government now has a reputation, but it is wasteful of taxpayers' dollars and violates the agreement with Ontario, underscoring again that the Government in Ottawa is rapidly losing public trust.

* * *

• (1415)

NORTH ATLANTIC TREATY ORGANIZATION

LIBERAL PARTY POLICY RESOLUTIONS

Mr. Bob Hicks (Scarborough East): Mr. Speaker, this Progressive Conservative Government has now, and has always had a clear-cut unified policy on Cruise missile testing, and most especially the necessity of maintaining our strong participation in the NATO Alliance.

However, it will take me several months to try to sort out and analyse the varied hypocritical statements and policy motions made at the Liberal Convention. Thank goodness that Party is not in a position to attempt to put into effect some of these fuzzy, fuzzy suggestions.

The best statement was by the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Turner) who is quoted as saying that "Convention policies while highly persuasive would not be binding." However, divisions in the Liberal Party would appear to be deepening as Liberal Members of Parliament say the Leader must adhere to those policy resolutions.

Mr. Speaker: Hon. Members would, I know, wish me to call attention to the fact that the Hon. Member for Yorkton—Melville (Mr. Nystrom) will rise on a short statement concerning a long-time friend and colleague of all of us.

* * *

HON. STANLEY KNOWLES

FORTY-FOURTH ANNIVERSARY OF ELECTION TO HOUSE OF COMMONS

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, I am sure all Members of Parliament will join me in wishing the best to Mr. Stanley Knowles who, on Sunday, November 30, celebrated the forty-fourth anniversary of his election to the House of Commons.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nystrom: I wish to add that Mr. Knowles has taught us what one Member of Parliament can do. Not only did he serve his constituents with great dignity, but he became known as "Mr. Parliament" because of his love of this institution. He also became known for his fight for pensioners and medicare across the country.

If I may borrow the words of the Member for Sudbury (Mr. Frith): "Stanley, you are first in our hearts".

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): I wish to thank the Member for Yorkton—Melville (Mr. Nystrom) for reminding us of this very happy occasion. Mr. Stanley Knowles was dean of the House of Commons. He is a great authority on parliamentary procedure and on the rights of Parliament, and a great crusader on behalf of the rights of our pensioners.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Knowles accompanied me and others, including the Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley—Hants (Mr. Nowlan), to the funeral of the late Don Jamieson a short time ago and we had the opportunity to renew our friendship. Everybody in Newfoundland appreciated the courtesy of his visit. I had the honour of dining with Stanley Knowles, which reminds me of the famous remark by Grattan O'Leary, "Although he votes with the NDP, he prefers to dine with the Grits".

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: We will accept it that way.

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): I just assume that Stanley had to pay for another dinner.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mulroney: How are the prices at Winston's?

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mulroney: "Winston's in St. John's", says the Leader of the Opposition.

I would like to add a word of congratulation to a most distinguished parliamentarian, a man of genuine accomplishment who has done a great deal for his constituents, for his province, and for Canada.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Mr. Mulroney: Mr. Knowles, on this occasion we are extending to you our congratulations and best wishes.

[English]

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, after that last intervention by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), he owes Stanley a dinner at the Ritz-Carlton in Montreal.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Oral Questions.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

REFUGEES

SITUATION OF IRANIAN SCHEDULED FOR DEPORTATION FROM UNITED STATES

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister, and I have given his office notice. It relates to a question put yesterday, and earlier, by my colleague from York West.

• (1420)

The Prime Minister is aware that the Minister of Employment and Immigration has refused to extend a ministerial permit to a 25 year old Iranian who will be deported from the United States back to Iran. Given that this young man, at least to my knowledge, has no criminal record and may well face death upon his return, would the Prime Minister tell the House what compelling reasons prevent the Government of Canada from giving him the right to life in this country?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think Canada has a record of great distinction over the years in dealing with refugees. Most recently I think that was established by the Secretary of State for External Affairs in helping to bring a number of refugees from Afghanistan to Canada.

In the case at hand, I am informed that the gentleman is a resident of the United States where he sought refugee status. I am informed there is nothing in his record which would warrant that status in the United States or pursuant to UN convention. We have many thousands of people seeking admission to Canada for legitimate reasons. We have objective criteria which are administered by public servants at all times with fairness and compassion. I think that has been the manner in which this particular case has been administered to date. If, however, my right hon. friend has any further information with regard to the case which he would care to impart to the Minister, I am sure the Minister would be happy to consider it and to review the decision in light of the information.

GOVERNMENT POLICY

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I call to the attention of the Prime Minister his very eloquent words with which I agreed at the time of the entry of Tamil refugees on to the shores of Newfoundland. At that time the Prime Minister said:

> If we err, we will always err on the side of justice and compassion.

How can the Government of Canada give the gift of citizenship to a man with 20 admitted convictions and yet refuse the gift of life to a man who will be deported by the United States back to Iran where he faces almost certain death unless Canada offers sanctuary?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am informed that the conclusion which my right hon. friend draws may in fact be quite inaccurate. Be that as it may, my right hon. friend draws an analogy to a group of citizens who arrived in boats off the coast of Newfoundland and Labrador last summer. Indeed I indicated that such people would never be turned away from Canada. They were hopeless people seeking exile and some possible future in Canada.

There is a big difference with someone who has been a resident of the United States since 1978 and, I understand, is married to an American citizen. He has sought refugee status repeatedly in the United States and has been turned down because of its internal objective criteria. He has been denied by the UN for the same reasons. I think there is a world of difference between the two cases, which is not to suggest that if my right hon. friend has new information to impart in this regard to the Minister it could not be beneficially reviewed by the Minister.

JUSTIFICATION FOR GOVERNMENT POSITION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, as my right hon. friend knows, Canadians in Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, are willing to receive this young man and to offer him a job. Perhaps it is up to the Prime Minister to explain the following to the House. In view of the circumstances set forth quite clearly by the American Embassy, how does he justify not extending a hand to this person who, if he does not intervene, will be left to his own and, I believe, hopeless resources when he is sent back to Iran?

Right Hon. Brian Mulroney (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition says "I believe hopeless resources" and that something untoward will happen should he be returned to Iran. If there is any information we would be happy to review it. We would clearly want to avoid any difficulty for anyone, including this gentleman who has been a resident of the United States since 1978, who, I believe, is married to an American citizen, and whose case has been reviewed many times by the Americans and by the UN. If my right hon. friend knows of anything at variance with what I have said, the Minister will be happy to review it.

• (1425)

Canada welcomes legitimate refugees at all times. This Government has increased the number of people eligible for refugee status, and we shall do more. We are committed to a progressive and open policy which will help refugees come to Canada, but that means being fair with other legitimate refugees who are lining up to come to Canada. That means applying objective criteria as fairly and compassionately as we can. That in turn means from time to time that not everyone can get in. We regret that. However, we must have a reasonable policy which guarantees access for those most in need.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

AMENDING LEGISLATION—POSITION OF ONTARIO MINISTER OF HEALTH

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. His Minister for Consumer and Corporate Affairs has allowed his office to be manipulated by Frank Moores' lobbying firm in aid of multinational drug companies, yet he refuses to meet with the Ontario Minister of Health or his officials who have waited eight weeks for a reply. How can the Prime Minister defend those actions? Is he suggesting that the Ontario Minister of Health has to hire Frank Moores to get an appointment?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I have never refused to meet with the Ontario Minister of Health. The letter read out in the House some days ago from that Minister to me was replied to some few days later. In that reply I indicated the position of our Government. There is no truth to the accusation the Member has just made.

As to lobbying, there is in fact a group of former Conservatives, lobbying very hard of behalf of the generic companies, with whom I have met. I have never met personally to discuss this subject with anyone from GCI.

REQUEST FOR MEETING BETWEEN FEDERAL AND ONTARIO OFFICIALS

Hon. Douglas C. Frith (Sudbury): Mr. Speaker, will the Minister therefore instruct his department officials to meet with the Deputy Minister of Health for Ontario—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Frith: —and the Minister as well—don't worry about it, folks—and bring with him the estimates of the cost impact on provincial health budgets as a result of higher drug prices?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I have said repeatedly in the House that if the Opposition allows this Bill to go to committee we will have ample opportunity to discuss all those cost estimates. I think that would lead to a better informed public, more so than any meeting of officials. However, I have no objection to any meeting between officials, and if he is making a representation on behalf of the Ontario Government then I will take it as such and see that the meeting takes place.

POSITION OF SENIOR CITIZENS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the same Minister. Thousands of Canadians, senior citizens as well as others, have protested Bill C-22. It will mean an increase in costs for medication by up to $650 million a year.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: Their protests are increasing. Furthermore, we have today in Ottawa from southwestern Ontario a group of senior citizens who want the Government to back down on this legislation. Considering all that, will the Minister tell the House how many Canadians he has to hear from before he will come to his senses?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I am going to be meeting with that group of senior citizens tomorrow. I have received telexes today from the First Seniors Resource and Research Society of British Columbia, the past President of the Canadian Cardiovascular Society, the Treasurer of the Montreal General Hospital, the Canadian Society of Industrial Pharmacists, the Alberta Council on Aging, and the Federation of Senior Citizens of Quebec, all of whom urge us to go ahead because they recognize that medical research is absolutely important to their future health and well-being.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Broadbent: I assure the Minister that he will hear from many thousands of Canadians, representing the majority, who are on the other side of the issue.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

CREATION OF JOBS—INQUIRY CONCERNING MULTINATIONAL COMPANIES

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, as the Minister has referred to jobs I have a very specific question. We have dealt to some extent with the issue of prices and the Minister has now raised the issue of jobs.

• (1430)

Will he confirm that a lobbyist representing multinational drug companies from the United States was in direct contact with officials in his Department during the summer requesting the removal from any legislation in this field of any requirement about specific performance for jobs in Canada?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, in the preamble of his question the Leader of the New Democratic Party suggested that millions of Canadians are opposed to more medical research in Canada. He is suggesting that millions—

Mr. Broadbent: Deal with the question, Harvie.

Mr. Andre: —of Canadians are opposed to 3,000 research jobs in Canada. I do not believe that, and I have ample evidence to support my contention.

I do not know who met with whom this summer. I have certainly never met with anyone such as the Hon. Leader of the New Democratic Party describes. I can assure him that if he will co-operate in sending this Bill to committee he will see that it is good news for Canada. We should give it passage because it is in the health and economic interests of Canadians. We would be fools to turn down this kind of benefit.

PROVISION IN DRAFT LEGISLATION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, after I saw the American spokesperson on television a week or so ago I did some checking. I am sure the Minister saw the program. In the draft Bill which the Minister was to present in the House last June there was a clause which would have required drug companies to produce jobs in Canada within two years or they would lose their monopoly. Why was that clause removed from the Bill just as the American lobbyist said on television that it was?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I have answered that question in the House already. It was removed from the Bill because the Canadian Drug Manufacturers' Association, which represents the generic companies, asked that it be removed. The provision to allow manufacturing in Canada after seven years will allow Canadian generics to go on the market after seven years. This will give Canadian drug manufacturers the opportunity which they requested. In response to a lobby by people here in Canada I put that provision in.

[Translation]

GOVERNMENT PROVISION

Mrs. Thérèse Killens (Saint-Michel—Ahuntsic): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. I have here a press release signed by ten senior citizen and consumer associations from Quebec who object to the proposed amendments to the Patent Act. These groups believe that prices will go up and that they will end up paying the bill through the provincial governments and their pharmacists, through their taxes and insurance premiums. Why is the Prime Minister using the ill supposedly to create jobs?

[English]

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I have a letter from the Quebec Federation of Senior Citizens. It reads in part:

[Translation]

"We believe that this change in the Patent Act is necessary to stimulate research and thus discover new drugs to treat diseases for which there is no cure yet, such as cancer, Alzheimer's disease, AIDS and cardiovascular diseases."

REQUEST THAT GUARANTEES BE MADE PUBLIC

Mrs. Thérèse Killens (Saint-Michel—Ahuntsic): Mr. Speaker, you will not let me read the names of these associations, so I will send a copy to the Minister. I have ten here from Quebec.

There is nothing in the Bill to guarantee those 3,000 jobs. There is nothing in the Bill to guarantee investments totalling $1.4 billion. Could the Minister disclose the guarantees he received?

[English]

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I would be delighted to. Only yesterday I announced $70 million in new spending in Nova Scotia and Newfoundland in that regard.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Andre: That brings the total so far to approximately $550 million.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Andre: I am also aware of and very sensitive to the fact that the Quebec National Assembly, under two different Governments, passed unanimous resolutions asking us to do exactly what we are doing.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

AIR TRANSPORT

REPORTED IMPENDING TAKEOVER OF CANADIAN PACIFIC AIRLINES BY PACIFIC WESTERN AIRLINES

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport. The Minister is aware of the impending takeover of Canadian Pacific Airlines by PWA resulting in one less competitor in the airline business. Is this the kind of free enterprise competition that the Minister and the Government have in mind for a deregulated transportation environment?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the takeover by PWA of CP has not yet been confirmed. It can be looked at in several ways. It may lead to more competition in the air transporation industry by establishing two strong national airlines. If anyone believes that this may not be in the public interest, all they need do is make a complaint to the Canadian Transport Commission which will investigate.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Orlikow: That will be a big help.

Mr. Crosbie: I really do not like being interrupted by catcalls, Mr. Speaker.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Broadbent: How times change.

Mr. Crosbie: There is simply no civility in this House.

The Canadian Transport Commission can review the matter and decide whether or not to hold a public hearing.

Ms. Jewett: What do you think about it?

Mr. Crosbie: The Hon. Member has a lot to say and I have very little to say in this House.

Mr. Speaker: Order! Order! The Chair can advise all Hon. Members that so far there has been nothing unparliamentary. Would the Hon. Minister continue?

Mr. Crosbie: Mr. Speaker, I really dig your new regime.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Crosbie: If the Canadian Transport Commission finds that the acquisition is not in the public interest, it can disallow it. The Cabinet will have the final say if there is an appeal. I might add that it will be possible to do the same kind of thing under the new legislation which we have introduced and which Hon. Members should pass on to committee.

Mr. Angus: Mr. Speaker, thanks to the actions of the previous Government, most industry people have given up on the ability of the CTC to review such things.

REQUEST FOR REFERRAL TO CANADIAN TRANSPORT COMMISSION

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Would the Minister agree to having Cabinet refer the proposed acquisition—assuming a deal is made—to the CTC with instructions to review it with regard to the benefit or lack thereof to the people of Canada?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, the Government has a policy developed by my predecessor, the distinguished Deputy Prime Minister, under the heading Freedom to Move. We believe in that policy and will stick to it. Therefore, I will not be referring that matter to the Canadian Transport Commission as the Member suggests. However, if any other member of the public believes there is any anti-competitive feature to this, or that it is not in the public interest, he or she may register a complaint and the Commission will do its duty.

* * *

CANADA POST CORPORATION

RURAL SERVICE—PROPOSED ELIMINATION OF JOBS

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, the incredible problems of "superbox", or should I say "blooperbox", have overshadowed the fact that hidden in the postal plan approved by the Cabinet is the elimination of 8,700 jobs in rural Canada. How can the Minister responsible, who presented this plan to Cabinet, justify a plan which would eliminate 8,700 jobs in rural Canada and square it with the fact that his responsibility is regional industrial expansion?

[Translation]

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I may remind the Hon. Member that Canada Post is faced with a deficit that has been increasing steadily, a deficit that must be reduced. That is why the Corporation has submitted a corporate plan.

The Hon. Member is alluding to matters that concern daily operations. He knows perfectly well that these matters are now before a committee, for consideration.

Mr. Speaker, I suggest that the Hon. Member, who in fact sits on that committee, put his questions about these daily operations to the president of Canada Post.

• (1440)

[English]

SUPERMAILBOXES REPAIR COSTS

Mr. George Baker (Gander—Twillingate): Mr. Speaker, I have. The only people handling the mail in the future will be merchants who already have a job. They do not have a job but it is machines, "a super-duper box", as they described to us, a box that talks, uses Visa, mails cards automatically, and even heats the ground on which you stand. Has the Minister made an estimate of the cost of continually repairing the superbox—the one with the lousy locks—and now purchasing super-duper box, the one that talks and warms your toes, and is it not cheaper to reinstate these 8,700 jobs and put back the handling of the mail into the hands of the people of Canada?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member does not seem to take the subject of Canada Post very seriously.

We have just set up a committee that will be responsible for examining the corporation's operations, and if the Hon. Member made his representations before the committee, we would give him the appropriate answers.

* * *

[English]

HOUSE OF COMMONS

PRESENCE IN GALLERY OF NEW BRUNSWICK MINISTER OF JUSTICE

Mr. Speaker: I would like to draw the attention of Hon. Members to the presence in the gallery of the Hon. David Clark, Minister of Justice for the Province of New Brunswick.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

PRESENCE IN GALLERY OF CHAIRMAN OF NEW BRUNSWICK ELECTRIC POWER COMMISSION

Mr. Speaker: Also, I would like to draw the attention of Members to the presence in the gallery of the Hon. Leslie Hull, Chairman, New Brunswick Electric Power Commission.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

PRESENCE IN GALLERY OF SPEAKER OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF ALBERTA

Mr. Speaker: Hon. Members will know that I take special pleasure in drawing the attention of the House to the presence in our gallery of the Hon. David Carter, Speaker of the Legislative Assembly of Alberta.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

TRADE

UNITED STATES DUTY ON CANADIAN SOFTWOOD LUMBER QUERY

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, first I want to welcome the Minister of International Trade back to the House of Commons after her long absence.

Some Hon. Members: Order!

Mr. Langdon: Will the Minister promise, after four flip-flops in government policy on the lumber issue, that 15 per cent truly is a final figure, or is she prepared to give up more ground and cost more workers their jobs?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, I am glad to take the opportunity offered by the Hon. Member to report to the House on my very successful trip to Japan, following the Prime Minister's trip earlier this year.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Miss Carney: Since he has shown such interest, I should add that I was able to follow upon the KANAO mission which found a new Canada here for direct investment since this Prime Minister and this Government took over. I was able to follow up with important amendments to the Japanese building code which will increase our lumber shipments abroad, and to defend our coal contracts by making our point about long-term commitments. This trip was further to our two-track policy for trade, where we place emphasis on our relations with our GATT partners as well as the U.S.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, can the Minister not see that she demeans herself and this House—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Langdon: —by not directly answering a question which is paramount in the mind of every Canadian—

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): Get to it.

Mr. Langdon: Is this 15 per cent a final offer, or is she prepared to give up yet further ground?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the only one who is demeaning the House is the Hon. Member, who is suggesting that our trade with Japan, our second largest trading partner, is not important and not worth reporting to the House.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): What about the answer?

Mr. Penner: Is that it?

Oral Questions

CANADA POST CORPORATION

SUPERMAILBOXES—EFFECT ON PROPERTY VALUES

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister responsible for the Post Office. By reducing the assessment value of Mrs. Karen Faschauner's house and giving her a $50 per year tax reduction on her tax bill for having a supermailbox in front of her house, the City of Winnipeg recognizes that supermailboxes reduce property values. Will the Minister admit that supermailboxes reduce property values?

[Translation]

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Again, Mr. Speaker, I must repeat the same reply which I gave earlier to the Hon. Member's colleague. These are issues of daily operation which are to be referred to a committee. I suggest my hon. friend would be better advised to make his representations to that committee.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question. The issue of the postal superboxes is not a matter of daily operation but a policy of the Government. It is the Government which is installing these superboxes, this superfiasco. Are you going to admit that it is a disaster? So much so that you have to buy ads on TV to sell the superboxes to Canadians who just do not want them.

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Quite the contrary, Mr. Speaker. This campaign is simply to make sure that Canadians are getting accurate information instead of the misinformation which is being spread by Hon. Members opposite.

HOME OWNERS' ANXIETIES

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): My supplementary question is directed to the same Minister. We have already directed this question in Committee to the President of Canada Post who did not reply satisfactorily. Will the Minister acknowledge the concerns of home owners who are afraid that the installation of these postal boxes in front of their houses will reduce the value of their property?

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, within the corporate plan, there is no indication whatsoever that property value will be affected by the installation of these superboxes, and we have no indication so far of any loss in property value.

IMPACT OF MUNICIPAL BY-LAWS

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Whenever there is a new installation in a municipality, Mr. Speaker, it is necessary to verify that your action does not go against zoning by-laws to protect the property value. Is the Minister prepared to make the installation of these postal boxes subject to zoning by-laws of any local municipalities?

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Again without going into the detailed operation of Canada Post, Mr. Speaker, I can assure my hon. colleague that the Corporation has always been very sensitive to that and that whenever particular problems arose, there were always discussions and arrangements with the municipalities involved.

* * *

[English]

IMMIGRATION

REUNIFICATION OF FAMILIES—ARRIVAL OF ILLEGAL IMMIGRANTS

Mr. Alex Kindy (Calgary East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of State for Immigration. Recent reports indicate that approximately 5,000 illegals entered Canada through Mirabel International Airport in 1986, compared to 1,500 in 1984. On the other hand, individual cases of family reunification that proceed through normal channels are being stonewalled by his Department. What does the Minister intend to do about it?

Hon. Gerry Weiner (Minister of State (Immigration)): Mr. Speaker, there has certainly been an abuse of the integrity and credibility of the Canadian system. Of course the remedy is the new refugee determination process that I will be proud to bring forward very soon. Innocent citizens of Turkey are now apparently being made to make misleading or inappropriate statements. If that is found to be so—and they will be treated in our fast-track system—they will likely be returned to their country of origin.

ARRIVAL OF TURKISH IMMIGRANTS—UNSCRUPULOUS CONSULTANTS

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration. We now learn that an immigration scam is taking place in Montreal with respect to Turkish immigrants, similar to the one that took place in Toronto in the spring with respect to Portuguese immigrants. On July 24 the Minister promised the House he would take quick action against those unscrupulous consultants and lawyers who are promoting this system among innocent people. It is now December, he has done nothing, and the cancer continues to grow. When is the Minister going to do something about the real cause of this problem, those who are promoting this illegal immigration into Canada.

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, we have indeed stated in July, when the subject of the Tamils came up, that the Government of Canada would take specific steps. In view of his experience in this House, the Hon. Member will know that when we deal with various countries on an international level, a number of factors must be taken into account. At present, with respect to the Turks, the Government of Canada is maintaining contacts. We have someone in External Affairs who has just returned from Turkey. We are attempting to, and hopefully will manage to solve the matter with the Turkish authorities, at the same time as we are preparing amendments to the refugee status that will soon be introduced.

The Hon. Member will have no difficulty appreciating that we are working on exceedingly delicate matters requiring a tremendous amount of attention, in view of the excessively open nature of our Canadian law with respect to the status of refugees.

• (1450)

[English]

REQUEST FOR INTRODUCTION OF AMENDING LEGISLATION

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, once again the Minister has not dealt with my question. On July 24 the Immigration Minister promised to take action against those unscrupulous consultants and lawyers who are promoting this illegal immigration. It is now December and we have seen nothing happen. It has also been more than a year that the Government has been promising amendments to the Immigration Act to deal with the refugee problem. Most recently they were promised for the fall. The fall has gone by and we are into December. When will we have those amendments?

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, do I have to remind the Hon. Member that the lawyers he is referring to are Turkish lawyers. They are not lawyers who deal with . . . I am sorry, but if the Hon. Member wants to co-operate, I will provide him with the information he needs to ask a question that contains correct information.

* * *

[English]

INDUSTRY

ANNOUNCED CLOSURE OF CANADA PACKERS PLANT IN WINNIPEG

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Right Hon. Prime Minister or the appropriate Minister, the Minister responsible for DRIE, perhaps. My question has to do with the fact that the city of Winnipeg, which is still reeling from the CF-18 contract, the railbus business, et cetera, learned this morning that Canada Packers in Winnipeg will be shutting down its hog and beef kill industry at the cost of some 475 jobs. What does the Government intend to do about this closure? Is the Government prepared to admit now that the kind of economic development policy it has in place for Manitoba is one whereby a $1 million grant went to Neepawa and contributed to this closure? And will the Government adopt a coherent economic development policy for Manitoba?

[Translation]

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I think I will simply put matters back into context, and also mention to the Hon. Member that, first, this is a corporate decision, a decision that was made because we were told the plan was very old and it was becoming hard for the company to modernize the system. We have always entertained an interest in the matter, and we have indeed asked to meet the corporation's president in order to explore the possibilities. If the company is interested in proceeding with a modernization plan, I can assure the Hon. Member that this Government is very much concerned about regional development and we will keep on pursuing that goal.

[English]

Mr. Blaikie: The fact is, Mr. Speaker, that the company had made a request to the federal Government for assistance in modernizing its plant. Instead the federal Government chose to give money to the new plant in Neepawa, which contributed to the situation before us today.

GOVERNMENT POSITION ON REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): I want to ask the Minister and the Prime Minister, as I have asked them before, when will someone in the Government stand up and say exactly what the Government has in mind for Winnipeg besides denial of contracts, closures and postponements of other things which would have been accomplished by now had it not been for the election of a Progressive Conservative Government?

[Translation]

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): May I restate once more, Mr. Speaker, this Government's intention and commitment to work at all times at helping regional development, and again our interest and determination to meet company officials and examine the alternatives with them, in order to save the jobs involved in Winnipeg.

[English]

GRANT AWARDED TO NEEPAWA PLANT

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a supplementary question to the same Minister. When the DRIE grant was given two years ago to the plant in Neepawa, assurances were given by Conservative Members of Parliament and Ministers from Manitoba that it would not in any way have an effect upon the employment base of Canada Packers. We have now lost 470 jobs.

Why was a grant turned down for Canada Packers at the same time a grant was given to the plant in Neepawa? And why has the Government not taken action since then to ensure the modernization of that Canada Packers plant?

[Translation]

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, once more, I repeat what I said in the first part of my answer. The decision is a corporate one which was made by the management. It is appropriate and in keeping with market conditions. We are always willing to meet with the management of the company to find alternative solutions so that we can continue to protect jobs as we have been doing in all regions of Canada.

[English]

Mr. Axworthy: I would like to point out to the Minister that it was not market conditions, it was a direct government grant to a new competing plant—

Mr. Mayer: That's not true. You know better than that.

Mr. Axworthy: —which took away the business from that organization. Surely the Minister must recognize that.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT ASSIST IN MODERNIZING PLANT

Hon. Lloyd Axworthy (Winnipeg—Fort Garry): The Minister says the Government is prepared to co-operate. Can we have a guarantee today that the Government will give assistance to Canada Packers to modernize its processing plant so we can at least save the 300 jobs which are being retained even though we have already lost 470 jobs? When is the Government going to show some sign of interest in the economic development of Winnipeg?

[Translation]

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, once again, I think that the commitment of this Government to regional economic development throughout Canada has always been obvious. I also remind my colleague that, if the company should decide to implement a modernization plan, we are always willing to discuss forms of assistance and alternative solutions to protect those jobs.

* * *

[English]

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

AMENDING LEGISLATION—CONTENT OF DRAFT BILL

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs.

An Hon. Member: He is going to try again.

Mr. Broadbent: It is about a serious bit of misinformation. Earlier in the Question Period I asked the Minister why a specific clause which would have required the drug companies to manufacture in Canada within two years was taken out of the Bill. The Minister at that time said he did so because he was requested to do so by the Canadian Drug Manufacturers Association. That struck me at the time as being absurd because the Association said the opposite to me. I have since checked with the Association. Will the Minister now correct what he said and point out that its request was for exactly the opposite? It wanted that clause which would guarantee jobs in Canada be put back in. Would the Minister correct the record now?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): As I indicated, Mr. Speaker, I had answered precisely this question some weeks ago for perhaps one of the Hon. Member's colleagues. The Canadian Drug Manufacturers Association representing generic drugs sent me a letter asking:

—that compulsory licences to manufacture domestic synthetic fine chemicals be granted earlier than 10 years at for example, 5.6 years in order to ensure "a window of opportunity" for meaningful industrial activity.

Mr. Broadbent: That's different. That's not the same thing.

Mr. Andre: In other words, the provision about which the Hon. Leader of the New Democratic Party was talking would not help—

Mr. Broadbent: No.

Mr. Fulton: No, Harvie.

Mr. Andre: Well, Mr. Speaker, they obviously will not allow me to answer, but perhaps they will co-operate and send things to committee so we can get into all of these facts in the right and proper forum.

Mr. Broadbent: I say quite seriously that the Minister said something quite the opposite about this Association earlier in the Question Period.

GENERIC DRUG INDUSTRY'S POSITION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): I would ask the Minister to answer this substantive question. Will he agree with the generic drug assocation of Canada that the one clause in the Bill which would have required the drug companies to produce jobs in Canada was removed from the Bill contrary to what the Association wanted and very much in the interests of the drug companies of the United States?

An Hon. Member: Right on.

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the restoring of patent protection will generate 3,000 research jobs in this country.

An Hon. Member: Here we go again.

Mr. Andre: That is precisely the type of research jobs, the generic companies are interested in—

Mr. Broadbent: You are the master of the half truth, Harvie.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): There is nothing too low for you, is there, Ed?

Mr. Andre: —getting into manufacturing. They asked for a window of opportunity so they could get into the manufacturing. We provided a three-year window of opportunity at the direct request of the generic companies.

* * *

[Translation]

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

FORGET COMMISSION RECOMMENDATIONS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montréal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. The Minister has acknowledged receipt of the report of the Forget Commission and he is certainly aware that the Commission has recommended, first, the creation of a Crown Corporation similar to the Canada Post Corporation or Petro-Canada to administer the Unemployment Insurance Plan, and second, the lay-off of 3,000 public servants.

Can the Minister tell us whether the Conservative Government intends to abandon its social responsibilities towards Canadians by accepting such a recommendation?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I said yesterday to the representative of the New Democratic Party that it would be unwise to comment on the Forget report before it is tabled in the House. That will occur tomorrow afternoon and we shall then be able to comment on the report.

• (1500)

[English]

PROPOSAL TO CREATE CROWN CORPORATION

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, surely the Prime Minister or the Minister responsible can tell the House that he rejects the creation of an arm's-length Crown corporation to deliver unemployment insurance. The Government has one fundamental role. Will it now begin giving up medicare and creating Crown corporations for unemployment insurance? Will the Minister give us at least that guarantee vis-à-vis the Forget Commission?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the Minister says that he will answer tomorrow afternoon.

[Translation]

AGRICULTURE

MARKETING OF INCUBATED EGGS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Guy Guilbault (Drummond): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Agriculture.

Since 1981, producers of incubated eggs have been asking for a national marketing board.

Could the Minister give the House a progress report, to ensure that the final stages of this project reflect the demands of the producers?

[English]

Hon. John Wise (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, I welcome the question of the Hon. Member for Drummond. I am sure he was pleased when I indicated that later today we will be releasing the information. We have been working with the broiler hatching egg association for quite some period of time. We have cleared all stages and will be in a position to announce the formation of a national agency for that commodity. This is another example of the Government keeping its commitments.

* * *

INVESTMENT CANADA

GLC PUBLISHING COMPANY—ACQUISITION BY GULF & WESTERN

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Minister responsible for Investment Canada. He will know how concerned Canadians were by the abandonment of the Canadianization policy for book publication through the decision on the takeover by Gulf & Western of Prentice-Hall. Will we be seeing a replay of that decision, or is the Minister prepared to tell us that in the case of GLC, another direct acquisition by Gulf & Western, the Minister is prepared to stand behind the Canadianization policy and tell us that he will not accept a takeover by Gulf & Western of another Canadian publishing company?

[Translation]

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, perhaps I may point out to the Hon. Member that the Government has always been concerned about increasing investment in Canada.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, since we introduced the Investment Canada legislation, we have had some tangible results, and I can inform the Hon. Member that today, investment in Canada has increased 17 per cent.

Mr. Speaker, this is one more instance of the wisdom of a decision made by the Government in January 1985, and it demonstrates our concern for sustained economic renewal.

[English]

CANADIANIZATION POLICY INQUIRY

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, more precisely, will the Minister affirm his commitment to the Canadianization policy and inform the House that Investment Canada will require Gulf & Western to sell GLC to a Canadian buyer, something which is required by the Government's own Canadianization policy for the book publishing industry?

[Translation]

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I can assure the Hon. Member that we have an abiding interest in the question she raised about the publishing industry. We are still discussing the issue with Investment Canada officials and the companies in question, with a view to finding appropriate solutions and making the appropriate decision, and, I repeat, to safeguard the interests of Canadians.

* * *

[English]

NATIONAL RESEARCH COUNCIL

TASK FORCE'S EXAMINATION OF BUDGETARY CUTS

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct my question to the Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion in the absence of the Minister of State for Science and Technology who, I gather, is in hospital for tests. I am sure my colleagues in the House would join me in wishing him well.

On November 7 the Minister of State for Science and Technology set up a task force to review the cuts at the NRC. The task force, though, has no formal terms of reference and is not authorized to reverse the Government's decision to cut $20 million from the budget of the NRC. Will the Government give the task force the power to reverse the decision to cut $20 million from the budget of the NRC?

[Translation]

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): Mr. Speaker, I echo the sentiments of the Hon. member and once again wish a speedy recovery to our colleague on this side of the House who is now in hospital.

I should like to give a more detailed answer to this question. True enough, the task force does not have the power to reverse the decision, but I am sure the Minister will consider the recommendations and consult with National Research Council with a view to making a decision in the best interest—

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. David Berger (Laurier): I am asking the Minister to authorize the task force to review the decision concerning the $20-million cut-back. Surely he can make this recommendation to the Minister.

Secondly, will he undertake to release the task force recommendations as soon as they have been submitted to the Minister?

Hon. Michel Côté (Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion): If I may, Mr. Speaker, I should like to take notice of these two questions and refer them to my colleague.

As to whether the information should be made public, I think my colleague will take the matter under advisement. With respect to giving more power to the task force, Mr. Speaker, I doubt that my colleague intends to give the task force the responsibility and authority to reverse a decision, but he will certainly take the recommendations under consideration before making a final decision.

* * *

[English]

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, there have been earlier discussions with representatives of the opposition Parties and I simply want to confirm that tomorrow will be designated as an allotted day.

* * *

POINTS OF ORDER

QUESTIONS RAISED IN HOUSE ON MATTERS BEFORE COMMITTEES

Mr. Albert Cooper (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order arising out of Question Period relating to a couple of questions that were asked. One such question was asked by the Hon. Member for Gander—Twillingate (Mr. Baker), and the second group of questions was asked by the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper).

Beauchesne's Citation 360(3) indicates that a question may not seek information about proceedings in a committee which has not yet made its report to the House. In light of the reforms that have recently taken place and the new role and influence that I believe committees of the House of Commons now have, I think it is absolutely imperative that any questions on those particular issues not be raised in the House of Commons. The reasons for this are very simple. If those questions are raised and the Minister responds to them, it prejudices the ability of the committee to operate freely. It also very much prejudices its chance of making a clear, free and independent decision.

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, it has long been understood that it is quite acceptable to ask questions in the House during Question Period about matters which may in one way or another also be under some kind of consideration in committee as long as there is not a direct reference to the committee as such or to discussions which would be identified as those taking place in the committee. When members of the Conservative Party were in opposition, there were many occasions on which questions were asked in the House and accepted by the Speaker which were about matters which were also under discussion in committee.

I would ask, Mr. Speaker, that you not accept the point made by the Hon. Member because at any one time, almost any possible matter that could be raised in the House could well be, and often is, under discussion in one form or another in a standing committee or a legislative committee. I am informed by our Whip that there are over 19 different committees meeting today. If one took the Hon. Member's point of order seriously, it would have the effect of shutting down Question Period. Now, this may be what the Hon. Member wishes. He may fear exposure of the flaws of the Government through the questions from this side of the House. Therefore, he may be raising this point of order in an effort to avoid these questions, arguing that the questions may have something to do with matters that take place in committees. I conclude by saying that the point of order is not valid.

• (1510)

Mr. Speaker: I know that the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray) would not wish to impute the motives of any other Hon. Member. Perhaps the Hon. Member could continue.

Mr. Gray (Windsor West): Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I do not wish to impute motives. I am simply trying to point out to you the effect of the Hon. Member's point of order, if it is accepted.

I conclude by saying that the practice of the House, which was accepted by Members who are now on the government side when they were on the opposition side, and which was accepted by yourself, Sir, and your many distinguished predecessors, would cause you to have very sound grounds to reject the Hon. Member's point of order.

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out that the question that I asked today had to do with the installation of postal boxes, which is part of the plan of Canada Post, and part of its activity. This plan has already been approved by Cabinet. What was referred to the committee, in the words of the Minister, was the postal rate package. When we questioned the President of Canada Post beyond that, he simply refused to give additional information.

Mr. Arnold Malone (Crowfoot): Mr. Speaker, I was rising at the time the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper) rose. I was intending to respond to the Hon. Member for Windsor West (Mr. Gray) when he put forward his thesis that it has long been understood, and then went on to say that the House could ask questions on those same subjects that were before committee. The fact is that is the tradition, and it should be recognized that it has long been understood. It also ought to be recognized that the McGrath report, and its adaptation, is very recently before us. It was accepted by Parliament as recently as this past year. It does set forward new sets of priorities and powers for private Members in the House of Commons.

If that type of responsibility for private Members is to be as the McGrath committee recommended, then clearly there needs to be a position within that committee under the new structure of what a standing committee ought to be—a group that can investigate matters without referral from the Minister, and that does not require any obligations of the Minister for the matters which it studies—and obviously the point of order that was put forward by the Hon. Member for Peace River (Mr. Cooper) ought to be taken seriously and not be reflected back on precedents in the period prior to the introduction of the McGrath committee report.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, the point must be made that since this House has adopted new rules, the Government majority could indeed shut down Question Period by sustaining the argument that the committees are more important than the House. That would not stand up to scrutiny.

I wish to make the point that since the rule changes, there have been situations where a few Members of Parliament could call any matter before a committee, because that was essentially what we did when we changed the rules. We allowed committees more flexibility to call several questions before them thereby making it very difficult for the Official Opposition, or for the other opposition to ask questions, because the Government could always invoke that the matter is to be studied by a committee, or is being studied by a committee.

I submit first that it is not for the committees to supersede the authority of the House. They are subsidiaries of the House and, therefore, by extension subject to the House. Second, I do not think that since Beauchesne's was written, and since we have amended our rules, that it would be proper for any group of Members, or any Member of the opposition, or the government side to entertain the argument that because a subject matter is before a committee there could be no questions about it during Question Period. I suspect, Mr. Speaker, and I hope that you will rule that this spurious point of order has absolutely no value; and that indeed the prime objective of Question Period is to direct questions to the Ministry to elicit information that is supposed to be forthcoming and is of some urgency.

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I rise on the same point of order. It is obvious that under the new Standing Orders that committees can investigate anything they wish at any given time. As Members of the House of Commons, we must retain the ability to raise questions that are in the public domain. Obviously, the questions raised by both the Liberal caucus and the New Democratic caucus with regard to the concerns of how the postal service will be changed over the years are legitimate questions for the House of Commons. They are legitimate questions that should be raised and directed to the Minister at this time. If we accept the proposal or thesis that is being put forward by government Members, then the ability of members of the opposition to raise any question at any time would be jeopardized.

The House Leader of the Official Opposition mentioned the number of committees that he believes are meeting today. Obviously, with the large government majority in the House, there can be a number of committees meeting on a constant basis. That would mean that the number of topics that could be raised in Question Period would be severely limited. I believe that the House of Commons is the body where these issues should be raised. That must be retained. I do not want to impute motives, but we must be careful and leery of any attempt by government Members to restrict the types of questions that can be raised by members of the opposition.

Mr. Speaker: The Chair has listened attentively to the representations made, and the position of the Hon. Member for Peace River (Mr. Cooper). The Chair will consider the remarks and report back to the House. I thank all Hon. Members for their contribution.

REQUEST THAT LETTER BE TABLED

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. During Question Period the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre) referred to a letter, and he did quote from that letter. I would ask that the letter from the Drug Manufacturers Association, to which the Minister referred, be tabled in the House as is the custom and the rule.

Mr. Albert Cooper (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, the Minister is not in the House and therefore cannot respond. His Parliamentary Secretary is not here. The Minister will now have received notice of the Member's request, and it can be dealt with accordingly.

Mr. Speaker: I hope that the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) will accept that undertaking on the part of the Government and that it will be brought back to the Chamber.

* * *

PRIVILEGE

COMMITTEE EXAMINATION OF ORDER IN COUNCIL APPOINTEES

Mr. Reginald Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, on Novemember 18, 1986, the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) raised a matter of privilege in which she sought Mr. Speaker's guidance as to whether or not the intent of Standing Order 104 is being subverted because of an arbitrary decision by the committee.

I was on official business and not in the House that day, and was not aware of this matter until last evening. If I had been in the House, I would have spoken in the debate as Chairman of the Standing Committee on Human Rights, the committee in question. Your Honour was generous on November 18 in permitting eight Members to speak in that debate, and I ask that the same generosity be extended to me today, which is the first opportunity I have had to contribute to the discussion.

It is clear that the committee acted within the terms of Standing Order 104, which authorizes a committee to call appointees or nominees to appear before it "if it deems it appropriate". If it deems it appropriate, the committee may call all the appointees, as it did in the case of Canadian Human Rights Commission appointments.

• (1520)

It is entitled to call only some of the appointees as it is doing in the case of the Canadian Human Rights Tribunal. Some committee members disagreed with the number being reduced from 16 to 7. My own views on that question are on record. However, no members argued that the committee was obliged to call all 28 appointees or any other number. Clearly the committee has the right to call all or some or none if it deems it appropriate.

The committee's action was taken as an amendment to a steering committee recommendation. In the manual entitled Committees of the House of Commons of Canada, Practical Guide it is made clear that the main committee has the authority to "send for persons" and that the steering committee has authority only to recommend "the next meeting of the main committee for its consideration and approval". Our steering committee hoped it might gain by a telephone poll a consensus supporting the steering committee's intended recommendations. When no such consensus was forthcoming, it was necessary to submit the recommendations to the next meeting of the committee. This was done in accordance with the manual on committee procedure. When the committee itself by majority vote decided on a number different from the recommendation, it was acting within its rights.

It has been a long respected practice that rulings by a committee chairman may not be appealed to the Speaker but only to the committee. In 1889, the Speaker of the British House of Commons so ruled. In 1920, that tradition was confirmed by the Speaker of that same Chamber who said:

I am not a court of appeal from the chairman of a standing committee.

In 1975, the Speaker of our House of Commons declared:

There is a well established practice that the Chair ought not to sit as a court of appeal in respect to the proceedings in a standing committee.

In the Fifth Edition of Beauchesne's, the following is indicated:

The opinion of the Speaker cannot be sought in the House about any matter arising or likely to arise in a committee.

Within the rules of the House, a committee has a life of its own and is subject to one master—the House itself. I submit that the Standing Committee on Human Rights has acted within the rules and traditions of this honourable House and has not offended the privileges of any Member of Parliament.

Mr. Speaker: Before recognizing the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps), I advise the House that the proceeding at this time arises out of a matter raised some days ago. The Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse) indicated that he had been away from the country and wished to contribute to the debate. I indicated to him that rather than send the Chair a letter or discuss the matter directly with the Chair, it was more appropriate that he raise the matter in the Chamber. I know the Hon. Member for Hamilton East was notified of that and graciously acceded to the suggestion. However, I just want Hon. Members to know that they may seem to have heard this debate some days ago. They did, but as the Hon. Member for Scarborough West had returned, I thought it appropriate that he be heard.

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, I will not repeat the arguments made at the time of the original point of order. However I would ask you, Mr. Speaker, to consider the remarks of the Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse) today. He said—and I quite agree with him—that the decision about whom to call is a committee decision.

If we look at the follow-up to the original motion to call only 7 people before the committee as opposed to the 16 originally agreed upon, 7 names were not supplied. Therefore, an executive decision was made by the chairman that he would call certain names without having them approved by the committee subsequent to the initial meeting. If he is arguing in the House that the committee makes the decision on whom to call, that particular provision has been clearly violated by his decision to choose or hand-pick certain members to appear before the committee today. They were not chosen by the committee. They were chosen by the chairman outside the committee. The committee has not approved them. He has violated the premise which he put forward in his statement today.

Mr. Stackhouse: Mr. Speaker, had the Hon. Member attended the last meeting of the committee, she would have been aware that such authority was given to me as chairman by the committee, that is, the authority to replace the names of members who would not or could not be present by selecting from the list of available nominees. It was a decision taken by a majority of the committee. The committee has the authority to give the chairman such authority, and it was supported by the member of the committee representing the Hon. Member before the committee that day.

I had the unanimous support of the committee to make the selection. Certainly it is entirely out of order, as well as entirely incorrect, to call into question my exercising an authority granted to me by the committee and my responding to a request by the committee without which we would not be able to hold the meeting which is to occur in five minutes. I invite the Hon. Member to join me.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, there is no intention on my part to impugn the integrity of the Chairman. I was pointing out that in the consideration of your ruling, Mr. Speaker, you must consider all arguments.

Earlier this afternoon the Hon. Member for Scarborough West put forward the argument that it was the committee which was to name the people to come before it for examination. I am simply pointing out that I hope he withdraws that part of the argument because it does not bear up to scrutiny. The committee in fact abrogated that responsibility. It handed it over to the chairman, and he was allowed to hand-pick the people to appear before the committee this afternoon without any further consultation with the committee. Either the committee chooses or the chairman chooses or the Conservatives choose, but they cannot have it every which way.

Mr. Stackhouse: Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) is not deliberately misleading the House. Unintentionally—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I assure all Hon. Members that the Hon. Member is correct. The Hon. Member for Hamilton East is not deliberately misleading the House.

Mr. Stackhouse: Let me say this for the information of the House and in view of the remarks made. The point is that the committee did not grant me the right to decide the number of members who would be called.

Ms. Copps: The names.

Mr. Stackhouse: That was a committee decision. That was what we were debating in terms of the point of order raised two weeks ago. At that time there was not a single reference to the names of the appointees to be called.

The procedure to which the committee agreed at its last meeting was that each of the seven members, including the Hon. Member for Hamilton East, would have the right to select one appointee. If that appointee did not or could not come, and if the Hon. Member in question did not name another member, the Chairman could select from the available appointees another person to take his or her place.

I was responding to and complying with that ruling of the committee. The principle which I put forward in my remarks regarding the point of order remains germane, namely, that the committee made a decision within its rights to change the number of appointees to be called. That is the issue.

Mr. Speaker: The Chair has listened carefully to this additional argument on a matter of concern to a number of Members and to the Chair. I thank the Hon. Member for Scarborough West for his total co-operation with the Chair's suggestion that the matter be heard in the Chamber rather than in the Chair's office. I also thank the Hon. Member for Hamilton East for her co-operation.

The Chair has not made a decision as yet on the matter raised by the Hon. Member for Hamilton East. I thank all Hon. Members for their patience and their interest. The Chair will report to the House as soon as possible.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

CANADAIR LIMITED DIVESTITURE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mrs. McDougall that Bill C-25, an Act to authorize the divestiture of Canadair Limited and to provide for other matters in connection therewith, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

Mr. Mike Cassidy (Ottawa Centre): Mr. Speaker, I waited patiently to begin my speech just before one o'clock. I am pleased to participate in the debate. However, I am sorry to see the Government's decision to pursue ideology without looking at the alternatives and therefore to go ahead with the privatization of Canadair.

• (1530)

A number of Government Members have criticized the NDP for the position it takes on this Bill. They seem to have short memories. I remind them of a press release issued by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) during the 1984 election campaign. He said:

> We will set up a separate Crown corporation for Canadair and de Havilland with a mandate for the development of the aerospace industry and not merely financial control. This organization will be responsible for developing in conjunction with the aerospace strategy so that Canadair and de Havilland will become commercially viable and will continue to be so into the next century.

It appears the Conservatives had a conversion after they came to power. It appears that the predilections of the former Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion convinced the Government that privatization was the way to go. As a consequence, an election promise enunicated by a senior member of the Conservative Party, the man who is now the Minister of Finance, was totally forgotten.

What was it that led the Conservatives to support continuing Crown corporation status for Canadair at that time, and what now leads them to change their minds? I do not presume to understand what goes on over there, but I want to put on the record that two and a half years ago they saw nothing wrong with continuing public ownership for Canadair. Since then we have seen them privatize first de Havilland and now Canadair. In the process they have put forward the argument that things have started happening with de Havilland and things will start to happen with Canadair. Of course. The reason things are starting to happen is because a decision has finally been made and the uncertainty surrounding those two Crown corporations is or has come to an end. That does not say the course of action taken was the only one available. Far from it. However, they have at least ended the uncertainty and that is why there was a recovery in the number of jobs, for example, at de Havilland under its new owner, Boeing.

[Translation]

Well, Madam Speaker, the question of Crown corporations goes far beyond the restricted approach taken by the Government. Ignoring the commitment made by the Progressive Conservative Government during the election campaign, some of the previous speakers in this debate told us that privatization is a good thing for the companies involved as well as for Canada. The policy of the New Democratic Party relates to the fact that we are against this Bill to privatize Canadair because we do question the ideological position of the Conservatives, bent as they are on privatizing all Crown corporations.

Perhaps I might ask a few questions, Madam Speaker. Are Canadians prepared to endorse the privatization of Air Canada and CN, two national companies which played a leading role in the development of this country, or do they have reservations? Did the Conservative Government itself have privatization in mind when offering tax concessions to the Reichmanns to facilitate the dismemberment of Gulf so as to enable Petro-Canada management to acquire some of the Gulf assets and add about 800 service stations to their own network?

In fact, Petro-Canada invested about $800 million in business expansion with the blessing of the Conservatives. Now will they say whether they are for or against privatization?

Some of the Members who took part in the debate on Canadair's future have implied that privatization was good because there was something basically healthy in private ownership, and that it was not easy in fact for Crown corporations to manage their affairs efficiently.

Now, Madam Speaker, I might suggest to Hon. Members opposite and also to those on the Liberal benches that the problem we face with Crown corporations in this country is to a major extent a management problem, the main reason for which is that neither Liberals nor Conservatives would admit that there is in this country a culture in Crown corporation economy. The main difference between our society and economy here in Canada and the ones in the United States is that we have used Crown corporations in a most creative way to set up important industries, develop the country's economy and provide Canadians with jobs.

[English]

We have used these Crown corporations in a very creative way. That is what sets us apart from our friends in the U.S. It puts Canada, in this area as in so many others, midway between the American way and the European way of doing things.

The problem has been one of management. I and many other Members read the criticisms in the report on public ownership and Crown corporations by the Auditor General a few years ago. The report suggested that these Crown corporations were effectively out of control. That led to an important report on this question which suggested a new regime of accountability. However, the former Government did not move beyond a form of accountability which effectively put a number of Crown corporations into a pattern of ownership little different from that of the private sector.

[Translation]

Now, Madam Speaker, I would surely like to see in the public sector a management system that would be different from that in the private sector, that would recognize that Crown corporations of course have some functions similar to those of private sector groups—the need to survive, to pay employees, to produce goods and services, to reach certain goals in terms of viability. But the public sector could also have goals that would be different from those prevailing in the private sector—regional development, national development, carrying the Canadian flag outside the country, developing target industries such as the aerospace industry as we see it now with the purchase of Canadair, the de Havilland Corporation, and so on and so forth. Crown corporations also have a potential for being managed differently from private corporation, as a model for the private sector.

I am wondering, for instance, whether it could be possible within our Crown corporations to ensure worker participation at all levels by sharing the information needed, by sharing responsibilities and then making decisions. Instead of that, we see that the Government has actually allowed those Crown corporations to be managed as if they were in fact private corporations. The same is true under both Liberals and Conservatives—there is no understanding of the fact that there really is a difference.

[English]

Then they criticize these Crown corporations for not having achieved all of the private sector goals when they have not understood there is a difference between private sector and public sector management.

I am very disturbed that the Canada Development Investment Corporation, the parent company for Canadair as it was for de Havilland, in looking for a new future, was neither directed nor took the initiative to look at options other than a simple takeover in the old-fashioned form of privatization. What about the possibility of joint ventures? What about the possiblity of consortiums with Canadian or foreign corporations? What about the possibility of an employee buy-out or participation in running these corporations? None of that was done. Instead the Government took advice from the private sector.

[Translation]

They sought the advice of people who had to make recommendations for the age-old form of privatization, that is selling to the private sector, to individuals from Bay Street or la rue Saint-Jacques and, of course, since they are working in the financial and private sector, the same people are advising the Government by way of the Business Council on National Issues and other such organizations. They actually gave the advice sought by the Government which effectively was to forget those investments, to forget what Canadian taxpayers have paid for the development of those very important corporations.

• (1540)

[English]

At the beginning of this year we were dealing with the sale of de Havilland. It is fortunate that the House of Commons is at least being asked to debate the sale of Canadair. That is a positive move compared to the stonewalling which took place in this House in December, 1986, which finally led to the Government's decision to allow the matter to go before the committee on regional development in January of 1986, only 10 months ago.

Of the $155 million which was nominally paid for de Havilland, only $90 million was paid in cash. In return, the Government of Canada gave a whole series of concessions. Boeing received $90 million in various deferred grants in return for the $90 million it paid for de Havilland. They were allowed $400 million in tax write-offs to reduce the cost of the airplanes they sold within Canada. There were other concessions under the various industrial productivity programs.

That is how we gave away de Havilland, a corporation in which the public had invested hundreds of millions of dollars. The Government is asking us to do the same thing with Canadair. I want to remind Members of the House that the investment—

[Translation]

—the investment of taxpayers in Canadair is approximately $2.2 billion. This is the amount of money that was invested in that corporation. Now Canadair is worth, according to experts, about $300 million. We have lost all that money as a result of bad management under the former Liberal Government. This corporation is worth, according to all the estimates, between $250 and $400 million. How much are we asking for Canadair? A mere $120 million. This is the price to be paid by Bombardier. Plus what? Plus payments for the technology used in the Challenger jet built by Canadair. Those payments have a nominal value of $173 million, but the alternative is to sell all those rights for only $20 million to be paid within the next two or three years. Therefore, a total of $140 million paid by Bombardier—for what? Well, Canadair will get $31 million in grants under the defence production industry program, as well as $20 million in grants for the CL-289 airplane; then, Canadair has been promised another grant of $30 million for other projects, including the CL-215 airplane and the Challenger jet. Now, if we add up all these amounts, we find a total of approximately $80 million which are effectively a compensation for the $120 million which Bombardier will have to pay. Moreover, the taxpayer will assume Canadair's debt and will share in the liability insurance risk for the next fifteen years on Canadair's aircrafts which are now being sold. This is a package deal which is very profitable indeed for Bombardier.

[English]

If it is a good deal for Bombardier, is it necessarily a good deal for Canadians? I would say it is not. We should think this through again. I remind the Government that in the policy it enunciated on the privatization of Crown corporations in the May, 1985 Budget we were assured that Crown corporations would not be sold at distressed prices merely to transfer them quickly to the private sector. We were told that privatization would take place "at a measured pace", that there would be careful consideration of all the issues, and that there would be a fair and reasonable price for each asset. I must ask whether $120 million is a fair and reasonable price for an asset which cost Canadian taxpayers $2.2 billion.

Have all the issues been carefully considered or has the Government decided that in order to please a few right-wingers it must do something to show that it is really a right-wing Government which accepts all the advice we have been getting from the corporate sector and right-wing ideologues in the United States? It may have been appropriate to take advice from right-wing ideologues a couple of years ago, but these are the people who brought us President Reagan's dealings with Iran and the cloak and dagger work from the basement of the White House. This is the kind of thinking which underlies such an ideological move as selling Canadair for $125 million, regardless of whether or not it is a good investment for the Canadian people today.

I would like to remind Hon. Members opposite of an old adage with regard to investing. Whatever happened before, you should look at the current situation before deciding whether to buy or sell. I notice that the Minister of State responsible for privatization is delighted that I have entered into the area in which she used to work. She knows that if an investment has dropped by half, on the one hand you should not hang on to it in the hopes that it will go back to the price you paid for it, and on the other hand, if it is a good investment at the current price, you should keep it rather than sell it because you lost money on it before.

The former Government lost the money on this investment. The latest profit figures indicate that Canadair has currently made a profit of $20 million. That is not bad for a company which the Government values at $120 million. On those grounds alone it would make a lot of sense to consider keeping Canadair in public hands rather than proceeding with the proposed privatization.

My colleagues have raised other questions.

[Translation]

My colleagues have raised other issues which I should like to address also. They said that the Bombardier Corporation has a certain management and marketing ability which will help Canadair. But they used the very same argument concerning the purchase of de Havilland by Boeing.

I submit that Bombardier is not familiar with the marketing of jet airplaines abroad, because it has never been involved in the past in this area of activity.

I have visited the Canadair plant in Montreal. It is a well managed plant, with good managers and good workers who have an esprit de corps which is probably much stronger than the one that existed at de Havilland's.

But we wonder why it is necessary to proceed with this privatization sale when this corporation as it exists now seems to be doing all right.

Although the time allocated to me has nearly expired, Madam Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister responsible for privatization, as she appears ready to stand up to answer questions. My question is this: What is really this Government's policy concerning the aerospace industry? The Minister of Finance has promised us a policy concerning the aerospace industry, but the only policy we get is that of sell, sell, sell.

• (1550)

[English]

Let me remind the Minister that most other countries have a substantial public stake in the aerospace industry. They have seen the necessity to do this because of the high technology and jobs involved. It seems to me that the Government is doing the opposite by selling out the two companies which together made up 25 per cent of the total volume and employment in this important industry.

I believe I have given a number of reasons why we are extremely disturbed over the sell-off of Canadair at a fire sale price. The Government did this with de Havilland and is doing it with Canadair. I call on the Government to stop implementing its ideology just for its sake, and to look at the consequences of what is taking place.

Mr. Redway: Madam Speaker, I listened with interest to the Hon. Member's comments about the opinion of Canadians on privatization in general. I suppose my constituency may not reflect the average Canadian constituency, but it seems to me that it problably reflects the average Canadian urban constituency. It is a riding that is entirely within the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto. It has residents who come from a very modest level in the socioeconomic scale, up to a reasonably high level in the socioeconomic scale. There is a cross-section of over 60 different cultural backgrounds in my constituency.

I recently put a series of questions to my constituents, among which dealt with the question of privatization of Crown corporations. In fact, I was somewhat surprised by the results. First, I asked: "Generally, do you favour the selling of Crown corporations?" I found that 72.5 per cent of my constituents who responded said that they favoured the selling of Crown corporations and only 17.5 per cent said no.

I asked some specific questions about specific Crown corporations, one of which was Canadair. Although the Government had already made a commitment to sell it by that time, the legislation had not been introduced. I found that 69.6 per cent of my constituents who responded said to sell it and only 17.7 per cent said no. On the question of selling Petro-Canada, 64.3 per cent of my constituents said to sell it and only 28.8 per cent said no. On the question of selling Canada Post, 62.3 per cent of my constituents said to sell it and only 30.2 per cent said no. On the question of selling Air Canada, 55 per cent of my constituents said to sell it and only 34.4 per cent said no. On the question of the CBC, 49.5 per cent of my constituents said to sell it and only 44.5 per cent said no.

Will the Hon. Member tell us whether he believes that I do not represent a typical part of Canada, and whether there is some peculiarity in my constituency that is not reflected in the other 281 constituencies in this country?

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I would point out to the Hon. Member that since his Government announced this policy of privatization it has fallen in the polls from approximately 50 per cent of the support of Canadians to just over 30 per cent. In the Province of Quebec, where the Progressive Conservatives won a smashing victory in 1984 with 57 seats, they have been standing in third place according to public opinion polls, behind the New Democratic Party as well as the Official Opposition. I believe that seems to reflect the fact that Canadians are extremely concerned and reserved about the kinds of policies which have been advanced by the Government, including the policy of privatization.

The Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway) has received responses which presumably reflect a fair number of people who elected him. I am not sure of the situation in his constituency, but I would point out to him that there are many fewer people in his constituency who are prepared to vote Conservative today than actually did so a couple of years ago.

I also point out to him that it is the responsibility of Governments to govern and not simply to bend with every wind, and change policy with every opinion poll. My party has taken positions for the long term which on many occasions have raised questions among certain Canadians. However, we have stuck to our guns on matters of principle and we have been proven right again and again. We have not allowed ourselves to be deflected because one or two opinion polls suggested that today we will not necessarily be popular.

It is up to the Government not to sell Canadair in response to the opinion of a few people in a Member's riding, but to implement an aerospace strategy which will ensure that Canadians can continue to participate in this important industry in the next half century. That is the question that needs to be answered. It is my opinion that by withdrawing totally from the aerospace industry, the Government of Canada is making it almost impossible for Canadians to have an industry that will be viable, effective and vibrant at the turn of the century.

Mr. Waddell: Madam Speaker, I want to comment on what the Conservative Member, whose riding I believe is York East (Mr. Redway), has said.

Mr. Redway: Madam Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Much as I would love to hear the Hon. Member's comments, I understand that it is contrary to the rules to comment on a comment, and that in fact we should be commenting on the principal speech that was given in this debate.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): I am sure the Hon. Member for Vancouver-Kingsway (Mr. Waddell) will be commenting on the comments of his colleague, the Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy).

Mr. Waddell: I just wanted to know his riding.

Mr. Cassidy: It is York East.

Mr. Redway: It is about time.

Mr. Waddell: The Hon. Member will know that there was a Member from York East who sat in the House for 23 years. His name was "Silent Bob McGregor". He was a Tory whom I believe sat here until 1958 and never said anything for 23 years. He made a bad mistake by standing up to make a speech because he was promptly defeated in the next election. I know my political history of York East, but the present Hon. Member for York East is very loquacious and makes speeches all the time.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Order. I am sure the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) would much rather hear questions about his speech.

Mr. Waddell: Madam Speaker, I have a comment and a question. The Hon. Member spoke about the history of Crown corporations in Canada. I point out to him that Canada has about 12 per cent of corporations in the public sector, which is not any greater than most successful industrialized countries in the western world.

The Hon. Member for York East conducted a poll in his riding. I, too, conducted a poll and I will attempt to provide him with the figures. I recall that selling Petro-Canada was very unpopular. Privatization has been a great part of Tory rhetoric. I suggest the Hon. Member read my speech. I referred to Professor John Langford, who is Professor of Public Administration at the University of Victoria. He is an expert on privatization and indicated, in a summary of his speech, that the support for privatization among the public was by those people who make more than $50,000 a year and tend to be in private business. I suggest that these are the people who like to profit by selling Canadian Crown corporations. They can buy them at fire sale prices, as will happen in this case.

I want to ask the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) about the alternatives he mentioned and what the Government could have done instead of selling the Crown corporation to Bombardier at a fire sale price. The Hon. Member outlined a few, but, I wonder if he could go into further detail about what alternatives a Government has in dealing with a Crown corporation it wants to change, reform, make more efficient, and so on? I think this is an important question.

• (1600)

I have just had a chance to read the Minister's speech. She really does not get into anything about why the Government is privatizing. She talks about the best interests of the company, about using private resources and how the private sector's potential as a dynamic and competitive sector can best be achieved. I can point to private sector companies like Massey-Ferguson, Dome Petroleum and Maislin Industries where there have been all sorts of problems. It seems to me that Canadair was being turned around by a massive injection of Government funds and had made a profit, as the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre indicated in his speech. Perhaps the Hon. Member could outline this again for the House so we can have a proper debate on privatization.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Order, please. The time for questions and comments is really over. I believe the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) would want to answer the question of his colleague, which was a very long question, so I will allow one minute for the Hon. Member for Ottawa Centre to reply.

Mr. Cassidy: Mr. Speaker, I would not dare to outline all of what needs to be done with respect to privatization in the course of just one minute. I would point out, however, that we have some several hundred Crown corporations which need to be dealt with on a case-by-case basis. Many, if not most of them, will prove to be worthwhile to keep in the public sector. However, what the Government is doing is starting with the ideological bias of: "Let's get rid of it" and is not prepared to look at the other options which also include joint ventures, turning these corporation into co-operatives and studying means by which these Crown corporations might enter into consortiums or co-operative arrangements with other Canadian or foreign corporations. These are the kinds of options which are a lot more creative than simply "sell, sell, sell". That is the Conservative way, and it is not just "sell", it is sell out.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[Translation]

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): It is my duty, pursuant to Standing Order 66, to inform the House that the questions to be raised tonight at the time of adjournment are as follows: the Hon. Member for Saint-Léonard—Anjou (Mr. Gagliano)—Canada Post Corporation—(a) Apparent contradiction in Government policies (b) Apparent inequities concerning postal services; the Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster)—Trade—(a) Announced closure of lumber mill at Nairn, Ontario (b) Restoration of jobs—Government position; the Hon. Member for Essex—Windsor (Mr. Langdon)—Pharmaceutical Industry—(a) Request that cost impact studies be released (b) Request that Minister promise to release studies.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[Translation]

CANADAIR LIMITED DIVESTITURE ACT

MEASURE TO ENACT

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mrs. McDougall that Bill C-25, an Act to authorize the divestiture of Canadair Limited and to provide for other matters in connection therewith, be read the second time and referred to a legislative committee.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Is the House ready for the question? Resuming debate. The Hon. Member for Yorkton—Melville (Mr. Nystrom).

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Madam Speaker, I welcome this opportunity to comment on a very important subject, namely Bill C-25, the privatization of Canadair and the sale of Canadair to Bombardier, a big Canadian company in the private sector in Montreal.

To me, Madam Speaker, what is important is the future of this country and how it is affected by privatization. It is important to know what we want to do as a country and what kind of future we want for Canada.

The privatization matter was raised two years ago by the former Minister of Regional Industrial Expansion, Mr. Sinclair Stevens. The former Minister referred to the possibility of privatizing Canadair and de Havilland. Madam Speaker, as you know, de Havilland was sold several months ago to a big private company in the United States, the Boeing Corporation.

Madam Speaker, the current situation is a bit different. We now have a proposal to sell Canadair to a large Canadian company instead of a large foreign company. That may make a slight difference in this case. Something else is different as well. We have a new Minister—he just left the House, Madam Speaker—and I think the new Minister—and I speak well of the Minister because, Madam Speaker, he is being more open with the House than Mr. Stevens was. He has given Members a lot more information than they had on de Havilland. Nevertheless, I have a number of major questions. The issue is an important one for the employees, men and women, in Montreal. It is an important one from the point of view of the role of Crown corporations in this country.

Madam Speaker, do we have guarantees from this Government that safeguard the jobs of employees working for Canadair?

Do we now have guarantees that major technologies will be developed here in Canada for the aerospace industry? Do we have major guarantees for the Montreal area? And is the price a good price for Canada? During the last ten or fifteen years, Canadian men and women have paid about $2.2 billion into Canadair. And now the Minister is suggesting we may get only $120 million for Canadair.

What is the history of Canadair, Madam Speaker? Canadair was bought by the Trudeau Government from General Dynamics in 1976, ten years ago. The Government bought it because General Dynamics had a problem. People who worked in the industry saw a possibility that the company might go bankrupt. Canadair is now No. 1 in the Canadian aerospace industry. And since 1944, that is 42 years ago, that industry has built something like 4,000 aircraft here in Canada. Of those 4,000 aircraft, it has built 600 jets here in Canada. And I know, Madam Speaker, that you agree with me when I say that one of Canadair's great successes was the building of its Challenger aircraft. The Challenger was a success, a great success because the Government massively subsidized research and development for that important aircraft which was sold around the world.

There is something else about Canadair: this Canadian corporation, like many other aerospace industries, has many contracts with the military, not only the Canadian military but also the Pentagon in the United States and NATO.

One other thing, and I already mentioned it, this is an important issue for Montrealers. There are four Canadair plants—three in Ville-Saint-Laurent, a suburb of Montreal, and a fourth one in Dorval where there are now 4,500 jobs. Madam Speaker, that industry is extremely important for Montreal, for the Province of Quebec and for Canada as a whole. And as I said, this is an important aspect of our overall philosophy of developing this country's future.

[English]

It is a very important industry in terms of technology and in terms of where we are going as a country. We must have some real development in the aerospace industry in the future. If one looks around at most countries in the world, one finds a great deal of public investment and involvement in the aerospace industry.

• (1610)

I would like to ask my friends in the Conservative Party to consider why they are privatizing this company and indeed why they are setting out on the course of privatization. I am concerned that some members of the Government Party have bees in their bonnets and want to privatize, as much as possible, some of the great Crown corporations in Canada. Perhaps some of those Crown corporations should be privatized. I am not arguing that all the Crown corporations should stay that way forever. However, let us not privatize in a carte blanche fashion.

Let us look at the history and ideology of the Conservative Party of Canada. Going back to Sir John A. Macdonald through to John Diefenbaker, Conservatives have believed that there is a role for the state to play through Crown corporations.

Mr. Boyer: Hear, hear!

Mr. Nystrom: One of my Conservative friends has said: "Hear, hear", and he is right. It was a Conservative Party that brought the CBC, the CNR and many of the other great national Crown corporations to Canada.

[Translation]

Madam Speaker, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as well as the Canadian Wheat Board and other Crown corporations of major importance in Canada today were established by the Conservative Party a long time ago. However, that was a different Conservative Party, a more Progressive one than the present Conservative Party.

[English]

It was not only the National Conservative Party that had an interest in public institutions. A few years ago, Premier Bill Davis of Ontario bought shares in Suncor. Peter "The Red" Lougheed started PWA in Alberta. As well, he put public funds into the oil industry and took out equity in that industry for the Province of Alberta. There is a tradition in the Conservative Party to recognize the importance of public participation of Crown corporations in the economy.

I would plead with my friends in the Conservative Party not to get carried away and try to privatize many of our important national Crown corporations and institutions. For example, the Hon. Member for York East (Mr. Redway) said he sent out a questionnaire in his riding and received responses indicating that 51 per cent of the people wanted this privatized, 65 per cent wanted that privatized and 70 per cent wanted the other thing privatized. I tell the Hon. Member not to be fooled.

When the Hon. Member for Yellowhead (Mr. Clark) was elected Prime Minister in 1979, he wanted to privatize Petro-Canada. Because he wanted to privatize Petro-Canada he lost a lot of public support. He also lost a vote of confidence in the House in December of 1979, and that resulted in his defeat as Prime Minister nine months after he was first elected. When Canadians realized that Petro-Canada might disappear they turned en masse against the Conservative Party led by the former Prime Minister and they voted for a lot of New Democrats and Liberals.

I remember very well the history of Petro-Canada. I remember the minority Government of 1972-74 at which time one of the conditions members of the New Democratic Party gave for making Parliament work was the establishment of a Crown corporation in the oil industry. I am very proud of the role played by Stanley Knowles, David Lewis and others in 1972-74 in getting Mr. Trudeau to accept the idea of a Crown corporation in the oil industry, which was eventually called Petro-Canada. I was very proud to work for some time on the committee discussing that particular issue.

There was nothing but opposition from members of the Conservative Party, day after day, week after week, month after month, to Petro-Canada. Just as they are doing now about the Canadair and de Havilland questions, they would rail, rant and rave against public participation in the oil industry. Then when they won the election, they wanted to privatize and the Canadian people said no. They reacted by electing a new Government and more New Democrats from western Canada. We took seats from Conservative Members in British Columbia, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. The Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry (Mr. Axworthy) was elected federally for his Party for the first time. One of the reasons for this was the Conservative Party's stand on Petro-Canada.

Members of the Conservative Party realized that they were wrong in trying to privatize Petro-Canada, just as I hope they will soon realize they are wrong in trying to privatize some of these other big Crown corporations. Early in the spring of 1980, the former Leader of the Conservative Party, the then Leader of the Opposition, announced that the Conservative Party had changed its mind on the Petro-Canada question. It would no longer privatize it. Conservatives would keep Petro-Canada as one of our national Crown corporations.

Mr. Della Noce: Not true. He doesn't know what he's talking about.

[Translation]

Mr. Nystrom: I see that the Hon. Member from Montreal does not agree at all with me, but if he examines, as I hope he will, the minutes of the House, Hansard, he will find a speech by Mr. Clark who was then leader of the Opposition and said that the Conservative Party had changed its mind and wanted Petro-Canada to remain a Crown corporation. However, Madam Speaker, now that the Conservative Government has purchased Gulf and Petro-Canada has become bigger than ever under a Conservative Government which now agrees with the idea of having the Crown corporation, Petro-Canada——which is of course a nationally-owned oil company.

[English]

That is the history of privatization under the Conservative Party. As well, it is a history of the reaction of the Canadian people to public ownership in Canada. Canadians are very proud of many of their national institutions and they realize the need for a mix between private, co-operative and public ownership.

Before I sit down, Madam Speaker, I want to say a little more about the principle of privatization. I will do so as a Member of Parliament from Saskatchewan. I noticed that the Hon. Member for Assiniboia (Mr. Gustafson) was here a few moments ago. Perhaps he is still somewhere in the House and would like to comment on my remarks later on.

I come from a province which probably has more public ownership and Crown corporations than any other province in Canada, the Province of Saskatchewan. Many of those Crown corporations were started up back in the 1940s when Tommy Douglas was Premier of the province. Our Party was in power for some 20 years. In 1964 when the Party was defeated the Liberal Premier, Ross Thatcher, kept most of those important Crown corporations. He privatized a few of them but he kept the basic and fundamental ones. Then Allan Blakeney became the Premier for another 11 years. At that time, there was once again an expansion of Crown corporations in Saskatchewan. Now under Grant Devine, the Conservative Premier of Saskatchewan, the major Crown corporations have been kept, once again showing that the Conservative Party realizes that there is a very important role for Crown corporations to play in Canada.

In Saskatchewan there are publicly-owned utilities like the Saskatchewan Power Corporation, Saskatchewan Telecommunications and Saskatchewan Transportation Company. As well, there are many very important economic Crown corporations, including Saskatchewan Mining and Development Corporation and one of the biggest Crown corporations, the Potash Corporation of Saskatchewan. None of these corporations has been privatized by a very Conservative, right-wing Government headed up by Premier Grant Devine.

I would argue that there is genuine support for very strong publicly-owned corporations. Corporations like Canadair should remain in the public sector and de Havilland should not have been sold to Boeing. Indeed, these corporations should be publicly owned. I think there is a very important role for the public sector to play in our society.

Mr. Della Noce: Vote Liberal.

[Translation]

Mr. Nystrom: I am not a Liberal at all, I am a Social Democrat, Madam Speaker. The Hon. Member for Montreal East was a Liberal, which I was not, and if I am not mistaken, he was active with the Liberal Party for a long time.

Mr. Della Noce: On a point of order, Madam Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Hon. Member for Duvernay (Mr. Della Noce) on a point of order.

Mr. Della Noce: Madam Speaker, I believe my hon. colleague is unintentionally and inadvertedly misleading the House, for I never belonged to any political party, Liberal or other, before I was elected in 1984.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Hon. Member for Yortkon—Melville (Mr. Nystrom) has the floor.

Mr. Nystrom: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I accept the remarks of the Hon. Member for Montreal East. Maybe it was another Conservative Member, I apologize. Maybe the Hon.

Member was not active with a political party, maybe he just stuck with a deep admiration for Mr. Trudeau, I do not know.

• (1620)

[English]

I was making the argument that there is a very important role in this country for Crown corporations, and for public ownership. Saskatchewan is a very good example. There is very broad support for that in our province, and in our country as a whole.

Not only do we have Crown corporations, in our province we have a great tradition of another form of public ownership, which is the co-operative movement. The biggest grain company in Canada is the wheat pool. The wheat pool is owned by the farmers of Canada, the producers who ship the grain. There is no move whatsoever to have more and more grain going to the private sector be it Cargill, or any other company. In Saskatchewan there is tremendous support for the co-operative movement and the credit union movement. There is tremendous support for the whole co-operative movement, whether it is in retail stores, or what have you. There is a great tradition for the co-operative movement and for public ownership.

[Translation]

And I know that in Quebec, it is exactly the same thing; the co-operative movement is very popular in Quebec. Caisses Populaires are very popular in Quebec. I also know that since 1960 there is a major participation in the Quebec public sector. I am thinking of René Lévesque who, at the time he was a Liberal minister nationalized Hydro-Quebec, a large public corporation which is now making substantial profits.

[English]

There are many other big Crown corporations in Quebec. There is a great tradition in this country to have Crown corporations.

My main reason for intervening in this debate was to raise with members of the Conservative Party, who I believe are good friends of mine, these questions of privatization. I would like to remind them of their tradition that goes back to Sir John A. Macdonald, and follows through to John Diefenbaker. They initiated many of the Crown corporations that we have today.

I would like to remind my friend from York East that he may have received some answers in a questionnaire from constituents, but I think those answers would be different if those constituents heard a real debate about Crown corporations in Canada, just as it was during Petro-Canada's days of great debate in the House. The former Prime Minister of Canada back in 1979 wanted to privatize Petro-Canada. The people of this country reacted against that. One of the reasons the then Prime Minister lost the election was because he wished to privatize Air Canada. Once the public became sensitized to that they reacted in a very negative way. In fact, it was so negative that his Party was soundly defeated. A lot of ground was lost in western Canada where the supposed support for privatization was very great.

I can assure you that the overwhelming majority of people in my riding and province do not want Petro-Canada privatized. They do not want it privatized because they understand the issue very well. Of course, the Conservative Party realized that when it changed its policy on Petro-Canada and decided it should be kept as a Crown corporation.

[Translation]

I would now like to thank you, Madam Speaker, and I hope that the federal Members of the Conservative Party will agree with me in the forthcoming weeks that we need Canadair as a Crown corporation, a state corporation belonging to all Canadians.

[English]

Mr. Boyer: I listened with interest to the Hon. Member who, like his colleague the Member for Ottawa Centre (Mr. Cassidy) who spoke a little earlier this afternoon, has urged that the question of privatization not be proceeded with as a matter of ideology. That is interesting, because if those spokesmen for the New Democratic Party are urging the Government not to proceed with something as a matter of ideology, it is most assuredly the other side of the coin that applies to members of that caucus where nationalization and state ownership is a fundamental part of the platform of that Party. Through a number of decades there had been clear examples of that policy being proceeded with on the basis of ideology, and not with particular regard to the practicality of state ownership in a specific case. For example, in the Member's own Province of Saskatchewan the CCF set up a shoe company which was state-owned, and which turned out to be a bust. There was a perfect example of something not working.

Mr. Waddell: We haven't heard about that one for years.

Mr. Boyer: It is in the Hon. Member's interest to actually come at this question in a more accurate historic perspective than he has, because it is most assuredly an important part of the Conservative Party's tradition in this country, that when it is necessary for the state to become involved in social or economic activity that is done through Crown corporations, or Government departments where appropriate.

Mr. Orlikow: You're right. Why are you changing now?

Mr. Boyer: Because times change. What is good in one instance cumulatively can make a difference over time.

In the United Kingdom in two days the deadline closes for people to subscribe for shares in the state-owned gas company. That public offering, as part of a privatization effort in that country, is being over-subscribed by individual citizens who are picking up on this opportunity to see privatization proceed, with the people of the country having a more direct stake in what is involved.

In other words, there is a creative way that one can approach these questions of state ownership or private ownership. The key thing is that the people of Canada are served. In doing so, no Government should be a slave to outdated ideology. The response that is coming from speakers for the New Democratic Party when they approach this question of privatization shows a clear knee-jerk reaction to these questions of state ownership. The Hon. Member's remarks, although they do refer to history, fail to take into account the movement of history, and the cumulative effect of vast numbers of Crown corporations that were created under previous Liberal administrations, to the point where what once was a useful adjunct of Government, a useful state purpose, has been over-used and abused. It has seen Government active in areas where it is counterproductive. That is why this Government is beginning the process of bringing some rationality and order into the mixed economy that will continue as part of this country's approach to economic regulation and commerce.

Mr. Nystrom: I appreciate the Member's question and comment. He says that we are being "ideolized". I would argue instead that the Conservative Party members are the ideologues, not members of this Party. For example, here I have an editorial from the hometown newspaper of the Member for Etobicoke—Lakeshore (Mr. Boyer), The Toronto Star of July 8, 1986, which states that the Government's privatization campaign is not a response to public pressure. Rather, the effort seems to stem from neo-Conservative ideology. Madam Speaker, it is neo-Conservative ideology. They are the ideologues.

The Hon. Member mentioned a shoe factory in Saskatchewan that closed many years ago, in the 1940s or early 1950s. Sure, there have been some failures in public enterprise. I would like to ask the Member about his own riding and his own city. What about the closure of Goodyear in his own city where some 1,500 jobs have been lost? That is a private sector company that is closing down. That is in the private sector. Today in Winnipeg Canada Packers announced that they were closing down part of their St. Boniface plant. This is a private sector failure. Part of its plant is being closed down in Winnipeg, and over 400 jobs will be lost. Every day in this country there are private companies going broke, so it is not just the public sector that has a failure once in a while. There are many, many failures in the private sector.

Mr. Riis: Thousands every year.

Mr. Nystrom: As I mentioned before, the Hon. Member is the one who is being the ideologue. It is the neo-Conservative ideology that the people in this country are now starting to reject. As the last poll showed, that Party is sitting at some 29 per cent support. One of the reasons is the neo-Conservative ideology we see across the way.

I made it very clear in my remarks that I support, and the history of the CCF-NDP Government in this country in Saskatchewan, Manitoba, and British Columbia has been to support not just Crown corporations, but also to support a co-operative movement of small business. I know that the Member for Assiniboia would agree with me, because he is a great red Tory who comes from that tradition in Saskatchewan that believes that we need a mixture of co-operative and public enterprise along with small business and the farm economy. That is the history of the CCF. That is the history of the Government of the CCF when it was in power. The Member across the way knows that. I said that this afternoon, but he chose not to listen.

[Translation]

Mr. Guilbault (Drummond): Madam Speaker, I listened closely to the Hon. Member, and he said that, as Conservatives, it is our policy to privatize Crown corporations while, in fact, this industry had suffered losses since 1976 and had an accumulated deficit of $2.4 billion which had to be borne by Canadian taxpayers, which is quite enormous, and while it is a fact that state-owned corporations are being privatized increasingly in other countries.

For instance, we know that France has privatized its pulp and paper industry and that part of it has been purchased by Canadians from the Drummond constituency, the Lemaire brothers. Now, instead of record deficits, there are record profits, which is to the advantage of the whole French industry. The same would happen in this case for Canada and Canadians.

In my opinion, it is insulting for the Bombardier administrators for someone to say that they are not offering an innovative and efficient management since we know that Bombardier began as a small snowmobile industry before building the New York and Mexico City subways and that this company will have engineers and the advantage of all the specialized workers of Canadair.

I must say that Crown corporations often have problems because of a top-heavy operation. Someone said earlier that this was a management problem and that you need one type of management in Government and another in the private sector. The question of productivity is always related to industrial management. The best way to guarantee productivity is to go to the private sector.

Some of the Members who went with me to Great Britain saw that even the prisons are being privatized over there, as well as all large Crown corporations.

In my opinion, it is quite wrong to say that the Conservative Government is privatizing haphazardly. I would like the comments of the Hon. Member on this point.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Hon. Member for Yorkton—Melville (Mr. Nystrom) has the floor.

Mr. Nystrom: Thank you, Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member said that—

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The Hon. Member has only one minute to give his answer.

Mr. Nystrom: —in England they are privatizing the prisons. That might be the reason why the Prime Minister decided to move the penitentiary from your riding to Manicouagan.

Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member said that I questioned the management of Bombardier. It was not me: maybe some other Members did, but I never questioned it.

I often asked questions like: Did Bombardier give any assurance they will protect the jobs presently in Montreal? Do we have guarantees for the technology and so on? These are important questions for the workers at Canadair, in Montreal and elsewhere in Quebec.

We need time to ask important questions and the Hon. Member for Montreal East agrees with me. This afternoon I asked precisely that kind of questions and I know I have the support of all the workers, men and women.

• (1630)

[English]

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Madam Speaker, the proposed sale of Canadair which we are now discussing and the earlier sale of de Havilland are perfect examples of the blind commitment of the Conservative Government to its free enterprise ideology that ignores completely the question of what is best for Canadians. We in Canada have hundreds, if not several thousands, of Crown corporations, not only at the federal Government level but also at the provincial Government level. Conservative Members seem to suggest that somehow Crown corporations are useless and inefficient. They seem to suggest that we do not need them and that we should be rid of them as quickly as possible. I remind them that most of the existing Crown corporations were created by Governments at the federal and provincial levels. They were not socialist Governments or wild eyed Governments. They were Conservative, Liberal, Social Credit, PQ, and occasionally CCF or NDP Governments.

I should like to put on record some examples of what I am saying.

Mr. Riis: Pacific Western Airlines.

Mr. Orlikow: As the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis) reminds me, the Conservative Government of Alberta under Premier Lockheed bought 100 per cent control of Pacific Western Airlines.

Mr. Riis: And now CP.

Mr. Orlikow: Yes, apparently Pacific Western Airlines is to purchase CP Air. In any event, it was done by the Conservative Government of that province to keep control in Alberta. It was an important consideration.

Also I remind them that the Conservative Prime Minister of Canada, R. B. Bennett, established the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as a Crown corporation. In 1908, the Conservative Premier of the Province of Manitoba, Sir Rodmond Roblin, the grandfather of a later Premier, Duff Roblin, who is now a Senator, established the Manitoba Telephone system as a publicly owned Crown corporation. A Conservative Government of Ontario established Ontario Hydro as a Crown corporation. A Social Credit Government of British Columbia, when W. A. C. Bennett was Premier, established B.C. Hydro and B.C. Rail as publicly owned Crown corporations. It was a Liberal Government of Quebec with Mr. Lesage as Premier which bought out private power companies and established Quebec Hydro as a Crown corporation.

Mr. Riis: What about Alberta Telephone?

Mr. Orlikow: I could go on and on. My colleague reminds me of Alberta Telephone. There was also Saskatchewan Telephone.

Why did these various Governments establish Crown corporations? They established them because there was a need for certain types of services. The private sector did not believe it would realize a profit from the services and was not interested or ready to go into those fields. Therefore Governments established the hundreds, if not thousands, of Crown corporations now existing in Canada.

I am not saying that all those Crown corporations are now necessary. I am not saying that all of them are operating as efficiently as they should be. They are like any other public or private organization. Sometimes they are not performing their functions as they should. However, to sell off federal Crown corporations, not because they have outlived their usefulness or because they are not being operated efficiently, is simply to follow an ideological view not based upon reality.

In the establishment and operation of Canadian Crown corporations we have historically done things in a way which is very different from the way they were done in the United States because our needs and abilities are different. Hon. Members opposite have suggested that socialists are so in favour of public ownership we are critical of all private sector operations. It is not true. It is not the position of the New Democratic Party of Canada. It is not the position of all Social Democratic Parties in countries throughout the world. This is particularly so in western Canada where its Social Democratic Parties are allied with our Party. As is the case with our Party, they belong to Socialists International. They have also accepted the reality that, for the foreseeable future, their countries will operate with a mixture of public and private ownership. Indeed, in Sweden, where the Social Democratic Party has governed for 50 of the last 60 years, there is much less public ownership than in Canada. That is because their needs are different from ours and they have not moved as quickly into public ownership as we have, whatever Government has been in office nationally or provincially.

• (1640)

How did we come to own Canadair? The people of Canada, through the Government of the day, bought Canadair in 1976 from General Dynamics, a multinational corporation whose centre of operations is in the U.S. We paid $48 million. Why? Because General Dynamics was losing money and not prepared to operate the company any longer. The Government had a choice. It could let the company close down with a loss of thousands of jobs and the technology associated with the company, or it could, as it decided to do, I think quite correctly, buy the company and avoid the disappearance of such an important part of Montreal's technological base.

Government involvement in and ownership of the aerospace industry is not unique to Canada. It is a fact of life in most countries with an aerospace industry. The only country where this is not the case is the U.S. The reason is that the demands of the U.S. for production of military aircraft is so great that the privately-owned industry is profitable and able to function. That is not true in other countries. In Great Britain, France and West Germany, to mention just three, a substantial part of the aerospace industry is owned by the Government. Why? Because they know it is in the public interest.

We have to ask ourselves if we had to buy Canadair in 1976 because General Dynamics was losing money and was not prepared to continue, what happens if the aircraft industry has another slump? What happens if sales decline precipitously in the 1980s or 1990s? What happens if Bombardier decides it cannot show a profit, which its shareholders rightly require, and continue to operate Canadair? Will we have to repurchase Canadair at what will probably be an exorbitant price after having virtually given it away with this legislation?

Canadair is Canada's top aircraft manufacturer. It now has 4,500 employees. Since it was first established it has produced over 4,000 aircraft. Its latest and successful product is the Challenger executive jet. That plane was brought to its present state of excellence in large part due to substantial federal expenditures on research and development. Without that assistance Canadair would probably have been shut down in the 1970s. At that time world aircraft markets were depressed. Sales dried up and by 1984 the Government had put over two billion of taxpayers' dollars into Canadair. I do not question that assistance. Without it Canadair would no longer be operating. However, in recent years the market has improved. Sales are being made. Canadair could begin to recoup some of that $2 billion. Yet now the Conservative Government, for purely ideological reasons, proposes to sell Canadair to the private sector at a fire sale price. Members of the NDP will never agree to that decision.

Let us look at the financial situation of the company. Experts have placed its value at between $300 and $400 million. Bombardier will pay only $120 million to take over Canadair. Right there we have a tremendous loss. We have lost the $2 billion and somewhere between $175 or $200 million we would get if the company was priced at its proper value.

• (1650)

That is not all the Government has done to persuade Bombardier to take over Canadair. Under the proposed agreement, if Bombardier enhances its research and development efforts it will get, without further payment, special shares in the company which are being kept by the Government. The Government fattened up the offer by approving $30 million in DIPP assistance for the production of the CL-227 system and $20 million to assist Canadair in its participation in a joint venture with West Germany on the CL-289. In other words, Bombardier got another gift of $50 million. Canadair also got the F-18 defence contract which will be worth $1.5 billion over the next 20 years. I could deal with this issue for more time than I am allowed for my entire speech. Canadair was awarded that contract even though the bid of the Winnipeg consortium was lower and was evaluated by 75 senior civil servants as better technologically. I must assume that was partly in order to persuade Bombardier to buy Canadair.

In summary, this is a great deal for Bombardier. I cannot blame Bombardier for being the recipient of a great deal for itself and its shareholders. However, I believe it is a terrible deal for the people of Canada. What will happen if the market for aircraft goes soft and Bombardier decides that it does not want to continue the operation?

I have one other point to make with regard to this deal. This deal is contrary to the promises made by the present Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) when he was in Opposition. On August 21, 1984, in regard to such a proposal, he said:

> We will set up a separate crown corporation for Canadair and de Havilland with a mandate for development of the aerospace industry and not merely financial control. This organization will be responsible for developing in conjunction with the Aerospace strategy so that Canadair and de Havilland will become commercially viable and will continue to be so into the next century.

Having made that promise, the Minister proposed that we sell de Havilland, which we did. He now proposes that we sell Canadair. As I have indicated, we opposed the sale of de Havilland as we now oppose the sale of Canadair.

Mr. Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Madam Speaker, I appreciate the opportunity to add a few words to the insightful statements of my friend from Winnipeg North. He has explored in depth the issues involved in the privatization of Canadair.

I was talking to a friend in Thunder Bay on the weekend who was active in the Conservative Party not long ago. He indicated to me his sense of alienation from his Party, his disaffection with what the Government is doing. I explored his views while appreciating that, although he may be disaffected from the Conservative Party, that hardly made him a candidate to join the New Democratic Party, given his rather harsh views on how small Government should be.

The aspect of his comments which is immediately relevent to what we are discussing today deals with the integrity which should characterize Government and the breaking of faith carried out time after time by the Conservative Government.

He commented on the fact that in the summer of 1984 he campaigned with the present Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson). At that time he asked why they were not saying what they planned to do, why they were not telling the people of Canada what their policies would be if they formed the Government. The Minister of Finance told him at that time that they would not get elected if they did that, that he should not press them to be explicit on these matters. In effect, I guess he was following the Crosbie strategy.

That is immediately relevant because on August 24, 1984 the present Minister of Finance issued a statement about the Canadian aerospace industry. He said explicitly that he envisaged the two Crown corporations, Canadair and de Havilland, being brought under the direction of a new entity, one Crown corporation, which would ensure that the substantial public investment in these companies, particularly in Canadair, did not go to waste, that the corporations were effectively managed, and that they carried out their operations in a business-like way. He suggested that there might be some participation by the private sector in sales of aircraft. He clearly indicated something of his dislike for public enterprise with regard to ideology.

In the statement made during the election campaign there was a very clear promise to the employees of Canadair and de Havilland, to people in Montreal and Toronto, and to the people of Canada that a Conservative Government would use the public enterprise forum to ensure that substantial investments in the aerospace industry were made to the benefit of the people of Canada.

In light of that, what is one to say of what was actually done? When this gentleman became the Minister of Finance he issued a budget paper on privatization in which he said explicitly that Crown corporations will not be sold at distressed prices merely to transfer them quickly to the private sector. My friend from Winnipeg North has pointed out how cheaply Bombardier acquired this company in relation to its value as determined by experts in the industry, its book value and its break-up value. By all those standards Bombardier has been given a gift. Canadair is being privatized merely for the sake of ideology.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): It is with regret that I must interrupt the Hon. Member. It being five o'clock p.m., the House will now proceed to the consideration of Private Members' Business as listed on today's Order Paper.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S BUSINESS--MOTIONS

[English]

THE FAMILY

GOVERNMENT COMMUNICATIONS PROGRAM—THE FAMILY AND MARRIAGE

Mr. Reginald Stackhouse (Scarborough West) moved:

The Family

That, in the opinion of this House, the Government should consider the advisability of sponsoring, with the provinces, a communications program, including the use of television, that will affirm the importance of marriage and family life.

He said: Madam Speaker, this is the first time I have had the opportunity to speak while you have been in the chair. Belated as my remarks may be, may I offer my compliments, congratulations and hope that you will enjoy the House as much as I am sure the House will appreciate your presiding over us.

• (1700)

The motion I introduce today was introduced earlier this year in a debate during Private Member's hour that occasioned so much enthusiasm on the part of Members that at six o'clock they were still talking. Therefore, I have brought the resolution back to the chamber so that we may have another opportunity to address it. However, I do offer the caution that I hope Members will be restrained in their enthusiasm sufficiently that we might conclude the debate today with an affirmative vote.

Having said that, I must offer a word of explanation and apology to you and other Members of the House. As luck would have it, I am chairing a meeting of a Standing Committee of the House and have just come from its session which is still progressing. Due to the nature of the agenda, I must go back after I conclude my remarks. I regret that very much because, otherwise, I could look forward to the contributions of fellow Members from all parties. I regret that I will have to delay that experience until Hansard is printed and I can read their contributions.

The motion before us would have been debated yesterday, but the House will recall that the agenda for last Friday was postponed until yesterday, and yesterday's until today because of a very worthy cause last Friday, as some would see it. Consequently, there has been a conflict in my agenda, having a committee meeting at the same time as my Private Member's motion is debated.

I want to begin by reminding the House of the fundamental importance of the family, not only to the persons who comprise a family unit but to society itself. Regardless of other changes in our society, social history shows that the family is permanently the foundation upon which any society must rest. The family offers a unique satisfaction to the basic permanent universal human need for belonging, regardless of what culture, what region of the world. We have a common humanity with certain common needs, including the need to belong to each other, the need to care for one another and be cared for by one another. The family has met that need to an extraordinary degree, since time immemorial.

The form of the family has varied from time to time. We have had the patriarchal family, with its stretched out membership. We have had the narrower domestic family, and in latter years we have had what sociologists have called the nuclear, atomic family of the mother, father and perhaps one, two or three children.

We have seen the development of other forms of the family. For example, there is the family in which there are perhaps three generations sharing and caring for one another. We have seen a family of just adults, providing the satisfaction for that need of belonging. We have seen sibling groups form family communities and relationships.

The point I wish to emphasize is that regardless of the form of the family, of how it has changed even in our own lifetimes and how it may change in the balance of this century and into the 21st century, some form of the family will be needed. Therefore, it behooves this Parliament and the Government to take the required steps to strengthen the capability of families, regardless of their varied forms in this country, to meet the needs of men and women of all ages, as well as children.

A major phenomenon of our changing society has been family breakdown. There has been a remarkable increase of divorce, separation and other disruptions of previously normal family ties. That has brought a cost as well as a benefit. It is a cost to the persons who have had to undergo that kind of breakdown. They certainly do not merit judgment by anyone, for I have met so many who have had to suffer more than their deserved share of pain and disappointment. There is a cost to children who very often lose, not only their sense of stability in the society immediately around them but the sense of credibility of those relationships and the credibility of the humanity to whom they want to turn.

I am not unmindful that sometimes, hopefully often, a family breakdown brings benefit. I can only support those who felt they had no other reasonable choice than to bring to an end a relationship that was injurious to them. However, I say that we should not be unmindful of the cost that is borne by the persons participating, and we should note the cost to the national society itself. There is a cost to us all.

What can we do about it? Part of the answer lies in legislation. We have addressed that through reforms to the Divorce Act that provide, among other things, for tighter administration of court orders for support. We have addressed those problems that legislation can solve, but legislation cannot meet every need.

There are some needs that can be satisfied much better by education. We need to remind ourselves over and over again that the law is not only a regulator, it is an educator. The law, by means open to it, transmits ideas, convictions and understanding that are part of developing a healthy society.

We have seen in our time that education is not only a matter of that which is communicated in classrooms, but that there is a great classroom that has no walls—the classroom of the country itself. One of the most powerful means of education today lies in television which, for good and often for ill, educates the populous throughout the day and night.

This motion calls on the Government to seriously consider adopting an education program, of which television would be a part, to communicate the values of family life to our people. I hope that the House will support this motion. I hope the Government will take the required steps to realize it and thereby fulfil a commitment contained in the Throne Speech when, on the advice of the Government, Her Excellency said: "My Government will take steps to strengthen the family in Canada". Such an education program as I suggest in this motion would bring about such a strengthening.

[Translation]

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Mr. Speaker, I have been listening very carefully, and I have every respect for the Hon. Member's views on the family. However, it seems to me that his motion was addressed mainly to the traditional family and marriage.

I think that if the present Government—if the Hon. Member wants communications programs on the family, we would have to ensure that the image presented by these programs is not just the traditional one. And I say this because when we look at the report published by the Quebec advisory committee on family policy last year, one of the major reports on the subject, it says that the majority of families today are not traditional, and that for the past ten years, if I am not mistaken, only 20 per cent of families in Quebec have been two-parent families. I think the national figure is 19 per cent. So I don't mind sponsoring a communications program on marriage and the family, provided it would also consider what is happening in 1986 and what will happen in 1990. Another point is that we should not force these values on Canadian men and women. Today, I think the supportive approach is preferable. We must remember that the majority of our families are single-parent families headed by women, and that when we present the image of a traditional family, it is one where the wife or mother stays home.

I want to be very clear on this. Let there be no mistake about my intentions. I am not condemning the traditional family, on the contrary. But I think that in society today, there are very few families where women have the option of staying home. When we consider the economics of the issue and when we consider the cost of educating children—we should remember that in 42 per cent of married couples with children, the woman has to work outside the home.

Talking about marriage is fine, but I think it would be advisable to look at the report on the family published last year, where it discusses the traditional marriage, the life expectancy of a marriage, and so forth. The family is very important, and it is definitely the wellspring of society, but in 1986, there are more nuclear families than traditional families.

When we talk about the family, I think it is very important to consider the parents' jobs, the women's jobs. We must discuss the position of women on the labour market. We should discuss the possibility of part-time work for most working mothers who have to supplement the family's earnings, and I think the Government, since the federal Government will be sponsoring this program with the provincial Governments, should come up with a number of answers. I am referring to day-care, a very important point, part-time work and work sharing.

It would be possible to make a program with this approach and to say that, in 1986, we have the traditional family unit, but also the nuclear family, and ask what can be done to help a family or a couple that wants children to survive in the eighties. In that case, I could support the proposal of the Hon. Member. However, if we simply do a program to promote or encourage traditional families, I do not think that it would meet the needs of the majority of Canadians.

We also have to recall that, in the 21st century, two thirds of the Canadian population will be senior citizens. Our young people will make up the families we will need to help us. What type of families, of services and of society will they need?

In my opinion, before setting up such a communications network, we should have answers to all these questions. You cannot promote one type of family more than another. There are now many women's groups, including one called REAL Women, which support the traditional family. That is all very well, but they often forget that the majority of women who are on the labour market and who must use day-care services have no other choice but to earn a living. They often suggest that if a mother puts her children in day-care, she is not a good mother.

I cannot support this view and I have to point out that it is not because you are not a traditional wife that you are not a good wife, and more important, that you are not a good mother.

The image is often what remains the longest in people's minds. Children will watch these television programs. I am quite in favour of having a television program, but it should be done with an open mind and I am concerned that the attitude of this Government as far as the family is concerned does not quite correspond to my own attitude or that of other Members. I do not think that this Government is really open-minded about all types of families. Before doing such a program, I would encourage all the members of the Conservative Government to read the report on family policy published last year by the Champagne-Gilbert Commission. If they agree with most of the recommendations of that Commission, it would mean that the Conservative Government is very modern in its views and I could then perhaps agree with the request of the Hon. Member and support such a program.

Otherwise, I do not think it would be possible to have such a program, unless it were very open and dealt with the nuclear family, the different types of families, the support and childcare services, work-sharing and also the remuneration of homemakers.

This is therefore another aspect which should be dealt with. So if we are prepared to discuss such a report and put forward quite "avant-garde" ideas, then I think it would be alright, but if the approach and the purpose of this communication program is simply to promote the traditional family, I am afraid I could not support it, not that I am against the traditional family, being the eldest of seven children, and I think that it is very important. In 1986, the outlook must be different, and people must know and accept the fact that there are different sorts of families, that children now may have stepfathers or stepmothers, and that this is now part of our life style.

• (1710)

[English]

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to have the opportunity to rise today to speak on the motion of the Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse). I want to commend him for raising such an important matter in this House. I do not think we spend enough time debating really crucial questions, such as the survival of the family as well as its well functioning. I am certainly very pleased to support his proposal that the Government should consider the advisability of sponsoring, with the provinces, a communications program, including the use of television, obviously, the most important and influential medium at our disposal, which will affirm the importance of marriage and family life.

I note that in addressing his remarks to the House the Hon. Member stressed the great diversity of Canadian families. He did not just talk about the traditional family which is declining numerically as other forms of families emerge. He did recognize the different kinds of age configurations and talked about single parent families. Of course, we see the traditional family is now a minority and so many families have only one parent. There is, of course, blended families and great kinds of extended families. All of these families are part of the richness and diversity of Canadian life. These are facts of life that we must indeed accept.

We also know that many families in Canada are in a lot of trouble. There are single-parent families headed by women, and these particularly have a great possibility of living in poverty. More than a million Canadian children are living under the poverty line. These are very sad facts that ought also to be addressed.

The family certainly needs better presentation on television. There should be greater psychological and social supports for marriage and the family. However, we also need economic supports. It is a scandal to have a million children living in poverty.

Why are so many elderly women living in poverty? It is because they were traditional homemakers and there is no pension plan for homemaker spouses. Women who have devoted their lives to raising their children in a traditional fashion are told what a great job they have done, yet they are told that it is not important enough for them to receive pensions in their own names, and they can jolly well live in poverty because there is no economic recognition for the contributions they have made. That too is a scandal in society. I wonder what kind of advertisement it is for marriage and the family when people who have devoted themselves to supporting the family are living in poverty as a result of society's lack of gratitude for the important work they have done.

• (1720)

One in 10 Canadian wives is beaten by her partner, either her husband or her common-law spouse. What kind of advertisement for marriage and the family is it when a family cannot even be a place of safety for one out of 10 women, an astonishing proportion? Certainly this is a problem we must address. Marriage and the family must be places of refuge, strength and satisfaction for people. Certainly male roles must change. We must get at the one in 10 Canadian husbands who considers it appropriate to beat his spouse. There must be non-violent resolutions of family disputes. These are issues that we must address.

Current portrayals of the family on television do not help. Of course, there is a great deal of violence on television and there is a great deal of trivialization of violence. In particular, American programming is more violent than Canadian programming or programming that comes from other countries. It trivializes violence by showing that there are no important consequences, when of course real pain and long-term psychological scars emerge from being beaten or being the victim of other violent acts. The television programming we now have is not very favourable to family life and is not a very good advertisement for marriage and the family. I think the Hon. Member's proposals in this regard are very well taken.

Let us look for a few moments at the family as it is portrayed on television. Very often it is the traditional family that is seen. The male is the bread-winner and the female is the parent at home full time with the children. Usually the family is richer than average. The problems of a typical Canadian family in making ends meet and having both parents working in order to pay a mortgage are not shown on television. Reality is not a very important theme. People do not see real problems portrayed on the screen. They see highly glamorized and very rich families, and they see families with some quite astonishing problems surrounded by a great deal of violence. I do not think any of this helps develop a healthy family life in Canada.

Thanks to the pressures women are putting on the CRTC and Parliament, women are increasingly being portrayed in other family roles on television. This is a refreshing change, because when watching television 10 years ago one would not have thought that women held jobs as economists, Parliamentarians and scientists, or that they did anything else but look after the family. One would have thought that their roles were confined to the family, and that of course was quite an inaccurate reflection of the roles of Canadian women and indeed the roles of women in any other country.

There has been greater realism in the portrayal of women's roles on television. However, I must say that there has been no corresponding change in the portrayal of men's roles on television. We still see the traditional male who does not have much responsibility in the family and whose role is outside the family. If we want to encourage Canadian fathers and husbands to play an important role in the family, to be involved with their children, to share in child care tasks and to have the joy of being with their children, we need not look to television because it does not help in that respect. Television still flogs the old example of a highly divided family with the wife full time at home and the husband full time outside the home. It does not show that many families are trying to meld these roles. Of course, it would be desirable to make it possible for parents to share these tasks. It would be desirable for both parents to have a shorter work week so they could share in the child care tasks within the family. We cannot change the roles of women without changing the roles of men. That must be true in how men and women are portrayed on television as well. There has been a slight improvement in the portrayal of women, but men are still portrayed in a very traditional way.

Of course, the trivialization of violence on television is not helping at all. REAL Women have protested that we do not see enough traditional women on television. I would like to quarrel with that argument in one respect. Statistically, it does not hold up. In fact, we do not see very many women on television at all, but we still see a disproportionate number of traditional women. I think REAL Women do have a point and this is a point that has been made by feminists for many years. That is that women in traditional roles have been denigrated on television.

Think of all the advertising that shows women in domestic roles looking, quite frankly, like idiots. Women are portrayed as being inordinately concerned with pleasing their husbands by shining up their homes. This obsession with cleanliness is one which no normal Canadian homemaker has ever had. No one believes that this is the way to success and happiness. These advertisements portray the stupidity of women in their deference to male experts who tell them how to clean their houses. These are roles which have been the mainstay of advertising over the years and, although there have been some improvements, this denigrates the role of the traditional woman and the role of all women. I think we must all complain about that. It is certainly not a very good advertisement for marriage and the family to show these roles in such unflattering terms.

If we accept that the problems I have enumerated are real problems for the Canadian family, we have to look at some solutions. Unfortunately, when we begin to look at solutions we see that they will cost money. The violent television programs that do not help promote family life are imported at a relatively cheap cost. They are mass produced and production costs have already been absorbed. They are for sale for retransmission in Canada at very cheap rates relative to production costs in Canada. It is expensive to create new material in Canada that is non-violent and pro-family. It is expensive to show Anne of Green Gables rather than to import some violent American programming. It will cost money to produce our own Canadian content shows which portray our different values.

Anne of Green Gables is an example of a very fine program which has been widely shown.

I would hope to see more such programming in Canada, but it does cost money. The main source of Canadian programming, the CBC, has had to cut back on Canadian programming. There has been very little Canadian production on the part of the other networks. The CTV, the English-speaking private network, produces almost no Canadian drama or entertainment. Of course, it is out to make money. It can make money by importing these relatively cheap American and very violent shows. It can get away with importing these, rather than producing its own. We must look at the economics of television broadcasting. If we want solutions, we must have better rules on violence. I note that the Canadian Association of Broadcasters is developing some guidelines on violence. They are not very strong ones, and I do not think they are adequate. These must be developed. There must be Canadian content regulations that will be good, strong ones. We need good public television, and it will have to be funded.

• (1730)

I see that my time is almost up, Madam Speaker. In closing, I wish to congratulate the Member and say that I certainly support the intentions of his motion, but we will have to look at the economics of broadcasting as part of the solution. There are no easy solutions. I am with him in spirit. We should be looking toward the solutions. We must look at how we will manage our own broadcasting, if we are going to have a television communications policy that actually does support the Canadian family.

[Translation]

Mrs. Monique Tardif (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): Madam Speaker, I sincerely appreciate this opportunity to debate the motion introduced today by my colleague from Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse) because it enables me to repeat and comment further on some of the last throne speech observations pertaining to the family. In the speech, Madam Speaker, Her Excellency the Governor General emphasized that the Government is resolved to defend and strengthen the institution of the Canadian family.

Because the well-being of Canadians generally is predicated on the well-being of Canadian families, we must remain ever aware of the current evolution of family structures and expectations.

Most Canadians look upon the family as the institution which can most influence the education and social upbringing of children. Fortunately, most of them equate as well this influence with the sound physical, affective and intellectual development of the family members throughout the various stages of life, and a healthy family will always foster the physical and psychological well-being of its members.

No one can deny that, in recent decades, the tensions harboured by Canadian families have given rise to new family structures, as evidenced by the ever increasing number of single-parent or reconstituted families.

The growing number of incidents which attest to the existence of violence against children, older people and women, as well as other family problems, prove that such tensions did have a very strong impact on the family's capacity to adapt and function. Fortunately, those families have shown the strength and flexibility needed to face that kind of problems. But some of them need help in times of strain in order to continue adjusting themselves, and it is towards the latter that governments have a special responsibility for providing the kinds of support that are appropriate to their new requirements.

I would like to mention two achievements that illustrate what is being done now in support of families. The first is a study conducted in Montreal, with funding from the Department of National Health and Welfare. The study dealt with a program of family enhancement. It had interesting results because it showed that consolidating adjustment potentials within the family has preventive benefits. The study showed that one is not born a parent. Child rearing techniques can be learned and should be taught, and those basic techniques that can solve problems can apply in a number of situations. The study also showed that early action and information reduce the need for later treatment to reduce the devastating and long-lasting effects of family breakdown.

The second example I would like to point out is the result of work done at the Health Promotion Directorate in the Department of National Health and Welfare. It is a unique program entitled "Family Passport" aimed at getting family members to carry on together various activities related to the family group's health and welfare. The program was tried in the field, results are very encouraging and developing work will be further advanced next year.

It is often said there is a danger that the government may ask the wrong questions, get the wrong answers and act accordingly when trying to solve a problem. My view is that that is not necessarily the case. Quite the opposite, I believe that the more co-operation and consultation there is, especially when the welfare in a society is involved, the less chance there is of that kind of error happening. It is also obvious that in an atmosphere of strong co-operation, the government and non-government sectors can form a powerful alliance to do what neither one could achieve by itself. That is exactly what the Government of Canada, through its National Health and Welfare Department, has done in various respects to support marriage as an institution and the family.

For instance, the Department co-sponsored a series of workshops on marriage preparation and family mediation in divorce cases. The objective was the gradual building of a Canadian network of leading competent people who could in turn train others and promote the creation of services.

The Department's Health Services and Promotion Branch accomplished considerable work to develop collective strategies concerning programs designed to strenghen the family's strong points. Thanks to both extramural research programs, the essential financial assistance has been provided and measures to support the family have been assessed.

In the last few years, the National Clearinghouse of Family Violence succeeded in raising in all sectors a record level of interest about the problem of violence against women and children. As for the National Day Care Information Centre, it helped keep up to date the information base and the necessary specialized councils to promote the development and growth of day-care services in Canada. Of course there is room for more work and co-operation in that field as in others and there are opportunities to implement new means to co-operate with associations which will enhance the efforts of the Government, professionals, the volunteer sector and the public.

Despite a freedom to choose other lifestyles, many people in our society recognize the benefits and values that family life embodies. Therefore, we must ensure that our programs follow the movement initiated in order to support the family. We must also examine as rigorously as possible the resources we put to work to support marriage and family life are used.

I do not think a lengthy debate is necessary to determine our needs; we know what they all are, to some extent.

What the Government cannot and must not do directly could however be done with its help by numerous other organizations of the social system. We will then have developed a strong and permanent framework for the survival and well-being of the family.

In conclusion, Madam Speaker, for me, the family is the backbone of our society and the Government must continue to act to support that institution.

I would like to move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Beauharnois—Salabery (Mr. Hudon):

That the motion be amended by striking out the words "in the opinion of this House, the government should consider the advisability of sponsoring, with the provinces, a communications program" and substituting the following therefor: "the Standing Committee on National Health and Welfare be empowered to study the feasability of a federal-provincial communications program,".

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Mrs. Tardif (Charlesbourg), seconded by Mr. Hudon, moves the following amendment: That the motion be amended by striking out the words "in the opinion of this House, the government should consider the advisability of sponsoring, with the provinces, a communications program" and substituting the following therefor: "the Standing Committee on National Health and Welfare be empowered to study the feasability of a federal-provincial communications program,".

The debate is on the amendment.

The Hon. Member for Outremont (Mrs. Pépin).

Mrs. Lucie Pépin (Outremont): Madam Speaker, I am quite prepared to support a proposal or an amendment of this kind. However, I want to be sure—and I have been listening to my colleagues—that when we talk about the family, we do not forget the issue of unmarried mothers and teenage pregnancies.

Today, one of our major problems in Canada is teenage pregnancies. The percentage is very high, and it seems not much or at least very little is being done to help these young mothers.

In a number of provinces in Canada, especially in certain regions, and I heard this when I was travelling with the Commission on Day Care, it seems that when these teenagers who may be 14, 15 or 16 become pregnant, their parents turn them out of the house. They go on welfare, they have to drop out of school and often they keep their children. The children are taken in by the family, often unemployed or on welfare. The young mother cannot find work, and if she does, it is usually poorly paid, and in many cases this means another generation of Canadians will be living on welfare.

We spent a lot of time discussing the possibility of giving parenting courses to these single mothers.

I also think these young people should be taught contraception. Every time the word contraception is mentioned, people blush or otherwise react. Everybody is dead set against adding this particular item to the program because they say it is being permissive. When we see children of 14 and 15 get pregnant, have children and then fail to give them an education, I think that when, first of all, they are not given a chance to finish high school and second, they are given no information at all about contraception, it may not be permissive, but it is just encouraging them to get pregnant and have a second and a third child that in turn will be dependent on Government assistance.

So if we are to have one of these communications programs, I hope we will be able to talk about the traditional family, the single-parent family, violence, support services such as day care, and that we might also talk a lot about single mothers and teenager pregnancies. Indeed the Government has to get involved and create a special program for these young mothers, first and foremost to help them avoid having more children out of wedlock, at least not when they are still teenagers. We do need a prevention program.

So I would hope such an education program might be included so as to enable single mothers to continue their secondary education, perhaps in general and vocational colleges, and then that they have access to sexual education programs.

I hope this recommendation will be considered and integrated into the program. Nobody can skate around this issue, especially when we know that 19 per cent of all childbirths in one of the Atlantic provinces last year involved teenagers. Whenever we want to raise this problem in committee everybody is embarrassed and they all say: We should not talk about this because recommendations of this nature might be construed as a sign of permissiviness on our part.

On the contrary, I suggest we would show that we do assume our responsibilities and that we must encourage young people to continue their studies, give them means, day-care and support services so they will be able to keep their children. But then we must also provide them with whatever is necessary to make it possible for them to become self-supporting just so they will be in a position to bring up those children.

• (1740)

[English]

Mr. Albert Cooper (Peace River): Madam Speaker, I am pleased to have an opportunity to participate in the debate this afternoon. It provides me with an opportunity to reaffirm my support for the Canadian family and its importance in society. It also provides Hon. Members with an opportunity to reflect upon the role which Governments have played in the past and will play in the future. It is an important opportunity for those of us in the House.

I have a plaque in my home of which I often think. I should like to paraphrase what it says. Essentially it indicates that if an individual is right within himself, there will be some harmony in his home. If there is harmony in the home, that harmony will continue out into the community, extend across the nation, and ultimately affect the entire world. I often think of it because it reaffirms the importance of the base unit we are discussing today.

As Members of Parliament we must consider the significance of families and their role in society. Also we must consider the impact of families upon the nation. There has been a tendency for some time for us to take the family unit for granted. As a result we have often neglected it by not proposing legislation which could be of assistance, or by simply ignoring it and some of the problems surrounding it.

The debate today has been indicative of the problems we face. All Members of Parliament have examples in their constituencies of problems and stresses experienced by families. I refer to wife battery and its impact upon communities. I can think of the impact it has had upon families in communities and towns in my area. One frustration I have experienced as a Member of Parliament is that in some communities there are now homes to which women can come with their children for security and protection. However, there has been no support for men, support in the sense of counselling or helping them address a serious problem which is hurting the family unit.

I am certainly pleased to be involved in this debate. I do not want to take up too much time because I should like to see the House of Commons reach a decision this afternoon. It is important for Governments to provide leadership based upon a clear understanding of the problems and the kinds of threats faced by families. Governments should look toward solutions to help alleviate the problems. They should not divert them momentarily or side-step them or come up with band-aid solutions. It is important for us to be involved in informed discussions.

I am also pleased with the amendment offered by my colleague to refer the matter to the Standing Committee on National Health and Welfare. I certainly support it because committee stage would provide us with an opportunity for discussion and informed debate. It would also provide us with an opportunity to draw upon the arguments and concerns demonstrated this afternoon. Hopefully the committee would consider looking at the experiences of various families throughout Canada which have dealt with frustrations and problems. It should look at the solutions they have come forward with and the activities in which they have involved themselves.

I should like to refer to an example which I think speaks well of what we are trying to accomplish—some families in Vancouver with the common problem of dealing with disabled family members. Often they were told that there was no choice but to institutionalize their children. Of course it was a real frustration for them. It did not seem to matter which way they turned. The common piece of advice they received from the bureaucracy providing the service was: "We are the experts. We know how to handle the situation. The only solution is to institutionalize your children". The parents began to say: "Wait a minute. We have a right to be involved in the process. We have a contribution to make. We have some decisions we would like to see taken". They formed a society called Community Living Society and began to lobby to try to improve their particular situation. With a fair amount of effort they were able to obtain funding from the Province of British Columbia, which further enhanced their ability to do something. The net result was that they were able to start providing services and facilities and take into their own hands the resolution of a problem which had caused all of them so much hardship. That is the kind of leadership we want to look to. It speaks well of the kind of potential Canadians have.

• (1750)

As well, their experience was the subject of a film produced by the Department of National Health and Welfare. It is available to the Canadian public and we can now sit down and see their struggles firsthand, and how they overcame their problems. We can then begin to realize how isolated we have become from the difficulties people face on a daily basis.

I know other Members wish to speak on this matter so I will not take up any more time of the House, other than to say I am very pleased that this motion has given us the opportunity to reflect on a problem fundamental to our society. We have had the opportunity to stop and think about what we as Members of Parliament can do to address the problems faced by a most significant part of our society. I am pleased to see the motion and indicate my support for the amendment, as well as the main motion put forward by the Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse).

Mr. Jim Jepson (London East): Madam Speaker, I would like to speak in favour of this well-intended motion brought forward by the Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse). Let me focus on what I believe is the foundation of our country, that being the family unit. I know others wish to speak so I will be very brief.

This evening I have heard various comments about the organization known as REAL Women. I regret that there are people in this country who look upon the traditional views of that organization as an attack on the family unit. They are in fact reinforcing family values. I regret that this has happened, but we see attacks on the family unit from every direction and that is why it is so important to have legislation such as this. It will reinforce and refocus our attention on this very important issue.

[Translation]

Mr. Léo Duguay (Saint-Boniface): Madam Speaker, I am pleased to rise today to support both the motion moved by my colleague the Hon. Member for Scarborough West (Mr. Stackhouse) and the amendment put forward by the Hon. Member for Charlesbourg (Mrs. Tardif).

[English]

I wanted to make only one or two simple and straightforward comments in order to emphasize the importance of this resolution. Contrary to the myth, and it is a myth, the high marriage and remarriage rates in this country indicate that neither marriage nor the family has gone out of style. The family is the principal means through which we care for one another. It is the primary unit of learning, education and socialization. It is a source of emotional sustenance and support, and a significant unit of both economic production and consumption. If we lose sight of the family we will be weakened as a society. All of our efforts to promote the well-being of the Canadian family must be maintained. Families remain the primary care givers for children and the primary providers of emotional support for adult members. They remain the primary context in which human values are cultivated. The family today in Canada is being rediscovered and our commitment to family life in its various forms must be maintained. That is why I take pleasure in supporting this resolution and the amendment.

Some Hon. Members: Question.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The question is on the amendment. Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the amendment?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion (Mrs. Tardif (Charlesbourg)) agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Shall the motion, as amended, carry?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion (Mr. Stackhouse) as amended agreed to.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): Shall I call it six o'clock?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

[Translation]

A motion to adjourn the House under Standing Order 66 deemed to have been moved.

CANADA POST CORPORATION—(A) APPARENT CONTRADICTION IN GOVERNMENT POLICIES—(B) APPARENT INEQUITIES CONCERNING POSTAL SERVICE

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Madam Speaker, I rise tonight to deal with the postal service in Canada. For the past few months, Canadians have been held hostages by this Government which is cutting essential services. In a modern society such as ours, a postal service is essential. Yet, for all sorts of reasons, the Conservative Government has decided to question its existence.

Madam Speaker, it would be appropriate to list the different actions which this Government has taken. First of all, there was the Marchment Commission which produced a very interesting report, including a recommendation that the Government allow Canada Post five years to soak up its deficit. A few months later, without any sound study, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) decided suddenly that it should eliminate its deficit within one year.

Because of that, Canada Post has taken steps to meet this demand from the Government. First, it submitted a plan of operation which the Government has accepted as such, except for a part which was referred to a committee; but it has accepted the notion, not on a temporary but on a permanent basis, that from now on, all new residences in Canada would not be entitled to postal home delivery, but that they would have access to superboxes. We learned recently on TV that these so-called superboxes are not really "super", because anybody could very easily open them and steal the mail.

We have also learned that Canada Post is planning to close several thousand post offices in rural areas, resulting in thousands of jobs being lost. Canada Post's plan of operation is also considering increases in postal rates for first class mail which are before the committee, but there are other increases which are not clear—and they are waiting to implement them—and which could have a very negative impact on publications, especially multicultural papers which are sent home; if the costs for mailing these papers were to increase, I do not think that their publishers could absord them, so that a great many weeklies for instance would likely disappear.

So, Madam Speaker, they spared nothing, they turned the Canadian postal service upside down in the name of deficit reduction. The cause is a worthy one, but if they want to reduce the deficit, they should be consistent and not ask Canadians always to foot the bill while millions of dollars are handed out to big corporations in the guise of tax favours. Concerning the matter being debated tonight, I was indeed referring to the Auditor General's Report, Note 4.44, where it is said that some $100 million were handed out to Canadian or multinational corporations while Canadians, people living in rural areas, were asked to accept reduced postal services and post office shutdowns in the name of the deficit. If the deficit is to be reduced, why extend income tax favours? Should they not impose fiscal restraint across the board, instead of focusing it on those who have the greatest need of those services, Madam Speaker?

• (1800)

[English]

The Government is reducing the effectiveness, if there was any, of our postal service. One night Dick Watson of Surrey, B.C., came home and saw a machine digging a hole for the installation of supermailboxes in front of his house. He used all his savings to buy a home for his family and suddenly his peace and tranquility will disappear because of all the traffic which will necessarily go past the supermailbox. How would the Minister feel if that happened to him? The Government has once again proven that in its efforts to reduce the deficit it always hits the wrong people, while giving millions of dollars worth of tax exemptions to companies and multinationals.

[Translation]

Mr. Pierre H. Vincent (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Madam Speaker, it is with pleasure that I take part in this debate. How indecent, and there is no other word, what the Hon. Member for Saint-Léonard—Anjou (Mr. Gagliano) has just been uttering. Madam Speaker, the Hon. Member for Saint-Léonard—Anjou, when dealing with the Canada Post question talks about big corporations and income tax credits. But the tax law as we know it, Madam Speaker, was enacted under his Government when in power—an Income Tax Act that is that thick. They enacted an Income Tax Act with scientific research credits, with tax havens for boats and hotels, a law that allowed the setting up of blind partnerships where all kinds of tax shellgames were played. It is not this Government, but his Government which created all that, and since 1984, Madam Speaker, we have been trying to put some sort of order into that legislation which has been described by tax experts and people in general as an incomprehensible, unimplementable, an unwanted legislation which they kept on. The Minister of Finance, in his last Budget, under the previous Liberal Government, was about to increase still further the complexities of the Income Tax Act. Two months after coming into office, Madam Speaker, that is in November 1984, we immediately dealt with the problem of scientific research income tax credit. That problem we solved, and not three years later. We solved the problem two months after being elected. In May 1985, we solved the problem of tax havens for boats and hotels that his Government had put in place.

Mr. Gagliano: And the Florida capital gains exemption?

Mr. Vincent: Yes, Madam Speaker, and we had the good sense to grant a $500,000 capital gains tax exemption. I recall a television program on which the Hon. Member for Laval-des-Rapides (Mr. Garneau) was told by all the participants at a round table discussion that he was playing politics by criticizing the $500,000 capital gains tax exemption. This is what he was told on the air by all the participants. He was told: "You, the Member of Parliament for Laval-des-Rapides, a former bank president, how can you oppose such an economically important initiative, something which is so much to the advantage of all Canadians, Western farmers as well as people in Quebec and small businesses throughout the country? You are playing politics." Today, the Hon. Member for Saint-Léonard—Anjou (Mr. Gagliano) is doing the same thing.

We have a problem with the postal service deficit. That is true. We have a problem with the Income Tax Act, which is too complicated. There were too many abuses of the tax system. We are now solving this problem. I hope that the Hon. Member for Saint-Léonard—Anjou understands what I have been telling him.

• (1805)

[English]

TRADE—ANNOUNCED CLOSURE OF LUMBER MILL AT NAIRN, ONTARIO. (B) RESTORATION OF JOBS—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Maurice Foster (Algoma): Mr. Speaker, on November 26 I put a question to the Minister for International Trade (Miss Carney) concerning the Government's intention with regard to the softwood countervail being imposed by the United States. The question was precipitated by a telegram sent to the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) on the previous day. It was sent by the Senior Vice-President of E. B. Eddy Forest Products Limited, which has a large mill in Nairn in my constituency.

I will read the telegram because it is very important. It was sent by Mr. E. F. Boswell, Senior Vice-President, and member of the senior committee of the Canadian Forest Industries Council. He states in his telegram:

> We at E. B. Eddy Forest Products were shocked to watch the Government of Canada take a 180 degree change in its position on the softwood lumber countervail case.
>
> With large sawmill operations in Ontario and Quebec, it has been necessary for us today to announce a suspension of operations at our mill in Nairn Centre, Ontario, which is the largest sawmill in the province.

Actually, it is the largest sawmill east of the Rockies.

> We have spent thousands and thousands of dollars supporting the efforts of the Canadian Forest Industries Council only to have your Government annul all of that effort at the most critical time in the defence of our case.
>
> It is unbelievable that any Government could so abandon such a large Canadian industry and all of its employees.

That telegram really tells it all. It outlines exactly how the softwood lumber industry, one of the largest employers in Canada, has been undercut by the Government's decision to knuckle under and negotiate a side deal with the U.S. Government rather than fight it out in the courts.

In this case, it involves a sawmill that employes some 300 people that will be shut down in a week or two due to the Government's undercutting of the Canadian Forest Industries Council which I understand has spent some $8 million preparing and fighting that case before the U.S. trade tribunals. It has been undercut by the Minister for International Trade who has done so many flip-flops this year it is difficult to tell on which side she is flopping right now.

When the International Trade Commission made its preliminary ruling in July, the entire forest products industry was going to fight the imposition of a countervail duty. Some time in September or early October, the Minister made her commitment to make a final offer of a 10 per cent side deal rather than fight it all the way. When the decision was made with the International Trade Commission and the Department of Commerce in the United States, they imposed a 15 per cent countervail duty. The Minister stood up in the House and said that she would fight that all the way. That went on for several weeks.

At the First Ministers meeting in Vancouver, after having a tête-à-tête with Secretary Baldrige in Washington, suddenly she advised the Ministers that she would make another final offer of a side deal at 15 per cent. That is where the Canadian Forest Industries Council parted company with the Minister. I believe a lot of the provincial Governments are parting company as well. They were told she had a deal and 24 hours later she did not have a deal, so no one knows where the whole situation stands.

• (1810)

However, the workers at Nairn Centre, Ontario, know where they are going to be. They are going to be out on the street in a week or so. Likewise the workers at Searchmont, Ontario whose mill was shut down earlier. One hundred and fifty workers were laid off. The stud mill operation at Dubreuilville, Ontario is operating at about a third of its capacity because it simply cannot pay the level of countervail duty. The prices on two by four studding has not risen. The mill is absorbing the total countervail imposed by the United States. The same thing is happening at the sawmill at Terrace Bay. It is certainly an extremely serious situation.

What is being applied to the softwood lumber industry, if the Minister capitulates rather than fight this through the trade tribunal in the United States, we will have to face on other lumber commodities, certainly on every dollar of softwood lumber we sell to the United States. That could be applied to almost every commodity. It really impinges on our sovereignty because in effect the United States is dictating the price of our commodities. Even though we like to think we are a manufacturing country, we still depend to a great extent on these resource industries. Therefore, I hope the Minister will stand firm and fight this countervail as we fought it successfully in 1983 and not continue to capitulate, trying to make a side deal which has very bad overtones for the future of our industries in northern Ontario, many of which are shutting down at this very moment because of the way the Government has mismanaged this matter.

Mr. John McDermid (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, there were more wrong statements in the seven minute speech by my hon. friend, the Hon. Member for Algoma (Mr. Foster), than I could possibly cover in the three minutes I have to reply. However, I will cover some of it. First, the action which was brought against the four provinces was brought by the United States industry. It was brought against the four provinces by the U.S. Commerce Department after presentation was made by the U.S. lumber industry through the countervailing system, which is American law, the same way as the Canadian corn producers, through our Canadian law, have brought an action against the American corn producers. There is no linkage between those two. It is American law.

Mr. Foster: The Government didn't try to make any side deals.

Mr. McDermid: I sat and listened to the Hon. Member and perhaps he will extend me the same courtesy. Before a preliminary decision was rendered by the Commerce Department, the unions, the lumber industry and the provinces requested the federal Government, and the federal Government agreed, to try and reach an agreement outside of the preliminary decision. That was not accepted. The preliminary decision came down. Many representations were made and, as a matter of fact, representations are continuing to be made on this particular issue.

After meetings with the provinces for a couple of days, and then attending the First Ministers' Conference, it was decided that they would attempt once more to try to solve this problem once and for all so we could get those workers back to work. One of the reasons they are not selling lumber right now is the uncertainty in the industry. The Americans want our lumber. It is of much higher quality than theirs. It is competitively priced. However, with all of this uncertainty they are not buying right now. That is why the mills are closing down. We want to clear that muddiness as quickly and as properly as we can. If we can reach an agreement outside the Commerce Department decision, then the matter will be decided once and for all.

• (1815)

The Hon. Member has bragged that the case in 1983 was won, but the problem was not solved. The problem still exists and the American industry has spent hundreds of millions of dollars fighting the Canadian lumber industry. It will continue to do so if we do not reach a settlement outside that agreement.

By the way, I have met with the Mayor of Terrace Bay, the union people and sawmill operators from the North. They want action now. They want jobs now. They do not want something that will be dragged out in the courts for six or eight months. They want their jobs to be preserved now and they want a decision now. That is why the union is supporting the Government's steps to get this matter settled. They want to wipe out that uncertainty so that they can get back to work.

There has been no flip-flopping on the part of the Government. We are fighting this thing right down the line. The speech made by the Hon. Member today demonstrated his total lack of knowledge of the issues and all the options available. If he took some time to be briefed on exactly what the issues are and on the down sides and up sides of all the options, he would not have made some of the outlandish statements he made today.

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY—REQUEST THAT COST IMPACT STUDIES BE RELEASED. (B) REQUEST THAT MINISTER PROMISE TO RELEASE STUDIES

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Madam Speaker, my comments today arise from the interchange that occurred between me and the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre) on November 19, 1986. In attempting to defend his position on pharmaceuticals, the Minister refused to release certain studies that had been prepared by the Government at that time.

I suppose there are four things that I want to put strongly on the record with reference to the answer provided me by the Minister and with reference to the entire policy of the Government in this area. First, I must say that I just came from spending a weekend in my home constituency of Windsor. While I was there, senior citizens presented to me hundreds of petitions indicating their complete disagreement with the policy that they saw would cost them money because of higher prices in the future.

I read an interesting piece in The Ottawa Citizen this morning written by a man whose views I usually do not take that seriously. Michael Walker, the head of the Fraser Institute, a very right-wing research institute, indicated that in his view, the Government was making a serious mistake in not admitting that there would be price increases. Anyone who has any sense of logic or any economic background or training will recognize that when the patent system is changed so as to give privileges to foreign companies, it is bound to push up prices as a result.

All we have to do to understand what will likely happen to the industry as a result of this legislation is to look not that far back to 1969 when there was no legislation in force of the kind that is in force now. We will see that all of the pipe-dreams and pie in the sky about which the Government talks of great new investments and research and development and the building of a great new drug industry here in Canada will be seen for what they actually are.

• (1820)

It is a mirage which has no possibility of being attained. In fact, at that time we had three studies take place, because our drug prices in Canada were the highest in the developed countries of the world. Finally, we were able to bring in a new approach which gave the generic manufacturers a chance to compete; not a chance to steal the product of a company, but a chance to compete by paying a 4 per cent royalty to the company involved. When that happened, lo and behold what all of us predicted would take place did in fact take place. The prices of generic drugs and, more important, the prices of non-generic drugs in this country came down dramatically.

That is what this whole issue is about. We believe that the studies that the Government has undertaken under the Privy Council Office will in fact demonstrate that precisely. That is why we have asked the Government to put those studies on the public record. We have continually received a stonewalling from the Minister. It tells me that those studies do demonstrate our position, that prices will rise, that a great many people will be hurt, and that we will not get the benefits that the Government says we will.

I ask yet again, for the sake of the openness, which this Government professed to believe in when it first came into office, that those studies be released, and that we have a chance to talk in committee and in the House on the basis of the solid information which we expect and hope will be contained within those Privy Council studies.

[Translation]

Mrs. Gabrielle Bertrand (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Madam Speaker, the amendments to the Patent Act, as contained in Bill C-22, represent the efforts of this Government to increase the level of pharmaceutical research and development in Canada and create more jobs for Canadians. With this legislation, which the opposition is attempting to delay using a variety of tactics much to the detriment of Canadians, the Government is taking another step towards the promotion of sustained economic growth and job creation while providing for the protection of Canadian consumers.

[English]

Some Hon. Members opposite have repeatedly demanded that cost studies relative to the amendments be made public. The Minister has repeatedly offered to discuss such estimates when the Bill is in legislative committee. As the Minister stated before the House, we have second reading and then committee study. The purpose of committee study is to analyse and deal with the necessary details of policy and legislation. Surely Hon. Members opposite are aware of this, yet they continue avoiding the very thing that they ask for.

• (1825)

[Translation]

It is reasonable to conclude that the opposition's demands for the studies followed by their refusal to have them placed before committee is nothing more than a further example of their attempts to stall the progress of this Bill and the benefits it will bring to Canadians.

Committee study will provide the appropriate forum for examination and discussion of the issue of costs. It provides for an evaluation and assessment in which all parties share as well as members of the public and the industry. Committee study allows for a variety of informed opinions to be heard. Thus, it is a more appropriate opportunity for constructive discussion of the studies which were the basis of the policy. Ideas and interpretations of the points which this Bill addresses will require the consideration of experts on the subject, both of the Government and elsewhere. Let us have a full and open examination of the issue. That is how progress can be made on this issue and not through repetitious debate ad infinitum.

To use the issue of cost study as a procedural wrangle to delay this policy is not fair to the Canadian public. The proper place to review such information is in committee, where testimony from all informed witnesses can be heard. There is no need for procedural tactics designed simply to hold up the Bill.

The proposed amendments to the Patent Act are a balanced package of amendments designed to fulfill a variety of objectives for the benefit of all Canadians. By reviewing the information which backs this Bill in committee, we will get efficient and effective discussion appropriate to its importance.

The Acting Speaker (Mrs. Champagne): The motion to adjourn the House is now deemed to have been adopted. Accordingly, this House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 2 p.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

At 6.26 p.m., the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Wednesday, December 3, 1986

The House met at 2 p.m.

STATEMENTS PURSUANT TO S.O. 21

[English]

HUMAN RIGHTS

U.S.S.R.—NON-DELIVERY OF FAMILY GIFTS SENT BY CANADIAN RELATIVES

Miss Aideen Nicholson (Trinity): Mr. Speaker, now that the gift-giving season is here I would like to draw the Government's attention to a situation that continues to distress and frustrate Canadians who are trying to maintain contact with family and friends in Eastern Bloc countries.

It is a sad fact that a person in Canada who sends a simple, inexpensive gift as a token of affection to an elderly parent, or to a dear friend in the U.S.S.R., must be prepared to have the package returned by the Soviet authorities, without any explanation of why it was not delivered.

This is not a new situation, and since there are obvious human rights implications I would urge the Government to use all possible means to remind Soviet authorities of their obligations under international human rights agreements, and to work for improvement in this particular situation.

* * *

• (1405)

DISASTERS

DAMAGE CAUSED BY FLOODING IN LAKE ST. CLAIR-LAKE ERIE AREA

Mr. Steven W. Langdon (Essex—Windsor): Mr. Speaker, this week 1,200 homes were hit by flooding in my constituency and along Lake Erie. This tragedy is a warning of worse flooding to come in the whole Lake St. Clair-Lake Erie area.

Just last week the International Joint Commission agreed that it was possible to fight the flooding. As the Great Lakes Coalition stressed, dredging and capital works in the Niagara River can significantly lower water levels.

Back in April the Minister of the Environment (Mr. McMillan) promised coalition representatives that he would act. However, nothing has happened. I believe strongly that a man-made solution to the flooding exists. I tell the Government that it must act now to achieve it.

HEALTH

THREAT CAUSED BY AIDS EPIDEMIC—NEED FOR MEDICAL RESEARCH

Mr. John Oostrom (Willowdale): Mr. Speaker, the Panos Institute, a London-based research group which specializes in Third World issues, concludes that AIDS could wipe out half the population of some African countries. The impact of such a tragic occurrence will be devastating to African countries.

Canada must be concerned about the pending catastrophe. If the virus were to become more infectious, it could threaten human existence the world over. The strains which such an epidemic would impose upon our health system and facilities would be equivalent to the results of an atomic war.

Canada would have to impose immigration AID tests. Canada must make AIDS research a major priority, for if we only pay lip service to this festering problem, the results could be devastating to Canada.

Canada has the facilities, the personnel, and a track record in medical research to help find a solution. Banting gave the world the cure for diabetes; the same can happen for AIDS. Let us all support drug patent Bill C-22 which will provide research funds for a future AIDS cure.

* * *

[Translation]

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

FORGET REPORT—EARLY RETIREES—OPPORTUNITY TO MAKE SPEEDY DECISIONS

Mr. Jean-Pierre Blackburn (Jonquière): At long last, Mr. Speaker, after spending 17 months to study, to hold meetings and to analyze briefs, the Forget Commission is about to release its report. It will now be up to us as Government Members to listen to the people and give serious consideration to the recommendations aimed at improving the unemployment insurance system.

Mr. Speaker, our Government had also given the Forget Commission a mandate to examine the thorny issue of early retirees. As Member for the particularly hard hit region of Saguenay—Lac-Saint-Jean, I can tell you that I had an opportunity to meet with a number of early retirees. They drew my attention to the fact that this legislation has been harmful to them because they retired early with the conviction that they would be eligible for unemployment insurance benefits. They were badly mistaken.

Mr. Speaker, I hope the Forget Commission will take a clear position so that, as soon as possible, we Government Members will be in a position to make a decision in the best interest of early retirees.

* * *

OFFICIAL LANGUAGES

LANGUAGE TRAINING—NECESSITY TO PUT PROGRESSIVE POLICIES FORWARD

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, last week, the Language Training and Development Branch had a meeting with all employees to explain the new language training policies adopted by Treasury Board on October 23, 1986. The new guidelines will eliminate 25 per cent of the language training received up to now by public servants during normal working hours. If demand continues to exist, training will have to be provided by private instructors outside normal working hours.

This proposal means a cut of around 48 per cent in person-years set aside for language training. The proposal reflects the Government's position that the Public Service of Canada has a sufficiently large pool of bilingual resources. Mr. Speaker, this is a false assumption, and the Commissioner of Official Languages has said so every year. Official languages instruction depends on the attitude of the managers responsible for implementing the policy, and they certainly are not all enthusiastic proponents of bilinguism. When is this Government going to stop saying one thing and doing the exact opposite? When will this Government get up enough courage to introduce progressive policies regarding our official language programs?

* * *

[English]

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

COVERAGE FOR PERFORMING ARTISTS URGED

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, for years now Government has been studying the plight of artists. Numerous recommendations have been made to improve the financial situation particularly of performing artists.

Two task forces and a parliamentary committee have recommended including performing artists under unemployment insurance. These are people in Canada who experience considerable periods of unemployment between engagements, and they are not very well paid when they work.

The Government has delayed enacting any improvement in the situation on the grounds that the Forget Commission was studying the matter. Now that we have the Forget Commission report, which does not even address the issue, it is time for action.

I call upon the Government to perform now, to stop delaying, and to enact the necessary changes before the Conservative Government's theatre run is over. Performing artists are the Government's spectators now. They will be among the players in the next election.

* * *

• (1410)

NORTH ATLANTIC TREATY ORGANIZATION

LIBERAL PARTY POLICY RESOLUTION

Mr. Bob Hicks (Scarborough East): Mr. Speaker, this past weekend's Liberal Party gathering highlighted the divisions which are increasingly becoming more and more evident to a growing number of Canadians. It is a Party heading in all directions. The divisions within the Liberal Party escalate as Liberal Members of Parliament insist that the Leader accept policy resolutions as policies of the Party. The Leader, who says he has returned the Party to the grassroots, tells these same people that certain policy resolutions do not count.

At the convention, Mr. Speaker, the grassroots voted to make Canada a nuclear free zone. The Leader says: "Let's really think about this one". Our NATO allies do not have to think about it. They know that such a detrimental policy would be in conflict with our NATO obligations. Where does the Liberal Party stand on this important issue? Canadians and our allies do not want, need, or deserve uncertainty in our NATO policies.

* * *

ACCESS TO INFORMATION

RELEASE OF RECORDS—CONSULTATIONS WITH PRIME MINISTER'S OFFICE

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, I want to share with you a letter sent by Mr. Paul M. Tellier, Clerk of the Privy Council and Secretary to the Cabinet, to Mr. James H. Taylor, Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs. It says, in part:

> The Prime Minister has asked me to communicate with you with respect to the processing by your Department of requests for access to departmental records under the Access to Information Act.
>
> It is important that you and your responsible officials ensure that your Minister is fully informed and that he personally signs off on the proposed release of any information that is potentially embarrassing either to your Department or to the Government.

In addition, where the records being requested relate to the Prime Minister or the operations of his Office, once your Minister has signed off, you should arrange for consultations on the material being proposed for disclosure with Dr. J. A. Doucet, Senior Advisor to the Prime Minister.

It is my opinion that the Government, instead of trying to hide embarrassing information, should avoid creating such embarrassment for itself in the first place and then it would not have to incite others to flout the law.

* * *

RIGHT TO LIFE

ALLIANCE FOR LIFE—ORGANIZATION'S APPLICATION FOR FUNDING

Mr. Rob Nicholson (Niagara Falls): Mr. Speaker, there are a great many people in this country working very hard to provide alternatives to abortion, finding caring and compassionate solutions to the problem of unexpected pregnancy. One such group is the national organization Alliance for Life which co-ordinates pro-life educational activities through its 255 affiliates across the country.

Alliance for Life has recently applied for a grant under the funding program for National Voluntary Health and Social Service Organizations administered by the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Epp). Provision of a sustaining grant to Alliance for Life would allow the organization to identify areas where help is needed for distressed pregnant women, to expand education programs relevant to adolescents whereby teen pregnancies would be reduced, and to hire personnel to set up self-help groups for post-abortion trauma. I would hope that the officials concerned in the Department of National Health and Welfare will quickly approve the application of this most worth-while organization.

* * *

HUMAN RIGHTS

EL SALVADOR—INCREASE IN VIOLATIONS

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, assasinations, political imprisonment, and "captures" by government armed forces are growing in El Salvador. In the first 10 months of 1985 there were 2,392 of these major crimes against human rights. In the first 10 months of 1986 there were 3,238, an increase of 35 per cent in one year. Yet the Canadian Government pretends that the Salvadoran regime of Napoleon Duarte is democratic and is reducing the violations of human rights. What nonsense, Mr. Speaker.

Many independent Canadian observers have exposed the continuing oppression in El Salvador. Now Professor Meyer Brownstone, who months ago received Canada's Pearson Medal for Peace, has reported publicly on his recent visit to El Salvador. He not only recounts these growing bloody human rights violations but he also reports that Canada's $8 million aid project is entangled in Salvadoran Government mismanagement and corruption, with a local bank raking off $1 million in fees and storage charges for fertilizer before it is all delivered.

Once again I call upon the Government of Canada to stop this aid to Duarte's corrupt and murderous Government and to conduct a public inquiry into the use of the aid that has already been sent.

* * *

[Translation]

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

QUEBEC'S RIGHT TO BE IN CENTRE OF INDUSTRY CREATING WELL PAID JOBS

Mr. Gabriel Fontaine (Lévis): Mr. Speaker, I should like to tell the House that we Quebec Conservative Members will long remember the hostile attitude towards Quebec which Quebec Liberal Members across the aisle have adopted in recent days in their unrelenting attack against our proposed drug legislation. The Fédération de l'âge d'or de la province de Québec, the Quebec senior citizen federation, fully supports more laboratory and drug industry research to promote better health among elderly Canadians.

The Quebec National Assembly has unanimously endorsed our initiative. Quebec press, radio and TV reporters are enthusiastic about our Bill, and I would refer Hon. Members to editorials which appeared in Le Droit and La Presse about drug industry piracy, respectively on November 19 and 27, 1986. Ever since 1968 when the present Liberal leader gave free rein to pill copiers, there has been no research, innovation and new jobs in Quebec.

Mr. Speaker, time has come for the Liberals to acknowledge that Quebec has the right and the ability to be restored as a drug industry centre which creates gainful employment, and they ought to stop putting their own petty partisan ambitions ahead of the interests of Quebecers.

* * *

• (1415)

[English]

REFUGEES

IRANIAN IN UNITED STATES—REQUEST FOR PERMISSION TO ENTER CANADA

Mr. Sergio Marchi (York West): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of State for Immigration (Mr. Weiner) has accused me of misrepresentation and spreading fear among Canadians concerning the 25-year old Iranian who has asked for refugee status in Canada. The Minister is confused and inconsistent.

He is looking for scapegoats to hide his own shortcomings. The facts are very clear and the options many. He can immediately issue a ministerial permit to allow this man into the country. He can grant him refugee status, or allow the community of Yarmouth to sponsor him as one of 6,000 people who will be sponsored by individual communities, over and above government sponsorship, in 1986.

For the Minister to claim that he does not have the power under the regulations to allow this person to come to Canada is a complete and very irresponsible fabrication. That he takes this position when Canadians are prepared to feed, house, and employ this person is a disgrace. The Minister has the power to save this man. He can allow people from Nova Scotia to sponsor this man as they have sponsored four others in the last year, and I cannot understand why he is looking for excuses not to do it. He should simply say he does not wish to extend the hand of compassion and humanitarianism or allow Canadians to act in the spirit of the prestigous award Canada received for helping others in need. That is what he should be doing instead of hiding behind excuses.

ORAL QUESTION PERIOD

[English]

PHARMACEUTICAL INDUSTRY

AMENDING LEGISLATION—POSITION OF CANADIAN DRUG MANUFACTURERS ASSOCIATION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. On November 25 my colleague from Saint-Michel—Ahuntsic asked the Minister why he had changed the drug legislation so that multinationals are no longer required to manufacture active ingredients in Canada. As found at page 1504 of Hansard, the Minister said:

—we did it because we were asked to by the generic companies and the Canadian Drug Manufacturers Association.

The Minister is now in receipt of a letter from the Chairman of the CDMA which says:

Your statement in the House of Commons totally misrepresents our meeting. We demand that you retract immediately this false assertion.

Will the Minister admit he was wrong and retract that assertion?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, actually the first time that question was asked by his colleague was on November 21. He will find a complete answer at page 1399 of Hansard. In fact this is a ridiculous discussion.

I wish the Hon. Member would co-operate in getting this Bill to committee so we can follow up on it. However, if he insists on knowing, on September 9, in Toronto, at the offices of Policy Concepts, the lobbying firm for the CDMA, my executive assistant met with Dr. Calenti, head of the CDMA, and Dr. Kubela, head of Torcan. They said then that the manufacturing provisions of the June 27 draft would not permit the generic companies to get into manufacturing. They would like to see either the first right of refusal removed, which would deny patent protection and is obviously something we do not approve of, or a window of opportunity between licences to manufacture and import. We thought that was a good idea, proceeded with it, and incorporated it into Bill C-22.

CHANGE FROM DRAFT BILL

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I suggest it is not a ridiculous discussion despite the Minister's attempt to waffle his way out of the situation.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

• (1420)

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): In response to a question from the Hon. Member for Oshawa yesterday he said it again:

It was removed from the Bill because the Canadian Drug Manufacturers Association—asked that it be removed.

Why did he change the legislation? Will he retract his earlier statement? Who influenced him to change that Bill?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, for the sixth time in this House of Commons, I will repeat. Dr. Calenti, head of CDMA, and Dr. Kubela, head of Torcan, in a meeting on September 9 in Toronto suggested that the provisions in the June 27 draft would not provide the generic companies with an opportunity to get into manufacturing and that they would prefer to have a window of opportunity between licences to manufacture and import. They wanted four to five years. We provided three years. However, the genesis of the idea was from that group. We thought it was a good idea. We would like to get the Bill to committee to demonstrate to the Hon. Member and the rest of the country why it is a good idea.

[Translation]

REQUEST THAT PRIME MINISTER SEEK MINISTER'S RESIGNATION

Right Hon. John N. Turner (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the letter from the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association of Canada is quite clear. My question to the Deputy Prime Minister is therefore: Considering that his Minister has misled the House, is he going to advise the Prime Minister to ask for the Minister's resignation?

[English]

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, questions about who said what to whom and when are a ridiculous waste of the time of this House.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Ouellet: Arrogant.

Mr. Andre: If the Hon. Member is really interested in Bill C-22, its provisions, and its effects on manufacturing, research, and health care of Canadians, he will co-operate with the House in sending his Bill to committee where we will have all of these discussions as parliamentary procedure dictates we should.

POSITION OF MULTINATIONAL COMPANIES

Mrs. Thérèse Killens (Saint-Michel—Ahuntsic): Mr. Speaker, we know who influenced the Minister. Mr. Stettler of the U.S. multinationals said last month that the November 7 Bill is more satisfactory to them than the June one. He claimed the penalties in the June Bill were too harsh. Can the Minister explain why the U.S. multinationals are happier with this Bill than with the June Bill?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, one of the people who influenced me on this Bill was Dr. Philip Seeman, the head of the Pharmacology Department of the University of Toronto, who said in Toronto yesterday:

> Senior citizens are being seriously misled by politicians, who tell them prices will skyrocket or that their provincial drug plans may be cut, but they're being denied drugs that could improve their life.

We want to stop that denial.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

INQUIRY WHY AMERICAN MULTINATIONAL COMPANIES PREFER NOVEMBER 7 BILL

Mrs. Thérèse Killens (Saint-Michel—Ahuntsic): Mr. Speaker, obviously, the Minister was influenced in some way. On a program televised by the CBC last month, Mr. Stettler, representing the U.S. multinationals, said that the Bill introduced on November 7 was more acceptable than the June Bill. Could the Minister explain this preference of the U.S. multinationals?

[English]

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I was also influenced by the writer of a letter to the editor in Saturday's Globe and Mail who said:

> As a father of two children with cystic fibrosis I find appalling the hysterical criticism by, among others, the opposition parties concerning proposals to amend the Patent Act.
>
> Our family literally depends for its survival on more and better drugs. Companies producing only generic drugs have contributed nothing to our survival and will not in future.
>
> Any proposal that will encourage the development of better drugs deserves universal support.

I support that father of sick children and the father of any sick children who want more health care in this country. If the Member does, she will support this Bill.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

• (1425)

PROPOSED COMMITTEE HEARINGS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, my question on the same subject is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister and Government House Leader. I was just informed before Question Period that the Government has refused to go along with a request to have a committee studying this Bill go to Halifax, Vancouver, Montreal, and a number of other communities, and that the Government plans to bring in closure. Will he tell the House if the real reason that the Government will now try to stop this Bill being discussed throughout the country with the people of Canada is that he has been informed by the Nova Scotia Government that it wants the federal Government to withdraw the Bill because, in the view of the Nova Scotia Government, this Bill will serve only the interests of international drug companies and that Nova Scotians ought not to be treated like guinea-pigs?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Not at all, Mr. Speaker. The fact is that we have had discussions for some time, trying to work out a proposition. I believe the Government has put forth a very reasonable proposition, with additional time for debate at second reading, and conditions to travel. It is certainly a new step in the new spirit of parliamentary reform to have a legislative committee travel and visit various cities across the country, as was requested by the New Democratic Party. We were really proposing up to two and a half months for further consideration of this Bill.

What we are really after is to allow the debate on this Bill to go ahead so that all Canadians and all parliamentarians can get a full understanding of the comprehensive nature of the Bill, and all the facts can be laid out on the table so that the people of Canada can judge. However, the opposition Parties have been frustrating our attempts to bring the Bill ahead and send it to committee for full discussion.

PUBLIC'S VIEWS

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, will the Deputy Prime Minister confirm that what the Government really wanted to do in those negotiations was effectively shut off all debate in the House of Commons after the committee hearings took place outside the House of Commons? Will the Minister confirm that? More specifically, will he acknowledge that the Government of Nova Scotia, a Conservative Government, has now joined with thousands of Canadians across the country and demanded that this Bill be taken off the Order Paper?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I am surprised that the Hon. Leader of the New Democratic Party keeps insisting that the people of Canada only see things his way. The Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs has been citing many, many experts on this subject who fully support the Government's initiative. Quite frankly, when the Government proposes up to two and a half months to consider this Bill, that certainly does not sound like a Government that is stifling debate.

Mr. Broadbent: The Minister knows full well that it is the same Government that wanted virtually no debate after the hearings. That is the reality and the Minister knows it.

POSITION OF CANADIAN DRUG MANUFACTURERS ASSOCIATION

Hon. Edward Broadbent (Oshawa): Mr. Speaker, I want to return to the Minister responsible for the Bill. He could not have been more explicit when he said to me in the House yesterday, with reference to a clause that was taken out of the Bill: "It was removed from the Bill because the Canadian Drug Manufacturers Association which represents the generic companies asked that it be removed". The letter that he received from that association, with reference to a meeting on October 14, said that quite the opposite request was made, that they wanted it in to ensure Canadian manufacturing took place in Canada. Will he confirm that he was at that meeting and that what they were saying was the case? If so, will he do the right thing and admit that he misled the House yesterday?

Hon. Harvie Andre (Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs): Mr. Speaker, for the seventh or eighth time, this question was originally asked on November 21. I refer the Hon. Leader of the NDP to page 1399 of Hansard. I repeat that on September 9 in Toronto, at a meeting between my staff and Doctor Calenti and Doctor Kubela, the generic companies suggested that the manufacturing provisions would not allow them to get into the fine chemicals manufacturing because the brand names would manufacture the major drugs, which are the only ones generics are interested in copying.

They suggested that they would have an opportunity to get into fine chemicals if we would change, to provide a gap between licences to manufacture and import. We provided that three-year gap. The idea came from the CDMA and turned out to be an idea that we found reasonable because it would bring on generic competition in those major drugs a little earlier. It was their initial suggestion and their idea which we adopted. If the Hon. Member is suggesting that we have adopted all of their suggestions, we have not. They are in the business of copying, and obviously they are opposed to anything that gets in the way of their being able to copy other people's discoveries.

* * *

• (1430)

CANADIAN HUMAN RIGHTS COMMISSION

PRE-COMMITTEE BRIEFINGS FOR TRIBUNAL APPOINTEES

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. Can he tell the House under whose authority the Prime Minister's Office organized a secret coaching yesterday of Progressive Conservative Human Rights appointees just hours before the appointees were supposed to come before a committee and testify about their own suitability as candidates for the Human Rights Tribunal?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, there is nothing secret about the briefings. The candidates had this opportunity available to them. They could respond to the invitation and if they chose not to, they did not have to do so. The fact is it was to provide a clearer outline of their duties and obligations and to remind them of the conflict of interest qualifications which are required. It was quite normal to outline these things to the candidates.

I might just remind the Hon. Member that this is a new process which has been adopted by the Government. This Government is not ashamed of the appointments it makes.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mazankowski: That is why we are prepared to have the candidates come before a parliamentary committee for consideration.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, the process was so open that even the Clerk of the committee did not even know about the secret meeting taking place over at the Langevin Block.

GOVERNMENT POSITION

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): First we had the resumés doctored, which was proven yesterday. Now we have appointees being coached. Just how low will the Government stoop—

Some Hon. Members: Order.

Ms. Copps: —to get its unqualified PC appointees on the Human Rights Tribunal, which deserves better?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the short answer to the Hon. Member's question is that we have opened up a secret process. The Hon. Member, and the Party of which she is a member, are the experts on secrecy.

REVIEW OF APPOINTMENTS

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Justice who is responsible for the Canadian Human Rights Commission. He presumably recognizes that it is the role of the Clerk of the committee to brief appointees with respect to procedures before that committee. Does the Minister not recognize that this blatant political interference by the Prime Minister's Office—after the news of doctored resumés and after restrictions by Tories on the number of appointees who could be reviewed—makes a total mockery of the parliamentary oversight process in this important area of human rights?

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Quite the contrary, Mr. Speaker. The purpose of briefings, if they are requested, is to allow people who have never appeared before a parliamentary committee to understand the nature and scope of the procedure, as the Hon. Member suggests, but also to get an insight with respect to the function and role of public officials. They are public officials and have the right to question what is expected of them in carrying out their responsibility. This has been going on as a continuing process. It is not a secret process. It is a logical process, as pointed out by the Deputy Prime Minister.

Mr. Robinson: Mr. Speaker, the only person who requested these meetings was the official from the Prime Minister's Office who put the meetings together. This is nothing more than blatant political thuggery by the Prime Minister, and that's not good enough.

An Hon. Member: Right on.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Robinson: It is thuggery, that is all it is, Mr. Speaker.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I do not know whether the Hon. Member has made it better or worse by calling it "political thuggery"—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Speaker: —but it might have been worse if it was just "thuggery". In any event, I would urge all Hon. Members to use as much discretion with their language as possible.

* * *

ACCESS TO INFORMATION

REFERRAL OF INQUIRIES TO PRIME MINISTER'S OFFICE

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is directed to the Deputy Prime Minister. In view of the additional news today that the Prime Minister has ordered all Government Departments to vet through his office any potentially embarrassing requests under the Access to Information Act, will the Deputy Prime Minister explain to the House why the Prime Minister is using his office in a way which displays such utter contempt not just for the access to information legislation but for Parliament itself?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, perhaps it might be worthwhile to remind the Hon. Member that there would not have been an Access to Information Act had it not been for this Government.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Mazankowski: Second, it is perfectly normal to ensure that accurate and timely information is provided, and that is all that was covered in this particular request.

REFERENCE TO POTENTIALLY EMBARRASSING INFORMATION

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, my question is also directed to the Deputy Prime Minister and it is on the same topic. In the letter the Clerk of the Privy Council sent to certain Deputy Ministers, he said in part that Ministers were personally to sign off on proposed release of information which is potentially embarrassing. It is not for accuracy but for embarrassment. Since when is potential embarrassment a criterion for screening information under the Access to Information Act?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Very simply put, Mr. Speaker, from time to time inaccurate information could be embarrassing, I suspect.

[Translation]

ACCESS TO INFORMATION ACT

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): I have a supplementary for the Deputy Prime Minister.

Instead of trying to get around the Access to Information Act in order to hide embarrassing situation, perhaps the Government should avoid getting into such situations in the first place. Wouldn't that be better than refusing to disclose the facts to Parliament and the people of Canada?

[English]

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): I repeat, Mr. Speaker, it is a fairly normal process to ensure that the information which is provided is accurate—

Mr. Boudria: And not embarrassing.

Mr. Mazankowski: I rest my case there. The Hon. Member would certainly like to find embarrassing information. He not only makes it a hobby, he makes it a full-time occupation.

* * *

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

SITUATION OF EARLY RETIREES

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Employment and Immigration and it has to do with the Forget Commission Report. The Minister told me on Monday he would answer questions in the House Wednesday afternoon. That is now. The time has arrived.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Turner (Vancouver Quadra): The time is now.

Mr. Clark (Yellowhead): The time has arrived.

Mr. Speaker: I know all Hon. Members would want to remain silent so the Hon. Member can get on with the question—because if he does not, the time will never arrive.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker, my question has to do with the thousands of Canadians who lost their unemployment insurance benefits because they happen to have taken an early retirement pension from their workplaces. The Minister and the Government have been saying all along: "We will wait for the Forget Commission Report". The Forget Commission Report has now come down. It states the Government was wrong in the way it went about doing that. Can the Minister stand in his place right now and tell the House that he intends to replace those unemployment insurance benefits which were so cruelly taken away from unemployed workers?

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I think the Hon. Member must realize that three o'clock is still the afternoon.

[English]

Mr. Blaikie: Is he going to answer questions or is he just going to make a statement?

Mr. Rodriguez: Mr. Speaker—

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An Hon. Member: Wait for them.

Mr. Blaikie: Order over there.

REQUEST FOR REINSTATEMENT OF BENEFITS FOR EARLY RETIREES

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): The Minister knows full well there are no question permitted after he makes a statement this afternoon at three o'clock. He specifically said he would answer questions about the Forget Commission Report Wednesday afternoon. I want to tell him these people are waiting.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

An Hon. Member: Listen to the fat cats laugh.

Mr. Speaker: I think all Hon. Members will note that the Hon. Member for Nickel Belt is seeking the Chair's help, assistance, and protection. The Hon. Member for Nickel Belt.

Mr. Rodriguez: The Government might think it is funny, Mr. Speaker, but there are thousands of unemployed workers who do not think it is funny and who are watching. Will the Minister stand in his place right now and tell us—and do not send me notes—when he will replace those benefits which were removed from unemployed workers?

• (1440)

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the day before yesterday I said, as the Hon. Member just recalled, that I would provide details or answers this afternoon. I wasn't joking when I said two minutes ago that at three o'clock this afternoon I would provide details on the pensions issue. But I repeat, three o'clock is still part of the afternoon.

* * *

[English]

AIR TRANSPORT

PURCHASE OF CANADIAN PACIFIC AIRLINES BY PACIFIC WESTERN AIRLINES

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Transport. Yesterday we learned of CP Air being purchased by Pacific Western. Does the Minister realize that in the document Freedom to Move his Government promised that deregulation would increase competition? Since then we have witnessed seven major takeovers in the airline industry. Is the Minister ready to allow this move to take place that will result in there being only two major airlines in Canada? Is his Government ready to allow this to take place?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I regret the savage attack that the Hon. Member has made upon his colleague, the Hon. Member for Winnipeg—Fort Garry, who introduced the deregulation policy with respect to air transportation three years ago.

Mr. Broadbent: You had a choice.

Mr. Crosbie: The hon. gentleman should have made his protests then when he was in Cabinet and approved that policy.

In the meantime, I think that Canada will be better served by having two healthy competitors than by having the giant Air Canada and a group of financially weak or regionally small airlines. We will have both. We will have two large competitive national airlines and a plethora of smaller regional and local airlines.

[Translation]

MINISTER'S POSITION

Hon. André Ouellet (Papineau): Mr. Speaker, to me it is obvious that the present Minister of Transport disagrees entirely with what was said and reported by his predecessor, who said on page 26: "Regulation will provide new opportunities for many segments of the air transportation industry and for many users, especially in the field of local and regional services."

What does the Minister intend to do to ensure there will be no increase in the cost to travellers, that the quality of service, especially in remote areas, will not deteriorate and that, and this is particularly important, there will still be a certain measure of competition in this field?

[English]

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I am very surprised that after the proposed National Transportation Act was introduced into the House some six months ago and a new version was introduced several weeks ago, the Official Opposition transportation critic does not know what is in it. I refer the hon. gentleman to the Bill in which he will find there are many safeguards with respect to all the matters to which he refers, including northern and remote service. A national transportation agency will be set up which will be able to consider matters of competition and have matters referred to it. There are many protections. I suggest the hon. gentleman read the Bill. It is a genuine piece of art.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

TIMING OF PARLIAMENTARY VOTE

Mr. Jim Jepson (London East): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Deputy Prime Minister. A clear majority of Canadians have indicated to the House that they want capital punishment reinstated. We have heard from the previous Minister that we can expect a free vote. My question is simply this. When can we expect this vote?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, as the Hon. Member knows, the Government's position is quite clear on this issue. At the present time I am currently examining options as to how this issue might be brought forth.

VOTING DATE INQUIRY

Mr. Bob Hicks (Scarborough East): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Deputy Prime Minister. His answer is not good enough. It is not good enough for Canadians and not good enough for the Members of this House. Trying to get a commitment from our own Government is like trying to walk across an ocean full of whipped cream on snowshoes.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Hicks: Will the Deputy Prime Minister relate to the House the calendar year in which this important matter will be discussed?

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I can only assure the Hon. Member that I will take his vigorous representation very seriously.

* * *

HOUSE OF COMMONS

PRESENCE IN GALLERY OF NEW BRUNSWICK MINISTER OF COMMERCE AND TECHNOLOGY

Mr. Speaker: I wish to draw to the attention of Hon. Members the presence in the gallery of the Hon. Fernand Dubé, Minister of Commerce and Technology for the Province of New Brunswick.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

* * *

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

LEVEL OF BENEFITS

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. It concerns the principle of unemployment insurance and the basic level of support that it is supposed to provide to the unemployed. The Minister may answer my question with regard to the Forget Commission or not.

If the recommendations of the Forget Commission were in place now 23 per cent of women claimants would be receiving less than $50 a week on which to live. Will the Minister assure the House that the Government will not cut benefits to Canadian men and women?

[Translation]

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I think it is premature at this stage, now that we are about to table one of the most important reports ever produced by a royal commission of inquiry, to give any assurances or any commitment on the part of the Government in this respect. We are going to table the report this afternoon. We will make a statement, and at that time, I expect there will be a debate and discussion and an opportunity for Members to express their views.

REQUEST THAT GOVERNMENT CATEGORICALLY REJECT ALL BENEFIT REDUCTIONS

Ms. Lynn McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the Minister to do something about the benefits principle so that the unemployed can survive. Considering the fact that the Forget report's main recommendation is to make the benefits structure an annual one, which would result in unemployment insurance cutbacks for three quarters of the unemployed in this country, will the Minister reject out-of-hand any reduction in benefits in Canada?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Finance and the Prime Minister have already promised, the Minister of Finance when he brought down the Budget, and the Prime Minister when he said, in answer to a question put in this House, that the unemployment insurance review would not lead to a cut in federal contributions for the unemployed. I think what we have here is a matter of principle. This is a general statement, and within this context, we shall be discussing the implementation of the principle in the weeks to come. I think the Minister of Finance and the Prime Minister were very clear in this respect.

* * *

[English]

CANADA POST CORPORATION

SUPERMAILBOXES—REQUEST THAT INSTALLATION BE STOPPED

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister responsible for the Post Office. Since the supermailbox was introduced we have proved that it is discriminatory to Canadians, that it opens easily, reduces property value, and interferes with the privacy of mail. Will the Minister ask Canada Post to stop installation of this "super-duper" mailbox and restore home mail delivery?

Hon. Bernard Valcourt (Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member says that the case has been proven, then I wonder about his standard of proof. For example, he is talking about restoring home delivery where mail is left unattended in front of homes, and this is going on in the cities of this country. We put it in a locked box, and he claims that this is not safer. I do not know what he is talking about.

[Translation]

REQUEST FOR REINSTATEMENT OF HOME MAIL DELIVERY

Mr. Alfonso Gagliano (Saint-Léonard—Anjou): Mr. Speaker, why does the Minister not admit that Canadians have seen enough of these superboxes, why not stop installing them and restore home delivery service?

Hon. Bernard Valcourt (Minister of State (Small Businesses and Tourism)): The Liberal Party should hire a new information agency, Mr. Speaker. A poll taken last summer among people now serviced through these boxes reveals that 94 per cent of them are quite satisfied. Consult Canadians first, then you might make more enlightened utterances in the House.

• (1450)

[English]

Mr. Orlikow: That is nonsense. Come on, tell the truth.

* * *

NATIONAL REVENUE

SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH TAX CREDIT PROGRAM INVESTIGATION

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Minister of National Revenue. The Minister and the Government have committed themselves to vigorously pursue those who have abused the SRTC program that cost the Canadian taxpayers some $3 billion in tax scams. Can the Minister confirm that not one more dollar in cash or securities was collected by the Government between the period of January to October, 1986?

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, I will certainly confirm that to my hon. friend when I check to see what the precise situation is. He has stated in the past that we are not vigorously pursuing the SRTC investigations. This is not so. We have 120 p.y.'s, and we have ample resources to pursue and to make certain that these fraudulent schemes, if they turn out to be such, are fully investigated and prosecuted.

NUMBER OF INVESTIGATORS

Mr. Simon de Jong (Regina East): My supplementary question, through you, Mr. Speaker, is this. Will the Minister confirm if, in fact, there are only 15 full-time members on the staff who are dealing with attempting to get back some $3 billion lost through this scheme?

Will the Minister confirm that the quota system is again back in use in his Department? This means that the small firms will be checked, but the large firms are getting away.

Hon. Elmer M. MacKay (Minister of National Revenue): First of all I can assure my hon. friend that with respect to the latter part of his question he is absolutely wrong. The quota system is not back in effect. We are treating all taxpayers fairly and equitably.

Second, with respect to the information that he wishes to receive with regard to SRTC investigations and procedures, I can confirm that we have ample resources to do that job which we are committed to do on behalf of taxpayers. If more resources are required, they are available.

ENERGY

DEREGULATION OF NATURAL GAS INDUSTRY—EFFECT ON SMALL PRODUCERS AND CONSUMERS

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. The deregulation of natural gas has been devastating to the small gas producers in western Canada. Now the Ontario Energy Board has stated that residential users of natural gas are being overcharged. How can the Government continue to support this program of deregulation which is so blatantly unfair to both the small producers and the residential users of natural gas?

[Translation]

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, in the discharge of their duties provincial agencies like that of Ontario may state their views on this question, however it is the market place which determines the situation and the agencies simply assume their responsibilities in their own regulatory sector.

[English]

PRICE CHARGED TO CONSUMERS

Mr. Russell MacLellan (Cape Breton—The Sydneys): Mr. Speaker, the Minister told the consumers of natural gas that the price for natural gas would come down with deregulation. If the Government is determined to continue with deregulation, will the Minister now assure the consumers of natural gas that they will be able to get natural gas at a fair price this year—not next year, not in five years, but beginning this year?

Hon. Marcel Masse (Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources): At a fair price this year, yes, Mr. Speaker.

* * *

LABOUR RELATIONS

BILL C-45—INQUIRY CONCERNING PROCLAMATION

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Government House Leader. Bill C-45, an Act respecting employment and employer and employee relations in the Senate, the House of Commons and the Library of Parliament was passed by the House and received Royal Assent from the other place on June 27 of this year. Can the Government House Leader indicate to us when this Bill will be Gazetted, so that the employees of Parliament Hill will finally have some legal rights?

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, this is a matter that is currently before the Board of Internal Economy, on which there are representatives of all Parties, including yourself, Sir. This issue is currently being considered. As a matter of fact it will be dealt with at tonight's meeting. There is a disposition to proceed, at least on parts of this Bill, at the earliest possible date. I would expect that there would be a recommendation coming forward from the Board of Internal Economy in the very near future.

* * *

AIR CANADA

DRUG TESTING OF PROSPECTIVE EMPLOYEES

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the congenial Minister of Transport. I am sure that that is not a contradiction in terms.

I am sure that the Minister is aware that a few weeks ago Air Canada began conducting secret and mandatory drug tests on all possible future employees. Has Air Canada explained to the Minister why, when the initial test is positive, that the Air Canada drug test manual does not require a second test, which is the only acceptable confirmation procedure that would stand up in a court of law? By the way, a second test is routine for race horses when the first test proves positive. Why does Air Canada not require a second test?

Hon. John C. Crosbie (Minister of Transport): I am glad to be called congenial. That has been one of my dominant traits for many years.

As I understand it from Air Canada, these tests are conducted as part of the regular medical examination that any applicant for a new job with Air Canada has to have. No one has been called in for a test who already works at Air Canada. They are very simple tests to do, and can be done very easily when the normal medical examination is done.

With reference to the question of a second test, or the exact point that the hon. gentleman is asking, I will have to check into that and report back to him.

REQUEST FOR MORATORIUM ON EMPLOYEE DRUG TESTING

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Prime Minister I wonder whether the Minister of Transport can speak on his behalf and tell us whether or not, because of the controversy around this issue, the Government is now ready to put an end to employee drug testing in this country, or at the very least impose a moratorium on drug testing until we have some minimum national standards, so that prospective employees have some rights?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, from the point of view of a national drug strategy I wish to tell the Hon. Member, as has been stated before, that the Government does not have any intention to move into mandatory drug testing. There is a condition, which I think has been generally accepted by the public, namely, that where health and safety are a consideration, this type of testing is legitimate. Obviously, even then there must be some very serious concerns raised in terms of appeal or second testing, as the Minister of Transport has raised.

Mr. Nystrom: For Air Canada baggage people?

Mr. Epp (Provencher): But those are the conditions under which the Government is proceeding on its national program.

* * *

TRADE

UNITED STATES DUTY ON CANADIAN SOFTWOOD LUMBER

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister for International Trade. Yesterday I received a letter from the Ontario Lumber Manufacturers' Association which states in part:

> The entire industry, across Canada, remains resolute in its unanimous decision, through C.F.I.C., to continue the lumber C.V.D. defence to the end, without concessions or deals such as the Government proposals which have seriously compromised our position.

I ask the Minister, Mr. Speaker, why has she refused to support the lumber industry and its thousands of workers across the country? Why has she been so weak?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, on this very difficult issue we have been consistent in our efforts to seek a solution which will retain Canada's sovereignty, keep the revenues in Canada, leave the provinces the right to manage their own natural resources, which they own, and the flexibility to increase stumpage fees, which are theirs, thereby protecting Canadian industry and protecting Canadian jobs. That has been the consistent approach we have taken from the start of this very difficult situation. We have had the support of the nine provinces that own the timber, and the labour union involved, and a lot of the industry.

CANADIAN SOVEREIGNTY—MINISTER'S POSITION

Mr. Keith Penner (Cochrane—Superior): Mr. Speaker, the letter goes on to state:

> It is one thing to negotiate dollars and cents; it is completely unacceptable to negotiate Canada's sovereignty.

• (1500)

Why has the Minister buckled under to U.S. pressure and failed to defend Canadian sovereign interests in determining the value of our own natural resources?

Hon. Pat Carney (Minister for International Trade): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member has it exactly backward. The process we are following, should it be successful and remove this distasteful precedent from the books, will protect our sovereignty. The course he is suggesting will put our sovereignty at risk and open every resource industry in the country to American scrutiny and American management. That is what he will not understand and he fails to accept.

Mr. Penner: Join the industry and fight the thing.

* * *

APARTHEID

SOUTH AFRICA—POSITION OF BORDERING STATES ON IMPOSITION OF SANCTIONS

Mr. John Oostrom (Willowdale): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Recently some top ranking officials from African States surrounding South Africa requested that Canada become involved in the military defence of South African transport corridors and key economic projects in Zambia and Zimbabwe. However, the two states bordering South Africa have failed to impose sanctions. Is the Minister investigating the matter? Will he inform these two Commonwealth countries of Canada's disapproval of conducting trade with South Africa?

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, there are several elements to that question. Let me try to sort them out and answer each one. First, if the States referred to are Zambia and Zimbabwe, they have both committed themselves to undertaking the elements of the Nassau Accord, and I believe they will within their capacity to do that. Second, Canada has no intention to provide military aid in the region, although we intend to continue and to increase our aid to Zimbabwe, to Zambia, to other countries in the front line states, and to SADCC. Third, I think any fair minded individual would acknowledge, in terms of the burden being borne caused by apartheid, that people who live in Zambia and Zimbabwe bear much more of the burden and often much more lethally than we do in Canada.

* * *

DISASTERS

CHERNOBYL NUCLEAR ACCIDENT—EFFECT ON CARIBOU IN LABRADOR AND QUEBEC

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, my question is for either the Minister of National Health and Welfare or perhaps the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. It was the Minister of National Health who answered questions relating to Chernobyl in the spring. He may be aware that scientists are looking into the possibility that at least 30,000 caribou in Labrador and Quebec died from radiation contamination caused by the Chernobyl nuclear disaster, according to a provincial wildlife biologist in Newfoundland today. What is the federal Government doing in respect of this possibility? What investigations are taking place as a result of federal government action?

When will we have a statement by the Minister on what monitoring took place in Canada after Chernobyl, where it took place, what they were monitoring, and just what was the total result as far as radioactive contamination in Canada was concerned as a consequence result of the Chernobyl accident?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, taking the Hon. Member's last question first, if I might, at the time of the Chernobyl accident and the days and weeks following, very full information along the lines mentioned by the Hon. Member was given. If he feels it would be helpful for the House and the country for an update to be given from that period onward, I would be willing to consider it and do it. In terms of the effect upon wildlife north of the sixtieth parallel, I have not had any notice of it. I will check it. In respect of other areas affected, all I can say at this stage is that the information I have received indicates that Canadians are not at risk. I will double-check it.

ABILITY TO MONITOR RADIOACTIVE CONTAMINATION

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I think it would be very useful if the Minister would provide the House with an update on what information was gathered respecting radioactive contamination in Canada. I hope he will look into the problem north of the sixtieth parallel. It is on the CP wire, if he is looking for information.

Many serious questions have been raised in respect of Canada's ability to monitor, and what it monitors, in terms of radioactive contamination, as a result of the inquiry the Hon. Member for Vancouver—Kingsway and I have been conducting across the country. Will the Minister assure us that he will make a statement in the House respecting our ability to monitor, and provide an opportunity for Hon. Members to ask questions about this very important topic?

Hon. Jake Epp (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, as I indicated in my first answer, I am willing to make the information available. With regard to what would be the best form and what would be the best approach in terms of discussing it with the Parties in the House, obviously I would leave that to the Deputy Prime Minister. However, I will be as open as possible.

* * *

[Translation]

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

RETROACTIVE REIMBURSEMENT OF EARLY RETIREES—GOVERNMENT POSITION

Mr. Jean-Claude Malépart (Montreal—Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of Employment and Immigration. For almost eleven months now early retirees throughout Canada have been waiting for an answer as to how they should fare under the unemployment insurance system. We know that the Forget report commissioned by the former and present Ministers will be tabled today. Should the Forget Commission recommend retroactive payments, apparently the Government will honour this commitment and pay up. The Minister said a moment ago that he would answer at three o'clock. It is now 3.05 p.m., and elderly Canadians want to know where they stand. Can the Minister live up to his promise to respond in time and forthwith tell the thousands of elderly who are waiting for his answer that indeed they will get a retroactive payment?

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, I fail to see what my colleague is driving at. As I just said, I am about to table the report. I should like to correct his statement. The Hon. Member is saying that if the Forget Commission should recommend such or such a thing, the Government is committed to act on it. Not at all. The Government did undertake to seek the advice of the Forget Commission, and now we have the answer. All I can say to my colleague is that, if the Chair will allow me, I will table these documents in two or three minutes. Then I will respond to your questions.

* * *

[English]

PRIVILEGE

Mr. Speaker: The Chair should like to advise the House that it has received notice of two questions of privilege, one from the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) and one from the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps). The questions of privilege are on the same subject. The Chair proposes to hear both Hon. Members, one after the other. The Hon. Member for Hamilton East served notice just prior to the Hon. Member for Burnaby, so the Chair will recognize first the Hon. Member for Hamilton East.

COMMITTEE CONSIDERATION OF ORDER IN COUNCIL APPOINTMENTS—ALLEGED COACHING OF WITNESSES

Ms. Sheila Copps (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Standing Committee on Human Rights met pursuant to Standing Order 104 to review the qualifications of seven recent appointees to the Canadian Human Rights Tribunal panel. During the course of questioning it was revealed that at least three witnesses had attended a secret meeting earlier that same day in the Prime Minister's Office. Invitations were extended by a staff member from the Prime Minister's Office. In attendance at the meeting were officials of the office of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney), the office of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn), and the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister.

Witnesses who attended the meeting informed the committee that during the meeting it was discussed what types of questions would be asked at the committee hearing and what personal characteristics the witnesses should promote in their responses. One witness stated that officials had in their possession copies of their resumés.

The Clerk of the Standing Committee on Human Rights who had invited all witnesses to contact him with any questions regarding the committee procedure had no prior knowledge of the secret meeting in the Prime Minister's Office. For officials of the Prime Minister's office, the office of the Minister of Justice, and the Parliamentary Secretary to meet secretly with and coach witnesses being called before a committee of the House is an extremely serious breach of privilege.

I draw Your Honour's attention to citation 638 of Beauchesne's Fifth Edition which reads:

> To tamper with a witness in regard to the evidence to be given before the House or any committee or to endeavour directly or indirectly, to deter or hinder any person from appearing or giving evidence is a breach of privilege. Corruption or intimidation is not an essential ingredient in this offence. It is equally a breach of privilege to attempt, by persuasion or solicitations of any kind, to induce a witness not to attend, or to withhold evidence or to give false evidence.

I conclude by stating that if you find, Mr. Speaker, a prima facie case of breach of privilege, I am prepared to move the necessary motion.

Mr. Svend J. Robinson (Burnaby): Mr. Speaker, I gave notice this morning of a similar question of privilege arising from the events which took place yesterday in the Standing Committee on Human Rights. I should like to add some background to the question of privilege.

The appointments in question are made on the recommendation of the Minister of Justice pursuant to Section 38.1 and Section 38.2 of the Canadian Human Rights Act. These particular appointments are of a quasi-judicial nature to a very important tribunal position. The tribunal appointees in question are appointed by the president of the Human Rights Tribunal, a distinguished Canadian, Mr. Sidney Lederman, who in turn appoints people to hear complaints which have arisen under the provisions of the Canadian Human Rights Act. The Tribunal appointees have very extensive powers to call evidence and other powers of a quasi-judicial nature. I think it is important to underline the fact that we are dealing here with appointments of a quasi-judicial nature which are subject to review under the provisions of the Standing Orders. My colleague, the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps), has already referred to the relevent Standing Order.

• (1510)

Under Standing Order 103 it is a Minister of the Crown who lays upon the Table the appointments and under Standing Order 104 it is up to the committee to which the appointments are referred to decide whether or not to examine the qualifications and competence of the appointee or nominee.

Surely there are serious questions about the integrity of this process when the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Justice (Mr. Gérin) himself participates in a meeting to brief the appointees before their appearance before the Standing Committee on Human Rights. What we are dealing with here is a situation in which the Prime Minister's office has involved itself for the purpose of briefing witnesses who are to appear before a committee of this Parliament. Why would the Prime Minister's office involve itself in this way? The Prime Minister's office was not responsible for these appointments. These people were appointed by the Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn). The individual who briefed these appointees is a Mr. Denis Jolette of the Prime Minister's office.

I want to note as well that these individuals did not request any sort of briefing by the Prime Minister's office or indeed by anyone else. Rather, the secretary to the official from the Prime Minister's Office, whose name is Reneé Levasseur, telephoned the appointees the previous day to urge them to attend the meeting which was held yesterday morning in the Prime Minister's office in the Langevin Block. There was no discussion whatever with the clerk of the Committee about this particular meeting. The clerk did not even know that the meeting was taking place. There was no discussion whatever with the full-time staff of the committee. They knew nothing about the meeting. There was no discussion with members of the committee. The Hon. Member from Hamilton East and myself and other members of the committee were not informed that this briefing, this coaching, by the Prime Minister's office was taking place.

The issue here is quite clear and yet is very fundamental, Mr. Speaker. We as a Parliament have embarked upon a process of scrutiny, of review, of the appointments made by the Government. Surely the process of review is tainted, is undermined, if prior to the committee in question conducting that review the Prime Minister's office meets with the people that are appointed and briefs them about what to expect before that review. That surely constitutes a breach of the privileges of all Members of this House. What it does is effectively undermine one of the very important new Standing Orders of the House of Commons itself.

It may be coincidence that the two people who were briefed that morning in the office of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) just happened to be the two people who were requested to appear before the committee by the two Opposition Members of Parliament on the committee. It may be coincidence, Mr. Speaker, but I doubt it. That again raises very grave questions about the purpose of this particular briefing.

Your Honour is aware of the maxim that justice must not only be done, it must be seen to be done as well. Yesterday in the committee the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Justice was very candid and straightforward with the committee. He said that he did not know who had convened the meeting and that it was not himself. He said he did not know who was invited to attend the meeting because he did not issue the invitations. What we have is the Prime Minister's office involving itself in this process. As I suggest, what could give rise to a clearer prima facie case of a breach of the privileges of this House and of the Members of this House than that kind of political interference in the oversight process of Parliament itself?

I urge Your Honour to recognize that indeed we do have Standing Orders here which have been undermined and thwarted by the conduct of the Government and by the conduct of the Prime Minister's office.

One final point. I have mentioned that we are dealing here with quasi-judicial appointments. Your Honour can imagine the uproar if the Prime Minister's office were to brief people being appointed to judicial positions. We are not just dealing with any quasi-judicial appointment here, we are dealing with a situation in which these appointees have come under signficant attack because it has been suggested that they were, in some cases, appointed on the basis of their political credentials. There have been questions about the doctoring of resumes. There have been concerns expressed about the nature of the review process itself. Taken in that context, as well as a situation in which questions were already raised about the partisan political involvement in this important human rights oversight process, to allow this kind of blatant political manipulation by the Prime Minister's office to proceed is a clear breach of the privileges of the Members of this House. Certainly I too am prepared to move the necessary motion should Your Honour find that a prima facie case has been established.

Mr. Speaker: Before calling on other Members, perhaps the Chair could direct a question to the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson). I think it is important that the Chair understand exactly what the point is that the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) and the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) are making.

There has been reference—I think just now by the Member from Burnaby—to the fact that one or more of these suggested appointments may have political affiliation. The Chair would like to know clearly whether the position which the Hon. Member is taking is that any person who is a member of a political Party is automatically barred from being considered by a Government for these appointments. I think it very important that that point be clarified now. If the answer to that is in the negative, then the Chair will be able to deal with the matter more easily. Could the Hon. Member for Burnaby please clarify?

Mr. Robinson: If there was one issue upon which all members of the Standing Committee on Human Rights were unanimous, it was that the mere fact of political affiliation, if it is coupled with other qualifications such as recognized competence in the field of human rights, clearly does not disqualify an individual for appointment to the Human Rights Tribunal.

That was not the concern, but rather that the appointments made in a number of cases were made solely on the basis of political qualification; in other words, solely on the basis of Progressive Conservative political affiliation and in the absence of any other qualifications whatever. No one, I believe, would suggest that political affiliation in and of itself would disqualify any individual otherwise qualified from serving on this or other government tribunals.

• (1520)

Mr. Speaker: Perhaps the Chair can help. I take it that the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) is making it quite clear that the political affiliation of someone named to this particular Commission is not in itself the issue.

Mr. Robinson: No.

Mr. Speaker: I think it is important that that be clarified before the discussion goes any further. The Chair would remind all Hon. Members that many Canadians belong to political parties, and not all to one political party. No doubt in the thousands of appointments made by any Government to judicial or quasi-judicial bodies it would be healthy for democracy to have a fair and even mix. However, the Chair takes the representation of the Hon. Member for Burnaby as not precluding someone from consideration because that person happens to be a member of a political party. I thank the Hon. Member for his contribution.

Are there other Hon. Members rising?

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a few remarks on this alleged tampering with committee witnesses. It is odd to see that coalition complaining about a process of review of appointments which is new to the Canadian political scene. It was instituted by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) and our Government in response to concern that the appointments—the process which was so abused by the Liberal Party—should be reviewed by a parliamentary committee. This is the first time it has been done in Canada. The Liberal-NDP coalition Government in the Province of Ontario has refused to institute any such process.

Some Hon. Members: Shame!

Mr. Lewis: Now we have the Liberal-NDP coalition here arguing that the way we are doing it does not quite suit their convenience.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Mr. Speaker: There is always on both sides of the House a temptation to broaden the debate on a question of privilege. The Chair senses that perhaps the debate is about to be broadened, so I would ask the Parliamentary Secretary to stay on the point which, I remind all Hon. Members, has been narrowed somewhat by the questions asked by the Chair and the answers given by the Hon. Member for Burnaby.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I was about to finish my remarks at that point anyway because I did not want to embarrass them any further.

I want to refer directly to Beauchesne's because there is an allegation here of tampering and breach of privilege by persuasion or solicitation. As I said, this is a new process. People are being asked to come to Ottawa to appear before a standing committee which contains Members who hope to make political gain out of examining them as to their qualifications.

An Hon. Member: That is the only thing they have in mind.

Mr. Robinson: Point of order.

Mr. Mazankowski: Can't stand the heat.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Chair wants to be more than fair in hearing arguments on all important points in the matter raised by the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) and the Hon. Member for Burnaby. All Hon. Members know it is very difficult for the Chair to adjudicate upon sometimes severely conflicting points of view if motives are questioned. I ask all Hon. Members to refrain from doing that as much as is humanly possible in this very human place. I will continue to hear the Parliamentary Secretary.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, we have dealt with two items. I think it is important to pin down the allegations that witnesses were tampered with, that they were asked to change their testimony, such that they came to the committee with a different view than the day they got off the plane, train or out of the car. I think it is perfectly reasonable to help people understand the procedure. It is new to them. We have no wish on either side to embarrass them over the process. Therefore, certain arrangements were made to facilitate an understanding of that process.

Mr. Robinson: That is the clerk's job.

Mr. Lewis: If that is the clerk's job, name one committee in which it is being done by the clerk.

Mr. Robinson: That is the clerk's job.

Mr. Lewis: Name one committee where it is being done. This is a new procedure.

Mr. Speaker: The Parliamentary Secretary is a veteran of the House of Commons. His exhortation to the other side to do one thing or another may or may not be received with dispatch and concurrence, but at least it should be put through the Chair.

Mr. Lewis: I am sorry, Mr. Speaker. Having dealt with that item, let us look at what the witnesses are being reviewed on. They get an understanding of the process and the questions to be asked, which are naturally as to competence and ability to fulfil the requirements of the appointment. I would also point out to the other side that we have brought in tougher conflict of interest guidelines. I do not believe, with all due respect, that Clerks of the committees are schooled in those guidelines. I think it is only fair that these witnesses have some understanding of those guidelines and the questions which may be put concerning them before they appear before a committee. This is done simply to make the witnesses aware of the process.

In all of the allegations we have not heard that any testimony was being interfered with. When you have a résumé before you which states the person's qualifications, the questions asked concern those qualifications and competence for the appointment. Surely that cannot be changed. If you have the qualifications, then you have the qualifications.

Ms. Copps: You changed the résumés.

Mr. Lewis: The Hon. Member is new to this process because it was not in effect in the Province of Ontario and we just brought it in here now. She understands that.

I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, I got off the track there. In finding that there has been an abuse of the privilege of members of these committees, whether it is this committee or any other, surely there has to be more proof than we have heard here today that a witness has been tampered with or that there has been, directly or indirectly, any attempt to deter or hinder any person from appearing. Deter or hinder! We set up the process to get them before the committee so how can we be deterring or hindering? We are bringing them in and explaining the process.

This entire question of privilege revolves around whether or not anything untoward was done in trying to explain to a Canadian citizens who have decided to come forward and serve their country as appointees how the process works. Should they not have the right to understand the process whereby they appear before a parliamentary committee? I believe we owe it to any individual coming before a committee to be questioned on their abilities and competence to go over the process with them. It is not to change their résumé, not to suggest we are going to do anything different than ask them questions. We have a duty to tell them the nature of the process and, I submit, that is all that has been done and nothing more.

Some Hon. Members: Hear, hear!

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I realize this is a very serious question and one which you will have to deliberate at some length. I believe as you review the transcripts of the meetings last night you will see that clear evidence was presented from at least two witnesses that the résumés were tampered with. More specifically, they indicated to the committee that they had sent résumés which included their political connections and those résumés had been altered. The witnesses stated that they had not altered the résumés, that the original résumés sent included a reference to membership in the Progressive Conservative Party. I believe that if you review the résumés and the "blues", Mr. Speaker, you will see that there was clear evidence of tampering, if the words of the witnesses are to be believed.

• (1530)

Mr. Speaker: I will continue to hear Hon. Members, but there is something that I feel I am duty bound to clarify with all Members. I happen to know that one of the witnesses before this particular committee is a member of the riding association of the riding which I represent. I want to assure Hon. Members that I have had no discussions with that citizen. I want Hon. Members to know that the Chair is listening to submissions with very great care. I felt I owed a duty to make it clear to all Hon. Members that one of the persons involved is a member of the riding association in my own constituency. I have had nothing to do with influencing what that person has said or done. In case there is any doubt, I want it to be absolutely clear to the House that that is the case.

I noticed that the Hon. Member for Hamilton East and the Member for Burnaby did not mention that. I take it that that was out of regard for the Chair, and that is a courtesy which the Chair very much appreciated. I feel honourbound to make that clear to all Hon. Members. I do not think that affects the argument, but I would rather have that understood than have suggestions made by anyone at any other time which might impute the integrity of this entire discussion. I thank Hon. Members for hearing me on that point.

Ms. Copps: Mr. Speaker, I have made my point. I would like to respond to the statement with regard to evidence of tampering. I believe that if the Speaker examines the transcript of the meeting he will discover that there is evidence of tampering with at least two of the résumés, and possibly three, of the appointees before the Human Rights Tribunal. I believe you should take that into consideration in making your decision, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. John Nunziata (York South—Weston): Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a very brief submission on this issue. In particular, I would like to reply to some of the comments made by the Parliamentary Secretary. He indicated that the witnesses were asked to appear in the Prime Minister's Office in order to allow them to understand the process and ask questions about the nature of the appearance they were about to make before the Parliamentary Committee. With the greatest of respect, Mr. Speaker, his arguments are not very persuasive.

It is of paramount importance to ask why the individuals were asked to appear in the Prime Minister's Office to be briefed or coached by officials from the offices of the Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn) and the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). Certain conclusions can be drawn from what occurred. Other Hon. Members have drawn those conclusions and I agree with the submissions made by them.

In my view, to condone what happened would set a very dangerous precedent. The integrity of the parliamentary committee process has been threatened by the actions of the Conservative Government in this case. It is not the role of the Prime Minister's Office to invite witnesses to be coached or briefed to help them understand the committee process. If such as responsibility exists, it is that of the nonpartisan clerk of the committee. It is inappropriate for the Prime Minister's Office or that of any other Minister of the Crown to invite witnesses who are about to appear before a committee to attend briefings. That would threaten the integrity of the parliamentary committee process. The conclusion which can be drawn quite readily is that the evidence of such witnesses would be tainted and not objective. If such a thing occurred within the criminal justice system, I suggest it would be tantamount to the obstruction of justice.

Mr. Nowlan: Poppycock.

Mr. Nunziata: It is not the role of the Prime Minister's Office to try to convince witnesses to give certain testimony before a parliamentary committee. In my view the Government introduced this reform to enable the Opposition to ask questions in order to satisfy Parliament and Canadians that people were being appointed to various boards and commissions based on merit. That which the Government has done has created considerable cynicism with regard to government appointments. It has also created considerable cynicism about our system.

I urge you, Mr. Speaker, to rule that there has indeed been a breach of the privileges of this House. In my view, the Government of Canada, through the Prime Minister's office, has shown contempt for this Parliament.

Mr. Reginald Stackhouse (Scarborough West): Mr. Speaker, I am glad to speak on this matter both as a member of the House and as Chairman of the Committee on Human Rights. I noted your remarks from the chair, Mr. Speaker. Your reference in no way added to the knowledge which members of the committee had. Every member of the committee was fully aware of the political affiliation of the appointee to whom you referred. We were aware of that because it was contained in a résumé which was circulated to each member of the committee. We all received copies of résumés which outlined the political affiliation of each appointee. While I welcome your statement and understand your reasons for making it, I point out to the House that we were all aware of the affiliations of that and other appointees.

That is representative of the fullness of knowledge available to members of the committee, either through papers circulated among us or through knowledge gained by questions freely asked with very few restrictions during the extended series of hearings. As an example of that, the committee discovered the holding of the information meeting which has occasioned this debate.

There has been no attempt to restrict this committee or any member of it from seeking the knowledge required to carry out the responsibility given to us by Standing Order 104. That is clear from the fact that this private meeting, which has been falsely called a secret meeting—and there is a difference—was fully described to us by the Parliamentary Secretary who was in attendance at our meeting and by each of the witnesses who attended that meeting. There was not the slightest attempt to withhold any information which any member of the committee desired to obtain. So free was the opportunity for seeking information that two witnesses who had been examined before we gained knowledge that the morning meeting had been held were brought back to the table at the conclusion of the examination of other witnesses. Their examination was resumed so that we could ask them about the morning meeting. There was nothing secretive about it.

• (1540)

I have the same transcript as the one to which Opposition Members have referred. We do not have the full transcript yet. I believe it is only a transcript of the first three witnesses examined. When you take the time to examine the transcript, when it is available, I am confident that you will see that, as reported by the witnesses who testified, the character of the morning meeting was primarily to acquaint the witnesses with the procedures that would be followed and the kind of meeting they were going to enter yesterday afternoon. Many of them indicated that they had never appeared before a parliamentary committee previously and that they were glad to have the opportunity. I point out that if you examine the transcript you will see, as will any other Member of the House, that there was not any testimony given yesterday that would encourage or support any indication by any member of the committee or the House that what went on at that meeting in any way prejudiced the testimony that those witnesses gave to us yesterday afternoon.

Ms. Copps: How do you know?

Mr. Stackhouse: No evidence at all. There was not the slightest shred of evidence that would support the conclusion that in any way that meeting tampered with the legitimate exercise of the rights and duties of those witnesses.

One can hold an opinion as to whether the meeting should have been held, but I submit that the evidence will show that there has been no breach of privileges of the Members of this House, especially members of that committee, by the meeting that was held and to which reference has been made.

I submit further that this matter is not a prima facie case of a breach of the privileges of the House, to be determined here, because it should be discussed by the committee itself. It is the committee that should deal with this matter, not the House in a plenary session. I make that point without reiterating the argument that I offered the House and the Speaker yesterday.

I suggest that the committee has the exclusive right to determine this. It is not in keeping with the traditions and procedures of the House, or the parliamentary tradition of which we are descendants, to bring into the House disagreements about the conduct of the affairs of a parliamentary standing committee. I hope we can settle that, because it will be a very negative, counterproductive precendent if every member of every committee who has some disagreement with the way in which a committee has conducted its affairs believes he or she has an opportunity to come back to the House the next day and open the question in this chamber rather than in the committee where it should be referred.

For example, our committee will be meeting as soon as tomorrow morning. Every member of the committee has an opportunity to return to the subject with which we were dealing yesterday and, in fact, we already have a notice of motion to that effect. I submit that it is within the competence of the committee to order its life and deal with this issue. For that second reason, there is not a prima facie case of the breach of privileges of Members of the House.

I hope this can be disposed of expeditiously so that the House can get on with its proper business and that the committee can soon deal with the concerns of human rights of Canadians, as it was constituted to do.

Hon. Herb Gray (Windsor West): Mr. Speaker, the Hon. Member who just took his seat argued that the matter before us is one that should be dealt with by the committee in question and not by the House. I am informed that when this matter was raised in the committee, the majority, the government supporters, voted not to question officials of the Prime Minister's Office who were involved in this morning meeting in order to get further information about what happened there. While the Hon. Member spoke at great length and with great eloquence about this matter, particularly the infamous morning meeting, I am also informed that he personally was not present at that morning meeting and is not in a position personally to say what did or did not happen there.

I particularly want to say to Your Honour that the contention of the Hon. Member who just spoke that this is not a matter of privilege to be dealt with in the House but a matter to be dealt with by the committee, is certainly not supported by the authorities. The citation in Beauchesne is taken verbatim from Erskine May's Parliamentary Practice which states:

> To tamper with a witness in regard to the evidence to be given before either House or any committee of either House or to endeavour, directly or indirectly, to deter or hinder any person from appearing or giving evidence is a breach of privilege.

Interestingly enough, this is a citation which is based on a resolution to this effect, passed by the House of Commons of the United Kingdom on February 21, 1700 and, according to Erskine May, a resolution which has been regularly renewed in every succeeding session. If there is something that creates concern—and I certainly submit that there is—then on the basis of the precedent in question it can only be dealt with by the House as a breach of privilege.

I am not aware of any doctrine, tradition or precedent which enables a parliamentary committee to decide on a matter of breach of privilege. For that matter, I am not aware of any doctrine, tradition or precedent which says that a parliamentary committee or members of a parliamentary committee as such have privileges which can be dealt with or decided upon by a committee. The whole matter of parliamentary privilege can only be dealt with by the House, not by a parliamentary committee which is simply a subsidiary body.

If there is a breach of privilege, and one could argue that the Hon. Member who just spoke is conceding that, then it must be dealt with in the House. I suggest that the Conservative Member who just spoke may well be conceding that there is a breach of privilege, because he was saying that this is a matter that has to be dealt with in the committee. At least at the conclusion of his remarks he was not arguing that there was nothing to be dealt with at all. He was saying that it had to be dealt with in the committee, and that is why I say that the Hon. Member seems to be conceding that there was a breach of privilege. If that is the case, then the precedents you must consider, going back to the resolution of the British House of Commons adopted in 1700, say that it is a matter to be dealt with in the House and not in the parliamentary committee.

I have one final point, Mr. Speaker. The Hon. Member to whom I have been referring talked about whether there is evidence of tampering. The precedent is clear. It says that tampering in the sense of "corruption or intimidation, though unusual, is not an essential ingredient in this offence". The concluding words of the citation which I believe has already been brought before you say that: "It is equally a breach of privilege to attempt by persuasion or solicitations of any kind to induce a witness not to attend or withhold evidence or to give false evidence". Therefore, if the words spoken by the officials in question of the Prime Minister's Office, no matter how gentle or kind they may have been, amounted to persuasion or solicitations of any kind, then in the words of the citation there is a breach of privilege. I submit with the greatest respect that a prima facie case of breach of privilege has been proven.

• (1550)

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I would also like to add a few words to this question of privilege raised by Members of the two opposition Parties.

No one is arguing that the Prime Minister's Office actually interviewed these people. It has been accepted that that has actually happened. However, there are two questions which have to be answered. Why was that done and what effect does that have on our committee system? Some Members of the Government have said it was done to coach the witnesses on what happens in front of a committee. If that was the only reason the Prime Minister's Office thought it was necessary to bring witnesses of committees into that office, then I would say it does not sound like there was any reason to do so in the first place because obviously—

Mr. Speaker: The Hon. Member who has a reputation in the House as being a skilled Parliamentarian will realize he may be putting the Chair in some difficulty. I would caution the Hon. Member who is an experienced Member of Parliament not to get too close to something which may be, I am afraid, imputing motives to the very people about whom we are speaking or of other Hon. Members of the House. I know the Hon. Member would not want to stray too far into that area if that is not his intention. Will the Hon. Member please continue.

Mr. Murphy: Mr. Speaker, I am not sure what you thought I was going to say, but I certainly do not think I was going to say anything which went against the rules of the House.

Mr. Speaker: Provided the Hon. Member is now quite sure he will not say anything which goes against the rules of the House, the Chair's intervention might have been helpful.

Mr. Murphy: I would almost accuse you of filibustering, Mr. Speaker, but that would be against the rules of the House.

The problem we face with this whole process is that the Prime Minister's Office, for some reason, brought these witnesses who were called before a committee of the House, and did some sort of coaching. We have no knowledge as to what took place in that coaching process. Obviously, the Prime Minister's Office felt it had to do this despite the fact that any Clerk of any committee is quite capable of explaining to witnesses what happens in committee and what are the procedures of a committee.

Mr. Speaker: I wonder if I could ask the Hon. Member a question. Imagine for a moment that a constituent of the Hon. Member is here and is called to come before a committee and the Hon. Member receives a call from the constituent who asks: "Can you tell me what this is all about and give me some advice." I wonder what the response of the Hon. Member would be?

Mr. Murphy: I think that is a very valid question, Mr. Speaker. I suspect that I would either give that person information or refer him to the Clerk. However, that is not what happened in this situation. As we understand it, and as people have explained it to us in addressing the question of privilege, the witnesses did not telephone the Prime Minister's Office and say: "Please tell us what is going on". The Prime Minister's Office called these witnesses in and said they must come in or should come in, whatever phraseology was used, and it would review and explain how the process works.

My problem with that is that committees of the House of Commons, through the new rules of the House, have an obligation to review various Government appointees. That was a right granted by the House and, I must admit, was a promise of the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney). The problem that we will have, especially those of us in the opposition, is that if there is going to be coaching of witnesses, as there quite often is in court cases, then the committees themselves, and especially the opposition Members of those committees, will need to have the same abilities, training and resources in order to ensure that the process is fair.

I am not a lawyer, Mr. Speaker, but I do know enough about law to recognize that there is some equality in the system. It is true that a lawyer will brief his or her client. That will happen. However, we do not have that same ability in our committees. That is the danger in what is happening here. If the Prime Minister's Office, with all of its resources, is going to bring in witnesses before they are even seen by Members of the committee, that will create an unfairness in the system which will guarantee that the committees will not work. I think that is a very serious breach of the procedures of this House and the intent of our committees.

Mr. Speaker: I want to be very careful here. The Hon. Member for Annapolis Valley—Hants (Mr. Nowlan).

Mr. Pat Nowlan (Annapolis Valley—Hants): Mr. Speaker, I will be very brief. I am not a member of the committee but I have been a Member of the House for a few years and I am chairman of a committee. I must say, without getting into the words of the formal notice of motion of privilege, that I as a Member of the House feel my privileges, in a reverse way, have been imposed upon and insulted by such a fictitious, specious motion of privilege put forward by the opposition. Never, since this new session has begun with its new rules, have I heard more of a mountain out of a molehill made by parliamentary pigmies who are trying to pervert the new parliamentary reform process.

Mr. Murphy: Order.

Mr. Nowlan: Quite frankly, Mr. Speaker, if Hon. Members opposite do not have more responsibility in trying to interpret these new areas of parliamentary reform—they are only provisionary rules—the sooner we get rid of them and get back to basic parliamentary order, the better it will be.

I must say, Mr. Speaker, to your credit you posed a question to the Hon. Member who just spoke which was a question I was asking myself as I listened to the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) and the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps). I do not know if the Hon. Member for Hamilton East is a lawyer, but the Hon. Member for Burnaby is a lawyer and very much a member of the Committee on Justice. To suggest that a client cannot be briefed by the lawyer without tainting his evidence as suggested by the Hon. Member for York South—Weston (Mr. Nunziata), who is also a lawyer of dubious skill, is an insult to any Parliamentarian, to any lawyer, or to anyone in the legal world—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Chair is not absolutely certain that to call another Hon. Member a lawyer of dubious skill would come as any surprise to the general public, but it may be creating an atmosphere in which other Hon. Members are inclined to respond in like fashion. I am reminded of what Shakespeare had one of his characters say some hundreds of years ago: "The first thing we should do is let us hang all the lawyers". I am sure the Hon. Member would not want to go that far.

Mr. Nowlan: I understand, Mr. Speaker, and you are in the chair to exercise moderation because those of us in the common field of the House sometimes do get a little excited. I used to be a member of the profession, and as far as I am concerned it is the last of the priesthoods and the faster it is defrocked and put back in the world of reality, the better it is.

I have not participated that much in some of these points of order, and you did denote the fact that perhaps I was not as moderate as I usually am. But, I have listened to this poppycock for an hour about a private meeting, as my hon. friend from Scarborough called it, which is totally distinct from a secret meeting. This was not a secret conclave, a cabal, a meeting under the cloak of darkness under the Peace Tower or climbing into the back door of the Langevin Building to pervert evidence before the committe. This "tainted" evidence, as it is called by the Hon. Member for Hamilton East, was allegedly in documents which were changed before and after these witnesses ever appeared.

There is absolutely no question of privilege here. The Hon. House Leader for the Official Opposition, who has come through an awful traumatic weekend trying to find out where he fits on the spectrum of free trade, or on any subject, let alone as leader, can be excused for his participation this afternoon. He is a notable Member of this House and I think a Member of some repute of the bar society of the land. For him to say that certain things said by the Hon. Member for Scarborough East (Mr. Hicks) lead ipso facto to an automatic question of privilege is one of the most facetious and superficial arguments that has ever been presented in this Chamber. Unless the tone and logic of debate starts to pick up, Mr. Speaker, you might as well turn off the cameras completely because the people of Canada will be turned off completely.

• (1600)

Let us get back to the business of the House, which is an interesting motion dealing with the Post Office. Evidentally, members of the New Democratic Party want to filibuster on an opposition day. I used to be in opposition and when we had an opposition day we treated it as the holy of holies because we were serious about the subject. Yet this opposition—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Hon. Member's intervention has been helpful. I think it is probably appropriate to ask Hon. Members if any can constrain themselves from entering into the debate. I now recognize the Hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Keeper).

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I wish to relate to you an experience we had at our committee with regarding an Order in Council appointment. I think it touches on what you will be dealing with in terms of this question of privilege. While the Chair may rule that the contact between the Prime Minister's office and the witness before he appeared before committee was a breach of privilege, Your Honour might also rule that the outcome of such a contact had an impact on the effectiveness of the committee to do its job.

It is with regard to the second point that I wish to comment. A Mr. Spector, who is now a senior civil servant, appeared before our committee. He was previously assistant to the Premier of British Columbia before he became assistant to the Prime Minister of Canada. When questioned in committee with respect to his views on public policy he would not answer.

The job of the committee is to evaluate the suitability of a candidate to perform the job to which he or she has been appointed by Order in Council. There are several basis upon which this evaluation can be made. It can be done on the basis of the number of degrees the person has, the type of work experience he or she has, or any record concerning public attitudes. The other basis upon which the evaluation can be made is with respect to the candidate's attitudes on public policy that fall within the area in which he or she will be working. The gentleman to whom I am referring was involved in the area of federal-provincial relations. This is the type of examination which would take place before the American Congress.

What I think is of interest and of relevance to this question of privilege is that the official to whom I have referred refused to answer any questions with regard to his views on public policy. This left the appearance that he had been, shall I say, coached or instructed, or at least that he had had some conversations—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The Chair is reluctant to interrupt the Hon. Member. Apart from the propriety of proceeding with these remarks concerning another person in another place and in another situation, the Chair is wondering how helpful they are in terms of deciding this point. I ask the Hon. Member to ensure that his arguments, which are always helpful to the Chair, keep on the point.

Mr. Keeper: Mr. Speaker, I am endeavouring to keep to the point.

The point I am making is that the committee has been assigned a task. That task is to review a candidate's suitability for appointment by Order in Council to a specific position. I am suggesting that one of the basis upon which it is necessary for the committee to examine a witness is with regard to his or her attitude on public policy as it relates to the position. The experience we have had with regard to at least one such appointment was that the witness who appeared before the committee refused to answer such questions. I am suggesting to Your Honour that this had the appearance of having been done as a result of instructions from his civil service or political boss.

I suggest this is relevant in terms of Your Honour's consideration of this point. If Your Honour is dealing with the question of whether a witness has been coached or not before appearing before the committee and whether that is a breach of privilege, then the experience which I relate is relevant to Your Honour's ruling. It is something which affected our capacity to judge whether or not the person was suitable for the position. We had, shall I say, one of the legs of the three-legged stool with which we had to judge the quality of this appointment taken away.

Mr. Albert Cooper (Peace River): Mr. Speaker, I wish to participate briefly in this question of privilege. I wish to touch upon what I consider to be the four key points of discussion here. First, I wish to touch on the whole concept of what we are dealing with since it is a new process. Second, I wish to deal with the business of Citation 638 of Beauchesne's, that is, the concern about tampering with witnesses. Third, I wish to talk about the concept of briefing witnesses. Fourth, I wish to talk about the role of the committee.

Dealing first with the process that is under discussion, I think it is absolutely imperative that all Members of the House understand the dangers that we are now engaging in. One of the things talked about in the McGrath Task Force was the danger of partisan activity and partisan use of committee procedures and the impact that that would have on the reforms. The reforms that we are dealing with today are extremely important to the committees and extremely important to the House of Commons. I think they are extremely important to all Canadians. This type of partisan approach to the issue and this partisan use of the rules will subvert that process and destroy any reforms that possibly have a chance of succeeding. We have to remember that they are provisional rules and that we are now in the test run. If we wish them to survive, and I am certainly one who wishes that they do, then we have to be very careful with the type of things that are being brought before the House of Commons.

My second point is with respect to Citation 638 of Beauchesne's. The whole tone of that paragraph is with respect to the concern that witnesses have been tampered with, tampered with in the sense of not appearing before the committee or being discouraged to appear; tampered with in terms of their evidence; or tampered with in terms of the type of things they will say to the committee. I think it is absolutely essential to go back to that meeting and have a look at what happened there to see if in fact any tampering went on. The impression I have as a result of conversations I have had with members of the committee is that the meeting was extremely open and frank. There was no desire on the part of any of the witnesses or on the part of the Parliamentary Secretary to deny in any way the fact that this briefing meeting took place. So there was a very open procedure. There was no impression of tampering in any way.

As experienced Members of the House will know, if they are concerned about evidence that is being put before the committee by the House, then they have the right to swear a witness. There was no request by any member of the committee to have any of the witnesses sworn. Obviously, there was a sense that the evidence coming from the witnesses was in fact relevant and had not been tampered with.

The third point with which I would like to deal concerns the idea of briefing witnesses. I find it absolutely absurd that someone would rise in the House of Commons and take the position that witnesses should not be briefed by anyone but the clerk. Anyone who has spent any time in the House of Commons, or on any of its committees, will have realized and witnessed personally Members of Parliament and various other people briefing witnesses before the committee, It is a totally acceptable form of behaviour. This is the type of thing that our traditions are built on, and it has gone on for a long time. It is almost laughable to find that to be a fundamental part of a point of privilege.

• (1610)

Citation 630 of Beauchesne's goes on to indicate that witnesses before a committee have the right to counsel. What is that, if it is not legalized and acceptable briefing in the eyes of Beauchesne?

The fourth point that I wish to touch on very quickly is the point raised by the Opposition House Leader when he stated, if I understood him correctly, that the committee has no role to play in privilege. On page 24 of Beauchesne's, paragraph 76, it states:

> Breaches of privilege in committee may be dealt with only by the House itself on report from the committee.

Now, if there had been a serious breach of privilege in the viewpoint of the Members who have raised this before the House, I would suggest to you that their first obligation would be to raise that point of privilege at the place of the so-called crime, which would have been in the committee. The committee would then hear the arguments, the chairman would then hear the arguments and rule whether it was a case of privilege, and then the committee would report accordingly to the House of Commons. That never happened. That proves the point at which I began, that really what we are engaged in here is not a point of privilege but a partisan exercise which undermines the role of committees, and has certainly taken up a good deal of the time of the opposition debate in the House of Commons today.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I wish to add two or three comments to what I believe is a very useful debate. I am pleased that we are having it today. Hopefully, as a result of your ruling, this type of debate and topic will not be raised again in the House.

The comments of my hon. friend, the Member for Peace River (Mr. Cooper), were thoughtful comments, particularly on the perceived partisan nature of this activity that is being debated here today. As the Hon. Member has indicated, the new provisional rules are very much appreciated by all Members of the House. They certainly have added a new dimension for those people who receive appointments to various boards and other organizations associated with the federal Government.

From the role I played, particularly on the Standing Committee on Finance and Economic Affairs when various officials who had received a government appointment were before that committee, I recall that they were in attendance with absolutely no briefing or no coaching of any type. As a matter of fact, on a number of occasions I recall individuals stating that they had literally got off the plane and walked into the committee room, and were not even certain of the procedures, or what types of questions would be put to them. Nevertheless, in a non-partisan way the appropriate questions were put from all sides of the committee table. By and large, I think people felt that a complete and appropriate vetting had taken place.

One of the questions, Mr. Speaker, that you must look at is this. These individuals were appointed by the Minister of Justice (Mr. Hnatyshyn), which is quite appropriate. The information that we have is that when they arrived they had been summoned by the Prime Minister's Office, not by the Minister of Justice's office, not by the clerk of the appropriate committee, not by Members of Parliament from their appropriate or respective constituent, but by the Prime Minister's Office.

The question that must be asked is why would the Prime Minister's Office, of all offices, want to contact these individuals for briefing, or coaching, or providing certain types of information or advice on how to approach the committee. That is the critical question. If there is any political involvement, if there is any partisan aspect of this discussion, surely to goodness that is it. The question is why does the Prime Minister's Office involve itself in a matter that was strictly that of the committee? If any part of the Cabinet should be involved, Mr. Speaker, certainly it should be the Minister of Justice who ought to have been involved in terms of concern that the individuals coming before the appropriate committee within his jurisdiction would receive at least a briefing on the rules, regulations and procedures of that committee.

I submit to you that we also are concerned about the possible partisan involvement in this particular discussion. But I say it is the involvement of the Prime Minister's Office where the partisan nature becomes a reality.

[Translation]

Mr. François Gérin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): Mr. Speaker, I was involved in the questions raised by the Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) and by the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps), and since they had received an explanation last night, I find it hard to understand their present approach.

First of all, I would like to make it clear that the meeting held yesterday morning was not a secret one in any respect. There was no secret about the number of people who attended the meeting, about who was invited, or about where the meeting was held, and I may add that when a witness was unable to name the people who were present, I immediately agreed to give the Committee the requested information, without any reservations. So it was not exactly what you would call a secret meeting.

Furthermore, and here it becomes a matter of personal privilege as a Member of this House, I may not have many years of experience in the House, and my English may not be perfect, but when I heard the word "tampering", I sent for a

French-English dictionary and an English dictionary, to check the meaning. In the English dictionary, the word "tamper" is defined as follows:

To alter, corrupt, pervert—

And that was never, not in any way, either directly or indirectly or otherwise, the case.

Yesterday, I told the Hon. Member for Hamilton East that I could not accept the allegations she was making. Considering the personalities of the two Members, and I have come to realize in the two years I have been here—

[English]

Ms. Copps: That's imputing motives.

Mr. Mazankowski: He is speaking on a point of privilege.

Ms. Copps: He's impugning the integrity. He cannot comment on someone's character.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I would like to say to the Hon. Member for Hamilton East (Ms. Copps) that we are in the midst of a point of privilege. I will hear the Hon. Member at the appropriate time. Will the Hon. Member for Mégantic—Compton—Stanstead (Mr. Gérin) please continue.

[Translation]

Mr. Gérin: Mr. Speaker, I have come to realize in the past two years that they often get carried away. This time I am willing to forgive and forget, but I have to say this will be the last time.

In fact, once they had been advised the meeting had taken place, the two Members had an opportunity to ask the witnesses who were present at the meeting all the relevant questions, and no one cast any doubts on the good faith or the actual testimony of these people.

So what I find particularly distressing is that today, after having had this opportunity to ask these questions, they say there has been a case of tampering, as they say in English. There was no tampering.

It is extremely distressing, because in addition to attacking me, Mr. Speaker, they are also attacking people who have been appointed to the Human Rights Tribunal, distinguished Canadians with extremely high professional qualifications. In fact, I was surprised to see how qualified some of these people are.

And today, they are being accused of having submitted to "tampering". That we cannot accept, Mr. Speaker.

In concluding, I would like to say that if the two Members want to pursue the issue, let them make a clear and specific charge, and in that case, there are other rules in the House that may apply. However, they will then have to suffer the consequences of having made unfounded charges.

• (1620)

[English]

Mr. Blaine A. Thacker (Lethbridge—Foothills): Mr. Speaker, with respect, we who have been around the House for some time—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. Perhaps I could interrupt the Hon. Member; I know he will graciously agree. I think the Chair has heard the issue fully. If it would please the House, the Chair would prefer the Hon. Member for Lethbridge—Foothills (Mr. Thacker) to be the last speaker on the issue.

Mr. Thacker: Mr. Speaker, we know from history how serious is a breach of privilege question. If someone tries to block any Hon. Member from getting into the House to perform his or her duty or to give a speech, that is a true question of privilege, perhaps the only one.

A question of privilege has been raised over some conduct on a committee. There has been no allegation that the rights of Members to question have been interfered with or that any questions were prohibited. There is no doubt that that would be a question of privilege, but not the events of today.

The Hon. Member for Burnaby (Mr. Robinson) has not been in the House since making his speech. I will tell the House where he has been—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I must ask all Hon. Members to respect the custom of the House—and it is an ancient and honourable tradition—that we do not comment in the House on whether or not a Member is in his or her place. All Hon. Members know that there are pressing duties on Members of Parliament. People are often visiting them, and Hon. Members must go to other places. I hope all Hon. Members would agree with the Chair that we should be very careful not to comment upon the absence of any Member from the Chamber. The absence of a Member one day is coupled with the absence of another Hon. Member another day. Given the press of obligations and duties which all Hon. Members owe to their constituents and to the country, continual attendance in the Chamber is sometimes very difficult. I know the Hon. Member would agree that the better course is not to make reference to the absence of a Member. I know the Hon. Member would want to support the Chair in that regard.

Mr. Thacker: Mr. Speaker, I remind you of the judicial principle in a court of equity, the court you are operating in today—when one comes into a court of equity, one must have clean hands.

What about the rights of the witnesses? It will be a frosty Friday before I will agree to the extension of these rules. Thousands of citizens across the land give hundreds and hundreds of hours each year out of their lives to make Canada the civilized country it is. We put in place a temporary process so that they could be quizzed on their qualifications. They have fundamental rights. They have the fundamental right to privacy. Another right is to belong to a political Party.

I have attended appointment hearings, and the very first question raised by members of the Opposition is about membership of a political Party. We know what members of the Opposition are trying to achieve. They are trying to build up a record so that they can rise in the House and say that only Conservatives were appointed. Particularly in respect of human rights, I know of several members of the Conservative Party who in the past wanted to serve on human rights tribunals but were never permitted to do so, even though they had distinguished careers in the area. They were never permitted to serve because they were members of our Party. There is a small group of human rights people who feel that unless we adopt its narrow view, we are no longer qualified. That is what they are trying to do, and that is fundamentally wrong.

I think, Mr. Speaker, you could take it as judicial notice that a question of privilege must be a most serious matter. This question of privilege does not qualify, as the vast majority of applications do not qualify. It is simply an attempt to discredit the Government in any way possible. It is unfair to the people who have given of their time to stand for public office. I submit that it should be dismissed out of hand for that reason alone.

Mr. Speaker: If it is the general disposition of the House, I think this is the appropriate place to move on to another proceeding. I want to say to the Hon. Member for Burnaby and to the Hon. Member for Hamilton East that I will consider very carefully their representations. I say to all other Hon. Members that the Chair will give the matter full consideration.

Also I say to them something about which some Hon. Members with a lot of experience in the House may be wondering, that is, why the debate has gone on as long as it has. It has gone on as long as it has because, in the opinion of the Chair, when all Hon. Members agree upon parliamentary reforms—and clearly the whole process we are discussing is one of those reforms—it takes a while for them to find out how to make a new approach work. I hope the discussion which has taken place today will assist Hon. Members in making the system work.

The Chair will look very carefully at the evidence which has been given here and at the comments of all Hon. Members. I say to all Hon. Members who have contributed to the discussion this afternoon that the Chair is grateful for their interventions. It is to be hoped that the Chair can make a ruling on the matter which will assist the House to continue in the spirit of reform, and at the same time have appropriate consideration for the sensibilities of witnesses who are called in front of commmittees of the House. The Chair will endeavour to deal with the matter in an appropriate way. Again I thank all Hon. Members for their interventions. If it is the disposition of the House, the Chair would now want to move on to other matters.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[Translation]

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

TABLING OF REPORT OF THE COMMISSION OF INQUIRY

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 67(2), I wish to table, in both official languages, two copies of the Report of the Commission of Inquiry on Unemployment Insurance.

* * *

LAW REFORM COMMISSION

TABLING OF THIRTIETH REPORT

Hon. Ray Hnatyshyn (Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada): As Minister of Justice, Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to table, in both official languages, report No. 30 of the Law Reform Commission of Canada entitled "Recodifying Criminal Law", Volume I.

* * *

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

RESUME OF REPORT OF COMMISSION OF INQUIRY

Hon. Benoît Bouchard (Minister of Employment and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, we have just tabled in the House the Summary of the Report of the Commission of Inquiry on Unemployment Insurance.

[English]

I want to thank the commissioners for their efforts on what is acknowledged by everyone to be a complex issue. We regret that the commissioners were unable to present a consensus report.

I am tabling the report of the commission which includes a minority report of two commissioners and supplementary statements by four commissioners.

[Translation]

Over the past few years the Macdonald Commission, the Newfoundland House Commission and others have analyzed the unemployment insurance system. The recommendations flowing from these various studies do not necessarily reach a consensus.

The Government does not endorse the Forget report nor any other, and it will not respond directly and specifically to the Forget report recommendations. However these reports will be used as background papers whenever the Government undertakes a study of the unemployment insurance question.

Admittedly the present unemployment insurance system does call for changes. As stated in the 1985 Budget, our aim is to improve and simplify the unemployment insurance program, to make it more equitable and ensure that it paves the way for labour market employment opportunities.

• (1630)

[English]

I want to emphasize, as did the Minister of Finance (Mr. Wilson) in his Budget of May, 1985, that our purpose is not to reduce federal contributions to the unemployed. The main objective of unemployment insurance will always be to provide temporary income protection for unemployed workers. The unemployment insurance program should also be able to enhance work incentives and prospects for long-lasting and productive employment.

[Translation]

The Government will listen to the views expressed as a result of the publication of these studies. Mr. Speaker, I now commit myself to appear before the House, by May 15, 1987 at the latest, to unveil the Government's proposals.

[English]

Finally with respect to the issue of pension regulations, I will be announcing the Government's decision before Christmas. Better than that, Mr. Speaker, I will be back to the House this Friday.

Hon. Warren Allmand (Notre-Dame-de-Grâce—Lachine East): Mr. Speaker, finally we have the Forget Commission Report, eight months late, nearly $3 million over cost and with two dissenting reports representing the views of three of the six commissioners, a commission wrought with divisions and leaks.

I want to remind the House again that the cost of this commission amounting to $6.8 million was paid out of the unemployment insurance benefit fund, for the benefit of unemployed workers instead of being paid out of general revenue. This in my opinion is illegal and it will be further challenged.

I was disappointed that the Minister had so little to say about the report today. After all these months, he had nothing to say about any of the recommendations in the report. While we in the Liberal Party believe that there are some imperfections in the unemployment insurance system and they should be corrected, there are some good recommendations in the report but some recommendations should be rejected immediately. First, the recommendation to abolish the extending of benefits in the regions to be replaced by some vague earning supplement system. You do not replace a specific program that helps workers when they are unemployed by a vague pie-in-the-sky proposal.

The second recommendation that should be rejected immediately is the one to annualize the benefits in order to calculate their amounts. Under this system we will very seriously hurt workers who are unemployed, especially seasonal workers who are not able to work for long periods of time. We must recognize that we live in a country that is basically a resource-based economy, a country with severe winters having many workers working on a seasonal basis. This proposal is completely unacceptable and should be rejected.

Finally, Recommendation No. 33 to do away with benefits for fishermen should be rejected immediately. It is proposing the abolition of a specific benefit for fishermen, a fair benefit, for something that is very vague. There are other recommendations that should be questioned but I will not comment on them today. We strongly support part of Recommendation No. 26, Mr. Speaker recommending that those cuts in unemployment insurance, where there were early retirement pensions, be rescinded as of January 5, 1986. I am pleased to see the Minister will be in the House on Friday to give the Government's response to that recommendation. One wonders why those cuts were made at all and why we had to wait. Those cuts caused a lot of concern and hardship to workers all over the country.

Finally, the Minister has not indicated the process we should go through. He says he will listen to the debate on the report as it is discussed across the country. Will this be referred to a committee? Will there be a federal-provincial conference? The report impacts on the provinces, especially by cutting back on unemployment insurance benefits because more people will be thrown into the welfare system. The Minister does not put forward any ideas for discussion in this respect. The report is filled with the philosophy of the Fraser Institute, namely, that if you make people starve they will find a job. That is no way to deal with human beings. The hidden agenda in this report is to save money in order to cut the deficit. Three billion dollars will be saved. There is no response from the Government as to what will be done with that $3 billion.

Unemployment insurance is important not only for those legitimately out of work but also for the economy by maintaining purchasing power.

Mr. John R. Rodriguez (Nickel Belt): Mr. Speaker, finally the day has arrived for the Forget Commission Report. The Minister has had it since Friday. I want to take up where the Minister left off in his statement. He says that the Government will listen to the public debate that will follow the study. We have had the debate, Mr. Speaker. Over 475 briefs were presented to the Forget Commission. Where has the Minister been? The debate has taken place, Mr. Minister. What we are now concerning ourselves with is the Draconian recommendations contained in the report. To cut $3 billion from the unemployment insurance fund is the mandate the Government gave the Forget Commission. Where did Mr. Forget cut the $3 billion? He cut from regional extended benefits with a system of annualization that will cost the Atlantic region $640 million in direct transfer payments of UIC. It will cost Quebec $1 billion and it will cost the west $500 million.

This is the Government that parades around as the great unifier of Canada, the great reconciliator. It is not enough for the Minister. I can understand why his statement was so brief, he would rather cut bait than fish. I do not blame him because he cannot win an election with these Draconian proposals of Mr. Forget. We have the spectacle of Mr. Forget and his commissioners having been paid $750 a day plus expenses affecting 78 per cent of those who collect unemployment insurance, over 50 per cent of whom will get less than $100 if you put the annualization into effect.

Isn't it great that the rich on $750 a day can say to the unemployed in Atlantic Canada, in Quebec and in the West: "You are getting too much in unemployment insurance"? That $3 billion neatly removes from the Government any responsibility for unemployment. What it says to the people of the country, to the unemployed and to the regions is, "You are responsible for your own unemployment, not the Government". This completely absolves the Government of any responsibility for regional strategies to create employment.

Mr. Forget also recommends setting up a Crown corporation. The UIC will be a Crown corporation supported strictly by contributions from employer and employee. We have a model of a Crown corporation, namely, the Post Office. The ultimate irony, to rub salt into the wounds, is to say to the people who pay their contributions to the unemployment insurance fund that they have to pay $7 for the Forget Commission study. You should be ashamed of yourselves over there.

* * *

PRAIRIE GRAIN ADVANCE PAYMENTS ACT

PRESENTATION OF REPORT OF LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE

Hon. J. Robert Howie (York—Sunbury): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present the report of the legislative committee on Bill C-12, an Act to amend the Prairie Grain Advance Payments Act, without amendment, in both official languages.

[Editor's Note: See today's Votes and Proceedings]

* * *

PETITIONS

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGE TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Iain Angus (Thunder Bay—Atikokan): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 106, I wish to table a petition which has been certified correct as to form and content by the Clerk of Petitions. The petition is from residents of the Thunder Bay area who are asking that the Government of Canada abandon the current proposals for the Patent Act legislation. They want Parliament to reject these proposals which they believe will increase prescription drug prices for Canadians.

• (1640)

I have a second petition, certified correct as to form and content under Standing Order 106, from residents in the area of Churchill, Manitoba. They believe the Patent Act proposals put forward by the federal Government will result in higher costs to provincial government drug plans and consumers.

Mr. Ian Waddell (Vancouver—Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, I, too, have a petition certified correct under Standing Order 106. It is signed by many residents of Prince Albert, Saskatchewan. My seat-mate knows that area very well. It calls upon Parliament to reject the proposed changes to the Patent Act which they say will increase prices for Canadians and they will suffer as a result.

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, it is my honour and duty to present on behalf of the Pinetree Heritage Club Inc. of Christopher Lake, Saskatchewan, a petition they forwarded to me. They feel the proposal to change the Patent Act will end up increasing the price of drugs and call upon Parliament to reject these proposals. They go on to say that these increases will affect all of them in their age group.

Mr. Derek Blackburn (Brant): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour and duty to present a petition signed by several people from Vancouver and the Lower Mainland of British Columbia who object to the Government's attempt to tamper with the Patent Act. They say this will result in greatly increased prices for drugs for ordinary Canadians. They call upon Parliament to reject these proposals.

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): Mr. Speaker, it is my honour and pleasure to introduce a petition which has been declared in order by the Clerk of Petitions. It is from a number of people in British Columbia, places like Nelson, Trail, Castlegar, Rossland, Salmo and so on. They are all concerned about the Government's proposed legislation which would in their opinion cause drug prices to be increased unnecessarily and cause great hardship to a number of Canadians, particularly senior citizens. They feel this is a concession to pressure from the multinationals based in the U.S. and they ask Parliament to reject the Government's proposals.

REMOVAL OF MAILBOXES BY CANADA POST

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): I have another petition from many people in Spadina and other parts of Toronto. It refers to the action taken by Canada Post in removing one-third of the mailboxes from the City of Toronto in recent weeks without consultation with the people concerned. They feel this will cause great inconvenience and even hardship, particularly for the elderly or young children who may be mailing letters. They ask Parliament to ensure that Canada Post replaces the mailboxes and does not take them away again without first consulting with the people concerned.

LOW-LEVEL FLIGHTS AT ARMED FORCES BASE IN GOOSE BAY

Mr. Dan Heap (Spadina): I also have a petition, found in order by the Clerk of Petitions, from a large number of people in Spadina who are concerned about the Government's proposal to increase low-level flight training out of Goose Bay, Labrador. They point out that this training already disrupts the life of native people. They are also of the opinion that it does not promote peace but makes war more likely. They ask Parliament to ensure that the Government stops that activity and not try to establish a NATO base there.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGE TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Bill Blaikie (Winnipeg—Birds Hill): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition pursuant to Standing Order 106. It has been certified correct as to form and content. Like every other petition I have presented on this issue, it has not been verified by the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) and does not need to be verified by him even though on one occasion he sought that authority for himself. That authority was not granted him by the Chair or by the NDP caucus.

I might say just a word about the petition itself. The petitioners protest the federal Government's proposals to change the Patent Act concerning prescription drugs. These proposals will increase drug prices despite what the Minister for Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre) says. It would severely restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy necessary prescription drugs. It would unfairly hurt those whose health needs require the purchase of prescription drugs on an ongoing basis and most certainly result in higher costs to provincial government drug plans. These changes are another example, unfortunately, of Canadian government concessions to the U.S. at the expense of average Canadians.

[Translation]

Mr. Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton—Melville): Mr. Speaker, I also have a petition signed by some 50 to 60 people from the Province of Quebec. All these petitioners submit that the Canadian Government proposal to amend the Patents Act will cause hardship for Canadian men and women, because the legislation will increase the price of drugs in this country, a hardship for senior citizens, sick persons, etc. here in Canada.

They also submit, Mr. Speaker, that this Government legislation will cause hardship to the provinces because there will be cost increases where provincial health care programs are concerned.

They also submit that the proposed amendments are another example of concessions made by the federal Government to the United States with respect to the free trade negotiations.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, they suggest to us, Members of Parliament, and I quote: "For those reasons, they humbly pray that Parliament will reject those proposals that would increase the price of drugs for Canadian men and women."

[English]

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I have two petitions. One is from residents of Thompson, Manitoba, who believe that the Government's proposals to amend the Patent Act will result in higher costs to provincial drug plans. They humbly pray that Parliament will reject these proposals.

I have another petition from an organization calling itself Senior Power. I am assured that thousands more of these are on their way. Senior Power from Regina humbly prays that Parliament reject the Government's proposals to amend the Patent Act pertaining to drugs. They, too, believe it will mean increased costs for them and for a very good provincial drug plan in Saskatchewan.

[Translation]

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have two petitions, the first one concerning the Patents Act. More specifically, drug patents will increase the price of drugs to Canadian consumers. Also, the admendments will affect mainly people with health conditions requiring constant medication. Those proposals will mean cost increases for provincial health programs. Those proposals also are another example of concessions made by the Canadian Government to the United States with respect to the free trade negotiations.

For those reasons, your petitioners humbly pray that Parliament will reject those proposals that would increase the price of drugs for Canadian men and women.

• (1650)

[English]

The second petition says that the federal Government's proposal to change the Patent Act as it relates to prescription drugs will increase drug prices for Canadian consumers, that these changes will hurt Canadians who must rely on drug treatment on an ongoing basis, and that these changes will result in increased costs for provincial government drug programs. It states further that these increases are an example of the federal Government giving in to American interests in the free trade negotiations. The petitioners therefore call upon Parliament and the Government to withdraw the amendments which the Government is seeking to put before the House.

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, I, too, have petitions which have been certified by the Clerk to be correct as to form and content. It is my pleasure to present the first petition from residents of the Province of Manitoba, primarily of Winnipeg, who protest the federal Government's proposal to change the Patent Act as it relates to prescription drugs. They state that this will increase drug prices for Canadian consumers and severely restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy necessary prescription drugs. They point out that this will unfairly hurt Canadians whose health needs require the purchase of prescription drugs on an ongoing basis. They also state that the proposals will produce higher costs for provincial government drug plans. They therefore call upon Parliament to reject proposals which will increase prescription drug prices for Canadians.

NEGOTIATIONS URGED WITH NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF JAPANESE CANADIANS

Mr. Ernie Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon): Mr. Speaker, I have a petition from residents of Atlantic Canada who state that the National Association of Japanese Canadians is the only elected national organization of Japanese Canadians. It is comprised of representatives from 15 centres across Canada. The petition points out that the National Association of Japanese Canadians has held public meetings on redress for the forcible dispossession and relocation of Japanese Canadians suffered during World War II and that the NAJC is the only organization which has used a national questionnaire to obtain grassroots advice in developing a position on a proper redress for the dispossession and relocation during the Second World War. Since this organization has full support, not only of Japanese Canadians but of members of many national ethnic and service organizations, they call upon Parliament to urge the Government to enter into negotiations immediately with the National Association of Japanese Canadians.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGE TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Howard McCurdy (Windsor—Walkerville): Mr. Speaker, it is my honour to present a petition which has been certified as correct in its form under Standing Order 106 as signified by the signature of the Clerk of Petitions. This petition comes from my constituents in the City of Windsor who are availing themselves of their ancient and undoubted right to express a grievance with the assurance that this House will provide a remedy. They protest the Government's intention to enact a Bill which would result in an increase in drug prices. I am sure you, Mr. Speaker, would understand that that would cause an increase and financial strain for many Canadians, those particularly—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. With the scientific training of the Hon. Member, could I ask him to be more concise.

Mr. Keeper: He means faster.

Mr. McCurdy: Mr. Speaker, I will try to be more concise. This petition cites the increased costs likely to result to federal, provincial and private drug plans. With the typical insight which characterizes the people of Windsor, they identify this prospective legislation with concessions by the Government in order to facilitate the free trade talks with the United States. Mr. Speaker, they demand the Bill's withdrawal.

Mr. Holtmann: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. From hearing the Member present his petition it is quite obvious that he is trying to stall for as much time as possible—

Mr. Blackburn (Brant): That's not a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It was my understanding that the Member had completed presenting his petition.

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to present a petition on behalf of a number of Canadians from Nova Scotia and western Canada. The petitioners are attempting to bring to the Government's attention the fact that its proposed changes to the Patent Act as it relates to prescription drugs will increase drug prices significantly. The petitioners are asking the Government to reconsider. In light of this, Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Vancouver Kingsway (Mr. Waddell):

That the House do now proceed to Orders of the Day.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Call in the Members.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. Riis) which was negatived on the following decision:

• (1700)

(Division No. 30)

YEAS

Members

Angus
Baker
Benjamin
Blackburn (Brant)
Blaikie
Boudria
Broadbent
Cassidy
Copps
de Corneille de Jong
Dingwall
Epp (Thunder Bay—Nipigon)
Finestone
Foster
Gagliano
Gauthier
Gray (Windsor West)
Guilbault (Saint-Jacques)
Heap
Hopkins
Hovdebo
Isabelle
Jewett
Keeper
Killens
Langdon
MacLellan
McCurdy
McDonald (Broadview—Greenwood)
Murphy
Nunziata
Orlikow
Parry
Penner
Prud'homme
Riis
Robichaud
Robinson
Roman
Tardif (Richmond—Wolfe)
Waddell—42

NAYS

Members

Andre
Belsher
Bernier
Bertrand
Binns
Bissonnette

Blackburn (Jonquière)
Blais
Blenkarn
Bourgault
Boyer
Bradley
Brightwell
Brisco
Browes
Caldwell
Cardiff
Carney
Clark (Yellowhead)
Clark (Brandon—Souris)
Clifford
Collins
Comeau
Cook
Cooper
Cossitt
Côté (Lac-Saint-Jean)
Crofton
Crosbie (St. John's West)
Crosby (Halifax West)
Darling
Daubney
Della Noce
Desjardins
Domm
Dorin
Edwards
Epp (Provencher)
Fennell
Fontaine
Forrestall
Fraleigh
Fretz
Gagnon
Gass
Gérin
Gervais
Gormley
Graham
Gray (Bonaventure—Îles-de-la-Madeleine)
Grisé
Guilbault (Drummond)
Gurbin
Gustafson
Halliday
Hamilton
Hardey
Harvey
Hicks
Hnatyshyn
Hockin
Horner
Howie
Hudon
Jacques
James Jardine
Jelinek
Jepson
Jourdenais
Kelleher
Kempling
Kilgour
King
Layton
Lewis
Lopez
MacKay
Malone
Mantha
Marin
Masse
Mayer
Mazankowski
McCain
McCrossan
McCuish
McDermid
McKenzie
McKinnon
McKnight
Merrithew
Minaker
Mitges
Nicholson (Niagara Falls)
Nickerson
Nowlan
O'Neil
Oostrom
Peterson
Pietz
Plourde
Porter
Price
Redway
Reid
Ricard
St. Germain
Schellenberg (Nanaimo—Alberni)
Schellenberger (Wetaskiwin)
Scott (Victoria—Haliburton)
Scowen
Shields
Sparrow
Stackhouse
Stewart
Suluk
Tardif (Charlesbourg)
Taylor
Towers
Tupper
Turner (Ottawa—Carleton)
Valcourt
Van De Walle
Vankoughnet
White
Wilson (Swift Current—Maple Creek)
Wise
Witer—129

• (1740)

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I declare the motion lost.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGE TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I rise to present a petition which, pursuant to Standing Order 106, has been certified correct by the Clerk of Petitions, although I believe it has not been so certified by the Deputy Prime Minister.

In the petition the people of Thompson, Manitoba express their discontent with the Government's intention to change the Patent Act, which they believe will increase drug prices for Canadian consumers and will severely restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy necessary prescription drugs.

I move, seconded by the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis):

That the House do now proceed to introduction of Bills.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The House has heard the terms of the motion. All those in favour of the motion will please say yea.

Some Hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

Some Hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the nays have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Shall I dispense with the ringing of the bells?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

Some Hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Call in the Members.

• (1750)

And the division bells having rung:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It being 6 p.m., the proceedings on the motion before the House have lapsed and pursuant to Standing Order 9(1), the House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

The House adjourned at 6.01 p.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Thursday, December 4, 1986

The House met at 11 a.m.

[English]

PATENT ACT

NOTICE OF MOTION PURSUANT TO S.O. 57

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I rise to give the House notice that at the next sitting of the House, immediately before the order of the day for resuming debate on Bill C-22 standing in the name of the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre), I shall be moving a motion that the debate shall not be further adjourned pursuant to Standing Order 57.

* * *

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, also I should like to advise the House that for the purposes of fulfilling the requirements under Standing Order 82(5) and Standing Order 82(9), the Government considers that yesterday was the fulfillment of an allotted day.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a separate point of order. We were witnesses yesterday to a procedure which I find difficult and of which I should like to apprise the Speaker. I gave notice of it this morning—

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I advise Hon. Members that the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier) has given me notice of the point which he wishes to raise. I ask him to do the Chair the courtesy of waiting for a few minutes, because I want to give a ruling on a matter which I think is of great importance to the Chamber and to the workings of Parliament. I will hear the Hon. Member shortly.

* * *

PRIVILEGE

PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS—COMMITTEE DECISION ON VOTABLE ITEMS—SPEAKER'S RULING

Mr. Speaker: Hon. Members will remember that on November 19 a question of privilege was raised by the Hon. Member for Peterborough (Mr. Domm). The Hon. Member expressed himself very forcefully and made it clear that he felt a deep sense of grievance, not only on his own behalf but on behalf of private Members on both sides of the House. It was also made clear during the discussion that his feelings are shared by other Hon. Members.

The Hon. Member for Burlington (Mr. Kempling), who is Chairman of the Standing Committee on Private Members' Business, and other members of the committee made useful contributions to the discussion which clarified for us some of the problems faced by the committee and the approach the committee has been taking in the discharge of its functions.

The House is operating under a number of new procedures, those relating to Private Members' Business being among the most significant. The concept of the Standing Committee on Private Members' Business and the special responsibilities conferred on it are both new and original. There are no precedents to guide the committee. It has a very unusual power—and I stress that it has a very unusual power—in that its decision with regard to the selection of items of business which must come to a vote cannot be challenged. When embodied in a report which is presented to the House, that report is deemed adopted by the House. The committee, therefore, plays a very important role in safeguarding the rights of private Members.

There is a procedural point which I should perhaps clarify before proceeding any further. The items selected by the committee from those in the order of precedence resulting from the draws which take place throughout the session are commonly referred to as "votable items". The fact is that all items in the order of precedence are votable if the House is disposed to reach a decision on them during the time allocated to debating them.

The difference between the items selected by the committee and the other items in the order of precedence is that the former are guaranteed to come to a vote, provided nothing intervenes to prevent it, such as the prorogation of Parliament. They are therefore privileged items. The committee must determine, in accordance with a set of criteria which it has adopted and published in a report, how the selection is made. This is a crucial responsibility. It is not for the Chair to dictate to the committee how it should discharge its responsibilities.

However, the Hon. Member for Peterborough raised an important question: Is it appropriate to use as a criterion the possibility that another committee might take the initiative of investigating the subject matter of a Bill or motion which happens to fall within its mandate? There is no guarantee that a committee will take the necessary initiative. Furthermore, there is nothing to prevent the House from making a specific reference to a committee even if that committee has an open mandate.

All items of Private Members' Business which were entered in the draw were previously examined and found to be in order. The motion of the Hon. Member for Peterborough which was successful in the draw reads as follows:

That the Standing Committee on Justice and Solicitor General be empowered to study and report on the arguments for and against capital punishment giving consideration to allowing the question of capital punishment to come to a free vote in the House.

• (1110)

If the House were to adopt this motion, the matter would be referred to the Justice Committee. It cannot be assumed that without such a reference the committee would launch such an investigation. If the criterion I have referred to were to pass unquestioned, there would be numerous motions which would never stand a chance of being selected by the Private Members' Business Committee.

Most new procedures pose difficulties which had not previously been anticipated. The House is the master of its own procedure and can therefore change any with which it is not satisfied. The new procedures relating to Private Members' Business, among others, are provisional in their application because the House wanted to see how they would work before confirming them on a permanent basis. The complaint of the Hon. Member for Peterborough, and the discussion which ensued upon it, clearly demonstrated to my satisfaction that there are aspects of these new procedures which need to be reconsidered. My point, however, is that this is a procedural matter which requires a procedural solution.

In summing up I would say that the Chair appreciated the concerns expressed by the Hon. Member for Peterborough and other Members participating in the discussion. I have to rule though that the matter complained of relates to procedure rather than privilege. However, I would call upon the Standing Committee on Elections, Privileges and Procedure to give early attention to this matter and treat it with the priority it merits.

The new Standing Orders governing Private Members' Business are provisional and the time to deal with this problem is now. I am sure that I speak on behalf of all private Members when I express the hope that an early solution will be found.

I want to thank all Hon. Members who contributed to the debate. I want to emphasize that it is the view of the Chair that this matter is serious, that there are other serious matters coming from the consequences of reform and it is the Chair's very fervent wish that Hon. Members and the appropriate committee take cognizance of the remarks that I have made today and treat the matter with the urgency which I think all Hon. Members feel is necessary.

[Translation]

PRIVILEGE

THE RIGHT OF MEMBERS TO HAVE QUESTIONS BEFORE THE HOUSE PUT TO A VOTE

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, yesterday evening at 5.45 p.m., the Chair accepted a motion moved by the Hon. Member for Churchill (Mr. Murphy), seconded by the Hon. Member for Kamloops—Shuswap (Mr. Riis), that the House proceed to introduction of Bills, and the Deputy Speaker called in the Members. As is customary, at one or two minutes to six the Government Whip and myself marched up to the Table, bowed to the Chair and at that very moment, the Deputy Speaker said:

It being 6 p.m., the proceedings on the motion before the House have lapsed and pursuant to Standing Order 9(1), the House stands adjourned until tomorrow at 11 a.m., pursuant to Standing Order 3(1).

Mr. Speaker, I am not implying that the Deputy Speaker ignored us or did not see us. He did see us, and I think that when he did, he probably took the advice of the Clerk and used Standing Order 9(1) to adjourn the House because it was six o'clock.

I submit, with respect, that this seems to be an excessively broad interpretation of our Standing Orders, and also that, unlike other countries and other parliamentary institutions, including Great Britain, which has served as a model for many of our practices and traditions, we in this country have the Constitution which indicates in Section 49 that any matter, and I am paraphrasing . . . Perhaps I could read the section since I have it here. I suppose it would be better for me to read it.

This is Section 49 of the British North America Act, which reads as follows:

49. Questions arising in the House of Commons shall be decided by a Majority of Voices—

The Chair will not vote unless there is a tie. In that case, the Chair must vote. And that is in our country's Constitution, Mr. Speaker. Yesterday evening, the House was asked to vote on a motion that had been accepted and certified correct, and as is customary, the Whips went up to the Table, as I said before, but the Deputy Speaker did not see us and he adjourned the House.

Mr. Speaker, I realize that the answer I will get is that there have been precedents since the notorious two-week long bells' incident, when the Speaker was reluctant to put the question because the Whips would not enter the House.

[English]

In the Fifth Edition of Beauchesne Citation 217 is citation. In part it reads:

The signal for taking the division is the return of the Government Whip and the Opposition Whip. The Whips march up the aisle and bow to the Speaker before returning to their seats. The Sergeant-at-Arms remains by the Bar, also bowing to the Speaker before resuming his seat. The Speaker then calls the House to order, rises and reads the question—

Over recent months, possibly over years, the Table is aware, I have looked into this question, trying to find what rule has been interpreted to allow the Chair to act not according to procedure , strictly, but to take a decision which—and when I inquired this is what I was told—is what is called creative decisions or creative interpretations. When you ask the question what is meant by creative interpretation, the answer is that it is always based on precedent. Precedents themselves are based on interpretations made by the Chair and I accept that. But I ask the Chair under what interpretation, under what rule of law or what rule of this House are we to operate if the Chair has that kind of power to disregard the will of the House when it wants, but still has before it a question which, in my view, by constitutional obligation it must dispose of.

I will not prolong this submission because I think Members in the House will understand that I have been hurt over the years by many things which all of us have accepted, but did not understand so much what they meant or on what they were based. I think it is wrong for a parliamentarian to accept something just because it is based, as we are told, on a precedent going back four or five years.

I think this whole question has to be resolved sometime by you, Mr. Speaker, because you are the Chairman of this group not the judge. You are not to make decisions based on judgment calls. You are supposed to make decisions based on interpretations of our rules. I see nowhere in our rules the authority, either in the new provisional rules or in Beauchesne, that would satisfy me in allowing the Chair, as was done last night, to ignore the Whips when they walked into the Chamber, or for the Speaker to adjourn the House because the Chair said that the motion had lapsed. The motion had not lapsed as far as I was concerned. It was before the House. The motion was put and was accepted as being in order. I would ask you, Sir, to look into this whole question and return to enlighten me—

[Translation]

—and clarify the issue so that I have a better idea of what is being done and why.

• (1120)

[English]

Mr. Scott Fennell (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I wish to support 100 per cent the statements made by the Opposition Whip.

We were at the door prior to six o'clock. I believe we were at the Table in advance of six o'clock, because we moved directly from the door to the Table. Prior to that time, I had a conversation with the Deputy Speaker. I was advised that if we were there before six o'clock, he would accept it for the vote. Mr. Speaker, I feel very strongly that a wrong has been done. Our Members were here and prepared to vote, and they were not allowed to vote in this case.

I would suggest that you read more of Citation 217, because it refers to Standing Order 9(2). It may be out of date now because of the new Standing Orders, but I would like you to refer to that, because in the past the only time that this would take effect is under Standing Order 9(2), which is the lunch hour.

I feel that my Members were wronged. We were all here and ready to assemble. We have had times, and I apologize to you, Sir, when many of our Members have not properly been in their place at the right moment. I will personally deal with that with my party. I think I can speak on behalf of the Opposition Whip, who will deal with his own Members and get them in their place promptly when we come into the House.

In view of the circumstances I feel you should look at this and review it very carefully. I take votes as high priority items and of great importance to my colleagues. I would greatly appreciate your giving proper thought in review of the situation, and come up with a ruling.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker: I heard the Hon. Member for Ottawa—Vanier (Mr. Gauthier), and I want to thank him for his comments. I would like to defer my decision until I have had a chance to examine the matter.

[English]

I thank the Hon. Member for Ontario (Mr. Fennell) for his intervention. I will report back to the House as soon as possible.

CONSIDERATION OF DECEMBER 3 AS AN ALLOTTED DAY

Mr. Nelson A. Riis (Kamloops—Shuswap): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a different point of order. I wish to seek your view on the fact that when the Government House Leader rose to introduce closure on Bill C-22 he also indicated that yesterday was an allotted day for the Opposition on the business of supply. He indicated that that day would be considered to have been a day when that business was in fact conducted. Such was not the case.

You will recall, Mr. Speaker, that as a result of a very important point of privilege debate went on for some time with interventions from all sides of the House. As a matter of fact, the opposition Parties tried to move to Government Orders of the Day to deal with the matter at hand. They were denied that right. As a result, at six o'clock, having never reached Orders of the Day, the House was adjourned. I would submit that the opposition day that was planned for yesterday ought to take place between now and the Christmas recess during the regular proceedings.

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I would like to draw to your attention the fact that the allotted day was announced by the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) in the House on Tuesday. The NDP Party put down a votable motion for debate. The reason that the House did not get to that votable motion was because of dilatory motions used by the NDP Party to eliminate the Government's right to conduct Routine Proceedings, which is a part of our Standing Orders. It seems to me that the NDP Party cannot have it both ways. It cannot use dilatory motions to eliminate the business of this House, the Routine Proceedings of this House, and at the same time say that as a result of their dilatory motions we did not get to what they wanted to do. I would suggest to you that it was their own actions which prevented the votable motion from being called. They impeded routine business.

I wish also to suggest to you that there is a danger here that this process could continue through further dilatory motions until next Wednesday which, under the Standing Orders, is the final day of the supply period. It is important that the Chair take into consideration the effect of dilatory motions and tactics, such as are being practised by the Opposition, if we reach Wednesday and we have not had either of the remaining two allotted supply days. The allotment was done Tuesday. If the Opposition chose, through their own motions, not to go ahead with it, then that is their own problem.

I am somewhat concerned because we had consultations during the day with the Table officers. It did not seem to us that there was any single clear-cut bona fide precedent which could be pointed to to decide this. I notice that on today's Order Paper there is the same motion which was placed the day before.

I wish to draw your attention to the proceedings of June 8th and 9th, 1972 when there was an opposition day scheduled debate. The motion was not called because the House agreed to have an emergency debate under Standing Order 43, as it then was, by unanimous consent. The Liberal House Leader of the day, despite strong pleadings from Members, insisted that he would let the emergency debate continue, if the House was prepared to make an order that evening to reduce by one the number of outstanding allotted days.

I wish to draw your attention to Beauchesne, Citation 275(4) which states as follows:

> It is one of the fundamental principles of parliamentary procedure that when nothing is done respecting an order of business, it is struck out and cannot make further progress until the procedure regulating its passage has been regulated by the House. Neither the Speaker nor any officer of the House have the power to move it forward.

I think that if you examine that statement, we can argue that the day was allotted, that there was no special arrangement to allow for it to go forward. Therefore, it has been dealt with by the fact that through the dilatory practices of the Opposition in delaying debate on anything, I might add, they have unfortunately delayed debate on their votable motion. I suggest that they cannot have it both ways.

In looking at the votes and proceedings for that precedent I gave you for 1972, there are precedents to suggest that while it got called, it was not proceeded with, therefore, it disappeared.

In closing, I ask you to consider two questions. First, has the allotted day not disappeared as a result of their own actions? That is unfortunate, but they were the masters of their own destiny in those actions. Second, there was also an important consideration because the Standing Orders called for two allotted days. If they continue to frustrate debate on an important issue, they may find themselves having scrubbed two allotted days, if these dilatory tactics continue.

You have, Mr. Speaker, an important precedent to decide, whether we are going to have Routine Proceedings and other business, or whether by interfering with Routine Proceedings and using that as a delaying tactic they can then come in the next day and say, "My, goodness, we delayed so long that we did not get to what we wanted to do, and said we wanted to do, so we would like to do it again today". I do not think they can have it both ways. I ask you to consider that very seriously.

• (1130)

Mr. Riis: Mr. Speaker, I think my hon. colleague misunderstood my point. The matter is not so much that we are talking about an Order of the Day that was never reached through the normal process. I ask you to consider Standing Order 82(9) which states:

> In each of the periods described in section (5) of this Standing Order—

Section 82(5) reads:

> For the period ending not later than December 10, five sitting days shall be allotted to the business of supply. Seven additional days shall be allotted to the business of supply in the period ending not later than March 26.

There are two separate periods during the day for consideration of businesss of Supply. Standing Order 82(9) goes on to say:

> —not more than two opposition motions shall be motions that shall come to a vote.

The operative words, Mr. Speaker, are "that shall come to a vote".

I believe a very important principle is at stake here. For a variety of reasons the allotted proceedings of yesterday did not come to a vote. If we do not ensure that two opposition motions come to a vote during that period we will break a very important tradition of Parliament. In your wisdom, Mr. Speaker, I ask you to consider the importance of having the proceedings of two of those allotted days come to a vote.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I concur with the latest argument of the House Leader of the New Democratic Party (Mr. Riis). You will also be asked to decide whether the Official Opposition or the New Democratic Party will be allotted the one opposition day which remains before December 10. Both those days call for votes. As far as I am concerned, according to our rules if a vote is called it must be held. Standing Order 82 says that two of those opposition motions must be voted upon. I insist that the Speaker respect that.

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, a decision such as this cannot be made by the Government House Leader. He announced that the Government considered yesterday to be an allotted day and would consider it as such. I believe that only you can make that decision, Mr. Speaker.

As our House Leader said earlier, more than half of the three hours which could have been used for debate yesterday was taken up with questions of privilege. It is true that the questions of privilege were raised by the Opposition, but at least six members of the Government spoke on them. In addition, the Government used a portion of the three hours for Statements by Ministers. Opposition Members then presented petitions, which is a legitimate process, and then our House Leader moved that we proceed to Orders of the Day. Had that motion been accepted by the Government we would have had time to debate and vote on the Opposition motion. We made the attempt. The Government used as much time as the Opposition early in the day.

I think it is very important that the procedure which the Government has suggested not be allowed to take place. It is quite conceivable that on every opposition day the Government could take action to prevent the opposition Parties from using their allotted days. It is very important that the Government does not prevent allotted days from taking place.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, we have heard good arguments from both sides on this issue. When a question of privilege is raised which involves both sides, both sides should participate in debate on it. I think the argument on that issue should be viewed in that context.

Although I do not have the Standing Order in front of me, I believe that the time taken by a ministerial statement would have been added on to the time for debate on a votable motion. That ten-minute intervention should not be considered in your decision. The fact remains that it cannot be both ways. The Opposition cannot delay the Government's routine business and then say that by doing so they lost out on their opposition day.

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a few brief remarks. I do not think that fault should be taken into consideration in your ruling. The allotted day either took place or it did not. Your decision should not hinge on whether one Member or one Party of this House caused the debate not to take place.

Allow me to raise the following hypothesis. What would happen if the governing Party used dilatory procedures in order to delay or prevent the proceedings of an opposition day? Would that day be deemed to have taken place in any event? If such is the case, I submit that opposition days could come to an end as the Government could use various tactics in order to ensure that debate on opposition motions would not take place.

I submit that because we never got to Orders of the Day yesterday the debate did not take place. Had we reached the Orders of the Day for even five minutes, perhaps the spirit of the Standing Order would have been followed. However, because we did not arrive at Orders of the Day, I believe that the Government's contention that the allotted day took place is wrong.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker: I want to thank Hon. Members for their comments. I will have to defer my decision until later, at a more appropriate time.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS

[English]

CANADA'S INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

GOVERNMENT RESPONSE TO REPORT OF SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Standing Order 99(2) of the House of Commons, I rise to table in both official languages, the Government response to the report of the Special Joint Committee on Canada's International Relations.

* * *

ENTERTAINMENT

PERFORMANCE BY ELMWOOD SCHOOL CHOIR

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, in the interest of what might be called harmony in the precincts of Parliament, might I depart slightly from the rules and announce in a paternal way to my colleagues that the Elmwood School choir will be singing at noon in the rotunda of the House of Commons.

Mr. Speaker: The Chair is very interested to hear the announcement of the Hon. Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark). The Chair joins with him in inviting all Hon. Members to hear an outstanding choir. Perhaps the Chair can depart a little from the strictness of the rules by also advising the House that one of my daughters was a student at that school.

* * *

• (1140)

CANADA'S INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

GOVERNMENT RESPONSE TO REPORT OF SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE

Right Hon. Joe Clark (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I have just tabled a statement on Canada's international relations, responding to the report presented in June by the Special Joint Committee of the House and the other place. That caps an unprecedented exercise in participatory democracy in the development of Canadian foreign policy.

Members of the joint committee held hearings across this country, from St. John's to Vancouver to Yellowknife. Thousands of Canadians made their views known, either directly or through organizations, on issues as diverse as arms control, export development, and human rights in South Africa. The committee produced a practical and sensible report, achieved by consensus and unanimous in its recommendations.

The response tabled today has two parts. First is a general statement of government policy in the seven main policy areas that the Special Joint Committee addressed. Second is a detailed response to all the recommendations made by the committee. Those number 121. The statement as a whole provides a picture of the Government's foreign policy. It underlines our commitment to the constructive internationalist approach that we have been pursuing from the moment we came to office.

The Government accepts the great majority of the committee's 121 recommendations and has already carried out some of them. There are a few recommendations that we are unable to accept, sometimes because we believe the remedy suggested is not the best available, sometimes for financial reasons. In each instance, we propose a different or less costly alternative.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, through the Committee Canadians expressed deep concern about the need for progress in arms control. The government fully shares this concern. We welcome the Committee's support for the six arms control and disarmament objectives enunciated by the Prime Minister (Mr. Mulroney) in October 1985.

With our allies we are working to build on the possibilities for progress identified at Reykjavik. Our common goal is to create a safer, more peaceful world, notably through radical reductions in nuclear arms. Canada is also using its influence to try to prevent the loosening of existing restraints on the arms race in space and on earth. We are playing an active role in multilateral forums. This year and last the UN General Assembly unanimously approved Canadian-sponsored resolutions on the importance of verification to arms control agreements. We contributed to the recently concluded Stockholm Conference, which reached agreements on confidence-building measures that will reduce the risk of accidental war in Europe.

The government agrees with the Committee that Canada has an important contribution to make in the area of peacekeeping. We have added the Sinai to the areas where Canada is helping to keep the peace. Canada is also attempting to play a moderating role in the resolution of regional conflicts. We are strongly supporting the Contadora process in Central America while opposing intervention by third parties. In the Middle East, we are giving strong support to efforts to negotiate a peaceful settlement of the Arab-Israeli dispute.

The Committee urged that Canada work in concert with the international community to combat terrorism. We are doing that. The International Civil Aviation Organization recently accepted a Canadian proposal that should lead to significant improvements in airport security around the world. Meanwhile, we are strengthening our domestic defences against terrorism, so that what we do ourselves supports our efforts to persuade others to act.

[English]

The committee attached especially high priority to making the Canadian economy more competitive internationally. The launching of the new round of multinational trade negotiations and the bilateral negotiations with the United States hold out the prospect of improving access to our most important markets. The National Trade Strategy, in which we have enjoyed the full co-operation of the provinces and the private sector, is producing substantial results. We are at the same time meeting the committee's recommendations aimed at exploiting the potential of the dynamic Asia-Pacific market. New trade offices, for example, have been opened in Bombay, Shanghai, Osaka and Auckland.

We have paid close attention to the vital role of small and medium-sized businesses in developing our international trade. We will consult with them to see how our export development and our export financing services can be further improved to meet their needs.

The Government is also doing everything possible to meet the committee's recommendations in the area of aid and development. We have set out some broad directions in the statement tabled today. We are maintaining real growth in aid and development funding despite cut-backs in many other areas. We are ensuring that our aid programs focus primarily on the poor of the world. The critical role of women in development will receive greater recognition. The proportion of aid we disperse through non-governmental organizations is already higher than for any other major donor. Canadian youth will be given the opportunity for greater involvement. We also intend to give greater attention to human resource development in our aid programs and to the potential of the private sector in developing countries.

The Government shares the committee's belief that foreign students constitute an important asset for Canada as well as for developing countries. We intend to increase substantially the number of CIDA scholarships. We are seeking to develop in co-operation with the provinces a national strategy to make it easier for foreign students to study in Canada.

The Government today affirms what so many Canadians told the committee, that the international promotion of human rights should be a fundamental and integral part of our foreign policy. The Government has already changed the export control regulations so that they take greater account of human rights considerations. Henceforth, officers in the Department of External Affairs will receive appropriate training if they are being posted to countries whose Governments seriously violate human rights. So will officers at headquarters on geographic or other desks responsible for important aspects of relations with those countries.

The committee made a very important recommendation in favour of establishing an institution to respond to the needs of developing countries which are seeking to strengthen their democratic institutions and strengthen their approach to domestic human rights. We agree. We are now identifying distinguished Canadians to advise the Government on the form and the mandate this new institution should have.

[Translation]

The Committee attached great importance to the northern dimension of Canadian foreign policy. The government is determined to act vigorously in exercising control of our north. We have affirmed that Canadian sovereignty extends to all the waters of the Arctic archipelago and announced regulations establishing baselines around its perimeter. We are committed to construct an arctic class icebreaker.

Our Northern foreign policy will have four dominant themes: affirming Canadian sovereignty; modernizing Canada's northern defences; preparing for commercial use of the Northwest Passage; and promoting co-operation with other northern nations.

[English]

The Government fully shares the committee's conviction that Canada can and should play a significant role in multilateral institutions. We are working hard to promote the United Nations and to strengthen it by promoting necessary reforms and providing a high level of support. We are now the fourth largest contributor to the UN system, and we play an active and effective role.

Canada, of course, has an especially important role in the Commonwealth and La Francophonie. Next year the heads of Government of both organizations will meet in Canada; La Francophonie in Quebec City in September and the Commonwealth in Vancouver in October. Part of Canada's distinctive identity is rooted in our membership in those two international families, and we intend to make the most of those advantages.

Growing interdependence, "the relentless internationalization of the national agenda", is a major theme of the committee's report. Like the committee, the Government sees constructive internationalism as the only appropriate response to that interdependence. A retreat into insularity would be a tragic mistake. No country can turn back the clock. Interdependence is challenging, yes, but it holds out great opportunities for furthering international peace and prosperity. Just as individuals can accomplish far more by working together, so can nations.

• (1150)

At the same time we must find room for realism, for perspective and for humility. Canada is not a superpower and our national experience has been extraordinarily peaceful and prosperous compared to that of most of mankind. Internationalism calls for a great deal of understanding and perseverence and for a lot of plain hard work.

Few countries are better placed than Canada to make a significant contribution to international order and development. Few other countries have such close ties to so much of the world, ties of history, family, culture and trade. We see constructive internationalism as confidently building on Canada's strengths and traditions. It is, and will remain, the fundamental foreign policy orientation of this Government.

[Translation]

Hon. Donald J. Johnston (Saint-Henri—Westmount): Mr. Speaker, first I should like to thank the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) who last night sent me copies of his statement on and response to the report of the Special Joint Committee on Canada's International Relations.

[English]

At the outset I would like to say that there are many elements in this response with which I am pleased. However, constraints of time, as one can appreciate today, oblige me to underline what I regard as specific areas for constructive criticism. Maclean's Magazine, as you know, Mr. Speaker, tells us that the Minister is widely considered as an effective and respected statesman. We in the Opposition wish to see him live up to those reviews. If sometimes in the past the Minister's image fell short of the reality, it would be equally unfair, we suggest, if his image should surpass the reality—if he should be painted in a more handsome portrait than he perhaps deserves. If there is, indeed, less here than meets the eye, or meets the ear, then we in the Opposition are duty-bound to draw it to the attention of the public.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, I must say at the outset that in spite of the positive elements of the response, a number of others are a great disappointment to me. Although the response is full of policy statements, especially in the first part, it does not feature fresh creative approaches in many critical fields such as the prevention of the arms race in space, Star Wars as it is commonly called, the drafting of a world-wide treaty banning mutually verifiable nuclear tests, the lack of control over arms shipments, the level of our official development assistance, the Government's timetable to reach an acceptable level, and the role Canada might play in Central America.

[English]

These are the principal questions which I wish to address in the few minutes available to me this morning. First, in addressing the question of the Strategic Defence Initiative, star wars, we find at page 47 of the report a recommendation with respect to the observance of the ABM Treaty of 1972. The committee asks that there be a reaffirmation of the ABM Treaty interpreted strictly as prohibiting all but basic research on defensive systems. The response is moderately positive. Yet, we have insisted, and continue to insist, that the Strategic Defence Initiative, star wars, is indeed in breach of the first paragraph of Article V of the ABM Treaty.

The best approach for the Government to take would be to insist on compliance with paragraph 1 of Article V of the Treaty which, as you know, Mr. Speaker, has previously been cited in the House. It provides that each Party undertakes not to develop tests or deploy ABM systems or components which are sea based, air based or mobile land based.

We believe the SDI initiative is in breach of that treaty. The Minister may argue that under the letter of the law, as interpreted in some quarters, it is not in breach. However, the role of the widely respected statesman, I say, compels him to speak to the spirit of the treaty, if not to the letter. In fact, I think there is a good argument on the letter itself. This is not a job for Philadelphia lawyers. This is a job for statesmen. The SDI iniative is blocking progress on disarmament, a declarative objective of the Government upon which the Minister has spoken eloquently from time to time. Instead, we have here with this initiative a risk of accelerating the arms race and at the same time siphoning off those precious dollars which could be directed to Third World development or at least put to better use.

Yes, the Minister supports a comprehensive test ban but hedges it with the issue of verifiability and so on. It is time for the Minister and the Government to speak out. They should have spoken out in support of the Soviet moratorium which, as we know, will expire at the end of this month.

We know what a sensitive area the control of arms exports is, and on page 48 of the report we find some language which questions the advisability of a register of exports in these areas. From the Iranian experience, which we have witnessed, we know our systems are inadequate. One of our own manufacturers has now suspended shipments to that country. I ask the Minister to come forward with a stronger policy in terms of the exportation of arms from this country and the use of end user certificates of some kind to put some teeth into the current regulations which in fact were introduced fairly recently. This is an important and critical issue, as we know from what is taking place in the United States at this very moment. Again, I say that response is not sufficient.

Perhaps one of the most important areas is that of our foreign aid, our official development. The majority of the committee felt we should achieve a goal of .7 per cent of ODA by 1990. That has been rejected by the Government. Instead the Government has said we will reach .6 by the middle of the next decade. This simply is not good enough for Canada and it is not good enough for the world.

The most insidious threat to peace on this earth is the growing disparity between the rich and the poor, between the Third World and the industrialized nations. I know about budget constraints. I was in the Government and I have listened on hot lines to people all over the country asking why we should be spending money on Third World developed countries when we have unemployed and all these demands here. But in fact, as we know, the per capita GNP of all developed countries in U.S. constant dollars grew from $340 in 1955 to $730 in 1980. During that same period, in the industrialized market economies, it went from just under $5,000 to just under $11,000, a gap which increased from $4,600 to $9,800 in real terms, an increasing gap.

• (1200)

Apart from the humanitarian issue there is a much greater issue. The Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) must sensitize his colleagues and the Canadian public to this issue. It is that the population explosion in those countries will virtually make this world uninhabitable as we know it now unless we reach a zero rate of growth in terms of world population by the year 2000 or shortly thereafter. If that goal is retarded to the year 2075 it is estimated that the world population will be 20 billion by the end of the next century. We know that poverty breeds people, something which has been established scientifically. So there are real interests in the long term in terms of the bias fear, apart from the humanitarian interests and humanitarian needs which are so pressing today.

I would now like to refer to Central America which is my last point. Here is a real opportunity for our Government and for our Minister to show statesmanship. Reference is made to the Contadora process. But at the moment the Contadora process is simply not enough. I think that if the Minister were to stand up and speak honestly in the House he would probably say that he is worried about it, that it is virtually dead and that it needs to be resuscitated. I understand that the General Secretaries of the OAS and the UN have offered to help revive the Contadora process and to give it support. So I encourage the Minister to take a statesman-like position in the great tradition of this country and tell the world that Canada is prepared to support those efforts, to provide peace-keeping if necessary, to provide observers if necessary, to do all possible to bring concerted diplomatic action to the crisis in Central America which risks becoming a Vietnam on this continent. This is a time for an active diplomatic role.

I would also draw to the Minister's attention that there are human rights issues in Central America which have to be addressed. Today I met with the Mission for Peace which recently came back from El Salvador and which has reported that human rights violations are once more on the increase. This takes us back into the area touched upon in the paper of aid to those regimes which suppress human rights. I encourage the Minister to look into that situation and determine whether more effort cannot be made to go to the non-governmental organizations to ensure that the aid reaches the people.

Our Minister has the opportunity, and I believe he has the capacity, to walk in the footsteps of some of the great statesmen this country has seen on the international stage. I refer to Lester Pearson and Pierre Elliot Trudeau. Let him not be timid. Canada does not wish timidity. As the Minister himself has said the report of the special joint committee is replete with ideas—

[Translation]

—which, I must say, reflect the philosophy, ideas and concerns of Canadians throughout the country. Canadians today feel very strongly that, through the Minister and his Government, our country ought to play a leading role on the international scene.

Despite the positive elements . . . I am nearly finished, Mr. Speaker, if you would allow me 15 seconds, even less. Despite the positive elements of the response to the committee report, including the commitment to increase the number of foreign students in Canada by sponsoring them through CIDA scholarships, and several aspects of the human rights policy, the Government did not quite rise to the challenges and opportunities I referred to in my remarks this morning.

[English]

Ms. Pauline Jewett (New Westminster—Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I too would like to thank the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Clark) for having sent his response to the opposition critics last evening, giving us a chance to go without sleep last night in order to read the very comprehensive response that he has provided.

I would like to note how satisfying it is that this particular reform of the House proceedings has been put in place which requires the Minister to respond to reports of committees within a certain period of time. I think we should ask the relevant parliamentary committee to look into the question of how we can develop time for fuller debate, particularly with respect to a report of such magnitude as was the report of the Special Joint Committee on Canada's International Relations. Indeed, I wish to refer to that report, having been a very active member of that joint committee.

I feel that the Minister's response to the committee has not been as forward-looking as was the committee report itself. Indeed, I am sorry to have to say this to the Minister, but comparing his response to the report of the joint committee is to see how regressive the Government and the Minister are becoming. It is not a response that picks up on the forward-looking, progressive type of initiatives that the committee frequently recommended. We were unhappy that the committee did not do more in some areas, such as in the area of a Canadian mission in Managua, but also in other areas.

As I read the response of the Government to the committee's recommendations what struck me was that the Minister is moving more toward the Reagan approach to international relations on many matters. When he is not moving toward the Reagan approach I am sorry to say that he is moving toward the Thatcher approach. I am thinking of South Africa in particular. In the few minutes available to me I would like to take perhaps half a dozen of the committee's recommendations and illustrate how the Government in its response has been doing exactly what I have just said.

In response to recommendation 16a with respect to encouraging a reaffirmation of the Anti-ballistic Missile Treaty interpreted strictly as prohibiting all but basic research on such defence systems, the Minister's response is that the "Government believes that the first priority of the international community should be to bring about a mutually-agreed and verifiable radical reduction in nuclear forces of the superpowers. The Government will continue to press both the United States and the Soviet Union to maintain the Anti-ballistic Missile Treaty until an updated treaty is in place". This means that the Minister has accepted the Reagan doctrine of revisionism. That is not what the committee recommended at all, and is something which I found very discouraging to see.

With respect to recommendation 16e regarding the prevention of an arms race in outer space, the Government's response is that "Canada is making substantive contribution to the discussion of this subject at the Conference on Disarmament". The Government states that Canada's verification research unit has commissioned research on space-based verification as a basis for further Canadian proposals. There is nothing in the response whatsoever to show how Canada is helping to prevent an arms race in space from taking place.

• (1210)

On the matter of foreign aid, the Government is again being as regressive as the Liberals were when they were in power. The Government does not accept the committee's recommendation that the goal of achieving .7 per cent ODA by 1990 be restored. Instead, the Government's objective is to reach a foreign aid GNP ratio of .6 per cent by the middle of the next decade. That is terribly regressive and will be a great disappointment to the other members of the committee.

I mentioned South Africa a moment ago. The committee recommended that Canada should move immediately to impose full economic sanctions, seek their adoption by the greatest number of Commonwealth countries and promote similar action by non-Commonwealth countries. The Government has responded by saying in effect that it will impose "limited sanctions as a more fruitful tactic that will strike at apartheid without destroying the South African economy on which the blacks depend". That sounds just like the words of Mrs. Thatcher. The blacks themselves have asked for full economic sanctions and the Minister knows that. He is moving backward on that issue as well.

To use a final example, since I have insufficient time to respond to all of the Government's responses, the committee recommended that Canada put pressure on the United States and the Soviet Union to secure demilitarization in the Arctic region. In the most incredible officialese, and by the way, this response is full of officialese, the Government ends by saying that singling out the Arctic for demilitarization does not seem practicable. The Government does not even say that it will try to talk to the Soviet Union and the United States on this matter.

If one wants to see a complete example of the officialese in this document one should look on page 74 which contains the Government's response to the committe's recommendation that Canada use its voice to vote at meetings of international financial institutions to protest systematic, gross and continuous violations of human rights. After lines and lines of gobbledegook, the Government indicates that it would welcome a detailed examination by the Standing Committee on External Affairs and International Trade.

I feel that the Minister himself has let us down and I feel that he has been let down by his own Department which produced what is effectively a very regressive response to what was, and I think the Minister agrees with this, a progressive report by the Special Joint Committee on Canada's International Relations. The many Canadians who contributed so much to the report of the joint committee, I am sorry to say, will be bitterly disappointed when they realize that the Minister and the Government have not picked up the challenge.

* * *

COMMITTEES OF THE HOUSE

AGRICULTURE—FIRST REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Lee Clark (Brandon—Souris): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present in both official languages the First Report of the Standing Committee on Agriculture.

[Translation]

COMMUNICATIONS AND CULTURE—FIRST REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. Jim Edwards (Edmonton South): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present the First Report of the Standing Committee on Communications and Culture on the reappointment by order in council of Mr. Jean-Claude Delorme as President of Teleglobe Canada and the appointment by order in Council of Mr. Brian G. Armstrong, Mr. Tommy D'Errico and Mr. Michael K. Power as administrators of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. The Committee considers that the appointees have the qualifications, aptitudes and abilities required to fulfill the duties of the positions to which they have been appointed.

[English]

BILL C-17—REPORT OF LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE

Mr. Barry Turner (Ottawa—Carleton): Mr. Speaker, in the spirit of breaking House rules, let me add that the great school of Elmwood is located in my federal constituency.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, as Chairman of the Committee, I have the honour to present in both official languages the report of the Legislative Committee on Bill C-17, an Act to amend the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act and the Income Tax Act and to repeal the Petroleum and Gas Revenue Tax Act, without amendment.

[Editor's note: For text of above reports, see today's Votes and Proceedings.]

* * *

PETITIONS

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present some petitions. First, many residents of my constituency have signed petitions to say that the proposals of the federal Government to change the Patent Act, especially as far as generic drugs are concerned, will increase the price of drugs for consumers, that they will seriously restrict the ability of many people to purchase the drugs they need and affect mostly those whose health requires the constant use of drugs, and that they will result in an increase in the cost of provincial health care plans and are another good example of the concessions made by the Canadian government to the United States in the free trade negotiations, to the detriment of the average consumer.

[English]

REQUEST TO WITHDRAW TARIFF ON ENGLISH LANGUAGE BOOKS

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I have another petition from several of my constituents, a petition which I will summarize. It deals with the book publishing retaliatory tariff the Government has imposed on imported books in the English language. In the opinion of the petitioners, this has limited the access of Canadians to literature and information. The tariff has had little negative effect on the publishing industry of the United States yet penalizes Canada's consumers, book publishers, book sellers, distributors and Canada's culture, and rising book prices have placed a strain on the book acquisition programs and policies of our nation's public and specialized libraries. The undersigned pray and call upon Parliament to rescind this tariff which threatens irreparable harm to the Canadian book industry and compromises federal policy on cultural industries with respect to free trade negotiations.

OPPOSITION TO LOGGING ON DEER ISLAND

Mr. Ray Skelly (Comox—Powell River): Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to rise today to present a petition on behalf of a number of people from British Columbia who are very concerned about the proposal to log an aboriginal area on Deer Island just off shore of Port Hardy. That island has been in the possession of native people for thousands of years. It is an aboriginal burial ground and an area of great aesthetic and ecological importance. The petitioners point out that if the federal Government does not act quickly on behalf of Indian people, we will again be forced to see the prospect of native

Indian people put in jail for defending property which is rightfully and generally accepted as being theirs.

I would point out that the petition urges the Minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development (Mr. McKnight) to act very quickly to resolve this issue in favour of the Kwakiutl people who are the traditional and aboriginal owners of that property.

OPPOSITION TO PROPOSED CHANGES TO PATENT ACT

Mr. Stan J. Hovdebo (Prince Albert): Mr. Speaker, it is my honour and duty to present a number of petitions. The first petition is from 1040 First Street East, Prince Albert, where a number of people, mostly senior citizens, have established a co-operative housing project. They call upon Parliament to reject proposals which would increase the cost of prescription drugs in Canada.

• (1220)

I also have the honour to present a second petition on the same subject from a group of citizens who are mostly from Selkirk, Manitoba. They call upon the House to reject proposals which would increase the cost of drugs in Canada.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition, which has been certified pursuant to Standing Order 106, from citizens of Winnipeg. They say that the proposals of the federal Government to change the Patent Act relating to prescription drugs will increase drug prices for Canadian consumers and will severely restrict the ability of average Canadians to buy necessary prescription drugs. Therefore they humbly pray and call upon Parliament to reject proposals which will increase prescription drug prices for Canadians.

Mr. Rod Murphy (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, it is also my privilege to present a petition on behalf of people from Manitoba. This is one of many consecutive days on which I have had this honour. These people express their opposition to the intention of the Government to change the Patent Act. They realize that prescription drug prices will increase, and for those Canadian consumers who have restricted ability to pay at the present time, this will be a very undue hardship. Also they recognize that those people who require a lot of drugs will have very high expenses as a result of the legislation. They are concerned that the Government is moving on the legislation strictly as a result of the free trade negotiations with the United States. The undersigned petitioners humbly call upon Parliament to reject proposals which will increase prescription drug prices for Canadians.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Order, please. I wish to inform the House that because of the ministerial statement, Government Orders will be extended by 34 minutes beginning at 1 p.m.

Mr. Cyril Keeper (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present a petition which, pursuant to Standing Order 106, has been certified by the Clerk of Petitions. The petition is from a number of people in Winnipeg and in Manitoba. It indicates that the proposals of the federal Government to change the Patent Act in respect of prescription drugs will increase drug prices for Canadian consumers. Also it indicates that the proposals will unfairly hurt those Canadians whose health needs require ongoing use of prescription drugs, and that the proposals of the federal Government will result in higher costs for provincial prescription drug programs.

As well it indicates that the changes are another example of the Conservative Government serving the interests of multinational corporations at the expense of Canadian consumers. The petitioners call upon Parliament to reject the proposals which will increase prescription drug prices for Canadians.

Mr. Les Benjamin (Regina West): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present two petitions signed by residents of Regina, Saskatoon, and a number of other locations in Saskatchewan.

Starting with the one entitled "Senior Power", these people petition Parliament to reject the proposals of the Government to amend the Patent Act because they submit that it will result in higher costs for senior citizens and for provincial drug plans. They therefore humbly pray that Parliament will in fact persuade the Government to withdraw the legislation.

REQUEST TO WITHDRAW TARIFF ON ENGLISH LANGUAGE BOOKS

Mr. Don Boudria (Glengarry—Prescott—Russell): Mr. Speaker, I have a number of petitions to present to the House. They have all been certified by the Clerk of Petitions. Without going into great detail, because others have described them already, they all concern the book publishing industry and the unfair and arbitrary decision the Government has imposed upon that industry. That being said, I will table several hundred names in the petitions which I have before me.

* * *

PATENT ACT

MEASURE TO AMEND

On the Order: Government Notices of Motions:

November 24, 1986—The Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council:

That, further to the notice given on Monday, November 24, 1986, by the Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council, and pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 117, in relation to Bill C-22, an Act to amend the Patent Act and to provide for certain matters in relation thereto, one additional sitting day shall be allotted to the consideration of the second reading and reference to a Legislative Committee stage of the said Bill; and

That, at fifteen minutes before the expiry of the time provided for the consideration of government business on that day, any proceedings then before the House shall be interrupted, if necessary, for the purpose of this Order and, in turn, every question necessary to dispose of the said stage of the Bill then under consideration shall be put forthwith and successively, without further debate or amendment.

Order Paper Questions

Mr. Mazankowski: Transferred to Government Orders.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Transferred to Government Orders.

* * *

QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

Mr. Doug Lewis (Parliamentary Secretary to Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, the following questions will be answered today: Nos. 34 and 38.

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Did I hear the Parliamentary Secretary accurately? Did he say Questions Nos. 34 and 38?

Mr. Lewis: Questions Nos. 34 and 38.

Mr. Gauthier: I regret to inform him that we were not given notice of those questions. We were given notice of Questions Nos. 25 and 29 today. I am just wondering whether the Parliamentary Secretary could get the numbers out so that we know which questions are being answered.

Mr. Lewis: The following questions will be answered today: Nos. 25 and 29.

[Text]

DND—TRIBAL UPDATE AND MODERNIZATION PROGRAM

Question No. 25—Mr. McKinnon:

What was the total estimated cost in budget year dollars in 1983 of the Tribal Update and Modernization Program (TRUMP) and what is the current estimated total cost in budget year dollars?

Hon. Perrin Beatty (Minister of National Defence): The 1983 preliminary estimate was $923M (budget year) based on conceptual (but still not defined) capability options. Current Treasury Board budget approval after definition phase, at contract, is $1,624.8M.

The reason for the difference between the two figures is that the 1983 figure was a preliminary estimate prior to defining the equipment necessary to meet the capability requirement and the current figure is a ceiling price based on a contractual commitment to undertake and complete the modernization.

ADMISSION OF REFUGEES TO CANADA

Question No. 29—Mr. Stackhouse:

1. In 1985 and the period January to September 1986, did any persons seek admission as refugees at Canadian points of entry and, if so, how many?

2. How many were granted status?

3. (a) How many were refused status (b) how many appealed such refusal and how many appeals were (i) completed (ii) upheld?

Hon. Gerry Weiner (Minister of State (Immigration)): 1. From January 1, 1985 to September 1, 1986, the total number of persons in Canada seeking status as convention refugees was 15,150.

2. Two thousand, one hundred and fifty-seven refugee claimants were determined to be refugees by the Refugee Status Advisory Committee (RSAC).

3. (a) 4,605 refugee claimants were not determined to be refugees by the RSAC.

(b) 2,854 refugee claimants who received negative RSAC decisions appealed to the Immigration Appeal Board (IAB) for redetermination of their claims.

(i) The IAB completed 404* redetermination appeals.

(ii) In those cases where the IAB rendered a decision during the time in question, they upheld the RSAC determination 302 times.

*Includes allowance to proceed to hearing, dismissals for want of perfection and dismissals for want of prosecution as well as positive and negative decisions.

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): The questions as enumerated by the Parliamentary Secretary have been answered.

Mr. Lewis: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the remaining questions be allowed to stand.

Mr. Boudria: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order to bring a question to the attention of the Hon. Parliamentary Secretary and to ask for his assistance.

I have had a question on the Order Paper for a considerable amount of time. It relates to the Shamrock Summit in Quebec City. It was there under the old rules. It was transferred to the 45 days under the new rules. The time lapsed at the end of June, and it was reintroduced in September. The 45 day point is certainly very near if it has not passed already.

In view of the fact that the question has been on the Order Paper for over a year, would the Parliamentary Secretary, in the spirit of the new rules of the House, give a commitment on when the answer will be forthcoming?

Mr. Lewis: Soon, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Shall the remaining questions be allowed to stand?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

GOVERNMENT ORDERS

[English]

PATENT ACT

ALLOCATION OF TIME TO CONSIDER SECOND READING AND REFERENCE STAGE OF BILL C-22

Hon. Don Mazankowski (Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council) moved:

That, further to the notice given on Monday, November 24, 1986, by the Deputy Prime Minister and President of the Privy Council, and pursuant to the provisions of Standing Order 117, in relation to Bill C-22, an Act to amend the Patent Act and to provide for certain matters in relation thereto, one additional sitting day shall be allotted to the consideration of the second reading and reference to a legislative committee stage of the said Bill; and

That, at fifteen minutes before the expiry of the time provided for the consideration of government business on that day, any proceedings then before the House shall be interrupted, if necessary, for the purpose of this Order and, in turn, every question necessary to dispose of the said stage of the Bill then under consideration shall be put forthwith and successively, without further debate or amendment.

He said: Mr. Speaker, it is with a great deal of regret that I rise to put this motion. As Your Honour can appreciate, we have had a number of discussions, but have been unable to reach agreement under Standing Order 115 and Standing Order 116. There have been extensive negotiations with the Opposition House Leaders in an attempt to get some form of realistic time allocation for the advancement of the debate on this Bill. We realize that it is a complex issue and that there are various points of view on the matter. The Government has been frustrated by the fact that the Opposition Parties have used every tactic, every dilatory motion and every conceivable attempt to circumvent and subvert the process of parliamentary democracy and to subvert what is really the essence of this institution.

• (1230)

If the Opposition Parties are so concerned about this Bill, why not debate it first and send it on to committee to have a thorough and thoughtful airing of all the contents? The Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs (Mr. Andre) has indicated his willingness to be available at any time, to make all the studies and background information available so that not only Members of Parliament but Canadians right across the country can have the full meaning of this legislation and discern the full impact of it.

We have gone through a series of interruptions, Mr. Speaker. I would just like to document them for you briefly. We had difficulty introducing the Bill. It was only through procedural expertise that we were able to introduce the Bill. On November 6 we had leave to introduce the Bill and on November 7 the Bill was actually introduced. Four days were spent on second reading on November 20, 21, 24 and 25. On so-called dilatory motions and events there have been some 13 hours, almost 14 hours, of valuable time of this House wasted through votes and procedural wrangles. That does not augur well for this institution.

I have a tremendous amount of respect for this institution. I have respect for individual Members wanting to express their points of view on their own behalf and on behalf of their constituents. In this case Parliament has been frustrated to a large extent and actual debating time has not been as long as we would have liked because a tremendous amount of time has been wasted, about 23 hours in total. Thirteen dilatory motions have been proposed. Ten hours and eight minutes have been spent just on voting, Mr. Speaker. If you consider the cost of operating this place at $1.1 million per day, it becomes—

Mr. Skelly: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. Would it be equitable for the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski) to give us the cost of ringing the bells in the last Parliament, something which was never done? This is a serious concern for elderly citizens in Canada—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): That is not a point of order. It is a point of debate. I am sure the Member will have an opportunity to make his presentation.

Mr. Mazankowski: Mr. Speaker, if the Hon. Member wanted to take issue with that particular point he should have done so at the time. I watch Members of the New Democratic Party. They have come up with no original tactics. They have borrowed most of them from other Parties.

Mr. Gauthier: You wrote the book on dirty tricks.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Mazankowski: I simply want to point out the reasons and the justification for the Government moving in this manner, albeit regrettably, Mr. Speaker.

As to actual time spent, the waste of time and the dilatory procedures that have been invoked on this institution, the Opposition House Leaders, myself and representatives of my office have been trying to work out some kind of an agreement. We started on November 26 trying to reach a realistic timetable for the passage of this legislation, including the allowance of time for the legislative committee to travel across the country to hear witnesses. That proposal was advanced by the New Democratic Party. It was a condition the New Democrats put to us. They also asked that the Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs provide the necessary information on the studies to which he referred to back up some of the statements. He agreed to do that. We wanted as well to get some agreement with respect to report stage and third reading. We tried in earnest to work out an agreement but it was not possible.

We proposed consideration of this Bill in all aspects, including committee travel and assurances that all representatives who wanted to appear before the committee would be heard. We suggested a logical timetable of February 15, which is more than two months. This Bill has been around since June, 1986.

Mr. Boudria: No.

Mr. Mazankowski: Not officially, but the Bill has been in the public domain for consideration. It is not new. There has been debate even though it has not always taken place during the course of the allocated time. This issue has dominated a good portion of Question Period.

We have been reasonable in trying to work out a realistic and sensible solution. Having failed, I regret that we have to move in this fashion and I commend passage and acceptance by all Hon. Members of the House.

Mr. Jean-Robert Gauthier (Ottawa—Vanier): Mr. Speaker, I cannot say that I am surprised by the move of the Deputy Prime Minister (Mr. Mazankowski). We are not surprised by the Government utilizing tricks about which it has become quite expert. Some of us believe the Tories wrote the book on all the dirty tricks that can be used.

Some Hon. Members: Oh, oh!

Mr. Gauthier: The Deputy Prime Minister is using very creative accounting when he says that this debate has been going on for some time. The fact is that in total we have spent six hours and 47 minutes on this most important Bill.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, there was one hour and thirteen minutes remaining in the eight-hour period normally allowed, during which Members may use debate to explain their positions. I think all Members will agree that at the second reading stage we are considering the principle of the Bill. And to prevent us from continuing consideration of Bill C-22, which we feel is a bad piece of legislation that should be withdrawn . . . We wish the Government would understand that public opinion, that Canadian men and women don't want to be saddled with measures as regressive as this one. And speaking on behalf of—

Mr. Charest: The National Assembly is unanimous.

Mr. Gauthier: —speaking on behalf of those Canadian men and women you are constantly ignoring, we want to make this Government understand what is so wrong with this Bill.

Mr. Speaker, for the benefit of the Minister, who may not have had time to familiarize himself with the Bill, I may recall that with this Bill, the Government wants to amend the Patent Act where it concerns pharmaceutical products. These are major amendments which, according to many experts and many Canadian men and women, will increase the price of pharmaceutical products for the consumer and also, for many people, make it less likely they will be able to purchase drugs.

Mr. Speaker, Bill C-22 is also a bad Bill because it will affect the neediest, people who cannot afford to buy these drugs and who often have to forego good medical care because the price is too high. And here is a Government that says no, we are going to remove the protection consumers enjoy because generic products are competing with the pharmaceutical products manufactured by the multinationals.

Mr. Speaker, during the few minutes I have left, I would like to try to explain to the House that the argument that this legislation will stimulate research and development does not hold water. It does not stand up to an objective assessment. We all know, we have heard it in the course of debate, and Members have said that the multinationals have made profits. And these are not my words, but the Task Force on Pharmaceutical Products has often said in its reports that the drug companies were making a reasonable and sometimes very substantial profit, thank you very much, from their operations. My point is that there has been no undue competition from the companies manufacturing generic products and that the existence of these companies has not kept the others from making a profit. But, Mr. Speaker, there are some aspects which should be stressed besides saying that it will mean increased costs for consumers and provincial Governments which, in many cases, pay for drugs used by elderly citizens—

An Hon. Member: Read the Bill.

Mr. Gauthier: I beg your pardon, does the Minister want to speak? I regret, Mr. Minister, but look at the facts: Nova Scotia said it did not want it. They said so the day before yesterday, keep up with the news.

• (1240)

[English]

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Paproski): Would Hon. Members please address their questions through the Speaker.

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Speaker, Bill C-22 entails additional expenditures for the provinces. As a matter of fact under the provisions of the Bill the Government will give the provinces $100 million over four years to compensate them for these additional outlays. The $100 million are a tacit admission that the provinces will have added expenses as a result of this measure. It is also the best proof and example that the Government is yielding to American pressure just so Canada can sign a free trade agreement with the United States no matter what it may cost. To this end the Government is quite prepared to sell, give or abandon absolute control over the Canadian market to the multinationals, and we know this is bound to have a negative impact, Mr. Speaker.

I realize that I do not have much time, barely a few minutes, Mr. Speaker, but I had drafted a whole speech because I thought I would be here tomorrow and have my 20 minutes to explain the research and development issue, because this is where we must force the Government to come clean. We have no proof that the multinationals have invested in research because, even though they may have been posting good profits until now, they have not done any drug research in Canada. As anyone would expect, they do that where they are headquartered, in the United states or elsewhere in Europe. They do no research in Canada because the market is too small. They keep saying that the Canadian market is made up of only 25 million people, whereas they have 225 million in the United States and it is much easier to carry out medical research in that country. This is why I think we are being misled when told that in the future, thanks to Bill C-22, the multinational drug companies will take advantage of the new Canadian situation to create jobs and launch scientific research and development projects in this country.

Hogwash, Mr. Speaker, nothing in the Bill guarantees that and gives Canadians any reason to believe that the multinational drug companies will promote research and development in Canada. It is unfortunate, Mr. Speaker, but again the Government is taking the gloves off and resorting to closure. And considering their overwhelming majority, 211 against 40 and 30, a total of 70 Opposition Members, they do have the big end of the stick. Once again, Mr. Speaker, they are using their majority to push through a Bill which we feel is bad and regressive and should be withdrawn.

[English]

