PROSPECTUS

OF THE
BAPTIST MISSIONARY MAGAZINE, OR

Nova Scotia and New Brunswick;

THE diffusion of Missionary and other Religious Intelligence, is highly useful. It tends to encourage and comfort the people of God, and to excite a spirit of zeal and activity in the promotion of the cause of Religion, and has often been made a means, by the Divine blessing of the conversion of sinners.

A proper medium for the communication of such intelligence in these Provinces, is much wanted, as there exists, at present, no Periodical Publication designed for that purpose.

Under these considerations, the Baptist Associations of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, have agreed to unite in the publication of a Work under the above title.
It is designed to contain—

I. BIOGRAPHY; either original or selected.
II. ESSAYS; comprising doctrinal, experimental, and practical subjects; Illustrations of Scripture, &c. &c.
III. MISSIONARY INTELLIGENCE; giving an account of Missionary exertions, and the success attending them in these Provinces and elsewhere, both in Christian and Heathen lands, and among different denominations of Christians.

IV. RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE; containing accounts of the revival of Religion, &c. &c.
V. MISCELLANY; containing Obituary Notices, Ori-nations, Constitution of Churches, Poetry, &c. &c.

The Editors respectfully solicit Communications for the various departments of the Work, not only from the Baptists, but also from those of other Denominations.—
They would, however, explicitly state, that as conscientious men, they can only insert such Communications as they conceive to be suitable for publication.

CONDITIONS.
1. This Magazine is to be published once in Three Months, (or oftener if found necessary,) each Number to contain 32 pages, stitched in blue or yellow.
2. The price will be seven pence halpenny each number, and Agents who become accountable for one year's Magazines, and take twelve copies, will be allowed a thirtieth gratis.

The profits of the Work will be devoted to Missionary purposes.

To be Sold or Let.

And possession given 1st May next.
THE Premises belonging to the late firm of M. Leod, Robertson, & Co. at present in the possession of James Robertson, & Co. on Pagan's Wharf, (so called.) They consist of two Lots of Ground, each thirty feet fronting and Slip, by thirty eight feet back. On the western Lot there is an excellent Store, the second Floor of which is fitted up with shelves, &c. as a Dry Good Store, and also a Counting Room; On the other Lot, there is a good Bridge substantially fenced in and well adapted for all the purposes of a Lumber Yard.—The whole forming one of the most eligible and convenient situations in the City for any person engaged in the general business of the Country. For further particulars application may be made to Alexander M. Leod, Esq. of to the Subscriber on the Premises,
Jan. 24. JAMES ROBERTSON.

For Sale or to Let.

A TWO Story Dwelling HOUSE and Premises annexed thereto, situated on the South side of Brussels Street, about half a mile from the Market House. It is well calculated for a Family, having a large Garden and a convenient range of Out Buildings. Possession will be given on the 1st May next. W. & F. KINNEAR,
Attornies for the Owners.

February 28.

To be Sold by Private Contract.

And Possession given on the 1st of October next.
THE slightly situated and convenient
HOUSE, with Chaise-house, Stable, Barn, Garden, and a frost proof Cellar; at present in the occupation of the Rev. Frederick Coster.—
A variety of fixtures, Carpets, Window Curtains, &c. may be had at a fair valuation. Apply to March 14. WILLIAM WRIGHT.

THE SUBSCRIBER

LATE from HALIFAX, most respectfully begs leave to inform the Citizens of St. John, and the Public, that he has taken that large and commodious HOUSE belonging to Mr. BENTLEY, Prince William Street; which he has spared no expense in fitting up in a comfortable manner for the accommodation of BOARDERS and hopes by strict attention to business to merit a share of public Patronage. JAMES COOK.
May 17, 1825.

NOTICE.

MRS. DEBORAH HARTT, respectfully informs the Public that she has ceased to carry on the Tanning and Shoemaking business, and requests those having accounts with her to hand them for settlement to her brother, Mr.
Jacob Ring, who from this date will carry on the business, and will supply them with such articles as are in his line, upon the same terms as heretofore. 31st May, 1826.

NOTICE.

HUGH FRIEL, begs leave to inform his friends and the public, that he has removed to the House next adjoining Mr. Cox's Auction Room, and formerly occupied by Mr. Turnbull, where he will carry on the Boot & Shoemaking Business, in all its branches, with neatness and dispatch.
June 27,

GRAND-BRITAIN.

LONDON, JULY 24. Council 77 and 76. Money grows more abundant at the Stock Exchange, in proportion as it is withdrawn from commercial operations.

The distress in the manufacturing districts of Scotland, exceeds perhaps, that of Lancashire or any other part of England.

The notices of the harvest in England, are favourable; yet a knowledge of this fact does not appear to have had any effect on the price of grain.

Great apprehensions are entertained of insurrectionary movements in the neighbourhood of Wigan, where persons have been engaged in manufacturing pikes for some weeks past.

A Bolton paper states, that five mills suspended operations at the end of last week in that town alone, and that 2000 workmen were added to the multitude, out of employment.

Losses sustained by the North American market sold last week at Huddersfield 10 to 20 per cent lower than they were known for the last six years in fact, no words can paint the distresses of Lancashire and West Riding Yorkshire.

An Indigo-planting Company, called the Honduras Company, broke up last week. We may add that all the share-holders, fished blue enough on the occasion;—having nothing to show for it.

Distress in Ireland.—The distress in Ireland is not confined to the poor weaver; the highest trees of the forest are leading to the storm; men who have passed through a long life with honour to themselves, and sold advantage to their country, are obliged to yield to the heavy pressure of the times; and every man's sympathy and respect; we trust the report exaggerates.

The wife of a Sexton belonging to one of the churches at Whitehaven, was last week interrupted in the middle of an harangue upon the burden of the times, by a person who offered to sell her a couple of ducks. Ducks! (exclaimed she) how can I buy ducks, or any thing else, when we have not bread to eat for three months!

A very worthy clergyman, was conversing one day with a friend in the Coffee-house, on the subject of a ship they had mutually insured. His friend observed, "Do you know that I already suspect our ship is in jeopardy?" "The devil she is, (replied he) well, I am glad that she has got into some sort of luck."

Northern Lighthouses.—We have received two Parliamentary papers containing detailed statements as to these establishments.—The charge is 24d per ton for every British vessel, sailing within the limits of the Isle of Man Light, i. e. between Dunross Castle, (Stonehaven) and St. Abbs Head; 5d for every foreign ship; 2d for every British ship liable to northern lights, but not within the aforesaid limits; and 4d for foreign vessels.

The royal canal of the Fens Government, is to continue that of Langageed, from Thoulouse to Bayonne. The surveys are all finished, and extend over more than seventy leagues, in the whole of which line there is not a single obstacle of importance. This canal will pass through five fertile departments, the produce of which it will be the means of spreading. A few navigators from sea to sea to the other, from the Mediterranean to the western Ocean, will be the immediate consequence to this great undertaking.

Little can be offered in the way of interest to our readers, except the cheering intelligence which has recently reached town from the manufacturing districts. The stories of meetings of a political character in these parts are ill founded; one misstatement made an attempt to excite discontent, but it failed. The general accounts are of a much more agreeable character than those we have lately received. In the colonial market, there has been, within these few days, a great increase of demand, if not of price; and in our home concerns, the establishment of the Branch Bank has not only given great satisfaction, but promises the most important aid and relief to the merchant and manufacturer.

It is confidently reported that the Austrian Ambassador at Madrid, has declared to the corps diplomatique the determination of the Emperor not to consent to the establishment of the new Portuguese Constitution.

In the village of Broughton, near Mckham, there are 170 looms, of which 150 are unemployed.

A number of distressed stocking weavers, from Leicester, passed through Bath on the 23rd inst. imploring relief. The Nottingham Herald states that there is decidedly more doing in the lace and hosiery business in that town, and in some branches an advance of prices is obtained.

A regular communication by means of packets is to be established between England and Hayti.

Among the recent additions to the British Gallery of Paintings, is mentioned a beautiful cabinet picture by Anselmo Caracci, of Christ appearing to St. Peter after his resurrection. This painting is highly commended.

The King and Queen of Spain have been caught in a sort of trap on the road to Sacedon, where a jetty made to support the highway, tumbled in altogether—twenty persons of the suite were injured, and several of the mules killed.

The English brig Volusia has been robbed by a Greek pilot of 41 bales of English manufactured goods and of all the money on board. The losses sustained in this way by the English alone, in one month, is estimated at 1,700,000 piastres.

By the last accounts, the Athenians are preparing again to attack Cape Coast Castle.

London, Saturday, July 29.—The transactions of the present week have been fraught with interest, inasmuch as they have not only exhibited proofs of confidence in the mercantile world, but in almost every description of produce some augmentation of value resulted; in this respect Coffee stands conspicuous, and St. Domingo, which may be considered as the standard of the market, now commands from 45 to 50s. being an advance of near 8s. per cwt. on the currency of last week, at which, however, the exporters are by no means solicitous to effect sales. British Plantation Sugars fully maintain their previous value, whilst the extensive sale of about 8000 bags Mauritius obtained an advance of 2s. per cwt. the prices ranging from 80 to 90s. per cwt. In Cotton, more business has been transacted; and since Wednesday, some speculative purchasers have made their appearance, which has occasioned several falling parcels to be withdrawn from the market; and as the accounts received from Liverpool this morning are encouraging, an additional tone of confidence marks the character of the holders.—Since the sale of indigos, several parcels have realized a profit of 3d to 6d per lb. Such is the favorable change which has taken place in a few days. Emassing from the metropolis, it will tend to dissipate that oppressive state of misery which has so long prevailed in some of our parts of the kingdom.

The propitious state of the weather—the establishment of Branch Banks—the confidence already inspired, may be considered as the harbinger of better times.

London, Saturday Evening, July 29.—Consols for account have until yesterday fluctuated very little, but towards the close of the market large purchases were made on that day, and aided by the abundance of money, a considerable advance took place. Consols which opened 77 1/2 advanced 7 1/2. This morning the improvement was continued, the consols being at 78 1/2 for the account being 78 1/2 at opening, and the last price 79 1/2 per cent Red. 78 1/2 per cent Consol. 3 1/2 per cent Bank Stock 300. The Foreign Market has improved with the English, Mexican Bonds having been as high as 40 and leaving off at 42 1/2; Colombian rising to 30 and closing at 25.

Manchester, July 26. I have just been informed that advices have been received of the return of three cargoes of manufactured goods from America; the intelligence of this has added to the general distress. Of their late employers, the few working people speak in the highest terms, most feelingly and warmly, and I am assured that many of the larger and more affluent manufacturers are now working at a loss, on an average of from 30 to 40 per week.

The agricultural interests in this quarter bear a corresponding depression with the manufacturing.—The solitary sheep are kept in a state of constant preparation and waitingness. As a proof of the extreme standing amidst, with the riders equally prepared.

London Markets, 12 August. There is considerable improvement in Commerce, and the demand for manufactures has revived; there is also a much greater demand for the chief articles of Foreign and Colonial produce.—There was a good demand for Cotton last week, the sales amounting to four thousand bales.

STATE OF TRADE.—The symptoms of improvement which were observable in the market on Tuesday last, continued throughout the week; and on Saturday we understand that very considerable purchases of cloth were made. Yesterday, also, we believe, the demand continued; and although any immediate considerable improvement is not to be expected, there seems a general hope that we have at length passed the worst. It is in favour of this view of things that June and July are at all times considered very dull months in Manchester; and that we are now on the eve of the period at which the country drapers lay in their stocks for the autumn trade.—Manchester paper.

The unaltered has no idea of the value that the Editors of some newspapers put upon a curious fact, a little anecdote that will make people stare; that will induce an old woman to take off her spectacles, wipe the dust off them, return them to the bridge of her nose, and read the paragraph again. When the object is to secure the good grace of such readers, a curious fact is worth its weight in Gold, a fact, for instance, like that which we take from a recent number of an Edinburgh paper. "On Saturday a master-sweep, while cleaning a chimney seven stories high, in the Fishmarket, lost his equilibrium, and fell from his 'bad eminence' into the court of a house, and was rescued from his perilous situation by the police; on which he remarked, that 'he was an ass like the wain of what had happened; but he had got an ass's tail.' The story is pretty well told; there is an air of truth about it. Arts et cetera artem. It puts us in mind of a relation of ours, who fell from the top of St. Peter's at Rome, and lighted on a mule upon which a priest was riding. He was rescued from his perilous situation by the police; on which he remarked, that 'he was an ass like the wain of what had happened; but he had got an ass's tail.' The story is pretty well told; there is an air of truth about it. Arts et cetera artem. It puts us in mind of a relation of ours, who fell from the top of St. Peter's

The following beautiful Poem is from a little volume lately published in England, entitled, "Songs of a Stranger," by Louise Starnes (Cork).

TO MY MOTHER,
Yes, I have sung of others' woes,
Until they almost seem'd mine own;
And Fancy oft will scenes disclose
Whose pang was in thought alone.
Her magic power I've cherish'd long,
And yielded to her soothing way;
Enchanting is her airy song,
And wild and wondrous is her way.
But thou—when'er I think on thee,
Those glittering visions fade away;
My soul awakes, how tenderly!
To pleasure that can ne'er decay.
There's not an hour of life goes by
But makes thee still more dearly dear;
My sighs attend upon thy sigh,
My answers wait upon thy tear.
For earth has nought so good, so pure,
That may compare with love like thine—
Long as existence shall endure,
Thy star of guiding love shall shine!
O'er other stars dark clouds may lower,
And from our path their light may sever—
They live to bloom as an hour,
But thine shall live to bless us ever!

THE PLEASURES OF HOME.
O sweetly bright in the morning walk,
When the early sun is beaming,
And the flower, upon its dewy stalk,
In its radiant light is gleaming,
But brighter far is the happy hearth,
Where parents' eyes are shining,
And children, in their love and mirth,
Round guardian knees are twining.
O lovely in the noontide hour,
When the balmy winds are sighing,
And, amid the calm of the sultry hour,
The clouds at rest are lying;
But lovelier far is the happy hearth,
Where parents' cheeks are glowing,
And the beautiful flowers of human birth,
Are round the table growing!
O sweet, sweet is the twilight shore,
By the river gently rolling,
When the peasant's weary task is o'er,
And the curfew bell is tolling,
But sweeter far is the happy hearth,
Where parents' hearts are beaming,
And babes—to them the gems of earth—
Are their evening hymns repeating!

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE ROSE.
Flowers, the emblems of youth and beauty, and innocence, and so less the frail meteor of human life, each in the comparative brevity of its transient history, the same, have ever mingled with the story of affection, and shed their own sweet influence over the dreams of romance, and the rustic tale of village courtship. How often has a single flower been the medium of intercourse between a distant lover and his mistress, and told to her moving spirit the secret of his heart. How often, when kindred spirits have been doomed to separate, has a blushing flower remained the silent witness of unspoken vows. How many promises have lived on in their commemoration, in the memory of flowers.

"Mamma," said Lauretta one morning to Mrs. La Branch, "I have a pretty little Rose for our flower garden. Shall I plant it in the border by the summer house?" "Certainly, if you please," said the good lady, "but where did you get such a treasure, Lauretta?" "The sweet old man on a dog-bench—he had never dreamed of such a question and was not prepared to answer it; with the dexterous ingenuity so peculiar to her sex, however, she excited herself at a single thought—a friend gave it to me as a keep sake." "Old Mr. La Branch, who was reading the evening news over his coffee, lifted up his eye at the moment—'Edward gone then?' said he, with a quizzing smile, and without waiting an answer dipped his coffee, and went on with the paper; and Lauretta escaped from the breakfast table as soon as an opportunity offered.

The flower was planted in the sunniest spot, and Lauretta watered it with so much care, and nursed it so attentively that it took deep root and bore a full crop of roses. They were her companions—she used to sit for hours in her favourite nook, and gaze upon them and recall all the tender recollections they brought to mind; and when the long summer months had faded away, and the autumn came in his garb of pensive sadness to wither the leaves and flowers, she redoubled her diligence to preserve them from the fate of their kindred in the garden; and to screen them from the nipping season, she conveyed the rose bush to her own neat parlour, and still made it her hourly companion.

Edward Martin and Lauretta were old acquaintances. He had gone on business to Liverpool. Before he sailed he had brought her the Rose Rose—and he intended to say he brought it as a pledge of friendship—he did not hope to be able to say more. He saw Lauretta sat the flower down by her side; but his courage evaporated; his feelings overpowered him, and he could not utter a word about it.

The time had not yet arrived in which Edward was expected to return, when early one morning, the door opened and Mr. La Branch came in from his morning walk with Edward, whom he had met rambling in the direction of the mansion; and who had reached home the evening before. The family pressed round their friend—and Lauretta's eyes sparkled, and they both looked when they shook hands, there was such a mutual welcome as does the heart good, in which words tell far less cordially than feelings.

A hasty breakfast over, Lauretta took him to her parlour, and pointed to the budding rose bush—"I have kept it," she said—"it is still fresh and beautiful." "I forgot the flower," replied Edward, "I only thought of you." Lauretta blushed and hung her head. Meanwhile, Mr. La Branch having in his morning pipe walked into the room—"I have spoken to the Donnie—" "To marry us?" asked Lauretta and Edward in the same breath, interrupting him—no entirely had that subject engaged their minds that the words came out without a thought, and perfect confusion would have overwhelmed them both; but the old gentleman burst into a laugh—"no children," said he, "I spoke to him about a little pig he was to send us for in morning's dinner—and I was going to say Edward must come over and help us out it; but I will tell him to bring his spectacles and prayer book along with him, and the other business can be done at the same time—Good morning," and turning on his heel he walked directly over to the parsonage.

Edward and Lauretta occupy the neat little cottage in the valley between the two estates; and afford a perfect commentary on the happiness of the marriage life when it is founded on mutual love, and surrounded by the thousand charms of virtue. I have often thought of them, and the simple history of their courtship, when reading the accounts of breaches of marriage contracts so frequent in our days. Theirs was the mutual pledge of hearts—unspoken, unexpressed, the only contracts which is never broken—the only one in these matters which is a good name.

Regality of Bats.—A merchant in this town, who had a considerable quantity of molasses in one of his back stores, became sorely vexed at always finding the vent holes open, although great care was taken to have them properly stopped. So much was his curiosity excited, that he at length determined to witness with his own eyes, the out-pulling of the plugs. He accordingly took an opportunity to have the store doors closed upon him; and had not waited in his situation long, before two of the white-haired petty merchant, a tier of hampsters, and very deliberately pulled out the vent stoppers, and proceeded to drop their tails into the holes, beneath them with the rich liquid, till they were again and tick off! This beats all methods to stop molasses, which have come within our knowledge.—Warren, (R. I.) Star.

Typographic Art.—An interesting little tract, which has just appeared from the Edinburgh Press, is from the pen of Dr. Colman, lately one of the Librarians of the Bodleian; and, we believe, a Professor of Greek, who, under the very modest title of "Typographical Engraving attempted," has accumulated so small a fund of useful and enterprising information. We have they being printed Dr. Colman's publication, in order to answer from his introduction a passage illustrative both of the quality with which this wonderful art is performed, and of the comparatively very short period in which it was introduced to almost every nation in the known world.

Typography, in its nature and origin, and still more in its dependencies, is a legitimate subject of curiosity and attention. The art, having been brought almost to perfection in its infancy (so that like inventors it may be said to have sprung to life in the workshop of a German forger); having been successfully exhibited in Germany, in 1437; was carried to Bohemia in 1461 four more years saw it in Italy; France and Switzerland were enjoying it in 1470; in the next year it was practiced in Holland; Sicily and Hungary possessed it in 1472; the next year brought it to England; Spain enjoyed it in 1476; Denmark in 1478; Portugal in 1489; and by the close of the 15th century, it had travelled to Constantinople. It reached Italy in 1608; Sweden in 1616; Macedonia in 1618; the shores of Iceland in 1620; by the year 1628, it was introduced to a new world, at Mexico; in 1631 it was in Ireland; in 1662 in Poland; in the next year in Russia; in 1676 in Sardinia; by the year 1699 it had winged its way even to Japan; it was in the Azores in 1553; in India and China in 1690; in 1693 in Peru; in 1690 on Mount Libanus; in 1691 in the Philippine Islands; and in 1699 in the British settlements of North America.

In past ages, the only road to prosperity has been war; and nations seemed to think that without conquests they could not be great. Modern no less than ancient history gives proof of this; for every page of both is filled with battles and successes.—The further we look back, the more we find it true that violence led to splendor and renown. The early eastern empires have left great traces of magnificence; but far above the gardens of Babylon or the temples of Admor, rises the glory of Constantinople. Of all that is recorded of Egyptian labor and Corinthian wealth, nothing equals in fun their contemporary warriors. The trade and merchants of Athens were not without profit to her; but to Marathon and Plataea, to Salamis and Mycale, she owes the admiration which present ages pay her; and Sparta flourished though condemned to idleness, except in war and theft. The trade of Carthage fell before the sword of Rome, and not all the arms that heathen nations ever fabricated, gave a momentary part of the power which the soldiers of the republic won. When Christianity was established, vulgar motives swayed mankind, and industry became a source of poverty. Venice, Genoa, Pisa, the petty states of Italy, stood, by their ingenuity, among the largest empires; and created resources by trade, which war could not have given.—The Hansatic League, the Netherlands, grew stronger by industry; and by labor, the Dutch republic was enabled to contend with nations much her superiors.—Id.

According to an article in the London Journal of Arts and Sciences for the month of July, it appears there are at present one hundred manufactories in France, devoted to the making of sugar from the beet root. The quantity of sugar actually prepared is estimated at from four to five millions of pounds. This, however, is but one twentieth of the consumption in that country. The manufactures are in a thriving state, and the demand for the article increasing. The price of fuel in the French market being almost one sixth part of the whole cost of manufacturing, the sugar of course, in countries where fuel is more plenty, could be afforded proportionally cheaper.

As we cannot judge of the motion of the earth, by anything within or upon the earth, but by some radiant and celestial point that is beyond it; so the wicked, by comparing themselves with the wicked, perceive not how far they are advanced in their iniquity. To know precisely what lengths they have gone, they must fix their attention on some bright and celestial object that is not of this world, but above them. When all horres escape, (except Fehel), nothing seems to move, as in a vessel under sail; and when all sail by common consent into vice, some seem to do so. He that stops first, views as from a fixed point the horrible extravagance that transports the rest.

No habit or disposition is permanent and safe, that is not raised on the solid basis of principle, and instances are not wanting of those in whom a long series of disappointments has soured and destroyed a cheerful temper, and changed the gay and fond enthusiast into a severe and gloomy misanthrope.

THE LAST MAN.—A lady, a few evenings since, after having for some time attentively read Mr. Shelley's novel, entitled "The Last Man," threw down the book and emphatically exclaimed, "I had my! Bless me! if such a thing ever were to happen, what would become of the women?"

FOOT'S LAMBS.—A gentleman with whom he was intimate, happened, in the course of conversation, to say something in jest about a game leg—Foot's replied, "Pray, sir, make no allusion to my weakest part; did I ever attack your head?"

A strong proof of FATAL AFFECTION.—An Irishman, wearing the peace against his three sons, this concluded his affidavit—and this dependent further said, that the only one of his children who showed him any real filial affection was his youngest son, Larry, for he never struck him when he was down.

The change of sex, of which several stories have been given by Ovid and others, has hitherto been considered a poetic fiction; a formidable instance of this singular conversion is, however, now announced in Newgate Market, London, where a shopboard exhibits the following inscription:—"A Gordian, male or female, till Mr. A. Griffin."
