MEETING OF SONS OF TEMPERANCE

Semi-Annual Meeting Held at Harcourt Last Week.

KENT CO. WORK.

Great Progress Being Made in Temperance Work in Kent.

Harcourt, June 28—Grand Division Sons of Temperance met here yesterday afternoon. Including G. W. P. Flemington, G. S. Everett and G. W. A. Forbes, there were twenty-three delegates.

The G. W. P. had since January last organized Westmorland-Albert District Division, and divisions at Port Elgin, Campbellton and Dalhousie. On March 31st the total membership was 2079, in 45 divisions, a small gain.

Albert E. Pearson, of Bass River was chosen G. Supt. Y. P. Work. Mrs. Armstrong, resigned.

The St. John District Division reported eight divisions with 468 members on March 31st, an increase of 65 members.

Westmorland-Albert District has six divisions, two of which, at Port Elgin and Point de Bute, have over 100 members each.

Kings District Division sent no report, but they will hold their quarterly meeting at Collina, July 6th.

Kent-Northumberland District Division report was read by H. H. Stewart, D. S. This District was organized Sept. 21st. During the last quarter of 1905, the seven divisions reporting decreased in membership from 359 to 348, the principal decrease being 10 at Richibucto. During the first quarter of 1906, seven divisions, not all the same as those reporting in January, gained 21 members, 14 of this gain coming from Bass River. Only two Northumberland divisions reported since April, Newcastle and Burnt Church. A movement was started by members of Harcourt and Grangeville divisions in March, seeking to have no licenses renewed in this parish from the following May 1st. Two-thirds of all the ratepayers of the parish signed a petition to that effect. One licensee here had his application for renewal refused, and the other secured his renewal. An application for a license at Kent Junction was also refused, so that now there is only one licensed saloon in the western part of Kent county.

$18.00 was voted Bathurst Division to aid it in the Liquor license investigations there.

On motion of H. H. Stewart and A. E. Pearson, it was resolved that this Grand Division notes with pleasure the recent union of different temperance bodies in the forming of the N. B. Temperance Federation, along lines suggested by this Grand Division at its meeting at Newcastle in May, 1905; and we urge members of the Order to heartily support the movement.

There was a good public meeting in the evening, and very well attended.

At a meeting of the directors and a number of the shareholders of the Shediac and Coast Railway Company, Friday, Mr. P. J. Veniot said that a firm of Toronto lawyers have asked whether they could get an option on the building of the line. The matter was left in the hands of a committee consisting of A. B. Copp, Judge Trueman and Recorder Skinner.

MEETING OF PRESBYTERY.

Session at Campbellton Last Tuesday—A. D. Archibald Moderator.

REV. H. ARNOTT RESIGNED.

The Presbytery of the Miramichi met in St. Andrew's church, Campbellton, last Tuesday. There were present, Rev. Jas. Wheeler, (Moderator), Rev. Dr. Carr, J. M. McLeod, J. Y. McCurdy, J. E. McKay, A. D. Archibald, H. J. Fraser, A. J. W. Myers, J. Sutherland.

Rev. A. D. Archibald was appointed Moderator for the ensuing year and Rev. J. M. McLeod was re-appointed Clerk.

Conveners of Standing committees were appointed as follows—Statistics, Rev. James Wheeler; Sabbath School, Rev. J. Y. McCurdy; Young people's work, Rev. H. J. Fraser; Systematic Benevolence, Rev. A. D. Archibald.

Rev. H. Arnett tabled his resignation of St. James' church, Newcastle. Rev. J. B. McKay was appointed to preach at Newcastle on Sunday July 8th, and cite the congregation to appear for their interests at a meeting of Presbytery to be held at Newcastle on the following Wednesday at 11 A. M.

Rev. D. Henderson submitted, through the Clerk, a very satisfactory report of the Home Mission work within the bounds of Presbytery. All the mission Stations were supplied by students, and the work was in a healthy condition. During the summer Rev. S. Sutherland will disburse Communion at Missou, Rev. J. M. McLeod at Millbank, and Rev. A. D. Archibald at Kouchibouguac. The resignation of Rev. H. Kent, Doaktown, was accepted and Rev. E. Thorpe, as appointed to supply Doaktown till the next regular meeting of Presbytery.

Rev. A. C. W. Myers asked for a grant of $300 from the Century fund, to be divided equally between his two churches. On motion of Rev. J. R. McKay the request was granted.

The bill, prepared last fall by the two Presbyteries of the Province, and dealing with the temporal affairs of the congregations came up again for consideration. Strong approval of the bill was expressed, and the Presbytery unanimously resolved to send it down in its entirety to sessions and congregations with instructions to report on same before September.

Rev. D. Henderson reported for the committee that was appointed to draw up the obituary notice of the late Rev. James Murray. The notice was ordered to be engrossed on the records. It showed that the most of Mr. Murray's ministry was spent at Tabusintac, Douglastown and Bathurst.

Dr. Carr reported that Dr. Grierson of Trinidad would visit this Presbytery in July, and address a meeting at Rexton, on July 14th; Dalhousie, July 6th; New Richmond, July 8th; Campbellton, July 9th; New Mills, July 10th; Bathurst, July 11th; Chatham, July 15th; Black River, July 16th; Newcastle, July 17th, and Blackville, July 18th.

Rev. A. D. Archibald made mention of the serious illness of Rev. J. D. Murray, at Buctouche. A suitable resolution, expressing sympathy with Mr. Murray, was passed. The Presbytery adjourned to meet at Newcastle on July 11, to dispose of Mr. Arnett's resignation.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Morrison, celebrated their golden wedding Wednesday, and congratulations poured in all day by telephone, telegram, letter and callers, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lingley, and family of Newcastle, and Mr. and Mrs. George Flett and family of Nelson, spent the day with them and a few friends called in the evening, giving them a little surprise. Mr. Morrison received a handsome gold-headed cane and Mrs. Morrison a purse of gold from members of their family, and a number of remembrances were received from their friends, including flowers galore. The happy couple have our best wishes for many more years of wedded felicity.—World.

GOLD DISCOVERY AT CHATHAM JCT.

Residents Enthusiastic Over Discovery and Many Claims Taken up.

TRACES OF GOLD.

Well Digger Will Dig Another Well and Developments Watched.

Much excitement exists at Chatham Junction, Chatham and Newcastle over the reported find of gold particles in borings of a well recently dug at the Junction. A quantity of the borings have been gathered up and sent to Chatham Moncton and Fredericton and while nothing definite has been given out, the statement is made that what appears to be gold particles is easily to be seen in the borings.

A number of Newcastle citizens went to the Junction and we understand some have secured areas. A large number of areas have been taken up by Chatham, Newcastle Moncton and Fredericton parties and developments are eagerly watched for.

The reported discovery of gold at Chatham Junction has created a boom in mining areas which promises to outlast that which followed the alleged discovery of precious metal at Cross Creek, in the spring of 1899. As on that occasion the government stands to realize something in the form of an increased revenue while those who buy the areas, will get experience if nothing else.

Up to noon to-day applications had been received at the crown land office for 470 areas, the bulk of which have been taken out by Chatham and Moncton parties. This morning Mr. R. Z. Walker took out fifty areas for Mr. T. H. Clancy of Chatham, and Messrs. W. T. Wilson of Moncton and Alex. McKenzie of Chatham took out twenty in one block.

The price charged by the crown land department is fifty cents each for the first ten areas, and then the charge is twenty-five cents per area up to one hundred. No individual or syndicate can take more than one hundred areas in one block.

A sample of the sand taken from the well at Chatham Junction is on exhibition, at the crown land office and is attracting considerable attention. Dr. Bailey examined some of the sand, and while admitting that it contains particles of gold he is inclined to be wary about expressing an opinion. He thinks that the element of chance enters largely into the proposition.

Col. Loggie of the crown land office who is familiar with the geological formation of New Brunswick, says that Chatham Junction is in the coal belt of the province and if gold exists in that region it is directly contrary to the theories and teachings of the most eminent geologists of Canada. They always have declared, he said, that gold does not exist in sections of the country where coal formations are found.

Premier Tweedie is inclined to the opinion that if gold exists in the vicinity of Chatham Junction it has been carried there by a subterranean stream from the hilly sections of the country.

Mr. Fred M. Tweedie, who has had considerable mining experience in British Columbia, is satisfied that the sand taken from the well at Chatham Junction contains particles of gold.—Herald.

Great improvements are being made about Bridgetown. A num-

The new factory for the Miller progressing rapidly. All the fram-

The skeleton of John McKenzie, who disappeared from his home at Lower Kincardine, Victoria county, on April 28, 1899, was found last Wednesday by Andrew Davidson, sr., on his farm, which adjoined the McKenzie homestead. At the time of his death he was survived by a wife and ten children.
Mrs. McKenzie died about two years ago.

A Convention of the local opposition in Restigouche county will be held next month to nominate a candidate for the seat vacant through the appointment of nomination will go to Mr. J. E.

Stewart, lately sheriff of the county.

Mrs. Eliza Stairs, who is slightly demented, left the resi-

on Wednesday last, and a continuous search has been made for her by relatives and friends, but without success until Tuesday afternoon, when she was found by her sons and others in a barn some miles out the Houlton road. She was nearly starved, and after food and drink were given her, she was removed to Mrs. Tapley's home in Woodstock.

The advertising merchant is the one who does the business in these days of push and enterprise.
There are more newspaper readers today than ever before in the history of the world. The newspapers place your business under the eyes of the buyer. He sees what he wants, and knowing where to find it, looks up the wide-awake merchant who asked him to come and see him. Success in these days of sharp competition calls for eternal vigilance. You can't keep a hustler down.

Reginald Hickson son of Mr. E.
Hickson formerly of Bathurst, but now of the I. C. R. Advertising Department, met with a severe accident last Wednesday at Moncton.
A horse ran away from near the track between the row of horses, with many ladies sitting in carriages, and the race track fence, where hundreds of people stood watching the races.

The horse was attached to a light express and swept everything before him. Reginald Hickson, the twenty-year-old son of Edward Hickson, of the I. C. R. advertising department, was standing on the fence and, hearing shouts, climbed down to get out of the way. He was struck by the horse rendered unconscious, and was picked up for dead. He had an ugly cut on his head and it was feared the skull was fractured. He was taken to the Hospital, and later regained consciousness. He was feared to be badly injured, but to-night hopes are entertained for his recovery.

A number of people were knocked down by the horse, and there were many narrow escapes.

It is a pleasure to be able to an-

Bishop Kingdon's condition. He is now able to sit up an hour or so a day, and is reported as making very satisfactory progress toward recovery.

It seems to be generally accepted as a fact that Principal Crockett of the Normal School at Fredericton, will retire from that position before the opening of the next term, on account of age and disability, and already there is a stir among the many aspirants for the position.

John Irving picked up a fine specimen of petrified tree trunk on his place below Chatham a few days ago, and has presented it to the Natural History society. The specimen appears to be part of an eight or ten year old rock maple trunk, which became buried some few thousand years ago.

There are eight hundred and sixty-seven candidates for the Normal examinations, which begin on Tuescton, 126; St. Stephen, 108; Wood-

C. H. COSSABOOM,
Rossway, Digby Co., N. S.

A Fredericton Road man was out Canaan way last week looking after some of his young cattle. He came across a spot in the woods where two moose had been killed. The guilty party or parties who did the unlawful killing had carried away five quarters of the animals and left the remainder on the spot. Some efforts had been made to burn up the heads, hides, etc., but without success. If hunger had driven a man to kill a moose this time of year some little excuse might be offered for him, but this wholesale slaughter and leaving nearly half the meat to spoil seems to savor very strongly of criminal lawlessness that deserves punishment.

A story is current that the decision to abandon legislation at Ottawa to make the Judicature Act operative is due the action of one of the judges. He is said to have made a formal protest against any change in his present status claiming that his appointment is a life one and that he cannot be removed or his position altered in a way unsatisfactory to him. If this report is correct it can be seen that action of the judge would tie the hands of the Government at Ottawa, for unless the present judges are prepared to accept appointments to the new court it is impossible to make the law effective, as nobody would want to be the government compelled to pay two sets of judges one lot having duties to perform and the other legislated out of their position. The matter is one of great interest to the lawyers, because not a few have been to heavy expense in buying books and studying up the new practice, thinking the change would be made on July 1.

Hot Weather HEADACHES

Tablets, powders, drugs, of any kind will NOT cure headaches. Simply because they never reach the CAUSE of the headache.

What causes headaches? Poisoned blood, always.
If the bowels are constipated—
If the kidneys are weak—
If the millions of pores of the skin are not active—
There are bound to be headaches.

Fruit-a-tives

cure headaches because they cure the cause of headaches. They do not drug the nerves. They go to the root of the trouble, invigorate and strengthen the liver and increase the flow of bile into the bowels, which cure constipation. Act directly on the kidneys, heal all kidney irritation. Act on the skin, stimulate and open the pores.

With bowels, kidneys and skin all healthy and working in harmony, the blood is kept pure and rich and there can be no headaches.

FRUIT-A-TIVES are pure fruit juices—combined by a secret process with tonics and intestinal antiseptics.

The two men on the back plat of the suburban trolley car were talking about the little woman in the blue sunbonnet who was watering flowers by the roadside.

"The biggest gossip in the county said the tall man, 'I detest gossips.'"

"So do I," replied the short man and she is certainly the queen of them all." But then maybe she is worried, and gossips for pastime. They say her first husband ran away with the cook."

"You don't say! Well, I heard that her second husband rolls home at dawn and you can hear him singing a block."

"He must be a bird. The policeman told my wife they only eat two meals a day and her daughter is going to be married to a lad who only makes $4 a week."

"Well, I'll declare! But I certainly hate gossips!"

"Yes, so do I."

Ask for Minard's and take no other.

But," protested the first dear girl, "I haven't got the face to ask a favor of him."

"Well," rejoined dear girl No. 2, "you might visit a complexion specialist and have your face remodelled."

MEETING OF SCHOOL TEACHERS

Largely Attended Convention of Provincial Teachers at Chatham.

Chatham, N. B., June 27—The twenty-first meeting of the Provincial Teacher's Institute opened this morning in the Grammar school, Dr. Inch in the chair. In the unavoidable absence of Dr. Brittain, D. W. Hamilton was appointed secretary of the executive committee pro tem and was afterwards made secretary-treasurer of the institute, and Miss Jessie Milligan, St. John, assistant secretary. The membership fee was fixed at fifty cents for ladies and $1 for gentlemen.

Inspector Carter, B. Foster, Inspector Steeves, Dr. Cox, W. J. F. Myles were appointed a nominating committee.

The report of the executive committee stated that there was $4.58 in the treasury. Premier Tweedie arrived just then and in a brief address of welcome said the financial state of the institute reminded him of the province, but trusted that the time was not far distant when both would be improved in that respect.

Dr. Inch said that the interest of the public had awakened to the importance of the schools and of doing more towards the maintenance of the teachers than formerly. The press sometimes severely criticized the school course and other matters in reference to the work but when an increase in teachers' salaries was broached they were a unit in favor of it. Perhaps the recent scarcity of teachers was not an unmitigated evil for it tended to increase the pay. Inspector Merseure, now in Winnipeg, had written him that he had visited many teachers who had gone to Manitoba from the east and only in a few cases had they improved their positions.

It was moved and seconded that fraternal greetings be sent from this institute to the one now in session in British Columbia.

F. W. Pearson, director of music in public schools in Philadelphia, gave a most interesting and helpful address in singing in the public schools. He spoke of the different methods practised in different places and after an experience of more than twenty years advised that each teacher teach singing in her own room for twelve minutes each day.

A discussion was opened by Inspector Bridges and Miss Mary McCarthy, of Moncton, a special teacher of music, told of the success in their schools.

Miss Ada E. Smith, of New London (Conn.) gave a lesson in Practical Methods of teaching Geography. She thought the teaching of no other subject demanded so broad a knowledge as this in order to make it a success. The speaker recommended that over local geography the continent of North America be studied thoroughly and other continents as compared with it.

Dr. Cox's subject was the transfer of Latin and Algebra to Grade 9, and he gave many good reasons why this change should be made. An enthusiastic discussion pro and con followed the argument, one side being almost as good as that on the other.

Chatham, N. B., June 28—The third session of the institute opened this morning with music by Miss Muriel Ellis. Prof. Lochhead, of the McDonald College, gave an address on Educational Unrest. He referred to changes in educational methods and aims during the past year. It is not so long since women were first admitted to the higher schools. Another change was awakening of the public to the fact every child should have an opportunity to attend school. The next subject taught should have some reference to the life of the pupils, and now the question is how many of these subjects should be taught.

The speaker did not think new subjects could be successfully engrained on the system, but recommended that the course be changed to meet the requirements. Teachers should be better paid and schools better equipped, and the results must be better. New subjects too often were imperfectly taught, but interesting and profitable lessons could always be given on the school surroundings and local industries.

D. W. Hamilton, M. A., read a carefully prepared paper on decoration of School Rooms and grounds.

This paper had many practical suggestions on the art of making rooms and grounds attractive and beautiful, at little expense, and referred to the benefits of such conditions to both pupils and teachers.

A discussion followed this paper then a practical paper on Admission to College on High School Certificate, was read by George J. Trueman, M. A., and discussed by several.

Miss A. E. Smith continued her address of yesterday on Practical Methods of teaching Geography. Miss Smith said magic lantern and stereopticon views of places studied made impressions on the minds of the children which were rarely eradicated. She strongly advocated the conversational method of teaching this subject.

This afternoon Lieutenant-Governor Snowball entertained the institute at a delightful sail on the river on his steam-boat St. George. The party were on the boat from 2 to 6 o'clock, sailing about fifty miles. Refreshments were served on board. As the boat returned to town, three hearty cheers were given for Governor Snowball.

This evening Prof. Pearson, director of music in the public schools in Philadelphia, will give the teachers instructions on the first school year's course in music, as used in Philadelphia. There will also be a meeting of the executive of the New Brunswick Teachers' Association.

The institute is to be entertained at an at home given by Premier and Mrs. Tweedie tomorrow from 5 to 7 o'clock.

Chatham, N. B., June 29—The Teachers' Institute opened this morning with a well rendered piano solo by Miss Ellis. Dr. Inch read a telegram from the teachers' institute in British Columbia extending fraternal greetings, after which Dr. H. S. Bridges, of St. John, read a paper on Some Phases of Modern Education, emphasizing the tendency of the times to run to extremes, the prominence of oral teaching and the length of time given to nature study, in some cases, to the neglect of what he considered, the greatest of all studies, that of the languages.

The speaker compared the obedience and respect of children of the present day with that of fifty years ago and while denouncing all brutal ways of dealing with children, thought that the too much observed and considered child would not make as good a scholar as one who was compelled to make some self-sacrifice for his education, for rigid discipline must be used to acquire certain things. The memory should be cultivated as well as the eye and hand and pupils should be able, when a book is put in their hands, to understand what is between its covers. When so many new subjects and methods are being introduced there is great danger of running to extremes.

This paper was discussed by Dr. Cox.

H. H. Hagerman, M. A., read a practical paper on the Metric System, which is gaining ground and before long will be exclusively adopted and gave helpful suggestions on teaching this subject.

Dr. Cox was unanimously elected representative to the senate of the University of New Brunswick and Dr. Bridges, H. H. Hagerman, Frank Owens, Dr. Hay, George Inch, Dr. Cox, R. E. Estabrooks, B. C. Foster, S. J. Lewis and Miss Ida Merseure were elected members of the executive committee.

The text book committee, Miss Annie Harvey, Dr. Bridges, S. W. Irons, F. O. Sullivan, B. C. Foster and Dr. Crockett and Inspector Carter ex officio, were re-elected for two years.

All agreed that this meeting of the institute had been one of the most profitable and enjoyable ever held and votes of thanks were passed to the local committee, to all those who took part in the programme, especially Miss Smith, of Connecticut; and Professor Pearson, of Philadelphia, to the press and the following resolution was moved and carried:

Resolved, That the members of this institute place on record their high appreciation of the thoughtful kindness of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick in placing at their disposal yesterday afternoon the steamboat St. George and affording them an opportunity of viewing some of the historic river Miramichi, their appreciation also of the courtesy and considerate attention of the premier, Hon. L. J. Tweedie, and of the many ladies and gentlemen of the town of Chatham who have contributed so much to the entertainment and enjoyment of the teachers now visiting this beautiful town.

SECRET IN HANDWRITING.

Curious Puzzles Experts Are Expected to Solve

Yes said an expert in handwriting it is no easy matter to tell which is a forged name and which is a bona-fide one, for the professional forger of today is an artist in his lawless work. Fifty or sixty years ago handwriting experts were conspicuous by their absence; now there are scores of them in London alone and the leading ones are constantly brought before the public in connection with law cases—big sensational and curious.

Professional handwriting experts have much curious work to do. I am called upon almost daily to furnish or confirm suspicions in matrimonial squabbles. Some weeks ago a young lady brought to me a birthday card she had received bearing a few words, but no name, written with a pen. She was anxious to know whether the sender was a certain young man with whom she had quarrelled three months before and not afterward seen. She showed me a letter she had received from him in days of yore, and, though the handwriting on the birthday card was disguised, I proved beyond a shadow of doubt on comparing it with the letter, that it was from the young fellow in question. The lady was very pleased when I pointed this out to her, and I have since heard that the quarrel has been patched up and that the parties are to be married a few weeks hence.

Last February a well known city merchant received a gaudily colored valentine. He brought it to me, stating that he thought the sender was a clerk in his employ to whom he had refused an advance in salary. He wanted to know whether he had surmised correctly. The word "miser" was written on the valentine in ink, and on comparing this with the usual writing of the clerk in question I discovered similar peculiarities in both, proving that the clerk was the guilty party. However, for the foolish young fellow's sake, I kept my knowledge to myself pointing out to the merchant that in suspecting his clerk he probably was making a mistake.

The difficulty a forger has to contend against when imitating some one's handwriting is in disguising his own. Experts are always on the lookout for foreign characteristics, for they very often level to the identity of the forger.

Moreland, the Oxford tutor, one of the most successful and capable forgers who ever lived, could not only reproduce the handwriting of other people, but could write no fewer than seven distinctly different hands. He had one failing, however, in writing in a different hand some of the characteristics of his own unfortunately crept in. This eventually proved his downfall. He wrote a number of blackmailing letters in a very fine, delicate, womanly hand. One of these letters was placed in the hands of official at the Home Office and a handwriting expert who examined it discovered some of the characteristics of Moreland's natural writing in the calligraphy of the "lady."

Were it not for the camera the detection of forgeries would be almost impossible. Quite recently a cheque for the sum of £200 was honored at a London bank. It proved to have been forged. An eminent expert who was called in examined with a powerful hand lens the signature on the cheque but found nothing suggestive of forgery. He then put the cheque to the photographic test and found upon the result an negative unmistakable signs of erasure and shading. The forger, whoever he was, had first sketched the name in pencil and then filled it in with ink, shading the down strokes afterward with a fine pen.

Autograph collectors should be careful when purchasing letters, etc., that are supposed to be in the handwriting of eminent people that they obtain the real things. There are men in London who make a good living by forging signatures and selling them at auction and bazaars. One man known to me has made as much as £60 in a month in this way.

The Union Advocate

NEWCASTLE, JULY 4, 1906.

Canada entered Sunday on the thirty-ninth year of its confederation with the brightest prospects that is possible to conceive. Prosperity extends throughout the whole length and breadth of Canada. It would be hard indeed to find in the annals of history a country that has made so much progress as Canada during the past decade. The wave of prosperity that set in at the advent of the liberal administration under Sir Wilfrid Laurier has continued uninterrupted. Under liberal rule the flood of emigration has been turned into one of immigration. Not alone has the Canadian returned to his own country from the United States, but many thousands of Americans have followed him to Western Canada and every day others are crossing the border to make their homes here. The influx of foreigners, too, is on a large scale, and week after week sees big steamships freighted with Russians, Germans, Swedes, and other European people coming to Canada. The orphan, the small farmer, the artisan, the laborer and persons of other callings of the motherland are coming here to better their conditions and to add further wealth to the country by their industry and enterprise. Each year has seen an increased revenue. The export and import trade continues to grow, while manufacturing in every branch shows such a remarkable expansion that the demand for skilled labor in the large centres is greater than the supply. Added to this is the fact that Canadian manufacturers are successful competitors in British and foreign markets. The laborer and tradesman, too, are partners in the general prosperity of Canada, with increased wages and shorter hours of labor. These are only a few of the many things this young country, so rapidly moving on its way to nationhood, has to be thankful for in celebrating its natal day. Every Canadian rejoices that during the past year two new provinces have come into existence, and that under the judicious management of the Hon. H. R. Emmerson the Intercolonial Railway is now under a paying basis. There is growth and improvement on every hand, such as the building of trans-continental and branch railways; providing facilities at inland and tidal waters for the quicker handling of goods, deepening harbors and canals, placing of aids for safer navigation. All to make Canada a better land to live in and a more important factor in the great world in whose affairs our very growth and development must compel us to more and more interest ourselves.—Ex.

When James J. Hill, addressing the Canadian Club at Ottawa, advised Canadians to "keep the flag flying to the last shred," he knew what he was about. The remark was not inspired by any remnant of affection which Mr. Hill may have for the old flag. It was prompted by a careful regard for Mr. Hill's railway interests, and was the remark of a shrewd, and far-seeing politician.—Ex.

The Sunday Observance Bill is still developing troublesome questions, but there is a commendable spirit of compromise manifested in the discussion which indicates in Parliament is anxious to frame a law which will ensure the maintenance of the Sabbath as a national day of rest and yet do no violence to the right of individual liberty.

OBITUARY.

MRS. GEORGE BEATON.

The sad news was received here Monday morning of the death at Hinsdale, Ill., of Mrs. George Beaton.

Mrs. Beaton was the eldest daughter of the late W. C. Anslow. A husband and two sisters, Mrs. George DeBlois, of Hinsdale, and Miss Mary at home, and four brothers, G. Baxter of North Sydney Junction, W. Parker, of Boston, Harry B. of the Advocate and Charles W. of the Events, Campbellton survive.

Mrs. Beaton was ill for about two months but it was not thought that the illness would terminate fatally. She was 36 years of age.

Mrs. Beaton was of a jovial and amiable nature and made hosts of friends who will regret to learn of her death.

MRS. THOMAS E. CLAY.

The unexpected death of Mrs. Maud Clay, wife of Thomas E. Clay, Hartford, Conn., on the 17th June, at the early age of 26 will be sad news for her many friends in this province. Mrs. Clay was a daughter of John and Mrs. McMurdo, Kensington, formerly of Alberton. Only a few months ago the spirit of her sister, Mrs. John Howard Margate, passed to Him who gave it. Mrs. McMurdo, mother of the deceased, was called to Hartford in February on account of the illness of her daughter from rheumatism. She apparently recovered, and on May 19th an infant son arrived in the home. Ten days later Mrs. Clay appeared to suffer from neuralgia, and although treated by three of the best physicians available, she passed away on June 19th. Kind friends ministered to her wants, in addition to the help and love which only her mother could bestow, as well as the watchfulness of her husband, to whom she was so much attached. The remains, accompanied by her husband, father and brother, were brought to Alberton, where the funeral took place on Saturday from the Presbyterian church, Rev. Mr. Gratz officiating. Mrs. McMurdo was unable to return as she felt it her duty to remain behind to care for the little baby boy until the return of his father. Mrs. Clay was of a generous disposition amiable and kind, and wherever known was a general favorite. She has resided in Hartford for several years, her sister, now Mrs. Ingalls, living not far distant. They were very much attached to each other and it will be doubly sad for her, but she as well as the many friends elsewhere, will rejoice in the good life of the departed, and her happiness, even in death.—Charlottetown Guardian.

Mr. Clay, who came to Newcastle to spend a few days with Mr. McMurdo, received a telegram Thursday morning from Hartford, announcing the death of his infant child. He left immediately for Hartford.

MRS. JOHN WAY.

INDIAN MONEY

NO GOOD.

Richibucto Indian Asks 'Why He Cannot Buy Liquor.'

Ell Tanarr, of Richibucto called at the Advocate Office and asked us to explain why an Indian's money was not as good as a white man's.

The following is his way of putting the matter.

Je, June 19, 1906.

Bill Tanarr:
Belonged to Richibucto, Kent Co. I liked to see reason why the Indians couldn't get the Liquor same as any other tribe.

He understood that the Indians as a same labor good as any one else and he spend is money in department store and everywhere. He thinks perhaps is money not so good in bar room as same as in department store.

Of course the above does not refer to Newcastle as everybody knows there are no bar rooms here.

GIVEN THIRTY DAYS.

Campbellton, June 26.—Last week I. C. R. officer Noble got warrants sworn out for the arrest of John Daigle and Frank Donnelly, both of Jacques River, on the charge of stealing a ride on a freight train from Nashes Creek to Dalhousie Junction on the 19th inst. Accompanied by town Marshal William Chamberlain, Mr. Noble went down the line to arrest said parties. They got Donnelly at Nashes Creek and Daigle at Culligan's Siding. They were brought to Campbellton and taken before police magistrate Matheson and each sentenced to thirty days. It was the intention of Mr. Noble to take the prisoners to Dalhousie yesterday morning, but on his hearing that these same men were suspected of entering a house of Mr. James Shaw at Dalhousie Junction while there on the 19th, and stealing therefrom a watch and a sum of money, it was thought advisable to hold them here for further developments in the case.

With the resumption of direct service, Boston to St. John, on the International division, from Union wharf Monday, a new steamboat, the Huron, late of the Clyde line, joins the magnificent fleet of white flyers already in the service between Boston and all points east, operated by the Eastern Steamship Company. The Huron goes in commission as a companion steamer to the St. Croix, plying coastwise in place of the Calvin Austin, between Boston and St. John, touching at Portland, Eastport and Lubec. As in the case of all the other steamers of the Eastern Steamship Company, this new recruit has every modern appliance for comfort, luxury and safety. The Huron is a propeller, and was built in Philadelphia in 1902.—Boston Post.

The Adventurers

By H. B. MARRIOTT WATSON

COPYRIGHT, 1899, BY HARPER & BROTHERS

"Come in," I said in low tones. "Your master is very ill. Where is the nearest doctor?"

"At Llanellan, sir," said she tremulously.

"Send the man posthaste," I ordered. "Let him gallop all the way."

"Is he?" she asked, and stared at me fearfully.

"Yes, I fear so," I answered.

CHAPTER IV.

THE events of that day, together with the two surprising sequels, to which I shall come presently, set me for the whole of a week upon the horns of doubt and perplexity. I was embarrassed by so strange a sequence of accidents. Somewhere behind and still aloof, but self-confessed, as it were, by the conduct and deportment of my unfortunate host, hung the shadows of a mystery to which I had no clew. It was plain that he had a secret which he kept very private and to which I should have been admitted on the very eve of his unhappy death. That death, so to say, had robbed me of my opportunity, and I could see no means to regain it. My dim suspicion that he had come by his end through violence was dissipated soon enough. The doctor certified to heart disease, from which he told me that Mr. Kesteven had long suffered.

"He might have gone off any moment," Mr. Greenstreet said. "A shock, a violent exertion, even a strong emotion—this would suffice to determine the climax of the disease."

A shock! The word lingered somehow in my thoughts without particular reason. The cries I had heard might well enough have been drawn from the old man in his last pains, and yet I had the impression that such deaths were usually instant, if not painless. Those shrieks had been prolonged and reiterated.

And here it was that I had my first surprise. Under the stress of the painful emotions of that time I had forgotten the leaf of paper which I had taken from the dead fingers. But while I was revolving the circumstances of the mystery the recollection of it flashed suddenly upon me, and feeling in my pockets I discovered it where it had remained since the entrance of the housekeeper. It was broad daylight, and the doctor from Llanellan had just gone from the house. I laid the paper upon my bedroom table and studied it carefully. It was of stiff parchment and stained yellow with the dust and dirt of years, much worn in parts and its margins gnawed as if by mice or rats. The characters were faded and well nigh illegible, but I made out, with some difficulty, the faint and ancient letters. This was how the document ran:

"Turning this corner, it is necessary to proceed upon the passage for the space of some thirty footsteps and at the close thereof to pause and survey the walls. If ye will then duly determine a height of five feet from the footway thereupon will be disclosed a small knobby, the which revolving will give access to a large cupboard within ye wall. Observe carefully upon the back of the cupboard and where the eaken pannels adjoin the stone. Here ye will perceive a spring, the which pushing a doorway shall open behind, giving entry to an interior chamber. A flight of stairway leadeth thence."

Here the parchment had suffered so grossly at the hands of time or from the assaults of its natural enemies that the characters became unreadable and finally ceased.

It was plain that this sheet had some connection with the disclosure Mr. Kesteven had intended to make to me, but beyond this conclusion I could not go. And so after a desultory study of the ancient characters I put it aside, locking it more by habit than of intentional prudence in my private letter case.

I now stood honorably charged with the last offices to my dead friend. An inquest was inevitable in the circumstances, but it was no more than a formality, and my evidence, with that of the housekeeper, Mrs. Main, and the doctor from Llanellan, was sufficient to close the investigation. It was not until these ceremonies were over that I experienced my second surprise, a surprise which, although I had become somewhat acquainted with the eccentricities of the man, fell upon me like a thunderbolt. Upon the morning after

Mr. Greenstreet had come to pay a visit to the lawyer, Greenstreet by name, who I understood, acted on Mr. Kesteven's behalf. I regarded this as the last of my melancholy duties, which discharged, I was free once more to resume the tour which had been so strangely interrupted. Mr. Greenstreet, the little fat, bowing solicitor whom I had already seen, received me with polite ceremony. His face wore a mingled expression of solicitude and satisfaction to be furnished in a nervous manner with a paper.

"A most melancholy end, Mr. Greenstreet," said he, shaking his head; "so sudden and a sterling, honorable man, sir. We must all go some day."

I put the question for which I had come on in response was saluted with a smile of astonishment.

"A great assistance, Mr. Greenstreet," he echoed, surveying me, with his mouth open. "Your assistance? Well, I suppose you can be of some assistance."

And he chuckled heartily, as if inviting me to join in his joke.

I told him that I was leaving the district that same day and would like to know in what way I might aid him, seeing that it was improbable that I should revisit the neighborhood.

"Then you do not intend to reside at the castle?" he asked.

"There was a certain tone of condemnation in his voice which, though I was at a loss to account for, I could not but recognize."

"Why, certainly not?" said I. "Why in the name of fortune should I? My only idea was, for Mr. Kesteven's sake, to smooth his affairs for his successors."

The little man started to his feet, and his mouth widened in a broader smile than ever. "Then it is possible that you are ignorant, Mr. Greenstreet?" said he. And looking at my interrogating face he positively beamed.

"Why, yes, it must be so," he said excitedly. "Mr. Kesteven, sir, by a will under date of Aug. 16, has made you his sole heir."

It was now my turn for amazement. The unexpectedness of the news left me agape, and then, after the first moment of silence, I felt my ears slowly growing warm, and I knew that I was blushing red as a peony in my confusion and astonishment.

The greedy little lawyer enjoyed the effects of his surprise.

"But the natural heirs"—I began, stammering.

"There are none," said he promptly. "The late Mr. Kesteven had no near relatives."

"The will"—I protested feebly.

"Was made three days ago, I, of course, assumed that you were well acquainted with its contents—a few legacies to his housekeeper and the servants, and yourself the residuary legatee. In order, however, not to raise your expectations too high, Mr. Greenstreet, he proceeded, now more coolly and quite officially, "I may say that there is little beyond the castle itself—a bare competence and no more."

I waved my hand. "Good heavens!" said I. "But what right have I?"

"It is scarcely a question that requires an answer," he replied dryly, "so long as Mr. Kesteven had the right. But, by the way, I may say—and it is

Mr. Greenstreet received me with ceremony.

A curious coincidence!—and here he rummaged among his papers—if you are anxious to get rid of the castle, I dare say it can be managed. Oddly enough, only this morning I had a letter from a firm of solicitors in London, assuming it was for sale and inquiring the terms. Let me see. Ah, here it is!" He handed me the letter, which was directed from the offices of a firm in Parvise street, Lincoln's Inn Fields.

"Quick work," I commented.

"The little solicitor assented. "It is a beautiful neighborhood," he replied, rather proudly, "and the castle is a fine building. Very antique, remarkably antique."

The adjectives were hardly chosen to my taste, but I could find no fault with the sentiment. Yet it seemed strange that a purchaser should have been so instant; I had understood that the experience was uncommon in the property market. As I sat contemplating the letter Mr. Greenstreet interposed.

"Well, sir," said he, smiling, "am I to entertain the offer?"

"No," I answered, though I could hardly have said why.

"You will live on the property?" inquired the lawyer.

"Yes," I replied, adding, "for the present."

But, in truth, I was in no state of mind to determine upon any particular course with definition, so involved were my emotions in the face of the extraordinary news I had heard. It was an amazing stroke of good luck which by a signature of a dozen letters converted a comparatively impecunious and briefless barrister into the proprietor of an ancient estate. These thoughts and feelings moved me as I rode back to the castle, quite oblivious of my earlier resolution to be gone from Raymond and the scene of that disaster. It seemed now that I was definitely bound up with the fortunes of the place unless I accepted Greenstreet's offer to negotiate a sale of the property for me. I had fallen into a reverie—nor am I ashamed to confess that it was a very pleasant reverie—when I reached the top of the hill upon which the castle stood. That hurried drive which Mr. Kesteven and I had undertaken three days previously had obviously been for the purpose of executing the will. I now asked myself the motive which had induced him so to favor a casual acquaintance, but I could find no answer save in the general eccentricity of his conduct. He had died without a relative, even without a friend, as it appeared, and to that fact the mere addition of a passing whim, generated possibly under a stress of unknown emotion, must suffice to explain his behavior. At that phrase of my own, "unknown emotion," I was pulled up sharply once more. What was there at the back of all these incongruous and incomprehensible incidents? In the current of these reflections I almost rode over the innkeeper Hood by the entrance of the park. He saluted me deferentially, stepping aside to let me pass and gliding noiselessly to open the iron gates. At the sight of him the lawyer's statement as to the contents of the will recurred to me, and I reined in, giving him good day.

"This has been a bad business, sir," he ventured in his even tones.

I nodded, replying with some commonplace.

"Especially, sir, for poor Mr. Kesteven, who was, in a manner of speaking, quite alone in the world."

"Yes," said I, though the remark was perhaps irrelevant. "So Mr. Greenstreet, his lawyer, tells me."

Hood's glance met mine, as though he would inquire of me; but feeling no doubt, that this would be too great a liberty, his eyes reverted to the gate, which he still held open respectfully.

"Mr. Greenstreet tells me," I went on, "and I suppose I am free to repeat it, that your old master has left you a small legacy."

The man started visibly, and for a second his dark eyes shone on mine. He seemed almost as surprised as I had been, but he recovered his astonishment next minute and dropped his gaze.

"Thank you, sir. It is very kind of him—Mr. Kesteven, I mean. I served him three years, and a better master no man need want."

"He paid you a similar compliment," said I, smiling.

"He was always very good to me, sir."

He stood silent, as though for me to enter, but as I did so he said respectfully:

"I suppose we shall be losing you, sir? It's a great thing for Mr. Kesteven to have had you with him in his last days."

"Well," said I, with a little laugh, which I really could not restrain in my excited condition, "not just yet, Hood. I think, I'm afraid I'll have to put up with my company for a little longer. You see, Mr. Greenstreet informs me that I am, quite unexpectedly, left heir to the castle."

If Hood were as much astonished at this statement as at his own good fortune, he certainly did not show it. I caught one glance of his extraordinary eyes, and then he had turned and was closing the gate.

"I'm sure I congratulate you, sir, if you'll pardon the liberty. The castle wants an owner, and I hope you'll be living here, sir."

I told him I did not yet know and rode up the park, leaving him to fix the locks.

I had said no less than the truth when I had answered Hood's questions, but circumstances soon made my resolution for me. The rumor of my inheritance was spread about the country, and I found myself suddenly elevated to new dignity in the eyes of the neighborhood. And the first fruits of this celebrity appeared in an unexpected visit from my young acquaintance, Montgomery. His farm, it seemed, was a mile or two from the castle, lying in the next valley, and he rode over to offer me his congratulations. It was plain that he had not been so deep in liquor as he had appeared upon that evening at the Swan, for he was hugely embarrassed during the interview and more than once offered to recede upon himself in somewhat deprecating terms.

"I'm not a bad fellow," he was good enough to explain, "but I'm a devilish fool. All the Montgomeries are. We've had a lot to put up with. Our estate's no better than a barnyard. We're a pack of idiots, that's what we are, Mr. Greenstreet. And when there's liquor about—Well, you know what it is."

I didn't quite follow out his meaning, but, on the whole, he struck me as a very amiable fellow, honest according to his lights, and bearing a certain distinction of person which, derived from a long and gentle race, could not wholly be concealed in the dull and uneducated individuality of its last representative. He certainly knew a great deal about horses, and as a result we grew very friendly ere he left. When he did so, it was with a frank hope, boyishly expressed, that I intended to live at the castle.

But it was not due to the arguments of Montgomery that I finally decided to stay at the castle, but to an incident very different, which fell out in the following way on the next evening: I had dined early, and as the light was still very full across the valley I sauntered out through the park and wandered down the road toward the Woodman. When I reached the Inn I noticed in the twilight the figure of a stranger leaning against the stone coping before the doorway smoking a cigar. At this moment Hood emerged from the taproom, and I nodded to him, asking if he had heard yet from the solicitor.

"Yes, sir; thank you, sir," he replied. "It's a very welcome present, sir; many thanks to your poor master."

"Well, you seem to be getting on," said I, with a glance toward the stranger, who, seeing my eyes on him, lifted his hat and smiled.

"Yes, sir," responded Hood in a lower voice. "The gentleman's come to stay a bit, sir. Name Captain Ser-

THREE FACTS

For Sick Women To Consider.

First.—That almost every operation in our hospitals performed upon women becomes necessary through neglect of such symptoms as backache, irregular and painful periods, displacements of the female organs, pain in the side, burning sensation in the stomach, bearing-down pains, nervousness, dizziness and sleeplessness.

Second.—The medicine that holds the record for the largest number of absolute cures of female ills is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It regulates, strengthens and cures diseases of the female organism as nothing else can.

For thirty years it has been helping women to be strong, curing backache, nervousness, kidney troubles, inflammation of the female organs, weakness and displacements, regulating the periods perfectly and overcoming their pains. It has also proved itself invaluable in preparing for childbirth and the change of life.

Third.—The great volume of unsolicited and grateful testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., many of which are from time to time published by permission, give absolute evidence of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice.

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women.—Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. From symptoms given, your trouble may be located and the quickest and surest way of recovery advised.—Mrs. Pinkham is daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years under her direction and since her decease she has been advising sick women free of charge. Out of the vast volume of experience in treating female ills Mrs. Pinkham probably has the very knowledge that will help your case. Surely, any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.

Business Course For Subscriptions

The Advocate will pay the entire charge for tuition at any N. B. Business College in exchange for subscriptions to the Advocate. Any young man or woman could earn this amount under her direction and since her decease she has been advising sick women free of charge. Out of the vast volume of experience in treating female ills Mrs. Pinkham probably has the very knowledge that will help your case. Surely, any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.

Full instructions will be sent on request, and all information as to the number of subscriptions, required, etc.
We will also allow a cash commission to enable the canvasser to pay at least a portion of his or her travelling expenses.
This is a rare opportunity to get a business education in exchange for a little earnest work.

The demand for expert bookkeepers and stenographers is growing and with this offer none need say they cannot afford to take the course.

THIS MEDICINE IS BREATHED.
That's why it is sure to cure Catarrh. You see it goes direct to the source of the disease,—the lining vapor repairs the damage caused by catarrh inflammation. Catarrh always cures because it goes into those tiny cells and passages that ordinary remedies can't reach, goes where the disease actually is. Impossible for "Catarrhism" to fail as any doctor will tell you. Don't be misled into thinking there is anything so good as Catarrhism,—use it and you'll soon say good-bye to catarrh.

How quickly it strengthens—what an appetite it gives—what a glow it brings to pallid cheeks! The nutriment contained in Ferrone puts strength into anybody. Laughing eyes, rosy lips, bright quick movement all tell of the vitality Ferrone produces. Thousands of attractive happy women use Ferrone—Why not you? PERCY ROCK.

Graphic Description of This Gaspe Coast Land Mark.

Few Canadians, who long to go far afield in search of Nature's beautiful works are aware of her wonderful handiwork in their own country.

Nature has been kind to the fair province of New Brunswick, and Moncton and vicinity have been favored with a fair share of her wonderful works and phenomena. It is not New Brunswick alone, however, that has been favored but all the provinces constituting this wonderful country of ours have been made beautiful to the eye by Nature's handiwork. But the old province of Quebec is perhaps the peer of all her sisters in beautiful natural scenery and the little fishing village of Percé on the Gaspé coast, within two hundred miles of Campbellton and about two day's travel from Moncton, presents some of the most wonderful sights within her famed areas. The traveller, on obtaining a good view of Percé is apt to exclaim "poor little Percé!" and why? surely there is reason enough.

With the wild waves of the Bay of Chaleur beating incessantly on her rugged coast and the rocky peaks of Mount St. Anne frowning above her from the west, as if waiting ready for a signal to sweep down with an angry roar and wipe her out of existence, the little village certainly presents a humble appearance which adds to the beauty of her surroundings. Founded about 1835 and settled by the hardy fisherpeople from the shores of Brittany and the Channel Islands, Percé derives its name from the famous rock which forms part of its scenery and of which a description might be interesting.

Separated from the shore by an interval of 300 feet, Percé Rock, presenting a formidable appearance stands isolated and towering like some huge ocean liner. The natural color of the rock is reddish brown and it presents an almost bronze appearance when old Sol sheds his powerful rays full on it. Reaching a height of 300 feet at its highest apex, it gradually tapers and extends seaward 1,500 feet and is 300 feet in diameter at its widest point. Beyond the rock, sternward, stands an isolated pillar which was formerly a part of the great rock but fell a victim to the unrelenting waves and according to local tradition was finally brought down on a rough 17th June in the year 1845. The rock, however, is still tumbled, an arch about 100 feet high by 75 wide having been worn through by the waves about 100 feet from its seaward extremity. The summit of the rock is about 250 feet in width and is the breeding place of thousands of gulls and cormorants, whose wild screams and calls mingle with the angry roar of the sea. An almost incessant pandemonium and adds to the wildest and beauty of the scene.

A WEIRD TRADITION.
The walls of the rock are sheer and have never yet been scaled by human being. There is a local tradition; however, of an old settler in the village, a Mr. Moriarty, who some hundred years ago, attempted to scale the rock but was driven off by its feathered inhabitants as soon as his body appeared on the summit and losing his footing he fell to his death.

There is now a local law prohibiting anyone from attempting to gain notoriety by this means which calls for a fine of one hundred dollars ($100.00).

To the southeast of the rock and distant from the shore about three miles is Bonaventure Island with its area of five square miles and population of fifty souls, humble fisherfolk, who live happily and contentedly on their island home.

On the east of the island is the rocky cliffs, thousands of gulls, auks, puffins, gulls and sea pilots make their homes and are to be seen at any time during the day in long rows along this side of the island.

On the west of the village is Mount St. Anne with its rocky peaks extended 1400 feet above the level of the sea. On its highest apex is the lookout from which the sightseer on a clear day, with the aid of a powerful glass, can view the country for fifty miles around. To the north is Red Peak which is 700 feet high and on its seaward side presents a perpendicular wall.

Percé, with its famous rock, island and rugged mountains surely presents a sight to the lover of wild scenery which cannot be surpassed by Switzerland's Alpine Peaks or the snow-capped heights of the Rockies.

A trip along the Gaspé coast in summer, either by land or sea, bearing inclement weather, is a delightful one. The roadway borders the shore of the Bay of Chaleur for a hundred miles from Dalhousie to Gaspé and passes through a succession of thriving little towns. The trip by water is made by the new steamer Lady Eileen and the scenery along the coast viewed from the water is beautiful indeed.

SUNLIGHT SOAP

is better than other Soaps but is best when used in the Sunlight way. Follow directions.

SUNLIGHT WAY OF WASHING

FIRST.—Dip the article to be washed in a tub of lukewarm water; draw it out on a washboard and rub the soap lightly over it. Be particular not to miss soaping all over. THIRD.—Put it in a light suds, lay in the tub under the water, and go on the same way until all the pieces have the soap rubbed on, and are soiled up.

Then go away for thirty minutes to one hour and let the "Sunlight" Soap do its work. NEXT.—After soaking the full time rub the clothes lightly out on a washboard, and the dirt will drop out; turn the garment inside out to get at the seams. But don't scrub any more soap on it, and don't wash through two suds. If the water gets too dirty, pour a little out and add fresh. If a streak is hard to wash, rub some more soap on it, and shake the piece back into the suds for a few minutes. LASTLY COMES THE RINSING, which is to be done in lukewarm water, taking special care to get all the dirty suds away, then wring out and hang up to dry.

For Washdays and Finishing proceed as follows:— Shake the articles free from dust. Cut a tablet of SUNLIGHT SOAP into shavings, pour into a gallon of boiling water and whisk into a lather. When just lukewarm, work articles in the lather without rubbing. Squeeze out dirty water without wringing and rinse thoroughly in two relays of lukewarm water. Squeeze out water without wringing and hang in the open air.

The most delicate colors may be safely washed in the "Sunlight" way.

$5.00 REWARD will be paid to any person who proves that Sunlight Soap contains any injurious chemicals or any form of adulteration.

5c. Buy it and follow directions. 5c. LEVER BROTHERS LIMITED, TORONTO

Cod fisherman report a sudden scarcity of fish due to the appearance of dogfish in the coastal waters. This pest is by no means diminishing but on the contrary seems to be increasing. The department of marine and fisheries is carefully considering in conjunction with the American authorities the best means of ridding the waters of dogfish, the natural enemy of our fishermen. The reduction plant established last year have accomplished much good in this regard and it is probable that ere long these plants will be established all along the coast.

SOME TIME in August next we expect to make some extensive alterations in our store, renovating its interior throughout. We have a large quantity of goods on our shelves which will have to be either disposed of or warehoused while the work is being done. We have considered the matter carefully and have decided that it is better to give our customers the benefit of the movement and to clear out the greater portion of the goods at almost any price, rather than go to the trouble and expense of warehousing same.
