French Tourists and Guides Killed During a Snowstorm on Mount Blanc.

Paris, Aug. 11.-The Matin declares that the Crown Prince of Germany, after an escapade at Bonn, where he is attending the university, had a violent interview with Emperor William. It is said that he expressed to his father his desire to renounce his rank and claim to the throne. A lady is supposed to be concerned in the affair. PERISHED ON MOUNT BLANC. Two French tourists and their guides lost their lives on Saturday on Mont Blanc. They were overtaken by a terrible snowstorm while descending the grand plateau. The two tourists perished in the snow, and the guides set off to obtain assistance from the Grands Mulets. They were, however, unable to reach the hut, and also per-pied the chair, said the party had formally withdrawn from participation in the coronation celebration, and had assembled for the purpose of protesting against the usurpation of Irish government by England. King Edward, he added, was not the constitutional monarch of Ireland. No English sovereign had been so since the union. A resolution was adopted declaring that "Ireland separates herself from the coronation rejoicing of her merciless oppres sors, and stands apart in her right-ful discontent and dissatisfaction." QUEEN HENRIETTE.

Spa. Belgium, Aug. 11.-Marie Henri. ette, Queen of the Belgians, had a good night, and was able to leave her this morning for breakfast. Serious rumors were in circulation last night that the condition of Queen Marie Henriette was dangerous, but at a late hour her majesty's physicians reported that she had revived and that there was no cause for anxiety.

King Happy as His People-Sympathy for the Aged Prelate-Pope's Cordial Message.

London. Aug. 11.-The King is crowned, and every man and every woman too seems to feel a personal gratification in the event. The stupefaction of six weeks ago is contrasted by the delight of the ever-memorable day and night. At most, it was expected that an invalid King might totter feebly to the chair of Edward Until the booming of guns announced the Confessor. What was seen was a King, erect and virile, bearing in a complished, there lingered in thousands certain paleness the evidence of re-

One of the most obvious sentiments now is anger against those who sought to deceive and in lead in regard to the King's health, and if the political Ishmaelite who, with his ly seven thousand members of great wealth, is using a newspaper to the nobility, the clergy and the genattack their royalty, were to be recognized in a crowd of rich or poor, it would go hard with him. The partial breakdown of the venerable Archbishop of Canterbury, who, instead of assisting, had to be assisted by the King in the performance some of his functions, is also a subject of sympathetic comment. archbishop is in his 82nd year, and his eyes are dimmed by old age. He had been a schoolboy when Victoria was crowned, and now with his sands nearly run out, he was called upon to rown her son. Everybody, and King Edward most assuredly, felt sympathy for the aged prelate, and sought far as possible to aid him in the important functions, which none but the could perform. Indeed, the Arch-bishop of Canterbury is a figure second only to the King in importance at the coronation, and his collapse, which at time seemed imminent, have had a deplorable effect. The kindness of his majesty had much to do with sustaining the veteran pre-late throughout his part in the cere-

HAPPY AS HIS PEOPLE. King Edward himself, according to palace accounts, is as happy as the people. His face was lighted up with that magnetic smile which has helped to make him liked by all admitted to his presence. He made no concealgreeting from his subjects, and when he showed himself from the balcony of Buckingham Palace with his Queen, his face was radiant with pleasure. The facts are that some of the misstatement in regard to his condition reached the King during his illness, and while he affected to smile at them his people shall always have access to there is no doubt that he felt them the house, which must ever be associkeenly, and felt gratified at being able to show the evidence of his recovery, and of his possession of a strong contitution and unimpaired vitality. The King by advice of his physicians did not stay up late Saturday night. He retired at an early hour to refreshing rest, unfatigued, and as bright and vigorous as when he began the great ordeal of the day.

DREADED A BREAKDOWN. It is learned that King Edward was greatly unnerved by the condition of the Archbishop of Canterbury, and that his majesty sat in constant dread of a contretemps, though outwardly calm. This brave show, however, did not deceive the Queen. Throughout the service, and especially as the Archbishop of Canterbury became more and more nervous, her majesty palpably dreaded that the King would break down.

Another incident relating to royalty Mecklinburg-Strelitz, who at the express desire of Queen Alexandra, sat cupied at the coronation of Queen Victoria.

THE KING'S GIFT.

King Edward has signaled his coronation in a memorable manner by the munificent gift to the nation of Osborne House, one of the favorite reof the late Queen Victoria. The gift is made in the following message to his people addressed to Prime Minister Balfour: "Buckingham Palace, Coronation Day, 1902-Under the will of the King's much-beloved mother, the Osborne House estate is, as Mr. Balfour is aware, the private estate of the sovereign. Having to spend a considerable part of the year in the capital of this kingdom and in its neighborhood. at Windsor, and having also strong home ties in the county of Norfolk which have existed now for nearly 40 years, the King feels he will be unable to make adequate use of Osborne House as a royal residence, and he, accordingly, has determined to offer the property in the Isle of Wight as a gift to the nation. "As Osborne House is sacred to the memory of the late Queen, it is the King's wish that with the exception of those apartments which were in the ated with her beloved name. As regards the rest of the building, the King hopes it may be devoted to nanavy and the army, whose health has been impaired in rendering service to

The troops present were picked regiments of the army, and the bands of music were the best the English barracks could send out. In the background of this pageant was Westminster Abbey, so transformed by decorations and stands that is was scarcely recognizable, and serried rows of gaily-dressed people rose in tiers of seats from the roadway on each side to a great height. Near the west door of the abbey stood a double line of sailors in blue uniforms, with white straw hats, making a block of color in the line of troops. Behind them, in a blaze of gold, the band of the Royal

He was recognized and loudly cheered. Then the last of the peers' carriages dashed by.

THE KING'S NURSES.

A wild welcome was accorded to the two nurses of the King during his illness, as they came up to the abbey, just in front of the royal carriage and pair which brought the children of the Prince of Wales. The nurses wore blue print dresses and white caps and aprons of their hospital.

FESTIVITIES GO ON. The festivities in London were continued on Sunday. There were considerable crowds almost all day long in the vicinity of Buckingham Palace and along the route of yesterday's procession, vieweven at the last moment some unto- ing the decorations and watching the ward event might once more plunge flow of notable personages to and from the various thanksgiving services. In the evening the Canadian arch, which as an exceptional novelty for Sunday, was brilliantly illuminated, was a great center of attraction and served to bring an immense concourse of people into its neighborhood.

THE CANADIAN ARCH.

The Times, reviewing the decorations has a criticism to make on the Canadian arch, which is the chief feature of the route in Whitehall. It has been renovated, and fresh inscriptions have been placed on the side facing the abbey. The great spread lettering reads: "Canada, Free Homes for Millions. God Bless the Royal Family." The Times observes that if the truth were told there is no lack of folks to speak in tones of subacrid banter of the uses of advertisement, adding good-humoredly that the royal family, though happily numerous, does not quite amount to millions, and is not Britain's Granary in War and Peace. REJOICING EVERYWHERE. While the coronation was being solemnized in London, celebrations and rejoicings were carried out throughout the olonies. Numerous cablegrams to the King conveyed the congratulations of representative bodies everywhere, salutes were fired and church services were held. Australia confined itself to religious services, having spent all the money gathered for the proposed event of June 26 for charities. Similar services were held by the British communities in all the European capitals and chief cities of the continent. The congratulations of European sovereigns also poured in. Soon after the King's return to the palace the Pope sent him an especially cordial message. The United States battleship Illinois, at Chatham dockyard, was decorated. Throughout the United Kingdom the cities were illuminated and enthusiastic demonstrations were held. Manila, Aug. 10 .- Forty-one American cruisers and gunboats assembled and were dressed at Cavite yesterday, and fired 21 guns at noon in honor of the coronation of King Edward.

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 11-A morally deformed and bloodthirsty president is W. J. Bryan's characterization of Mr. Roosevelt. Mr. Bryan's attack follows a review in the Commoner of the president's address at West Point. The article says in part: "President Roosevelt in his recent extemporaneous speech at West Point gave expression to a sentiment which suggests an inherent barbarism that will have to be taken into account in weighing his purposes and predicting his future course. His address on 'Strenuous Life,' delivered some three years ago, showed that he gave to virtue the ancient rather than the modern definition, and placed physical courage above mental greatness, and moral worth. But when in his West Point speech he laid aside all restraint and in a fit of animal enthusiasm, said: 'A good soldier must not

The management of the Chicago and Northwestern is formulating a plan by which all train employes on the sysem will be given such instruction in rudimentary surgery as win render them competent to give first aid to the injured in case of accidents. The in-struction will probably be given through the medium of illustrated lectures by the company's surgeons. Every station was represented at the meeting held at Addison Friday. While drawing fair salaries, operators con-tend that they are not paid enough in proportion to bark peelers and woods-inen, nor enough to compensate for un-civilized surroundings. It was generally reported that operators were ready for a strike and a tie-up on the road, but wiser counsels prevailed and after an election of officers and a branch of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers had been installed, a committee was appointed to wait upon the Goodyears. Train robberies are rare in Mexico and if they do occur, capture and punishment are sure to follow. Three Americans held up a passenger train of the Mexican Central on July and secured $50,000 in currency. On July 31 two of the robbers were captured and nearly $30,000 recovered—an example of speedy and efficient police service which seldom, if ever, has been equaled in this country. To the Mexi-attempt to interfere with train move-ments is no doubt largely due the immunity from train robbery in that country, and it is probable that justice will be swift in the present case.

FATAL TO THE MOSQUITO

New Discovery Made by the Agricultural College of Michigan.

Agricultural College, Mich., Aug. 11 -During the present season a series of experiments has been carried on at the college looking to the acquiring of more intelligent and efficient methods of dealing with the mosquito nuisance In an interview upon the progress of the work, Prof. R. H. Pettit told of an interesting and remarkable discovery made by Bronson Barlow, the assistant in charge of the field work, who, in the course of the regular examination of the mosquito breeding ponds, found that in one pool the banks were lined with the bodies of dead mosquitoes, killed by a fungous disease. This disease is one closely related to the one that kills flies in the autumn, attaching them to window panes. The mosquitoes are atttached to the surface upon which they die by filaments of the fungus extending from the body of the insect, which filaments bind it firmly in place. The body of the insect first becomes fully occupied by the vegetative mycelium of the fungus, after which the growth appears on the outside, completely covering the mosquito with a white shroud. Upon the surface of this white covering spores which serve as seeds, are borne and foreibly ejected into the air for some distance, and coming in contact with other mosquitos infects them. An attempt is being made to introduce the disease into other ponds to determine whether it can be disseminated and made of practical value in abating the mosquito nuisance.

The "Publishers' Association" and the "Booksellers' Association" Pull Together.

New York, Aug. 11.-Conclusive proof of the existence of an airtight book trust, comprising both the publishers and dealers throughout the country has come to light. The other is the "American Booksellers' Association," made up of the leading dealers throughout the country.

The names of the one publishing firm not in the trust and the few dealers who have not joined the combination of dealers are on a blacklist, which is in the hands of every member of the two associations.

The two associations have been known to exist for some time, but the evidence of the inner workings of the combinations has just become public The American Booksellers' Association comprises 270 dealers, including the sellers in every city of any importance in the United States. Over half have become members in the past year, and the association became aggressive only in the past six months.

The trust maintains its offices at Nos. 30 and 32 East Twenty-fifth street. Clarence E. Wolcott, of Syracuse, is president, and J. W. Nichols, of this city, is secretary. It has an executive committee of seven members and an advisory committee of 50 members representing every city of any size. The American Publishers' Associa-tion includes the fifty largest firms in that line of business, and also maintains an office in this city. The two concerns are in signaling distance of each other in many ways, as is shown

THE NEW PACIFIC CABLE

President Roosevelt's Conditions in Regard to the Line.

Connection With Manila-Keeps on U. S. Territory to China.

Oyster Bay, Aug. 11.-President Roosevelt has made public the full text of the conditions under which he will approve of the plan to lay a submarine cable in the Pacific to connect the United States with its Pacific oriental possessions.

The conditions imposed by the president are: That the company shall in no way be controlled by or connected with any other cable company; that this company is in no way to acquire the exclusive privilege of landing cables from the United States on the coasts of China; that its cables shall touch on American territory only from the United States to China, and shall construct and control an independent line from the Philippines to China; that commercial rates shall be reasonable; the United States Government and its agents to have priority over all other cablegrams at such rates as the postmaster-general shall annually fix; that the United States shall have the right at any time to purchase the cable lines and other effects of the company at valuation fixed by arbitration; that the United States may assume full control of the lines in time of war, and contracts with foreign Governments will be null and void when the United States is engaged in war; the United States may at any time sever branches connected with the main cable; that all employes above the grade of laborer, after the cable is laid, shall be American citizens; that a speed of 25 words per minute shall be maintained; the cable to be of best material; to be kept open daily; the United States to assume no liability; that the consent hereby granted shall be subject to any future action by congress or by the president affirming, revoking, or modifying, wholly or in part, the said conditions and terms aforesaid during war or threatened

While the conditions are regarded as stringent, it is believed the company will accept them, and that the work of laying an American cable to the Orient will soon be begun.

Sir Wilfrid at Edinburgh.

Of the many honors showered on the colonial premiers in Great Britain, one of the most distinctive was the conferring upon them of the freedom of the city of Edinburgh. The reception throughout the day was worthy of the best traditions of Scottish hospitality. To a man of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's poetical temperament, there must have been a peculiar charm in this tribute the great honor which has been befrom the old capital, steeped as it is in literary associations, with its heri- It has been by privilege to know something of the Scottish character. tage of history and romance, and its present-day pre-eminence in education, which, in combination with its majestic beauty, has given it the name of jestic beauty, has given it the name of Modern Athens. The conferring of the city's freedom in the afternoon, in the presence of a kind enough to refer to the causes for what greater example could be given great company of citizens, was carried out with the picturesque rites which have been handed down from ancient times, the councilors, in their robes of office, entering the hall preceded by the sword and mace and halberd bearers. The presentation address by the town clerk was an admirable deliverance, of which we reproduce a portion:

"The phrase 'freedom of the city' comes down to us from medieval times, for admission as a burgess was a necessary preliminary to anyone being allowed to engage in trade or commerce. These material advantages of the freedom have long ago disappeared, but the form has been re-tained as a convenient way to the corporation recognizing eminent public services. It is an encouragement to public men to find that their labors are appreciated by the representative authorities of a great community. All these gentlemen whose names are now proposed to add to the roll are prime ministers. Their representative position, as chosen under the free institutions of the countries from which they come of itself attests the estimate put upon their public services by those best qualified to judge. (Cheers.) We in this country do not always under-stand political parties and political issues in the colonies. I am afraid it may be said that we sometimes do not understand our own-(laughter)-and we are not in a position to pronounce judgment upon the opinion's which may be held by our guests upon any par-ticular question. However, there are certain characteristics which we look for in our public men as befitting their position and influence, and these we recognize here. We find them to our hand. The first point in favor of the motion, then, is the testimony given to us by the constituents of the prime ministers on the other side of the seas (Cheers.) The second point I would mention is, that these five gentlemen before us today with imprimatur of our univerwith upon them. (Cheers.) T that ancient and much-respected institution, and the reasons given by the dean of the faculty of law, for the university authorities con-ferring their degrees are all applicable to the conferring of this honor with which the corporation have to do. I need not, therefore, repeat these. The first name that comes before us, then, is the Right Hon. (Loud cheers.) Though to that task I have given my life, I do not pretend high aspirations and broad and noble that I am singular in the effort. It has been the effort of a good many Canadians before me; it shall be the effort of a good many others after me, and it is some consolation that these efforts have not been altogether unavailing. (Cheers.) The city clerk a moment ago referred to the time when your ancestors and my ancestors were in close illiance. History revolves, and each turn of the wheel brings new events, new conditions. [M. A. P.] At the time of the King's recent operation the nurse who had been present to assist left the room on his recovering consciousness, but not before the King had caught sight of her face. Directly after, he asked one of his physicians who she was, for he had seen her somewhere, and quite lately. The doctor admitted that this was so for, but a short while before his maestty had presented this same nurse the spirit in which this subject of the British dominions beyond the seas Africa. New York, Aug. 11.—Falling 300 feet down the sheer side of a cliff in Englewood, Robert Scott, 13 years old, reached the bottom with no greater injuries than bruises. When he regained his senses, however, he was so weak that his cries for help did not reach far beyond the lonely spot in he had fallen.

Scott lay in the bushes at the bottom of the cliff for nearly two days, being discovered finally by boys. They summoned aid and Scott was carried home. Two doctors were called. They found not a bone broken, and express the belief that the boy price, and that values must get down to 70c or lower before the wheat can be shipped out of the country; a good deal of white wheat is sprouted; red is generally in better condition; Manitoba wheat is steady, at 81½c for No. 1 hard, Goderich; 85½c for No. 1 northern and 83½c for No. 2 northern, grinding in transit. Flour—There is little demand for export; owing to the scarcity of old wheat the millers do not seem to have much flour to offer; cars of Ontario, patents are quoted at $2.95 asked in buyers' bags east and west; choice brands are held 15c to CELEBRATION MARRED. St. John, N. B., Aug. 10 .- A double drowning marred the coronation celebration here. Chester McCluskey and Walter Pynes, two bright young men, lost their lives in Loch Lomond, ten miles from the city. They were in a small boat competing in a race, when a squall struck their boat and upset The wind was blowing a gale at the time, and they were drowned before a rescuing party could reach them. · BLOWN TO ATOMS.

Bradford, Pa., Aug. 11.-Joseph Gilson, aged 44, and Oscar Bergvalle, 17, were blown to atoms by an explosion of nitroglycerine at Irivne's Mills, near here. Gilson and Bergvalle were taking a load of glycerine from the company's magazine in Rice Brook to Olean. It is supposed a wheel of the wagon dropped into a rut in the road causing the jar which brought on the explosion. Nothing was left of the outfit but a small portion of one horse.

LEARN HOW

To Feed Yourself Skillfully. It is easy to use good food and get well and keep that way, but a person must go about it. A lady says, "I had a dreadful time of it before I learned how to feed myself properly. I suffered with stomach trouble for about ten years, and finally got so bad that terrible pains would set in, followed by nauseating sickness in the stomach and bowels.

Sometimes I would bloat up and would have to lie flat on my back. My stomach finally got so bad that it would throw up everything I ate, and, of course, I lost weight and strength very rapidly. I became pale. Blood was out of order and I looked like a skeleton finally.

One day neuralgia set in the stomach and liver, and I went right down to death's door. But she was firm. She who knew the danger so well, whose eyes were not blinded by passion of self-interest, though she had loved him entirely, though her future life promised to be even sadder and lonelier than his own. She could do right, though hers appeared far the harder task of the two. We call them the weaker sex; we mock their frailties, their indecision, their inconstancy, and love of change; yet I have known women bear suffering both of body and mind without wincing, from which a strong. man has shrunk and turned away

"It must not be," she said, softly, but decidedly. "This is our last meeting upon earth. It is hard to say farewell. Gilbert, if it will make you happier, I will even pray that you may forget me." He was angry, maddened, desperate. "You have never loved me." he exclaimed, wildly, "if you can say such things to me now. You are like all other women, and I was an idiot to suppose you different. So long as everything went on smoothly, while there was little to lose and much to gain, so long was I in high favor, and Mrs. Latimer saw nothing to be ashamed of in the conquest of Gilbert Orme; but directly there comes a difficulty, directly she on her side has something to give up, something to unsuch the said that a something to give up, something to unsuch the said that the said tha content of the course of the c

He spoke in strong, bitter irony; hurt, angry, and self-torturing. She could not answer him for sobbing, and he went on, now softening at her distress, now lashing himself once more into cruelty:
"If I might but live near you, and see you sometimes; if I might watch over you, Ada, and hear from you, and be sure of your welfare. I would even be satisfied that you should never hold communication with me as long as you were well and happy, on condition that I might come to you and aid you in sickness and distress. But no, no, you shake your head, you deny me even a kind word, a pitying look. False, heartless, ungrateful! You never cared for me, and I will crush and annihilate every feeling I ever had for you, as I trample this wretched flower under my feet!"

Then, without another word or look, he turned abruptly to the door and left the apartment fixed eyes and parted lips, Ada With fixed eyes and parted lips, Ada stretched out her arms toward his receding figure. She tried to speak, but her voice was gone. Like the vague noises of a dream, she heard his footsteps die away upon the stair, the closing of the street-door, and the wheels of the cab which had been waiting for him, clattering away up the street. Then for the first time she realized her desolation. She felt the agony she had undergone, and knew the extent and the hopelessness of her loss. Never to see him again! neither today, nor tomorrow, nor next month. nor through all the weary years they both might live; never to hear his voice, nor see his handwriting, nor know aught of him save through careless, indifferent third persons. Her dearest hope to be that he might forget her, that he might belong exclusively to another, and love that fortunate woman as well as he had loved her. No! she could not quite bring herself to that, and yet how selfish to wish it otherwise! And half an hour ago her destiny was in her own power! Had She so willed it, she might have been his own all her life. It was a cruel re-flection, and yet had it to be done again, Ada thought she would again have found

CHAPTER XXXIV.

It is a bright spring afternoon in the first flush of the London season. The old story has begun over again with fresh hopes, fresh schemes, a few fresh faces— the old story of dining and driving and dressing and pushing on with calm, polite energy that never relaxes, as though it energy that never relaxes, as though it had some definite object for its goal. There are, indeed, a few blanks among the rank and file of the elite. The pale visitor who knocks at the door of the lowly hut and regal palace, alike regard-less of the hall porter's "not at home" and the peasant-mother's imploring cry, has taken care of that. Certain Amphit ryons will bow blandly to their guests no more; a joker or two has exchanged his thoughtless existence for something a little more like real earnest. Timon Athens has left a hatchmen on his four-storied house, and his affairs in a state of hopeless confusion; yet the ball goes round much the same. A few words of languid pity comprise Timon's epitaph:
"The fool of a doctor never bled him.
How well his horses sold at Tattersall's; and who has got his cook?" His very cabhorse stands opposite to them now as they sit in the bay-window of their club; but Landless, Flippant and the like have already paid tribute to his memory as recorded above, and are talking of some-thing eise.

Charley Wing has succeeded to a fortune. Charley Wing has become the un-expected possessor of docks in Liverpool, and acres in Buckinghamshire, and mines in Cornwall, and money in the funds. No longer a gay condottiere, living from hand to mouth, looking perpetually over his shoulder for somebody who "wants" him, reduced to his last shifts to obtain him reduced to his last shifts to obtain credit for his gloves, Charley Wing has become a man of substance—a land-holder, a capitalist. The change has had its usual effect. From a light-hearted, open-handed "good-for-nothing," he has become a morose, close-fisted curmudgeon. The ci-devant dandy walks about now with thick soles and a cotton umbrella. Landless asked him last week to lend him a "pony."

"Only a pony, I give you my honor." raid that experienced borrower, in a tone of injured feeling, "and he has never spoken to me since, besides refusing point-blank. The infernal screw!"

The pony would have been useful to Ladless, who owes money to everybody that will trust him. A year ago, if Charley Wing, by rare accident, had a five-pound note in his pocket, it was at the service of the first person who asked for it. The ever-green Filopant, settling the service of the first person who asked for it. The ever-green Flippant, settling his neckcloth and feeling the padding of his coat, opines that "it's all up with a fellow when he gets into more than ten thousand a year." and his auditors, having applauded Flippant's remark, as is their custom, the latter struts away with the happy persussion that he had with the happy persuasion that he has perpetrated a jest. Holyhead joins the group, and nods to a man in the street, who walks moodily by, with his eves fixed on the pavement and who takes no notice of the saluta your man in the street.

'Now,' said Landless. "there's a fellow "Now," said Landless, "there's a fellow that Jaccording to Flippant must have come in for a pot of money. It's all, up with Orme since he went to that queer Australian climate. I never saw a man so changed in my life. He was never likely to set the Thames on fire: but still he used to be a cheery, amusing bird anough and now how your residence. ne used to be a cheery, amusing bird enough, and now you can't get a word out of him, good or bad. liver, or lawsuits, or what?"

"How d'ye mean he can't set the Thames on fire?" interrupted Holvhead, rising freely, as was his wont, in defense of an absent friend. "There's not a fellow of our own set that's got better brains than Orme. If he turned his mind to it, I would back him to write a book, hanged if I wouldn't!" ("Nobs" always avowed that he considered the production of a book, good or bad as production of a book, good or bad as the ne plus ultra of mental ability.)
"He's only seedy after a sea voyage, that's all. So would you be, Landless, if that ereat stomach of yours was turned inside out without intermission for twelve or fourteen weeks. He'll be all right after the Derby. A fellow never feels as if he was thoroughly at home till he has seen a Derby, you know."

It will be a great game. -Cornwall Standard. INDIANS PLAYED GREAT GAME.

Nearly 1,000 spectators turned out to witness the lacrosse match between the Red Jackets and the Shamrocks of Toronto, played at Olympic Park Saturday, says the Buffalo Courier. All who attended the game saw one of the best of its kind ever played in this city. The Shamrocks won by a score of 5 to 3, but they had to work hard to beat out the clever Indian players. The game was exciting from the start and it was nip and tuck between the two teams for first honors. The visitors won out through their clever team work. The Indian team was much heavier but what the Canadians lacked in weight they made up in skill. The contest was replete with clever plays and the ball was kept in .506 motion, going from one end to the other in clocklike fashion. The Canadians were first to score. They worked the ball gradually down the field and shot the sphere into the net 3 for a score after about five minutes of play. The Shamrocks soon saw that their opponents' weak points were in guarding the goals, and they took advantage of this, and after a few moments' more play scored another point. Before the half ended the visitors secured one more, making the score 3 to 0 in favor of the Shamrocks in the first

In the second half the Indians played a much better game, and by a series of clever passes succeeded in securing their first goal. They got one more before the Shamrocks scored their fifth point and time was called.

PARR TO TOUR CANADA. Jim Parr, the English wrestling champion, in a letter to a Buffalo paper, received Saturday, states that he will sail from England the latter part of this month, arriving here about the first week in September. Parr has planned to make a cami paigning tour of Canada, with a view to annexing the championship of the Dominion. He will or arriving here issue a challenge to the wrestlers of Canada, and will take on all comers just as fast as they care to tackle

If Dan McLeod, alias "George Little," who holds the Canadian championship at present, means to retain that title, he will be obliged to defend it against the sturdy Britisher. Parr, during his seven months' so-journ in the United States in 1901-02, participated in nearly 100 contests, inluding the bouts wrestled while meet ing all comers at threaters in various He defeated a number of America's best known wrestlers, including Mc-Leod in a handicap match, and Tom Jenkins was the only man who could do anything with him. According to reports from England Parr has grown heavier since his return to that country. He expects to with it the American championship this time, but he will insist on the match being wrestled under Police Gazette rules, which allow quick, flat falls without requiring one wrestler to hold the other down for any length of time. Montreal, Aug. 11 .- A brisk breeze on Lake St. Louis favored the yachts, or, rather, the Trident, for the third of the series for the Seawanhaka Cup, and Tecumseh was hopelessly beaten all the way. The course was the same as en Thursday-two miles to windward and return, three times around. The weather started half a gale, blowing out of northwest. The race started at 1:15, but through a mistake the Trident had to turn back and recross the line, losing 31/2 minutes. Notwithstanding this handicap, the defender gained steadily to the outward mark, and at 1:40 had passed the Tecumseh. When half the race was sailed, and Trident was leading by three minutes, the wind was blowing almost a gale. BROKE AMERICAN RECORD.

Toronto, Aug. 11 .- The city championship for 100 yards was held under the auspices of the Toronto Swimming Club Saturday under favorable condi tions. The winner, Mr. Joseph Wilson, won handily in 74 1-5 seconds. He held the lead throughout, and that he had lots to spare was shown in the club handicap shortly afterwards. The second man, Arthur Firth, who was city champion in 1897 and 1900, was about two and a quarter lengths behind, and a little ahead of George Carson, the holder of last year's championship There were five entries, and it was a splendid race. IT IS A LIVER PILL.—Many of the ailments that man has to contend with have their origin in a disordered liver, which is a delicate organ, peculiarly susceptible to the disturbances that come from irregular habits or lack of care in eating and drinking. This accounts for the great many liver regulators now pressed on the attention of sufferers. Of these there is none superior to Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. Their operation, though gentle, is effective, and the most delicate use them. Course

In every respect the picnic passed off in most delightful manner, and "Famous," the trademark adjective of the firm, will long describe it when mention in made of the record outing, so far, of the summer season. The extent of McClary's influence in this city was never before so impressively shown. The railway authorities estimate that very nearly 5,000 peo-ple attended the picnic. London supplied the largest portion of this number, but many went from St. Thomas and from the intermediate districts. No one was more surprised than the Lake Erie people themselves at the tremendous growd that went to the lakeside. They expected a fairly large crowd, but nothing like that which did excuse for the inadequate accommodation that was provided. They did their task at that time was simply imposthat if they want to ride comfortably to Port Stanley on their picnic day railway men the fact that they are not running a tea party, but the anindustry, with an army of employes, may expect a seat on the way down, but as it was on Saturday, very many did not get one. The trains that pulled skill at rounders that the enamel deaway from here both in the morning and in the afternoon were made up of fifteen or more coaches each, and they were packed right full. Some special trains ran also from St. Thomas, so that when the whole crowd assembled on the hill at Port Stanley it made the largest and by far the happiest-looking gathering that Fraser Heights has seen this season.

From the moment the morning train arrived at Port, the excursionists found much to interest them. Luncheon first engaged their attention, and none of the picnickers displayed any very noticeable desire to stay away from the tempting spreads which covered the picnic grounds. The employes had placed the preparations for the picnic in the hands of very competent committees, whose efforts were entirely successful, and kept the big crowd mused during the entire afternoon. Two events were of special interest-the baseball match and the tug-of-war. The former was between a team pick-ed from among the employes and the regular team, which has lately been holding top place in the Wholesale League. Quite a number who knew the abilities of the men on the picked team were of the opinion that would give the regulars a hot rue or their money.
