WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 19,

THE LONDON TRAGEDY. It is not often that in the well-ordered community of London such a tragic event as that recorded in our local columns toenry Smith does not require to be d on by us to convey a lesson of aport. It is the old story of the terrible perversity of human nature. Henry Smith stands charged with the murder of the woman whom he had sworn to love, defend and cherish, and who for 22 years had been his 22 years had been his anion. It is an awful charge, and though the evidence at present is over-whelmingly in favor of the assumption that it is well founded, it would not be fair

At the end of the debate the vote was taken on Mr. Parnell's amendment to the address, which was rejected—307 to 74.

Lonbon, Feb. 19.—In the House of Commons yesterday Sir Henry James declared that the inexorable facts were against the Parnell party in their endeavors to prove that the present tranquility of Ireland was due to a union of hearts, to that understanding between an English and Irish party which, it was pretended, promised the triumph of their ideas. The truth was that a similar improvement was observed the triumph of their ideas. The truth was that a similar improvement was observed under the influence of coercion as it was enforced during the Ministry of Mr. Gladstone. He thought Mr. Parnell, from what he eaid, must be ignorant of the condition of Ireland. Instead of böycotting being milder than formerly it was now absolutely fiendish. Ireland wished to be left alone, and members like Mr. Lefevre would really assist in the solution of the difficulties only by ceasing to interfere between landlord by ceasing to interfere between landlord and tenant.

Mr. Morley said surely a Government depending upon coercion and menace should approach the projected remedial measures with the deepest misgivings. Mr. Balfour had asserted at Edinburgh that the laws against combination were alike in England and Ireland, and this had drawn out a denial from several Tories. He invited those gentlemen to repeat their denial in the coming election for St. Pancras. the coming election for St. Pancras. He reminded the House that Lord Salis-He reminded the House that Lord Salisbury at the election of 1885 took the stand that the law could not touch boycotting. He challenged the Government to exhibit courage enough to denounce the Times, their ally, whose language was worse than that of United Ireland, or if they believed its charges, to expel their colleagues, whom it charged with murder. He described as a farce the proposed legislation that needed the co-operation of the Irish people and their leaders under a policy of coercion and exasperation.

The scene of the murder one of the most dismal, uninhabited sections that could be found in the immediat neighborhood of any city. At the extreme east end of Regent street, near the banks of the river, was the habitation of Henry Smith, a three-roomed house. The nearest neighbor was a full block away and any disturbance at the Smith house could readily pass unnoticed by the residents of the neigh borhood. The family troubles were recently ventilated at the Police Court, and that the affairs of the household did not run smoothly was then brought before the pub-lic. POUNDED TO DEATH.

A Shocking Murder in Belleville-A

Belleville, Feb. 19 .- One of the most BELLEVILLE, Feb. 19.—One of the most horrible murders ever committed in Hastings county was brought to light at 7 o'clock yesterday morning. A fallen woman by the name of Hannah Cole was literally pounded to death at midnight somewhere on Dundas street between Ann street and Mr. Nelson Bingham's residence. William Arnott and another man, as yet unknown, are charged with the crime, but as yet have not been arrested.

"MY GOD, JACK, DON'T KILL ME for the sake of my two children," were the cries which first aroused people living on Dundas street, but no one apparantly made any effort to save the victim who was frantically shrieking for help and endeavoring to escape from the fiends, who again and again dealt blows on the poor victim's face until she fell to the ground unconscious. The two men then dragged her along the road to Mr. Nelson Lingham's barn, where they accomplished their inhuman purposes. When Mr. Lingham opened his barn, shortly before 7 o'clock in the morning, he heard issuing from the manger, in which was hastily thrown some hay. On looking further he was horrified at seeing the upturned and swollen features of a woman apparently about 40 years of age. She was dying, Her coat was torn in fragments and the snow was blowing over her dishevelled hair and bruised face. Making the woman's position as comfortable as possible, Lingliam at once telephoned to police headquarters for an officer and the victim was conveyed to the hospital.

SHE NEVER REGAINED CONSCIOUSNESS, and lingered until 10:40, when she died.

The parties were under the influence of liquor, it is said. A man who witnessed the assault from his window identifies Arnott with the crime. The victim came here twelve years ago, and has since conducted a house of ill-fame. STIFLED GROANS

Alisa Craig, Feb. 17.—Word was received here the other day from Mr. John Poole, who has been working in the Michigan lumber woods, that he had both legs broken by an accident.

Mr. Johnson Alexander, of this village, met with a peculiar accident one day lately which might have resulted more seriously. Mr. Alexander, who is a blacksmith, was preparing to set tires and used coal oil to start the fire. By some means the oil in the can became ignited and an explosion followed. The burning oil was scattered over Mr. Alexander's clothes which took fire. Mr. Geo. McEwan, who was standing near by, went to Mr. Alexander's assistance and soon succeeded in putting out the flames. Mr. A. will dispense with coal oil for lighting fires in has had no policy on other important public matters that have been brought before the House in recent years, and has again and again been compelled to adopt the views of the Liberals—aye, even after Mr. Laurier Mr. McCarthy's panacea for the wholesale production of patriots is to make them talk English, and he proposes to accomplish this by saving $400 or $500 per annum on what may be termed Sentimental Contingencies in Northand his followers had been soundly traduced by Tory newspapers and politicians for entertaining these views.

If Mr. Blake or Mr. Laurier provides the Government with a policy on the present occasion, it will not be the first time that occasion, it will not be the first time that the floundering Tory Cabinet has been kept the agency of bayonets. But no matter what happens, Mr. McCarthy tells us that he will never desert the Tory party. He must still be on the outlook for fat retainers.

History, in a great measure, repeats itself. The eccentric Pepys, whose quaint will reverted from occupying their rightful part of the seventeenth century has afforded much instruction and amusement to us of a MIST I FARN ENGLISH.

MIST I FARN ENGLISH

The skirt is either kilted or plain. A little outdoor jacket usually accompanies that the floundering Tory Cabinet has been kept to determine the cuttory and the straight path by the wisdom and foress and worn open in front it displays the waistcoat either of check suede or white heaven are the infamous Franchise Act, are at present prevented from occupying their rightful position on the treasury benches. The country is no doubt intelligently sizing up the novel situation.

MIST I FARN ENGLISH in-Chief of an army to inforce his views by much instruction and amusement to us of a later generation, dilates on the danger of a MUST LEARN ENGLISH. Hon. Wilfrid Laurier has emphasized all his previous declarations in regard to the ease that prevailed in the winter of 1661, and which very much resembled the grippe.

After recording in August, 1661, "a sickly tune both in the city and country everywhere (of a sort of fever) that never was heard of almost unless it was in a plague dominance of the English tongue by his last great speech in the House of Commons. The honorable gentleman said:

The honorable gentleman said:

There are in Quebec, as in Ontario, men who will not be amenable to reason. The extreme men in Quebec propose to form a French nation on the St. Lawrence, and those in Ontario talk of putting down the French with bayonets. Cheers and Lughbry. The said there was sever to come a day when this system would cease, and only the English language would be spoken. I do not bother myself about such considerations as to a dim distant fu ure. The only thing which troubles me is to keep peace and harmony in this land, and I am not willing to provoke broils at present in the hope of avoiding possible troubles in the future. In my judgment, English is today, and must be for several generations—perhaps for several centuries to come—the commanding language of the world. So long as the center of civilization was the Mediterranean three great languages held successive sway, Greek, Latin and French. At the end of the twelfth century rrench was the dominating language. It is still the language of diplomacy and for the international exchange of the higher productions of the human mind. It is no longer the language of the masses. English has taken that place by the development of the Angio-Saxon race, and it is now spoken by 100,000.000 people in all parts of the world. The fact that the English language dominates on this continent makes it imperative upon French-Canadians, though they will and may retain their own language, to learn English.

And the French-Canadians have good

And the French-Canadians have good enough sense to follow the advice of such teachers as Mr. Laurier. They do learn English. They are, we are told, anxious wherever found to acquire the use of the tongue without which the progressive citisomething for nothing there is really no need to economize. Our Dominion rulers are men of that stamp. Take, for example, the irresponsible Senators, who are appointed for life, and get $1,000 a year and 10 cents a mile traveling expenses to and from Ottawa, no matter how little playing at revising House of Commons laws they may undertake. These men, or their friends around the stand French. The experience but goes to prove that Mr. Laurier is right when he acknowledges that English is the dominant language, and that there is no danger of crowding it out, but on the contrary that every citizen of French origin, who desires to wake the most of his opportunities, will not only acquire it, but see that his children follow in his footsteps. The trouble to be avoided lies in such injudicious and wholly unnecessary attacks on the French-speaking population as have been advocated by Mr. population as have been advocated by Mr.
McCarthy and his associates, who talk of compelling the French-speaking population, by force of arms, if need be, to give up their language and their customs. Surely the man who talks in this way, even though he asserts that his object is to purify the Tory party to which he belongs, should receive little countenance from any one who looks upon peace and goodwill as national blessings. The experience of all history teaches us that peoples can be led to change their religion or their language, either by per-suasion or by peaceable evolution, but where is the historical precedent that leads to the conclusion that a people has been successfully intimidated into forsaking their

Some of them can afford horses that "taffy" for the French-speaking people and carriages, others can and do ride, but but "taffy" for the French-speaking people of Quebee. The honorable gentleman pointed out that the cause probably lay in the fact that the majority of the French-speaking people of all methods for obtaining fresh air and the fact that the majority of the French-speaking people of all methods for obtaining fresh air and the fact that the majority of the French-speaking people of all methods for obtaining fresh air and the fact that the majority of the French-speaking people of all methods for obtaining fresh air and the fact that the majority of the French-speaking people of the fact that the majority of the french-speaking people of Quebec. speaking people have until recently been almost solidly supporting Sir John Maclook upon the alternative as an objectiondonald, Sir Hector Langevin and Mr. Chap-leau. The appeal which Sir John Macdonald trying to get women to buy a sensible skirt, addressed to Mr. Blake at the close of his The feature of it is this—that it is without a addressed to Mr. Blake at the close of his speech in the House of Commons on Monday night supplies further proof of the impotency of the present Government at Ottawa. Sir John Macdonald, in addressing to Mr. Blake the cry, "Come over and help us, we perish," once more confesses that he is a leader who does not lead—that his Government has really no definite policy on the question before the House, just as it has had no policy on other important public to complete a trousseau. to complete a trousseau.
"But here is the shapely skirt," she said,

"But here is the shapely skirt," she said, and she brought out a smart, neatly-made walking dress of blue serge. "This is made for walking in the country, and stands four inches off the ground. A dress for walking in London would be made an inch longer. As a matter of fact, they are usually made to the top edge of a low shoe. Homespun and tweeds are considered a little smarter and tweeds are considered a little smarter than blue serge, and the former materials are usually ordered by country wearers. The skirt is either kilted or plain. A little

We have made a dress of this pattern for Fraulein Nodel, the German companion to the Prince of Wales' daughters. Lady Carew, the Carews of Devonshire, also wears the dress, and we make it for Lady Harburton. She is a little difficult to fit, however, as she doesn't wear corsets. For some women we make cloth knickerbockers, the same shade as the dress, and then underskirts are dispensed with. Then spats can be worn in London and gaiters in the country. I think," added Mme. Gold-schmidt, "that the writer of the article in the Pall Mall rather exaggerated the ad-schmidt, "that the writer of the article in the Pall Mall rather exaggerated the advantages of short skirts. It is not necessary for a woman to wear a skirt up to her knees to keep it out of the mud. A dress only needs to be three or four inches off the ground to keep perfectly clean."

"But don't women object to even four inches off their skirts! It reduces their height." "Yes; they do complain of a dress when it makes them look short. There is no overlooking the fact that they do. But at the same time they appreciate the advantages of always being clean and smartly dressed, instead of being untidy and mudspattered.

"Wouldn't it be possible to invent something that would shorten a dress temporarily?" "Well," answered madame, "we have been putting tapes into the skirts of some dresses, so that a woman could draw up the back of a dress several inches from the ground. Bue this gave an ungraceful lop-sided appearance to the wearer, as the dress was longer in the front than at the back, and a woman would have to take off her bodice when she got indoors to let down the back again. The tapes were of no use if a rain came on suddenly, because she couldn't get at them. There is nothing made in the nature of a dress-looper. Years ago clasps to catch up the back or side of a dress were used. They were fastened by a cord to the waist, and were very ugly, so they didn't prosper. There is no way, either, of carrying a dress with ease. To hold it up behind is hard. The best way, if it must be carried, is to bring it in a bunch to the side. Dresses are more difficult to carry than they were because when steels were fashionable. Dresses are more difficult to carry than the were, because when steels were fashionable a woman had something to hold her skirts a woman had something to hold her skirts up by. Even if you wanted to hold up one of our shaply skirts there is this advantage—that you are relieved of the weight of about two pounds of underskirt by the absence of a foundation."

"Do you claim any other advantages for the skirts!" "Yes, golf and tennis can be played with case on a wet ground. Its advantages for the skirts!" "Yes and wet ground.

played with case on a wet ground. Its advantages for walking is apparent. Last, but not least, it will enable English women to get rid of the idea in the minds of foreigners that English women have big feet."

Hot Springs Fail Cuticura Succeeds.

Having been a sufferer for two years and a half from a disease caused by a bruise on the leg, and having been cured by the CUTICURA HEMEDISS when all other methods and remedies failed, I deem it my duty to recommend them. I visited Hot Springs to ne avail, and tried several doctors without success, and at last our principal druggist, Mr. John P. Finlay (to whom I shall ever feel grateful), spoke to me about CUTICURA, and I consented to give them a trial, with the result that I am perfect I the sufferings sprang from of any one in the State. The CUTICURA REMEDIES are the best blood and skin cures manufactured. I refer to druggist John P. Finlay and Dr. D. C. Montgomery, both of this place, and to Dr. Smith, of Lake Lee, Miss.

CRICKET.

Eight years ago a team of Winnipeg cricketers made a tour of Eastern Canada and came off with Hying colors. The club intends trying to repeat this performance next summer. The proposition is to make a trip the latter part of next July. Fifteen men will be taken, eight of them embers of the Winnipeg first eleven, while the other *esven will include the cream of the Provincial and Territorial players. The club proposes leasing a Pullman car and making the tour in it from town to town, and it is expected that a series of ten matches will be played with all the best-known Ontario cricket clubs, and the only condition exacted by the Winnipeg club is that professionals shall not be played against them. one horse in 10,000 is capable of, and no three of the best horses that ever lived, relieving each other, could have held him during the 24 hours. Another wonderful performance of the year was that of William Van Wagoner, or Newpert, R. I., who, with arms folded, rode a safety bieyele om mile in 2 minutes 40 seconds. On this style of wheel the balance is kept entirely with the body, the legs playing no part, as with the high wheel.

"Slow races" have gone out of fashion so decisively that few of the latter-day cyclists know what they mean. They are balancing competitions on tall bicycles, wherein the rider who succeeds in coming in last at the end of a specified distance, without dismounting or actually stopping his wheel, takes the biscuit box, claret jug, claret stand, or whatever else the prize consists of. The reason such races are not held on the cinder path nowadays is that they would too closely resemble the amateur championship races.—[Irish Cyclist.

GRANDMA'S VALENTINE.

Grandma sits in her easy chair,
Dreaming the dreams of her youthful prime
She smiles in her happines, unaware,
Reading so slow her valentine,
Time-faded and worn by the dust of years;
But odorous still as the breath of the rose
Is the silent sheet; time backward flows;
They meet again at the evening's close.

The robins flutter among the leaves Of the grand old oak by the cottage low. She's hearing the tender tale he waves, Hor pulses thrill as in long ago; Classing her hand in close embrace. Whispering "Darling, what'er betide, I'll faithful be if you follow me. And be my tender and cherished bride."

brotherly kiss.

What the feeling was she couldn't say.
All she could explain to herself was that he wasn't what she expected him to be; and that feeling was a very long time in wearing off ing off.

A month had passed since Mr. Will Orpinton returned to the bosom of his family, and his father was far from being

He did not like to confess it even to himself, but he was disappointed in Will. The young gentlman had commenced to give himself airs and to indulge in extravagant habits He wanted more money than his father thought he ought to have. He went up to London and made a fearful number of purchases, and ordered the most expensive things he could get in every direction. His father, seeing how things were going, ventured to remonstrate, but Will laughed the matter off.

"Come dad" but it she is about right himself. An old Quaker said to his wife, "All these is a little late for you to be out, isn't it, Peck? Aren't you afraid your wife will miss you?" Mr. N. Peck—I hope she will. She can fling things pretty straight, though.

Every man thinks he is about right himself. An old Quaker said to his wife, "All the wife will miss you?" Mr. N. Peck—I hope she will. She can fling things pretty straight, though.

"Come, dad," he said, "you mustn't be stingy. Look what a lot of lost time I've got to make up for."

Will was making up for lost time with a vengeance. He got in with the fastest set of young fellows in the neighborhood, and became quite a "sportsman." Hisextravagance knew no bounds. Horses arrived which he had purchased, a dog-eart, a mail phae-ton, and a tilbury, and then he told his father that he must build new stables at once, as the old ones hadn't had half enough

He went to London for a week, saying that he wanted to see a friend who had come over with him from Canada in the same ship, and though his father gave him a comfortable sum to take with him, he wrote home in a couple of days for a further large amount, saying that he had made a purchase. When he came back he was wilder in his notions than ever, and told his father that he had seen a capital place to let in London that would just suit them for a town house, and had begun to negotiate for it. It was just the place they wanted, and the girls must go up for the London season, and they would have to give balls and parties, of course.

John Orpington was grieved and shocked at the extravagant notions his son had brought home, but he was horrified when he found that he had also plunged into the excitement of betting, and was backing horses for large sums in all the principal races.

With the example of his own fate before him, Orpington was paralyzed with fear at this discovery. His son was treading step by step the same road to destruction which his father had previously traveled.

Lizzie had long ago discovered that her father was unhappy about Will and she shared her father's anxiety. She was bitterly disappointed in her brother. She did not like to confess it, but she was beginning not to like him. He was so different to the brother, she had pictured in her brother. A meeting of No. 2 Committee of the Board of Education was held last evening. Present: Chairman Turner, Trustees Childs, Craig, Brady, Durdin, Woodward, Jeffery, Principal Woods, Inspector Boyle, Secretary Abbott and Engineer Tracy. Chairman Turner stated that the object of calling the meeting was to consider the matter of plastering the lecture room of the Collegiate Institute. It was decided to plaster the room, put in a match ceiling and floor the room above. The matter of the cloak room at the same school was then considered. The committee decided to remove the partitions, and leave further improvements to the Chairman of the Board, Engineer Tracy and Chairman Turner. Trustee Brady moved that in future all accounts be rendered every six months. The motion carried. Engineer Tracy was instructed to prepare plans for the proposed extensions at the north Waterloo street school, the Talbot street school, the Hamilton road school and for extensions in Ward No. 5, and present the same at the next meeting of the Board.

"La Grippe" or Lightning Catarrh, MR. EDITOR.—"La grippe," or Russian influenza, as it is termed, is in reality an epidemic catarrh, and is called by some physicians "lightning catarrh," from the rapidity with which it sweeps over the country. Allow us to draw the attention rapidity with which it sweeps over the country. Allow us to draw the attention of your readers to the fact that Nasal Balm, as well as being a thorough cure for all cases of the ordinary cold in the head and catarrh, will give prompt relief in even the most severe cases of "la grippe" or "Russian influenza," as it will effectually clear the nasal passages, allay irritation and relieve the dull, oppressive headache accompanying the disease. No family should be without a bottle of Nasal Balm in the house, as cold in the head and catarr h are peculiarly liable to attack people at this season of the year, and Nasal Balm is the only prompt and speedy cure for these troubles ever offered the public. Easy to use and agreeable. If you cannot get it at your dealer's it will be sent post tree on receipt of price (50 cents and $1 per bottle) by addressing Fulford & Co., Brockville, Ont.
